MANY KILLED IN TRAIN WRECK

MAINLY ABOUT PEOPLE

BY H. N. F.

"A college education means infinitely more than gaining an advantage over your fellows and the bringing in of the necessary nuggets of gold. It would be a waste of your time and money to study here if you did not develop those inner graces of the christian life that broaden your sympathies and give you an intense interest in every department of the college life that is contributing to the development of character." Who said it? Rev. H. E. Stout, D. D. He said it to the girls of Howard Payne college for fourteen years. He lived up to it. Church chroniclers say that the girl students lived up to it. He has been saying it as the president of Texas Woman's college for more than two years. D. D. stands for doctor of divinity. President Stout is a doctor of divinity. D. D. likewise stands for district deputy. Dr. Stout is District Deputy Governor of Kiwanis for the states of Texas and Oklahoma. "We have him with us today." Kiwanians say that Dr. Stout is emphatically a man's man. He is going to build a college triangle on Polytechnic hill, Fort Worth, which will include the Bible, journalism and athletics. Of course it is admitted that the most versatile and most accurate newsgatherers or reporters since the beginning of Time were writers of the Bible. Then why not a college triangle which will include the Bible, journalism and athletics? Dr. Stout never carries about with him a funereal face. He never throws a spasm when a fellow mortal explodes a hearty laugh. He doesn't think it a sin or sinful to pull a witty story. Kiwanians say that he loves to mingle with the people of the right sort who are now on earth. He was a very young man when he was made president of Howard Payne college for girls. His predecessor had achieved remarkable success. Dr. Stout, doctor of divinity and district deputy, achieved a greater success. Then Fate and the church of his choice decreed that he should succeed Dr. H. A. Boaz as president of Texas Woman's college. Dr. Boaz moved eastward thirty-three miles. Now Boaz is president of Southern Methodist University. He filled a pulpit in the city that faith built Sunday night—that of Dr. H. D. Knickerbocker who is away out at El Paso, belting hades out of sinners and walloping the devil on the banks of the upper Rio Grande. Dr. Stout is not an old man. He couldn't be an old man. He was a very young man sixteen years ago when he assumed presidency of Howard Payne. He has only lived sixteen short years since that memorable day. He is proud of the fact that Texas Woman's College prepares young women to be church leaders; that it prepares volunteers to go to foreign fields to do missionary work; that his college is enlarging the scope of its work by opening up definite fields of education for young women; that a department of journalism is close to his heart; that physical education will be a special feature; and that a course in library work will be offered next year. He knows that there is a wide field in the church itself for trained young women; that those who have completed the required work in religious education are accepted by the mission board of his church for positions in the foreign field; that there is unusual demand for christian teachers in the mission field; that many of the young women

WASHINGTON, March 12.—Representative William H. Stafford of Wisconsin, one of the busiest members of congress, nevertheless, finds time to gather curios. Mr. Stafford recently dug up a mock bill of fare printed by the Confederate forces, just prior to the end of the seige of Vicksburg by the Federals and its defense by the Confederates.

The Southern forces were so sure that the Federals would never break through that they circulated this menu. But the Federals did break through. Here is the menu:

DEATH LIST IN SOUTH AFRICA ESTIMATED 100

By Associated Press.

JOHANNESBURG, Union of South Africa, March 12.—At least one hundred persons are believed to have been killed in Saturday's fighting here and the wounded will reach a much larger number.

Desperate efforts are being made by the commander to gain control of the town before the forces under Major General Sir J. L. Van Deventer and Brigadier General Conrad Britscan arrive.

The fighting for the most part takes the form of sniping, there being only occasional volleys. The only government forces to be seen are those guarding the city hall. The striking miners are reported to have burned the police station at Fordsburg.

A communique from Pretoria says larger numbers of troops will be available shortly and that recruiting is going on at a satisfactory pace, although many evidently fail to realize the seriousness of the situation.

Cape Town dispatches say that outside the Rand the general strike has had a limited success. At Durban a meeting attended by 800 persons. Mostly strikers, resulted in the formation of a commando of 300 men who paraded without violence.

A similar meeting at Bloemfontein favored formation of commandos, but a single arrest led to the dispersal of the gathering before the decision could be carried out.

MAN MISTAKEN FOR INTRUDER KILLED; ANOTHER INJURED

By Associated Press.

HOUSTON, Texas, March 12.—H. L. Hughes is dead and J. B. Meeks, is in a Houston hospital in a serious condition as the result of a shooting at West Columbia, near here late Saturday night.

Meeks, the surviving victim, said Sunday that a keeper of a rooming house mistook them for intruders as they were approaching to rent a room for the night. The keeper is being sought by authorities.

Both men live in Freeport, Texas.

MISS MORGAN TO VISIT BURK AND ELECTRA TODAY

Talks to Capacity Crowd at Olympic Sunday Afternoon; Obtains Over $2,000 in Money and Pledges

Anne Morgan, after two strenuous days in Wichita Falls in the interest of the American Committee for Devastated France, will conclude her Wichita county visit with addresses in Burkburnett and Electra today. Tonight she will leave for Fort Worth going from there to Wichita, Kansas for her next engagement.

At Burkburnett she will speak at the Lyric theater at 10 o'clock in the morning, and at the high school auditorium at Electra at 3 o'clock this afternoon.

Her appeals for the work of the American Committee in Wichita Falls brought $2,220, in money and in monthly pledges, all for small amounts. This she considered a good subscription, as the committee is asking only a little more than a million dollars from the entire United States, and appeals were made for only small sums.

Indications are not lacking that the other object of her visit—a better understanding of the problems confronting the French, and a better sympathy for them and their efforts to undo the damage that war has done, was as successfully accomplished.

Sunday afternoon Miss Morgan talked to a capacity crowd at the Olympic theater. As forcefully as on former occasions she brought home to her hearers the horrors that the French people had undergone as a part of the war, and the bravery with which they are working, in the face of every adverse circumstance, to build again—an effort in which the labor of those maimed and crippled as a result of the war has been enlisted as well as that of the remaining able-bodied men and women, the aged and the older children. She laid especial emphasis, however, on the work designed to restore the health and vitality which was sapped during the war and to keep them healthy and happy by food, clothes and medical attention which their parents are not yet able to give them. She showed that the work being done was carried on in such a manner that it was not so much doing things for the French and their children as to help them do things for themselves.

The conditions Miss Morgan described were visualized for the audience by excellent motion picture scenes, showing the desolation wrought by the war, the efforts of the French government and the French people to repair the damage, and various phases of the work carried on by the American committee.

Miss Morgan was introduced by Judge John C. Kay. Earlier in the day she had spoken to several Sunday school classes, among them Mrs. C. R. Hartsook's class of business women at the First Methodist Church, South. This class and another class had become jointly responsible for the maintenance of a trained nurse in this district, Miss Morgan announced at the Olympic meeting.

GREECE SEEKS FORMATION OF NEW MINISTRY

By Associated Press.

ATHENS, March 12.—King Constantine has charged Nicholas Stratos, former minister of marine, with the formation of a new cabinet.

LONDON, March 12.—The Athens correspondent of the Exchange Telegraph company reports the resignation of the Guenaris cabinet. He adds that a prolonged crisis is expected, as it is unlikely the liberals can form a government which will survive.

The Greek government was defeated in the chamber of deputies at Athens Friday when Premier Gonnaris was refused to a vote of confidence, 161 to 156. He had previously announced that as the allies desired to establish peace in the Near East he had accepted their mediation on condition that they agreed regarding the peace terms.

Bolby and "Billie" Vault Into Political Picture Gallery

BY H. N. F.

Bolby is on the road—speaking of R. Y. Bolby of Kemp. He must be "The Little Stranger" of Texas politics. Bolby was born on a farm in Denton county. He was reared on a farm in Denton county. He has lived in Kaufman county fifty-five years. Then he moved to town and has been in business ever since. Bolby, R. Y., is a candidate for governor—he will hurl or has hurled himself against the Hon. Pat Morris Neff.

If elected, he promises to bar all chronic politicians from his office; he promises to make all demagogues unwelcome. Educationally speaking, he is for an agricultural and mechanical college for West Texas, a college of industrial arts for Southwest Texas and a state university that will be "the greatest in America."

If elected he will appoint a woman secretary of state. If elected, he will give preference to all appointed positions to veterans of the war.

Bolby is for prison reform. He would sell the prison farms, and build factories in which the convicts may work, thus placing them in direct competition with free factories and free and skilled labor. After cutting up his prison farms he would sell the land to small farmers on long time at a reasonable rate of interest.

Bolby has a heart. It is just saturated with the milk of human kindness. He would use the prison at Huntsville for a negro asylum.

Bolby holds that there are three cardinal crimes—rape and robbery and the manufacture of whisky. If elected governor he swears he will never grant a pardon or parole to a rapist, a robber or a rum-runner.

If elected he will permit the Red Cross ladies and the club women to select his secretary of state. Bolby favors a law regulating the purchase of real estate, both in town and country. He favors a law regulating the rents of farms and town property, and prohibiting the owner from charging in rents more than ten per cent of its assessed value.

Bolby is a humanitarian. If elected he will demand a home where all the aged and dependent women of Texas can be cared for in their last days. He doesn't say a word for the aged and dependent men of the State. What provision would he make for the decrepit males? Would he favor shooting them or shipping them to the pauper house?

Bolby is a purist.

If necessary he would stop the clock. These are his words, "I regard the present day movie to be one of the greatest curses of the age and I also would ask for a law regulating moving picture shows."

But when it comes to the written law or impartial law enforcement, Bolby is a peach. He is a state rights and local self-government champion of the age that perished when John Barleycorn died. These are the words of the immortal Busby—no, Bolby.

"I believe in local self-government and let each county say who the enforcement officer shall be. I will veto any law that will give the governor the right to say who the enforcement officer shall be in any county in this State. As the law now stands the governor is commander-in-chief of all the military and ranger forces of Texas and he should either enforce the law or resign."

Shades of Dr. Atticus Webb!

Think of a reformer, a regulator, a humanitarian, a promiser of patronage in advance of his election and a purist who would outlaw the movies, making local self-government his paramount issue "and then let each county say who the enforcement officer shall be."

There are all kinds of Democrats down here in Texas; there are all kinds of political freaks down here in Texas; many varieties or

TWO KILLED IN AUTO ACCIDENT AT FORT WORTH

By Associated Press.

FORT WORTH, March 12.—Two children were killed, a third is expected to die and three other persons were seriously injured when an automobile of C. S. Caylor fn which his family was returning to their home at Stop Six, about 12 miles from here, was struck by an eastbound freight train. The accident occurred at a crossing a short distance from the Caylor home.

Francis Caylor, 9 years old, was killed instantly. Cornelia Caylor, 10 years old, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. S. Caylor, other occupants of the car, sustained injuries from which she died 15 minutes later at a local hospital. Martha Caylor, age 6, another daughter, sustained a fractured skull and her death is expected. Mrs. Caylor, who was riding in the front seat with her husband and one-year-old child, sustained a fractured skull and internal injuries. Physicians pronounce her condition serious. Caylor, who was driving the car, received a cut over the right eye, while the baby was the least injured of the party.

According to the story told by Caylor, who was taken to a hospital here, the party was returning from Fort Worth and had drawn up to the railroad crossing, going south. A freight train was coming westbound, and he had suggested to his wife that they wait until the train passed. Mrs. Caylor however, suggested that they continue and as they cleared the track on which the westbound train was approaching, the automobile was struck by an east bound freight train on a parallel track, the approach of which was not seen by any of the occupants of the automobile.

FIGHTING AND FIRING FEATURE IRISH MEETING

By Associated Press.

CORK, March 12.—Michael Collins, head of the provisional government, addressed a huge meeting here today in defense of the Anglo-Irish treaty. He was subjected to considerable interference from adherents of Eamon DeValera who in large groups took up positions near the platforms from which Mr. Collins and others spoke and interrupted the speeches by firing shots, seemingly in an endeavor to create excitement. A number of free fights occurred during the meeting. J. J. Walsh and John J. McKeown, were among the speakers, all of whom refused to be frightened by what was termed "black and tan" arguments. Mr. Collins charged Mr. DeValera with a campaign of incitement and declared that the tactics being pursued were those of a defeated and discredited faction.

There was a demonstration last night by the anti-treaty adherents against the reception to Mr. Collins. Thousands of persons congregated in the streets and dismantled the platforms that had been erected and threw them into the river. Anti-treaty literature was liberally distributed throughout the city today.

MELLON FIRES BROADSIDE AT THE BONUS BILL

Treasury Secretary Declares New Measure Involves "Dangerous Abuse of Government Credit."

Mr. Mellon of Opinion That Least Objectionable Plan Is to Pay Out of Current Revenues.

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 12.—The new soldiers bonus bill as drawn by house republicans was attacked tonight by Secretary Mellon as involving "dangerous abuse of government credit."

Replying to a request for the treasury's comment on the new bonus bill, Mr. Mellon in a letter to Chairman Fordney of the house ways and means committee made public tonight by the treasury, sharply criticised the features of the proposed measure providing for loans by banks upon adjusted service certificates as indirect and "forced" borrowing by the government. He suggested that the "direct and regular way" to provide for a paid-up endowment insurance feature would be to authorize insurance certificates with provision for direct policy loans to be financed by the government. Mr. Mellon contended that "it is both dangerous and unwise" to attempt to avoid the cost of the bonus for the time being.

"There is no way," he said, "by which the American tax payer can avoid the burden and if a bonus is to be imposed it is far better for all concerned that it be placed upon a direct and definite basis and paid for each year out of current revenues. To do this at this time will necessarily mean the imposition of additional taxes for the purpose."

The secretary estimated the cost of the bonus under the bill considering each of the possible choices offered to veterans at more than $1,200,000,000 by January 1, 1926. Whatever form the bonus measure might take, he asserted, would mean a cost to the government of from $300,000,000 to $400,000,000 for the next three or four years and possible continuing liabilities thereafter of more than $200,000,000 a year until 1943.

Accompanying his letter Mr. Mellon transmitted statistical tables prepared by treasury experts showing the varying cost of a bonus according to what percentage of veterans might choose the different plans of payments offered.

Mr. Mellon called attention to the fact that the bill makes no provision for raising additional revenue to meet the cost of the bonus and recalled to Mr. Fordney, President Harding's letter of February 16, in which it was suggested that a general sales tax be enacted to provide the necessary funds or the bonus legislation be postponed.

Secretary Mellon's letter, in part, follows:

"The bill makes no provision whatever for singing fund, amortization or other reserves against either the liability that would be thrown upon the government in 1925 or against the liability on certificates at the end of twenty years, nor does it make any provision for the payments which would accrue in ordinary course from year to year on account of death of veterans.

"The direct cost to the government of a bill carrying these provisions for about 4,500,000 ex-service men is almost impossible to estimate because of the uncertainty as to which of the plans will be chosen and in what proportions. But the government actuary has prepared tables of estimated cost on the assumption that 70 per cent will choose the certificate plan, 63 per cent the farm and home aid plan, five per cent the farm and home aid plan, five per cent the vocational training plan and 2 per cent the land settlement plan. In the calculations as to the cost of the certificate plan it is assumed that half of the veterans will borrow on their certificate from the banks and default on their loans, in view of the attractive provisions for cash redemption in case of default. It appears from these tables on the basis assumed by the actuary the total direct cost to the government in the fiscal year 1923 would be $289,954,000 in the fiscal year 1924, $216,440,000; in the fiscal year 1925 $128,013,000, and in the fiscal year 1926, for the most part by October 15, 1925, which the adjusted certificates issued as security for bank loans would have to be redeemed, $615,822,000. This would mean total payments within about three and a half years over $1,200,000,000. These estimates take no account of amortization or other reserves against certificates to retain outstanding after the fiscal year 1926, which would add at least $40,000,000 a year to the current charges, or of possible additional costs under the land settlement plan if the reclamation projects therein authorized should be carried through. It is estimated that about $100,000,000 per annum would be required after 1923 if these reclamation projects should be pressed."

'SHOWDOWN' IN TREATY BATTLE EXPECTED SOON

Administration Leaders Plan Move to Check Flow of Oratory and Bring Question to Vote.

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 12.—If administration leaders succeed with the plan on which they have agreed, senate consideration of the four power Pacific treaty will reach the stage of action during the coming week.

Believing that virtually every senator has made up his mind how he will vote, those in charge of the treaty will begin tomorrow on an aggressive effort to bring the debate to a conclusion. Senator Lodge, of Massachusetts, the republican leader, hopes to secure a unanimous agreement setting a time to begin roll call on the proposed reservations, and if he fails he is prepared to hold the senate in sessions until late hours, so that the storm of oratory over the treaty may spend itself as soon as possible.

The opponents of ratification are not expected to assent readily to such unanimous agreement as Senator Lodge suggests, although they declare they have no intention of unduly prolonging the debate. They have given notice that any attempt to force results will be followed by the adoption of vigorous measures by the "irreconcilable bloc" which for the past week has kept at least one of its members on the senate floor constantly to observe developments and shut off any move for premature action.

In spite of this situation the administration senators are hopeful that voting on reservations will begin within a few days and some of the more optimistic even believe that a final roll call on ratification may be possible by the end of the week.

They assert that pledges given them make it certain that more than the necessary two thirds have decided to vote for ratification with the "no alliance" reservation of the foreign relations committee, and they declare that a majority would like to clear the way for the other arms conference treaties and general legislation. The treaty opponents again will take the offensive at tomorrow's session. Senator Johnson, republican, California, leading off with a prepared address against ratification. Senator Pomerene, democrat, Ohio, who favors ratification with reservations, and Senator Shields, democrat, Tennessee, an opponent of the treaty, may also address the senate tomorrow or Tuesday.

