

Midland County voters Saturday will decide if the county will renovate the current jail, construct a new one or transfer even more prisoners to other jails. Two propositions will be on the ballot and voters can choose one, both or neither. The Reporter-Telegram takes an overall look at the issue on Pages 8, 9 and 10A today.

France blocks Reagan's trade talk date

By TERENCE HUNT
Associated Press Press

BONN, West Germany — As protesters converged for his visit to a German military cemetery, President Reagan was dealt a setback at the conclusion of the economic summit Saturday when France prevented the leaders of seven industrial nations from setting a date for new trade talks.

Reagan was described by Treasury Secretary James A. Baker as disappointed with the outcome on the trade issue, but "genuinely pleased" overall with the allies' 11th annual summit.

"We all got what we wanted," Reagan said as he walked with other leaders to hear West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl read the final communique in the Bundestag, the federal parliament.

The statement said summit members believe trade talks "should begin as soon as possible. Most of us think that this should be in 1986."

Despite this disagreement, the seven nations pledged to work toward world economic recovery and to resist pressure to protect their own markets from outside competition.

Reagan's biggest victory was lining up all his partners — Britain, Canada, France, Italy, Japan and West Germany — behind his strategy for arms talks with the Soviet Union.

He had to swallow silence from the allies, though, on his "Star Wars" plan for research into space-based missile defenses. At the last minute, he was heartened by a personal endorsement of the program from Kohl at the closing ceremony.

And Reagan got no help for his trade embargo against Nicaragua.

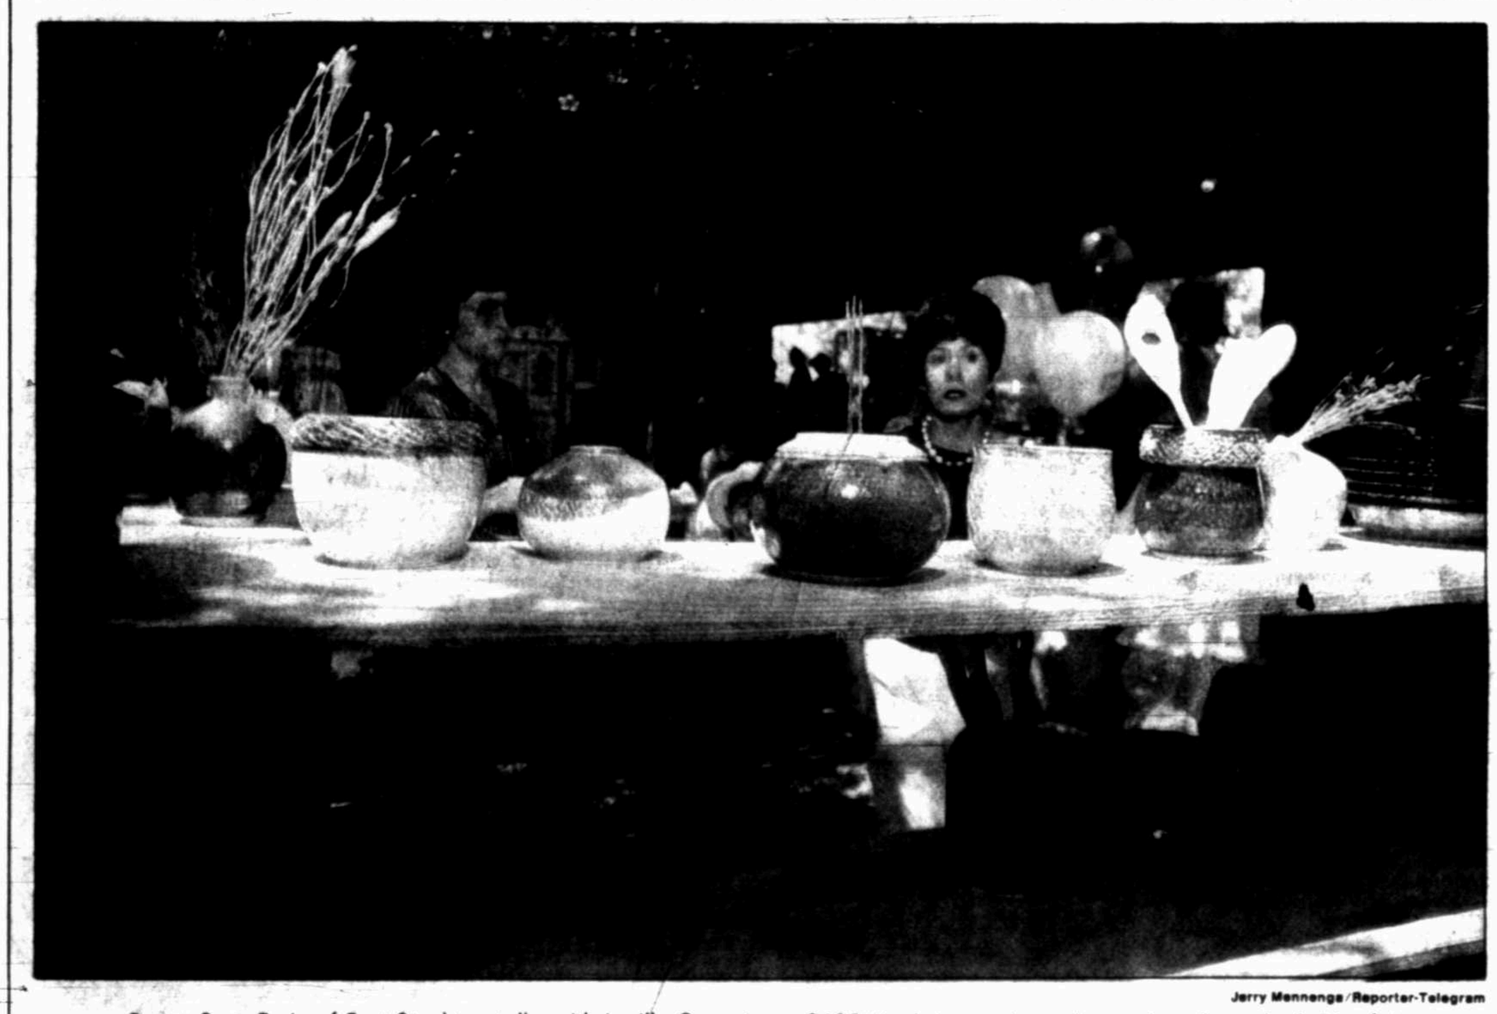

Two miles from the final session, in a cobblestone square of this Rhine River capital city, protesters 10,000 strong assembled to attack the meetings. "Hunger, arms race, exploitation — that is the summit," read one of their banners.

About 250 youths clad in leather, chains and hoods broke from this group and scuffled with baton-wielding police. There were about three dozen arrests and about a dozen injuries to police as the youths smashed windows and looted stores.

Near Hannover, 200 miles away, a quieter protest heralded the start of many demonstrations in this country and abroad over the plan for Reagan and Kohl to lay a wreath Sunday at a cemetery with the graves of 2,000 German soldiers, including 49 members of Adolf Hitler's dreaded Nazi Waffen SS combat units.

A group of American Jews, led by Rabbis Avraham Weiss and Ronald Schwarzberg of the Hebrew Institute of Riverdale, New York, said they would defy police orders to end their sleep-in at the site of the Bergen-Belsen Nazi concentration camp, where 50,000 people were murdered by the Nazis.

Crowd fares well at Mayfair

By MARK LEWIS
Staff Writer

The little boy was disappointed. He'd just gone two-for-two at the free-throw line, and the prize he was being offered seemed an inadequate reward for such a feat of marksmanship.

"You got a little stuffed doggie," said Phillip Pfefferle, who was working the basketball-toss booth Saturday at Trinity School's Mayfair '85.

The boy reacted with a disdainful look which said he was too old for stuffed doggies, and fished out another buck for another two throws. Again, he was two-for-two; this time, he was handed a bigger stuffed doggie.

"You got to work your way up the wall" to the good stuff, Pfefferle told him.

About 10 free throws and $7 later, the boy walked away with a more suitable prize. So did many others at the fund-raising fair, which featured arts-and-crafts booths, food, live entertainment and a children's carnival.

Besides stuffed doggies, there were watercolors and woodwork items, stoneware and stained glass, metal art and mole jackets; there were pita sandwiches and pastrami, baked goods and beer, frozen food and frito pies; there were martial-arts performances and Madonna silkscreens, scout-troop skits and Spinaroo rides.

The artists' booths were inside the school, but most of the action took place out on the athletic field where the carnival was set up. The line for the Ferris wheel was the longest, but each ride had its own fans among the hundreds of kids in attendance.

"I like the ones that go up and down," said 6-year-old Jaden Berry, 3405 Choate, who along with his younger brother Derrick had just been unstrapped from the Blue Ride. Both boys attend Trinity.

"They're having a great time. To them, it's just as fun as Disneyland," said their father Jay. "This is great for parents — I can have a good time, see people I haven't seen, and it's not expensive."

The kids then hustled Jay off to the "Konkord Kastle," an inflatable medieval fortress where they could literally bounce off the walls. The longest line may have been for the Ferris wheel, but teen-agers preferred the Satellite, a centrifugal-force ride where they could indulge their penchant for screaming their heads off.

A good time seemed to be had by all, with the possible exception of some parents who had joined their kids on the Ferris wheel and seemed a bit queasy when their car stopped at the top and rocked gently back and forth.

The fair was to raise money to help support the private school at 3500 W. Wadley Ave., which instructs children from age 3 through the ninth-grade level.

Absentee voting 'a little light' on jail bond issue

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

For the second time in slightly more than two years, Midlanders are being offered a chance to decide the fate of the Midland County Jail and, to some extent, what happens to the 55-year-old courthouse in Saturday's two-part tax bond election.

Through last week, 437 Midlanders had cast absentee ballots in the election, which will be held at 30 precincts in the city and rural areas of the county. Absentee voting at the Midland County Elections Administrator's Office, 709 W. Washington Ave., will continue 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday and Tuesday.

"It think it is a little light (absentee voting) for something as important as this," said Janeice Builta, elections administrator. "I don't understand it," she said of the relatively low voter turnout. "This affects people."

The Midland County Commissioners' Court is giving the almost 55,000-member electorate a chance to vote for one of two, for both or for neither of two propositions.

Proposition No. 1 is for the issuance of "not more than" $3 million in bonds for the renovation of the jail, expansion of Culver Youth Home and the funding of a study on the county government needs into the 21st Century. The jail, built in 1973 as the fifth floor of the 1930-vintage courthouse, currently is restricted to holding 85 inmates. Backers of the renovation advocate increasing inmate capability by installing cells in the "bull pen" — the undeveloped northwest quadrant of the jail.

The Midland Chamber of Commerce and the Concerned Citizens Committee are endorsing jail renovation.

Proposition No. 2 is for the issuance of "not more than" $9.9 million in bonds for the construction of a $8.4 million jail and sheriff's offices apart from the downtown courthouse, and for expansion of Culver Youth Home.

The majority of the five-member court is supporting Proposition No. 2 for the new jail, which could house 225 inmates and which could be equipped to take on 75 more. In addition, the seven-acre jail site east of Midland would offer additional space for increasing maximum-security cells for 600 inmates.

Further, Proposition No. 2 indirectly addresses the courthouse issue. Were it to pass and the jail and sheriff's offices were moved, commissioners say they would convert the fifth-floor jail and sheriff's offices in the basement to courtroom and offices space.

Should both propositions pass by a majority of votes, the Commissioners' Court would determine which proposal to implement.

The Chamber and the Concerned Citizens Committee want to study jail and courthouse needs before launching building programs.

The Chamber's board of directors unanimously agreed that the Chamber would "endorse and actively support" Proposition 1 for the jail renovation and suggested that far less than $3 million would be required to revamp the jail.

"The worst possible thing that could happen would be that both propositions fail," said Jim Alsup, Chamber president. "If that happens, we might be faced with the jail being closed or the shipping of prisoners" to other county jails.

In 1983, only 9 percent of the Midland voters bothered to decide an $11.69 million courthouse-jail expansion project, which they resoundingly rejected.

C. DeWayne Davis, then a commissioner, noted that voter "apathy and indifference is pretty well governed by the state of affairs — the economy." A recession was present then.

In December 1970, the Midland voters approved a $1.95-million bond issue to renovate the courthouse and to build a new jail, which the Chamber and the Concerned Citizens Committee now want to revamp.

Hearst to acquire WCVB-TV in Boston

Hearst News Service

NEW YORK — The Hearst Corporation said today that it has reached agreement in principle to buy Metromedia's television station WCVB-TV, Channel 5 in Boston, for $450 million, believed to represent the largest single station broadcast transaction in history.

The announcement was made jointly by Frank A. Bennack, Jr., president and chief executive officer of The Hearst Corporation, and John W. Kluge, chairman of the board and chief executive officer of Metromedia. The sale is subject to approval of the Federal Communications Commission and to other regulatory filings. Kluge said that the sale of the Boston station would be effected in connection with another major transaction involving Metromedia, the details of which would be announced May 6.

The purchase of WCVB-TV will be the latest in a series of more than a dozen acquisitions by Hearst since 1979. In all, when the Boston acquisition is completed, Hearst will have spent nearly $1 billion in these properties and in the development of new ones.

WCVB-TV, situated in the sixth largest broadcast market in the United States, is widely regarded as one of the best television stations in the country with an exceptional record for local programming.

"We are, of course, delighted with the opportunity to acquire WCVB-TV," Bennack said. "We intend to preserve its unique character as a great local broadcasting organization in one of America's prime regions. We believe Hearst's record as a radio and television broadcaster for more than three decades has been outstanding, and we are proud of that record. The addition of this extraordinary station to our broadcast group represents a quantum leap forward."

Local land firm linked to organized crime?

From Staff and Wire Reports

DALLAS — Two reputed organized crime figures from Miami have established a West Texas business that is being used for real estate investments, the Dallas Times Herald reported in its Sunday editions.

State documents show Jack Giacalone and Victor Dante control V-G Inc., a Texas corporation formed in 1982 and based in Midland, through trusts they set up in Miami, the newspaper said.

Both men have been described as organized crime figures by the Department of Justice and other law enforcement agencies who suspect them of laundering illicit drug profits through real estate investments, the Times Herald said.

"They have been moving a lot of money out in Texas and Arizona for investments," said Sgt. Howard Hasenback of the Metro Dade Police Organized Crime Bureau in Miami. "These guys are very interested in buying up property in certain parts of Texas, Arizona and New Mexico."

Midland County District Attorney Al Schorre said he has received "no complaints" about fraudulant land dealings alleged by the Dallas newspapers.

"The information has been relayed to the (Texas) Department of Public Safety for their investigation, for them to look into," he said.

However, Linda Truitt, president of the Better Business Bureau (BBB) in Midland, said she did receive in 1983 some "inquiries" about a V-G Inc. doing business as Apache Acres in Hudspeth County in far West Texas.

She said an answering service in Midland would mail out brochures on Apache Acres to those, generally out of staters, who were looking for investments.

As she recalled, the brochures pictured an oil well in the county, which is made up of mountains, plateaus, salt lakes, and rocky land, and represented potentials for drilling oil wells. However, she said that there's no commercial oil wells in the county and the well picture in the brochure "turned out to be a dry well."

"Geologists did not consider it (the area) very good for oil possibilities," she said.

War images haunt West Germany

By ROBERT E. THOMPSON
Chief, Hearst Washington Bureau

BONN, West Germany — Why did it happen? Can it happen again?

Those questions haunted me as I traversed the fertile Rhine valley where gardens were aglow with brilliant red and yellow tulips and orchards burgeoned with pink and white blossoms.

Everywhere — in the towns and cities, in the beer gardens and shops — the German people moved in an aura of prosperity and freedom. Of their own volition, many of them proclaimed their friendship for America and Americans. Some expressed their gratitude that Ronald Reagan had decided to visit the cemetery at Bitburg.

They appeared as happy, independent and prosperous as any people on earth.

Yet exactly four decades ago, all Germany lay in ruins, a nation and a people who truly appeared to have experienced the Biblical apocalypse. Millions of military personnel and civilians were dead or maimed. Communities of varying size — from once-mighty Berlin to tiny farm villages — were reduced to dusty, deadly heaps of rubble.

Wherever they gazed, the German people — famed in history for their industrial, scientific and musical genius — viewed nothing but destruction and hatred.

Whether victims or willing accomplices of Adolf Hitler, they — like millions of other human beings — reaped the bitter harvest of his evil quest for power and the brutality he unleashed on humanity.

Few visible traces of that tragedy remain in today's Germany. Indeed, the specter of Hitler and Naziism would not have hovered over the president's state visit to Germany and his participation in the seven-nation Bonn economic summit had it not been for Reagan's decision to lay a wreath at Bitburg cemetery, where despised Nazi Waffen SS troops are buried.

That decision set off a furor among American Jews, whose families were incinerated in Hitler's concentration camps, and war veterans who fought Hitler's forces across the bloody plains and valleys of Europe.

But the president viewed his decision from a different perspective. He contended repeatedly — before and after his arrival in Europe — that after 40 years the time has come for "peace and reconciliation" between the United States and West Germany.

That historic objective, however, was achieved long ago, in the days of West Germany's Konrad Adenauer and America's Harry Truman, Dwight Eisenhower and John Kennedy.

Had it not been achieved long ago, West Germany would not today be one of the world's most successful and flourishing democracies, and one of America's staunchest allies.

Yet the sudden focus on Hitler, the Holacaust and the grisly antecedents of World War II is not without its positive aspects.

As Reagan and most Americans who lived through World War II understand, Hitler was permitted step-by-step, conquest-by-conquest to move across Europe until the entire continent was engulfed in war. As one act of violent aggression was appeased by the leaders of England, France and other nations, Hitler simply indulged in an additional act of even more violent aggression.

It finally required the most costly and treacherous war in the history of mankind to propel him and his fellow aggressors in Japan and Italy to defeat.

It is that lesson of World War II that has led every post-war president, from Truman to Reagan, to employ American economic and military assistance in an effort to contain communist aggression in Europe, Asia, Africa and Latin America. Sometimes it has worked; sometimes it hasn't. But the Soviet war machine has never been permitted to ignite the world as did Hitler's.

A second, vital lesson of World War II was emphasized by West Germany's white-haired, 65-year-old president, Richard von Weizsacker, when he met with Reagan in Bonn's Villa Hammerschmidt.

At the end of World War I, von Weizsacker noted, the United States disengaged itself from Europe and retreated into isolationism. It was during that period, while Americans watched complacently and in isolation from across the Atlantic, that economic, social and political chaos in Germany spawned the rise of Hitler.

After World War II, however, von Weizsacker pointed out, the United States not only stayed in Europe but helped rebuild the war-torn nations with the Marshall Plan. The United States also invoked the Truman Doctrine that halted Soviet aggression in Greece and Turkey.

Those two lessons must never be forgotten if freedom and democracy are to be preserved. The only way to make certain that it doesn't happen again, whether in Germany or elsewhere, is for the democracies of the world to remain vigilant and to strengthen the bonds of collective security that grew out of World War II.

The German people, who have made one of history's most spectacular comebacks in the 40 years since VE Day, may understand the meaning of those lessons better than most of the peoples of the world.

Protests take on international flavor

By KENNETH JAUTZ
Associated Press Writer

BITBURG, West Germany — A world-wide contingent of Jewish leaders, protesting President Reagan's visit to a cemetery where SS soldiers are buried, massed at the military gravesite Saturday while police broke up a sit-in by anti-Reagan protestors at the site of a Nazi concentration camp.

At the same time, about 250 masked, leather-clad youths battled riot police in Bonn and went on a window smashing and looting spree at the conclusion of the international economic summit in the West German capital.

Police spokesman Hans-Georg Classen said about three dozen people were arrested and about a dozen police officers were injured in the melee that exploded after more than 10,000 chanting demonstrators crowded into the cobblestoned Muensterplatz square to hear speakers denounce the summit and the arms buildup.

Another 7,000 persons demonstrated against the summit in nearby Cologne, about 20 miles north of Bonn. Local police said the rally ended without incident.

Reagan was scheduled to leave Bonn for Bergen-Belsen on Sunday, to deliver what aides described as a highly emotional speech on the Holocaust.

The president added the stop to his itinerary in an attempt to quell the rising tide of protest over his visit to the Bitburg military cemetary, where 49 members of the Nazi SS are buried alongside some 2,000 German war dead. But the furor only increased.

West German police broke up a sit-in by 11 American Jews and Christians at the Bergen-Belsen concentration camp site, where more than 50,000 perished. They group had defied orders to clear the area in advance of Reagan's visit to the memorial Sunday. After asking the protestors to leave, the unarmed police escorted them from the area and offered to help them find hotels.

"We must never again be silent," vowed Rabbi Avraham Weiss, one of the two U.S. rabbis protesting Reagan's visit to the Bitburg cemetery.

REAGAN

"We must never again be silent," Weiss said. "If we do not remember what happened, no one will remember." Later in the evening, police peaceably devicted 11 protesters who had defied a request to leave the area in advance of Reagan and Kohl's Sunday morning ceremony.

Other protesters, including 15 New York state legislators and 500 students from 17 nations, gathered closer to the military cemetery in Bitburg, 220 miles south of Hannover.

Reagan and Kohl will not speak during the 10-minute ceremony, which has been denounced by heavy majorities in both houses of the U.S. Congress as well as by Jewish, veterans and other groups in many nations.

Reagan, who has described the Bitburg trip as a gesture of reconciliation, was asked Saturday how he feels about going there.

"I am looking forward to it," the president replied.

In an acknowledged effort to blunt criticism of the Bitburg ceremony, Reagan and Kohl will be accompanied by relatives of the anti-Nazi resistance. A senior German official, speaking on condition he not be identified, said Saturday there would be five or six such relatives and that "absolutely none of those who were invited refused the invitations."

The only one identified so far is a West German army officer who said he is going only because his military superiors asked him to. He is Col. Berthold von Stauffenberg, 50, a son of Lt. Col. Claus von Stauffenberg, who was executed in 1944 for leading an abortive plot to kill Hitler.

In the far southern Bavarian town of Nesselwang, at a reunion of former Waffen SS soldiers, there was praise for Reagan for visiting the graves and for resisting pressure to call off the ceremony.

LAND

"We'd tell them that no there's no commercial wells there. It's a risky investment." Further, she said that "none of the major oil companies" were drilling there.

Land was sold in five-acre tracts for oil investments and not for housing developments, she said. The operation proposed the "possibility of (investors') selling" the land to major oil companies, which, Ms. Truitt said, apparently were not interested in leases there. Further, she said mineral rights there are owned by the state of Texas but the potential buyers of the surface rights were given the impression that somehow they could share in any oil production.

"They were trying to sell land to people out of state, people who were not coming down to look at it" and people who envisioned Texas as thoroughly oil rich. She said Apache Acres letterhead said the business was a member of the BBB; it was not, she said.

Ms. Truitt said she reported the operation to a state land management office.

Giacalone, 41, is the eldest son of longtime Detroit mafia boss Anthony "Tony Jack" Giacalone, the Times Herald said.

Dante, who is also known as Vito Desantos, has a lengthy arrest records in Detroit and Miami on charges ranging from gambling and prostitution to handling stolen good and loan-sharking — lending money at exorbitant interest rates — the Times Herald said.

Dante faces trial in Atlanta on tax evasion charges stemming from an FBI investigation into loan-sharking and in Miami in connection with a stolen property case.

During a January court hearing in the Miami case, authorities introduced a tape recording made by an undercover informant working with narcotics agents.

On the tape, Dante agreed to launder proceeds from drug smuggling through real estate investments and Indian gambling activities, a Justice Department attorney said.

Dante also had a bingo operation in Miami that collapsed about the same time he and Giacalone created their Texas business.

Florida authorities refused to issue bingo permits to charities using Dante's bingo hall because they suspected organized crime connections and illegal gambling, the Times Herald said.

Norman Eliot, a Miami accountant who once handled books for Giacalone and Dante and who was the original registered agent for V-G Inc., declined comment and refused to say how to contact Giacalone and Dante, the Herald said.

Giacalone was set up in the Florida home-building business by his father, the newspaper said, adding that he Giacalone built up a large home-building business in Florida with the help of his father and through subsidized home mortgages from the Federal Housing Administration.

But in the 1970s, his companies folded, leaving in their wake several million dollars worth of court judgments for bad debts. However, the Times Herald, said, Giacalone was personally liable for the debts.

A few months after Giacalone and Dante organized V-G Inc., they hired an answering service in Midland to serve as a mail drop and to handled nationwide mass mailings, the Times Herald said.

The corporation is owned by Z-J Trust and V-F Trust, both organized in Miami. The Times Herald said Dante and Giacalone are trustees of both.

Kluge said he felt "the highest responsibility to find a quality broadcaster to to be the successor owner" to Metromedia in Boston.

"I knew of the Hearst stations' reputation and record, and, more specifically, I had direct knowledge of how well Hearst operated the station which it acquired from us in Kansas City," he said. "I was aware of the Hearst interest in WCVB-TV and I felt committed to provide it with the first opportunity to buy the station."

WCVB-TV is one of the two largest non network-owned ABC affiliated stations in the nation in terms of access to television households. WCVB-TV and the ABC affiliate in Philadelphia are the ABC television Networks' largest outlets after its owned and operated stations in New York, Los Angeles, Chicago and San Francisco.

"As new technologies and new media emerge," Bennack said, "the strength of local broadcasters will depend more than ever on the commitment of stations to serve their communities vigorously with programs that speak to local issues and concerns. WCVB-TV has been a national leader in this type of broadcasting."

Before the start of the Hearst acquisition program in 1979, the privately held and broadly diversified communications company had grown primarily from within and had rarely sought the acquisition route for a period of more than 30 years. Media properties acquired by Hearst in recent years have included two other network-affiliated VHF television stations, KMBC-TV in Kansas City, Mo. and WDTN-TV in Dayton, Ohio; 10 daily newspapers in five states; Redbook, a major consumer magazine; varied book publishing interests including William Morrow & Company; cable systems and several consumer and trade publishing properties and service organizations. During the same period, Hearst launched Country Living and Colonial Homes magazines and has been a joint venturer in the newly formed LIFETIME and Arts & Entertainment cable networks.

Hearst is believed to be the largest publisher of monthly consumer magazines in the nation, publishing more than 20 magazines, including Good Housekeeping, Cosmopolitan and Harpers Bazaar in America and abroad. Hearst's 16 daily newspapers have combined circulation of more than 1,100,000 weekdays and 2,100,000 Sundays. The Hearst newspapers include the San Francisco Examiner, Times-Union (Albany, New York), Seattle Post-Intelligencer and the San Antonio Light.

Aside from the networks themselves (CBS, NBC and the to-be-merged Cap Cities/ABC), Hearst will become, with the addition of WCVB-TV as its sixth VHF station, the second largest operatator of network affiliated VHF television stations after Westinghouse Broadcasting. The Hearst television stations now include WTAE-TV, Pittsburgh; KMBC-TV, Kansas City; WISN-TV, Milwaukee; WDTN-TV, Dayton, all ABC affiliates; and WBAL-TV, Baltimore, a CBS affiliate. The compnay also owns and operates seven radio stations. The Hearst broadcst group reports to John G. Conomikes, vice president and general manager of broadcasting.

Correction

In a Friday story on neonatal services at Midland Memorial Hospital, the hospital board of directors was incorrectly identified as the board of trustees.

The actions described in the story were taken by the directors, who are elected by Midland County Hospital District voters; the trustees comprise a separate board, appointed by the board of governors.

The Reporter-Telegram regrets the error.

Murdoch may get other holdings

NEW YORK (AP) — Metromedia Corp. confirmed Saturday that it is selling its Boston television station to the Hearst Corp. and is negotiating the sale of six other big-city stations with media magnate Rupert Murdoch.

The two deals would be worth slightly more than $2 billion, according to Murdoch, who attended a meeting of Metromedia and Hearst executives in New York.

The impending sale of WCVB in Boston for $450 million was confirmed by Frank A. Bennack Jr., president of the Hearst Corp., and John Kluge, Metromedia chairman, following the session.

Kluge said the sale of WCVB, which must be approved by the Federal Communications Commission, was "part of an overall transaction which we will be able to announce Monday."

Murdoch said that "a deal is contemplated" for him and oilman Marvin Davis to buy other Metromedia stations in New York, Los Angeles, Chicago, Houston, Dallas and Washington. The purchase would apparently require Murdoch, an Australian, to become a U.S. citizen, a step he said he will take. It might also force him to sell some of his newspaper properties.

State district judge Larry Sullivant, right, presides over a custody hearing in Denton for two California children located through a nationwide telecast for missing children. Dr. Edwin A. McDonald, the father of Theresa, 9, and her brother Edwin, 7, testifies as the mother, Terry Lanotte McDonald looks on.

Judge: Children should be returned to father

STATE

DENTON (AP) — Two children found living secretly with their mother after a national telecast about missing youngsters were returned to their father Saturday by a state judge.

After a lengthy hearing, District Judge Larry Sullivant said he felt he had no other alternative but to return their children to their father, Dr. Edwin A. McDonald of Fresno, Calif.

Sullivant said he would honor a California court order that gave McDonald custody over his ex-wife, who had them when they were found earlier in the week in Denton and who has been charged in California with child abduction.

Teresa McDonald, 9, and her brother Edwin, 7, were located in Denton, 35 miles northwest of Dallas, on Tuesday, the day after Teresa's picture was shown on national television following a telecast of "Adam," the story of a missing child later found murdered.

An anonymous caller reported having seen the girl at a private school here.

The children, who had disappeared nearly two years ago, had been staying with their mother, Terry Lanotte-McDonald, who authorities said was living in Denton under an assumed name.

"The children have been made fugitives, and they can no longer have the benefit of a normal family relationship," Sullivant said in announcing his decision.

"I pray to God the children can recover from this traumatic experience," he said.

Ms. Lanotte-McDonald, 34, was arrested on a California warrant alleging child abduction, but was released on $8,000 bond. The children had been in the temporary care of the state, pending the hearing.

Ms. Lanotte-McDonald cried when the ruling came and began screaming after she was helped from the courtroom. McDonald dropped his head when he heard the news, and his present wife reached over to hug him. The children were not present.

After the hearing, Ms. Lanotte-McDonald's lawyer, George Carter of Fresno, said she would not fight extradition to California.

Although the woman had custody of the children when they were reported missing in August 1983 while visiting their father, a California court awarded custody to the father in June 1984.

Sullivant, in honoring the California ruling, said he didn't feel it was in the best interests of the children for their mother to have fled with them.

Farabee sworn in as governor for the day

AUSTIN (AP) — Well-wishers lined the walls and filled the seats of the Senate chamber and gallery Saturday as Sen. Ray Farabee, D-Wichita Falls, was sworn in as ceremonial governor for the day.

"Until today I always thought the legislative branch of government was the most important," Farabee said.

Farabee was elected president pro tem, the assistant presiding officer of the Texas Senate at the beginning of the legislative session. As president pro tem he is awarded the ceremonial honor to serve as governor for one day.

Farabee also draws the real governor's salary for one day.

Keeping with tradition, Lt. Gov Bill Hobby left the state for a trip to New Mexico, said Sen. Kent Caperton, D-Bryan. But lawmakers attending the ceremony said they did not know where White spent the day.

"Each legislative session, each era, each 50 years of our history brings new problems," Farabee said after recounting the history of Texas. "But with those new problems there are challenges.

"And this is a great day to come here and think about some of those problems and particularly to think about the history of this great state and new opportunities," he said.

Farabee, a 10-year veteran lawmaker, was praised by former Sen. A.R. "Babe" Schwartz, D-Galveston, as a "man of courage."

Ray Clymer, owner of a beer distribution company in Wichita Falls, called Farabee a "rising star" in Texas politics.

"I'm one of the number of citizens in our area of Texas who have known for a number of years that this day was going to come," Clymer said. "In Witchita Falls, Texas, no one any longer speculates about whether or not Ray Farabee will advance to a higher office. We only speculate on which office that might be."

The ocassion was filled with pagentry as bands from Farabee's alma maters, Wichita Falls High School, Midwestern State University and the University of Texas, played before and after the swearing-in ceremony.

STATE IN BRIEF

Dallas Democratic Party to celebrate JFK's birthday

DALLAS (AP) — The Dallas County Democratic Party will host a dinner May 29 to honor President John F. Kennedy's birthday, party officials say.

The observance will replace memorial services that were held on Nov. 22 — the day that Kennedy was assassinated in 1963. The local party discontinued that observance in 1983.

The dinner will be the first time there has been a Democratic celebration of Kennedy's birthday in Dallas, officials said. House Majority Leader Jim Wright, D-Fort Worth, has been invited to be the keynote speaker.

Democrats have contacted the Kennedy family in an attempt to get a family representative to attend, preferably John Kennedy Jr., according to Richard Cox, executive director of the county party.

"We buried the man more than 20 years ago and now it's time to celebrate his birthday," said Bob Hickman, county party vice chairman. "We celebrate everybody else's birthday. We don't celebrate Lincoln's assassination."

Bandido to be sentenced

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — A member of the Bandidos motorcycle gang faces sentencing May 24 following his conviction on a federal firearms charge.

Steven Robert Barbour was convicted Friday on charges of illegally possessing a firearm. He faces a maximum sentence of two years in prison and a $10,000 fine.

Barbour, who was arrested in a nationwide crackdown against motorcycle club members suspected of selling drugs, was ordered acquitted of federal drug charges on April 20 after a jury failed to reach a verdict.

U.S. District Judge Hayden Head Jr. ordered Barbour jailed until pending sentencing.

Men to be tried to Dallas

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — U.S. Attorney William Lutz says two men arrested in Albuquerque will be prosecuted in Dallas along with five people arrested there after a year-long investigation into an alleged cocaine smuggling ring.

Charges filed in Albuquerque against Christopher J. Reo, 29, and Anthony J. Reo Jr., 24, both of Detroit, were dismissed Friday by U.S. Magistrate Robert McCoy at the request of the U.S. attorney's office.

The two brothers had been charged with conspiring to smuggle into the United States from Colombia 700 kilograms of cocaine, and Lutz said the same charge will be filed against them in Dallas.

The five people arrested in Dallas were identified as James Lyne Harnage of Boulder, Colo.; William Schwarz of Basalt, Colo., and Santa Fe, N.M., and Albert Fortna, John Peter Boisvert and Ronald Paul Poland, addresses unknown.

Senate OKs Hall as judge

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Sam B. Hall Jr.'s appointment to be a federal judge was unanimously approved by the Senate on Friday.

"I'm very grateful, I'm very honored and I'm very humbled by this entire process," said Hall from his home in Marshal.

Hall, a Democrat from Marshall, was nominated by Republican freshman Sen. Phil Gramm. The two were fellow members of the Conservative Democratic Forum, also known as the "Boll Weevils."

"I am delighted," Gramm said in a statement after the Senate approved Hall by voice vote. "Through this confirmation, we lose a great and distinguished congressman, but we provide for the federal judiciary one of the finest people ever to wear the judicial robes of the republic."

Woman tosses baby at guard to escape arrest, officials say

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A woman tossed her 2-week-old baby at a security guard and dragged another toddler almost a quarter-mile in an attempt to escape arrest for shoplifting, officials say.

A 31-year-old woman was charged with misdemeanor theft after the Friday incident and bail was set at $400, police said. Her children were placed in an emergency children's shelter.

Police were called to a K Mart store about 3:30 p.m. after witnesses said a woman outside the store was quarrelling with a security guard over a $200 backpack designed to carry infants.

The guard, who asked not to be identified, said, "I followed her out the door, confronted her and said, 'Let's go back inside.' She said, 'I don't want to go to jail' and then tossed me the 2-week-old baby.

"She then threw me the baby holder," he said. "She reached to grab the other one (child) and grabbed him brutally by the shirt. I told her to be careful, that I was afraid she would drop or choke the child."

The woman then took off her shoes and began running, dragging the toddler behind her, the guard said.

She got into a car and rode a short distance with a stranger, he said. Then she jumped from the car and ran into a wooded area behind the store, where police arrested her.

"I want my babies back," police said the woman shouted as she was handcuffed and loaded into a police car. "I didn't steal anything from K Mart."

Shooting suspect just out of jail

HOUSTON (AP) — A double amputee accused of shooting a woman during a crime spree had been freed from the Harris County Jail on "good behavior" only six days earlier, investigators say.

Edward Gale Crawford, 33, who has no legs and uses a wheelchair, had served four months of a one-year jail term on an aggravated assault conviction when he was set free April 27, The Houston Post reported Saturday.

Crawford, of Baytown, who lost his legs in a train accident in 1976, was charged with attempted capital murder, aggravated robbery and aggravated kidnapping Friday afternoon, police Sgt. Fred Berner said.

He was held without bond in the Harris County Jail.

Court records show Crawford had been charged with murder in the Dec. 8, 1974 rape, strangulation and burning of two 13-year-old girls. The charge was dismissed in 1980 because of insufficient evidence, records show.

In another incident, Crawford was arrested Dec. 30, 1984, on a charge of using an arm of his wheelchair to beat a Houston police officer, court records show. He was found guilty Feb. 13 and sentenced to one year in the county jail.

Police said a man in a wheelchair steered into a south Houston hamburger stand about 7 p.m. Thursday and robbed the owner of $80. He then wheeled across the street into a department store parking lot, armed with two .38-caliber pistols, police said.

Police said the man then shot Roberta Rose Hinkle, 62, who was listed in poor condition Saturday morning at a Houston hospital. The man also tried to kidnap Jennifer Westerhoff, 21.

Ms. Westerhoff said she wasn't aware of the shooting as she drove into the parking lot but she saw a man in a wheelchair crossing her path.

She said Crawford pointed a gun at her and asked for a ride. She said she opened the door for him and he scooted into the back seat, pulling his wheelchair behind him. As he was attempting to get into the front seat, Ms. Westerhoff said she put the car in drive and jumped out.

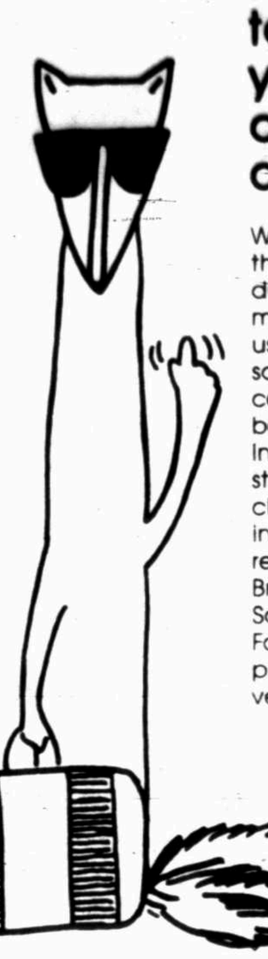

The man then got out of the car and rolled up to a car occupied by Donald Keith Harmon, 27, and Dianne Bennett, 30, who were ordered to drive him around Houston. Ms. Bennett said the man eventually ordered Harmon to stop the car and get him a taxi.

Cab driver Dallas Joseph Decuir said he took the man to several homes and then to a Veterans Administration Hospital where the man walked on his hands into the building only to return minutes later in a wheelchair, Decuir said.

Decuir said he left the man at a service station to get a faulty wheel on his chair fixed and planned to pick him up later. After Decuir left the station, he was advised by his supervisors that police were looking for a double amputee.

Police said they arrested the suspect at the station about 11:45 p.m.

TWC trying to adjudicate water rights before next drought

By BILL KIDD

AUSTIN — There was, some time back, a commercial which warned that "it's not nice to fool Mother Nature."

Not only is it not nice, it's impossible.

So that's why the Texas Water Commission is working to find ways to cooperate with Mother Nature in stretching Texas' water supplies.

Depending upon the part of the state, the water problem may be critical, approaching critical, or not so critical, but overall, the problem is becoming more severe.

Which is why the TWC is attempting to complete its work in the adjudication of water rights throughout Texas before the next severe drought.

Texas legislators approved the adjudication effort in 1967, and the effort really began in the 1969-70 period.

TWC Commissioner Lee Biggart reports the agency now is in the final stages of the adjudication effort, with the work at the Commission level expected to be completed by the end of the summer (with TWC having set an August 30 deadline).

At that point, the adjudication effort will go to the courts for final approval, but Biggart expects the work will be completed swiftly.

The effort to impose an artificial order, in the form of water rights, in the world of nature, where rivers may be flooding one year and nearly dry the next, hasn't been a simple one, and it has led to some peculiar situations.

One of those occurred recently as the Lower Colorado River Authority, Colorado River Municipal Water District and TWC attempted to approve the permits required in the settlement of the Stacy Reservoir lawsuit.

As part of that settlement, LCRA amended its permit for Lake Buchanan, which has a 1938 water right, to permit transfer of some of the water from Buchanan to Stacy.

But the difficulty is that the transfer is only on paper, since Stacy is upstream of Buchanan.

Adding to the confusion is the fact that between Stacy, which was given water rights officially as of 1978, there are folks with water rights between 1938 and 1978, so that water has to be released to provide for their needs.

Juggling around the various priority dates, and discussions on how much water should be required at any one time, led one observer, during a break in the proceedings, to suggest to one of the participants that establishing a watermaster on the Colorado River might be a much simpler approch.

"You won't get any argument from me," was the answer.

Before long, the Colorado and other Texas rivers are likely to have watermasters overseeing the use of their water.

The Rio Grande has had a watermaster operation since 1971, and there is agreement among water experts that the system has been working well.

Austin attorney Tim Brown, formerly chief attorney for the TWC, says the system has "worked quite well" for the Lower Rio Grande Valley, where there once was "constant litigation" over water rights.

"Whenever you talk about water rights," Brown notes, "a common complaint you hear is that the person whose diversion point is located upstream takes your water."

A watermaster operation "imposes a realistic and meaningful remedy for protecting senior water rights holders," Brown says.

TWC has been attempting to use streamflow restrictions to allow additional water rights to be granfed in streams where there are large numbers of senior appropriators, and limited amounts of water.

But that, Brown says, "is just a very academic approach," and may be "of little solace to the person downstream who is not getting his water."

Biggart agrees that the Rio Grande operation "has worked really well," perhaps due to the fact that there are two major reservoirs on the river which allow regulation of releases.

Watermasters can work on other streams, he agrees, and adds there isn't likely to be any other approach.

By using a wastermaster, Biggart says, the state can grant more permits and "more sophisticated permifs"in streams, allowing more people to use available water, without endangering senior appropriators (who would have first call on available water during shortages).

"In basin after basin, we are running out of water," Biggart says, with the critical water problem spreading to other areas of the state.

"The water shortage is now moving to Central Texas," Biggart comments. "It's not just a West Texas problem."

"What we're trying to do is to get everything in place before the next critical drought."

If the TWC succeeds, that time of shortage could find watermasters who, while they can't fool Mother Nature, can make her periodic harshness more bearable for Texans.

HOW TO USE STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE

1. Call the StockQuote Hotline number listed below. A computer voice will answer and ask you for the Account Code.
2. Enter the Account Code, then depress the star key (*) on your telephone. The computer will then ask you to enter your Stock Code.
3. Enter the Stock Code for the stock you wish quoted, the computer will quote the Ticker Symbol, Current Price and Net Change from the previous day's close.
4. After the stock is quoted, the computer will ask you to enter another Stock Code. You have two options:

A. You may request the quote for another stock simply by repeating Step 3, or...
B. You may request additional information on the stock just quoted by once more depressing the star key (*), in which case the computer will respond with the Price, Net Change, Volume, High and Low. The computer will then ask you to enter another Stock Code (repeat Step 3).

You may enter up to 10 requests per call.

STOCK CODES

All Stock Codes are based on industry standard Ticker Symbols provided by your broker or available from any Standard & Poor's Stock Ticker Guide. Codes are made up of a series of two-digit numbers, each representing one of the letters in the Ticker Symbol.

To determine the two-digit code for any letter of a Ticker Symbol, remember: The first key to be depressed is always the one on which the letter appears. The second key is always a "1," "2" or "3" indicating that letter's position on its own key (first, second or third position). EXAMPLE: "IBM" = "43 22 61"; "BX" = "22 92." Remember to depress the star key (*) after entering each code.

Chili days end for Corsicana

CORSICANA (AP) — As the last few tamales rolled down the ramp, a spicy Corsicana tradition that was first dispensed from the back of a horse-drawn wagon drew quietly to a close.

As it prepares to move to new headquarters in Dallas, Wolf Brand Products made its final production run in Corsicana Friday, nearly 90 years after creator Lyman Davis first sold his chili from a wagon in this Central Texas city.

Davis and his Mexican ranch cook concocted the fabled chili recipe before the turn of the century. The brew got its name from a salesman who used to travel in an auto with a wolf head on the hood.

And at one point, Wolf Brand sales representatives drove trucks with caged wolves in the back.

Davis opened the Corsicana cannery in 1921, and although Wolf Brand was sold to the Quaker Oats Co. in 1957, production continued on much the same as before.

Wolf Brand became the Southwest's premier chili, and the company eventually added other product lines such as tamales and different blends of chili.

Last year Quaker Oats acquired Stokely-Van Camp and its Dallas plant, and corporate officials decided they could save $1 million annually by combining the two operations.

When the Wolf Brand shutdown was announced last August, the company instituted an accumulative bonus plan of $150 a month for employees who remained on the payroll through May 3, the official shutdown date.

El Paso hotels, motels provide free rooms for cancer-treatment patients

EL PASO (AP) — When Dorothy Cole learned she had cancer, her biggest fear was not of the disease or the radiation therapy needed to treat it, but of her ability to get from her southern New Mexico hometown to El Paso daily for treatment.

The 118-mile drive from this West Texas city to Truth or Consequences, N.M., "would have been too much to make each day, especially after the radiation," said Mrs. Cole, 64. "I couldn't have gone back and forth," she said.

But she and her 67-year-old husband, Jim, also knew they could not afford to stay at an El Paso hotel for six weeks, the average time needed for radiotherapy.

The Coles' fears were allayed when an El Paso Cancer Treatment Center social worker told them of a unique program, available in Texas only in El Paso and Austin, designed to aid people just like them.

Established a year ago by the El Paso Metro Unit of the American Cancer Society and this city's Hotel and Motel Association , the "guestroom" program provides free hotel accommodations for out-of-town cancer-treatment patients.

"We couldn't have gone through with the treatment if they didn't have this program," Cole said. "It made things possible."

Under the program, out-of-town cancer patients who show a financial need are housed at hotels for up to six weeks at no charge. The accommodations usually include one double room for adult patients and their families.

Fifteen hotels currently participate in the program in El Paso, the first Texas city to initiate it.

Individual hotel managers determine how long guests can stay at their inns.

During their six weeks in El Paso, the Coles were housed at five hotels, they said.

"But the moving didn't bother us," Mrs. Cole said. "We were amazed we could stay anywhere for free at all."

Frank Preston, manager of the Texian Inn, a program participant, said, the Hotel and Motel Association became involved when it was "looking for a charity and saw the need of cancer patients for such a deal."

Woman's skull to be reconstructed

HOUSTON (AP) — A movie scene led a Harris County prosecutor to a graveyard where workers dug up a woman's body and removed her skull with hopes of reconstructing it to properly identify the woman.

David Knight, an assistant district attorney, said Friday he hopes a process called "skull sculpting" will strenghten his case against a motorcycle gang member accused of killing Rene Lynn Mau, a stripper.

Mary A. Mize, a forensic composite artist, will reconstruct Ms. Mau's skull into what the woman looked like, Knight said. Knight hopes the reconstructed skull will prove that the woman buried in east Houston was indeed Ms. Mau.

"It's an experiment," Knight said. "It's another evidentiary tool to prove the case."

Knight said he got the sculpting idea from the movie "Gorky Park," in which a murderer removes his victims' faces and police hire a scientist to do the same task Ms. Mize has been commissioned to do.

"This is not anything I would expect to prove her identity beyond a reasonable doubt," Knight said.

But combined with other testimony, it could tend to convict Ms. Mau's alleged killer, he said.

Calvin Louis Miquez, 36, is charged with murder in the Dec. 5, 1981, killing of the 34-year-old stripper. He was a member of Satan's Enforcers, a motorcycle gang, Knight said.

Miquez was indicted after a man who said he saw the woman beaten to death reported the slaying to authorities in March 1984.

Another witness has told authorities he saw two men and a woman, all of whom he knew, beat a woman to death near his home on Dec. 5, 1981. But the victim was so badly disfigured by the beating that the witness could not identify photographs of Ms. Mau, whom he did not know, Knight said.

District Attorney John Holmes said he could remember one other such case where prosecutors attempted to reconstruct a skull.

Knight said a woman also has been charged with Ms. Mau's death but has not been arrested. The third man seen during the beating is still at large, he said.

Secret Service arrests five counterfeiters

FORT WORTH (AP) — Secret Service agents say the arrests of five people have cracked a counterfeiting ring that produced phony $100 bills.

Federal and local authorities seized more than $500,000 in fake money, printing equipment and plates at storage facilities in Burleson and Arlington late last week, officials said.

The scheme, which is believed to have begun in Oklahoma, moved to Arlington and was discovered before any of the counterfeit bills were passed off to the public, said Secret Service agent Joe Gallo, head of the counterfeiting squad in Dallas.

Along with thick stacks of fake $100 bills, agents confiscated a printing press, camera, plates, a paper cutter and negatives used to make the counterfeits, officials said.

"By Secret Service standards, this particular counterfeit money wasn't especially deceptive, but it was deceptive enough to be passed on to the general public," Gallo said. "This could have caused us a big headache."

The ring is believed to have made $1 million in counterfeit bills in two batches, Gallo said. However, the first batch was destroyed because of imperfections, he said.

The operation was stopped in its early stages last week when Arlington police arrested a suspect found trying to flush 22 of the fake bills down a toilet, said Ronald W. Hicks, resident agent-in-charge of the Fort Worth office of the Secret Service.

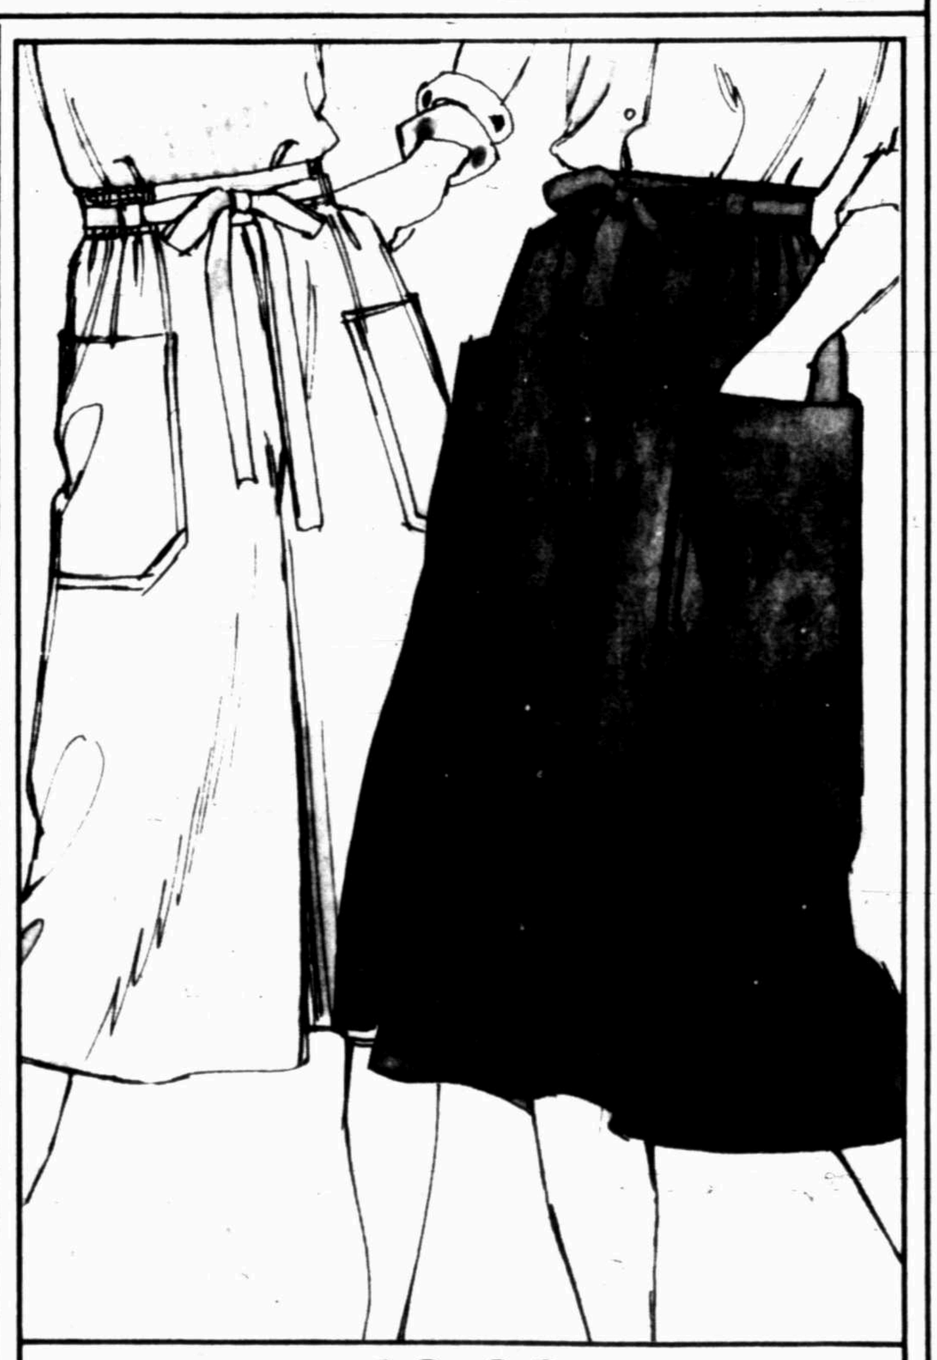

Subsequent investigations led to criminal complaints being filed against Rolf Corneliussen, 51, of Fort Worth; Raymond Henry Masters, 51, of Arlington; his son, Daniel Raymond Masters, 27, of Arlington; James Brockman, 44; and his wife, Celia Ann Brockman, 34, both of Arlington, investigators said.

The five are accused of conspiracy to manufacture, possess and distribute counterfeit currency.

Vietnamese, Cambodian refugees return to Marine base for reunion

NATION

CAMP PENDLETON, Calif. (AP) — About 10,000 Southeast Asian refugees flowed into this Marine Corps base Saturday for a reunion that included Vietnamese barbeques, photographs of long-lost friends and exhibits of their life when they arrived here a decade ago.

The revelers were among 80,000 Cambodian and Vietnamese immigrants who fled to the United States when South Vietnam and Cambodia fell to communist forces in 1975. The refugees were processed through Camp Pendleton, where they lived in tents.

At the reunion, they reviewed how much had changed since then.

Most of the adults spoke in their native tongue, while their children, many of them too young to recall the camp, chatted in English.

"This place looks strange. I don't remember anything about it," said Dung Tran, a 15-year-old girl from Santa Ana, who was 5 when her family came to the base from South Vietnam. "I was kind of curious to see how it used to look."

Dung's sister Nhung, 20, remembered the perilous journey to freedom.

"April 30 was my birthday. It was the day we left Saigon to come to America. They didn't want to let us on the boat. We had to give gold and all the money we had and finally they let us on," she said.

The campgrounds where the tent cities once stood were vacant, but the area where refugees were released to sponsors was turned into a festival, with green tents containing carnival games, a display of photos taken a decade ago and a model of the living conditions the refugees knew: 24 metal and canvas cots.

"When they first came in, this is what they saw," said Master Sgt. Cloyd Sparks, who posed for pictures with dozens of Vietnamese he met 10 years ago.

"It was hectic during those days. We were putting in showers, trying to make these people comfortable, and teaching them English. It was quite a job," he said.

Crowds of Vietnamese huddled around a massive sculpture called the Hand of Hope. The 8-foot hand, with replicas of a Vietnamese and a Cambodian child cradled in its palm, was covered with freshly cut roses. The work was dedicated on July 4, 1975 after being completed by a Vietnamese artist and two Marines.

"When we first came, we were very touched by their sensitivity and caring," said Loan Bui, who was 8 years old when she and her family arrived.

Astronauts prepare for landing

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Challenger's astronauts charged into the final shifts of their mission Saturday, working to add to science studies that already could fill a library and monitoring a menagerie of healthy rats and monkeys aboard Spacelab 3.

