Friends recall Daniel fondly

By TIM LOTT
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS — Former Texas Gov. Price Daniel was remembered today as an honest, gentle man who had the peoples' best interest at heart during his years in office.

Daniel, who served three terms as governor from 1957-63, died early this morning at his ranch in Liberty of a cause that hasn't been determined, but could have been a stroke. He was 77.

Texas Gov. Bill Clements this morning released a statement from Taos, N.M., where he is vacationing. He asked that Texas flags be flown at half staff to honor Daniel.

"It was with great sadness that I learned of the death of my friend, Price Daniel," Clements said.

"Texas historians and political scholars will look back at his more than 40 years in public life with respect and admiration," Clements said. "No man has done more for our state than Price Daniel."

"I am truly saddened," Clements said.

"He was always a gentleman," said Waggoner Carr, speaker of the Texas House of Representatives from 1957-61. "He was not mean in any sense of the word. He was just a very reliable person. The people trusted him and he never did betray that trust."

"I'm sorry to hear about it," Carr said. "He was a very honest, forthright man. He was a hard worker and a good friend."

Daniel had been a U.S. Senator for one term before he ran for governor in 1956 against Ralph W. Yarborough. Daniel won the election, but Yarborough won a special election to replace Daniel in the U.S. Senate.

Daniel sought a fourth term as governor in the 1962 election, but didn't even make the runoff. John Connally defeated Don Yarborough in a runoff election for the Democratic nomination and then defeated Jack Cox in the general election.

Daniel served three terms as Texas attorney general from 1947-1953.

Ralph Yarborough said he and Daniel were in the Young Democrats together before Dwight Eisenhower became president. He said a split occurred when Daniel supported Eisenhower for the office.

Because of their mutual objectives in later years, Yarborough said, "A friendship formed between us despite the spirited race for governor in 1956."

"It's a great loss to Texas," Yarborough said. "I considered him a friend. I think he did me, too."

Esteem Machine performs for deaf

By STEVE GEISSEN
Staff Writer

In an effort to spur an awareness of issues such as teen pregnancy and drug abuse, a teen theatre group performed Wednesday for students and faculty of SouthWest Collegiate Institute for the Deaf.

The Esteem Machine — the teen theatre group of Planned Parenthood of West Texas, Inc. — performed for approximately 70 people at SWCID.

The group — composed of students from Midland and Odessa high schools — performs throughout West Texas presenting short dramas dealing with problems affecting teens.

The problems the group dramatizes include drug and alcohol abuse, incest, date rape and teen pregnancy.

At SWCID, interpreters translated the actor's dialogue into sign language for the deaf students in the audience.

"Our program usually doesn't go in and change lives," said Rene Brister Chambers, director of the group. "What our program does is get people to think about the issues we present. It helps bring a lot of problems out in the open."

The Esteem Machine presentation is particularly appropriate for educating deaf students about human sexuality, she said.

"The hearing impaired tend to be ignored as far as learning materials on these topics are concerned," she said.

In one of the skits, a girl confronts and overcomes the peer pressure associated with drug usage.

In other skits: A girl who has died because of drunk driving relates her feelings as she watches her own funeral; an incest victim realizes that she is not to blame for her father's actions and seeks help; a victim of date rapes decides to confide in her mother; and four girls debunk several birth control myths.

The last drama, a skit on teen pregnancy, features a role reversal designed to allow males to see teen pregnancy in a different light. In this skit, two pregnant males with bulging stomachs talk of how they were treated unfairly by their girlfriends who have abandoned them.

"She got really mad when I told her I was pregnant," says one male to the other. "And just like your girlfriend, she said that I couldn't prove it was her's. She told me she loved me, but now I see it was just a ploy to get me in bed with her. I feel so cheap."

After the performance, the seven members of the cast introduced themselves and took part in a question and answer session.

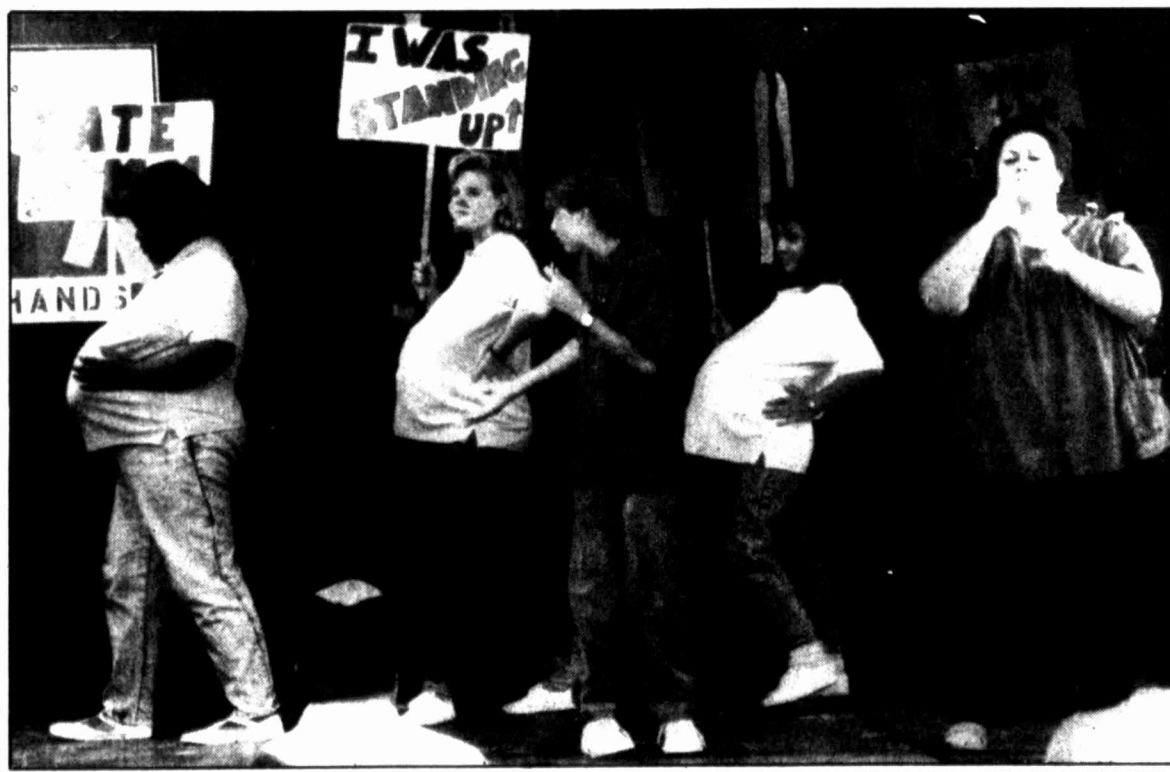

Several SWCID students asked questions through interpreters and a candid discussion of the issues the group dramatized ensued.

Questioned about sexual abuse, Chambers told the students that most girls who become pregnant before they reach the age of 13 are the victims of sexual abuse.

"There are ways they can get help," she said. "It's a very prevalent problem we don't address much in any of the educational programs in the Permian Basin."

The Esteem Machine presentations are, in part, designed to reach out to the victims of abuse, she said. "If people see our skits, and they talk about sexual abuse, it makes it easier to report," she said.

Asked what he had gained from his participation in Esteem Machine, Brian Coates, 16, said

Fires rage, threatening campground

By BART ZIEGLER

New wildfires ignited as hundreds of soldiers fanned out along fire lines, while a huge blaze threatened one of Yellowstone National Park's most scenic areas and flames came within a mile of a nuclear missile silo in Montana.

In Oregon, Gov. Neil Goldschmidt declared an emergency Wednesday night, clearing the way for deployment of the National Guard to help fight raging fires. Crews also struggled against blazes in Idaho, Washington and California.

The Boise Interagency Fire Center, which coordinates firefighting in the West and Alaska, said 66,000 fires have blackened 3.3 million acres in drought-plagued 1988, 300,000 acres more than in 1986, considered the region's worst year.

"Obviously, we've got a wild year here," said spokeswoman Bernie Pineda.

In Montana, fire broke out Wednesday afternoon a half-mile from a Minuteman II nuclear missile site between Great Falls and Lewistown, the Air Force said.

The blaze more than doubled to 900 acres overnight, but Zail Chapman, dispatcher for the Helena National Forest in Great Falls, said, "The missile silo is completely secure."

About 240 firefighters were in the area, and the fire was expected to be contained by tonight, he said.

Malmstrom Air Force Base at Great Falls sent military police and firefighters to protect the silo Wednesday afternoon but withdrew them during the night, Capt. Donald Planalp said this morning.

"There is really nothing above ground that's flammable," Planalp said.

Firefighters in Yellowstone hoped for continued low winds to help keep the 97,600-acre North Fork fire from moving the one mile to an evacuated campground and hotel complex.

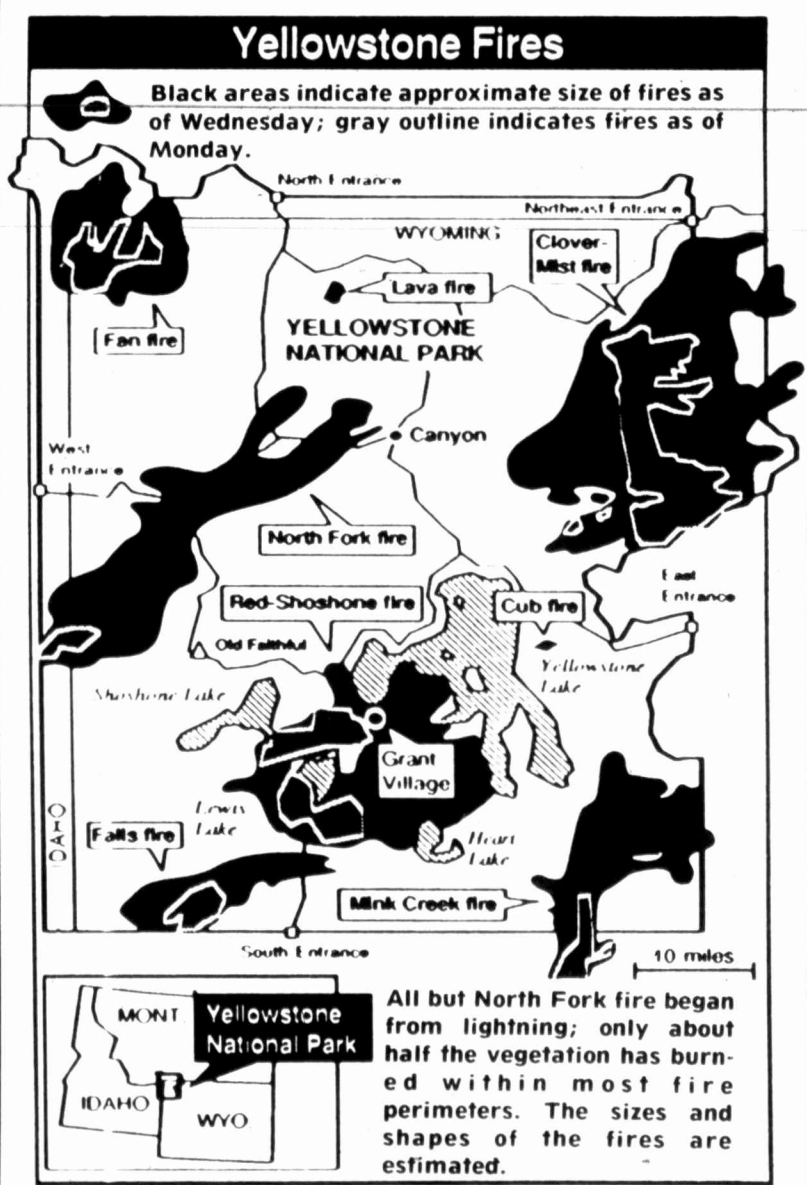

About 360 visitors were evacuated Wednesday as flames advanced to within 1½ miles of the Canyon compound.

"It's a hassle," said visitor Pat Bentz of Prineville, Ore. "I just hope I don't have to go through this kind of thing again."

The evacuation left only firefighters and reporters to contend with the heavy smoke that obscured the sun and veiled views of the 308-foot Lower Falls and 109-foot Upper Falls.

