How's that?
One-way

Q. Why are Third and Fourth Streets one-way? Has the city given any thought to making them two-way streets? I think that might improve the downtown area by making the area more accessible.

A. Sherrill Farmer, coordinator of traffic and planning for the City of Big Spring, said the Texas highway department designated the streets as one-way more than 30 years ago. Farmer said he believed the streets were designated one-way because there was no interstate around the city at that time and it was believed that one-way streets would better facilitate traffic.

Although the interstate now bypasses Big Spring, Farmer said, "I don't know of any reason to change (the streets)." He said the city, through the Texas Office of Traffic Safety, contracted with the firm of Pinnell-Anderson-Wilshire and Associates, Inc., in 1978 for a study of the local traffic system and the study showed "no justification for change" of existing street patterns.

Mario!

Gov. Cuomo's keynote electrifies convention

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Delegates to the Democratic National Convention chanted "Mario...Mario...Mario" Monday night as Gov. Mario Cuomo officially opened the 1984 gathering with an emotional address designed to draw a sharp contrast between the Democrats and President Reagan.

"The Republicans believe that the wagon train will not make it to the frontier unless some of our old, some of our young and some of our weak are left behind by the side of the trail," Cuomo said.

"We Democrats believe that we can make it all the way with the whole family intact."

Repeatedly, the delegates in Moscone Center were on their feet cheering — so much so, that at times Cuomo put out a hand to quiet them. He was interrupted by applause 48 times, and when the speech was done, the New York governor was called back for two curtain calls.

One governor said when Cuomo was finished, "I saw congressmen and their wives with tears in their eyes." A senator called it the best keynote address he had ever heard.

"The finest political speech of our lifetime," said Michigan Gov. James Blanchard, who had seen the misty-eyed congressmen and wives.

Walter Mondale, who handpicked Cuomo to deliver the keynote speech, telephoned the governor at the podium to congratulate him.

"He used a hyperbolic expression, expressing his satisfaction," said Cuomo.

Mondale's wife, Joan, said the speech was "fabulous." Sen. Alan Cranston of California called it "the best keynote I ever heard — sensational — the delivery and more the content. He stated our case."

Asked about his reception, Cuomo — on everyone's list for future party nominations — explained, "These people have a weakness for Italians from Queens," a not-so-subtle reference to Rep. Geraldine Ferraro, the Local unions don't expect postal strike

Staff and wire reports

Although national postal union representatives have spoken of possible "illegal work stoppages" this weekend if contract negotiations fail, local union and management representatives said a strike by Big Spring postal workers is unlikely.

"I really don't think there's any danger of local people going out on strike," Big Spring Postmaster Frank Hardesty said today. "There's been no activity on that by the unions. It's illegal and they would probably lose their jobs if they did strike."

Both Hardesty and union representatives said Big Spring would not support such a strike.

"This area wouldn't support it," said postal clerk Pearl Shifflett, local president of the American Postal Workers Union, which represents about 25 clerks and janitorial workers at the Big Spring post office. "In the bigger towns, it (a strike) might be more of a threat."

Hardesty agreed, saying he would be "very surprised" if the two union locals in Big Spring participated in an illegal strike or "work stoppage" if the contracts expired at midnight Friday without a new agreement.

"I don't believe the union representatives are encouraging a strike," he said. "I believe they'll reach an amicable solution. It might take some time."

Bargainers were expected to continue talks today at the national level, in the face of a 12:01 a.m. Saturday expiration of contracts between the Postal Service and four unions. A strike is illegal, although union officials have not ruled out a work stoppage.

Two of the largest unions have locals in Big Spring, the American Postal Workers Union and the National Association of Letter Carriers. Combined they represent about "57 or 58 employees," according to Hardesty. The office employs about 61 persons, he said.

Local NALC president Wade Bledsoe could not be reached, but Mrs. Shifflett said both unions had similar bargaining positions.

If no settlement is reached and the contract deadline is not mutually extended, federal law provides for compulsory fact finding and binding arbitration.

"We're always hopeful that (contract negotiations) will finish as soon as possible and we're always hopeful we will get the most benefits possible," Mrs. Shifflett said.

The two unions representing the vast majority of workers have proposed a wage-and-benefit increase of more than 10 percent in the first year of a proposed three-year contract.

Change means dollars

Cities counting on new tax bill

Harte-Hanks Austin Bureau AUSTIN — While most people are worried about how much more they'll be paying in taxes next year, Texas cities are already wondering how much more money they'll receive from changes in the state's sales tax law.

The three-year, $4.6 billion tax bill just passed by the Texas Legislature will give cities a $158.1 million windfall.

Though none of the new taxes were earmarked specifically for the cities, those that now charge a 1-cent city sales tax will benefit from the legislature's decision to expand the items that fall under the sales tax umbrella.

Based on a formula supplied by the state comptroller's office, another $316,000 in sales tax revenues could flow to Big Spring over the next three years. The increase in fiscal year 1985, which begins Sept. 1, could be about $88,000, while the hike could be as much as $111,000 in 1986 and $117,000 in 1987.

Those estimates are rough, however, and may well differ from actual revenues. The problem with obtaining accurate estimates, Moore said, is that each city will vary as to the number of businesses that will be coming under the new sales tax law Oct. 2.

Big Spring received $1.5 million in sales tax revenues in 1983.

Street fair paves way for downtown rebound

From staff reports

With less than two weeks to go before downtown merchants kick off their First Annual Heart of the City Festival, organizers say they have overshot their original projection of 40 booths for the event.

According to city Administrative Assistant Pat Hardy, organizers have received firm commitments from some 60 interested locals who will sell produce, prepared food items and handmade arts and crafts at the event.

"We don't want a bunch of people to come in, make a buck and split. The whole idea is to be community-oriented," said organizer David Mills of his organization's efforts to maintain a local slant on items sold at the July 28 downtown festival.

A breakdown of booths for the event show that about 10 of the booths will offer local produce, mainly grown by farmers from the Knott community, Hardy said.

Mills said organizers are also in a process of negotiating with local produce wholesalers to sell fruits and vegetables at the festival.

He said organizers have also talked to other Howard County farmers. However, he was not optimistic about their participation. "We talked to a lot of farmers who wanted to come in, but basically they're afraid they're not going to have enough produce to sell," Mills mentioned lack of rainfall as a contributing factor to these farmers' fears.

"But we're not going to turn down anybody that wants to sell produce," Mills said.

According to Hardy, about 30 local artisans and craftsmen have also committed to selling their handmade products at the festival, including 15 booths allotted to the Big Spring Art Association. Various other craftsmen will sell ceramics, crochetwork, woodwork, jewelry and other handicrafts, he said.

Hardy said festival-goers will be able to purchase prepared food during the day from such organizations as the NAACP, which plans a barbecue stand, LULAC, which will provide drinks and Mexican food, the Howard County Democratic Club, the Northside Community Center and the Howard County Boxing Club. Other individuals will also sell items such as baked goods and snow cones, he said.

Hardy said about ten booths will

Weather

More rainfall predicted

By The Associated Press

Widely scattered showers developed along a weak cold front in North Texas early today, and forecasters predicted rainfall would continue in the area through Wednesday.

The slow-moving cold front stretched east to west across North Texas and into the High Plains. Showers and thundershowers were also scattered over the Panhandle and northern High Plains.

Skies were mostly cloudy over the northern half of Texas ahead of the front. Southern sections of the state reported mostly clear skies.

Winds were generally south at 5 to 10 mph, and light and northerly along the Red River, the Panhandle and the northern High Plains.

Low temperatures ranged from 70 degrees at Amarillo to 83 at Abilene, Stephenville and Waco. Most readings were hovering in the 70s and 80s.

Scattered thundershowers should again form over the northern half of the state through Wednesday, with partly cloudy to mostly cloudy skies in the region. Mostly sunny skies were expected to prevail over the southern half.

A 20 percent chance of thundershowers was forecast for North Texas by the National Weather Service. Highs were expected near 102 degrees, with the low Wednesday in the middle 70s and the high in the upper 90s.

A cold front pushed thundershowers across the northern Plains and the upper Mississippi Valley today.

Severe thundershowers moved through the southwestern states and across parts of the Southeast. In northern Louisiana, thundershowers brought high winds and rain and some streets were flooded in Shreveport, La., where more than 1 1/2 inches of rain fell.