Over Sunday conferences served to stiffen the lines on both sides but apparently effected little change in the general situation. The group of republicans who would like to see unqualified ratification were said to be still reluctant to follow Mr. Lodge in his support of the "no alliance" reservation, although there appeared to be little doubt in the minds of the administration leaders that in the end a solid republican vote, exclusive of the "irreconcilables" would support the committee program.

KIWANIS PROGRAM AND LIMA BEANS AT THEATER TONIGHT

Grover Bullington, general chairman of the Kiwanis committee on artainment at the Wichita theatre tonight, is enthusiastic with regard to the advance sale of tickets and predicts a large attendance.

Tickets will be on sale in the lobby of the Kemp hotel from 9 until 5, and at the Wichita theater from 3 until 8 p. m. President Ben Neal of the Kiwanis hopes for a large attendance at the luncheon and a packed house tonight.

"Lima Beans," a musical skit, will be presented and the soloists on the program are singers who have won for themselves the praise of critics and the plaudits of music lovers wherever they have appeared.

COACH DERAILS AND PLUNGES FROM TRESTLE

Former Editor of Record News, Seriously Injured, Highly Praised for Fortitude Displayed.

Six Men and One Woman Killed Outright and Many of Sixteen Injured Not Expected to Live.

Willard Cope, formerly associate editor of the Record-News, was seriously injured when a coach of an Atlanta, Birmingham & Memphis train plunged off a trestle near Atlanta, Georgia Sunday. Cope, who was connected with the Record News here for more than a year, came here from Atlanta, and returned to do newspaper work in that city after leaving here.

While a comparatively young man, he is considered by fellow newspaper workers as one of the most capable men ever connected with the editorial staff of a Wichita Falls newspaper.

Cope's action in insisting that the women and children injured in the wreck be taken care of first, although badly crushed himself, as reported in Associated Press dispatches, is declared characteristic by fellow newspaper workers who knew him while here.

While his duties while with the Record News were for the most part "inside," he "covered" the court house on a number of occasions and is well known to county and court officials.

He was one of the first to reach the gambling hall in the K-M-A pool where two special officers were killed in the course of a raid when lawlessness was at its height in the oil fields, with another representative of the Record News taking a dangerous run over the rough oil field roads in the early morning hours. His account of the affair was the first to reach the people of Wichita Falls and had much to do with the arousing of public sentiment which resulted in the sending of Texas Rangers to the Wichita county fields and stamping out the lawlessness which prevailed there at that time.

By Associated Press.

ATLANTA, Ga., March 11.—Seven persons were killed and nine injured when a passenger coach on the Atlanta, Birmingham and Atlatic railroad was derailed near Union City. The car went off a trestle and fell fifty feet.

Thirty persons were in the coach, the last of the train, when one of the wheels burst. The trestle was reached and almost crossed when the car suddenly turned over, tearing away from the one ahead as it fell into the shallow creek.

Six men and one woman were killed and several of the injured are not expected to live. For hours parties worked in the wreckage, releasing those imprisoned and removing the dead, the injured being removed to hospitals here. The following list of dead was issued by officials of the railroad tonight.

C. E. ELMORE, cashier local station A. B. and A. railroad company.

W. E. M'INTOSH, Imperial Hotel, New York City.

B. C. DRIVER, Roanoke, Ala.

W. E. JOHNSON, Birmingham, Ala.

R. W. LANIER, operator, Seneca, Ga.

MRS. I. H. ETHERIDGE, Atlanta, Ga.

W. M. BROOKS, Western Union Telegraph Company, Manchester, Ga.

A graphic description of the wreck was given by H. F. Hentz, who was seated in the front of the car and escaped without injury.

An irregular motion of the car just before the trestle was reached, was the first indication that something was wrong, he said.

"About five seconds later," he continued, "we suddenly plunged backward into space. A crash followed and there were screams from all portions of the car.

"Those of us who occupied the front section looked for an avenue to escape. An opening was found through the front door. I managed to assist the three women who were with me through the opening and then returned to help the others. One young man, apparently crushed, was the first person I found. He refused to let me help him, but urged me to assist the women and children. He sat there calmly smoking a cigarette as if nothing out of the ordinary had occurred. I learned later on that this young man was Willard Cope, a newspaper man."

B. L. Bugg, receiver of the railroad, issued a formal statement tonight, stating that the accident was caused by the breaking of a new wheel on the front truck of the coach.

TWO STATES IN MEXICO SCENES OF OUTBURSTS

Officials of Michoacan and Jalisco Have Appealed to Obregon for Protection Against Rebels.

By Associated Press.

MEXICO CITY, March 12.—Disturbances, accompanied by some bloodshed which have taken place in the states of Michoacan and Jalisco during the last few weeks are causing the central government here to assume an energetic attitude in policing these districts, although the activities do not appear to have been directed against President Obregon.

Morelia, capital of Michoacan, for several days has been in a state of panic, due to threats of rebels under Colonel Francisco Cardenas to take the city. Reports received here today indicate that the revolutionists are surrounding Morelia and possibly may occupy it.

Social guards maintained by Francisco J. Mugica, governor of Michoacan, clashed with a rebel detachment of the outskirts of Morelia last night. Several men were killed. The rebels retreated. Mugica is said to have abandoned the government palace during the fighting and to have taken refuge in the tower of the Cathedral.

Press despatches from Morelia are obscure as to the real situation there, but it appears that various rebel forces are united under the command of Cardenas and are threatening the state authorities as represented by Governor Mugica.

The state government is being supported by federal troops. General Enrique Estrada, former minister of war, has gone to Morelia to direct the operations.

Governor Mugica's request to the legislature that it accept his resignation has been denied, but a year's absence has been granted him and it is possible he will arrive in Mexico City this week.

Meanwhile the entire state is in turmoil and a serious situation may develop any day.

The state of Jalisco has been added to the list of states where the governor is in conflict with an aggressive opposition.

Governor Basilio Vadillo is at outs with his legislature, which has retired to the federal garrison at Guadalajara "for safety's sake."

Vadillo is charged by the legislature with being responsible for several recent demonstrations in which several persons were killed and many injured. An energetic appeal has been sent to Prtsident Obregon for federal protection. General P. Elias Calles, chief of the cabinet, has replied that all possible guarantees will be given.

The legislators in Jalisco have have instituted grand jury proceedings against Governor Vadillo with a view to removing him from office. They characterize Vadillo and his followers as rebels against the central government because of alleged attempts to intimidate the inhabitants of Guadalajara. All the saloons in Guadalajara were closed Saturday night and troops patroled the city. The State of Pueblo, which was the scene several weeks ago of armed resistance against the state government of Jose Maria Sanchez, apparently has returned to normal after the ousting of Sanchez and the substitution of Froylan C. Manjarrez as provisional governor. Sanchez steadfastly denies persistent reports that he is organizing a rebellion aimed to restore him to power in Pueblo but in reality to be directed against the central government.

Troops under General Guadalupe Sanchez battled with the rebels of Miguel Aleman at Lomalarga, State of Vera Cruz, Saturday and succeeded in driving the rebels further into the hills, says an official report issued today.

SPANISH GOVT. OFFICIALS NIP REVOLT PLANS

By Associated Press.

LISBON, March 12.—Plans for an uprising together with quantities of ammunition and explosives have been discovered in raids by government agents at the headquarters of the workmen's syndicates. As a consequence the syndicates have been closed and drastic steps are being taken to preserve order. About one hundred notorious agitators have been arrested.

The raids followed various acts of violence by striking workmen.

Man's Two Wives Strangers for Seventeen Years

By Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES, March 12.—When Edward Gilbert, mining expert, died at his home here Friday night he widowed two wives, one here and the other in Chicago, according to reports here.

Gilbert was said to have disappeared from his home in Chicago 19 years ago. Then, it is reported, he went to Mexico where he was married again. And for seventeen years he kept the secret of his purported Chicago marriage from his second spouse.

According to the Los Angeles Mrs. Gilbert, she learned of her husband's first step into matrimony four months ago when she received a long distance telephone call from the Illinois city, the caller identifying herself as Mrs. LeClaire Gilbert of Chicago and asking that she be allowed to speak to her husband.

Today Mrs. Belle Gilbert, the Los Angeles widow, notified the eastern widow of their husband's death.

The local Mrs. Gilbert said her husband had admitted having a wife in Chicago after she told him of the long distance telephone message.

Bolby and "Billy" Vault Into Political Picture Gallery

types are bobbing up and will continue to bob up during the campaign of 1922.

It is the duty of a patriot to contribute to the gaity of nations. Militarily speaking, Colonel Billie Mayfield of Houston is a patriot. Editorially speaking, he is the publisher and editor of Mayfield's Weekly. This weekly has a mission. It speaks for the Ku Klux Klan and Colonel Mayfield's Moral Cleanup.

Do you get it?

Colonel Billie has tossed his hat into the political ring. He has announced himself as a candidate for Lieutenant Governor, with this promise to the voters of Texas, "I can swing myself according to the needs of the State." He bluntly says he is running for office on the Mayfield idea. "Cleanup," he says, is the Mayfield idea.

Colonel Billie is a purist. He stands with both feet on the Ku Klux platform. He believes that the automobile is sending boys and girls to hell—that is, he says, he believes it. He believes that the movie is sending boys and girls to hell.

Of course in the old days it was the wine room and the dance hall that sent all the people to hell but times appear to have changed and the devil has established new routes from this pulsating world of ours to his burning inferno. This makes three candidates in the race for lieutenant governor:

Former Lieutenant Governor W. A. Johnson of the Hall County Herald; State Senator T. M. Davidson of Harrison county, and the fantastic Colonel who wields a facile pen for the Houston mouthpiece of the Invisible Empire.

Should the Houston colonel visit Quanah it would not be necessary for Editor Koch to say in his paper, "Mayfield is a disappointment. He failed to say anything about the Ku Klux Klan."

Editor Johnson is for junking the penitentiary plants, selling the prison farms, making road builders of the convicts and state-owned cement plants for the manufacture of road materials.

Senator Davidson is for all these and the strictest of economy in the expenditure of all the tax money of the people. Every candidate for office this year is out of date and out of fashion if he neglects to mention among his planks, strict economy, law enforcement, equal rights for all and "I'ell with John Barleycorn."

All are platitudes except the last. John is dead.

Another candidate has come out of the west. J. S. Thompson of Foard county has announced as a candidate for commissioner of the general land office. He "comes out of the west" but he was born in Dallas county. He has been in Foard county ever since 1887. His father was a Confederate soldier and his son fought in France and Flanders. He is college bred and has been an active surveyor for twenty-four years. Of course he is modest about it. He doesn't say how long he fought for prohibition until it came; he leaves the voter in the dark as to just where he stood when equal suffrage was the football of politicians and a doormat for the bosses.

Any man who has lived in West Texas since 1887, and has been surveying wild lands for twenty-four years should be given a respectful hearing by the voters of the commonwealth. What's the matter with the west?

Editor Koch, the Quanah Oracle, is reminded that Cullen F. Thomas addressed the people of Knox county at Knox City last week. Mr. Thomas is the first candidate for senator that has visited Knox county, and a correspondent who was present, says that he "was greeted in a crowded auditorium." Also, "his address of two and one-half hours was heard with the closest attention."

Mr. Thomas never said anything about the Ku Klux Klan.

He did say that he had bled internally and externally for a couple of decades in fighting the battles of prohibition.

Editor Koch is also notified that the Hon. Lucian W. Parrish appeared in Slaton, Lubbock county and spoke in Shopbell Hall "to a large crowd." He was introduced by Mayor Bob Murray.

Mr. Parrish did not say anything about prohibition. He has conscientious scruples against kicking a corpse in the graveyard.

Mr. Parrish did not say anything about the Ku Klux Klan and unless Mr. Thomas adds another plank to his platform or another chapter to his two hour and a half speech, he will be as silent on the subject as John Barleycorn is dead when he visits Slayton and elucidates for the edification or education of his Lubbock county supporters.

Jefferson is one of the oldest towns of Texas. Jefferson is on the banks of the Red. More than a half a century ago, David B. Culberson landed at Jefferson. He came all the way from Talledega, Alabama.

Of course Charles A. and Robert came with him.

David B. Culberson was looked upon as one of the great constitutional lawyers of America. He practiced law for the love of it and served his constituents for twenty-four years in order to make a respectable living.

Charles A. jumped into the game at an early age.

He became county attorney of Marion and served three terms. Enterprising men had built the Texas and Pacific railway and one morning after his retirement to private life, Charles A. caught a train for Dallas, hung out his shingle, announced as a candidate for attorney general, wiped Judge Charles F. Clint off the map and has been on the official firing line ever since, as attorney general, governor and United States senator.

Well, the point is this:

Jefferson Democrats organized the first Culberson club in the state and not a speaker "said a word about prohibition or the Ku Klux Klan" and not a resolution blistered or praised "the quick or the dead."

Editor Koch should hasten to send a wire to the senatorial contenders who have spoken and repeated without saying anything of John's burial ground or "the sons of the invisible Empire."

"What fools these mortals be."

DEEP WELL IN YOUNG HOLDING UP PRODUCTION

Special to The Record News.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., March 12.—After producing around 50,000 barrels of oil the first two months of its life, the No. 1 Scott-Smith of the North American Oil and Refining corporation in the South Bend, Texas, field, has settled down to a steady flow of 200 barrels daily, according to M. H. Warren, vice-president and general manager of the corporation.

The well has now averaged 224 barrels daily for the last 30 days, flowing through 5-inch casing with almost 500 feet of open hole. Tubing is now being set in the well, the cavings will be cut off, and the owners expect the well to keep up its present production for a long time. It is producing from the gray sandy lime at 3,500 feet.

The North American's two latest producers in the field, both of which are offsets to No. 1 Scott-Smith, are holding up exceptionally well in the 2,200-foot sand which they found while drilling for the deep pay. No. 3 Scott-Garrett averaged more than 325 barrels its first 30 days and is now flowing around 300 barrels daily, while No. 3 Scott-Smith came in at 250 barrels January 31 and is now going 190 barrels daily.

The North American is drilling seven wells to the 3,500-foot sand, regardless of splendid showings at shallower depths. These are No. 2 Payne, down 2,720 feet; No. 2 J. W. Burgess, 2,625 feet; No. 5 Scott-Smith, 2,460 feet; No. 4 Goode, 2,235 feet; No. 6 Scott-Smith, 600 feet; No. 1 Corbett, 2,650 feet, and No. 7 Scott-Smith, spudding.

Five other wells are drilling to the shallow sands. They are No. 7 Fords, No. 10 Ford, No. 6-A Ford, No. 11-A Ford, and No. 4 Scott-Garrett.

PASTOR TELLS HOW TO "SEND GIRL TO HELL."

COLUMBUS, Ohio, March 12.—"For every fallen woman there is a fallen man," asserted Rev. Dr. William Pieffer, addressing an audience of women in Central Baptist church here. "There is no double standard."

"The surest way for a mother to send a fallen daughter to hell is to shut the door in her face," continued Rev. Pieffer. "Only a mother's love can bring her back to righteous living."

T. W. C. President To Speak Today To Kiwanis Club

Dr. H. E. Stouk, president of Texas Woman's college and lieutenant-governor of the Texas and Oklahoma Kiwanis district, will be the "speaker of the day" at the weekly Kiwanis club luncheon this noon; while faculty members of T. W. C., who are to appear in a musical program tonight at the Wichita theatre, will furnish the music.

BUT: Porter Oakes, W. L. Valentine, Dr. W. T. Wells, Thomas R. Wynn and F. B. Stout will not hear the voice of the speaker nor the sweet music, for Secretary Frank Quiesser has mournfully reported that these five brothers have strayed from the fold, have missed four consecutive meetings and are now ex-Kiwanians.

Frank's weekly letter is a wee bit mournful, it seems, the slender secretary also chronicling the sad tale that E. M. Belcher, J. H. Fletcher, B. B. Greever, E. C. Jordan, L. E. Martlew, L. R. Scheurer, H. G. Smith and H. B. White were absent last week without excuse. But, anyway, Joe Art, E. C. Huckabee, I. A. Fine and C. W. Nolan presented acceptable excuses, and Frank also takes comfort in the thought that last week's meeting showed an attendance of 80 per cent.

J. N. Sherrill is giving the attendance prize this week, a $7.50 shirt. "Sherry" is an attorney, and doesn't sell shirts, and there is a dirty rumor afloat that this may be an old shirt of his'n on which laundry bills aggregating $7.50 have been paid!

"Jaly" Yeargin will give the "silent boost," but Frank doesn't say what it is; just stays as silent as the boost.

MILL STRIKERS ADDRESSED BY SAM GOMPERS

President of American Federation of Labor Pledges Textile Men Support of Organization.

By Associated Press.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., March 12.—The American Federation of Labor will stand firmly behind the textile strikers of New England in their fight against wage reduction and increased working hours, Samuel Gompers, president of the federation, declared here tonight, addressing a meeting of several thousand persons. Speaking to an audience of 3000 in Pawtucket in the afternoon, Mr. Gompers, who is touring the textile areas of New England where strikes are in progress, gave a similar pledge on behalf of his organization.

"Come what may," said he, "the United Textile Workers of America can count on the American Federation of Labor to stand behind them to the fullest extent of its power, and the American Federation has a membership of 5,000,000.