Ten fires involving 355,000 acres were burning in Yellowstone, closing five other campgrounds, the Grant Village hotel area and the south entrance. Firefighters at the 156,500-acre

Water district planning alterations for pipeline

HERALD STAFF REPORT

The board of directors of the Colorado River Municipal Water District have approved preparations to raise a pipeline across Natural Dam Lake.

The 2,200-foot section of a 36-inch water line will be raised on heavy-duty A-frames, according to District General Manager Owen H. Ivie, high enough to protect the pipeline from submersion in the salty water behind Natural Dam.

That lake has been substantially lowered by releases of its waters. Approximately equal in size to Lake Colorado City when full, the lake now contains slightly less than 20,000 acre-feet of water, according to Joe Pickle, public information officer for the district, and the releases have been reduced to approximately 200 acre-feet of water per day.

Ivie reported that the board has approved up to $225,000 in funds for the project. As part of the same project, cross-connections to a 27-inch water line also routed across Natural Dam Lake will be made, to enable the district to channel water from the submerged 27-inch line into the 36-inch line, should a leak develop in the Initial widening plan is complete

By MICHAEL DUFFY
Staff Writer

Plans for the first phase of the Gregg Street widening project have been completed and forwarded to the Texas Department of Highways and Public Transportation office in Abilene, Mike Chetty, resident engineer, said today.

"Officials there will review the plans and then forward them to the Austin office," Chetty advised.

Federal Highway Department officials will then review the plans. "They have already been involved in the process," Chetty said.

More than 40 business owners were contacted by Chetty in an 18-block area from 10th Street to FM 700, seeking input to alleviate parking problems expected as a result of the construction project slated to begin in late May or early June, he said.

"We've contacted everyone in that area either one way or another. We have worked it out," Chetty said.

That section of highway ranks second among the 13 counties in the highway department's District 8 in number of accidents; fourth in accidents that occur during wet weather; and 13th in the entire state of Texas for cost of improvements in relation to the reduction of accidents.

Highway Department officials announced on May 23 they had decided to proceed with the project that generated months of discussion among Big Spring residents.

Two weeks later, highway officials notified Mayor A.C. "Cotton" Mize they had approved a second street widening project — that will include Gregg Street on U.S. 87 to the Missouri Pacific Railroad overpass — just north of 2nd Street.

Chetty said he will begin, in about three weeks, contacting owners of businesses located along the second phase of the project.

The engineering firm of JSW & Associates is designing the plans for relocation of waterlines beneath Gregg Street to parallel alleyways, Tom Decell, public works director, said today.

The city will contract the construction work for the project that Decell has previously estimated at just over $341,000, an expense the city will bear.

To complete the project, contractors will need 10,170 feet of 4-inch; 3,120 feet of 6-inch and 750 feet of 12-inch waterlines, Decell said.

The city must have the waterlines moved by March 1989, Decell said.

Bidletting will begin in March 1989 and Chetty said it will take about one month before a contract is awarded.

The 10th Street to FM 700 project was proposed because of the accident rate on that portion of the state highway, thus qualifying for $700,000 in federal highway and safety funds. An additional $50,000 will be awarded for traffic lights, according to highway officials.

Toddler's death due to drug fight

DALLAS (AP) — A 21-month-old boy was shot to death during a drug fight and not as the result of a random highway shooting as the child's mother claimed, a Texas Ranger says.

Texas Ranger George Turner of Cleburne said Wednesday that officials now believe the mother, Rochelle Luvon Redicks, 21, and David Lee Lowe, 34, were involved in a drug deal in a Dallas apartment complex at the time John Redicks was shot to death.

Turner said a drug dealer apparently opened fire on Ms. Redicks and Lowe and one of the bullets struck the child in the head.

Dallas Police Lt. Ron Waldrop declined Wednesday to discuss the investigation.

"We're not really at a point where we can talk about it," Waldrop said.

Ms. Redicks claimed Tuesday that the boy was shot as she and a man drove north of Interstate 35 between Waxahachie and Dallas early Tuesday morning.

Minister pleads guilty

DALLAS (AP) — A Southern Baptist minister who said he often watched pornographic films before raping women has been sentenced to 10 life terms after pleading guilty to charges relating to a series of attacks, prosecutors said.

Gregory Charles Goblen, 28, pleaded guilty Wednesday to five charges of burglary of a habitation and sexual assault and five charges of aggravated sexual assault, Dallas County assistant district attorney Mike Gillett said.

The charges were in connection with a series of sexual assaults in and around a north Dallas apartment complex known as The Village.

Goblen was a pastor of Outreach Baptist Church in suburban Garland. The church is one of 28 mission churches sponsored by First Baptist Church of Dallas, which provides funds to pay the minister's salary and help get the church started.

Between sobs that made his answers inaudible at times, Goblen said that his actions were the result of viewing pornographic material available in the community.

A graduate of Trinity Heights Christian Academy in Shreveport, La., Goblen enrolled in Louisiana Tech University in nearby Ruston. He left Shreveport about five years ago to attend Dallas Theological Seminary. After graduating in May 1986, Goblen enrolled at Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary in Fort Worth, where he was working toward a Doctor of Ministry degree.

Parkinson eludes reporters

By DAVE PEGO
Associated Press Writer

MESQUITE — Settled on a hill dubbed "Fort Mesquite," the press waits for Paula Parkinson, the former Washington lobbyist who has become a problem for Republican vice presidential candidate Dan Quayle, but a friend says the media siege won't work.

"She is still here, but she doesn't want to talk to anybody," said a woman who identified herself only as Cori and as a niece of Ms. Parkinson's roommate, John Gideon, who was arrested Friday after a domestic disturbance.

Neighbors say the press began waiting outside the apartment late last week, even before the Los Angeles Daily News reported that two former attorneys for Ms. Parkinson say she told the FBI in 1981 that Quayle had propositioned her on a Florida golfing holiday.

Quayle, who has denied any relationship with Mrs. Parkinson, said Tuesday he is tired of questions about her.

"This is getting a little bit outrageous and I'm getting a little bit indignant about just one bum rap after another," he said.

Ms. Parkinson has refused to come to her apartment door. Although she accepted a list of prepared questions from one reporter, she sent it back outside without answering them.

Gideon was arrested after a disturbance at the apartment complex, Mesquite police said.

Ms. Parkinson has held a number of short-term jobs since the original 1981 scandal and ensuring appearance in Playboy.

She also has had legal problems, The Dallas Morning News reported. She was arrested for public intoxication twice in 1985, with one case being dismissed and the other probated for 90 days.

Then last December, she pleaded guilty to a charge of driving under the influence and was placed on probation for two years, the newspaper said.

Probation Commission wants funds doubled

AUSTIN (AP) — Probation officers should have reduced caseloads, and new services should be provided for offenders with special problems like mental illness or substance abuse, the new executive director of the Texas Adult Probation Commission said.

The commission plans to ask the 1989 Legislature for a 100 percent budget increase to $200 million for the next two years, James McDonough told a Wednesday news conference.

"For the good of our state, for the welfare of the treasury of our state alone, the caseloads and revocations must be reduced, and I think we can do it," said McDonough, a Catholic priest who has been interim executive director since mid-July.

In 1987, the system collected about $102 million in court costs, fees, restitution to victims, attorney fees and probation supervision fees, he said.

Probation revocations send 12,000 people a year to prison, McDonough said, and reducing that number could reduce the number of new prisons needed.

The caseload of an average probation officer is 140 people, he said. There are 2,500 probation officers in Texas, with 178,000 felons and 151,760 misdemeanor offenders under their supervision.

The number of offenders sent to prison also could be reduced if there were community resources, including specially trained probation officers, to deal with those who are mentally retarded or mentally ill, or who have drug or alcohol problems, he said.

Former governor dies

LIBERTY (AP) — Former Texas Gov. Price Daniel, who once said he would rather hold that job than the presidency, died in this Southeast Texas town early today.

George Christian, a former press secretary to Daniel, said the former governor and U.S. senator suffered what he believes to be a massive stroke at his ranch at about 1 a.m. He was taken to Yettie Kersting Hospital at Liberty where he was pronounced dead upon arrival, a spokeswoman said.

Daniel, 77, served three two-year terms as governor from 1957-63 but lost an unprecedented bid for a fourth term in a Democratic primary race won by John Connally.

"The death of Price Daniel is a loss to the people of America. He never, never overlooked the problems with which the people were concerned. We're going to miss people of his caliber," said former Gov. Preston Smith. "I've lost one of my best friends."

It was Smith who appointed Daniel to the Texas Supreme Court in January 1971. Daniel retired from the court eight years later.

Daniel started his public career as a member of the state House of Representatives in 1939.

He became speaker in 1943, but later waived his legislative exemption and enlisted in the Army as a private. He left the service in 1946 with the rank of captain and made a successful race for state attorney general.

He won two terms without op-

PRICE DANIEL

position, beginning in 1947. He was elected to the U.S. Senate in 1952.

Daniel ran for governor after resigning his U.S. Senate seat in September 1956.

His early training was aimed at a career in journalism. He was a young reporter for the Fort Worth Star-Telegram and the Waco News Tribune. He received his undergraduate degree in journalism at Baylor University in 1931 before taking his law degree at the same school a year later.

In 1940, Daniel married Jean Houston Baldwin of Houston, a great-great granddaughter of Texas revolutionary hero Sam Houston. The Daniels had four children.

Father convicted in drug death

ANGLETON (AP) — A man who prosecutors say failed to seek medical help for his 17-month-old son after the boy ate a large quantity of cocaine was convicted in his death.

Robert Quinn Beaty, 26, who opted not to have a jury trial, was convicted Wednesday by State District Judge Ogden Bass of knowingly injuring his child by failing to seek immediate medical care. He faces up to life imprisonment and a $10,000 fine when sentenced Oct. 28.

Testimony revealed Robert Ealie Beaty ate some of his parents' cocaine the morning of Sept. 28 and died at the family's Brazoria mobile home shortly before he was brought to the Brazosport Memorial Hospital that evening.

Autopsy results showed the baby died of a drug overdose. The boy had about a quarter teaspoon of cocaine in his stomach and had absorbed 30 milligrams of the drug into his blood.

Beaty's wife, Nealie Ellis Beaty, 25, also is charged in the case and is scheduled to stand trial in October.

Prosecutors said Tuesday that Beaty knew his son swallowed a large amount of cocaine several hours before drug-induced seizures killed the boy, but did not seek help because he was afraid he would be charged with possession of the drug.

EPA proposes stricter regulation of municipal landfills

By DAVID GOELLER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — The long arm of the Environmental Protection Agency is reaching out to the local town dump — and the huge metropolitan landfill as well.

EPA, in its first major effort to regulate the land disposal of household trash and garbage, is proposing rules that officials say would force nearly every municipal dump to take steps to protect the environment.

Announced Wednesday, the plan would require all of the nation's municipal solid waste landfills to install often-expensive monitoring equipment to detect pollution of groundwater supplies.

The proposal, not expected to be popular with local governments, would require the cleaning up of dumps found to be leaking contaminants into underground aquifers.

The draft regulations would force operators to put waterproof covers over dumps when they are closed and would set restrictions on where a new dump can be located.

Many dumps that open after the rules take effect, probably not before 1991, would have to install bottom liners to prevent leakage and have systems to collect the polluting liquids found in dumps.

"It's a very strong protective rule," said J. Winston Porter, assistant EPA administrator for solid waste and emergency response. "In some cases, people are going to have to spend a lot of (compliance) money."

"... local governments will say this is too expensive and environmental groups will say it isn't strong enough." — J. Winston Porter, assistant administrator, Environmental Protection Agency

The plan would leave many compliance details up to states, so long as a dump did not impose any greater danger to humans than a 1-in-10,000 chance of contracting cancer from water contaminated by a dump's leachate.

The proposal would apply to an estimated 6,000 solid waste landfills — 78 percent of them owned by local governments — that handle about 80 percent of the 160 million tons of household refuse produced each year, he said.

At least one of every four municipal dumps is believed to be violating one or more state groundwater-protection standards, he said.

Porter said the dangers posed by municipal dumps can be seen in the "Superfund" priority cleanup list, where nearly one of every five facilities awaiting decontamination was once a municipal solid waste landfill.

Around the nation, less than a third of the operating dumps have groundwater monitoring systems, only 15 percent have bottom liners and only 5 percent have leachate collection systems, according to EPA.

He said he could not estimate precisely how much cost would be added to the nation's annual $4 billion to $5 billion bill for dumping, burning and recycling its trash and garbage.

