WTC event set Thursday...

Holiday plans in full swing in community

Plans are in the works all over town for holiday festivities ranging from the annual lighted Christmas parade to a visit by jolly ol' Saint Nick himself.

Snyder Chamber of Commerce, as well as Snyder merchants, are gearing up for the season and chamber manager Donna Fowler is asking everyone "to put forth a little extra effort to have an extra special hometown holiday."

The first scheduled holiday happening is Thursday as Western Texas College kicks off the Yuletide Season with campus-wide festivities.

The Scurry County Museum will have a Christmas reeeption beginning at 5:30 p.m. The museum's Santa exhibit will be in place and will remain on display until Dec. 10 when WTC dismisses for the holidays.

The lighting of the WTC Christmas tree will be held in the central courtyard that evening.

Also, the drama department will present a play and the Planitarium will present a holiday show.

The events are open to the public.

Beginning, Nov. 23, angels will be among us as city employees will begin hanging Christmas decorations around town, including the lighted angels made by Price Daniel Unit inmates.

Snyder merchants are already preparing for the day after Thanksgiving — the busiest shopping day of the year.

Christmas lights will be turned on throughout the city that day, and the holiday shopping season will officially begin.

Also, Santa will be at the courthouse gazebo and Christmas carolers will be on the square.

Local businesses will have sales and incentives encouraging citizens to shop locally including giveaways, free hot chocolate and spiced tea.

"They are doing all they can to make shopping at home more pleasant and fun," Fowler said.

She said she is encouraging people to look in Snyder stores for their holiday needs before heading to larger cities.

"At least look at home first and give our merchants a chance. Often times it is cheaper and local merchants have a better stock than anywhere out of town.

"We want everyone to have a wonderful Thanksgiving and then hit those stores bright and early on Friday morning to kick off out shopping season."

The annual lighted Christmas parade is Dec. 5 sponsored by the chamber.

Fowler is urging everyone to get involved with the parade this year.

"I really feel like it is one of the highlights of the season for children because it is such a pretty, visual part. It is a shame for it to go down hill."

She said she understands that putting together a float is a little troublesome because generators are needed.

"But there are several companies in town that may let you borrow or rent generators. Also local department stores carry battery packs with lights for clothes or hats. Those are festive and inexpensive."

Cash prizes will be awarded.

Also that night, the chamber will be offering coffee, hot chocolate and popcorn.

"Dress warm and come expecting to have a good time," Fowler said.

The chamber asks that no one have Santa Claus on their float, as there will be only one Santa in the parade.

On Dec. 23, the chamber will be holding its annual open house from 10 a.m. until 2:30 p.m.

"There will be lots of goodies so everybody please come by," Fowler said.

Commissioners set to rehash old business

Scurry County commissioners will rehash three items of business when they meet at 10 a.m. Monday, including the possibility of lifting the county-wide burn ban.

The court approved the ban on outdoor burning in June due to the extremely dry conditions which existed in the county at that time.

During a meeting last month, the commissioners voted to allow the Snyder Fire Department to issue permits for outdoor burning.

In other business Monday, the court will also open bids for roof repair at Scurry County Coliseum.

The court approved $150,000 in September to repair the 30-year-old facility's roof with the funds coming from the county's permanent improvement fund.

During that meeting, County Judge Ricky Fritz said, "We have had a $6,000 patch job done on the roof, but there is no way a Band-Aid is going to help us this time. That roof won't make it until next year."

The last item of business is to open bids for a pickup for the county extension office.

$200 million assistance program is announced

U.S. Agriculture Secretary Dan Glickman has announced a new $200 million livestock assistance program to compensate farmers and ranchers for losses incurred this year due to drought and other natural disasters which reduced grazing vegetation.

Glickman, who visited Snyder in August and spoke to a gathering of area farmers and ranchers at Lorber Industries, said the program will allow producers to continue doing what they do best, "producing food and fiber for Americans and the world."

Sign-up for the program will begin Nov. 23, said Joe Hefner of the local Farm Service Agency.

Hefner said payments will be issued after publication of program regulations and the completion of the sign up, which is expected to end in early January.

The money will allow the USDA to make assistance available on a county-by-county basis where at least 40 percent of grazing loss occurred for 90 or more consecutive days.

Livestock owners can contact the local FSA at 5309 Big Spring Highway to determine their eligibility.

THE SDN COLUMN

By Roy McQueen

The feller on Deep Creek says, "Do what you can, with what you have — then call a professional."

Got a nice note from former Snyder resident Helen Nixon, who now resides in San Angelo.

The purpose of the letter from the retired Baptist missionary was two-fold. She wanted to congratulate the SDN staff on last month's special edition, and to brag a little on the Snyder community.

"Civic leaders deserve a lot of special recognition for the countless hours given to bringing the prison and Lorber to Scurry County...I would not dare to mention names, for fear of omitting someone."

Her second reason for writing was a "sequel" to the cottage cheese-pineapple salad episode from several months back.

You may recall that she placed the dish on her porch to take to a funeral meal, only to have it picked up by the Food Bank volunteers.

Her sequel:

The ground was covered with snow the day after Christmas. All that day, I would remove my walking shoes, leaving them on the porch.

"When leaving for my walk on the 27th, the shoes were not there. Giving up on finding them for the moment, I wore another pair on my walk, mulling over the whereabouts of the others.

"The shoes cost less than 10 dollars, they were over two years old, not to mention the slits I had cut in the sides to avoid having to pay for made-to-order walking shoes.

"The shoes had no real value, but the acrylic lifts, guaranteed for life, had cost $235 some 15 years ago. They fit my feet only and were of no value to anyone else, so I figured the culprit had to be a dog.

"A short time before dark, my neighbor confirmed my suspicions, bringing me one shoe with the lift in place. The next day I resumed my search for the second shoe. I found a shoe, but not mine.

"After driving through the alley, I turned alongside the lawn of my other neighbor on the corner and saw something that required closer investigation. It was the second shoe with acrylic lift still in place."