The seven-man crew worked quietly and intensely Saturday, operating 13 of 15 experiments aboard the Spacelab 3 module in the shuttle's cargo bay in a rush toward mission's end.

Today, the astronauts will start packing up for Monday morning's return to Earth.

"Everybody had a good sleep, we're in good spirits and we're ready for a good day," mission commander Bob Overmyer said as his Gold team began its 12-hour shift.

Overmyer said the crew had been working vigorously and "we come off our shifts so tired that we're hurting."

"All of the animals I can see appear to be moving and in good health," said Bill Thornton, a physician and the chief zoo keeper for the 24 rats and two squirrel monkeys aboard Spacelab.

Mission science director Joe Cremin said the astronauts already have gathered enough data to fill a library — 2½ million video frames and 210 billion bits of electronic data. This is enough material, said Cremin, to fill 44,000 volumes of 200 pages each.

The crew concentrated on growing crystals and on experiments in fluid dynamics. These studies have high priority because of their potential for demonstrating the value of space manufacture of exotic metals and glasses, and for development in weightlessness of advanced electronic components.

Other experiments gathered medical data on the animals and on the men themselves.

The seven-day science mission is scheduled to end at 12:05 p.m. EDT Monday with a landing on the dry lakebed runway at Edwards Air Force Base, Calif.

In preparation for their return to Earth, the astronauts will start shutting down Spacelab today, with a final close-out set for about midnight.

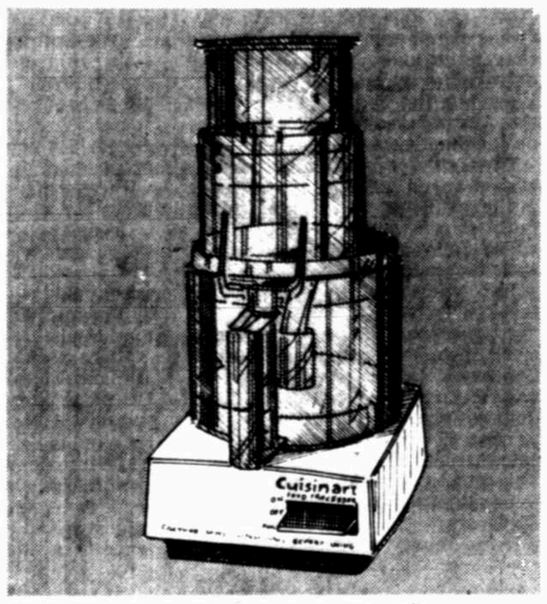

Cremin said 14 of 15 experiments were "fully successful."

At least some data was gathered from each of the 15, although an astronomy camera was used only once because of the failure of an airlock.

Longtime Midland County Jail issue e

Proposition 1: The issuance, sale and delivery of not more than $3 million in tax bonds

The passage of a $3 million jail bond issue on Saturday wouldn't transform the Midland County Jail into a haven for prisoners.

The issue, titled Proposition No. 1, is to bring the courthouse jail up to standards set by the Texas Commission on Jail Standards in Austin and to maintain those compliances until the jail is abandoned and, possibly, a new one is built. It also is to fund a study of long-range county government needs and to finance the expansion of Culver Youth Home, a juvenile detention center.

"We want to complete our present jail to its fullest ability to have about 90 additional bunks," said Bill Williams, spokesman for the Concerned Citizens Committee, also known as the Committee of Concerned Voters. "Secondly, we want to bring the present jail up to Texas Commission on Jail Standards standards, so they'll be happy."

The actual issuance of bonds could be less than $3 million, depending on bids on the three projects in Proposition No. 1.

The Concerned Citizens Committee, which advocates passage of Proposition No. 1 for the jail renovation, was primarily responsible for blocking the Midland County Commissioners' Court's plans for building a new jail 2½ miles east of the downtown courthouse and expanding Culver Youth Home under $9.9 million in certificates of obligation, which do not require voter approval. Tax bonds do.

"We've talked about $2 million and down all along instead of $3 million," said Williams, a 49-year-old Midland businessman.

The Midland Chamber of Commerce also has endorsed Proposition No. 1. It was the Chamber's Midland County Jail Task Force which recommended jail renovation, expansion of the juvenile detention center and the study. Chamber President Jim Alsup said the Chamber's action will demonstrate to the Jail Commission that "we are responsibly meeting the problem."

Of that $2 million which Williams projects, about $1.25 million would be required to renovate the jail. Renovation would include:

— Installing cells in the jail's undeveloped northwest quadrant — the "bull pen."

— Repairing or replacing plumbing.

— Building an exercise area on top of the courthouse.

— Replacing air-conditioning units.

— Replacing the roof.

— Installing a centrally-controlled locking mechanism for single cells.

— Installing a water closet in the holding cell.

— Bolstering the smoke-purging system.

"These are dollars that need to be spent anyway," said Williams. "Even if the voters of Midland County feel comfortable in voting for the $10 million jail, it's probably 2½ years away from being usable. (Proposition 2 plans actually provide for an estimated $8.4 million for new jail facilities).... Is Austin (the Jail Commission) agreeable to wait? We are of the opinion we've got to bring it up to standards immediately."

In addition to the projected $1.25 million for renovating the jail, Williams is allowing $500,000 for expanding Culver Youth Home and as much as $100,000 for a study of Midland County's governmental needs into the 21th Century. But he suspected that a thorough study — not architectural drawings and blueprints — could be done for about $25,000. His estimates total less than $2 million.

Were the bids to total $2 million, then that amount — and not $3 million — in tax bonds would be issued.

But even if bids were to peak out at $3 million, the tax-rate hike needed to pay off the short-term indebtedness possibly would be between 2 and 2.6 cents per $100 valuation. That would mean a tax-rate increase from the current 16.5 cents per $100 valuation to 18.5 cents up to a maximum of 19.1 cents. Under the 2-cent increase, taxes on a $100,000 house would increase by $20 to $185 per year. Under a 2.6-cent hike, taxes on that $100,000 house would increase by $26 to $191 a year.

Williams is asking voters to cast ballots for Proposition No. 1 for the jail renovation and against Proposition No. 2 for the new jail.

"If you vote for both of them and they both pass, the (Commissioners') Court has the option to do what they think best."

Williams is convinced the jail can be brought up to standards.

"I think there's a lot of confusion right now (about completion of the jail's northwest quadrant)," Williams said. "There are still stories going around that say our jail can't be brought up to standards. But Sheriff (Gary) Painter will tell you he's within seeing distance of solving every problem if we can get these bids."

But Williams admitted he doesn't know how many years the revamped jail will serve the county until it becomes outmoded again or too small for the influx of inmates. "I think we are going to be honest with the people and tell them 'We don't know.'

"If we can say we are only going to grow as our population grows," he said, "then I think our proposal will last for five to eight years."

He countered the argument that inmate population is surging due to the changes in the driving-while-intoxocated and theft laws which demand more jail time or which convert certain crimes from felony to misdemeanor offenses. "Looks like to me we ought to have a true picture (of increased jail population) more than a year after the laws were changed."

Williams and his Concerned Citizens Committee see no urgency is flinging headlong into a new jail-building program.

"What's imperative about rushing?" he asked. "I think all four commissioners today would agree that our little expansion would take care of today's needs. If it will take care of today's needs, why don't we investigate total needs before we build a $10 million jail out in the county?"

"We do not need a jail away from the courthouse. I think it should be built with the courthouse where we've got access to the courts and to the clerks."
— Sheriff Gary Painter

"We must do something.... If somebody wants to build a jail and lease it to the federal government, let's let free-enterprise do it."
— Committee spokesman Bill Williams

"The jail and the courthouse, in my view, are interrelated. The functions of the courthouse historically are part of what happens in that jail."
— Attorney John Hyde

And its proponents

Though the dominant feature of Proposition No. 1 is for the jail renovation, the study of long-range county government needs is intrinsically linked to the jail.

And it is getting more visible support than is Proposition No. 2 for a proposed jail apart from the courthouse.

Of the four commissioners, Scott Welch is a staunch supporter of Proposition No. 1 for jail renovation. His choice is contrary to the preferences of the other three commissioners and County Judge Bill Ahders.

"I'm opposed to splitting the jail and the courthouse," Welch said. "And though it calls for $3 million, I hope we can do it for about half of that. It would give us time to look the situation over to see where we are right now."

Welch said action has to be taken quickly due to the expense of transferring the overflow of prisoners to other jails.

He said he wouldn't be surprised if the completed jail up there wouldn't last several years. "I don't like to call it a 'Band Aid' (measure). I think we're finishing it."

From the "very outset," Commissioner C. Wallace "Wally" Craig has favored the new jail proposed under the $9.9 million bond issue.

"I did my best on that Task Force to convince everybody that we did need a new jail."

He was not successful. The vote on the 11-member group was overwhelming but was not unanimous. Commissioner Durward Wright, also a member of the Task Force, said he was "not totally in tune" with the group.

Although with reservations, Craig backed the Task Force recommendation.

"I went along with it (for jail renovation) trying and searching to find somebody to support something, because we haven't had person one support anything up to that point," Craig said.

"I still think the jail ought to be out of town," he said. "I have felt that moving it from downtown was, in the long run, the most economical and best way to meet that need."

Please see ONE, Page 10A

...And if both bond propos

If both jail bond issues fail, what would happen?

"I don't know what we'll do," said Midland County Commissioner C. Wallace "Wally" Craig.

"We probably would live with what we have with the jail repairs being made and ship more and more prisoners out of town," he said.

Commented Commissioner Durward Wright: "For the time being, we will continue to transport. It's extremely costly." Wright noted that the voters will have a "chance to express their desires" in Saturday's election. He suggested that voters can opt for an unwritten choice — transferring more prisoners — by rejecting both propositions on the ballot.

Proposition No. 1 for $3 million would fund jail renovation, a study of county courthouse and jail needs and an expansion of Culver Youth Home. Proposition No. 2 for $9.9 million would finance an $8.4 million jail and the youth home.

"If both go down," said Commissioner Win Brown, "they (the Texas Commission on Jail Standards) could probably shut us down. They would probably be a little more lenient than shutting it down."

Nevertheless, Brown said there's a "remote possibility" that the Commissioners' Court again would vote for issuing certificates of obligation to finance the jail. The Concerned Citizens Committee effectively blocked an earlier issuance of $9.9 million in certificates by petitioning that the jail issue be decided by a vote of the people.

"The concerned citizens were so concerned that they have just about totally disrupted the county's operation," Brown charged.

"Our first priority is to build on Culver Youth Home," he said. "They've got to have a maximum-security area out there. That's already federally-mandated, period.

There's agreement on one thing: Jail must be brought up

Like a brazen warrior, the Midland County Jail has been taking on flak even while it counterattacks to stay alive. It may not.

The jail is a wounded mass of steel and concrete resting above the downtown Midland County Courthouse on 30 pillars. The columns give the 1930-vintage edifice a neo-Grecian look.

It may perish in the public arena like a hapless warrior. Or it may survive. Its fate may or may not be decided in the two-phase jail bond election on Saturday.

The jail's woes have been accented and held for public purview by the Texas Commission on Jail Standards. In recent years, the Jail Commission has cited the jail for several violations and has suggested it might shut down the jail if it was not brought up to standards.

The problem, which seems to have turned into a dilemma, is this: To bring the jail up to standards by building a new jail or by renovating the old one.

There are opposing forces to both suggestions, although both factions and spin-off groups agree that something has to be done. There is no unanimity, even on the Midland County Commissioners' Court, on how to approach the jail issue. The issue is further clouded and complicated by those who see an urgency to expand the courthouse and courtroom space; they consider the jail and courthouse as inseparable.

Compounding the jail issue is the diminishing usefulness of the courthouse.

"We are in dire need of courthouse, courtroom expansion," said County Commissioner Win Brown. "All of those district courts and county courts need expansion."

Growth of county government is making the courthouse seem smaller and smaller. Offices are crowded and running out of file and people space. Some services have been relocated to annexes; even related functions are split from floor-to-floor and to another building. The judiciary is hungry for more courtrooms and, in cases, for more a stately and dignified courtroom atmosphere.

"The lack of appropriate work space does reduce efficiency," said District Attorney Al Schorre.

However, County Commissioner Durward Wright noted that though courthouse space "is an urgency of sorts ... it isn't as urgent as the jail issue."

How to resolve the courthouse-jail problems is enigmatic. Judge Vann Culp of the 238th State District Court sees a trend toward the concept of a house of courts — buildings set aside just for the courts due to the growing judiciary.

But the optimum solution for Midland County would be to "demolish the whole (courthouse) building" and build a complex adequately to handle courthouse, jail and other county government needs far into the future. The expense would be "tremendous," he noted. "It's not the cheapest, but it would be ideal."

What happens, though, ultimately is up to the four commissioners, the county judge and people acting as voters and taxpayers.

"I have the greatest respect for what they (the commissioners) are trying to do," Culp said. "I understand the dilemma. They have studied it more than anyone else."

THE MALIGNED JAIL has been under two of 33 remedial orders issued statewide by the Jail Commission since 1977. Those orders were issued in 1983 and again in 1985 after the jail failed to measure up to standards. The Jail Commission limited the inmate population to 85 due to the system of classifying prisoners according to sex, first and repeat offenders, type of crimes, temperament of inmates and other variables. The jail has 101 bunks.

"When they (the Midland County commissioners) were in the planning stages of this new jail (in 1983 and 1984)," said Robert O. "Bob" Viterna, "we accepted the fact that they said they were going to fix up all the deficiencies by building a new jail." Viterna is the executive director of the Austin-based Texas Commission on Jail Standards.

The Jail Commission essentially had granted the county a grace period while it was making "good faith" efforts to build the jail.

The Jail Commission now seems short on grace and patience.

The proposed new jail "fell through" in late December 1984 after the Concerned Citizens Committee, also known as the Committee of Concerned Voters, ran interference and effectively blocked the Midland County Commissioners' Court's plans to raise $9.9 million through certificates of obligation to build a new jail. The committee wanted the jail issue to be submitted to a vote of informed taxpayers.

If the county commissioners were distraught then, the Jail Commission was severe and stern.

"The bottom line is the Commission could close the jail and ship everybody out," Viterna said, if standards are continually violated and inmate population is not held in check. "It's going to be an expensive proposition."

The sheriff already is transferring prisoners to other West Texas jails to keep the population well below the 85 limit.

"Crime is on the upbeat," said County Judge Bill Ahders. "Midland is growing. We are going to have to have a suitable jail."

"If current trends hold true," said Midland County Attorney Mark H. Dettman, "our population will keep jumping quite rapidly in the jail." He cited the more stringent driving-while-intoxicated (DWI) laws which require that a guilty defendant must serve jail time except for the first offense. The "bull pen" area of the Midland County Jail will get a facelift if either Proposition 1 or 2 passes Saturday. If Proposition 1 is approved the space will be converted into cells, but if voters opt for Proposition 2, which calls for a new jail, the space will be made into offices or courtrooms.

Dual jail bond issue grew both ur...

What the Midland County citizenry does, if anything, about the County Jail will be determined Saturday when voters have the options of voting for one of two, for both or for neither of two propositions.

Proposition No. 1 is for a $3 million tax bond issue to renovate the 11-year-old jail; expand Culver Youth Home, a juvenile detention center; and fund a long-range study of Midland County's needs.

Proposition No. 2 is for a $9.9 million bond issue, which is the same as the earlier proposal which the Committee of Concerned Voters blocked. It would fund an $8.4 million jail, which the commissioners had planned to build on seven acres of county-owned land 2½ miles east of the downtown courthouse. Proposition No. 2 also would finance the Culver Youth Home expansion.

The evolution of the dual bond issue was full of happenstance and persistence. The Committee of Concerned Voters, represented by former County Commissioner Charlie Welch, retired pipeliner Tom Mitchell and businessman Bill Williams, had petitioned the commissioners to hold a bond election to let the people — and not the commissioners — decide if the county should build a new jail. The petition succeeded in part. It blocked jail construction, which was to get under way earlier this year. But an election never materialized. The commissioners had set a bond election for Feb. 2 following the committee's pleadings. But the commissioners cancelled it after the committee, via Welch, requested that the election be postponed so that the electorate could be thoroughly informed on the jail issues.

"WE WANT TO RESOLVE this jail issue in a reasonable, cooperative manner that will please the voters of Midland County," said Welch, commissioner from 1969 until 1983.

The commissioners on Jan. 14 nixed the election. And Welch subsequently requested the Midland Chamber of Commerce to set up a committee to probe the jail issues. The commissioners concurred.

Subsequently, the Chamber did set up an 11-member Task Force, headed by banker Wayne Merritt, to make recommendations to resolve the jail problems.

On March 21, the Task Force issued its recommendations. It recommended to the Midland County Commissioners' Court that the existing jail be renovated "in the most cost-effective manner" to eliminate deficiencies cited by the Jail Commission. In addition, the Task Force suggested that juvenile prisoner and courthouse office space be provided "as needed." In addition, the Task Force recommended a "major feasibility study" to develop master plans for a county government complex — including courthouse and jail — to serve the county for the next 40 to 50 years.

The Task Force also "encouraged" a joint city-county effort "due to overlapping jail and other services."

"I think it is an excellent idea," said Midland County Judge Bill Ahders. "I think it is asinine to have two jails."

Countered Midland Mayor G. Thane Akins: "It certainly has some merit, ...but the advantages are not obvious to me at this point." Midland's Municipal Court is conveniently just across the street from the Public Safety Building, which includes the City Jail and Police Station. Commissioner Durward Wright said the county "stands ready to work with the city at any point in time" on a joint city-county jail effort. "For the time being, their (the city's) oper... them. Proposition 2: The issuance, sale and delivery of not more than $9.9 million in tax bonds

The proposed Midland County Jail to be built under a $9.9 million tax bond issue would be "the most cost effective and revolutionized" in jail construction, according to County Commissioner Win Brown.

"It is one of the best plans."

The jail would contain safety and security features which would afford space to expand but would not provide "creature comforts that would be conducive to someone attempting to get in the jail," said Commissioner Durward Wright.

"It would be concrete and steel," said Wright, and would serve the community well into the 21st Century.

"Safety and security features would be built in, highly complimented by the Texas Commission on Jail Standards," Wright said.

And building the jail apart from the courthouse would afford 55 percent more courthouse space for courtroom and office development. Jail hardware would be removed from the courthouse's fifth-floor, which overhangs the rest of the building, and the sheriff's offices would be relocated from the courthouse basement to the jail site. County officials are deploring crowded courthouse conditions and are citing the need for more courtrooms and increased offices space. Other traditional courthouse functions, such as tax collections, adult and juvenile probation, elections, county engineering, agriculture, welfare, county construction, veterans service and certain roles of District Attorney Al Schorre and County Attorney Mark Dettman are located in three annexes.

"The bottom line is what is the most economical thing for taxpayers," said Brown, "and that is why I heartily support Proposition 2" for the new jail. "We (commissioners) know what we are looking at, and we don't have to do any speculating...We are in dire straits for a new jail. We are in dire straits for more office and courtroom space."

The "patch-work" associated with Proposition No. 1 for jail renovation ultimately would "double or triple the cost to the taxpayers," Brown said. He reasoned that plans for a "bigger and costlier edifice" will emerge if Proposition No. 1 is approved and Proposition No. 2 dies.

"We can systematically start budgeting money for renovating (the courthouse) to keep the courthouse for the courts and record keeping," he said, if Proposition No. 2 is implemented.

Initially, the two-tier, double octagonal modular jail, to be built on a seven-acre tract 2½ miles east of the downtown courthouse, would afford single-bunk cells, multi-occupancy cells and dormitory-type cells for 225 men and women inmates. Cells for an additional 75 inmates could be built in an undeveloped second level of one of two modules, and space would be available for adding two additional modular units to bring the inmate capacity to 600.

"And in the event the Texas Commission on Jail Standards writes a special set of rules for bunk-house type non-violent misdemeanor criminals, we have the area to expand into that kind of facility," said Wright.

The proposed jail would provide for jail "needs for the next century."

"It's only problem was space, and at the time, we built for an expansion of approximately 300 percent, and we've already used that expansion and more."
— Commissioner Durward Wright

"The concept the commissioners have come up with is one of the best concepts of any that has been presented to the Jail Standards Commission."
— Commissioner Win Brown

"I think lawyers should be willing to make the sacrifice so that we can have a proper facility within our ability to pay for it."
— Judge Bill Ahders

And its proponents

Proponents say the proposed Midland County Jail would offer a wider dimension — more space and efficiency — than would the revamped older County Jail in downtown Midland.

And the new jail would serve a projected growth in criminal offenders, they add.

"It's a sad state of affairs when we have to consider a new jail or a tremendous revamping expense. But if we are going to have an orderly society and if the attitude of the public is to convict and incarcerate the criminal, we're going to have to provide the facilities. The trend is for punishment," said Midland County Commissioner Durward Wright.

A projected increase in crime and inmates gave rise to the present jail, which was built as the fifth-floor of the 1930-vintage courthouse in 1973 as "one of the top jails in the state," said Wright. "It's only problem was space, and at the time, we built for an expansion of approximately 300 percent, and we've already used that expansion and more."

Wright noted that the commissioners then felt they were foresighted, but they didn't realize that Midland County, as a one-city county, would grow in a decade to a population of 100,000 plus from a city of about 60,000.

Wright noted that the proposed renovation of the jail under Proposition No. 1 "only foregoes the problem for a limited number of years."

"I look at it as if it would not be as prudent in the long run as the new jail," Wright said. "On the other hand, if that's what the voters of the community want us to do, that's exactly what we will do."

However, Wright said that the commissioners may select which proposition they want should both be approved by the voters.

"We need a new jail," said Commissioner Win Brown. "We have researched it. The concept the commissioners have come up with is one of the best concepts of any that has been presented to the Jail Standards Commission."

Please see TWO, Page 10A

"It's still a no-frills operation," said Brown, even at the projected cost of $104 a square foot. The proposed complex, which would include sheriff's offices, would contain 81,067 square feet. Construction costs is projected at $8.421 million. So far, the county has spent about $500,000 on the project on county-owned land: approximately $400,000 on architectural fees and $121,468 for a water line to the jail site. The city and the county shared in the water-line costs.

Architect Walter Pate has described the proposed facility as "a constitutional jail. It's designed not to do anything but comply with the Texas Commission on Jail Standards."

Passage of the $9.9 million bond issue is not assured, as voters on Saturday will have the option of voting for one of two, or both or none of two jail propositions. Proposition No. 1 would provide for up to $3 million in tax bonds for renovation of the existing 1973-built jail and would finance a study for long-term county government needs, including the courthouse and jail. Unlike Proposition No. 2, it has no built-in provision for expanding courthouse needs. Proposition No. 2 would incorporate the modular jail on the outskirts of town. Either, however, would provide $500,000 for expansion of Culver Youth Home, a juvenile detention facility in far north Midland. Since the federal government has mandated that juveniles shall not be jailed in the same facilities with adults or even served by the same staff after December 1985, the Midland County commissioners felt obliged to build jail-like maximum security units into Culver Youth Home. The expansion also would provide offices for the juvenile probation staff.

If either proposition passes, the Midland County tax rate likely would increase somewhere between 2 and 2.6 cents per $100 valuation, according to Commissioners Wright and Brown.

The current tax rate is 16.5 cents per $100 valuation based on a countywide $5 billion tax base. Economics could alter tax base and effect a change — upward or downward — in the tax rate.

A successful bond issue then would bring the tax rate up to either 18.5 cents or 19.1 cents from 16.5 cents per $100 valuation on property.

With a 2-cent increase, county taxes on a $100,000 house would increase by $20 to $185 a year. A 2.6-cent tax-rate hike would convert to a $26 tax increase or a total of $191 in county taxes on a $100,000 house.

To the taxpayer, the immediate difference between the $3 million and $9.9 million in bond issues would be the length of time to pay off the indebtedness: 15 years for the $9.9 million bond issue and not more than five years for the $3 million bond proposal. Interests on bond money is about 9 percent.

Craig said the present jail likely would be adequate "up to a certain number" — 85 inmates.

"You can make it work," he said. "It's not the best deal in town. But it can be made to work, and, I guess, can comply with the Jail Standards within the framework of what you've got. But it would cost a bunch of money."

"And where we'd get that money I don't know. You'd have to get the money somewhere...something's got to give."

Even with its $12.9 million budget, the county is on an austere financial plan. The county has no surplus funds to board inmates elsewhere.

"I can assure you of one thing," said County Auditor Floyd Jarnagin. "It's not in the budget.

We haven't got it. There are no surplus funds in the county till."

As did Jarnagin, Midland County Attorney Mark Dettman said the commissioners could "amend the budget" in mid-year and siphon funds from other departments. The county's 1985 budget is $12.9 million. But the reduction of county employees "would be the last resort" in collecting those funds.

"I would hope we could find other means other than a reduction of personnel," Dettman said. "I don't think anybody is over-staffed." Unlike the federal government, the county "cannot operate in a deficit.... We have to have a balanced budget..., which is the way it should be." Furthermore, Dettman noted that the commissioners "can't raise taxes, not in mid-stream. That would be unfair."

"It's the changing community attitudes," Dettman said, which are demanding jail time and more severe sentences and fines. He cited a case in which a jury found a man guilty of first-offense DWI and gave him a year in jail. That incident involved a serious injury to another motorist.

Compounding the jail issue, he noted, is the conversion of felony crimes, such as thefts of $750 or below, to misdemeanors. That move by the Texas Legislature was to take some pressure off of the overcrowded Texas Department Corrections' penitentiary system and to put the burden for those crimes on counties.

"There's even a bill down there right now to authorize the housing of people who have been convicted of (certain) felonies to serve their prison time in the county jail as opposed to the TDC." He cited such third-degree felonies as burglary of a motor vehicle, some forgeries and aggravated assaults.

Dettman said he intends to "start filing some criminal non-child support cases, action which probably would further crowd the jail.

"When they start serving time up there, things really stack up," Dettman said."

"WE COULD FURTHER restrict the population, but it's not likely," Viterna said. "We're already restricting the population to what we think it should be, so restricting it further would really not be a proper remedy."

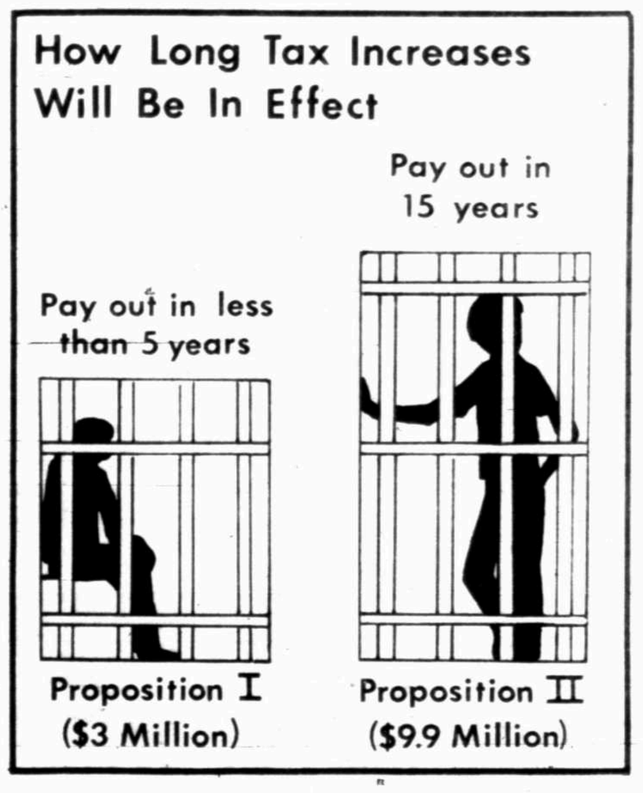

"But saying you can't hold prisoners there is a proper remedy because the jail isn't as safe and secure and sanitary as it is supposed to be."

The Jail Commission is not saying Midland County must build a new jail; rather, it is ordering that the jail must conform to its rules and regulations which ensure the well being — not luxuious pampering — of prisoners and which effectively protect their constitutional rights.

"It (the proposed jail) would be a nice jail if it ever gets on the ground," Viterna said.

The proposed sprawling, two-tier jail initially would hold 225 inmates, could be be equipped to handled 75 more and could be expanded to hold 600 in maximum security cells.

"The present jail was inadequate to serve the needs of the community into the future," Viterna said. "It's going to be all right for right now if they do some of these (corrective) things.... But it's up to the citizens of the community to determine whether they are going to continue to live in the old one under the remedial order or whether they are going to do something about making the jail the size to fit the community that they live in."

TO COMPOUND the jail issue, the Task Force concluded in reaching its recommendations that Midland County "needs a new jail" but did not endorse the commissioners' proposal to build the $9.9 million jail and sheriff's office complex. However, the Task Force did concede that "the proposed new jail east of Midland (or on any another site of similar size) would provide the capability to meet the county's long-term jail requirements." Nevertheless, the Task Force said the location of "all county functions," including jail, courts, law enforcement and other offices, in a single complex "would be most efficient and desirable."

"Although the Midland economy is struggling at present, the historical pattern of growth will resume in the near future," the Task Force concluded.

To try to resolve the jail issues, the commissioners later decided to hold a referendum to discern the public's viewpoints. Provisions of the referendum were:

— $3 million bond issue for the renovation of the 1930-vintage courthouse, expansion of Culver Youth Home, and the long-range study.

— $9.9 million bond issue for construction of the new jail 2½ miles east of the courthouse and the expansion of Culver Youth Home. The commissioners had planned the piecemeal renovation the courthouse and convert the fifth-floor from a jail to courtrooms and related offices.

— Transfer the prisoners to other West Texas jails at an annual expense of $2 million if the old jail was closed by the Jail Commission.

THAT REFERENDUM was to be held May 11 but it was cancelled after Midland County Attorney Mark H. Dettman told the commissioners that the Texas Election Code made no provisions for referendum elections in May. The next legal election date would be in August. Rather than wait, the commissioners instead voted to convert the referendum into a bond election, which, unlike referendums, can be held at will. Proposition No. 3, for the $2 million for the annual transfer of prisoners, was eliminated from the bond election.

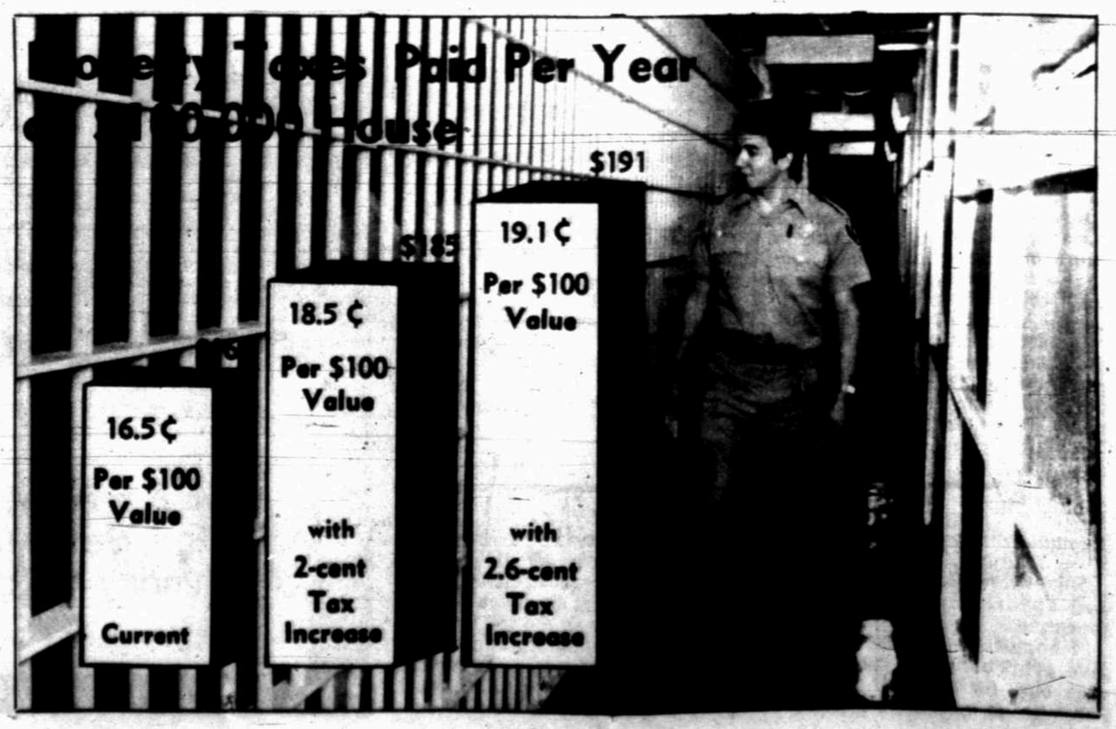

Two years ago, the commissioners developed a master plan and called an $11.69 million bond election to build a courthouse addition and jail on the north side of the courthouse and to renovated the courthouse. But that proposal failed dismally: by a 4-to-1 ratio. The issue attracted only 9 percent of the 43,646 qualified voters; only 841 voted for the bond issue, and 3,025 voted against it.

Even before that, in 1982 at peak of the recent oil boom, former Sheriff Dallas Smith had proposed building a stockade to contain "overflow" prisoners from the jail. But that proposal, though sanctioned by the commissioners, never materialized due to opposition by citizens groups. No one, it seemed, wanted a stockade in his neighborhood. The commissioners relented.

Particularly since then, the Texas Commission on Jail Standards has been monitoring the county's progress toward a new jail.

Since 1977, the Jail Commission has closed eight Texas jails for failure to comply with its stringent jail standards. In addition, 10 jails in rural areas voluntarily closed for similar reasons.

However, Craig said he realizes that a jail apart from the courthouse "creates other problems."

"So, I'm going to vote for both of them and hope they both pass," Craig said. "I'm awfully glad to have somebody backing something. Of course, that means the Chamber as well as the Concerned Citizens Committee."

Concerned Citizens Committee spokesman Bill Williams said he has chosen to "ignore" a commissioners' proposal the county enter into a contract with the federal government to house federal prisoners in a new jail and thereby defray costs of building and operating the jail. "If somebody wants to build a jail and lease it to the federal government, let's let free-enterprise do it. I just don't think county government ought to worry about operating a hotel."

Williams suggested that the Midland Chamber of Commerce could help in "an educational process" on those needs, possibly including a courthouse, jail, library and other facilities.

RATHER THAN "out in the country" apart from the courthouse, Williams' Committee would prefer that the "jail be a part of the courtroom system — part of the courthouse — whether we go across the street, buy some property or whether we relocate to property the county already owns."

Williams referred to the Commissioners' Court's 1983 courthouse-jail expansion plan which confine the proposed development to the courthouse square. That $11.69 million project was defeated by a resounding 4-to-1 ratio by voters on April 23, 1983.

"I think we (the committee) would support that issue before we would the present one.... I don't know if that proposal satisfied all the needs because I don't know what all the needs are."

He spoke against any attempt by the commissioners to re-issue certificates of obligation and thereby bypass the voters to raise funds for building projects such as the jail.

"The people of Midland County will do what's necessary to solve our problems if you'll tell them what our problems are. Let's not advertise that we are going to issue certificate. Let's let the people say 'yes' or 'no' upfront. Educate them to those problems. The people will do what's necessary."

"WE DO HAVE a problem," Williams said. "We must do something; we must make improvements. We must expand our jail."

At the most, said Williams, the expansion would increase the bunk space from 101 to 130. But using the Jail Commission's 80 to 85 percent rule, the 130-bunk jail would be limited to 104 to 110 inmates due to the classification system, just as the exisiting 101-bunk jail is limited to 85 inmates. The Jail Commission normally deems a jail at legal capacity when it's 80 to 85 percent full due to the complex system of classifying and segregating prisoners. "There's a whole spread of classifications," said Robert O. "Bob" Viterna, executive director of the Jail Commission.

In that framework, the conversion of the undeveloped northwest quadrant would provide room for an additional 19 to 25 inmates.

"It's almost self-enforcing," said Viterna.

To better control inmate population, Williams suggested that "week-enders" — those who are sentenced by judges to service weekend jail time so that they might continue working — could be jail weeknights. The jail population increases over the weekends but drops during the weekdays.

"It could be that we need to inconvenience the inmates," Williams said. "Should we inconvenience the taxpayers or should we inconvenience the inmates? ...Most problems can be solved, but you've got to work on them."

Neither Williams nor his committee is against a new jail if it's needed.

"We need the interim situation even if we start a new jail," he said. "We've got to bring it up to standards in a few days. We don't have a choice on that."

SHERIFF GARY PAINTER is advocating that the jail system be directly linked to the courthouse.

"We do not need a jail away from the courthouse," he said. "I think it should be built with the courthouse where we've got access to the courts and to the clerks. Lawyers can handle their business here. It would be better for me and much better for the court system to have inmates more easily accessible to the courts and to the attorneys. The prisoners and their families wouldn't be put into such of a turmoil or have such of a problem when it comes court day or whatever."

Painter is suggesting that the county commissioners re-adopt the 1983 concept for expansion of the courtroom and jail on the courthouse square. He favors expanding the courthouse and building a jail addition which would be linked to the renovated jail.

"If we were to use that concept, then the taxpayers would not be throwing away their money on the renovation. If they were to build it outside the city limits away from the courthouse, to me there's no way we could get our money back on this renovation," Painter said.

"I'm hoping and praying they pass that renovation issue."

Still, the sheriff said that the county "eventually" is going to have to build a new jail because "this one is going to become outdated. It's going to become too small for the population. That's on the belief Midland County is going to expand and grow...we are a progressive county."

Painter noted that the renovated jail would not be designed to hold federal prisoners. The commissioners had envisioned making a profit off of the new jail by leasing block space to the federal government for housing prisoners.

"But then there's no guarantee that federal money is always going to be there...there's absolutely no guarantees."

Further, Painter said he "can foresee civil liability situations" in transferring prisoners from the proposed jail site 2½ miles east of the courthouse. He referred to the possibilities of traffic accidents and the escape of "dangerous" prisoners who could "get in the community and commit more crimes.... This is a very real situation."

TOM MITCHELL, who headed up a petition drive last November to block the $9.9 million jail project, said "Nobody wants a jail out in the country...(and) away from the courthouse. It's not that they (petitioners) are against the jail. A lot of them said they would be for a new jail but not out in the country."

John Hyde, a Midland lawyer and former president of the Midland County Bar Association, said he favors a new jail but not apart from the courthouse.

"The jail and the courthouse, in my view, are interrelated," Hyde said. "The functions of the courthouse historically are part of what happens in that jail. The attorneys who are in criminal practice in the courthouse are opposed to moving the jail," Hyde said. "I have noticed general opposition to moving the jail that far out."

Mark Withrow, an attorney who is vice president of the Midland bar, said courthouse expansion is needed.

"I don't think there's any doubt about that. Just how to go about it is a puzzle. I'm hesitant to favor an offsite jail." The bar has not taken a formal stand on the jail issue.

The proposed sprawling jail and sheriff's complex would offer a "line-of-sight" concept by which guards from central control rooms could visually see and check inmates without benefit of television monitors. At the same time, guards would have voice communication with the inmates. "We can handle 2 to 2½ times the number of prisoners for the same personnel we now have," he said. "We won't have to hire as many jailers. Jailers are expensive (at) $30,000 per jailer per year easily."

"PROPOSITION 1 in the long run is the most expensive and extravagant thing we can get into," Brown said. "And we (commissioners) have worked our fingers to the bone in trying to provide the most at the least cost to the taxpayers. Sure, you can build a cheaper jail, but it's going to cost you more in the long run," Brown said. "By spreading out, we will save money in the long run."

If the new jail is approved under Proposition 2, it would be constructed in two years. The jail's plans, designed by Midland architect Walter Pate, have already been approved by the Texas Commission on Jail Standards, Brown said.

"Our new design will not fit in a downtown location," he said. "We have spread out, and in spreading out, weve become twice as efficient. We have an excellent design."

Brown said the trend today is to separate jails from courthouses. County courthouses at Dallas, Amarillo, El Paso, Garden City, Abilene, Houston, Lubbock, Waco and, Austin are separate.

"The trend does tend toward separate jails and courthouses," said Pate, "but in some cases, they are connected by bridges or tunnels." In other instances, such as at Abilene, Amarillo and Dallas, the jails are more distant from the courthouses.

"That's the trend — away from the archaic idea that the jail has to be right next door to the courthouse," Brown said. "The only need for a jail to be close to the courthouse is so that attorneys don't have to get into their cars and drive to see their clients. Now, that's dumb."

Brown noted that the cost of jail construction represents only 18 percent of the 50-year life-time cost of a jail. The balance, 82 percent, is in personnel, maintenance and operations costs.

"We know we need a jail, and we need more additional space for other courthouse offices." A jail and sheriff's offices apart from the courthouse would free 21,200 square feet for additional courtrooms and offices, Brown said. The county could expand courtroom and related space "without having to float another bond issue."

Brown dismissed the Commissioners' Court's 1983 plans for an expanded jail and courthouse on the courthouse square. That proposal, in the form of an $11.69 million bond election, was defeated at the polls by a 4-to-1 ratio. Some critics of the concept of a jail apart from the courthouse are suggesting a return to the 1983 concept.

"This was an old concept that the Commissioners' Court has already junked, and the voters junked for an downtown expanded jail and courthouse complex," Brown said. "That was two years ago. Why re-study it and try to breathe life back into it?

COUNTY JUDGE Bill Ahders said he wants "to do what's best for the community...the people of the community, including the lawyers, the judges and the taxpayers."

"We have to think of everybody. Some of the lawyers have complained it's difficult for them to get that far out (2½ miles from the downtown courthouse)" to the proposed jail site. Ahders said he agreed that there would be "some inconvenience."

In the "old days the lawyers were down by the courthouse." He said that situation is changing somewhat now that more and more lawyers are moving their offices from the downtown area.

"I think lawyers should be willing to make the sacrifice so that we can have a proper facility within our ability to pay for it."

Wright says the five-mile round-trip from the courthouse to the proposed jail site "isn't a tremendous item."

"I don't readily foresee that it would cause this office any interruptions or delays," said District Attorney Al Schorre. "It may cause the defense lawyers some inconvenience."

And the taxpayers' ability to pay for the proposed new jail would be enhanced by revenue gained by the county leasing block space to the federal government for the housing of federal prisoners, Ahders said.

"At this point, we do have somewhat of a handshake deal with the federal government," he said. If the county leased space for 50 prisoners for $50 a day for a year, the county could gross $912,500.

"It's anticipated on a cost-accounting basis that our cost for housing federal prisoners would be approximately $18 to $24" per prisoner per day, Wright said. "As the number increases, cost decreases...There's no way to put an absolute dollar amount on it."

Brown said the county would "offset well over half of the cost of the jail" by contracting to house federal prisoners. "The cost to the taxpayers has been uppermost in our minds."

FAIL

"I CERTAINLY wouldn't advocate putting them (inmates) back on the street," Dettman said, "But that would keep the numbers below 85" and save the county money in farming out prisoners. Most of the prisoners are pre-trial detainees, while others are serving jail time for misdemeansor violations and still others, convicted in state courts, are waiting to be transferred to the Texas Department of Corrections.

The sheriff has a $2 million budget for operation of his department. But the jail is budgeted for only $197,600. Of that, $120,000 is for feeding the prisoners, and the balance is for clothing, medication and medical expenses, supplies, and jail repairs and maintenance.

The first week of shipping out 22 inmates after the Jail Commission's remedial order limiting the jail's population to 85 went into effect cost the county almost $3,000 but in a year's time could total into the hundreds of thousands of dollars, officials estimated. Were the jail to be shut down, commissioners had theorized that costs of transferring inmates to other jails might be as high $2 million annually.

"It's certainly not a sideshow or part of any advertising gimmick," said Wright of the timing of the recent transfer of surplus inmates and Saturday's election. "We've been on the threshold of this situation for four years."

The obvious costs of farming out prisoners is in the daily "rates" charged by West Texas county jails. So far, daily rates charged by area jails in Stanton, Garden City, Snyder and Colorado City have varied from $20 to $26. In addition, Midland County must bear transporation costs, any medical expenses and the time in returning the inmates to court for hearings and trials.

"We're constantly rotating people," Jail Lt. Bennie Cureton. "It's hard to keep track of them."

Inmates could be transferred to the El Paso County Jail at $45 a day per prisoner. "We haven't struck a deal with them yet. That's the last resort. That's the last place we'll go. That's too much out of the way; There's no sense in throwing money away."

ON MAY 13, two days after the election, the County Jail will undergo an annual inspection by the Jail Commission. Since the 1984 inspection, the sheriff and the Commissioners' Court have worked at correcting jail deficiencies.

"I'm not anticipating any problems," said Bob Viterna, executive director of the Jail Commission.

However, if county officials were openly to defy the Jail Commission's rules, including those on population limits, the Jail Commission could take Midland County to court.

"The bottom line," said Viterna, "is we could close the jail and require everybody be shipped."

It's remote, but Midland County conceivably could be confronted by the federal government in case inmates' constitutional or civil rights were violated.

"They (federal courts) are not going to get involved unless a suit is filed," said Dettman. "The Jail Commission has a statutory duty to be actively involved in overseeing county jails."

"He observed that constitutional standards are "not as strict or detailed" as Jail Commission standards, "although the Jail Commission standards are patterned after constitutional standards, he said.

"Passive is not the right word, but the federal judicial system doesn't get actively involved until a suit is filed challenging the conditions of the jail."

"Federal courts don't want to be involved in the day-to-day operation," he said. "Sometimes they have to."

He recalled a case in the Deep South.

The federal government ordered a county jail to be brought up to constitutional standards.

"When the deadline got there, it wasn't up to standards, so the court started to fine them and held them in contempt and fined the county $25,000 a day.

"That caught their attention real fast, I imagine."

JAIL

Meanwhile, the Midland County Jail apparently, has run out of reprieves.

"I hope that (the jail crisis) will give everybody the incentive to work hard for the bond issue," said Bob Viterna, executive director of the Jail Commission, "and come up with the funds to get the county a jail" to meet or exceed standards.

"And you don't see much tangible going back into an old jail and tearing out all the plumbing and starting all over again," he said. "The worst part of it is when it's all finished, you're still going to have an old jail."

HOW THEY VOTED

House rejects resolution to declare Indiana seat vacant

WASHINGTON — Votes of area members of Congress on key issues during the week ending May 3, 1985

Key House votes

Defying Republican threats to paralyze the House with legislative guerrilla warfare, Democrats April 30 on a 200-229 vote rejected a resolution to declare Indiana's Eighth Congressional District seat vacant and request the state to hold a special election.

That action set the stage for a vote to seat Democrat Fank McCloskey, who had been declared the winner of the Indiana race by four votes after the House Administration Committee supervised a recount. The House May 1 seated McCloskey, prompting an unprecedented walkout by Republicans.

The controversy over the Eight District raged for six months. McCloskey's opponent in the race, Republican Richard McIntyre, was certified as the winner by the Indiana secretary of state after a recount showed him leading McCloskey by 418 votes. The House, citing inconsistencies in recount procedures, refused to seat either man until it had conducted its own investigation.

Proponents of the resolution charged the Democratic majority inthe House with rigging the recount. The Democrats, they said, simply stopped counting when their man took the lead. They asked the House to declare the seat vacant.

Opponents of the measure argued that the recount, which was actually performed by the nonpartisan General Accounting Office, was conducted under rules agreed to by both parties at the outset.

Voting to declare the Indiana seat vacant: Reps. Tom Loeffler, R-Hunt, and Larry Combest, R-Lubbock. Voting against: Rep. Henry B. Gonzales, D-San Antonio.

Key Senate Votes

Senate Majority Leader Robert Dole, R-Kan., guided the Senate April 30 to a 50-49 vote of approval for the Republican-backed budget plan.

The plan, developed by the president and Senate Republicans, is designed to reduce the federal deficit, but the vote's significance is largely symbolic. Some of the major cost-cutting measures it calls for are likely to be altered or eliminated by later amendments, and, should a budget plan eventually be agreed to by the House and Senate, Congress would need to pass numerous bills to carry out its individual provisions.

The plan would reduce budget deficits by $300 billion over three years, principally cutting domestic spending. The measure calls for eliminating 20 programs, including Amtrak subsidies and the Job Corps, and cutting about 30 others, including farm price supports,Medicare and financial aid to students.

Voting for the Republican budget plan: Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas. Voting against: Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas.

• • •

The first strand of President Reagan's deficit reduction package began to unravel May 1 when the Senate voted 65-34 against proposed reductions in cost-of-living adjustments for Social Security recipients. The Senate had approved the reductions only the day before as a part of the Republican budget plan.

Current law allows Social Security recipients to get a cost-of-living (COLA) increase, but only if the rate of inflation is more than 3 percent.

The president's proposal would have guaranteed recipients a 2 percent cost of living increase if inflation went up by between 2 and 4 percent. If the inflation rate exceeded 4 prcent, then, under the president's plan, the cost-of-living increase would be the inflation rate minus two points. If the administration's inflation estimates over the next three years proved correct, the COLA revisions would have saved the federal government about $34 billion.

Voting to keep full Social Security COLAs: Bentsen. Voting against: Gramm.

• • •

The Senate continued to backtrack on President Reagan's budget proposal by refusing to kill an amendment cutting his defense request. A motion to table the amendment failed May 2 by a vote of 48-51.

The amendment, subsequently approved on a voice vote, allows defense spending to increase next year only as much as the cost of inflation. It was the second time that week senators voted against a key part of the budget package they had approved April 30.

Voting to kill the amendment to slow down defense spending: Gramm. Voting against: Bentsen.

Reagan says Soviets major aggressor

BONN, West Germany (AP) — Calling the Soviet Union "the major source of aggression in the world," President Reagan on Saturday urged America and its allies to persevere in the defense of freedom.

In his regular weekly radio address broadcast to Americans from the site of the just-concluded international economic summit, Reagan said "the West will receive no gifts from the Soviets. Allied unity and resolve is the only message we can expect them to respect and respond to in constructive ways."

Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, delivering the Democrats' equal time response from Washington, charged that the White House had refused to allow 40 Holocaust survivors or children of survivors to stage a peaceful protest during Reagan's speech today at the site of the Bergen-Belsen concentration camp.

The group objects to Reagan's visit to Bergen-Belsen to offset his plan to lay a wreath at a Bitburg military cemetery where 49 SS Nazi stormtroopers are buried, Moynihan said.

"The American government has denied these American citizens the right to be present at Bergen-Belsen when our president is also there," Moynihan said. "The mind cracks, the heart breaks. What has possessed the White House?"

In his address, Reagan sought to emphasize the positive aspects of the summit, saying he was pleased that West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl "welcomes" the so-called "Star Wars" defense research.

"Other summit leaders said they will examine how they might participate in this immensely hopeful undertaking," he said.

Of the summit's failure to set a date for new international trade talks under the aegis of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, Reagan said "it was clear that almost all of my summit partners want a 1986 target date to begin a new round of trade negotiations."

"I'm heartened by the progress on this issue since last year's summit," he said. "We're pleased that plans for these negotiations, so important to world prosperity, have gained momentum.

He did not refer directly to French President Francois Mitterrand, who opposed setting a date for the first global trade talks since 1979. Mitterand has insisted that an agenda must be set in advance in the interest of protecting European farmers.

Reagan reserved his criticism for the Soviet Union.

"The Soviet Union continues to be the major source of aggression in the world," he said, "building up its military forces far beyond any defensive needs and through those forces, and those of its satellites, promoting violence and repression across the globe from Afghanistan to Cambodia to Nicaragua."

Because of this, Reagan said, "the democratic nations must continue to maintain our strength and keep the peace to enhance deterrence while striving through negotiations to achieve equitable and variable reductions in nuclear arsenals."

The president said the Bonn summit with the leaders of Britain, Canada, France, Italy, Japan and West Germany "made clear that 40 years after defeating fascism, freedom continues to shower us with infinite blessings."

In his five-minute radio address, Moynihan said members of the International Network of Children of Jewish Holocaust Survivors were denied permission by U.S. security officials to protest Reagan's visit to the concentration camp.

"Their purpose, of course, was to declare their disapproval of the president visiting the sacred site of Bergen-Belsen as some kind of offset to his visit to Bitburg," Moynihan said.

The New York Democrat urged Reagan to allow the group to stage their protest at Bergen-Belsen.

"That place, Mr. President, is their place," Moynihan said. "It is not only their place, Mr. President, it is their right."

Jury awards $8.9 million against drug company

WICHITA, Kan. (AP) — A record $8.9 million damage award rendered in a Dalkon Shield case against A.H. Robins Co. will make drug companies "sit up and take notice," according to a jury foreman.

The jury ruled that the pharmaceutical company was 84 percent negligent in a case stemming from a woman's claim that her use of the intrauterine device led to a complete hysterectomy. The jury awarded the woman $1.4 million in compensatory damages and $7.5 million in punitive damages.

"It is the largest verdict that we've had," said Tom Kemp, a San Francisco attorney who represented A.H. Robins, which said it will seek to have the verdict set aside. A company spokesman called the award "outrageous."

Bush vehicles collide

BARRINGTON HILLS, Ill. (AP) — Two vehicles in Vice President George Bush's motorcade collided Saturday, but no one was injured and the vice president was not even aware of the accident, a White House spokesman said.

Bush's motorcade had stopped in this Chicago suburb so that he could attend a private fund-raiser at a home when the accident occurred, said Ed Murnane, a White House spokesman.

"It involved an ambulance rear-ending one of the vans in which White House staff members and guests" had been riding, Murnane said. He said Bush's motorcade normally has 15 to 20 vehicles and that an ambulance is always included.

The two vehicles, occupied only by their drivers, were trying to park in a private driveway, Murnane said.

The vehicles were still serviceable and continued with the vice president's motorcade to Wheaton College in Wheaton, where Bush was to deliver the school's commencement address and to receive an honorary degree.

Beluga whale has anemia

APPLE VALLEY, Minn. (AP) — Big Mouth, a male beluga whale at the Minnesota Zoo is critically ill with anemia and has been given a 50-50 chance of survival, zoo officials said.

Zoo workers lower the water in the zoo's holding pool twice a day, then wade waist-deep into the water so they can roll Big Mouth onto a stretcher to take blood samples and force-feed him.

Neither the whale nor his mate, Little Girl, is currently on exhibit. They are among only 12 belugas in captivity in North America, zoo officials said.

Dow to plug brine wells

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Dow Chemical Co. has agreed to shut down its extensive network of brine wells and pipelines near Midland, Mich., by 1987, company and state officials report.

The brine system has been blamed by state environmental experts for repeated spills of salty water which, they say, pose a threat to public health, crops and animal life. Dow uses the brine in some chemical manufacturing processes.

Under the plan, Dow will close and plug the wells by the end of 1986, flush out pipes, conduct environmental studies of soil and water and install equipment to catch spills.

Judge reduces sentence

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — A federal judge has reduced by 10 years the 40-year prison sentence being served by Carl J. Civella, a reputed leader of organized crime in Kansas City.

Civella, 76, was sentenced Sept. 4 to 10 years in prison by U.S. District Judge Scott O. Wright. The sentence, which followed a plea bargain involving several alleged gambling-related activities, was to run in addition to a 30-year sentence handed down in connection with a casino skimming case in 1983.

In a one-page order filed Friday, Wright ordered the 10-year sentence to run concurrently with the longer prison term. He gave no reason for the change.

Man pleads in bombings

WASHINGTON (AP) — Thomas Eugene Spinks, one of three men accused of bombing 10 abortion clinics in Washington, Maryland, Virginia and Delaware, faces a possible 15 years in prison and $20,000 in fines after pleading guilty to one count each of conspiracy and malicious destruction.

Spinks, 37, a roofer and chimney sweep from Laurel, Md., entered his plea in U.S. District Court in Baltimore.

Spinks is to be sentenced by Judge Alexander Harvey II in June. He has been held without bond since his arrest in January.

Union Carbide resumes production of MIC

INSTITUTE, W.Va. (AP) — After installing $5 million worth of additional safety equipment, Union Carbide resumed production Saturday of the pesticide ingredient methyl isocyanate, which killed 2,000 people in a leak from a subsidiary plant in India.

A company official called the restart "routine."

Carbide's unit here had been shut down since the Dec. 3 leak at a plant in Bhopal, India, which also left thousands injured.

The first shipments of MIC are expected to leave the plant as soon as enough of the chemical is produced, company spokesman Thad Epps said Saturday. Carbide will sell the chemical to other companies, including FMC Corp., for delivery elsewhere.