One EPA control scenario estimated the extra cost could reach $800 million a year, or about $11 per household.

"It will add something to the homeowner's bill," Porter said. "We don't think it will be dramatic."

He said he expects positive reaction from states because they will have flexibility to structure their dump-control programs to meet particular hydrogeologic and topographical conditions.

"I think we'll get two other reactions: local governments will say this is too expensive and environmental groups will say it isn't strong enough," Porter said.

He said the higher dump operating costs under the proposed rules could nudge local governments to make greater efforts to recycle trash, a move that could aid EPA's national goal of recycling 25 percent of all household refuse.

EPA expects to take a year to obtain public comment on the proposal before making it final, Porter said. Dumps would then have 18 months before they had to comply with the requirements.

COOKE CITY, Mont. — Firefighters watch as fire rages through the forest on the southern edge of the Stormy Creek forest fire north of Cooke City Wednesday.

Fires rage

Clover-Mist fire in northeastern Yellowstone received aid from 635 soldiers from Fort Lewis, Wash., who took over mop-up work on the fire's east flank in the Shoshone National Forest.

To the south in Grand Teton National Park and the Bridger-Teton National Forest, firefighters planned to guide a 16,000-acre fire toward Yellowstone's southern border, where they hoped it would join two other blazes and consume all available fuel.

To the east, Bighorn National Forest officials hoped to contain an 11,000-acre fire by tonight.

In southern Montana, about 600 more firefighters headed for the 28,000-acre Storm Creek fire in the Absaroka-Beartooth Wilderness. Management of the firefighting was handed over Wednesday to a top-level team from Alaska.

Commander Dave Liebersbach said the fire gained between 500 and 1,000 acres on its southern flank Wednesday and was 4 miles from Cooke City, 3 miles closer than Tuesday.

He said a ridge separated the fire and the tourist community just outside Yellowstone's northeast gate. Officials said there was a 10 percent to 20 percent chance the fire could cross the ridge today.

Southeast of Helena, crews neared containment of a 16-day-old blaze that destroyed more than a dozen structures. Firefighters on Wednesday began hand-burning the last troublesome area along fire lines surrounding the 37,200-acre blaze. Officials predicted it would be contained by Friday evening.

A raging fire on the steep slopes of Hells Canyon at the Idaho-Oregon line forced crews to move their base camp to escape the flames. The fire mushroomed

Wednesday from 1,200 acres to 2,000, making a run into a stand of timber containing 12 million board feet of wood.

Oregon's state forester, James E. Brown, requested National Guard aircraft to help map the fires.

No ground troops were immediately called out in the governor's emergency order, which applied only to southwest Oregon.

A fire at Ward Canyon in northeastern Oregon grew to 1,000 acres Wednesday, forcing 229 firefighters to abandon the fight and consider moving their threatened camp.

A blaze at Walker Mountain northeast of Grants Pass burned 600 acres by late Wednesday, and authorities drew up contingency evacuation plans for residents.

Lightning storms Tuesday peppered southwestern Oregon, starting at least 60 fires.

he was more informed about the problems teenagers face. "I'm just naturally going to be more careful," he said.

Dan Day, a student in SWCID's interpreter training program, asked the group why they didn't have a skit dealing with safe sex.

Chambers responded by saying the group was working on a skit in which AIDS and safe sex will be discussed.

After the question and answer period, Day said he thought the performance was "very good and informative."

"I wish I would have seen something like this when I was in high school," he said.

He said he thought the SWCID students in attendance enjoyed the show because the issues were presented by students to students.

"Having a production like this is much more fun and interesting, and keeps the kids' attention better than a teacher just getting up and lecturing," he said.

Michelle Northrup, a SWCID student, said, "I thought it was great, excellent. Some people, especially those who are new at college, they'll keep the things that were talked about in mind."

"Many of the new students (at SWCID) have received almost no sex education at all," said Vicki White, a Howard College faculty member and interpreter.

"Too often these subjects are not discussed among family members. We're hoping this will raise their consciousness and let them talk about it in the open."

Marvin Wilson, a SWCID student, also said he enjoyed the presentation. "They talked about many of the things that young adults need to know more about," he said.

Coates said the members of the Esteem Machine cast were impressed by the audience's reaction to the performance.

"They were a lot more open than any other audience we've ever played to," he said.

Chambers said she was approached after the performance by several SWCID students who expressed an interest in joining the acting group.

She said she plans to organize the interested students into a group that would perform for deaf audiences.

The Esteem Machine will appear again in Big Spring on Sept. 18 at 7 p.m. at First Methodist Church.

smaller pipe.

The lines were raised above the level of Natural Dam Lake some 20 years ago, Pickle said.

The district's long-range planning committee also suggested several alternatives concerning work to be done at the lake in view of its unprecedented rises during the past two years, according to Ivie. Among the suggestions were continued studies and dialogue with The Texas Water Commission and the Texas Water Development Board.

Because the quality of the water in that lake is poor, and because forced releases send water down Beals' Creek and eventually into Lake E.V. Spence, the district is concerned with protecting and improving that dam, Ivie has said, in order to protect the quality of water supplied from Lake Spence.

In other efforts to offset the effect of the releases, the district has increased the mixture of water from Lake Thomas with the Lake Spence water at Big Spring, he said.

Pickle said the quality of water delivered to various cities — Stanton and westward to Midland and Odessa areas — has actually improved during the period of the releases from Natural Dam Lake.

The construction project raising the pipelines will involve the crossings of Buzzard Draw and Sulfur Draw necks of the Natural Dam Lake. A-frame built of creosote-treated pilings are planned, effectively putting the pipeline on stilts, Pickle said.

Ivie also said the district directors appropriated $125,000 for relining the 15-million gallon terminal storage reservoir at the Big Spring base station. This reservoir receives water from both Lake J.B. Thomas and Lake E.V. Spence, then delivers it to Big Spring, Midland and Odessa.

Ivie told the board that satisfactory progress is continuing on the construction of Stacy Dam, and that excavation on the channel leading to the substructure for the San Angelo, Midland and district future pump station has begun.

More than 18,000 of the 22,000 acres of land needed for the project have been acquired, he said, and two Farm to Market Roads affected by the project will be modified. It is possible that FM 2134, which will be inundated by the reservoir, will be relocated, and a contract for a bridge on FM 1929 could be up for bids in December.

Manufacturing growth aids economic comeback

AUSTIN (AP) — Manufacturing growth, particularly exported-related manufacturing, is leading Texas' economic comeback from the depths of recession, the state comptroller's office said Wednesday.

"From 1987 to 1989, manufacturing employment in Texas is expected to rise 4.9 percent, adding 46,000 jobs for a 1989 total of 974,000," according to the comptroller publication Fiscal Notes.

"We've got plants running at full capacity for the first time in five years," said Comptroller Bob Bullock. "And, barring a national recession, we think manufacturing will keep on growing for a dozen more."

The Fiscal Notes article said the major contributor to Texas' ongoing economic recovery "is the energetic rebound of export-related manufacturing."

Export booms are fueled by the declining value of the dollar against foreign currencies, which makes U.S. goods a better bargain overseas and at home compared with higher-priced foreign goods, the article said.

The value of exports shipped through the Port of Houston during 1987 jumped $1 billion to $9.1 billion, the article said, and exports shipped from the Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport has tripled over the past seven years — from $461 million in 1980 to $1.5 billion last year.

Texas exports in 1987 totaled $19.7 billion, second only to California's $27.5 billion, the article said.

Petrochemicals account for about one-third of Texas' manufacturing exports, it said, and one in every eight manufacturing jobs is directly tied to exports.

Jury says no negligence

A Howard County jury found Dr. Donald E. Crockett Jr. not negligent, in a two-year-old civil suit Wednesday.

District Judge James Gregg said the jury finished at 4:12 p.m. with a verdict of not negligent in the case filed April 7, 1986 by Gwenda K. Justice.

Justice's suit, which originally also included Dr. J.E. Mathews and Malone Hogan Hospital Inc., had alleged unspecified acts of medical negligence and failure to provide care in accordance with medical standards.

Justice alleged in the suit that as a result of a gallbladder surgery performed in May 1985, she had sustained damage to her colon and internal organs.

Judge Gregg said he ruled Mathews out of the suit prior to the jury's deliberations. The case records include an order separating Malone Hogan from the other defendants and dismissing both Justice's suit against the hospital and the hospital's counter-suit to recover its bill.

Both suits were terminated to allow them to be refiled if the plaintiffs desired to do so later, the court records indicate.

Justice had sought $200,000 in damages plus costs of the suit.

A jury is being empaneled today in a second civil suit. Beverly Hall filed suit June 11, 1986 against the State Employees Workers Compensation Division.

The suit alleges that Hall, while an employee of Big Spring State Hospital, sustained a disabling back injury on June 6, 1985.

The suit seeks a lump sum compensation amount of $203 per week for $401 weeks plus costs of court and medical costs.

Jail release fees to increase

HERALD STAFF REPORT

Fees for release from city jail for persons arrested on failure to appear and capias warrants will be increased beginning Sept. 1, Municipal Judge Gwen Fair said.

The fee for release from jail on failure-to-appear warrants will rise from $55 to $100 and from $60 to $120 on capias warrants, Fair said.

These kind of warrants are related to Class C misdemeanors only, Fair said.

The increases are being implemented because the city of Big Spring has "for years" had one of the lowest rates for warrants in municipalities across Texas, Fair advised.

Sheriff's log

Howard County Sheriff's Department officers reported investigating the following incidents as of 8 a.m. today:

• A 1982 Kenworth cabover tractor and silver asphalt trailer reported missing Wednesday were reported recovered.

• Angela Kathleen Willborn, 25, 608 Douglas St., was arrested on a judgment for driving while intoxicated Wednesday. She is being held in the Howard County jail in lieu of $531 in fines and court costs, and has been sentenced to 40 days in the county jail.

• Two grassfires were reported to the sheriff's office Wednesday. One fire was located in Glasscock County, with authorities there notified and Forsan fire unit dispatched; the other fire was located 22 miles northeast on Gail Road, and Luther and Jonesboro fire units were dispatched, according to sheriff's records. That fire was reported under control at 2:45 Wednesday.

• Jose Munoz II is being held in lieu of bonds totaling $10,000 on four charges of burglary of a habitation. Munoz, 23, 2611 Fairchild Ave., was arrested by city police.

• Sonia Biddle, Sterling City Route, reported someone fired a gun at her house.

• Freddie E. Puga, 45, 202 Lockhart St., was sentenced to 90 days in county jail after being arrested Tuesday on a DWI judgment.

Death

Jessie Ruth Beasley

Jessie Ruth Beasley, 86, Lubbock, a former Big Spring resident, died in a Lubbock nursing home Wednesday, Aug. 24, 1988.

Graveside services will be at 11 a.m. Friday at Cox Cemetery, Milburn, with Rev. R.J. Elkins officiating. Burial will be under the direction of Rix Funeral Home, Lubbock.

She was born June 5, 1902. She was a teacher and librarian in Big Spring School system until her retirement and was formerly employed as a medical librarian at the Big Spring State Hospital. She moved from Big Spring to Lubbock in 1986.

She is survived by one sister, Ruby Blankenship, Dallas.

The family suggests memorials to the Big Spring State Hospital Volunteers Services Council, Box 231, Big Spring, Texas 79721.

Opinion

Views of other Texas papers

Here is a sampling of editorial opinions from around the state.

Nelson Mandela merits release

The recent report from South Africa that imprisoned black leader Nelson Mandela has tuberculosis should prompt the South African government to release Mandela after 26 long years behind bars.

Even if one accepts the government's position that Mandela is dangerous, his death in prison only would inflame South Africa's tense racial situation and spark a wave of bloodshed and destruction.

On a more humanitarian level, the release of Mandela would show that the South African government can show some flexibility and compromise. Regardless of the government's opinion of Mandela, it should have the common sense to realize that he is considered the moral leader of millions of black South Africans and the worldwide focus of anti-apartheid resistance.

Time is running out on the South African government in more ways than one. A 70-year-old man with tuberculosis in jail won't live too many more years... and 20 percent of a nation can't dominate the other 80 percent forever. By doing something about the former, the government can moderate the outcome of the latter.

Don't lengthen Texas school year

The issue of a longer year for public schools in Texas has been raised again by the Select Committee on Education.