We have to wonder if reported "thefts" have increased in San Angelo since the retired missionary moved there.

WTC, Ritz to co-produce 'An O. Henry Christmas'

"An O. Henry Christmas," a musical adaption of two of O. Henry's most popular short stories, is being co-produced by the Western Texas College Theatre Department and the Ritz Community Theatre.

The show will open Thursday at 8 p.m. at the WTC Fine Arts Theatre, and will run Friday and Saturday evenings, also at 8 p.m.

There will be a performance Sunday at 2:30 p.m.

The adaption, music and lyrics for the show were written by Peter Ekstrom.

"The Last Leaf" is a story whose theme deals with friendship and the sacrifice of giving one's life for the saving of another. The characters in this drama are the doctor, played by Dallas Martinez, Sue, played by Tiffany Martin, Johnsy, played by Vickie Williams, and Herr Behrman, portrayed by David Olson.

"The Gift of the Magi" is a charming Christmas story about newlyweds and the irony of their sacrifices to give each other a Christmas gift.

The roles in this tale are Jim, played by Dallas Martinez, and Della, played by Shannon Gates.

Helen Cogan, head of the WTC theatre department, is the director, and Ellie Dryden from the Ritz staff is supervising technical aspects.

Judy Smallwood is the musical director and accompanist.

Tickets are $7 for reserved seating, $5 for seniors and students and groups of 10 or more.

Ritz season ticket holders and WTC IDs will be honored.

Reservations may be made by calling 573-8511, ext. 234 between 8:30 a.m. and 5 p.m. on weekdays.

Chamber meets Monday noon

Snyder Chamber of Commerce will hear a report from the nominating committee and plan holiday events at a noon meeting Monday.

An executive session is set at the conclusion of the meeting to discuss personnel matters.

Man arrested on possession charges wanted for murder

A Snyder man who was arrested last week on cocaine possession charges is also wanted for murder.

Sheriff Darren Jackson said he suspected Ismael Herrera had given an alias when he was arrested and further checking indicated the man's name is Rigoberto Herrera, and he is 42-years-old — two years younger than he had first stated.

Jackson said the man is wanted in Harris County on two warrants — one for murder and the other for attempted murder.

Fingerprints confirmed he is the man wanted in the 1993 shooting in Houston which killed one and injured another.

When Herrera was arrested at his residence last week on the first degree felony charge of possession of cocaine with intent to deliver, the bond was set at $50,000.

There is no bond set on the Houston charges.

Besides Herrera, Robin Christina Thurmond, 21, was also arrested at 1107 21st St.

She remains in jail on a $25,000 bond.

Herrera and Thurmond were arrested after search warrants were issued for their residence last Thursday.

Three people were arrested last Friday after a search warrant was issued for a residence at the Royal Mobile Home Park, and two of those subjects are still in jail.

Seventeen-year-old Mustafa Burks and 18-year-old Fathima Burks remain in jail on bonds totalling $8,250 each for possession of cocaine and possession of marijuana.

Tiffany Sneed, 25, has been released from jail on bonds totalling $8,250 on the same charges.

Jackson said the arrests were part of an on-going investigation locally which is coordinated with the West Central Texas Interlocal Drug Task Force.

Gray wolves to be freed could help save species

PHOENIX (AP) — Undaunted by the heavy losses sustained in the gray wolf reintroduction program, biologists plan to release two more of the animals into the wilds of eastern Arizona.

Two female Mexican gray wolves were expected to be set free Monday. Wildlife officials hope they will mate with the remaining members of a landmark reintroduction policy — three male wolves.

Federal and state biologists released 11 Mexican gray wolves into the Apache-Sitgreaves National Forest in January, hoping the population of the endangered animals would thrive and reproduce.

Yet five of the 11 wolves reintroduced into the wild — and a pup born to one of them — are now either dead or presumed dead. One was shot by a camper who felt threatened by the animal. Three were believed to have been shot, while two others, including the pup, are presumed dead.

Only three of the original 11 wolves remain in the wild. Three others were recaptured — two because they wandered outside the reintroduction area, one because she was the mate of a shot male.

"If people would leave the wolves alone, they have a very bright future," Hans Stuart, a spokesman for the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service in Albuquerque, N.M., said Friday. "All the known mortalities are from people."

The wolves were raised in captivity, but are capable of hunting, killing and reproducing in the wild, Stuart said. One of the males that remains and one of the females which was shot mated this year produced the first cub born in the wild since at least 1950.

The recovery program begun this year is designed to build a self-sustaining population of about 100 wild wolves. The Mexican gray wolf, or lobo, was hunted to near extinction about 50 years ago.

Ranchers in the area strongly objected to the wolf releases, saying the animals represent a threat to their cattle and families. Despite their opposition, Stuart said ranchers have cooperated with the program.

Barbara Marks, president of the Greenlee County Cattleman's Association and the chief opponent of the wolf release, did not return a call for comment Friday.

Probation given for DWI offense

A 29-year-old Snyder woman Thursday pleaded guilty to a charge of felony driving while intoxicated.

Teresa Michelle Breedlove of 211 25th Street pleaded guilty to the Oct. 6 charge in 132nd District Court.

District Judge Ernie Armstrong assessed a five-year probated prison sentence and fined the defendant $1,000. She was also ordered to serve 240 hours in the Scurry County Jail and particpate in a court-approved substance abuse program.

White House lawyers say attack was legal

NEW YORK (AP) — Administration officials planned the August raid on Osama bin Laden's Afghanistan camps with the unspoken goal of killing him and his lieutenants, The New York Times reported Saturday.

Officials have consistently denied the raids were designed to kill bin Laden, the millionaire Saudi exile suspected of orchestrating the two American embassy bombings in East Africa. Federal prosecutors have charged him with waging a global war against American interests.