"We're probably talking days," Epps said.

He said minor engineering problems had delayed the scheduled restart of Carbide's MIC unit here Friday.

"When you have a major chemical unit down and out of operation for five months, you expect to run into certain, almost predictable situations where you have to shut down," Epps said. "It was pretty much a normal startup for a unit like this. Routine."

Epps said Carbide had been working around the clock for several weeks, preparing the renovated MIC unit for use. MIC production began at 4:05 a.m. Saturday with the introduction of phosgene and monethylamine gases into the unit, Epps said.

The renovated unit has improved scrubbers and flares to control escaping gases. Inadequacy in these systems at Bhopal was blamed by Carbide investigators for letting the leak get out of control.

Other improvements at the Institute unit were in refrigeration to keep the gas at a stable temperature and in a computerized leak monitor, officials said.

Epps said the chemical would be stored until enough was accumulated to begin conversion into a more stable intermediate chemical, aldicarb, for shipment to other Carbide plants.

MIC also will be shipped to other companies, including to FMC's Middleport, N.Y., plant, for manufacture into pesticides. FMC's shipments will continue until the company finishes construction of an MIC conversion unit at Carbide's Institute plant.

MIC is used to make pesticides, particularly Sevin, and the shutdown has left Carbide with a backlog of orders for the product. Epps said Carbide plans to run the MIC unit continuously throughout the rest of the year to catch up with demand.

Ex-Kent State student praises plans for campus memorial

KENT, Ohio (AP) — A former Kent State University student paralyzed by the National Guard gunfire that killed four anti-war protesters 15 years ago praised plans for a campus memorial Saturday, while U.S. Sen. Howard Metzenbaum called dissenters "quite often the heroes."

About 400 people turned out to commemorate the 15th anniversary of the shootings on a grassy hillside that became a focus for the nation's bitter division over the war in Southeast Asia.

On May 4, 1970, after a weekend of demonstrations that saw a building burned and other vandalism, Ohio National Guardsmen opened fire on Kent State students who were protesting the U.S. invasion of Cambodia. Besides the four students killed, nine were wounded.

Dean Kahler, left paralyzed by a bullet that day, rode his wheelchair over the site of the shootings Saturday and stirred up some old memories.

"You remember Richard Nixon calling students names and you remember Spiro Agnew making wild accusations," Kahler said.

"You remember the speech by (former Ohio Gov.) Jim Rhodes calling us all kinds of nasty names. So it's a real emotional situation," Kahler said.

But neither Kahler, who is now an Athens County commissioner, nor others directly affected by the shootings focused on any bitterness left over from the incident.

Instead, they praised the university's recent decision to design and build a memorial at the site of the shootings.

"I was very bitter," said Elaine Holstein of Glen Oaks, N.Y., the mother of slain student Jeffrey Miller. "It's been nine years since I've been on this campus, and I didn't ever think I'd set foot on it again. I think what brought me back was the word that there will finally be a memorial."

Metzenbaum, featured speaker at the ceremony, also praised the decision to build the memorial.

"What I think we cannot forget is that students were exercising their basic right of dissent," said Metzenbaum, D-Ohio. "That right...so totally separates democracy from totalitarianism. Those who dissent are quite often the heroes. It takes guts to dissent."

He said dissent is woven through America's history, and he compared the Kent State protests to the Boston Tea Party, the women's rights movement and the Civil Rights movement.

"It is not enough to allow dissent. We must demand it," he said.

Metzenbaum noted that the war in Cambodia is still going on.

"People are still dying in Cambodia. How many of us here and in Congress are paying attention to that suffering?" he said. "I plead with this generation of students to make a special effort to understand what happened at Kent State."

Another speaker read a brief history of the shootings: a 13-second spray of gunfire into a crowd that had begun to disperse at the end of a protest rally.

The ceremony began Friday night with a candelight vigil at the site of the killings. Eight of the nine wounded students attended the service and were given a standing ovation at the end of Saturday's program.

One of the wounded students, Alan Canfora, 36, said there has been more interest in the Kent State shootings this year than there was for the 10th anniversary.

"This year, there is a link between this event and the 10th anniversary of the fall of Saigon," Canfora said. He is an adviser to the May 4th Task Force, a group of about 15 students who organized the Saturday program, which included singing and poetry reading.

Pope praises Nancy Reagan for anti-drug abuse campaign

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II praised first lady Nancy Reagan Saturday for her international campaign against the "grave social evil" of drug abuse at a half-hour meeting in the pope's library at the Vatican.

"Encouragement from the pope — you can't ask for more than that," Mrs. Reagan told reporters on her plane back to Bonn, West Germany. "It was beautiful — once in a lifetime experience."

The first lady said she was taking a message from the pope to President Reagan, attending a seven-nation economic summit in Bonn. She did not disclose the letter's contents.

After her meeting with the pontiff, Mrs. Reagan viewed the frescoes in the Sistine Chapel and then ended her three-day visit to Italy to rejoin Reagan. They attended a black-tie dinner and then boarded a helicopter and flew to a centuries-old castle where they are staying, about 18 miles from Bonn.

"God bless you, thank you very much for your visit," the pontiff told the president's wife in English as they walked hand in hand to the door of the papal library after their private meeting.

In a statement handed to her in a white envelope, John Paul deplored the "tragic and debilitating" effects of drug abuse and called for international cooperation "with a view to arresting, and eventually eliminating this grave social evil."

Mrs. Reagan, wearing a black coat dress and a black hat with a turned-up brim edged in white, arrived at the Vatican under tight security with an official party of 15, including her hairdresser and maid.

WORLD

Vatican and Italian security officials cleared one half of St. Peter's Square of pilgrims and tourists to let Mrs. Reagan's motorcade pass through an arch adjoining the largest church in Christendom.

Vatican officials also blocked off half of the Sistine Chapel so Mrs. Reagan could view Michelangelo's frescoes after the audience.

The crowd on the other side of a wooden divider waved and applauded and Mrs. Reagan waved back. The 20-minute tour also included a visit to the Pauline Chapel.

Before leaving for Bonn, Mrs. Reagan attended a gala lunch hosted by the U.S. ambassador to the Holy See, William A. Wilson. VIPs and movie stars, including actress Audrey Hepburn, also attended.

In his statement, written in English, the pope lauded Mrs. Reagan's "participation in the fight against drug abuse and in the rehabiliation of those whose lives have been affected by this social evil."

Last month in Washington, Mrs. Reagan brought together 17 wives of prime ministers and presidents from around the world in Washington for a first such summit on drug abuse.

The Roman Catholic Church, the pontiff said, has "great concern for the harmful effects of so pervasive and alarming a social problem as drug dependency."

Noting that 1985 has been declared by the United Nations as International Youth Year, the pope said, "One of the great challenges to modern society is to find viable solutions to this problem which affects so many of our young people."

"Certainly the leaders of society must strive to create the social conditions in which young people are discouraged from seeking refuge in the fantasy world of self-indulgence and drugs..."

Legislation and law enforcement to curb drug trafficking, the pope stressed, are "ultimately effective only insofar as they receive the support of other nations which are committed to higher human values and to the common good of their respective citizens and of their neighbors."

After their meeting, the pope and Mrs. Reagan posed for photographers, then exchanged gifts.

The first lady presented John Paul with a crystal box etched on the top with the White House and her signature.

The pope gave her a silver and mother-of-pearl rosary.

During her visit to Italy, Mrs. Reagan also visited a drug rehabilitation center in Castel Gandolfo south of Rome and lunched with President Sandro Pertini at the Quirinal Palace on Friday.

American found guilty of murder in Montreal train station bombing

MONTREAL (AP) — A New York man was found guilty today of three charges of first-degree murder stemming from the Labor Day bombing at Montreal's main railway station that killed three people and injured 47.

He was sentenced to life in prison, and will not be eligible for parole for 25 years.

A jury of six men and six women deliberated for 17 hours over three days before rendering the verdict. Thomas Brigham, 65, of Rochester, shrugged his shoulders when the verdict was read, but displayed no facial expression.

"I quite agree with your decision," Justice Kenneth Mackay told the jury.

Police arrested Brigham at the station on Sept. 3, 1983, several horus after the explosion in a locker in the main lobby.

Brigham was convicted of murdering three French tourists, who were killed in the explosion: Eric Nicolas, Marcelle Leblond and Michel Dubois.

Crown prosecutor Claude Parent called 20 witnesses during the trial, which began April 15, and presented as evidence several rambling, apparently threatening notes that defense lawyer Pierre Poupart admitted were written by Brigham. The messages were received by Via Rail, which operates the rail service and by some news agencies.

The messages contained such phrases as "time bomb set for 10:30 prox" and "papacy ended with a bang Sept. 3."

Pope John Paul II began a visit to Canada shortly after the explosion, but he was not in Montreal at the time of the bomb blast, and never went to the central train station.

In closing arguments, Poupart described the prosecution evidence as "flimsy" and described Brigham as "the ideal scapegoat."

Brigham's ex-wife, one of nine witnesses called by the defense, testified he had been committed to psychiatric hospitals four times during the 1970s because he believed he was Jesus Christ and had other delusions.

Parent argued that the circumstantial evidence gave a "clear picture" that Brigham was guilty.

Prosecution witness Debra Hockenbery of Wilmington, N.C., testified that Brigham told her family on a train to Quebec City from Montreal two weeks before the blast that if they heard of an explosion "you'll know it was me."

Fighting in Beirut goes on for seventh day

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Christian and Moslem militiamen, entrenched behind newly erected earth barricades, traded sniper fire and hurled grenades Saturday on the seventh day of sectarian fighting in the Lebanese capital.

The thud of exploding rocket-propelled grenades and mortar rounds mingled with the crackle of rifle fire throughout the day, after fierce overnight tank and mortar exchanges killed four civilians and wounded 37 people, including three Lebanese soldiers.

Police said a woman also died of wounds received earlier, bringing the toll in fighting in Beirut since last Sunday to 19 killed and 116 wounded.

Lebanon's leaders contacted each other by telephone trying to end hostilities which have again placed this Mediterranean nation on the brink of all-out civil war.

Local newspapers said President Amin Gemayel, a Christian, and Prime Minister Rashid Karami, a Moslem, agreed Friday night to "launch a war on the war."

But the reports did not say what they planned to do to restore stability to Lebanon, ravaged by more than a decade of sectarian warfare.

Karami's nine-member Cabinet has been powerless to stop the fighting in Beirut and in parts of south Lebanon vacated by Israeli troops.

Skirmishes forced almost all major crossing points to close between Beirut's mostly Moslem and Christian sectors. Earthen mounds up to 12 feet high were erected along the Green Line dividing east and west.

Scores of families spent the night in basements and bomb shelters, then fled their homes near the Green Line to safer neighborhoods when day came.

Local radio stations said Christian units of the Lebanese army in the mountaintop garrison of Souk el-Gharb traded pot shots and grenades with Druse militiamen, poised on opposite bluffs east of Beirut.

The coalition Cabinet was paralyzed. Christian and Moslem members were split over a Moslem offensive that seized a coastal belt of Christian villages near the southern port of Sidon, sending tens of thousands of Christians fleeing to the mountain stronghold of Jezzine.

Christian forces have been divided, with Gemayel's Phalange Party at odds with the breakaway Lebanese Forces militia led by Samir Geagea.

Police said at least 78 people were killed and 220 wounded in the southern fighting in which some Christian villages were looted.

Charles, Diana visit Venice, cruise canal

VENICE, Italy (AP) — Prince Charles and Princess Diana of Great Britain, greeted by thousands of waving and cheering people, cruised the Grand Canal in a motor launch today and visited the sights of this famed city.

On the next-to-last day of their 17-day Italian tour, the couple arrived in Venice on the royal yacht Britannia after an overnight cruise in the Adriatic Sea.

Streams of well-wishers lined the bridges over the Grand Canal as the royal couple sailed below. Disembarking at St. Mark's Square, the prince and princess were welcomed by an Italian navy honor guard and then made their way to St. Mark's Basilica a few yards away, shaking hundreds of hands en route.

They also saw the Doges' Palace, where their guides included Mayor Mario Rigo. They admired works of art by Venetian masters Titian and Tiepolo.

Rigo presented them with a fruit bowl of gold and Murano glass with the coat of arms of the Prince of Wales etched on it. Prince Charles said the fruit bowl would be put in the dining room of the couple's home.

Marcos rejects officials' plea to impose martial law

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — President Ferdinand E. Marcos has rejected a plea by local officials to impose martial law on Mindanao, saying he has adequate power to deal with the communist insurgency there, the presidential palace said Saturday.

An official news release did not identify the petitioners, but indicated they were from Mindanao, the Philippines' second largest island, 500 miles south of Manila.

"There are sufficient laws available to defend the state against those seeking its violent overthrow," the release said, referring to constitutional provisions giving Marcos power to arrest and indefinitely imprison anybody considered a threat to national security.

Marcos and members of his government have said that reports of increased armed attacks in Mindanao by the insurgent communist New People's Army were exaggerated by the foreign and local press.

Sikh shoots four policemen

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — A Sikh terrorist shot four police on Saturday, two of them fatally, and then was captured after a gunbattle in Chandigarh watched by thousands of people, the city's inspector-general of police said.

Inspector-General N.K. Singhal said that Gurinder Singh, wearing only a turban and undershorts grabbed a rifle from a police squad trying to arrest him and shot two police to death. Two wounded officers were hospitalized.

Singhal said the man was involved in earlier terrorist violence, and police wanted to interrogate him.

He said Singh fled to a house in a crowded area of Chandigarh and traded shots for four hours with police and troops who surrounded the dwelling. The official said Singh kept firing even after he was wounded by a bullet, and was finally subdued with tear gas. Singh was hospitalized.

Police reportedly had difficulty controlling the crowds who came to see the gunbattle, the United News of India news agency reported.

Police: Airline threatened

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — A senior police officer reported Saturday the arrest of a 16-year-old girl accused of threatening to plant a bomb at the Singapore Airlines office unless she was paid 5 million baht (almost $219,300). Lt. Col. Somchai Mahawansu, an inspector, said that the girl made the extortion threat in a telephone call to the airline on April 30.

Somchai said that after subsequent calls, a dozen police forced their way on Friday into a Bangkok house outside of which a box of money was to be left, and arrested the girl.

Somchai said she denied the charge, but that police have tape recordings of her phone threats.

Pope plans Morocco visit

MARRAKECH, Morocco (AP) — Pope John Paul II will visit Morocco Aug. 19-21, official sources said Saturday.

The sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said that King Hassan II met Friday night with the Rev. Roberto Tucci, a special papal envoy charged with arranging details, the sources said.

Hassan, as president of the Islamic Conference's Jerusalem Committee, visited the pope in April 1980.

Romania downplays Soviets' role in liberation

TIRGU MURES, Romania (AP) — While recognizing Soviet sacrifices in World War II, Romania, Moscow's maverick ally, has recently been playing down the Red Army's role in freeing the country from pro-Nazi rule more than 40 years ago.

"We don't belittle the role of the Red Army," Col. Constantin Ucrain, a professor of military history at the military academy in Bucharest, told The Associated Press. "But we point to our country's part, which has been downgraded by some."

As in other countries of the Soviet bloc, paeans to Russian forces in World War II have been common in this Oregon-sized nation.

"Glory to the heroic Soviet army which liberated Romania from the Fascist invaders' yoke," proclaims a plaque at the Soviet war cemetery at Tirgu Mures, a Transylvanian city and one of the battle sites recently visited by Western reporters.

"It's the Soviets who erected the plaque after the war and we can't remove it," said a historian, who spoke on condition he not be identified.

But a recent book written under the supervision of Lt. Gen. Ilie Ceausescu, deputy defense minister and a brother of Romanian leader Nicolae Ceausescu, contradicts Soviet assertions that the Red Army liberated the country.

Published last year, "Two Hundred Days Sooner" says Soviet forces were 375 miles away from Bucharest when the August 1944 revolution began that toppled the pro-Nazi regime, implying that the Russians were far removed from the armed struggle.

The book draws its title from its thesis that World War II would have dragged on for another 200 days had Romania not switched to the Allies' side.

In the early days of the war, Romanian troops under Marshal Ion Antonescu joined forces with the Nazis in an attempt to get back the province of Bessarabia, which Soviets had annexed in 1940.

Romanians fought the Russians deep inside Soviet territory. On Aug. 23, 1944, an anti-Nazi coalition overthrew Antonescu, and re-entered the war on the Allied side.

Polish police clash with demonstrators

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Riot police chased and beat dozens of Solidarity demonstrators who took to the streets in two Polish cities after a Roman Catholic Mass to mark the anniversary of Poland's 1791 constitution.

Also Friday, the United States announced it would expel four Polish diplomats in retaliation for Warsaw's expulsion of two U.S. Embassy employees it accused of leading an illegal May Day celebration.

An estimated 6,000 people marched through Warsaw's old town on Friday night after a Mass marking the anniversary of the 1791 constitution, chanting "Solidarity," the name of the outlawed free trade union. Riot police chased and clubbed dozens of the demonstrators. There were no reports of any serious injuries.

In the southern city of Krakow, police used clubs to scatter protesters marching after a Mass attended by 7,000 people, Solidarity supporters in Krakow said.

The clashes came two days after thousands of Solidarity supporters demonstrated in five cities on May Day. May Day protests in Gdansk turned violent and several people were injured, some seriously.

The Reagan administration told Zadzislaw Ludwiczak, the ranking Polish diplomat in Washington, that it would expel four Polish diplomats.

The action broke from the usual practice of expelling diplomats on a one-to-one basis apparently to indicate strong U.S. objection to Warsaw's actions.

The diplomats are Boguslaw Maciborski of the Polish Embassy in Washington and Romuald Derylo, Jozef Kaminski and Stanislaw Zawadzki of the consulate general in Chicago. Maciborski is the embassy first secretary, Derylo and Kaminski are consuls and Zawadzki is a vice consul.

In a statement, the State Department said: "We want to express our grave displeasure not only with the unjustified expulsion of our diplomats, but also with the Polish government's bald fabrication of a story to justify their expulsion."

The Poles had said the two U.S. diplomats, David Hopper and William Harwood, were among 15 people detained in an "aggressively behaving leading group" of Solidarity supporters on May Day.

The U.S. Embassy in Warsaw said the Americans were not involved in the protest and were kicked, hit and pushed by Polish security agents.

Solidarity founder Lech Walesa attended two evening Masses with several thousand people in Gdansk on Friday night. The Masses ended peacefully, the Rev. Henryk Jankowski, a Walesa adviser, said by telephone.

High in 90s is forecast

From Staff and Wire Reports

The weatherman's word for today is "fair."

He's calling for a high today in the mid-90s and southerly winds at 10 to 20 mph.

The weatherman at the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport is calling for a "fair" tonight and Monday. The low tonight is to be in the low 60s. The high Monday is to be near 90.

Saturday's peak temperature was 91 degrees, and the record high for a May 4 is 103 degrees in 1947. The overnight low was 58 degrees. The record low for a May 4 is 39 degrees in 1933.

STATE

Fair skies provided the Lone Star State another sunny day Saturday as a high-pressure system continued to influence Texas weather.

Some fair-weather clouds dotted the High Plains, south and far west, but skies were otherwise cloudless, according to the National Weather Service.

Late afternoon temperatures were mostly in the 80s and 90s, and the 4 p.m. temperature extremes ranged from 92 degrees at Wink to 75 degrees at Galveston.

Winds were from the south across most sections, with speeds ranging from 5 to 15 mph, the weather service said.

In the forecast for North Texas, skies should be fair and a little warmer through Sunday night, but it should be partly cloudy in the west late Sunday night and throughout the area Monday. Highs both days should be in the upper 80s to low 90s, while Sunday night's lows should be in the 60s.

In West Texas, Sunday should be sunny and Monday fair with highs both days in the 80s, 90s and near 100 in the Big Bend valleys. Overnight lows should be in the 60s.

In South Texas, skies should be partly cloudy Sunday through Monday. Highs both days should be in the 80s. Lows Sunday night should be in the 60s and 70s.

NATION

Strong winds surged over the northern Plains on Saturday, while sunny skies prevailed over most of the nation.

Gusts of over 50 mph were clocked at Williston, N.D., Glasgow, Mont., and Rapid City, S.D., and winds of 30 to 45 mph blew through Kansas and across southern Minnesota and Wisconsin.

Showers and thundershowers were scattered across northern Wisconsin and Michigan.

Models Troy Bush and Connie Wagner set the mood for Saturday's semi-formal Gourmet Midland, planned for 6 to 9 p.m. at Midland Center. The event, a first for Midland, is part of the second annual Celebration of the Arts, Friday through May 20.

Celebration adds 'tasteful' touch

By GEORGIA TEMPLE
Entertainment Writer

The inside of Midland Center will be transformed into a sidewalk cafe Saturday for the city's first Gourmet Midland.

One of numerous events being held Friday through May 20 during the second annual Celebration of the Arts, Gourmet Midland is cosponsored by Midland Arts Assembly and the Midland Chamber of Commerce's Convention and Visitor's Bureau.

"We're moving into territory which has not been chartered in Midland before," said Shawna K. Rust, manager of the Convention and Visitor's Bureau and co-chairman of the Gourmet Midland committee. "We hope this year's Gourmet Midland will establish a tradition for future Celebrations of the Arts."

The idea for such an event is the result of success stories from Beaumont, Abilene, San Angelo, Lubbock and San Antonio, where similiar culinary evenings have been well received.

"They have been a complete sellout in most of the Texas cities," Ms. Rust said. Tickets for Saturday's Gourmet Midland have been limited to 1,500, the amount sold in other cities of a comparable size.

In those cities, the dinners were co-sponsored by the Texas Restaurant Association. Not so here.

"We chose not to in order to make it a part of the Celebration of the Arts," said Ms. Rust. "The TRA restricts people who are not members and we wanted to allow any Midland establishment to participate, TRA member or not."

Out of the 135 invitations sent out to Midland establishments, 17 affirmative answers were received. A listing of those who have agreed to participate includes Ramada Hotel, Holiday Inn Country Villa, Master's Club, Plaza Club, Cattleman's Steakhouse, Luigi's, Chili's, Murray's, Saladeli, Grandy's, Midland Hilton, Texas Tumbleweed, Fifth Avenue Bakery, Entertainment Services, Ocean's Seafood, Sam's BBQ and El Chico.

"I think by looking at the participants, each person will find something to satisfy his or her palate."

The cost to rent a booth is $75 for the evening, "a reasonable amount for the advertising and publicity that each establishment will receive," said Ms. Rust. Each participant receives a plaque and four complimentary tickets to the event. Others who are interested in participating may call Ms. Rust at the chamber.

Tickets, priced at $15 per person and $25 per couple, may be purchased at Luigi's, RepublicBank First National Midland, Midland Arts Assembly and Midland Chamber of Commerce. Proceeds from the 6 to 9 p.m. semi-formal Saturday event go to the Midland Arts Assembly.

Ms. Rust said she could not have put Gourmet Midland together without the help of Zuma Renaud, co-chairman of Gourmet Midland, and committee members Bob Bunch, KNFM-Radio; Steve Kempton and Louis Hochman, Luigi's; Alison Peeler and Susan Atchison, chamber of commerce; Jean Posey, director, Norma Webb, president, and Mary Rasmussen, chairman of the Celebration of the Arts committee, all of Midland Arts Assembly; Mary Whiteman, Texas American Bank; and Cindy Ford, First City National Bank. And, Ms. Rust said, "We're grateful to Snowwhite Laundry for donating all the linens."

Ms. Rust, a graduate of Washington State's culinary school, said her second priority is cuisine.

"Midland has come a long way in the food industry," she said. "We have a wide variety of chefs and other individuals in the area who contribute a great deal to our daily lives just through the foods they prepare, yet culinary arts have been overlooked and underemphasized in the world of art. Gourmet Midland will hopefully reverse that trend."

High schools to promote achievements

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

Some theorists believe that citizen awareness and support are vitally important to excellence in education.

With that theory in mind, the Midland Independent School District invites all interested Midlanders to attend its second Midland High School Showcase and Lee High School Rebel In Review Monday.

The muti-faceted approach to promoting community awareness will focus primarily on student achievement, said Dr. Patricia Smith, MHS director of Instructional Services.

"This year is an enlarged version of last year's program. This time we are focusing on Midland High's achievements over a 59-year period," she said.

Showcase '85 is a "single evening of demonstrations, displays, discussions and tours designed to demonstrate for all citizens how well their high schools are working," she said.

Its purpose, according to Ms. Smith, is to "show the community what's in our high school and that the programs are in place and working well."

Featured activities this year include performances by the high school band, orchestra and choir, as well as conferences with counselors and academic panels to discuss the impact of state regulations in English, social studies, mathematics, science and foreign language.

A special addition, "Centennial Corner" will exhibit MHS memorabilia including a 1913 graduation announcement, football and track trophies dating back to the 1930s and a 1939 letter jacket.

The entire faculty is involved, Ms. Smith said, as well as hundreds of students, parents and alumni.

Educators will answer questions about course offerings and requirment, program emphasis, honors courses and advanced placement testing.

The LHS version entitled, Rebels In Review, is designed to provide the LHS community with an opportunity to "see education as it is," according to Joanne Montgomery, Instructional Services director at LHS.

"We think we have some good things going on at Lee High School. This is just a special invitation to the community to come out and see it," she said.

LHS Rebels In Review will begin at 7 p.m. with a meeting of the LHS Parent-Teacher Association. Members will meet until 7:15 p.m. in the auditorium for a brief business meeting and to install officers.

Sessions begin at 7:15 p.m. with a sophomore orientation for Lee Freshman High School students and their parents.

Carnivals question stand on games of chance

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

While the Midland County District Attorney's Office is taking traveling carnival operators on a ride, pending legislation could give the operators another ticket of chance.

After the arrests in April of eight employees at a local carnival, word has spread among the carnival crowd that the Tall City isn't the easiest place to set up shows. Several carnivals scheduled for this month haven't even appeared and worried attorneys representing different carnivals have made several phone calls to investigators in the district attorney's office about their games.

But in Austin, legislation that could make it more difficult to monitor the employees of carnivals and the games they have has already passed through the House.

House Bill 1776, sponsored by Rep. Bill Messer of Belton, would amend Sec. 47.01 of the Texas Penal Code to legalize gambling at carnivals.

The section would read that the term "bet" would not include "an offer of merchandise with a value not greater than $25, made by a proprietor of a bona fide carnival contest conducted at a carnival sponsored by a non-profit religious, fraternal, school, law enforcement, youth, agricultural or civic group, if the person to receive the merchandise from the proprietor is the person who performs the carnival contest."

"That statute would be a real step backwards," District Attorney Al Schorre said. "It's supposed to amend it to give exemption to religious and fraternal organizations but the only thing that statue does is give exemption to the carnivals."

A similar bill that passed last legislative session was vetoed by the governor and Schorre said his office feels it could happen again. Nonetheless, members of the district attorney office are planning to testify against the bill when it goes before the Senate.

CENTENNIAL CHRONICLES

Parks weren't born as cultivated oases

By MARY FRANCES BEVERLEY

Mary Frances Beverley is a long-time Midlander, a former Midland Independent School District speech and English teacher, book reviewer, freelance writer and is active in Midland Community Theatre. Her book, "Great Hometown Restaurants of Texas," was published by Gulf Publishing Co., Houston, in late 1984. Her articles have appeared in numerous magazines.

Midland parks didn't begin as the faithfully-tended oases they are today. It wouldn't be inappropriate to name one of them Buffalo Wallow park, for this is what several of them were originally, cool resting places for the buffalo which once wandered over the Permian Basin. The natural lakes or playas, such as Grafa or Cowden Park, offered the ideal spot for the animals to roll and scratch and cool off in the shallow water.

These lakes also provided convenient watering places for cattle and were used for this purpose just as they are today on nearby ranches. Deciding to improve on what nature had provided, the late Henry Halff brought in donkeys to tramp down the bottom of the natural basin on his property, now a part of Cole Park, southeast of the city. Whether or not the idea helped the basin hold water better isn't known, but when the experiment was finished, Halff released the donkeys, and, according to a number of Midlanders who remember, every boy in town who wanted a donkey had his chance to own one.

A typical natural pond which became a city park is Hill Park on Cuthbert and Kansas streets, once a part of the J.E. "Bob" Hill Ranch which stretched 80 acres north from the Hill home on Illinois Street. In those days Hill Park's pond was used to water the ranch's cattle, and those were also the days when fishing was good in Wadley-Barron Park's lake bed, then a part of the same ranch and today restored to its natural pond state. In later years golfers fished golf balls from its watery depths when it became a part of Midland Country Club's golf course.

EVEN BEFORE officially-designated city parks existed, Midlanders had a favorite spot for picnics and recreation. Warfield, a farm/ranch west of town and earlier known as Chinagrove, was the scene of large gatherings of people for a number of years.

In the early 1900s, water drew Midlanders to Cloverdale Farm, southeast of the city, later to be called Cole Park. There they could swim in a million-gallon stock tank. During the 1930s, a swimming pool was part of the recreational facilities in Pagoda Park, located on land which is now the site of the Village shopping area, bounded by Andrews Highway, Wall Avenue and Illinois Street. The park was also the location of a baseball field for a professional team, the Midland Braves, and a miniature golf course. The park was in existence until the early 1950s.

Many Midland parks have been named after prominent civic and business leaders. The first official city park was named to honor A.B. Cole, caretaker of the park and other city property from 1924 until 1950. Cole was responsible for buying with his own money and planting 5,000 elm tree saplings in the park. Then when the trees were 7-10 feet tall, he transplanted hundreds of them to parks and other areas.

Other parks named after community leaders include: Cowden, Scharbauer, Garrett-Brown, Grafa, Elkin, Fasken, Hill, Hogan, House, Halff, Naomi Lancaster, Thomason, Wadley-Barron, and more recently, Butler and Essex.

ULMER PARK on West Kentucky and Clark streets was the site of the first Midland College which was built in 1910. Today Ulmer Park contains one of several public swimming pools in city parks.

Wadley-Barron Park was the unofficial location for special community events for a number of years. Just as the courthouse lawn of the early 1900s was the scene of Fourth of July picnics, band concerts and speeches, so this park now has its own gazebo bandstand, donated by the Kiwanis Club. The gazebo is often the setting for weddings, concerts and other special events. At least one generation of children has grown up in Midland looking forward to decorating their tricycles and wagons for the annual July Fourth parade around the park.

Wadley-Barron Park was the setting for a memorable, unscheduled event in the late 1950s. Following a typical West Texas gullywasher, owners of some of the numerous boats in Midland were returning home from weekend outings when the sight of the park's full lakebed suggested the natural place to extend the weekend's fun. Several boats, one towing a pony-tailed young waterskier, took to the water, cheered on by a large crowd of spectators.

Everyone was enjoying the novel scene until the arrival of a whistle-blowing policeman who was loudly booed as he waded, waist deep, to enforce the law. The law was clearly explained on the following day when a sign appeared on one of the park's corners, explicitly banning "Water Sports" in Wadley-Barron Park.

SINCE THE recent bowing to the naturally-rising water table and conversion of the park into an official small lake, the Parks and Recreation Department has placed a sign clearly banning swimming in the lake. In addition, as in all city parks, a sign states that any beverage in a glass container is forbidden, along with any alcoholic beverage and dogs not on leashes unless the owner has a permit from the city.

Midland parks have features uncommon in the parks of many big cities: few noticeable insects, no noisy passing traffic, little trash, a rare chance of muggings or other dangers or disturbances. There is room to enjoy the privacy of a family picnic, throw a Frisbee, run a dog, enjoy a quiet talk or soak up the frequent West Texas sun.

The names of Midland's newest parks continue to reflect our city's special features along with its beginnings: Windlands, Tumbleweed, Sage, Santa Rita, Centennial Plaza. It's highly unlikely anyone will ever encounter a buffalo or any cattle in Midland parks, but among their quiet trees and grass, some people may sense ghostly figures, reminding them that they are not the first to enjoy these oases on the prairie.

Centennial Chronicles will appear on this page each Sunday through July 7 in observance of Midland's Centennial. The columns were contributed by local writers in cooperation with the Midland Centennial Commission.

GARY OTT

Steinbrenner should groom game — not players

One of my fondest memories of childhood is the many hours I spent on Saturday afternoons glued to the old black-and-white television set, watching with keen interest as my beloved New York Yankees won another close one from the likes of the Cleveland Indians, Detroit Tigers or, better yet, the much-hated Boston Red Sox.

I lived and died with the Yankees.

I knew all the players, what position they played, their batting averages, their marital status and, if it was provided on the back of my baseball cards, their favorite color.

They were like family. Clete Boyer at third. Tony Kubek at shortstop. Bobby Richardson, the ideal leadoff hitter, at second. Joe Pepitone, one of baseball's original longhairs and who, by the way, was just arrested last week on drug charges, at first. Yogi Berra, and later Elston Howard, behind the plate.

I could go on, but you get the point. I know my Yankee history.

My favorite was Mickey Mantle. God bless Mickey Mantle. Every kid should have a hero like Mickey Mantle. Even the name — Mickey — personifies the small-town, middle-class America in which I grew up.

I would weep openly, and without shame, if he struck out with runners in scoring position. In our neighborhood sandlot games, I would insist on playing centerfield and batting clean-up just like he did.

If the others refused, I would take my bat and ball and go home.

Being a good sport never entered my mind when the subject at hand was Mickey Mantle and the Yankees.

Sadly, that's all changing. I no longer lose sleep when they drop another one-run game to the Blue Jays of Toronto, a city that belongs in the major leagues about like Hong Kong does.

The problem with today's Yankees is their owner, George Steinbrenner, a rich Republican shipbuilder who was once one of Richard Nixon's most avid supporters. Probably still is, for that matter, which isn't why he is ruining the Yankees, but does add reason for disliking him personally.

No, the reason he is destroying my childhood memories is because he has forgotten baseball is a game, meant to be played and enjoyed by human beings who will sometimes make mistakes, like losing occasionally.

He has also forgotten tradition is an integral part of the game, especially with a team like the Yankees who have a long and illustrious history.

You don't buy that sort of thing with money, even the millions of dollars he so casually tosses about. All he has managed to do with his money is buy mediocrity with a grating personality, the worst of two worlds.

The final blow came last week when Steinbrenner fired the team's manager, Yogi Berra, who, short of Mickey Mantle himself, was what the Yankees once stood for.

To see Yogi Berra is to see baseball at its best. He is a short, fat, tobacco-chewing, beer-drinking, high-school-educated man who mumbles a lot and once said, "The game ain't over until it's over."

When he speaks a small but steady stream of tobacco juice sometimes flows down his chin.

You don't fire people like that. Even if he can't manage a lick, you keep him around as honorary team philosopher.

And what reason did Steinbrenner give for the firing?

The team was losing too much? Not really. That would make too much sense. Instead, he gave some vague mention of there not being enough discipline on the team.

So he made a new rule. From now on the players must wear coats and ties on road trips and hair will be neatly trimmed.

Great. That should really help their hitting deficiencies.

What they need is someone like John Madden, the former Oakland Raiders head coach and current beer commercial star. In his autobiography, his touched on the subject of disciplining professional athletes. He said:

"I only had two rules: One, be on time. Two, play your fanny (he was more graphic) off when I tell you to."

Maybe that's why his band of scraggly outlaws consistently won championships while the neatly-groomed Yankees languish in last place.

MISD, TLCPE keeping eye on student ration legislation

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

What's magic about the number 22?

"Nothing" despite what the Texas Legislature seems to think, said Bill Jackson, vice president of the Midland Independent School District Board of Trustees and co-vice president of Texans for Local Control of Public Education.

Jackson and his TLCPE colleagues this week will keep a close eye on legislative happenings. In particular is an amendment to repeal a law requiring school districts to enroll no more than 22 students per classroom in grades K-2.

According to Dr. Eli Douglas, TLCPE president and superintendent of Garland Independent School District, the special interest group supports House Bill 2308 to amend the present law to require student-teacher ratios be based upon a districtwide average rather than individual classroom size.

"Under the current law and State Board of Education policy, if a campus has three first-grade sections, with enrollments of 24, 22, and 22, a district has no leeway when another student enrolls on that campus," Douglas said." The district would be required to employ another teacher and establish a fourth section."

The 22 student-teacher ratio, to be implemented this fall under the provisions of House Bill 72, was passed by the Legislature during a 1984 special summer session.

"What we're asking is that we have an average (rather than a fixed number)," Jackson said. "You don't have to have a rule so rigid that if you have 23 kids in a classroom you have to add another teacher.

"There's nothing magic about the number 22," he added.

A survey of local school districts shows that the 501 districts responding would need an additional 2,368 teachers and 1,854 additional classrooms to implement the rule, Douglas said. The cost to school districts to employ additional teachers and classrooms would total an estimated $142 million; and would be provided at the local taxpayers' expense, he added.

Locally, MISD could spend up to $1 million to hire 25 additional teachers and create the 25 additional classrooms needed to impelement the law, Jackson said.

MISD's districtwide average is estimated at 22.3 students based on a projection of pupils enrolled in grades K-2, he reported.

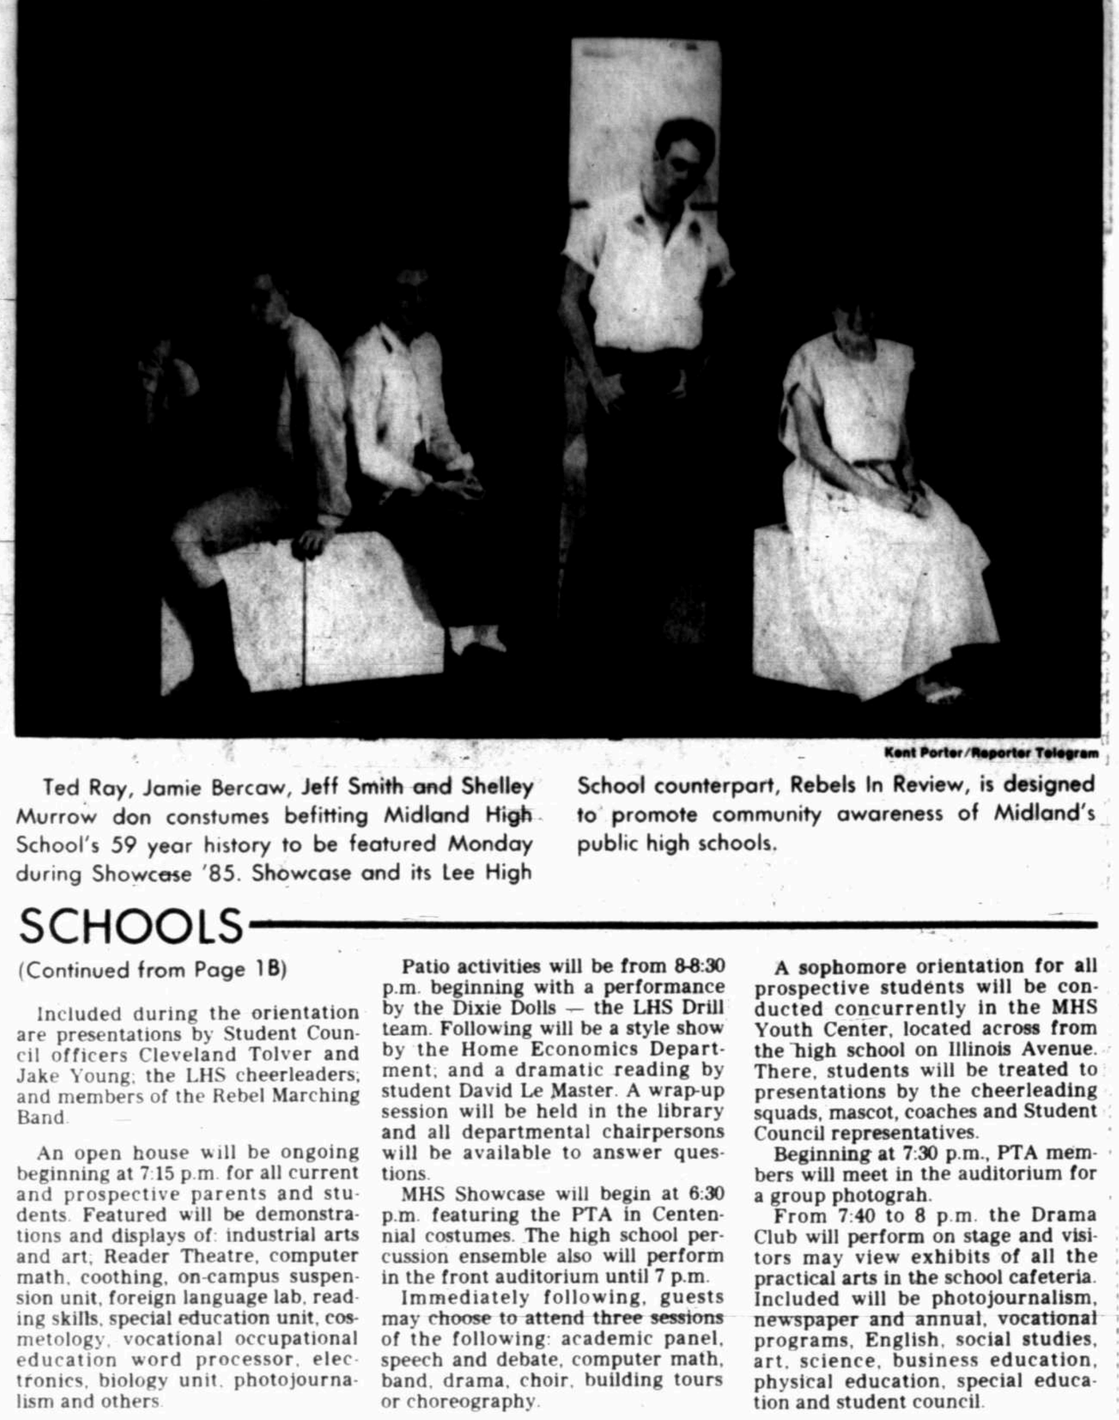

TLCPE, a statewide organization established last fall, is comprised of some 600 members, including teachers, school districts, school administrators, trustees and parents. MISD is a member of TLCPE.

A study conducted by the Educational Research Service concluded that class size has little if any decisive impact on the academic achievement of most pupils in most subjects in classes of 25-34 pupils, Douglas said.

"The Educational Research Service suggests that what is needed are practical guidelines for flexible class size policy," he noted. "Flexibility allows decisionmakers to vary the size of classes to fit the needs of pupils, teachers and diverse school situations."

Douglas said that TLCPE believes that public policy should continue to focus attention on programs for students in the early elementary grades.

"The lowering of class size at these grade levels should continue to be a high priority for the State of Texas and local school districts," he said. "However, we believe that good management practice would suggest greater flexibility in this area."

GAMES

Schorre said local organizations which have their own booths and contract rides through a carnival haven't been the major problem. What law enforcement officers really want to eliminate is the carnivals in which the "weighed" games are run by traveling carnies, who often use the name of the organization sponsoring the carnival as a safety shield. Usually the organization receives 15 percent of the profit but sometimes carnies re-use tickets, making it impossible to determine the actual gross.

"We wouldn't be opposed to local organizations sponsoring that type of activity," Schorre said. "It's the traveling games we don't like. The rides are legal."

J.D. Luckie, investigator with the district attorney's office, agreed:

"We have no objection to the churches or other groups having carnivals if they come and build their own games. But when they're run by the carnies, the public is going to be cheated and there is no way to control what you're going to get."

The arrests in April of seven employees, including the owner, of Love's Carnival on promotion of gambling charges spurred the district attorney's office into action. According to investigators, the games and contests were rigged.

Also arrested on a warrant was a 53-year-old "kiddie-ride operator" who is alleged to have escaped from a Georgia penitentiary where he was serving time for murder. Another person arrested on the promotion charges also was charged with possession of marijuana and amphetamines.

In an executive session with the Midland City Council two weeks ago, representatives of the district attorney's office requested a city ordinance which would require operators of carnivals to have licenses to operate within city limits and mug shots and fingerprints of all employees available.

"We just want to know who is operating these games," Schorre said.

SCHOOLS

The intersection is being reconstructed and new traffic signals will be installed during the closure.

Retailers eye effect of Blue Law repeal

By KEN HERMAN
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN — Texans counting on wide-open Sunday shopping if the Blue Law repeal bill is approved might be charging toward disappointment, says the sponsor of the repeal measure that is halfway through the Legislature.

"If people are expecting all the stores in the state to be opened on Sunday they are going to be surprised," said Rep. David Cain, D-Dallas.

"I would be very surprised if the department stores that are not opened now on Sundays would just open their doors to a bunch of retail traffic on Sundays," he said. "As far as a bunch of stores in suburban malls opening, I'd be pretty surprised."

Cain will be pretty surprised, some retailers say, predicting the death of the 1961 Blue Law probably would open most stores — either by choice or economics.

"I can tell you with a great degree of certainty that all your major stores will open. When all your major stores open it means all the stores in those shopping centers will open. You can bet your last dollar on that," said Mickey Moore, director of the Texas Retailers Assocition, which likes the Blue Law.

"I think you are going to see a lot of doors just blow open," said Frank Griffis, consultant for the major retailers who combined to fight for repeal.

Robert Mettler of San Antonio, president of Texans for Blue Law Repeal and chief executive officer of Joske's, indicated his stores most likely would open on Sundays if the Blue Law is stricken.

"I would assume we would. We have plans to be opened each and every Sunday available," he said.

Sunday store hours probably would be about noon to 5 p.m., he said.

Cain's repeal bill, which would keep the Blue Law in effect for auto dealers, was approved 102-40 in the House last week. It's up to the Senate now, where sponsor Ray Farabee of Wichita Falls says he is "very close" to having the needed votes.

"It's looking good in the Senate," Griffis said. "We can smell victory."

Assuming Senate approval and Gov. Mark White's OK, the Blue Law would die Sept. 1, which is a Sunday. Assuming all the stores that joined Texans for Blue Law Repeal would take advantage of the new freedom of commerce, Texans could expect these stores to open Sundays: Joske's, Haverty's Furniture, K Mart, Levitz Furniture, Sears, Target, Toys "R" Us and Zales.

Several stores already opened Sundays for restricted sales also joined the repeal effort, including, Tom Thumb-Page, Handy Dan, Eckerds, Kroger and 7-Eleven.

Cain said the biggest immediate effect of repeal would be in those stores now opened Sundays for sale of everything but the 42 items banned by the Blue Law.

"The grocery stores, the convenience stores and the hardware stores that are now opened Sundays will not have to worry about fencing off areas," he said.

The Texas Retailers Association support of the Blue Law is based, in part, on the fear that mom-and-pop stores would be forced to open on Sundays — by economics or by mall contracts.

In some malls, the big stores dictate shopping hours.

Stanley Guzick, manager of Benold's Jewelers store in Austin's Highland Mall, has fought repeal.

"It's awfully rough on a family-owned business. You can imagine who'll be working on Sundays," he said.

"I don't think we are going to have much of a choice. If the mall says open, you're opened," said Guzick, who already works long hours.

And he's figured that he would survive Sunday work "as long as I have a big screen TV to watch the Cowboy games."

Informant may seek federal term

HOUSTON (AP) — A former paid informant for the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration, who claims his life would be in danger if he served a prison term in the Texas Department of Corrections, has three months to arrange for a federal term, a judge ruled.

U.S. District Judge James DeAnda agreed to delay scheduled hearings on informant Kevin Peter Ward until Aug. 5. The judge said a hearing now was unnecessary since federal officials told him they will not stand in the way of a transfer.

South PTA runner-up in state contest

South Elementary Parent Teacher Association has been selected as runner-up in the 1984-85 "Outstanding PTA in Texas" competition of the Texas PTA.

Winner of the top award was Key Elementary PTA of Arlington.

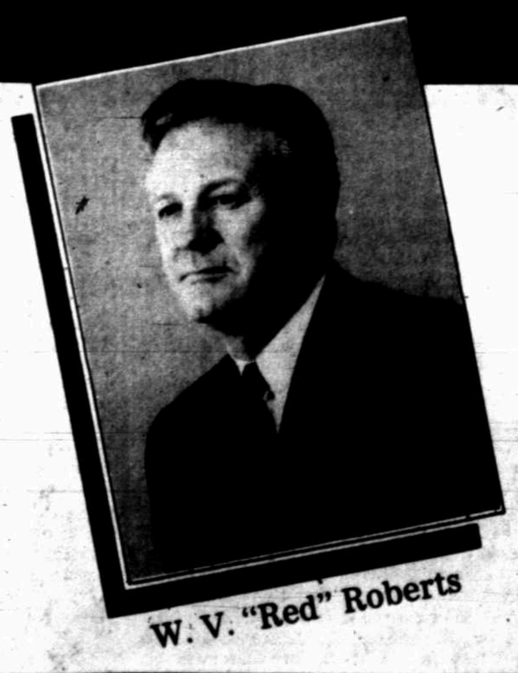

With a predominantly Mexican-American student body, South PTA membership in 1984-85 rose to 451.

Parents participated in the neighborhood crime watch program, child abuse clinic and Project SMART (Stop Marketing Alcohol on Radio and Television).

South PTA also worked with the Lions Club on "Helping Hand" posters and with the police department on bike registration and crime watch. They provided student fingerprinting, held bike and seat belt safety programs, sponsored Headstart clothing drives, and donated gifts to underprivileged families.

Parent volunteers also were busy as room mothers, partners-in-reading, field trips, baking, working in carnival booths and typing for teachers.

People of our community who make a difference.

W. V. "Red" Roberts

"I've just lucked my way through the oil business," says W. V. "Red" Roberts, owner of Columbia Drilling Company.

Mr. Roberts grew up in the midst of the oilfield. He recounts, "the Luling field offset my grandfather's old homeplace" when Prarie Oil and Gas drilled a number of wells on the land and the Magnolia Refinery was built on the Roberts' farm.

In the mid-20's Mr. Roberts' father became a driller, starting at Luling, then moving to Texon, McCamey and finally leaving the oilfield in 1929 while living in Wink, Texas.

After Mr. Roberts got out of the army in 1946, he attended Texas Tech for a short while. Soon he discovered that he would rather be back in the oilfield than in school. "I hired out to J. P. "Bum" Gibbons in 1947," he says that's when he first came to Midland and began working as a roustabout.

Though work with various contractors and Republic Supply Company and Vance Supply Company carried Mr. Roberts away from Midland for a few years, he returned to the community in 1951 as Assistant Superintendent for Western Drilling. Later he worked for for Cactus Drilling Company, Darrell W. Smith and Jess Warton, "a couple of my 'oilfield daddies,'" says Mr. Roberts. By that time, oil men such as Van Welch (the man the Welch field was named after) had caught Mr. Roberts "bluffing his way through the oil field." He learned from those years and those men.

It was the year 1959 when this enterprising Midlander decided he was ready to start his own drilling company, Rod Ric Corporation. "There's not anything in the world as fullfilling as being able to do your job better than anyone else." When one reaches that point and thinks he's not getting paid enough, "then you need to go into business for yourself," says Mr. Roberts. He reasons that such a venture will reveal how good a man really is at his work.

Rod Ric was the first West Texas drilling company to operate 100 percent trailer mount drilling rigs, according to Mr. Roberts. In the early days of the company many production and drilling superintendents greeted the drilling crews with, "We didn't need a pulling unit. We wanted to drill a well." Eventually, the company proved not only that the mobile rigs could handle the task, but that they could do it faster and more economically to 6,000-7,000 feet than rigs which utilized standard drilling equipment.

In 1980 Mr. Roberts sold Rod Ric but by 1983 he was back in the drilling business with a new company, Columbia Drilling.

Today, Mr. Roberts says, "I and anybody else that takes anything from the oilfield for themselves owes it to someone else. I owe it to a lot of superintendents like Marvin Mills, Joe Smith, Henry Crim, Bill Wardroup, Les Weatherall, Perk Perkins, Arno Anders, and T. P. "Red" Drew that gave my concept a chance." Moreover, he says, friends gambled with him, giving him credit

Not only has Mr. Roberts been busy in the oil field, but he has been an active member of the Lions Club and First Baptist Church. He is proud to be a Trustee of Manor Park and one of the newer members of the Board of the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum.

Innovative thinking, determination, and action are why W. V. "Red" Roberts makes a difference in Midland.

LETTER FROM COLLEGE

Baskin to address graduates

By H.A. TUCK

This is final exams week, concluding the spring semester. And for quite a few students, it's also graduation time. Midland College's annual Commencement Ceremony is set for 7 p.m. in the Al G. Langford Chaparral Center with Joan Baskin, Midland Chamber of Commerce president, as the speaker. The public is invited to attend the event and help the graduates celebrate this milestone.

• • •

Graduates of a different sort will be celebrating at 6 p.m. Wednesday when the General Education Development (GED) graduates have a covered dish dinner. The dinner is in honor of all the students who have earned GED diplomas during the 1984-85 school year. It's being held in Room 134 of the Occupational-Technical Building.

GED students are adults who study to obtain the equivalent of a high school diploma through the free Adult Basic Studies program operated by MC. Many of them will be enrolling in college courses now.

• • •

Pre-registration for MC's first summer session starts Monday in the Student Services Office, located in the Administration Building.

The early counseling and pre-registration is being conducted this week from 8 a.m. to 7:30 p.m. Monday through Thursday and 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Friday. After this week, hours are 7 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Monday through Thursday as MC goes on its summer operating hours.

May 28 is the last day to pre-register. Official registration is set for May 30, with classes starting June 3.

Student Senate officers for 1985-86 were elected recently. They include Mike Mahoney, president; Joyce Lynde, vice president; Sheila Evans, secretary-treasurer; and Kathe Arrington, parliamentarian.

They have taken office and will spend part of the summer planning Student Senate activities and programs for next year. Both Freshmen and Sophomore Senators are elected early during the fall semester.

• • •

Students also voted recently on "Teacher of the Semester" for each of the college's seven instructional divisions. Those selected were Johnny Moore, automotive, Technical Studies Division; Shea Nabi, biology, Scientific Studies Division; Anthony Ferro, dance, Fine Arts Division; Bob Weidman, respiratory therapy, Health Studies Division; Dr. Betty Gaines, behavioral science, Cultural Studies Division; Dr. Sylvia Major, English, Communications Division; and Barbara Scofield, computers, Business Studies Division.

By the way, this is the first time for the designation as "doctor" for Betty Gaines, who has completed work for the degree from Texas Tech. Another new "doctor" is speech instructor Tyler Tindall.

Service awards were presented to a large number of employees during a general faculty meeting last week.

Fifteen-year awards went to Dr. Geraldine Box, Dr. Wayne Holcomb, Dr. Don Hunt and Patricia Meyers.

Those receiving ten-year awards were Margarito Almaras, Alex Andrew, Clyde Chynoweth, James Fuller, Anita Harwell, Leroy Hunt, Emma King, Nancy Lowe, Dorothy Nutter, Margie Peddy, Dr. Elizabeth Robinett-Merckle, Dr. Jack Schneider, Flo Skinner, Rebecca Tillapaugh and H.A. Tuck.

Five-year awards were given to Ennis Cochran, Margaret Dieringer, Pedro Garcia, James Goldman, Ellen Gonzalez, Maria Grado, Dr. Donald Grant, Keith Greenwood, Karen Harris, Helen Hinson, Van Johnson, Mary Lee, James Orr, Alma Priestley, Fred Rylee, Katherine Snowder, Dr. Charles A. Stewart, Shirley Stuart, Rebecca Tate, Wayne Young and Ruby Winkler.

Helen Hinson is director of MC's vocational nursing program in Fort Stockton.

Congratulations to the Chaparral tennis teams, who swept through both conference play and the regional tournaments. That earns them trips to Ocala, Florida, for the National Junior College Athletic Association tournaments.

The women's tournament is May 14-17, while the men's tourney is May 21-24.

Coach Joe Williams and his players have an opportunity to make it twin titles for the Chaps...something they've never accomplished.

If you're a super-eager student-or a glutton for punishment-then you might be interested in knowing about the Spring Interim Session, which begins May 13 and ends May 24.

It's a chance to earn three hours of college credit in just two weeks, by going to class five hours a day, reading a lot, and writing a lot. Those who survive an interim class, and a surprising number have done so, say it's very fast, but with the total immersion that can result in great results.

There's no pre-registration, but information may be obtained in the Office of Student Services, Administration Building.