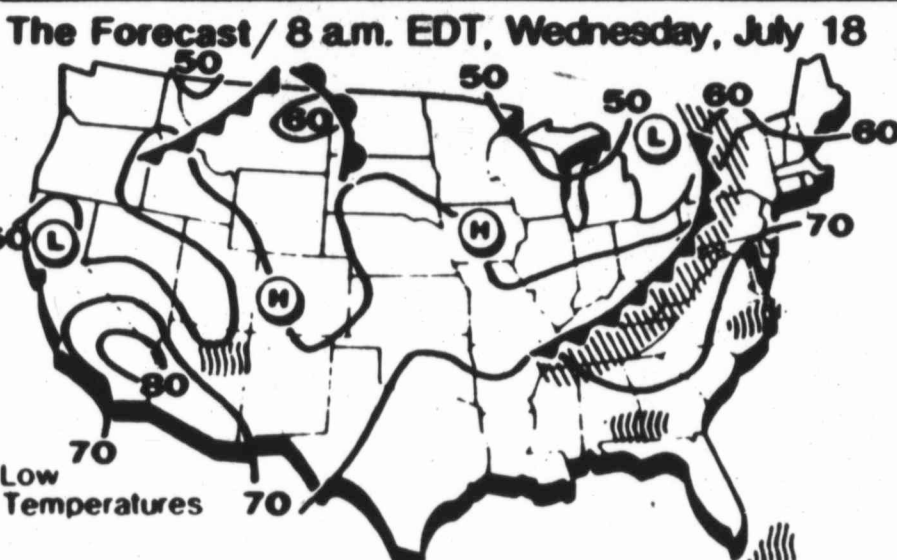

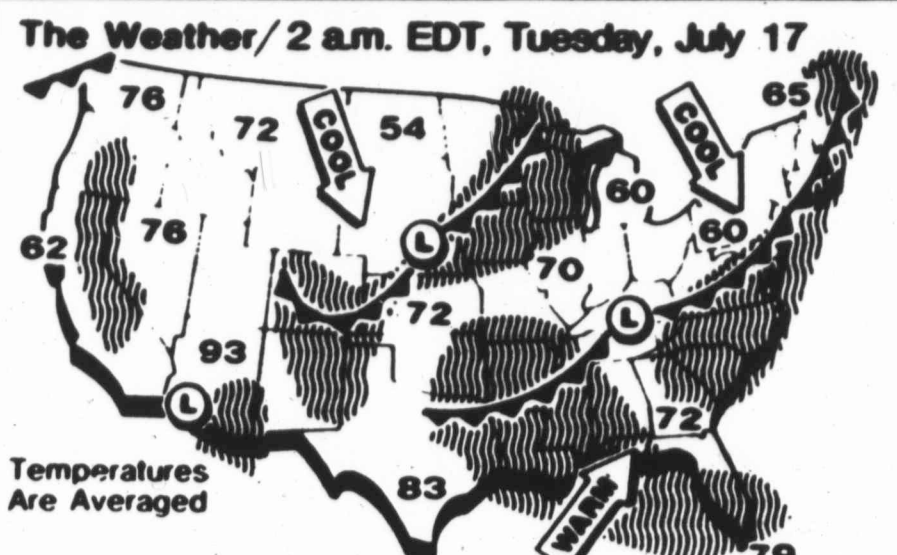

Thundershowers Monday evening spawned tornadoes at Jackson and Minnetonka, Minn., with 70 mph winds at Rochester, Minn.

A twister also touched down near Erwin, N.C. while one inch of rain fell at Bragg, N.C.

Thundershowers were also scattered over California and Arizona. Fair skies stretched from the northern Plains to the northern Pacific coast.

Today's forecast called for thundershowers from the Mississippi Valley to the middle and southern Atlantic Coast. A few thundershowers were forecast over the southern intermountain region while sunshine was expected for the Plains, the Rockies and the West Coast.

West Texas: Cloudy, cooler north. Otherwise, partly cloudy through Wednesday. Isolated to widely scattered thundershowers north and far west today and tonight. Highs upper 80s north to near 104 Big Bend. Lows tonight upper 50s mountains, mid 60s north and mid 70s extreme south.

Sheriff's Log

Man pleads guilty to burglary

A 21-year-old Big Spring man pleaded guilty Monday in 118th District Court to one count of burglary of a habitation.

District Court Judge Jim Gregg sentenced Mart Dewayne Smith of 1402 1/2 S. Main to 14 years in prison in a plea-bargain arrangement with the district attorney's office.

Smith also was credited with serving 146 days in the county jail.

At the time of Smith's arrest, Police Chief Rick Turner said at a press conference that police had cleared a string of burglaries and four rapes, mostly committed against elderly persons.

Earlier, Smith waived a parole hearing and admitted to a technical violation — leaving a geographical area without informing his parole officer — for which his parole was revoked. He had been charged with other violations, according to his parole officer, David Harman, but Harman refused to specify what violations.

Howard County sheriff's deputies early Tuesday morning arrested James L. Fontenot, 44, of San Angelo on suspicion of unauthorized use of a motor vehicle and public intoxication.

According to the sheriff's report, Fontenot was arrested three miles north of Big Spring on Highway 87, where he was found lying on the ground near the right front wheel of a 1974 Chevrolet pickup truck. The truck was reported missing by the J.D. Burk Construction Co. of San Angelo, according to the sheriff's report.

Willie Fitzgerald Watson, 20, of Houston was released from the Howard County jail to Harris County law enforcement officers on a Harris County warrant for revocation of probation. Watson was arrested July 7 on suspicion of driving while intoxicated and driving while license suspended and the Harris County warrant.

Michael James Turnmire, 29, of Lubbock was released Monday from county jail on two $5,000 personal recognizance bonds for aggravated assault and resisting arrest, and will be admitted to the Veterans Administration Hospital, according to his arrest card.

Phillip Mulneix, 20, of Gallatin was arrested Monday by the Cherokee County sheriff's office on a Howard County warrant for theft of services. He was released from jail on $1,000 bond via the Cherokee County sheriff's office.

Yvonne Arisaga of Denton Road told deputies Monday that someone broke into their trailer house and took an almond washer and dryer between July 9 and Saturday. The washer-dryer set was valued at $700, according to the report.

Bill Allison, the pipeline superintendent of Getty Trading and Transport Co. of Midland, told deputies Monday that someone had taken an air conditioning-heating unit from a building one mile northeast of Vincent on Highway 350. Three tires also were discovered missing on Friday, according to the report.

Ester Fox of 1000 Runnels said her husband, Charles Fox, 58, was last seen wearing brown pants, a maroon striped pullover and a red or black cap, she told deputies.

Taxes

The tax base was expanded by eliminating the exemptions on a number of goods and services, including:

- Cable television.
- Newspapers and magazines.
- Dry cleaning.
- Parking.
- Movies, concerts, sports events and other entertainment ticket sales.
- Some computer programs.
- Fertilizer for home use.
- A wide range of repair services, except for cars and trucks.

Those services will be taxed by cities and transit authorities, as well as the state, for the first time.

John Moore, a spokesman for State Comptroller Bob Bullock, notes that the cities won't have to do anything special to receive the additional funds.

"We'll just have some new folks to collect it from, and we'll forward it to the cities," he says.

The comptroller's biggest problem between now and Oct. 2 when the expanded sales tax takes effect is identifying all the businesses that are no longer exempt.

be taken by groups providing information on subjects ranging from cameras and model airplanes to blood pressure.

Organizers have scheduled a variety of entertainment and competitions throughout the day, including a 10 a.m. wheelchair race, an 11 a.m. "Big Wheel" race for children, a 3 p.m. break-dancing contest and a "Main Street Mile" race at 7:30 p.m., Hardy said.

Entrance fees for the wheelchair and Big Wheel races are $2, with participants receiving a Heart of the City T-shirt for their efforts, Hardy said. Entrance fee for the mile run around the courthouse will be $4, he said.

Other planned entertainment includes performances by the Big Spring Prison Camp Outlaw Band, the Big Spring Area Concert Band, and shows by local puppet master Kelly Draper, clowns, a magician and a belly dancer, Hardy said.

Local youth groups will also show their talents throughout the day in conjunction with the Chemical People's Youth Appreciation Week, he said.

And local radio stations KWKI, KKIK, KBST and KBYG plan live remote broadcasts from the downtown festival throughout the day, Hardy said.

Capping the event will be a street dance that is scheduled to begin at 8:30 p.m. and is also sponsored by the Chemical People organization.

Mills said he has felt an overall positive reaction for the public at large since beginning work with the Heart of the City Project.

"I have not have anybody say it won't work or that we're not doing the right thing," he said.

However, he backed down from his statement, saying he sometimes "gets to arguing" with close friends about the eventual success of the Heart of the City Project.

"At first, some people acted like I was putting a lot of effort into nothing. They told me, 'Aw, it's been tried. You're not going to get anything done.'"

"I get unglued at that point. I say it can happen, it can work. I've seen it work."

Mills mentioned his experience in Farmington, N.M., which he said had a worse downtown situation than Big Spring and "turned it around into a thriving community."

"It took a constant effort on everybody's part," Mills said of Farmington. "They wouldn't let anybody drop the ball."

Mills also met head on criticism that it was inadvisable to give special attention to one of the city's business districts over others.

"Downtown is probably the ugliest place in Big Spring so it's the best place to start," he said.

"The whole idea is to rejuvenate the traffic in Big Spring as a whole. It's like the hub and each of the shopping centers is like the spokes off the hub."

"(If I were a merchant in another district), I would feel glad that somebody's building traffic and educating people to stay in Big Spring," he said.

Chemical takes aim at woodpeckers

HOUSTON (AP) — A new chemical repellent aims to chip away at the woodpecker's nagging habit of chiseling utility poles, a favorite nesting place for the birds.

The chemical, called ST-138, was developed by the Southwest Research Institute in San Antonio and is being marketed by the Woodpecker Repellent Co. of El Campo, a Houston firm organized by seven electric co-ops who have been delighted with the new product.

Woodpeckers cause about 10 percent of the utility pole casualties nationally and even more in some forested areas. The Guadalupe Valley co-op near Gonzales reports that its pole damage costs the firm $75,000 to $100,000 a year.

The Houston Lighting and Power Co. reports that it has to replace 10 to 20 poles a year due to damage by woodpeckers. The poles cost $250 to $500 each.

But the biggest problem with woodpeckers is that they weaken power and telephone poles which can then suddenly collapse during a storm, interrupting service.

Woodpeckers find utility poles ideal for the construction of nests.

Appraisal district to discuss chief appraiser's position

The Howard County Consolidated Tax Appraisal District could consider the dismissal of the district's chief appraiser in a meeting at 1 p.m. Wednesday in the county courtroom of the Howard County Courthouse.