"These members, with their wives and children represent 25 per cent of the population of the United States. The American Federation of Labor will exert every effort ungrudgingly, cordially and enthusiastically to help the textile strikers to at least get bread during their struggle."

He declared textile workers knew, if few other people did, that about a year ago wages in this industry were cut 22½%. They knew that the cost of living had not been reduced when that cut was put into effect. Today a further reduction of 20% was offered. Mill owners thinking that because the first cut was accepted with little more than a murmur, the second would be accepted "in actual silence," in addition to the new wage reduction mill owners proposed to extend the 48-hour week to 54 hours.

"Men and women of the laboring class who accept every kick that is given them are treated as yellow curs are treated," declared Mr. Gompers.

"I have read that the manager of one of the mills in Rhode Island said the state must protect its industries," he continued.

"I was always under the impression that the paramount duty of the state was to protect its people. The womanhood and childhood of the country demand protection.

"Mill owners say that under existing conditions it is impossible for them to compete with the mills of the south. Much already has been said in reply to that claim. The fact that the textile industry in the south is largely owned and controlled by northern capital is controvertible. No attempt yet has been made to dispute that fact.

"If the textile workers accept this 20% reduction, is it not reasonable and natural to suppose that the textile mills of the south will meet this cut with a similar reduction in wages there? If that cut is made will not the same competition between the north and the south again prevail? It will, and the mill owners of Rhode Island will again demand 10 or 20% reduction. Then each side will go on competing and depressing downward. What then will become of the textile industry in America. Let this competition continue and there will be no textile industry left in New England. Thank God, there are enough industries in the United States to allow men and women now employed in the textile business to find a livelihood."

WHO'S WHO

F. E. SCOBEY

F. E. Scobey, San Antonio, Texas, has been named to succeed Ray T. Baker, as director of the U. S. mint.

Scobey is a staunch republican in the Lone Star State, where the like are scarce.

F. E. SCOBEY

Also he is an intimate friend of the president and surprised the country when, shortly after the election, he literally stole the president-elect and brought him to the land of cactus and mesquite for his post-election rest.

Scobey, like his more distinguished friend, swings a wicked golf stick, laughs a hearty laugh and has a voice that would do justice to a train announcer.

Scobey is a native of Ohio. He was clerk of the Ohio state assembly when Harding was a member of the state senate from 1899 to 1903. Their friendship dates back to that time.

Since moving to Texas a few years ago, Scobey has not been actively engaged in politics, but he is not altogether an outsider at the game in that state. He has been consulted by those who at different times have run republican politics in Texas and when Harding became a candidate for president he had himself elected a delegate to the national convention. There he held out for Harding to the bitter end though the delegation wavered.

Scobey is president of the Scobey Fireproof Storage Company a member of the Country club, the San Antonio club and the Rotary club. He has a pleasing personality.

IOWA PARK AND ELECTRA ENDORSE PRINCIPLES OF WICHITA COUNTY ASSN.

Citizens of Iowa Park and Electra, in mass meetings Sunday afternoon, gave their endorsement to the organization of the Wichita County Citizens' association, and to the resolutions passed when the association was organized in Wichita Falls two weeks ago. There was a good attendance in both places, with a fair sprinkling of women, and with the crowd in accord with the speakers, as indicated by their response, but there was none of the peppery, argumentative passes that characterized the organization meeting.

R. E. Huff, chairman of the executive committee of the association, Frank Kell, J. T. Montgomery, T. B. Noble, Mayor W. D. Cline, members of the executive committee, and a number of other Wichita Falls citizens, attended both meetings.

Mayor Cline, Judge Huff and Judge Montgomery were the speakers at both meetings. A full explanation of the purposes and plan of operation of the association, and the conditions that brought about its organization was made by the speakers.

Sharp criticism of the administration of some branches of law enforcement in Wichita county, and of some individual cases that have brought about conditions leading to the organization, featured the addresses.

"This is not a political organization," all three of the Wichita Falls men said, "but we do ask that those who become members promise to pay careful consideration to the qualifications of candidates we may, after investigation, see fit to recommend for your consideration. We are not pledging you to vote for any candidate, say for sheriff, that we may recommend, but we will expect you to consider carefully our suggestions.

"Your executive committee at the initial meeting, was empowered to make a recommendation to Governor Neff for a district attorney. The man we recommended has been appointed, and we believe from what we have learned of his qualifications, and his personality, that he will make this district a good, and a fearless district attorney."

Commendation of the manner in which the district judges were according to the suggestions concerning speeding up the criminal docket was also given by the speakers, and a personal commendation given the judges for their efforts.

"This association is not asking for a conviction in every case where an indictment is returned," said Judge Huff, "for it is as much a part of law enforcement to see that the innocent man is acquitted, as to have the guilty punished. We are merely asking that the law be enforced impartially and speedily."

A thoughful and conscientious jury service, a fulfilment of the obligations of citizenship by reporting felonies known to have been committed, careful consideration of the officers of law enforcement elected, and a sincere, whole-hearted support of these officers, when elected, was presented as the principle obligations a member of the association takes upon himself when joining.

There were a number of members enrolled at the two meetings. Organization of the precinct associations will probably take place later, under direction of the members of the general executive committee, in that precinct.

KAY'S ADDRESS IS DEFENSE OF THE PURITANS

Speaker Denies So-called Blue Laws Can Be Correctly Referred to As "Small Town Stuff."

"There is a lot of fun being made of puritanism and 'blue laws' at the present time," declared Judge John C. Kay in his address to the Men's Bible class at the Olympic Theatre Sunday morning. "But do you know that there never was a great nation that was not established by the puritans? You hear people talk about Sunday laws as being 'small town stuff,' although it has been over six hundred years since you could buy anything except a prescription in London, which could hardly be considered as being in the small town class."

Judge Kay failed to hold out any hope to those who would have the prohibition amendment repealed. The speaker told of seeing a "wretched girl" in vaudeville, holding out a bottle of what was represented as beer, and exclaiming, "So you will come back." "But she was wrong, declared Judge Kay, for it wont come back. There is no place in the economy of nature for it." The address in part is as follows:

The best definition of life is that it is a series of changes. Now get that through your heads, that it is not one thing, one program one standard matter, but a series of changes. It is so in all nature, the blackness of the night is followed by the morning in all its glory; the winter is followed by the spring and your difficulties and my difficulties, which are the pressing burdens today, become but a laughing memory after a while. Who cares anything now about the panic of 1873 or the Black Friday that they had in New York at that time or the panic of 1893, and so every difficulty that we get into, every calamity because life is made up of changes, that difficulty, that stress, that strain must have an end and a change, while the cold winds blow in the winter, the seeds are lying on the ground in the woods and somewhere God is cutting the fabrics to make a new summer for his trees and mixing the paints for the flowers that are going to bloom after the cold winds and the frost are gone, so that whatever your status is, whatever your difficulties are, it is well for the brave man and the strong man to remember that, that, like everything else, cannot last.

Now this lesson is about puritanism. You know there is lots of fun made in the papers about the Puritans and the blue laws. Every once in a while you hear somebody say they are going to have the old New England blue laws enacted. They seized upon some set of laws that some crank proposed which were never even referred to a committee, much less passed, and called them the blue laws, when no human ever had such laws. What they are talking about in regard to the blue laws is prohibition, and the Sunday laws and they say we are going to repeal the Sunday laws. I heard a fellow here say, "that is small town stuff." I do not know what size place you call London, but it has been over six hundred years since you could buy anything there on Sunday except a prescription, and that is the people that we came from.

I heard a poor wretched girl on the vaudeville stage holding a bottle of beer in her hand and crying out, "So you will come back." Ah, it will never, never, come back! Why will it not come back? Because there is no place in the economy of nature for it. And you hear fellows talking in congress and in the legislature and in the paper like they were going to do away with prohibition. Do you know that not one man got up in congress and offered to abolish prohibition. If you cannot get one man to do it what are you going to do with one hundred million people. Puritanism! I do not know that I am especially a shining light among Puritans, I believe in it though. Did you know there was never a great nation that was not established by them. Why England didn't amount to anything until old Oliver Cromwell went up to London and tore down and destroyed a rich and profligate government and set himself up there as the law, proclaiming himself high protector of England, and passed his Puritan laws and then it was, and not until then, that England was respected on every sea. He made the Protestant churches safe in every country in the world. He wrote religious freedom so high that it can never die and his vigilance was so great that he reached the place where nobody dare to dispute England's rights or his rights. Everybody knows who made this country, it was not jazz people. The same way all over the world.

This fellow Amos was living out there in the woods and he went down there and saw them spending money and cutting up while he cooked his meals down there in the woods on a skillet, and he thought it was worse than it was. It must have been a great surprise to him, who had never yet been in town, to see some of us perform. He went down there and became a great pessimist about the Jew, and he seems to have been right about it. Now all those fellows serve their purpose in the world. It takes a pessimist in every neighborhood to act as a safety valve, but it takes an optimist too. It takes all kinds of people to make a world to keep going. I never could see as much bad in the world as Amos. It may be that my ideas are not like his about there being as many bad people in the world as he supposed, but that kind of a man deserves his purpose in the world, it calls his attention to wrong, shame, ignorance and bad things, it is an unpopular job, I would not want a more unpopular job on earth than to be a citizen fixing things, tell them what is wrong and what to do next. I do not want to get the reputation of fixing everything I see; such a man loses his influence. I believe it is a better policy to look for the good and a better policy to call attention to the good, to the nurture of the good, to point it out, and if your neighbor has a virtue, proclaim it from the housetops, and if your town has a virtue proclaim it from the housetops. Over there, I want you to get this, you fellows who knock Wichita Falls and talk about us, over there somewhere about that Red Sea country they have a proverb that says: 'The wise man spreads his cloak on the spot on his city, but the fool calls attention to it.' I believe that is worth thinking about.

I have not despaired of the human race in Texas, I have not despaired of the human race in all the world, I want to say that every man in Texas has always been good to me as long as I have lived here, thirty-three years. You know you will find what you are looking for. If you are looking for the worst of it you will get the worst of it. You have to fish in the water and plow in the ground, and if you are looking for some fellow to double-cross you, as these fellows say, if you are looking for it you are going to find it. I never find it, nobody ever hurts me. If a fellow takes something from you he doesn't hurt anybody but himself.

I want you fellows to go out here and quit looking for the worst things to happen in life and commence looking for the best things, and that is my philosophy of life. I cannot keep people from just naturally giving me a whole lot and I have faith in humanity and faith in my fellowman, and I believe that is the reason he has some in me too. That is the way to look at life. This is a fine world and a fine country and a fine people, with a great religion and a great Father over us all and we cannot lose and we are going to win.

HARDING LAUDS TREATY LETTER HUGHES WROTE

President and Party, Cruising Down Florida Coast, Stop on Shore to Learn the News.

By Associated Press.

ROCKLEDGE, Fla., March 12.—President Harding today expressed satisfaction over the Hughes letter to Senator Underwood on the four-power Pacific treaty.

"That's fine. I am glad he did it," the president said when told by newspaper men the substance of the letter as carried in news dispatches from Washington.

The houseboat carrying the president and Mrs. Harding and their party, which is cruising down the Florida east coast, had stopped for a few minutes here for mail, telegrams and newspapers. None of the party came ashore, but to waiting newspapermen the president expressed satisfaction over the Hughes letter.

Mr. Harding evidenced much interest when told of the fight in the senate yesterday over the treaty and the use by Senator Underwood as one of the weapons of argument in support of the pact of a letter from Secretary Hughes asserting he himself had prepared a draft of the treaty after consulting the other American delegates and which draft, with minor changes, became the final text.

Attorney General Daugherty also questioned the correspondents on happenings in Washington, and, with other members of the party, registered satisfaction over developments there.

Among those who welcomed the president and Mrs. Harding during the brief stop here today were Mr. and Mrs. Charles B. Kling and daughter. Mr. Kling is a brother of Mrs. Harding, and lives at Rockledge.

The entire day was spent by the president and his party aboard the houseboat proceeding leisurely down the coast. The night was spent with the boat anchored near Titusville. Tonight the boat was anchored above Fort Pierce where the president plans to go ashore in the morning and motor 14 miles north, for a game of golf.

Just how far south the president plans to go remains unknown, but some members of the party are urging him to continue beyond the middle of the week, the time originally set for returning to St. Augustine. Mr. Harding is improved, greatly, as is apparent by his healthy tan.

No expression has come from the president on the proposed soldier bonus legislation beyond the statement carried in his letter to Chairman Fordney of the house ways and means committee, but developments in congress as reported daily in Washington news dispatches are among the first things which have the attention of the party. To each request for any statement from the president on the newest house proposal on the bonus, administration spokesmen have said the president's position is unchanged from the suggestion stated in the Fordney letter—enactment of a sales tax to raise the bonus funds or postponement of the legislation.

Any other or additional publications purporting to give the president's views, this spokesman said, are nothing more than conclusions drawn by individuals.

FATTY'S THIRD TRIAL WILL BE LEGAL BATTLE

SAN FRANCISCO, March 12.—Roscoe C. (Fatty) Arbuckle, motion picture actor will go to trial tomorrow for the third time on charges of manslaughter growing out of the death on September 9, 1921 of Miss Virginia Rappe, a motion picture actress. Miss Rappe's death followed a drinking party in Arbuckle's hotel suite. It is expected that the process of selecting a jury will occupy the greater part of a week. The trial will see no change in the lists of opposing counsel, but it is said more witnesses will be called than in the previous trials.

The jury in the first trial voted 10 to 2 for acquittal. The second voted 10 to 2 for conviction. Both sides have promised to submit evidence in the forthcoming trial that was not introduced in the others. The prosecution will lack one of its chief prosecution witnesses, Miss Zey Prevost, who left the state after the second trial and has refused to return. It is expected her testimony in one of the earlier trials will be read into the record. The depositions in a number of Chicago witnesses have been obtained by the defense for use in an attempt to prove that the death of Miss Rappe was due to a chronic disorder which came to a sudden climax and not to external force applied by Arbuckle, as the prosecution contends.

HEARING WILL BE RESUMED TODAY ON RUSSELL CHARGES

By Associated Press.

JACKSON, Miss., March 12.—Hearing of witnesses in the investigation being conducted here by a house committee into charges made by Governor Lee M. Russell that a "pernicious" lobby was being maintained here by fire insurance companies which withdrew from the state following the filing of anti-trust suits against them in December, 1920, will be resumed tomorrow morning.

The committee is also inquiring into another charge made by the governor that these companies had fostered the suit recently instituted against him by Miss Frances Birkhead, his former stenographer, for alleged seduction.

Members of the committee had not decided today whether they would call Miss Birkhead to testify.

MURDER OF N. J. CIRCUS OWNER STILL UNSOLVED

By Associated Press.

RIVERSIDE, N. J., March 12.—Scores of possible clues were run down without furnishing a solution to the mystery surrounding the slaying of John T. Brunen, circus owner, who was shot in his home Friday night.

County authorities tonight said developments in the case would make necessary a long examination of Mrs. Brunen and her 18-year-old daughter, Hazel, probably tomorrow.

William Parkson, a lion tamer, who married Hazel Brunen in face of her father's opposition, sent word to the authorities that he would be glad to give any information he could. He was attending a dance at Perthamboy when Brunen was shot by some one outside who fired through the window pane. The circus man had the marriage of Parkson and his daughter annulled.

Hazel Brunen tonight denied that her father had been a friend of Wm. Desmond Taylor, motion picture director, recently slain in Los Angeles. She said, however, that he had been closely associated with William Fox, president of the Fox film corporation, and that they had jointly owned concessions at Coney Island at one time.

SOLON DIGS UP MOCK MENU OF CONFEDERATES

Black, who has been looked upon as safely esconsed in his place.

Davis once represented Texas-at-large in the house of representatives, on an historic day he arise and said some things that were not complimentary to Jefferson Davis, President of the Confederacy. When election day came around Confederate veterans buried him beneath an avalanche of ballots. Now Davis wants to come back. He was famous as a populist and was an early advocate of prohibition.

The House has just passed a bill appropriating $42,500 for 13 Apache Indians, heirs of prisoners of war held for many years at Fort Sill, Okla. Originally there were 85 Indian prisoners at Fort Sill survivors of the Indians who fought Billy Dixon and his little band of Texans at Adobe Walls in the Texas Panhandle, and also remnants of the bands which General Nelson A. Miles battled across the Texas Panhandle.

The government promised the Indians—if they would be nice Indians—that he would give them allotments of land, etc. But Uncle Sam seems to have forgotten all about his promise. So the old Indians died off and their heirs, most of whom are minors were getting in rather tough circumstances, until Representative Gensman took the matter up and pushed the bill through the House. Now the Indians will each have a farm in Oklahoma.

It is a great thing to be leader. Men spend their lives getting to places of leadership in congress. But a leader does not always get what he wants. For instance there is Representative Frank W. Mondell who has been in the house for more than two decades and is now the leader of the biggest majority any party in the house ever had. The other day Mondell had up a public land bill he was very desirous of having passed for it effected Wyoming senate race against Senator John B. ing where Mondell has entered the Kendrick, democrat, and native Texan.

Mondell asked unanimous consent to have the bill considered. But he reckoned without Congressman Daniel E. Garrett, of Texas. Garrett was not feeling particularly good that day, for Mondell had objected to the consideration of Garrett's bill to supply clothes to ex-service men in hospitals, on the ground that "it "really established a new compensation system."

