Few face drug tests in U.S. work places

WASHINGTON (AP) — Twenty percent of all American workers are now employed by companies that test for drug use, but only one employee in 100 actually is tested in a 12-month period, the government reported today.

Ninety-one percent of employers have neither testing nor counseling programs, the Labor Department said, but larger companies are much more likely to have such programs.

Job applicants are far more likely to be tested than employees, the department said. It billed its survey of 7,500 establishments as the most extensive study to date on drug testing in the workplace.

Among establishments with testing programs, about two-thirds tested only those workers suspected of drug use, while one-fourth had programs that subjected all employees to possible testing.

In the 12 months prior to the Labor Department survey, taken last summer, establishments with testing programs reported testing slightly fewer than 1 million workers — or about 1 percent of all workers. Of those, about 9 percent tested positive for drug use, the study said. Of 3.9 million applicants who were tested, 12 percent tested positive for drug use.

In another study, released Tuesday, researchers said 31 drug testing laboratories that follow industry guidelines had an overall accuracy rate of 97 percent in testing urine samples for narcotics.

Inhalant abuse up, survey says

By JANE MARLER DEES

The practice of inhaling substances to get high is a problem among Midland's upper grade level public school students, a survey completed last summer has confirmed.

Midland Independent School District 8th-, 9th- and 12th-graders consistently reported in the survey they had used inhalants — correction fluid, hair spray, freon, glue, frying pan coatings or other similar substances — from 2 percent to 7 percent more often in April 1988 than students on a statewide average.

In addition, the number of 7th-, 8th, 9th and 12th-graders who reported they had abused inhalants at any point in their life was 2 to 11 percent higher than the state average.

The survey was conducted last May among roughly 20 percent or a little more than 1,400 of MISD's 7th- through 12th-graders by the Texas Commission on Alcohol and Drug Abuse and Texas A&M University.

Nearly 60 percent of the 12th-graders reported they had used alcohol within April 1988 and nearly 90 percent of that group has had at least one drink in their life.

Those two figures were higher than the state average for 12th-graders by 2 to 3 percent.

The number of seniors who have smoked marijuana — either in their life or in April 1988 — also was higher than the state average by 2 to 6 percent, the survey found.

Channel project on line for March

By CHRIS VAN WAGENEN
Staff Writer

A million dollar channel project that's expected to alleviate flooding from the northwest to the southeast of town was given the green light by Midland City Council Tuesday.

Midland's infamous Northwest Drainage Channel — the site of heavy flooding, particularly between Haynes and Maxwell streets — will take six to nine months to complete and most certainly will cause some turmoil for motorists.

By giving the go ahead to its engineering department, the council has, for the most part, exhausted what remaining surplus bond funds were left, thus raising the question of another bond election.

"We're ready to put it out for bid now," said Deputy City Manager Mike McGregor, who has pegged the city's share of the project at about $820,000 for two new bridges with culverts.

In addition, the Texas Department of Highways and Transportation will spend an additional $380,000 to construct a multiple flow box culvert at Midkiff Road, about a half mile south of Midland Park Mall.

■ Is thrift fraud widespread? — 8B

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration's parting shot on the savings and loan crisis — a recommendation to curtail deposit insurance — landed with a thud on Capitol Hill and at the president's own Treasury Department.

Secretary of the Treasury Nicholas F. Brady, who will remain in the administration of President-elect Bush, moved swiftly to disavow the proposal, which came Tuesday in a report to Congress by the White House Council of Economic Advisers.

Brady is formulating the next administration's plan for the S&L industry, in which a post-Depression record of 205 institutions were closed last year.

Until now he's refused to release any details of the work in progress, but the White House suggestion prompted him to make a rare disclosure. In a statement released through Rep. Chalmers Wylie of Ohio, the ranking Republican on the committee, Brady denied emphatically the administration is even considering reducing the $100,000 limit on insured accounts.

News of the Reagan report reached the House Banking Committee on Tuesday, in the middle of a six-hour hearing on the S&L problem, and provoked an outcry.

"I think its wrong to even discuss limiting the insurance," said Rep. Kweisi Mfume, D-Md.

The Reagan report did not suggest how much the insurance limit should be reduced, nor did it say if the reduction should apply to existing deposits, or just to new deposits.

Most depositors would be unaffected, even by a sharp reduction. According to the U.S. League of Savings Institutions, a trade group, the average S&L account at the end of 1987 had $8,440.

Nevertheless, Congress is extraordinarily sensitive about anything that might spook depositors into withdrawing their money — all that really keeps insolvent S&Ls afloat is Congress' word that it will stand behind the deposits.

A suggestion sometimes offered as a way to plug that loophole is limiting depositors to only one insured account. But, Federal Home Loan Bank Board Chairman M. Danny Wall said the rule would be extremely difficult to enforce.

The Internal Revenue Service, which keeps track of deposit accounts to make sure tax is being paid on interest earned, hasn't been able to obtain Social Security numbers necessary to monitor all of the accounts, despite an intensive effort, Wall said.

Many have obvious language needs

EDITOR'S NOTE: In observance of "The Year of the Young Reader" programs being held this week in Midland, the Reporter-Telegram is publishing a six-part series detailing several issues that affect children and their reading skills. In today's installment, issues that affect children with limited English proficiency are explored.

THE YOUNG READER: new words ... new worlds

By JANE MARLER DEES
Staff Writer

Section 21.451 of the Education Code spells it out in black and white: "English is the basic language of the State of Texas."

Found within the black and white of that statement, however, is a whopping gray area.

The Texas Education Code can stipulate all it wants, but one fact remains. There are huge numbers of students in this state whose parents speak languages other than English.

English isn't spoken in the home at all in many cases. In many homes, conversation is conducted in Spanish or Vietnamese or Chinese.

Perhaps a child's parents — well-educated physicians or oil company executives — have been transferred to America suddenly.

Or maybe their parents just plain can't read or write any language.

Being immersed in an all-English-speaking school and expected to learn to read this "foreign tongue" could be a nightmare for children.

State law mandates, however, that a school district with an enrollment of 20 or more students of limited English proficiency (LEP) in any language classification in the same grade shall offer a bilingual program.

In Midland, a "Home Language Survey" is given to every child who enters the school district. Three questions determine whether the child needs to be enrolled in the bilingual program: What language is spoken in your home most of the time, what language does your child speak most of the time and what was the first language your child learned to speak?

Nearly 30 percent of MISD's elementary student body is comprised of Hispanic-Whites, explained Dr. John Martinez, coordinator of the Midland Independent School District Bilingual Education program.

The bilingual program here has an enrollment of about 1,100.

LEP elementary students with Spanish as a primary language are taught a full-time program of dual-language instruction. Forty-five minutes a day of English language instruction is included in the curriculum.

Because the district doesn't have other bilingual programs besides those taught in Spanish, an LEP child with a primary language such as Vietnamese or Chinese is instructed in an English-as-a-second (ESL) environment, Martinez added.

By law, ESL instruction is in English and taught by teachers trained in recognizing and dealing with language differences.

Care is taken to integrate students of all cultural heritages in classes such as art, music and physical education.

Former bank officer given 5-year prison term

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

A 41-year-old former Midland bank president who admitted that he "made a terrible error in judgment" as a bank loan officer in 1985 and 1986 was sentenced to five years in prison on Tuesday by U.S. District Court Chief Judge Lucius D. Bunton.

"It has caused me a lot of turmoil," Michael Courtney Sherrod said shortly before Bunton pronounced sentence.

A federal jury in December convicted Sherrod of accepting a "finder's fee," which the prosecution termed an unlawful "gratuity" of $16,750 following the funding of a $225,000 loan in January 1985 when Sherrod was vice president of Western Bank. Additionally, Sherrod was convicted of making a false entry in a bank customer's financial statement in May 1986.

"I accept the jury's verdict," Sherrod told the judge. "I felt the trial was fair and impartial."

In finding Sherrod guilty on two charges, the jury also acquitted Sherrod on two other accusations — perjury before a federal grand jury in June 1988 and misapplication of funds in January 1985.

The judge could have imposed on Sherrod up to a 10-year sentence — a five-year prison sentence on each of the two convictions.

Sherrod and his Midland defense attorney, Hal Brockett, had pleaded for probation. Sherrod asked for mercy so that he once again could become a "great contributor" to his community and to care for his 7-year-old daughter, Courtney.

But the judge, who agreed with Sherrod that "you did make a mistake, and the jury recognized that," said that he wished "God would speak from above" and tell him "what's best for you and me." Bunton noted that the jury did clear Sherrod of perjury.

Nevertheless, Bunton, in hoping he made the "right" decision on punishment, meted out to Sherrod two five-year prison sentences, which he ordered to run concurrently.

WEATHER SUMMARY

Cloud cover could increase

From Staff and Wire Reports

Increasingly cloudy skies are in the forecast for tonight, according to the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport. The low will be in the lower 30s and winds will be southerly at 10-20 mph, shifting to the northeast near midnight.

Thursday will be cloudy and colder with a 20 percent chance of showers. The high will be in the upper 30s and northeast winds will gust from 10-20 mph.

Tuesdays high of 65 was 11 degrees cooler than the record high temperature of 76 set in 1935. The overnight low of 32 was 40 degrees warmer than the record low temperature of minus 8 set in 1962.

STATE

Colder weather is in store for most of Texas by tonight with some snow possible in West Texas and some sleet or freezing rain possible in northwest sections of North Texas by Thursday.

Forecasts are calling for mostly cloudy skies with scattered showers and thunderstorms through tonight across North Texas and South Texas. It will be turning cloudy and cold tonight across West Texas.

The snow could start Thursday in West Texas and the freezing rain or sleet is possible in northwest sections of North Texas by Thursday night.

Lows tonight will cover a wide range, mostly in the 30s and 40s, ranging from the middle teens in the Panhandle to the low 60s in the Lower Rio Grande Valley.

Highs Thursday will be mostly in the 30s over West Texas, ranging from the upper 20s in the Panhandle to the mid 50s in the Big Bend area, in the 40s and 50s over North Texas and in the 60s and 70s over most of South Texas, ranging upward to around 80 in extreme South Texas.

A dense fog advisory was in effect early today for the Texas coastal plains.

Fog reduced visibility along the coastal plains early today and some scattered drizzle was reported in East Texas. It was mostly clear over the western half of the state and low clouds covered the eastern half.

Early morning temperatures were in the 20s in the mountains of Southwest Texas and in the 30s and 40s over the western half of the state and in the 50s over the eastern half of the state. Extremes ranged from 24 at Marfa in the Davis Mountains to 60 at Corpus Christi.

Other early morning temperatures around the state included 37 at Amarillo, 38 at Wichita Falls, 54 at Fort Worth, Waco and Austin, 56 at San Antonio, 54 at Houston, 58 at Brownsville, 46 at San Angelo, 36 at Lubbock, 32 at Midland and 30 at El Paso.

NATION

Snow fell across the West and the Midwest today after two people died in an Oregon storm that triggered road-closing mudslides and floods. A rare January tornado in Utah damaged houses.

Snow showers fell in upper Michigan, Minnesota, the Dakotas, Montana, Wyoming, Utah, Idaho and eastern Washington state. Rain and thunderstorms fell from Louisiana to central Mississippi.

Texas area forecasts

West Texas: Increasing cloudiness and turning colder tonight. Cloudy and colet across the area Thursday with a chance for snow north and showers south becoming isolated far west. Lows tonight 16 Panhandle to 36 southeast. Highs Thursday 26 Panhandle to 46 far west and mid 50s Big Bend valleys.

North Texas: Considerable cloudiness all area tonight and Thursday and turning colder. Chance of showers west, with showers and thunderstorms likely east, some thunderstorms possibly with locally heavy rains. Precipitation possibly changing to freezing rain or sleet late Thursday northwest. Lows tonight 35 northwest to 62 southeast. Highs Thursday 35 northwest to 66 southeast in the morning, declining to 30 northwest to 58 southeast by sunset.

Women, minorities slower to quit smoking

WASHINGTON (AP) — Anti-smoking campaigns have been most successful in getting white men to put out their cigarettes, and a new government report calls for more efforts aimed at women, children, minorities and high school dropouts who are not quitting as quickly.

The annual report, issued by Surgeon General C. Everett Koop on the 25th anniversary of the government's first such report, says the proportion of American smokers has declined from 40 percent of the population in 1965 to 29 percent in 1987.

"These changes represent nothing less than a revolution in behavior," Koop said in the report. "Thanks to the remarkable progress of the past 25 years, we can dare to envision a smoke-free society."

However, he said, "smokers are disproportionately found in groups that are harder to reach, and this disparity may increase over time. Greater effort and resources will need to be devoted to achieve equivalent reductions in smoking among those whose behavior has survived strong, countervailing pressures."

The 700-page report documents changes in the 25 years since the surgeon general's initial declaration that cigarette smoking leads to cancer and other serious diseases.

The most significant shift has come among men — half of whom smoked in 1965, according to the report. By 1987, less than a third were lighting up.

Women smokers declined from 32 percent to 27 percent over the period, the report said.

The figures also show a slow decline among blacks, 43 percent to 34 percent, and virtually no change among those who never graduated from high school, 37 percent to 36 percent.

Among high school seniors, daily cigarette smoking dropped from 29 percent in 1976 to 21 percent in 1980 and then leveled off in the 18-21 percent range for the seven years after that.

Since 1977, prevalence of smoking among high school senior girls has been greater than that among boys of that age.

Among the other findings of the report:

■ Nearly 45 percent of American adults who ever smoked have quit, though the "quit ratio" does not take into account the length of a quitter's abstinence.

■ Smoking is responsible for more than one of every six deaths in the United States and "remains the single most important preventable cause of death in our society."

■ Between 1964 and 1987, some 789,000 smoking-related deaths were avoided or postponed as a result of decisions to quit smoking or not to start, which the report attributes to the anti-smoking campaign.

■ Four-fifths of smokers born since 1935 started smoking before age 21, and the proportion of people who begin smoking during adolescence has been increasing, particularly among women. A quarter of high school seniors who have ever smoked had their first cigarette by sixth grade and half by eight grade.

■ The number of legal restrictions on children's access to tobacco products has decreased over the past 24 years, and "vendor compliance with minimum-age-of-purchase laws is the exception rather than the rule."

The first surgeon general's report concluded narrowly that smoking increases deaths among men and causes lung and laryngeal cancer in men and chronic bronchitis in men and women.

Surgeon general reports since then have concluded that smoking increases deaths among men and women and causes lung and laryngeal cancer in both. The reports over the years also have tied smoking to heart disease, atherosclerotic peripheral vascular disease, chronic obstructive pulmonary disease and low birthweight babies as well as cancers of the mouth, esophagus, bladder, kidney and stomach, cervix and pancreas.

TESTING

"Inaccuracies should not be used as an argument against drug testing," said Christopher S. Frings, director of the study conducted by the American Association of Clinical Chemistry.

However, he conceded that not all labs adhere to proper procedures.

The Labor Department, in the study released today, said there appears to be no rush among employers to launch testing programs. Only 4 percent of the employers without programs said they were considering establishing one in the next year.

A breakdown by industry found the highest rate of positive test results — about 20 percent — among employees in wholesale and retail trade.

That industry also had the highest rate of positive test results among job applicants, 17 percent for wholesale trade and 24 percent for the retail sector.

The lowest rate of positive test results among employees was in transportation, 5.6 percent, a statistic influenced by mandatory testing in many sectors of the industry. Nearly 10 percent of applicants for transportation jobs tested positive for drugs, the study found.

The rate of positive test results among applicants was lowest, at 5.5 percent, in communications and public utilities.

Mining, communications and public utilities, and transportation establishments were most likely to have drug-testing programs, partly because of regulatory requirements.

DRUGS

Cocaine use was lower among MISD students than it was on a state average from 1 to 3 percent, although the number of 8th- and 11th-graders reporting cocaine usage in the past year was higher by about 1.5 percent.

The use of crack, a purified derivative of cocaine, was not surveyed in the analysis.

The use of amphetamines during the April 1988 among MISD 8th-, 9th-, 10th- and 11th-graders was higher than the state average by 1 to 7 percent, the survey found.

Abusing hallucinogenic drugs, such as LSD, "ecstasy" or "magic mushrooms" was not as common in the MISD during any time frame as it was on a statewide basis, the survey found.

But heroin use among 7th-, 9th- and 10th-graders was higher by less than 1 percent in the MISD than it was on a statewide average.

Perhaps most startling, 2.9 percent of MISD 7th graders queried said they had used heroin before. The state average for heroin usage within that grade level was 1.4 percent.

MISD counselor Pat Cobb explained at Tuesday night's MISD board meeting several aspects of the survey.

Alcohol use increases with age because of added peer pressure, financial income and desire to take risks.

Nearly 55 percent of the 7th graders in Midland said they had already used alcohol in their short lives.

Marijuana usage generally jumped greatly between the 10th- to 11th graders, in part because the children are learning to drive, another expert explained.

Still, Midland Police Cpl. Jim White explained there are actually children who are addicted to gasoline fumes.

Although it is illegal to sell persons under 18 substances that yield a high by sniffing, the practice of abuse continues in Midland, White added.

Inhalant abuse can cause lung, kidney, liver and bone marrow damage, the corporal said.

Confirmed in the survey was the fact drug abuse prevention education must start at the elementary school level, Ms. Cobb said.

In other action Tuesday night, MISD trustees voted to adopt a Crime Stoppers program in the district's two high schools and two freshman high schools.

Midland County Sheriff's Department Sgt. Keith Ward, coordinator of Midland Crime Stoppers, explained the high school program will allow students to call 697-TIPS with information regarding crimes in the school.

The largest number of crimes committed at that level include theft, vandalism and drug usage.

The student giving Crime Stoppers the tip will remain anonymous and will receive a reward should the crime be solved, Ward explained.

Each school's student council will be administrators of the in-school program and set the dollar amounts of awards, he added.

COUNCIL

Those familiar with the project have argued for months that it was imperative that the city put the project out for bid before the state, in order to get the best competitive price.

Harvey Hansen, director of streets, traffic and engineering, said the project could be awarded as early as Feb. 7. "If they (council members) award it, I'd expect we could begin work either the first or second week of March.," he said.

In addition, engineers said they plan to contract an excavator to widen the channel to the maximum 100-foot right-of-way and deepen it by two to three feet. "We think we have a lot of qualified (contractors) people locally who can do the job," said Hansen.

The council's decision to push ahead with the project leaves the city in a precarious position of not knowing whether voters can be counted on to support any future bond election issues.

However, officials also note it would have been senseless for the state to tear up Midkiff Drive only to leave a bottlenecked channel for future flooding from Maxwell to Haynes.

"It doesn't do any good to have one bridge built there and not the other two," said Mayor Carroll Thomas last week.

Meanwhile, the council gave its legal and financial departments the go ahead to pursue Texas Capital Access Program funds through the Texas Department of Commerce.

Better known as Texcap, the $750 million pool was issued on July 15, 1986, through the Texas Small Business Industrial Development Corp. for the purpose of supplying public work funds.

City officials have said previously that they're interested in obtaining up to $15 million to expand the city's water plant as well as construct a new sewer line to Midland International Airport.

In other business, the council:

■ Approved sending bids for T-ball complexes at Bluebird Lane and a new sprinkler system. Council has committed up to $90,000 for the project, $19,000 of which would come out of revenue sharing funds.

■ Rejected a plan for a billiard hall at the intersection of East Illinois Avenue and Fort Worth Street. To approve the plan, council would have had to re-zone two blocks.

■ Will consider reconditioning more than 193 parking meters in a nine-block downtown area that could eventually reduce rates to 25 cents per two hour period.

■ Supported the postal services naming of the "Carl Hyde" building at a new facility at Midland International Airport in recognition of the long-time Midland resident and federal employee.

■ Approved the appointment of United Bank Chairman Wayne Merritt to the city's finance commission.

■ Recognized the Midland Lee High School band for it invitation to President-elect George Bush's inauguration Jan. 20.

BANK

Sherrod is to start serving the five-year sentence on Feb. 6.

"I agree," Bunton said, "that chances are slim that Michael Sherrod will ever again be in this courtroom."

Before Bunton had levied the sentence, Brockett said that his friend and client already has suffered "quite a bit of punishment" for the "one mistake ... this man ... has made in his life."

Brockett's co-defense attorney, David Lindemood, later said that the $16,750 gratuity to Sherrod was "voluntarily given" to Sherrod by Western Bank customer Glen R. Cothrun. Cothrun had sold his Twin Oaks Grocery Store to Steven A. Walker. Walker had borrowed the $225,000 from Western Bank through Sherrod, and the money was transferred to Cothrun to conclude the sale.

Sherrod had been in banking for about 20 years, Brockett noted.

"He is no longer a banker," Brockett said. "He has lost his employment. He has lost his career. He has been accused of being a thief ... and a liar, but the jury vindicated him of being a liar and to a certain extend of being a thief."

"The jury found that he did not take any bank money," Brockett said. The finder's fee came out of the proceeds from the sale of Cothrun's grocery store to Walker, he said.

Brockett said Sherrod also lost his wife to divorce, lost his house in Midland, and lost his step-child, but retained custody of his daughter.

"I know Mike Sherrod has suffered quite a bit," Brockett said. Sherrod's daughter will be "taken care of" even if he is imprisoned, Brockett had said, but the child's "best interests" would be better served personally by the father, he said.

Sherrod, who had moved to Colorado, was an officer for the First National Bank of Colorado Springs when the federal grand jury looked into the Federal Bureau of Investigation's case against him. The case was prosecuted by Assistant U.S. Attorney Tom McHugh of San Antonio.

Sherrod resigned his post with the Colorado Springs bank after he learned of the grand-jury investigation, Brockett said.

Sherrod, a civic leader in Midland, at one time had been an officer for Midland's First National Bank, which failed in 1983. Later, he was an officer for Western Bank, which failed in 1986, and was the last president of Security National Bank, which failed in February 1987.

Brockett said Sherrod has been a "devoted" father and a loyal patriot.

Sherrod, a veteran who was twice — 1982 and 1985 — named Texas Marine of the Year by the Marine Corps League, helped organize Vietnam War veterans in Midland's 1985 Centennial parade.

"He has been dedicated to community services," Brockett said of Sherrod. Brockett said that while his "community service" is evidence by writing checks, "Mike Sherrod has been devoted to his community through the sweat of his brow and the strain of his back."

Following the sentencing, Sherrod, upon the advice of his attorney, declined to comment on the sentence.

Brockett, however, said that Bunton's sentence was a "little tough."

"That's a understatement," he quickly noted, and said he and Sherrod were disappointed in the sentence.

"We don't feel he deserved that severe of a punishment," Brockett said, particularly "in light of the fact" that Sherrod was "found not guilty on the two worse counts — perjury and misapplication of bank funds."

Using tracking tests, all children are weaned from their native tongue as they progress, Martinez said.

By the fourth grade, the student is getting 99 percent of his instruction in English, he said. The largest exits of LEP and ESL students from their specialized courses occurs in the second grade, Martinez added.

Vying for position with the mandated bilingual education philosophy is another school of thought.

Some educators feel immediate immersion in the slower-paced ESL curriculum ultimately benefits the LEP student, explained Dr. Maurice Benitez, an expert in the field and professor at the University of Texas at Austin.

In that ESL venue, the child would need to receive more individualized oral instruction.

Benitez believes that the LEP child, like any of his English-speaking peers, has to have a meaningful experience in the classroom if he is to learn to read.

That experience is hindered greatly and ultimately is not meaningful if he doesn't understand the teacher's instruction, the UT professor explained.

The advantages of teaching a child to read in his primary language are many, Martinez said.

His arguments in favor of bilingual reading instruction include the following:

■ The language a child brings to class is the language that is accepted at home. Therefore, the child feels accepted when being instructed in his native tongue.

■ The oral sound system he has developed at home — integral to the teaching of reading — is the same one taught in his native-language readers.

■ At least 90 percent of the knowledge gained while learning to read Spanish, for instance, are transferrable in learning to read English.

"Research has been done that shows that the most effective way to make someone a competent reader in a second language is to make him a good reader in his first language," Dr. Martinez explained.

Lawyers charged with conspiring to bribe JP

HOUSTON (AP) — Two Houston lawyers, including one involved in a major drug trial in federal court, have been arrested on charges of conspiring to bribe a justice of the peace to drop a hot check charge against a client of one of the lawyers.

Darryl G. Campbell, 46, of Seabrook, and Paige E. Janik, 28, of Houston, were in the Harris County Jail Tuesday night in lieu of $4,000 bond each.

They face charges of conspiracy to commit a bribe and aggravated perjury, each with maximum punishment of 10 years in prison and a $5,000 fine, Assistant District Attorney Terry Wilson said.

Campbell represents two defendants in a major drug smuggling trial under way in federal court here. Another attorney in the drug case expressed concern that jurors could be prejudiced by news of the bribery charges.

Campbell was noticed at the jail by one of two men he was representing in federal court earlier in the day in a massive drug smuggling trial, according to officers who did not want to be identified.

The client was being returned to his cell by federal marshals just as his lawyer was being booked.

Campbell told his surprised client that he hoped to post bond in time to continue the trial today, officers said.

Campbell and Janik, who briefly practiced law together last fall, are accused of planning last Halloween to bribe then-Precinct 8 Justice of the Peace Larry Boyd in a case involving a client of Janik's.

Two other justices of the peace were also considered as bribery targets, but the charges relate only to the case before Boyd, Wilson said.

Janik represents the hot check defendant on misdemeanor charges in three or more justice of the peace precincts, Wilson said.

Boyd, who had been active in programs designed to crack down on hot check writers, lost his re-election bid Nov. 8. The precinct includes Pasadena and Clear Lake City.

Wilson said Campbell and Janik testified before a grand jury a week later and allegedly made false statements about the case.

The prosecutor said the lawyers contacted the owner of a Pasadena business where Janik's hot check client worked and solicited money to bribe Boyd through an unidentified intermediary. Boyd notified the district attorney's office of the plot, the prosecutor said.

Boyd, former chairman of the justice of the peace section of the State Bar of Texas, was not available for comment Tuesday night.

In the federal drug smuggling trial, which started Monday, Campbell has been representing Pablo Bravo and Mario Ginoris, charged with serving as functionaries in a ring of eight people who allegedly brought more than 2 tons of cocaine into the United States,

Kent Schaffer, another defense attorney on the case, said the news of the arrest could "devastate" the rights of the other six defendants if it reached the jurors. He said he plans to ask a judge today to sever Bravo and Ginoris from the trial.

"If the jury finds out about this, it cannot help but prejudice them," he said.

Clements says state has ample funds to meet its needs

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements, voicing a belief that state government has enough money to do what needs to be done, says he is keeping an eye on lawmakers' ideas for "revenue-neutral" changes in the tax system.

"I want to make it abundantly clear: we have ample revenues," Clements said in an interview on Tuesday's opening day of the 1989 Legislature.

"There are some people in the Legislature who have proposed some adjustments in the tax structure that would be...revenue neutral (neither raising nor lowering the tax take)," Clements said.

"I am very cautious about this, because every time I hear a legislator talk about 'revenue-neutral' that's gobbledygook for 'I'm getting ready to raise your taxes.' So I'm very skeptical of that whole process."

The governor said he believes revenue estimates of about $45 billion for the 1990-91 budget period should be sufficient. However, he said lawmakers might want to use some of the $1.5 billion Comptroller Bob Bullock has set aside for making up money lost in legal challenges to the state tax system and other contingencies.

Discussing his priorities for this legislative session, Clements said he hopes lawmakers will approve building 10,000 more prison beds and authorize drug testing of inmates in prison and before they are released on parole.

"It's really a terrible thing to acknowledge, but within our prisons we have a serious drug problem," Clements said. "A testing procedure within the prisons is in order, and certainly some kind of a testing procedure before release is in order."

The governor also said he wants lawmakers to approve construction of another 10,000 beds to help ease the prison overcrowding problems.

"Prison construction will be a very prime item," he said, adding that he expects the Legislature to approve the sale of state bonds to raise the millions needed to build the extra prison space.

Schools being added to Texas A&M system

AUSTIN (AP) — Under recently introduced legislation, Corpus Christi State University, Texas A&I University, and Laredo State University would become part of the Texas A&M System. Corpus Christi would become a 4-year institution in 1994, and a law school would be established at Texas A&I.

"Bringing the A&M System, one of the premier systems in the nation, to South Texas, will improve the stature as well as the substance of higher education in the region," said State Sen. Carlos Truan, D-Corpus Christi, co-chair of the Legislative Joint Committee on Higher Education, sponsor of the bills along with state Sen. Judith Zaffirini, D-Laredo.

Soviets may have snatched missile recorder, Pentagon says

NATION

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Air Force can't find the flight data recorder from a nuclear test missile and the Pentagon says the Soviets may have snatched the device from where it splashed down in the western Pacific Ocean.

The recorder was aboard a Minuteman 2 missile test-fired from California at Kwajalein Atoll in the Marshall Islands on July 7, 1987, according to Army Maj. Bill O'Connell, a spokesman for the Defense Department.

The story was first reported Tuesday by the CBS Evening News and later confirmed by the Pentagon.

The flight data recorder was part of the dummy warhead on the missile, which did not carry any nuclear weapons on its launch from California. The Air Force periodically tests missiles by launching them from California at Kwajalein, 5,000 miles away.

"It is unlikely that the Soviets recovered it (the recorder) in the hours between splashdown and the first search, but that possibility cannot be ruled out," said O'Connell.

Gennady I. Gerasimov, the Soviet Foreign Ministry spokesman, said at a news briefing in Moscow that he had heard news reports of the incident, "and I checked with our central information agency."

O'Connell said the recorder has failed to turn up in five searches of the area where the missile splashed down.

The recorder would contain valuable information about the performance of the Minuteman 2 missile. It was not classified, O'Connell noted, but its recovery "would be useful to our missile testing efforts."

"There are many possibilities that might account for the loss, including accidents during the handling of the recovered debris, poor record keeping, and problems in shipping," he said. "None of these possibilities has been ruled out and the investigation is continuing."

But he did confirm that Soviet personnel may have landed on Kwajalein, which is supposed to be uninhabited.

U.S. officials found "vodka bottles, cigarettes, bug spray and a few technical items of Soviet manufacture that could not have floated ashore and would have been unlikely to have been left ashore purposefully," he said.

CBS said a Soviet trawler was about 50 miles away during the splashdown, and a Soviet mini-submarine may have been used to snatch the warhead's flight recorder.

O'Connell refused to say if a Soviet sub had been detected in the area. "There have been a number of reports of Soviet submarine sightings and these reports are not being ignored," he said. "I cannot, however, confirm that there was Soviet submarine activity in or near Kwajalein."

The test shot came nine months after the Soviets ended a fishing agreement with Kiribiati, the island nation next to the Marshalls, O'Connell noted. If the fishing agreement had still been in effect, the Soviets would have had support capabilities to try to take the payload by sub, he said. But in July 1987, the Soviet fishing fleet only had access to Vanuatu, over 2,000 miles from Kwajalein.

O'Connell said the Pentagon objects strongly to any clandestine Soviet landings in the Marshall Islands that may have occurred. He called such incursions "illegal and a clear infringement of the sovereignty of the Marshall Islands, in addition to being a challenge to the security of the U.S. testing programs."

Astronomers spot evidence of black hole in Milky Way

By DANIEL Q. HANEY

BOSTON (AP) — The discovery of a river of gas flowing toward the middle of the Milky Way supports the belief that an infinitely dense speck more massive than 1 million suns lies at the heart of the Earth's galaxy, astronomers say.

The speck is known as a black hole, collapsed stars with such intense gravitational pull that nothing can escape from it, not even light. While many astronomers believe that a massive black hole exists at the core of the Milky Way, this has still not been proven.

In research presented Tuesday, astronomers described their discovery of a 90-trillion-mile-long stream of gas that apparently is being sucked across the heavens into the black hole.