But adding days... at a time when public schools are still struggling with educational reform is unlikely to strengthen the system. Texas needs to do more with the classroom time already available before investing in more time.

Texas public schools have been turned upside down... by the educational reform act of 1984... The responsibility for carrying out educational reforms has put school administrators under increased pressure as well. School boards have been obliged to find construction funds to satisfy new state regulations that limit the number of children in each classroom.

Texas might benefit from a longer school year in the future. But state and local school officials need to complete the unfinished tasks all around them before they are handed still more hours and days to fill.

Waco Tribune-Herald

Adults need to speak out on abuse

The results of a poll to be published in... Parents magazine raise troubling questions about the responsibility of others to speak up about child abuse.

According to the poll, 11 percent said they suspected someone of child abuse. Of those, more than a third kept quiet about it.

Of those who did nothing, the majority said they weren't sure they knew enough to speak out. Others said it was none of their business, or they were concerned about legal liability, offending someone, losing a friend of suffering physical injury.

There obviously is a need to appeal to the moral responsibility of everyone to be concerned about the well-being of those too small to protect themselves.

It doesn't take a special prosecutor's staff to observe that children who suffer repeated broken bones need help. It doesn't take a private eye to know that children who are kept locked up without regular meals need help. It doesn't take a therapist to know that children who are raped before they are even in first grade need counseling... The message from the Parents magazine poll ought to be that more people need to speak their consciences.

Block steel plant's sale to Iraq

The proposed sale of the large USX Corp. steel plant in Baytown is disturbing news... USX Corp. should explore every means to sell the plant to another American firm... As a last resort, the Reagan administration should consider blocking the Iraqi deal.

Texas congressmen led by U.S. Rep. Jack Fields... are trying to get the government to intervene...

He says at least two domestic companies would pay an amount either equal to or larger than the Iraqi offer of $100 million-plus... Fields contends (USX) isn't interested because it "doesn't want competition in the domestic steel industry."

That is outrageous when there is plenty of evidence that steel products the plant is capable of making are still in demand here.

The USX Corp. should sell the plant to an American firm if that possibility exists. The jobs are needed here, and apparently the products are, too. If USX won't reconsider, the Reagan administration should help the firm change its mind.

Dallas Times Herald

America needs new energy policy

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, the No. 2 man on the Democratic ticket, is perfectly right to decry the Reagan administration's lack of interest in expanding the U.S. Strategic Petroleum Reserve. But it is also worth noting that an expanded reserve, while important, should be only one part of an overall national energy policy, and neither the Reagan administration nor the Congress has yet come close to developing such a policy.

Everything is partisan during an election campaign, which is only to be expected. But after the issue of the presidency is settled, it is to be hoped that the new administration and the Congress will find time to agree on a bipartisan national energy policy that will include conservation, alternative and synthetic fuels, and incentives for domestic oil and gas exploration — a policy that will enable the nation to become as energy self-sufficient as possible.

Investment in Houston Zoo needed

City Council voted this week to spend $250,000 getting ready to collect an admission fee at the Houston Zoo in Hermann Park. That's a lot of money, but a necessary investment.

The $250,000 will pay for ticket booths, cash registers and computers, easier zoo access for the handicapped and other major renovations. Scheduled to begin in January, the admission charge is expected to bring in $1.5 million per year.

In return for its investment, the paying public can expect to see new exhibits at the zoo and improved maintenance and facilities throughout the city park system. That is the bargain made for ending the zoo's long tradition of free admission, and Council should take care the city lives up to its end.

Strolling through the toy department

By STEVE REAGAN, Staff Writer

Let's you and me take a tour of the toy department.

No, no, no — not Toys 'R Us, or a section of Wal-Mart... not one of those toy departments. I mean the Herald's toy department — otherwise known as the sports section.

Some newspaper type long ago classified sports as the toy department of the newsroom and, on reflection, the description is somewhat apt.

Granted, sports has its serious side, what with litigation and strikes and drug probes and who knows what else, but let's face facts: No one is going to have their life changed forever if the Cowboys lose.

In fact, the very prospect of another Cowboy loss makes some of my friends exceedingly happy — but enough of that.

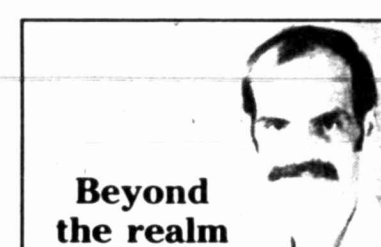

It's like one quarterback said a few years ago when asked if he regretted tossing an interception during a crucial moment in a game.

"Sure, I feel bad," he said. "But I would have felt worse if I had thrown that interception and 40,000 people had died."

Perspective.

In other words, it's only a game, bucks.

And that's what we deal with, by and large, in the toy department,

Beyond the realm

folks — games. Who won, who lost, who scored and who didn't — it's all in a day's work for the staffers of the Herald toy department.

You know, that's all fine and good, Reagan, but — if you don't mind — we'd really appreciate it if you'd get to the point of all this. I mean, we all know you're famous in these parts for your ramblings, but if you can just give us a clue about what you're writing about, it'll give us a reason for hanging in there until the end.

I'm getting to that. It just so happens that Steve Belvin, our sports editor, is on vacation this week and yours truly is substituting for him.

Oh, we get it. This is going to be a column about running the sports section, right?

Yeah, that's about right.

And you're going to tell us about how fun and dandy it is to take a break from the serious issues of the world — like droughts, forest fires, plagues, wars and things of that nature, correct?

You're getting warmer.

And you're also going to throw in a few fond remembrances from your more-or-less athletic days, such as the time in Little League when you almost knocked out the catcher cold swinging at a pitch?

Well, I wasn't going to go that far.

Or the time in seventh grade football when — as a third-string center — you finally got to play, only to wind up eating grass all day long because you couldn't quite get the knack of blocking that meddlesome linebacker?

Hey, wait a minute...

Or when you finally decided in the eighth grade that carrying a trombone in the band was a bit less life-threatening than facing that linebacker again?

Who's writing this column, anyway?

Surely you're going to regale us all with the tale about your days on your Air Force squadron's softball team, aren't you? You remember that, don't you? The best part for us was when the manager finally made you the first-base coach, figuring that was the place you'd do the least damage.

WOULD YOU PLEASE?????

Hey, don't blow a blood vessel, Reagan. Remember what you said — it's only a game? Perspective? Toy department? Fun, fun, fun, all day long? You wrote that, didn't you?

Yeah, but...

No buts, Steve-o. The point we're trying to make is this: It may be the toy department, but that doesn't mean it's unimportant.

I never said it wasn't.

Well, just keep that in mind, Reagan. Sports can be very, very, good to you — if you play your cards right. Why, you might even become a sports writer for USA Today!

Whoopie.

Don't mention it, pal. Well, we've wasted enough of your time; you can continue with your column, now. But before we go, can we make a suggestion?

Can I stop you?

Not likely. Anyway, what do you think about the Rabid Bats?

Excuse me?

The Rabid Bats. We mean, your all hot and bothered to dump the Steer as the high school mascot, aren't you? Well, we think the Rabid Bats would be an absolutely terrific mascot for the team.

You do, eh?

Yeah, either that or the Devil Dogs. Both would be great for striking fear and respect into the hearts of opponents, don't you think?

Maybe.

Well, anyway, it was just a suggestion. Keep well, Steve-o. It was great talking to you again.

Don't mention it.

Refuse trouble Trash freighter has curious voyage

By JACK ANDERSON and JOSEPH SPEAR

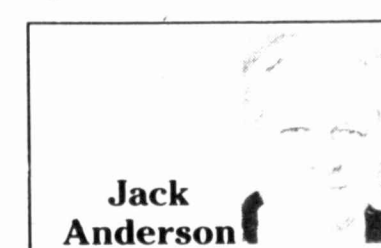

WASHINGTON — A huge freighter packed with Philadelphia's burned trash has been cruising the world for nearly two years looking for a foreign garbage can. The tale of the 466-foot Khian Sea is part of a larger U.S. trash crisis that has now prompted congressmen to consider a law banning the export of garbage to Third World countries.

The rusty, 17-year-old ship left Philadelphia in September 1986 with almost 14,000 tons of that city's incinerator ash. A Philadelphia waste hauling firm had hired Amalgamated Shipping Co. of the Bahamas, which said it could dump the ash on a man-made island in that country. But Amalgamated Shipping apparently did not have permission to make the projected dump.

Rebuked by the government of the Bahamas, the Khian Sea embarked on a curious odyssey through the Western Hemisphere, stopping in Puerto Rico, Antilles, the Dominican Republic, Jamaica, Panama, Honduras, Colombia, Guinea Bissau and the Cayman Islands.

The shipping company tried unsuccessfully to pay someone in each of those countries to take the ash. At one point, the shippers wrote to Chile suggesting that it convert its northern desert into a landfill for U.S. trash.

Now, the U.S. Coast Guard is investigating the curious path of the Khian Sea. Rep. John Conyers, D-Mich., does not want trash shippers striking deals abroad that could later haunt the United States. At a congressional hearing on the issue, Conyers said he is alarmed by reports he has heard that the trash export business appeals to unscrupulous elements.

Conyers is pushing legislation that would outlaw waste exports from the United States beyond those specified in current treaties with Canada and Mexico. "We can't just shop around for the poorest nation and ask them to cash in on their health and environment," Conyers said.

He and Rep. Mike Synar, D-Okla., noted at the hearing that there is no way to stop trash merchants from misrepresenting their cargo to make it more acceptable to the receiving country. Khian Sea shipping documents and communications seen by our associate, Jim Lynch, indicate that the Philadelphia ash has had more aliases than Butch Cassidy.

When it left Philadelphia, the load was labeled "incinerator ash." In Fort Lauderdale in March 1987, it was "general cargo." In Cayman Brac in December 1987, it was "bulk construction material." By the time it docked in Haiti in January, the load miraculously became "top soil fertilizer."

The shippers struck a deal in Haiti to pay a local firm to take the "fertilizer." The Khian Sea began dumping the ash on the beach of Gonaives, 75 miles north of Port-au-Prince. Environmentalists with Greenpeace found out and sent a team of investigators to warn the Haitian government. Haitian authorities then ordered the ash put back on the boat.

The Khian Sea took back only part of its load before sneaking out to sea in the middle of the night. A month later, the brother of the two Haitians who negotiated the "fertilizer" dump was indicted in Miami for alleged ties to cocaine smuggling into the United States.

The drama of the Khian Sea shifted to the United States again in March when the ship returned to Philadelphia to negotiate a deal to leave the ash there. The Coast Guard ordered the ship to stay put, but it slipped out in the middle of the night. After a long stretch of no reported sightings, the ship showed up at a Yugoslavian port in late July.

According to Yugoslavian press accounts, the freighter had tried unsuccessfully to dump the ash in Senegal and was headed for Greece when it was ordered to dock in Yugoslavia because its registration had expired. The Khian Sea is still in Yugoslavia undergoing unspecified repairs.

Amalgamated Shipping would not comment on the activities of the Khian Sea. The ship's U.S. representative, Coastal Carriers, Inc., said it is only responsible for the ship when it is in U.S. waters. But a company spokesman claimed that the ash had not been misrepresented in any of the ports. He would not comment on the Khian Sea's next destination.

SHOPPING AROUND — South Korea is looking for better relations with the Soviet Union, and the Summer Olympics aren't the only reason. The South Koreans are doing as much as $500 million a year in indirect trade with the Soviet Union using third-country ships. Western countries restrict the sale of technology to the Soviets, so South Korea is opening trade offices across Eastern Europe to serve as conduits for South Korean merchandise going to Soviet buyers.

The South Koreans want alternative markets if the United States puts up protectionist barriers, and they want to outflank North Korea by cultivating relationships with North Korea's allies — the Soviet Union and China.

MINI-EDITORIAL — The use of illegal drugs, cigarettes and alcohol is on the decline among American military personnel, a Pentagon survey reports. Drug use shows the most dramatic decline since 1980, probably because the military got tough with mandatory drug testing.

Now it's time to get tough with cigarettes and alcohol, which threaten not only the lives of military personnel, but their readiness as well. The captive audience of the military is an ideal environment in which to promote good health habits.