The Spring Student Art Show closes this afternoon, but you can see it from 1-5 p.m. in the McCormick Gallery, Allison Fine Arts Building. The show fills virtually the entire gallery with a tremendous assortment of drawings, oil paintings, watercolors, mixed media, photographs, sculpture, and ceramics.

Also on display are a number of architectual drawings by Midland College architecture students.

It's really a good show, very diverse, and one you should see before it closes.

H.A. Tuck is public relations director for Midland College.

EDUCATION

Pre-registration to begin for MC summer session

Pre-registration and early counseling for Midland College's first summer session begins Monday.

Persons planning to take credit courses during the session should visit the Office of Student Services, Administration Building. Hours this week are 8 a.m.-8 p.m. Monday through Thursday and 8 a.m.-5 p.m. on Friday.

The pre-registration continues through May 28. Registration date is May 30 with classes starting June 3. The session ends July 9.

After the first week, hours for pre-registration will be 7 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Thursday.

As prospective students complete pre-registration, they are issued time permits which assign them specific times to report for the offical registration. Since they are issued in the order students complete pre-registration, the earlier students come in, the better time permits they receive. This helps assure them they will get the courses they want at the times most convenient for them.

Midland College also offers an intensive two-week summer interim session, which starts May 13 and ends May 24. By attending classes five hours daily for the two weeks, students may earn three hours of college credit. There is no preregistration required for the Interim Session. Students register and begin attending classes at 8:30 a.m. May 13.

San Jacinto does well in math competition

San Jacinto Junior High School won the Texas State Mathematics League Regional Competition in the seventh and eighth grade divisions. Other winners were Bowie Junior High of Odessa, second place; Trinity School of Midland, third place; and Colorado City and Fort Stockton, fourth place in the seventh grade division. Fort Stockton won second place; Trinity third and Bowie fourth in the eighth grade division.

The contest is based on scores from a written test administered to top math students earlier in the school year.

Several San Jacinto students earned individual honors in the competition. In the seventh grade division, Michael Leung won second place. Eighth graders earning individual honors were Chris Lord, second, and Denise Basquez, Kurt White and Matt Paniszczyn, tied for fourth place.

Junior high school students from Ector, Howard, Midland, Mitchell, Pecos, Presidio, Scurry, Val Verde and Winkler counties participated in the competition.

The seventh grade team consists of Michael Leung, Megan Bray, Suzanna Harless, Cindy Robertson and Joseph Baressi.

The eighth grade team consists of Chris Lord, Dennis Vasquez, Kurt White, Matt Paniszczyn and Tiana Daniel.

FIXED OR ADJUSTABLE MORTGAGE?

There was a time when the pundits claimed that the fixed mortgage was extinct. The pundits were wrong. If one thing is certain it is that future mortgage financing and interest rates are unpredictable.

Lenders are now offering fixed rate mortgages and more competitive interest rates. However, the popular adjustable rate mortgage is still with us and probably always will be. It may still be a good option for many.

With the adjustable rate mortgage, the borrower shares the risk of fluctuating interest rates with the lender. Obviously, the lender prefers this option. In order to make this shared risk partnership workable, the lender must offer the borrower a premium. The premium for choosing an adjustable mortgage should be somewhere between one and three points below the fixed rate mortgage rate.

Over 70% of buyers, given the choice between fixed or adjustable mortgage, choose the fixed rate. However, you should consider all options.

DYING TO LOSE WEIGHT

Why do overwight adults who are otherwise healthy suddenly die while using very low calorie- diets? A new study confirmed the long-held suspicion that heart problems are to blame. Researchers studied the deaths of 17 people who had been consuming commercially distributed liquid protein diet products offering 300 to 500 calories daily. They found that the deaths were triggred by irregular heartbeats and that the dieter's hearts has actuallty shrunk in size. New warning labels are now being required. The FDA ordered very low calorie protein diet products (those below 400 calories daily) to carry labels warning that their use as a total diet, without medical supervision, "may cause serious illness or death."

Cox, son of Don and Rosemary Cox, 209 Ridglea, is a member of the Industrial Arts Club, Fellowship of Christian Athletes and the MHS football team where he was a two-year letterman earning All-District honors. He also was a member of the baseball team, served as Catoica escort and received awards in the State Industrial Arts competition and from the Daughters of the American Revolution.

Hardy

Cox plans to attend Texas Tech University and study physical education.

Miss Hardy, daughter of Jay and Edith Hardy, 4302 Skyline Drive, is a member of the Junior Engineering Technological Society, French Club, band, church choir, National Honor Society and Student Council.

She also served as drum major, band chaplain, JETS vice president and was named to Area Band and All-Region Band.

Miss Hardy plans to attend the University of Texas at Austin and study biology/pre-medicine.

The West Texas State University School of Agriculture awarded a $600 Houston Livestock Show & Rodeo Scholarship to Karma Kay Hancock a senior at Lee High School. Miss Hancock plans to study pre-veterinary medicine at WT.

STILLWATER, OKLA. — Midlander W. Reid Williams is among 3,284 students to receive degrees from Oklahoma State University during commencement ceremonies Saturday.

FORT WORTH — Patricia Murphey of Midland was among 25 Texas Christian University students selected for membership in the TCU Student Foundation for 1985-86.

Ms. Murphey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John W. Murphey, is a member of Mortar Board, Phi Chi Theta business sorority, Delta Delta Delta social sorority, and has been listed on the Dean's Honor List. She is a graduate of Midland High School.

Moseley

SHERMAN — Two Austin College students from Midland were recognized for academic excellence recently during the college's annual honors convocation.

They are James Moseley, son of Patricia Bassham; and Michael Collins, son of Ada Anne Collins.

Moseley, a junior, received the Will Mann Richardson Prize for outstanding scholarship and service. He also was one of 15 students named to Who's Who for 1985. Moseley also was named a member of Alpha Chi, a national honor society recognizing outstanding scholarship, and Pi Gamma Mu, a national honor society for students in the social sciences.

Collins, a senior, was named to Pi Gamma Mu.

It's time to spray mesquite

AGRICULTURE

The time for broadcast aerial application of herbicide for control of mesquite is fast approaching. Hopefully, control in 1985 will be better than in past years due to the wet winter encountered across much of the Trans-Pecos region of Texas. Any moisture received this spring will also be helpful.

There has been a considerable amount of change in the past few years concerning the availability of certain herbicides for control of mesquite. At the present time there are four herbicides that may be used for aerial treatment. This includes three herbicides that have been used for many years and one that has only recently been labeled for use.

The three herbicides that most people associate with mesquite control and are still labeled for that use include 2,4,5-T, dicamba and picloram. The herbicide 2,4,5-T has been the most commonly used product for mesquite control in the past. While 2,4,5-T is still labeled for that use, it is no longer manufactured in this country. As such, supplies are low to non-existent. Confusion has arisen as to what herbicide or combination of herbicides should now be used, since 2,4,5-T was the most commonly used product for mesquite control both by itself and in combination with picloram.

One option available to ranchers this year is to substitute dicamba for 2,4,5-T. This herbicide, sold under the trade name "Banvel" can be applied by itself, or in a 1 to 1 combinaton with picloram for conrol of mesquite. The mixture with picloram must be tank mixed since a commercial formulation is not available. Picloram is sold under the trade name "Grazon PC." The effective rates for both dicamba alone and in combination with picloram is 0.5 to 1.0 lbs. active ingredient per acre. The lower rate is used in West Texas. Dicamba alone, or in combination with picloram, can be expected to give equal or slightly greater control as compared to 2,4,5-T.

Due to the recent labeling of a new herbicide, there is one additional option available for control of mesquite. This new herbicide is triclopyr, sold under the trade name "Grazon ET." This herbicide will provide approximately the same level of control as 2,4,5-T both alone and in combination with picloram. Rates, timing and method of application are the same as for 2,4,5-T and dicamba. The herbicide is not labeled for basal treatment of mesquite as is 2,4,5-T.

It must be remembered that with all the herbicides listed, maximum kill is dependent on proper timing and good growing conditions. Generally, broadcast aerially applications are made 45 to 90 days following bud break. This corresponds to the time when the leaves are fully extended and have turned from a light green to a dark green color. In addition to foliage development, soil temperature is an important factor. Best control of mesquite is usually obtained when the soil temperature at 12 to 18 inches of depth at time of spraying is 75 degrees or above.

If frequent rains occur during the spray season, root kills are often reduced because the mesquite plant will continue to add new leaf growth, thus the plants have leaves in different stages of maturity. If possible, herbicide application should be delayed for 10 to 21 days after a significant rainfall to allow new growth to mature. Another factor to remember before spraying mesquite is damage to mesquite foliage by insects, disease or hail. If a significant number of mesquite plants have been defoliated by insect or hail, plant kills are usually reduced.

JUNIOR LIVESTOCK SHOWS — ARE THEY WORTH IT? Before we discuss the merits of a junior livestock show, maybe we better define it. First of all, it's not a junior livestock show, it's a youngster show where livestock are used as props or visual aids. About 90 percent of the people who come to a livestock show come to see their youngster or someone else's youngster show themselves, and they have an animal in order to get into the ring.

Junior livestock projects should never be sold as a money-making project. It is a teaching project, and should be sold as such. What does it teach?

1. It teaches youngsters to get along with people. Showing animals, winning, getting beat, and so forth, helps youngsters to get along with others.

2. Livestock feeding teaches responsibility. It is the feeder's responsibility to hear the alarm clock and obey it. If they learn nothing more than that, feeding is worth while.

3. Junior livestock projects teach youngsters to attend to details. In feeding, and especially through life, it is often the little things that count. The person who goes the extra mile gets the job done.

4. Decision-making is the most painful task that a teenager has. The good animals shown this year didn't just happen to be here. Somebody planned it that way.

5. Feeding teaches younsters to plan. Without a good planning job, we are sunk.

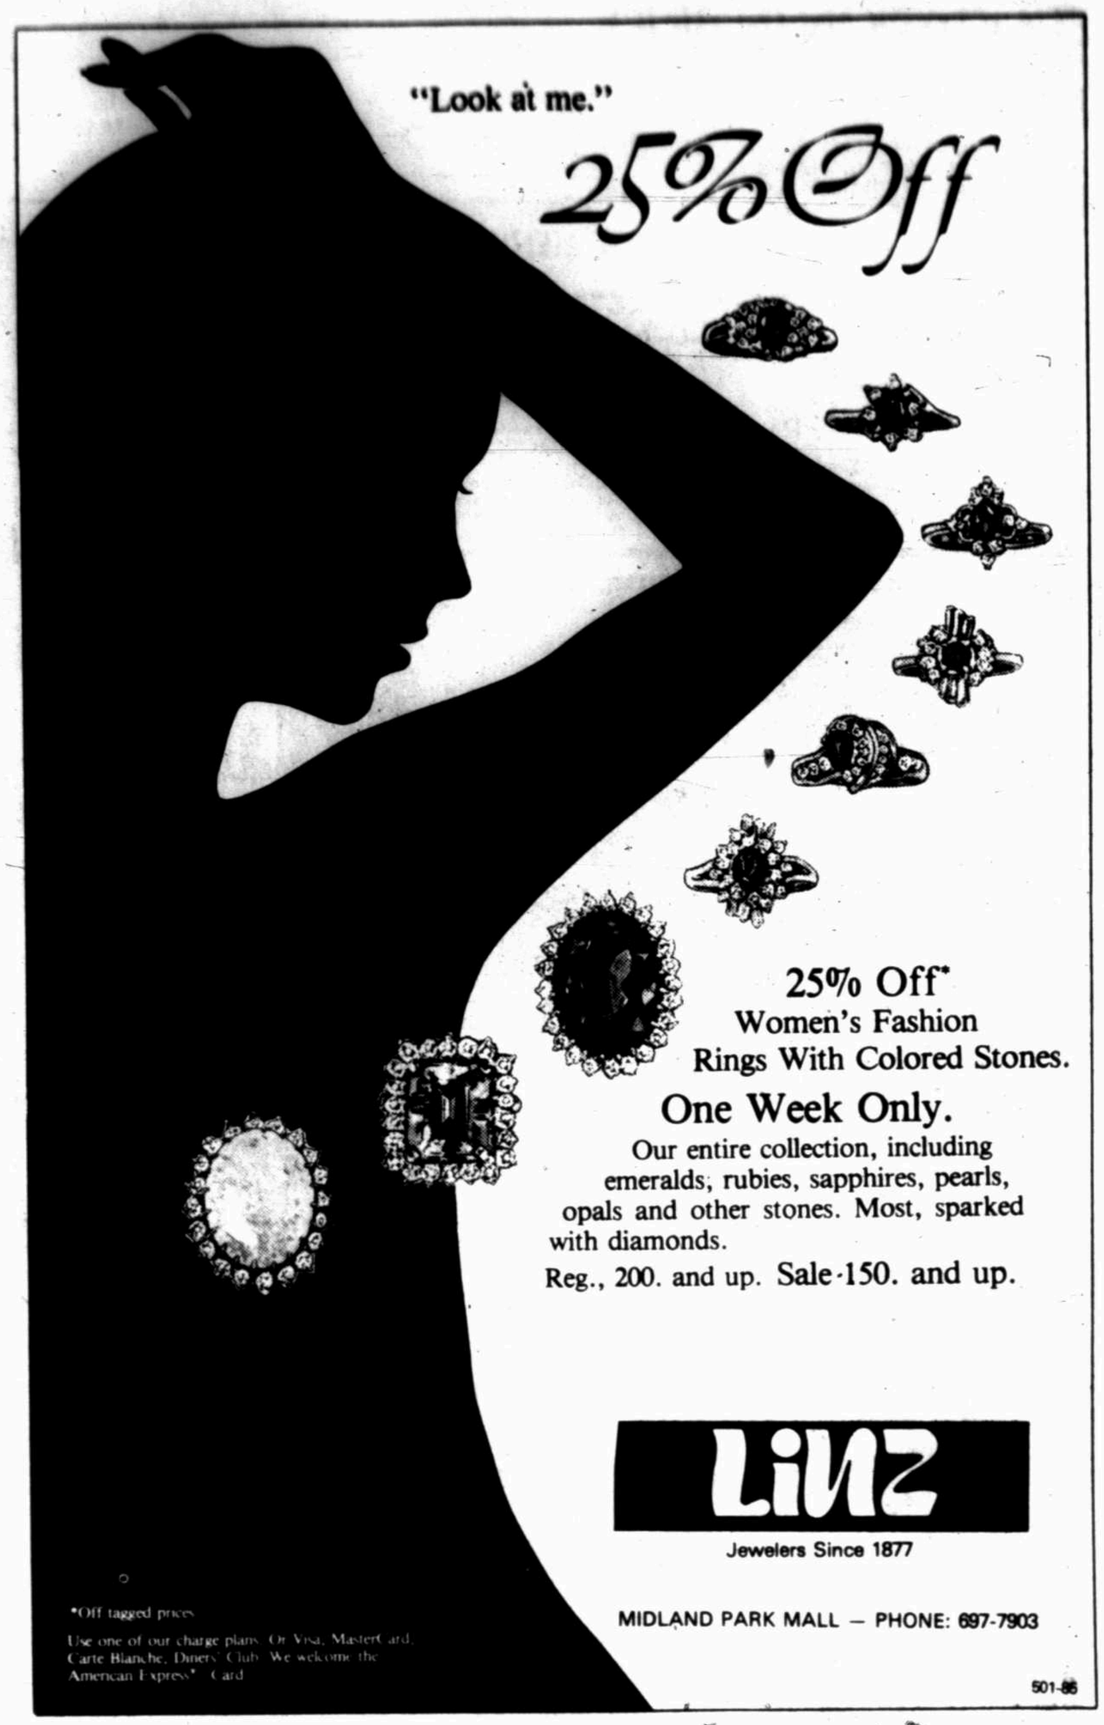

6. Somewhere along the line, we hope our young feeders will learn a little about livestock production.

We don't expect every youngter who feeds a calf, lamb, or hog to become a beef cattleman, sheepman or hogman; neither do we expect all little league baseball players to play for the major leagues.

Feeding is a family project. I don't mean the whole family does the work. I mean the whole family must enjoy it. Half the value of the project is lost if the parents don't attend the show.

I think sometimes we are prone to look at investments through the wrong end of a telescope. For example, we don't buy a car, we buy transportation; we don't buy a TV set, we buy entertainment; we don't miss a day at school, we lose a day of education. By the same token, we don't invest toward a premium list or buy some youngster's calf or pig in a premium sale. Rather than that, we invest in the future of some boy or girl, who in turn will help to keep America the greatest country on earth.

Earnest C. Kiker is Midland County Extension Agent for Agriculture.

Czech farms producing too much

By IVA DRAPALOVA

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia (AP) — For Czechoslovakia's farmers, it was a very good year — so good that it could be bad.

The communist-governed nation's agriculture has overcome the often traumatic transition from private farms to cooperatives in the 1950s to become a major stabilizing factor in the economy. Now authorities are concerned about overproduction — a rare situation in Eastern Europe.

According to official figures, Czechoslovakia met 97 percent of its domestic food needs last year. Such an achievement was undreamed of a decade ago, but it brings worries of what to do with excess produce.

"Less is sometimes more," cautioned a recent edition of the farmers' newspaper Zemedelske Noviny, commenting on a surplus of eggs last year.

Hens laid 170 million more eggs than the 1984 plan called for, meaning that every citizen would have to consume a dozen more eggs than they normally do in a year, the newspaper added. "According to the opinion of experts this task is beyond the capacity of Czechoslovak citizens."

The surplus was laid by 640,000 hens fed on grain costing the equivalent of $5 million to $8 million. Zemedelske Noviny calculated that 32 people extra people were needed to tend to the excess poultry around the country.

"We arrive at the conclusion the eggs were produced unnecessarily and in addition at pretty great expense," the paper said.

Czechoslovak farms were not always so prosperous. After the communists took power in 1948, small family farms were turned into larger state or cooperative enterprises. Centuries-old property lines were plowed over to consolidate the new units.

Camping clinic planned

A family camping clinic sponsored by the Midland Parks and Recreation Department will be 6:30 to 9 p.m. May 14 and 16 at the Hogan Park Activity Building. Deadline for registration is Monday at the Parks and Recreation Building, 300 Baldwin St.

The clinic will include the basic camping skills, demonstrations on the use of various camping equipment and safety precautions. Special attention will be given to children in the camping environment.

A weekend camping trip will conclude the clinic, giving the participants a chance to practice their new knowledge of camping.

Instructor will be camping specialist and outdoorsman Richard Galle.

Fee is $20 per family and a minimum of 10 families is needed. Single parents also are urged to enroll.

Aerobatics club elects president

From Staff Reports

Paul Erdmann of Midland has been elected president of the West Texas Aerobatic Club, which is Chapter No. 71 of the International Aerobatic Club (IAC).

Other officers include Arnold Phillips of Midland, vice president; Gene Beggs of Odessa, safety officer; Deidre Gantt of Midland, secretary-treasurer, and Beth Beggs of Odessa, newsletter editor.

The IAC club meets at 7:30 p.m. on the first Tuesday of each month in the lounge of Memphis Aero at Midland Regional Airport.

IAC is a branch of the Experimental Aircraft Association.

ARMED FORCES NEWS

Navy Seaman Recruit Leonard D. Anderson, son of Buddy and Lois Anderson of Midland, has completed recruit training at Navy Recruit Training Command, Naval Training Center Great Lakes, Il.

During Anderson's eight-week training cycle, he studied general military subjects designed to prepare him for further academic and on-the-job training in one of the Navy's 85 basic fields.

Anderson's studies included seamanship, close order drill, Naval history and first aid. Personnel who complete this course of instruction are eligible for three hours of college credit in physical education and hygiene.

Navy Midshipman Paul M. Boswell, son of Ellsworth R.G. and Mary R. Boswell of Midland, is a member of the Naval Reserve Officers' Training Corps at the University of Texas, Austin. Also, Navy Midshipman James T. Reid, son of Jerry P. Reid of Midland, is a member of the Naval Reserve Officers' Training Corps at the University of Texas, Austin. The NROTC unit recently set a Laser-class sailboat endurance sailing world record on Town Lake in Austin.

Beginning at noon Oct. 14, Boswell and Reid played an active part in launching the 12-foot Laser sailboat and continuously sailing it around Town Lake for 100 hours. This was more than enough to break the former record of 24 hours set in 1978 at the Annapolis, Md., Boat Show.

Pvt. Charles B. Campbell, son of Billie N. and Donna J. Campbell of Midland, has received the parachutist badge upon completion of the three-week airborne course at the U.S. Army Infantry School, Fort Benning, Ga.

During the first week of training, students underwent a rigorous physical training program and received instruction in the theory of parachuting. The second week they received practical training by jumping from 34-foot and 250-foot towers. The final week they made five static-line parachute jumps including one night jump.

Campbell is a 1983 gradute of Midland High School.

Pfc. Dennis W. Campbell, son of Roosevelt and Mary E. Campbell of Midland, has completed a combat engineer course at the U.S. Army Training Center at Fort Leonard Wood, Mo.

During the course, students were trained in the techniques of road and bridge building, camouflage and demolition. They also received instruction in combat squad tactics as well as in the use of infantry weapons.

He is a 1978 graduate of Robert E. Lee High School.

Navy Airman Calvin Hutson, son of Mortilar and Archie L. Hutson Sr. of Midland, has completed recruit training at Navy Recruit Training Command, Navy Training Center San Diego.

During Hutson's eight-week training cycle, he studied general military subjects designed to prepare him for further academic and on-the-job training in one of the Navy's 85 basic fields.

Hutson's studies included seamanship, close order drill, Naval history and first aid. Personnel who complete this course of instruction are eligible for three hours of college credit in physical education and hygiene.

Marine Pvt. Kevin D. Johnson, son of Rev. and Mrs. DeFarris Johnson of Midland, has completed recruit training at Marine Corps Recruit Depot, San Diego.

During the 11-week training cycle, Johnson was taught the basics of battlefield survival. He was introduced to the typical daily routine that he will experience during his enlistment and studied the personal and professional standards traditionally exhibited by Marines.

He participated in an active physical conditioning program and gained proficiency in a variety of military skills, including first aid, rifle marksmanship and close order drill. Teamwork and self-discipline were emphasized throughout the training cycle.

Navy Airman Recruit Johnny M. Morney, son of Mary J. White of Midland, has completed recruit training at Navy Recruit Training Command, Navy Training Center, Great Lakes, Il.

During Morney's eight-week training cycle, he studied general military subjects designed to prepare him for further academic and on-the-job training in one of the Navy's 85 basic fields.

Morney's studies included seamanship, close order drill, Naval history and first aid. Personnel who complete this course of instruction are eligible for three hours of college credit in physical education and hygiene.

Marine Staff Sgt. Curtis M. Smith, son of Terry P. and Marquita L. Smith of Midland, is currently participating in exercise Team Spirit 85.

The month-long exercise is a combined exercise involving the military forces of the United States and the Republic of Korea. Nearly 195,000 personnel will participate.

During Team Spirit, Smith and other members of his command, with 1st Marine Aircraft Wing, on Okinawa, will be involved in various naval exercises, which will end in a major amphibious assault on the southeastern coast of Korea.

Exercise Team Spirit 85, is the largest such exercise conducted in the free world this year.

Marine Sgt. Joseph C. Weaver, son of Joseph C. Weaver Jr. of Midland, has been promoted to his present rank while serving at Marine Corps Air Ground Combat Center, Twentynine Palms, Calif.

He joined the Marine Corps in November 1981.

Proposition I best immediate answer

On Saturday Midland County voters will make an important decision. They will approve a $9.9 million bond issue which would include provisions for an $8.4 million jail facility east of Midland...or they will instruct county officials to move ahead with renovation of the existing jail and order a comprehensive and long-range study of the county's total physical plant needs...or they will show total disinterest in the jail and courthouse problems by voting against both bond proposals on the ballot.

The latter would be a serious mistake that could have major financial repercussions for taxpayers in the immediate future. But such short-sightedness would not only result in tremendous expense for county prisoner transfer and housing elsewhere. It would give Midland and Midland County the notoriety of being the dynamic area that refused to address one of the most important problems it has had to face in recent years.

The cost already has begun. In the first week of transporting prisoners the tab approached $3,000 and county officials estimate the figure will climb into the hundreds of thousands of dollars within a year.

Building and even renovating jails is not at the top of anyone's list of favorite things to do. It never has been. In addition, the opinion exists among some that Midland, after all, is not in a high growth posture at this time and, thus, existing jail facilities should be sufficient for now and for the immediate future.

They are not.

Not only does the current transfer of prisoners make that clear but there is no reason to believe the situation will change. Even without an early return to a high growth rate for Midland, it likely will become worse; local jail population likely will increase.

THIS PROBABLY WILL HAPPEN due to legislative action that returns more and more categories of cases to the county level because of severely overcrowded conditions in state penal institutions. The reason for continued and growing high local and state jail populations, even without similar increases in general population, is that society is getting tougher on crime. Law enforcement, prosecutors and judges are following through on the wishes and mood of voters. The result is less probation, more jail terms and longer jail and prison sentences. A move away from that trend is not indicated for the foreseeable future.

So if we can agree that doing nothing, by voting against both proposals on the May 11 ballot, would be both short-sighted and costly, let us look at the two propositions, the most controversial and expensive first.

— Proposition II is the result of much planning and study by the County Commission. We commend Midland's county officials for their long and hard work. But while the plan would house far more prisoners than necessary now and in the immediate future and thus provides for longterm growth, it does not address many of the problems associated with the courthouse. It would free up space now occupied by the jail and thereby alleviate some courthouse crowding but it is not a total solution. Funding for what would have to be done at the courthouse is not included. Strong concerns have been expressed by jurists, attorneys, law enforcement officials and others about costs, security, inconvenience and other problems associated with having a jail so far from the courts where cases would be tried. Transfer of prisoners would continue, along with the costs, until the new jail was completed. And despite assurance that housing of federal prisoners would generate much revenue, in our opinion Proposition II, with a price tag of up to $9.9 million, is not the answer.

— Proposition I would authorize issuance of not more than $3 million in tax bonds to make needed renovation of the jail, allow for expansion of Culver Youth Home for juvenile offenders and fund a thorough and comprehensive study of county needs.

WE BELIEVE PROPOSITION I is the best answer to the problems confronting us today for several reasons.

— It has been correctly pointed out that many of the repairs included in Proposition I would be necessary even if a new jail was built elsewhere. Unless the courthouse is demolished, it is safe to assume that plumbing, roof, air-conditioning and other work would have to be done since current jail space would be occupied by other county agencies and offices.

— The renovation would allow for an additional number of prisoners and while some cost for transfer might be necessary, depending on jail population levels, that cost would not approach what it would if both proposals are voted down.

— Despite longtime study of jail needs by the County Commissioners' Court, no current comprehensive study exists in regard to the county's total needs for the next 25 years and beyond. It is true that a major plan had been developed in connection with the 1983 bond issue but it was not presented with much enthusiasm and there seemed to be a lack of commitment to that plan on the part of county officials. Perhaps, despite results of the 1983 bond election, that study should be thoroughly reviewed as it might apply to total county needs.

Two years ago there appeared to be an emphasis on the courthouse just as in the current proposals there is an emphasis on the jail. While it is understandable why that emphasis is now on the jail's shortcomings and needs, the two really are inseparable since serious problems exist in conjunction with each. At this time, at least, there is no such master plan being put before voters. And county government has spread to several annexes, creating a situation that is both inconvenient and confusing to county residents.

If ever mass confusion existed, it does on this issue.

PROPOSITION I HAS THE SUPPORT of the Midland Chamber of Commerce and the Committee of Concerned Voters. Both underlined their support with the hope that, if approved, the county would authorize only those minimum expenditures necessary in order to fund each of the three programs involved — jail, youth home and comprehensive study — the implication being perhaps that can be done for less than $3 million.

We agree. We further urge the Commissioners' Court to invite continued participation by an appointed jail task force. The work of the task force and this past week's action by the chamber are commendable but they are not enough.

There should be continuing involvement on the part of the chamber, through a task force group, and hopefully county officials not only realize that kind of support and participation is necessary but would welcome it with open arms.

There are projects in which, if solutions are to be found and success reached, governmental entities either cannot or should not work alone.

History proves the Midland County Jail issue most certainly is one of those.

Coke's 'secret' is in stomping!

There are only three great "Master Coca Cola Tasters" in the world. One is Beauregard Cokely from Marmaduke, Ga. Beau has been producing and bottling the finest vintage Coca Cola in the South for the past 40 years.

Art Buchwald

His palate is so sensitive that I have seen him perform a blindfold test where he was able to distinguish between unmarked bottles of Coca Cola, Dr. Pepper, Seven-Up and Miller's Lite Beer.

I have attended four-star banquets where Beau, by just holding his glass up to the light, was able to tell the year a Coke was bottled, the district it came from and, what was more astounding, the first name of the truck driver who delivered it to the supermarket.

It was no wonder that when Coca Cola announced it would introduce a new formula for its drink last week that I sought out Beau to discover exactly what was going on.

I found him in his famous Coke cellar at Chateau Lafite Atlanta with his wife and daughter. The three of them were hip deep in a large vat stomping on juicy red cola grapes in their bare feet.

Beau climbed out of the vat and greeted me warmly. Then he bent over, opened a spigot and poured some cola syrup into a tin cup. He sniffed it, sipped it, swilled it around in his mouth and spat it out. "Stomp a little harder," he yelled up to his wife. "It's not sweet enough."

He handed me the cup. "What do you think?"

I tasted it and also spat. "It shows extraordinary promise, and its honesty can't be questioned," I told him.

Beau nodded, "I believe that 1985 could be one of the great vintage years for Coca Cola. You would have to go back to the glorious reds of '31 and '35 to match this one for body and bouquet. The sun has finally shone on Georgia."

"Is it true that after 99 years Coca Cola has a new taste?"

"We haven't changed the taste. We've improved its virility. In place of the light, dry bubbly that has been our trademark, we're producing a mature, full-bodied, more distinctive cola."

He went over to a Coke case marked "1984." "Taste the difference between this and the '85," he said.

I did. "Now that you mention it, the '84 does seem to lack breeding."

"Of course it lacks breeding. To give Coke back its nobility, we've made this year's vintage rounder, smoother and bolder. We're allowing the cola to mature in its six-pack a week longer and the bubbles to breathe in the can. We want our customers to be part of an entirely new soft drink experience."

"Rumor has it that you are just pandering to the Pepsi generation," I said.

Beau was furious. "It's an insult to mention Coke in the same breath with Pepsi Cola. Pepsi consists of nothing but carbonated water, sugar, caramel color, phosphoric acid, caffeine, citric acid and natural flavorings. Coke, on the other hand, is the real thing. It will always be the pause that refreshes because every American knows things always go better with Coke."

Beau's wife and daughter were leaning over the side watching us. He looked up and yelled at them, "Who told you to stop stomping?" They went back to jumping up and down.

I said, "Beau, could you tell me what the Coke formula is all about?"

"I'm sworn to secrecy."

"All right, just nod your head if I'm right or wrong. Would it have anything to do with making the syrup with your bare feet?"

Beau kicked me out through the cellar door.

"What did you do that for?" I asked.

He said, "You're getting too close to the secret for comfort."

CIA study faults free enterprise defense

WASHINGTON — A CIA analyst's study suggests that in one important area — weapons development — American-style free enterprise may be the worst possible system.

Jack Anderson

Its surprising conclusion is that the Soviet Union's defense-production system is far more efficient and less wasteful in many areas than the Pentagon's traditional handling of research, development and production.

U.S. weapons not only cost much more than they should, but take so long to produce that some are obsolete by the time they roll off the assembly lines, according to the CIA study.

The candid, critical evaluation, which runs 107 pages, was obtained by our associate Indy Badhwar.

The CIA author takes particular aim at the Pentagon's "source selection" process — the method by which the armed services choose the contractors who will build their weapons. The fatally flawed process takes longer and costs more than in any other country, the CIA charges.

Expressing a viewpoint that will surely raise eyebrows on Capitol Hill, the study claims that, far from too little competition, Pentagon procurement is crippled by too much.

"Because the United States has demonstrated the benefits of free market competition in the civilian sector, there seems to be an unquestioned faith in its application to the military sector," the CIA report explains. "But something may go terribly wrong when competition is forced into the defense research-and-development area."

The report quotes George C. Lodge of the Harvard Business School, who pointed out that "it is a dangerous delusion to keep mumbling the old myths of free enterprise when they are irrelevant."

Weapons research and development "is not a free-market endeavor," the CIA analyst states. He cites some persuasive reasons why civilian-style competition is incongruous in defense-contract bidding:

— "When airlines want a new aircraft, they do not contract for research and development; the producing companies fund it themselves and the marketplace determines the winners and the prices. Also, there is normally only a single buyer for a weapon system (the government), not multiple customers as in the free-market arena. Unlike the open market scenario, the single defense customer is also the regulator and manager of the R&D project it is buying."

— In the civilian economy, the market sets the prices; goods move freely in and out of the market; prices fall with reduced demand; labor is highly mobile; production is for inventory, and there are many small buyers.

These factors, which tend to cut costs and encourage efficiency, are not present in the defense market. The prices are set by the amount of money the Pentagon has available; there are extensive barriers to entry or departure from the market; production starts only after the sale is made; there is greatly diminished labor mobility; and prices rise with reduced demand.

In short, the free enterprise system is stood on its head.

Because production is the money-making part of the system, "R&D is likely to get short shrifted," the CIA study charges. The winner of the R&D contract "has the assurance of an inside track in getting the later, more profitable production contract."

GEORGE F. WILL

Europe afraid to dismount economic 'tiger'

BONN — Confounding the skeptics who scoff at cumbersome meetings like this, the big-seven industrial democracies have achieved a splendid result, described by a diplomat as "the banalization of summits." Had this not become the "cemetery summit," it would have been conspicuously normal, with the U.S. President promising to do something he lacks the power to do alone (this time, cut the budget substantially) and with the other leaders praying privately that their public demand (this time, for a substantial weakening of the dollar) not be satisfied too soon.

George F. Will

While U.S. growth last year was an astonishing 6.8 percent, Germany, France, Britain and Italy averaged just 2.3 percent combined. And the performance would have been even worse had the strong dollar not driven up French exports to the United States 50 percent, and German exports 40 percent.

Since 1970 the United States has produced more jobs every day than Western Europe has produced in the decade and a half. While there has been a net loss of jobs in the Common Market, the United States has been creating as many jobs (26 million) as there are workers in Europe's largest economy, West Germany. Taxes, federal and other, take less than one-third of America's GNP, but nearly half in Western Europe. Reagan doubtless believes, probably rightly, that the time is ripe for Europeans to profit from the example of Reaganomics, meaning stimulative tax cuts. But the sobering example of his deficits has made European leaders wary of trusting tax cuts to be sufficiently stimulative, given the inelastic spending demands of their welfare states.

For a generation, all seven governments have acted as though their problems were produced by economic cycles, and that therefore the collective task was to modulate the cycles. The U.S. role was to serve as the Great Alibi. The severity of economic cycles was invariably blamed to some extent on the excessive tightness or looseness of U.S. fiscal monetary policies, and on the deplorable strength or deplorable weakness of the dollar.

Today there is broad recognition that what David Stockman says about the United States is true of the other welfare states as well: The problem lies not in the path of the economy but in the structure of policy, especially concerning social entitlements.

Many European leaders believe it is time for U.S. taxes to rise and European taxes to fall. But history offers no precedent for a U.S. increase. Stockman notes that in the two decades prior to 1980, during the Cold War and the Vietnam War, during Great Society spending and Ford-Carter moderation, the federal-tax burden averaged 18.9 percent of GNP, and today is just a fraction of a percentage point higher, although Reagan has presided over an increase in the size of the federal government (measured as a percentage of GNP).

The strong dollar, caused in part by government borrowing, is, like a hungry tiger, difficult to dismount from. But the U.S. expansion is slowing, markedly. The economy is driven by consumer demand and the strong dollar, by making imports cheap is diverting demand abroad. The growth of production is decreasing proportional to the growth of demand. The decline of the dollar will be, effectively, an increase in U.S. demand for domestic production.

But the decline should be slow enough to allow European economies to ease off their heavy dependence on exports to the United States. This is especially necessary now that the United States wants the European economy stimulated to diminish its dependence on the U.S. economy performing as a locomotive, pulling the world.

On the eve of the summit, economic indicators showed a slowing of the growth that is the President's real hope for substantial deficit reduction. Unless Reaganomics has repealed the business cycle, the U.S. expansion is not immortal. The terrifying fact is that the deficit is unprecedented not only in its size but in its context. It has grown during a robust recovery, with the economy near full employment.

With policy generating $200 billion deficits during an expansion, a contraction could cause the economy to implode, collapsing in on itself beneath the weight of interest rates that are rising to keep attracting foreign funds to finance U.S. government borrowing. The alternative — that Americans should pay now, for the way they live now — is, apparently, unthinkable.

This prospect of deficit-driven implosion is the ghost haunting the Bonn banquet. Fortunately, summits offer Presidents pleasant respites, tranquil moments of diverting ceremony, such as laying a wreath ... no, never mind.

County jail proposals deserve attention Saturday

Bill Modisett

If you're anything like me, probably the last thing in the world you want to be concerned about is a jail.

I don't like jails. I want to stay out of jails. And I certainly don't want much of my hard-earned money going to purchase jails. Most of all, I just don't want to think about them; there are more pleasant things in this world to occupy my thought waves.

But come next Saturday Midland County Jail is going to be at the center of my attention. That's when a special election will be held to decide which, if either, of two bond proposals is approved to build a new county jail or renovate the existing one while conducting a study to determine long-range needs.

Well, like most Midlanders that kind of election really doesn't appeal to me. For one thing, the county wants some more of my money and for the second, officials want to spend it on something that I consider a fairly low priority item.

But I'll be voting Saturday, regardless. Maybe you're asking why anyone with so little interest in jails would take the time to vote in such an election. I'll tell you why: The problem at Midland County Jail isn't going to go away if I simply roll over and go back to sleep next Saturday morning or go out to mow the lawn or finish building my kid's sandbox.

You ought to vote, too, because the jail "problem" won't magically disappear if you close your eyes and pretend it doesn't exist. It exists, folks, and like most unpleasant problems, if you ignore it the situation in question will only get worse.

The problem is going to be resolved one way or another; I can see that and you should be able to, also. A powerful state commission called the Texas Commission on Jail Standards will see to that. Like most problems "solved" by state agencies or officials, if the Midland County Jail "problem" is left up to the jail commission, those individuals won't worry too much about the cost or the trouble involved for Midland officials and residents or the impact on the Midland crime statistical data; they'll simply choose the quickest way to solve the problem. We'll pick up the tab.

Maybe a lot of Midlanders are under the mistaken impression that such a solution is the best way around the half an hour it would take to go vote Saturday. It's not. Such an "answer" typically results in other related problems down the road. That isn't an answer, in my opinion.

For a number of years I've been preaching respect for law and order, punishment to fit crimes and individual responsibility at the local level. In the past few years, some of it has come to pass. More and more people are becoming involved in fighting the criminal element and standing up for individual rights. The courts are getting tougher, sending more criminals to Huntsville for longer sentences.

It's having an impact. The prisons are overcrowded and, as that happens, more prisoners must be paroled to allow new ones into the Department of Corrections. That puts more pressure at the local level on officials and voters to respond to the rapidly-changing criminal justice needs, such as bigger jails and more courtrooms.

I'm not recommending that you vote for any particular proposal in the election, just that you make a determination of what's best, based on the facts before you, and go to the polls. Don't let some commission in Austin decide the future course of your jail; decide for yourself.

The jail "problem" is not going to go away until we, as a community, determine how to resolve it.

NEW CONGRESSIONAL CAMPUS FAD: HOW MANY CONGRESSMEN CAN YOU STUFF IN A CHAIR?

LETTERS

We need to solve jail problems now

I would like to write a few things about the jail situation. It seems that we need to do something about the jail and in a hurry! We wonder why something has not been done before to repair the jail. For the last two years, we have had three of the same commissioners and the same county judge on the Commissioners' Court. In these two years, the Jail Standards Commission has written letters dating back to January 1983 to January 1985 telling the commissioners what they need to do to bring the jail up to standards. Yet, nothing has ever been done to update the jail.

In the petition presented to the commissioners in late 1984, we, as taxpayers, asked for a vote on the jail bond issue. Seems we got more than we asked for. Maybe a little blackmail? We not only got one bond issue but an additional bond issue. Voters can vote "for" or "against" both referendums. If the $3 million bond wins, we can get the jail updated now. If the $9 million bond wins, we still have the same problem that the sheriff has now — farming out the prisoners not just temporarily but for two or three years until the new jail is built near Stanton. In addition, the Jail Standards Commission could close the existing jail until the new jail is built. More tax money! Also, the commissioners have spent enough money drawing up plans on the new jail to pay for the repairs needed on the existing jail — this without even considering the taxpayers' wishes.

In a few years, maybe we can build a new jail in town. The sheriff says he is now using more deputies for the farming-out of prisoners than he normally would use if they were housed in the present jail. If the new jail is built out of town, we will still have the same expenses transporting prisoners to court and back and forth. Consider the expense in the long run of running a new jail out of town.

At the present time, the City of Midland houses federal prisoners. If the federal prisoners were to be housed at the county jail, it seems like we would be "robbing Peter to pay Paul." Also, how many federal prisoners would there be housed in the county jail and what is the expense of their upkeep? A final note, so far a contract has not been signed with the federal government and the County Commissioners to house these federal prisoners. What happens if the federal government decides against using the county jail — who pays then?

Commissioner Win Brown calls it a Band-Aid for the new jail but it seems the only Band-Aid needed is for his mouth, and I don't know if one is made that large. Seems the commissioners and the judge are for a new jail only. Maybe when election time comes for their positions, we can change some of their positions — maybe out.

As a taxpayer for 35 years in Midland, we recommend voting for the $3 million bond issue (to update the jail now) and vote no on the $9 million bond. If both bonds carry, the commissioners can say which bond it goes with, and the voters won't have any say in the matter. So as a taxpayer, we urge you to go vote May 11, 1985. As members of the Committee of Concerned Voters, we will monitor the use of the bond money making sure that it is spent on items stated in the bond proposition only.

How can locals prefer 'Gotcha' to 'Amadeus'?

Midland is a great place to live, no doubt, but I have grave reservations about one segment of its entertainment offering...the showing of high-caliber motion pictures at the local theatres.

Are the moviegoers of Midland trying to tell the entertainment world something about their preference in films? Woody Allen's blockbuster masterpiece movie (or so I've read), "The Purple Rose of Cairo," paid a brief visit to Midland last week. I missed it because I thought I would first let the crowds diminish. Evidently, the crowds diminished from the outset and economics told the theatre management to find another movie. "Amadeus" had a similar fate. It took eight Academy Awards (including Best Picture, Best Director and Best Actor) to get the film back to Midland this spring.

Why should I worry about missing a chance to see the best work ever by America's premiere contemporary movie director, when I can choose from the current outstanding selection: "Barbarian Queen" (No man can touch her naked steel), "Just One of the Guys" (Terri Griffith is about to go where no woman has gone before), "Gotcha" (Jonathan started out trying to score, and ended up being the target). Give me a break!

Those of us in Midland who demand excellence for their entertainment dollar are forced to view noteworthy domestic and foreign films elsewhere much of the time. "Fanny and Alexander," "My Dinner With Andre," "Amadeus," "The Purple Rose of Cairo," and others got a rude welcome or no invitation at all from a surprising Midland movie audience.

Performing arts need competent reviewer

I have recently learned that Georgia Temple will no longer be reviewing the cultural and entertainment events in Midland. And, as I understand it, no one else will be either. I find this a dismal piece of news.

I have not been told what precipitated this action on your part — whether it was wounded egos complaining to newspaper personnel or whether the paper does not find these activities of interest. I certainly hope it is not the latter.

This will be a big loss to the community and to the arts. In order to grow and improve, all of the performing arts need constructive criticism (and praise). Although it is probably impossible to find any one person who could qualify as an "expert" in all the areas of music, drama, ballet and art, most Midlanders will agree that Georgia has done an excellent job in that regard. She is an intelligent, educated, articulate, discerning and caring person and I feel she's been oustandingly effective covering all these diverse activities.

The majority of the people I know read the Midland Reporter-Telegram for local news and her reviews of the local art scene are always eagerly awaited. I hope this action on your part is not irreversible and that you will re-think your decision.

Legislature's 'sick tax' is terminally ill itself

The "sick tax" proposed by the Texas Legislature is sick itself. Taxing hospital revenues to pay for indigent care is absurd! Hospitals would be forced to pass these costs, plus added processing costs, on to the patient. This would increase the costs for medical care for everyone, including those who already are unable to pay. Additional bureaucrats and staff would be needed by the state to collect these tax payments, and to distribute them. Therefore, even more tax dollars would be needed to pay for the handling and processing of the "special" tax dollars.

If the tax starts at 1 percent this year, it can easily be raised next year, and the next as the Legislature sees fit. Without a doubt, medical costs will also rise accordingly, above and beyond the drastic increases already being felt by so many. At Midland Memorial Hospital, over 12 percent of the revenues taken in already go to pay for unpaid or "indigent" bills. Approximately $60 per day is charged to each "paying" patient to cover the costs incurred by the "non-paying" patients. If hospital revenues are taxed, hospital charges will also be increased, which will cause indigent costs to rise as well. Insurance rates, too, would be forced higher to cover the added costs paid.

Medical expenses are already tremendous, and we cannot allow additional taxes to be placed upon those who are desperately struggling to pay their own way. Medicare will not help, and our state "leaders" refuse to face the truth or help to solve the problems. Instead, they propose to create more problems. If hospitals are taxed today to pay for the sick, then supermarkets might be taxed tomorrow to pay for food stamps. Perhaps an increase in the state sales tax is needed. In the very least, a revision of our Medicare and Medicaid programs in Texas is drastically needed. At present Texas shamefully ranks 48 out of 50 states in the benefits provided by Medicare. State funding or help, in many instances, does not exist at all. Period.

We must provide health care for all who need it, yet at the same time the costs for this care must be paid. Taxing the sick to pay for the sick, however, is the wrong way to go about it. Perhaps the Legislature needs a dose of "good ol' castor oil."

City Council must answer for streets!

It's time our organized City Council answered for the disorganized repairs of the streets. You cannot avoid it or understand the daily changed detours. I certainly want the streets repaired permanently but not all at once.

I have seen accidents and personally had my car rear-ended. It is doubtful my car will survive the sewer water baths, the ditches we are expected to jump, or the holes we fall in. After visiting several City Council meetings, I pray for this city daily because of the lack of public interest and the power five men have had.

Come to the City Council meetings and question!

Reagan shows 'profile in courage' in cemetery visit

By WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST JR.
Editor-in-Chief, The Hearst Newspapers

Hearst

SAN FRANCISCO — President Reagan will today be fulfilling his promise to West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl to visit the German military cemetery in the little town of Bitburg.

By doing so, he will be paying a debt of gratitude to the German leader for staunchly supporting U.S. defense policy in Europe.

He will also be honoring the friendship of the overwhelming majority of West German people who for 30 years have been among America's most reliable allies in Europe.

He will be seeking to achieve a reconciliation comparable to that forged on the World War I battlefield of Verdun last year when French President Francois Mitterrand and Chancellor Kohl clasped hands to honor their dead.

He will be striving, in his own words, to "make it plain that never again must we find ourselves enemies and never again must there be anything like the Holocaust."

He will be visiting Bitburg cemetery, where the 2,000 war dead include 49 SS troops, despite congressional resolutions opposing the visit, despite strong objections by Jewish and U.S. veterans groups, and contrary to the advice of Republican political strategists. He will be doing so despite the possibility of violent demonstrations by Jewish survivors of the Nazi death camps, or their relatives, and by leftist fanatics, some undoubtedly incited by Soviet agents.

In doing so, he will be showing great political and personal courage and integrity. He will be showing the character of a strong leader. We should respect and admire him for it.

In a book entitled "Profiles in Courage," Jack Kennedy, then senator, wrote in 1956 that "in the days ahead only the very courageous will be able to take the hard and unpopular decisions necessary for our survival in the struggle with a powerful enemy" (Soviet Russia), and do so, Kennedy added, with what Ernest Hemingway defined as "grace under pressure."

It is no secret that in doing what he is doing in Bitburg today, the president has the Soviets very much in mind. Ever since the German Federal Republic joined the Atlantic Alliance in 1955, Moscow has been striving to turn the West Germans against the United States in the hope of forcing their withdrawal from NATO.

A poll showed that 72 percent of the West Germans wanted the President to visit the Bitburg cemetery. One Bonn official said calling it off would be an insult to the decent majority of German war dead buried in Bitburg. Kohl said it would damage German-American relations. Former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger said if the president backed out after the visit had become such an important issue in Germany, "it would do enormous damage to our foreign policy." One of West Germany's leading mass circulation newspapers commented that the uproar in the United States had made clear "how thin the ground is on which the friendship of former enemies rests."

Thus it is clear it was not only appreciation for the fearless way Chancellor Kohl stood up to violent demonstrations in 1983, won a national election and obtained parliamentary approval for deployment of new American missiles in West Germany that made President Reagan keep his promise to visit the cemetery after Kohl refused to change the site. It was the broader vision of a leader who looks beyond political expediency to cope with potentially crucial consequences of his actions.

Our Washington bureau reports there were a number of reasons why Chancellor Kohl chose the Bitburg cemetery for the president's visit to commemorate the end of the war with Germany and recognize the strong bonds of friendship that have developed between West Germany and the United States over the past 40 years.

Bitburg was known to have resisted the Nazi regime more than many other German towns. It has a reputation for harmonious relations with 12,000 U.S. servicemen stationed at a nearby air base. It has been selected as the site for U.S. cruise missiles. For 25 years American, French and German military personnel have conducted annual ceremonies at Bitburg honoring war dead.

Most important of all for Chancellor Kohl, Bitburg is in his home state, the Rhineland-Palatinate. In neighboring North Rhine-Westphalia, West Germany's most populous state, crucial elections will be held a week from today. Failure of the president to visit the Bitburg cemetery after the chancellor had made it such an important issue could cost his party victory in that election.

One can understand why the chancellor has called the president's determination to keep his promise "a noble gesture." To me, it is even more than that. It is an act of sound statesmanship.

Geography course starts at church

Jones

The Dellwood Baptist Church will host a Bible Geography Study Course Monday-Friday from 7-9 p.m. in the Fellowship Hall of the church.

Instructor for the course will be Rev. J.P. Jones of Lamesa. Jones is a preacher and a student and teacher of Bible land geography and history.

He has conducted numerous tours to the Holy Land and other Middle East, European and African nations during the past 20 years. He is noted for being able to put this knowledge into understandable and interesting language for the novice Bible student.

At the same time, advanced students should find his use of visual aids (maps, slides, movies, etc.) helpful in their studies.

The Dellwood Baptist Church is located at the corner of W. Ohio and Midkiff Rd. The public is invited to attend the seminar.

Community Bible Study set for men

A Men's Community Bible Study begins this fall in Midland.

All interested men & their wives are invited to an informational meeting and fellowship to be held at Bill Black's residence Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. The Blacks' reside at No. 28 Suffolk in Saddle Club North.

The Men's C.B.S. is an outgrowth of Midland Men's Bible Study which started 18 months ago with about 20 members.

This men's group has enrolled about 90 men and meets Tuesday evenings at First Presbyterian Church. The Midland Men's Bible Study is affiliated with Community Bible Study, a nationwide organization, in order to take advantage of the quality Bible Study materials and leadership structure.

Christian Science practitioner to address government of God's law

"Life is not some giant lottery," says Fay Mckenzie Waldman of California. "We just don't have to go along with the thinking that says we live in a lawless universe, subject to risk and chance."

She says she finds within the biblical model of "God's law" a direct challenge to a view of life as capricious, with unpredictable joys or sorrows just around the corner.

Mrs. Waldman will speak on the theme "God's Law, Not Chance, Governs" at 8 p.m. Friday at the Christian Science Church, 1001 W. Tennessee Ave.

Several years ago, she left a busy acting career to devote her full time to the Christian healing ministry as a Christian Science practitioner, and she draws on a variety of healing experiences to develop her message. Her interpretation of the Bible and the teachings and works of Christ Jesus provide the basis for lecture.

In her lecture, Mrs. Waldman stresses the effect of thinking on our lives. But she says she is not an advocate of "positive thinking." On the contrary, she says simply thinking "nice" thoughts isn't sufficient to overcome the immorality, ill-health, and general evil that face so many people in the round of daily living.

But the lecturer does feel that "spiritual thinking" — that is, a reasoned, heartfelt obedience "to God's law of good" — can actually heal and transform lives, bringing people into the freedom, harmony, and health that overrules misfortune and chance. Such "spiritual thinking," she says, demands that we bring every thought "to the obedience of Christ," as Paul admonishes in the Bible.

The lecturer tells of a young man who was healed overnight of what was diagnosed as tuberculosis when he began "to understand that God's law, not chance, governed his life."

Her visit is sponsored by First Church of Christ, Scientist, Midland, and is open to the public. Free care for small children will be provided by local church members.

Midland student named summer mission worker

DALLAS — Isauro Sifuentes of Midland was recently selected to serve a 10-week term as a Texas Baptist Rio Grande River Ministry summer worker.

Sifuentes, student at Hispanic Seminary, San Antonio, is among 32 volunteers who will spend the summer doing mission work along the 900-mile Texas-Mexico border. He has been assigned to Rio Grande Valley.

Hundreds of volunteers from throughout the United States each year give their time and talents to the River Ministry to staff medical and dental clinics, construct churches, missions and other buildings, teach border residents agricultural skills, lead Vacation Bible Schools and dig water wells.

The River Ministry is one of the mission arms of the 2.3 million member Baptist General Convention of Texas that receives its financial support from the Mary Hill Davis Offering for State Missions. The offering is taken each fall in the 4,700 churches and missions affiliated with the BGCT.

FW Wyatt edges Lee for title in final race

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

LUBBOCK — Fort Worth Wyatt's 1600 meter relay team ended Midland Lee's quest to hand departing coach Sam Volpe his first Region I track title here Saturday afternoon by the protruding chest of Julius Wilson. However, the saga wasn't all tragedy as five more state berths were earned by Tall City runners.

Wyatt defeated the Rebels for the team title by a 66-61 margin when Wilson's chest was judged across the line before Lee's Marq Brackens. Amarillo Palo Duro set the region record with a 3:12.3 while Wyatt was given a 3:12.4. Lee's school record time for the second day in a row was 3:12.5.

Volpe took the team loss in stride, saying, "We were where we wanted to be on the last race of the day. If you can't beat the team you need to, you don't win the meet. It was that type of race and we were clearly third. Our kids couldn't have run that race any better."

But maybe the sad news shouldn't dominate the conversation because the state berth haul grew. Lee's Walter Jones became the first Rebel in history to qualify for three state events in one year by winning the 100 meters, placing second in the 200 and running the anchor leg of Lee's second place sprint relay team.

Region I Track & Field

Midland High's Ethel Edwards won the 200 meters and Lee's Diane White was second in the long jump for two more berths. They all join Midland High's Darrell Davis, who won his state berth in the shot put on Friday with a 62-8¾. That means each local school will have at least one representative in Austin next Saturday.

Jones just keeps on adding to his remarkalbe string of firsts for the Lee track team. He was the first 4-5A trackster to ever win four events in the same district meet. Now he adds three state berths. He did not place Saturday in the long jump, failing to make the finals.

Jones said of his 10.4 victory in the 100, "We had someone jump on the first gun and I thought it was me because I really got out of the blocks fast. That scared me and I sat in the blocks the second time and didn't get a good start, but I knew I could win when I was beginning to pull even with the field after 50 yards. I knew I could do it then."

Jones was beaten in the 200 by Killeen Ellison's Wilfred Sheppard. Sheppard had a 21.5 and Jones a 21.6. "I didn't run my race. I was fighting myself the whole way. I should have won that one, too."

Jones teamed with Harold Woods, Brackens and Quintus Hampton for a second in the sprint relay. Jones took the baton seven yards behind Wyatt's Wilson and just lost at the tape. Wyatt had a record 40.9 while Lee had another school record of 41.0, the third time this year the sprint team had rewritten the Lee books.

Midland High's Edwards, a sophomore, made her first region presence felt with a 24.9 victory. Coming off the curve, Edwards was at least fourth, but staged a straightaway sprint that turned on the crowd to pull off the victory.