District board members told the audience at the board's last regular meeting in June they would consider whether to fire Pereira at the next meeting. The board could take no action and could not convene into executive session at the June meeting because they did not specifically mention personnel matters on the agenda.

Tax board meetings, which last year had trouble attracting a quorum of its own members, now are attracting angry crowds of between 100 and 200 persons who yell for Pereira's dismissal at the meeting.

Many Howard County taxpayers are irate at Pereira because he increased the appraised values of their real estate in a year when local realtors say the market is "soft" and depressed. According to realtors, more than 500 houses remain unsold in Big Spring.

The poor sales market, coupled with bad years in both the oil and agriculture industries, angered taxpayers who said the higher appraised values were the first step to higher taxes.

Tax rates are set by individual taxing entities, based on tax rolls from the county tax-assessor collector's office and valuations determined by the appraiser's office.

Earlier, the board agreed to return valuations, with certain exceptions, to the 1983 appraised values. The reversion to old values came at a meeting crowded with county residents who shouted angrily at the board.

Also on the agenda for Wednesday is discussion of a date for a budget work session for the district.

Time also has been set aside for "audience participation," according to the agenda.

CRMWD sets bid opening date

The board of directors for the Colorado River Municipal Water District will open bids at 10 a.m. Thursday on about $4.5 million of construction in connection with the district's planned Beals Creek diversion.

The diversion is the largest project planned by the district since completion of the Ward County well field in 1970.

Major portions of the job are a 72-foot high dam 1,600 feet long across Red Draw, 1 1/2 miles south of Beals Creek. When full, the dam will cover 376 surface acres and contain 8,536 acre-feet of water. According to district staff, the cost is estimated at $2.445 million.

The other part of the project up for bid is the pump station, the low-channel dam, pumps and pipelines, estimated to cost about $2.057 million.

According to consulting engineers, 14 contractors have asked for plans for the construction projects.

Forsan slates school reunion

Forsan school will host an all-school reunion at 3 p.m. Aug. 4 in the school cafeteria.

A catered barbecue supper is planned for 6 p.m. Those planning to attend should contact Sherry Walraven Kloss at P.O. Box 2769, Big Spring, or call 263-6290.

Sterling Co. team takes second

A four-person 4-H Sterling County took second place honors in the State 4-H livestock judging contest in the round-up last month.

The Sterling County team of Bubba Kearney, Reed Stewart, Kevin McDonald and Rene Stewart was coached by Russell Kott. In addition to the team's second place finish behind Gillespie County, Rene placed second in individual point totals.

Ector County finished fifth in the same contest.

A Sterling County team also tied with Randall County for fourth place in an open class contest.

Also at the state round-up, a Mitchell County team placed sixth in the farm and ranch management team and a Midland County team finished sixth in the focus on health contest.

PD answers stereo theft calls

Big Spring police Monday received three reports of stereo equipment that was stolen from various locations around the city.

Robert Pruitt of A-1 Furniture at 2611 W. Hwy. 80 told police at 8:02 a.m. Monday that someone between 3 p.m. Sunday and 8 a.m. Monday entered the business and stole stereo equipment valued at a total of $1,690, police reports said. Among items stolen were two stereo cassette players and three sets of speakers, according to reports.

Larry Hass of Route 1 told police at 8:03 a.m. Monday that someone between 11 p.m. and midnight Sunday entered his unlocked 1974 Chevrolet 2-door and stole two Pioneer speakers and a graphic equalizer valued at a total of $370, police reports said. The incident occurred while the car was parked outside Hass' residence, reports said.

Rondel Brock, Vice-President of Bob Brock Ford at 500 W. Fourth, told police at 8:50 a.m. Monday that someone between 5 p.m. Saturday and 8 a.m. Monday entered a vehicle on the business lot and stole a cassette player and speakers valued at a total of $400, police reports said.

In other police reports: Terry Don Schaefer of 705 Willa told police at 7:57 a.m. Monday that someone between 3 a.m. and 7 a.m. Monday entered his residence and stole $240 in currency and an undetermined amount of change, police reports said.

Paul Davis of 811 Ohio told police at 12:45 p.m. Monday that someone between 6 p.m. Sunday and 9 p.m. Monday entered his residence and stole a General Electric stove valued at $300, police reports said.

Lorenzo Duron, 24, of 102 N.W. Eighth was arrested at 1:15 a.m. Tuesday near the intersection of Sixth and Airbase on suspicion of driving while intoxicated, police reports said.

W.M. Hyden, 57, of Gail Route was arrested at 1:25 a.m. Tuesday near the intersection of Sixth and Circle on suspicion of driving while intoxicated, police reports said.

Helmet: Forbes' best buy

NEW YORK — Malcolm Forbes, chairman and editor in chief of Forbes magazine, is recovering in a hospital after a motorcycle accident in Montana, a spokesman said.

Forbes, 64, a motorcycle and ballooning enthusiast, suffered a collapsed right lung, broken ribs, concussion and abrasions Thursday afternoon and was flown to Kalispell (Mont.) Regional Hospital, said Don Garson, director of corporate communications for Forbes.

Forbes' motorcycle slid out of control on loose gravel in Glacier National Park, Garson quoted Dr. Jan Engzelius, one of Forbes' three companions on a three-state motorcycle trip, as saying.

"One look at Forbes' helmet and it is apparent that without it he probably wouldn't have survived," he quoted Engzelius as saying. "Without the leathers he was wearing the extensive body bruises would have meant a lot of Mr. Forbes' flesh left on the road."

Also accompanying Forbes were Errol Ryland, manager of Forbes' Trinchera Ranch at Fort Garland, Colo., and James Hudlow, Forbes' nephew, Garson said. The party was visiting three of Forbes' ranches.

Forbes has taken motorcycle trips across Russia, China and Pakistan and to the Arctic Circle. He also sponsors an annual hot air balloon festival at his chateau in Normandy, France.

MANTEO — Britain's Princess Anne, saluted Friday by soldiers in Elizabethan garb and a bagpipe-and-drum corps, dedicated a replica of a 16th century sailing ship that brought English colonists to North Carolina 400 years ago.

The princess also spoke at the unveiling of a plaque marking what she called "the first serious attempt by the English to settle this New World that 16th century travelers knew so little about."

Knowing what she knows about America now, she added she "can't imagine why they didn't come sooner."

Thousands of spectators jammed the tiny Manteo waterfront for the ceremony. Guests included a delegation of British officials, Gov. Jim Hunt, Gov. Charles Robb of Virginia, Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C.

The ceremonies, including dedication of the replica ship Elizabeth II, commemorated the Roanoke voyages, so-called because they landed near Roanoke Island where Manteo is located. English colonists first landed on North Carolina's Outer Banks July 13, 1584.

"It was a turning point in history," Hunt said.

He passed the bar exam

SAN DIEGO — When J. David Dominelli was jailed in late April, those outside knew he was the head of a multinational money trading firm. Inside, almost no one knew.

But that didn't last long at the Metropolitan Correctional Facility. "Everybody's got some favor to ask you," Dominelli says now. "It's absolutely mind-boggling."

After first failing to recognize Dominelli as the man jailed on a civil contempt charge for failing to cooperate with the trustee sorting through the remains of his J. David & Co., other inmates are now trying to take advantage of him, Dominelli said.

They've pleaded for help in their criminal cases and, in some cases, asked for money, Dominelli said.

"Some of these people are really poor," Dominelli said. "I have bought some of them, you know, when you go up to the commissary, a cup of noodle soup or cigarettes, things like that."

Dominelli has been indicted on fraud, contempt and perjury charges related to the bankruptcy of his firm.

'No nominee can be elected without help.'
Walter Mondale

THREE IN A ROW — Mondale shakes hands with rivals Gary Hart and Jesse Jackson after the three held a surprise meeting Monday at the Democratic convention in San Francisco.

Mondale's moment

Big 3 lay down arms, shake hands on unity

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — As Walter Mondale courted his two opponents face to face, the Democratic National Convention embraced a new hero in New York's Mario Cuomo, who rallied the party to his vision of the future and his vow — "Democrats did it, and Democrats can do it again."

The payoff for Mondale's dramatic move — a personal session alone with his two rivals for the nomination — could come tonight if the convention sidesteps a brawl over philosophical differences as it drafts a platform.

Aides to the three candidates — Mondale, Gary Hart and the Rev. Jesse Jackson — are to meet today to see if they can resolve their bosses' differences over party planks on the use of force abroad, on justice, jobs and peace.

Away from the humid subterranean convention hall, where their delegates bathed in oratory, Mondale, Hart and Jackson held their first joint meeting since the primaries. The site: neutral ground — a hotel suite atop breezy Nob Hill.

"No nominee can be elected without help," said Mondale, addressing 300 reporters after the hour-long session. Hart said he thought a compromise could be reached on his plank — seeking to pledge a future Democratic president to commit no U.S. forces in Central America and the Mideast unless U.S. interests are jeopardized.

Jackson was ambiguous. "We reserve the right to be competitive to the very end," he said. But he also said: "There is now a need more and more to cooperate."

His planks cover jobs, justice and peace. He seeks an absolute cut in defense spending, not merely the slow growth that Mondale advocates.

Jackson, who won 18 percent of the primaries' votes, addresses the delegates tonight, something candidates for the nomination used not to do.

Gov. White rips Reagan, GOP

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — President Reagan has turned his back on the majority of Americans, preferring instead to favor the privileged few, Texas Gov. Mark White told the Democratic National Convention.

White introduced the keynote speaker, New York Gov. Mario Cuomo, on prime-time network television Monday with a sharp attack on Reagan's administration.