Lengthy federal trial goes to jury

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — The case of 20 alleged mob members has gone to the jury after nearly two years, that produced more than 40,000 pages of transcripts in one of the nation's longest federal criminal trials.

U.S. District Judge Harold A. Ackerman spent most of Wednesday instructing the 12-member panel, which was to be sequestered and begin deliberations today.

After Ackerman sent the panel to its hotel for the night, defendants shook hands with their attorneys and kissed each other on the cheek.

The trial, which yielded more than 850 exhibits and the testimony of 89 witnesses, ended 22 months and four days after the first of 1,500 people reported to court for jury selection.

During the proceedings, a prosecutor twice became a father, one defense attorney was elected mayor of a suburb, and one died of cancer.

AIDS-afflicted girl to stay home

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — A mentally retarded 6-year-old girl afflicted with AIDS may stay in a home instruction program while an appeals court decides whether she must be enclosed in a glass booth if she attends school, a federal judge ruled.

Eliana Martinez earlier won the right to attend school with other retarded children when the fall term begins Monday in Hillsborough County. But she would be isolated in a special 6-by-8-foot booth until she is potty trained and stops sucking her thumb.

The child's adoptive mother, Rose Martinez, fought in court for two years to get her daughter in the class but balked at the glass cage required by District Judge Elizabeth Kovachevich.

Ms. Martinez' attorney, Steve Hanlon, appealed to the 11th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Atlanta. He also filed a motion for a local stay, asking that Eliana be allowed to attend classes with no restrictions or be kept in the county's homebound school program until the Atlanta court rules.

Cow deaths prompt milk dumping

DAVIE, Fla. (AP) — Officials have dumped more than 30,000 gallons of milk at a dairy farm following the recent deaths of more than 20 cows, possibly from something they ate, authorities said.

The milk apparently was not contaminated but was dumped as a public health precaution until the cause of the cow deaths is determined, according to officials from the farm and the state agriculture department.

"I do not believe there is any contaminant or toxicant causing the cattle deaths," Jay Boosinger, director of the division of dairy industry for the Florida Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services, said Wednesday.

Judge rejects PTL reorganization

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — PTL's bankruptcy trustee says he'll shorten the time the ministry has to sell its assets when he submits a revised reorganization plan to a bankruptcy judge who rejected his first proposal.

U.S. Bankruptcy Judge Rufus Reynolds said it failed to take into account the ministry's poor financial health.

He gave PTL bankruptcy trustee M.C. "Red" Benton until Oct. 1 to prepare a new plan, and until Sept. 10 to return with information on potential buyers of the ministry's assets.

Benton said PTL's secured creditors rejected the plan because it allowed five years for the sale of the assets. PTL's major contributors, called lifetime partners, also rejected the plan.

Spectacular blaze

LISBON, Portugal (AP) — Firemen struggle as a fire that began in a department store spread to other shops in central Lisbon today, killing at least one person and injuring three as it burned out of control, news reports said.

The Portuguese news agency LUSA quoted fire officials as saying they didn't have enough water to fight the blaze, which was near Rossio Square in Lisbon's 19th century commercial district known as the Chiado.

News reports said the fire began in the warehouse section of an old department store and spread quickly to neighboring shops.

A firefighter told The Associated Press the fire broke out before dawn on the ground floor of the three-story Grandela department store. He said much of the Chiado was burning or in danger of catching fire. Radio Comercial said flames could be seen 13 miles away.

Marcos making formal request

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Ferdinand Marcos has formally asked for the first time to return to his homeland, prompting panic selling on the stock exchange today as traders voiced fears for the government's stability.

The ex-president, living in exile in Hawaii, filed a petition Wednesday with the anti-corruption court demanding the right to defend himself when a former Cabinet minister testifies against him in November.

Last week, the court ruled that Marcos had the right to cross-examine former Public Works Minister Baltazar Aquino when he gives evidence in a deposition hearing Nov. 7.

It was the first time Marcos formally sought permission from any Philippine institution to return to the land he fled after the February 1986 uprising that toppled his administration and propelled Corason Aquino to the presidency.

Chile lifts long-time restrictions

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — The country's military leaders have lifted all state of emergency measures for the first time since President Augusto Pinochet seized power in 1973, a move the opposition greeted with cautious approval.

Wednesday's decree comes just days before the four-man ruling junta is expected to nominate Pinochet, an army general, as sole candidate in a presidential referendum slated for October.

Interior Minister Sergio Fer-

andez, in a news conference, told reporters the presidential decrees lifting the emergency "will take effect upon publication in the official bulletin," probably today or Friday.

Opposition leaders said they hoped the move would increase the likelihood of a clean referendum. But they said it should have come sooner and that it remained to be seen if the government would actually allow citizens to fully exercise basic political freedoms.

Killer croc's companion caught

KUALA LUMPUR, Malaysia (AP) — A witch doctor using a monkey as bait captured the companion of a notorious man-eating crocodile, but the 200-year-old killer croc remains at large, a newspaper said today.

Bujang Sudin, a 16.4-foot long specimen weighing 397 pounds, was pulled from a river Saturday and sold to a nearby crocodile farm, the New Straits Times said.

The newspaper said the witch doctor, Bakir Alias Yeop, lured the crocodile with the monkey and chanted, "Bujang Sudin come." It said two other men then helped haul the crocodile from the river.

The report quoted Abang Adris Abang Suhai, a police official in Sarawak state, 540 miles southeast of Kuala Lumpur.

Polish police crush three strikes

JASTRZEBIE, Poland (AP) — Riot police crushed strikes at three southern coal mines and beat some men after dragging them from the mines, activists said today. Witnesses said some strikers at one colliery escaped underground.

Despite the police raids in this coal-rich region where miners nine days ago began Poland's most serious strike wave since 1981, activists said strikes continued in the Baltic ports of Szczecin and Gdansk and at the Nowa Huta steel mill outside Krakow.

The Borynia mine in Jastrzebie and the Morcinek mine in nearby Koszyce were cleared of strikers during the night, according to workers from each of the mines. All strikers were evicted from the nearby Moszczenica mine except the 40 who descended into the mine shaft with bread.

Soviet spy ring suspects held

NEW YORK (AP) — West European authorities detained eight people involved in a spy ring that supplied the Soviet Union with secret military documents for at least 10 years, according to published reports.

Principals in the newly uncovered ring, which operated through a German-Hungarian connection, caused a major security loss to the United States in the late 1970s, The New York Times reported today.

Officials refused to describe the loss, the Times said.

Senior officials at the Pentagon and the State Department learned about the espionage network in the last few days, the newspaper said.

Documents concerning NATO defense plans for Europe were believed stolen as well as the U.S.

Army contingency plans for a ground war in Europe against the Soviet Union, the newspaper said.

Investigators told the Times they believe that the West German-based spy ring, aided by couriers in neutral Sweden, provided documents apparently obtained from U.S. soldiers to the intelligence agency of Hungary, a Soviet ally.

The network was uncovered by West German and U.S. officials, including agents from the FBI and the Army, the Times said. The Army has about 250,000 military personnel in West Germany at more than 200 installations.

The Times said officials did not know how long the network had been operating.

The newspaper quoted unidentified U.S. officials as saying authorities in Sweden and West Germany detained eight people on Tuesday but that some were brought in only for questioning.

Those detained included a retired Army sergeant who has been living in West Germany, the Times said.

Names of those involved and further details of the case have not been made public.

West Germany government spokesman Norbert Schaefer said today he couldn't say anything about the matter. Justice Ministry spokesman Juergen Schmid in Bonn said he knew "absolutely nothing" about the report.

"Even if I knew, I couldn't tell you anyway," Schmid told The Associated Press.

National Swedish television reported Wednesday that security police in Stockholm arrested three Swedes suspected of spying.

Ribs on the pit

HUNTSVILLE — O.C. Ward forks up a rack of ribs from one of the barbecue pits outside the New Zion Missionary Baptist Church in Huntsville. For nearly a decade Ward, 67, and his 70-year-old wife, Annie Mae, have churned out tons of barbecued ribs, chicken, brisket and sausage that have withstood the tests of economic crunches and fickle palates.

Mother dresses son like a pig

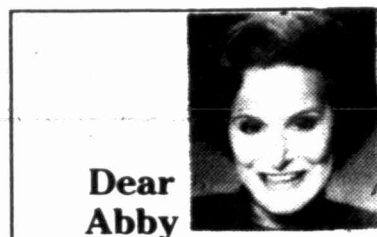

DEAR ABBY: I just read a news item in the Palm Beach Post that brought tears to my eyes. A mother dressed up her 7-year-old son like a pig, made him sit on the front porch with his hands tied behind his back, blue fingerpaint on his face and a cardboard pig nose taped to his head. She hung a sign around his neck that read, "I am a dumb pig. Ugly is what you become every time you lie and steal. Look at me squeal. My hands are tied because I cannot be trusted. This is a lesson to be learned. Look. Laugh. Stealing. Bad boy!"

The mother was charged with a misdemeanor (child abuse) and freed on her own recognizance. Abby, my blood is boiling! Doesn't the woman realize the humiliation she put upon her little boy, probably for life?

I just had to write to you because I need to express my anger.

FLORIDA CHILD LOVER: DEAR FLORIDA CHILD LOVER: The mother who abused her son in this manner needs to be educated. Humiliating her son publicly will not prevent him from lying or stealing. By branding him a liar, thief and a "bad boy," she is labeling him as a person who cannot be trusted — and that is exactly what he will live up to. This well-intentioned mother is guilty of child abuse.

DEAR ABBY: A little background information: My husband's income is down 35 percent to 40 percent from last year, and down 60 percent from the previous year as a result of the recession in this part of the country. I've had to give up my cleaning lady, make my own clothes instead of buying them, sell my fairly new car to eliminate the high payments and cut corners wherever possible. My family is comfortable as long as we watch our expenditures.

I have worked in a department of a large company for several years with a dozen or so people. Since the beginning of the year, there have been two marriages and four babies — each requiring gift money. Now, two more are having babies.

I have been approached to contribute $20 to a pool so we can buy something "big" instead of a lot of little things individually. Abby, I generally spend $5 to $10 for a baby shower gift, so I told the collector I hadn't planned on spending quite that much. I received a shocked look in return.

I feel guilty not going along with her request, but I really can't afford it. I need to know how to handle these "donate-so-much" situations that will continue in the future.

Please don't use my name or location. Sign me...

ECONOMICALLY SQUEEZED DEAR SQUEEZED: Your initial response to the collector was the very best. Buy a gift in the amount you can afford and present it individually. Your candor is refreshing. To thine own self be true.

DEAR ABBY: Part of my job is to take telephone messages for my boss. There is nothing more frustrating than having someone call and ask me to please have my boss call him back, and when I say, "May I please have your number?" the caller says, "He has it."

Abby, nine times out of 10, my boss does not have it, and I end up having to look it up, which can be a hassle. It would be so much easier if the caller would just give me his (or her) number. Please print this. Maybe the guilty ones will be a little more considerate.

OLIVIA
DEAR OLIVIA: As one of the "guilty ones," I thank you.

What teen-agers need to know about sex, drugs, AIDS, getting along with their peers and parents is now in Abby's updated, expanded booklet, "What Every Teen Should Know." To order, send your name and address, clearly printed, plus check or money order for $3.50 ($4 in Canada) to: Dear Abby's Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054.

Opera country

NEW YORK — Beverly Sills, left, sings with country and western star Randy Travis — the first time she's performed publicly since 1978. An operatic star, Sills is taping a pilot for a daily talk and variety show on which Travis appears as a guest.

Black actors getting better television roles

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — More blacks are appearing on prime time television shows, and not just in stereotypical roles as cute kids, domestic workers, criminals and jive-talking comedians, according to industry researchers and observers.

"There has been an improvement in the employment of black performers and the range of character portrayals has improved," said Rodney Mitchell, affirmative action administrator for the Screen Actors Guild. "No longer are they confined to street types, non-professionals, crime victims and crime perpetrators."

Some credit the success of "The Cosby Show" for opening the doors to more positive black portrayals. A recent Howard University study of 58 black characters in 26 network shows last season found that, instead of the lower class roles that dominated the 1970s, "blacks on television are generally portrayed as belonging to middle and upper classes."

Women played nearly half of the black roles, compared to previous years when men greatly outnumbered them, the Howard researchers reported. The study also noted more middle-age and elderly black characters, fewer obese women and more characters portrayed as competent.