But the raid was timed so that more than 70 cruise missiles would strike Bin Laden's camps while he was there, the Times said, citing officials. Officials believe he was there at the time but managed to escape unscathed.

White House lawyers concluded in a secret review conducted before the attack that the raid was legal, even though U.S. and international law bars anyone working for the government from plotting or carrying out assassinations.

The infrastructure of bin Laden's group is mostly "human," a top U.S. counterterrorism official told the newspaper.

Snyder Oaks under new management

Snyder Oaks Care Center, located at 210 37th Street, is under new management.

Care Inn Properties of San Antonio purchased the facility, effective Oct. 1.

Gloria Mann is the new administrator. She moved to Snyder from Brenham, where she has lived the past nine years.

She graduated from Sam Houston State Univeristy in Huntsville where she earned a bachelors degree with a major in Spanish and a minor in English.

Mann entered the health care field in 1 90 when she went to work at Carousel Manor in Brenham.

"I was hired to do payroll and the job evolved into the position of assistant administrator," Mann said.

During the five years she was with Carousel Manor, Mann began working towards getting her administrator license.

In order to receive the license, she had to have 520 hours internship and 200 hours of administrator coursework.

She was working at Brenham Rest Home when she received her license in September of 1997.

"I finished the hours in May, tested in July and received my license in September."

She stayed with Brenham Rest Home until coming to Snyder Oct. 1.

Mann was born and reared near Wharton, but has lived all across West Texas including Sweetwater, Abilene, Pecos, Ft. Stockton and Big Spring.

"I lived in the area for 10 years and really came to love it. I'm glad to have the opportunity to come back to West Texas. I love the big skies and the West Texas friendliness."

Mann said everyone has been accepting of her.

"The staff here has been very willing to work with me. The residents and their families have been wonderful. It makes a lot of difference. It helps you to do your job when people are so willing to work with you."

Mann and her husband, Charly, have three children, Shelly, Donovan and Justin, and three grandchildren.

Randy Travis to sing at fund-raiser

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Randy Travis will kick off The Salvation Army's holiday fund-raising drive at the Dallas Cowboys' Thanksgiving Day football game.

The country music singer will perform "I Did My Part" at halftime of the Cowboys' game with the Minnesota Vikings.

"'I Did My Part' is a special song for me because it represents how I try to live my life and how I would like to be remembered," Travis said Friday. "The Salvation Army depends upon people doing their part to make the holidays a little happier for everyone."

The Salvation Army's bell-ringing holiday volunteers collect money from Christmas shoppers, whose donations help the agency help the poor and hungry by providing food, emergency shelter, disaster relief, drug abuse treatment and other services.

William Penn, the Quaker foundr of Pennsylvania, was born in England in 1644.

12 persons hurt

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — A set at a Yale University student theater collapsed during a performance Friday, sending performers tumbling six to eight feet into the orchestra pit. About a dozen people were taken to the hospital.

None of the performers was seriously injured, said Lloyd Suttle, associate provost of the university.

Some performers fell from the platform into the orchestra pit, Nolan said. No audience members were hit by the falling platform, but several musicians were injured.

Fake doctor indicted

TRENTON, N.J. (AP) — A man who allegedly posed as a doctor has been indicted on sex charges for performing pelvic and rectal exams on eight women.

Leonard Brian Schwartz already faced three counts of practicing medicine without a license and was indicted Thursday on six new charges.

Schwartz, a car salesman, lured victims with an offer to give B-12 shots, free exams and treatment for minor injuries, prosecutors said. He dressed the part and examined women on a gynecological table in his apartment, they said. He has no medical training and no college degree.

Schwartz, who lives in Old Bridge, faces up to 60 years in prison on charges that include criminal sexual contact and sexual assault. He remained in custody Friday in lieu of bail.

Schwartz's attorney, Ken Weiner, said some of the women told him Schwartz was playing doctor as part of a consensual sexual fantasy.

SJHS lists winners in fund-raiser

Snyder Junior High School has raised $2,168.33 through its recent St. Jude Children's Research Hospital Math-a-thon.

Two eighth graders collected the most money. Matthew Stokes was first with $195. Brady Reed was in second place with $166.

Rebecca Pavlovsky, seventh grader, had the most sponsors — 22. Brady Reed, with 16 sponsors, came in second.

The first place winners in each category — Stokes and Pavlovsky — will receive a $20 gift certificate. Reed was in second place in both categories and he will receive a $15 Wal-Mart certificate.

Anyone earning any amount in the math-a-thon received a certificate. Those earning $35 also received an admission ticket to Six Flags as well as a St. Judge T-Shirt. For earning $75, participants also received a St. Jude Sports Bag in addition to the other prizes.

The student who raised the most money over $100 also received a dual cassette jambox.

Students earned money through answering math problems. Money raised in the math-a-thon will help build an endowment fund for St. Jude Children's Research Hospital.

Theresa Vest, SJHS math teacher, coordinates the local math-a-thon each year.

Task force for serial killings passes 1st year; no arrest yet

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — Their faces stare out from posters mounted to the sides of buses, lumbering along the same route where many of them walked as prostitutes.

Their eyes reflect fear, nervousness or anger at being arrested and photographed in the middle of the night. They are all the victims of a serial killer who has eluded an intense yearlong homicide investigation.

So far, there have been no arrests and no named suspects.

"Help us find our killer," the Spokane Transit Authority posters implore over enlarged police mug shots of the slain women.

The joint Spokane County-City homicide task force has confirmed nine victims of a killer or killers since last November here and in Tacoma, 300 miles to the west. As many as 17 other deaths since 1990 are also being investigated for possible links.

The confirmed victims were involved in prostitution or drugs, or both. Each had been shot and dumped in remote locations, not found sometimes for months after their disappearances.

"We're making progress," said the task force co-commander, Spokane Sheriff's Capt. Doug Silver. He admits to feeling frustrated that many of the victims died after the task force was formed, "but I do believe we will catch this person."