So when Mondell tried to call his own bill up under unanimous consent the Texas solon stopped it, with this ironical suggestion:

"Mr. Speaker, in view of the long explanation made by the gentleman from Wyoming of this bill it is very evident to my mind that it has been ill-considered in the committee. I think it has no business on the calendar in that kind of condition. It opens up the great public land question and is liable to cost millions and millions of dollars to the people of this country. If we cannot get a few old clothes for the disabled soldiers, you cannot get this bill, and, Mr. Speaker, I object."

The moral of which is that even the boss doesn't always have his way.

MINISTER ASKS CHRISTIAN LIFE OF CHRISTIANS

With second Corinthians 3:3 as the text of the morning, Dr. T. S. Pittenger brought a strong appeal to his congregation for the living of strong, clean and pure lives, in order that others, who are not carristians, may read the life and acts of a follower of the Christ in our very words and deeds.

"The text of the morning," said the pastor, "is found in the discussion by Paul of the need of obeying the Mosaic laws, customs and statutes by the Corinthians, and of their value in the building of the character and the social, political and business life of the Jewish race. Certain questions had been raised as to what the people might do or might not do, as Christians, some maintaining that a Jew could do what a Gentile could not do, so the thought I want to bring to you this morning relates to the Christian who has a new life and heart in Christ, who is following the Christian life, with a new line of conduct for the individual. In studying this question we must take all phases of life into consideration.

I have studied this city in various ways and have had a chance to study the trick and crime of men generally, in various ways, so that I have been able to find out some vital things that may interest you. If one individual loses his standing in society, he lowers the standards and morals of society to that extent, while if a number of individuals lose their standing, it only injures society in the same proportion, so that the more that weaken in the vital things, the more society is weakened.

Any man that lives a life so that others, reading it, will be led astray, is not doing what he should do, even tho he himself may not suffer harm thereby, and the man that lives so that his life may be read on the wrong side contributes to the wrongdoing of society just that much. The trouble with the Christians of this community is that they are not living lives that can be read the way they should be read by others watching them. The thing that keeps a pastor worried is that good people, with so many likeable qualities, persist in setting examples that eventually lead to wrongdoing in the community. What we need is for the Christian people to write the messages into their lives that can be interpreted for the good and the uplifting of the community. We should live lives so that others coming into contact with us will feel a touch of the divine presence.

Business houses, banks, theaters, all advertise their business and in like manner the Christian people are the advertisements of the church of the living God by the conduct of their lives. A man can write the characteristics of purity and cleanliness into his life so that people will trust him, he can write loyalty into his life so that people will know he will be in the thick of the battle till the last man falls, and the people of this community can so write the characteristics of Christ into their lives that people will know them in that way.

It is not the breaking of the big laws that makes us criminals in the sight of God but it is the constant breaking of the little things that are so easy to keep that shows the intent of the heart. Paul urged the Corinthians to live clean, pure lives, so that in going about the city the people would know them to be the followers of Christ. The breaking of the little laws may not send us to the pen but it keeps us from living the kind of lives that will be interpreted for the good of others. Going to one dance may not be harmful, if the dance be decent, but the present day dances are not decent, so that even one dance is harmful. Things were done during the boom and war period that would not be tolerated today, so that it is now time for us to draw the line between what we will and will not do, to get on the right side of life, as God wants to do, and to live the kind of lives that He wants us to live.

BOLD PROFESSOR WAITS ALONE FOR NOTORIOUS GHOST

By Associated Press.

CALEDONIA MILLS, N. S., March 12.—The spookhunter, Dr. Walter Franklin Prince, was alone tonight in Alex MacDonald's little home over on the hill, hoping that the "thing" which caused Alex and his family to vacate would get friendly and suggest a game of "tag."

Down here in the settlement the folk sat up late expecting at any moment to see the professor, his hair on end, fleeing from whatever it was that took liberties with Alex's cattle, slapped a provincial detective and a reporter when they grew too bold and then refused to walk when its would-be visitors called.

There are some here who believe Dr. Prince has already discovered the secret of the ghost, or perhaps made its acquaintance and arranged for a friendly little chat tonight.

Dr. France has taken precautions to prevent members of his party from giving out any information that he has shared with them, and members of the MacDonald family who visited their erstwhile residence Friday night were pledged to secrecy regarding what happened.

Dan McGillivray, a neighbor, said tonight:

"I reckon the doctor saw all he wanted to, else why all this gum shoe stuff.

"We had one mystery up here all winter—now we've got two," he added. "First it was the ghost, now it's the ghost hunter."

No report was made public of the happenings of last night in the MacDonald home. It was generally believed, however, if the ghost went for a walk it managed to evade Dr. Prince's cob web system of jingling ghost alarms.

Tomorrow morning Dr. Prince will be joined by members of his party at the spook hunt, then all will leave for Antigonish to entrain for Halifax. Dr. Prince will make a written report on his investigation.

plan definitely to go out as teachers of mathematics, science and English and combine them with the great ideals of the Bible. A Christian educator is Dr. Stout; a Kiwanian of high degree is Dr. Stout; he will be the principal speaker at the luncheon of the Kiwanis club of Wichita Falls at the noon hour today. He is as widely known in Kiwanian circles as he is in the educational circles of the country. He should have a message for Kiwanians. Doubtless he has. He comes here with the Music Master, Carl Venth, and the faculty of the Texas Woman's College because he admires progressive people, dearly loves to visit progressive cities and is almost as fond of music as he is of the Bible, of journalism and athletics. The Music Master and the soloists will make their bow to a Wichita Falls audience at the Kiwanian luncheon prior to their appearance at the Wichita Theatre tonight. Dr. Stout will hold the center of the speaking stage at the luncheon; he will be an interested spectator at the festivities of the night. He dresses as smartly as a Wall street broker; when he shakes hands he has the grip of a farmer; when he speaks he looks you straight in the eye. Sing on, "Lima Beans."

Texas is coming into her own. Texas is the imperial commonwealth. Texans fought for their own freedom in the long ago and with the sword won their own independence. Texas is the land of majestic distances and magnificient opportunities. Colonel George M. Bailey of the Houston Post is not a native Texan but he sings the glories of Texas like a wandering harpist or minstrel of old. He came from the mountains of North Carolina in early youth and he's been "telling of Texas" ever since. This epic from the Bailey pen is worth while: "Texas oil refineries produced nearly a billion gallons of gasoline last year, the Texas division being exceeded in volume of output only by the East Coast division, which produced slightly over a billion gallons. With the total production of the country 5,153,549,318 gallons, approximately one-fifth was made in Texas. Oil has become one of the big four interests of the State, which now includes live stock, cotton, lumber and oil. For more than half a century Texas has been an important factor in feeding the country with its beef production. Producing one-fourth or more of the South's cotton crop annually, Texas does more than any other three States combined to clothe the nation. Beginning originally with 40,000,000 acres of timber, 30,000,000 acres of it has been exploited and the lumber used in building throughout the Middle West, the Southwest and in foreign countries. And now oil, the latest of the State's great resources to be tapped, is produced in volume to be of national concern. Feeding, clothing, housing and furnishing fuel for manufacturing and transportation, Texas has become indispensable to the country as a source of raw materials. No other State approaches it in variety and volume of products. Texas this spring is observing a number of holidays which commemorate events connected with the liberation of the State from Mexico, and which led up to annexation to the United States. People outside of Texas pay little attention to these holidays, but were they to stop and consider what Texas is contributing to the nation, the significance of those events which ushered Texas into the Union would be more fully realized, and Texas holidays would be remembered and honored throughout the nation. Independence Day, Alamo Day and San Jacinto Day are primarily of interest to people living in Texas, of course, but the occasion is they commemorate foreshadowed the development of a great territory that is vital to the life of the nation today. Imagine the United States without Texas, and early Texas history will have a deeper national interest." Texas has the greatest Agricultural Fair and Exposition on the North American Continent. It is at Dallas. Texas has one of the greatest Live Stock Shows on the North American Continent. It is at Fort Worth. Texas has the greatest Cotton Palace of any cotton producing country. It is at Waco. Some day Texas will lead in manufactures and then Texas will be as imperial in the wealth per capita of its people as it is foremost in territorial area of all the States today.

Former Lieutenant Governor W. A. Johnson of the Hall County Herald, pioneer of newspaperdom in the Panhandle country, is a lifelong Prohibitionist and was a champion of equal suffrage many years before its coming. Oscar Branch Colquitt was just the reverse. He did not believe in prohibition or woman suffrage. The former governor took himself out of the race for senator the other day in the boldest document or address that has been given the people in recent years. He denounced the "Invisible Empire"; he declared for the enforcement everywhere of the written law; he made a masterful appeal for civil and religious liberty and announced his willingness, if necessary, to aid in the organization of a party in Texas in defense of civil and religious liberty and, in a political sense, to give battle to those who believe in the Masked-Midnight reign of the unknown and the taking of the law into private hands by men who call themselves guardians of a higher law and its mob-enforcement under Texas skies. Former Lieutenant Governor and Editor Johnson is an admirer of Colquitt and this tribute from the pen of Johnson to the former governor appeared in the current number of the Hall County Herald: "O. B. Colquitt is the first announced candidate to withdraw from the race for U. S. senator in Texas. This announcement is one that is frought with many possibilities. One can reason any way he chooses about the position taken by Governor Colquitt, but he can not dodge the fact that he has always been very strong as a vote-getter in Texas. He has had a line of supporters that no one could shake loose. He has for many years been a consistent anti, and the anti voters of the old days will still support him, regardless of who is in the race. Of course, there are others of the same general allignment, but when the polls were closed, Colquitt had the votes. This county is about an average Texas county, as far as the general allignment goes, and in this county, Colquitt would have been second man in the senatorial race. Other old antis are in the race, such as Culberson, Ousley, Henry and Ferguson. The old Colquitt following will perhaps be divided between these four candidates. Some of it will perhaps also go to other candidates in the race. As we see it now, Colquitt would no doubt have been in the run-off. As it is, no telling what will be the effect of his withdrawal. A person may agree or disagree with Governor Colquitt, but whichever he does, he must admit that he is a man of ability, convictions and high personal integrity." Former Governor Colquitt gave to the people in his address the platform which he would have stood upon had he made the race for senator. Colquitt lost the senatorship six years ago. He ran first at the primary. Then all factions united against him and put Culberson over. There will be the same line-up this year unless the signs are misleading. Judge Barry Miller is directing the Culberson campaign. He is a past-grand when it comes to political managerial finesse. He has made the nominating speeches in legislative halls four times in placing the name of C. A. C. before the lawmakers of Texas. There is a Culberson following in every county of the State. Texas Democrats have been voting for the Culbertsons, father or son, for almost fifty years. What will the Texas Democrats do this year? What will the factions do when it comes to the run-off?

REDTAIL, THE HAWK, IS JUST TOO LATE

Redtail the Hawk was lazily sailing around and round high in the air, very much after the manner of Ol' Mistah Buzzard. He was doing it for two reasons—because he just loves to sail round and round that way and look down on all that is going on on the Green Meadows and in the Green Forest, and because he was getting hungry and he was trying to make up his mind what he wanted most for his dinner. He wasn't very particular, not really. There were several things he could think of that would taste good. There was Chatterer the Red Squirrel. He had had his eye on Chatterer for some time, but somehow Chatterer always managed to give him the slip. There was Danny Meadow Mouse. He wouldn't make a very big dinner, but he would be tender and very delicious. It was very annoying that Danny managed to keep himself out of a sight so much these days. Then there was Mr. Greensnake and Grandfather Frog. But Mr. Greensnake was hard to see unless he happened to be moving, and Grandfather Frog was so old and wise that Redtail had about given up trying to catch him. He had just about decided to go over to the Smiling Pool and try for one of Grandfather Frog's foolish children, when he heard the voice of Blacky the Crow down below him in the Green Forest.

Redtail's sharp eyes twinkled. "I wonder what Blacky sees now," thought he. "If it can get him so excited as all that, I guess I will have a look myself."

With that he sailed swiftly over the Green Forest until he was right over Blacky the Crow, who was in the top of a big pine tree. Blacky was so busy watching what was going on below him that he didn't see Redtail at all. Now, Redtail's eyes are very, very sharp, and, looking down from high up in the blue, blue sky, he could see all that Blacky saw and more, too. He saw Peter Rabbit dodging this way and that way for his life, with Reddy Fox right at his heels. He saw Old Man Coyote and Granny Fox hurrying-up and he felt sure that when they got there Peter wouldn't have the least chance in the world. He surely would be caught by one of them, and that would be the end of him. Right away Redtail made up his mind that neither Reddy Fox nor Granny Fox nor Old Man Coyote should have Peter Rabbit if he could help it. Not that he meant to help Peter. Oh, my, no! The fact is, he meant to have Peter for his own dinner. He had had his eye on Peter for a long time, and he had tried many times to catch him, but always Peter had been too smart for him. But now, with so many others to dodge, Peter wouldn't be watching up in the sky. He would just watch his chance and snatch Peter right out from under the very noses of the others. It would be great fun, for he had no love for any of them. They hunted so much on the Green Meadows that he sometimes found it hard work to get enough to eat, and now he would get even with them.

He sailed down, down out of the blue, blue sky almost to the tree tops and no one saw him. Then as Peter ran lipperty-lipperty-lip across a little open place, he closed his wings, and with his great cruel claws spread wide he shot down like a brown thunderbolt to seize Peter just as Granny Fox sprang out from her hiding place and Reddy came tearing along at Peter's heels. And, like them, Redtail the Hawk was just a wee, wee bit too late—Peter was safe under a big pile of brush.

Watching the Parade

By JOHN PILGRIM

My friend the Boy has been sadly out of sorts lately. He doesn't know precisely how to tell about it. When I press him for a confidence—by roundabout routes, for if you ask a boy to take his soul out and open it up before you he refuses—he becomes somewhat inarticulate. His usual statement runs something after this fashion:

"Aw—Gee!"

But I think I know what is ailing him. His mother is a dear lady. She is very glad indeed that her son was not a daughter and so, being of the sex sometimes called inconsistent, she is doing her best to bring him up as a nice little girl should be brought up. She hovers over him. That is the only word to use. She broods. She spreads her maternal wings. If he gets his feet wet the house is in a commotion. If he stays out a bit late at night the house is in another commotion. If he gets himself slightly smeared she asks him with tears in her voice if he:

"Will not try—TRY HARD—to be Mother's Little Gentleman?"

That sort of treatment might do very well indeed for some boys. I may have my own idea as to what sort of men they would grow into, but I've seen 'em grow, and they do not always grow into that sort of men at all. But this kid is a highly masculine specimen of young America. It is almost as much of a crime to keep him tied up as it is to try to make a lap dog out of a German police hound. He needs dirt and green grass and swimmin' holes and fights and loud brawls and chilblains to develop him as he should develop.

If he were given that sort of thing he would come naturally for his loving. But to love him all the time is about as hard on that sort of a kid as to scold him all the time. Especially the thing to do when he does something really bad is not to cuddle him on mother's knee—a perch he has somewhat outgrown and on which he is very uncomfortable—but to take him in what passes for a woodshed in these days of nickel-plated flats and give him a nice old-fashioned dose of strap oil. It does wonders for kids. I'll say so. I shall always hold the memory of my grandfather in loving memory because when he licked me he licked me good. I could show the welts to the other kids and did.

One of these days my friend the Boy will try to run away from home. I can see the run-away coming. I ran away myself when I was his age. And jeemly crickets, wasn't I glad to get back!

REGARDING BEES OR BEE KEEPERS

("Bees for pleasure and profit on application. Crosby Lockwood & Sons, Hall-court, E. C."—London Times.)

How do you like your bees?
For pleasure or for profit?

Perhaps you have never tried them for pleasure. If not, now is the time, before the fad becomes so common that even the working people are keeping bees.

o o o

Most people do not realize the vast amount of happiness and contentment a bee can give its keeper. As a matter of fact, the modern 2x4 apartment is ideal for bee keeping. Carefully brought up, a well-bred bee makes a delightful and companionable pet. It can be taught to stand on its hind legs, lie down, roll over, and even to beg for food. In the case of a bumble bee this begging for food is called "bumming a meal."

o o o

The more intelligent bees can be taught to go upstairs and get the master's slippers. If they are carpet slippers with a flower design, the bee enjoys it hugely.

o o o

And there are few things so amusing to the master as the sight of his pet bee flying around the house with his slippers. It is often difficult to ascertain whether the bee is flying somewhere with the slippers or the slippers flying somewhere with the bee.

o o o

At any rate, it is very diverting to the master, to the bee, and probably to the slippers.

The modern apartment is ideally suited to bee keeping. In fact some apartments are large enough for two bees' keeping. Great care must be taken in catching and in keeping a bee. A bee should be taken when young—when the person taking it is open to debate, but all agree it should be taken by surprise.

o o o

Bees inhabit flower beds. One way to take a bee is to go out into the garden and hide behind a hollyhock, first removing your hat and exposing your bald head, upon which you have previously painted a picture of a hollyhock blossom.

o o o

Then you make a low buzzing sound like a dumbwaiter buzzer. Presently a bee will light on your cranium. You then slap your hat on, imprisoning the bee.

o o o

This may be kept up until you get as many bees as desired or until your head really begins to blossom.

o o o

Another way is to set out trained bees as decoys. When the wild bees see the decoys they will light in their midst. You should then throw a wet blanket over the head of the bee you desire, carry it to the bee coop and hurl it inside.

o o o

A person with the hives makes the best bee catcher.

o o o

Of course, much depends on the bee—f'instance whether the bee is intelligent. Some bees be and some bees be'nt.

o o o

There are all kinds of bees, but perhaps the best known and most popular is the F. O. Bee of Detroit. Then there is the Bee-V-Dee and the famous B. R. T. of Manhattan. Not to mention the well known Bee in the Bonnet.

o o o

In raising the young bee great care should be shown with regard to its diet. It should be fed exclusively on bone scraps until it has become strong and self-reliant. Then it may be fed beef, mutton or lamb, but no potatoes. Potatoes seem to ruin a bee, somehow or other.

o o o

After you have raised a bee to manhood or womanhood the thing to do is to open a window and chase it out. That's where the pleasure comes in.

