On The BEAM

By J. W. King, Sr.

Land has been found for the lighted baseball field and the committee is ready to receive money from any source to use in the purchase of the land, putting up the lights and other things necessary for a baseball field.

The city has agreed to underwrite $500 of the cost, so has a gin, which is $1000 toward the cost. The field will cost more than $2000 so another $1000 will have to be raised by some means in order to complete the job. All the money needs to be on hand before the project is started.

There is not much time to wait as the baseball season will be upon us right away. Once the field is built revenue from the games and concessions should pay for it in a short time. There is no question about the need for the field. The young folks need a place for recreation and the citizens of the community ought to provide it for them.

Abilene Woman Spoke At Baptist Church Here Monday

Approximately 40 women were present to hear Mrs. J. L. Anthony of Abilene when she spoke at the First Baptist Church Monday at 2 p. m.

Mrs. Anthony, a member of the University Baptist Church in Abilene for approximately 50 years, says her great love is missions, which she talks, teaches and lives. She has made three trips to Canada, one to Hawaiian Islands and has been in many states teaching in mission schools and giving her testimony. But the highlight of her life was when she boarded a plane for Nigeria, Africa, to help in work for five months, a venture her relatives and friends were not so optimistic about for the then 78 year old woman. But she took medicine in case she got sick, the amount of 5 aspirin, and brought four of them home. The trip was financed by friends who said "we did this because we've all gained in one way or another from Mrs. Anthony's generosity of spirit."

Mrs. Anthony is author of a book, "Here I Am" an autobiography, and presented an autographed copy to the church library.

Mrs. Anthony is an aunt of Mrs. Hubert Meadows of Lorraine. Her sister, Mrs. H. C. McDermott and Mr. McDermott of Abilene, accompanied her to Lorraine and Mrs. McDermott was present for the days program.

Rep. George Mahon Reports To People

Agriculture: On March 6, I joined a number of other Members of Congress in urging the Secretary of Agriculture to reconsider his action in slashing milo supports. We pointed out that the 31 cents per 100 pounds cut in milo for 1959 was all out of proportion to the support price for corn and that the heavy reduction would be disastrous to many grain sorghum growers. We called Mr. Benson's attention to the fact that milo was of about the same feed value as corn and that the law requires that relative feed values should be considered in fixing feed grain supports. Mr. Benson pointed out that under the law he has authority to consider other factors. He gave the group no encouragement. The next move will be a hearing on the problem by the House Agriculture Committee on March 13th.

National Defense: We are in the seventh week of hearings on the President's defense budget. Scores of witnesses have testified. From the facts presented, it is clear that the U. S. is in the overall, is militarily stronger than Russia.

It is also clear that we are behind in the vital field of long-range ballistic missiles. In the intercontinental ballistic missile race it is estimated that we will lag behind Russia through 1963.

When we consider that the ICBM is, no doubt, to become the major weapon of the future, we cannot regard this second place role without concern. We are now giving much consideration to the problem of how to close the missile gap. The situation is disturbing, but we must bear in mind that our bomber striking power is still quite capable of destroying Russia. In fact, each side is becoming increasingly more capable of destroying the other. This points up the urgent necessity for a genuine settlement of major international problems.

Foreign Affairs: Most Democrats and Republicans alike view the illness of Secretary Dulles as a serious blow to the country at this critical point in our foreign relations. No one is equipped to step immediately into Mr. Dulles' shoes. There is full agreement that we must stand firm in the presence of danger in the Berlin crisis. But more is required than determination. There must be day to day planning and decisions. The President is doing the best he can to meet a difficult situation. It is certain that he will be fully supported by Congress.

The Berlin controversy has become increasingly more serious in recent weeks as a result of Khrushchev's further demands and maneuvers. He appears determined to try to kick the Western powers out of Berlin. It is thought that he will stop short of war, but miscalculations in an atmosphere of threat and bluster constitute a real danger of a shooting war.

Spending: The President recently submitted a balanced budget for the coming fiscal year, but the balance hinges on some important "ifs". For example, the budget as presented would be thrown off balance if Congress, as now appears likely, refuses to raise the gasoline tax by 1 1/2 cents per gallon or rejects the increase in the first-class postage rate from 4c to 5c. Also, there are indications that the President's revenue estimates are unduly optimistic.

The controversy between the President and Congress over who is the chief culprit in big spending focuses public attention on a very vital issue. The unassailable truth, based on official Executive figures, is that the President has requested considerably more spending authority since he has been in office than Congress has provided. Had Congress followed the recommendations of the President, the Executive branch would have spent, or had on hand to spend, large additional sums.

I believe that Congress will moderately increase the President's defense budget, but I hope the over-all budget can be kept in balance. The government departments may spend money as a result of direct appropriations by Congress, or as a result of authority granted by Congress to withdraw funds from the Treasury without consideration by the Appropriations Committee, a system known as the "back door" method. I am supporting legislation to block the back door method. During the last two years Congress cut the President's requested spending authority in appropriation bills by about $5 billion, but increased sums requested through the so-called back door method by about $2 billion. If all spending authority were channeled through the Appropriation Committees of Congress, the Congress and the country could more easily keep tab on government spending and the pressures for economy would be greater.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilmon Tartt and girls spent Saturday night and Sunday with her mother, Mrs. Will Young, at Elmdale.

We express our heartfelt thanks for the flowers, food, cards and every other expression of sympathy and comfort to us during our sorrow. We are deeply grateful for such friends.

Questions and Answers

Q. I'm going to have to fill out a VA income questionnaire soon. Are State veterans' bonuses considered income for VA pension purposes?

A. No. Under the law, bonuses or similar cash gratuities paid by States for service in the Armed Forces are not considered as income in determining eligibility for VA pension.

Q. I am thinking of adding the total disability income rider to my World War 2 GI insurance policy. If I become disabled and receive the monthly income benefits, will the amount my

A. No. War Orphans payments may not be made to a student attending school less than half-time.

Q. Are "peacetime" veterans entitled to VA hospital care?

MY HUSBAND SAYS

..... he gets pretty mad at the unfair things some people say about Electric Cooperatives. He says that if it hadn't been for our electric cooperative we might still be without electricity. He says we borrowed the money at interest to build our own system. That we made a covenant and agreed to serve as many rural people as we could and that in many areas we put up several miles of line just to serve one member. He says the cooperatives are the world's greatest rural electrification experts. My husband also says that we've never tried to take consumers from other utilities... and he doesn't think they should invade the areas we fought so hard to develop. My husband says we must have equal rights to survive.