Hailing the Democratic Party as "the pulse beat of the American people," White said:

"The Republicans have given us a government that says to the people, 'No'. We have always led from the conviction that our clarion call is, 'The people, yes'."

"The Republicans have proven that theirs is a government of the privileged few. We are the party to which the people turn when they want to be heard."

White used the speech to run through a lengthy list of issues on which he said the Republicans have ignored the desires of most Americans.

The list includes nuclear war, farm foreclosures, rising interest rates that prevent young couples from buying houses, unemployment, affordable health care and opportunities for women, minorities and the handicapped.

"The people are not shy about telling us what they want," White said. "We have listened to those voices. We have listened to them and learned."

White said Democratic officeholders can solve many of the problems despite the sometimes rocky relations among party members.

"We are a big, brawling, diverse, visionary, shirt-sleeve party. We have never been a slick-packaged party or a lockstep or a rich party," he said.

News in brief

Iraq downs Iranian jet

BAGHDAD — Iraqi air defense units today shot down an Iranian jetfighter in the southern sector of the border area, an Iraqi military spokesman said.

The spokesman, reading a communique over the state radio, said the Iranian warplane "tried to violate Iraqi air space in the southern sector" of the 730-mile border separating the two countries, which have been at war since September 1980.

There was no independent confirmation of the claim.

UK strike talks start

LONDON — Government mediators worked today to negotiate an end to a week-old dock strike that stranded scores of foreign truck drivers near Dover and forced sharp increase in some food prices.

Face-to-face negotiations between union leaders and employers have broken down, and mediators from the government's Advisory, Conciliation and Arbitration Service plan to talk separately with each side.

Mediators met Monday night with representatives of the National Association of Port Employers and were scheduled to meet later today with officials of the Transportation and General Workers Union, which represents some 35,000 dockworkers.

Peru's capital attacked

LIMA — Leftist guerrillas cut a main power line with a series of bombings and plunged the capital into darkness Monday night, police said. The rebels also set off bombs at a half dozen places during the blackout.

The state utility Electrolima said 40 percent of the capital's power was effected by a cut in the main line between Lima and the state capital of Huancayo, 325 miles to the east. It made no immediate estimate of damage.

2 tunnel to W. Germany

MUNICH — Two East German brothers tunneled all night under a chain-link fence fortified with automatic shooting devices and escaped into West Germany this morning, Bavarian police said.

The brothers, ages 28 and 19, used a collapsible shovel to dig in a spot where the East German authorities had not yet buried blocks of cement to prevent tunneling, said police spokesman Heinz Sles.

The exact location of the escape was withheld for security reasons, he said.

Hanoi returns GI remains

HANOI — Vietnam today turned over graying bones believed to be those of eight U.S. servicemen, and U.S. officials put them on a cargo plane headed for a military identification center in Hawaii.

PUBLIC NOTICE

AT&T Communications has filed with the Public Utility Commission (PUC) of Texas to introduce a new intrastate, optional long distance service to begin August 1, 1984, the same date "Reach Out America" plan will be available for interstate calls.

A new service designed to give customers the opportunity to reduce the cost of long distance in Texas has been filed with the state PUC by AT&T Communications of the Southwest, Inc.

"Reach Out Texas" is an optional calling plan which will provide additional discounts on long distance rates for Texas customers who frequently place calls in the evening, weekend, and night time calling periods.

The new "Reach Out Texas" plan for the first time extends the benefits of competition to many Texas consumers who previously have not had any discounted long distance service available to them.

AT&T Communications customers who choose this new optional service will pay a monthly charge of $14 which entitles them to one hour of intrastate "Direct Dialed" (1+) calling during the weekend and night rate period.

An additional customer savings for those participating in the plan will be that any Direct Dialed calls placed during the weekend and night rate period that exceeds the one hour period will be charged at an hourly rate of $12, or $.20 per minute.

Customers selecting this option also receive an additional 15 percent discount for intrastate Direct Dialed calls during the evening discount rate period for a total savings of approximately 38 percent.

A one-time charge of $6 is billed when a customer orders the "Reach Out Texas" plan. The $6 is collected by AT&T Communications and paid to the local telephone company to establish the service. This charge will be waived during the first 90 days that the offering is available.

AT&T Communications is proud to offer this optional service for its Texas long distance customers and will in the future continue to introduce cost cutting programs to help Texans reduce their long distance bills.

A complete copy of the "Reach Out Texas" tariff and rate schedule is on file with the Texas Public Utility Commission at Austin, Texas.

AT&T Communications estimates that the revenue impact of this new service would be significantly less than 2.5 percent of annual gross revenues.

Persons who wish to intervene or otherwise participate in these proceedings should notify the Commission as soon as possible. A request to intervene or participate or for further information should be mailed to the Public Utility Commission of Texas, 7800 Shoal Creek Boulevard, Suite 400N, Austin, Texas 78757. Further information also may be obtained by calling the Public Utility Commission Consumer Affairs Division at (512) 458-0223 or (512) 458-0227, or (512) 458-0221, teletypewriter for the deaf.

*Customer billing for the optional calling plan will be provided for AT&T Communications through billing contracts with the local telephone companies. Therefore, the introduction of these rate plans into a specific area is contingent upon local company billing capabilities. Southwestern Bell Telephone Company has agreed to handle the billing in its service areas effective August 1, 1984.

Quick police vote is best approach

The city's decision to call a vote on the manner of selecting a police chief is a good-faith effort to accomplish two ends: first, to diffuse a divisive issue and, second, to demonstrate responsiveness by government.

City officials were presented with a petition that calls for a citywide vote on changing the manner of police chief selection from appointment to popular election. Given the volume of work involved in certifying a petition, the city could well have been in a position of not calling a vote until January. That's a long time for an issue ripe with negativism to fester.

Instead, the city accepted the petition — without certifying its accuracy — as a mandate that enough citizens want to consider the issue to put it to a vote. With that action, the city initiated its own binding referendum and will get it on a ballot for a special vote next month.

Those who circulated the petition apparently believe the police department would be stronger with a chief who answers to voters at the ballot box. And with the restriction on residency, we could expect chiefs to be either home-grown products or individuals who move up within the department. The apparent leaning is toward continuity in office, a desire for someone who "knows Big Spring."

On the other side are those who believe the chief should only be qualified — by training, by experience, and by effectiveness in community relations — to handle the job. And perhaps it's better not to have long-standing ties to the community. The thinking here is that the chief then has no vested interests, is not inclined to "play favorites" and can work unfettered at simply enforcing the law — equally and with consistency.

The precise merits of both philosophies — and, no doubt, some other considerations that we've not touched on here — will be the subject of newspaper articles and public debate as the election nears. At this point, we just want to express satisfaction that the petitioners' viewpoint is being expedited for public consideration.

At the movies

I walked into Sullivan's house and found him in a serious conversation with his 12-year-old son, David.

"Am I interrupting anything?" I asked.

"No," replied Sullivan. "We were just discussing going to a movie together. What would you like to see, David?"

"I'll leave it up to you, father," David said. "If you think a film is too violent or has sexual content not suitable for someone of my age, then I would hope you would not let me see it."

Sullivan was very perplexed. "You're not helping me much."

"The decision is not mine to make. After all, you're my parent, and you know what is best for me."

Sullivan picked up the newspaper with the theater listings.

"How can I tell what is in the movies if I haven't seen them?" he said.

"You must be guided by the Motion Pictures Association ratings. At my tender age I certainly would not expect you to take me to a film with an R rating, since it would contain improper language, excessive violence or even nudity that we both would find morally offensive."

Sullivan said, "Yeh, I guess you're right."

"We can also eliminate X-rated movies since you couldn't take me to one even if you wanted to."

"Who said anything about taking you to an X-rated movie?"

"I was just making it easier for you to select the right film for me. You can forget the G category as we'd both be bored, even if we could find one," David said.

"So what we're looking for is a PG or Parental Guidance film?" Sullivan said.

"This would be a good place to start. Of course, there is a new rating, PG-13, which is a warning to you that there is more violence and sex in it than a PG film, but not enough to rate an R."

"Would you like to see a PG-13 picture?"

"The question is not whether I would like to see one, but whether you and mother would want me to view it," David replied. "It's a grown-up decision that, as a child, I don't feel I should be part of."

"Every film in this paper sounds like either a sophomore college joke or a stupid comic strip adventure. What kind of guidance can I get from that?" Sullivan complained.

David said, "You can't blame the motion picture producers. Grownups don't go to the movies, and therefore Hollywood no longer has to pander to their tastes."

"Where the heck did you hear that?" Sullivan wanted to know.

"I saw Jack Valenti on the 'Today' show and he said it while defending the rating system," David replied.

"What else did he say?"

"The PG-13 rating places an even larger guidance responsibility on the parent. You, in effect, Dad, are the final arbiter as to how much violence or sexual permissiveness I will be exposed to in my developing years."

I could see Sullivan was losing his patience. "If it was up to me I wouldn't let you see any of these idiotic movies," he said, throwing down the paper.

"I may not agree with your assessment of the current crop of summer films, but as a 12-year-old, I respect your right as a parent to protect me from them."

"Here's five bucks," said Sullivan. "Go see anything you want."

"Thank you, father," David said. "What are you going to see?"

I asked David as we left Sullivan steaming in the living room.

"Indiana Jones," he whispered to me. "We go through this charade every week."