"I knew I was going to win. I was about fourth, but I was only worried about the girl in green (Western Hills' Sheronda Banks, who finished second)," said Edwards.

Coach Brenda Mitchell said, "I thought Ethel ran well, but she sure waited a long time to make her move."

Lee's White was picked to win both the long jump and triple jump after leaps of 19-9 and 39-9 at district, but her second place 18-4¾ in the long jump was the only state berth she could come away with.

Rebs, 'Dogs still checking talent

By ERIC SCHURER
Sports Writer

Some kinks have certainly been worked out, some muscles stretched and bruised and some paint has no doubt been transferred from one helmet to another in the hard-hitting contact sessions.

After all, "it takes a different breed of cat to like to play football in May," as Midland Lee coach Jack Tayrien says.

But if after the first week of spring football training sessions at Midland High and Lee you were expecting some answers to the many questions that face both programs in the 1985 season, don't hold your breath.

Lee's offensive backfield, which lost all four starters from its state quarterfinal team and must be rebuilt in order for the Rebels to stage another run at the District 4-5A championship, spent the first week of spring drills without quarterback hopeful Tuey Rankin. Rankin, the center fielder on Lee's playoff-bound baseball team, could be the key to keeping the Rebels' offense in high gear.

"That does cause some problems, but it's a problem we like to see because of the success of baseball, and the track team too," Tayrien said. "It'll hurt (Rankin) some, as well as four or five other kids. But he's a senior with more experience with our system, and he's working some drills in the morning."

OVER AT Memorial Stadium field, Doug McCutchen, also in his second year as head coach, has the luxury of the second team all-district QB Matt Marcum to run the show along with returning running back Jake Madrid to help carry the ball.

McCutchen will spend his spring dreaming up combinations of blocking lineman to lead the Bulldogs and Marcum into the high-rent neighborhood in the district.

"Our big concern this spring is getting our offensive and defensive lines put together, we lost all our starting linemen, that's our main inexperience," McCutchen said. "We have some linemen from our JV team that did a good job last year. They just haven't been there before. That is their biggest drawback.

"Having a quarterback like Marcum returning gives you an advantage to getting your offense going, though. That is one of the keys, having someone who knows how it is all done."

That is one thing the Bulldogs have going for them in this their second spring under McCutchen.

"We changed everything drastically when I got here. They ran the I-formation and threw a lot. We run the "Houston Veer" now, and we have the capability of running the veer. Nearly everybody knows the offense and defense now because of their previous knowledge, working it last season.

"We just have to find out what people fit in what positions and get some repetitions in until we execute better than we do now. But it is still too early to say that we've found people."

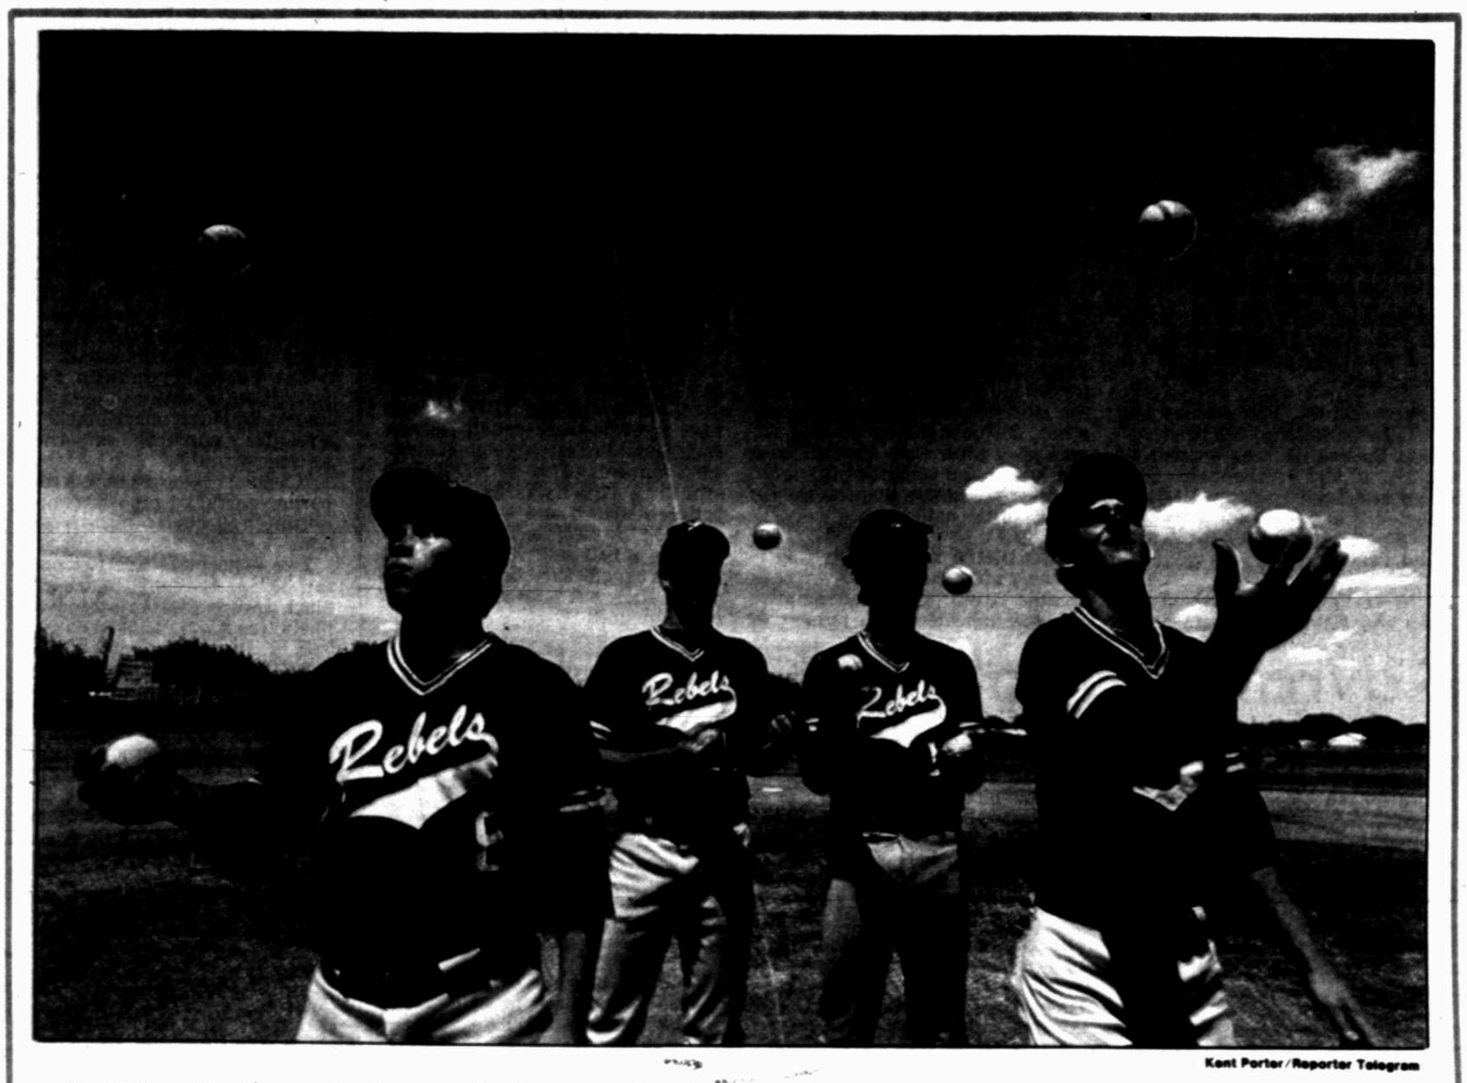

Another emphasis McCutchen is putting on the 'Dogs spring drills is the elimination of mental mistakes and improved concentration. MHS averaged around five fumbles a game last season, far more than a district contender would allow. "I've been pleased as far as our concentration is concerned. We had a short scrimmage Thursday and we really worked on not making mental mistakes like fumbling, offsides...I've really been pleased with our attention and willingness to work...It's been just great."

TAYRIEN IS guarded about naming replacements for graduated seniors—especially for the backfield trio of Walter Jones, Tyrone Thurman and Randy Ellis. But of some positions, he is more than happy to boast.

Because of graduation losses two years ago on his inherited offensive line, Tayrien found a stable of junior thouroughbreds that paved the way for Lee's district leading running attack.

Now, Wade Wiesepape (center), Ricky Lee (guard), Jake Young (guard), Mike Little (tackle) and tight ends Anthony Dickens and David Almand are seniors, giving Tayrien the luxury of experience in the trenches.

Even Rebs' weak spot can do job

Midland Lee battery ready to take on Plainsmen

By BOB BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

Once again the time is drawing near for the seemingly annual Midland Lee-Lubbock Monterey bi-district playoff game. It's a game that the Rebels are looking forward to, especially the pitching staff.

Last year Lee had only one consistently effective pitcher: Bryan Willis. This year, the Rebs have three that have been getting the job done: Mike Small, Mike Rittenberry and George Matta.

Even though the three pitched Lee to a 20-6 overall record and to a third consecutive playoff berth with a 12-2 District 4-5A mark, they each feel the pitching mound is one of the team's weaker points.

"Our strengths are hitting and defense, not pitching," said Rittenberry, a senior with a 5-2 record, two saves and a 2.91 earned-run average. "I mean, we have good pitching, but people can hit us."

"None of us is a Terry Suggs (Abilene Cooper's hard-throwing ace) who can go out and expect three strikeouts every inning. He was getting them too," said Small, a senior with a 6-1 record and 3.04.

Suggs led Cooper's pitching staff with a 9-1 record, 2.72 ERA and 71 Ks in 54 district innings of pitching. His only loss of the season came at the hands of the Lee Rebels. He'll likely see a lot of action in Cooper's playoff series with Plainview.

With the hitting and fielding they have behind them, the Rebel hurlers aren't afraid to give up a few hits, even a few runs. They believe in the guys behind them and in the guys who keep the Rebel attack going.

"We're not going to be the same team we were in the Tournament of Champions (when Lee's fielding was suspect). We had too many errors behind us then. We're not making as many now," said Small.

"Yeah, we're going to play good defense and hit the ball well," added Rittenberry.

Lee finished the season with a .392 4-5A batting attack compared to .320 as a team for the 26-game season. Small is a key part of that attack, being the only Lee pitcher to see full-time hitting duty. His .345 season average has also earned him left field duties when not pitching.

ALL THREE pitchers see hitting as the Lubbock Monterey strength and know they'll have to pitch a smart game to keep Plainsmen runners off the base paths.

"They are a good hitting team, they can hit about anything you throw at them," said Rittenberry. "I think that's their strong point, that and (pitcher Mike) Eckles. He's not an overpowering pitcher, but he keeps you honest. He's good."

"I guess it'll be their hitting," said Matta, a junior who compiled a 9-2 record, one save and 2.93 ERA, mostly in relief duty. "The high balls, they'll hit them. If we keep them low, they don't hit the ball as hard or as often."

One thing the Rebel pitching staff is looking at is last year's 2-0 bi-district sweep Monterey posted. Even though none of three saw any mound time — Willis went the distance in both games — they remember what happened.

"We lost to them last year in the playoffs so we have a little revenge factor going for us," said Rittenberry.

"I think we're ready for them," added Matta.

Sooners' Tisdale opts out

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — University of Oklahoma basketball star Wayman Tisdale said Saturday that he would bypass his senior year of eligibility and make himself available in next month's National Basketball Association draft.

Tisdale, the only player in college basketball history to be named first-team All-America his first three years, announced his decision at a packed news conference at the university.

The 6-foot-9 Tisdale was named The Associated Press' Big Eight Player of the Year three times.

Tisdale said after "long, careful, prayerful consideration, I'm making myself available in the NBA draft. However, I intend to complete my education at the University of Oklahoma."

He thanked Coach Billy Tubbs, calling him a "a primary factor in my development ... his guidance and inspiration helped me to obtain the highest goals that an individual could ever do."

Long haul doesn't hurt

Angels destroy Dodgers, 17-1

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

Midland Manager Joe Maddon was curt and business like. "Keep it short. In 20 minutes we're flying back to Beaumont and riding the bus back for Sunday afternoon's game," he advised the interviewer after the Angels' 17-1 win over San Antonio Saturday night.

Joe couldn't believe what he had seen, and neither could a season's high turnout of 2,850 fans, who stood in line a quarter of a mile long to collect their pregame t-shirt after passing through the turnstiles.

"We rode the bus all night and part of the morning," Maddon described the 600-plus mile trip home after the series finale in Beaumont Friday night. So it's little wonder he was thinking of doing it again.

The Angels pounded out 18 hits without the benefit of batting practice and BP will be optional for today's 2 p.m. game against the Dodgers. "It was optional prior to the game tonight," Maddon informed. "We didn't change any plans because of tonight."

SECOND baseman Mark McLemore and centerfielder Devon White were the catalysts of the Angels' biggest offensive display of the season. Between them, the speedsters had six hits. Even more significantly, they reached base nine of a possible 11 times.

"They are the key," said left fielder Reggie Montgomery, one of the night's hitting stars and THE fielding star. "If they don't get on base, my three hits don't mean much." With them on base Montgomery knocked in a run with a single in the first, two runs with a fourth inning hit and another run in the six-run seventh.

First baseman Dan Murphy also benefited handsomely with three runs batted in.

Strangely enough, Midland took a 15-1 lead into the last of the eighth without the aid of a homer. "That's good," said Maddon, "That shows we were hitting line drives and not going for the fences."

Then in the eighth, Bill Merrifield and Tito Nanni spoiled it with back-to-back homers.

DESPITE Fourth of July on the Fourth of May, perhaps an even bigger story was Don Timberlake. The big righthander came into the game 0-4 and had failed to go more than

Yes, there's water, fish to be found in West Texas

ERIC SCHURER
Sports Writer

Having spent the sum of my days in the water wonderland, fish-happy state of Michigan, it wasn't easy to be convinced that good fishing is not that far away in water-poor West Texas. A trip to Lake Brownwood, 60 miles southeast of Abilene on Highway 279, was all it would take to cure me of my skepticism. And although our early spring excursion netted some less than spectacular results, the 7,000 sqaure feet of surface acreage of the lake has yielded a healthy tonnage of hybrid striped bass and open season is just beginning to ascend upon us.

The lake, a man-made affair that waters the residents of nearby Brownwood, has been stocked with more than 210,000 of these game fish since 1980. And, according to David Davis, owner and operator of Centex Striper Service, the lone fishing guide service on the lake, his own lake-record of 10 lbs. seven ounces is ready to fall this year.

In fact, Davis reports catching more than 60 fish over the past two days all between the three and nine pound range.

"Early May has historically been the beginning of the best fishing here, but I've never seen anything like this," Davis said. "And the big fish aren't fixing to show for a few weeks yet."

You see, the hybrid striper, a mix of the striped and white bass, will grow for about six years and the original stock is just getting to be trophy size.

OUTDOORS

THE HYBRID is a schooling fish that eats up to one-third of its weight in bait fish, mostly shad, in one day, but usually in two frenzied spurts depending on the water, atmospheric and barometric conditions.

Davis, who is in his third year on the lake after working for four years at Lake Buchanan as a guide, calls the process of netting the hybrid striper one "of long periods of waiting for the chaos to start."

And start it will, when Davis leads you to the hybrids' hangouts and the conditions are right. Using four down-rigged trolling rods rigged with 20-lb. test and baited with "Big Bomber" lures, it is not unusual for all four to go off in a matter of minutes with each passenger reeling in three to four pounders at the drop of a hat.

Unhappily, our trip was not quite as successful. The early spring finds the hybrid a testy creature, waiting for the powers-that-be to decide if winter is ready to let go its grip on the lake's waters. Davis had been having chancy luck the week before we set out, but as the weather warmed up and stabilized, confirmation was given when a boatload of 14 was hauled in four days before our arrival.

BUT THEN came the storms, another of spring's vagaries that send the hybrid huddling on the lake's bottom and leaving him decidedly not hungry.

The day of our particular outing was overcast and gray at the outset and Brownwood had endured three straight days of tornado warnings and thunderstorms.

Bad omens for sure.

But setting out with gritted determination, we trolled up to Davis' first "hot spot" and hooked two smallish hybrids, about 1½ lbs. apiece. What's to worry? Easy pickin's we thought.

Six hours and one tornado warning later, as we prepared to reel in the lines and head for the shore, we managed another. Not bad, one each. That worked out to one fish per six man-hours on the boat, but the promise of fish had never escaped us all day.

Constantly the fish-finder scanner showed the humps of the larger hybrid hovering inches over the weedy bottom. The turbulent weather had lulled them into thinking that winter was back upon them.

Luckily for the fisherman with a hankering in the months to come, the fish are active and biting as if smitten with spring's passion. May has always been his best month and Davis is itching for someone to top the lake record. He knows that sucker is down there, it's just a matter of who is going to land it.

Lakes rise, action up at WT lakes

From Staff Reports

With small, but significant rises at Lake J.B. Thomas and E.V. Spence, improved fishing action is anticipated this weekend, but things weren't all that bad last week.

Mike Moody, Odessa, landed a 22 3/4 pound striped bass at Spence, and trotline fishing was good at Thomas with modest of catches of crappie on minnows and jigs.

At Thomas, George Snowden, Ira, took yellows weighing 14, 15 and 20 and J. Flynt, Snyder had 11, 15 and 16 pounders.

Robert Manley, Ron Manley and C.D. Offield, Midland, enjoyed success at Spence, landing stripers of 4½, 5½, 10 and 10½ pounds. Glen Richey and Fred McMann, Midland, reported 7 and 7½ pounders and Tom Manley came up with a 5 pound, two-ouncer...

A NINE-Year study by the Texas Parks and Wildlife Dept. to determine the impact of Florida-strain largemouth bass at Marine Creek Lake near Fort Worth was focused on the effect such transplants would have on a lake which already had a standing population of largemouth and spotted bass.

After six years, it was discovered "intergrades" made up 40 percent of the largemouth population.

Also, intergrades grew faster than northern largemouths during the first three years; intergrades made better use of sunfish as forage; intergrades compete with spotted bass for forage species more than with the northerns; intergrades consumed 20 times the percentage volume of sunfish than spotted bass; and length and weight of the intergrades were better than either the Florida or the native fish...

RED DRUM are on their way to recovery after the early 1984 freeze, says the TPWD. "Bag seine sampling is a good indicator of the number of juvenile fish entering the system," says biologist Larry McEachron, "And samples from Nov. 1984 to Feb. 1985 show there are 20 per cent more redfish in every bag system compared to the same period a year ago."

"Most juvenile reds will be growing past the 18-inch minimum length limit in about a year and a half. Anglers may retain only redfish between the lengths of 18 and 30 inches, and the daily limit is five."...

Lake Victor Braunig is known for the nation's finest freshwater drum fishing, but lately hybrid striped bass have been stealing the show. A creel survey by the TPWD shows 1,889 hybrids were caught during March, and the catch weighed about 4,038 pounds. The TPWD began stocking the hybrids, a cross between striped and white bass, at Braunig in 1977 with additional releases in 1981 and 1984. The largest hybrids caught have been in the 12-pound class, but most are from two to four pounds...

Caribou find new home

By BRUCE BARTLEY

LAKE LOUISE, Alaska (AP) — After a high-technology roundup and fly-in, biologists have transplanted caribou to Alaska's Kenai Peninsula, where the native herd was destroyed 80 years ago by market hunters.

Twenty eight caribou from south-central Alaska were transplanted to the peninsula this spring. Biologists believe the habitat on the peninsula southeast of Anchorage could support a population of 2,500 animals.

The caribou roundup near Lake Louise was a display of high-technology management in a relatively untouched wilderness setting.

"Caribou cowboys" built a temporary corral of pipe, plywood, netting and burlap on a frozen lake.

Two helicopters and two spotter planes roamed the nearby black spruce forests looking for likely transplant candidates.

BIOLOGISTS in the helicopters shot the animals with tranquilizer darts.

Once an animal went down from the tranquilizer, the helicopter returned, dropping off a two-man team to hobble the dazed but still conscious caribou, blindfold them and place them in a bag designed to hold the animals' heads erect.

The animals then were picked up by a helicopter and flown to the corral.

The animals' antlers were sawed off to prevent the caribou from injuring each other or their handlers. Unlike most members of the deer family, female caribou have antlers, although they generally are smaller than the males.

While the high-technology enabled the roundup to go perfectly, the inherent bureaucracy of the modern world took its toll.

The original plan was to handle the animals as little as possible. After their capture, they were to be mildly sedated and loaded into a pod slung beneath a giant military helicopter designed to haul troops. After a two-hour flight, they were to be released on a high bench between the Skilak and Tustamena lakes.

BUT AT the last minute, after nearly half the animals had been captured, the Department of the Army in Washington, D.C., decided that would be an inappropriate use of the Alaska National Guard aircraft.

So biologists found a livestock truck to haul the caribou nearly 300 miles. Then they were flown by small helicopters to the peninsula.

Terry Spraker, a veterinarian from Colorado State University and a veteran of numerous big game transplants, warned that mortality rates would multiply each time the animals were handled. Sixteen of the 44 animals died during the transfer.

Biologists remained optimistic that the remaining 22 cows and six bulls would be a viable basis for a healthy herd.

"It is (enough) if a wolf pack doesn't find them fairly quickly," said Dan Timm, regional director of operations for the Alaska Department of Fish & Game. He said the few wolves in the area generally are widely dispersed.

Biologists believe all 22 cows were carrying calves.

UNDER NORMAL attrition, it would be expected that 25 percent of the calves would survive until fall. Thereafter, the herd is expected to grow about 25 percent a year.

Timm said no firm population figure has been set for when the herd could be hunted.

The process of restocking the peninsula with caribou actually began 20 years ago when two transplants were made.

Navratilova rolls into Slims finals

HOUSTON (AP) — Top-seeded Martina Navratilova dominated her third straight opponent and easily advanced to the finals of the $150,000 Virginia Slims of Houston tennis tournament Saturday with a 6-3, 6-0 victory over former countrywoman Helana Sukova 6-3, 6-0.

Navratilova, Fort Worth, Texas, who has lost only eight games to three opponents this week, will face unseeded Elise Burgin in Sunday's finals.

Burgin blew two match points in the eighth game of the second set but rallied in a tiring tie-breaker to upset second seeded Manuela Maleeva 6-4, 7-6. Burgin upset fourth seeded Zina Garrison in Friday's quarter-finals.

It almost looked like Navratilova was coasting.

"I wasn't coasting," she corrected. "When someone has beaten me before, I don't coast. I try to beat them."

Navratilova lost to Sukova in the semifinals of the Australian Open last year that ended Navratilova's record string of 74 consecutive victories.

But Sukova never was in Saturday's match. She was broken in the second game of the opening set and then fell apart in the second set.

"I think she started going for shots in the second set to try to et back in it," Navratilova said.

Navratilova is one match away from her 105th tournament victory as a pro. She has a 35-2 match record this year and has a 59-6 record in sets in 1985.

Burgin, ranked 52nd in the world, stunned Maleeva with an aggressive attack in the first set, breaking Maleeva in the second, fourth and 10th games to get the advantage.

Burgin kept the pressure on during the second set and jumped to a 5-2 lead.

But she allowed Maleeva to escape two match points in the eighth game and Maleeva evantually held with a backhand down the line winner.

Maleeva, rated No. 4 in the world, broke Burgin in the ninth game with a marathon baseline to baseline duel that ended when Burgin's return of Maleeva's drop shot hit wide of the line.

The two players battled to a 6-6 deadlock in the tie-breaker before Maleeva returned Burgin's serve wide to bring it to the third match point. Burgin then won the tie-breaker 8-6 with an overhead winner.

"That last overhead took three hours," Burgin said. "I thought it would never come down and when it did I thought it was hit the net or something. I may need a wheelchair. A third set would have been really tough."

The two players battled for 2 hours, 17 minutes in 88-degree, windless weather on the Sweetwater Country Club clay court.

"I should have been more aggressive," a tearful Maleeva said. "But it was difficult because she hit the ball with so much top spin, so the ball bounces differently."

Oklahoma plans deer jamboree

From Staff Reports

The 1985 Oklahoma Deer jamboree will be held Aug. 2-4 at the Tulsa Exposition Building, Expo Square. The event includes big game competition in individual categories —conventional gun, bow and arrow, muzzleloader and non-hunting.

Highlights will be Best in Show, Best Taken Out of State, Best Taken During 1984 Season, Best by Youth (15-under), Best Taken by Female and Longest Spike Buck and Smallest Rack Buck.

The contest is open to any typical or non-typical whitetail trophy taken by resident or non-resident.

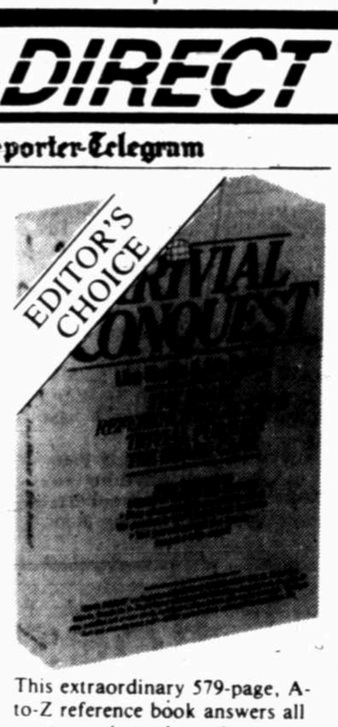

One exhibit will be the greatest collection of whitetail antlers in the world, including several state records, the record book buck, plus non-typical and typical heads.

Seminars will be conducted by whitetail experts such as Dick Idol, John Wootrers and Roger Rothaar. Also planned are hunter safety courses by the Oklahoma Dept. of Wildlife Conservation.

Cordero, Spend A Buck coast home in near-record

By ED SCHUYLER JR.
AP Sports Writer

LOUISVILLE, Ky.—Angel Cordero, described as a jockey who is a master at knowing how fast he's going, went jet-fast on Spend A Buck Saturday at the Kentucky Derby.

It was no contest.

Spend A Buck and Cordero reached the end of the 1¼ miles in 2:00 1-5, the third-fastest time in the 111-year history of the Derby, and set record fractions in doing so.

"I wanted to be five or six lengths off the lead and that's where I was," said Don MacBeth, who rode 6-5 favorite Chief's Crown, the 1984 2-year-old champion who was unbeaten in three previous starts this year.

The closest Chief's Crown could get to Spend a Buck was 1½ lengths after the first quarter-mile. At the half-mile point, he was second, six lengths back and he never got any closer than five.

Stephan's Odyssey, who took second from Chief's Crown, was 5¼ lengths behind the winner.

"The winner ran an awesome race," said MacBeth.

Spend A Buck flashed through the first quarter mile in 23 4-5, then reached the half in 45 4-5, tying him for the fourth-fastest half-mile in Derby history. He then broke the Derby record for three-quarters with a time of 1:09 4-5 and set a Derby record for the mile in 1:34 4-5.

The only two Derby winners to complete the Derby in faster times were Secretariat, who won in 1:59 2-5 in 1973 and Northern Dancer, who was clocked at 2:00 in 1964.

ETERNAL PRINCE, another speedster, was expected to vie for the lead with Spend A Buck, but he never did. His jockey, Richard Migliore, said "he just didn't break. He was kind of upset by the crowd all yelling and screaming."

So Cordero and Spend A Buck just ran off and set their own very fast pace.

"He's a great horse," Cordero said of Spend A Buck, who paid $10.20, $5.40 and $3.40 in winning his third race in four starts this year and his eighth race in 12 career starts.

"A good horse makes everybody look good. I didn't want to fight. He made an easy lead all the way. He could have run two miles this way. He's a great horse. It was a great race for all of us."

Cordero, who at 42 became the oldest jockey to win the Derby and who became only the sixth rider to win at least three Derbies, then showed some speed of his own. He left immediately after the race to fly to New Jersey, where he was to ride in the feature race at Garden State Park Saturday night.

Roger Laurin, the trainer of Chief's Crown, went into the race thinking victory. But while he was watching the running, he recalled that he was thinking, "Help."

BUT THERE was no help for any of the people connected with any of the other Derby starters on this sunny day at Churchill Downs.

Chief's Crown finished a half-length behind Stephan's Odyssey, who paid $10.20 and $5. Chief's Crown was $2.80 to show after finishing a neck in front of Fast Account.

"That horse on the lead was really rolling," said Eddie Delahoussaye, who rode Skywalker to a sixth-place finish. "I don't think there's a horse around who can run with him."

"I can't believe this," said Cam Gambolati, Spend A Buck's 35-year-old trainer, who was in his first Derby. "It's a miracle come true. I don't know what I'm doing. It's the whole underdog story."

The Spend A Buck saga is a movie script story. Dennis Diaz, of Tampa, Fla., paid $12,500 for the son of Buckaroo to a man who was having a cash-flow problem.

Diaz retired from the insurance, real estate and construction businesses at age 38 and got into horse racing "because I wanted something to do."

"Oh, I tell you what, we're just so happy. The only advice that I can give to everybody right now is to retire at 38."

Diaz and Gambolati both had said before the Derby that Spend A Buck had earned a trip here with his 10½-length win in the Cherry Hill Mile and his 9½-length victory in a sensational 1:45 4-5 for 1⅛ miles in the Garden State Stakes.

But Diaz said after the Derby, "we never thought he would do this. He's just a hell of a nice colt. It was very encouraging to me that he could be a potential Triple Crown winner."

The second race of the Triple Crown is the 1 3-16-mile Preakness on May 18 at Pimlico.

But Spend A Buck could earn another $1 million bonus from Garden State Park by skipping the Preakness and running in the Jersey Derby on May 27. Spend A Buck picked up a $1 million bonus from Garden State Saturday. The track had offered that amount to any colt who could win the Cherry Hill, the Garden State and the Derby.

Spend A Buck earned $406,800 from a purse of $581,800 and, with the bonus, now has earned $2,398,509.

OTHERS IN the supporting cast of Spend A Buck's one-horse show were, in order of finish were Stephan's Odyssey, Chief's Crown, Fast Account, Proud Truth, Skywalker, Tank's Prospect, Floating Reserve, Rhoman Rule, Encolure, Irish Fighter, Eternal Prince and I Am the Game.

And they performed before what was, for the Derby, a small crowd of 108,573. The record was 163,628 for the 100th Derby in 1974. Last year's attendance was 126,453, but all ticket prices for this year's race were doubled.

Besides Laurin, other human contestants in the 111th Derby for whom this Derby was a pipe dream were trainer Woody Stephens of Stephan's Odyssey and that colt's jockey, Laffit Pincay Jr.; Jacinto Vasquez, the jockey of Rhoman Rule, and Delahoussaye.

The oldest winning jockey before Saturday was Jean Cruguet, who was 38 when he got the roses with Seattle Slew in 1977. The other jockeys who have won three Derbies were Isaac Murphy in the late 1800s, Earl Sande in the 1920s and 1930s and Bill Shoemaker in 1955, 1959 and 1965.

Only Eddie Arcaro and Bill Hartack, with five each, have ridden more Derby winners.

Spend A Buck may pass on Triple Crown attempt

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Will it be the Preakness and possible Triple Crown glory, or the Jersey Derby and a shot at a $2 million bonus for Kentucky winner Spend A Buck?

"That's kind of a rock and a hard place I like to be caught between," said Dennis Diaz, who purchased the colt for $12,500.

Diaz, 42, of Tampa, Fla., retired from the real estate, insurance and construction businesses at age 38 to get into the horse business.

Diaz said a decision will be made Sunday or Monday whether to send the front-running Spend A Buck in the May 18 Preakness at Pimlico, second leg of thoroughbred racing's Triple Crown, or the Jersey Derby at Garden State May 27.

Trainer Cam Gambolati agreed that the decision would be made by Diaz "because he owns the horse."

"By God, don't anybody think we may not do it," Diaz said of the $2 million lure. "Don't think we're automatically going to the Preakness."

The $2 million bonus, instituted this year by Garden State Park, is given to any horse which wins the Cherry Hill Handicap, the Garden State Stakes, the Kentucky Derby and the Jersey Derby.

Spend A Buck, ridden by Angel Cordero, has won the first three by big margins.

DIAZ AND Gambolati ruled out any possibility that the colt could run in both.

"You can't go to the well too many times," Gambolati said. "They run too hard. You can't abuse them."

Diaz said, "We have to see how he comes out of this race. He may need the extra nine days."

While the $2 million bonus is inticing, the stud value of the colt would be greatly enhanced by victories in the Preakness and the third leg of the Triple Crown, the Belmont Stakes. And Gambolati admitted that "$2 million in the breeding business is nothing."

"We don't know how good he is yet," said Diaz, who said he has discussed syndication of the colt with Kentucky owner-breeder William Farish.

Gambolati said favored Chief's Chief, who finished third, "had no excuse. He dropped in right behind and had to come catch us, and didn't."

THE TRAINER said, "The whole race was up to Angel.

"I kept asking, 'When's Eternal Prince coming?' I knew he must have been in trouble."

Eternal Prince and Spend a Buck were expected to challenge for the early lead, but Eternal Prince could never get free of the pack.

"With a quarter-mile to go, I only worried whether he could get a mile and a quarter," said Gambolati. "By the eighth pole, I knew we were a winner."

Dantley, Jazz hold on, 131-123

NBA

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Utah forward Adrian Dantley scored 32 points and reserve forward Jeff Wilkins scored 18 second-half points as the Jazz beat the Denver Nuggets 131-123 Saturday in a National Basketball Association Western Conference semifinal playoff game.

Wilkins, who came off the bench, helped Utah battle a Denver rally in the fourth quarter when he scored two free throws and two field goals.

Guard Rickey Green put the game out of reach when he drilled a long jumper with 30 seconds left, giving Utah a 127-123 advantage.

He scored two free throws eight seconds later and Darrell Griffith slammed home a dunk with 10 ticks of the clock to ice the contest.

Green and Griffith each finished with 24 points. Griffith, who suffered a serious scoring slump in the first two games, connected on three of four three-point shots.

Calvin Natt paced the Nuggets with 30 points, while Alex English had 26. Mike Evans had 19 points, including three three-pointers.

The win trimmed Denver's best-of-seven playoff advantage to 2-1. Utah will try to tie the series Sunday night at the Salt Palace.

Utah built a 10-point lead in the first quarter as Green and Dantley began hitting from the outside. During one three-minute stretch, Utah outscored the Nuggets 11-4. Green gave the Jazz their first lead of the game when he sank a pair of foul shots at 7:47 in the first period.

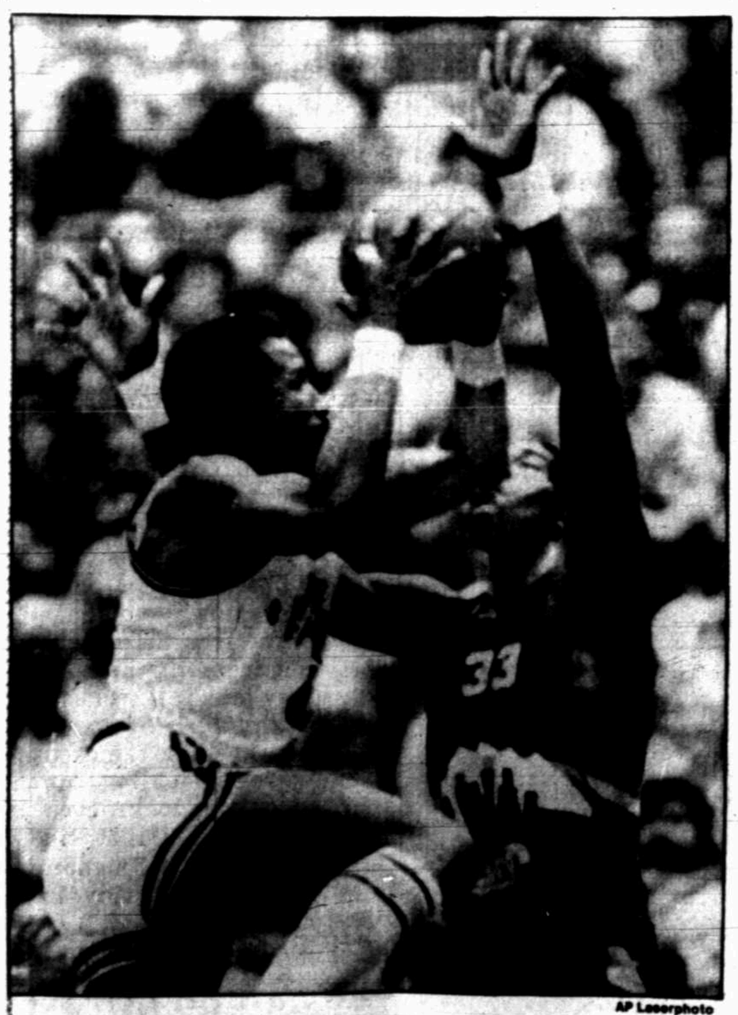

Griffith scored on a slam dunk 18 seconds later and the Jazz began building its advantage, which stood at 37-27 going into the second quarter.

Denver whittled away at the lead, shaving it to 67-61 at halftime. The Nuggets tied the game five times in the third period, which ended deadlocked at 99. Dan Issel gave the Nuggets a 101-100 lead with the first basket of the fourth quarter.

The fourth-quarter lead changed hands five times before the Jazz took control.

"We played very hard," said Utah Coach Frank Layden. "They just wouldn't let us pull away. They could've folded several times, but they just kept coming back. That's why they are a (divisional) championship team.

"We went to our bench and they came through. Jeff (Wilkins) was terrific," he said.

Midland's Kleine has big spring for Irish

If you are making book on Midland's next college All-America in football, a candidate whose prospects look better every spring belong to the younger cousin of Arkansas basketball star Joe Kleine.

With two seasons left, Wally Kleine could follow in the footsteps of Midlanders Junior Miller and Tom Brahaney.

That may be jumping the gun a bit, but the 6-9 Midland High grad had another great spring this year at Notre Dame.

Last year he was named the Most Improved lineman in spring training and went on to start every game for the Irish.

This year, Wally received the Herring Award, presented after each spring practice to the Best Defensive Lineman on the team.

Of course, making All-America is somewhat like being named No. 1. It takes a lot of luck, the right bounces, favorable publicity and a winning record. An extreme example is BYU last season. Still, anyone on a Notre Dame, Texas, Oklahoma, USC, Alabama or Penn State team with a winning record has a good start in the right direction....

As for Midland's previous All-Americas, Brahaney made it at center for Oklahoma back in the Jack Mildren years and then went on to several seasons with the St. Louis Cardinals. Miller made it at tight end at Nebraska during, well, the Junior Miller years. I'm sure there was an outstanding back Miller's All-America season that got most of the publicity at Nebraska, but the Cornhuskers produce ground-devouring backs with the same punch-pressure regularity of a USC and after a while they all seem to run together. Miller is currently with the New Orleans Saints.

If my memory isn't playing tricks, it seems as though Steve Aycock might also have earned All-America recognition from UPI as a linebacker at Oklahoma, also in the Mildren era...

SHAWON DUNSTON'S advancement from No. 1 free agent draft choice to the Chicago Cubs' No. 1 shortstop in less than three seasons of pro ball has resulted in heated controversy over his ability to handle the position with major league aplomb.

Dunston's tenedency to err with disturbing frequency are cited in arguments that suggest he'll never make it as a major league shortstop and should be playing centerfield. Shawon's errors seem to run together like a severe case of poison ivy.

The cries of outrage that contend Dunston is playing out of position are all too true. What most folks don't realize, however, is that last year as Midland's shortstop in the Texas League, Dunston had been playing the position less than a full year. He had been a third baseman when drafted. And now, with less than two years experience, he is expected to perform with the mechanical precision of a golden oldie like Eddie Joost, Lennie Merullo, Wayne Ambler, Billy Rogell or Cecil Travis...

DAVE HEATH, who last year caught for the California Angels' AA farm at Waterbury, Conn., is glad to be away from the Eastern League where it was "wet and cold" and in the Texas League, where it is hot and dry.

The one advantage the league did have was short road trips, "except for Buffalo, N.Y., and Burlington, Vt. They were long, but not really all that bad. We had a bus with bunks, an icebox, tv and movies. No, those trips really weren't too bad."...

WHEN MEL Hall, Joe Carter and Don Schulze were traded to Cleveland last year in the seven-player swap that sent Rick Sutcliffe to Chicago, Hall wondered, "Who's Rick Sutcliffe?"...

The California Angels could wind up in nearby Irvine if the dispute with the City of Anaheim isn't resolved. The City wants to build a 16-story office complex for the NFL Rams on some property close to the Anaheim Stadium, already enlarged to satisfy the Rams' shift from Los Angeles, while the Angels feel the ground in question could be better utilized for parking. As a result of the feud, the Angels are requesting a "two-year right to leave" clause in their stadium lease...

Small crowd watches Bandits beat Express

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Quarterback John Reaves completed 20 of 38 passes and threw for two touchdowns in leading the Tampa Bay Bandits to a 24-14 United States Football League victory over the Los Angeles Express before 4,912, the smallest crowd of the season at the Coliseum.

After falling behind early, Tampa Bay scored 24 consecutive points in the second and third quarters to take control of the game from the struggling Express, who last Monday found out that the team would finish out the season.

After reports leaked last week that the franchise would be folded, league owners, who have been financially supporting the team for most of the last nine months, voted to keep the club going through the rest of the season.

After giving up a quick touchdown, Tampa Bay tied the scored 7-7 on a 26-yard touchdown pass from Reaves to receiver Larry Brodsky.

Heaton four-hits Rangers in 3-1 win

Associated Press

CLEVELAND — It took a bad season for Neal Heaton to realize his limitations and become a better major league pitcher.

"Last year I thought my fastball was good enough that I could just rear back and throw it past hitters anytime. But I found out that didn't cut it, that I have to change speeds and hit spots," Heaton said after four hitting the Texas Rangers over the first seven innings to give the Cleveland Indians a 3-1 victory Saturday.

The left-handed Heaton stuggled to a 12-15 record with an unenviable 5.21 ERA last season, following what had been an outstanding 1983 rookie campaign.

Indians Manager Pat Corrales had a meassage for Heaton at the start of this season.

"Pat just told me that I've got to get the ball down, and if I don't, it's going to be a long year for me like it was last year," said Heaton, who has responded with a 2-1 record and 1.95 ERA in 37 innings.

"I've found you don't need a 95 mile-per-hour fast ball or a great Bert Blyleven-type curve ball to win in the major leagues if you change speeds and keep the ball down," Heaton said.

American League

Brett Butler snapped a fifth-inning tie with a run scoring triple and Tom Waddell, the last of three Cleveland relievers gained his sixth save.

Butler put the Indians ahead to stay in the fifth when he drilled a triple to deep center field after Tony Bernazard walked with two out. Cleveland added a run in the eighth and chased Rangers left-hander Frank Tanana, 0-4. Julio Franco led off with a double and scored on a single by Andre Thornton.

Yankees 5, Royals 2

NEW YORK — Kansas City shortstop Greg Pryor's wild throw allowed Don Mattingly to score from first base, and Don Baylor followed with a two-run homer in the seventh inning to give the New York Yankees a victory over the Royals.

Charlie Leibrandt, 3-1, retired the first two New York batters in the seventh before Mattingly blooped a single to left. Dave Winfield then hit a sharp grounder that Pryor fielded deep in the hole. Pryor's throw went past second baseman Frank White and skidded into foul territory as Mattingly raced home.

Winfield reached third on Pryor's three-base error, and Baylor then hit his third home run of the year, into the left-field seats. Baylor drove in four runs, going 3-for-3 with a sacrifice fly.

Ron Guidry, 2-3, allowed just four hits, but two of them were solo home runs. Darryl Motley hit his third homer in the second and George Brett hit his third in the sixth to make the score 2-2. Guidry has allowed eight home runs in 40⅔ innings this season.

Tigers 7, White Sox 1

DETROIT — Walt Terrell pitched a two-hitter through eight innings and Larry Herndon, Barbaro Garbey and Nelson Simmons homered to lead the Detroit Tigers to a victory over the Chicago White Sox, ending a three-game losing skid.

Terrell, 3-0, walked three and struck out five, but never allowed a runner past first base until the eighth inning, when the White Sox scored on Rudy Law's RBI single.

It marked the third time in his career that Terrell, who was obtained from the New York Mets in an off-season trade, has put together a three-game winning streak during a season.

Red Sox 5, A's 4

OAKLAND, Calif. — Bill Buckner hit a tie-breaking home run, and Steve Crawford, making his first major league start in four years, held Oakland to one run on four hits through 6⅔ innings to lead the Boston Red Sox over the A's.

Buckner had three hits, including the two-run homer in the fourth inning, and scored twice. The homer was Buckner's fourth of the season and snapped a 1-1 tie.

Angels 4, Brewers 3

ANAHEIM, Calif. — Bob Boone's two-run single paced Ron Romanick and the California Angels to a victory over the Milwaukee Brewers.

Boone's third-inning hit gave the Angels a 4-0 lead, and they held on for their eighth victory in 10 games.

Romanick, 3-1, scattered six hits over seven innings before leaving in favor of Pat Clements. Donnie Moore got the final three outs for his fifth save, giving up a run on Jim Gantner's ninth-inning sacrifice fly.

Twins 8, Orioles 6

MINNEAPOLIS — Mike Stenhouse, who was unable to crack the Minnesota Twins' lineup for two weeks, capped a five-run first inning with a two-run homer as the Twins defeated the Baltimore Orioles.

The Twins sent 10 men to the plate in the first against losing pitcher Dennis Martinez, 2-2. The first six collected base hits to help Minnesota to its 11th victory in 12 games.

Mariners 8, Blue Jays 1

SEATTLE — Matt Young tossed a five-hitter and Al Cowens and Gorman Thomas each drove in two runs in the first inning to lead the Seattle Mariners to a victory over the Toronto Blue Jays.

Young, 2-3, who was removed in the fifth inning of his last start when he felt his elbow pop, had Saturday's start pushed back two days because of soreness.

But he showed no ill effects against the Blue Jays as he struck out three and walked one in pitching his first complete game of the season.

ANGELS

two innings in his last outing. Saturday, he was everything the Angels had hoped he would be in the Texas League, going the route with a fancy four-hitter.

Catcher Doug Davis described the difference as the slider. "He was getting his breaking pitch over and that was the key. He was throwing his slider over for a strike."

Through eight innings, Timberlake, who walked three in all, reached three balls on only four hitters. A hint as to the kind of night it was going to be came when he fell behind tough Cecil Espy, the game's first batter, 3-0 and then got him on a called third strike.

His lone mistake was a lead off home run to Jon Debus in the second.

"I hadn't pitched a good game in the last five. My good outing came late," said the North Carolinian, "but this was the first game I was getting my slider over with any consistency."

"Monty (pitching coach Aurelio Monteagudo) made a few changes and it made a difference," said Maddon.

Midland jumped in front 3-0 in the first against Shawn Hillegas, who had to retire at the outset of the fourth as a result of a foot injury, with a series of blue dart whistlers. McLemore and White started it. Murphy's hard shot to second was bobbled and then Montgomery ripped a hit off Jeff Hamilton's glove at third and it was 2-0. Hardest hit ball of the inning was by Dale Sconiers, but it resulted in a double play when first baseman Larry See gloved his line shot and threw to second to double Murphy. Merrifield, however, doubled home the third run.

A four-run fourth in which McLemore doubled in two runs and Montgomery another pair and a six-run sixth in which Sconiers doubled in two runs, settled the issue.

HALO-UCINATIONS—Montgomery made the two outstanding defensive saves of the game a couple of diving, rolling catches to snatch the ball off the grass tops in robbing Debus in the fourth and Hamilton in the seventh...Maddon looked genuinely sorry when he said it, "The Dodgers have a good team. We aren't going to be able to do this to them every night."...Julian Gonzalez is ready to go again after injuring his arm in a fall on the stairway of the hotel in San Antonio...

SPRING—

"Our strength, certainly, is on the offensive line and in the defensive secondary," where returners Kevin Witt, Terry Young and Tracy Mayfield roam, said Tayrien. "I'm not saying that we'll be better there than in past years, but we have more experience in those areas in spring training."

And although graduation has hurt the Rebs in several areas besides the backfield, namely the defensive line and linebacking corps, Tayrien does not bemoan his fate.

"That's what you expect in high school football, you can't go out and recruit, you work with what you got. And since we work with the two-platoon system, we're trying to find 44 football players — two at each position, and we're going to play the very best 11 on each side of the field that we've got."

TRACK

She was disappointed.

"I was sick before jumping. I was happy to get the state berth in the long jump, but it wasn't a very good jump," said White.

White was beaten by Amarillo's Kim Guthrie with a 19-0¾. Guthrie went on to win the high jump (record tying 5-8), triple jump (record 38-3) and third in the 100 hurdles for 36 points. She was the star of the girls division.

White was fourth in the triple jump with a 37-11¾.

The Lee boys had two near misses at other state berths. Sophomore Mike Garza was third in the 3200 with a 9:42.65 after leading the first four laps. He finally lost to Abel Romo of El Paso Burges (9:37.7) and Searle Lawson of Arlington (9:42.6). Garza was also fifth in the 1600.

Hampton was also third in the 300 hurdles with a 37.8. Permian's Gerry Guster, who won two state berths, won the intermediates with a 37.1 while Booker Conley of Bryan was second with a 37.7. Hampton was in the running until the second to last hurdle when Conley got the edge.

Lee's 1600 relay team was in position to win the region title, but even its 3:12.5 wasn't good enough to get out of the region. It would have been a region record in any other year.

Brad Cooper, who also placed sixth in the 400, gave Lee the lead after his starting leg of 48.32 in the 1600 relay. Craig Swearingen added about seven yards to that lead with a split of 48.52, but Hampton lost ground despite a 48.19 split. Brackens had a blazing split of 46.97, but Palo Duro's Jimmy Jones had a 45.7 split to move from third to first.

For the girls, Midland High's Amy Cumings placed fourth in the 1600 with a 5:32.0 and sixth in the 3200 with a 12:46.7. Lee's Tangi Carter was fifth in the 100 with a 12.0 while teammate Tami Woodberry was fifth in the 100 hurdles with a 14.8, tying her best effort of the year.

The MHS girls also placed sixth in the 1600 relay as Faye Daugherty, Abbie Green, Tina Knight and Edwards posted a 4:01.4. Knight failed to place in the long jump, still nursing a bad ankle.

The only other 4-5A athlete to earn a state boys berth was San Angelo's Ottoway Perryman with a second in the 400, a 47.6 effort. San Angelo's Willie Blakey, who was thought to have a good shot in the long jump, scratched twice in the prelims and didn't make the finals.

Odessa Permian won the girls division with 57 points, but qualified only one individual and two relays. Sonji McIntire won the 400 title with a 57.2 and ran legs on both the winning 3:52.1 1600 relay team and the second place 47.6 sprint relay.

San Angelo's Cindy McClure was the only other 4-5A girl to earn a state berth with a second place 2:16.4 in the 800. McClure has now earned three state berths in three separate sports (cross country, swimming and track) this year.

LEE

And, about his pitching staff, head coach Ernie Johnson said, "They've done better than I thought they would this year. They're not super, they give up runs, but they've done a good job.

"If Rittenberry would develop a breaking ball, he'd do a lot better. He pitched the whole game against Odessa (in the last week of 4-5A play) and threw only one curve ball. It shows he's done a good job when he's only got one pitch to rely on."

FOR THE past two years, Rebel pitchers have been looking at one main catcher. Others have seen a bit of time, but Jimmy Phillips has been the main horse behind the plate.

With the two years of experience, the leadership he's developed, the Rebel pitchers have all the faith in the world in his ability.

"He's the best in the district, the only one I'd feel comfortable with," said Rittenberry. "He's got a lot of experience."

"Me too," said Small. "I haven't ever thrown to any other catcher since I've been up here."

"I feel good throwing to him," said Matta. "I have a lot of faith in him. He does block my curve ball."

Blocking the ball is one of the things Johnson says his senior catcher does best. "He's improved a good deal over last year. The main thing about him, as a catcher, is he keeps the ball in front of him. The pitchers have confidence in him. They're not afraid to throw it low when he's back there.

"Jimmy's had an off year hitting and he's real disgusted about that. But, he's making progress."

As a catcher, one of the things Phillips needs is a good line of communication with the pitcher on the mound. If he's expecting one pitch and they throw another, it could cause problems in a game if there are runners aboard.

"They haven't crossed me up since the first game or two," said Phillips. "George is the only one who ever crosses me up and that's because he can't see when he forgets his glasses. Neither of the Mikes have crossed me up this year."

Along with his hitting, which started coming around in the second half of the district season, Phillips would like to improve "my footwork, get rid of the ball quicker on throws to second. That's my main problem really."

"Jimmy does have a strong arm to second. The ball gets to center field real quick," joked Small.

Phillips just smiled and nodded agreement. "It does get there quick."

Joking aside, they all have Monterey on their minds, especially Phillips who caught in both playoff losses a year ago.

"I can't wait," he said. "I just want another shot at Monterey."

He'll get it at 4 p.m. on Tuesday at Lubbock's Lowery Field and then again at 2 p.m. Saturday at Lee Field in the if necessary doubleheader.

Phils topple Astros in 13th, 7-5

Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA—Luis Aguayo hit a two-run homer in the bottom of the 13th inning with one out to give the Philadelphia Phillies a 7-5 victory over the Houston Astros Saturday.

The home run was the second of the game for Aguayo, playing third base in place of Mike Schmidt, who is out with a pulled hamstring. Ozzie Virgil hit a one-out single before Aguayo's homer off reliever Bill Dawley, 0-2.

The Astros tied the game 5-5 in the ninth inning on pinch-hitter Harry Spillman's three-run homer.

With one out, Alan Ashby singled and Craig Reynolds hit a potential double play ball to Aguayo. However, Aguayo's throw to second base was dropped by Juan Samuel and Spillman then hit a 1-2 pitch deep to right field for his first homer of the season.

Earlier, Virgil's three-run homer capped a four-run fourth inning for the Philadelphia Phillies to help them take a 5-2 lead into the ninth.

Cubs 12, Padres 8

CHICAGO—Home runs by Ron Cey, Ryne Sandberg and former Midland Cub Shawon Dunston featured successive four-run innings leading Chicago to a triumph over San Diego.

Graig Nettles hit two home runs and drove in three runs for the Padres, while Steve Garvey and Garry Templeton added solo homers behind a 24-mph wind blowing toward center field.

The Padres pulled within 9-8 after scoring single runs in the fifth, sixth, seven and eighth innings, but the Cubs scored three unearned runs in their half of the eighth after a two-out error by Templeton at shortstop.

Templeton could not handle a two-out grounder by Davey Lopes, who then stole second. After an intentional walk to Leon Durham, Keith Moreland drove in a run. Tim Stoddard walked Jody Davis, Cey and Dunston in succession to score two more runs.

Dunston hit his first major league homer in the fourth inning.

Reds 14, Mets 2

CINCINNATI—Nick Esasky hit his third career grand-slam homer in a 10-run sixth inning, and Jay Tibbs pitched a four-hitter for his first career complete game as Cincinnati outmuscled New York.

The Reds sent 15 batters to the plate in the inning, getting seven hits and five walks off four Mets pitchers and sending right-hander Roger McDowell, 2-1, his first defeat of the season.

Tibbs, 1-4, had pitched no-hit ball through five innings before the Mets tied the score 2-2 on Keith Hernandez single and Gary Carter's fourth homer of the season.

Pete Rose had a first inning single to draw within 70 hits of Ty Cobb's all-time mark.

Eddie Milner started the Reds sixth with a single, and Rose walked. Parker, who extended his hitting streak to 13 games, doubled to right to score Milner and break the tie as Rose went to third. Cedeno was walked intentionally to load the bases, and Doug Sisk relieved McDowell. Esasky then hit his grand slam homer to center.

Dodgers 6, Pirates 5

PITTSBURGH—Pedro Guerrero tripled in Ken Landreaux with the winning run after drilling a tying home run as Los Angeles, behind Fernando Valenzuela, rallied to beat Pittsburgh in 10 innings.

Landreaux singled to greet reliever John Candelaria, 1-3, in the 10th before Guerrero just missed his second homer of the game, lining a shot off the right-field wall. Guerrero failed to score when a Dodgers' suicide squeeze misfired on a pitchout, and Guerrero was tagged out at home by catcher Tony Pena.