Although black holes cannot be seen, astronomers look for other evidence of their existence, such as the tug of their gravity on nearby celestial objects.

Paul Ho, who directed the research at the Harvard-Smithsonian Center for Astrophysics in Cambridge, noted that the galaxy's center is a gravitational well.

"We think that stars drift toward the center," he said. "It's a natural place for a massive black hole to form."

Ho's radio telescope observation was made with astronomers from the Max Planck Institute in Munich and the University of Cologne, both in West Germany, and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

The report was presented at a meeting of the American Astronomical Society here.

"This is a complex region," Bonnerd J. Teegarden of NASA's Goddard Space Flight Center in Greenbelt, Md., said of the study. "Results like these are adding a lot to our understanding."

Teegarden said that most astronomers believe that a massive black hole exists at the center of the Milky Way.

He noted that the nature of this and other black holes is one of the most exciting areas of research and speculation in astronomy.

"It pushes hard on the basic concepts of physics," he said. "Physicists don't really know what happens when you collapse a million solar masses of matter down to a point. The laws of physics, as we know them in the laboratory, are inadequate to explain such an extreme situation."

Earlier, astronomers have spotted signs of a massive gaseous cloud spinning around the Milky Way's center, which is 30,000 light years from Earth in the constellation Sagittarius. A light year is 6 trillion miles, the distance light travels in a year.

Scientists believe the cloud is circling a black hole that is 1 million times more massive than the sun. They theorize that parts of the cloud constantly fall into the black hole.

Perhaps the equivalent of one-thousandth of the mass of the sun spirals into the black hole each year. This produces tremendous amounts of kinetic energy, the energy released by motion.

Reagan to say farewell tonight

WASHINGTON (AP) — George Washington delivered his farewell address to a Philadelphia newspaper, Lyndon Johnson and Gerald Ford delivered theirs to Congress, and Ronald Reagan is turning to the medium of which he is most the master — television.

Reagan's swan song as president will be delivered at 9 p.m. EST tonight from the Oval Office and will be carried by the networks.

The White House press office said the address, expected to last about 20 minutes, would be the 43rd television speech of Reagan's presidency.

"We expect it to be a very personal kind of look at what President Reagan tried to do, and what he sees as his accomplishments, and the problems ahead," White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said Tuesday.

"It will be an opportunity for him to talk directly to the American people as he has done so often in the last eight years."

Indeed he has.

It was through this forum that the president:

— Helped generate the steam to push his tax cuts through Congress.

— Defended his decisions in the Iran-Contra affair.

The former radio announcer, movie actor and after-dinner speaker came to the White House with more television-related experience than any of his predecessors. His 1964 television speech for Barry Goldwater helped catapult Reagan into two terms as governor of California, where he continued to sharpen his television skills as well as gaining experience in government.

In his first major televised speech from the Oval Office, he outlined his tax reduction program on July 27, 1981, using charts and a pointer to make his case that the administration plan was more fair than that proposed by Democrats in Congress. He ended, as he would so often, "Thank you, God bless you, and good night."

But his statement from the Oval Office on Nov. 13, 1986, that the arms sent to Iran "could easily fit into a single cargo plane" and did not constitute a swap of arms for hostages, failed to go over in Congress. Reagan later had to admit mistakes had been made.

Sometimes he had surprises up his sleeve. His speech on March 23, 1983, announcing that he was ordering a study of what came to be known as the Strategic Defense Initiative, or Star Wars, was news to many of his key advisers.

His speech on the Challenger explosion on Jan. 28, 1986, was one of his shortest, only 11 paragraphs, and is often cited as an example of Reagan at his most eloquent. Speaking only a few hours after the disaster, he told the families of the crew members, "They wished to serve, and they did," and added, "Nothing ends here; our hopes and our journeys continue."

Tonight's speech is likely to be short on news, but it follows a tradition of farewell addresses that has been followed by many previous presidents from George Washington to Jimmy Carter.

Judge permits victim to decide fate of rapist

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — A woman who was allowed to decide her rapist's fate chose a plea-bargained 4½-year sentence that will put him behind bars immediately, then said of being asked to choose: "Wasn't that something?"

"He was so kind," the 65-year-old victim said of Hennepin County Judge William Posten. "He said, 'It's your decision.' I liked that."

Posten called the victim into his chambers Monday and gave her two choices in the prosecution of James Halvorson, 25. She could have the case go to trial and hope for a conviction, which could have meant a nine-year prison term, or she could accept a plea agreement providing for a 4½-year sentence.

The woman chose immediate incarceration in lieu of a trial because Halvorson was free on bond and she feared being attacked again, said Assistant County Attorney Kevin Johnson.

"She knew he would be going straight to prison" and wouldn't be eligible for parole for three years, Johnson said Tuesday.

Halvorson was accused of breaking into the woman's house through a kitchen window in the early morning hours of June 16, according to a criminal complaint. The noise awoke the woman and she went to investigate. A man dragged her from the kitchen to the bedroom, covered her head with a blanket and raped her. He fell asleep after the attack and the woman ran to a neighbor's house to telephone police, Johnson said.

Halvorson's attorney, Earl Gray, said Halvorson was "drunk out of his mind" at the time.

Halvorson had recently been convicted of drunken driving for a fourth time and had received a delayed jail sentence two days before the rape, authorities said.

Film maker knew reading's import

The late Walt Disney, renowned for his family movies and animated films, knew his industry. Without a doubt, most of today's young people could correctly identify Disney on a test as one of the best known family movie producers of the 20th century. After all, young people today tend to be more regularly exposed to films than to the printed word.

Many might not know, therefore, that Disney was also a steadfast supporter of the written word. "There is more treasure in books than in all the pirates' loot on Treasure Island ... and best of all, you can enjoy these riches every day of your life," Disney once said.

Disney's timeless message about the import of reading takes on special meaning in Midland this week, because Midland Independent School District is conducting a number of programs in observance of the proclamation of 1989 as "The Year of the Young Reader." The week will conclude Saturday with a symposium for parents and educational leaders featuring an address by Bill Halloran, a nationally known reading consultant and innovator in children's literature.

While Disney's comment may be interpreted as including only novels, the importance of reading must also include many forms of printed material. Says Dr. Peggy Holland, MISD's coordinator of reading, "We are talking about reading more from the newspaper, magazines, paperbacks and library books. We want them to see reading as a life-long process ... and to see reading is something that is necessary and something that is fun."

With today's time constraints, there may be a real temptation for some students to rely on television and movies as sources of entertainment. To a degree, that's fine. But statistics reveal that many do that to the exclusion of reading. After all, 98% of the homes in America have a television set and it's turned on for 6¼ hours a day, according to Jim Trelease, author of "The Read-Aloud Handbook."

And there are other factors involved. In many homes, youngsters do not have parents who influence them by their good reading habits. Yet youngsters who are read to, educators say, develop an interest in reading that will benefit them in school.

Reading is important, but it often doesn't develop without the interest being instilled in youth. This is "The Year of the Young Reader." Capturing the interest of those young people can change their lives — for the better — through the practice of reading.

Hirohito's guidance

When the American military high command in Tokyo in 1945 suggested that Emperor Hirohito renounce his divinity, the Emperor was bemused. "I have never considered myself a god," he said, "nor have I attempted to arrogate to myself the powers of a divine being."

The modesty of this shy, scholarly man became, in the postwar era, a blessing to his nation as it reinvented itself from amid the ashes of a devastating defeat. But his passive acquiescence to militaristic politicians was no blessing during the 1930s. In his exalted position, he might have helped spare the world limitless tragedy. Instead, war became inevitable.

Emperor Hirohito had occupied Japan's Chrysanthemum Throne for nearly 63 years — longer than any other Emperor — when he died Saturday at the age of 87. He bore a measure of responsibility for the havoc Japan inflicted on its Pacific neighbors, including the United States. Yet in 1945 he found the courage to persuade his countrymen that surrender, however painful, was the only alternative to chaos. He then served gracefully as a symbol of unity during Japan's remarkable climb to prosperity and power.

Historians and the Japanese people themselves disagree about the precise details of Hirohito's wartime role. Some argue that he actively supported his country's fateful alliance with Germany in 1940. Others say he was disturbed by the course of events yet possessed neither the training nor personality to resist the collective wishes of his ministers and military advisers.

Five years later, however, a bitterly divided Cabinet asked Hirohito to decide whether Japan should fight on or surrender. His words were poignant but firm: "I cannot tell you how unbearable it is to see the brave and loyal fighting men of Japan disarmed. ... Nevertheless, the time has come when we must bear the unbearable." When the fanatical diehards made one last effort, he warned that prolonged war would reduce Japan to ashes. "How then," he asked, "could I carry on the wish of my imperial ancestors?"

According to the British biographer Leonard Moseley, Gen. Douglas MacArthur insisted that Hirohito would better serve the goals of national reconciliation by remaining on the throne. But the Emperor agreed to purge himself publicly of his "divine pretensions."

He asked his people to reject the "false conception that the Emperor is divine and that the Japanese people are superior to other races." He then said to his wife: "Do you see any difference? Do I look more human to you now?"

Hirohito's transition from someone "sacred and inviolable" to a revered figurehead under a revised constitution seemed a happy one. The emperor attended to ceremonial duties, traveled widely and pursued his lifelong interest in marine biology. No longer a figure of awe, he had won new freedom as a symbol of continuity in a nation of bewildering change.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Wednesday, Jan. 11, the 11th day of 1989. There are 354 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On Jan. 11, 1935, aviator Amelia Earhart began a trip from Honolulu to Oakland, Calif., that would make her the first woman to fly solo across the Pacific Ocean.

On this date:

In 1757, the first secretary of the Treasury, Alexander Hamilton, was born in the West Indies.

In 1805, the Michigan Territory was created.

In 1861, Alabama seceded from the Union.

In 1913, the first sedan-type automobile, a Hudson, went on display at the 13th Automobile Show in New York.

In 1943, the United States and Britain signed treaties relinquishing extraterritorial rights in China.

In 1964, Surgeon General Luther Terry issued the first government report saying smoking may be hazardous to one's health.

In 1977, France set off an international uproar by releasing Abu Daoud, a Palestinian suspected of involvement in the massacre of Israeli athletes at the 1972 Munich Olympics.

In 1978, two Soviet cosmonauts aboard the Soyuz 27 capsule linked up with the Salyut 6 orbiting space station, where the Soyuz 26 capsule was already docked, making it the first time three spacecraft were brought together in orbit.

Scandal wrecking Greek government

WASHINGTON — The socialist government of Greece, headed by anti-American demagogue Andreas Papandreou, is on the verge of collapse and we — inadvertently but happily — may have had a hand in its demise.

Jack Anderson

The prime minister's problems are manifold. He, members of his family and high-level officials in his administration have been accused of involvement in an ever-expanding banking scandal, considered the biggest in Greece's history. The same cast of characters is entangled in a related affair involving the illegal sale of arms to Iran and Iraq.

Papandreou has also offended traditionalist Greeks by announcing he will divorce his 64-year-old American wife, Margaret, to marry his 34-year-old mistress, Dimitra Liani, who also stands accused of involvement in the financial scandal. To top it off, the American-educated Papandreou, 69, recently underwent triple bypass heart surgery.

In the vortex of the storm is a Greek-American publishing and banking magnate named George Koskotas. He is now in a Massachusetts jail cell awaiting possible extradition to Athens. He fled Greece last November in the face of forgery, fraud and embezzlement charges. The value of his nefarious activities has been officially estimated to be at least $300 million.

We first heard of Koskotas two years ago when a well-informed, Washington-based Greek journalist, Elias Demetracopoulos, tipped us that the banker had been indicted by a New York grand jury in 1980, but never arrested. The grand jury indicted Koskotas on 65 counts of tax fraud and the warrant was still outstanding.

Our calls to several Washington officials apparently alerted them to Koskotas' record and he was picked up a few months later by the Internal Revenue Service in a very unlikely spot. He had been invited by U.S. Information Agency Director Charles Wick to meet President Reagan. Incredibly, Koskotas was intercepted by the Secret Service just before he was to enter the White House.

Koskotas was eventually cleared of the charges in the United States, but the notoriety surrounding his arrest in Washington sparked close scrutiny in Greece, particularly from a respected news magazine called "Anti." Newspapers picked up on the stories and began looking into Koskotas' dealings in Greece. A court-ordered investigation followed, the Central Bank of Greece began an examination and a parliamentary probe is currently underway.

In the United States, congressional investigators may soon examine the intriguing question of why the U.S. Embassy in Athens and the United States Information Agency director in Washington thought a man with 64 counts of tax fraud hanging over his head should have an audience with the president.

Footnote: Our sources in Washington predict that the Papandreou government will fall before the national elections scheduled to be held in June.

ORTEGA OVERTURE — Nicaraguan President Daniel Ortega is eager to settle his differences with the United States after George Bush takes office. Ortega is a hard-line communist who has been a political agitator since he was a teen-ager. Bush is a hard-line anti-communist who once headed the Central Intelligence Agency. Yet it is possible the two men could resolve a decade of bad feelings between their countries. Nicaragua's economy is in a shambles. The inflation rate there last year soared over 2,000 percent. Ortega turned to Moscow for aid, but Mikhail Gorbachev has financial problems of his own. According to intercepted intelligence, Gorbachev told Ortega not to count on the Soviet Union to bail him out. So Ortega is preparing a peace overture for Bush. He will promise to use his influence to restore peace in Central America and adopt democratic reforms if the United States will get off his back. It's an offer Bush can hardly refuse.

MINI-EDITORIAL — The Navy really knows how to shop for bargains. It bought half its supply of a particular helicopter part for the bargain basement price of $8.31. The value of the part was estimated at $54. Too bad the story doesn't stop there. The other half of the supply cost the Navy $3,474 each. Joe Isuzu would be proud.

Ollie's best hope was for a Bush pardon!

The goal of any good lawyer is to get his client off no matter who he has to embarrass to do it. Such was the case of Ollie North's attorney, who subpoenaed as witnesses President Ronald Reagan, President-elect George Bush and Secretary of State George Shultz. But in an unbelievable Catch 22 situation, the prosecutors asked that the major charges against North be dropped because the White House said the incriminating evidence that might show North violated national security would, if it was made public, endanger our national security.

Art Buchwald

It's a pity the White House balked because all of us were hoping Ollie's trial would finally reveal what was going on. Besides Reagan and Bush, it was rumored Ollie's lawyers hoped to subpoena the Ayatollah Khomeini, Premier Yitzhak Shamir, Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, President Francois Mitterrand, Mickey Mouse and Donald Duck.

North's attorneys have their defenders.

"It was necessary for North's lawyers to do what they did," an Ollie supporter told me. "They could not defend their client unless they had every scrap of paper the White House produced in the last eight years."

"Would they have stopped after calling Donald Duck?"

"Not necessarily. They also wanted to question Pakistani Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto, Andrei Sakharov, Guy Lombardo — if he was still alive — and the two whales that escaped from the ice floe. The defense lawyers were basing their case on the fact that others had to know what North knew or he would not have known how to do what he did."

"How did Reagan fit into all this?" I asked. "He claimed at the time he didn't know anything."

"Maybe he didn't know anything, but Ollie's lawyers intended to find out when he knew it. We're not saying that the President was part of the conspiracy, but somebody must have told him something about Ollie and Fawn Hall playing burn bag in their office. The defense intended to embarrass the President to the point where he wouldn't cooperate, thus making it impossible for Ollie to get a fair trial."

"Suppose, for argument's sake, the President did take the stand. Wouldn't that have wrecked Ollie's defense?"

"Not necessarily. The fact that Reagan agreed to testify was no guarantee he could remember anything. What the defense was counting on was that Reagan would say he approved North's actions, although he had no idea what Ollie was doing."

"How could that happen?"

"The CIA's Bill Casey slipped the papers onto the President's desk when Reagan was dozing. We know that the President always signed everything in front of him, including the ink blotter. What we don't know is to whom Mr. Reagan presented the pen to after he signed the directive. It could easily have been Adnan Khashoggi, the Arab wheeler dealer."

"So, if the North defense could have proved Khashoggi had the pen that signed the order which sent Ollie to Tehran, North could have been found completely innocent of any wrongdoing?"

"Yes, but it's not necessary now. No one has to test the President's memory on the Iran-Contra caper because the President's men have declared all the information is top secret. The defense was relieved. It was actually a gamble to subpoena President Reagan in the first place. If the public had perceived that Ollie's lawyers were mean to Reagan, then North could have lost his title of American's No. 1 Hero."

"I can see them calling President Reagan — after all, he was the head of the country — but why Bush?"

"Because Ollie's lawyers were certain Bush wouldn't be able to remember anything either, and then he would have been tried for contempt of court."

"Then what?"

"Bush would have had no choice but to pardon himself."

JAMES RESTON

Bush's first test may be policy toward Israel

WASHINGTON — The Bush administration's first real foreign policy test is likely to come in the Mideast. The leaders of both political parties are talking vaguely about restoration of nonpartisan cooperation abroad, but it's mostly talk. What both need is more precision on policy toward Israel and the Palestine Liberation Organization.

James Reston

The parties have long agreed that Israel's security is a "vital interest" of America. The same thing has been said about our relations with the NATO allies and Japan, with one important difference. We have made it clear to our friends and adversaries that we would oppose the conquest of the Western European allies or Japan, with military action if necessary. But no such clear commitment covers our relations with Israel.

That country is described as our principal Mideast ally, and no leader of either party has ever suggested that we would permit its destruction. This policy has never been formalized by treaty, and Israel's enemies keep nibbling away at its security as if they could achieve their aims without facing U.S. power.

The Reagan administration has taken Yasser Arafat's word that he opposes "terrorism" and recognizes Israel's "right to exist" within secure borders, in accordance with Security Council Resolutions 242 and 338, but he does not recognize Israel's present borders and does not regard the present subversive warfare against Israel as "terrorism."

Meanwhile, officials here urge Israel to exchange "land for peace" as a basis for compromising the present difficulties, but they don't say what America would do if Israel gave up the disputed land and got no peace. Thus, the Israelis, Palestinians and hostile Arab states that are armed by the Soviet Union are left in doubt.

This vagueness has been tolerated by both parties ever since America presided over the formation of Israel, and it's doubtful that any secure settlement in the region will ever be reached until Washington convinces everybody concerned that Israel's existence within fair and defensible frontiers is really a "vital interest."

President-elect George Bush and his chosen secretary of state, James Baker, can begin this process by removing doubts about their intentions in the talks with the PLO. But to make such a policy credible, they will also have to do some talking with Democratic leaders of the Congress about a security treaty with Israel.

The new administration has a chance to make a new, more practical beginning. This means being sure that Israel's squabbling politicians really want to reconcile their differences and remove the vagueness in their relations with America.

Merely talking with Arafat about "terrorism," "peace for land" and U.N. resolutions, without convincing him and his associates that America is ready to back the security of Israel with force, is not likely to make any fundamental change in this endless and intolerable state of semiwar.

Nor is there much future in negotiating a demilitarized Palestinian state, for a future sovereign state could make any military arrangements it liked with the Soviet Union, especially if Israel were not sure of Washington's protection.

This is not simply a formula for the security of Israel. The Mideast, with its vast oil reservoirs and location between the continents, is a "vital" interest not only for us but for NATO and Japan, too. And Israel is an essential base for the protection of one of the world's most important strategic areas.

At least the Bush administration, along with its other allies, should take a new look at it. Talking to Arafat alone is no answer to a crisis that will inevitably get worse as the Palestinian population increases and the divided and diminished Israelis find themselves isolated, with only promises from Washington to rely on.

Revenge called motive in espionage case

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — A former Navy enlisted man tried to sell submarine warfare secrets to the Soviets because he had been discharged for indecent exposure, according to authorities who said no damaging information was passed along.

Craig D. Kunkle, 39, was arrested Tuesday at a Williamsburg motel as he tried to turn over classified documents to two undercover FBI agents posing as Soviet officials, said Irvin B. Wells III, head of the FBI's Norfolk office.

Kunkle, a former chief petty officer, was charged with attempting to deliver classified information to a foreign government. If convicted, he could be sentenced to life in prison.

Kunkle, of Virginia Beach, was discharged from the Navy in October 1985 as non-judicial punishment for multiple acts of indecent exposure committed at the Barber's Point Naval Air Station in Hawaii, according to an FBI affidavit filed in U.S. District Court.

Beginning early last month, Kunkle talked six times with an FBI undercover agent whom he believed to be a representative of the Soviet embassy in Washington, the affidavit said.

"During each of these conversations, Kunkle discussed various aspects of his military background and experience, and his desire to sell classified United States Navy military secrets to the Soviet Union for monetary gain, and as revenge for his discharge from the United States Navy," the affidavit said.

It did not specify how much money Kunkle is alleged to have expected for the documents.

The court papers said Kunkle was a specialist who installed submarine monitoring equipment on Navy aircraft. He served in the North Atlantic, Indian and western Pacific oceans and gained security clearance in 1984, when he was designated an anti-submarine warfare supervisor.

He was working alone in his attempts to sell the information to the Soviets, said Wells.

Kunkle's wife, Suzanne A. Kunkle, is enlisted in the Navy. "We are interviewing her, but there's no indication of any involvement on her behalf," Wells said.

Kunkle was first identified by counterintelligence surveillance of telephone calls to the Soviet embassy in Washington, said a source who spoke on condition of anonymity. U.S. counterintelligence agencies routinely monitor telephone calls to the embassy in an effort to prevent spying.

The case is unrelated to the Norfolk-area spy ring led by former Navy sailor John Walker, who is serving a life sentence for selling valuable Navy secrets to the Soviets, FBI spokesman Charles W. Steinmetz said.

War reparations feared to take 60 years

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sponsors of a law to compensate Japanese-Americans who were forced to live in internment camps during World War II say it would take 60 years to make reparations under the spending plan proposed by President Reagan.

"Unless Congress appropriates the authorized maximum amount...many of the eligible recipients may die before receiving their token compensation," Sen. Spark Matsunaga, D-Hawaii, said Tuesday.

Matsunaga and the other lawmakers who sponsored the 1988 law said they would press the House and Senate budget committees to vastly increase the $20 million in the president's 1990 budget for the reparations.

Up to $500 million can be appropriated in any single year until $1.2 billion has been paid out.

No payments have been made under the law, which promises $20,000 each to an estimated 60,000 survivors of internment camps, where Americans of Japanese ancestry were forced to live from 1942 to 1946.

Matsunaga called the Reagan proposal "woefully inadquate" and expressed hope the new Congress "will be sympathetic to our request."

The senator said some of the survivors "are in their 80s and 90s and have been waiting more than 40 years for the apology and token compensation provided by the 1988 act." The law requires the oldest survivors be paid first.

Officials at the Office of Management and Budget had no immediate comment.

The sponsors said at Reagan's spending rate, it would take 60 years to complete the payments although the law has a 10-year deadline to complete the payments.

Rep. Norm Mineta, D-Calif., said that only 1,000 individuals would be compensated under Reagan's first-year spending proposal, and asked: "Why has the president's vision narrowed now? Why did he not remain committed to fight for the full $500 million funding to honor his commitment and our nation's ideal?

"I ask President-elect Bush, 'How much longer must they wait?'"

"The Justice Department is well ahead of expected schedules in locating recipients," said Rep. Robert Matsui, D-Calif. "There is no reason to delay the process now. We are talking about a majority of elderly citizens who may not be here in 5 or 10 years, much less 60 years."

NATION in brief

U.S. attorney says plans uncertain

NEW YORK (AP) — U.S. Attorney Rudolph Giuliani, who made a name for himself prosecuting the biggest insider traders and mobsters, says he has not decided whether he'll enter the political arena when he leaves his job this month.

The high-profile prosecutor who also targeted corrupt politicians said one of the proudest achievements of his 5½-year tenure had been an improvement in the "ethical climate in business and politics.

"When I spoke of crime five or six years ago, most people thought of street crime and violent crime," he said. "We have now broadened those areas to business and politics."

Giuliani announced his resignation as U.S. Attorney for Manhattan at a packed news conference Tuesday. He said he will leave the post by the end of January.

It has been widely speculated that Giuliani, a Republican, intends to run for mayor of New York later this year, and he said he had not "shut the door" on such a bid.

Baby unharmed in chase

ZION, Ill. (AP) — A teen-age mother unable to get a baby sitter kept her infant in the back seat while she robbed a bank at gunpoint and led police on a chase that ended with her car slamming into a roadblock, authorities said.

The 5-month-old child was apparently unharmed, his distraught father said.

"It was a very terrible day," said Shawn Richberg, 20, a Navy seaman apprentice who lives in this city about 45 miles north of Chicago. "I'm worried and lost and just don't know where to start or what to do."

Authorities said the infant's mother, 19-year-old Tammy L. Richberg, was charged with armed violence and armed robbery. She was ordered held on $1 million bail.

The baby was handed over to juvenile authorities immediately after the chase, but was later returned unharmed to his father.

AIDS law approved

LOS ANGELES (HNS) — A new law banning discrimination against carriers of the AIDS virus has been tentatively approved by the Los Angeles County Board of Supervisors.

The ordinance barring housing, employment and consumer discrimination against those infected with the deadly disease now goes to a formal vote of the board in two weeks.

The supervisors voted 3-to-2 to tentatively approve the law, debated for six months. Conservative supervisors Mike Antonovich and Pete Schabarum have consistently opposed the law, saying it duplicated existing state and federal statutes used to protect AIDS patients.

But Municipal Court Judge Rand Schrader, who also serves as vice chairman of the county's Commission on AIDS, told the board, "The purpose of this ordinance is to make the county's position clear and unequivocal. If it does duplicate existing law, it does no harm."

Quayle to get money

WASHINGTON (AP) — An aide to Dan Quayle asked the Republican National Committee for "a very large amount" to defray the cost of the vice president-elect's Christmas-week vacation in Vail, Colo., and the party approved a $25,000 payment, The Washington Post reported today.

RNC Chairman Frank Fahrenkopf told the newspaper that the original request "was not something I thought we could do." Quayle's spokesman, David Beckwith, said an aide had made an unauthorized estimate of vacation expenses of $65,000.

The Quayle family vacation plans were scaled back and Beckwith told the Associated Press on Tuesday evening that the final cost to the RNC would be about $15,000.

He said that amount would cover the expenses of two aides — their accommodations, air fare, per diem payment, rental of a four-wheel-drive vehicle, extra telephone lines and facsimile and reproduction machines — during the 10 days.

Beckwith said an unidentified aide planning the Vail trip had estimated the cost at $65,000, including a charter airplane, hotel and other expenses of the Quayle family, advance men, personal aides and others. The trip was to have included a stopover at the Jan. 2 Fiesta Bowl football game in Tempe, Ariz.

Mexican soldiers were quickly posted at installations run by Pemex — Mexico's government oil monopoly — throughout the country, including this gasoline distribution facility in Nuevo Laredo, Tuesday. The army moved in after powerful Pemex union leader Joaquin Hernandez Galicia was arrested on gun-running charges.

Mexican oil workers strike after arrest of their union boss

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Refinery operations across Mexico were crippled today as tens of thousands of striking oil workers protested the arrest of their union boss following a gun battle in which a federal agent was slain.

The arrest of Joaquin Hernandez Galicia on gun-running charges Tuesday was widely seen as a surprise challenge to the powerful union by the new administration of President Carlos Salinas de Gortari.

Traffic was lighter than usual during the morning rush hour as many people left their cars at home to save gasoline or because they did not have enough.

Some gasoline stations closed early Tuesday and remained closed this morning. Lines of up to 45 cars waited at those that were open.

The official Notimex news agency said soldiers had blown down the union boss' door with a bazooka shot during the morning raid on his home in the northeastern city of Ciudad Madero.

The allegedly corrupt Petroleum Workers Union of the Mexican Republic controls more than half the lucrative drilling contracts issued by the government oil monopoly Pemex, or Petroleos Mexicanos, S.A.

"We had to move to clean up things," a presidential source said on condition of anonymity. "They knew this was coming."

Hernandez Galicia warned last week that the union would paralyze Mexico's oil industry if the government carried out a threat to sell Pemex operations to private investors. Oil revenues are crucial to the struggling Mexican economy.

Salinas, who took office Dec. 1, has vowed to sell or close unprofitable and non-strategic state industries.

Animosity between Hernandez and Salinas, then president-elect, surfaced in October when the union revived charges that a leading governing party official, Mexico state Gov. Mario Ramon Beteta, had embezzled millions of dollars while serving as head of Pemex.

During Beteta's tenure, the union lost control of millions of dollars worth of contracts and the profit that allegedly came from reselling them or collecting hefty commissions from drilling companies, which in turn passed the charge on to the oil company.

Attorney General Enrique Alvarez del Castillo said a federal agent was killed in Tuesday's battle between security forces and Hernandez Galicia's bodyguards at the union boss' home.

He said 16 other people, including former union Secretary-General Jose Sosa, were arrested on illegal weapons charges.

Alvarez said police confiscated 200 Uzi submachine guns and 250,000 rounds of ammunition at Hernandez Galicia's house and denied chares that the raid was an attack on the union.

"It is the prosecution of crime committed by individuals," he said.

Union members, whose wages and benefits are among the highest in Mexico, paralyzed operations at six of the nation's nine oil refineries. Strikes also shut down eight petrochemical facilities, the Excelsior news agency reported.

A blockade by thousands of protesting oil workers and sympathetic students that had cut highways leading into the twin cities of Tampico and Ciudad Madero was lifted by this morning and traffic returned to normal.

Some gasoline stations were closed and there were waits of about 40 minutes at others.

Troops occupied the Tampico airport and a refinery in Ciudad Madero, Jimenez said. Stores — many operated by the union — were shut in Ciudad Madero on Tuesday, while gasoline supplies ran out in Tampico, he said.

Soldiers also occupied Pemex installations in the northern border city of Reynosa and in Villahermosa, capital of oil-rich Tabasco state.

An estimated 6,000 oil workers and their supporters quit work at a Mexico City refinery after hearing of the arrests and marched to the Zocalo Plaza shouting "Freedom for Joaquin!"

They were joined by busloads of workers from the refinery in Tula, to the north, and from other cities, workers said. Buses arrived all afternoon carrying workers to demand freedom for "La Quina," the diminutive by which Hernandez Galicia is known.

737 pilot again questioned about why undamaged engine shut off

LONDON (AP) — The pilot of a Boeing 737 was questioned again today by investigators trying to determine why his plane's apparently undamaged right engine was shut down long before the jet crashed, while the burning left engine remained in operation.

The Civil Aviation Authority said it would order stepped-up inspections of engines on three types of airplanes as a result of the crash Sunday of the British Midland Airways jetliner.

The new inspections will apply to Boeing 737-400s, the type of aircraft involved the crash, as well as Boeing 737-300s and Airbus A320s, which have similar engines, the authority said in a statement.

The statement came after the Transport Department recommended more frequent inspections of Boeing 737 engines. A communique issued by the department's Air Accidents Investigation Branch said it was still looking into the possibility that both engines "might have suffered a related failure."

It did not refer to suggestions in the British media that the pilot shut down the wrong engine when a fire alarm went off.

The reasons for shutting down the engine "are not yet clear and are still under investigation," the comunique said.

The pilot, Capt. Kevin Hunt, whose back and legs were broken in the crash, was interviewed for 45 minutes at Leicester Royal Infirmary, said the hospital's deputy general manager, Carol Henshall. Hunt answered preliminary questions Tuesday.

The jet plunged into an embankment a half-mile short of the runway at East Midlands Airport in central England, where it was trying to make an emergency landing. Forty-four people died and 82 were injured.

Transport Secretary Paul Channon said Hunt had reported a fire in the right engine of the new Boeing 737-400 shortly after it took off from London's Heathrow Airport for Belfast.