The task force has doubled in size from four detectives to eight and investigators have chased and cleared about half of the 3,000 tips they've received in the past year.

Lynn Everson, a Spokane Regional Health District AIDS outreach worker known by prostitutes as "The Condom Lady," said the task force moved quickly to establish a rapport with street women who are the killer's likely targets.

Two homicide detectives frequently walk the streets, talking to prostitutes to glean information and have developed a "real trusting relationship" that has benefited the investigation, she said.

In turn, social workers have given investigators a list of "bad tricks" reported by prostitutes — now at least three pages long with descriptions of customers and more than 100 vehicles.

But there has been criticism of the investigation.

Mark Sterk, who will lead the task force when he takes over as Spokane County sheriff in January, immediately called for changes in the way the task force is run after his election.

NJ governor has appendix removed

TRENTON, N.J. (AP) — Gov. Christie Whitman had her appendix removed Friday after she was admitted to the hospital with stomach pains.

The surgery at Morristown Memorial Hospital took about 90 minutes, her spokesman Peter McDonough said. Whitman, a Republican, went in for surgery following several days of "abdominal distress," McDonough said.

He said the governor is expected to be discharged from the hospital on Saturday and will recover at home.

6 Months Free Internet

Bullard's Computer Solutions, Inc. is offering a Christmas special: Six months of free Internet with the purchase of a new computer.

"This is a $162 value," said Drew Bullard, president of BCSI. "Both businesses and families are finding the Internet essential to their activities and this will give them a chance to test this interesting new phenomena without having to pay for it."

Computer Solutions is a local computer store located at 3405 College Ave. and has been in business since 1991.

"Service has become one of our most important products," said Bullard. "People now realize that computers are not VCR's. Things happen to them which are sometimes hard to understand. We have a lot of people bringing messed up discount store computers into our shop. They are frustrated because they can't get any knowledgeable help with them. We try to offer that help and do it with a smile."

Computer Solutions has four full-time employees and is able to fill all your computer needs, including web site design, web hosting, Internet access, new computer sales, and computer repair.

Call them at 573-4801 or come by the store at 3405 College Ave.

Stock investors on Fed watch thought safe no matter what

NEW YORK (AP) — It doesn't matter what the Federal Reserve decides next Tuesday about interest rates — stocks should do well into the end of the year even if Greenspan & Co. don't push rates lower for the third time in less than two months.

That prediction comes from Wall Street analysts who, despite their apparent nonchalance, are still taking sides around the crystal ball.

One side argued this past week that the Fed will again lower rates in a bid to prop up recent fragile advances in foreign financial markets. Another camp believes the Fed's priority is the domestic economy, which continues to hum and doesn't need the stimulation that lower rates would provide.

The Fed first lowered its target for the federal funds rate, the interest charged on overnight loans between banks, by 0.25 percentage point in late September.

On Oct. 15 it followed with a surprise cut of 0.25 percentage point in the discount rate, which it charges its member banks, to 4.75 percent. It also dropped fed funds another 0.25 percentage point to 5 percent.

Invoking years of history from the annals of Fed-watching, many economists believe the Fed won't stop with two small rate cuts but clip them again Tuesday.

Although they ended up supporting domestic stock prices, both earlier cuts were aimed more at propping up weak global markets than they were at Wall Street, said William Meehan, chief market analyst for Cantor Fitzgerald in Darien, Conn.

A third rate cut could finish the job, by giving an extra boost to foreign currencies that have been rising against the dollar and to fixed-income markets in places like Korea and Thailand, where interest rates have fallen dramatically. It would be especially important to Brazil, which won a commitment from the International Monetary Fund Friday for financial assistance worth $41.5 billion.

"It's not going to do a heck of a lot of good to the emerging markets to provide $42 billion for Brazil, or to keeping things on a relatively even keel here, if the Fed fails to lower rates one more time," Meehan said.

Things are getting pricey in the garden of good and evil

SAVANNAH, Ga. (AP) — The best-selling book "Midnight in the Garden of Good and Evil" helped make Savannah's historic district, a mix of the elegant and the tawdry, internationally known.

Now home prices are skyrocketing, and some residents — even those who stand to make millions — are worried that the 250-year-old neighborhood might become unaffordable to the wild characters that make life here so interesting.

"It's good to some degree, of course," said real estate agent Dickie Mopper, a 30-year resident of the 2.2-square mile National Historic Landmark district. "But I don't want to lose the place I fell in love with — where I was able to move, while making nearly nothing, just down the street from a state senator."

And directly across the street from a whorehouse catering to a nowhere-near-high-class clientele.

John Berendt's 1994 book introduced the world to the neighborhood's magnolia-scented mayhem. It's a true story about a gay antiques dealer unsuccessfully tried four times for the 1981 murder of a young gigolo. It also reveals Savannah's stranger side through real-life characters like drag lady Chablis. A movie adaptation came out last year.

The renewed interest helped push up real-estate prices of the stately, historic homes — one of which recently sold for $3.3 million. Just two years ago, no home had sold for more than $1 million.

It's not on the market, but the Mercer House featured in "Midnight" would sell for at least $5 million, said preservationist and next-door neighbor Lee Adler.

A typical three-story townhouse, already restored, sells for $350,000 to $400,000.

"We're just practicing saying '$1 million' with a straight face," said John Duncan, who lives above his antiques store in a building he bought 24 years ago for $36,000.

The homes — a mix of Federal, Greek Revival, neo-Classical and Victorian styles — are built around large garden squares in a grid pattern laid out by English Gen. James Edward Oglethorpe. He founded Savannah, a port city located where the Savannah River flows into the Atlantic Ocean, in 1733.

Unlike their neighbors in Charleston, S.C., Savannahians abandoned their downtown earlier this century for outlying subdivisions. Many of the downtown structures collapsed; others were dismantled.

But the exodus also left opportunity for urban pioneers, some of whom bought large homes or office buildings four decades ago for as little as $2,000.