Jack Anderson

Situation critical in Nicaragua

WASHINGTON — The Central Intelligence Agency has a unique capacity to rise up and create a fiasco. A decade ago, it recruited some obscure tribesmen to fight its covert battles in Laos and Iraq, then abandoned them to be slaughtered. Now a similar catastrophe is in the making in Nicaragua.

In an earlier column, I told how the CIA armed the Creoles and Indians in Nicaragua, provoked them to attack the Sandinista regime, then cut off their supplies. They will soon be without weapons to defend themselves against a remorseless enemy.

My roving reporter, Jon Lee Anderson, is now traveling with the MISURA guerrillas — a coalition of Miskito, Suma and Rama Indians — along Nicaragua's swampy Atlantic coast. He reports that their situation is critical.

Their leader is Steadman Fagoth, a small, wiry man, with curly black hair that tumbles over a bald spot. He yearns for the quiet, contemplative life of the marine biologist he studied to be. Yet he is a tough guerrilla chief, and his manner conveys authority.

"The gringos have cut off all their aid to us," he told my reporter in Spanish. "They say it's because they don't have any more money, but I think it's because we're naughty children."

Fagoth meant that the Indians have resisted the CIA's efforts to force them into what he considers an unholy alliance with the contras, who are led by former officers of the late dictator Anastasio Somoza's hated national guard.

Fagoth also believes the CIA aid ought to be out in the open. "Everyone knows about it and who it's for, so why call it covert?" he demanded. "I will ask for it to be sent directly to us from Congress. I want to see American C-130s unloading our supplies in the open. As long as it's covert, it allows corrupt middlemen to fill their pockets."

Fagoth said his forces had received arms from the CIA, plus a monthly allotment of $80,000 to pay for food, clothing, fuel for their boats and other expenses. "It was never enough money," he said.

Last month, the CIA sent them nothing at all and informed them that no more aid would be available. The 30-year-old Indian thinks his determination to remain independent of CIA control is what caused the cut-off.

"The CIA has wanted to be the owner of the anti-Sandinista movement," he said. "They are wrong if they think they can buy our movement with their money."

The CIA's malign neglect could pass an invisible sentence upon the Indians. If agency officials had pondered their decision with a little intelligence and compassion, they would realize that the cost will be high in Indian lives. The Sandinistas have already started to herd the Indians into "relocation camps" and to wipe out any who resist.

"We'll put up our blood," said Fagoth, "but the gringos must put up the cash."

Footnote: A year ago, my reporter Jon Lee Anderson made a foray into Nicaragua with the Indians. They complained bitterly to him that both the Honduran army and the CIA's Somoza-tainted guerrillas were taking a cut of their supplies. I reported this in my column and it caused some unpleasant repercussions. When the MISURA commanders returned to Honduras, they were thrown in jail for having talked to my reporter, and Honduran authorities tried to run the Indians out of the country.

Jack Anderson's investigative report from Washington is distributed by United Feature Syndicate.

Mailbag

Behind police chief issue

To the editor:

In reference to the petition for an elected Chief of Police, I am not saying this is good or bad at this time. I question who will benefit from this.

It is my understanding this petition was started by the bail bonding people because it took too long to get a person out of jail, and too much red tape.

I ask this question, does it benefit the citizen who works hard, pays his taxes and doesn't get into trouble? I don't see how.

I can understand the bonding people wanting to give faster and better service, that's what all businesses want, but not at someone else's expense.

I would hope that these people and all of our citizens would get on something important; our water in Big Spring is terrible and in my opinion, not safe to drink especially for people having heart trouble or kidney problems and expectant mothers. But I haven't seen these people marching on city hall and CRMWD. Something should be done now before it is too late.

Another important issue that needs the time and effort spent on it is our taxing body and tax board. We all need to look at this bad problem. Our tax appraiser, Mr. Pereira, must go. He has caused more problems in Howard County than the bad water or our police chief.

In my opinion, he must go now — with Mr. Pereira, there is no BEEF.

Today in history

By The Associated Press
Today is Tuesday, July 17, the 199th day of 1984. There are 167 days left in the year.

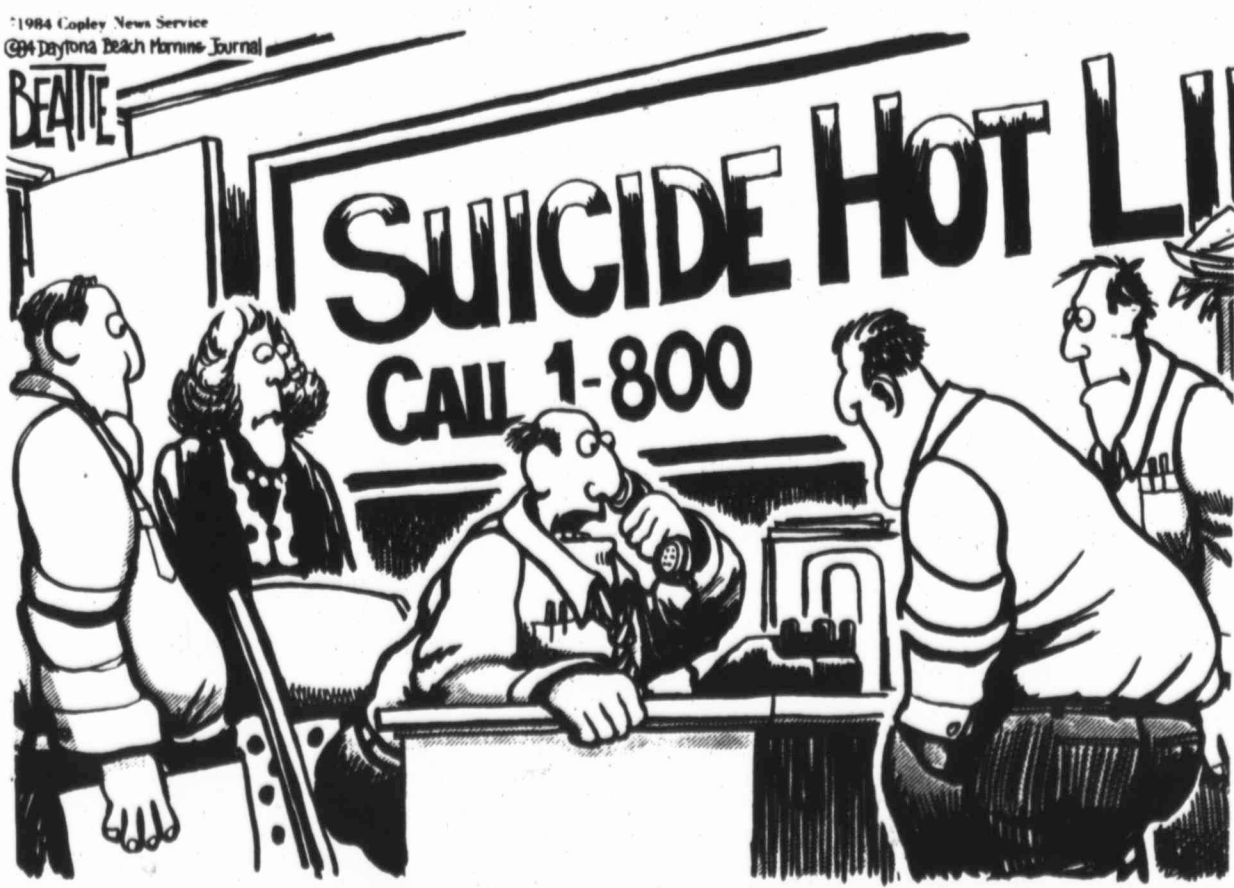

Today's highlight in history:
On July 17, 1936, the Spanish Civil War began as General Francisco Franco led his army forces in revolt against the government.

On this date:
In 1603, Sir Walter Raleigh was arrested for suspected complicity in a plot to dethrone England's King James I.

In 1821, Spain ceded Florida to the United States.

In 1898, during the Spanish-American War, the Spaniards surrendered to the Americans at Santiago, Cuba.

In 1945, President Harry Truman, Soviet Premier Josef Stalin and British Prime Minister Winston Churchill gathered in Germany for the Potsdam Conference, the final allied summit of World War II.

Around The Rim

By CAROL HART BALDWIN

Politics. Ugh

I hate politics.

I've come to that conclusion slowly. Throughout the years my attitude toward politics has continued a downhill roll. Walter Mondale's recent selection of Rep. Geraldine Ferraro as his running mate was the last straw.

If women and other minorities are ever to get equal treatment, we have to be selected on the basis of our merits, not because we represent a certain sex or race. Now that Ms. Ferraro has been selected, critical politicians jumped on the issue, charging that she was chosen only because she is a woman. They've disregarded her background in Congress, they've insinuated that she was chosen only because of political pressures and they've really clouded up the pride women might feel at finally being included on a presidential ticket.

Politicians who are pro-Mondale aren't much better. Too many news stories have come across the newswires lately talking about the "sparkle" that Ms. Ferraro adds to the ticket. Again, it's not her background and expertise that's sparkling. It's the fact that she's a woman.

I believe women and other minorities should get equal treatment just because we're people too. Everyone deserves a chance. And we deserve a chance to make it on our qualifications, our ambitions, our drive toward a goal. We don't need token chance. We need real opportunities.

There are other reasons I'm disillusioned with politics. Too often, political glamour and fake smiles get in the way of public interests and concerns. "I'm going to do this," they all promise with a smile as the audience cheers in the background. Months later, after the election, the story changes.

Politicians are judged on their looks more than their standards and ideals. It's no wonder that a former actor is now the president. I think actor and president are very similar roles in today's world.