Some things haven't changed, the Howard scholars found. Blacks were still more likely to be cast in situation comedies than dramas and were most often supporting or minor characters. More than half appeared in shows with black themes, such as "Amen," "Cosby," "227" and "A Different World."

More blacks watch television than do other racial groupings, according to Nielsen audience data. A recent Nielsen viewing analysis reported that television usage averaged 10.6 hours per day in black households, versus 7.3 hours daily in all other homes.

HBO drops 'Tanner'; hopes for move to PBS

NEW YORK (AP) — Boy, will HBO be in trouble if Michael Dukakis is elected president. The cable channel has dropped "Tanner '88," the series about a fictional underdog presidential candidate, and Kitty Dukakis is such a fan, she was in it.

Mrs. Dukakis did a cameo in the final episode, filmed last month at the Democratic National Convention in Atlanta.

HBO had agreed to carry the Robert Altman-Garry Trudeau series only through the convention, but the Tanner crew hoped to get an extension, based on their good critical notices, and take candidate Jack Tanner through the November election as an independent.

Except for a possible pre-election special, the series' final episode, "The Reality Check," airs Thursday as well as Aug. 28 and 30.

"Otherwise, this is it — I'll ride off into the sunset," said Michael Murphy, who plays Tanner. "Next week this time I'll be out of work and depressed."

Murphy may only be out of work temporarily. The Public Broadcasting Service is hoping to find an underwriter to pick up the series and move it to public television for the rest of the campaign. That will take some doing, since time is short and the show is expensive.

"I've never had response to a character that I've had with this," said Murphy in an interview on the set in Atlanta. "The response is not only positive, it's intelligent. We get people who get it, who get what we're trying to do here. Everybody except HBO, I guess."

Trudeau, who writes the scripts and is co-producer, is the cartoonist of "Doonesbury" fame. Director Altman ("M-A-S-H," "Nashville") is known for his facility with improvisation and gritty realism.

The Appel version of the top singles

By TIM APPEL
Staff Writer

The first two pages of an article pay tribute to the 45 rpm record and the single songs etched into the seven-inch vinyl disks. The next 47 pages address the subject of the top 100 singles of the past 25 years, as selected by 25 so-called music critics.

The article I refer to is "The 100 best singles of the last 25 years" in the Sept. 8 edition of Rolling Stone magazine. I respect the opinions of anybody, especially if they can lay a foundation for the basis of their argument. This article does not.

Reading the entire article, you begin to wonder how they went about choosing the songs they did. It has become obvious to me that the top two songs of all time were chosen because of the name of the magazine ("Satisfaction" by the Rolling Stones, and "Like a Rolling Stone" by Bob Dylan).

Their choosing for these? Because they liked the opening guitar riffs on "Satisfaction," and because "Dylan was a revolutionary" and this was his first top ten single. Can this be considered a competent selection process?

A review

Of the 100 songs listed, I agree with only 12 selections. These include "Good Vibrations" by the Beach Boys, "Hey Jude" by the Beatles, and "The Message" by Grandmaster Flash and the Furious Five.

A few could easily make the second 100 list, such as "Mr. Tambourine Man" by the Byrds, "Imagine" by John Lennon and maybe, just maybe, "Satisfaction" by the Rolling Stones.

Then we have the list of songs that have no purpose of even being considered in the top 1,000 songs. This list includes "I Want You Back" by the Jackson 5, "When Doves Cry" by Prince, and "Up-town Girl" by Billy Joel. Get real.

Reaction to the list from four self-styled music critics in the Big Spring Herald newsroom was pretty much the same. Upon hearing that "Billy Jean" by Michael Jackson was ranked seven spots higher than "Hey Jude" by the Beatles, heads were simply shaken.

I am not claiming to be a music critic. On the other hand, perhaps I am. Every individual who buys — or refuses to buy — a particular record, every one who listens — or does not listen — to a particular radio station, is a music critic. In a simple and effective way, they are saying what they do and do not like in music.

Therefore, submitted for your approval, is my list of the 25 best singles of the past 25 years. These are not my favorite songs; rather, they are songs I believe made the greatest impact on the course of the music industry since 1963.

1. Hey Jude — The Beatles
2. Stayin' Alive — The Bee Gees
3. Stop! In The Name of Love — The Supremes
4. Light My Fire — The Doors
5. Louie Louie — The Kingsmen
6. Strawberry Fields Forever — The Beatles

7. Let's Go — The Cars
8. Shout — The Isley Brothers
9. The Message — Grandmaster Flash and the Furious Five
10. Subterranean Homesick Blues — Bob Dylan
11. The Twist — Chubby Checker
12. American Pie — Don McLean
13. All You Need Is Love — The Beatles
14. Respect — Aretha Franklin
15. Oh, Pretty Woman — Roy Orbison
16. Good Vibrations — The Beach Boys
17. Rock Lobster — The B-52s
18. Proud Mary — Creedence Clearwater Revival
19. Valley Girl — Frank and Moon Zappa
20. My Generation — The Who
21. Piano Man — Billy Joel
22. My Sharona — The Knack
23. Jumpin' Jack Flash — The Rolling Stones
24. Face The Fire — Dan Fogelberg

25. We'll leave this one blank, because no such list can ever be complete, as future songs replace those from the past and every listener has his own opinions.

Iran's recovery from the war is predicted to be slow

By HANNS NEUERBOURG
Associated Press Writer

TEHRAN, Iran — Repairing the ravages of war and relations with Iraq will be a long, tedious process in which much depends on the political fortunes of the man responsible for Iran's more conciliatory policy.

The effort begins when peace negotiations open in Geneva on Thursday, five days after a U.N.-sponsored truce took effect in the 8-year-old conflict, which cost up to 1 million lives and hundreds of billions of dollars.

At center stage is Hashemi Rafsanjani, speaker of Iran's parliament, who also became armed forces commander a month before Iran accepted a U.N. cease-fire resolution July 18. The Security Council passed Resolution 598 unanimously a year earlier and Iraq agreed to it, but Iran had not.

Rafsanjani, 54, has the public backing of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, the 87-year-old patriarch whose fundamentalist Moslem revolution overthrew the late Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi in February 1979.

"Virtually everything depends on whether Rafsanjani, a pragmatist, will be able to control the hardliners," said a West European diplomat, who spoke privately as did all others interviewed during a 10-day visit to Iran. "Let us hope that Khomeini will be around long enough to allow him to get really settled."

Huge tasks confront the leadership.

Three years ago, the official Iranian assessment of war damage already was the equivalent of $350 billion. Last week, the Tehran newspaper Kayhan estimated losses to date at $600 billion, more than all the money Iran's oil exports have earned since they began.

Western analysts say two-thirds of Iranian industry is idle, lacking trained management, spare parts and the necessary semi-finished products. Of 77 "major revolutionary projects" in all branches of industry announced nine years ago, only four have survived in official plans.

Daily blackouts illustrate the effect of Iraqi air raids on power stations. Oil refineries have been so badly damaged that one-third of the petroleum products Iran now consumes must be imported.

Oil output was put officially at 2.2 million barrels a day in March-June, little more than one-third the level of a decade ago, and full production probably would not exceed 3.3 million.

Iranian officials hope quota enforcement by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries will bolster prices, but diplomats say Iraq, which ran up an estimated $100 billion in foreign debt during the war, may continue to ignore the quotas.

Agricultural output in Iran also suffered and food imports now cost $2 billion a year, equivalent to almost a third of oil revenue.

Prospects of reducing the bill are not good because the population grew from 38 million to 50 million in the decade ending in 1986. The birth rate of 3.5 percent is among the world's highest.

Iran's foreign debt is roughly balanced by its $4 billion in foreign exchange reserves and there is no record of a contract not having been fulfilled, according to Western trade attaches. "Iranians are very credit-worthy," one said.

There is no indication so far that the government wants to borrow.

After a two-day visit to Tehran, Foreign Minister Tom Hayden of Australia said: "No one has asked us for aid. These people have run their economy prudently. They are looking forward to maintaining self-sufficiency and national respect and confidence."

A senior European diplomat said: "Recovery will not be feasible without some kind open-door trade policy," adding that the war's end may not free much capital because of the need to modernize replenish the military arsenal.

Normalizing relations with Washington will take time, diplomats agree.

An effigy of President Ronald Reagan hanging from gallows was a feature of a "March of Allegiance to the Imam" early this month and Rafsanjani probably will be reluctant to antagonize hardliners.

5,000 people said killed in Burundi

By DIDRIKKE SCHANCHE
Associated Press Writer

NAIROBI, Kenya — Burundi's army is still battling pockets of resistance after ethnic fighting killed an estimated 5,000 people, but the army itself did not massacre people, a Western diplomat said today.

Thousands of refugees pouring into the central African nation's northern neighbor, Rwanda, say the Tutsi-dominated army is engaged in a mass slaughter of Burundi's majority Hutu tribe.

The Hutu, despite comprising nearly 85 percent of Burundi's 5 million people, are subservient to the Tutsi, who make up the remaining 15 percent and dominate the government and military.

A senior Western diplomat in Burundi said, "The idea the army is massacring Hutus, burning huts, etc., is just not what we're hearing here."

"Non-governmental sources, including missionaries coming down from the north, say the army is acting with a great deal of restraint," said the diplomat, who spoke on condition he not be further identified.

He said the army "still is engaged in fighting with dissident Hutus."

As of Tuesday, about 38,000 refugees had fled into neighboring Rwanda since the killing began on Aug. 14, and an estimated 5,000 peasants continue to cross the border each day, said Code Cisse, the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees' representative in Rwanda.

"We saw many people who had been injured by bullets and bayonets," Cisse said in a telephone interview. "They said they were fleeing because they didn't want to get shot by the military."

Burundi's government has denied the accusations and claims 5,000 people were killed in a slaughter instigated by exiled Hutus who infiltrated the tiny central African country to inflame anti-Tutsi sentiments.

The Hutu and the Tutsi are longtime enemies. Following an abortive 1972 coup attempt in the former Belgian colony, the Tutsi massacred more than 100,000 Hutu, including most of the tribe's intelligentsia, according to human rights groups.

Details about what sparked the current violence are sketchy.

Golf and other events of Note

By STEVE REAGAN
Staff Writer

Before we begin this edition of Thursday Notes, a brief disclaimer:

In my Wednesday sports column, I noted that I would continue with my NFL picks in today's edition. Sad to say, I was mistaken.

Aside from compiling the Notes, I am editing the sports section in Steve Belvin's absence. And if that wasn't enough, I also have my regular column today on the Opinion page.

Needless to say, three Reagan columns in one day would be too much for even the most dedicated readers. Therefore, my NFL picks will resume Friday.

With that out of the way, on to the Notes.

Today is the final day to register for the Comanche Trail City Golf Championship this Saturday and Sunday at Comanche Trail Golf Course.

Entry fee is $25 per golfer. Regular flights will be pre-flighted. There also will be a senior division for golfers over 50 years old, a super senior division for golfers over 60, and a junior division for players under 18. There is no entry fee for the junior division.

For more information call Al Patterson at 263-7271.

For those who haven't noticed, the Big Spring High School Lady Steers volleyball team's season is underway. Although winless, the local spikers and setters will attempt to change that when they face Abilene Cooper tonight in Steer

The freshman girls will play at 5 p.m., followed by the junior varsity at 6 p.m. and the varsity team at 7 p.m.

Local boxer Juan Baldwin will have to wait a while to win his second professional bout.

Baldwin was scheduled to box Arturo Saucedo of Houston Friday in Odessa, but the bout was cancelled by the boxing commission when the ring didn't meet state regulations. Juan said the bout will be delayed a couple of weeks.

He also said that it is in the works for him to box in Las Vegas, Nev. sometime in September.

And now, for the weekly news from the Comanche Trail Ladies Golf Association:

The team of Peggy Marshall, Tammy Newsom and Ramona Harris shot an even par 38 for first place in scramble play on the back nine Monday.

Finishing second was the team of Patsy Sharpnack, Mary Malone and Patti Woodall with a 39. Annie Ward, George Newsom and Dee Jenkins shot a 42 for third place.

Gerald and Ramona Harris and Omer Decker and Ina Stewart shot a six under par 30 to capture first place in couples' scramble play last Thursday.

Max and Betty Ray Coffee and Jim and Annie Ward placed second with a four under par 36.