Lions play keep away, top Tigers, 42-28

By Eric Drennan
Sports Editor

SAN ANGELO — Brownwood's most effective defensive tactic was an old fashioned game of keep away.

And the sixth-ranked Lions used the schoolyard diversion to put a cap on the Snyder Tigers' season.

Brownwood held the ball for nearly two-thirds of the contest Friday night, limiting Snyder's offensive chances en route to a 42-28 bi-district victory at San Angelo Stadium.

Despite the setback, the Tigers finish the year with a 7-4 mark, their best since 1991.

With the score knotted, 21-21, at the midway point, Snyder was matching the 10-1 Lions blow for blow, before Brownwood took control of the battle in the third quarter.

Snyder was limited to only seven plays in the period, while the Lions ate over nine minutes off the clock on two touchdown drives.

"We just couldn't get the ball back in the second half," Snyder coach David Baugh said. "They have such a strong running game and every time it seemed like we might be able to stop them, they would make a play to keep the drive alive."

Brownwood took the opening kickoff of the second half and methodically marched 70 yards in 14 plays, with QB Colby Freeman carrying it the final 2 yards. The Jeremy Findley point-after gave the Lions a 28-21 lead with 5:11 left in the third quarter.

Following three plays from the Tiger offense, Deacon Burns advanced a punt back to the Snyder 42-yard line. Eight plays later, following a successful fourth-and-seven conversion, Freeman plunged in from 3 yards out for his fourth score of the night and a 35-21 Brownwood advantage.

On only their second possession of the second half, Snyder tightened the gap to begin the fourth quarter.

Junior fullback Paul Camp rumbled 26 yards to the Brownwood 27, and three plays later, Sonny Cumbie hit Matthew Grimmett with a 26-yard scoring toss. Andy Parker booted the PAT, trimming the margin to 35-28 with over 10 minutes left on the clock.

But the Lions pinned the Tigers deep in their own territory on Snyder's next possession. After a short punt, Brownwood set up shop at the Tigers' 33-yard line.

Five consecutive running plays, including a pair of 12-yard jaunts by Freeman, moved the Lions to the Tiger doorstep. Freeman registered his fifth and final TD on a 6-yard effort to cap the scoring for the 42-28 final tally.

"Brownwood is a very powerful ballclub," Baugh remarked. "Our kids battled all night, like they did all season. Our kids have nothing to be ashamed of. There's no doubt this has been one of our more successful seasons in recent years. And by far the most enjoyable."

Snyder, the District 5-4A runner-up, began the contest with a flurry.

Camp broke loose for 85 yards on the opening kickoff, scurrying to the Brownwood 7, before being hauled down.

Two plays later, Justin McNair dove across for a 6-0 Tiger lead, following an unsuccessful two-point conversion.

The Lions answered when Freeman, who finished with 173 of Brownwood's 424 rushing yards, found the endzone from 8 yards out at the 4:25 mark.

After the Tigers were held on downs, Burns raced 47 yards to up the margin to 14-6. Burns led all rushers with 201 yards on the night.

Midway through the second period, following an Aron Stanley fumble recovery, a 39-yard Cumbie-to-Camp aerial set up a 7-yard TD scoot by Camp. Cumbie threw to Jacob Hodges for two points, leveling the score at 14 apiece.

Snyder's defense then held the Lions inside their own 20, giving the Tigers the opportunity to take their second lead of the night.

On second down from the Brownwood 25, Camp took a swing pass in the flat and broke through three Lion defenders on his way to the endzone. Parker's kick put Snyder up, 21-14, with 3:47 left in the half.

Brownwood responded with a nine-play, 74-yard drive, capped by a 1-yard plunge from Freeman for the 21-21 halftime score.

The Snyder defense was on the field for over 30 minutes all total, with the Lions' executing 73 offensive plays to only 46 for the Tigers.

Offerman becomes newest multi-year signee

By RONALD BLUM
AP Sports Writer

The Red Sox had to start the post-Mo Vaughn era somewhere, and they did it with Jose Offerman.

The second baseman, who agreed Friday to $26 million, four-year contract, might not be the bigger bopper Boston needs, but the Red Sox are trying.

Albert Belle said he met Thursday with Red Sox general manager Dan Duquette. And Belle intends to get together next week with New York Yankees owner George Steinbrenner.

"These teams (Yankees and Red Sox) are really making the decisions easy," Belle said Friday. "They want to pay you well and they want to put you in a situation where you can win. What more could you want?"

Also Friday, the Los Angeles Dodgers signed reliever Alan Mills to a $6.5 million, three-year contract, San Diego signed outfielder John Vander Wal to a $1.75 million, two-year deal and the Cleveland Indians traded pitcher Chad Ogea to the Philadelphia Phillies for reliever Jerry Spradlin.

Belle, one of the most prized free agents, has until Dec. 2 to go back to the Chicago White Sox under his old contract, which calls for a $10 million salary in each of the next three seasons and gives the team a $10 million option for 2002 with a $5 million buyout.

Top spots up for grabs around NFL

By The Associated Press

Ho-hum, the San Francisco 49ers could be in first place in the NFC West after Sunday's game against Atlanta. Wow, the Falcons could be in first place in the NFC West.

"It's time to get ready (for the playoffs)," wide receiver Jerry Rice of the 49ers (7-2) said. That's what Rice has said many times.

"The game is going to be the biggest of the year," quarterback Chris Chandler of the Falcons (7-2) said. Falcons players haven't often talked like that 10 weeks into a season.

The Falcons, playing at home after a big 41-10 win at New England, will have to stop the NFL's top offense (424.2 yards per game). The 49ers, however, struggled in beating hapless Carolina 25-23 last week.

In other Sunday games, Pittsburgh is at Tennessee, New England at Buffalo, Dallas at Arizona, Tampa Bay at Jacksonville, Cincinnati at Minnesota, Miami at Carolina, the New York Jets at Indianapolis, Philadelphia at Washington, St. Louis at New Orleans, Baltimore at San Diego, Seattle at Oakland, Green Bay at the New York Giants and Chicago at Detroit.