Nobody would disagree that we need more honesty in politics. Politicians are, unfortunately, the people who make the decisions for the rest of us. We're advised to be careful in our selections of the men and women who run the government. To make wise decisions we need honesty upfront.

My only hope for politics is that the tokenism we must deal with today will break prejudices in the future. If people are given equal chances, for whatever reasons, then some day we may be selected for what we offer, not for what we look like to the public eye.

Dr. Donohue

Pregnancy weight

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Last year I was successful in losing 78 pounds and am presently on a maintenance diet to keep the weight off. I have regained 18 pounds. Will it be harmful to remain on my diet, which is very nutritionally balanced, while I am trying to get pregnant? If I do become pregnant, will my dieting harm the baby in any way? — D.B.

To answer your question about your weight loss and fertility, I'd have to know just how much you weigh now, whether your periods are occurring normally (indicating ovulation), and whether your health is good. If you are in normal weight range and if you can answer the other questions affirmatively, then I doubt very much whether any present infertility (another part of your letter) could be laid to the previous weight loss.

As to dieting and pregnancy, the rules are quite clear. A woman in the normal weight range should gain about 24 to 30 pounds during pregnancy — including the weight of the fetus, of course.

It is hazardous to the baby to deprive the body of the normal number of calories, vitamins and minerals during pregnancy. Here's a rule you can use as a guide: Under normal circumstances, a woman who can maintain current weight on 2,000 calories a day before her pregnancy would increase her daily intake by 300 calories.

Weight control during pregnancy is OK so long as the woman does gain the amount of weight the doctor advises. But weight reduction, unlike weight control, is not usually recommended in any pregnancy.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Is there any new drug for lowering cholesterol levels? — D.H.

Many are always being developed and tested or are under study. One such drug works by lowering the so-called "bad" cholesterol protein carriers in the blood (the low-density lipoproteins). These LDLs are less efficient in clearing the blood of cholesterol. When you lower the LDLs, you give the good lipoproteins, the HDLs (high-density lipoproteins) a chance to really load up on the cholesterol and have a better blood-clearing effect. I hope that's not terribly confusing.

The new drug I mentioned acts by stimulating the liver to get rid of more LDLs. Trials are not completed, but I am sure it will be publicized when and if it is found appropriate for distribution and general use.

Meanwhile, there are many old drugs used to lower cholesterol, among them Atromid, probucol, nicotinic acid, and cholestyramine. Your other related questions are discussed in the booklet "Control Your Cholesterol Sensibly," which other readers may obtain by writing me care of the Big Spring Herald, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope and 50 cents for printing and handling.

Class of '42 holds reunion

Members, room mothers and friends of the Stanton High School Class of 1942 attended a reunion at Cap Rock Auditorium in Stanton, Saturday.

Class members and remaining home room mother of the class of '42, Mrs. J.A. Wilson, participated in the Centennial Parade preceding the "Old Settlers Reunion." This climaxed the week-long celebration of the Stanton Centennial. Following the parade, the group met at Cap Rock Auditorium for lunch and a time of fellowship.

A business meeting was conducted with Morris Donelson, 1942 class president as master of ceremony. He was assisted by Flora Dee Cook Wilson, vice president; Colleen Church Leonard, secretary-treasurer; and Dwain Henson, class reporter.

Corsages were presented to Mrs. Wilson, the remaining 1942 home room mother, Velma Zimmerman, a grade school room mother, and Lois Church, a sponsor throughout the years.

The farthest distance traveled to attend the reunion was by the Charles Petersons from El Centro, Calif. The group agreed to meet again on "Old Settlers Day" 1986, which is always the second Saturday in July.

Dear Abby

To brush or not to brush

DEAR READERS: "Grossed Out in Georgia" expressed disgust with people who brush their teeth in public washrooms. I defended the brushers. Many readers bristled.

DEAR ABBY: This is in regard to "Grossed Out," who couldn't stand the sight of someone brushing his teeth in a public restroom.

As a dental assistant for four years, I have seen many mouths that might have needed a lot less dental work had their owners done a little more brushing.

Tell "Grossed Out" that he needs to brush and floss only the teeth he wants to keep.

teeth but never flossed, and she also kept all her teeth to a ripe old age.

I do a little better: I brush my teeth once a day and have my teeth cleaned once a year. At age 72 I still have all my teeth plus a few fillings.

On the other hand, my husband was a fanatic about brushing his teeth and flossing them, too. He saw his dentist every six months, but he lost all his teeth before he was 60.

So, I have concluded that if you want healthy, long-lasting teeth, you must choose the right parents. Nothing else counts.

M.K. IN CALIFORNIA

KEEP SMILING

IN MISSION VIEJO

DEAR ABBY: After reading the letter from "Grossed Out," I was prompted to write in defense of brushing teeth in public.

At the age of 30, I finally got enough nerve to get braces to correct my teeth. Anyone who's had braces knows that food tends to adhere to the teeth and braces.

I brush my teeth in public restrooms after eating because I think it would look far worse to have food particles dangling from my braces.

Also, it's especially important while wearing braces to brush so decay doesn't destroy the teeth under the braces.

BRUSHING IN PUBLIC
DEAR ABBY: You told "Grossed Out" that the sooner one brushes and flosses his teeth after eating, the healthier his teeth will be. Abby, that shows that you have fallen for the commercials of the teeth care industry.

There is no real proof that brushing and flossing will make teeth last longer. Let me tell you why I say that: My grandfather never owned a toothbrush and he never heard of dental floss. When he died at 88, he had all his own teeth and they were in wonderful condition. My mother brushed her

Cuomo's convention speech hailed as historic

Democratic vice presidential nominee-in-waiting.

In his keynote speech getting the convention down to business, Cuomo, exhorting his fellow Democrats to close ranks and oust Reagan from the White House, accused the president of a "macho intransigence" and policies that could "lead us to bankruptcy or war."

Cuomo scathingly accused Reagan of complicity in the deaths of U.S. servicemen in Lebanon, financing the Latin American governments "that murder nuns," and domestic poverty so desperate that Americans are forced to sleep in gutters.

Leading the Democrats' oratorical charge against the Republicans on prime-time television, Cuomo contrasted his own heritage as the son of hard-working Italian immigrants with his image of Reagan as a smooth-talking, horse-riding president, isolated and unaware of the hardships his policies have created.

"He said, 'Why, this country is a shining city on a hill,'" said Cuomo.

"But the hard truth is that not everyone is sharing in this city's splendor and glory. A shining city is perhaps all the president sees from the portico of the White House and the veranda of his ranch, where everyone seems to be doing well."

Said Cuomo: "There's another part of the city, the part where some people can't pay their mortgages...and middle-class parents watch the dreams they hold for their children evaporate."

"In this part of the city there are more poor than ever, more families in trouble, more and more people who need help but can't find it. Even worse, there are elderly people who tremble in the basements of the houses there."

The governor said Reagan's economic policies had left people sleeping in the streets — "in the gutter, where the glitter doesn't show" — and giving "their lives away to drug dealers."

Cuomo said Reagan could see for himself if he bothered to visit the poor in Appalachia or unemployed steelworkers in Lackawanna, N.Y.

"It is the same shining city for those relative few who are lucky enough to live in its good neighborhoods," he said. "But for the people who are excluded — locked out — all they can do is to stare from a distance at that city's glimmering towers."

Cuomo said that his success story — the son of an industrious immigrant grocer in the New York borough of Queens who rose to become governor of one of the country's biggest states — will be more difficult to repeat unless Reagan is denied re-election in November.

He said Reagan's policies had lowered inflation, but only by producing the worst recession since 1932, more than 55,000 bankruptcies and "two years of massive unemployment."

The governor said Reagan had created the largest federal budget deficit in history despite his pledge to balance the budget by 1983. In doing so, he said, Reagan had created "a mortgage on our children's futures that can only be paid in pain and that could eventually bring this nation to its knees."

In foreign relations, Cuomo accused the president of "incendiary rhetoric" and "a macho intransigence" regarding arms control talks with the Soviet Union.

The governor blamed Reagan's policies for the deaths of hundreds of American servicemen in Lebanon, for giving "monies to Latin American governments that murder nuns" and not providing sufficient support for Israel.

"Our policy drifts with no real direction, other than an hysterical commitment to an arms race that leads nowhere — if we're lucky. If we're not — (it) could lead us to bankruptcy or war," Cuomo declared.

Cuomo said re-electing Reagan would make things worse by freeing the president's "radical proclivities," but he warned Democrats that Reagan would be hard to beat.

"That this disastrous quality is not more fully understood by the American people is attributable...to the president's amiability and the failure by some to separate the salesman from the product," he said.

Cuomo dismissed Reagan's attempts to blame Mondale, the Democrats' prospective presidential nominee, with problems of the Carter administration under which Mondale served as vice president.

"How can you make a vice president responsible for four years and make a president responsible for nothing?" Cuomo asked.

The 52-year-old governor, who writes his own speeches, said Mondale and his chosen running mate, Rep. Geraldine Ferraro of New York, are up to the challenge of defeating Reagan. Ms. Ferraro, like Cuomo, is of Italian descent.

"We will have a new president...a Democrat born not to the blood of kings, but to the blood of immigrants and pioneers" and "America's first woman vice president, the child of immigrants," Cuomo declared.

Cuomo was asked earlier what Reagan might think of his speech.

"I don't think he'll listen," Cuomo replied. "He'll probably be on his horse somewhere."

Hearing Loss Is Not A Sign Of Old Age.

Chicago, Ill. — A free offer of special interest to those who hear but do not understand words has been announced by Beltone. A non-operating model of the smallest hearing aid Beltone has ever developed will be given absolutely free to anyone requesting it.