Valenzuela, 3-3, wasn't as sharp as he was in his first five starts, when he allowed only one earned run in 42 innings, but he blanked the Pirates over the final five innings, striking out seven and walking three while allowing 10 hits.

Cardinals 6, Giants 4

ST. LOUIS—Rookie Vince Coleman singled twice, walked, stole three bases and scored two runs, leading St. Louis Cardinals to a victory over San Francisco.

Terry Pendleton, Jack Clark, Willie McGee and Ozzie Smith also contributed two hits apiece to a 13-hit St. Louis attack off San Francisco left-hander Atlee Hammaker, 0-3, and reliever Greg Minton. The Cardinals, while handing the Giants a fourth straight defeat, erupted to score four times in the first inning when assisted by two San Francisco errors.

Hammaker, after yielding a lead-off single to Coleman at the outset, wild-pitched the baserunner to second base and watched Coleman steal third base as Lonnie Smith was walking.

Coleman continued home when catcher Alex Trevino's throw sailed into left field. Lonnie Smith was eventually picked off second base following Tommy Herr's single, but Herr afterward scored on McGee's sacrifice fly and Pendleton singled two runs home.

Gary Rajsich doubled home Rob Deer for San Francisco in the second and scored when catcher Tom Nieto dropped Coleman's throw from right field on Jose Uribe's single before St. Louis struck again.

After two were out in the bottom of the second, Coleman walked on a 3-2 pitch and moved up on a Hammaker balk. Coleman then scored for the second time when Ozzie Smith bounced a single off the glove of Giants shortstop Jose Uribe.

Coleman's steals gave him a major league-leading total 17 in 15 games, including seven thefts of third base and a string of 13 in a row since last thrown out April 21st.

Expos 9, Braves 3

ATLANTA—Mike Fitzgerald and U. L. Washington each drove in two runs with the only hits in a five-run fourth inning as Montreal downed Atlanta.

The Expos took advantage of four walks and a passed ball on a strike-out in the fourth, breaking a 1-1 tie to enable Bryn Smith to gain his fourth victory of the year against no losses.

It was the third victory in a row for the Expos and their ninth in the last 11 games.

Andre Dawson opened the fourth by striking out, but he reached first on a passed ball by catcher Rick Cerone.

Oilers match playoff scoring mark in 11-2 win

NHL Playoffs

EDMONTON, Alberta (AP) — Charlie Huddy, Jari Kurri and Glenn Anderson each scored two goals as the Edmonton Oilers ripped the Chicago Black Hawks 11-2 Saturday night in the opening game of the National Hockey League's semifinal playoff series.

Edmonton's 11 goals tied the NHL playoff record established by the Montreal Canadiens in an 11-0 win over Toronto in 1944.

Anderson's fourth goal of the playoffs gave Edmonton a 1-0 lead 5:48 into the game and Huddy got his first of the postseason at 10:09 to make it 2-0.

Ken Yaremchuk's goal at 12:36 cut the Oiler lead to 2-1, but Paul Coffey responded at 18:25 to make it 3-1, and Kurri and Mark Napier scored in the first 5:18 of the second period to start the romp.

Kurri and Huddy each added their second goals to give Edmonton a 7-1 bulge after two periods.

Troy Murray had the other Chicago goal, at 18:22 of the third, and Wayne Gretzky, Pat Hughes and Willy Lindstrom also scored for Edmonton, which plays host to the second game of the Campbell Conference final series Tuesday night.

Murray Bannerman started in goal for Chicago, but was replaced after stopping only five of nine shots in the second period. Warren Skorodenski replaced Bannerman and allowed four goals while facing 14 shots in the final 20 minutes.

Mother Teresa to address rally

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — Mother Teresa, whose work with orphans in Calcutta earned her the 1979 Nobel Peace Prize, has accepted an invitation to speak at an anti-abortion rally here on June 30.

The announcement prompted excitement and worry about how to handle the expected crowds.

"Isn't that something? That's as close as I'll ever get to being in the same town as a saint," said Catholic laywoman Melba Scott.

Mother Teresa's visit will be her second to Nebraska. She was at Boys Town in Omaha in 1976 to receive the Father Flanagan Award.

• • •

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — Just because artificial hearts are expensive doesn't mean doctors should stop experimenting, says Dr. William C. Devries, who has implanted four.

"If we don't pursue the possibilities of (the artificial heart) because it's expensive," he said Friday, "we'll enter the intellectual dark ages."

DeVries, head of the artificial heart program at Humana Heart Institute in Louisville, Ky., made the comments in a talk to doctors, medical students and staff at Eastern Virginia Medical School.

Humana reportedly paid $15,500 for the polyurethane and aluminum Jarvik-7 heart implanted in Devries' second patient, William Schreoder, and its drive system.

NEW YORK (AP) — Entertainer Ginger Rogers, diva Renata Scotto, editor Helen Gurley Brown and Sen. Alfonse D'Amato were among seven people honored as distinguished Americans Saturday by the Women's National Republican Club.

Others receiving awards at the GOP lunch in Manhattan's Waldorf-Astoria Hotel were LeGree Daniels, chairwoman of the National Black Republican Council, M.G. "Pat" Robertson, president of the Christian Broadcasting Network Inc., and James H. Van Allen, founder of the National Tennis Foundation and Hall of Fame.

The seven were chosen because their "talent, integrity and knowledge are examples of the best in leadership," said Mrs. Jay C. Thompson, a club boardmember.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Screen Actors Guild has voted to join actress Vanessa Redgrave's case against her dismissal as a narrator by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, which stemmed from her support of the Palestine Liberation Organization.

The movie union cited its opposition to blacklisting and said the situation poses a threat to the First Amendment rights of all artists.

NO. 34,512
IN THE MATTER OF A 1982 CHEVROLET PICKUP TRUCK IN THE DISTRICT COURT OF MIDLAND COUNTY, TEXAS 142ND JUDICIAL DISTRICT CITATION BY PUBLICATION THE STATE OF TEXAS
TO: UNKNOWN OWNER OF A 1982 CHEVROLET PICKUP TRUCK:
You are commanded to appear and answer the Motion to Forfeit filed by the Texas Department of Public Safety at or before 5:00 o'clock p.m. on the 20th day from the date of publication of this citation, in the 142ND District Court of Midland County, Texas, to be held at the County Courthouse in the City of Midland, Midland County, Texas. The case is No. 34,512, styled In the Matter of the 1982 Chevrolet Pickup Truck, in which the Texas Department of Public Safety is plaintiff, the unknown owner is defendant and the Motion to Forfeit was filed on February 22, 1985. The nature of the suit is as follows:
The Texas Department of Public Safety has seized an altered 1982 Chevrolet Silverado, 1/2 ton pickup truck, with fictitious vehicle indentification number 1GCDC14H1CS180015. The 1982 Chevrolet Silverado 1/2 ton pickup truck is currently being held at the following location: Big Three Tire, Interstate 20 and Garden City Highway, Midland, Midland County, Texas. The owner or any lien holder has the right to reclaim the vehicle or part not later than the 20th day after the date this citation is published, on payment of towing and storage costs. Failure by the owner or a lienowner to reclaim the vehicle or part by the 20th day after the date this citation is published waives all right, title and interest in the vehicle and interest in the vehicle or part.
If this citation is not served within 90 days after the date of its issuance, it shall be returned unserved.
SIGNED AND SEALED on this the 17th day of April, 1985.
VIVIAN WOOD
DISTRICT CLERK, MIDLAND COUNTY, TEXAS

AREA TANKS

Is Pleased to Announce They Are the EXCLUSIVE DEALER for West Texas & Southeastern New Mexico Area For

XERXES FIBERGLASS TANKS

*Now there's an alternative to steel tanks. It's fiberglass. Switching to fiberglass tanks could be one of the smartest oilfield decisions you ever make. They don't rust or corrode. They'll store brine and drilling by-products safely for years without deteriorating with a fraction of the maintenance. And because they're fiberglass, they are lightweight, easy to install and easy to move. Your investment return starts the day of installation.

*Xerxes uses the most advanced fiberglass construction techniques and highest quality materials available. Special resin tanks that are tough as you can get against corrosion. Your investment return starts the day of installation.

*AREA TANKS will stock and have available for immediate shipment the standard API sizes: 210's, 300's, and 500 barrel capacity enclosed or open top tanks. We welcome any inquiries on tanks requiring specialized engineering specifications.

*AREA TANKS still maintains an ASME code shop, API shop-welded tanks, field welded tanks, portable sandblasting and coating units, frac and vertical test tanks.

Office Systems Sales

It's not hard to sell with a line like ours.

Over the past 5 years, Wang has outpaced everybody in the pack. Especially in office systems. And that kind of success opens a lot of doors.

Right now, we need bright, aggressive salespeople who know office equipment cold – people with at least 2 years of quota achievement in companies like IBM or Xerox.

If that's you, here's what Wang has to offer: A chance to sell some of the hottest products around, and a chance to earn big money very soon. Plus generous benefits, including profit-sharing and stock plans.

Why not put yourself on the fastest track in the business? Send your resume to:

New opportunities in computer engineering technology

At Electronic Data Systems (EDS) Corporation, the new General Motors alliance has opened new doors of opportunity for those special people with the ability and motivation to rise above the crowd. EDS has joined GM in its revolutionary venture to create the factory of the future. With EDS as the world's largest computer services firm and GM as the world's largest engineering and manufacturing organization, your career opportunities are limitless. You'll get world-class training in the EDS Engineering Systems Development (ESD) Program, which is specially designed for engineers who want to advance quickly, in a computer technology environment that can only be described as state-of-the-art.

Your career will be at the leading edge of technology — in robotics, CAE/CAD/CAM/CIM, machine vision, manufacturing control systems, expert systems and simulation systems. Both the training and the work will be hard, stimulating and will challenge your very best efforts.

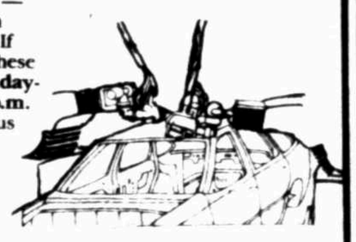

But, you'll be able to gain a depth of experience into a very short time that would require many years at a more conventional position. You'll move up at your own pace — getting more responsibility just as soon as you're willing and able to handle it.

As an Engineering Systems Development graduate, you'll be involved in designing, developing and implementing sophisticated systems for supporting GM clients with state-of-the-art engineering and manufacturing systems. You'll be an important part of a bright, highly motivated group that pushes back the barriers in technological advancement — and be liberally rewarded for your accomplishments.

To qualify for the ESD Program, you must have:

- Minimum of BA degree in engineering, math, physics or computer science
- GPA of 3.0
- Excellent record of academic achievement
- Willingness to relocate
- U.S. citizenship or permanent visa

Not everyone can make it at EDS. But, if you're one of those who can — and do — you've got a head start on your career goals at EDS. If you think you're one of these special people, call Monday-Friday, 8:30 a.m.-5:30 p.m. (central time), or send us your resume.

Do it now — your career time is too valuable to waste.

OPENINGS AVAILABLE NOW

Call us collect, today, Sunday, May 5th at (214) 392-8660 between 1-5 p.m. (central time).

Walking on the wild side

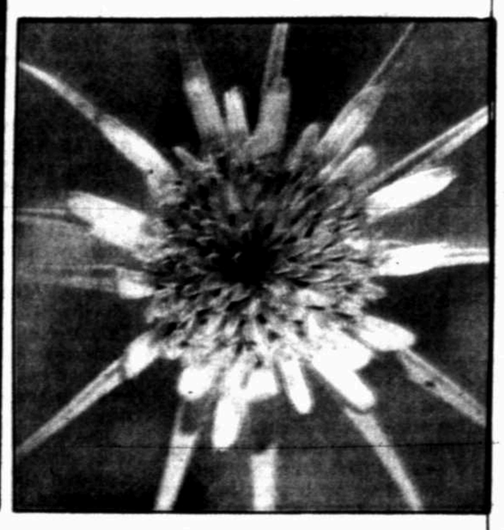

Red-winged blackbirds with their bold quasi-military stripes stand as sentries overlooking the Midland Outdoor Learning Center's Nature Trail. The bright reddish-orange gaillardia, far left, grows wild in this area, but it also is easily cultivated to add color to flower gardens.

The oddly leafless ephedra is a "dinosaur" of the plant world, according to local horticulturist Burr Williams.

This spring may be described as only "about average" for wildflowers, but after the last two drought-ridden years, Midland's landscape seems almost lush, such as the photo to the left. Some northern relatives of the bright yellow salisfy, above, found here are know as "oyster plants" because they are said to have an oyster-like flavor.

Text by David Lee Forrest
Photos by Kent Porter

The colorful wildflowers basking in the warm May sun sprang from the frosty chill of January's white snow.

For the past two years, drought-ridden Midland has been unusually drab and dusty. In comparison, this spring seems absolutely lush and this winter's snowfall deserves at least some credit, according to horticulturalist Burr Williams, of Midland.

The rain that fell during the fall and winter, when wildflower seeds were germinating, was crucial in creating this year's colorful spring, he said. The snow didn't actually add that much moisture to the ground, Williams said, because 16 inches of fluffy snow only melts down to about an inch of water.

However, the snow was helpful because "it holds the moisture in from last fall," he noted.

Williams said 1981 was "the last good wildflower year" before the harsh drought set in.

"I'd rate this year about average. The last two years were below average."

Williams guides Tuesday morning nature walks at the Midland Outdoor Learning Center in Hogan Park for those interested in native springtime flora and fauna.

Construction of the center's half-mile-long Nature Trail began in 1981 and has become a popular location for Midland schools' field trips. Williams estimated that 2,000 to 2,500 students visit it each year.

He is busily promoting a Midland Nature Center membership drive to raise funds for a permanent Learning Center building on the site.

"There is a lot of us who like this country and we need to promote it more. Let's lose the transient's attitude of 'Well, it ain't like back home.' This is home, folks. Being a part of the Nature Center is admitting to the world, and yourself, that this is home and you are dang proud of it."

Among the area's unusual wildflowers that Williams points out to the visitors who trek along on a nature walk is the ephedra, a strange leafless shrub covered with tiny yellow flowers.

"This is the way all blossoms were in the time of the dinosaurs, so you're essentially looking at a dinosaur," he said.

An African variety of ephedra is a source of the asthma drug ephedrine, he said. Ephedra was used by settlers to make a tea-like beverage, which earned the plant the nickname of "Mormon tea."

"I don't think it's all that good," said Williams, who could be called a connoisseur of wildflower teas.

He prefers tea made from the red berries of sumac bushes, which he claims is "a wonderful, wonderful brew."

Another wildflower once valued for medicinal purposes found on the trail is the white larkspur with small, blue-tinged white blooms.

"It was a pretty powerful drug for the Indians and early white settlers," Williams said. However, he added, "It's also pretty poisonous" in large quanitities.

During the walks, Williams occasionally redirects the group's attention from the plant life growing on the ground to birds flying overhead. According to Williams, 343 different species of birds — from tiny hummingbirds to lofty eagles — have been seen in Midland County.

At the beginning of the first of the walks in April, Williams sounded almost like a proud parent when he announced to the group that a pair of eastern bluebirds, which normally wing north out of the Permian Basin when warm weather arrives, had stayed to nest in Hogan Park.

The free nature walks will continue May 7, 14 and 21. Participants meet by 8:30 a.m. in the parking lot north of the Woman's Club building in Hogan Park for the 1½-hour springtime tour of the trail.

By MARILYN McKNIGHT HARRISON

The Midland Symphony Guild sponsored another fun and successful trip to New York City recently.

The group included Susan (Mrs. Duke) Wilson, Susan (Mrs. Jay) Horton, Liz (Mrs. Rick) Orson, Patty (Mrs. James H.) Chandler, Lorraine and Rufe Bynum, Jane (Mrs. Russell) Ramsland, Donnie (Mrs. Stanley) Weiner, Jeanie (Mrs. J. Coley) Cowden, Juanita (Mrs. Durward) Goolsby, Mary (Mrs. Ted LaCaff, Maureen (Mrs. John L.) Cox and her daughter, Carolyn (Mrs. Jay) Berry, accompanied by Maureen's brother, Gary Treadwell of Fort Worth.

Staying at the Essex House on Central Park South, the group enjoyed five days of shopping, sightseeing, dining in some of the city's finest restaurants and first rate entertainment, including Liberace's show at Radio City Music Hall, Yul Brynner in "The King and I," and the new musical, "Grind," starring Ben Vereen. Another highlight was the New York Pops' second anniversary celebration concert at Carnegie Hall, where they saw such celebrities Pops conductor Skitch Henderson, Doc Severinson, Liza Minnelli, Barbara Walters and Gloria Steinem.

A side trip to the charming town of Pound Ridge Village on the Connecticut line provided a Sunday diversion for the group. Between browsing in the antique shops and other stores that line the city streets, they enjoyed lunch at Emily Shaw's, a delightful restaurant which has been in existence for over a hundred years.

The trip evokes many special memories for each of the travelers. For some, it was lunch at "21" as guests of former U.S. Secretary of the Treasury Bill Simon. For Maureen and her brother, it was the pleasure of getting unexpected tickets for "The Donahue Show." Several enjoyed renewing old friendships at a reception one evening in the Cox suite. And, of course, the trip was not complete without the traditional, last minute stop, en route to the airport, at Balducci's Bakery in the Village to fill shopping bags with deli and bakery goods to bring home.

KAREN GRAVITT and Tim Holder, who are planning a June 1 wedding, were honored at parties here last weekend.

Wilma (Mrs. Yale) Key entertained for them with an announcement party and buffet dinner at the Midland Country Club on Saturday evening. The house party included the couple's parents, Jeannie and Wallie Gravitt and Nita and Bob Holder; the bride-to-be's brother and sister, Van and Valerie Gravitt, and Tim's sister-in-law and brother, Kay and Steve Holder.

Carrying out the bridal colors, the individual tables were covered with ivory cloths and accented with coral napkins, with Sonja roses and baby's breath as the centerpieces.

Karen was honored that morning with a brunch and miscellaneous display shower in the home of Geneva (Mrs. Dan) Fender.

Attending both parties were the bride's grandmothers, Leslie (Mrs. Denver) Gravitt of Levelland and Johnnie (Mrs. H.V.) Newman of Shallowater, as well as a number of guests from Lubbock and Snyder. Karen's grandfather, H.V. Newman, was present for the evening party.

THREE MIDLAND COUPLES traveled to Amarillo recently to celebrate the milestone birthday of a good friend and former Midlander, Rich Oelze.

Nancy and Skeet Doss, Debbie and Randy Bruno and Jeanette and Loren Bryant made the trip in the Dosses' Winnebago. They were guests of Rich and his wife, Joyce, in their lovely home, along with a number of the couple's Amarillo friends, for the 40th birthday celebration. Adding to the hilarity of the occasion were the guests' versions of "You know you're old when..."

A BRUNCH AND MISCELLANEOUS shower recently honored Margie Nathman, who will become the bride of Tom Terrett on May 18. The party was held in the home of Heidi (Mrs. George) Goebel, with Barbara (Mrs. Mike) Barta as the co-hostess.

Decorations carried out a color scheme of yellow, white and green. Guests enjoyed a buffet of quiche, fruit salad, cranberry and banana muffins, fruit punch and coffee from a table decorated with miniature carnations and daisies and a cake topped with a charming set of wooden figures of a bridal couple and church building.

A special guest was the bride's mother, Maguerite (Mrs. George) Nathman.

ON THE OCCASION of her 86th birthday, Mrs. Ann Gunther was honored with an informal gathering at the home of her daughter and son-in-law, Jean and Aubrey Reid.

The serving table held a beautifully decorated birthday cake and a colorful arrangement of fresh flowers with a "bouquet" of multi-colored balloons.

Guests were Dorothy and Dr. Brandon Rea, Lois and Ken Carpenter, Vera and Paul Wecker, Lois and John Carter, Evelyn and Dr. Norman Gould, Carolyn (Mrs. Lucien) Lindsey, Mrs. Loleta Guffey, Mrs. Ruth Jones, Mrs. Roberta Holliman and Miss Lillian Knowles.

MEMBERS OF THE MIDLAND Study Club combined their annual couples' party with a fun way of raising funds for their philanthropic project.

After a dinner of barbecued brisket with all the trimmings, and homemade ice cream and cake for dessert, the group enjoyed an evening of bingo. Members brought "white elephants" for the prizes. With no set price for the bingo cards, the party goers were asked to donate as they saw fit and urged to purchase as many cards per game as they wished. The result is a generous donation for the Permian Basin Center for Battered Women and Their Children.

Club president Thelma Bloch and her husband, Bill, hosted the party at their in Green Tree Country Club Estates. The club's new members, Jane (Mrs. Johnny) Mulloy, Jo Ann (Mrs. Charles) Gholston, Marty (Mrs. J.C.) McNeal, Liz (Mrs. Richard) Robinson, Ruth (Mrs. Ed) Kerr and Billie (Mrs. Bob) Schmucker, served as co-hostesses.

The red and white checked table cloths and napkins, along with red and white balloons for decoration, provided a festive setting for the party.

Day care programs help children gain independence

Hearst News Service

Children who attend day care programs tend to be more independent and assertive than kids who stay home, but they may have trouble learning to play by themselves.

Day care's inherent peer influence and lack of privacy may make it difficult for a child to enjoy moments of solitude, says Nancy Robinson, a psychologist in the University of Washington's Department of Psychiatry and Behavioral Sciences. The child's evenings may be spent with parents who are "very tuned in to them" and anxious to compensate for the separation during the day — further reducing the chance for independent play.

"Some of the most important things in the world have to be done alone, so that's an important issue," Robinson says.

Robinson says the quality of a child's home life is still the most important factor in his well-being, even if he spends much of his week with other care-givers.

"In every single study I know, the influence of the home is still more important than the day care, given the normal range of day cares," she says. "That doesn't mean day cares can't ruin kids; they can."

Robinson, who studied day care in nine countries with her late husband, Halbert B. Robinson, recalled the time her husband visited a South Carolina day-care center in which a single woman was trying to cope with 17 children.

"The shades were drawn and it was 10 o'clock in the morning. The kids were all in their cribs. He said, 'What are you doing?' She said, 'How would you take care of 17 kids?' "

Overall, however, the quality of day care is improving, she says. Once viewed as custodial care, day care now takes on many of the functions of preschool.

"By and large the picture's really quite a positive one," she says. "It especially tends to be positive if the mother's doing what she wants to be doing and there's not too much stress in the family."

Miniature horses can be costly

Home planning can help elderly

STILLWATER, Okla. (AP) — Planning and adjustments can make a house safe and convenient for the elderly, says Ann Dellenbarger, Extension housing and interior design specialist at Oklahoma State University.

Good design can overcome limitations of reduced eyesight, weakened muscles and lessened agility, she says. For instance, a blinking light might be installed to flash when the telephone rings.

She notes that warm colors in the red and yellow range are more comfortable for the elderly than the blue-violet range. Contrasting colors can separate the floor from the baseboard, making it easier to judge distances. Floor covering different in color and texture from its surroundings can help an elderly person identify danger areas such as stairways.

Hog farmer branches out into more colorful career

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — After 40 years of raising hogs, tobacco and soybeans, Floyd "Junior" Gray was tired of depending on the whims of nature for his livelihood. So he invested about $4,000 in the dream of a manufacturer with an idea but no money.

The move appears to have paid off.

Gray isn't spending his time slopping hogs any more. The Kinston farmer has been crisscrossing the country, taking orders for what he calls "the next Cabbage Patch kids" — "Color Me" T-shirts with outlined designs that come with colored pens whose ink can be washed out of the fabric again and again.

Gray and Carroll Midgette, working out of a mobile home surrounded by tobacco barns, have taken orders for 100,000 dozen of the T-shirts since Midgette took a few samples to the National Merchandise Convention in New York in September.

"When I went up there, I said it would be OK if I sold 50 to 100 dozen," Midgette said. "I wound up doing 5,000 dozen.

"We've got 'Color Me Santa Claus,' 'Color Me Animal World,' 'Color Me Army,' 'Color Me God Is Love,' and other designs," he said. "We've got companies that want their own designs. We've got a company that's going to bring the shirts to Saudi Arabia."

And Gray and Midgette are not stopping there.

"Right now, we're ushering in the color-me kids," Midgette said. "We're working on cartoons, and we're dealing with companies to make tennis shoes and jogging suits."

Midgette said he'd got the idea for the T-shirts about 15 years ago.

"My kids liked to color, and they liked to wear T-shirts. I thought you could sell a T-shirt that kids could color on, wear and then wash out and color again," he said.

"I thought it would work, but I didn't think it would get this big," said Midgette, now president of the enterprise, G&M Manufacturing. "I didn't know it was going to explode like this."

Gray, now board chairman, said he'd been skeptical at first of Midgette's proposition.

"A lot of people have approached me with things like this, so when Carroll came by ... I didn't pay him much mind," he said. "But my wife thought he had a good product. He came back again, and we were riding in my truck. We were looking at the crops, and they didn't look too good. And he said, 'Trust me.'"

Midgette said the business had not rounded the financial corner yet, but he expects it to in about three months.

Gray said no matter what happened, he wouldn't give up his hogs.

"I enjoy hogs, I really do," he said. "I've been a farmer all my life."

DENTAL HEALTH UPDATE

Philip O. Warlick D.D.S.

CAN BLEEDING GUMS BE SERIOUS

QUESTION: I notice blood stain on my toothbrush in the morning and when I bite into an apple. It must be a symptom of bleeding gums. Can bleeding gums be serious?

ANSWER: By serious, you can be sure that it's not in the same category as being rushed to the hospital in an ambulance. However, as far as your dental health is concerned, bleeding gums are unhealthy gums and it should alert you that more serious problems lie ahead if the condition is left untreated. It is the first sympton of gum disease which can eventually lead to periodontal disease. This is the ongoing destruction of the bone support of your teeth and is the major cause of tooth loss in adults.

By ERMA BOMBECK

They aren't off the assembly line yet, but already men are beginning to salivate over the new cars coming out next fall. They're already lusting for Astro vans, Aerostars and Prairies.

For over 30 years, I've been waiting for the coming of the Momobile, a car that would transport children and mothers in some kind of comfort. It's been etched in the drawing board of my mind for so long I can close my eyes and see it.

It would be a two-story car, designed along the lines of a Boeing 747. The driver would sit on the second level in a soundproof, carpeted area behind a locked door. There would be a small bar, library, phone and bunk bed for long traffic lights and those times at the school when practice ran late.

The first level would be enclosed entirely by glass louvres that opened out into 43 separate windows. Children would sit on carpeted risers so there would be no seats to kick. The windows would be controlled by a computer near the driver's seat. If arguments ensued, the driver could open the windows, causing extreme bug damage to the teeth and for a moment take their breath away.

A large hole in the center of the floor would have the suction of a major tornado. As soon as something was airborne (boxes, balls, food, a child, candy wrappers, etc.) the item would be sucked into the hole, thus keeping the area clean.

For those warm, wonderful moments when mothers are teaching their teen-agers how to drive, I visualize the Turbo Chickenette. It's a compact car with sensor lights that set off an alarm whenever a car comes within three feet of it. The interior is divided into two sections. The driver's side has a steering wheel, brake and accelerator. The passenger side is a small chapel, complete with kneeler and religious appointments. There is an industrial-strength floor and an imaginary brake. When the door is shut, a cassette is activated of a Baptist choir singing, "When the Roll Is Called Up Yonder I'll Be There." The car splits in half and runs independently when a siren is heard.

In my mind, I'm working on another car design for women whose kids borrow theirs because their father "works" and needs his. I call it the Cinderella SL 340. During the day when the mother uses the car, it's your basic sports model with velour seats, matching shag carpeting, clean ashtrays and a litter bag hanging from the radio knob.

When it is driven by anyone to whom you have given birth, on the stroke of midnight the radio dials become locked, a light goes on that reads "BUY GAS," and the driver is given 30 minutes to get home before it turns into a tank.

I've got a lot of great ideas on a camper that would house four children and two adults on a family vacation, but the ejection seats need work.

Street walls 'racy'

DETROIT (AP) — The barrier wall system, designed originally for Grand Prix auto racing in 1982, is now being used in highway construction. Grand Prix races, such as the famous runs at Monaco and Detroit, stress tight turns on city streets. Their barrier wall system, because of its mobility, proved more efficient than steel guard rails. The system is now being used on interstate highways during construction.

Car 'freebies' available

Copley News Service

There's one thing that's almost certain: Your car is a major investment. That could be called the bad news. The good news is that you can send away for a few freebies that will make that car become a little less burdensome.

Auto tune-ups and your car's several filter systems add up to a great deal of mechanical information for the average, non-mechanically inclined individual — which is a nice way of saying that some of us don't know our crankcases from our vapor canisters.

Lucky for us there's Car Care Carl. This nifty little cartoon character takes us through the bare essentials of auto knowledge. Two fold-out brochures featuring Car Care Carl make up this freebie: How to Keep Your Car in Tune and Keep An Eye on Your Car's Filters.

For copies, send a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for each pamphlet wanted, asking for "Keep an Eye on Your Filters" or "How to Keep Your Car in Tune", to Car Care Council — Filters or Car Care Council — Tune-ups, 600 Renaissance Center, Detroit, MI 48243.

Another freebie is a short how-to on auto maintenance, designed to help you keep your auto investment healthy. It's a reprint of an article originally published in Freebies Magazine.

For a copy, send a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope, asking for "Auto Maintenance Reprint," to Freebies Magazine, P.O. Box 20283-CP, Santa Barbara, CA 93120.

Booklet covers auto air bags

Copley News Service

If you run your car into a post, what's between you and impact with the steering wheel or dashboard?

This is a question the Insurance Information Institute asks. And their answer for a safer car is a large, air-filled pillow between you and your car's steel and plastic.

"Air Bags: A Matter of Life or Death" addresses this very controversial matter. The eight-page brochure tackles the objections that have been raised to including air bags as a safety requirement in all new vehicles and gives the institute's replies.

How the bags inflate (with sodium azide) is discussed also, along with their expense.

To obtain a copy of the booklet, send a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to the Insurance Information Institute, 110 William St., Department AB, New York, NY 10038 and request "Air Bags: A Matter of Life or Death."

Lifestyle policies

The policies for publication of announcements in the Lifestyle Department of The Midland Reporter-Telegram are:

Information for Sunday pages must be in our office by 5 p.m. the preceding Tuesday. For publication in a weekday paper, we must receive the information by noon two days before the information is to run. For example, an item to appear in Wednesday's paper must be received by noon Monday.

Engagement announcements must appear at least four weeks before the wedding date. Wedding stories must be submitted within five days of the event.

Engagements, weddings, anniversaries and club notices must be submitted in writing. All materials should include the name and telephone number of the person submitting them. These items appear in the Sunday paper only. The Reporter-Telegram has forms for announcements of engagements, weddings and anniversaries.

We cannot mail pictures or forms to persons within Midland. Pictures must be obtained in the Lifestyle office within one month after publication.

Portraits of the future bride and bridegroom in one photograph may be submitted with engagement announcements. Wedding photographs should be of the bride only.

Photos should be black and white, glossy finish, studio portraits. Studio color pictures may be submitted, but they may reproduce poorly. Quality reproduction cannot be assured when color prints are used.

There is no charge for publication of photographs and stories.

DEAR ABBY

Telescope studies wrong heavenly bodies

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I don't know if I'm old-fashioned or not, so please help me understand something. I live in an apartment complex that has a huge pool. Last year I had a few female friends come over and use the pool every once in a while. The problem is this: There is a window on the second story where some guy has a "high-powered" telescope that he uses to get very close-up shots of the ladies using the pool. Lady friends of mine were uncomfortable with this when they visited last year.

Question: Is there anything I can do legally to prevent this intrusion of privacy this year? (The telescope is set up and ready to go.) Am I and my friends old-fashioned or what?

To tell you the truth, you're the only one I had the guts to ask. — BUMMED IN PANORAMA CITY

DEAR BUMMED: If it were a private pool, the guy with a high-powered telescope would be invading your friends' privacy, but since the pool is public, "Where's the beef?" — if the ladies will excuse the expression.

DEAR ABBY: My wife of 44 years has Alzheimer's disease, and I have finally placed her in a nursing home where I know she is getting better care than I can give her now.

My problem is loneliness. I have many friends who say, "Come over — anytime; you're always welcome." Then they tell me how much they admire me for caring for my wife the way I did these last few years.

I don't need admiration — I need companionship. Why can't people be more specific, and say, "Come over next Sunday" or Wednesday or whatever?

Maybe it would help if you put in a plug for those who are widowed, or in a situation like mine. After all, some of your readers may find themselves alone someday. Sign me ... LONELY

DEAR LONELY: Friends who say "Come anytime" usually mean it, but if you're lonely, don't wait for friends to call you — call and invite them for a pot-luck supper, an evening of cards, coffee and dessert. (It's easy to entertain at home with so many carry-out establishments.)

I'm not talking about casual acquaintances; I mean good friends.

DEAR ABBY: This is a letter from two friends with the same problem: Our boyfriends want too much too soon. The thing is, we really like them and don't want to lose them.

If we don't do what they want us to do, they will find someone else who will.

You will probably tell us to find someone who won't want too much, but that is impossible.

Do you have any suggestions? Please print this because I'm sure other girls have the same problem. — TOO MUCH TOO SOON

DEAR TOO MUCH: The worst mistake a girl can make is to give a guy too much because she's afraid if she doesn't, somebody else will. If he wants "too much," then let the foolish girl who gives it to him have the pleasure (and the pain) of winning this dubious prize.

DEAR ABBY: Please do a good deed for the elderly. Around holiday times, I am frequently asked, "Where are you going for the holidays?"

I am not going anywhere. I have rotten children who do not invite me although I have been extremely good to them. It is embarrassing to have to stutter and lie. They have no reason to be ashamed of me. My appearance and manners are above reproach.

Please write about this in your column. It might keep people from asking that embarrassing question. It is almost as bad as saying, "If you have no place else to go, why don't you come to my house?" — HUMILIATED

(Getting married? Send for Abby's new updated, expanded booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." Send your name and address clearly printed with a check or money order for $2.50 (this includes postage) to: Abby, Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

Male shoppers buy groceries differently than women

Hearst News Service

They are model shoppers — quick-thinking, fast-moving, no-nonsense, adventuresome, big spenders. They rarely poke through egg cartons, squeeze the Charmin, manhandle the produce, whine about expiration dates or hold up checkout lines with coupons. There are those that do, of course, but surveys tell us such souls are in the minority.

While more women are bringing home the bacon, studies conducted by Cornell University and Better Homes and Gardens reveal that more men than ever are doing the grocery shopping: 82 percent of husbands do it on occasion and more than 40 percent do it regularly.

Male shoppers tend to go for prepared and upscale fare, and that is one important reason deli sections have been expanded to take in such goodies as veal cordon bleu, barbecued spare ribs and stuffed pork chops, "scratch" bakeries pump out torts and croissants, and trout swim around in tanks.

Male shoppers are not cheapskates, either.

"They avoid store or no-name brands, and go for well-known labels," adds Edward McClaughlin, a marketing professor at Cornell who specializes in supermarket issues.

Here's what else the Cornell/BH&G surveys have found about the male shoppers:

— They are 70.9 percent less likely than women to clip coupons.

— They are impulsive. If something strikes them as interesting or challenging — be it yucca or ugli — consider it sold.

— They know only two types of meat: Hamburger and sirloin steak. Seafood tends to center on lobster.

— They don't read food ads and rarely bother with shopping lists.

— They buy a lot of snacks, too. Loads of it — especially pretzels and potato chips.

— Males don't bother with nutritional labels, are quick to improvise with substitutes and aren't terribly fussy over expiration dates.

— They don't squirrel away sale items — even toothpaste and toilet paper are purchased on "as-and-when-needed basis."

— Men spend less time and money grocery shopping — an average of 17.8 minutes per visit and $24.03 vs. $28.75 — but they return more frequently, 2.4 times per week as against 2.29 for women.

Video stores cutting fees

NEW YORK (AP) — Video stores are reducing membership fees and using other methods of attracting customers, including free delivery of motion pictures and other videocassettes.

"The video store has become an adult candy store," according to Steve Savage, who is president of New Video.

"A new kind of lifestyle has evolved from the freedom that comes from being able to act like a Hollywood movie mogul in your own living room," he said.

"Market research tells us the VCR no longer is a high ticket luxury item, but is now viewed as a common household appliance," Savage added.

Some industry analysts predict more than 50 percent of American homes will have at least one VCR by 1990.

Eleanor Roosevelt award given

NEW YORK (AP) — Muriel Fox, a public relations executive, has been awarded the first NOW-NYS Eleanor Roosevelt Leadership Award for her two decades of work in civil rights and the business community.

Ms. Fox helped build and hold press attention around NOW's early issues and helped to create the NOW Legal Defense and Education fund, of which she is now chair.

NCJW head elected

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Barbara A. Mandel, a member of the National Council of Jewish Women for 36 years, was re-elected NCJW national president.

MEET MOTHERHOOD IN STYLE

Your pregnancy promises to be one of the most challenging and rewarding times of your life-and a time of important changes and adjustments in your lifestyle. But fortunately; pregnancy doesn't mean you can't look your best. At Expectation Shoppe, we've put toether a collection of maternity wear that can carry you through those exciting nine months both fashionably and economically.

For most women, building a new wardrobe that will be used for such a short time often seems an unnecessary expense, and the question arises, "Why buy maternity clothes at all?" The reasons are simple. Maternity clothes at Expectation Shoppe are designed to fit your body.

And when you look your best, you can feel your best. And at Expectation Shoppe we're not just in the business of selling clothes-we're consultants. We know how to put together a set of basics that you can mix and match throughout the stages of your pregnancy, and that won't strain your budget.

You'll find a full ranges of sportswear, exercise clothes, lingerie, and a number of unique gift items for the expectant mother at Expectation Shoppe. And we welcome the opportunity to discuss your individual needs in person.

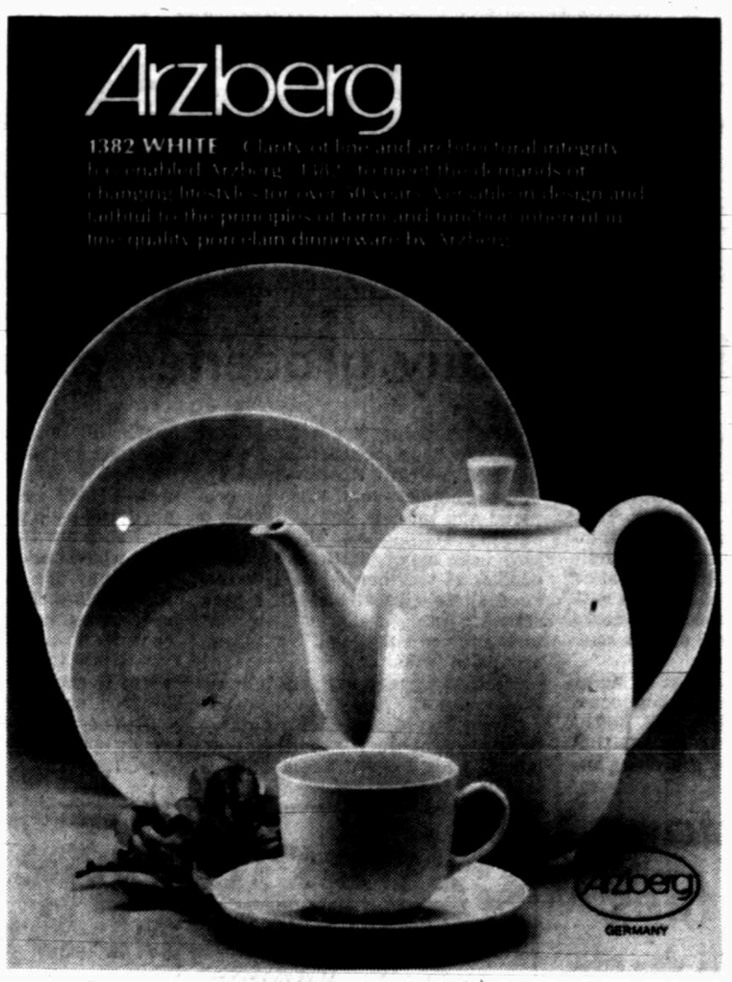

Please come see us. Expectation Shoppe wants to help you make this important time in your life even more satisfying.

Sincerely,

Midland's Thouvenel String Quartet recently returned from a three-week tour of The People's Republic of China. Accompanying them were 21 Midland residents, including Reporter-Telegram City Editor Gary Ott. This is the second of a four-Sunday series reporting on that trip.

CHINA
AND ITS PEOPLE

Text and photos by Gary Ott

It is called the People's Republic of China and somehow the name seems appropriate. No single feature stands out more when discussing, or viewing, the country than its people.

The numbers alone are awesome. Latest estimated figures put the country's population at just over one billion.

To break it down even further, one out every four people in the world resides in China, a country only slightly larger than the United States when Alaska and Hawaii are included.

By contrast, the U.S. population is approximately 235 million.

And while China boasts many huge cities — Shanghai, the largest, has an estimated population of 11 million — the bulk of the people still live in rural areas. Indeed, 80 percent of the people live in the countryside, most in thatch-room farmhouses or in newer tile-roof cottages made of clay bricks.

A drive through the small villages gives the visitor a taste of what rural life must be like. Throngs of people line the streets, many hauling produce to market with the traditional "danzi," a bamboo pole with buckets on each end.

A quick glance inside one of the huts reveals most have concrete floors, though a few are still made of dirt. An average room consists of a table and two chairs and an entire family lives in two or three rooms.

Aside from the chairs, table and beds, there usually is no other furniture.

The working day is long and hard. The peasants work six days a week, 52 weeks a year. Holidays are rare. During the winter months, when cold weather settles in, workers keep warm by adding more clothing, usually made of padded cotton.

Because of the nature of the work, clothes wear out quickly. Much patching is done.

Life in the city generally is easier than in the country, though by American standards it would still be considered primitive.

Of the approximately 406 million people in the Chinese work force, 100 million are employed in urban factories. They, like their counterparts in the country, work six days a week for anemic wages.

A common family lives in a small house or apartment, sharing a kitchen and bathing facilities with one or two other families.

As a visitor tours the city streets, a recurring sight is clothes hanging on lines from the balcony of apartments, a constant reminder that the modern conveniences Americans take for granted are distant dreams for the Chinese people.

If electricity is available, which it generally is in the cities, a home will have only one bare light bulb hanging starkly from the ceiling. It will be of no more than 40 watts to save electricity.

Water is another treasured commodity. And for good reason. Although running water is provided in some city apartments, more often than not urban dwellers must get their water from communal taps and, in smaller country villages, from street wells.

Please see CHINA, Page 2F

With a population of more than 1 billion citizens, China is a country with many children. Two youngsters, in the top right photo, participate in a dance game in a schoolyard. The two men, above, pass the time playing a card game on the curb of a city street. The danzi, a bamboo pole with with a bucket on each end, is still a popular device for hauling produce. It still is used by urban dwellers, shown in the above left photo, and rural workers, in the center photo.

China, United States have similarities, differences

EDITOR'S NOTE: During his three-week stay in China, Reporter-Telegram City Editor Gary Ott kept a journal of daily activities there. What follows are excerpts from that diary, tentatively entitled "Rambling Thoughts From a Stranger in a Strange Land, Part II."

Sunday, March 23, 11:30 p.m.:

Today I fell in love. It happened in a small mountain village between Chongqing and Dazo, where our group was headed by bus to visit some Buddhist statues and carvings. We made a brief pit stop where the locals offered us cups of tea.

I graciously declined and headed for the streets with my camera. A modest crowd had gathered to stare in disbelief at the weird-looking foreign invaders. Among them were two beautiful little girls, neither of whom could have been more than 12 years of age.

They immediately became my favorites and, quite frankly, the feeling seemed mutual. I pointed my camera at them and they giggled with delight, jumping up and down and each trying to hide behind the other. I chased them briefly and they shrieked with laughter, ducking behind the many dilapidated objects that dotted the street.

When it was time for our group to leave the two girls chased after our bus, waving and laughing as I held my head out the window and did the same.

Once in Dazo we viewed the Buddhist structures. They were very impressive. One in particular caught my attention.

It depicted what hell would be like and what types of people were destined to end up there. Drinkers were high on the list. According to the interpretations of the carvings, people who drink will have horrible things happen to them, including having their legs cut off at the knees. This is so they won't be able to go to bars and other drinking establishments to engage in the dreadful sin.

Several members of our group tossed out tasteless jokes about the exhibit, but I merely fired up another Marlboro and made a mental note to never become a Buddhist.

Monday, March 24, 11:10 p.m.:

We're back in Chongqing and tonight several in our group attended a Chinese opera. The crowd consisted primarily of older persons. I was later told it was because traditional Chinese language is used in the operas and young people don't understand the meaning of the words.

Gary Ott

Neither did I, of course, but the acting and elaborate costumes were fascinating.

One minor problem did come up, however. Older Chinese people have the rather distasteful habit of spitting continuously. As the actors would be approaching a high point in the performance, someone behind you might well choose that precise moment to hocker up and cut loose with a big juicy one, splattering it noisily against the concrete floor. I giggled throughout the evening. It was either that or become nauseated.

Tuesday, March 25, 10:40 p.m.:

We now have boarded a boat for a three-day cruise down the Yangtze River, the largest and most picturesque in China.

For the first time on this tour I have a roommate. The development was unexpected, but so far it has caused no problems. He is a bureaucrat with the transportation department in Washington who is traveling with another tourist group, consisting primarily of senior citizens from the Northeast.

This is his seventh trip to China since 1981 and he claims to speak a fair amount of Chinese. However, everytime I've heard him try to communicate, the people had no idea what he was talking about.

It is sort of sad to witness his obvious embarrassment.

Wednesday, March 26, 11:30 p.m.:

Today was a highlight of the trip in my opinion. We switched ships, going from our large fancy one to a much smaller canoe-like boat. We then spent several hours cruising through magnificent gorges. The scenery was breath-taking. We all ran out of descriptive adjectives and ended up repeating words like "gorgeous," "incredible," "awesome," and "My God, look at that." We finally shut up and just stared.

Later, we arrived at a small river village where the people had prepared a seven-course meal for us. They waited on us hand and foot. It is going be difficult adjusting to life in the United States where you are just another body. Here we are treated as something special. I like that.

It was particularly true in that village because I was told our group was only the second batch of Americans to have ever been there. The people lined the river and waved to us as we passed. Frankly, I'm enjoying this new-found celebrity status. I was meant to be a star.

Sunday, March 30, 12:05 a.m.:

We have just arrived at Jingling Hotel in Nanjing where we will be spending the next three days. It is our first luxurious hotel on the tour. It is a massive structure with many American features. Despite my affinity for old, rustic surroundings, I think I'm going to enjoy this change of pace. For example, I can flush my commode without flooding the bathroom.

In China, one learns to be grateful for small things.

Six hours later:

I have just returned from an afternoon of sightseeing, spending the past hour or so in the bar on the 36th floor of the hotel. It revolves and you can sit at your table and look out on the city, seeing it from various angles.

I was there with seven or eight other members of our group but they soon left, leaving me to daydream about past friends and future expectations.

As I gazed out on the city I thought to myself that I could easily be in New York, San Francisco, Boston or any other American city with a distinct personality. Not an Atlanta, Kansas City, Phoenix or some other clone of Dallas.

My free-wheeling thoughts were interupted momentarily when a group of Chinese soldiers, dressed in green uniforms with red stripes on the collars, entered the room. Two of them were holding hands. I arched an eyebrow, but was later told such behavior is normal and nothing unusual should be read into their actions.

Maybe so, but somehow I can't see Gen. Patton tolerating such things.

CHINA

But despite the hardships and primitive living conditions, the people, both in the cities and the countryside, appear to be reasonably happy.

Two reasons probably help explain this to Americans.

1) They know nothing better.

2) Things seem to be improving.

For whatever reason, though, the people seem content.

They also share certain characteristics with Americans.

For example, rural residents seem friendlier while urban dwellers are more hurried and take the sight of a busload of touring Americans in stride.

The latter is not the case with rural citizens. The mere arrival of a bus containing 25 Americans is cause for celebration. The people crowd the dirt streets just to catch a glimpse of the foreigners.

It is a happening. Small children chase the bus, waving and shouting Chinese adulations. Bright smiles dominate the faces. The reception makes visitors feel as though they are celebrities. Rock stars. Sports heroes. Someone, who for whatever reason, as some stake to claim.

Yet, the scene might not be that different from one involving a small West Texas community suddenly finding itself the host of a worldwide celebrity such as Muhammad Ali.

It would be an event, something everyone in town, whether or not they liked or respected the person, would want to be a part of.

Such is the case with rural China. Curiosity runs high.

Urban residents, like their counterparts around the world, are more cynical. They are more worldly and less easily impressed. The sight of visiting foreigners, while not an everyday occurrance, is not all that unusual, either. It is a happening that is becoming more and more commonplace, even in a closed society such as China.

As this exposure continues — and it has been ongoing since 1979 — the Westernization of urban China becomes more apparent. A typical big-city Chinese resident, particularly a young person, probably doesn't differ all that much from those in any other country, especially in appearance. Blue jeans, sometimes designer brands, are popular. Open-collar sports shirts and spiked boots are increasingly common.

And since English is taught in the schools, it is not unusual for young people to stop an American on the street and engage him in intense conversation.

The people are inquisitive. They ask probing questions, seeking out knowledge on the United States. They want to know about lifestyles here, how the government operates and how Americans view China.

It is almost as though they don't want to hear anything negative about the U.S. When one 26-year-old man in Shanghai was told life in America would be a major adjustment for him because of the fast-paced, sometimes uncaring attitude of Americans, he replied, "Our people need to speed up the changes going on here now. It is moving too slowly. We need to learn from you Americans."

Kyoto founded by Japanese imperial court

Copley News Service

In A.D. 710 the imperial court moved to the new city of Nara, Japan's first permanent capital and urban center, but it left there in 784 to escape Buddhist political influence. Kyoto ("Capital of Peace and Tranquillity") was established by the imperial court in 794.

Indian rickshaw coolies continue to pull others' weight

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

CALCUTTA, India — Nearly all are barefoot as they pull their rickshaws over the hot, rutted asphalt, sometimes at a gentle trot. Years of treading the streets have made the soles of their feet as tough as leather.

Rickshaw coolies are as much a part of the Calcutta street scene as ever, but most are young.

A few years of such toil and they are physically spent, too weak and usually too ill to continue pulling people miles at a time through the streets of the Bengali capital.

About 18,000 rickshaw coolies currently offer their services, according to authorities in this city of 10 million.

Only about a third are licensed. The rest work illegally, occasionally to be arrested and released after paying small fines or, more likely, baksheesh.

Nearly all rickshaw wallahs, as they are known, come from neighboring Bihar state, one of the poorest and most backward on the Indian sub-continent.

Mostly they are outcasts, rejects of Indian society unable to find work on the land. In Calcutta, an overcrowded eastern port where taxis are scarce, they find a tolerable way of life.

A strong coolie can earn the equivalent of up to $5 on an average day — a relatively good wage.

But the hard work — trips of 20 miles are frequent — can be appreciated only by walking in temperatures of 104 degrees Fahrenheit in 100 percent humidity.

The Communist government of West Bengal and the Calcutta city administration has long wanted to be rid of the wallahs.

"People should not be borne by people," runs one argument against the coolies. Another is that they are so slow they cause traffic jams.

Coolies have already been banned from some city areas. However, a total ban has been resisted so far by the coolies, who have formed a militant trade union.

It was with the union's help that the rickshaw wallahs have raised their rates. The lack of taxis means they have a monopoly enabling them to fix their own prices.

Following bicycle safety rules makes trip pleasant

NEW YORK (AP) — Bicycling is a great way to spend the summer, but only if important safety rules are observed, says Karen Bloom, an official of American Youth Hostels, an outdoor recreational and educational travel organization.

"Bicycling is an out-of-doors adventure, seeing the country, enjoying nature, camping and meeting new people," says Ms. Bloom, travel director of the Metropolitan New York Council-AYH. "It is an opportunity to travel from place to place learning about the world and its people."

To help ensure a trouble-free trip, she offers these safety tips to teens planning a tour within a group such as AYH or on their own:

— A well-made, hard-shell, lightweight helmet should be worn at all times. Studies show that 80 percent of all bicycle accidents are injuries to the head.

— Sunglasses cut down on glare, improving visibility, lessening fatigue and keeping road dust out of the eyes.

— Riding gloves made especially for cycling relieve the constant pressure of the handlebars, which sometimes causes a slight numbness in the hands. In addition, they prevent scrapes and abrasions in the event of a fall.

— Reflective or highly visible clothing is an important safety feature and reflectors should always be attached to the bike.

— Rules of the road are the same for bicycles as they are for cars and should be followed: obey all traffic signs and regulations; keep to the right; use hand signals at all times; don't tailgate other cyclists within your group.

AYH, which urges that bicycles be checked every morning before the ride begins, has developed this "two-minute bike check":

— Lean on your handlebars to make sure you cannot twist them.

— Check brake shoes and brake nuts.

— Check wheel axles for tightness.

— Pinch tires for air and shake rims for tightness.

— Spin wheel for alignment and inspect tires. Inspect tires to make sure they spin freely.

— Check seat post. Rock seat to make sure you cannot twist it loose.

— Check chain tension.

— Squeeze brakes as hard as possible and check that they work.

— Bounce bike to check for rattles and loose equipment.

In addition, Ms. Bloom suggests the following general guidelines to be used whenever on a bike — whether a three-week trip or a ride around the block:

— Always ride with both hands on the handlebars.

— Never grab another moving vehicle while riding.

— Ride under control at all times and adjust speed to the traffic conditions.

— Do not ride barefoot.

— When you stop, make sure you and the other members within your group are well off the road.

Luxembourg hotels booked for Pope's visit

By 'GENE BURKE
Copley News Service

TRAVEL ADVISORY: LUXEMBOURG — The State Department advises that due to a visit by Pope John Paul II to Luxembourg, hotels will be fully booked from May 15-18. Anyone planning a visit during this period is advised to obtain confirmed hotel reservations well in advance.

Q. How does one obtain information about travel to East Germany?

A. Contact the Embassy of the German Democratic Republic, 1717 Massachusetts Ave. N.W., Washington, D.C. 20036.

Q. My passport expires soon. What must I do to renew it before it expires?

A. You may apply for a new passport at any time either before or after your present one expires. If you are planning to travel abroad this summer, I urge that you file for a new passport as soon as possible. This is the busy travel season, and it may take three to four weeks to send your passport after the application is received by a passport agency.

Q. I find there is no record of my birth or baptism. How can I obtain a passport without a record of my birth?

A. Secondary evidence of birth may be submitted when you file. A notice from the State Registrar stating that no birth record exists should be submitted accompanied by the best secondary evidence possible. This evidence may consist of a hospital birth record, affidavits of people having personal knowledge of the facts of your birth — preferably a relative — or other documentary evidence such as early census, school or family Bible records. A personal knowledge affidavit should be supported by at least one public record reflecting your birth in the United States.

If you wish personalized information about passport requirements, send your questions to 'Gene Burke, c/o Passport Agency, 11000 Wilshire Blvd., Room 13100, Los Angeles, Calif. 90024.

Burke is consultant to the assistant secretary for consular affairs at the State Department.

TABLE DISCUSSION

Instead of traditional end tables, consider placing an elongated table for bench beside a sofa or couch. The space directly next to the sofa can hold a lamp, ashtray and so on. The extension of the surface can be used for audio equipment, displaying art objects, plants, books, and magazines. The surface will give the sofa-plus-table setting a built-in continuous look. The surface can be a simple bench or table. Another practical end table is a low chest or trunk which can provide hidden storage as well. A favorite Victorian treatment that works quite well in contemporary settings is to cover an inexpensive table with fabric down to the floor.

Our staff will work with you in decoratong your home the way you want. Complete custom window treatments are handled at WINDOW DECOR, 30 West Industrial Loop, 685-0875. We also have wall coverings, upholstery material and drapery hardware. Hours: 8am-4:30pm Mon. thru Fri.

HINT:

To save space beside a sofa, consider using a nest of tables.