Channon told the House of Commons Tuesday that investigators found evidence of fire in the left engine, but no evidence of fire or mechanical damage in the right engine.

Britain's tabloid newspapers concluded today that Hunt had mistakenly shut down the right engine, believing it was on fire, instead of the left engine.

"Fatal Error" said the Daily Star; "Pilot Shut Off the Wrong Engine" said the Sun; "Error on the Flight Deck" said Today.

The British Airline Pilots Association called the newspaper reports "outrageous" and "without a shred of evidence." Aviation experts said it was highly unlikely the pilot could have confused the two engines, given the cockpit layout and the system of doublechecks between pilot and co-pilot.

Mrs. Henshall said that after Hunt's meeting with investigators he "is obviously a lot happier that they have all the relevant facts."

She said some of the "wilder headlines" had been kept from the pilot but he had been made aware by friends and colleagues of the news reports.

The plane took off at 7:52 p.m. Government sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Hunt reported at 8:06 p.m.: "I have an engine on fire." Then, at 8:14 p.m., the sources said he told traffic control: "I am shutting down the starboard (right) engine."

Mixup in two bodies from crash corrected

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — A mixup in which the caskets of two victims of last month's Pan Am jetliner bombing were shipped to the wrong cities was straightened out and the remains returned to the right families.

The casket containing the body of 20-year-old Karen Hunt was flown from Boston and arrived at a Rochester funeral home Tuesday, and the body of Mary L. Johnson, 25, of Wayland, Mass., was flown from Rochester to Boston.

Ms. Johnson's relatives were an hour from burying the body they thought was hers Sunday when FBI agents informed them of the mixup.

The mistake was discovered last week when the medical examiner's office in Rochester concluded that the body sent to the Hunt family was not Ms. Hunt.

Ms. Hunt's father, Robert Hunt, said the family planned a prayer service but would not bury her until spring, when the ground thaws.

Gregory Jones, an FBI spokesman in Washington, said authorities recovering bodies from the Dec. 21 explosion over Lockerbie, Scotland, apparently correctly identified the bodies of the two women but somehow flew the caskets to the wrong cities.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Hungary expands rights

BUDAPEST, Hungary (AP) — Parliament today enacted two key laws giving citizens the right to demonstrate and to join political parties other than the Communist Party, the sole legal party in Hungary since it took power in 1948.

The new law on association, however, only grants political parties and new independent movements the right to exist. A separate law to be passed later this year will regulate the registration and operation of political parties, according to officials.

Only then will two fledgling political parties and the dozens of independent political groups formed in recent months be able to field candidates for parliament and for local councils.

The long-awaited laws on assembly and association were passed with an overwhelming majority in parliament a day after advocates of greater pluralism clashed with more orthodox Communists over the pace of reform.

Nuclear plant attacked

MOSCOW (AP) — Ten Soviet scientists called today for halting construction of a nuclear power plant in the Crimea, a popular resort area they say is prone to earthquakes more violent than the tremor that devastated Armenia last month.

Tuesday night, the Soviet television news program "Vreyma" announced that Armenia's sole nuclear power station, which is built on a geological fault in the southern republic, will be shut down by March.

Officials have said the Armenian plant was shaken but not damaged by the Dec. 7 quake that killed at least 25,000 people in northwest Armenia, but the quake apparently accelerated the government's decision to shut down the plant.

Since the April 1986 Chernobyl nuclear plant accident in the Ukraine, the Soviets have moved away from a previously professed faith in nuclear power as a completely safe energy source and public opposition has grown.

The 10 scientists, in a letter published today by the Communist Party daily Pravda, said the plant's first reactor, capable of generating 1 million kilowatts, is projected to go on line sometime this year.

Burmese repatriated

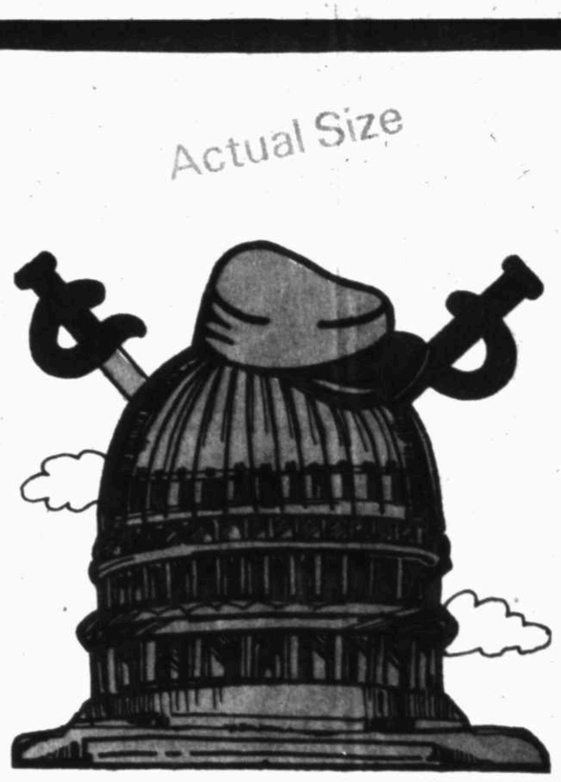

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Thailand has forcibly repatriated Burmese students to their homeland, subjecting them to possible detention and harsh treatment by Burma's military government, Amnesty International says.

The London-based human rights organization said Tuesday that Thailand on Jan. 6 forcibly returned 22 students who had fled neighboring Burma after a bloody military coup Sept. 18.

In a statement telexed to news agencies in Bangkok today, Amnesty said it feared the 22 and other students previously repatriated by Thailand may have been detained and abused by security personnel in Burma.

Midland sweeps district dual meets

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

Midland High won the boys District 4-5A dual swimming title, but San Angelo kept the outcome in doubt until the final event, the 400-free relay

The Bulldogs carried a 38-35 edge into the distance test and although San Angelo took first, Midland staged a stirring finish to garner title-saving second and third for a 42-41 margin.

Midland's girls had it easier, winning seven firsts on the way to a 49-34 victory over San Angelo at COM pool

Apparently there is more to a swimming relay than just jumping into the pool and splashing to the finish in the fastest time.

"We had three different relays set up for the 500," said MHS Coach Jesse Marsh, "We knew San Angelo had one of their good swimmers held back so we had to wait and see. Once those cards are handed in at the starting blocks by the swimmers, that's it."

The girls were making it three straight in dual titles while the boys were bouncing back from a third place in 1987.

District is in Odessa Feb. 18, but in between there will be two invitationals.

"Next week's West Texas at Lubbock is a fun meet," said Marsh, "An opportunity for everyone to get used to the pool where regional will be held."

The last weekend of January Midland will host its invitational and it will amount to a sneak preview of regional.

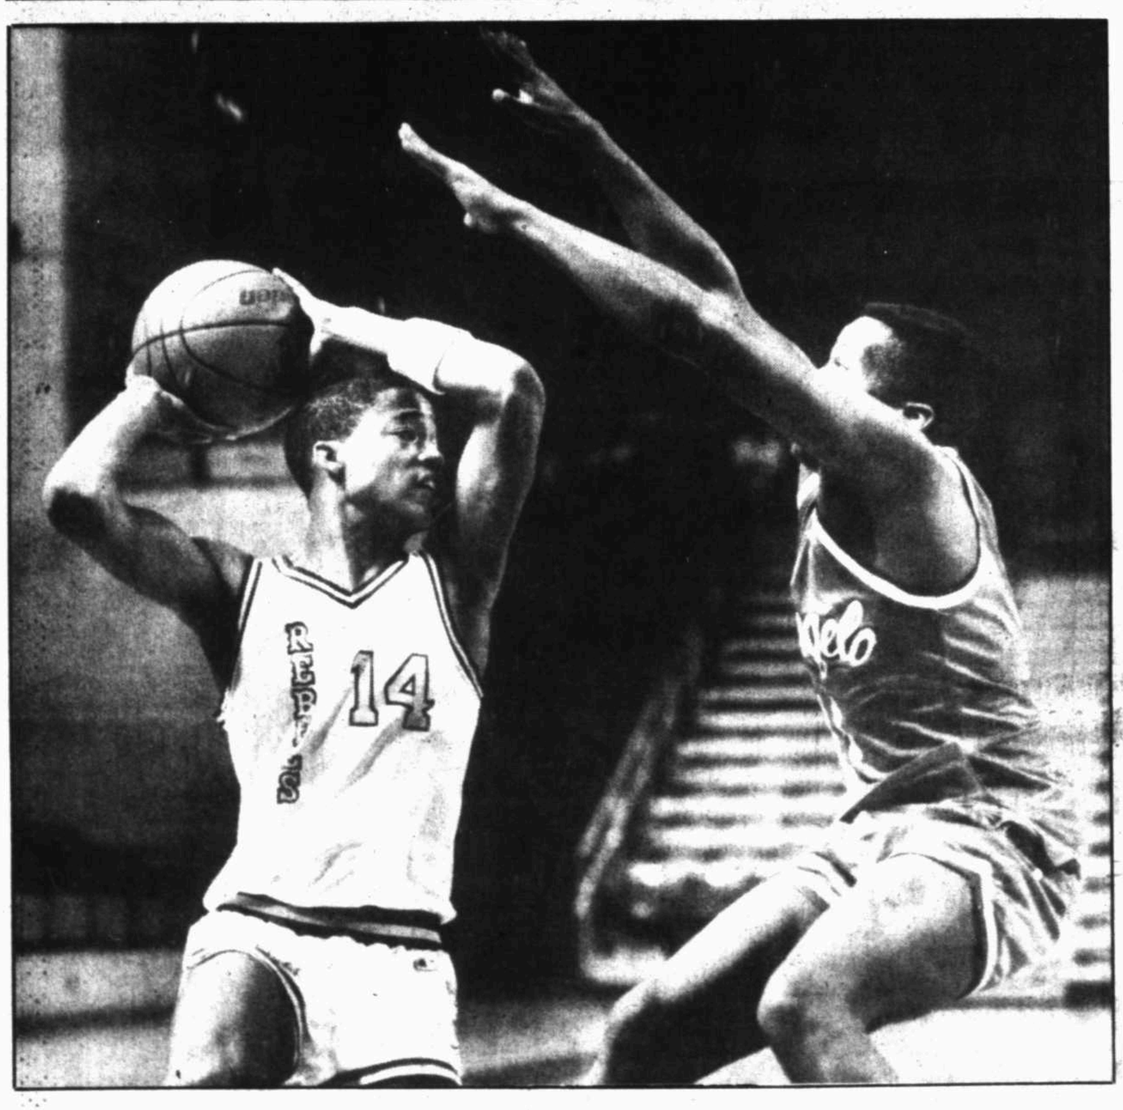

"All of our district teams will be here, plus Amarillo, Lubbock, Pampa, practically everybody but El Paso.," Marsh said.

Angelo whips Rebels

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

The San Angelo Bobcats are off to a weird start in the District 4-5A basketball race, losing to Cooper at home in their loop debut and winning on the road, 86-69, against Midland Lee Tuesday at Chaparral Center.

However, Bobcat coach Scott Galloway says there is a good reason for losing where they are supposed to win and winning where they are supposed to lose.

"We have a very young team and our kids were really tight against Cooper in the opener," said Galloway. "Sometimes young kids are too anxious to please at home.

"I think the road games are good for us right now. We have Odessa High on the road Friday and maybe we can work all the jitters out by then."

The Bobcats certainly didn't have any jitters at the Chap against Lee Tuesday. They hit 54 percent from the field, dominated the boards and forced a ton of Lee turnovers. In addition, the Bobcat offense generated 29 points in the second quarter and 26 more in the fourth period.

"Well, I will have to say that this was one of our better games overall — probably, the best," said Galloway.

It was one of those outings that Lee coach Paul Stueckler just has to take in stride. His Rebels didn't play that poorly, hitting an even 50 percent, which is good anytime for Lee.

But there was simply too much Tom Englert and Terry Lewis inside and Tracey Anthony outside.

"I told my kids after the game that it wasn't so much what we did bad, but what San Angelo did good. They killed us inside and outside.

Hobbs squeaks by Bulldogs

By JIMMY PATTERSON
Sports Writer

Maybe now that the legislature is in session, we can get lawmakers to change the Texas boundary so that Hobbs can move into District 4-5A. It's a shame these guys can't meet more often in the year ... this is some kind of intense rivalry here.

And Tuesday night's game at the Midland High gym did not ease tensions between the two schools as Hobbs came out with an 81-76 win after the Bulldogs led throughout most of the game.

The difference was easy to see.

The Eagles and 'Dogs were tied at 55 at the end of the third quarter, but in the final eight minutes, the Eagles connected on 12-of-13 free throws en route to the five point win.

By comparison, Tracey Bascus hit four-of-four from the line — the Bulldogs' only freebies in the final eight minutes.

When the game was over, Hobbs had connected on 26-of-36 (72 percent) from the stripe; MHS had hit 10-of-19 (52 percent).

With 10 seconds left, a Hobbs' technical led to Bascus' final two free throws, which pulled the 'Dogs to within four, 80-76. When Dorey Thompson inbounded from midcourt, Scott Melzer and Dexure Young got their signals crossed on the reception and the 'Dogs were called for traveling, turning the ball to Hobbs.

Hobbs' Greg Gribble hit a free throw with three seconds left to move the Eagles' lead to an insurmountable five points.

MHS overcame an early 5-2 deficit and did not relinquish the lead until the opening of the fourth quarter when Hobbs went on a 12-3 tear. Hobbs coach Ralph Tasker said his Eagles were woefully slow in getting their game in gear.

"We just weren't digging deep enough in the first half," Tasker said. "We have to have it in overdrive to beat anybody. It was a wonderful win because we had to earn it."

The 'Dogs played what was their best game of the season, especially considering the way they were blown away the first time the two met, a 112-68 loss in New Mexico.

"They're a different team, here," Tasker said. "We didn't even show the film of the first game this season to the boys. We showed 'em last year's game here. (MHS) thinks it can beat you here. And they convinced me for 3½ quarters that they just might do that."

Bulldog Greg Lewis scored eight points in the first quarter. Two early fouls, though, and head coach Jack Stephenson rested him to prevent further foul trouble. When Lewis, who finished with 20 points, left the game in the first quarter, the Dogs went flat.

49ers could surpass Skins as Super team of '80s

By TOM D'ANGELO
Cox News Service

SANTA CLARA, Calif. — Just eight weeks ago, the San Francisco 49ers were an organization in turmoil.

The team had lost two consecutive games for the first time in three years. Quarterback Joe Montana was struggling and was on the verge of losing his starting job to Steve Young.

Wide receiver Jerry Rice hinted his lack of productivity was caused by the uncertain quarterback situation. Coach Bill Walsh was reportedly at odds with owner Edward DeBartolo, Jr.

A trip to Miami for Super Bowl XXIII was as close for the 49ers as cable cars are to the stars.

"I've seen this organization hit rock bottom and I've seen this organization at the top," said safety Ronnie Lott after a 9-3 loss to the Los Angeles Raiders dropped the 49ers to 6-5.

"Right now we are at rock bottom. Rock bottom."

The previous week, San Francisco had blown a 23-0 lead at Phoenix and lost 24-23. With five games remaining, the talk was not of making the playoffs, but how long it would take this team to rebound.

The answer: five weeks.

"As far as the season is concerned it's been one of those years," said Walsh, whose $1.3 million-a-year job is secure. "I haven't seen one like it before where no single team really dominated. It's been a season that may be full of surprises until the final game."

One of the biggest surprises was the way the 49ers sent the Chicago Bears into hibernation Sunday during the NFC Championship game at Soldier Field.

Being a Chicago Bear wasn't enough with the windchill factor reaching minus-33 degrees. The 49ers handled the sub-zero temperatures like polar bears, toying with Chicago in an easy 28-3 victory.

"Adversity," Montana said. "This feels real sweet after all the adversity we've been through this year."

Slowly, San Francisco began resembling the team that won 13 games during the 1987 regular season, and not the team that was dominated by Minnesota in its opening game of the 1987 playoffs.

Montana became the clearly established starter, improving each week and peaking Sunday with a performance that Walsh called one of Montana's greatest. The defense, which was the staple during the erratic regular season, got even stronger.

After its loss to the Raiders, San Francisco finished the regular season with four wins in its last five games, then followed with playoff victories over Minnesota and Chicago by combined scores of 62-12.

The toughest hurdle for the 49ers was Minnesota, especially after losing three straight first-round playoff games since winning the 1985 Super Bowl.

"It was a great feeling," Walsh said. "We were being stigmatized as a losing team somehow, and we'd lost sort of badly in some playoffs. That was very important for us to re-establish ourselves in the hierarchy of the NFL."

By earning their third trip to the Super Bowl in the '80s, the 49ers are laying legitimate claim to being the team of the '80s. The 49ers' 99-48-1 record in the '80s is the best in the league. The Redskins are second at 97-52 and the Dolphins third — and fading fast — at 92-54-1.

Only Washington has played in three Super Bowls this decade, and the Redskins are 2-1. The 49ers beat Cincinnati in Super Bowl XVI and Miami in Super Bowl XIX.

A win Jan. 22 at Joe Robbie Stadium would give San Francisco three Super Bowl titles in the '80s and make a strong argument as to who follows the Green Bay Packers ('60s) and Pittsburgh Steelers ('70s) as a team of the decade.

"We're not going to make that claim now," Walsh said. "One team did that a year ago, if you remember, and everybody else said it was, too.

"It showed things can turn around at any time. There are four or five teams that can be considered team of the decade and we might be one of them."

Chaps need all the support they can get

Reggie Franklin figures it will be enough of a disadvantage playing the nation's No. 1 team without the crowd being on the Wranglers' side.

"You know they are going to bring a big crowd over here Thursday night," the Midland College coach worries. "I just hope more Midland people show up than Odessa College fans."

"That was one of the problems last year."

Franklin knows it's going to be a tough task, just staying with the Wranglers. It was tough even before the years in which they were not ranked No. 1.

"THERE'S NO doubt about it, they deserve that No. 1 ranking," says Franklin. And one of the reasons is Larry Johnson, adjudged by most juco afficianados as the No. 1 player in the two-year college ranks today. Johnson is an attraction who should be a magnet for all fans who like to watch good talent in action, whether they be for MC or OC.

And this will be UNLV-bound Johnson's last appearance in the Chap Center since the Region V tournament will be in Waco this year.

WHAT KIND of a chance does Midland have against the Wranglers?

Franklin won't venture any predictions. "We're just going to have to gut it up and play the best we can."

Sure, there have been some problems for MC, resulting in the dismissal of one player, the sidelining of two others temporarily for academic reasons and the loss of Steve Overstreet, who quit after being elevated to a starting role.

However, last season, the Chaps didn't really come together as a team until after the dismissal of Alex Stanwood, the squad's leading scorer.

Herman "Skeeter" Henry stepped in, took up the slack and won himself a scholarship to the University of Oklahoma, where it seems all Chaparrals' who are good wind up.

THE ADVERSITY this season may bring this team together as well, creating leaders from unexpected sources.

With a 2-2 WJCAC record, the Chaps are in a desperation struggle for one of the four berths in the regional tournament.

OC and South Plains are assumed to have locks on two berths, the only question is which will be the champ.

Midland, Howard and NMJC are the contenders for the other two spots. NMJC is 0-3, but has some easier sailing ahead and can make up ground on the Chaps and Hawks quickly.

If somehow MC could pull off an upset Thursday....well, dreams sometimes come true, don't they?

Abilene given scare by Permian in 4-5A

From Staff Reports

Just when everyone was about to draw the conclusion that Abilene High was going to skate through the District 4-5A basketball race, the Eagles had a big 70-67 scare from 0-3 Odessa Permian on the road Tuesday night.

AHS led by 13 points in the fourth period, but Permian scored 23 in the final frame to make it close. Shawn Almond had a three-point shot at the end of the game, but hit only air.

Greg Denman led the 2-0 Eagles with 26 points while Donald Hall had 14. Permian was led by 21 points from Sean Butler while Eric Lewis had 18.

In another 4-5A game, Odessa High lost its grip on first place in a 66-63 road loss to Abilene Cooper as the Cougars got 24 points from Mitch Royals, 17 from Jay Monkerud and 16 from Girardeau Murray while OHS had 16 from Patrick Brown, 14 from Walter McCoy and 12 from George Collins.

HOBBS

But when Lewis was charged with his third foul in the second quarter and was benched again, Dexture Young came to a quick rescue, dumping in 10 second-quarter points. The lanky wingman finished the night with 16 points.

Two other Bulldogs finished in double figures — Bart Saddler, with 10, and Tracey Bascus, with 16. Saddler left midway through the fourth quarter with a leg cramp.

Midland High out-rebounded Hobbs 43-39 in some intense play underneath the net. Bascus led the 'Dogs with 11, eight of which came in the first half. Hobbs had 39 boards in a defensive game that was controlled early by the 'Dogs, late by the Eagles.

Hobbs' half-court game was also in top form, forcing two turnovers in the second quarter when MHS guard Dorey Thompson was unable to inbound the ball from the baseline in his allotted five seconds. Twice more in the second half the Hobbs defense intercepted inbounds passes from MHS guards.

"It was a great, tremendous effort," Stephenson said of the Bulldogs' play. "The shots didn't go in, in the third quarter. And all those (Hobbs) free throws ...

"And they do a great job on their half-court defense."

"They have a fine team" Tasker said of MHS. "Jack does a marvelous job getting ready for us. If they play that way, they won't lose anymore games this year."

The Bulldog JV, behind Michael Ryan's 18 points and Skeeter Bowers' 18, downed the Eagle JV 87-76. MHS was up by 15 at one point. MHS sophomores, led by E.J. Johnson's 24 points and Earl McDonald's assists, downed the Hobbs' sophs 75-70.

The Bulldogs, 9-11, re-enter district play Friday with a trip to Abilene High. Hobbs moves its record to 9-3 with the win.

LEE

They are a classy bunch when they have things going for them," said Stueckler. "It's one of those losses you have to take in stride and go on."

There were five ties and nine lead changes in the game until Englert hit a basket with 5:08 left in the second period to give the Bobcats a 25-24 lead. San Angelo quickly ran that margin to 42-33 by the half and never looked back. San Angelo led by 18 points with 6:22 left in the game as they steadily increased the lead.

Anthony bombed from outside for 18 points while Englert and Lewis worked inside for 17 each. Craig Smith added 10 points. Englert, San Angelo's only returning starter, had only four points against Cooper last Friday, but found himself against Lee.

"Tom was tight against Cooper, and since he is the only starter we have back, I think his tightness was a bit contagious to our other young players. It was good to see him have a big night," said Galloway.

Lee was led by a game high 28 points from Torval Crisp, who also went into a scoring slump last Friday in a loss to Odessa High.

But even Crisp was impressed by the Bobcats. "I don't know what happened, but I can tell you that San Angelo is good. At least, they were tonight."

Lee also got 15 points from Jared Edwards, but no other Rebel could climb into the land of double digits and a lot of double digits were needed in this one.

In junior varsity action, San Angelo beat Lee by a 57-47 margin with Bill Lehman hitting 12 points and 10 each from Darren Felty and Robert Jeff. Lee got 12 points from Tony White and 10 from Brian Rippee.

Midland Lee lasses defeat San Angelo

From Staff Reports

SAN ANGELO — The Lady Rebels inproved their District 4-5A mark to 4-1 to remain a half game out of first place with a 55-48 win over San Angelo Tuesday night.

The Lady Rebs trail only Abilene Cooper in the district standings. Cooper is 4-0 after soundly defeating Odessa High 72-40.

Lee was led by Monica Ramirez' 27 points and Mary Ann Isom's 10.

The teams played a close game from beginning to near the end, the Rebels leading by 13-10 at the end of the first quarter and 26-22 at halftime. San Angelo made a threat in the third quarter, outscoring Lee 14-12 and crawling to 38-36.

San Angelo drops to 9-8 and 0-4 in district.

In other girls action, Abilene High downed Permian 61-45. Midland High defeated Carlsbad, N.M., 61-56 Monday night.

Lee, 15-5 overall, hosts Abilene High 8 p.m. Friday.

Author offered ex-player $500

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A former North Carolina State basketball player says the author of a book about Wolfpack coach Jim Valvano's program offered to pay him $500 to $1,500 per half-hour for information on the team, a Raleigh newspaper says.

Quentin Jackson, who played for the Wolfpack from 1984-1988, told The News and Observer of Raleigh that he received the offer during a conversation with Peter Golenbock, the author of a forthcoming book called "Personal Fouls". Jackson called back a second time after considering the offer.

"I told Golenbock that I would be glad to talk to him for that kind of money, but that I had to do it at the sports information department," Jackson told the newspaper. "And I told him that I didn't have anything bad to say about the program or Coach V. When I told him that, he said, 'Fine,' and hung up the telephone."

Jackson said he got in touch with Golenbock through former team manager John Simonds Jr. last May and June.

N.C. State chancellor Bruce Poulton said Tuesday that a former team manager whom he didn't name was the source of information for the upcoming book. According to a book jacket, the publication will contain allegations of irregularities in the Wolfpack basketball program.

"John must have felt that I had an ax to grind with Coach Valvano over playing time," said Jackson, now a player for the Harlem Globetrotters.

"John told me he had the telephone number of a guy staying in a hotel in Durham and that the guy was writing a book on ACC basketball and wanted to interview me. I called the number, and the man identified himself as Peter Golenbock. ...

"He told me he wanted to write a book about what it was like to play against teams like Carolina and Duke and win the ACC tournament. That all sounded fine to me. But then he told me that my name wouldn't have to be in the book and that no one would have to know that I had given him any information.

"That made me suspicious. I had never heard of a situation that like in a book that wasn't supposed to be controversial."

The relay team of Jason Hathaway, Rhett McKeller, Crispin Schroeder and Moss Fennell took second for the Bulldogs and the foursome of Mark Dildy, Pete Zubiate, Elton Watson and Trey Smith took third in the crucial 200.

The Bulldog boys also won seven firsts in 11 events with Matt Seay garnering firsts in the 100-breast and 200 IM.

Michaela Hasek won the 50-free and 100-breast for the girls, "But Alyssa Archer was outstanding," added Marsh, "Her 2:13.45 in the 200-free was her best ever."

As for the future, Marsh says, "This meet was not indicative of San Angelo's strength. They have tremendous depth. They will be tough in district and then in regional it should come back to us."

Stanton sweeps pair from Forsan

By BILL GRIMES
Sports Writer

STANTON — The Forsan starting five outscored their Stanton counterparts 58-44 in the Class 2A district boys basketball opener for both teams here Tuesday.

That did not ensure a Forsan win, however. Lance Jenkins, Steven Ruiz and Kelly Inman made sure of that.

The aforementioned trio of Buffs combined to outscore the Forsan bench 24-2 en route to a 68-60 Buff win.

IN A girls district opener, Kaki Elmore scored 10 of her 14 points in the fourth quarter to help Stanton nip Forsan 40-32.

Four of the Stanton boys' five non-district losses came at the hands of Class 3A schools, yet Forsan led the entire first quarter with a running, gunning style of play.

Then Jenkins went to work. With the Buffs behind 17-12 going into the second eight minutes, the senior post scored 13 of his team-high 17 points in the second period to give the Buffs the lead for good.

Unlike many reserves, Jenkins is no stranger to scoring success. In fact, Jenkins, Ruiz and Inman have all scored in double figures at least once this season.

"We just come out and do what needs to be done," Jenkins said.

STANTON used Jenkins' inside prowess to overcome Forsan's guard-oriented game for a 24-13 second quarter advantage en route to a 36-30 halftime lead.

The Buffs scored the first six points of the quarter on lane jumpers by Jenkins and Robert Jones, and a layup by Inman. Forsan took back the lead briefly, but Jones put Stanton up for good with 5:49 left in the half on another lane jumper.

Forsan wasn't done yet, however. The visiting Buffaloes trailed by no more than six points in the second and third quarters, before Stanton pushed its lead up to 10 for most of the last three minutes of the game.

Jones, who added 16 points for Stanton, said Forsan was an unknown quantity going into Tuesday's game. "We didn't know what to expect.

"We just knew we had to get started right in district."

Stanton coach Kevy Allred said the Buffs won by forcing Forsan into a slower tempo.

"They were beating us up and down the court," Allred said. "We knew their guards were going to be tough."

INDEED, Forsan guards Dave Rundell, Stephen East and Charles Newton combined for 46 of the visitors' 60 points. Rundell led all scorers with 21 points, while East added 17 and Newton eight.

But Forsan was only three-of-12 from three-point range and could never get an inside game going to compensate.

Stanton continues its quest for a fifth straight playoff berth Friday at Ozona.

Girls
Coach Rob Young's Lady Buffs struggled offensively through the first three quarters before Elmore went wild in the final eight minutes on feeds from guards Stacie Tom, Karen Graves and Kelli Glaspie. The senior forward scored most of her five fourth-quarter buckets from point-blank range, but disavowed the lion's share of credit for pulling her team out of a close game.

"I like pressure, but really it's just us working together as a team. It was just my turn to score tonight."

The Queens dictated the tempo for much of the game, much to Young's dismay.

"We didn't do a good job adjusting to their tempo. They made us play their game," Young said. "We'd get a break and dribble it off a foot or something."

After shooting a pathetic 24 percent from the field for the first three quarters (and going scoreless for the last 5:22 of the third quarter), Stanton bounced back to shoot better than 50 percent for the final eight minutes.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Travel, pleasure and new financial rewards are the ingredients that will make you happy. Love surrounds you. You appreciate even small gifts and always seem to have an adoring audience. Creative ideas will boost your career. Major monetary decisions are featured in May. Try not to feel overwhelmed. Later developments will set everything straight. Keep your correspondence up to date. Having a lot of contacts makes it easier for you to get your way when the chips are down.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: journalist Martin Agronsky, comedian Joe E. Lewis, author Jack London, artist John Singer Sargent.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Community interests are in the spotlight. Others look to you for leadership. Tackle problems with patience. Write overdue letters today. An exciting invitation comes your way. Consult partner.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Be on guard against superficial attractions. You could be duped by someone who is insincere. Keep your immediate environment orderly and you will turn out more work. Mess is distracting!

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A great day for sealing bargains, taking a business trip or helping out a friend or lover. Begin new projects. In emotionally charged situations, choose your words carefully.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Seek the best professional advice you can find. Action will be almost impossible without the go-ahead from experts. Think out your basic moves. Impulsive behavior could prove costly.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Surprise visits and messages can relieve tension at work. Pay more attention to domestic matters if trying to strike a better balance between work and family.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Difficult obstacles can be surmounted today. Choose the best path to avoid running into a stone wall. Think twice before acting. Set a good example for young people to follow. Defend your ideals.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Quiet pursuits can be very rewarding financially. Welcome a new partnership or employment opportunity. Keep away from crowds if coming down with a cold. A relaxing evening at home works wonders.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A conference with an influential person will bring good career or financial results. You could be asked to perform extra duties that will translate into new honors and prestige. Jump at the chance!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Good cheer abounds today, but so do carelessness and extravagance. Do not carry too much cash. Give a wide berth to pessimistic people. A good book or favorite hobby helps you relax tonight.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Start new projects. Put your best foot forward and you will succeed beyond your wildest expectations. Domestic problems are easily solved, thanks to your tact. Pour on the charm.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Curb your excitement. Bragging could be misinterpreted. An emergency will claim your attention later today. Keep calm even if others panic. Higher-ups are counting on you.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A surprise visit will delight you. Change your schedule to accommodate this special person. A newcomer could play a key role in your financial or romantic future.

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
1 ♠	2 ♡	Dbl	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Nine of ♠

The saddest words heard over the bridge table are the plaintive: "But partner, I had an opening bid!" That usually means that someone went for a large penalty—and it usually should have been avoided.

The key to making an overcall, especially at the two-level, is suit quality. A six-card suit headed by 100 honors and nothing else is better than a 15-point hand with a ragged suit. If you want to see why, take a look at what happened to poor South on this hand.