THE CASE FOR FRANCE

By DR. FRANK CRANE

(Copyright, 1921, by Frank Crane.)

In the court of American public opinion the case for France should at least be clearly stated.

As near as we can come at the consensus of public opinion among the leaders of French thought and the directors of French action, the case may be stated substantially as follows:

It is with somewhat of dismay that the French people become aware that the people in the Allied countries, with whom they have recently been in such close unity in standing the universal peril, seem to have the idea that the Republic of France, intoxicated by its military victories and swelling with vanity, is getting ready to put on the grand airs of Louis XIV and to swagger about in the boots of Napoleon.

France is not drunk with military glory. Proud as she may be of the endurance and heroism that her sons have shown for more than four years upon the battle-field, she still knows all too well, what that victory cost her in men and money, and could consider another war with nothing but horror.

What could she hope from another conflict?

She has already delivered Alsace and Lorraine and she has a Colonial Empire which has reached the limit of her expansive force. What more could she want? The left bank of the Rhine? She knows that the left bank of the Rhine is peopled with six million Germans and that she could incorporate it by force only in violating her own principles and exposing herself to a war of revenge which would be justified on the part of Germany.

What certain of our British and American friends take for imperialism or militarism, is our set purpose to compel Germdny to fulfill the obligations imposed by that treaty to which all the Allies have affixed their signatures.

What our friends take for militarism is the anxiety of a peace-loving people of forty million inhabitants—a number which is not increasing—who are neighbors to a country of eighty million inhabitants, the number of which is constantly increasing, who have twice in fifty years subjected France to the horror and shame of invasion and who, whatever they may be individually, have shown a singular docility in allowing themselves to be dominated by a military party.

It is not surprising that Bolshevik Russia cries out against French militarism, since had it not been for the aid of France the Red armies long ago would have trampled Poland in the dust.

It is not surprising that the Germans consider as militarism our determination to remain upon the Rhine and not to disarm rapidly, since without that constant menace Germany would never pay her debt.

But that our friends in America and Great Britain should place their faith in so gross a charge betrays indeed an incomprehensible ignorance of the nature of the French people and the ideals of the French Republic.

This in a nut-shell is a statement of the case for France.

Rippling Rhymes

By WALT MASON

RAIN AND DROUTH.

The water's piled in my front yard, all kinds of water, soft and hard, and still the rain comes slopping down, and saturates the weary town. The rain against the window beats, and catfish throng the village streets, and even frogs and ducks are tired; they have more rain than they desired. And while the day's so wildly wet, I read the Gophertown Gazette, the old home paper that has brought for years its freight of Gems of Thought. And back in Gophertown, it seems, all dried up are the babbling streams; there is no water in the wells; a parching population yells for just a little slice of rain, and all its yelling is in vain. No rain clouds gather in the sky, the river beds are dusty dry, while fish sit up along the brink and gasp for something fit to drink. The weather bureau should reform; why don't it always send a storm where there should be a cloudless sky, and send a drouth where it is dry? Why does it drench the western coast, and dodge the plains that need rain most? Why am I always stuck in mud, or battling through a turbid flood, while other fellows voice their wrath because they cannot have a bath? The weather bureau makes me tired; all winter long it's kept me mired.

JUST OFF FASHIONABLE DRIVE

Martha smiled with pleasure as she moved about the little apartment. For one thing, she had bested her husband. Vainly had he argued against a move to the city, vainly had he pointed out how comfortable they were in the midwest town. They owned their home, they liked their neighbors, they had hosts of friends and he earned a good salary, but Martha still clung to her own opinion. In the city the girls would have opportunities. She talked vaguely on this point and finally Clem gave in.

"It will be a terrible uprooting, Martha," he said slowly, "but I think every one should have the right to say where life shall be spent. If nothing will content you but moving to the city, we'll move, but you'd better go up and visit Grace and look about for a flat. Then I'll give up my job here and bring the furniture and the girls and you can give them all these opportunities."

When Clem had consented Martha had immediately written her cousin and now she was making the visit he had suggested. She had looked eagerly for a flat near Grace and they had seen one in the block west of Broadway in the same street.

"I did want to get in the same building, Grace," Martha had said. She hated to cross Broadway, for the automobiles coming from five directions frightened her. "I thought we could spend so much time together while the children are at school."

"You'll find there isn't so much spare time," Grace had said, her eyes on the clock at that moment. "You see, we cannot get up early as we did at home, because there is never any heat early. At home one could put a shovel of coal on the stove and that was all there was to it. Then, with the late start in the day, comes the marketing. The stores are always crowded and there is a lot of time wasted waiting around. So many things are cheaper downtown that it is better to go down, but then again there is a half day consumed in going and returning. I have a lot of sewing to do, too. Clothes wear out much faster here, and I have to wash the curtains once a month."

Here Martha had interrupted. "Do you mean to say those curtains were washed last month?" she asked.

"Yes, you'll see," Grace's tone was weary. "Life is much more complicated here. If Frank could work in a small town I'd never stay here in this cooped-up place."

"But, you are within a block of the busiest thoroughfare," Martha had cried.

"What good does that do me? I'd rather have a cottage with a yard around it than to walk past those pretentious houses. They mean nothing to me. They only make our rent higher."

But Martha, her eyes filled with the glamour of the great city, refused to heed. Clem had done well. There was a substantial balance in the bank at home and they could rent their house. At least she could give her girls the opportunities she had longed for.

As she wiped the dishes she heard a step on the back stairs.

"There," commented Grace, "there is an instance of the 'wonderful opportunities' here. That girl has a lovely mother. She is just as sweet a girl as you would find back home, but——"

"Where is the girl?" Martha looked out at the rainy porch, but saw no one except a woman walking on tottering heels. The short skirts flared out above too-thin stockings. The unbuckled galoshes flopped untidily over the high-heeled pumps. An imitation fur was tightly held about thin shrugging shoulders, and the thickly powdered nose was blue with cold. Blond hair curled out under a swathed turban, with a costly aigrette extending from the right, and long suede gloves reached to the edge of the black satin sleeves that extended only three inches from the shoulder.

"That," said Grace succinctly, "She is fourteen years old. Her father makes a very moderate salary, but the girl cannot be contented unless she dresses the way she sees rich women dress. She goes to the movies nearly every night and copies what she sees there, too. Do you notice the way she crosses her arms over her thin little chest? That is her latest affection. She sees a few foolish women who have nothing to do but follow the fads of the moment, and she wants to emulate them. She goes to a good school and has the 'opportunities' that you keep harpin upon, but she has no time for study. All her spare time is spent in fixing up new costumes. Cutting out the necks and shortening the sleeves of her blouses. Those gloves never cost less than $12, and on a rainy day you can guess how long they will last."

"But," gasped Martha, "why doesn't her mother make her dress sanely."

"At first she did try to, but she, like you, wanted her girl to have everything as nice as the other girls at school. Now she has become accustomed to the bizarre appearance of Lucille; you see, Lucille's friends look just the same. Being just around the corner from a wealthy street is of no advantage. If they could get ahead enough to move out to a suburb where life does not move so swiftly, and where ideals still have a chance of emerging, Lucille would settle down into the pretty child she is. I think a lot of her; she is too fine to be warped by this artificial mode of life, but——" Grace made a hopeless gesture—"her mother is proud of the girl's beauty and has gradually ceased to refuse her anything, no matter how absurd. They are in debt now and have no chance of saving anything."

The rain spattered sharply against the windows. The baby in the next flat wailed bleakly, the milkman was late, and there was no way of getting milk, for down in the shop there would be only yesterday's milk until the big wholesale wagon came. Above a vocalist competed with the baby successfully. The janitor knocked sharply at the back door and told Grace that the garbage must be wrapped in newspapers before being deposited in the pail. In the alley delivery cars let out their mufflers and sirens shrieked.

Martha sensed the uproar only vaguely. Her eyes were fixed on the backstairs. Lucille had long since passed down with her absurd flopping galoshes and the barrel of the janitor was now descending on his back, but Martha did not see his gloomy face. Instead she saw her two girls ready for school. Their faces were powdered and they wore pert little veils with large dots. They had exchanged their simple, well-tailored frocks of serge or tricotine for flimsy satin of brief lengths.

"Grace," said Martha suddenly, wrenching her gaze from those impossible children of thirteen and fifteen. "I believe I'll go back home. My girls are just children, and I guess they have all the 'opportunities' they need right in their own home. I've been wondering how we'd like being cooped up in those small rooms and——"

"And," smiled Grace, "you are lucky enough to awaken in time."

Psychopathic Hospitals

By H. ADDINGTON BRUCE

Author of "The Riddle of Personality," "Self-Development," Etc.
(Copyright, 1921, by The Associated Newspapers.)

I have been asked to say something about psychopathic hospitals, and in especial to make clear the difference between a psychopathic hospital and a hospital for the insane. It is possible to make this difference clear in a very few words.

The hospital for the insane is, as its name implies, an institution for the care and treatment of persons in an advanced state of mental disease. The psychopathic hospital is a place where the mentally sick in general are received for diagnosis, observation, and effort to prevent their maladies progressing to an advanced and perhaps incurable state.

The psychopathic hospital, that is to say, represents an attempt to make hospitals for the insane decreasingly necessary by affording timely provision for people who otherwise might drift helplessly to insanity.

Also—and even more important—the psychopathic hospital aims to improve the mental health of the community in general by accepting for study and treatment, not merely the potentially insane, but persons whose conduct in any way indicates that their mentality is not as vigorous or well-ordered as it ought to be.

Thus, people suffering from psychasthenic dreads are suitable candidates for treatment in a psychopathic hospital. So are neurasthenes and the victims of hysterical affections. And, properly enough, the psychopathic hospital acts in conjunction with courts, schools, and charitable agencies to ascertain the true condition of delinquents whose mental integrity has been called into question.

In some psychopathic hospitals, moreover, effort is made to help not only those who unmistakably are mentally ill, but also those who, by repeated inability to retain employment, indicate that they need mental readjustments of some sort. And in all hospitals of this sort helpful effort is extended whenever necessary to families of patients as well as to the patients themselves.

Again and again it has been found that the mental difficulties of patients are rooted in, or intensified by, unfavorable home influences. Sometimes, too, it is found that in the home are relatives even more in need of treatment than the patient who applies to the hospital.

Hence social service work of a most useful sort is often done in connection with the medical work of the psychopathic hospital. And all the while, coincident with these inner and outer healing activities, research activities are under way with a view to gaining greater knowledge of organic and functional mental maladies.

Such hospitals, obviously, hold promise of rich achievement. Those in existence have already achieved much. But it cannot be said that as yet there are in existence anything like the number of psychopathic hospitals the immensity of their task demands.

This, no doubt, is due chiefly to inadequate appreciation, both by the general public and by legislative bodies, of the real value of well-organized psychopathic hospitals as conservers of that greatest asset of all communities—the mental health of their people.

Some day the needed appreciation is sure to come—and with it action that will mean a perceptible abating of the many evils incident to mental ill-health, evils ranging from pauperism, vice, and crime to the hopelessness of the absolutely mentally incompetent.

ARBUCKLE NOT FRIGHTENED BY "UNLUCKY 13"

Film Actor Goes to Trial in Los Angeles Tomorrow for Third Time on Charge of Manslaughter.

HOW "13" DOMINATES IN ARBUCKLE TRIALS

(By International News Service.)

SAN FRANCISCO, March 12.—Here are some of the thirteens figuring in the Arbuckle case:

Addition of the figures making up 1219—hotel-room number in which the fateful Arbuckle party was held—gives thirteen.

"Fatty" was indicted September 13.

He was arraigned one month later—October 13.

There were thirteen jurors in the first trial.

An important climax in his second trial was reached Friday, January 13.

There were thirteen women in the panel from which the first jury to try the comedian was selected.

Arbuckle and his wife recently celebrated their thirteenth wedding anniversary.

And Arbuckle goes on trial for a third time on the thirteenth day of the month.

By ELLIS H. MARTIN,
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 12.—Again does the mystic figure of 13 appear "in the life of Roscoe ("Fatty") Arbuckle. Tomorrow—the thirteenth of the month—the film comedian goes on trial a third time for manslaughter as a result of the death of Virginia Rappe, pretty film actress who died following a gay Labor Day party given at a local hotel by Arbuckle.

Since the inception of the case the number thirteen has figured persistently.

But it has no terrors for Arbuckle. "The thirteenth is just as good a day as any," the film comedian said.

There are prospects that the third trial would be even longer drawn out than the first two. The first trial required about three weeks, ending in a "hung" jury, which voted ten to two to acquit. The second trial took four weeks and resulted in a ten to two disagreement, the majority favoring conviction.

The task of selecting a jury to hear the third trial is expected to be an arduous one.

Recent filmland scandals, including the Taylor case, are expected to enter into the examination of the jury in order that the defense may be assured that no prospective juror has permitted these things to influence or prejudice him or her against the defendant.

Once the jury is selected and the taking of evidence begun it is expected that each side will take greater care in presentation of the evidence than in either of the previous trials.

The defense has let it be known that "all of the facts" will be given this third jury. On instructions from Arbuckle certain matters relating to the dead girl were not placed in evidence in either of the previous trials. The defense is expected to offer these, including two affidavits taken in Chicago at this trial. —The state will fight vigorously this line of evidence, as, it is contended, it dates too far back to be relevant to the case at trial.

"Fatty" May Take Stand.

Stung by the assertion of members of the second jury which heard the evidence in the Arbuckle case, that the defense was "weak," the comedian's attorneys planned to leave no point open. In the second trial Arbuckle failed to take the stand, because the state read his testimony at the first trial into the record, and defense attorneys waived their right to argue the case before the jury.

Arbuckle will in all probability take the stand in this trial, and arguments will go the limit.

The state will be minus one of their star witnesses. Zey Prevost, showgirl, who, with Alice Blake, attended the party, has succeeded in making her way from the state. Her testimony at the previous trial will be read into evidence, but the state has no means of compelling her attendance. She proved a reluctant witness at both trials, and the state fought hard to have her declared a "hostile" witness at the second trial.

"Struggle Print" Evidence

A battle royal promises at this trial over the state's "struggle print" evidence. At each trial the state has introduced a door from the hotel suite in which the party had been held, and E. O. Heinrichs, finger-print expert, identified alleged fingerprints thereon as those of Miss Rappe, with Arbuckle's superimposed.

The defense savagely attacked this testimony at the second trial, one defense expert alleging the prints were not genuine. It is understood that the defense will call additional experts at this trial in an effort to impeach this line of evidence.

The state's case will be practically the others, with the exception of the the same at this trial as in each of absence of Miss Prevost from the stand.

Fashions for Americans

Housework loses much of its element of drudgery if a woman can feel that she presents an attractive appearance while about her tasks, and certainly present-day style developments are very friendly to the woman who does her own work, offering a wide array of charming little frocks that may also be very inexpensive. Such a one, made of printed sateen, is shown in today's sketch. It is trimmed with embroidery, plain color fabric being used as a piping or binding. Appliqued motifs appearing at the top of the pockets and helping to accentuate the basket design of these pockets also serve as trimming.

This dress is merely one of many equally charming, and it may offer a suggestion to the woman who does her own sewing as well as her other housework, as the ideas in this dress may be widely varied and used in the development of others.

Flowered cretonne plays an important role in the fashioning of house, garden and porch dresses, sometimes being used for the entire frock with a trimming in plain color, and again being employed for perhaps the skirt, with upper part of dress in plain chambray or linen. And then, as every woman knows, flowers may be cut from cretonne and appliqued onto a plain fabric, making an effective trimming.

Black sateen is used to make charming house frocks this season, with colored applique work forming the trimming, or perhaps a heavy wool embroidery giving a decorative touch, and the well-known old reliable unbleached muslin gains in favor for the purpose season after season. Unbleached muslin house dresses and work aprons are trimmed very effectively in checked or striped gingham, in embroidery or in appliqued motifs, and these garments will stand the hardest sort of wear and tear and innumerable launderings.

Another fabric much favored is heavy cotton crepe. The same trimming used for unbleached muslin is applied to the crepe and with equally good effect.

House Dresses of the Present Day Are Smart as Well as Practical.

"NEVER TOOK $60 WORTH OF BATHS IN MY LIFE"

(By International News Service.)

CODY, Wyo., March 12.—Jeff Chapman wasn't even a "regular Saturday nighter" he protested in defense against an action of Blanche Gokel, proprietor of a "hot springs" bath establishment here, who was suing him for $130 due on baths.

The court awarded a judgment of $60 against Chapman, prompting this explosion from the defendant:

"I declare I never took $60 worth of baths in four months. In fact, Your Honor, I never took $60 worth of baths in my whole life."

A Wife or a Profession?

BY CAROLYN BEECHER

(Copyright, 1922, by Carolyn Beecher)

CHAPTER XXII.

Annette's intimacy with Luella Gower grew. They were much together. Dr. Blake was always pleasant, always gentlemanly, when he met Luella, although he disapproved of the friendship. Had he as much as hinted his reason Annette would have been wildly angry.