CHINA
AND ITS PEOPLE

Text and photos by Gary Ott

The people of China come in all shapes, sizes and ages. A grandmother cares for her grandchild, top right photo, and an elderly woman smiles brightly for a visiting photographer, top left. Children in China today are dressed in everything from uniforms to frilly aprons. Others just seem to get caught going the wrong way in heavy pedestrian traffic.

Madame Fang Fei

A former guerrilla's story

Her business card reads:

"Fang Fei. Vice-president of The Chinese People's Association for Friendship with Foreign Countries, Jiangsu branch."

It could say, "And former guerilla."

That addition in itself would not be all that unusual, especially in China where wars and revolution are a vital part of history.

But when the person involved is a woman in her 70s and the freedom for which she was fighting was liberation from the American-backed Chiang Kai Shek forces in the 1940s, then her story takes on added interest.

"There were many women like me" fighting in the revolution, she said in broken English and with the aid of a translator. "I actually started fighting before the revolution. It was in the '30s in the War of Resistance against Japan."

And for the next 10 years she fought, guerrilla-style. Her specialty was working underground in the small villages northwest of Shanghai. She organized the peasants and later, after the Japanese had been defeated, she used those contacts to assist Mao Tse-tung's communist revolution.

Mao and Chiang Kai Shek, who had been fighting for control of the country prior to the war with Japan, united for that brief period but then resumed their struggle shortly thereafter.

"I realized early that Chiang Kai Shek was not the one to lead our country," she said. "I had read Mao and liked what he said.

"His idea was to organize the peasants, educate them as much as possible, and have them lead the revolution. The enemy forces control the cities and we were strong in the countryside. We would attack at night, often using the surprise element," she said.

The close ties established with peasants would later assist many revolutionary leaders, particularly those who would be termed "intellectuals."

Between 1966 and 1976 China suffered through a repressive period known as the "Cultural Revolution." During that time the more radical members of the communist party seized control of the government and had determined that social classes were forming and that intellectuals were climbing to the top.

The Cultural Revolution ended that. The educated, including Madame Fang, were removed from their jobs and shipped to farms where they performed menial jobs side-by-side with the peasants.

Good friends come in handy at a time like that.

"The peasants were very kind to me," she said. "They remembered me from my fighting days."

With privately-owned vehicles virtually non-existent, the Chinese rely on other modes of transportation. In Shanghai alone, an estimated 5 million bicycles are used. In rural areas, workers haul their produce the best way they can, usually loading it on flat-bed trailers, center right photo.

Is inflation just a sleeping lion?

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans have enjoyed a period of relative calm on the inflation front since 1982. But that three-year lull could be coming to an end, some analysts are warning.

These economists see worrisome signs that the factors that converged to provide relief from double-digit inflation rates may now be turning against the United States.

If that occurs, the country could have more to worry about than rapidly rising prices. A return of inflation is often the harbinger of the beginning of a recession.

The concerns about rising inflation are not universally held, but a growing minority of economists are beginning to raise alarms.

"I think the inflation rate will double in the next year, hitting 8 percent by the end of 1986. This will doom the recovery and open up the likelihood of a recession some time in 1986," said Lawrence A. Kudlow, formerly chief economist of the Reagan administration's Office of Management and Budget.

THE CONGRESSIONAL Joint Economic Committee issued a similar warning last week, saying "we face the possibility of significant upward pressure on prices at some point in 1986 or possibly even before."

Much of the concern stems from the fact that the progress against inflation has been built on temporary factors that are not expected to last.

The Joint Economic Committee estimates that last year's 4 percent rise in consumer prices would have been a steeper 5.5 percent if it had not been for the strong value of the dollar.

From 1980 to the beginning of this year, the dollar rose 53 percent in value against other world currencies. This surge lowered the price of some imported goods by as much as 35 percent. At the same time, domestic manufacturers have faced pressure to hold the line on their own price increases or risk losing even more market share to imports.

But the dollar has already dropped substantially from the peaks it reached in February and further declines, especially if they are rapid, could boost the U.S. inflation rate substantially.

OIL PRICES have also been falling, giving consumers the benefit of lower prices on gasoline and home heating oil plus a host of products made with petroleum. But gasoline prices rose a sharp 3.6 percent last month, enough to propel overall consumer prices to their fastest monthly gain in more than a year.

While many analysts believe the spurt in gasoline prices is temporary, others are predicting that oil prices will begin rising again as world demand picks up in coming months.

In further bad news, the government reported last week that the productivity of American workers fell 1.2 percent in the first three months of this year while unit labor costs, which reflect changes in productivity and wages, shot up by 7.3 percent, the biggest increase in almost three years.

Productivity gains, which lower the cost of producing an item, are needed to keep inflation from heating up.

"These types of numbers are simply not enough to keep the wolves of inflation away from the door," said Michael Evans, head of his own forecasting firm, who predicted that inflation would rise to a rate of 6 percent next year. "That will be enough to bring on a recession," he said.

THE REAGAN administration, which counts the taming of inflation as one of its biggest achievements, is not expressing alarm at the latest signals, pointing to other numbers which show that the underlying inflation rate remains low.

But some critics say the government's complacency about a threatened return of inflation is one of the problems.

"No one in Washington is worried about fighting inflation anymore," said Kudlow, who is now head of a private economic consulting firm. "Economic policy priorities are all geared to fighting unemployment, not inflation."

Critics point out that last year's 4 percent inflation rate is more than double the rate that prevailed through most of the 1950s and 1960s. With all the positive forces, some wonder why inflation has not fallen more.

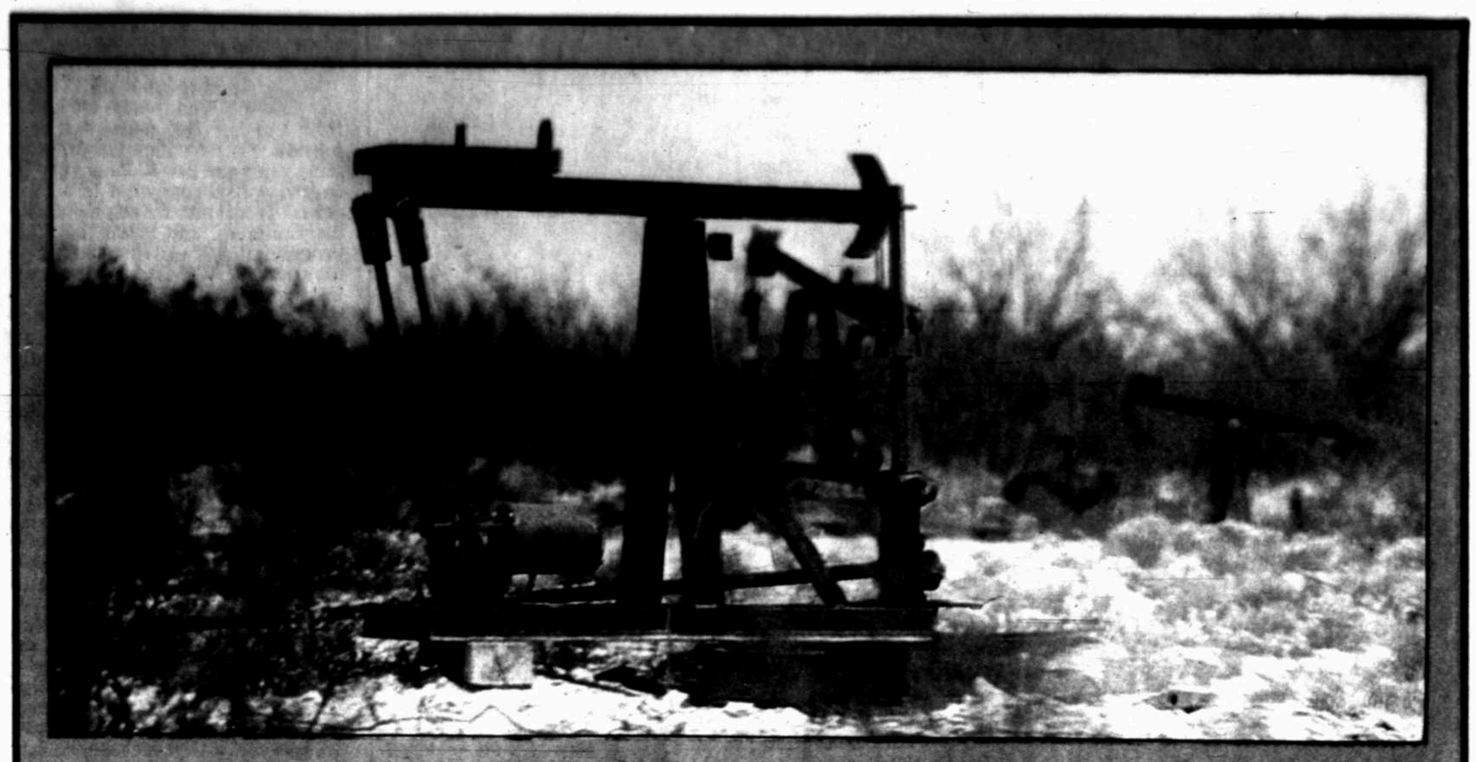

Herbert Stein, chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers under President Nixon, blamed high inflation during the 1970s as a key impediment to reducing inflation now.

"With the inflationary expectations that were built into the wage process, it is surprising that we have been able to reduce inflation this fast," he said. "But a 4 percent inflation rate is still not a victory. It is a rate that should bother people."

NOT ALL ECONOMISTS believe inflation will become a problem this year.

Donald Ratajczak, director of the economic forecasting project at Georgia State University, said he was still forecasting an inflation rate of 4 percent this year, but he saw inflation accelerating to a 5.2 percent pace next year.

"The dollar, productivity and wages are all moving in directions that are not beneficial, but fortunately they are moving relatively slowly," he said.

Basin's oldest oil becomes commercial

By JOHN PAUL PITTS
Business-Oil Editor

The oldest oil discovery in West Texas may have finally become commercial.

Completely over shadowed by Santa Rita No.1, few remember that the initial quest for oil in West Texas began, not in Mitchell County or Reagan County, but in Reeves County, nine miles north of Toyah. It was here that the smell of oil first caused excitement to swell in the bosoms of entrepreneur wildcatters and land developers.

Although the shallow oil play, which was kicked off just after Spindletop, attracted much attention it never proved commercial and was abandoned about 1928 after numerous shallow and deep tests, including the digging of one open pit oil well.

Now, after 57 years of almost total neglect and abandonment, VC Management, an Odessa firm, has launched a bold plan that could include the drilling of over 1,700 wells on six remote sections in and around the old Toyah field, now called the Pamela field.

Discovery of oil in the field was in 1898 or 1903 according to differing accounts. Some oldtimers say that the location of the field, 9 miles north of the present town of Toyah, was intended as the original townsite of Toyah, and that Chinese coolies hand digging a well encountered oil at 90 feet, forcing the railroad to redirect its route 15 miles to the south where Toyah now stands.

"We are inclined to believe the story of the oldtimers," said Curtis Yonts, consultant to VC Management. "An old Chinese yen was found near the well when we were doing some work on it."

The account of record, however, is in Volume I of Samuel D. Myers book, "Permian Basin." Myers says the Toyah oil discovery was encountered in a water well being drilled by J.D. Leatherman in 1903. This report initiated a flurry of drilling in the vicinity of the Leatherman discovery, but none of the wells, drilled from 70-340 feet, ever produced over two barrels per day.

Not much has changed according to VC Management which has drilled 62 wells to date and is producing 38 at an average rate of two barrels per day per well from wells 197 ft. deep.

How oil came to be trapped at such a shallow depth is also topic for speculation, but the trapping mechanism appears to be a thick section of clay on top, with limestone on the bottom and faults to either side, according to the firm.

South Texas residents oppose nuclear plant

BAY CITY, Texas (AP) — Retired farmer A.H. Johnson says he doesn't oppose nuclear energy, he just doesn't want it being produced almost in his back yard.

Johnson, of Markham, Texas, says he lives "exactly 10 miles downwind" of the South Texas Nuclear Project under construction near Bay City, 90 miles southwest of Houston.

"I'm in favor of it being somewhere besides Matagorda County," Johnson said. "This pile of waste material down there will be an added threat to the safety of the county."

Johnson was one of about a dozen citizens who commented on the project Thursday in a town meeting with representatives of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission.

While some citizens said they were concerned about hazards the plant might pose to the area, most spoke favorably of the $5.5 billion project.

"I have been advocating nuclear energy since the early '50s," said Stanley Rosenthal, a Bay City geologist who lives about five miles from the plant.

Rosenthal said that whenever opponents of nuclear power want to demonstrate effects of nuclear energy, they show films of atomic bombings.

"Any time they show a nuke plant, that's what they do. They show a film of this bomb going off," Rosenthal said. "We need to get rid of these people that only predict gloom and doom."

More hard times ahead for U.S. steel industry

WASHINGTON (AP) — During the next decade, the nation's steel industry faces continued retrenchment, problems with imports and costly restructuring as it struggles to compete in world markets, a new study says.

Even in a scenario that includes effective import controls and favorable exchange rates, the so-called integrated steel mills that perform a broad range of production and manufacturing functions would continue to close as producers strive to become more efficient, said the 158-page report of a panel of steel industry experts.

The report, prepared under the auspices of the National Academy of Engineering for release today, said that if the steel industry is to shake off its financial woes, "the most efficient operations must be saved, clearly inefficient operations should be closed, and mixed (integrated) facilities must be encouraged to modernize and restructure themselves."

But some factors necessary for revitalization are beyond the industry's control, said the report, titled, "The Competitive Status of the U.S. Steel Industry." Chief among these factors are the strength of the U.S. dollar and effective domestic trade law enforcement and legislation.

Problems with imports, it said, are likely to get worse as developing countries add new capacity. The study mentioned but did not evaluate President Reagan's program, initiated last year, of seeking voluntary restraint agreements with major exporters to reduce the foreign share of the U.S. steel market from 25 percent to 18.5 percent.

The difficulty in competing with foreign steelmakers stems not from a lack of technical knowledge, but from subsidization of foreign producers by their governments and a lack of capital by American firms to make use of known technology, the report said.

Small business rates some of the glamor

By JOHN PAUL PITTS
Business-Oil Editor

Judging from its rapidly changing image, it appears the business profession has finally become fashionable in America.

While business may once have been viewed as a comfortable but glamorless career for an army of accountant-types and corporate bureaucrats, who learned to say "yes" a lot, appreciate big titles and little perks, and make few waves until pension time, it is no longer so. Nor is business any longer considered a titan-begats-scion closed circuit affair.

Today business is viewed as a dynamic, vital, and exciting career, where brains, skill and talent are appreciated more than connections — a career where the desire to be a self-made man or woman can be realized. Moreover, it is now viewed as much a glamor career as as politics, acting, journalism, law or any one of a dozen other professions which once ranked ahead of business in the glamor department. Corporate heads are no longer obscure, semi-reclusive individuals who flit about quietly in hombergs and limos. In fact some of these movers and shakers in the business world have now reached celebrity status in the manner of Lee Iacocca, Ted Turner, Boone T. Pickens and others, whose names have become household words. It is little wonder that the nation's business schools are packed and more and more young people are seeking a career in business.

Accompaning this new found appreciation for the business world has been a virtual explosion of business news, with a proliferation of business publications, expanded business news coverage in newspapers and on TV.

Most all of this news, however, still revolves around the large corporations, or the so-called movers and shakers. Still the unsung hero of the business world is small business.

This week, however, Midland will join the nation in saluting the small businesses of America, as Small Business Week is observed. Throughout the nation mayors and county supervisors will join President Ronald Reagan in signing proclamations proclaiming small business the cornorstone of free enterprise — as did Midland Mayor Thane Akins. They will be right on target.

According to a packet of information provided by the Midland Chamber Small Business Council, approximately 98 percent of the 14.2 million non-farm businesses in America fall into the small business classification.

Further, small businesses employ 48 percent of the private work force, contribute 42 percent of all sales in the country, and are responsible for 38 percent of the gross national product.

Last year 650,000 new small businesses were started, 50,000 more than the previous record year, creating new jobs. Small business typically plays a moderating role upon employment during recessionary times. While big business was trimming its payroll by 1.7 million employees during the downturn of 1981-82, small business was adding 2.65 million new jobs. Also, jobs generated by small businesses are more likely to be filled by younger workers, older workers and women. Studies also show that 67 percent of initial job opportunities are provided by small business, indicating that small business is responsible for the initial on-the-job training in basic skills.

Another great asset small businesses bring to the economy is flexibility. A Small Business Administration study indicates that small firms are relatively quick to move from slow-growing industries into new and emerging industries. It is this flexibility that provides a high national productivity and makes America competitive internationally.

Couple these attributes to the innovation factor and there emerges the picture of a vital force. Another SBA study reports that innovation among small business workers is significantly higher than among workers in large businesses, with small firms producing 2.5 more innovations than larger firms, relative to the number of employees.

More than half of all new products developed since World War II have been the result of a small business. And, in the energy industry, almost every major new innovation including air conditioning, gasoline engines, electric lights and petroleum cracking were developed by small business.

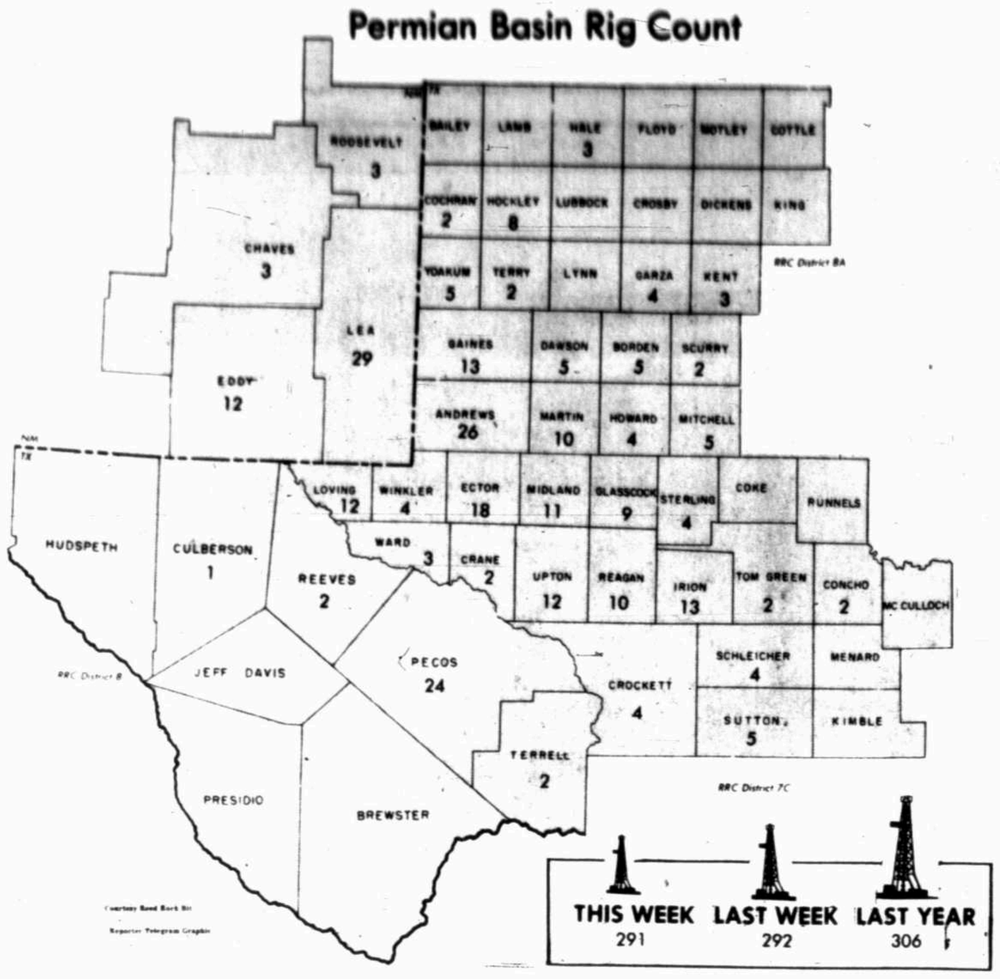

With such a track record, it is no wonder that small business deserves a week all of its own, and proclamations are signed all across America.

If big business has overshadowed small business in the quest for glamor and excitement, maybe it should not be so one-sided.

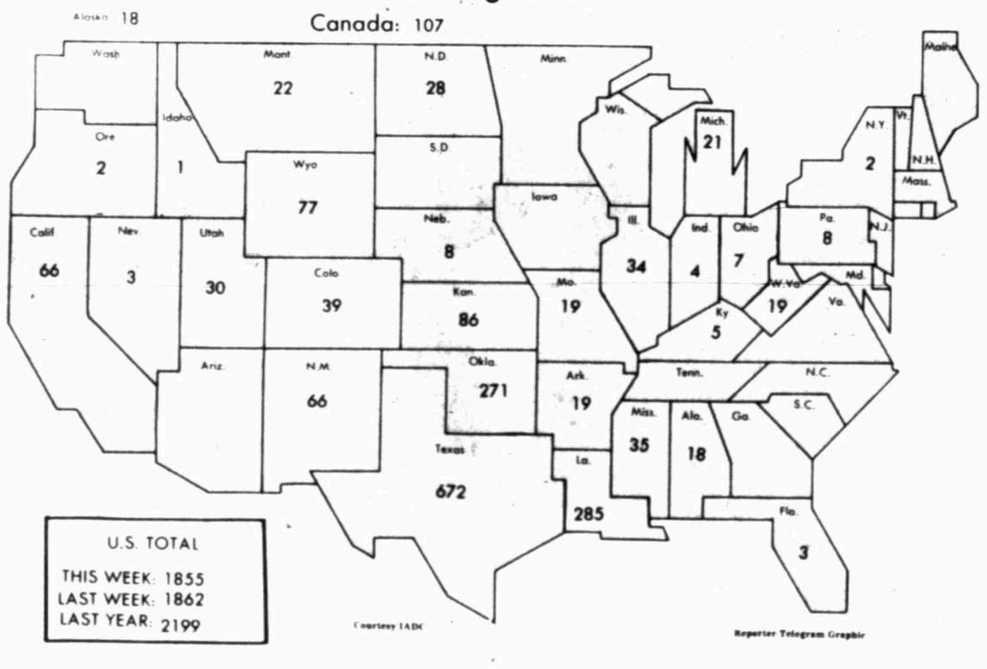

Small business would seem to be a field with unlimited glamor, excitement and dynamics, and the young person inclined to a career in business would not go wrong thinking about starting his own business or joining a small firm.

Permian Basin Rig Count

U.S. Rig Count

Permian, U.S. counts dip lower

Both the Permian Basin and the U.S. rig counts slipped slower this week. In the Permian Basin, Midland County added a rig, raising the total to 11 this week. Ector County added two rigs, putting a total of 18 rigs to work. Three rigs shut down in Andrews County, leaving 26 at work within county lines. Glasscock County added one rig for a total of 9 rigs this week.

Pecos County added 9 rigs to the count this week, putting 24 to work. Lea County, New Mexico, the most active county in the Basin, held steady at 29 rigs a second week. Both Coke and Lubbock counties were left with no activity this week.

For the week, the count is 291. A week ago the count was 292. A year ago the count was 306.

The state of Texas continues to lose rigs, dropping 13 this week, for a count of 672. New Mexico held steady a second week with 66 rigs. Five rigs shut down in Oklahoma, leaving 271 working. Louisiana added six rigs, raising the count to 285.

Mississippi added five rigs to the count, putting 35 to work in the state. Arkansas shut down five rigs, dropping to 19.Canada added three rigs, for a total of 107.

For the week, the count is 1,855. A week ago the count was 1,862. A year ago the count was 2,199.

San Antonio company develops harmless, smokeless cigarette

It's not the real thing

By SHEILA ALLEE
Associated Press Writer

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Gerald Mazur isn't blowing smoke when he talks about his company's product — a smokeless cigarette.

It's the latest thing in the tobacco industry — guaranteed to raise a few eyebrows and draw some indignation in the nonsmoking section of an airliner.

FAVOR looks like a conventional cigarette, smells like one, and smokers say it even tastes like one. But unlike your usual Marlboro, this cigarette doesn't take to a match.

Consequently, there are no ashes, no ashtrays, no cigarette stubs and no smoke to raise the ire of nonsmokers.

"We make no health claims and we make no cessation claims," Mazur said, one of the original founders of Datapoint Corp. "It's just a viable alternative to tobacco pleasure."

The product began flavor and aroma consumer testing this past week and is scheduled to go on the market in September.

Mazur, chairman and chief executive officer of Advanced Tobacco Products, Inc., says the genius behind the product is Phil Ray, president and chief of technology for the firm.

A mad-scientist type, Ray said he had been a three-pack-a-day smoker for years.

"It got to be less and less popular. I had to ride in the back of an airplane," he said.

So he went to work and developed the smokeless cigarette, a pencil-thick cylinder filled with a fibrous substance laced with a pure nicotine solution. The cigarette also is treated with special flavors and aromas — like vanilla, cocoa and licorice that make it more authentic to the senses.

Ray frequents a laboratory where there are "Thank You For Smoking" signs, a smokeless cigarette dangling from his lips.

Gerald Mazue, Chief Executive Officer of Advanced Products, holds a smokeless cigarette which his company produces. The product will go on the market in September.

He and Mazur go way back — to at least 1968, when they formed Datapoint, the computer manufacturing firm based in San Antonio.

Both eventually left Datapoint for other ventures.

In 1978, Mazur said he heard Ray had developed a smokeless cigarette.

"My first reaction was 'is he out of his mind? Whoever heard of a smokeless cigarette?'" he said.

But the invention piqued his interest enough to prevail upon Ray to sell him a small interest in the idea.

Then about two years ago, Ray approached Mazur for help in raising enough capital to produce a marketable smokeless cigarette.

The two decided to run a survey in selected cities, which found 78 percent of those asked said they would buy the product.

Armed with that assurance, the Mazur and Ray formed ATP and issued a public offering May 23, 1984, that raised $8.1 million.

The money has enabled ATP to hire the expertise Mazur and Ray said they wanted to perfect the product and to move into 40,000 square feet of office, lab and manufacturing space in a new industrial park north of San Antonio.

When the operation is in full swing, there will be two assembly lines with the capacity to produce 51 million packs of cigarettes annually.

Each pack of FAVORs contains six cigarettes that "smokers" draw on. Each one, Mazur said, contains the tobacco pleasure of five cigarettes.

"It's just like chewing gum. When it's lost its flavor, you can tell. You're just sucking air," he said.

Mazur doesn't claim to be part of the nation's competitive cigarette industry, which in 1983 did $160 billion worth of business. ATP is just making a tobacco product in the same leagues as snuff and chewing tobacco, he said, and it's subject to the same regulations as those products.

Test marketing for flavors and aromas began May 1 in Westchester County, N.Y., and FAVOR is due to go on the market in Austin in September. From there, ATP will move into the Dallas-Fort Worth area and Houston.

"We're not going to change the world. It's just an alternative," he said.

PBGC slates four courses

The Permian Basin Graduate Center will offer four courses in the PBGC Building, 106 W. Illinois, Midland.

"Programming in BASIC," Monday through Wednesday, May 13-15, from 7-10 p.m. This course will be an introduction to computer programming using the BASIC language. The course will cover: what is a "Program" programming concepts, flow diagramming, and actual hands-on programming. Ted Windecker, President, T. R. Windecker, Inc., will instruct the course. Fee is $90.

Advanced Contracts, Monday-Tuesday, May 13-14, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. and Wednesday, May 15, from 9 a.m. to 12 p.m. This course is designed for those experienced in dealing with the typical exploration and development agreements, who seek to avoid pitfalls arising in more complicated transactions, and who wish to explore more innovative approaches to contract structuring. Lewis G. Mosburg, Jr. Attorney, Oklahoma City, will instruct. Fee is $350. Qualifies for 15 CPL recertification credits.

"Clear Writing" Wednesday-Thursday, May 15-16, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Few skills contribute more to success, are more impressive and sae asmuch money as those of direct, concise writing. This workshop will provide you with these skills in such a way that you will be able to use them on the job. John Brogan, Brogan Clear-Writing Seminars, San Francisco, will instruct. Fee is $260.

"The Development of Carbonate Reservoirs," Wednesday-Thursday, May 15-16, from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. The course will cover the specific depositional, diagenetic and petrophysical traits of carbonate sediments that govern their development into reservoir rocks. Dr. Perry O. Roehl, Professor of Geology, Trinity University, will instruct. Fee is $275.

Flat tax seminar slated at UTPB

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — The Permian Basin Petroleum Association and the University of Texas of the Permian Basin Wednesday will co-sponsor a presentation on the impact of three proposed flat tax plans on the oil and gas industry.

The presentation will be made by Jon Rex Jones and Bud Jones, president and vice president respectively of governmental relations of the Independent Petroleum Association of America (IPAA). The purpose of the presentation is to help laymen, as well as petroleum professionals, understand the current proposals and their ramifications for the industry.

The presentation will be from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m in the UTPB lounge just south of the Devonian Room.

Admission is free and all interested presons are urged to attend.

Accountants to meet Tuesday

The Permian Basin Chapter of Public Accountants will hold their monthly meeting on Tuesday at the Odessa Holiday Inn Centre. Election of officers for the local chapter for the 1985-86 year will be held.

All practicing accountants, bookkeepers and tax preparers are invited to attend. Reservations for dinner should be made through Kathy Conway at 332-0466.

TRC approves oil slick cleanup

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Railroad Commission approved funds Thursday to clean up a 300-foot oil slick on the Pecos River south of McCamey.

Commission investigators reported last week that vegetation on both sides of the river, which is about 40 feet wide at the site, had been burned in an apparent attempt to clean up the spill.

The commission said a crew was being hired to gather up as much oil as possible from the river.

The cleanup was expected to cost about $2,000 and take about two days.

Unemployment tax problems corrected

AUSTIN (AP) — Problems in collecting and crediting federal unemployment taxes are being corrected after state officials complained that the Internal Revenue Service was moving too slowly, the Texas Employment Commission says.

The agency and state lawmakers had complained that the IRS was slow in crediting millions of dollars to the state's jobless account.

The cash flow is critical to Texas businesses, because the state is repaying federal loans used to pay unemployment benefits during the 1982 recession.

If the state remains in debt this November, Texas employers would face an additional tax increase, officials saiid.

Bill Grossenbacher, employment commission administrator, said the IRS has credited another $44.9 million in federal tax credits to the $29 million already accounted for. Another $45 million should be credited later this year, Grossenbacher said.

TOYAH

A cross section of the wells include a 40-foot sand section, followed by 20-30 feet of pea gravel, and then 20 feet of the gray clay over the first oil section of anhydride, followed by a five-foot skip and another 15-18 feet of anhydride oil pay on top of the 45 foot section of limestone. Artesian water is trapped below the limestone.

After a through study of the field and determining that commercial production could be achieved in the field, VC Management began to acquire leases in the field in July 1984, ending up with six sections in the vicinity of the field. Until that time nobody had controlled more than 80 acres of the shallow rights to the field.

According to Diane Beason, president VC Management, it was not that the production was unknown that kept it from being developed for 57 years, it was the fact of negative economic factors that weighed heavily against it.

"There were four or five wells in the field that could produce and some oil was bailed from them and sold," said Beason, "but they were so remote from other production and electricity that producing such a small number of wells would have been astronomical." She said it would have cost over $90,000 just to run electricity to the field.

The solution, from VC Management's studies, indicated that massive drilling on two-acre spacing would provide the volume of wells and production to make diesel generators economical. A 40 kw generator now supplies current to 38 wells at a cost of $2 per day per well. When totally developed, it is estimated that a 750 kw diesel generator could run 1,500 wells at a cost of $900 per day.

Research also concluded that costs in all areas would have to be held to an absolute minimum, using an in-house operation as much as possible. Also needed was a comprehensive drilling plan, even though the wells would only be 197 foot deep. The area has been described as a drillers nightmare, with deposits of shale and clay that swell and stick tools and drill pipe tight. There are still locations in the field where rotary drill pipe and cable tools have been cut off at ground level and left in the hole.

Beason says that after $250,000 of experimenting with different drilling procedures the firm has worked out a successful drilling program.

But even with the kinks worked-out, drilling in the swelling clays is still 45 percent of the $12,800 it costs to complete a well to the tanks. As drilling in the field continues Beason is hopeful that total completion cost will drop to $10,500 per well. The completion program now calls for 5 1/2 in. casing to 197 ft., with six joints of 2 3/8 in. tubing and a 1 1/2 in. x 4 foot, Harbison-Fisher pump on seven 3/4 in. sucker rods. To keep costs down the operation is almost totally in-house. The firm owns and operates its own drilling rig, well service unit, water truck and cementing truck. It even builds its own two-foot high pumping units from railroad steel in an Odessa welding shop, using non-oilpatch, gear reduction boxes. Flow lines are standard one-inch pipe. There are even plans on the drawing board for the firm to eventually build its own pipeline to connect with the nearest line eight miles to the north.

"This is a long term project," said Yonts, "we can't get impatient or greedy."

VC Management is now developing Phase I of the field, which is 1,000 acres in the heart of the six section proposed field. Offsets have been drilled on all four cornors of the 1,000 acres and have been successful, and 120 drilling permits have been filed with more in the process.

"We will drill 400 wells in the heart of the field, then continue with further development from there," said Yonts.

If the six sections is fully developed with 289 wells per section, as approved by the Texas Railroad Commission, he estimates it will take eight years to fully drill the field.

"It was a long time coming," said Yonts, "but I think we have finally mode the oldest oil in the Permian Basin commercial."

STEEL

"The introduction of radical new technologies will probably not be the salvation of the domestic industry over the next 20 years," the report said.

James Collins, executive vice president of the American Iron and Steel Institute, agreed with the study's conclusion that the industry must "turn out more steel with less people." But he said the report's figures appeared "dated."

"It doesn't talk about the last couple of years and cost reduction. Our productivity has gone up sharply in that time," Collins said.

Hans Mueller, a Middle Tennessee State University economics professor who sat on the panel, said, "If you define productivity as output-per-man, then it has gone up. The industry fired so many people that they cut into the marrow."

While the study cites figures and events from 1984, Mueller said the 17-member panel had not met in more than a year. Since then, "the dollar has become more powerful and that does change the competitive constellation," he said. A strong dollar makes U.S. exports more expensive and reduces their competitiveness in foreign markets.

The panel said it focused on integrated producers, since they represent the largest steel industry segment and are most affected by international competition. An integrated mill performs nearly every function in steelmaking, from processing raw materials to molding refined steel into a variety of shapes.

Economist David Tarr of the Federal Trade Commission agreed with the panel's finding that minimills, which tend to have narrower product ranges and serve more local markets, faced a more certain future than integrated mills.

"The minimills have been recapturing markets from imports in products in which they specialize. I have doubts about some of the (integrated) plants in western Pennsylvania and eastern Ohio that are older," he said.

The report said older, less efficient plants could be closed without compromising American defense requirements. "A shrunken (but more efficient) steel industry may be better able to fulfill security needs than an oversized, inefficient industry," it said.

The panel's mandate was to examine possible scenarios facing the steel industry in the future, not to recommend action. The National Academy of Engineering, which oversaw the panel, is a private organization that sponsors programs aimed at meeting national needs.

Daily newspaper circulation sets new record high

WASHINGTON (AP) — Daily newspaper circulation in the United States reached a new high of 63.3 million in 1984, according to a study released Wednesday by the American Newspaper Publishers Association.

The annual ANPA survey of the industry also reported that the total of morning and evening newspapers declined by 13 to 1,688, while the number of Sunday papers reached 783, an increase of 11.

ANPA also reported that two out of three American adults read a newspaper every day and that the average street-sale, single-copy price of a newspaper was 25 cents.

The study also said advertising volume reached a new high of $23.8 billion in 1984, an increase of 15 percent over the previous year.

Noble reveals gas discovery

ARDMORE (SWN) — Noble Affiliates, Inc. has announced a natural gas and condensate discovery well in Grayson County, Texas.

The Haun No. 1 well, located approximately seven miles south of Sherman, was drilled to 11,183 feet and encountered 18 feet of Oil Creek sand. The well tested 4.1 million cubic feet of gas and 230 barrels of condensate per day through a 15/64-inch choke with flowing tubing pressure of 3,028 pounds per square inch.

A confirmation well is presently being drilled on the prospect which consists of 2,830 net acres.

Samedan Oil Corporation, a wholly owned subsidiary of Noble Affiliates, Inc., is operator of the wells and owns a 12.5 percent working interest. Other owners include New England Energy Incorporated, a wholly owned subsidiary of New England Electric System, (12.5 percent); Louisiana Land and Exploration Co. (25 percent); Meridian Oil, Inc. (20 percent); Sabine Corporation (seven percent); Hanna Petroleum Company (10 percent); Carlson Petroleum Company (4.5 percent); and various other private companies and individuals.

Noble Affiliates, Inc. is an independent energy company with exploration and production operations throughout major basins in the United States, including the Gulf of Mexico and offshore California, as well as Canada, Tunisia and Indonesia. It also operates a contract drilling fleet of 51 land and marine units.

Buying American can present less choices than expected

Foreign vs. domestic issue doesn't apply to some items

WASHINGTON (AP) — If you're thinking of buying American to help right the Japanese trade imbalance, you may find less of a choice than you'd guess, especially if you're shopping for many household products.

For automobiles and clothing, including shoes, American consumers are in the middle of an international battleground. But for many other products, foreign vs. domestic isn't as much of an issue, say experts whose job is to test such products.

"All of this back and forth about buying American — you don't have that choice except with cars and clothing," said R. David Pittle, technical director for Consumers Union, publisher of Consumer Reports magazine.

"That seems to be the only place where it makes a difference because all the rest of the market has been decided ... at least in the things we've looked at," said Pittle, a former member of the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission.

The marketplace is segmented, he said, with Japanese products dominating some areas, American products dominating others.

In cameras, for instance, there are a handful of European brands but most 35mm cameras sold in this country are Japanese, he said. Some instant or disc-type cameras are American made. But, said Pittle: "For serious photography, there is no choice. It's all imported."

Similarly, nearly all televisions and video equipment is Japanese. Some Japanese-brand television sets are assembled in the United States, but the videorecorders or televisions bearing the familiar American brand names are made in Japan, he said.

American manufacturers dominate the market in other consumer goods, he said. For instance, clothes washers and dryers, freezers and full-size refrigerators, which are called major white goods, are generally American made, he said.

Even in autos, the lines are blurred. American manufacturers have joined the Japanese in joint production projects, sell Japanese cars under U.S. names, and put foreign-made engines or other components in U.S. cars. Japanese manufacturers have established plants in the United States.

For many consumer products, particularly electronic, much of the competition now is not so much U.S. vs. Japan but Japan vs. the "new Japans," the Asian countries of Korea, Hong Kong, Taiwan and Singapore.

Joe Bhatia, executive staff engineer for Underwriters Laboratories Inc., an independent product tester, said those countries rely on lower labor costs to produce less expensive goods.

Some Asian countries other than Japan have gained significant shares of U.S. markets, such as Korea has with black-and-white televisions. But Bhatia said he has found products from those countries often lower in quality than Japanese or U.S. products.

"Those are quick and dirty," he said. "They're aiming for the low end of the market and are full of problems, mostly ... We've had a lot of complaints from retail chains."

Those countries, he said, are where Japan was several decades ago when they were imitating, not innovating.

"The Japanese were known for their cheap products, lower quality. They went completely around, and now they're known for good quality and reliable products," he said. "They invested highly in research and development and it's paying off."

The new competition means Japan "has to keep going on up the high-tech scale," making more complex and more expensive products, said George Packard, dean of the Johns Hopkins School for Advanced International Studies.

The next area of Japanese concentration is in business and office machinery, including computers, Bhatia said.

Former Getty chairman appointed to Valero board

SAN ANTONIO (SWN) — Harold E. Berg, former chairman of the board and chief executive officer of Getty Oil Company, has been appointed to the Board of Directors of Valero Energy Corp.

Berg's career in the oil industry spans some 40 years including executive positions with both Getty and Skelly Oil Company, a Getty predecessor company.

Berg currently serves on the boards of Baker International and the First National Bank of Tulsa. In addition, Berg is currently chairman of the board of trustees of the J. Paul Getty Museum, and is a trustee of Colorado College. He is also formerly a member of the executive committee of the U.S. Olympics, and served on the Los Angeles Council of the Boy Scouts of America. Berg has held memberships in the National Petroleum Council, the American Institute of Mechanical Engineers, the American Petroleum Institute, and the Mid-Continent Oil and Gas Association. Berg replaces John F. Baugh who left to devote more time to his other business interests.

In business at the company's annual stockholders' meeting: current directors Jack T. Currie, Mayfield R. Shilling, and Harry E. Walker were elected to the Board of Directors; Arthur Andersen & Co. was ratified as the independent public accountants of the Company and the Securities Purchase Agreement between Valero Energy and TAG Group USA was approved by the stockholders.

The Securities Purchase Agreement signed in January 1985 requires that TAG USA assist Valero in attempting to secure a satisfactory feedstock supply arrangement for Valero's Corpus Christi refinery. TAG has already purchased $15 million of Valero's convertible Preference Stock. If a feedstock agreement is successfully negotiated prior to July 1, 1985, $85 million more will be contributed by TAG through the purchase of additional convertible securities from Valero.

DeltaUS to determine its future

TYLER (SWN) — DeltaUS Corp. has announced that it has asked Morgan Stanley & Co., an investment banking firm, to review the company's operations and assets to permit the company to determine it's future course of activity.

"The continuing instability of oil and gas prices, as well as other economic factors affecting both the industry and DeltaUS, make it important that we continue to seek directions which will best serve the company and its shareholders, including the sale of the company as a whole," said Keating V. Zeppa, DeltaUS chairman of the board and president.

He said Morgan Stanley will examine DeltaUS' total assets to determine their fair value and suggest options to the company's board of directors.

OIL AND GAS PROPERTIES FOR SALE

A large independent oil and gas company is offering for sale leasehold interests, wells and associated oilfield equipment on certain properties located in the Permian Basin of West Texas and Southeast New Mexico; Oklahoma; the Rocky Mountains; the lower Gulf Coast; and the Ark-La-Tex areas.

PBLA to meet Tuesdays at Midland Center

The Permian Basin Landmen's Association will meet at 11:30 a.m., Tuesdays, at the Midland Center conference room in the basement.

There will be a buffet lunch followed by a four hour seminar at 1:00 p.m. The first part of the seminar will be conducted by Conrad E. Coffield of the law firm of Hinkle, Cox, Eaton, Coffield and Hensley and will cover comu;sory pooling in New Mexico. The second part will be conducted by William B. Burford of the same firm who will speak on rights of ingress, egress and surface use.

Conrad E. Coffield is the senior partner in the Midland office of the Texas and New Mexico law firm of Hinkle, Cox, Eaton, Coffield and Hensley. He was born in Hot Springs, South Dakota and attended South Dakota School of Mines and Technology. He graduated from Washington University in St. Louis with a BSBA degree in 1952. He served in the United States Coast Guard from 1952 to 1956. In 1959, he was awarded a law degree from the University of Texas Law School in Austin. After graduation from law school he joined the Hinkle law firm in Roswell, New Mexico. Coffield opened the Midland office of the Hinkle firm in 1966 and has continued as partner-in-charge of that office since that time. His practice is devoted to oil and gas matters.

William B. Burford is a patner in the Midland office of Hinkle, Cox, Eaton, Coffield and Hensley. Born in Del Rio, he spent most of his early years in Mount Pleasant, Texas. He graduated from the University of Texas with a B. S. in geology in 1975 and from the University of Texas Law School in 1978. After graduation from law school he became associated with the Hinkle firm in Midland, where his practice focuses primarily on oil and gas matters involving both New Mexico and Texas land.

All PBLA members and guests are invited and the course will be worth five CPL recertification points.

State offshore leases down from January

AUSTIN — State offshore leases produced 121,189 barrels of crude oil during February, compared to 127,491 barrels in the longer month of January.

Gas well gas production from state leases amounted to 8,895,604 Mcf in February, against 9,859,420 Mcf in January.

Casinghead gas production totaled 256,412 Mcf in February, compared to 320,173 Mcf in January. Casinghead gas in natural gas produced from oil wells.

Condensate production from state leases amounted to 36,379 barrels in February, against 44,069 barrels in January. Condensates are liquid hydrocarbons produced from gas wells.

In February, offshore production was about 0.2 percent of total estimated crude production in Texas. Offshore gas well gas production was approximately 2.5 percent of the estimated state total.

Offshore production in state waters was reported in February from 49 oil and 443 gas wells.

Large firm head becomes small-town entrepreneur

By KEITH E. LEIGHTY
AP Business Writer

FREEPORT, Ill. (AP) — After delaying for two years his retirement as president of IC Industries Inc., Robert Schnoes took off to fulfill a long-time dream of owning his own business.

Schnoes, 58, had been in line to replace William Johnson as chairman of IC, but then Johnson announced last June he would stay on at the request of the board of directors.

At about the same time, Schnoes — carefully following the five-year plan he had updated every year for the past 30 — had bought a retirement home in this northern Illinois town and laid plans to buy a business and move it here.

"I'm not sure which of those two things was more important," said Schnoes, recalling the events that preceded his retirement from a position that paid him $430,000 a year and fringe benefits.

In any case, his reception in Freeport was warm.

"I guess I'm in the unique position where everybody I've talked to has been totally cooperative," Schnoes said of his transformation from a leader of one of the nation's biggest industrial companies to a small-town entrepreneur.

He and his wife, Delores, bought a 200-acre farm and restored 1842 farmhouse near Freeport, where they found themselves perfectly suited to the atmosphere — conservative, energetic and filled with community pride, and with a church for every 1,000 of the 27,000 residents.

It is a busy, productive town. Honeywell, Goodyear and Kemper have divisions or subsidiaries here, and Stephenson County's dairy farmers have the highest output of any county in the state. And Schnoes, a one-time garage mechanic with an interest in technology, likes to keep busy.

In April 1984, he bought Ultrasonics, a small company in Trenton, N.J., that makes sonic devices used in such varying procedures as eye surgery and cleaning radiators.

Freeport seemed the perfect place for such an operation, Schnoes said in an interview after a board meeting of Signode Corp., a Chicago company of which he is still a director.

Looking for a site for Ultrasonic, he found an abandoned railroad station knee-deep in broken bottles and beer cans that had been saved from destruction by a community fond of its 60-year history.

Then fate stepped in to bind him even more securely to Freeport. As he kicked through the railroad station rubble one summer day, Schnoes noticed that the Burgess battery plant across the street was not in much better shape.

His curiosity was piqued, because the first crystal radio he built as a boy in Pittsburgh had a Burgess battery. He learned the plant had been founded by "Doc" Burgess, developer of the flashlight battery.

Inventories of raw material and finished goods were nearly gone, utility companies were threatening to shut off services unless bills were paid and employment had fallen to 100 from more than 1,000 shortly after World War II.

It was a temptation Schnoes found irresistable.

"If there's anything I've been a success at in my career, it's been rebuilding companies and dealing in electronics," said Schnoes, who also rebuilds classic cars.

"Almost everyone in the community had worked there or had a relative who had. Even the mayor had worked in the building. It became evident that the community was trying to save this company. I guess I became immersed in the enthusiasm," he said.

As always, Schnoes sought his wife's advice before sealing the deal.

"After looking at the company, I would have said no," she recalled. "But knowing Robert, I said yes."

Relishing the opportunity to apply new technology to a faltering business, Schnoes recalled that he told Burgess employees: "Our greatest asset is nothing."

What he meant, he said, was that Burgess was so run down, the equipment so old, there was nothing they had to keep. He shrugged off a roof collapse after a heavy January snowfall, saying, "That happens."

"I'm a great believer in American ingenuity. That can make up for the difficulties of high labor costs, high interest rates, fuel costs and the strength of the dollar," he said.

"There's no business that can't be turned around if they set their minds to it," said Schnoes.

"I have changed from an industrialist with a company in the Fortune 100 to an entrepreneur with two relatively small businesses," he said.

"I live on a farm. I'm eight minutes from my own business. I'm two hours from Chicago. I now have the opportunity to not only enjoy myself, but to give someone else a chance.

"A lot of people will be happy with that. Not just my wife and me."

Muse Air terminates service to Oklahoma City

OKLAHOMA CITY (SWN) — In what may be the shortest period of airline service to a city in recent history, Muse Air has announced that it is terminating service to Oklahoma City on May 31 and placing all its seats to Dallas, Austin, Houston and New Orleans on sale.

Effective Monday, Oklahoma City residents will be able to fly to Dallas or Austin for $20 and to Houston or New Orleans for $40. Other Muse Air destinations are not included in the Farewell Sale.

Muse Air will stop serving Oklahoma City May 31, 1985. Tickets for the Farewell Sale may be purchased at Muse Air ticket counters in any of the cities involved.

Wall Street snickers at brokerage firm's television pitch

Hearst Feature Service

When John Houseman, the actor of "Paper Chase" fame, delivers his television pitch for a brokerage firm - "They make money the old-fashioned way. They earn it." - superbroker John D. Spooner has a good laugh.

He says all of Wall Street snickers at the way it's presented to the public. The money world isn't the way they tell you it is. It is, instead, a high-pitched frenzy, a big sell, with a product line about as old-fashioned as genetic engineering or artificial intelligence.

And it is a world of plungers and pushers that renders Las Vegas serene by comparison. You're invited to roll the dice. Right now, there are futures contracts available on some 80 products, from stock indices to foreign currencies to Treasury bills. Upcoming are about 50 more, including contracts on the consumer price index and auto sales.

It's not a place for the timid. As Daniel Drew, the legendary trader of the Gilded Age, once remarked: "Wall Street ain't a place for sentiment. You leave your sentiment at home when you come downtown."

Spooner, a Shearson Lehman Brothers senior vice president in Boston, updates that with these words:

"Wall Street is a place of absurdity. Overkill always happens. If marine biology gets hot, suddenly 15 marine biology funds spring up. It's hardly a charitable institution; Wall Street is the most cynical place in America. When I was a youngblood I knew a broker whose credo was, 'My customer's profit should never exceed my commission.' "

Who is this Spooner and why is he saying all these things about the business that makes him a very comfortable living? Well, he's a safe and sound broker with a customer base of 3,500 well-fed investors. He's a Big Producer with sales in the millions; since the house takes 60 percent of what he sells, the Big Producer can also be the Big Truth Teller.

"As long as my numbers are there, they love me," he says. "They think I'm a character, but they love the numbers."

A decade ago, Spooner startled his peers by publishing "Confessions of a Stockbroker, by Brutus." It didn't exactly read like a brochure from the Big Board's public relations department. It was devilish, and Spooner, then with H. Hentz, got into trouble for it, which only hyped the book's sale.

Now Spooner has topped himself with "Sex and Money: Behind the Scenes With the Big-Time Brokers" (Houghton Mifflin, $15.95). Here are some lines from it that tell what it's about:

"Nothing is sacred in the world of investments. Indeed, almost everything is profane. The attempted assassination of the pope, the deaths of Princess Grace and Natalie Wood, the epidemics of herpes and AIDS, all gave rise to jokes. There is only one thing to take seriously. How are your stocks doing? Black humor proliferates because everyone in the business always operates on the thin edge of disaster."

"I'm not a stock picker," he says, "but a brain-picker." One of his clients in Texas, a "smart and cold-blooded" woman, tipped him to Phillips and Cities Service two years ago. Both were undervalued takover candidates.

Spooner laughs at technical analysts ("witch doctors") and most Wall Street research. He says he is still amazed by the Street's herd instincts. Perhaps he is old-fashioned in the modern world, looking for values.

The frightening thing about "Sex and Money" is that it's true. Only some of the locations have been changed.

American Tuna makes $4 million star-covered debut

New York Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — Watch out, Charlie the Tuna.

A new competitor has just hit the supermarket shelves — American Tuna, whose star-covered red, white and blue cans declare it to be the only national brand caught, processed and canned exclusively by workers in the continental United States.

American Tuna, the first new nationally marketed tuna brand name in 30 years, is being introduced accompanied by a $4 million star-spangled advertising campaign that clearly tries to play on building protectionist sentiment.

Such flag-waving may be necessary, however, if American Tuna, a product of C.H.B Foods Inc., is going to succeed where other companies have failed. The domestic tuna industry has been battered for years by overproduction, high interest costs and what industry executives say is the government's failure to stem a flood of cheap imports.

"Tuna is a dying industry in this country," said Robert Allen, vice president of sales and marketing at C.H.B. and the new brand's creator. "When I heard that the government wasn't going to help, it made me angry. I thought, 'If the government won't help, maybe the consumer will.' "

Allen's brainstorm occurred last July, when the International Trade Commission rejected an appeal by the industry to impose stiffer tariffs on imported water-packed tuna, from its current level of 6 percent. In the last four years, the volume of imported tuna has more than doubled, from 3.6 million cases in 1981 to 8.4 million in 1984.

The imports come mainly from Thailand, Taiwan and other Asian countries where workers earn as little as 60 cents a day, according to the American Tunaboat Association in San Diego. The industry contends that domestic fishermen and processors operate at a disadvantage because Federal environmental and labor restrictions force up the cost of production.

Most United States canners, such as Bumble Bee Seafood Products and Star-Kist Foods Inc., rely on fish caught in foreign waters and operate overseas canning and processing plants in American Samoa, the Philippines and other areas. American Tuna is priced competitively with other national brands — that is, 25 percent to 40 percent higher than the house brands that depend almost entirely on imports — but the company is hoping that its aggressively patriotic marketing will give it an edge.

Labor unions, trade associations and analysts wish C.H.B. luck on its venture but warn that it faces an uphill battle. "It's one of the few positive things that's happened in the industry in the last few years," said David G. Burney, executive director of the United States Tuna Foundation in Washington. "But it's such a tough position to take, because they'll have a hard time trying to compete on a price basis with the imports."

The fishermen and canners could use some good news. The domestic fleet, which is based in San Diego, has been cut from 125 vessels in late 1983 to its current level of about 75, Burney said.

Several major plants have closed in the last three years.

GAME RULES

1) The Midland Reporter-Telegram A.M. 1510 KMND Trivia game is based on skill in answering 10 Trivia questions each week. There will be 14 weekly Trivia Games beginning Monday March 18th and ending Saturday June 22nd, 1985. A total of $2,800.00 will be awarded to first place winners over the 14 weeks. Additionally, 2nd and 3rd prizes will be awarded weekly.

2) Questions for each weekly Trivia Game will be broadcast over AM 1510 KMND at least 4 times per day on the half-hour Monday through Friday, between the hours of 6:00 AM and 6:00 PM. Each question will be read at least two times during the week. The entire set of ten (10) questions each week will have been broadcast over AM 1510 KMND Radio by 6:00 PM Thursday.

3) Questions for each week's game will be numbered from 1 (one) to 10 (ten). The answer to each numbered question must be PRINTED or TYPED on the correspondingly numbered answer line in the official Midland Reporter-Telegram AM 1510 KMND Radio Trivia Game entry form for that week. Each weeks official entry form will be published Monday, Tuesday and Thursday in the Midland Reporter-Telegram. Hand drawn facsimilies of the entire official entry form also will be acceptable, but machine duplicated copies are prohibited.

4) Contestants may submit multiple entry forms each week. However, each entry form must be mailed postage paid to the designated address in a separate envelope with the number of the weekly game marked in the lower left hand corner of the envelope on the address side. Envelopes must be postmarked by midnight Friday of each week, and be received at the contest address by 2:00 PM of the following Tuesday to be eligible for the weekly drawing.

5) The $200.00 first prize will be awarded to the entrant with all 10 questions answered correctly each week. In the case of more than one entry with all 10 answers correct, a drawing will be held. 2nd and 3rd prizes will be awarded to the next 2 entrants with the most correct answers respectively. Again, in the case of more than one entry form with all 10 correct answers, drawings will be held to determine the 2nd and 3rd prize winners. In the case of no entrants with all 10 correct answers, the prizes will be awarded to those with the most correct answers respectively.

6) Correct answers to each weeks Trivia Game Questions will be broadcast twice on AM 1510 KMND Radio Saturday morning between 6:00 AM and Noon. Trivia Game questions and answers will also be published in the Midland Reporter-Telegram each Sunday. Weekly winners will be announced by both AM 1510 KMND Radio and the Midland Reporter-Telegram each Wednesday.