It's yours for the asking, so send for it now. It is not a real hearing aid, but it will show you how tiny hearing help can be. The actual aid weighs less than an eighth of an ounce, and it fits completely into the ear canal.

These models are free, so we suggest you write for yours now. Again, there is no cost, and certainly no obligation. Although a hearing aid may not help everyone, more and more people with hearing losses are being helped. For your free sample write today to: Department 00000, Beltone Electronics Corporation, 4201 West Victoria Street, Chicago, IL 60646.

Steve's tuff

By Steve Belvin

Year of the underdog

1984 is shaping up to be one of the most interesting pennant races in recent years in Major League Baseball, due mainly to the number of "unknowns" that have eased into the top spots in each league.

With the All-Star game over and the season halfway through its 162 game slate, none of the teams are celebrating a league championship just yet — not even the Detroit Tigers.

You know the team in the American League East that set a torrid pace with 35 wins in its first 40 games. The people in the Motor City are jumping with visions of pennants in their heads like in the days of Denny McClain, Mickey Lolich and Willie Horton.

Just like the Tigers of old, this year's team is doing it with pitching, having the lowest team earned run average in the A.L. Combined with the hot bats of youngsters like Chet Lemon, Alan Trammell and Lou Whitaker its no wonder they have a seven game lead over Toronto.

One alarming fact is that the Tigers have played just .500 ball since their fast get-away. Can the surprising Blue Jays with their youthful talent or the defending world champion Baltimore Orioles (11 games out), with their balanced hitting and pitching attack, catch Detroit?

I think there is still a good race remaining in the A.L. East.

AMERICAN WEST RACE

The A.L. West is a good race heading down to an exciting finish. No runaways in this division with the last-place Texas Rangers just seven games out. Defending division champs, the Chicago White Sox, lead the pace playing just over .500 ball. California, Minnesota, Oakland and Kansas City all have a shot. Even Texas has a chance, but honestly believing the Rangers will win the West is like saying I can outrun Carl Lewis.

California and Minnesota seem to have the inside track since both squads have stronger pitching staffs. The Angels have not begun to hit like they are capable of.

METS AND CUBS

The Mets and Cubs are the cinderella stories in the N.L. East. Both squads boast an abundance of good ballplayers that have carried the two to the top, but as always defending league champion Philadelphia looms in the background.

The Cubs' strength is definitely hitting. With young stars like Leon Durnam, Ryne Sandberg and Jody Davis the Cubbies swing the hottest bats in the league. If anything is their downfall it is pitching and Philadelphia. They have a shortage of consistent starters plus Philadelphia has dominated the Cubbies in the first half.

The Mets are just the opposite, they have fair hitting but their strength lies in the young arms of hurlers Ron Darling and Dwight Gooden. Can the Cubs' bats fight off the Mets' pitching and can both hold off Philly and all that experience?

SURPRISING SAN DIEGO

The other surprising story of the National League is the San Diego Padres in the West who currently have a seven game lead over an inconsistent Atlanta. Goose Gosage is the stopper the team needs in the bullpen while All-Everything outfielder Terry Gwynn is the spark SD needs.

One can't count the Braves and LA Dodgers out either, but San Diego will make them earn their money.

So we're set for the second leg of an exciting season. It's been a while since this many underdogs were atop the league standings. Wouldn't it be nice to see Toronto and Chicago playing in the World Series?

Officials feel education laws discriminate against athletes

HOUSTON (AP) — Texas' recently-passed education reform laws discriminate against some students and may prompt some who participate in extracurricular activities to drop out of school, local education officials said.

Tougher academic requirements in House Bill 72, adopted recently by the state legislature, could affect schoolboy athletics, band, debate, choir and drill squad, officials said in a story published Monday in The Houston Post Monday.

The new law forbids a student to participate in sports or other extracurricular activity after Jan. 1 if he or she is failing any academic class. The law follows the recommendation of a study committee headed by Dallas computer magnate H. Ross Perot.

"Everybody wasn't created equally like H. Ross Perot thinks," Buddy Hopson, athletic director for the Fort Bend Independent School District, told the Post. "Kids are raised in different environments. It (the bill) is a very discriminatory thing."

"The best days of high school athletics are behind us," Hopson said.

Some educators estimated that about 20 percent of the students now in extracurricular programs will be benched or forced to withdraw.

"I don't think there's a team in the state that it won't affect," said Paul Benton, basketball coach of Madison High School in Houston.

"It will be real tough on the inner city kids," he said. "And it won't just affect sports. It affects the bands and the drill teams, too. Some kids will drop out of school that otherwise would have stayed in."

College coaches also are concerned.

"It could be too stringent if a student is taking five good academic courses," said Jackie Sherrill, football coach at Texas A&M. "I think what they're trying to do is right, but it may be a step too far."

In Longview, where the high school football team was top-ranked in some polls, school superintendent Bill Ford said the effect could be dramatic.

"We run approximately 18 to 20 percent failures in at least one subject," said Ford. "Across the board, we could see 18 to 20 percent of our athletes not able to participate on Friday night (when football games often are played)."

Humble athletic director Sam Mosely said the new law will cause a change in philosophy in his district. He said coaches will use a different academic strategy to keep their players on the field.

"If a kid only has to take four (classes), we wouldn't insist on

In District LL Tournament

Big Spring teams among final six

The District Little League All-Star Tournament field is down to its final six teams after Coahoma and Midland Eastern bowed out in defeats to Midland Tower and Big Spring Texas respectively.

Both Tower and Texas remain in the double elimination tourney with one defeat each. The other four remaining teams are Big Spring National, Western Midland, Midland North Central and Big Spring International. All have undefeated records.

In tonight's action North Central will battle the Internationals at the American League Park at 8 while the Nationals square off with Western at 8 at the National League Park. The winner at the American League Park will face Midland Eastern Wednesday while the winner at the National League Park will take on Midland Tower.

BIG SPRING TEXAS 3, MIDLAND EASTERN 1

Sambo Rodriguez hurled six strong innings and limited Midland Eastern to six hits as Texas eliminated Eastern from the tourney.

Eastern collected three singles in the first inning to take a 1-0 lead. From then on Rodriguez was invincible as he shutout the opposition.

Texas scored all its runs in the fourth inning thanks to two singles and two walks off loser J.J. Johnson who allowed three hits in three-and-a-third innings. Randy Martinez came on in relief and struck out eight while not allowing a hit.

Joe Herrea and Johnson collected two and three hits respectively for Midland. Chris Cole and Raul Castillo led the Texas bats.

In a game played at the National League Park, Midland Tower downed Coahoma 5-3.

BIG BLAST — Dave Winfield of the New York Yankees swings for a first inning grand slam against the Texas Rangers. The hit came off Dickie Noles, who was making his first start, and rallied the Yanks from a two run deficit and an eventual 9-8 win.

Hot handed Norman eager to try tough British Open Classic

ST. ANDREWS, Scotland (AP) — Greg Norman gave fair warning of what was to come.

"Look out," was all he said.

Norman made that statement at the Congressional Country Club in suburban Washington, D.C. a couple of months ago. He had just scored his first American triumph, a front-running, never-headed, five-shot victory in the Kemper Open.

"This has been a barrier for me, winning the first one in the States. Now I've crossed that barrier. I've proved it could beat these guys. I've proved it to myself."

"Now that I have, look out. And the brash Australian, with his harshly hooked nose, sun-bleached white hair and awesome length off the tee, promptly proceeded to fulfill that prediction, embarking on a rampage of such magnitude that Tom Watson was prompted to announce:

"Right now, Norman is playing the best golf in the world. He's riding the crest of a wave. He has to be considered among the favorites, probably the favorite, for the British Open."

And Norman, the man called the "Great White Shark," will not deny that label going into the 113th British Open Championship Thursday on the ancient links of the Old Course at St. Andrews.

"I'm looking forward to it," said the 29-year-old who has abandoned his role as a dedicated globe-trotter and established a permanent home in the United States.

"I like St. Andrews. I've played it maybe 30 times. I know its humps and hollows. All the trouble is on the right. They say it's not a fader's course. But that's not true. You just start it to the left and bring it back."

USING BOTH HANDS — Dallas Cowboys tight end Doug Cosbie goes out for a long pass during practice Monday at California Lutheran College. Cosbie appears the heir to the spot due to the retirement of veteran Billy Joe Dupree.

UH fills coaching slot

HOUSTON (AP) — Ben Hurt, who served as an assistant football coach at University of Houston from 1965-71, will return in the same capacity this fall, Cougars head coach Bill Yeoman announced Monday.

Hurt, 49, will replace Deryl Ray McGallion, the Cougars' linebacker coach for the last five years. McGallion resigned recently to go into private business.

"We are thrilled to have him (Hurt) back," said Yeoman.

Hurt, 49, returns to the University of Houston after coaching stints at Texas A&M, Middle Tennessee State and Nederland High School. The Nashville, Tenn., native coached the Cougars defensive line from 1965-71.

A Big Spring WINNER!