Luella Gower had a greatly exaggerated idea of her own attractions, of her power over the opposite sex. She was a strong, vital sort of a girl, the sort to make a strong appeal to most men. That she had not impressed Howard Blake was apparent, and it piqued her. In several ways she had tried to attract him, ways perfectly plain to Howard and which did not intrigue him in the least.

Howard Blake was in love with his wife. He had given all he had to give of himself to Annette. Aside from this he was not at all what is designated as a "ladies' man," although he was invariably courteous and affable. Perhaps his experiences abroad might have made him a bit disdainful of the too open methods Luella took to attract him. A good looking officer was not allowed to forget the fair sex "over there." But whatever the cause he was not the man to whom Luella's tactics appealed. That she posed as his wife's friend disgusted him still more.

Piqued because of her failure, Luella determined to revenge herself by implanting suspicion of the doctor in Annette's mind and by making her one of the crowd to which she belonged and of which she knew the old doctor disapproved, and more than half suspected Howard did also.

The motor accident in which Miss Norwell had been injured seemed to play into her hands. Here was a cause for jealously ready to her hand —the lovely golden haired blue-eyed girl, who had so suddenly become a patient of the doctor's.

Now that Elsie was back things went far more smoothly in the home. Good food always has its effect upon human beings. Annette was not as fretful, as inclined to tempers as when she was scorching her face or burning her hands over the hot stove, or making them red by washing dishes. Howard was more comfortable, because his food was nourishing, well cooked and tasty. He remarked:

"It is good to have Elsie back. I guess we will have to keep her."

"Of course we shall keep her. That is as long as my money holds out."

Elsie came in just as Howard spoke and stood a moment waiting the answer. Then she came hastily forward into the room and said:

"Of course I'll stay. I can wait for my pay."

"You better keep still until you are asked to wait," Howard said severely.

"It ain't so bad waiting." Elsie said not at all abashed by his tone. "If I don't git it I don't spend it."

In spite of himself Howard laughed heartily and Annette joined him.

"You're quite a philosopher, Elsie," he finally said.

"I don't know what that means, but I guess I'm it," she returned with the freedom of the small town helper, whose people attend the same church and who feels herself not one whit lowered because she helps some one a bit better off.

Elsie had scarcely left the room when the old doctor came in accompanied by Mrs. Burr.

"Burr wanted to see Annette about something and so I said I'd come along," Mortimer Blake said as he lighted one of Howard's cigars. "Can't afford them myself, Howard, but might as well smoke them when I get the chance."

Howard knew he was only teasing, so paid no attention but commenced at once to talk of a case that interested him. Annette and Mrs. Burr had gone into the living room.

"What is it, Mrs. Burr?" Annette asked coldly.

"I heard you had Elsie back."

"Yes, she came back a few days ago. What of it?"

"You may not like it, I don't expect you will. I suppose you'll think I am your uncle's servant and haven't any right to meddle. But he's worried. He wants Dr. Howard to succeed more than he wants anything in the world. He also loves him better than anything in the world. Why can't you be a real wife to him and do your share instead of running around with that Gower crowd, and that Agnew doctor who tried to get your uncle's practice away from him?"

"I do not see that what I do is any of your affair, or of Uncle Mortimer's either."

"Perhaps it isn't, but you are making things hard for all of us. I have to keep denying things, not on your account, but because of him, the old doctor. If you'd let Elsie go and do the work you'd not only save money but you'd save some other things I know about—reputations maybe."

HOME NURSING and HEALTH HINTS

By M. JESSIE LEITCH

Just at the tag end of the winter little Susie Jones developed chicken-pox and had to stay home from school.

It was bad enough to have chicken-box and little red spots all over one's face and chest, but to stay home from school almost broke Susie's heart.

Her mother, desiring to do the right thing by Susie, put her to bed in a darkened room, confusing for the moment the matter of darkened rooms and measles.

Then came the doctor, who had been too busy to get around on the first day, Susie was ill.

He was a nice, big, cheerful doctor, with graying hair and red cheeks that wrinkled into a fascinating smile when he looked at little girls like Susie.

And he said at once that there was not the slightest reason in the world why Susie should stay in bed as long as she remained in the bright room that got the morning sunshine, kept warm, and did not go into other parts of the house.

Susie Easily Amuses Herself.

So Susie, with paper dolls and picture books and the freedom of the bedroom, got along very nicely, and stayed up most of the day, and amused herself as only little girls with an imagination and chicken-pox can.

The other children were not allowed in the room at all, and all the dishes Susie used were kept separate —and not returned to the kitchen at all.

"I must say the child doesn't sound very ill," mused Susie's mother one morning as she heard the child singing at the top of her voice. The doctor had said that chicken-pox was seldom severe in children's cases, and that unless Susie developed a rise in temperature there was not the slightest need to worry.

Susie did not develop a temperature, but the little red spots became blistery looking, then yellowish, and intensely itchy.

And Susie began to scratch. Which was the worst thing she could do, because only when the pustules are scratched is there a liability of the skin being marred with scars.

Cotton Mittens for Susie.

So Susie's mother made a pair of white cotton mittens, which were not very handsome, but they made it impossible for the small, restless fingers to scratch the spots.

Every day Susie was anointed with sweet smelling oil, which helped a great deal to prevent irritation of the skin.

And in a little less than two weeks the child was better. There were only faint pink spots on her skin where the spots had been, for the daily oiling had taken care of the dried out pustules.

And having soaked all the bed clothes in disinfectant for a few hours before sending them to the laundry, Susie's mother had the room well aired, allowed the sun to stream into it all one day, and after a general polishing of woodwork and wiping down of walls the room was ready for use again.

And Susie having almost forgotten the humiliating white cotton mittens, was happily back at school.

SLEDS CALLED PLEASURE VEHICLES BY OHIO MAYOR

(By International News Service.)

CINCINNATI, Ohio, March 12.—Despite the ruling of a New York magistrate to the contrary, sleds are pleasure vehicles and will be considered so by police officials of Cincinnati, Mayor George Carroll declared after reading of the suspended sentence given to a man because he insisted upon pulling a sled, on which his child was riding, through a park where all but pleasure vehicles were barred.

"Kids get more pleasure out of their sleds than their parents do out of their automobiles," the Mayor said. "I look back over my coasting days with the greatest pleasure."

SALMITES WIN OUT 9-7 IN HOT GAME MARKED BY MANY HEFTY HITS

"Cowboy" Strepy, the Human Woolworth Building, Shows Cleveland a High-Priced Brand of Rookie Twirling; Fred Beck and Ray O'Brien Continue to Soak the Marble.

By "NICK" CARTER

The ball game was about to start. Anxious thousands packed the big stands waiting for the announcement of the batteries. Manager Luke McHoozus, hard-boiled old veteran of a hundred campaigns, sat on the bench thoughtfully looking over his twirlers. Should he send a veteran in against Joe McAllister's sluggers? No, by Godfrey, he would risk his all on that stalwart, splendid specimen of manhood, the rookie hurler Dick Merriwell. McHoozus arose; his mind was made up; so was his bed at home; he was ready for anything:

"Merriwell," he roared, "you'll start today."

The batteries were announced. The thousands in the stands were silent, stricken dumb by the announcement. What? Send in the rookie, Dick Merriwell, in an important game like this? McHoozus must be crazy.

The tall, handsome young pitcher took his place on the mound; he took the ball; took a fresh chew; took a look at the catcher's signal; took his time; took a wind-up—and started pitching.

Dick Merriwell lives today enshrined in the hearts of the public. Veteran ball players, sluggers of great magnitude, bowed before his curves and speed, while on the other hand it was easy for Dick Merriwell to hit home runs because virtue was on his side. This shows you, my dear young reader, that you will always win in the game of life if you have virtue, beauty, modesty, curves and speed.

Fans of Wichita Falls, I trust you do not consider me off my coco because of the above. It is Sunday as I write, and I am trying to preach a little sermon—trying to tell you in a roundabout fashion what "Cowboy" Strepy from Hicksville Corners, Texas, did to the Cleveland Indians out at Athletic park. There were other Spudders embroiled in the glorious fracas, which the Salmites won 9 to 7, but I prefer to open the services with a recitation of the deeds of Cowboy Strepy.

This Strepy person is approximately—Oh, I guess he's even taller than that; he's so darn tall he's naturally round-shouldered where the high winds for several years have been hitting him in the back of the neck. He stood out on top of the hurling hill, and the Indian batters must have thought some guy on Pike's Peak was snowballin' 'em!

Cowboy Hogties 'Em.

Strepy worked only four innings; that is, he pitched and the Indians worked. Customarily during the course of four innings, twelve players go to bat. While Cowboy worked, however, six players went to bat, and six went up to look at the ball as it whizzed past 'em. That long drink o' water from the sticks struck out six men in four innings is what I mean! Didn't anybody get a bit off'n him? Oh, surely. Jeanes dropped a weak Texas leaguer in right field, Yuna singled to center, and Guisto hit a homer off the left field wall—a high soarer that the strong south wind floated gently over. But those three hits were all.

Cowboy Strepy went to bat once himself. He stood there, as motionless as the Woolworth building and just as tall, and let a low one on the inside go past. Ball one! He didn't move as a high one on the outside slipped into "Ginger" Shinault's glove. Ball two! Pitcher Edmondson decided he could safely take a chance on the Sleeping Beauty, wound up slowly and slipped a fast one right down the old alley:

Cowboy's long, lean, lanky frame leaped to sudden life. He swung hard, crisp, clean, all the way from his heels, and then walked around the bases, touching 'em all. The ball? Oh, yes, to be sure, the ball—why it went over the center field fence. A small boy brought it around to the gate later, but Will Gray let the boy keep it; the ball was flat on one side; you couldn't play with it any more.

That's all "Cowboy" Strepy did, except for a few little details here and there. He didn't issue any bases on balls, although he did park a ball in Hammond's ribs—and in the fourth frame he struck out the side; he began by whiffing Sorrells; then he hit Hammond; perhaps he eased up a bit on the next one, which Guisto poked over the fence; then Cowboy got peeved and struck out Benedict and Yuna in succession.

Salm sent Cowboy to the clubhouse, and the Indians gave three silent cheers. "Lefty" Carmen went to the hill. The Indians touched him for 4 hits in 3 innings; he uncorked one wild pitch, and he farmed three batters. Carmen had plenty of stuff yesterday, but the little southpaw was working too fast.

Graham, a rookie righthander, worked the last two frames, and allowed 3 hits, gave one base on balls and struck out one batter. Graham showed a fast-breaking curve ball, but his delivery telegraphs that same curve to the batter.

Shot From Ambush!

Graham went to bat once and hit at a wild pitch for the third strike. Someone let out a yell to him, and Graham headed for first base. Shinault, Cleveland catcher, raced back to the stand, grabbed the rolling ball and cut it lose; it soaked Graham squarely in the seat of his britches, and he did a nose dive in safety over the base! That's one case, I claim, where the Indian shot the paleface from ambush!

That old ball game was a thriller yesterday, gang. The Spudders took a one-run lead in the third; the Indians grabbed two in the fourth and the Spudders tied it up again in their half; Cleveland made another in the fifth and one more in the sixth, while the Spudders got one back in their half of the sixth, leaving them one run to the bad; then the Indians pushed across two more in the seventh frame, and a three-run lead looked mighty big; but the Spudders raised Ned in their half of the seventh and knocked in 4 markers, again taking the lead by a lone score; Cleveland then tied it again in the eighth—and the Slugging Spuds hammered out two more on 'em in their half.

Fred Beck continued on his merry way with the stick. The big fellow made four hits out of five times up, including a two-bagger, making a record of 4 hits out of 9 times at bat in the two games with the Indians—and every hit he made was a Simon-pure wallop with steam back of it. O'Brien also continued to pound the pill, getting two out of four, one of the two being a hefty triple; while Benny Allen kicked in with two hot singles. Schmidt gave another nice exhibition of receiving for four frames, while Hall, a John Tarleton college youngster who showed up here yesterday for the first time, was sent in by Salm long enough to go to bat once and peel off a three-sack blow to center field.

Almost 1,900 fans viewed the Spudders' second victory, and all of 'em were tickled foolish with the ability, the pep and the enthusiasm the Spudder rookies are putting into their work this spring; while the two veterans making their first appearance here, Beck and O'Brien, are so rotten that the fans just naturally hate 'em both—Oh, ya-as, they do!

Want Gravel Contracts to Be Explained

An investigation of the charges brought by the Western Sand & Gravel company with regard to sand purchased for concrete road work will be demanded of the commissioners' court Monday, following adoption of a resolution to that effect at a meeting of the "Wichita Falls Welfare League" Sunday afternoon, according to E. H. Breaux, acting chairman.

The meeting was not announced in advance. The mass meeting called for Saturday afternoon on the vacant lot at Tenth and Ohio was called off when the expected crowd failed to put in an appearance.

The organization is the outgrowth of the mass meetings held at the dance hall near the Ohio avenue river bridge.

"BO" IS OPPOSED TO CHANGE MADE IN GRIDIRON RULES

By Associated Press.

DANVILLE, Ky., March 11.—"Bo" McMillin, Centre college's all-American football star, who next year begins his career as coach at Centenary college, Shreveport, La., does not think the rule of abolishing the free kick for goal after touchdown, which was passed by the national rules committee in New York today is an improvement in the gridiron game.

"On the spur of the moment I do not favor the rule," he said. "I do not think the rule will stick more than a year or two because it will take up too much time."

Battle Notes

Hey, Skinney! Li'l Jakey Miller blew in yesterday, and was out at the park in uniform! Now, by gum, we'll have a little more excitement in the outfield, huh? Jake passed the ball a while, then trotted around the park a couple of times with Knudier and called it a day. The hard-hitting center fielder looks thinner to me; he's a little short on wind, but otherwise says he feels fine.

Wright, the long-lost infielder purchased from Oklahoma City, also put in an unexpected appearance, thereby gladdening Salm's heart. There is going to be a royal battle this week for those infield jobs. Tanner, Sorey, McDonald, Hall, White, Wright and Evans, all seeking jobs at second, short or third.

Ray O'Brien proved yesterday that he has that shot-gun arm credited to him in the advance dope. Yuna singled to center in the second inning, and tried to stretch it to a double—but Ray picked him off at second, making a lightning, snap throw to Buddy Tanner.

Benny Allen made a pretty steal of second in the second frame, ending up with a neat slide inside the bag.

Benedict outrageously robbed Ray Schmidt of a hit in the fourth, when the stocky catcher cracked one on a line a few feet inside of third base. Benedict went over like a shot, and made a sensational grab of the pill.

Shinault played pocket billiards with Umpire Lee Magee in the fifth, bouncing a mean one off Lee's shin. Mister Shinault, I rise to remark, also socked a wicked homer over the center field fence in the seventh canto. It wasn't a weak sister with the wind behind it, such as Guisto hit earlier, either; it was traveling hard and fast.

Ray O'Brien "gotta holt o' one" in the sixth, and slammed it at Middleton's bean. The Cleveland pitcher and Lee Magee both ducked; and nobody blamed 'em—if Middleton had stuck up his glove, that ball would have torn his hand off at the wrist!

Benny Allen won a hundred-yard dash in the seventh, after rescuing first on a clean single to left. Middleton tried to pick Benny off the bag, and heaved the ball to the club house. Guisto started after the ball and Benny started for second, third and home, winning the race by a nose.

Rookie Hall, making his absolutely first appearance, folks, won 'at old ball game. With the score tied in the eighth, Hall drove Graham home with the needed run with a ringing three-bagger to right center.

Compensation Is Theme of Dr. Grafton

By FRANK S. REID.

Dr. Grafton's morning sermon subject "Compensation" suggested itself in the 27th Chapter of Isaiah, 8th verse: 'He stayeth his rough wind in the day of the east wind.'

Said Dr. Grafton: "We have here the figure of the two classes in which God is determining the measure of the tribulation that shall come upon His people; tribulation that was brought about by reason of their sins.

"We have in this passage of scripture of the law of Compensation, or in other words the law of proper distribution. The Great Jehovah God in His providential care for the human family, puts into operation, often times, this law of compensation and sees to it that the storm wind does not blow in our lives at the time when the raw east wind is blowing. In other words, that when there is great distress, trouble and sorrow. He will see to it that calamity is prevented from coming into our lives.

"This law of compensation is illustrated in life. We see it in its workings day by day. There are counterbalancing advantages that come to men and animals when there has come into their lives that which would handicap them; that which would be a handicap to them. Running through life is this same law of equalization, busy continually safeguarding life and limb. She sees to it that the storm wind does not blow when the raw east wind of adversity is blowing. Here is a man with two strong limbs. He is making his way through life. Suddenly there comes a calamity and he loses one of them. Here is a man who has two eyes. He is making his way in life. Suddenly there comes a calamity and he loses the sight of one of his eyes. Here is a man who is winding his way up the hillside of life, when suddenly there comes a calamity and he loses his health. Something like this might handicap you; prevent you from doing your part in the world's work. That would be a calamity indeed and in truth. What does this law of Compensation do to the man who has lost his eye, nature goes to it that strength comes to the other eye; there is a keenness there; nature equalizes it. The man who lost a limb would be greatly handicapped along the way of life were it not for nature compensating; giving double strength to the other arm. The Great Jehovah God counterbalances things.

"There is this same law in the providences of Almighty God. How does God prepare men over against the day of adversity; over against the day of testing time? In the first place, I believe God prepares men by educating them. Trouble comes suddenly; comes as a thief in the night; when man is not prepared and he feels helpless and wanders about and suddenly there comes stealing in his mind a passage of scripture that he has been taught that God stood over him through the years, and the sun comes up again and the clouds are gone, and he faces life conscious of the fact that the danger has passed and he hears the call 'friend I am sorry for you; my heart goes out to you and I want you to know I am your friend'. Often times men say 'he stood it better than I thought.' He had strength all along the way. The Great Jehovah took him over the time of the storm wind, preparing him for that hour.