Denver plays at Kansas City Monday night.

Steelers at Oilers

The Steelers (6-3) will try to remain no worse than one game behind Jacksonville in the AFC Central by avoiding a second loss in three weeks to the Oilers (5-4). The Oilers won 41-31 at Pittsburgh Nov. 1. Steelers quarterback Kordell Stewart had his best game in a 27-20 win over Green Bay Monday night. The Oilers will be looking for a fifth win in six games behind the passing of Steve McNair and the running of Eddie George.

Cowboys at Cardinals

The Cowboys (6-3) get a chance to increase their NFC East lead to two games over the Cardinals, a team they've beaten in 15 of the last 16 meetings. The Cardinals (5-4), who have won three of four home games this season, could tie for the lead with a victory. The Cowboys' Emmitt Smith, who has 12,105 yards rushing, needs 16 to pass Franco Harris for seventh place on the career list.

Eagles at Redskins

The Eagles (2-7) are looking for a sweep of the Redskins (1-8). Eagles running back Charlie Garner had a career-high 129 yards on 16 carries in a 10-9 win over the Lions last Sunday.

Packers at Giants

The Packers (6-3) will try to snap a four-game road losing streak to the Giants (3-6). Packers quarterback Brett Favre needs 47 yards passing to reach 25,000 yards in his 106th game, which would make him second only to Dan Marino (92 games). The Giants, floundering on offense, will try to avoid a three-game losing streak.

Buccaneers at Jaguars

The Bucs (4-5) hope their NFC top-ranked defense (275.1) can help get them to .500 by stopping the AFC's third-ranked offense (338.4), led by Scott Brunell, the AFC's No. 3 passer. The Jaguars' Fred Taylor also is No. 3 among AFC rushers, with 611 yards.

Dolphins at Panthers

It's the first-ever meeting between the Dolphins (6-3) and Panthers (1-8). Dan Marino needs four touchdown passes to become the first player to throw for 400 TDs, but that's not likely to happen in one game in a season where the Dolphins are concentrating on running the ball.

Coyotes run wild in romp; Regional rematch upcoming

KLONDIKE — If the old adage "defense wins championships" is true, then Borden County is on the fast track to another state title.

The Coyotes surrendered only 43 yards on the ground and 21 yards through the air Friday night, posting a 46-0 bi-district shutout of Wellman-Union in six-man action at Klondike.

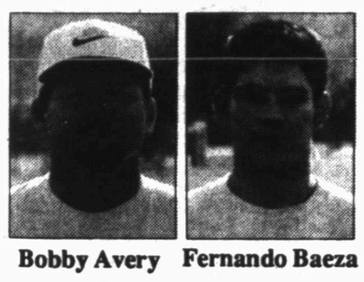
The victory sets up a rematch of last year's regional playoff between Borden County and Grandfalls-Royalty at 7:30 p.m. Friday in Seagraves.

Last year's meeting proved to be the Coyotes' toughest challenge on their march to the championship, as they were forced to rally for a 30-26 victory.

"I think it was important for us to get a convincing win in the opening round," Borden County head coach Bobby Avery said. "It gets our confidence up and maybe sends a message to Grandfalls. Maybe it will give them something to think about this week."

A "convincing win" might be an understatement when referring to Friday night's rout.

Borden County ended the contest on the 45-point rule less than three minutes into the second half.



Bobby Avery Fernando Baeza

Coyote tailback Fernando Baeza, who finished the game with 132 yards on just 10 carries, found the endzone on his only two times to touch the ball in the third quarter.

Baeza scampered in from 4 yards out at the 8:32 mark, before ripping off a 46-yard sprint to half the contest with 7:13 left in the period.

"Fernando was determined to end the game on that carry," said Avery. "He wasn't going to be denied."

Borden County's defense did its job to get Baeza every opportunity he needed to score.

The Wildcats could muster only two first downs on the night and was forced to punt four times in the abbreviated contest.

"Our offense and defense are peaking at the right time," Avery remarked. "We looked every bit as good as we did last year, on both sides of the ball."

Ed Rodriguez opened the scoring with a 2-yard plunge at the 7:50 mark of the first quarter.

Three minutes later, Baeza hauled in a 8-yard pass from Colt McCook to extend the margin.

McCook completed seven of 12 pass attempts for 156 yards in the contest, with Kevin Pinkerton being his primary target.

The Coyote center snagged five passes for 144 yards, including a 38-yard TD reception that pushed the tally to 24-0.

Baeza ended the first half with a 8-yard dash to paydirt.

McCook booted all five PATs.

The winner of the Coyote-Cowboy rematch on Friday will advance to the quarterfinals where it will face the winner of the Groom-Rule match-up.

Lockout leaders not conversing

NEW YORK (AP) — The two biggest bigshots in the NBA lockout aren't even talking to one another anymore.

Union director Billy Hunter decided Friday to give commissioner David Stern another dose of the silent treatment, refusing to place a telephone call to Stern despite his vow Wednesday to touch base with his adversary and see if the process of ending the lockout can be moved forward.

"I think they need to lock themselves in a room, put a port-o-potty in there and don't open the door until they come out with a deal," said Aaron Goodwin, a member of the union's agents' advisory committee.

"At some point you've got to get something done," Goodwin said. "I think we're at that point."

But no one in a position of power seemed to agree.

Jeffrey Kessler, the outside lawyer for the union, called NBA chief legal officer Jeffrey Mishkin to say that the union saw no point in a meeting. There have been no meetings between the sides since last Friday, and there have been no full negotiating sessions since Oct. 28.

The season cannot start until mid-December at the earliest.

"If they say there's no point, then not much is likely to happen for a while," said deputy commissioner Russ Granik.

Some new details about the Oct. 28 session emerged Friday, including the fact that Michael Jordan moved right to the top of the bargaining team on the first day he joined the fracas.