Saturday is the date for the inaugural Seminole Drifters Team Roping event, at the Drifters' Arena one-and-a-half miles northeast of Seminole.

The books open at 9 a.m. and roping begins at 10 a.m. Buckles will be awarded to the high money winner, best header and heeler.

For more information contact Joey Martin at (806) 828-4104, Tommy French at (915) 758-2424 or Phil Robinson at (915) 758-2088.

Big Springer Sam Froman continues his fishing excellence at Lake J.B. Thomas. Froman caught a 22-pound yellow catfish at the lake this past week.

Other good catches at Lake Thomas include locals Albert Carlile and Ronnie Gaskin, who caught a 5½-pound blue catfish and a 15-pound yellow cat on their trotline.

Gary Payne and Kevin Hager of Odessa landed a 27¼-pound striped bass last weekend at Lake Spence. Also, Odessan Robert Bremerand bagged 30 channel catfish, 16 black bass and nine crappie.

Other Lake Spence reports include Anthony Campbell, Abilene, who caught 9½-pound and 11-pound striped bass; Carrie, Barbara and Doyle Gray, also of Abilene, caught three stripers — of 7½, 8 and 17 pounds, respectively; and Brook, 6, and Allison, 11, Chandler, Midland, who bagged a 15-pound crappie and a 2½-pound black bass.

Four indicted in agent probe

By JAMES LITKE
AP Sports Writer

CHICAGO — A long-simmering scandal that tainted college athletics has boiled over with the indictment of three sports agents and a professional football player.

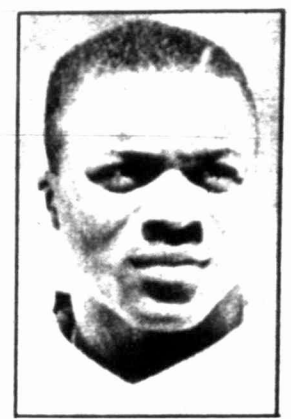

New York-based agents Norby Walters and Lloyd Bloom were charged Wednesday with racketeering, mail fraud, wire fraud and extortion in indictments announced by U.S. Attorney Anton Valukas.

Wide receiver Cris Carter, 22, of the NFL's Philadelphia Eagles and California-based sports agent Dave Lueddeke, 37, also were charged in a separate scheme. Prosecutors said Carter, then a wide receiver at Ohio State University, accepted a $5,000 payment from Lueddeke that both men concealed from a federal grand jury investigating Walters and Bloom.

Valukas said 43 college athletes who signed with Walters and Bloom — many of whom went on to play in the pro ranks — avoided prosecution with pre-trial agreements to perform community service and to reimburse some portion of their scholarships to universities they attended.

Pirates wilting under hot August sun

By The Associated Press

Jim Leyland may be the manager of the Pittsburgh Pirates, but he thinks he's watching Pittsburgh Paints.

"When we play like we're playing, it's like watching paint dry," he said Wednesday night after the slumping Pirates lost to the Cincinnati Reds 6-2.

NL

Pittsburgh has lost three of its last four games and 20 of its last 33. The Pirates are 11-14 in August and have scored only four runs in their last 37 innings.

"You can sum it up by saying the Cincinnati Reds played like a team playing to win a pennant, and we played like a team ready to go home," Leyland said. "It's a matter of maybe these players don't know what's at stake. But it will change (Friday) in Houston... there will be some changes made."

In other games, New York beat Los Angeles 2-1, Montreal beat San Francisco 7-5, Chicago beat Houston 3-2, San Diego beat Philadelphia 5-2 and St. Louis beat Atlanta 5-3.

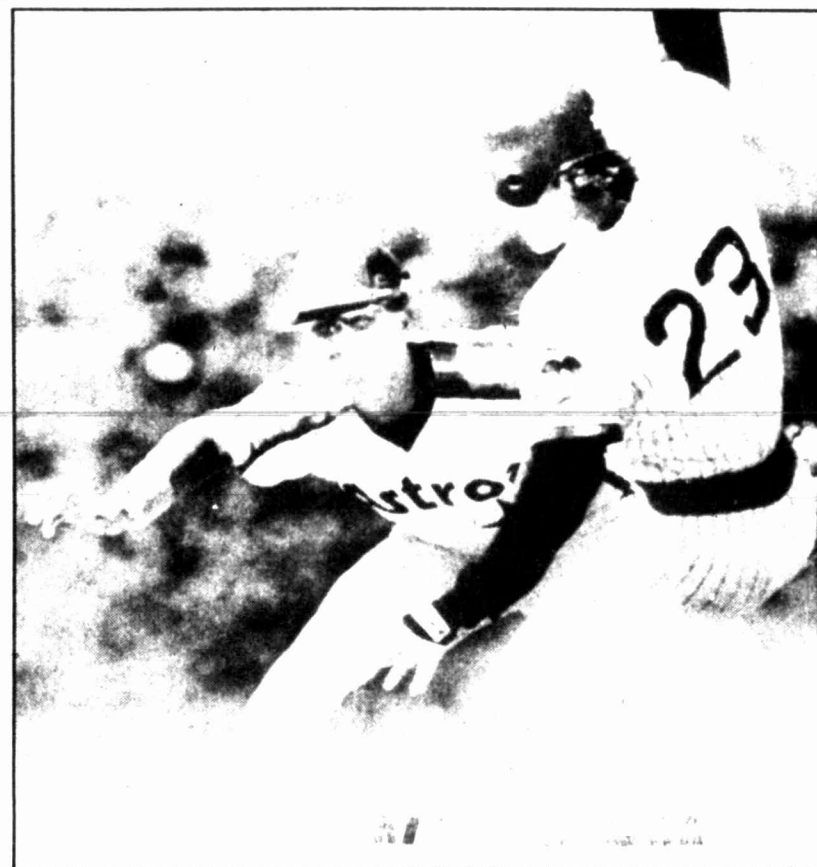

Cubs 3, Astros 2

Rafael Palmeiro led off the ninth inning with a double and scored on Vance Law's single.

Juan Agosto, 10-1, relieved to start the ninth and had his 10-game winning streak stopped. Reliever Jeff Pico, 4-6, got the victory.

Greg Maddux took a four-hitter into the eighth with a 2-1 lead before Buddy Bell's game-tying single off Pico. Nolan Ryan struck out nine.

Mets 2, Dodgers 1

CHICAGO — Chicago Cubs' Ryan Sandberg (23) is tagged out by Houston Astro shortstop Rafael Ramirez on a fifth-inning steal attempt Wednesday afternoon. The Cubs defeated the Astros, 3-2.

Keith Hernandez hit a run-scoring single and Kevin McReynolds a sacrifice fly as New York rallied in the eighth inning to sweep the season series in Dodger Stadium for the first time ever.

New York has won eight of nine games against the Dodgers this season, including all six in Los Angeles.

"It means nothing if we play them in the playoffs," said Hernandez, who alluded to the Dodgers' 11-1 record against Philadelphia in 1983, when the Phillies won the playoffs in four games.

The Mets stretched their East Division lead to 5½ games over Pittsburgh, which lost to Cincinnati.

One-day sentence sparks debate

TORONTO (AP) — A judge's "message" about violence in hockey, in the form of an assault conviction for an on-ice incident, is sparking debate among NHL players and coaches over who should police what happens on the rink — the league or the courts.

But for Minnesota North Stars right wing Dino Ciccarelli, convicted Wednesday of assaulting an opposing player with his stick and sentenced to a day in jail and fined $1,000, there's no question.

"I just think the judge wanted to use me as a precedent, but if I'm being made an example, then the NHL is going to have to step in and stop all the fighting and stick swinging," Ciccarelli said.

"I think it's ridiculous," he said. "I don't see where these people are getting involved in the hockey aspect. I think the league office should be taking more charge and taking more control of it. Obviously, they are using me as a scapegoat and the judge wanted to use me as an example."

Ciccarelli, 28, is believed to be the first NHL player given a jail term because of an on-ice incident, league officials said. Assault charges were filed after a Jan. 6 game in which Ciccarelli twice hit the Maple Leafs' Luke Richardson on the head with his stick and punched him in the mouth. Richardson, wearing a helmet, was not injured.

"It's time now (that) a message go out from the courts that violence in a hockey game or in any other circumstances is not acceptable in our society," Toronto provincial court Judge Sidney Harris said after finding Ciccarelli guilty of assault.

Olympians down NBA in overtime

DENVER (AP) — Point guard Charles E. Smith scored 20 points, including a 3-point play with 23 seconds left in overtime, to give the U.S. Olympic men's basketball team a 105-103 victory Wednesday night over a squad of NBA players.

The triumph improved the Olympians' record against NBA competition to 6-1. The tour concludes with a game against NBA players at Las Vegas, Nev., on Saturday and a final game at Los Angeles against Athletics in Action next week.

Olympic Coach John Thompson of Georgetown has until Sept. 2 to trim his squad from 14 players to the 12 who will compete in the Olympics at Seoul, South Korea.

Smith, also from Georgetown, scored seven of his team's 11 points in overtime as the Olympians withstood some late-game heroics by Jeff Hornacek of the Phoenix Suns, a last-minute replacement for Tyrone Bogues on the NBA team.

Hornacek, who scored 25 points, had the last 11 NBA points in regulation and the last four NBA points in overtime.

Hornacek's two free throws drew the NBA within 102-101 with 1:05 remaining in overtime, and his 15-footer put the NBA ahead 103-102 with 40 seconds left.

But Smith's drive and free throw after he was fouled settled the issue.

The game wasn't as physical as some played by the Olympians, but it did give them a good workout against Denver Nuggets coach Doug Moe's up-tempo offense and pressure defense.

Twins prove once again to be nightmare for Detroit

By The Associated Press

Even though the Minnesota Twins have been a nightmare for Detroit this season, the Tigers don't plan on losing any sleep over it.

AL

Dan Gladden and Kirby Puckett hit home runs to highlight a six-run second inning as Minnesota defeated Detroit 8-2 Wednesday night and finished the season series with 11 consecutive victories over the Tigers.

The Twins had five extra base hits in the second inning off Frank Tanana, 14-8. In winning 11 of 12 from Detroit, the Twins outscored the first-place Tigers 65-18 after dropping the first meeting this season 7-0.

"They're a good ball club, but so are we," Tanana said. "I'm not going to lose any sleep over it. You just tip your cap and say good riddance. You're glad the nightmare is over."

Elsewhere in the American League, it was California 4, Boston 3; New York 7, Oakland 6; Chicago 6, Toronto 4; Cleveland 7, Milwaukee 2; Texas 7, Kansas City 4 and Baltimore swept Seattle by identical 4-3 scores with the nightcap going 12 innings.

Rangers 7, Royals 4

Bobby Witt pitched a three-hitter for his ninth straight complete game and Mike Stanley's two-run double keyed a four-run rally in the eighth inning as Texas beat Kansas City at Arlington Stadium.

Witt, 6-8, tied a club record for consecutive complete games also held by Ferguson Jenkins and Gaylord Perry. Witt struck out 11 as he continued the longest complete-game streak in the majors since 1985 when Bert Blyleven went the distance in 10 straight starts for Cleveland.

Steve Buechele went 4-for-4 with two runs batted in, including a run-scoring single to spark the eighth-inning rally.

Angels 4, Red Sox 3

Roger Clemens lost his fourth consecutive decision for the first time in his career as California beat Boston at Fenway Park.

Mike Witt allowed six hits in eight-plus innings and Tony Armas hit a two-run homer for the Angels.

Clemens, who missed a scheduled start last week for the first time since 1985, allowed five hits and three runs in six innings. He fanned six to increase his major league-leading total to 248.

The Red Sox scored two runs in the ninth, but Bryan Harvey came on and got his 13th save.

Yankees 7, Athletics 6

Ken Phelps' three-run homer highlighted a five-run, eighth-inning rally in the bottom of the ninth inning as New York beat Oakland 7-6. The victory moved the Yankees to within four games of first-place Detroit in the AL East.

Trailing 6-2 and facing A's ace reliever Dennis Eckersley, Claudell Washington and Don Mattingly led off the bottom of the ninth with singles and Phelps followed with his 20th homer.

Dave Winfield followed with a single off Eckersley, who allowed seven hits and five runs in one-plus inning. After Winfield's single, pinch-hitter Gary Ward met reliever Greg Cadaret with a single that sent Winfield to third. Gene Nelson, 7-5, got Don Slaught to ground into a double play, but Winfield scored to make it 6-6.