7) It is not necessary to purchase the Midland Reporter-Telegram to play the Trivia Game. Copies of the MRT are available for free examination at the Midland Reporter-Telegram 201 East Illinois and the Midland County Public Library.

8) All winners must sign a release form acknowledging that both the Midland Reporter-Telegram and AM 1510 KMND shall have the right to publish, publicize, and broadcast his/her name, picture, voice and the fact that he/she won the cash or prize. If a winner is a minor, a parent or guardian must sign a minor's release form prior to the prize being awarded. Winners are responsible for all taxes incurred on prize.

Tariff resolution may be approved

By BILL KIDD

AUSTIN — A resolution calling for the U. S. Congress to impose a temporary tariff on imports of foreign crude oil and petrochemical products is expected to be approved by a House committee shortly.

The resolution, introduced by state Rep. Jim McWilliams, D-Hailetsville, was supported Monday night by several oil and gas experts, including Texas Railroad Commission member Mack Wallace.

"It's a mystery to us why foreign crude, gasoline, diesel fuel and heating oil is allowed to come into this country virtually duty-free, while dmestic producers are socked with a tax on windfall profits, which do not exist," said Kilgore Mayor Mickey Smith, representing the East Texas Producers an Royalty Owners Association.

Larry Long, an independent producer from Kilgore, told the House Energy Committee that he andhis colleagues are "very much disturbed by price erosion" in products. "We support this import fee and feel like it's time for the U. S. to look after our own industry," said Long.

Long said oil prices have dropped from a high of $38 a barrel in 1981 to between $25 and $27.50 a barrel currently. Dallas petroleum consultant John LaRue told the committee there is no evidence the decline in oil prices has stopped.

"Unless the leadership of this nation bring energy security to the forefront...an economic and strategic crisis will face this country in the not too distant future," said Wallace.

McWilliams HCR 106 calls for the state to send copies of the resolution to the president, Congressional leaders and members of the Texas delegation with the request it be entered in the Congressional Record.

"Present import policies have resulted in serious economic decline and escalating unemployment in the domestic oil industry," HCR 106 says, adding "continuation of these present policies will result in an increasing dependence on foreign oil in contravention of national policy.

McWilliams noted the resolution would "have no force of law," but would remind "the people in Washington of the interests of the people of the State of Texas."

Rep. Gerald Yost, R-Longview, who serves on the House Energy Committee along with McWilliams, said "One would rather see an artificial tariff than to have tomake up the shortfall predicted by Bullock's office."

Rep. Tom Craddict, R-Midland, also is on the committee.

The measure was sent to a subcommittee for a refinement of language, but is expected to be reported out favorably and sent to the full House for consideration.

Real estate developer has Smithsonian come to him

WASHINGTON (AP) — Most American history buffs go to the Smithsonian Institution in Washington D.C. to view treasured artifacts from America's past.

History buff and real estate developer Harlan Crow had the Smithsonian come to him.

With the Trammell Crow Co. of Dallas footing the bill, the National Museum of American History jumped at the first chance it ever has had "to make available things that belong to the whole nation out where the nation is, which is outside of Washington and New York," said museum director Roger G. Kennedy.

At untold cost, objects once held by historic figures such as George Washington and Thomas Jefferson were transported from behind the thick marble walls of the Smithsonian to the chrome and glass of downtown Dallas. The exhibit runs through October.

Crow in some ways built the pavillion adjacent to his LTV Tower to suit the Smithsonian — for instance, installing air conditioning ducts beneath the cases that hold some of the especially frail objects.

The setting for the exhibit, created by threatrical designer Peter Wexler of New York, features spotlights and recorded music inspired by the John Bull, the only operable steam locomotive in existence; the first telegraph key; Lewis and Clark's compass; Washington's telescope; General Custer's buckskin jacket; and dozens of other irreplaceable relics transported from Washington.

Many were removed from the museum for the first time.

As Kennedy said, "You can't just stick 'em in a box and send 'em."

Terry Sharrer, an American History Museum curator who coordinated the Dallas exhibit, said he had to convince some of his colleagues to let the objects go.

"Curators are paid to worry about these things, to guarantee their good care forever, so we finally persuaded them that these things were going to get extraordinary care," Sharrer said. "In fact, I think we have at least as good a security system down there as we do in our own building. We have a humidity and temperature control system in the cases that I think is superior to anything that we have (at the museum)."

"But, of course, you worry every time you take the family jewels out of the vault," said Kennedy. "And sometimes the family jewels never get out of the vault for that reason."

The Crow company will not discuss the cost of the exhibit and Harlan Crow, a partner in Trammell Crow Co., will not talk publicly about it at all.

"He said the exhibition is the important thing, not him," said his secretary, Patsey Campbell, who called Crow "a history buff." She said he hoped other business leaders would consider doing similar things for the public.

But Sharrer said the extraordinary objects in the Dallas exhibit probably would not go anywhere else.

"I'm not sure another major museum would even be able to afford to borrow them," he said.

The museum people speak in awe of the cost to the Trammell Crow Co., which they say they can only guess.

"I can't imagine it was anything less than an arm and a leg," said Sharrer, who priced the cost of shipping the John Bull to Dallas and was quoted $75,000, one way.

United Parcel Service shipped the locomotive — jokingly called the biggest overnight parcel ever — without charge.

Kennedy and Sharrer both attribute the precedent-setting display to Harlan Crow's love of history.

"I talked to Harlan last night," said Sharrer, "and I really had the distinct feeling that while he would just as soon have his salary, he might rather have my job."

Estate executor allowed to vote at meeting

Los Angeles Times —
Washington Post News Service

LOS ANGELES — A probate judge here ruled Wednesday that the executor of the Conrad Hilton estate may vote its controlling block of stock in Hilton Hotels in favor of management's anti-takeover proposals at Monday's annual stockholders' meeting.

Rejecting the California attorney general's contention that executor James Bates has a conflict of interest because he also is a Hilton director, Judge Robert I. Weil held that voting the stock was well within the business discretion allowed Bates.

Voting of the estate's 27.4 percent Hilton stake for the proposals, as Bates has said he will do, is expected to go a long way toward assuring their passage.

Weil's decision was a setback to Las Vegas-based casino operator Golden Nugget, which has made overtures toward acquiring the controlling Hilton interest and which has worked against the anti-takeover proposals.

Golden Nugget, which was not a party in Wednesday's proceeding, has another chance Thursday to advance its cause in a federal court proceeding. There it seeks a preliminary injunction that, if granted, probably would delay Hilton's annual meeting.

Weil, after a hearing, concluded that Bates had no conflict sufficient to justify the court's disqualifying him from voting the Hilton shares. Therefore, Weil said, it "ill-behooves the court to substitute its own judgment for the executor's business judgment."

Bates' position in the dispute was supported by attorneys for the Conrad Hilton Foundation, which was named chief beneficiary in Conrad Hilton's will, and by attorneys for Hilton Hotels Chairman Barron Hilton.

Susan St. James

By JACK CARROLL
King Features Syndicate

You know Kate. She's the groovy, kooky, handy, with-it, wise, perky, motherly half of "Kate & Allie," CBS's hit Monday night series that premiered last year as the highest rated new sitcom of the season. If you know Kate, then, you pretty much know Susan St. James, the groovy, kooky, handy actress who plays her pretty much by playing herself.

"Yeah, I guess we're both extremely peppy, enthusiastic. I always think everything will work out," she says.

Like Kate, Ms. St. James is a character. Not a naturally funny one, she insists, though, despite the obvious success she's had in the show. "People always say if I'm on for an hour I'm very funny. But if I do something like Carson, and I'm only on for five minutes, I'm not funny. I have to get comfortable."

Apparently, she's getting comfortable, because in "Kate & Allie" she's very, very funny. A sitcom about two divorcees trying to make it in New York City balancing motherhood, dating, ex-husbands and work, the series has been praised as a breakthrough program in its realistic duplication of contemporary women.

And it's because each episode actually works like a little drama that Ms. St. James feels so comfortable in the role.

"This isn't 'Laverne and Shirley,'" she insists. "Our scripts are extremely packed; they're 60 pages long," compared to the 45 pages most half-hour series use.

"I think of it as a positive show. In the beginning it was square Allie (played by Jane Curtin) and groovy Kate, but that's changed a little already, and that's how it works in the series episodes. Kate's for unloading and Allie frets.

"After the first show, well, I had some funny stuff, but Jane was getting all the laughs. So I came to the second show and every line I did I delivered too big," she says, demonstrating the ham job she did. "The director came over to me and said 'What are you doing?' It was just hard for me, those first six shows."

Susan St. James

"These things keep happening on the show, and then weeks later they happen in my life. It's really bizarre. I find myself saying the same dialogue to my kids; it comes in really handy. They've scripted us so many nice ways to say no. And the other day, Allie said, 'There's pizza in the oven, salad in the fridge and cupcakes in the closet.' And I went home and said, 'Let's have pizza, salads and cupcakes.' I'm even getting menu ideas from the show."

— Susan St. James

That was 30 shows ago, though, and with a renewal for next season assured, Ms. St. James realizes that her decision to do the comedy was the right one. Coming off of [illegible] "Love at First Bite," she auditioned for Kate [illegible] at first. "I had a lot of reservations [illegible] and their choice, they [illegible] I thought that I was definitely going to [illegible] Jane [illegible] the fact that it's a very loving part of [illegible] and [illegible] Kate [illegible] Allie [illegible] and [illegible] Kate [illegible] Allie [illegible] and [illegible] Kate [illegible] Allie

BETWEEN THE LINES

Q. I'd like some background information on Sigourney Weaver. What is she doing now?

David Richardson
Perth, Ont., Canada

A. Sigourney, or Susan as she was originally named (the Sigourney came from "The Great Gatsby," which she read at the age of 14; she felt it was a more suitable name for someone already 5 feet 10 inches at that age), is the daughter of TV talk show creator Sylvester "Pat" Weaver and English actress Elizabeth Inglis. She was raised on New York's East Side and sent to exclusive private schools. Despite being mildly attacked by J. Fred Muggs, the chimp on her father's "Today" show, she was drawn to show business anyway.

She started acting while at Stanford and got her master's at Yale Drama School. Her professional debut in the play "The Constant Wife" was in heady company: Ingrid Bergman starring, Sir John Gielgud directing.

Sigourney Weaver

She then followed in more down-to-earth fashion with three months on the soap "Somerset."

The role that really brought her attention, though, was her film debut as Ripley, the crew member, who, dressed only in her underwear, captures the vile space creature in "Alien." Plans are in the works now for "Alien II," but her involvement is still up in the air.

She co-starred in "Eyewitness," "The year of Living Dangerously" and "Deal of the Century." She did, of course, finally do comedy in "Ghostbusters," and she wanted that part so much that she jumped on a table and howled in her audition. Currently, she's making a movie in Paris, "Une Femme Ou Deux" with Fench heartthrob Gerard Depardieu.

In her personal life, speaking of hearts, she married theater director Jim Simpson last fall.

Q. I would like to know about an actor named Eric Roberts. I am totally enthralled by him.

Linda Loon
Kinel, Maui, Hawaii

A. He turned 29 on April 18, was born in Biloxi, Miss., and raised, along with his two younger sisters, in Atlanta by his father, Walter Grady Roberts, a blacklisted Hollywood writer. The senior Roberts established the Actors and Writers Workshop in Atlanta, and starting at the age of 4, his son acted in a number of productions. By 16, Eric was so experienced that he was admitted to London's prestigious Royal Academy of Dramatic Art, where he spent two years.

At 18, he moved to New York, appeared on the soap "Another World" and in a couple of off-Broadway plays. Four years later, he got what he assumed would be his big break, the lead in the film "King of the Gypsies," but that movie bombed.

He subsequently turned down a three-picture, $600,000 deal with the studio that released it because he was afraid that they were trying to market him as a teen-age idol in dumb movies.

He appeared, instead, in the PBS productions "Paul's Case" and "Miss Lonelyhearts," as well as the film "Raggedy Man" with Sissy Spacek.

He was in the process of transferring the play "Mass Appeal" from off-Broadway to Broadway in 1981 when he cracked his Jeep into a tree near his farm in Connecticut. He recovered from the resulting coma and leg and face injuries (although you can still see a scar over his left eye), but then had a fight with the play's director, so she replaced him and put out the word that he was still smashed up. "The phone calls," he says, "literally stopped overnight."

A few months later, though, director Bob Fosse called to ask him to audition for "Star 80." He beat out dozens of other actors (including Richard Gere in the final round) to play Paul Snider, the leechy and ultimately homicidal husband of playmate Dorothy Stratten, and won raves for his performance.

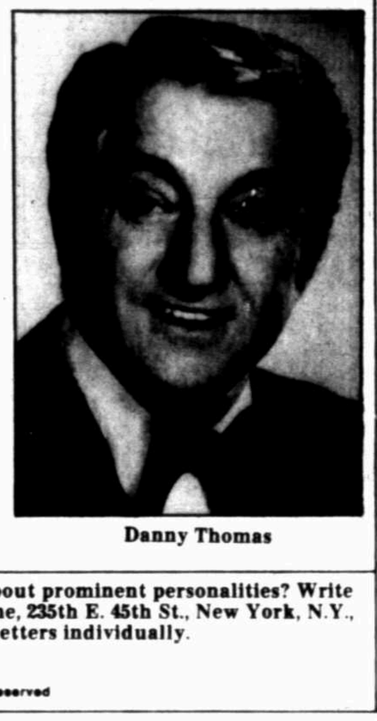

He followed that film with "The Pope of Greenwich Village," then a comedy, "The Coca Cola Kid," shot in Australia (he reportedly hates it and hopes it is never shown in this country). Currently, he's filming "Runaway Train" with Jon Voight and Rebecca deMornay.

Offscreen, his personality might surpirse you. He's very quiet and his voice contains a pronounced stutter, which he's had since childhood and which disappears, he found, when he memorizes lines. If he hadn't become an actor, he says he'd have been a cowboy, and when he isn't working he spends a lot of time riding his horses, which are stabled near his farm.

Q. In early December, I read that Danny Thomas was in a hospital in Los Angeles. Is he all right now and back working? Will he be in Atlantic City soon?

Arnold Arzinger
Bayonne, N.J.

A. "He had an operation that men have but is fine now," according to an associate. He has been working hard raising money for St. Jude's Hospital in Memphis, the main outlet of his energy these days. He does still do a few weeks a year in Atlantic City and Las Vegas, though, and was, in fact, in Atlantic City a few months ago. He will probably be back later this year.

Danny Thomas

Q. I have always admired Debbie Reynolds. Is she doing anything now?

D. Lippin
Upland, Calif.

A. We put that question to her agents and got the response that she's relaxing with her husband in Roanoke. (She married Virginia businessman Richard Hamlett last year.) She just finished a stint at Harrah's in Reno and felt like taking some time off before resuming appearances on the Vegas-Reno-Atlantic City circuit. If you want to see her right now, though, there's always her exercise tape, "Do It Debbie's Way."

Debbie Reynolds

Q. Recently, I've been seeing Carrie Snodgress in a lot of guest-starring spots on TV. Could you tell me more about her? Wasn't she famous a few years back?

E. Picha
Prophetstown, Ill.

A. She was the most famous around 1970 when her second film, "Diary of a Mad Housewife," was released and she earned a nomination for the "Best Actress" Oscar. After that, though, she met rock star Neil Young, dropped out of Hollywood, moved to his Northern California ranch, and had a son, Zeke, who was born with cerebral palsy.

She spent five years at the ranch, during which she took physical therapy courses to work with Zeke; but as she describes it, Young decided it was time for her to leave.

She moved back to Hollywood, but had a hard time getting back into the industry at first. In 1978, she got a small part in the film "The Fury," then a role in "A Night in Heaven" and a part off-Broadway. Now, though, her career seems to be getting back on track. She has one of the leads in Clint Eastwood's film, "Pale Rider," due out later this month.

Carrie Snodgrass

SUSAN

"But there was chemistry. This show is so well written, the writing pulled us through before Jane and I knew what we were doing."

The image of Ms. St. James as working mom, big-city commuter and career veteran is one she can hardly accept herself, given the wild reputation she acknowledges preceded her. She traces her rebellious period to 1963, when as a college freshman she decided not to continue her education.

"Kennedy was shot," she says, "And of course, I was an Irish Catholic, I had met Ted, I had campaigned for Jack. So I was completely floored. It was like the end of the world and the beginning of my whole transition. I went to France."

After several years of modeling on the continent, she returned to Hollywood as a rich girl turned actress who soon attracted notice as one of the first Hollywood performers to take a stand against the Vietnam war.

All the while showing up for her early calls on "Fame Is the Name of the Game" and "MacMillan," she attended frequent anti-war rallies and peace marches, all with the most idealistic of intentions.

"I was the kind of person who could convert more people to be against the war because nobody thought I was an anarchist. Jane Fonda was a little strident. But people could look at me and think about being against the war without going 'Arghh!' I was more like the girl next door."

Or the hippie next door, as many reports cast her at the time. With her psychedelic vans, long hair and granny dresses, she was dubbed a counterculture star. She dated Steven Stills, a rock musician who in retrospect seems about as freaky as Andy Williams. She named her first two children Harmony and Sunshine, appeared on talk shows touting the benefits of vegetarianism and generally set herself up as a '60s chick.

Now, the Connecticut mom says her public image back then was way off base. "I was obsessed with the war; I read everything that had ever been written about it," she insists of her politics.

"But now I read these things in the scandal sheets about my wild past. People never separate the alleged wildness from what was really going on, which was protest. I was protesting the war, but it all got blurred into hippie, abnormal without distinction. I didn't know anyone who wasn't against the war."

Susan St. James monkeys around in a scene from "Kate and Allie."

Her politics are less radical now — in fact, she's downright mainstream. She still maintains her connections with the Kennedys: "I know Sarge and Eunice real well. I spent a lot of time with Rose before she got so sick," she says, name-dropping shamelessly.

But obviously she feels close enough to the family through her extensive cooperation with them. She works frequently on the Special Olympics, a charity many of the Kennedy family members support. And she's pledging not to let her kids forget the war — she took the older ones to the Vietnam War Memorial in Washington recently, and showed them her brother-in-law's name.

A perceptive analyst of the changing times, she says, "I saw all the vets at the memorial and I'm shocked how much they look like how we looked when we were all against the war with their long hair." Her ties with the '60s sensibility are apparent in her dress, her funky sense of independence and the easy go-with-the-flow way she approaches her career as mother and actress. "Hey, listen, I still have blue jeans with peace and love embroidered on them," she insists.

An Emmy winner who's lived in the limelight for nearly 15 years, Ms. St. James has grown comfortable with her own celebrity. She does bristle, though, at the way people think they know her from the things they've read — or thought they read. "They come up to me and say, 'Oh are you still eating sprouts?' But I don't mind too much. I was such an autograph hound myself."

An avid sports fan — her large family still plays softball when they get together at the Rockford, Ill., home — Ms. St. James maintains a mountain home in Telluride, Colo. "It's my favorite area in the whole word." At least two times a year, she treks out there with Ebersol, an inveterate urbanite and TV junkie who's abashed at the absence of cable services out on the ranch.

A recent trip to the remote vacation spot took more than 24 hours. "Dick said we could have been in Paris in less time. We could be sipping schnapps in a cafe. And I had to agree."

But the skiing is nowhere near as good in Paris, or the white water rafting, both avocations of the physically fit 36-year-old. And Ms. St. James is the kind who wants everybody else to enjoy what she enjoys; she's the big organizer.

During filming of "High Cost of Living" in Eugene, Ore., she arranged a rapids-shooting flotilla for the whole crew of landlubbers who were working on the film. "We had the star boat, the brass boat. We just sat there swigging the vodka... I love working on movies."

She doesn't get to make the kind of movies, though, that she dreamed about making when she was a young girl growing up outside of Chicago. That's where her love affair with the big screen began: "I came to Hollywood to do the Doris Day, Natalie Wood, Audrey Hepburn thing."

Now looking at a long run with the sitcom, Ms. St. James has decided she'll only stay with the show as long as it retains the quality and freshness of these first episodes. "If we have a nine-year run, please just don't make us adopt a small child. You know how they always make you do that because the other kids are getting big and they're not cute any more. The nicest thing I think about 'Kate & Allie' is that if the show isn't funny one week, I mean not gut-splitting funny, you don't care because you just like the people."

John Rubinstein says comedy his specialty

Hearst News Service

Though Tony Award-winning actor John Rubinstein is best known for his dramatic performances on stage ("Children of a Lesser God") and TV ("Family"), he's really a closet comedian.

"That's how I started in grade school and high school, and that's what I did most when I was acting at UCLA," he says. "If you wanted somebody to be funny, you'd get me. That's sort of my speciality."

After years of being cast in serious parts, Rubinstein is getting a rare chance to demonstrate his flair for comedy in the hit CBS series, "Crazy Like a Fox," in which Jack Warden plays his father. In the lighthearted mystery/action adventure, Rubinstein plays Harrison Fox, a San Francisco-based yuppie lawyer who keeps getting involved in his private detective father's cases. Rubinstein couldn't be happier that the series came his way.

"It's a good change for me," he says, pointing out that he's always felt more comfortable in comic roles, even when he started his acting career in the late '60s. At that time, "What was in vogue on TV and movies was the young, drug-taking hippie-arsonist-rapist-murderer. I usually played sensitive young rapists."

His image finally changed somewhat in 1972 when he was cast as the title character in the long-running musical "Pippin":

"I was sort of the sweet young thing, the happy little character who gets into deep trouble and sings in a nice little voice," he muses. "There was a lot of comic stuff in that."

Though "Crazy" was introduced last December as a mid-season replacement, it has become one of the top-10 series of the year. Rubinstein was surprised.

"I've been involved in many projects that I thought were wonderful, but then they didn't go anywhere. I've learned not to have any expectations."

"Crazy" is a good word to describe Rubinstein's life at the moment, as well. The first six weeks of the year found the 38-year-old actor shooting his series during the week in Los Angeles and San Francisco. On Friday nights he flew to New York and starred on Broadway in "Hurlyburly," David Rabe's controversial look at Hollywood. After Sunday's matinee, he headed back to Los Angeles to be ready for work at 6 a.m. Monday.

Besides being an accomplished actor and composer ("Jeremiah Johnson" and "Amber Waves"), Rubinstein also is the son of the late, legendary pianist Artur Rubinstein. The actor says being the son of a famous person didn't hurt or help his career.

"I don't think it made any difference at all. He was the only father I ever had, so I really don't know. There are still and always will be people who only think of me as the son of somebody. I don't think that it (the name) ever got me a job or an interview."

Instead, "I think being my father's son had a lot to do with who I am, just in terms of the life I had with him, but I'm sure that's true of you, too."

Reynolds convincing as ex-con 'Stick'

By DAVID LEE FORREST

Forrest

Burt Reynolds — a man many film critics rather unfairly love to hate — both starred in and directed his new film "Stick."

Although "Stick" isn't quite good enough to make one forget that Reynolds has been in such recent embarrassing trash as "Cannonball Run II" and "City Heat," he does deliver a spare and convincing portrait of an ex-con and shows some — but not enough — directorial skill.

"Stick" is based on a novel by writer Elmore Leonard, who is now making an impressive transition from a cult following to the top of the best-seller list with his crime and detective stories.

The title character is a former successful car thief in Miami, who was sent to prison after a botched attempt at armed robbery.

Almost immediately after his release, Stick accidentally stumbles into a drug smuggling deal that also seriously misfires, leaving his best friend dead.

Reynolds the actor plays Stick as a man with a slightly twisted code of honor which virtually requires that he avenge the killing.

Reynolds the director also starts off doing a surprisingly good job at setting the film's tone and atmosphere. Unfortunately, his sense of pacing doesn't turn out to be very good at all.

The movie takes off quite well, but then gets bogged down in subplots involving minor characters. George Segal gets a tad too much screen time as a slightly obnoxious millionaire. Candice Bergen is just dead weight in her role as Stick's romantic interest.

This romance subplot serves absolutely no purpose in advancing the plot and proves to be a completely pointless dead end.

One suspects that Reynolds stuck Ms. Bergen in because he felt it was simply impossible to make a movie that didn't have at least one woman falling hopelessly in love with him. At least he shows enough self-restraint not to have dozens fawning over him like he did in "The Man Who Loved Women."

Veteran character actor Charles Durning fares a little better in his offbeat role as a garish Miami villain played as sort of a low-class Sidney Greenstreet.

The spooky-looking Dar Robinson has a prominent role as Moke, an albino hit-man who haunts Stick throughout the film. Even though Moke is easily the most interesting character other than Stick, he somehow never quite connects solidly with the rest of the film.

The story's various elements — including honor, revenge, greed and even the "Santeria" religious cult — also fail to really come together.

While Reynolds the actor does his best work since "Starting Over," Reynolds the director should have made "Stick," with its talented cast and volatile themes, much better than it is.

"Stick," rated R for violence, strong language and some sexual innuendo, is now showing at North Park Cinema.

'Just One of the Guys' has mixed messages

"Just One of the Guys" carries the androgynous trend seen in films such as "Victor Victoria," "Yentl" and "Tootsie" down the age scale to teen-agers.

Terry, played by Joyce Hysen, the young heroine of the film, is an attractive, affluent, stylish and moderately spoiled high school student who has a college-age boyfriend with a fancy sports car. In short, she has the sort of life many teen girls would find idyllic.

But Terry has a dream — she wants to be a serious journalist — and she believes that her school newspaper's sponsor won't take her ambition seriously just because she's a pretty girl.

Her somewhat less-than-logical response is to temporarily transfer to another school where she masquerades as a male so she can write an article about her experiences as a guy and enter it in a journalism contest to prove her reportorial ability.

Complicating these weird plans are her sex-crazed younger brother, very energetically overacted by Billy Jacoby, and the new classmate, played by Clayton Rohner, she falls in love with while pretending to be guy.

Dressed as a male, Terry struts, saying things like "Yeah, I'll take a brewski" in a deep voice. Despite this, she is at least as convincing a boy as Barbra Streisand in "Yentl" and is considerably more believable than Julie Andrews was in "Victor Victoria."

However, Terry's teenybopper feminism is as exaggerated and silly as her little brother's overblown lechery and she fails to come across as being anywhere near as earnest as the plot requires her to be.

Director Lisa Gottlieb may have been trying to make a point about sex roles, but the screenplay is a muddle of hopelessly mixed messages.

For example, the movie clearly believes "that clothes make the man" — Rohner's character only gets noticed by girls when he dons some trendy duds — but Terry is righteously indignant when her old boyfriend complains about the way she dresses.

The film also gives a lot of lip service to the notion of male sensitivity, but then forces Rohner to prove himself by beating up another guy in a fistfight.

Any serious intentions the movie may have had are completely undercut and the film ends up being little more than another teen-age sex comedy, although at least it's not a mean-spirited one like those of "Porky's" ilk.

"Just One of the Guys" is just one of the semi-cute and supercontrived teen flicks.

"Just One of the Guys," rated PG-13 for strong language and considerable sexual innuendo, is now showing at the UA Cine IV.

'Gotcha' has plenty of comedy, little thrills

"Gotcha" is a spy comedy-thriller that has plenty of comedy but falters a little in the thrills department.

"Gotcha's" hero, an 18-year-old college freshman played by Anthony Edwards, goes to Europe with his roommate during summer vacation.

While in Paris he meets and falls in love with a mysterious, dark-haired woman, played by Linda Fiorentino. He naively wanders off with her on a "courier trip" to East Berlin, where, not surprisingly, he finds himself entangled in a web of international espionage.

Most of the movie is played for laughs and Edwards shows considerable flair for comedy. He has an appealing fresh-faced, quizzical look that is reminiscent of a very young Jimmy Stewart.

Even though Edwards' character is almost constantly confused, he handles some truly bizarre situations with great aplomb.

For example, he flees Russian KGB assassins in West Berlin by catching a ride with a group of German punk rockers. After the young Germans find out that their hitchhiker is from California, they all cruise through Eastern Germany together singing Randy Newman's "I Love LA."

The attractive Ms. Fiorentino has appropriately dark and mysterious European looks, but her character is never developed nearly as well as Edwards'. She mainly serves as a straight foil for Edwards' young American silliness.

The comic aspects of "Gotcha" work much better than the action plot. Although the suspense builds nicely up to the hero's escape from Germany, the film's pace then awkwardly slows down. Edwards' misadventures back in California are still interesting but not nearly as much so as his European escapades.

Although the movie's weak spy story would hardly impress the dean of thrillers, Alfred Hitchcock, even that late, great director would probably find himself chuckling pleasantly at "Gotcha's" wry humor.

"Gotcha," rated PG-13 for mild violence and sexual situations, is now showing at Midland Park Mall Cinemas.

Exhibit about Third World children

A hands-on multi-media exhibition, "Someone Like Me," is on view at the Museum of the Southwest, 1705 W. Missouri Ave., through June 10.

The exhibit consists of 600 feet of innovative games and displays designed to educate the public about children in the developing world whose needs are not being met.

Designed by Save the Children and Columbia University's Teachers College, with a grant from the Agency for International Development, the exhibit illustrates that the world we live in is interdependent; therefore, what happens in one part of the world affects people thousands of miles away.

The exhibit is also designed to show that young people can make a difference.

Museum hours are Tuesday through Saturday 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Sunday 2-5 p.m. There is no admission charge.

ENTERTAINMENT IN BRIEF

Presidential Museum presenting FDR exhibit

ODESSA — The Presidential Museum will sponsor a film series and brown bag lunch lecture Friday in conjunction with the special exhibit, "Franklin Delano Roosevelt: The Intimate Presidency" being shown from Tuesday through June 8.

On May 10 at 12:00 noon Kenneth Yeilding, professor of history and government at Odessa College will give a free lecture on, "Ah, That Voice: The Fireside Chats of Franklin Delano Roosevelt" which was compiled by Yielding and Paul H. Carlson. The lecture will be held in the museum's education center. The public is invited to attend and bring a brown bag lunch. Copies of the book will be available for purchase.

Beginning Wednesday, the museum is sponsoring a free film series every Wednesday evening during the month of May. Film classics and more current movies depict FDR and his times. All movies will be shown in the museum's education center beginning at 7:30 p.m.

The films scheduled are as follows:

—May 8, "FDR: That Man In The White House" stars Robert Vaughn in his acclaimed performance as Franklin Delano Roosevelt. Performed as a cross between a press conference, fireside chat and admittance to the inner sanctuary, it is filled with historical insights to the events of the 1930's and '40's.

—May 15, "Mr. Smith Goes To Washington," Frank Capra's academy award winning film stars Jimmy Stewart as the idealistic, politically naive Boy Scout leader who is appointed to the United States Senate.

—May 22, "The Grapes of Wrath," Henry Fonda stars in this film classic about the Great Plains dustbowl of the 1930's and the "Okies" flight to California.

—And May 29, "Eleanor and Franklin: The Rise To Leadership," focuses on the private lives of the Roosevelts rather than the political events. This film stars Jane Alexander and Edward Herrmann with a large supporting cast.

For further information call the museum at 1-332-7123.

Theatre displays art work

The gallery at Theatre Midland, 2000 W. Wadley Ave., will be featuring two artists during the showing of "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest." The production is onstage in Theatre One through May 18.

Charles Beckendorf is one of the premier artists in Texas. From humble beginnings, Beckendorf has built a highly successful, multimillion dollar business which includes not only his well-known pen-and-ink drawings, original paintings and prints of both, but also books, postcards and a new magazine called Charles Beckendorf's Texas Quarterly.

Beckendorf lives in Fredericksburg where his wife, three sons and his daughter all work with him at his gallery.

Sculptor Ann Armstrong's bronze sculptures are known for their portrayal of human emotions. In 1981 she was commissioned by a group of Houstonians to sculpt a bust of the late Golda Meir, to be presented to the nation of Israel at the feast of the tabernacles.

Ms. Armstrong was trained at the Kansas City Art Institute. Her works range in scale from just a few inches to life size.

Although her studio is in Houston, she travels extensively executing portrait commissions from personal sittings as well as teaching workshops.

This sculpture by Ann Armstrong is on display at Theatre Midland through May 18.

Auditions slated for 'Rains'

ODESSA — Open auditions for "Whenever It Rains: A Celebration of the Spirit of Odessa" are scheduled for 7:30 to 9 p.m. May 13-15 at the Globe Theatre.

Singing and non-singing parts will be available for dancers, actors and actresses of all ages. Production dates for the play are June 28 and 29, July 5, 6 and 7.

Written by Rick Smith with music by Tim Ryan, "Whenever It Rains" traces the beginning of Odessa from the arrival of the towns first settlers to the discovery of oil.

"Whenever It Rains" was originally produced in 1981 as part of Odessa's centennial celebration. Since then, the script has been revised to include more of Odessa's history. This will be the fourth year the Globe has mounted the production.

Parts available include Col.Spangler, Odessa's first promoter; Kate and Ben Cooper, early ranchers in the area; the telegraph operator and the news reporter who watch Odessa grow; Dora Edwards, a storekeeper from Boston who speaks incredibly bad French; and Jim and Molly Johnson, a young couple on their way west who decide to settle in Odessa after a train runs over the mules pulling their wagon.

The production will be under the direction of David Weaver, Jr. with musical direction by Heidi Hoffman and choreography by Jan Collerd. For additional information and copies of the script, contact the Globe of the Great Southwest.

Carlsbad to host art show

The Carlsbad Area Art Association will host its 22nd annual Tri-State Arts and Crafts juried exhibition from July 1 through July 27. All artists, craftsmen and photographers over 18 years of age in the states of Arizona, Texas and New Mexico are invited to participate.

The show will hang in the Fine Arts Gallery of the Carlsbad Museum, 101 S. Halagueno St., from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. daily through Saturday. The museum is closed Sundays.

Two noted New Mexico artists, Ray Vinella and Leslie Crespin, will serve as jurors and will select the show from submitted slides. Awards will be selected by the jurors after all work is received. Last day for receipt of slides, entry forms and fees is May 24.

Cash awards will be given for Best of Show and in each of six categories where ten or more works are accepted. Categories include oil, acrylic, mixed media, watercolor, pastel, graphics, prints, drawings, scratchboard, photography, sculpture and fine arts crafts: ceramics, fiber arts, glass, metalwork, jewelry, woods.

All shipped work is due on or before June 27. Entry forms and further information may be obtained from CAAA Tri-State, Box 66, Carlsbad, N.M. 88220, or call Peggy Titus, 1-505-887-3796.

ACS Round-up June 1

The American Cancer Society announces Round-Up 1985 will be held June 1. Proceeds from the gala will help support service, education and research programs of the American Cancer Society.

Crystal Gale will be the entertainer for the affair with dining and dancing under the stars. The Perini Brothers of Buffalo Gap will again cater the fund raiser. Also included in the evening will be special events, such as, cow chip throwing and horse shoe tossing.

More than 3 million Americans live today who are cured of cancer; however, the battle is not won. Monies raised during this event will help provide funds necessary for the American Cancer Society to accomplish its goal: the elimination of cancer in our lifetime.

For more information, please contact 683-6374.

Give roast 'uncommon treatment' for elegant entree

By PHILOMENA CORRADENO
King Features Syndicate

A roast is a roast is a roast is a roast? Only if you go the usual route — that is, seasoning it, popping it into the oven and practically ignoring it until the thermometer or timer gives the alert. Roasts need no attention, making it an ideal, leisurely, impressive way to entertain guests or satisfy family. But give the meat an uncommon treatment and you lift it from the ordinary to an elegant entree.

There's a wide choice, not only in the meat but in the cut.

First, there's a boneless pork leg (fresh ham) with a savory wild-rice stuffing. For this we've selected a vacuum-packed (not frozen) pork because there's no waste. This lean and tender meat, available in most markets, has no excess fat. If left unopened, it will keep in your fridge for one to two weeks. Check the "last date of sale" on the package.

If you can't find the vacuum-packed, have your butcher remove the bone from a pork leg.

PORK LEG WITH WILD-RICE STUFFING

3 to 3½-pound boneless pork leg
1 cup water
¼ cup wild rice ⅛ teaspoon salt
¾ cup diced peeled tart apple
½ cup coarsely chopped carrot
½ cup coarsely chopped green pepper
3 tablespoons butter
1 teaspoon celery salt
1 teaspoon savory
⅛ teaspoon pepper

Bring water to boil in small saucepan; add wild rice and salt. Cover tightly and cook slowly 45 minutes. Stir in apple, carrot, green pepper, 2 tablespoons butter, ½ teaspoon celery salt and ½ teaspoon savory and continue cooking, covered, 5 minutes.

Cut pocket lengthwise in pork, parallel to cutting surface, making it as large as possible, yet being careful not to cut through opposite side.

Place stuffing in pocket; secure with small wooden picks. Lace string around picks to close opening. Place roast, fat side up, on rack in open roasting pan. Insert meat thermometer so bulb is centered in thickest part, not resting in fat or stuffing. Do not add water. Do not cover.

Melt remaining butter; brush over surface of roast. Roast in slow oven (325 degrees) until meat thermometer registers 170 degrees (about 35 minutes per pound), 2¼ to 3 hours. Remove roast and let stand 15 to 20 minutes before carving.

If gravy is desired: Skim fat from drippings. Add enough water to drippings to make ⅔ cup. Combine ⅓ cup Rhine wine and 2 teaspoons cornstarch in small saucepan; add diluted drippings. Bring to a boil and boil 1 minute, stirring constantly.

• • •

If you prefer fresh ham without stuffing, pork can be given a special touch. Forget the applesauce. Instead, fill apples with a herby bread stuffing and bake them during the last 40 or 45 minutes the roast is in the oven.

ROAST PORK LEG

5- to 7-pound half pork leg
¼ teaspoon coarse ground black pepper
1 teaspoon rosemary, crushed

Rub meat on all sides with pepper and rosemary. Place, fat side up, on rack in open roast pan. Insert meat thermometer so bulb is centered in thickest part. Be sure bulb does not rest in fat or on bone. Do not add water. Do not cover. Roast in slow oven (325F) until meat thermometer registers 170F. Allow 35 to 40 minutes per pound.

BAKED APPLE STUFFING CUPS

8 medium cooking apples
¼ cup butter or drippings
1 cup chopped celery
1 cup water
1 (8-ounce) package herb- seasoned stuffing mix
¼ cup chopped walnuts

Slice off top third of apples; reserve. Remove part of the cores and centers to form cups. Coarsely chop reserved tops.

In saucepan cook celery in butter or drippings 3 minutes. Add water; bring to a boil. Stir in stuffing mix, chopped apples and walnuts.

Beef Wellington

Remove from heat; cover and let stand 5 minutes.

Fill each apple cup with stuffing. place cups in 13-by-9-inch baking dish. Cover tightly with aluminum foil and bake in slow oven (325F) 20 to 25 minutes. Remove cover and continue baking 10 to 15 minutes or until apples are tender.

• • •

In the annual menu survey conducted by Restaurants /& Institutions magazine, Beef Wellington led the list of entrees most often being added to menus. In two years the number of establishments that are including it has risen from 9 percent of those surveyed to about 20 percent.

Why are chefs taking on this not-too-easy chore? Because beef is still a leading choice and Wellington is fast growing in popularity with diners.

You too can serve this culinary masterpiece. You may choose the expensive tender filet, or use an eye round with meat tenderizer. And take the easy way with frozen patty shells for the pastry cover.

Thaw shells in the refrigerator for several hours, or overnight, being sure they remain cool to the touch. Do not press them into a ball because that destroys the leaf layering that distinguishes puff pastry. Rather, place thawed shells side by side to roll them into a long rectangle. A stockinet-covered rolling pin and pastry cloth are helpful in working with puff pastry.

BEEF WELLINGTON

1 4-pound eye round of beef
¼ cup softened butter or margarine
1 teaspoon unseasoned tenderizer
1 (4-ounce) can chopped mushrooms, drained
2 (4½-ounce) cans liver pate
¼ teaspoon rosemary
2 (10-ounce) packages frozen patty shells, thawed
1 egg
1 teaspoon milk

Spread top of eye round with softened butter. Prick with a fork at ½-inch intervals. Sprinkle with tenderizer. Roast in a hot (450F) oven 60 minutes (medium rare), then cool completely.

Meanwhile, combine mushrooms, liver pate and rosemary. When beef is cool, spread liver-mushroom mixture over entire surface. Roll out thawed patty shells (12 shells) about ¼-inch thick, making one long piece of pastry. Wrap it around the beef.

Trim edges of pastry, moistening edges with water, and seal by pressing together. Brush crust with egg beaten with milk. Prick crust in a few places to allow steam to escape. Roll out trimmed pastry and cut into narrow strips. Lay across dough-wrapped beef in lattice pattern. Brush these also with beaten egg and milk.

Bake in hot (425F) oven 20 minutes, or until pastry is golden brown.

• • •

What could be more delicious than a lean, delicately cured, canned Polish ham? Enhanced with fresh tomatoes, onion and Madeira wine, it makes a glorious roast.

BAKED POLISH HAM MADEIRA

1 5-pound canned Polish ham
2 medium fresh tomatoes, chopped
1 medium onion, chopped
½ teaspoon oregano
1 cup Madeira wine

Place Polish ham in baking pan. Surround with chopped tomatoes and onions. Sprinkle oregano over vegetables. Pour Madeira over ham and vegetables. Bake in a preheated 350F oven for one hour, basting ham several times with wine and vegetables from pan. Slice ham and serve with vegetables and pan juices. Serve with buttered bow-tie pasta and steamed broccoli.

• • •

If properly done, without going overboard with garnish, a glazed smoked ham is probably one of the most attractive roasts to grace a table. Don't go for the usual pineapple; this time make it cherries.

GLAZED HAM

5-to-7-pound shank half smoked ham
¾ cup cherry preserves
1 tablespoon fresh orange juice
1 teaspoon grated orange peel

Place ham, fat side up, on rack in an open roasting pan. Insert meat thermometer so bulb is centered in the thickest part. Do not let bulb rest in fat or on bone. Do not add water. Do not cover. Roast in a slow oven (325F) until meat thermometer registers 130F to 140F for "fully-cooked" half ham (18 to 24 minutes per pound); 160F for a "cooked-before-eating" half ham (22 to 25 minutes per pound).

Meanwhile, melt cherry preserves in small saucepan over medium heat. Strain cherries from syrup; reserve syrup. Coarsely chop cherries. Combine cherries, syrup, orange juice and grated orange peel. Brush glaze over ham during last 20 minutes of cooking time.

Seniors can remember their school year via video cassette

JERSEY CITY, N.J. (AP) — Years from now, members of the Class of '85 at Fairleigh Dickinson High School will be able to recall the good old days by popping a video cassette into a player and watching themselves at dances, football games and field trips.

They are among the first students to star in a video yearbook, a two-hour tape for which footage has been gathered during the past seven months.

The experiment has not only boosted morale at the inner-city school but has also increased attendance at school functions and turned some casual dressers into fashion plates.

"The school is cleaning up a lot. The graffiti has come off the walls and everything," said Renee Charles, 18, one of about 425 seniors.

When about 50 seniors recently took a field trip to the United Nations and the American Museum of Natural History in New York City, Michael Brain, co-owner of Sunrise Video Productions Inc., went along.

Brain has spent hundreds of hours with the students, taping them in action at academic contests, performances of the musical "Grease," Halloween parties, science fairs and dances.

"In the beginning, they were anxious, jumping in front of the camera, doing ridiculous things," said Brain. But now they don't seem to notice the camera at all, he said.

Taping will end with the graduation, and the hours of raw material will be edited into a two-hour tape, scheduled to be ready by August.

Novel 'Face' testimony to human spirit

"Face," by Cecile Pineda. Viking. 194 pp., $14.95.

By DAN CRYER
Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

The human face presents the self to the world. In our smiles, tears, wrinkles and grimaces we telegraph a thousand silent tales.

But what if the face has been so disfigured by accident that people turn away in pity or horror? Since the self is so much a product of the interaction between the outward-looking I and the rest of the world peering in, has the self then been changed, too?

Such is the intriguing predicament given fictional expression in "Face," Cecile Pineda's first novel. It is a poetic, hallucinatory work, finely and sparely written, the debut of a very talented writer indeed. In the end, however, her book is done in by the heavyweight of symbolism its slight frame cannot support.

The novel's protagonist, Helio Cara, is a 36-year-old mulatto barber who lives in a mountainside shantytown high above Rio de Janeiro. (Although Ms. Pineda does not describe his face, the man's first name means "sungod" and his surname "face.") A simple man from Brazil's hinterlands who barely reads and writes, Helio hopes someday to own a barbershop of his own and to marry Lula, his sweetheart. But a freak accident destroys those plans forever.

Informed by telegram one day that his mother is dying, Helio races in the rain down the steps toward the city (presumably to catch a bus to visit her). He slips, falls down the cliff and resumes consciousness the next day in a hospital. His face has been severely maimed and can be reconstructed only by plastic surgery that he cannot afford and that the state will not provide unless he can prove that his disfigurement prevents him from practicing his trade.

Thereafter one misfortune begets another. Despite his boss's refusal to rehire him after his recuperation, government bureaucrats thwart Helio's efforts to qualify for surgery. Neighbors shun him and eventually burn down his shack. Worst of all, Lula rejects him, saying, "I can't make love to a monster."

Helio is reduced to a pathetic figure wearing a rubber mask (later discarded for a white handkerchief) to hide his deformity, scavenging for food among garbage cans. He has become a man wthout a face, a man without a self.

A Review

Although Helio eventually finds a clinic where the surgery will be done free of charge, he decides to decline treatment after all. His motivation is unclear — and this is a major failing of the novel — but apparently his lack of a home and a lover have made life unbearable in the metropolis. He's no doubt a hunted man by now, too, since he's raped and beaten Lula for refusing his advances. Why then does Helio continue going to the clinic after the rape, and why does he return to her apartment to look for her?

In any event, Helio later heads back to the provinces and somehow finds the courage and makeshift skills to reshape his face himself. Although he is of a time and place in which barbers set fractures and pull teeth as well as cut hair, the scenes in which he strips skin from his chest and grafts it onto his face, and boils a plastic ball to construct a nose are wildly improbable.

Helio, you see, is not simply remaking his face. He is fashioning a new identity. Despite apparent death threats from Lula's brother, he returns to Rio ready to take on the challenge of a new life.

There is no reason, of course, to swallow any of this. The novel's supposed testimony to the survival of the human spirit, to the little guy's existential defiance of fate, seems instead a product of sheer authorial fiat. Ms. Pineda hasn't made Helio seem capable of this kind of transformation at all. It has, consequently, all the credibility of a quack in the operating room.

If metaphorical overkill poisons plot in "Face," Ms. Pineda's prose nonetheless gives a great deal of pleasure. In short takes of a page or two, the author mixes past, present and dream. Watch closely as she describes Helio's nurse in the hospital:

"The Big Irma, flipping his body like ninepins, and the new sheets of the morning cool to the touch. Later he could see her gold teeth, announcing the day like a sunrise. Why don't you smile, Senhor? And her raucous cackle when he pointed to his jaws wired shut.

"In his eye, he saw her, the massive shelf of black breasts dancing dementedly, head thrown back, her teeth his own private sunrise. Peals laughter: if God made a sound for the dawn, a sign, it would be this — if God had thought of it first, before the Big Irma."

By PHIL THOMAS
Associated Press

On the dust jacket of "Blood Meridian," the publisher should have printed this warning: "The contents of this novel may upset your stomach."

That's the kind of book it is, and the it starts in the third paragraph when the story's unnamed protagonist is described as "pale and unwashed. He can neither read nor write and in him broods already a taste for mindless violence."

The last two words are the key, for this book contains nothing but page after page of mindless violence. Opening in 1849, when "the kid" is 14, orphaned and roaming about the South in search of ways of keeping alive, the story line moves quickly into the Southwest and into Mexico, and the route is littered with corpses.

Teaming up first with a band which is wiped out by Indians, the kid alone escapes. He's on his own, but not for long. Soon he ties up with another gang that has been hired by a Mexican governor to go out and kill Apaches and bring back their scalps. The gang does just that, and McCarthy details the killing scenes in gruesome plenitude. And so it goes, for page after blood-spattered page, until the kid himself is finally wiped out some 30 years after he took up his murderous ways.

Pieces of Eight," by Sydney Harris; Houghton-Mifflin; 292 pages; $7.95 (softcover). Small book carries giant cargo of wisdom: "Honesty consists of the unwillingness to lie to others; maturity, which is equally hard to attain, consists of the unwillingness to lie to oneself...If we could find a way of relieving boredom for the human race, it would reduce mischief and crime far more than a hundred schemes to promote morality and punish evil-doing..."

Book gives account of life in bee society

"The Queen Must Die: And Other Affairs of Bees & Men," by William Longgood. Norton. 234 Pages. $12.95.

A Review

FRANK STILLEY
Associated Press

There could hardly be a more fascinating creature in all creation than the bee, and particularly the honeybee. But the more humans learn about bees the more mystified they become.

"Scientists believe that bees, next to humans, have the most elaborate social structure and specialization of labor in the animal kingdom," writes author William Longgood.

Indeed. And bee society still is beyond human comprehension in many, many ways. For whatever reason, though, bees seem to like humans.

In a honeybee society the individual doesn't count, except to perform specific tasks for the good of all. Bees ruthlessly destroy any that cannot serve, even their queen, because of age, injury or laziness.

A hive is a female society, headed by a queen. Females do all the work of gathering nectar and pollen, housekeeping, tending young, serving as honeycomb construction engineers and making endless decisions.

They decide when to create a new queen and how many drones to produce. Queens and drones, the males, are developed from special diets. The drones live a lush life of total indolence. They do nothing but eat and loll around — until time to fertilize a new queen. One or more then succeeds in a high-flying sex fling. Consummation kills them.

Queens do nothing but lay eggs, often as many as 2,000 a day. They are constantly fed, cleaned and loved — as long as they produce.

There are literally thousands of other nuances of bee life: communication, navigation, hive operation, disaster action and human relations.

This is no dull, pedantic, scientific book. It is a lively, loving account of what seems to be known about bee life and the countless things still left to know. In many ways bees seem to be more intelligent than humans. Why?

Any reader should find this book utterly enthralling.

Author catalogues 20 financial fiascos

"Famous Financial Fiascos," by John Train. Clarkson N. Potter Inc. 112 Pages. $8.95.

A Review

By PHIL THOMAS
Associated Press

Phineas Taylor Barnum is credited with coining the phrase, "There's a sucker born every minute."

But even Barnum would be surprised at just how right he was if he were around to read John Train's "Famous Financial Fiascos," a wittily acerbic cataloging of the vast variety of ways devised over the centuries to separate a fool and his money.

For starters, there was a wheeler-dealer named Charles Ponzi. Back in 1919, Ponzi had an idea. He organized a firm that would take your money "and after 90 days you got back your original stake plus a profit of 40 percent."

Sounds absurd on the face of it, but greed provides marvelous blinders for otherwise clear eyes and the money poured in. Ponzi, of course, took the money paid in by later investors "and simply paid off earlier investors with funds received from later ones." Who knows how long it might have gone on if the authorities hadn't stepped in? But they did, Ponzi went to jail, and the investors were left holding the proverbial bag.

Another financial structure that collapsed like a house of cards was one built in the 1920s and '30s by Ivar Krueger, the Swedish match king. With a near monopolistic grip on the international match market, Krueger constructed a company that "seemed to repose serenely on a financial rock." More, actually, like quicksand since some strange financial goings-on were at work. When they came to a head, Krueger shot himself, his firm collapsed, and claims against his estate eventually passed $1 billion.

In 18 other incisive accounts, Train tells of other giant financial schemes that went sadly, for investors, awry. Among the were "Tulipomania," "The Great War Loan Conversion," and "The Putrefacation of Juan March."

GOREN BRIDGE

BY CHARLES GOREN AND OMAR SHARIF

©1985 Tribune Media Services, Inc

DEAR MR. GOREN

Q.—We had a major catastrophe on the following hand:

♡AQ7643 ◇Q ♧AKQJ52

We use weak two-bids, so I opened with an artificial forcing bid of two clubs. My left-hand opponent overcalled two spades, partner passed and right-hand opponent raised to four spades. I tried five hearts, and we played it there for down one. The tragedy is that we were cold for seven clubs. Where did we go wrong?—S.W., West Palm Beach, Fla.

A.—I sympathize with you—you fell victim to the one weakness of all systems that use a strong one club or two club opening bid. They are ill-equipped to handle powerful two-suited hands, especially where the opponents interfere.

Had you been playing old-fashioned strong two-bids, there would be no harm in opening two hearts. Now when the bidding reached four spades by your turn, you could safely venture five clubs. After your artificial two club bid, however, you were at the five-level and you had not yet shown one suit!

The solution is to open the hand one heart! I know that seems like a drastic underbid, but you can be sure that the auction won't end there. You can jump shift in clubs at your next turn to complete the description of your hand.

Q.—In a recent quiz you had the following hand:

♠Q73 ♡J952 ◇K10653 ♧8

You suggested that the correct response to a one club opening bid was one diamond. I had always been taught that it is correct to respond in the major, rather than the minor. Why the difference in approach?—J.L., Detroit, Mich.

A.—The modern tendency is to respond up-the-line, i.e., you bid your cheapest suit first. That is especially true when the lower-ranking suit is five cards long and the higher only four cards.

By responding that way, you should not miss a fit in any suit. If you respond one diamond and partner has a four-card heart suit, he will bid it next. When you hold a weak hand, that has the additional advantage of making the stronger hand the declarer at the major-suit contract, with the weaker hand exposed in the dummy.

Naturally, the above recommendation does not apply when responder has two five-card suits. Then it is always correct to respond in the higher-ranking of the two, so you can rebid in the lower-ranking suit.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Monday, May 6, 1985

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Your talent for getting along with people receives new attention in the months ahead. A company or individual with a public-relations problem looks to you for help. Promise yourself that you will insist on being paid for your expertise. A shrewd real estate investment could mean lasting financial security. Give family life top priority, and your personal relationships will be richly rewarding. Romantic partner shows great affection. CELEBRITY BIRTHDATES: journalist-author Theodore White, baseball's Willie Mays, actor-producer-writer-director Orson Welles, rising star Lori Singer, the Phillies' Larry Anderson, pianist Carmen Cavallero, actor Stewart Granger, psychoanalyst Dr. Sigmund Freud.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): An estate matter will be settled in your favor. An out-of-town visitor could alter your plans for the day. A change in lifestyle brings you greater comfort.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Use diplomacy to avoid getting dragged into other people's conflicts. A co-worker may be demanding too much of your time or sympathy. Protect your privacy.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A work-related decision is announced at long last. An associate's shrewd advice and practical help improve your finances. Show your appreciation. Allow a teen-ager to make more decisions.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A friend shares exciting news. Listen carefully -- you could benefit financially. Although your social life is booming now, work must come first. Spend more of your leisure time with family members.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Handle business and financial transactions with care, consulting lawyers or accountants when necessary. A new hobby could turn out to be a real moneymaker. Keep all secrets to yourself.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Stick to a sure thing when trying to boost your career or income. Stop envying someone else's good luck -- your turn will come soon! Double check reservations.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Distractions could slow progress at work. Remain good-natured. You need to consult experts before okaying a financial transaction. A former associate could make an excellent romantic partner.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Someone in authority is more supportive than in the past. You may have to make a major career decision soon. Listen carefully to a loved one who has your best interests at heart.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Tackle any work that requires intense concentration early in the day. Immediate gains will be small but welcome. Be persistent. A special announcement gives family members cause for celebration.

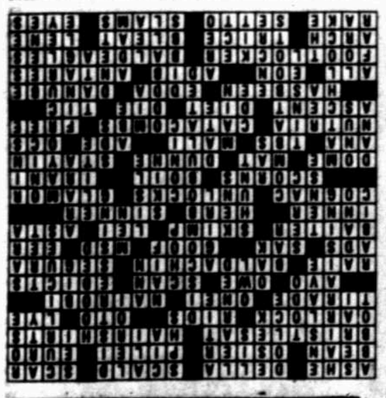

CAPRICORN (Dec. 21-Jan. 19): A discussion about earning power with a knowledgeable person proves very helpful. You are likely to feel some impatience with old customs and methods.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A temporary personal sacrifice may be required. Give a little and you gain a lot! An old friendship means more than ever. New romance is possible. Spruce up your home or personal appearance.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Your past experiences serve you well in business. Charm works wonders when dealing with a stubborn acquaintance. Romance puts a dent in savings.