During that session, small groups from each side went off to a separate room.

After unofficial offers were tossed about by both sides, Stern and Granik left the room to speak to several owners. When they returned, the deal could not be closed.

Since then, the process has slowed almost to a halt.

One of the few lockout-related events that took place this week was the union's status meeting on Wednesday, after which Hunter said he would call Stern.

A rumor spread after the meeting that some conciliatory players, including Steve Kerr, had been shouted down. Even Stern said that was what he had heard.

"I don't think anybody got shouted down," countered agent Mark Bartelstein, who represents Kerr and 28 other players.

"That was the whole idea. They didn't want it to be a cheerleading session."

Colts' FB Heyward has piece of tumor removed

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Indianapolis Colts fullback Craig Heyward may need additional surgery and radiation therapy to combat a benign tumor that doctors were not able to completely remove during 12 hours of surgery.

The shrimp-sized tumor, known as a chordoma, was entwined with vital brain structures and had been blurring Heyward's vision, neurosurgeon Dr. Troy Payner said Friday.

Doctors said they removed as much of the tumor as they could during Thursday's surgery.

"Craig's tumor is a rare, slow-growing tumor, which has the potential to reoccur or regrow after removal," Payner said.

Heyward was alert and talking but in serious but stable condition Friday at Methodist Hospital. He is expected to remain in the intensive care unit for several days, spokeswoman Jennifer Farley said.

The 32-year-old Heyward had complained of blurred vision in his right eye last week, prompting a series of tests that showed a tumor pressing on the optic nerve.

Most patients require further surgery and radiation treatment after the initial surgery, the hospital said.

Kim Holle, a spokeswoman for Heyward's agent, said Heyward's wife, Charlotte, is "very optimistic."

Mitesh Shah, a neurosurgeon with the Indiana University School of Medicine, said most people can lead normal lives for a long time even if such tumors return.

Heyward, who has played 11 years in the NFL, was placed on the non-football injured list Monday, ending his season. The Colts signed fullback Kantroy Barber off Buffalo's practice squad to fill the roster spot.

Clinton, Jones settle lawsuit for $850,000, but no apology

WASHINGTON (AP) — Without apology or admission of guilt, President Clinton is paying Paula Jones $850,000 to drop her sexual harassment lawsuit after four years of litigation and political headaches that spawned the impeachment proceedings against him.

"The president has decided he is not prepared to spend one more hour on this matter," Clinton attorney Robert Bennett said Friday after lawyers for both sides signed the deal and notified the U.S. District Court in Little Rock, Ark.

Clinton "remains certain" that Mrs. Jones' allegations were baseless, Bennett said.

Mrs. Jones, in New York for a TV interview with the tabloid "Inside Edition," cried when she got the news by phone from her lawyer, and said, "It's over, I'm so glad," according to her friend and adviser, Susan Carpenter McMillan.

In Long Beach, Calif, Mrs. Jones' husband, Steven, told reporters: "Paula is tickled to death. She's ecstatic, as happy as any one individual can be."

"There's a lot of T's to cross and I's to dot still," he said, but "this was good for all sides."

Carpenter McMillan, whose husband brokered the final deal from his California law office, added a dig at Mrs. Jones' detractors: "It's been a long, exhausting four years. She's fought the good fight. American history will be a lot kinder to her than liberal feminists."

The settlement says Clinton will pay Mrs. Jones within 60 days and requires both parties to "unconditionally release each other and representatives in connection with any claims" stemming from the lawsuit.

"Nothing in this agreement shall be construed to be an admission of liability or wrongdoing by any party," the lawyers' signed agreement said.

Nearly half of the payment would come from Chubb Group Insurance, a legal source familiar with the case told The Associated Press. For a lump sum of roughly $400,000, Chubb was buying out the president's personal liability policy, which had been paying his Jones-related legal bills, said the source, speaking on condition of anonymity.

The balance could be drawn from Clinton's Legal Expense Trust, which contains donations of at least $1 million. Trust administrator Peter Lavallee said that as of Friday evening he had not been contacted about any such request.

In California county, pot No. 1 cash crop and an ex-con is D.A.

UKIAH, Calif. (AP) — The rule of law seems to have a weak hold in this county of spectacular forests, canyons, rocky coastal cliffs and some of the finest marijuana in the world.

In Mendocino County, pot is the biggest cash crop and the new district attorney is an ex-con.

"People tell me one of two things," said District Attorney-elect Norman Vroman. "It's either, 'I wish I had the guts to do what you did against the IRS,' or it's 'How in world do you believe you can be the top prosecutor if you've served time in federal prison?'"

Vroman, a lawyer, served nine months behind bars during the early 1990s for failing to pay several thousand dollars in income taxes.

Last week, Vroman, running on a platform that included decriminalization of marijuana, defeated a three-term incumbent who was president-elect of the California District Attorney Association.

This rugged county of 52,000 people 100 miles north of San Francisco also elected a new sheriff, Tony Craver, who also backs decriminalization.

In Vroman's case, voters were displeased with the incumbent's handling of a big murder case in which a sheriff's deputy on stakeout was shot to death. The defendant was acquitted.

But the folksy and engaging Vroman also was seen admiringly as a rebel. And Craver has a blunt, genial manner that went over well with people and was seen as having deeper roots in the county than the previous sheriff, who spent a decade in Los Angeles County.

The two men's stance on marijuana figured in both campaigns in this county of mountain folk, ex-hippies, yuppies and refugees from big cities.

Report says traffic jams not just a problem for big cities

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — Long the bane of big-city commuters' urban existence, traffic jams have moved toward the country, according to a new study.

Time commuters spend stalled in traffic in small- and medium-sized cities has more than quadrupled since 1982, growing at a far faster rate than it has in larger cities, the Texas Transportation Institute says.

Researchers say their findings show that traffic congestion isn't just a big-city problem.