South's two-heart overcall seemed innocent enough—that is, until West doubled. East won the spade opening lead with the king, cashed the king of diamonds and then continued with ace of spades and another. West ruffed and returned a diamond, allowing East to win two tricks with the jack and ace.

East exited with a trump and West captured declarer's nine with the ten. He returned a club to declarer's king. After cashing the ace of clubs, declarer was forced to lead a trump. He chose the jack, taken by West's queen.

Back came the queen of clubs, forcing declarer to ruff. He then had to lead away from his king-seven into West's ace-eight tenance. That meant that declarer scored only three tricks, for a set of 1,400 points.

"But partner, I had 13 points," cried South. North gravely leaned over and changed South's score to minus 1,387.

Soviet, American artists to tour both nations with works, director says

FORT WORTH (AP) — Plans are final to bring Soviet and American artists together and tour their works in both countries, the organizers of the event said.

InterCultura and the Modern Art Museum of Fort Worth also announced Tuesday the Meadows Foundation had awarded a $250,000 grant for development of the event.

E.A. Carmean, director of the Fort Worth art museum, said putting the exhibition together in its final form was a complex undertaking, "given the vast geographical distances between our countries and the sheer number of artists we needed to consider." More than 100 artists were reviewed before the selection of 10 from the USSR and the same number of American artists.

The exhibition is the first joint exhibition of contemporary Soviet and American artists to tour both countries, according to Gordon Dee Smith, president of InterCultura, a exhibitions organization in Fort Worth.

"10+10 is an event of historic significance, and we are pleased to have the support of the Meadows Foundation in this venture," Smith said.

The show, 10+10: Contemporary Soviet and American Painters, will debut in May at the Fort Worth museum and end its American leg at the Corcoran Gallery of Art in Washington, D.C.

The works will then be exhibited in Moscow, Leningrad and Tbilisi of the Soviet Union.

Smith's trip to the Soviet Union in 1987 initiated the negotiations for the exhibition and is part of a multi-exhibition exchange that includes a proposed show of Soviet avant-garde works from the 1900-1920 period.

MORGANTOWN, W.Va. (AP) — Herbert Morrison, whose emotional description of the crash of the Hindenburg stirred millions 52 years ago, died Tuesday at age 83.

Morrison was a reporter for Chicago radio station WLS on May 6, 1937, when he described the explosion of the airship as it approached its landing in Lakehurst, N.J. Thirty-six of the 97 people aboard died.

Morrison became the eyes and ears of the world as the only broadcaster at the scene. Millions heard his tear-filled account of the explosion, the fire and people falling from the sky.

Morrison served in the Army Air Corps during World War II and later became the first news director at television station WTAE in Pittsburgh. He retired after developing a radio and television section for the university relations department at West Virginia University.

NEW YORK (AP) — Former Beatle Ringo Starr trades his yellow submarine for a blue train conductor's hat in a new children's television program.

"Shining Time Station" makes its debut on PBS later this month. To promote the program, Starr arrived here Tuesday on a train from Chicago with his wife, Barbara Bach, and his co-stars Brian O'Connor and Nicole Leach.

"It's great to be 18 inches tall again," the full-sized Starr told reporters in Chicago on Monday as they watched a video version of his character, Mr. Conductor.

The 20 half-hour segments are aimed at children ages 3 through 7.

Each segment includes two animated four-minute train sequences. They have run since 1984 on British television under the name "Thomas the Tank Engine and Friends."

Starr deflected questions about his recent stay at a substance-abuse treatment center. Asked if he could talk about his problems with drugs, Starr answered, "Yes, I won."

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Family Ties" TV star Michael J. Fox has signed a multiyear contract to develop, produce and star in movie and TV projects for Paramount Pictures Corp., the studio said.

Terms of the contract announced Tuesday weren't disclosed.

"Michael is widely recognized as one of the industry's most dynamic and accomplished young actors and we have enormous faith in his potential as he enters a new phase of his already established and successful career," said Frank Mancuso, Paramount chairman and chief executive officer.

Fox has won three Emmy awards for his role as Alex Keaton on Paramount's "Family Ties," now in its seventh season on NBC-TV. He also starred in the movies "Back to the Future," "The Secret of My Success" and "Bright Lights, Big City."

NEW YORK (AP) — "Black and Blue," the Broadway musical revue, has postponed its opening that had been scheduled for Sunday because of the illness of Ruth Brown, one of its stars.

Miss Brown, a rhythm 'n' blues singer from the 1950s, suffered an angina attack complicated by pneumonia on Jan. 6 and has been out of the show since then, said spokeswoman Marilynn LeVine.

The musical, which celebrates American blues songs and tap dancing, will now open either Jan. 22 or Jan. 26, Ms. LeVine said Tuesday.

"Black and Blue" will continue in preview performances at the Minskoff Theater until the opening.

Overproduction not problem, yet

CARACAS, Venezuela (AP) — Overproduction by some members of OPEC has not become a problem yet as the cartel voluntarily cuts output to raise prices, Indonesia's oil minister said Tuesday.

Responding to press reports of alleged overproduction by the United Arab Emirates, Ginandjar Kartasasmita said OPEC has not confirmed that the UAE is violating its quota even though he said the reports should be taken seriously.

"Some members may have a reason for overproducing and (cutbacks) may have to be done gradually. This is permitted by OPEC. What is not permitted is to put this (overproduction) on the market," Kartasasmita told reporters.

He said a meeting of an eight-member subcommittee of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries charged with monitoring compliance with the new quota system would be obligatory if overproduction occurred, but he indicated a meeting would not be held before February.

"We are barely two weeks into the accord and we cannot know what production will be for January," he said.

OPEC agreed last November to limit production to 18.5 million barrels a day starting Jan. 1.

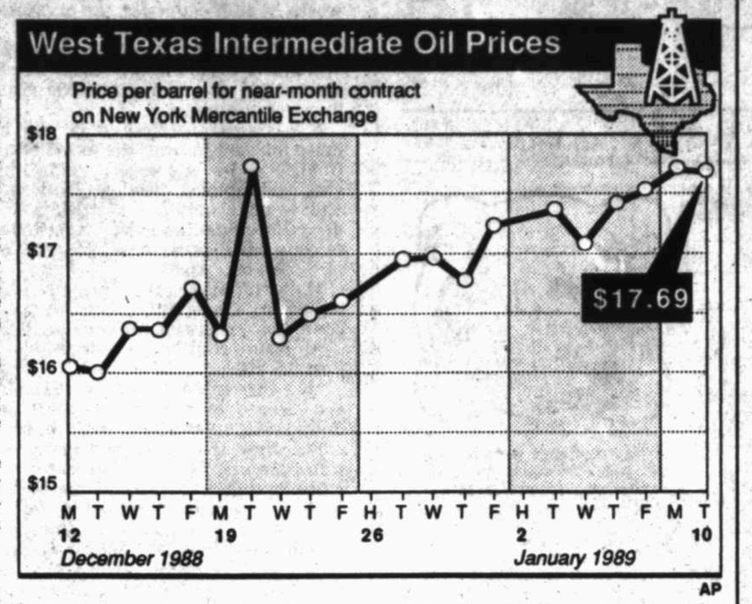

A scheduled meeting of the subcommittee, to which Venezuela and Indonesia both belong, is set for March.

Kartasasmita said OPEC will seek cutbacks from a group of independent producers in a joint meeting Jan. 26 that need not amount to the 15 to 20 percent reduction OPEC is imposing on its members.

"We don't ask for that much. It's up to them to decide how much they want to cut. We are not demanding anything, but any cut will help," the minister said.

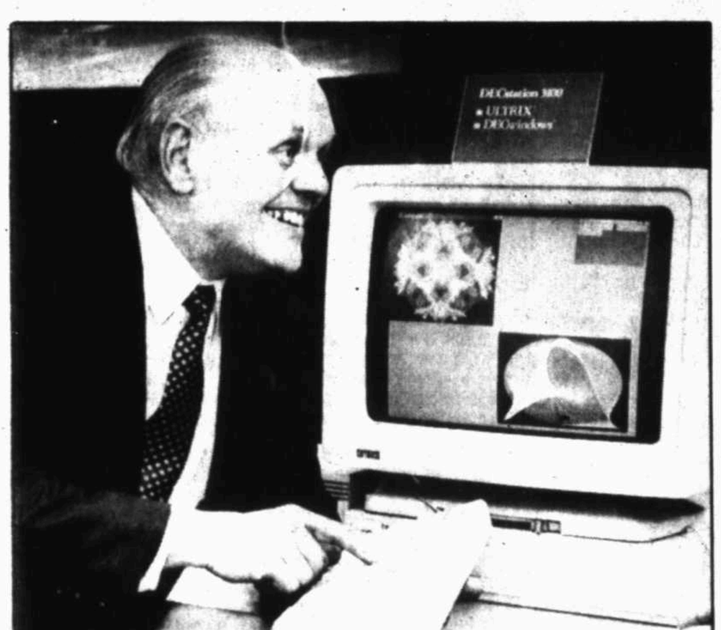

He said that OPEC would not be able to reach its price aim of $18 per barrel without total member compliance and without cooperation from non-OPEC producers.

Digital unveils new line of workstations

By PAUL FREIBERGER
Hearst News Service

SAN JOSE — Digital Equipment Corp. has introduced its long-awaited workstation with MIPS chips and new models of its existing VAX workstation line.

The engineering workstations are trying to reach the fastest-growing segment of the computer industry.

Digital, the nation's seconnd-largest computer maker with more than $10 billion in sales, hopes both moves will help it overtake Sun Microsystems Inc. of Mountain View, Calif., the leader in a workstation market that is expected to grow from $3.6 billion to $11.4 billion in 1989.

In addition, Digital unveiled a line of personal computers designed by Tandy Corp. The machines are compatible with IBM PCs and should fare better than earlier efforts by the company to sell personal computers, analysts said.

Analysts said the introductions, particularly of the MIPS processor-based Decstation 3100, would heat up the battle in the market for computer workstations, powerful systems used by engineers for complex technical applications.

One surprise was the $11,900 price of the entry level 3100. The company said it offered much greater performance at half the price of competitive models from industry leader Sun Microsystems.

Digital competitors take workstation in stride

By PAUL FREIBERGER
Hearst News Service

SAN FRANCISCO — Scott McNealy, the president of Sun Microsystems Inc., took Digital Equipment Corp.'s announcement of a competitive workstation in stride.

"You can't throw an immature product out there and expect the world to jump on it," McNealy said Tuesday.

So did Larry Lytle, a spokesman for Hewlett-Packard Co., another Digital competitor. "It reinforces the strategy we've had in place and in that sense it's very positive," Lytle said.

Robert Miller, president of MIPS Computer Systems Inc., which designed the chip Digital is using in its new workstations, said, "This is a great day. Digital has spoken in a resounding way."

Silicon Valley observers were outspoken in reacting to Digital's announcement of workstation using the streamlined reduced instruction set computing (RISC) design and running the industry standard Unix operating system.

Whether or not Digital succeeds in ousting Sun from its place as workstation leader, most agree that the product announcement will affect the strategy and fortunes of many high technology companies.

The big winner, analysts say, is MIPS. The company gains credibility from Digital's endorsement of its technology. MIPS profits from selling chips and software to Digital and it also gets royalties of sales by MIPS-licensed semiconductor companies to Digital.

Analysts said there isn't necessarily a big loser, but Sun is clearly the focus of Digital's attention.

"I wouldn't be suprised to see Sun lower their prices or improve the capabilities of existing systems soon," said Lawrence Harris, an analyst with Bateman Eichler, Hill Richards.

In fact, industry observers expect Sun to introduce a more powerful workstation based on its own RISC architecture within the next few months.

McNealy would only indicate that Digital's announcement would make his company more aggressive. He said if a price war ensues in the workstation industry that "Sun has a business model more structured to run lean and mean and with a minimum of overhead."

Industry observers said other companies expected to gain from the Digital announcement are the three semiconductors that make chips based on MIPS' design.

Analysts say other companies that will have to adjust their strategy in light of the announcement include workstation competitors, Hewlett-Packard, Silicon Graphics Corp. of Mountain View, and International Business Machines Corp.

MHCC making progress on move to new building

The Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce is learning first-hand what the saying "The best-laid plans of mice and men" means.

At Tuesday's meeting of officers and board members, the main topic was financing renovations of the new building at 1100 Parker. Members had hoped to be in their new home at 1100 Parker by the end of this month. However, they just recently accepted a bid for renovation of the building, and are in the process of obtaining a 15-year note from NCNB Texas to finance the remodeling. The cost is expected to be approximately $20,000.

Car-quota extension draws mixed reactions

Mitstuzaka

WASHINGTON (AP) — Japan's decision to retain its cap on car exports to the United States drew little praise in this country, with reaction split between those who wanted the voluntary export quotas lowered and those who say the restraints are no longer useful.

Two of the Big Three U.S. automakers, Ford Motor Co. and Chrysler Corp., welcomed the decision, announced Tuesday in Tokyo. While Chrysler said the restraints were needed to keep the U.S. auto industry healthy, Ford broadened its justification for the quotas by saying they should remain in place until the United States has approached trade equity with Japan in products ranging from steel and textiles to semiconductors.

INFUSION PLUS, the home health care agency, is planning to open a pharmacy at 433 Andrews Hwy.

Dan Wiest, manager, says plans are for the pharmacy to be open by Jan. 23. It will be a full-service pharmacy with city-wide delivery, a drive-through window and computerized records. Pharmacy hours will be from 10 a.m. to 6:30 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Infusion Plus is a home health care agency specializing in home administration of intravenous medications. The agency's nursing staff helps with a variety of IV therapies including antibiotics, pain management, immune therapies and growth hormones. Wiest added that, where possible, the staff will teach the patient to self-medicate.

In addition, the agency has some medical equipment such as oxygen supplies.

From Staff and Wire Reports

Profit-taking on Tuesday lowered crude oil futures, but a sharp drop in oil inventories reported after trading closed appears to be giving prices a lift.

On the New York Mercantile Exchange, the February contract for West Texas Intermediate was trading at $17.88 by midmorning, up 19 cents from Tuesday's close of $17.69, settling 3 cents lower after having been down as much as 25 cents during the session. On Monday, the February contract closed 17 cents higher at $17.72 a barrel.

Among refined products traded on the exchange, domestic heating oil futures ended mixed, with the February contract settling at 53.86 cents a gallon, down 0.29 cent.

Analysts said prices were dragged down by profit-taking. Energy analysts said investors decided to take advantage of steadily rising prices and began a round of heavy selling early in the day.

Prices later recovered most of their losses on reports that non-OPEC oil producing countries were preparing to announce production cutbacks to help bolster the recent accord among members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

After the close of trading, the American Petroleum Institute reported that for the week ended Jan. 6, crude oil stocks fell by 5.5 million barrels, to 328.86 million barrels.

Nauman Barakat, vice president of energy investments at Prudential-Bache Securities Inc., said the API report would probably send crude futures higher.

"Many people were expecting a buildup of as high as 7 million barrels of crude so the API report will be construed to be very positive for the market," he said.

Intervention stems rising dollar's tide

LONDON (AP) — The dollar was mostly lower in busy European trading late this morning. Gold prices fell.

Traders in Rome said the market appears to have engaged itself in an arm-wrestling match with the U.S. and West German central banks.

Both banks have intervened in the market this week to stem the dollar's climb, and the Bundesbank reportedly intervened again early today.

In Tokyo, the dollar rose 1.25 yen to a closing 126.95. Later, in London, it was quoted at 126.45 yen.

In London, the British pound rose to $1.7760, compared with $1.7643 Tuesday.

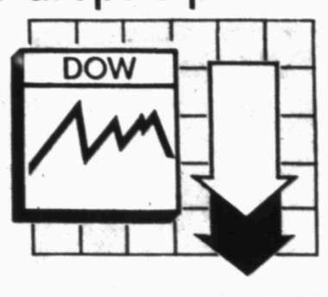

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $402.30 a troy ounce, down from $404.75 bid late Tuesday. At midmorning today, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $403.50.

In Zurich, the bid price was $403.30, down from $405.10 bid late Tuesday.

Earlier, in Hong Kong, gold fell $2.70 to close at a bid $404.48.

Market's breather drops 6 points

The Dow Jones industrials closed at 2,193.21, a decline of 6.25 points.

Declining issues outnumbered advancing ones by about 4 to 3 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed stocks, with 621 up, 816 down and 543 unchanged.

Traders said the market seemed to be catching its breath after having advanced in every session of 1989 except the first, setting three post-crash highs in the process.

The stock market is only slightly below where it stood right before the stock market crash of Oct. 19, 1987. The session before its 508-point plunge, the Dow Jones industrial average had closed at 2,246.74.

The Dow Jones industrials cracked 2,200 during the trading day on Thursday, Friday, Monday and again Tuesday before retreating each time.

Volume on the floor of the Big Board came to 140.42 million shares, down from 163.18 million in the previous session.

As measured by Wilshire Associates' index of more than 5,000 actively traded stocks, the overall market fell $5.200 billion, or 0.19 percent, in value.

BUSINESS IN BRIEF

Brady gives economic commission 'go-ahead'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The incoming Bush administration gave a high-level advisory panel the go-ahead to begin work in earnest on forging a solution to the federal government's huge deficit problems.

Officials of the National Economic Commission said Tuesday they had received word from Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady, who will stay on as the Bush administration's chief economic spokesman, that Bush will be looking for the panel's report March 1.

Mistrial declared in GAF insider case

NEW YORK (AP) — A mistrial has been declared in the stock manipulation case against GAF Corp. and a top company officer, throwing one of the biggest prosecutions spawned by the Wall Street insider trading scandal into confusion.

The mistrial ruling by U.S. District Judge Mary Johnson Lowe came Tuesday after the defense challenged the government prosecutor's handling of an important piece of evidence and said it had unfairly hurt their case.

Defense attorneys then requested dismissal of the entire indictment, but Lowe rejected their request and said she intended to begin picking jurors for a new trial later in the week.

Harris Trust agrees to $14 million settlement

WASHINGTON (AP) — One of the nation's largest banks agreed to pay a record $14 million in back pay to women and minorities it employed from 1973 to 1988, but refused to concede that it had discriminated.

Harris Trust and Savings Bank of Chicago, 40th among the nation's banks in assets last year, said Tuesday it agreed to settle charges originally filed by the Labor Department in 1977 to avoid "more legal and statistical wrangling." A Chicago group that had supported the government's complaint said up to 5,000 people could share in the award.

Financial jobs more scarce in New York

NEW YORK (AP) — The number of jobs in financial services, one of the engines of growth in the metropolitan economy, declined in New York City for the first time in more than a decade during 1988, according to a yearend review that shows the nightmare of Black Monday has yet to fade in the Big Apple.

The area encompassing New York City and northeastern New Jersey experienced job growth in almost all other industries, but at the slowest rate in the past six years, the federal Bureau of Labor Statistics reported Tuesday.

Getting new credit like shopping for car

By VIVIAN MARINO
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK — Imagine this: A restaurant trying to solicit business mails you a sample menu that leaves out prices and doesn't describe its dishes.

Or, how about a car dealership pitching its latest model that keeps the sticker price inside the trunk instead of on the side windows?

Would either establishment be likely to get your business? Hardly.

Yet many American consumers have had credit cards issued to them over the years without knowing beforehand all the exact terms, such as the interest rates, fees or grace periods involved.

President Reagan has signed long-awaited legislation that changes all that. The new law, which goes into effect this year, forces all banks, department stores and other credit card issuers to supply these details on applications and solicitations.

Under current law, creditors are not required to disclose the information until the card is issued.

"Now the sticker is on the window instead of hidden in the trunk, so to speak," noted Robert K. Heady, publisher of the North Palm Beach, Fla., newsletter 100 Highest Yields, which tracks the credit card industry. "But if the buyer shops around he can find a cheaper model."

That's good news for the more than 100 million U.S. consumers who hold more than 800 million credit cards and have outstanding balances approaching $150 billion.

Consumer groups had strongly backed the standard-setting legislation because it would allow people to shop for the best deals. And banking groups liked the fact that the measure would prevent states from imposing differing disclosure requirements on their interstate industry.

From a consumer standpoint, "The main reason why we needed the disclosure law was because the whole credit-card industry since the early 1980s ... has taken a very sophisticated marketing approach," said Peggy Miller, a lobbyist with the Consumer Federation of America.

She said that while computers have made it easier for creditors to solicit business through the mail, the nitty-gritty financial terms have remained "too complicated and easily misinterpreted" for the average person.

Ms. Miller cited a poll conducted by credit card giant MasterCard International four years ago. It found, among other things, that of 373 cardholders surveyed nationwide, only 27 percent were aware they had an annual fee and a scant 17 percent knew the rate of interest they were paying.

Consumer groups say more legislation is needed to give plastic-happy consumers a fairer shake in the expanding credit world, particularly in the area of interest rates, which have remained historically high.

"We're pushing for an outright (rate) cap tied to the prime rate," said Ms. Miller.

Heady said 100 Highest Yield's survey of the nation's 100 largest banks and thrifts found the average rate on cards such as MasterCard or Visa was 18.19 percent, compared with an average 18.81 percent three years ago.

Financial institutions have defended their rates as necessary to cover high operating costs and fraud.

MHCC

In other business, Elvia Hernandez, executive director of the chamber, reported that efforts to obtain a Jungle Jim franchise are continuing, and that Dave Pickus, vice president of the San Antonio-based company will meet with MHCC officers in February.

Members hope the franchise, an indoor children's playground, would be both a source of funding for the chamber and offer a much-needed service to the City of Midland.

Midland Chamber of Commerce official Mike Strotheide, assistant manager of the economic development department, was guest speaker at Tuesday's meeting. He told members that the department, its small business development program and export assistance center are available to anyone wanting to start a business or see an established business grow.

Members also recognized the 10 students who will be participating in the Lorenzo de Zavala legislative program. From Lee High, the five are Patrick Carrasco, Michael Castillo, Becky Duran, Abel Rodriguez and David Sotelo. From Midland High, the students are Lori Bonilla, Melissa Castaneda, Evelina Montez, Angela Nunez and Elisa Valdez. The 10 will be accompanied by Jane Carrens of Lee High and Patti Smith from Midland High.

The program, for Hispanic students, is a week-long program whereby students from across the state learn about state government by forming their own judicial and legislative systems, passing laws and making judicial decisions. They stay at Southwestern University in Georgetown and are bussed to Austin for the activities, which take place July 30-Aug. 3.

DIGITAL

Some observers warned that versions of the workstation that include needed storage devices and software would cost much more. And many analysts expect Sun will follow suit in the coming months with new systems and lower prices.

Digital said the 3100 would be the first of a family of workstations using MIPS technology. The workstation runs the Ultrix operating system, Digital's version of the industry standard Unix system software.

"We're pretty bullish on what they announced," said David Burdick, an analyst with Dataquest Inc., a market research company. "We didn't expect Digital to be this aggressive price wise."

Analysts generally agreed that Digital had to make the move. During the past two years it has watched Sun steal customers of its older minicomputers.

OPEC

He said Indonesia is estimating its average price this year at $14 a barrel as part of a government policy to wean the island nation from its dependence on oil income.

Kartasasmita arrived in Caracas Monday for a five-day official visit which has included talks with Venezuelan Energy Minister Julio Cesar Gil and Venezuelan president-elect Carlos Andres Perez.

He said Indonesia supports Perez' proposal for a summit of OPEC heads of state in 1990, the year of OPEC's 30th anniversary.

The two countries are exploring technical cooperation in oil between the Indonesian state oil company Pertamina and Petroleos de Venezuela S.A. and increasing bilateral trade in non-oil goods.

Kartasasmita plans to visit OPEC member Ecuador and independent producers Colombia and Mexico following his scheduled Friday departure from Venezuela.

Perez, who will be inaugurated Feb. 2, is scheduled to visit Iran, Iraq and United Arab Emirates next week to drum up support for an OPEC summit.

Regulator: Lots of money rat-holed away

By THOMAS C. HAYES
New York Times News Service

DALLAS — Federal regulators examining documentation for thousands of multimillion-dollar loans now in default at insolvent savings institutions are finding that fraud was more widespread than had been thought.

While fraud in all its forms is still a distant second to the collapse of the real estate market in the South and Southwest as the major cause of the savings industry crisis, in some ways it is the most egregious because it glaringly illustrates the weakness of past attempts at supervision.

"I have stopped predicting the extent of the fraud," said Marvin Collins, the United States attorney in Dallas. "It is greater than I expected."

Frederick D. Wolf, a director of the General Accounting Office's accounting and financial management division, added that "some of the deals were fraudulent; some were wildly optimistic." For countless real estate projects financed by savings institutions, he said, "the economic value just isn't there."

Federal officials now attribute much of the overbuilding in real estate to a euphoria, especially in Texas, that was fed by fast deals, fast profits, and a far-too-lax regulatory system right after Congress broadened the institutions' lending powers in 1982.

Such an era proved attractive for bank-fraud artists who profited from kickbacks on loans they should not have made or who booked loans based on their own false information.

Then, too, federal investigators are looking into evidence that suggests the existence of a band of savings and loan owners and executives who made multimillion-dollar loans to each other's institutions, each time at a value inflated with the help of false appraisals.

Lately, Collins said, there have been discoveries of another version of fraud: the falsification of net worth statements by executives of some shaky institutions that regulators would otherwise classify as insolvent.

Putting a hard figure on the cost of fraud to the savings industry's insurance fund and ultimately to the government is not possible, regulators say.

Detecting fraud can take months, if not years, and even then fraud is difficult to prove in court.

One estimate of fraud in the savings industry crisis was recently published by The Dallas Morning News.

While not assessing the actual cost of fraud itself, it said that losses of more than $10 billion were piled up among 50 savings units and banks, mainly in the South and Southwest, that engaged in possibly fraudulent lending practices. That $10 billion is roughly 20 percent of the total estimated losses that must be covered at savings institutions in the South and Southwest.

Regulators and law enforcement officials say the documents they have examined indicate fraud was present in dozens of institutions in the Southwest. Dozens of former lenders in the Southwest have been investigated by a Justice Department task force in one of the largest campaigns against white-collar crime ever mounted by the government.

The effort thus far has accused more than 20 individuals. People familiar with the investigations said privately that they expected some grand-jury indictments soon against former leaders of some of the least solvent savings units in Texas.

Many individuals under investigation were removed from their institutions by regulators by the end of 1986. Many others under investigation are developers who were heavy borrowers from the same institutions.

> "Some of the deals were fraudulent; some were wildly optimistic." For countless real estate projects financed by many Southwestern savings institutions, "the economic value just isn't there."
> Frederick D. Wolf, director, General Accounting Office accounting & financial management division

All the same, "a lot of money got put into people's pockets and they've rat-holed it somewhere," said H. Joe Selby, former chief regulator for the Federal Home Loan Bank of Dallas. "Some of it is in artwork, fancy homes, fancy airplanes, and Rolls-Royces. Some of it went to Rolex watches, lizard shoes, hunting parties, and yachts."

"It burns me up," he said.

As Congress prepares to consider the extent of the savings industry crisis and how much must come from the Treasury to ease the problem, some analysts think taxpayers will be asked to pay half of what they estimate will be a $100 billion final total, or perhaps $50 billion or more over several years. The Reagan administration, in its budget for the fiscal year 1990, outlined plans on Monday to spend a total of $64 billion for the FSLIC from 1989 through 1994.

The biggest reason for the high bailout cost is visible in the gleaming new skylines and partly vacant offices, apartments, and retail centers along the highways of cities like Phoenix, Dallas, and Houston. Thousands of these projects, which were financed by savings institutions across the nation, are generating far too little in cash payments to meet their obligations.

Congress set the stage for the lending binge in 1982 by removing the ceilings on interest rates that savings institutions were permitted to pay on deposits. Paying the higher rates squeezed the industry's profits; it forced savings executives to scramble to find higher-yielding loans.

Many institutions were acquired or started by real estate developers who eagerly exploited new rules approved by Congress that permitted savings operators to invest in complex multimillion-dollar commercial loans.

Growth in deposits and assets surged for many institutions. For instance, in the four years after 1982, Sunbelt Savings, in Dallas, soared to $3.4 billion in assets, from $589 million. Vernon Savings' assets increased to $1.3 billion, from $121 million, in the same period.

The Federal Home Loan Bank later accused Vernon's former owner, Don R. Dixon, of "wildly unsafe and unsound" lending practices before it forced him to leave the institution early in 1987. Dixon and other officers were also charged with taking at least $40 million from Vernon through unwarranted bonuses, illegal dividends, and other unlawful payments. Dixon, who now lives in California, is fighting the lawsuit.

Other regulatory changes approved by Congress included an increase in the industry's ability to lend. It pared the minimum-capital requirement from $5 to $3 for every $100 in loans. At the same time, commercial banks had to have $6 of capital for every $100 of loans on their books. Then, too, accounting standards were eased, enabling hundreds of institutions to show profits and net worth when they would have been considered insolvent under normal rules.

The effect was to give operators of savings institutions a free hand in gambling with government-backed deposits. If their projects succeeded, they would reap huge profits as well as huge fees. If they lost big, and the industry's insurance fund was wiped out, taxpayers would be forced to help pick up the tab.

At the time, the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, which governs the nation's savings institutions, was limited to 600 examiners for 3,100 institutions. Most examiners were young, underpaid, and ill equipped to police the fast-growing industry. Despite the untested waters into which the savings industry was moving, the Reagan administration repeatedly turned down requests by the bank board for a sharp increase in the number of loan examiners on its national staff.

Asked who is responsible for the industry's staggering problems, M. Danny Wall, chairman of the bank board, said through a spokesman: "There's plenty of blame to go around."

Backed by federal deposit insurance and willing to offer the highest interest rates, operators of Texas savings institutions attracted deposits from around the nation in the early 1980s. They were eager to do so because lending opportunities abounded. Oil prices remained above $25 a barrel through 1985, high enough to support an active drilling industry. During that period, the Texas economy grew faster than that of any other region.

But the folly of four years of wildly optimistic construction spending became apparent in 1986 as vacancy rates soared. Crude-oil prices collapsed, leaving the oil industry in far worse shape than expected. Rents and real estate values plummeted.

The resulting maelstrom of foreclosures capsized not only hundreds of savings units but also forced mergers or federal rescues among most major bank holding companies in the Southwest.

Under a plan being contemplated by the Treasury, tax dollars would be combined with insurance premiums paid by the industry to shore up the ailing institutions that still hold the loans made to build thousands of these now unprofitable developments. In a typical case, the property for a $1 million loan in 1983 to an apartment developer in Fort Worth might be worth only $600,000 today.

Reasons for the $400,000 decline could vary. One might be that the property has several vacant units on which no rent is paid. Another might be that most units are rented but average monthly rates declined below the level to keep loan payments current. Or, the developer might never have completed the project.

Lawyers for nearly all financial institutions in Houston and Dallas are locked in slow-moving negotiations with the FSLIC, borrowers, and suppliers over how to settle huge losses. The legal logjam has made it difficult for sellers to market billions worth of foreclosed property, even at auction prices.

Also, a crackdown by loan examiners against fresh lending by savings institutions on real estate dried up local financing available for bidders on land and real estate in Texas, brokers and lawyers said.

"People who have to sell can't find buyers," said John J. Kendrick, a lawyer in Dallas who specializes in financial institutions. These factors have further depressed the values of most properties, including apartments and single-family homes, held by financial institutions in the Southwest.

QUOTA

General Motors Corp. called the quotas "irrelevant" in a market where Japanese makers have consistently shipped fewer cars than the number allowed by their government.

"The extension .. is almost symbolic," GM said. "The (quotas) are not constraining shipments from Japan and are not expected to under current market conditions."