"Judgment may come to your lives and mercies walking alongside and the Great Eternal God sends mercies and judgment to compensate you in time of great grief."

WHAT'S THIS! WALTER JOHNSON'S TWIN? ALMOST

Joe Gleason, at left, and Walter Johnson.

If we hadn't given the thing away in the headlines would you have known that one of the gents above was not Walter Johnson, "King Walt?" It's a good bet you wouldn't. For Walter's double, Joe Gleason, a righthanded hurler being tried out with the Nationals this spring, looks acts and pitches so much like Walt that new arrivals at the camp are startled when they see the two in action. Look over the photos above. Note the position of the throwing arm, the tilt of the body, the position of the legs and the similarity in build.

MARLIN MAN SAYS SPUDDER HURLERS O. K.

The sporting editor of The Record News has received from G. A. Pringle, secretary-manager of the Marlin Chamber of Commerce, a letter sketching the glorious lives being led by Frank Kitchens and his staff of Spudder hurlers. Pringle doesn't profess to be an authority on baseball, wherefore his comment quite naturally does not contain very much detail regarding the work of the players; in fact, G. A. puts out mostly a swift line of talk boosting the good old town of Marlin—which shows he's the right kind of citizen—and he also seems to be laboring under the delusion that "Kitch" owns the Spudders, lock, stock and barrel.

However, G. A., we're grateful to you for your interest, and we hope you'll send more letters. Here is the one referred to:

"The Wichita Falls battery staff composed of Frank Kitchens, catcher, and manager of the squad; Abe Bowman, pitcher; C. Darrough, pitcher; A. Ruth, better known as Young Babe' Ruth, pitcher, and C. A. Ramsey, pitcher, is doing splendid preliminary training work and enjoying the splendid hot water baths in the wonderful Marlin mineral waters.

"With two work-outs a day and a couple of good hot baths with accompanying rub-downs, Kitchens says he and his men will soon be in prime condition, and that the Wichita Falls team is going to snatch the Texas pennant this year with very little trouble.

"Kitchens is one of the best catchers in the Texas league and with the husky and speedy bunch of twirlers that he has lined up for this season, he is likely to get such a lead early in the season that the next team to his, in the percentage column, can never reach him with a ten-foot pole.

"Kitchens is working out some with the Indianapolis team which has its whole bunch here and is showing the Indians how Texas backstops seldom let the pill go by even in practice. Frank says it is a little early yet to say which of his pitchers is going to be the star of the team this year, but that they are all going good and with these fine baths that made the New York Giants famous, he believes they will all be hurlers of the first magnitude.

"To say the least of it, the Wichita Falls boys are well pleased with their stay in Marlin and the Marlin citizenship appreciates having as guests, the fine manly and high class bunch of fellows that they are."

DAVE PAUL ORDERS 1922 SILVER BALL AND BAT FOR SPUDS

Dave Paul, local jeweler, yesterday announced that he had ordered another silver bat and silver baseball to be awarded to Spudder players at the end of the Texas league season. Last year Paul's silver bat and ball were given to Bob Bescher, left fielder, by vote of the fans.

This year, however, Dave is dealing a new deck. According to the dope handed out yesterday, the silver bat will be presented to the player with the highest batting average, while the ball will go to the Spudder pitcher who wins the greatest number of games.

SHOTWELL MAY COACH '22 HIGH SCHOOL ELEVEN

According to a well-defined report in circulation here yesterday, Shotwell, coach of the 1920 Abilene High school football team, is coming to Wichita Falls as a high school instructor next fall, and will have charge of the Red and Black gridiron squad.

Shotwell is said to be slated to fill the position of instructor in manual training at the local high school, as Dabney, who is teaching in that department now, is returning to Texas A. & M. college next fall.

Members of the 1921 high school football squad have been hopeful (and the same is true of hundreds of alumni) that Harry Viner, last year's coach, would be called in again by the high school authorities in the fall—while on the other hand, the faculty of the school appears insistent on a teacher-coach.

If an outside coach is retained, there is hardly any question but that the job will be offered to Viner. If a teacher-coach is insisted upon, Shotwell might be just the man to fill the bill. He was usually successful with the Abilene team in 1920, his eleven ending the season as runner-up in the battle for the state championship. Cleburne high and Houston Heights high tied for the title that year.

TEXAS U. WILL HOLD SPRING GRID TOURNEY

Special to the Record News.

AUSTIN, Texas, March 12.—Next fall's University of Texas football squad will be selected from the players who come out for spring training which begins on Monday, March 27, according to a statement by Berry M. Whitaker, head coach of the Longhorn eleven.

"Many new players will have to be developed this spring on account of the loss of eleven regular members of the 1921 football squad. Training this spring will be far more intensive than ever before as the large number of new men will have to be taught the rudiments of the game and the style of play to be adopted in 1923. Practice teams will be chosen and actual scrimmage frequently engaged in" said Coach Whitaker.

A spring football tournament will be held this year at the end of the training period. Seven silver loving cups will be awarded to the best linesman, and, center, backfielder, punter, passer, and field goal kicker. This tournament will serve to augment the enthusiasm of spring football training and enable the coaches to better familiarize themselves with the abilities of the players, it is expected.

FOOT RACER WILL RUN AGAINST FOUR ROLLER SKATERS

Percy "Doc" Smallwood, trainee of the Cleveland, American League, baseball club, who was in Wichita Falls Saturday and Sunday with the Cleveland Yanigans, has a neat little job on his hands the next three days.

"Doc" Smallwood claims the world's championship as a middle-distance runner, holding the three, five, ten, twelve and fifteen-mile records. In Dallas today, tomorrow and Wednesday he is going to run at the Fair Park roller rink against four of the fastest roller skaters in Texas.

In today's race, Smallwood will run one mile to the skaters' two; tomorrow he will run a mile and a half against the skaters' three miles, and Wednesday he will trot three miles to the skaters' five.

Can "Doc" get away with it?

TYRUS R. COBB FACED BY TWO BIG PROBLEMS

Detroit Leader Must Bolster Up Wrecked Infield and Select Several Capable Hurlers.

"Danny Clark" and "Topper" Rigney Among Nine Contenders for Five of the Berths As Infielders.

By Associated Press.

DETROIT, Mich., March 12.—Two "major" problems confront Tyrus Raymond Cobb as he inaugurated his second attempt to pilot the Tigers into a pennant.

The Detroit leader must bolster up his infield, wrecked last year when the keystone combination gave way, and from a coterie of a dozen pitchers taken into the training camp at Augusta, Georgia, eight or ten must be found to bear the brunt of the coming campaign. On last year's showing, the catching and outfield corps can hold their own with anything in the American league, while Blue and Jones, also veterans, are without competition for their places at first and third this season.

If "Pep" Young is back in form that marked his playing prior to last year, Manager Cobb's worries about second base will be ended; if not, George Cutshaw, the National league veteran is expected to have the call for the post, unless one of the youngsters aspiring for a berth, shows major league ability.

At short, the field probably will be open to recruits only, as Flagstead, who filled in last year after Donie Bush was benched, is classified as an outfielder.

Cobb has let it be known that seven infielders will be carried this year, in order to assure plenty of utility strength, and with Blue and Jones assured of their jobs, the fight for the other five places lies between Young, Cutshaw, S. T. Barnes from Kalamazoo, D. C. Clark, Wichita Falls, Fred Haney, Omaha, J. L. Mann, Evansville, E. E. Rigney, Fort Worth, F. C. Herman, Edmonton, Alta., and H. G. Merritt, who was with the Tigers in the latter part of 1921.

Rigney, who cost Detroit $7,500 is considered one of the leading candidates for short, and glowing advance notices have also been received of Mann.

Tiger adherents point to the 1921 records as indicative of the task Cobb faces in whipping his pitching staff into shape. Of the hurlers counted as regulars, Cole alone was credited with more victories than defeats, the figures being 7-4.

Leonard, another lefthander, led the local pitchers in point of effectiveness, with 3.74 earned runs per game, and he ranked fourteenth in American league averages. The other, Oldham, Hollings, Dauss and Ehmke trailed far behind.

Seven youngsters, including Stewart who saw service with the club last year, constitute the additional material on which Cobb has to draw. Of the lot, principal attention is centering on Herman Pilette, and Sylvester Johnson, the pair of eighteenders for whom the club paid around $40,000 to Portland.

The catching staff which last season consisted of Bassler, Woodall and Manion, has been augumented by R. H. Spencer, from Raleigh, N. C. Cobb plans to carry only three receivers, and the veterans are expected to have the preference.

Barring injury of illness, Cobb, Heilman and Veach will likely constitute the Tiger outfield when the bell rings on opening day. If Cobb keeps five outfielders to round out the legal complement of 25 men, the other places furnish a contest for Flagstead, Robert Fothergill, recalled from Rochester and Johnny Mohardt, the recruit from Notre Dame.

IN THE SPIRIT OF THE TIMES.

Eva—Why, I thought they were about to be married?

Bill—Yes, everything was in shape and they had arranged to have the announcement cards printed when the printers went on a strike and by the time the strike was over their engagement was over, too.

NEWS NOTES FROM MOVIELAND

As the artist sees Mildred Harris.

Mildred Harris, formerly the wife of Charlie Chaplin, has turned her back on the movies and is aiming at drama on the legitimate stage via the vaudeville route. It may be added by way of information that anything that Mildred turns her pretty back on is unusually lucky, at least that is the opinion formed on seeing her in a lovely jade green dancing frock of the backless style.

Miss Harris has not made any pictures for six months, although her last work is just being released now. She is playing on the Keith circuit in a little sketch written specially for her and is about to take it into New York.

Mrs. Harris, Mildred's mother, who always accompanies her daughter, tells how Mildred's life is closely following her horoscope as it was read several years ago. That told how she would enter the movies as a child, how she would be married, how she would go on the stage and finally be a successful concert or grand opera singer.

Oh, no, Mildred did not believe it, at least she did not think so, she was not just sure, but so many of the things were coming true. She was considering a play which she would take to London to open there. She sighed a bit sadly and looked as if a tear would fall any moment and said, "Just think, I may have to spend the rest of my life between New York and Europe and leave forever my lovely Hollywood with its roses and trees and green grass."

Miss Harris is a beautiful girl with a wistful look. She has a wealth of golden hair and large blue eyes. She believes she married when too young. She was but seventeen. She also believes that Hollywood is painted much blacker than it really is.

"I know both Mabel Normand and Mary Miles Minter," she said, "and they are both lovely girls. It is the hangers-on at the studios who give the colony the bad name it bears. As for the parties, people have to have them at their homes for there are no amusements out there. There are no theaters, only one stock company."

Then the pressing need of a bit of practice dith a new waltz for her dance, and an appointment with mother to shorten her lovely green frock brought the interview to a close.

"Youth Is Fickle," Declares Donna And Promptly Marries Young Man

Donna Genevieve Couviere Evans Travis, whose philosophy of love changes with her sweethearts, in a dancing pose.

LOS ANGELES, March 12.—Donna Genevieve Couviere Evans Travis has a system of philosophy all her own and it's peculiar—peculiar in that it changes with her sweethearts.

And old Dan Cupid, the relentless little rascal, just smiles at the changes. Love knows no philosophy—pugh.

For Donna, Follies beauty and movie star, has decided, perhaps, that after all it is better to be a young man's slave than an old man's darling.

And this in spite of the fact that only three short weeks before that decision Donna had most forcibly declared:

"My next husband must be gray-haired and 'reliable,' with a sense of duty toward others."

That was after she had been told that her former husband, Nelson F. Evans, Hollywood movie photographer had married in New York before his interlocutory decree became final and had sailed for Europe with his new bride.

But now says Donna: "Wise women change their minds, fools never," thereby shattering one perfectly good system of feminine philosophy. And the reason—why the reason is Charles H. Travis, wealthy and—young.

"No, I am not going fortune hunting among the older generation of my acquaintances," she said at first. "I have merely learned that youth and good looks are dangerous qualities in a husband."

Then she proceeded to unfold her new philosophy of love so that the inexperienced debutante might profit by it.

"I would warn the young girl not to be flattered in egotistic helplessness by the dashing, collar-ad hero and swept off her feet into marriage with a man she is bound to discover shortly to be too irresponsible and unsettled for an ideal life mate.

"Better an elderly fireside protector, though his knees are bent and his hands shake, than the handsome, fickle, young wooer who is made of the stuff of jellyfishes and must be babied and pampered like a child to keep from becoming tempermentally fretful."

Donna says that before their marriage Evans was a wonderful, bashful, handsome boy. He promised everything, limousines, diamonds, furs—everything that money can buy.

So, presto! Wedding chimes. Disillusionment.

"Then Nelson took on that peculiar mental condition known as temperment," Donna continued. "He mimicked all the important persons he came in contact with.

"And he specialized in bizarre caps and scarfs which he had heard other women admire on other men.

"And the way he fought at the divorce trial for custody of Touser, our bulldog, was final evidence of his unmatured personality."

All of Which Nelson Denies.

But love's wounds heal quickly and as love comes in philosophy goes out.

Now three weeks after delivering herself of the philosophy of disillusionment, comes the announcement that the pretty young divorcee has been married to Charles H. Travis.

"How do I explain it and reconcile it with my philosophy?" she asked, after the ceremony had been performed in the bride's fashionable Los Angeles home.

"Well, I've simply learned that there isn't a bit of truth in such philosophy. Why, the very next day after the papers printed my interview I began to be flooded—literally swamped—with proposals from old men.

"Some came by mail and messenger and worded in terribly silly language. I saw after a few days of that that I'd been entirely wrong in thinking the elderly men were settled and mature in their ideas. Why some of them are more flighty than the young fellows ever were!

"Some threatened to end their lives, and other terrible things, if I did not marry them immediately. Can you picture a young woman in search of a level-headed mate married to anything like that?

"And then, too, right in the middle of it all to meet somebody of my age and fall in love at first sight—!"

Don't Overlook Any Diamonds

KIMBERLEY was going back. The farmers were disgruntled. They said they couldn't eke out a living from the rocky soil.

—And all the time, their ragged youngsters were playing with diamonds!

—But the farmers didn't know. Many of them died poor. They thought the priceless gems were pebbles.

—Some folks are just like those Kimberly farmers. They seek opportunity in some distant place and overlook the wealth that is daily within their grasp.

—Advertising is a diamond mine of opportunity. It tells of values you would probably overlook if it was not there to guide you.

Some Chest-Nuts

An impetuous inspector was worried by the noise made by the scholars in the next room. At length, unable to bear the uproar any longer, he opened the door and burst upon the class.

Noticing one boy taller than the others talking a great deal, he caught him by the collar, hurled him into the next room and placed him in a chair, saying: "Now, sit there and be quiet!"

Ten minutes later a small head appeared round the door and a meek little voice said:

"Please, sir, you've got our teacher!"

Two Irishmen wandered into a public house, where the electric call bell, with a press button had recently been installed. Of course this excited their curiosity and when the waiter had supplied them with two "ould ales," they asked him what it was for.

The waiter explained and the rest of the evening he was kept busy by repeated ringings and orders for "two ould ales."

Next morning, the inebriates being still abed, their respective wives met in a shop.

"Bedad," said one, "it's in the pigsty I found my husband this mornin'."

"That's nothin', said the other. "All night long Mike was pressin' on my nose and calling for two ould ales."

McCarthy had worked on the same farm for the last sixty years, and he was very proud of his record. One day his employer said to him: "McCarthy, you are getting very old, and I think it about time you retired."

"Me retire, sir? Why, I worked for yer grandfather, yer father, and one of yer uncles before you became boss. If I had known this wasn't to be a permanent job I wouldn't have taken it on," said the old man, indignantly.

The manager of a store was examining the applicant for a position. "Are you a teetotlar?" he asked.

"Yes," was the reply.

"A good salesman?"

"Yes, indeed."

"Can you tell a good lie?" was another question, and there were others referring to the ability to speak foreign languages, etc., all of which were satisfactorily answered. The applicant was engaged and he got on famously until a French girl approached and made known her wants in her own tongue. Then he was stumped. Five minutes later he was facing the indignant employer.

"This is scandalous sir. When I engaged you, you said you could speak French," he exclaimed.

"True, replied the culprit, "but you also asked if I could tell a good lie."

A battalion of British soldiers in India had to make a forced march of thirty miles to the scene of a reported rising of the natives.

When they got there they found it was a false alarm, and the commanding officer told them they must march home again.

Hearing the groans of the weary ones, he cried:

"If there is any man who does not want to match back, let him step three paces forward."

The whole battalion with the exception of one man stepped forward.

"My good man," said the C. O., "you are a credit to the army. You are the only man willing to march back thirty miles."

The solitary hero stared blankly at the C. O.

"March back thirty miles?" he stuttered. "Why, I'm too tired even to step forward three paces!"

TEXHOMA-ARCHER POOL COMPLETIONS EXTEND LINE OF PRODUCTION

No. 13 Gose of Texhoma Extends Line Quarter of Mile East; Another Completion Is Early Promise.

Operations in New Laning & Moninger Pool Assume Importance; New Locations Extend to Burk Line.

Completion of a couple of new producers in the Texhoma-Archer county pool, and the promise of a third in a few days, with an extension of a quarter of a mile southward for the pool; considerable new developments north and east of the old Texhoma pool in South Burkburnett, and a start towards resumption of drilling operations, after a week's shut down occasioned by the severe weather, featured developments in Wichita county this past week.