Rev. Victor Sedinger First Christian Church

"This community is the real 'winner'," says Victor Sedinger. "Where there is a need, the people respond to it." Victor was recalling the early days of the Rainbow Project, the Howard County shelter for abused children. About two years ago Victor became aware of the need for help for the county's abused youngsters; as outgoing president of the Ministerial Fellowship, he recommended that a committee study the feasibility of a shelter. Subsequently a plan emerged from the committee's findings, and in January of 1983 volunteers began remodeling Old Fire Station No. 6. "Volunteers poured in from all over the community," he says. "Much of the labor and materials were donated. People made whatever contribution they could." Since the shelter opened in November of 1983, more than 40 children have been cared for. Victor has been a driving force on the project from the first, even doing some of the carpentry work himself; he currently serves as president of the Rainbow Project board of directors, and is in demand as a spokesman at club meetings. "Big Spring proved it could meet a community need," he says "and now other needs have come to our attention, such as support for rape victims and parents who have lost children." Victor is an Advisory Board member for Rape Crisis Services of Big Spring and a member of Rotary Club. He serves as Christian Education Chairperson, Central Area, Christian Church in the Southwest, and is presently working on his doctorate at Brite Divinity School at TCU. He moved here from Lubbock four years ago with wife Carolyn, a dental hygienist, and children Leah and Adam.

THE WINNER —
 says "Let me do it for you."

THE LOSER —
 says "That's not my job."

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RIGHTER INSTITUTE

FORECAST FOR WEDNESDAY, JULY 18, 1984

GENERAL TENDENCIES: The daytime finds you very much out of tune with the little affairs and duties of life and in these you are actually likely to have poor judgment and would be unwise to take risks.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Forget those private worries and get busy on whatever is of a practical nature and get ahead faster.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Be patient in going after your goals since there are bound to be delays and obstacles in the path of your progress.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Don't take any risks in business affairs during the daytime since conditions are a bit tense and in the evening your goals are easier.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) That new idea needs further study before putting in operation, so don't push it early. Be happy with your pals.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) Be careful not to argue with a business partner during the daytime and then tonight you can make new contacts that are worthwhile.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) You may have trouble with partners if chances are taken by anyone and promises not kept, but tonight you can fulfill them nicely.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) You find it slow sledding at work in the morning, but associates later give you the support you need. Be carefree.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) You may find entertainments disappointing so don't expect very much, and in the evening you can plan future activities well.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Don't start any arguments at home today and later you can go out for entertainment. Look to your mate for solace.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Early give attention to whatever is important and don't let routine work deter you from this. Be careful in driving with a friend.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Study present costs well and try to shave them and be sure not to add any other expenses. Not a good day to seek advice.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) You find it difficult to know how to handle an intimate affair so just let it work itself out. Improve your appearance.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will require much in spiritual and ethical training early otherwise your progeny could become confused. Then the life can become very successful, especially if a good education is provided. The forte is business here.

"The Stars impel; they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

Austin victim of own city water ordinance

AUSTIN (AP) — As the City of Austin began ticketing violators of a mandatory water conservation ordinance, residents began to feel the trickle-down economic effects of a dry summer.

Ironically, one of the first offenders cited was the city Parks and Recreation Department.

"I was not aware of any problem, but I'll sure get on the horn and find out and see that the proper people are notified," said Paul Hofmann, assistant to city manager Jorge Carrasco. "We need 100 percent compliance if this is to work. I feel a little foolish."

The parks department was cited for watering two locations on the wrong day, officials said.

"Part of it is connected to the confusion of the first day," said Donna Brasher, manager of community services for the parks department.

As of Monday, Austin residents face a $200 fine for watering lawns out of turn, and officials said that by 9 p.m. Monday, six violators were ticketed. The city, which has an adequate water supply but an inadequate distribution system, has devised a five-day watering rotation — based on the last digit of addresses.

"Basically, it's putting us out of work," said Charles Fritsch, whose company uses a water-based mixture to install lawns. "We're going to look outside of Austin for work so we can keep people on the payroll."

The city cut off Fritsch's right to use water from fire hydrants. A meeting is set for tonight between city officials and landscaping interests to figure out what can be done.

Meanwhile, a Northeast Austin man on Monday became the first waterer ticketed for violating the restrictions.

"He just said he was confused about what day he could water. While my partner was writing the (ticket), I gave him a sheet that had the watering schedule on it," said Austin Police Officer Bill Whitaker.

Police Chief Frank Dyson said 10 officers who usually issue warrants have been transferred to water enforcement chores. Regular uniformed officers will issue watering tickets only if they are free at the time.

"We're not asking the patrol officers to look the other way, but their main responsibility is to deal with emergency situations," said Dyson.

The dry spring was a problem for Austin, but a more pressing problem is a water treatment system that has not kept up with local growth.

Most of Central and South Texas has been bone-dry this summer because of a drought extending back into the winter months, meteorologists say. About 67 cities and towns have taken water conservation steps because the water level in underground wells and reservoirs has dropped severely. The Austin restrictions do not curtail in-home use, and lawns can be watered any day with a hand-held hose.

Austin. Offenders face a $200 fine for violating a restriction that lawns may be watered only every five days.

The water problems have dried up grass sales. Sarah Madden of The Grass Patch said sod sales have dropped about 50 percent since talk of water restrictions began several weeks ago. Sod needs twice-a-day soaking for about three weeks, she said.

In addition to the possible $200 fine, violators could face the embarrassment of having their name printed in the newspaper.

Jeff Bruce, managing editor of the Austin American-Statesman, said the newspaper will publish the violators' names if the logistics can be worked out.

The paper currently publishes the names of people arrested on driving-while-intoxicated charges.

Bruce said the water offender list would be printed "for the same reason we run the DWI list. It heightens public awareness of it."

"Today is my day to water," said Bruce. "I was going to play tennis tonight. Now I have to stay home and water my yard."

San Saba fires county jailer

SAN SABA (AP) — A San Saba County jailer who bypassed county officials and complained to state officials that his jail fell short of state standards was fired Monday by the county commissioners' court.

Tim Atkins, 26, who had lived in and managed the jail for the past two years, mailed letters July 10 to the Texas Commission on Jail Standards and to the American Civil Liberties Union and claimed that the jail violated at least 13 regulations ranging from lack of security to safety hazards.

Atkins said the pleas of him and his wife that the 100-year-old jail be brought up to standards had gone unheeded by county officials.

Commissioners discussed the matter with Atkins Monday morning, then reconvened Monday afternoon and voted to dismiss him.

"He's (Atkins) stirred up something here that could cost the taxpayers $1 million," San Saba Mayor Joe Ragsdale said during the morning session.

"They go to the American Civil Liberties Union, which is a communist organization, and they're (ACLU) just ready to jump on the bandwagon," Ragsdale said.

After receiving Atkins' letter, the jail standards commission summoned Sheriff Brantley Barker and County Judge Thomas Bowden to meet with the commission on July 25 in Austin to discuss continued operation of the jail.

The jail is overseen jointly by the city and county under a consolidated law enforcement contract.

"What I don't understand is why wasn't this letter brought to him (Sheriff Barker) before (notifying) the jail standards commission," said commissioner Calvin Bush.

At Bush's suggestion, commissioners rejected Atkins' request that he be given $22,604.62 in back pay for his wife's services at the jail the past two years.

Also turned down was the jailer's request that the county reimburse him $4,867.05 for a freezer, refrigerator, washer, dryer, dishwasher and microwave that the Atkins used to provide laundry and meals service to jail inmates.

Search continues for Anson minister

ANSON (AP) — Authorities reopened a search for a missing Church of Christ youth minister Monday after reports he was seen riding a motorbike through Crowell, 90 miles north of here.

Wesley Barrett "Barre" Cox, 31, of San Antonio had been feared the victim of foul play after his ransacked car was found Thursday evening on a farm road just north of Tuxedo, 10 miles north of here in northern Jones County.

But Jones County Sheriff Mike Middleton said Monday that a convenience store manager in Crowell identified a picture of Cox as the man who came into her Allsup's convenience store late Thursday morning.

"He came into the store and bought a pair of sunglasses. He was wearing a motorcycle helmet," Allsup's manager Esther Atwood told the Abilene Reporter-News.

"All we discussed was finding him a pair that would fit. He tried on several different pairs," she said.

Ms. Atwood's daughter, who was also in the store, and an unidentified truck driver also said the man appeared to be Cox, Middleton said.

The man left Crowell on a motorbike and was apparently headed for Vernon, 31 miles northeast of Crowell, Ms. Atwood said.

On Sunday, after three days of an intensive air and ground search by lawmen and numerous friends and relatives of Cox proved fruitless, Middleton had called off the hunt for Cox. The sheriff added that he was continuing the investigation on the assumption Cox had been the victim of foul play.

After the car was found, Rotan policeman Floyd Bankston reported he had assisted Cox about 3:45 a.m. Thursday after Cox ran out of gas about a mile north of Rotan. A motorbike that Bankston reported seeing in the trunk of Cox's car was missing when the vehicle was discovered.

Cox's 1976 Oldsmobile 98 was found at 7:30 p.m. Thursday with holes knocked in both the front and back glass. Police found the vehicle on Farm Road 1661, about three miles north of Tuxedo.

The keys were locked in the trunk, where officers also found an empty beer can. The beer can was being processed for fingerprints or other clues. Contents of his wallet were found scattered along a ditch about a mile south of where the car was found. About $100 was believed missing from the wallet, Middleton said.

Cox, a former Abilene Christian University staff member, had been in Lubbock the past two weeks, doing work on his doctoral dissertation. He reportedly left Lubbock Wednesday night and planned to stay with friends in Abilene before traveling on to San Antonio, where he had been youth minister at MacArthur Park Church of Christ since last fall.

"Something everybody is curious about," Cheryl Mann, director of information at Abilene Christian, said Sunday, was the whereabouts of the small motorbike that Bankston reported seeing in Cox's trunk.

The motorbike, which the officer said Cox told him he bought for his wife, was missing along with a small blue-speckled helmet that appeared too small for the 6-foot-1, 205-pound Cox.