Japan's minister of international trade and industry, Hiroshi Mitsuzuka, said Tuesday in Tokyo that Japan would continue to limit car exports to the United States to 2.3 million vehicles annually and predicted shipments in fiscal year ending next March would fall 100,000 vehicles short of the quota.

He said the decision to continue the voluntary restraints was taken out of concern that uninhibited car exports would trigger protectionist sentiment in the United States.

Japan unilaterally adopted the quotas in 1981 as a way to dampen calls for legal restrictions on imports of Asian cars.

The action came amid a deep depression in the U.S. auto industry, high gasoline prices that steered car buyers from Detroit's larger products to more fuel efficient smaller cars, and a strong dollar.

The auto industry has since recovered its strength, in part through adopting Japanese-style production methods. And as gasoline prices have dropped the public's taste has swung back toward larger vehicles made by Detroit.

Also, the dollar has been sharply devalued against the yen, forcing Japanese automakers to raise dollar prices to cover their production and shipping costs.

The shifting marketplace has altered the nature of the quotas from a policy that protects U.S. makers to one that increases their competition, said David Healy, automotive analyst with the New York brokerage house of Drexel, Burnham Lambert.

"The Japanese, being smart businessmen, have gotten around the quotas in many ways," he said. "One is to build more cars in the United States, more domestic competition."

Another is to ship more expensive cars to the United States, since the quotas are based on the number of vehicles, not their dollar value, Healy said.

The Japanese announcement did little to appease the chairman of the House Energy and Commerce Committee, Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., who said the quota "fixes the number so high it really doesn't matter."

The United Auto Workers union praised the Japanese decision while expressing disappointment that the quotas had not been made more stringent.

a menu FOR EFFORTLESS ENTERTAINING

Some say entertaining is an art. But anyone can entertain effortlessly with a simple, yet elegant menu that requires little advance preparation and only a few last-minute details.

This holiday season, promise to entertain more frequently – and with greater ease – by streamlining your party plans and serving a few carefully chosen recipes.

A beef roast is always a good choice for entertaining. Almost everyone enjoys the flavor of a roast, and once it is oven-ready, there is little for the cook to do. A beef rib eye roast, rubbed with a blend of garlic and herbs, and cooked the way you like it, is especially festive. Serve the beef with an easy, flavorful Madeira sauce and golden oven-roasted potatoes. The sauce can be prepared while the roast stands for carving, and the partially cooked potatoes brown right alongside the roast.

Crumb-topped asparagus is an easy party dish for all seasons. The rich, nutty flavor of toasted almonds, combined with Parmesan, dill and lemon juice complements the thick, juicy tips and stems of Michigan asparagus. The canned or frozen asparagus takes only minutes to cook and is nice to have on hand for spur-of-the-moment entertaining.

For dessert, serve Cherry Cheese Tart, an impressive finale that is surprisingly simple to prepare. The rich crumb crust is accented with crunchy toasted almonds and a hint of cinnamon. The sparkling topping combines ready-to-use tart cherry pie filling with kirsch or a favorite fruit liqueur. Orange peel and almond extract flavor the cream cheese filling. For a relaxed party day, the dessert can be made a day in advance.

To round out the menu, select a seasonal salad, such as Tossed Romaine with Vinaigrette, pick up some rolls from the bakery and embellish the after-dinner coffee with cinnamon.

Now wasn't that easy? This winter, have fun – and entertain more frequently, artfully and effortlessly.

TIMETABLE

The day before the party

- Prepare Cherry Cheese Tart.
- Prepare Almond Parmesan Crumbs for Asparagus.
- Set the table and organize the serving dishes.
- Purchase a centerpiece and/or use holiday candles and pine boughs.

The day of the party

- Pick up rolls from the bakery.
- Clean lettuce for salad and prepare vinaigrette.
- Chop shallots and measure ingredients for Madeira Sauce.
- Prepare the garlic-herb mixture and rub evenly over roast. Refrigerate until ready to start cooking.
- Peel potatoes; microwave, drain and cool until ready to oil and place around roast.
- Put your feet up and relax a few minutes before your guests arrive.

MENU

Tossed Romaine with Vinaigrette
*Beef Rib Eye Roast with Madeira Sauce
*Oven Roasted Potatoes
*Asparagus with Almond Parmesan Crumbs
Bakery Rolls and Butter
*Cherry Cheese Tart
Cinnamon Coffee

*Recipe Provided

Cherry Cheese Tart

1-1/3 cups flour
1/4 cup packed brown sugar
1/4 teaspoon ground cinnamon
1/3 cup butter, softened
1/2 cup chopped toasted almonds, divided
1 package (8 ounces) cream cheese, softened
1/2 cup powdered sugar
1/2 teaspoon grated orange peel
1/4 teaspoon almond extract
1 tablespoon kirsch or fruit-flavored liqueur
2 teaspoons cornstarch
1 can (21 ounces) tart cherry pie filling
Lightly sweetened whipped cream, if desired

Preheat oven to 350°F. Combine flour, brown sugar and cinnamon in small bowl. With pastry blender or 2 knives, cut in butter until mixture resembles cornmeal. Stir 6 tablespoons almonds into flour mixture. Press into bottom of 8-1/2-inch springform pan. Bake 20 to 25 minutes or until golden brown; cool. Beat together cream cheese, powdered sugar, orange peel and almond extract in large bowl; set aside. Blend liqueur and cornstarch until dissolved in medium saucepan; stir in tart cherry pie filling. Bring cherry mixture to a boil over medium heat, stirring until thickened. Cool slightly. Spread cream cheese mixture on top of cooled crust; top with cherry mixture. Sprinkle with remaining chopped almonds; chill. To serve, cut Cherry Cheese Tart into wedges and top with whipped cream, if desired. Makes 8 servings.

ALMOND TOASTING INSTRUCTIONS

- Conventional Oven: Spread sliced or chopped almonds in a single layer in shallow pan. Place in cold oven; toast at 350°F, 9 to 11 minutes, stirring occasionally, until golden brown.
- Microwave Oven: Spread sliced or chopped almonds in a single layer on microwave-safe plate. Microwave on HIGH power, 3 minutes, stirring halfway through. Cool plate on counter.

Asparagus with Almond Parmesan Crumbs

3 tablespoons butter, divided
1/2 cup fresh bread crumbs
1 clove garlic, minced
1/2 teaspoon dill weed
1/2 cup sliced natural almonds, toasted
1/4 cup grated Parmesan cheese
2 cans (about 15 ounces each) Michigan asparagus cuts and tips*
1 tablespoon fresh lemon juice

Melt 2 tablespoons butter in frying pan over medium heat. Stir in bread crumbs, garlic and dill weed; cook and stir until crumbs are golden brown. Remove from heat; stir in almonds and Parmesan cheese. Set aside. Cook asparagus as label directs; drain. Toss with remaining butter and lemon juice to coat thoroughly. Spoon asparagus into serving dish and toss gently with crumb mixture before serving. Makes 8 servings.

*Two boxes (10-1/2 ounces each) frozen Michigan asparagus cuts and tips may be substituted for canned Michigan asparagus.

Beef Rib Eye Roast with Madeira Sauce and Oven Roasted Potatoes

2 cloves garlic, minced
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon each cracked black pepper and dried thyme leaves
1/2 teaspoon dried tarragon leaves
4-pound beef rib eye roast
8 medium potatoes, peeled and cut in half diagonally
1/4 cup water
3 tablespoons vegetable oil
1/4 cup finely chopped shallots
1 cup single strength beef broth
1/2 cup Madeira wine
1 tablespoon tomato paste
Italian parsley sprigs, if desired

Press garlic and salt together with a French knife to form a paste. Combine paste with pepper, thyme and tarragon; rub evenly over surface of beef rib eye roast. Place roast, fat side up, on rack in open roasting pan. Insert meat thermometer so bulb is centered in the thickest part but not resting in fat. Do not add water. Do not cover. Roast in 350°F oven to desired degree of doneness. Allow approximately 18 to 24 minutes per pound. Meanwhile, place potatoes and water in 2-quart, microwave-safe casserole. Cover and microwave on HIGH power, 15 to 16 minutes, until almost tender, rearranging after 8 minutes. Drain. Brush potatoes with oil; add to roasting pan during last 35 to 40 minutes of cooking time. Remove roast when meat thermometer registers 135°F for rare; 155°F for medium; 165°F for well done. Remove potatoes and keep warm. Allow roast to stand 15 to 20 minutes in a warm place before carving. Roast will continue to rise about 5°F in temperature to reach 140°F for rare; 160°F for medium; 170°F for well done. To make sauce, skim fat from roasting pan. Add shallots; cook and stir over medium heat 2 to 3 minutes. Stir beef broth and Madeira into roasting pan. Stir until all meat juices attached to pan are dissolved. Add tomato paste; mix well. Increase heat to medium-high; continue cooking until liquid is reduced to 3/4 cup. Serve roast with sauce and potatoes. Garnish with Italian parsley, if desired. Makes 3/4 cup sauce and 8 servings of potatoes.

Cooking teaches patience, motor skills to children

By CANDY SAGON

DALLAS (AP) — Kids and cooking go together like pots and pans. If you have any doubts, just ask Ellen McDowell, owner of The Cooking School, who helps teach 100 eager youngsters a week to make everything from apple crisp to quick pizza to bran muffins.

"They're very enthusiastic and the boys love it as much as the girls, sometimes more so," says McDowell, whose 3-year-old daughter, Emily, attends weekly classes.

Parents who bring their children to these classes say they do it because the children enjoy themselves and learn new skills (in addition to providing Mom and Dad a mealtime helper).

Of the 402 boys and girls ages 6 to 12 surveyed, 77 percent said they liked to cook and 52 percent said they did it for the personal satisfaction.

About 40 percent of the youngsters surveyed in 10 cities, including Houston, cited the excitement of preparation — actually mixing ingredients and stirring the food — as the part they liked best, with only a third mentioning the fun of eating the end result.

And the person they most like to cook for? "Mom," said 41 percent, "because she deserves it," "because I love her" and "because she's not a picky eater," many of them explained.

At a recent class, Margaret Minshall, 3½, explains that she cooks at home with her mother "a lot," and that cakes are her favorite thing to make.

Of the five 3-year-olds and one 4-year-old in Margaret's class, four have taken cooking classes before, including two enthusiastic boys who expertly slice their apples to make a crunchy oatmeal-topped apple crisp.

Teacher Laura Hickey says the classes are so involving and "hands-on," that it's not difficult to hold the attention of even fidgety 3- and 4-year-olds.

"Boys especially seem to love the physical aspects of cooking. They love cutting and rolling and they love to get messy," she says with a laugh.

The children learn how to level off measuring spoons of baking powder by "ice skating" their fingers across the surface, and how to pack brown sugar by pressing a cupful against the side of the bowl.

Hickey also shows them how to juice a lemon with juicer. "Push down, squeeze and turn," she instructs, and the children dutifully repeat the instructions as they take turns using the juicer.

Once the apples are sliced and drizzled with lemon juice, each child scoops up oatmeal, mashes butter, and sprinkles in the "cimmanin" to make the sweet topping.

AFTER THE dish is put in the oven, the children take a juice break, color their recipe sheets and play with kitchen toys.

By the time the others have arrived, the apple crisp is done and ready to be taken home and eaten.

"Cooking is an activity the whole family can do together. It teaches children how to follow directions and to realize that they have to wait for results," says Howard Solganik, newspaper food columnist and spokesman for Gold Medal's Alpha-Bakery children's cooking program.

The Dayton, Ohio, father of two says he often cooks with is 3½-year-old daughter and 1½-year-old son.

"As soon as a kid can stand, he can help cook. My 1½ year old can stir and dump in flour," he notes.

Solganik says a favorite time for the family to cook is after dinner, when a quick, simple recipe can produce a treat like Elephant Ear cookies for dessert.

"It's my daughter's favorite recipe because it produces four cookies, one for each member of the family," he says.

Gold Medal has produced an attractive 60-page "Alpha-Bakery Children's Cookbook," that features easy recipes for each letter of the alphabet.

The cookbook can be ordered by sending $1 to cover postage and handling to: Alpha-Bakery Children's Cookbook, Gold Medal Flour, P.O. Box 5401 (DTH), Dept. 849, Minneapolis, Minn. 55460.

APPLE CRISP

3 cups apples, cored and sliced
1 teaspoon lemon juice
1 cup sugar
2 teaspoons cinnamon
¾ cup brown sugar
¾ cup oatmeal
⅓ cup flour
⅓ cup butter
1 teaspoon baking powder
¼ teaspoon baking soda

Place sliced apples in a greased shallow 9-inch square pan and sprinkle slices with lemon juice.

Cover with sugar and then sprinkle with cinnamon.

Mix together brown sugar, oatmeal, baking powder and soda in mixing bowl.

Add butter and cut into dry ingredients, using two knivees until mixture is crumbly.

ELEPHANT EARS

This is a fun recipe for children to make because it involves so many different skills, such as using a rolling pin, patting and pinching the dough, and "Painting" on melted butter with a brush.

¼ cup margarine or butter
1 cup all-purpose flour
2 tablespoons sugar
½ teaspoon baking powder
⅛ teaspoon salt
⅛ cup milk
3 tablespoons sugar
1 teaspoon ground cinnamon
Sugar

Heat oven to 425 degrees. Grease a cookie sheet with shortening.

Heat margarine until melted; set aside.

Roll dough with a rolling pin or pat with hands into a rectangle, 9x5-inches.

Pinch edge of dough into roll to seal. Cut into four equal pieces with a sharp knife.

Place cut sides up on cookie sheet; pat each into a 6 inch cricle. Sprinkle with more sugar.

Bake until golden brown, 8 to 10 minutes.

DELICIOUS DRUMSTICKS

⅓ cup all-purpose flour
1 teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon paprika
¼ teaspoon pepper
6 chicken drumsticks (about 1½ pounds)
¼ cup margarine or butter, melted and cooled

Heat oven to 425 degrees.

Mix flour, salt, paprika and pepper in a bowl.

Arrange in an ungreased square pan, 8x8x2 inches.

Bake uncovered until done, about 50 minutes.

Resealable packaging keeps various foods 'under wraps'

NORTHBROOK, Ill. (AP) — To help keep packaged food fresh after opening, Americans spend close to a billion dollars a year on film and foil for wrapping edibles, according to grocery trade sources.

Now, food manufacturers using resealable packaging are eliminating the need for wraps. The packaging technology features a zippered closure for easy food removal and resealing by consumers, according to Zip-Pak Inc.

This food protection method is available on selected brands of cereal, natural cheeses, potato chips, hot dogs and sausages.

Sugar: Expert opinions differ in sweet controversy

By CHARLES BRITTON
Copley News Service

Sugar and slavery go hand in hand. The cane originated in New Guinea, where it was cultivated as early as 8000 B.C., but sugar first entered the European consciousness in medieval times.

On Middle Eastern plantations, crusaders found forced labor cutting cane and boiling down the juice.

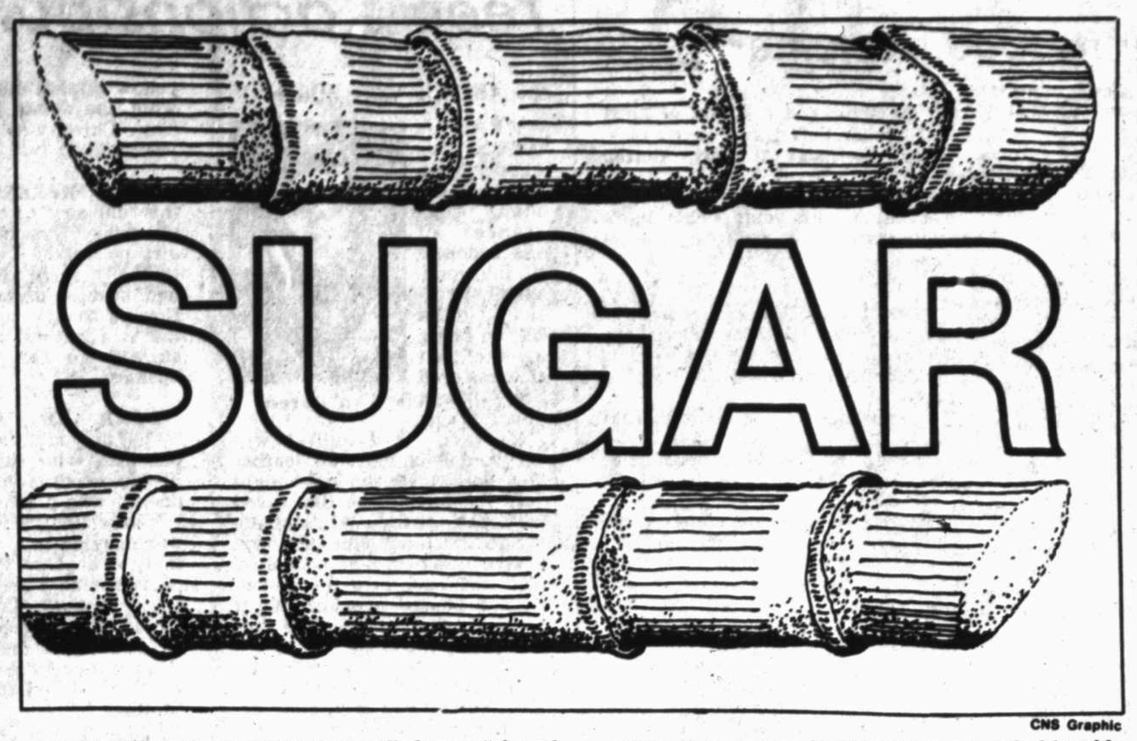

They carried the crop and the slaves to Sicily and southern Spain. By the 15th century, the same pattern had repeated itself in the Atlantic, on the Portuguese islands of Madeira and Sao Tome.

Sugarcane arrived in the New World as soon as Columbus could carry it here. He brought cuttings on his second voyage; the crop prospered as never before, and so did the slave trade.

Historians calculate that two-thirds of the 20 million Africans forced to the Western Hemisphere worked in the sugar fields of the Caribbean and South America. Social critics continue to complain that the condition of cane field workers since emancipation has not been a great deal better.

In the United States today, the association of sugar and slavery has taken a different turn. Nutritionists charge that it is the American consumers who have become the slaves of their taste for sweetness.

Standard U.S. government data give annual sugar production as 149.7 pounds per American. This includes all common sources of concentrated sweeteners, mostly glucose and fructose, such as white sugar, brown and the so-called raw sugar, molasses, corn syrup and honey. Even if you deduct some for waste, that's still a massive sugar habit.

CNS Graphic

THE TYPICAL adult derives some 24 percent of his daily calories from sugar, about 600 a day, or 219,000 a year.

According to some estimates, adolescents may work their way through 274 pounds a year, or three-fourths of a pound a day, or around 1⅓ cups.

The American appetite for sugar seems invincible. The sharp price increases of the mid-1970s caused only a trifling drop in consumption, and the advent of non-caloric sweeteners hasn't caused much of a dent, either.

"What seems to be happening is that the non-caloric sweeteners support our appetite for sweet things," said Audrey Cross, associate clinical professor at the Columbia University School of Public Health and a former special assistant to the U.S. secretary of agriculture for nutrition policy.

Nutritionists — from mainstream spokesmen for moderation to the most fervent diet evangelists hurling anathemas at the sweet stuff — agree that Americans eat far too much sugar.

The indictment against sweets rests on two well-established charges:

- Sugar promotes tooth decay.
- Sugar is scarcely more than "empty calories," providing next to no food value.

This bill of particulars fails to satisfy fervent dietary reformers, who make sweeping accusations linking sugar to every known disease. Proof, however, is another matter.

"Scientific literature does not support any relation between sugar and disease, except tooth decay," said Wayne R. Bidlack, associate professor at the University of Southern California School of Medicine and an authority on the foodstuff.

Even the link to tooth decay may be less firm than it used to seem.

Stephen J. Moss, chairman of pediatric dentistry at New York University, told a recent meeting of the American Dental Association that candy and soft drinks are no worse on this score than many other foods. Licorice and chocolate may have an anti-cavity effect, he said.

BECAUSE SUGAR could be classified as an "abused substance," it's easy to overlook the fact that it does have good qualities.

The case for the defense might cite these factors:

- Sugar brings out the flavor of most foods. This is one reason that Americans eat so much — it often appears in prepared foods where you might not look for it, such as salad dressings and condiments.
- Sugar is a good preservative, a role not limited to jams and jellies. Add a little sugar to bread, as bakers often do, and the loaf won't dry out as fast.
- Sugar brings delight and variety to our diet. Puritans may frown, but pleasure is a good thing in itself; treats have a place in a balanced life.

The trick is to keep pleasure from turning into vice. For most people, sweets offer a constant temptation to gain weight, and that can contribute to many health problems.

Further, since sugar has negligible food value, a diet high in this product may well provide poor overall nutrition.

Our bodies do not seem adapted to dealing with doses of pure sugar. Among other effects, a jolt of sugar will raise the triglyceride level of the blood, a factor that especially concerns heart patients.

Most people, however, seem to take sugar metabolism in stride. A minority experiences major difficulties.

THE MOST serious condition is diabetes mellitus, characterized by excess sugar in the bloodstream; this disease carries a number of grave complications, including blindness and circulatory damage. Diabetics need close medical attention.

But sugar does not cause diabetes, despite frequent attempts to prove that it does. It may contribute indirectly, Bidlack said, because excess sugar consumption can cause obesity, which in turn can open the way to the onset of diabetes. The same holds true for excess consumption of calories in any form.

In the much rarer condition of hypoglycemia, the metabolism overdoes the management of sugar, and the blood ends up with too little.

About 15 years ago, hypoglycemia was a fashionable disease. "Millions of Americans suffer from hypoglycemia without even knowing it!" proclaimed health guru Carlton Fredericks from the cover of his best seller on the subject.

Symptoms included headaches, anxiety and indecisiveness and, not surprisingly, Fredericks knew just the vitamins and health foods to correct these miseries.

In reality, hypoglycemia is impossible to diagnose without an elaborate blood test, and most people have gone on to worry about something else.

Many advocates of "natural foods" preach against white sugar, Bidlack noted, using the following reasoning: White sugar is 99.8 percent pure sucrose; therefore, it has no nutritional value; therefore, it is toxic.

The first two steps are quite true. The last is dubious at best, and it misleads believers into preferring other products, such as the supposedly more natural honey, that offer no real advantage.

"If you look across the board — sucrose, molasses, brown sugar, honey — all are sugar," Bidlack said. "If you're talking about normal consumption, you won't gain a whole lot from any of them. People should choose on the basis of flavor and individual preference."

WHITE SUGAR consists almost entirely of the disaccharide sucrose, made of joined molecules of the more fundamental sugars, fructose and glucose.

Molasses, the residue from the refining process, contains more nutrients than other products, but it is still not a very good source of nutrition; the acrid blackstrap molasses has the most food value, if you can stand it.

Pure fructose — which is sweeter than regular sugar — often is called "fruit sugar," but it is refined from corn.

From a nutritional standpoint, none of these alternatives to white sugar offers a bargain. Turbinado sugar, for example, sells for about three times the price of regular white sugar. The consumer would be better off buying the regular product and investing the difference in fresh fruit and vegetables.

Ironically, all sugars, indeed all carbohydrates, end up in the same way: as glucose in the bloodstream. Harold McGee, author of "On Food and Cooking," describes glucose as "the body's preferred fuel, carried through the blood to all cells of the body."

For the average American today, the trouble is that technology, abetted by personal preference, delivers sugar in unlimited amounts at prices anyone can afford.

It was not always so. Human beings seem to have an innate sweet tooth, but for centuries Europeans could satisfy it only with an occasional taste of honey. The ancient Greeks and Romans knew little about sugar, and during the Middle Ages it appeared first as a drug and then as a condiment on the tables of the rich.

CONSUMPTION STARTED to rise rapidly with the opening of rich sugar plantations on Atlantic and Caribbean islands.

The peoples of Northern Europe and their descendants have cultivated the most powerful taste for sweets, and the British and Scandinavians have long been among the most avid sugar eaters.

The French and Mediterranean peoples consume less, perhaps because sugar does not go well with their dry table wines. Poverty has prevented much of the rest of the world from cultivating a sweet tooth, but in China, for example, consumption is growing.

The history of sugar passed its greatest milestone at the start of the 19th century.

As Napoleon dominated Europe, the British blockaded Continental ports, keeping Caribbean sugar from consumers. It had long been recognized that a common variety of beet contains as much sucrose as cane, so the emperor offered a prize for a practical extraction method.

In 1812, Napoleon pinned a medal on Benjamin Delessert for producing beet sugar; in 1813, 300 such factories opened.

Virtually overnight, sugar passed from the status of an imported luxury to a common staple. The great era of the pastry cook began, and most of the cakes and pies we know today were created.

Beet sugar now accounts for 40 percent of world production. Nothwithstanding popular opinion, there's no difference between cane and beet sugar either in cooking or eating.

TODAY, SUGAR is more denounced and more consumed than ever before. The national passion for sweets has kept pace with health consciousness in what has been called the "workout, pig-out" syndrome.

Most consumers go straight to the treats without bothering to exercise first, and in so doing, they are most likely to reach for a soft drink. Such beverages represent the greatest single source of sugar in the American diet. Some brands contain as much as 3 tablespoons per bottle, and in 1985, sodas became our leading national beverage, surpassing even water.

Breakfast food manufacturers inject more sugar into the American diet. Many brands list sweeteners as the first or second ingredient, and health food granolas may not be much better. These facts have been widely publicized but appear to have little effect on supermarket shelves.

Everything suggests that the dietitians — from the most sober academic to the inflamed lay evangelist — will do little to restrain our appetite. We may be slaves to sugar, but we find our bondage sweet indeed.

'Homemade' soup warm meal in a hurry

By NANCY BYAL
Associated Press

Soup is a comfort food, warming to both body and soul. Celebrate January as National Soup Month with one of these easy creamy homemade chowders. Each is ready in 10 minutes or less.

SPEEDY CLAM CHOWDER

In a saucepan cook 4 slices bacon until crisp. Drain, reserving 2 tablespoons drippings. Crumble bacon and set aside. Cook ¼ cup chopped onion in reserved drippings until tender. Stir in one 10¾-ounce can condensed cream of potato soup, one 7½-ounce can minced clams (undrained), and ½ cup milk. Simmer, uncovered, 5 minutes; stir occasionally. Stir in bacon and sprinkle with paprika. Makes 3 servings.

CAULIFLOWER CHOWDER

In a large saucepan combine one 10-ounce package frozen cauliflower and ½ cup water. Cover and cook 5 minutes or until tender. Do not drain. Cut up large pieces. Mash all the cauliflower slightly. Stir in two 11¼-ounce cans condensed green pea soup, 2 cups milk and 1 cup shredded Swiss cheese. Cook and stir until cheese is melted and soup is heated through. Makes 6 servings.

CHICKEN-CORN CHOWDER

In a large saucepan combine 3 cups hot water and 1 teaspoon instant chicken bouillon granules. Bring to boiling. Break 2 ounces noodles slightly while adding to the broth. Return to boiling; reduce heat. Cover and simmer 5 minutes. Do not drain. Stir in one 10¾-ounce can condensed cream of chicken soup, one 8¾-ounce can cream-style corn, and 2 tablespoons chopped pimiento. Bring to boiling, stirring constantly. Add one 6¾-ounce can chunk-style chicken or 1½ cups diced cooked chicken; heat through. Makes 4 servings.

SAUSAGE CHOWDER

In a large saucepan bring 1½ cups water to boiling. Add half of a 16-ounce package loose-pack frozen broccoli, cauliflower and carrots and 1 teaspoon dried Italian seasoning, crushed. Return mixture to boiling; reduce heat. Cover and simmer 5 minutes. Do not drain. Stir together 1¾ cups milk and 2 tablespoons cornstarch. Stir into vegetable mixture along with 6 brown-and-serve sausage links cut into bite-size pieces. Cook and stir until mixture is bubbly. Cook and stir 2 minutes more. Tear 2 ounces sliced process Swiss cheese into pieces; stir into chowder until melted. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Makes 3 servings.

QUICK DRESS-UPS

- Top off chowder with an extra that adds flavor and texture. For flavor, try shredded spinach, chopped tomatoes, citrus slices, fresh herbs, crumbled bacon or shredded cheese. For crunch, float crumbled bacon, oyster crackers, plain or herbed croutons, canned French fried onions, or popcorn.
- When you serve chowder in mugs, add a celery or carrot stick or green onion as a stirrer.

Turkey stew baked in oven

By NANCY BYAL
Associated Press

Ohio reader Anita Hecky came up with this recipe to use her leftover grill-smoked holiday turkey. The stew bakes in the oven to blend and mellow the flavors. Serve it in shallow bowls or rimmed plates with a scoop of hot cooked rice.

BAKED TURKEY STEW

2 stalks celery, thinly sliced
1 medium green or sweet red pepper, chopped
1 medium onion, chopped
1 clove garlic, minced
2 tablespoons margarine or butter
4 teaspoons all-purpose flour
1 tablespoon chili powder
¾ teaspoon dried thyme, crushed
¾ teaspoon dried rosemary, crushed
⅛ teaspoon ground red pepper
1 14½-ounce can stewed tomatoes
1 12-ounce can vegetable juice cocktail
1½ cups chopped cooked turkey
2 cups hot cooked rice
Salt and pepper

Cook celery, pepper, onion and garlic in hot margarine until tender. Stir in flour, chili powder, thyme, rosemary and red pepper. Add undrained tomatoes and juice cocktail. Cook and stir until bubbly. Add turkey. Transfer to 1½-quart casserole. Cover; bake in 375-degree F oven 20 minutes or until heated through. Season with salt and pepper. Serve over rice. Makes 4 servings.

Texas barbecue 'legendary'

Restaurant famous for its food, customers

By GREG FIEG PIZANO
Associated Press

ROBSTOWN, Texas — A stranger drove into a filling station — so the story goes — and stuck his head out the window to ask where he could find some of that famous Texas barbecue he had heard so much about.

The attendant wasn't sure, but a customer offered a suggestion: "Go to Howard's," he said. "That's the best place."

"Or you can go to the Texas Bar-B-Q House," said another customer. "That's really the best place."

Both withdrew their suggestions, however, when a third customer reminded them: "If you really want the best barbecue, go to Joe Cotten's."

Whether Joe Cotten's really is the best, of course, is a matter of opinion.

But there's little doubt after 40 years of serving brisket, ribs and sausage that it has come to be regarded as one of the biggest and most revered barbecue restaurants in Texas.

It's legendary even to its competitors.

Just a hole-in-the-wall beer joint when it opened in 1947, it has grown into a 15,000-square-foot, Robstown mecca for some of the most prestigious palates in the South.

Among Cotten's customers have been President Lyndon B. Johnson, Gov. Bill Clements, country-western singer Willie Nelson, rock 'n' roll star Bill Haley, former U.S. Ambassador to Great Britain Anne Armstrong, football player and businessman Roger Staubach, and many others.

CATERING CONTRACTS have come from as far away as Houston.

Not only is Cotten's parking lot full with pickups, Cadillacs and jalopies, but even helicopters alight on the U.S. 77 median in front of the building.

Powerful business people from all points clamber down just for the privilege of tasting honest-to-goodness Texas barbecue served on sheets of plain, old-fashioned butcher paper, and hearing the familiar, barking voice of rugged 63-year-old Joe Cotten himself as he asks: "Did y'all get enough to eat?"

Among those who fly in regularly are executives for the sprawling Coastal Corp. oil company in Houston, who generally have reached a consensus, company spokesman Jim Bailey said. "They feel it's the best barbecue in the state."

What makes Cotten's Cotten's are locally built, custom-made, 7-foot by 8-foot iron "pits" teeming with 1,300 pounds of corn-fed Iowa beef smoked all night long over a glowing half-cord of gnarled mesquite.