The Texhoma Oil and Refining company's No. 13 Gose, the far east well of the pool, was drilled in Friday and is a 75-barrel well. The No. 14, on the north side of the Gose lease, offsetting the Harper production on the Taylor is reported a 50-barrel pumper.

A half mile south of the discovery well of the pool, and a quarter mile from the nearest producer the Archer Oil company is reported on a sand at 1598 feet which gives promise of making a producer. This test is particularly interesting since extensions have been infrequent in this pool, since the earliest days of development.

The Texhoma's No. 15 is drilling around 1550 feet, offsetting No. 4, and the No. 16 is a few hundred feet deep, offsetting No. 7.

In Laning Moninger Pool.

Despite the bad weather there were several new locations made during the week in the new Laning and Moninger pool, opened up by the No. 1 Cropper of Laning, Moninger and Newby, in the sand at 1240 feet, and two miles north of the producing line in the Texhoma pool. Three new wells are to be drilled by the Laning et al interests on the Cropper, one in the Burk-Tex Refinery yard, where the discovery well was drilled, and the other two east of the road, on the Cropper.

From the new rigs and new locations reported there will soon be a line of derricks from the old shallow field to the Burkburnett cemetery.

The Camp Oil and Gas Company's No. 1 Hardin, 80 acres, the No. 1 J. W. Sides of McNeil, White and Keuhn, the No. 1 Sides of Tom Hunter, and the O'Neil et al on the Huffman are among the new rigs already up to go down for this new sand.

A mile and a quarter east of the Texhoma pool on the R. E. Moore farm a new 500 foot shallow pool has been opened up, and two new deep tests, now under way, add to the interest of this east side, which has never been thoroughly tested.

Tests on Moore Farm.

The tests drilled last year by Reising et al on the Moore farm had several good showings, in the various shallow depths, though failing finally to make producers in the 1600-foot sand, a new sand for this pool. These showings led R. E. Moore, the owner of the land, to start drilling for the shallow sand, and the No. 1 and No. 2 fee, just completed are the results of the first operations. These wells are producing from the 560-foot sand, and are fifteen-barrel pumpers, a good average for wells of this depth in the South Burkburnett pool.

A half mile to the north of these shallow producers the Texhoma Oil and Refining company is getting ready to drill its No. 1 R. E. Moore, making a deep test of it.

South of the Moore south line on the Horton, the Dow et al deep test is also under way.

Electra Very Quiet.

Failure of the Gulf's No. 1 T. W. Roberts to get production in the Magnolia new 1600-foot sand, in the Fowlkes Station pool, southeast of Electra causes disappointment to be one of the predominant features of the week. The Roberts is to be put down to the 1800-foot level in the hope that the deep Electra sand which has recently been developed with splendid results in the South Electra shallow pool, may be picked up here. The Gulf's No. 1 Powell failed to make a production in the 1800-foot sand, and is drilling deeper.

These tests are to the west and north of the Magnolia's discovery well, and are several locations away. Their failure in the new sand depth turns attention to the tests to the east, northeast and southeast of he discovery well, including he two Magnolia wells now drilling. The Hunter-Mona Marie No. 1 Roberts and the Sooner Oil Corporation's No. 1 Roberts are also northeast from the discovery well, and due to provide interesting developments in a short time. The Texhoma Oil and Refining company's No. 1 Duke is also located where it will have a good play.

The Texhoma Oil and Refining company's No. 1 Throckmorton, a wildcat about three miles south of the Magnolia well on the Duke, is reported drilling around 800 feet.

On the Douglas, between the Fowlkes pool and the South Electra pool, the Hobbs Oil Company's No. 1 Douglas has been finally abandoned, slightly below 2000 feet. It failed to make a producer in the 1800 and 1900 foot sands, from which there is some production not far away.

The South Electra pool is as badly tied up for lack of water as in previous weeks, with no relief possible except a general and heavy rain. The Gladiolus, Planet and Griswold leases, usually active, are practically shut down.

The No. 21 Burnett is the only rig running on the Griswold Oil company's lease, and this is due for completion some time this week. The Griswold wildcat on the Waggoner has not yet been able to get a test of the 1900-foot sand, the fishing job which has held up operations for the past two weeks, continuing through this week, with the water and bad weather an additional hamperong feature.

New Shallow Well.

The Petroleum Producers company has completed its second 480-foot producer, on the Waggoner, in the new shallow pool to the west of the South Electra production. This well, the No. 4 shows up for only 15 or 20 barrels, a decided falling off from the 100 barrels flush of the discovery well, which has the record to date of the largest producer under 500-foot ever completed in this district. This discovery well kept up its record production for several days, gradually shading off to 60 barrels daily, and kept up its average quite as well as the usual run of 1600 and 1800-foot wells in the old pool.

The No. 3 on this lease is about ready for completion. These wells are being drilled with spudding machines which only need water for the hole, and can therefore run despite the water shortage. Water is being hauled now for this lease, and for a few others that are drilling for this shallow sand. F. M. Gates No. 1 Waggoner, has been drilling and is due for early completion.

None of the proposed tests for the sand opened up by the No. 1 H. & T. C. of the Rio Brave Oil company have yet been able to start drilling. The discovery well, in the 1560-foot sand, is still flowing by heads, though there is not sufficient gas for a very heavy or extended flow. The bad weather has prevented the pump from being rigged up, and the production is still a matter of conjecture.

The No. 2, this lease, is down around 500 feet.

COTTON PRICES CONTINUE HIGH DURING WEEK

By Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 12.—The advancing trend of prices on the stock exchange was continued this week with occasional setbacks, many popular shares exceeding previous high records of the year. Speculative issues overshadowed investment stocks both in activity and extent of gains. The movement derived much of its stability, however, from the progressive demand for dividend paying rails.

The most constructive influence was the high price schedules adopted by a number of independent steel manufacturers, their action bespeaking confidence in the immediate future of that industry. Similar tendencies were observed in the automobile and copper trades and among food stuffs the better inquiry for sugar was accompanied by an upward revision in the raw and refined products.

Traders ignored the many unfavorable 1921 financial statements, nearly all of which revealed drastic reduction of inventories. Almost the only favorable exhibit for that period was the statement of Studebaker, which reported the best year in its history. Tonnage movements on leading railway systems were generally in excess of the corresponding week of the last two years. Steady accumulation of some of the secondary transportation stocks, particularly Ann Arbor common and preferred and several of the cheaper coalers, revived rumors of mergers or change of control to new and stronger interests.

Lower money rates stimulated the markets speculative operations and accelerated the underwriting of new corporate offerings as well as municipals, notably the new city of Detroit and several Canadian issues.

Foreign exchange sustained sharp reversals, mainly in consequence of the British crisis in India, but the movement did not extend to Far Eastern remittances, these holding firm for the most part.

The demand of the United States government and its Rhineland Army expenses be met from the German reparations payments injected a new element into the European economic situation. Bankers were of the opinion, however, that the allies would yield to the Washington government.

MARY SAYS "I'M FROM TEXAS," THEN KISSES AND SMACKS FOLLOW

Mary McCormic, the cowgirl opera star, innocent cause of the excitement.

Helen of Troy was responsible for one war, but that one had nothing on the one caused by Mary McCormic of the Chicago Grand Opera in the grand ballroom of the Hotel Commodore in New York. Mary and Rafaele Diaz of the Metropolitan Grand Opera met in the ballroom. "I'm from Texas," quoth Mary. "So am I," said Diaz, and (smack) he kissed her. The rush was on. Seventeen maids and matrons claimed to be Texans and Diaz smacked them all. The eighteenth one, Mrs. Minna Rosenthal, concert singer, stepped up. So did her husband, Dr. Harvey Rosenthal, and Diaz's smacking stopped as Rosenthal smacked him with his fist.

YELLOW PERIL POLITICS.

(From The Dallas News.)

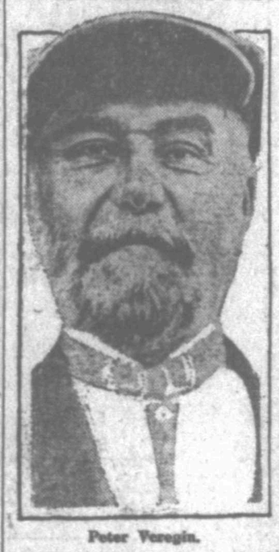

According to The Dallas News, there are only twenty-nine Japanese farmers in Texas and but five Chinese farmers—in both cases a decrease since 1910. "Lest we forget," a Texas lawmaker last year introduced an alien land measure to "prevent the Japs from obtaining a monopoly of Texas land." The News tells something else: Thirty-two per cent of the Texas farms in 1920 had no farm vegetable garden, 30 per cent had not a single pig and 12 per cent had no kind of poultry. No wonder the tenant farmer was hard hit when the slump came.—Wichita Falls Record News.

The yellow peril is nowhere so perilous as in the politically uncertain State of California. In that great commonwealth there are so many Japanese you see one nearly every day, if you tour the country industriously, as most visitors do. In fact, the Jananese population of California is so conspicuous and arrogan that you see throngs of them every time you read a speech by a California candidate, and mostly they are in a menacing attitude, as revealed by the rhetorical disclosures of the gentleman on the stump. This condition is demonstrable within the vocabulary of any California politician, but far less obvious in the census returns. The census returns, in fact, signify that if all the Japanese in California were combined into one Jap he would hardly be big enough to challenge Jack Dempsey. But in California, where there is no threat to white supremacy, an issue calculated to make the pale faces paler is very useful to gentlemen in need of a background for their candidacy. We know how it is here in the South with certain of the political spitball artists who need a little quack medicine for their pitching arms.

Peter Veregin, leader of a strange Russian religious sect, the Doukhobors, which is said to have 1000 followers in Canada, proposes that the whole tribe drown its children under 16 years of age and the aged as a protest against exorbitant taxes. STANDARD OIL AND SCOUTS IN SOUTH AMERICA

American Company Has Acquired Large Acreage in Argentina and Is Pushing Developments.

Petroleum Experts and Their Anticipations; British Controlled Companies Early Invaders of Pan-Americas

NEW YORK, March 12.—The Standard Oil company of New Jersey is planning the formation of the Standard Oil Company of Argentina for an extensive development program. The corporation has acquired a large acreage under lease, has a crew of geologists in the field and is going ahead with its search for oil. Three wild-cat wells are being drilled in the Neupuen field on the River Covunco. A. A. Eberly, formerly connected with the Carter Oil company, a Standard subsidiary, and E. S. Stebbinger have been sent to supervise extensive operations. Thus far the prospectors have not discovered oil.

Through a subsidiary, the West India Oil company, the Standard of New Jersey already is active in the Argentine. This company, however, only takes care of the marketing operations of the Standard, having a refinery at Campana, about 30 miles up the River Plate, above Buenos Aires.

For some time petroleum experts have looked toward South America as a future source of the world's oil supply. Developments in the countries south of the Equator have come rapidly during the last few years, especially since reports were first circulated regarding the shortening of life of the Mexican oil fields because of salt water. British controlled oil companies entered the Argentina field some time ago, and production has been started by some of these companies, the wells averaging about 1,000 barrels daily. One of the wells drilled last year, No. 128, in the Comodoro Rivadavia field, had an initial flow of 1,200 barrels an hour. The drilling depths average 1,500 to 1,800 feet.

The oil fields of the Argentine are mostly controlled by the government, which generally maintains the mineral rights, but there are several parcels owned and controlled by foreign companies on which oil is being produced. Until Well 128 was brought in, most of the wells drilled produced only small quantities of oil, but all were producers, there being virtually no dry holes among the numerous wells drilled. Since Well 128 started up production has increased to a material extent, and in 1920 the output exceeded 1,000,000 barrels.

Under the mining laws of Argentina the Standard Oil company of New Jersey has taken over nine parcels of land, consising of 20,000 acres. These claims are said to adjoin the property of the Andres Petroleum Corporation, on which a test well is being drilled. The Neuquen field, in which the Standard is drilling wildcat wells, is considered one of the most promising. In this field the company has taken over 25,000 acres from the Petroleos de Neuquen company, an Argentine concern. The price paid was reported to have been in the neighborhood of $700,000. A well has been started on this property which showed indications of gas at a depth of about 600 feet. In addition to the above and the claims taken over from the government, the company has acquired approximately 180,000 acres in the Challeco, Plaza Huincul, Cerro Lotena, River Covunco and River Barrancas districts.

Major Malcolm Wheeler Nicholson, stationed at Fort Ethan Allen, has written President Harding complaining that the American army is being "Prussianized," that officers are being commissioned through political motives rather than merit. Nicholson neglected to send the letter through the regular military channels and as a result is now in trouble for going over the heads of his superior officers.

BARN IS SEIZED FOR MIDNIGHT ROOSTER FIGHT

(By International News Service.)

BUCYRUS, Ohio, March 12.—"City folks" can be depended upon to frame freakish fads, Edgar Kaler, farmer, residing near here, will tell the world. Forty automobiles were parked in Kaler's barnyard upon his arrival home last night. The occupants had come from Cleveland. They had brought roosters along. The Clevelanders liked Kaler's barn, they said and wanted to stage a chicken fight. The festivities continued until 2 a. m., when Kaler called for the sheriff to disperse the party.

COTTON PRICES WERE FIRM AT NEW ORLEANS

By Associated Press.

NEW ORLEANS, March 12.—Fluctuations in cotton last week were narrow, the extreme range of prices being 48 to 66 points, May trading as high as 17.05 and as low at 16.42. The market had a steady undertone the week through because of the unfavorable weather conditions over the belt, finally closing at net advances of 18 to 24 points, with May at 16.74. In the spot department middling gained 25 points in the net results, closing at 17.00 cents a pound, which compared with 10.75 as the closing price this week a year ago.

Reports from the greater part of the belt were that preparations for the crop were being delayed by the rains of the week, which came on a soil already soaked because of too frequent rains since about the first of January.

Operations on the long side were slightly restricted by rather unfavorable accounts from cotton goods markets, by the continuation of the strike in New England, further complaints of slow business at Manchester, and messages from southern mills sections saying spinners had decided no curtailment of output because of inability to secure profitable prices.

The statistics of the week were bullish, the visible supply of American cotton falling to 3,556,546 bales, against 4,225,892 a year ago and 4,445,578 two years ago.

OPEN LETTER NO. 2

FOR THE INFORMATION OF TAXPAYERS OF WICHITA COUNTY: ISN'T IT A FACT THAT APPROXIMATELY $1,000 PER MONTH OF THE TAXPAYERS' MONEY IS BEING WASTED ON BUYING SAND FOR THE CONCRETE ROADS.

J. P. Jones, County Judge, County Commissioners, J. M. Isbell, County Engineer

You have not seen fit to reply to our open letter No. 1 published in the daily papers of this city March 4th, 5th and 6th. It seems to us that if our position is not right you would be glad to explain to the Tax Payers wherein we have misinformed them.

We are, in this letter, going to give some additional information regarding the way you are buying sand for the concrete roads you are building in this county. First we want the Tax Payers to know that since the Company has been under its present management at least, it has had no desire to have you buy any of our products without it is first-class in every respect and meets the specifications of the State and Federal Highway Departments, whose specifications you work under in securing State and Federal Aid. To show you our good faith in this respect we wrote you a letter some months ago suggesting that we would be pleased to have you place an inspector at our plant, appointed by you to pass on the quality of our product and the expense of having such inspector to be met by us. You refused to do this and after such refusal we made arrangements with the best consulting engineer in this city to inspect and test every car of our sand before it was hauled to your unloading plant. It was not our intention for any car to be delivered to you from our plant until it had received this very rigid examination. However, we cannot be responsible for samples exhibited when taken by a prejudiced party, as it is entirely too easy for a sample to be taken and "salted" with Wichita County dirt and then tested or exhibited.

We want the Tax Payers to know that several weeks ago we called on you while the Court was in session and brought with us samples of sand taken from cars shipped you from other plants and placed them before you. You were of the impression when these samples were shown you that this sand was from our plant and immediately condemned it, saying that you could not afford to use any such sand in your roads. We think you were absolutely right in this instance, as some of the sand was of very inferior quality, containing clay balls, roots, sticks and other foreign matter, making it a very poor quality of sand. It developed however, at this meeting that this sand had already been unloaded at your plant and was unquestionably used in the road work. In other words it seemed that after you found that it did not come from our plant some miraculous change in quality of same was effected and the sand was entirely satisfactory, according to your judgment, for use. Please understand that the sand we are now discussing is sand that you are now paying 10c per ton more for than we are asking for ours, which will pass the most rigid examination by an unprejudiced and competent engineer.

Another question we would like to ask and have you answer to the Tax Payers of this County is, why are you so anxious to have all the money released by the banks so it can all be spent this year, instead of running over several months into the next year? What benefits, if any, are to be derived by the Tax Payers in having this money spent more rapidly than you first anticipated? Why not give your successors in office a chance to spend a portion of this money and see if they cannot build more miles of road for the same money than you are building?

Since writing our Open Letter No. 1 numerous Tax Payers of this County have written and talked to us about this proposition, all of whom, without exception, have suggested that we, in the vernacular of the baseball fan "Pour It On." And for your information will say that their suggestion is going to be followed until justice and right prevail.

We shall be glad to hear from as many of the Tax Payers of this County as see fit to write or talk to us regarding it and invite either criticism or commendation of our attitude, as all we are asking for is a square deal, which if given to us will mean a saving of many thousands of dollars to the Tax Payers of Wichita County.