Luis Aguayo and Rafael Santana followed with singles and Rickey Henderson hit a hard grounder off third baseman Tony Phillips' glove for the game-winner.

Jose Canseco hit his major league-leading 33th homer, a two-run shot in the ninth that put Oakland ahead 6-2.

White Sox 6, Blue Jays 4

Carlton Fisk hit a two-run double as Chicago stopped its six-game losing streak and beat Toronto in a rain-delayed game at Exhibition Stadium.

Bill Long, 5-9, ended his five-game losing streak. He gave up two runs on five hits in five innings. Fred McGriff hit his 30th homer.

Coaches predict a wild and woolly year in AFC East

By STEVE HERMAN
AP Sports Writer

INDIANAPOLIS — AFC East coaches generally agree the 1988 season could see a replay of 1987, when all five teams challenged for the division title that Indianapolis won in the final game.

Buffalo coach Marv Levy picks Miami, because of quarterback Dan Marino and the Dolphins' winning tradition under Don Shula.

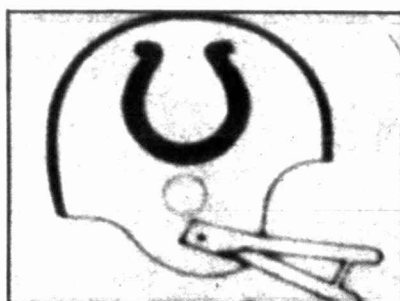

Shula hedges his nod to the Bills by emphasizing every other team's strengths and the tight race a year ago.

But most predictions are nothing more than wild guesses, although if you had to pick a non-contender, it would be the New York Jets.

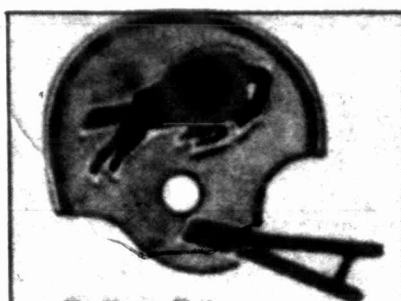

Otherwise, it could be a replay of last year, when all five teams were tied at 6-6 with three games to go.

"You can't afford a mistake or a slip," says Ron Meyer, who took over an 0-13 Colts team with three games to go in 1986 and led them to a 12-6 mark since, including their first division title in a decade, last season.

The Colts gained instant respectability with the acquisition last

NEW YORK JETS

October of All-Pro running back Eric Dickerson from the Los Angeles Rams. The deal also sent rookie linebacker Cornelius Bennett, the Colts' unsigned top draft pick, to Buffalo, and helped make the Bills contenders, too.

The Dolphins and Patriots finished a game behind Indianapolis. The Bills, who had won just eight of 48 games the previous three years, were 7-8. And the Jets were only one game behind Buffalo, finishing 6-9.

Buffalo's hopes are based on four young, emerging stars at four of the most important positions — quarterback Jim Kelly, defensive end Bruce Smith, Bennett and Shane Conlan, who became more effective when he moved to inside linebacker after the Bennett trade.

If they get the running they expect from rookie Thurman Thomas and second-year man Jamie Mueller, they could win.

The Colts' big edge is Dickerson, who played only nine games last year but still led the AFC with more than 1,000 yards rushing. Indianapolis isn't likely to catch its opponents by surprise this year, though, and Meyer says repeating as champion will be very difficult.

"I think whenever you go after the divisional championship as an opponent, the sense of urgency to prepare and compete is that much greater. You can't sneak up on anybody," he says.

"Quite frankly, in the past, the Colts probably have been considered a win on our opponents' scorecard. That isn't taken for granted anymore."

The Colts were 3-3, including two victories with replacements during the players' strike, when General Manager Jim Irsay pulled off one of the biggest trades in NFL history with the acquisition of Dickerson.

The Colts' offense improved drastically with Dickerson and the steady performance of Albert Bentley, first in the AFC and second in the NFL with 1,578 all-purpose yards.

But going into the season, the Colts have problems on the offensive line, where Ron Solt and Kevin Call were holdouts. The oft-injured Gary Hogeboom is the quarterback, with Jack Trudeau behind him.

On defense, the leader is outside linebacker Duane Bickett and the Colts hope for help from nose tackle Joe Klecko, picked up after being released by the Jets because of his chronic knee problems. So far, the knee has held up.

"We're better right now, but unfortunately that isn't always reflected on the scoreboard," says Meyer. "Injuries, performance and attitude all have a big part to play as the season progresses.

Marino at Miami and Kelly at Buffalo are considered the top quarterbacks in the division.

Kelly passed for 2,798 yards and broke his own club record with a 59.7 completion percentage last year. Marino, entering his sixth season, holds 17 league records and is the NFL's all-time passing leader with a career efficiency rating of 94.1.

Marino should get help at Miami from Troy Stradford, who ran for 619 yards and caught passes for 457 in becoming the NFL offensive rookie of the year last season.

Agent

Chicago Bulls — also agreed to testify if the case goes to trial.

Prosecutors claimed Walters and Bloom offered star college athletes cash, autos, trips and clothing in exchange for signed — in some cases post-dated — agreements allowing the agents to represent them in professional contract negotiations.

When those inducements failed, or if a signee asked to back out of an agreement, Valukas said, Walters and Bloom sometimes resorted to threats.

The indictment also named reputed organized crime figure Franzese as an unindicted co-conspirator and alleged that Walters and Bloom used his reputation to coerce athletes into signing contracts. Franzese is serving a 10-year prison term in California for racketeering and tax violations.

The telephone at Walters' World Sports & Entertainment Inc. went unanswered Wednesday.

Attorney, M.L. Trope, representing Bloom, said, "Lloyd Bloom is a kid who was in this business for two years and based on facts in this case, did not commit any crime. He'll vigorously fight to vindicate himself."

Carter, who left Ohio State with a year of eligibility remaining and ended up with the Eagles in the NFL supplemental draft, was charged with obstruction of justice and mail fraud.

"I am cooperating fully... and could only say that I regret my past mistakes," Carter said in a statement released Wednesday by the NFL club.

Lueddeke was charged with perjury and obstruction of justice stemming from the alleged $5,000 payment to Carter. He did not immediately return a telephone call to his firm, Pro-Line Sports in Sherman Oaks, Calif.

Valukas declined to speculate about whether other sports agents employed similar tactics, but noted the investigation was continuing.

In one conversation, Wednesday's indictment charges, Walters told Seattle Seahawks linebacker Tony Woods during a January 1987 telephone call — while Woods was still a student at Pitt:

"This is my life on the line... Now it's your life on the line... your reputation, your business... your family, your brother, your school... everything is going to be tainted and tainted bad. It's gonna be terrible for you."

Prosecutors claimed Walters and Bloom also induced the athletes to defraud their schools by accepting cash and signing contracts in violation of NCAA rules, and then signing affidavits saying they had not broken any NCAA rules.

The indictment charged that Walters also used threats to sign acts in the music business.

Green: Tyson ran like a sissy

NEW YORK (AP) — Mike Tyson and Mitch Green agree on one thing: Green, who has risen to instant fame as Tyson's sidewalk sparring partner, was more like the heavyweight champion's punching bag.

Green, a boxer who lost in the ring to Tyson two years ago, met the same fate in a pre-dawn scuffle Tuesday outside a Harlem haberdashery. He met reporters Wednesday to give his version of the humdinger on 125th Street.

"Mike Tyson hit me and ran like a sissy," he said.

Tyson's description, issued a few hours later, was equally succinct: "He hit me first, I hit back and the fight was over... faster than Spinks," a reference to Tyson's first-round knockout of Michael Spinks earlier this year.

Green demanded a rematch with Tyson, but said he would not drop criminal charges against Tyson even if he agreed to one. Green also said Tyson hit him after he told the champ he did not fight hard in their 1986 bout because he had been cheated by promoter Don King.

In his statement, Tyson dismissed Green as "a punk and a true coward" who filed a criminal complaint as "a publicity stunt."

"I can beat this guy any time, anywhere, any place," Tyson boasted. "I will teach him a lesson in the ring that he should have learned already."

But first, he said, Green would have to survive "some good tough que, where the champ was picking up an $800 jacket around 4:30 a.m.

"When I got there he was there with a lot of his friends. I approached him. I said, 'Mike, what you doin' here? What's up?'"

"I told him that when I fought him (in 1986) I did not fight him that night because Don King (cheated) me out of my money."

"(Tyson) said he did beat me... He said, 'We can do this now.' I said, 'Do what?'"

"We walked outside. He said, 'We can do this now.' To make up for that fight we had back then. I said, 'What?' At that moment, he was fixing his rings on his hands, like brass knuckles... He sucker punched me."

"I tried to get to him and his friends held me. He never knocked me down... He shook his hand like a little sissy and ran."

Although the Tyson camp held out hope that Green would drop the charges, he said he would not, even if Tyson agreed to a rematch. "His hand is a licensed weapon... I want to settle this like gentlemen," Green said.

On Aug. 27, 1987, Green was arrested after police found drugs in his car and that his license had been suspended 54 times. A week later, he was arrested and charged with disorderly conduct and driving while intoxicated after he refused to pay a toll on the Whitestone Bridge.

preliminary fights so that he's ranked again."

Tyson says Green ripped his shirt and shoved into him, "ranting and raving" that Tyson and King owed him money.

Tyson cancelled an appearance Wednesday at a Harlem police station where he was to receive a summons charging him with simple assault, a misdemeanor. The boxer's publicist said that Tyson had to see a physician because the broken hand with which he hit Green was hurting.

At his news conference, Green — his left eye puffed closed, a large cut on the bridge of his nose — offered this version of his encounter with Tyson at Dapper Dan's Bouti-

Steeler founder Art Rooney dies

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Pittsburgh Steelers founder Art Rooney Sr., died today, eight days after being hospitalized for a stroke, officials at Mercy Hospital said.

Rooney, 87, had been in a coma since Monday.

"At 7:45 a.m. this morning The Chief... passed away in his sleep with his family at his bedside," said Dr. Theodore Gelet, Rooney's personal physician.

Rooney was admitted to the hospital Aug. 17 after becoming dizzy at the National Football League team's offices at Three Rivers Stadium.

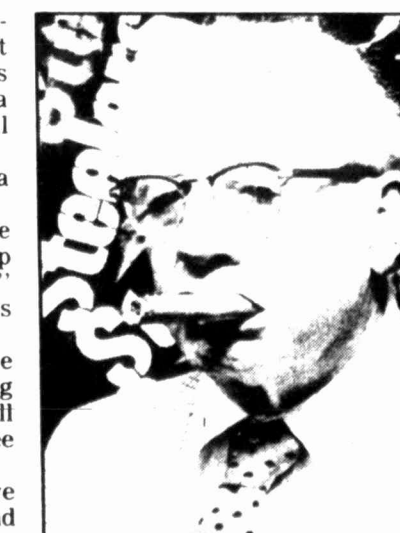

Although he appeared to improve last weekend, he deteriorated and slipped into a coma Monday.

Rooney was partially paralyzed on his right side. Even before the latest change, doctors gave him little chance of full recovery.

Funeral services were set for Saturday morning at St. Peter's Church in Pittsburgh, with visitation Friday evening.

Rooney bought the Steelers in 1932 with $2,500 he had won betting, then watched them struggle for 40 seasons before becoming the NFL's most dominant team of the 1970s. They are the only team to win four Super Bowls.

His reputation for honesty, sincerity and benevolence won him thousands of friends and once prompted Supreme Court Justice Byron White, known as "Whizzer" during his Steeler playing days, to say: "There is no man in the world I respect more than Art Rooney."

ART ROONEY

Yet "The Chief," as he was known, was a shrewd entrepreneur and racetrack operator who earned millions of dollars before turning over his sports empire to his five sons in the late 1960s.

Despite his wealth, Rooney never left the decaying neighborhood on Pittsburgh's North Side where he grew up.

"He was a very humble person," former Steelers quarterback Terry Bradshaw said. "Losing or winning, he was no different. It didn't matter whether he was talking to the Pope or a bum in the street. He treated everybody the same."

And his daily rituals — Mass at a neighborhood church, five-minute walk to the stadium, cigars and chats with reporters — rarely changed.