NO OTHER METHOD can produce that same, smoked flavor as far as Joe Cotten is concerned. His wood pile is as big as a corral.

Sauce is created in a bubbling, 35-gallon caldron using buckets of drippings slowly collected from the sizzling meats and mixed with more than 30 pounds of fresh tomatoes, mustard, black pepper, salt and other ingredients.

Rival Kenny Montgomery of Texas Bar-B-Q in nearby Corpus Christi calls Cotten a legend.

"I feel like Joe has built his reputation for so long it's tough to compete," said Montgomery, whose barbecue has often been favorably compared to Cotten's.

THOUGH MONTGOMERY thinks his own barbecue is best, he's not necessarily insulted to be considered — at least by some customers — to be No. 2.

After all, he's heard of people as far away as Japan talking about Cotten's as though it were a shrine or some kind of tourist attraction.

"As long as they mention me in the same breath with Joe Cotten, that's an honor," Montgomery said.

Whether Cotten's barbecue truly is better than Montgomery's or any other remains a matter of personal preference, of course.

Cotten, a powerful, broad-chested patriarchal type with tough, stubby fingers, wrists as thick as a boa constrictor and a no-funny-business gravelly voice, rules his domain with the authority of the oilfield roughneck he once was.

HIS KITCHEN is immaculate under his watchful eyes. A 35-member bucket brigade is made to go over every square inch of stainless steel and terra cotta at least twice a day with cleansers, mops and sponges.

What if once in a while there's a soap streak on a table top, a mop string in the drain or a soiled brush in the janitor's closet?

"There better not be," says Cotten in a cool but certain tone.

If an employee is as much as one minute late, he's in trouble, or "gone" as his co-workers put it.

Though he might not get fired, he might be given some "time off to think about it," Cotten said.

"It doesn't matter where we are or what we're doing, if we get in trouble Joe Cotten will come and get us out," said one worker who asked not to be identified.

COTTEN'S REPUTATION is such that a competitor once hired one of Cotten's cooks, then proceeded to advertise that the fellow, "formerly of Joe Cotten's," was now at such-and-such a place.

"People asked me whether I was going to sue them, but I said no. I don't mind them advertising my place," Cotten said.

Cotten works his dining rooms with all the charm of a man running for mayor.

"See that man over there," says Cotten, pointing to a customer. "When he came in he was all nervous and excited. Now we got him relaxed. That's what we want. We want people to be comfortable."

Cotten is reputed to know thousands of customers by name, and he makes a point to try to ask as many as possible whether they have had enough to eat.

"Bring on some more meat," Cotten will call out before they have a chance to answer.

None of his recipes are written down, but all it takes is one taste for Cotten to tell if an ingredient has been forgotten, said his son, Cecil, 28, who one day will take over the business.

He could probably detect a teaspoon of sugar in a barrel of vinegar, Cecil Cotten said.

Before moving to his present location in 1968, Cotten had been in a little place he leased on Avenue A, where he had put a small barbecue pit in a building at the rear.

"We started out with a sandwich for 30 cents, and a pound of meat was a dollar. Soft drinks were a nickel and beer was 20 cents," Cotten said.

"We didn't have any silverware. You cut it with your pocket knife and you ate it with your fingers," he said.

TODAY THERE are place settings and his waiters all wear red jackets, white shirts and black ties even if the meat is still served on butcher paper.

His cooking style is derived from primitive European traditions widely thought to have been brought to the American South by early Europeans.

The word barbecue comes from the French, who, using pits of flaming hickory, cooked animals whole, from the barbe (whiskers) to the queue (tail.)

Barbecue was the constant fare at every outdoor social gathering when he was a boy, growing up an orphan in rural Driscoll, Cotton says.

Just as their ancestors had done for generations in Europe, men used to dig pits in open fields and fill them with burning wood, Cotten recalled.

BEEF, PORK, MUTTON, goat and venison — all carefully suspended on chicken wire — was slowly cooked to perfection.

"They turned the meat with pitchforks and basted it with kitchen mops," Cotten said.

Today Cotten still uses a mop for basting, but regardless of what anyone tells you, it's the process of flavoring meat with wood smoke that is the essence of the process, and anything less just isn't barbecue, Cotten insists.

Use pine and it will ruin the meat with bitterness, Cotten said. Not even hickory can produce the sweetly delicate flavoring of mesquite, he said.

In the old days, there were no supermarkets, so grocery stores and meat markets often were seperate businesses in separate locations, Cotten said.

TO AVOID having to destroy meat when it turned off-color, meat market operators began digging barbecue pits behind their buildings to cook it and sell it for lunch sandwiches; hence the butcher paper, he said.

Cotton has four children, all of whom have worked in the restaurant at one time or another, and six grandchildren.

His wife, Charlene, said she did all the cooking at home up until about 15 years ago, then Cotten began trying his hand at chiles, Mexican food, soups, even whole turkeys at Thanksgiving.

He has become a pretty good cook.

"Boy is he," Mrs. Cotten said. "He doesn't use any recipes. He just cooks. There isn't anything he can't cook, and when he cooks everybody wants to come."

DEAR ABBY

Teen's actions pure showmanship

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I've read, seen and heard many instances of the rudeness of the younger generation, but I'd like to relate an incident that restored my faith in young adults.

My teen-age daughter was very proud of her new leather "bomber" jacket she had bought with the money she had saved from baby sitting. While standing in the lunch line, she was approached by a high school senior who had spied the jacket. He had bought one just like it for his girlfriend — and her jacket was missing.

He proceeded to question my daughter about the jacket she was wearing and eventually accused her of stealing his girlfriend's jacket. Only when my daughter was in tears in front of the packed lunchroom did the girlfriend appear WEARING her "missing" jacket.

The senior of course apologized to my daughter and went even further by having a vase of yellow flowers delivered to her while she was in her afternoon class. Chivalry is not dead! — IMPRESSED

DEAR IMPRESSED: You call this "chivalry"? I call it a grandstand play. First he humiliates a girl publicly — calling her a thief. Then on discovering he had made a mistake, he sends flowers to her classroom. This kid is a natural showman. He should go far in the P.R. business.

DEAR ABBY: A lady asked, "What do you do with a 28-year-old man who rarely showers, never washes his hair and doesn't own a toothbrush?"

You replied, "Nothing." Well, I was married to a man just like that for 40 years. He was a good provider and a gentle person in all his actions. Even though I hinted often and spoke negatively about other men who never cleaned themselves up, he never got the hint, so I also tried to do "nothing."

I slept on the far side of the bed, feigned sleep and weariness and avoided closeness whenever possible.

I know I hurt his masculine ego many, many times. Poor soul. How I wish I could have said something definite about it instead of living those 40 years in that unhappy situation, and doing so little to make him happy and satisfied.

Abby, I would have advised that lady to tell her husband to shape up or ship out. That is what I should have done 40 years ago. — TOO LATE NOW

DEAR TOO LATE: If your husband is still alive, it may not be too late. Get "Love and Sex After 60" (Harper and Row) by Dr. Robert N. Butler, former head of the National Institute on Aging (and Pulitzer Prize recipient for his book, "Why Survive: Growing Old in America"). But all the books in the world will not help you unless you look your man straight in the eye and tell him the truth: "I love you, but I can't make love with a clothespin on my nose."

ITALIAN
VEGE
1 10-ounce packa

When used simply as decoration, radicchio wasted as vegetable

By BARBARA KAFKA
New York Times News Service

It used to be that when a restaurant wanted to add bulk and a little class to an abysmal, slammed-together salad, it sliced in some red cabbage.

Well, high-priced greens are now getting the same treatment, as they are joined on the plate at fancy restaurants by the expensive, waxy, purple-red leaves of radicchio.

Is the radicchio there for taste, to flaunt classiness or simply for a change of color? Too often, it's the latter.

Recipes that call for a leaf of radicchio in the presentation are hauntingly reminiscent of the lettuce cups of yesteryear. In using radicchio this way, a really sensational vegetable is abused.

In any case, the question may not be, why radicchio, but which radicchio?

Radicchio (pronounced rad-EE-key-o) is the Italian name for a good-sized group of red chicories. These are not lettuce or cabbage, neither of which can replace radicchio's fleshy, slightly bitter chewiness.

Radicchios are named after the towns in the Veneto region of northern Italy where most are grown.

The one most popular in the United States, the dark-red ball that looks like an undernourished cabbage, is Rosso da Verona. Now, however, many other kinds are becoming available; the price is usually $3 to $7.50 a pound.

The radicchio that Italians eat most often is Treviso. It is the color of the Verona variety but its leaves are longish — sort of like gawky, adolescent endive leaves.

Like Belgian endive, Verona and Treviso radicchios are the products of a complicated cultivation.

AFTER THE first heads are grown they are cut back, leaving only a root from which a new head forms in the cold and dark of a growing shed.

In the process, endive turns white and radicchio turns dark red, its white veins standing out in gaudy splendor. If radicchio is not grown in this way, all a gardener will get for his or her troubles are long, thin, dark-green and very bitter leaves.

The second growing, called blanching, also produces a waxy leaf with a comparatively mild flavor.

Field-grown radicchios — not forced second growth — are Chioggia (key-OH-gyah) and Castelfranco. Both of these are variegated red and white.

Chioggia has a more pronounced color and more pronounced white ribs. It forms semi-oval heads that are somewhat loosely packed, while Castelfranco looks more like a soft, roundish leaf lettuce.

To confuse the issue a bit, though, Chioggia is sometimes forced in a second growth, in which case the heads become more waxy.

Other varieties of radicchio include Palla Rossa, which means red ball, Sottomarina and Chiavari (key-ah-VAH-ree), the last one grown mainly for its edible root.

All radicchios are late-season winter vegetables. They do not take freezing weather, but they do need temperatures in the low 40s to develop a really brilliant color.

Italians almost never use radicchios in a mixed salad, but savor them alone with the simplest of olive-oil dressings.

Even more often they cook radicchio, usually turning not to Verona, but to varieties like Treviso, Chioggio and Castelfranco that are milder in flavor, since the bitterness of radicchio intensifies with cooking. The tonic bitterness, however, is extremely agreeable as a contrast to rich or fatty flavors.

GRILLED RADICCHIO

1 head Treviso, Chioggia or Verona radicchio
Olive oil
Kosher salt to taste

Cut radicchio through the core into 2-inch wedges. If using Treviso or Chioggia radicchio, trim stem to ½-inch. Cut in half lengthwise through the core.

Brush cut sides of radicchio with olive oil.

GRATIN OF CHIOGGIA

2 heads Chioggia or Treviso radicchio halved lengthwise, or Verona radicchio cut into 2-inch-wide wedges
2 tablespoons unsalted butter, plus butter to coat baking dish
2 tablespoons flour
1½ cups milk
1 teaspoon kosher salt, or to taste
Freshly ground black pepper to taste
4 tablespoons freshly grated Parmesan cheese
8 very thin slices of prosciutto

If using Chioggia or Treviso radicchio, trim stalks to ½ inch.

Fill a large, deep saute pan with salted water. Bring to a boil and immediately lower to a simmer. Place radicchio in water in a single layer. Cover with a clean tea towel. Cook in barely simmering water for 30 minutes.

While radicchio is simmering, prepare a bechamel sauce. In a medium saucepan, melt 2 tablespoons butter. Stir in the flour. Cook over low heat 3 minutes, stirring constantly. Slowly whisk in the milk. Whisk over medium heat until boiling and cook 3 minutes longer. Stir in kosher salt and pepper. Remove from heat and stir in Parmesan cheese.

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Butter an 8-inch square oven dish.

Drain radicchio. (Liquid may be saved for another use.) Wrap each section in a slice of prosciutto. Arrange in a single layer in buttered pan. Pour bechamel on top, smoothing sauce into corners of pan. Bake for 15 to 18 minutes or until bubbly.

PINK BEAN SOUP WITH RADICCHIO

2½ cups water
2 heads radicchio
2½ cups liquid (veal stock, chicken stock, cooking liquid from other radicchio recipes or a combination of these)
Kosher salt to taste
Freshly ground black pepper to taste
1 medium-size potato, peeled and cut into ½-inch chunks, cooked in boiling salted water until almost done
2 teaspoons shredded fresh basil leaves
2 teaspoons fruity olive oil
Grated Parmesan cheese

Rinse beans. In a small soup pot, add beans and 2½ cups water. Bring quickly to a boil, shut off heat and cover. Allow to sit 1 hour.

Put radicchio in a saucepan and add stock. Simmer for 40 minutes, turning once. Drain, but reserve cooking liquid. Cut radicchio crosswise into half-inch strips. There should be about a cup.

Drain and rinse beans. Return to soup pot and cover with reserved cooking liquid. Simmer 1 to 1½ hours or until tender.

Stir in cooked and sliced radicchio, plus salt and pepper to taste.

Add remaining ingredients, except cheese, and reheat to boiling. Remove from heat and serve with Parmesan cheese.

BRAISED TREVISO

2 whole Treviso or Chioggia radicchio
2 tablespoons unsalted butter, cut into ¼-inch cubes
2 cups strong veal stock
Kosher salt to taste
Freshly ground black pepper to taste

Preheat oven to 300 degrees. Trim stalk of each radicchio to ½ inch. Split radicchio in half lengthwise through the stalk.

Place radicchio cut-side up in a baking dish just large enough to hold the four pieces. Tuck butter between leaves of each half.

Sprinkle with kosher salt and pepper. Pour in stock to a depth of 1½ inches. Cover tightly with aluminum foil. Cook 20 minutes.

Uncover carefully to avoid steam and turn the radicchio pieces over. Recover and cook an additional 20 minutes, or until a skewer easily pierces the stalk ends.

Vegetable mixture source of iron

By NANCY BYAL
Associated Press

Iron is one mineral that women, in particular, have trouble getting in sufficient amounts for daily needs. There's iron in red meat, but this savory vegetable mixture is a good source of iron too. You can make it even higher in iron by cooking in iron cookware. As the vegetables simmer, they actually pick up iron from the pan.

ITALIAN-SEASONED VEGETABLES

1 10-ounce package frozen chopped spinach
1 28-ounce can tomatoes, cut up
1 cup chopped green pepper
1 cup chopped onion
1 teaspoon sugar
1 teaspoon Italian seasoning, crushed
2 cloves garlic, minced
½ teaspoon salt
1 15-ounce can butter beans, drained

In a large saucepan combine spinach, tomatoes, green pepper, onion, sugar, Italian seasoning, garlic and salt. Bring to a boil; reduce heat. Simmer, uncovered, 20 to 30 minutes; stir often. Add beans; heat through. Makes 8 servings.

That standby staple — the spud — has been transformed. It's now the trendy tuber.

Dress it up or dress it down, the potato finally is enjoying the success it deserves, as a nutritious and eye-pleasing side dish or a stand-alone entree.

Take one recent full-page supermarket advertisement, which touted merits of the newest variety available, the Yukon Gold.

According to the ad, the golden yellow meat of the tuber is buttery tasting, "the richest you've ever tasted. So good you probably won't choose to add butter or even sour cream to enhance the flavor."

Well, maybe or maybe not. Our small survey of Yukon Gold tasters found opinions of the spud's supposed buttery flavor mixed. But the rich buttery color of the spud meat is enticing, so much so that restaurants are adding them to their menus.

The potato, even the standard brown or white kind, has become increasingly popular in recent years.

Long maligned as a "fat food," the potato is, in fact, just the opposite and is called a powerhouse of nutrition by the United Fresh Fruit and Vegetable Assocation.

A potato, especially one with the skin left on, provides dietary fiber, valuable minerals and vitamins, while being very low in sodium and 99.9 percent fat-free.

Believe it or not, according to the Encyclopedia Americana, the consumption of five pounds of potatoes a day, plus one quart of milk, will provide all the nutrients needed for the human diet.

IF YOU'RE NOT crazy about that steady of a potato diet, consider that one medium-size boiled, unpeeled potato has about 120 calories, 3 grams protein, 27 grams carbohydrates, a trace of fat, 16 milligrams calcium, 1 milligram iron, 22 milligrams vitamin C, and 1.6 milligrams niacin.

If a plain old potato — sans butter, sour cream, chives and bacon bits — seems a bit dry to your taste, try spritzing a baker with fresh lemon juice and a dollop of plain (low or non-fat) yogurt. For more variation, dust with grated Parmesan cheese or top with a sprinkling of toasted sesame seeds. Whip up your own low-calorie "sour cream" by blending cottage cheese with fresh lemon or lime juice until smooth.

For lower calorie french fries, an American staple, try "frying" them in the oven instead of in deep fat. Cut potatoes in strips and keep in ice water until ready to cook, then drain. Spread the strips in a single layer on a shallow pan, then sprinkle with cooking oil. Bake strips about 30 minutes at 450 degrees Fahrenheit, turning frequently, until desired degree of crispness is reached. Sprinkle with fresh lemon or lime juice for extra taste without adding salt.

Try these recipes for a fresh approach to potatoes:

POTATO OMELET
¼ cup butter or margarine
3 medium potatoes, pared and thinly sliced
Salt and pepper to taste
1 medium onion, chopped
Juice of 1 lemon
2 medium fresh tomatoes, sliced
6 eggs
½ teaspoon cinnamon
¼ teaspoon salt

Yields 4 servings.

Heat butter or margarine in large skillet. Add sliced potatoes, a few at a time, and cook until lightly browned on both sides and nearly tender. Remove from skillet and sprinkle with salt and pepper. Cook onion in same pan until golden. With slotted spoon, remove onion from skillet, place in a small bowl and sprinkle with lemon juice.

Return browned potatoes to pan. Arrange tomato slices over potatoes; spread onion mixture over all. Cover skillet and cook over low heat 10 minutes or until potatoes are tender. Beat eggs, cinnamon and ¼ teaspoon salt. Pour egg mixture over potatoes and tomatoes in skillet, cover and cook over low heat until eggs are set. Cut into wedges to serve.

VEGETABLE POTATO SALAD
3 medium potatoes, cooked and peeled
½ cup wine vinegar
¼ cup olive oil
Salt and pepper to taste
½ head cauliflower, broken into flowerettes
2 cups broccoli flowerettes
½ pound asparagus, cut into ½-inch pieces
½ cup fresh or frozen green peas, cooked
3 scallions, chopped
1 carrot, pared and shredded
8 cherry tomatoes, halved
Romaine lettuce
Chopped green pepper for garnish

Yields 6 to 8 servings.

Cut hot potatoes into chunks. Place in large bowl. Combine vinegar, oil, salt and pepper in screw-top jar; shake well. Pour over hot potatoes and toss lightly. Cover and refrigerate.

Steam cauliflower, broccoli and asparagus separately for 10 minutes or until just tender-crisp. Refrigerate to chill.

Just before serving, combine potatoes, cauliflower, broccoli, asparagus, peas, scallions, carrots and tomatoes. Toss lightly and serve on romaine lettuce leaves. Garnish with chopped green pepper.

MEXICAN POTATOES
6 potatoes, peeled
6 slices bacon, cooked and drained
4 hard-cooked eggs, coarsely chopped
3 tablespoons olive oil
1 onion, chopped
2 cups canned crushed tomatoes
1 (4-ounce) can green chili peppers, seeded and chopped
1 teaspoon chili powder
½ teaspoon cumin
Salt and pepper to taste
¼ pound Monterey Jack cheese, sliced

Yields 6 servings.

In large saucepan, cook potatoes, covered, in lightly salted water for 20 minutes or until tender. Slice in half lengthwise and place on broiler-proof serving dish cut side down. Lay bacon slices over potatoes and sprinkle with chopped hard-cooked eggs. In large, heavy skillet, heat olive oil and saute onion for 5 minutes or until tender. Add tomatoes, chili peppers, chili powder, cumin, salt and pepper. Cover; lower heat and simmer 10 minutes. Pour sauce over potatoes and cover with cheese slices. Run under broiler for 2 minutes, or until cheese melts.

POTATO STUFFING FOR ROAST TURKEY
2 pounds boiled potatoes (save water in which you boiled them)
1¼ cups chopped onions
⅓ cup butter or peanut oil
5 cups bread cubes (half white, half wheat)
¾ cup chopped parsley
¼ teaspoon garlic powder
Salt and pepper to taste
¾ teaspoon poultry seasoning

Roughly mash potatoes and add about ¾ cup of water in which you boiled them. Mix in well. Saute onions in butter or oil until lightly browned. Combine onions with bread cubes, parsley, garlic powder, salt, pepper and poultry seasoning. Add to potatoes and mix well. Stuff turkey or bake separately in buttered dish at 325 degrees for 45 to 50 minutes.

(From "The Spud Book" by James Houston Turner.)

LITTLE SHEPHERD'S PIES
1 tablespoon vegetable oil
1 small onion, chopped
½ green pepper, chopped
2 cups chopped leftover lamb or beef
Salt and pepper to taste
4 large russet potatoes, baked
2 tablespoons heavy cream
4 ounces cheddar cheese, shredded
2 tablespoons butter, melted

Yields 4 servings.

In large skillet, heat oil and saute onion and green pepper for 5 minutes. Add meat and stir-fry until hot, about 1 minute. Season to taste with salt and pepper.

Cut potatoes in half lengthwise and scoop out pulp, leaving ¼-inch shell. Place potato pulp in small bowl and mash well. Mix in cream, cheese, meat mixture, salt and pepper.

Spoon mixture into potato shells, mounding tops. Drizzle each with butter, then place shells in shallow pan and bake at degrees for about 15 minutes, or until lightly browned.

(From "Wild About Potatoes.")

POTATO PEELINGS
Potato peelings
Salt to taste
Garlic powder to taste
Oil

Pat peelings mostly dry with paper towel. In skillet, put ⅛ inch or so of oil. Peanut oil adds flavor to peelings. Heat it hot enough so a drop of water crackles when flicked in. Put only enough peelings into grease so all can be covered with oil. Cook until crisp and brown. Remove, drain and season to taste. Parmesan cheese sprinkled on top also is good. Serve hot.

(From "The Spud Book.")

BAKED POTATO SKINS
6 potatoes
¼ cup butter, melted
Coarse salt

Yields 6 servings.

Scrub potatoes and pat dry. Pierce in several places with fork. Bake potatoes at 400 degrees about 45 to 60 minutes or until tender. Cool slightly and then cut in half. Scoop out flesh, leaving ⅛- to ¼-inch shell. (Reserve flesh for recipes calling for mashed or riced potatoes.) Turn oven up to 500 degrees.

Using kitchen shears, cut shells in half and then in half again, giving you 8 sections for each potato. Brush both sides of skins with melted butter and sprinkle with coarse salt. Place on a baking sheet. Bake about 10 to 12 minutes or until crisp.

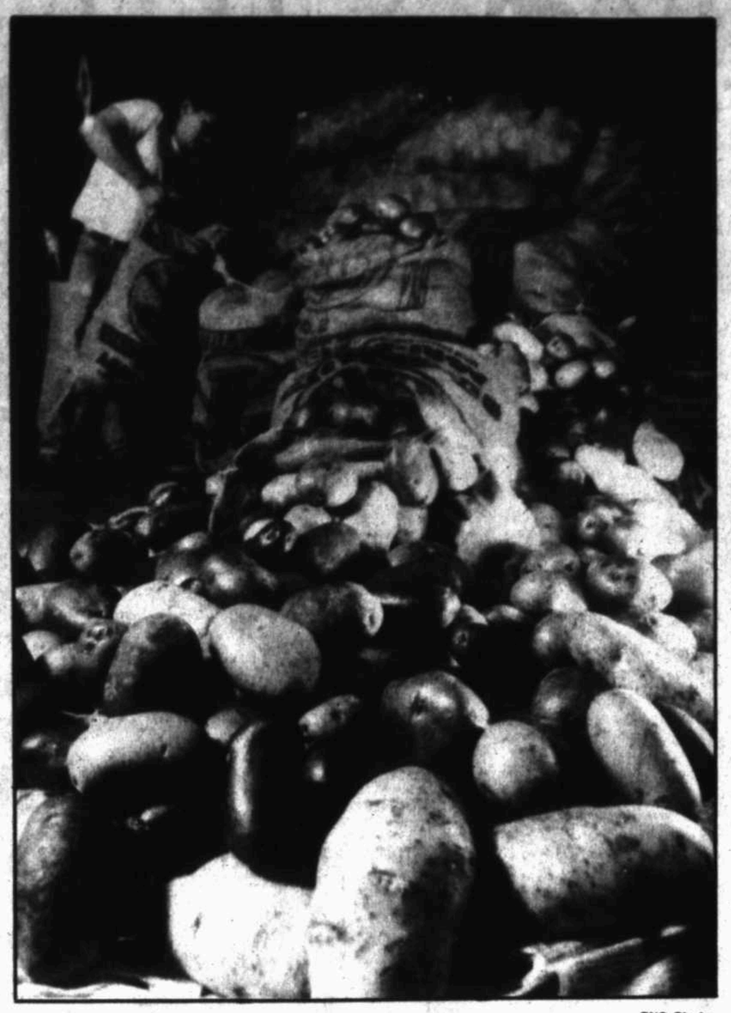

SUGGESTED SKINS TOPPINGS
Shredded cheddar cheese and crumbled bacon (just run under the broiler)
Sour cream and chives
Shredded Swiss cheese
Cottage cheese
Smoked salmon
Tuna salad
Egg salad

GARLIC DIP FOR POTATO SKINS
6 cloves garlic, finely minced
4 teaspoons Dijon-style mustard
2 egg yolks, slightly beaten
½ cup vegetable oil
¼ cup olive oil
1 tablespoon lemon juice
Salt and pepper to taste

Yields about 1¼ cups.

In small bowl, combine garlic, mustard and egg yolks and stir until well blended. Combine vegetable and olive oils and slowly add, a drop at a time at first, beating constantly. As mixture begins to thicken, add oil a little faster and beat until mixture is smooth. Add lemon juice, salt and pepper.

Once considered merely a staple, the potato is setting a food trend as nutritious side dish or hearty meal in itself.

Potatoes a top choice for microwave meals

By NANCY BYAL
Associated Press

Potatoes cook so quickly in the microwave that they've become a top choice for family meals. A whopping big 8-ounce potato cooks in the microwave in 15 minutes; that gives you time to prepare a saucy topper and have your whole-meal potatoes on the table in less than 30 minutes.

SUPER SPUDS
4 large baking potatoes (8 ounces each)
Taco Topper or Denver Tater Topper (recipes below)

Scrub potatoes; prick several times with a fork. Arrange on microwave-safe paper towels, leaving 1 inch between potatoes. Cook on 100 percent power (high) 14 to 17 minutes or until done. Halfway through cooking time, turn potatoes over and rearrange.

Prepare Topper. To serve, use two hot pads to roll potatoes gently between hands. Cut a crisscross in the top. Press ends and push up potato. Spoon topper over potato. Makes 4 main-dish servings.

TACO TOPPER: In a 1-quart microwave-safe casserole crumble ½ pound ground beef. Cook, covered, on 100 percent power (high) 2½ to 3½ minutes or until no pink remains, stirring once. Drain off fat. Stir in 1 cup taco sauce. Cook 3 to 4 minutes or until heated through, stirring once. Spoon meat mixture over potatoes. Dollop potatoes with ½ cup frozen avocado dip, thawed, and ½ cup dairy sour cream. Sprinkle with 1 medium tomato, chopped; ½ cup shredded Cheddar cheese; and ¼ cup sliced green onion. Makes 4 servings.

Nutrition information per serving: 567 cal., 21 g protein, 68 g carbohydrate, 23 g fat, 66 mg cholesterol, 767 mg sodium. U.S. RDA: 18 percent vit. A, 43 percent vit. C, 23 percent thiamine, 19 percent riboflavin, 31 percent niacin, 20 percent calcium, 28 percent iron, 43 percent phosphorous.

DENVER TATER TOPPER: In a 1-quart microwave-safe casserole combine 2 tablespoons margarine or butter, 1 small onion, sliced, and ¼ cup chopped green pepper. Cook, covered, on 100 percent power (high) 3 to 5 minutes or until tender, stirring once.

Stir in 1½ teaspoons cornstarch and dash pepper. Stir in one 7½-ounce can tomatoes, undrained. Cook, uncovered, on high 2 to 4 minutes or until slightly thickened and bubbly, stirring every minute. Add 1 cup diced fully cooked ham, ¼ cup sliced mushrooms and 1 teaspoon snipped parsley.

Cook, uncovered, on high 2 to 4 minutes or until heated through, stirring once. Spoon on top of potatoes. Sprinkle with ½ cup shredded American cheese. Makes 4 servings.

Nutrition information per serving: 424 cal., 17 g pro., 63 g carb., 13 g fat, 32 mg chol., 797 mg sodium. U.S. RDA: 16 percent vit. A., 68 percent vit. C, 37 percent thiamine, 14 percent riboflavin, 29 percent niacin, 13 percent calcium, 23 percent iron, 33 percent phosphorous.

Uncooked rice no more labor intensive to prepare than instant

By LORNA SASS
Copley News Service

The amber waves of grain that have always made America beautiful are gradually gaining the increased respect and attention of adventurous cooks.

As a result of the growing awareness of nutrition and the value of a high-fiber diet, many Americans are moving away from highly refined foodstuffs in favor of whole grains.

One has only to visit a well-stocked health food store or supermarket to recognize the wealth and variety of these attractively priced staples — barley, oats, rye, brown rice, buckwheat, millet and bulgur wheat, to name but a few.

Grains have long formed the backbone of the vegetarian diet, for they are nutritional giants.

Take the wheat berry, for example. Each whole grain of wheat contains 22 vitamins and minerals, substantial protein, and dietary fiber — in addition to the starch that is normally sold in the form of refined flour. That refined flour, however, is stripped of the bran coating and wheat germ, two components of the wheat berry that contain most of its nutritional value.

Similarly, when other whole grains are processed and refined, they are robbed of much of what makes them worth eating.

Many people avoid preparing whole grains in the mistaken notion that they are difficult and time-consuming to cook. It's certainly true that boiling a pot of buckwheat groats takes more advanced planning than preparing a portion of Minute Rice, but it's certainly no more labor-intensive.

Cooking long-grain or whole grain rice is not more labor intensive than cooking instant rice. Long grain rices are nutritional giants and are the backbone of vegetarian diets.

FOR, AS THE cooking instructions below demonstrate, it's very easy to prepare a basic batch of any whole grain. Pre-soaking whole grains overnight in water shaves at least 10 minutes and sometimes as much as 30 minutes off total cooking time, and if you happen to own a pressure cooker, you can cook grains in one-third of the normal time without any pre-soaking!

Uncooked grains should be stored in a cool place in a jar with a tight-fitting lid. Once cooked, grains may be stored in the refrigerator for two to three days — good news if you'd like to cook up a double batch and then serve the grains in a variety of ways. You will find that they add a wonderful dimension to salads, casseroles and stews.

Are you convinced? I hope so. Here are some basic cooking directions followed by a delicious recipe for putting those amber waves of grain into the limelight on your daily menu.

The following basic recipes will yield enough cooked grains to serve six. The recipes do not include salt or other seasonings (such as sliced fresh ginger, garlic or dried herbs), but you may simply cook these with the grains for a more flavorful result.

Depending upon the menu, I generally add either three thin slices of ginger, a large clove of garlic (cut in two) or ½ teaspoon of dried herbs to the cooking water. I then sprinkle on soy sauce to taste at the table. Cooked grains may also be tossed in butter, olive oil or sesame oil with delicious results.

FOR A RICHER preparation, briefly saute the grains in a few tablespoons of butter or oil until they are well coated. Then add boiling water (watch for sputtering!) and continue as directed below. If you are planning to serve the grain unadorned, it's nice to substitute vegetable stock or bouillon for all or part of the water.

Be sure to rinse grains thoroughly before cooking, removing any gravel or discolored bits. For best results, be sure to use a heavy saucepan that heats evenly and has a tight-fitting lid. If you find that your grains are still burning on the bottom of the pan, try using a flame-tamer, which distributes the heat evenly. (This is particularly helpful if you are using an electric stove.)

Note that I have given a range of cooking times for each grain, since there is always some diversity in dryness of grains, heaviness of pot and intensity of cooking heat. By the same token, the grains' cook must use judgment when it comes to adding more liquid as needed if the grain is not quite cooked and all of the liquid has already been absorbed.

If you prefer your grains nicely separated, remove the pot from the heat a few moments before all of the liquid has been absorbed. Leave the cover in place and allow the grains to steam for about 10 minutes or until done. Any excess liquid can always be drained off before serving.

BARLEY

Whole, hulled barley is the most nutritious form of this ancient grain. To prepare whole (unpearled) barley:

Soak 2 cups of barley overnight in ample water to cover. Drain.

Bring 8 cups water to boil and add barley. Cover and simmer over very low heat, adding more water as needed until barley is tender, about 45 to 60 minutes.

When barley is done, drain and, if time permits, return to pot to steam and absorb surface water. Cover pot and let sit 10 minutes off heat.

Season as desired before serving.

BROWN RICE

Long-grain brown rice is the whole unpolished grain, its color coming from an outer coating of bran. It is chewier than white rice and has a nuttier flavor. To prepare brown rice:

Bring 4 cups water to boil.

Add 2 cups washed and picked-over brown rice. Cover and simmer over very low heat until rice is tender and most of liquid is absorbed, about 30 to 45 minutes. Turn off heat and let stand, covered, for 10 more minutes.

BUCKWHEAT

Despite its name, buckwheat is not related to wheat but is a protein-rich and very flavorful fruit (whose distant cousin is rhubarb). When its outer shell or hull is removed, it is called a groat. When roasted, it is known as kasha — a fine base for pilafs and stuffings. To prepare kasha:

Toss 1½ cups of cleaned and picked-over groats with a large beaten egg. Over medium flame, stir egg-coated kasha in heavy skillet until dry and grains are separated, about 3 minutes.

Melt 2 tablespoons butter in large, heavy saucepan. Add kasha and toss to coat. Add 3 cups boiling water (watch out for spattering!), cover and cook over very low heat until kasha is soft and most of the liquid is absorbed, about 10 to 15 minutes. Turn off heat and let stand, covered, for 10 more minutes.

BULGUR

Bulgur is parboiled wheat that has been cracked into small bits, cutting down cooking time considerably. It is available in coarse, medium and fine grinds and makes a delightful breakfast cereal or rice substitute.

To prepare coarse bulgur: Heat 2 tablespoons butter or oil in heavy saucepan and stir in 1½ cups coarse bulgur. Then add 3½ cups water, cover pot and simmer over very low heat until grain is tender and most of liquid is absorbed, about 15 to 20 minutes. Turn off heat and let stand, covered, for 10 more minutes.

MILLET

Most commonly eaten in its cracked form, known as coucous, whole cooked millet can be served as a side-dish substitute for rice or in a vegetable pilaf. To prepare whole millet:

Toast 2 cups millet in heavy skillet by stirring constantly over high flame until seeds begin to make popping sound and brown slightly, about 3 minutes.

Meanwhile, bring 6 cups water to boil and add toasted millet. Simmer, covered, until most of liquid is absorbed, about 30 to 40 minutes.Turn off heat and let stand, covered, for 10 minutes.

OATS

Old-fashioned rolled oats, or oatmeal, are made by steaming and flattening whole oat groats with a roller, thus reducing cooking time dramatically. The finest method we have come across for preparing non-gummy breakfast oatmeal comes from Marlene Bumgarner's "The Book of Whole Grains" (St. Martin's, 1976):

Bring 2¼ cups water to boil. (At this point you may add ½ to ¾ teaspoon salt, if desired, and ¾ cup raisins.) Add 1½ cups old-fashioned rolled oats. Stir quickly, turn off heat, cover pot tightly and steam until all liquid is absorbed, about 3 to 5 minutes.

WHEAT BERRIES

Wheat berries are unprocessed whole-wheat kernels. Cooked, they have a delightful crunch and a nutty flavor and make a hearty breakfast cereal and a fine addition to whole-wheat breads. To prepare:

Soak 2 cups wheat berries overnight in ample water to cover. Drain.

Bring 7 cups water to boil, add wheat berries, reduce heat, cover pan and simmer until tender, about 1½ to 2½ hours. During this time, stir occasionally and add more water as needed. When wheat berries are tender, drain.

If time permits, return to pot to steam and absorb surface water. Cover pot and let sit 10 minutes off heat.

Season as desired before serving.

The good news for grain lovers is that "The Grains Cookbook" (Workman, $14.95) by the late Bert Greene has just been published. Although not strictly a vegetarian cookbook, it is a delightful compendium of nutritional background, history and lip-smacking grain recipes. Here is a recipe adapted from Bert's new book.

BERT GREENE'S SCOTTISH OAT STOVIES

5 tablespoons unsalted butter
3 medium onions, sliced into thin rounds
6 to 8 small russet potatoes, cut in half lengthwise
¾ cup water
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon ground white pepper
Pinch of ground allspice
¼ cup rolled oats
⅛ teaspoon hot Hungarian paprika

Yields 4 to 6 servings.

Melt 4 tablespoons butter in large, heavy pot or Dutch oven over medium-high heat. Add onions and toss lightly to break rings apart. Add potatoes, cut side down. Pour water over potatoes and sprinkle with salt, pepper and allspice. Heat to boiling then reduce heat. Cook, covered, over low heat until potatoes are tender, 25 to 30 minutes.

Preheat oven to 250 degrees. Partially remove cover of pot and raise heat slightly under potatoes. Continue to cook until all liquid has been absorbed, 3 to 5 minutes. Transfer to a heatproof serving dish and place in oven. Melt remaining 1 tablespoon butter in small skillet over high heat. Toss in oats and sprinkle with paprika. Cook, tossing constantly, until oats turn golden, about 2 minutes. Sprinkle over potatoes and return to oven for 5 minutes before serving.

Cookbook author Lorna Sass has had articles published in many newspapers and magazines, including Harper's Bazaar and Gourmet.

Pecan-caramel sauce sweet topping for apple cake

By NANCY BYAL
Associated Press

APPLE CAKE WITH PECAN CARAMEL TOPPING

4 eggs
1 package 2-layer-size apple cinnamon or applesauce spice cake mix
⅓ cup cooking oil
⅓ cup water
¼ cup apple juice or bourbon
2 cups chopped, peeled cooking apples (2 to 3 apples)
1 cup chopped pecans
1 recipe Pecan Caramel Topping (recipe follows)
Vanilla ice cream (optional)

In large mixer bowl combine eggs, cake mix, oil, water and apple juice. Beat on low speed just until moistened, scraping sides often. Beat on medium speed for 2 minutes. Stir in apples and pecans. Turn into greased and floured 10-inch fluted tube pan. Bake at 325 degrees about 60 minutes or until cake tests done. Cool on wire rack for 15 minutes. Remove from pan and cool thoroughly. Serve with Pecan Caramel Topping and ice cream, if desired. Makes 16 servings.

Pecan Caramel Topping: In medium saucepan combine ¼ cup margarine or butter and ⅓ cup chopped pecans. Cook and stir over medium heat about 5 minutes or until pecans are toasted and margarine is light brown. Stir in 1 cup packed brown sugar and 1 cup whipping cream. Bring mixture just to boiling, stirring constantly over low heat. Simmer, uncovered, 2 minutes. Cool slightly. Makes 1¾ cups sauce.

Microwave makes marvelous muffins

By DESIREE VIVEA
Copley News Service

Want to make a quick brunch or light supper into something special? Serve a basketful of hot muffins straight from the oven.

The batter takes only minutes to mix, and the muffins need only minutes to bake, when you use your microwave.

Why heat up the conventional oven when you want to make only enough muffins for one or two? Instead, try today's microwave Oat-Nut Muffins for Two" — this recipe makes just enough for you and a friend.

If you own a microwave cupcaker (a plastic tray with indentations for cupcakes), you're in luck. If not, you can use glass custard cups lined with paper baking cups.

OR MAKE YOUR OWN baking cups out of paper drinking cups (don't use cups that are wax-coated). Just cut off the tops, leaving a 1-inch wall at the bottom. Fit a paper baking cup into each of these, and you're all set. (Bases can be reused a number of times.)

Microwaved muffins are lighter in texture, and raise higher than do conventionally baked muffins. For this reason, you should fill muffin cups only about half full (not two-thirds full, as in conventional recipes).

Check muffins after minimum cooking time specified by your recipe. To check for doneness, insert a toothpick near center of muffin. If it comes out clean, muffin is done. If not, keep baking and checking at 20-second intervals until done.

Overbaked muffins can be dry and slightly crunchy, with a texture resembling croutons. They bake so quickly in the microwave, that it's easy to overcook them — I know, I've done it myself! These crunchy little muffins don't taste bad, but they're probably not what you had in mind. So watch your timing.

Because microwaved muffins don't brown, you might want to add an attractive topping for eye appeal.

FOR SWEET MUFFINS, try these toppings: chopped or slivered nuts, cinnamon sugar, shredded coconut. For savory muffins, top with paprika, bacon bits, or a mixture of Parmesan cheese and a dash of paprika for color.

To reheat one muffin, wrap loosely in a paper towel or napkin. Microwave on HIGH (100 percent power) setting eight to 12 seconds (12 to 20 seconds for two muffins; 30 seconds to one minute for four to six muffins).

(Recipes in this column are tested in 625- to 700-watt microwave ovens.)

When microwaving baked goods, remember that the centers of cakes, breads, etc., will often look damp at the end of the cooking cycle. It's important to follow prescribed standing time, as this will complete cooking.

OAT-NUT MUFFINS FOR TWO

¼ cup quick-cooking rolled oats
2 tablespoons warm water
⅓ cup whole-wheat flour
2 tablespoons light brown sugar
½ teaspoon baking powder
¼ teaspoon ground cinnamon
¼ teaspoon salt
1 egg, lightly beaten
2 tablespoons vegetable oil
2 tablespoons milk
¼ cup chopped nuts
2 tablespoons raisins or chopped prunes
2 teaspoons whole-wheat flour
1 teaspoon light brown sugar
1 teaspoon butter or margarine, softened

Yields 4 muffins.
Preparation Time: 5 to 10 minutes
Cooking Time: 1½ to 3 minutes (plus 3 minutes standing time)
Oven Setting: HIGH (100 percent power)

Combine oats and 2 tablespoons warm water in small bowl. Let stand about 5 minutes. Meanwhile, in medium mixing bowl combine next 5 ingredients.

Add egg and oil to oat mixture; beat to blend well. Add to dry ingredients, stirring only long enough to moisten. Fold in half of nuts and all of raisins or prunes. Place 4 paper baking cups inside 4 6-ounce glass custard cups.

Divide batter evenly among these. In small bowl combine remaining ingredients, adding reserved nuts. Toss with fork to blend. Sprinkle mixture evenly over muffin batter.

Arrange muffins on round microwave-safe platter and microwave, uncovered, 1½ to 3 minutes, or until toothpick inserted near center comes out clean. Let stand in custard cups 3 minutes before serving.

CHEDDAR CORNMEAL MUFFINS

½ cup milk or buttermilk
1 egg
2 tablespoons vegetable oil
¾ cup all-purpose flour
⅔ cup yellow cornmeal
2 teaspoons baking powder
¼ teaspoon each salt and dry mustard
¾ cup shredded cheddar cheese
Paprika

Yields 10 to 12 muffins.
Preparation Time: 5 to 10 minutes
Cooking Time: 7½ to 10½ minutes (plus 6 to 9 minutes standing time)

In medium mixing bowl combine milk or buttermilk, egg and oil. Beat well with wire whisk. Add all remaining ingredients except cheese and paprika, stirring only long enough to moisten. Gently fold in cheese.

Place paper baking cups inside 10 to 12 6-ounce glass custard cups. Divide batter evenly among cups. Arrange 4 of the cups in a round microwave-safe baking tray. Sprinkle tops lightly with paprika. Microwave, uncovered, 2½ to 3½ minutes. Let muffins stand 3 minutes in custard cups to set. (Repeat procedure with remaining muffins.)

ALMOND BUTTERMILK BRAN MUFFINS

1 egg
½ cup bran
¼ cup vegetable oil
¼ cup brown sugar
¾ cup all-purpose flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
¼ teaspoon baking soda
¼ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon ground cinnamon
½ cup sliced almonds

Yields 6 muffins.
Preparation Time: 5 to 10 minutes
Cooking Time: 4½ to 6 minutes (plus 6 minutes standing time)

Add all remaining ingredients except almonds. Stir briefly, just enough to moisten flour. Place 6 paper baking cups inside 6 6-ounce glass custard cups. Divide batter evenly among cups.

Arrange 4 of cups on round microwave-safe baking tray. Microwave, uncovered, 2½ to 3½ minutes. Let muffins stand in custard cups 3 minutes to set. (Repeat procedure with remaining muffins, microwaving 2 to 2½ minutes for 2 muffins.)

Oyster dishes tasty, historically developed

By MELANIE BARNARD
and BROOKE DOJNY
Copley News Service

Oysters are among the oldest known creatures to inhabit the waters of the world. There are more than 300 known varieties found in all of the oceans except the polar seas.

Perhaps because of their lengthy history, their curious shells, and their mysterious ability to produce extraordinarily beautiful pearls, the oyster has been subject to much folklore and many misconceptions.

Widely acclaimed to be an aphrodisiac, oysters have long been a part of celebratory meals in many cuisines. Far be it from us to refute the romantic properties of oysters, but we are here to promote them as absolutely delicious quick food for any occasion.

Hangtown Fry is a classic American omelet attributed to a lucky miner in the California gold rush who wanted to celebrate his strike by ordering the most expensive meal in Hangtown. The chef suggested oysters and eggs, both very expensive items at the time. The miner agreed but requested that bacon be added, and Hangtown Fry was born.

Low Country Scalloped Oysters is a re-creation of a dish enjoyed during a Carolina coastal vacation. Pure simplicity, it is a soothing Southern casserole that goes together in minutes and bakes unattended while you whip up a salad.

The old adage that oysters should be eaten only in the "R" months is a myth. Oysters are now readily available year-round due to modern methods of seafood farming, harvesting and storage.

Oyster shucking is a tricky and tedious process. Plan ahead and ask your fishmonger to do this. Alternatively, purchase already shucked oysters in refrigerated vacuum cans. They are excellent and usually less expensive, too. Canned oysters are the least desirable, though acceptable, alternative.

LOW COUNTRY SCALLOPED OYSTERS

1 cup "unsalted tops" saltine or soda cracker crumbs
½ cup fresh bread crumbs (about 1 slice bread)
8 tablespoons melted butter
⅓ cup heavy cream
1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
¼ teaspoon cayenne
2 tablespoons minced chives

Yields 4 servings.
Preparation time: 10 minutes.

Spread half of crumb mixture over bottom of shallow 1 to 1½-quart baking dish, such as 10-inch pie plate. Arrange oysters in single layer over crumbs. Pour cream mixture over oysters. Toss remaining crumbs with chives and sprinkle evenly over oysters. (Casserole can be assembled ahead to this point.)

Bake in center of oven for 20 minutes or until crumbs are golden brown and casserole is bubbly. (If top is not browned enough, run under broiler for about 30 seconds to brown.)

HANGTOWN FRY

12 medium-size or 8 large oysters
¼ cup flour
3 tablespoons butter, divided
7 eggs
3 tablespoons water
3 tablespoons minced parsley, divided
½ teaspoon Tabasco sauce
¼ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon black pepper

Yields 4 servings.
Preparation and cooking time: 25 minutes.

If oysters are large, cut in half. Dust oysters with flour.

Add 1 tablespoon butter to drippings in skillet. Heat until butter stops foaming, then saute oysters over medium-high heat for about 1 minute per side until golden and just cooked through. Remove oysters to plate. Reserve skillet.

Whisk eggs with water, 2 tablespoons of parsley, Tabasco, salt and pepper.

Heat remaining 2 tablespoons butter in reserved skillet. When butter stops foaming, add egg mixture and cook over medium heat, shaking pan and lifting edges of eggs as they cook to allow uncooked portions to run underneath. When omelet is nearly set, about 3 minutes, sprinkle oysters over it and sprinkle with remaining 1 tablespoon parsley. Continue to cook about 1 minute until just set and oysters are heated through.

By JAMES CULLEN
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Gib Lewis breezed to a fourth term as House Speaker, then ruled out new taxes as the Texas Legislature opened for business Tuesday for its 71st regular session.

"I'm not worried about a tax bill," Lewis said. "I rule out a tax bill in 1989."

Lewis told reporters he was hopeful that Comptroller Bob Bullock would come up with a more favorable forecast of revenues as the session progresses and the state's economy stabilizes, but he added, "We'll have to do what we have to do with what we have."

Lewis, a Fort Worth Democrat starting his 10th House term, greeted with a thumbs-up sign the 149-0 vote that reinstated him as speaker. Then he took over from Secretary of State Jack Rains, who gavelled the House of Representatives to order at noon and presided over the swearing in of the 150 members.

"The fun's over. It's time to go to work," Rep. Stan Schleuter told the overflow crowd of House members, their families, state officials and members of Congress who filled the aisles of the House chambers to watch the opening session.

Schleuter, D-Killeen, nominated Lewis to preside over the House, as Lewis has during the past six stormy years. "These have not been easy sessions for him or for any of us," Schleuter said. The past four years have been "extremely difficult," as the state fell short of revenue.

"Through it all, Gib has been an island of calm in a sea of conflict," said Schleuter, who as chairman of the Ways and Means Committee has been responsible for bringing record tax bills to the House floor to pay for those problems.

Legislative leaders say expected revenue is $1.1 billion short of maintaining current services, but Bullock has suggested bookkeeping maneuvers that would make another $1 billion available.

Rep. Ashley Smith, a Houston Republican and past chairman of the Government Organization Committee, said in seconding the nomination that Lewis knew what was worth fighting for. "As a world class hunter, he has the ability to recognize whether it's a trophy that is worth the hunt."

Rep. Mark Stiles, D-Beaumont, also seconding the nomination, said the Legislature must build for the future.

"The critical conditions facing the state haven't been created overnight, nor will they be solved overnight," said Stiles, past chairman of County Affairs.

"We're ready to get behind a true leader and do business the way Texans want it done," he said, citing the development of better education opportunities, more human services and greater economic development efforts that have taken place with Lewis' support.

"Gib Lewis has taken his dedication to his own district and extended it to the entire state," Stiles said.

Not to be outdone, Rep. Jim Rudd, D-Brownfield and past Appropriations Committee chairman, said of Lewis, "He's moved Texas from the Big Chief Tablet and pencil days to the present day of economic reform."

Lewis is expected to make new committee assignments in the next two weeks.

In his opening speech Lewis said the state needs to keep building on the foundation of economic development.

"We have been through difficult times," he said, noting the impact of collapsing oil prices, the national recession and an overvalued dollar that hurt export markets, high interest rates and overbuilding that crippled construction trades and Mexican economic troubles that have hurt foreign trade.

"Jobs were lost, and Texas no longer seemed quite the place it had been," Lewis said.

But the state fought back with a new blueprint for Texas in 1984, when it passed education reforms that "began the battle against mediocrity in our public education system."

In 1985 the Legislature enacted and voters approved a statewide water plan that legislators hope will guarantee water supplies into the 21st century, he said.

In 1987, facing the largest budget shortfall in its history, Lewis said, the Legislature met that challenge and created the Texas Department of Commerce to coordinate economic development efforts.

Lewis got applause when he offered support for public education and higher education. "We must have the wisdom to continue pursuing excellence in our public schools," he said.

He also got applause when he called for attention to the homeless and the jobless and improving access to health care.

Lewis called on the Legislature to design a better system of workers compensation, which he said fails to meet the needs of injured workers and discourages business development.

The state also needs more prisons, drug treatment and prevention programs and more action against cancer and AIDS, he said.

"This year we face a choice," he said. "We can call retreat, trim our sails, cut back our vision and display the face of self-doubt to the rest of the nation and the world. Or we can continue along our steady path, the prudent, measured, confident and continuing path of investment in ourselves, our people and the future," he said, to applause.

Lewis also welcomed U.S. House Speaker Jim Wright, who represents Lewis in Congress. Lewis noted, "He and I consider ourselves speakers-in-law."

Wright described a "profound sense of homecoming and a sense of nostalgia" as he noted that he started in the Texas House of Representatives in 1946 in the same group of freshmen legislators as Jack Brooks and Doyle Willis.

Brooks, D-Beaumont and elected to Congress in 1952, is now dean of the Texas congressional delegation after 36 years in Congress. Willis, D-Fort Worth, is second in seniority with 24 total years.

Citizens being introduced to law enforcement

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

Midland's first citizens police academy kicked off Tuesday night with a welcome by the police chief, an introduction of senior officers and a tour of the cramped, obsolete and soon-to-be replaced public safety building.

Students were also greeted by members of the police Special Weapons and Tactics Team, who "just happened" to be in the building for a regular Tuesday training session.

"We'd like to introduce to you what law enforcement really is," Police Chief Richard Czech said. "It is not what you've seen on the movies or on TV...our life is dull and mundane."

Most citizens would be surprised to know that 90 percent of the police officers in the United States never draw their weapons, the chief said.

"I hope that we can change some of these perceptions with this class," he said.

Czech gave his department high marks for professionalism and training, but like his officers he referred continually to budgetary and manpower constraints that he said has checked the department's progress.

"Midland has a pretty modern police department," he said. "As modern as we can get with the amount of money we've got."

The academy, which was the brainchild of the chief, is also designed to encourage continuing support for the department, he said.

"We hope some of you will return and maybe volunteer in the future," he said. "But there are no strings attached."

Students were split into three groups and given a tour of the Public Safety building, which was built in the 1950s and once housed the central station of the Midland Fire Department.

The detective division, which occupies the eastern end of the two-story building on Texas Street, is the most cramped area of the facility. Students were shown one small room that is used for lie detector tests and interviews of sexual assault victims who are minors. The room, which is equipped with a two-way mirror, also occasionally is used for "line-ups" of suspects.

"But if we ever have to do all three at once, we are in trouble," said Lt. Hank Norton, who heads the department's intelligence section.

Perhaps the smallest room in the detective division is the narcotics section, which operates in a tiny corner office. A trio of just-confiscated marijuana plants have the most room, on a windowsill.

The department's need for equipment was underscored when the head of the section showed off some new telephones that are being used by detectives. "Those we got from some cocaine traffickers we busted recently," said Detective Sgt. Larry Bledsoe. "They've even got memories."

Year's first tax rebate slightly ahead of '88

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

A boost in Midland's sales tax collections this month signaled a promising start for the city's Fiscal Year 1989 budgetary account, according to a report released this week by State Comptroller's Office.

Midland's payment of $505,881 made up the state's first installment into the Fiscal Year 1989 account and brought the city in at about 0.54 percent ahead of last year's pace.

In Odessa, receipts this month of $422,928 represented a drop in fiscal-year-to-date sales tax reimbursements by 0.92 percent from last year's figure of $425,803.

Despite the monthly decrease in Odessa, State Comptroller Bob Bullock said most cities, counties and metropolitan transit authorities can expect a little extra spending money for their 1989 budget.

"That money can be put toward needed local projects or set aside for a rainy day," the State Comptroller pointed out.

Bullock sent checks totaling $64.1 million to 924 cities that collect local sales tax at either 1 or ½ percent.

Payments to the cities, which represent taxes collected by monthly filers last November and reported to the Comptroller's Office by Dec. 20, reflect 19.4 percent more money that was sent in the January 1988 allocation.

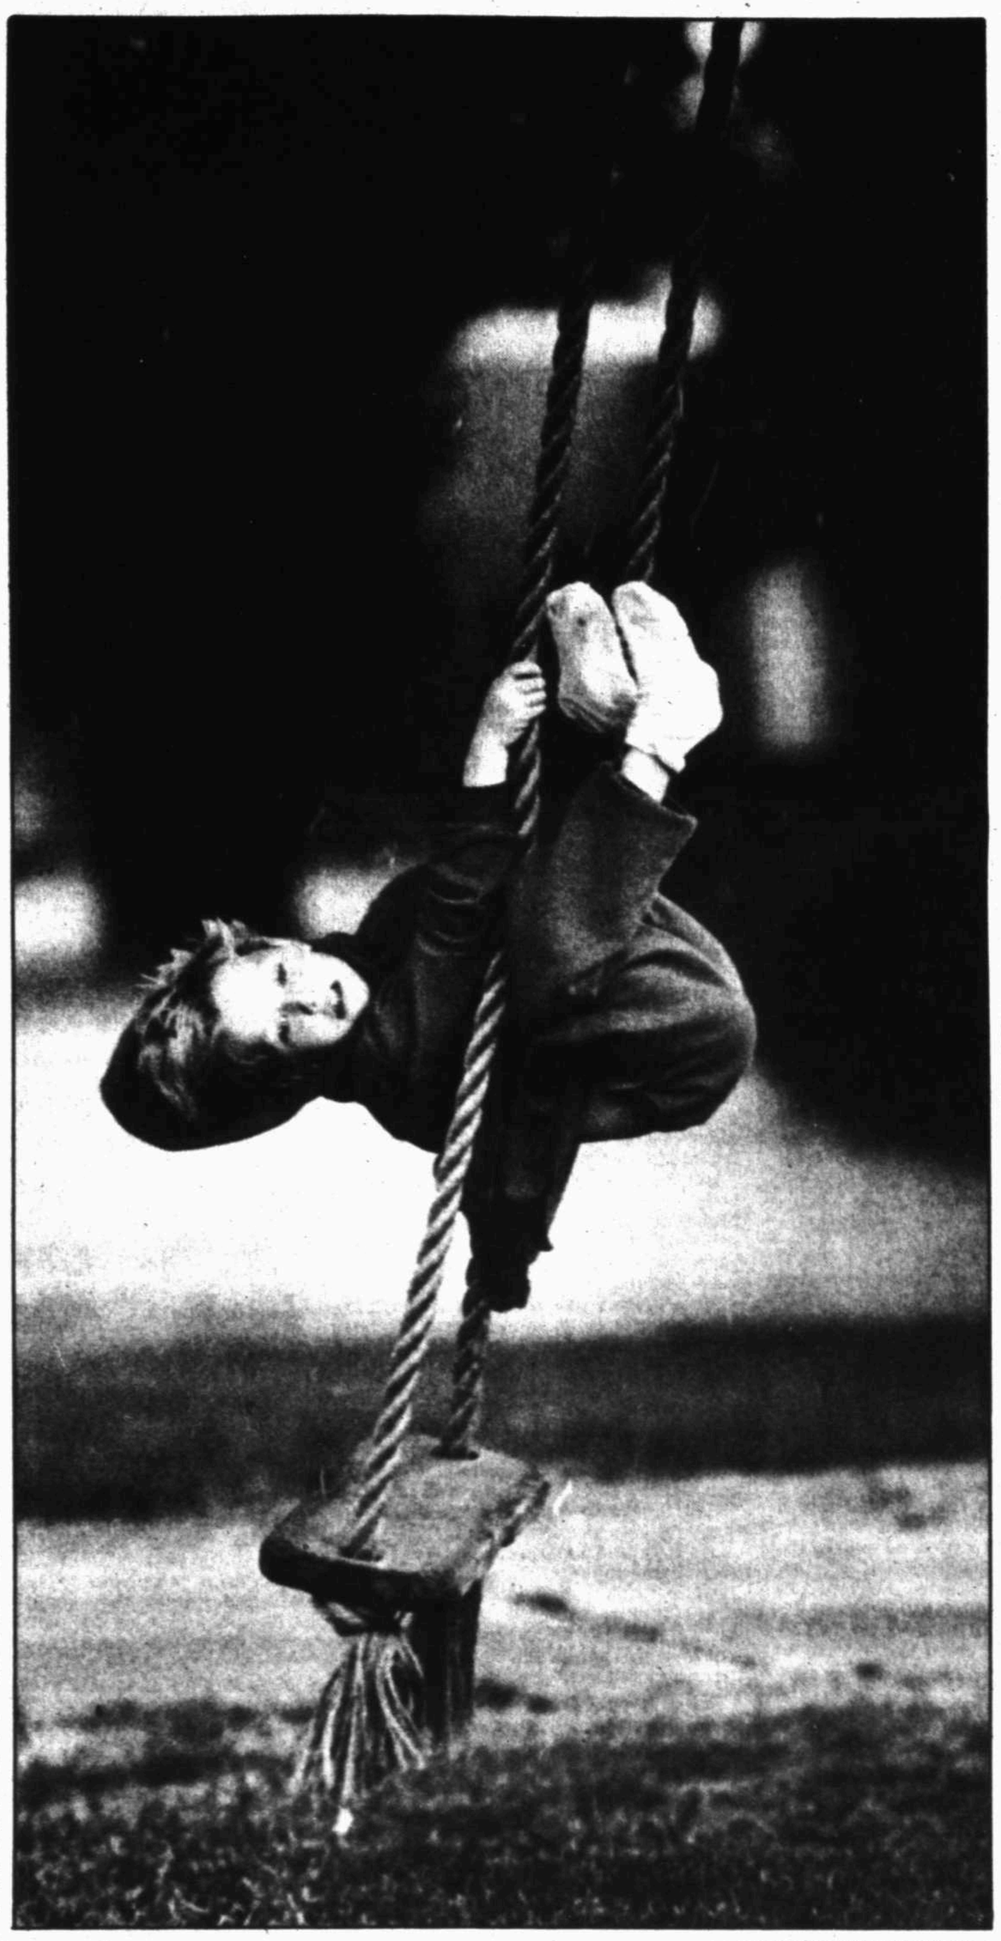

Midland County reaped $278,673 during the November collection period. The county began collecting the one-half cent sales tax last January.

A penny sales tax imposed by cities and a half-cent county tax are placed on such items as land surveying, insurance claims adjusters, garbage collection and local and intrastate long distance telephone services.

Texas lawmakers added those and 13 other services to the sales tax base in October 1986. Cities and counties collect sales taxes on the same list of goods and services that legislators draw up for the state sales tax base.

Boulter INS post candidate

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former U.S. Rep. Beau Boulter is a leading candidate to be chief of the Immigration and Naturalization Service, a newspaper reported today.

The Republican from Amarillo, who lost a November bid to unseat U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, is "under serious consideration" for the position by Attorney General Richard Thornburgh, the Dallas Times Herald quoted a source who was consulted about the possible appointment. The source said Boulter's Texas ties "make him really attractive."

Boulter, a lawyer who served two terms in Congress, has no particular immigration expertise. When on Capitol Hill, he was assigned to the budget and government operations committees, and the select committee on children, youth and families. He did not assume a leading role in the wholesale reform of the nation's immigration system in 1986.

Boulter was in a meeting this morning and not immediately available for comment.

Alan C. Nelson, the current director of the INS reportedly wants to keep his job and has told Thornburgh so. While Nelson is highly regarded by rank-and-file INS agents and many in Congress, he angered Thornburgh recently by opposing the attorney general's plan to grant more independence and authority to the department's inspector general.

Others being considered include Harold Ezell, the outspoken and often controversial chief of the INS's Western Region in Los Angeles; former Rep. Dan Lungren, R-Calif.; who was a leader in the passage of the Immigration Reform and Control Act of 1986; and Perry Rivkind, director of the INS's operation in South Florida.

Rivkind is nearing retirement, and Ezell drew fire by allowing agents to attend a luau sponsored by deposed Philippines President Ferdinand Marcos and his wife, Imelda. Lungren and Nelson are from California, which could be a drawback.

"There's a sense of getting rid of the 'California Mafia,'" the source said.

"One reason Boulter is considered attractive is because he's from another state, and one that has a significant stake in immigration matters, not to mention one that happens to be near and dear to (President-Elect George) Bush's heart," the source said.

Pension plan set up for research chimps

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A biomedical foundation is establishing a pension plan for 81 AIDS-infected chimpanzees.

The Southwest Foundation for Biomedical Research plans to invest more than $1.77 million over the next 10 years into chimpanzee retirement accounts that are expected to grow into $2.9 million through the year 2026, officials said.

"We always have had a moral obligation to take care of the animals that we use, but we can have the best intentions in the world, but if we don't have the money, there is little that we can do for them," John Speck, controller of the biomedical foundation.

The fund will help in their care and is sure to be enough to buy bunches of bananas and lots of apples, cucumbers, celery and watermelon over the next 40 years for the chimpanzees, who cannot be used for other research after being exposed to AIDS.

DIMMITT (AP) — With its new political clout in Washington, Texas should take the initiative in promoting production and use of ethanol, an alternative energy expert said.

The four Texans on the House Agriculture Committee should lead the way to a bipartisan consensus supporting ethanol, energy consultant Fred Potter told the annual meeting of the Texas Corn Growers Association on Tuesday.

"It's first of all good for Texas, good for the Texas gas industry, good for Texas agriculture, and it's going to allow less environmental regulation on the Texas oil industry," said Potter, president of Washington-based Information Resources Inc.

Boosting production of ethanol, a fuel made from grain, would benefit both farmers and taxpayers, he said.

"Ethanol production is the greatest untapped market for farmers, not only here, but for farmers around the world," he said.

"We're talking about profiting from a commodity that has spillover benefits that include a substantial improvement in the air quality of this nation and around the world and also with a very substantial reduction in the dependence on foreign oil by all the Western countries."

Use of the West's surplus agricultural commodities would provide new markets for farmers, which would in turn spur prices and production and decrease the need for price support payments, Potter said.

Under the budget proposed Monday by President Reagan, major federal crop supports, including those for corn, would be cut to a six-year low of less than $11.6 billion from more than $13.8 billion in 1989. In 1986 such supports reached a high of almost $26 billion.

Literature distributed by the Texas Corn Growers show that 360 million bushels of corn were used last year to produce about 900 million gallons of ethanol.

Man to be charged in murder

From Staff Reports

A 65-year-old Midland man was expected to be charged today in Monday's fatal stabbing of another man following an argument at an eastside bar, police said.

The man was arrested without incident about 5 p.m. Tuesday at his residence on South Dallas Street, police spokesman Cpl. Jim White said.

Alfonso Smith, 41, whose last known address was in San Antonio, was stabbed once in the abdomen at the Savoy Club about 10 p.m. Monday, according to investigators. The stabbing occurred after Smith and another man had exchanged angry words, White said.

Early Tuesday, police were given conflicting statements by witnesses at the scene and reported that Smith was inside the bar, then walked outside. Several minutes later, he walked inside, sat down and collapsed.

But White said today Smith was stabbed inside the club and never went oustide. "Fifteen or 20" patrons were inside the business when the stabbing occurred, he said.

High school will pay cash for information on campus crime

MANSFIELD (AP) — Mansfield High School will pay cash for tips about campus crime in a program that police praise and the American Civil Liberties Union fears could be misused by vengeful teen-agers.

Police and school officials scheduled assemblies Tuesday to explain the Crime Stoppers style program to students and ask for their anonymous help in solving two cases — thefts of a youngster's skateboard and a substitute teacher's car-hood ornament.

Kennith Clarida, an Arlington police detective who helps administer the Tarrant County Crime Stoppers program, said, "We want students to know that they can be part of the solution or part of the problem."

When youngsters keep silent about a crime, they are assisting the criminals, he said.

Members of the American Civil Liberties Union, though, fears the turmoil of high school romances and other relationships might yield bogus tips, getting innocent students in trouble.

"A guy might use the program to get back at a girlfriend who dumped him or against her new boyfriend," said Don Gladden, general counsel for the Greater Fort Worth chapter of the ACLU.

"Mansfield High School doesn't have any rampant crime," but petty thefts, simple assaults and vandalism occur occasionally in the student body of 1,800, Clarida said.

Cynthia Williams, the school's alcohol and drug abuse counselor and Crime Stoppers administrator, said students will not be disciplined solely on the basis of a tip.

Williams has appointed a board of five students — who will remain anonymous, to prevent retribution — to consider each reported crime and decide how much of a reward to offer. Cases will be posted on a bulletin board and described in the school newspaper, she said.

The student board has not set any rewards yet, but they probably will be small, Williams said.

CHIMPS

But Roger Fouts, a psychology professor at Central Washington University in Ellensberg who has studied chimpanzees for 20 years, said the biomedical foundation's humanitarian attempt is admirable, but it might not be enough.

"If you look at $3 million for about 40 years, that's bare minimum," he said. "Giving a chimp enough food, enough water and making sure that they have a dry and warm cage doesn't seem to be enough."

Foundation officials said the chimps exposed to the AIDS virus have shown no signs they have developed the fatal disease. It is probable the chimps will live their normal life span of about 40 years or more, pushing their care bill to $5,000 each annually, they said.

Speck and Dr. Jorg Eichberg, director of veterinary resources, began discussing two years ago how to pay for care for the chimps, and started the investment program in the spring.

Eichberg, who in June 1983 became the first scientist to infect a chimpanzee with the AIDS virus, said he hopes the chimp retirement program would silence animals rights groups critical of the foundation's use of animals for experiments.

"We are really genuinely concerned that these animals get the best treatment available," Eichberg says. "We have to combine our emotions with pragmatism in our work and I think we have done a pretty good job."

But Fouts said research groups should do more for the chimpanzees.

"They must ensure that they lead as much as possible a normal life," he said. "What we have with chimpanzees is a species that has been exploited by biomedical concerns, but this attempt by the Southwest foundation to help the chimpanzees is an admirable one."

POLICE

"I can certainly see where they need the room," said student Jackie Hamilton, who is on the Crime Stoppers board and is former president of the Midland Crime Prevention Commission. "Everyone is certainly crowded in there."

Ms. Hamilton said she is especially looking forward to lectures on the enforcement of narcotics trafficking and by detectives.

"But overall, I thought it went terrific," she said of the first session.

Members of the SWAT team, outfitted in their usual black uniforms and combat boots, trudged into the classroom. Czech said they happened to be in the building for previously scheduled training.

"This is a group of men with total dedication," Deputy Chief Jim Colburn said. "And it is a volunteer unit. These men are not being paid anything additional."

During the 10-week session scheduled to end in March, students will receive lectures in all areas of police work, including K-9 operations, fingerprints and identification, and crimes against property and persons.

Czech also said students will be able to go to the department's firearms range for target practice.

At the start of Tuesday's session, students were asked to complete a survey of their perceptions about the police department. The survey will be analyzed and compared to one which will be completed at the end of the session, Cpl. Jim White said.

"We want to know what we're doing for you in Midland, and what we can do better," White said.

TAX

In reviewing the whole picture, Odessa's assistant fiscal services director James Zentner described Odessa's loss in sales tax collections this month as a "drop in the bucket."

"When you have $6 million in collections in a year, the less than a 1 percent decline isn't anything to be alarmed about," he said.

Zentner said city financial directors are anxiously awaiting the release of next month's statistics, which will detail spending by Christmas shoppers during the month of December.

Big Spring's fiscal-year-to-date total came in 9.4 percent above last year's: $84,529 compared to $77,227 in January 1988.

And Stanton posted a 26.6 percent increase in collections between January 1988 and January 1989. The city this month received $3,477. Last January, Stanton netted $2,746.

Toastmasters to hold installation banquet

From Staff Reports

The annual installation banquet held by Pop Up Toastmasters is scheduled for Thursday at the Ramada Inn.

New officers include Anne Severson, president; Susan Winn, educational vice president; Keith Burt, administrative vice president; Jack Waldrup, secretary; Candy Hall, treasurer; Jim Osborne, Russell Strait and Marvin Wooten, sergeants at arms; and Charles Spence, ad hoc committee.

Guest Speaker for the evening is Mary Lou Cassidy.

'Shakespeare LIVE and Lively' being staged

From Staff Reports

Midland Community Theatre's "Shakespeare LIVE and Lively!" week continues tonight beginning at 7:30 p.m., when the founder of Midland's "Shakespeare As We Like It" Bob Anson will speak about "Shakespeare's Lucky Banana Peel."

His talk will be followed by "A Midsummer Night's Dream," the classic 1935 film starring Mickey Rooney, Joe E. Brown, Olivia de Haviland and Jimmy Cagney.

There is no charge. For more information call Midland Community Theatre's box office, 682-4111.

Mirror tells woman she could no longer hide drug addiction

By DAVID EMSWILER

WEST COLUMBIA (AP) — Kathy Phillips' youngest daughter knew to get Mommy a beer from the refrigerator when "Days of Our Lives" came on TV at noon.

For this 34-year-old mother of four, those were anxious times when the line between reality and illusion drew thinner and thinner.

Mrs. Phillips escaped from the responsibilities of life by taking powerful prescription drugs — about 30 every day, often while drinking beer and smoking marijuana — then eventually passing out on the living room couch. There, her husband, Gordon, and her older children would find her after returning home from work and school.

Few people, if any, could come to her home. When her husband's friends or brothers visited him, their wives would wait outside in the car. Mrs. Phillips wanted her fierce habit to be a secret and her irritability was too much for most to handle.

But the secret was a lie, and everybody knew Mrs. Phillips had major problems. Her mother, Joan Cantrell, said her daughter "looked 45 years old" at the height of her 17-year addiction.

Mrs. Cantrell said she often asked her daughter to go home when, on any given visit, Kathy only would want to argue.

This was the scenario of a drug addict and alcoholic, one that started at the tender age of 13 when she drank her first beer after succumbing to peer pressure at school. The pills began later, when she was 18.

Her first marriage came at that time, for one primary reason: "Because I wanted to drink away from home, and my first husband also liked to drink," she said.

Mrs. Phillips sums up the whole dark period. "For 17 years I didn't like myself. I would tell myself it is them and not me," she said.

But today, those dark days are a memory, and Mrs. Phillips makes the most of every minute, like a child allowed to go outside after being grounded for an extended period.

Mrs. Phillips has been on a slow, but steady uphill climb since being admitted into the Alpha Center, a drug rehabilitation clinic at Brazosport Memorial Hospital.

"I had to learn who my kids were all over again, because I didn't know them. I had to learn who my husband was all over again. He stood by me the whole way and I thank God every day for that," she said.

Mrs. Phillips also attributes her survival to God.

"I do believe in God and believe that he had his hand on me," she said. "Because if not, I wouldn't be here today."

The turning point in Mrs. Phillips' life came about two years ago when, on a particularly depressing afternoon after the soaps, she took a look in the bathroom mirror.

Mrs. Phillips said she felt like she was in "a fog" as a result of all the tranquilizers, alcohol and pot she had consumed that day. She had started at 9 a.m., somewhat earlier than usual.

"I walked into the bathroom and looked in the mirror and did not like what I saw," she explained. "I thought, 'Did I really want to look like this and feel like this for the rest of my life?'

But soon, Gordon came home from work. "He called Dow (Chemical Co.), where he works, and asked someone what he should do. Then he took me up to the hospital and they admitted me."

The nurses and counselors within the Alpha Center worked with and cared for Mrs. Phillips.

"I was there for 35 days and it's a 28-day program," she said. "The counselors and nurses, they really work with you and care for you. They don't leave you stuck in a room."

Now Mrs. Phillips uses much of her time teaching youngsters and parents the dangers of drugs.

DEATHS

Ruth Ray

Services for Mrs. W.G. (Ruth) Ray are scheduled for 11 a.m. today at the First United Methodist Church with Dr. Russell Parchman officiating. Burial will follow at Resthaven Memorial Park under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

She died Sunday at her home in Midland.

She was born July 9, 1919, in Mount Pleasant. She moved with her family to Midland in 1936 from Albany, where she had graduated from high school in 1936.

She entered the service during World War II and served in Washington, D.C., in the U.S. Navy Hydrographic office. She was discharged and returned to Midland in 1945. She was office manager for Argo Oil Co. for 14 years and in 1960 became an independent landman until 1968, when she became a bookkeeper and office manager for Dr. Jack Walton.

She retired in 1982 and lived in Midland until her death.

Survivors include her husband, Wilburn G. Ray of Midland; three sons, Dr. Bobby G. "Skipper" Ray of Midland, Kenneth Ray of Union City, Calif., and Horace Ray of Petersburg, Va.; two brothers, Max Tidmore of Lubbock and Jim Tidmore of Pipe Creek; three sisters, Mrs. Charles Patterson of Midland, Mrs. Charles Tidmore Houston of Loveland, Colo., and Mrs. Kenneth Wood of Irving; six grandchildren and three great-grandchildren.

Pallbearers will be Paul Hartzke, Ray Allen, Don Fisler, Garland Williams, Johnny Carter, Bill Hutcheson, J.D. Youngblood and Jack King.

Honorary pallbearers will be the Altrusa club of Midland.

Newel Beauchamp

Funeral services for Newel Bunyard Beauchamp of Midland will be 1 p.m. Thursday at the Ellis Funeral Home Chapel, with the Rev. J.B. Stewart, associate pastor of the First United Methodist Church, officiating. Burial will follow in Resthaven Memorial Park.

He was born Jan. 13, 1899, in Panola County, the son of a pioneer West Texas family. He moved to Midland in 1914 and worked for the Midland Hardware Co. installing electric light plants and refrigeration for various businesses and ranches. He was a member of the First United Methodist Church and the Midland Volunteer Fire Department.

He married the former Sephrena Webb Dec. 21, 1921. She preceded him in death in 1928. He later married Dessie Kiser Feb. 14, 1931. She preceded him in death Feb. 6, 1975.

Survivors include a son, Newel W. Beauchamp of Midland; two daughters, Marie Tutten of Houston and Inez Thomas of Austin; a brother, Marvin S. Beauchamp of Midland; seven grandchildren and four great-grandchildren.

Mary L. Clark

Services for Mary L. Clark of Midland are scheduled for 2:30 p.m. Thursday at Winters Funeral Home in Winters. Local arrangements are being handled by Ellis Funeral Home.

Mrs. Clark died Monday afternoon at a Midland hospital.

She was born Jan. 24, 1944, in Ramona, Calif., and was reared in Midland. She married Windell Clark in 1965 and was a member of Calvary Assembly of God Church.

Survivors include her husband of Woodville; a son, Windell Wayne Clark Jr. of Woodville; a daughter, Nita Clark of Midland; her parents, Luther and Nora Potts of Winters; three brothers, William Potts of Hobbs, N.M., Olan Potts of Winters, and Paul Potts of Perryton, Okla.; eight sisters, Ruby Goodson of Long Star, Fay Murphy of Denton, Pauline Alewine of Kilgore, Easter Jonas of El Centro, Calif., Veda Black of Hobbs, and Bonnie Plumley, Stella McKinny and Edna Woodrum, all of Midland; and numerous nieces and nephews,

Sarah Gomez

Services for Sarah Renee Gomez will be 3 p.m. Thursday at Word of Life Church in Midland with Pastor Russell Austin officiating. Interment will follow at Fairview Cemetery under the direction of the Ellis Funeral Home.

Pallbearers will be Kevin York and Keith Brannon.

Joseph Veach

Services for Joseph Eugene Veach, 70, are scheduled for 1 p.m. Friday at the Ellis Funeral Home Chapel with the Rev. Bob Porterfield officiating. Burial will follow in Fairview Cemetery.

He died late Tuesday afternoon at a Big Spring hospital.

Ruben Culp

Funeral services for Ruben S. Culp of Midland are pending with Ellis Funeral Home.

SPELLING BEE 1989

The Reporter-Telegram will sponsor the 1989 Regional Spelling Bee April 15 at Midland College.

School spelling champions from Midland, Martin, Glasscock and Upton counties will compete for the top prize of an all-expenses-paid trip to the National Spelling Bee in Washington, D.C.

This daily column on words, their spellings, meanings and origins will be published through April 14. These words are typical of those used in bees but may not necessarily be used in competition.

ed´a-tor´e-al

editorial — (noun) Most newspapers have an "editorial" page or section. On this page, letters to the editor from readers are displayed along with articles expressing the opinions of the newspaper's editors, publishers or columnists. Many of the "editorial" articles comment about current news items or public policies. The root word of "editorial" is "editor," derived from the Latin word "editus," based on a word meaning "to bring forth, to proclaim, publish." "Editorials" intentionally express the views of the writers or those in control of publication. News stories, on the other hand, express only facts and not the writers' opinions or views.

High school will pay cash for information on campus crime

MANSFIELD (AP) — Mansfield High School will pay cash for tips about campus crime in a program that police praise and the American Civil Liberties Union fears could be misused by vengeful teen-agers.

Police and school officials scheduled assemblies Tuesday to explain the Crime Stoppers style program to students and ask for their anonymous help in solving two cases — thefts of a youngster's skateboard and a substitute teacher's car-hood ornament.

Kennith Clarida, an Arlington police detective who helps administer the Tarrant County Crime Stoppers program, said, "We want students to know that they can be part of the solution or part of the problem."

When youngsters keep silent about a crime, they are assisting the criminals, he said.

Members of the American Civil Liberties Union, though, fears the turmoil of high school romances and other relationships might yield bogus tips, getting innocent students in trouble.

"A guy might use the program to get back at a girlfriend who dumped him or against her new boyfriend," said Don Gladden, general counsel for the Greater Fort Worth chapter of the ACLU.

"Mansfield High School doesn't have any rampant crime," but petty thefts, simple assaults and vandalism occur occasionally in the student body of 1,800, Clarida said.

By offering rewards, the Crime Stoppers program tries to gather information that otherwise would be unavailable.

Cynthia Williams, the school's alcohol and drug abuse counselor and Crime Stoppers administrator, said students will not be disciplined solely on the basis of a tip.

Williams has appointed a board of five students — who will remain anonymous, to prevent retribution — to consider each reported crime and decide how much of a reward to offer. Cases will be posted on a bulletin board and described in the school newspaper, she said.

The student board has not set any rewards yet, but they probably will be small, Williams said.

"It might be just a few dollars for a pair of gym shorts, but $20 or $25 for a (vandalized or stolen) computer," she said.

But Roger Fouts, a psychology professor at Central Washington University in Ellensberg who has studied chimpanzees for 20 years, said the biomedical foundation's humanitarian attempt is admirable, but it might not be enough.

"If you look at $3 million for about 40 years, that's bare minimum," he said. "Giving a chimp enough food, enough water and making sure that they have a dry and warm cage doesn't seem to be enough."

Foundation officials said the chimps exposed to the AIDS virus have shown no signs they have developed the fatal disease. It is probable the chimps will live their normal life span of about 40 years or more, pushing their care bill to $5,000 each annually, they said.

The biomedical foundation is among the leading facilities worldwide that conducts AIDS research using primates.

Speck and Dr. Jorg Eichberg, director of veterinary resources, began discussing two years ago how to pay for care for the chimps, and started the investment program in the spring.

Eichberg, who in June 1983 became the first scientist to infect a chimpanzee with the AIDS virus, said he hopes the chimp retirement program would silence animals rights groups critical of the foundation's use of animals for experiments.

"We are really genuinely concerned that these animals get the best treatment available," Eichberg says. "We have to combine our emotions with pragmatism in our work and I think we have done a pretty good job."

But Fouts said research groups should do more for the chimpanzees.

"They must ensure that they lead as much as possible a normal life," he said. "What we have with chimpanzees is a species that has been exploited by biomedical concerns, but this attempt by the Southwest foundation to help the chimpanzees is an admirable one."

"I can certainly see where they need the room," said student Jackie Hamilton, who is on the Crime Stoppers board and is former president of the Midland Crime Prevention Commission. "Everyone is certainly crowded in there."

Ms. Hamilton said she is especially looking forward to lectures on the enforcement of narcotics trafficking and by detectives.

"But overall, I thought it went terrific," she said of the first session.

Members of the SWAT team, outfitted in their usual black uniforms and combat boots, trudged into the classroom. Czech said they happened to be in the building for previously scheduled training.

"This is a group of men with total dedication," Deputy Chief Jim Colburn said. "And it is a volunteer unit. These men are not being paid anything additional."

During the 10-week session scheduled to end in March, students will receive lectures in all areas of police work, including K-9 operations, fingerprints and identification, and crimes against property and persons.

Czech also said students will be able to go to the department's firearms range for target practice.

At the start of Tuesday's session, students were asked to complete a survey of their perceptions about the police department. The survey will be analyzed and compared to one which will be completed at the end of the session, Cpl. Jim White said.

"We want to know what we're doing for you in Midland, and what we can do better," White said.

TAX

In reviewing the whole picture, Odessa's assistant fiscal services director James Zentner described Odessa's loss in sales tax collections this month as a "drop in the bucket."

"When you have $6 million in collections in a year, the less than a 1 percent decline isn't anything to be alarmed about," he said.

Zentner said city financial directors are anxiously awaiting the release of next month's statistics, which will detail spending by Christmas shoppers during the month of December.

A $39,911 payment for the city of Andrews represented a little more than a 20 percent increase over last January's payment of $33,251.

Lamesa netted $34,695, boosting its total by about 15 percent over last January's rebate.

Big Spring's fiscal-year-to-date total came in 9.4 percent above last year's: $84,529 compared to $77,227 in January 1988.

And Stanton posted a 26.6 percent increase in collections between January 1988 and January 1989. The city this month received $3,477. Last January, Stanton netted $2,746.

By DAVID EMSWILER

WEST COLUMBIA (AP) — Kathy Phillips' youngest daughter knew to get Mommy a beer from the refrigerator when "Days of Our Lives" came on TV at noon.

Mommy didn't drink before then. That's how Mrs. Phillips convinced herself she didn't have a problem.

For this 34-year-old mother of four, those were anxious times when the line between reality and illusion drew thinner and thinner.

Mrs. Phillips escaped from the responsibilities of life by taking powerful prescription drugs — about 30 every day, often while drinking beer and smoking marijuana — then eventually passing out on the living room couch. There, her husband, Gordon, and her older children would find her after returning home from work and school.

Few people, if any, could come to her home. When her husband's friends or brothers visited him, their wives would wait outside in the car. Mrs. Phillips wanted her fierce habit to be a secret and her irritability was too much for most to handle.

But the secret was a lie, and everybody knew Mrs. Phillips had major problems. Her mother, Joan Cantrell, said her daughter "looked 45 years old" at the height of her 17-year addiction.

Mrs. Cantrell said she often asked her daughter to go home when, on any given visit, Kathy only would want to argue.

This was the scenario of a drug addict and alcoholic, one that started at the tender age of 13 when she drank her first beer after succumbing to peer pressure at school. The pills began later, when she was 18.

Her first marriage came at that time, for one primary reason: "Because I wanted to drink away from home, and my first husband also liked to drink," she said.

Mrs. Phillips sums up the whole dark period. "For 17 years I didn't like myself. I would tell myself it is them and not me," she said.

But today, those dark days are a memory, and Mrs. Phillips makes the most of every minute, like a child allowed to go outside after being grounded for an extended period.

Mrs. Phillips has been on a slow, but steady uphill climb since being admitted into the Alpha Center, a drug rehabilitation clinic at Brazosport Memorial Hospital.

"I had to learn who my kids were all over again, because I didn't know them. I had to learn who my husband was all over again. He stood by me the whole way and I thank God every day for that," she said.

Mrs. Phillips also attributes her survival to God.

"I do believe in God and believe that he had his hand on me," she said. "Because if not, I wouldn't be here today."

The turning point in Mrs. Phillips' life came about two years ago when, on a particularly depressing afternoon after the soaps, she took a look in the bathroom mirror.

Mrs. Phillips said she felt like she was in "a fog" as a result of all the tranquilizers, alcohol and pot she had consumed that day. She had started at 9 a.m., somewhat earlier than usual.

"I walked into the bathroom and looked in the mirror and did not like what I saw," she explained. "I thought, 'Did I really want to look like this and feel like this for the rest of my life?'

"I was really thinking about suicide at that moment because I didn't know any other way out."

But soon, Gordon came home from work. "He called Dow (Chemical Co.), where he works, and asked someone what he should do. Then he took me up to the hospital and they admitted me."

The nurses and counselors within the Alpha Center worked with and cared for Mrs. Phillips.

"I was there for 35 days and it's a 28-day program," she said. "The counselors and nurses, they really work with you and care for you. They don't leave you stuck in a room."

Now Mrs. Phillips uses much of her time teaching youngsters and parents the dangers of drugs.

DEATHS

Ruth Ray

Services for Mrs. W.G. (Ruth) Ray are scheduled for 11 a.m. today at the First United Methodist Church with Dr. Russell Parchman officiating. Burial will follow at Resthaven Memorial Park under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

She died Sunday at her home in Midland.

She was born July 9, 1919, in Mount Pleasant. She moved with her family to Midland in 1936 from Albany, where she had graduated from high school in 1936.

She entered the service during World War II and served in Washington, D.C., in the U.S. Navy Hydrographic office. She was discharged and returned to Midland in 1945. She was office manager for Argo Oil Co. for 14 years and in 1960 became an independent landman until 1968, when she became a bookkeeper and office manager for Dr. Jack Walton.

She retired in 1982 and lived in Midland until her death.

Survivors include her husband, Wilburn G. Ray of Midland; three sons, Dr. Bobby G. "Skipper" Ray of Midland, Kenneth Ray of Union City, Calif., and Horace Ray of Petersburg, Va.; two brothers, Max Tidmore of Lubbock and Jim Tidmore of Pipe Creek; three sisters, Mrs. Charles Patterson of Midland, Mrs. Charles Tidmore Houston of Loveland, Colo., and Mrs. Kenneth Wood of Irving; six grandchildren and three great-grandchildren.

Pallbearers will be Paul Hartzke, Ray Allen, Don Fisler, Garland Williams, Johnny Carter, Bill Hutcheson, J.D. Youngblood and Jack King.

Honorary pallbearers will be the Altrusa club of Midland.

Newel Beauchamp

Funeral services for Newel Bunyard Beauchamp of Midland will be 1 p.m. Thursday at the Ellis Funeral Home Chapel, with the Rev. J.B. Stewart, associate pastor of the First United Methodist Church, officiating. Burial will follow in Resthaven Memorial Park.

Beauchamp died Tuesday at a local hospital.

He was born Jan. 13, 1899, in Panola County, the son of a pioneer West Texas family. He moved to Midland in 1914 and worked for the Midland Hardware Co. installing electric light plants and refrigeration for various businesses and ranches. He was a member of the First United Methodist Church and the Midland Volunteer Fire Department.

He married the former Sephrena Webb Dec. 21, 1921. She preceded him in death in 1928. He later married Dessie Kiser Feb. 14, 1931. She preceded him in death Feb. 6, 1975.

Survivors include a son, Newel W. Beauchamp of Midland; two daughters, Marie Tutten of Houston and Inez Thomas of Austin; a brother, Marvin S. Beauchamp of Midland; seven grandchildren and four great-grandchildren.

Mary L. Clark

Services for Mary L. Clark of Midland are scheduled for 2:30 p.m. Thursday at Winters Funeral Home in Winters. Local arrangements are being handled by Ellis Funeral Home.

Mrs. Clark died Monday afternoon at a Midland hospital.

She was born Jan. 24, 1944, in Ramona, Calif., and was reared in Midland. She married Windell Clark in 1965 and was a member of Calvary Assembly of God Church.

Survivors include her husband of Woodville; a son, Windell Wayne Clark Jr. of Woodville; a daughter, Nita Clark of Midland; her parents, Luther and Nora Potts of Winters; three brothers, William Potts of Hobbs, N.M., Olan Potts of Winters, and Paul Potts of Perryton, Okla.; eight sisters, Ruby Goodson of Long Star, Fay Murphy of Denton, Pauline Alewine of Kilgore, Easter Jonas of El Centro, Calif., Veda Black of Hobbs, and Bonnie Plumley, Stella McKinny and Edna Woodrum, all of Midland; and numerous nieces and nephews,

Sarah Gomez

Services for Sarah Renee Gomez will be 3 p.m. Thursday at Word of Life Church in Midland with Pastor Russell Austin officiating. Interment will follow at Fairview Cemetery under the direction of the Ellis Funeral Home.

Pallbearers will be Kevin York and Keith Brannon.

Joseph Veach

Services for Joseph Eugene Veach, 70, are scheduled for 1 p.m. Friday at the Ellis Funeral Home Chapel with the Rev. Bob Porterfield officiating. Burial will follow in Fairview Cemetery.

He died late Tuesday afternoon at a Big Spring hospital.

Ruben Culp

Funeral services for Ruben S. Culp of Midland are pending with Ellis Funeral Home.

SPELLING BEE 1989

The Reporter-Telegram will sponsor the 1989 Regional Spelling Bee April 15 at Midland College.

School spelling champions from Midland, Martin, Glasscock and Upton counties will compete for the top prize of an all-expenses-paid trip to the National Spelling Bee in Washington, D.C.

This daily column on words, their spellings, meanings and origins will be published through April 14. These words are typical of those used in bees but may not necessarily be used in competition.

ed'ə-tôr'e-əl

RAILROAD COMMISSION OF TEXAS
LEGAL DIVISION

DISTRICT 8
December 16, 1988
CASE NO. 104,792

NOTICE OF HEARING

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN to the public and to all interested persons that under the legal authority and jurisdiction of Title 3, Oil and Gas, Subtitles A, B, and C of the Texas Natural Resources Code, and pursuant to Article 6252-13a, Revised Civil Statutes of Texas, The RAILROAD COMMISSION OF TEXAS will hold a hearing on JANUARY 18, 1989 at 9:00 a.m. at the William B. Travis State Office Building, 1701 W. Congress Avenue, Austin, Texas. The hearing will be conducted in conformity with the Administrative Procedure and Texas Register Act. TEX. REV. CIV. STAT. ANN. art. 6252-13a (Vernon Supp 1988). For room assignment on the date of the hearing please check the bulletin board in the 1st Floor lobby. Persons planning to attend this hearing are urged to contact the applicant (see service list) immediately prior to the hearing date to be sure that the hearing will proceed on the scheduled date. The Commission will consider the application of:

Tammrock Petroleum Co., Inc., 500 W. Texas, Suite 1485, Midland, Texas 79701

drill Well No. 1, State Gas Unit Lease, 156.2 Acres, Section 32, Block 54 twp 4, T&P RR Co. Survey, A-3465, Greasewood (Silura-Devonian) Field, Reeves County, being 11 miles in a northwest direction from Pecos, Texas.

This application is to correct bottom hole location for the subject well as presented in Case No. 104,792 in which applicant's request for an exception to Statewide Rules 38(a) (5) and Rule 37 was approved.

If a continuation is necessary, this hearing will proceed at the William B. Travis State Office Building, 1701 N. Congress Avenue, Austin, Texas, and, to the extent possible, on subsequent working days. The room number and exact time of the continuation will be announced on the record in this proceeding and recorded with Docket Services, Legal Division, Railroad Commission of Texas.

ANY REQUEST FOR POSTPONEMENT of this hearing must be received no later than four (4) working days prior to the scheduled date shown above. Copies of such request must be forwarded to all parties shown on the service list.

PURSUANT TO SAID HEARING, the Commission may enter such rules and orders as in its judgment the evidence may justify, including placement of the proposed well at a different location from that requested by applicant.

TO APPEAR in support of or in opposition to this proceeding, a party other than the applicant must file with Docket Services, Legal Division, at least five (5) days in advance of the hearing date, a notice of intent to appear.

ALL EXHIBITS filed as a part of the record in this cause must be specific and, if a reference includes an exhibit filed in prior proceedings before the Commission, a copy of such exhibit properly identified shall be submitted for this record.