While congestion levels in San Diego and Las Vegas have increased by more than 50 percent since 1982, the study showed conditions worsened at the same rate in three smaller cities: Salt Lake City, Utah; Albany-Schenectady-Troy, N.Y.; and Eugene-Springfield, Ore.

That's not to say that avoiding gridlock in large cities is getting any easier. It's not.

The study showed conditions improved at only two areas in Houston, where the congestion index dropped by 5 percent, and in Phoenix, where the index dropped by 1 percent.

Researchers Tim Lomax and David Schrank, who have studied roadway congestion in the country's 50 largest urban areas since the 1980s, added another 20 cities to the Texas A&M-based institute's study this year.

That allows more comprehensive tracking and more meaningful comparisons of traffic conditions from city to city, the current study says. It incorporates information collected through 1996, the most recent year for which all necessary data are available.

Population in cities included in the study ranges from 105,000 in Boulder, Colo., to 17.1 million in New York.

"The boundary chosen for inclusion in a mobility analysis is significant because it has a direct impact on an areawide mobility assessment. City or county jurisdictions vary in the percentage of urbanized area included and the density of the development," the 127-page congestion report said.

One method of quantifying congestion, a roadway congestion index, is a density measurement that considers traffic volume (demand) and the number of freeway and major street lanes (supply) in an area.

An index value of greater than 1.0 indicates problematic congestion.

Five areas showing the highest congestion levels were: Los Angeles (1.57); Washington, D.C. (1.43); Miami-Hialeah (1.34); Chicago (1.34); and San Francisco-Oakland (1.33).

The lowest congestion levels were found in Bakersfield, Calif. (0.68); Laredo, Texas (0.73); Colorado Springs, Colo. (0.74); Beaumont, Texas (0.76); and Corpus Christi, Texas (0.78).

Rush-hour travel took about 50 percent more time than non-rush hour trips in Los Angeles, San Francisco-Oakland, Seattle-Everett, Washington, D.C. and Las Vegas.

But the study showed rush-hour trips in seven other cities required only 5 to 10 percent more time than non-rush hour trips. Those with the least difference between rush hour and non-rush hour trips included Eugene-Springfield, Ore.; Boulder, Colo.; Albany-Schenectady-Troy, N.Y.; Corpus Christi, Texas; and Beaumont, Texas.

Whatever happened to "park and ride"? The idea may have died. But the researchers are looking for creative solutions to the congestion that causes billions of dollars in delay and wastes billions of gallons in fuel yearly.

"Urban areas are not solving the problem simply by building roads," said Lomax. "The future solutions won't be limited to roads, and therefore the measurement techniques cannot be limited to roadway-based measurements."

Clinton offers more emergency help to storm-stricken area

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. government will offer $45 million in additional defense equipment and services to help Central American nations recover from the devastation of Hurricane Mitch, President Clinton said Saturday. That is beyond the $80 million in emergency aid already promised.

"The United States will spare no aid to the people of Central America — our fellow Americans," Clinton said in his weekly radio address in which he promised to consider debt relief for Nicaragua and Honduras.

"A storm shows no respect for boundaries, and we should respond the same way," the president said.

Mitch hammered Central America last month, killing an estimated 10,000 people and creating what U.S. officials have called the worst natural disaster in history to strike the region. The storm wiped out crops, destroyed homes, roads and bridges and triggered an enormous outpouring of international aid.

Lawyers defend Joe Camel image

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lawyers defending Joe Camel say R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co.'s decade-long promotional campaign featuring the cartoon character did not affect minors' health.

During the first days of Joe's trial this week, they were successful in getting a University of California professor to concede that no studies have proved that tobacco advertising causes children and teen-agers to begin smoking.

But prosecutors contend Joe Camel's appeal to youngsters and the increased cigarette sales to children during the successful Joe Camel advertising campaign will prove their case before a Federal Trade Commission administrative law judge.

On Friday, Dr. Paul Torrens, a prosecution witness who teaches at the school of public health at the University of California, Los Angeles, testified that tobacco ads influence what teen-agers think is acceptable behavior, making it seem OK, even cool, to smoke cigarettes.

That is why putting tougher restrictions on tobacco ads is essential to any program to reduce youth smoking, he said.

Officers take male juvenile into custody

Officers took a juvenile into custody early Saturday following a report of a hit and run.

At 12:57 a.m. Saturday, officers received a report that a subject driving recklessly in the area of 43rd Street and Avenue V had struck a fence at 2304 43rd Street and left the scene.

Officers located the subject, a male juvenile, and an offense report for driving under the influence and an offense report for one-vehicle/fixed object was filed.

The juvenile was transported to the police department where he was later released to his parents.

In other activity, an officer was requested at Mulligan's Mall at 1:06 p.m. Friday in reference to criminal mischief. An offense report for Class C criminal mischief was filed.

At 4:19 p.m. Friday, Dorothy Browne requested an officer in the 2700 block of Denison in reference to her purse being taken from her vehicle while it was parked at the Post Office. An offense report for burglary of a vehicle was submitted.

A woman in the 1700 block of Avenue I requested to speak to an officer at 4:42 p.m. Friday in reference to her daughter not returning home from school. An offense report for runaway was filed.

An officer was called to the American Motor Inn at 7:14 p.m. Friday in reference to a juvenile drinking. A offense report for contributing to a minor was submitted. A citation was issued to the minor and the minor did leave the premises.

An offense report for hit and run was filed at 7:28 p.m. Friday in the 4200 block of College Avenue.

At 8:31 p.m. Friday, an officer was requested at Lawrence IGA #400 in reference to the theft of an employee's purse. An offense report for Class C theft was filed.

An officer was requested at the Plaza Truck Stop at 11:49 p.m. Friday in reference to three subjects leaving the restaurant without paying for their meals. An offense report for theft of service was filed.

Toymakers use chemical that causes animals' liver damage

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two environmental groups called on the toy industry Friday to ban the use of a softening ingredient in plastic toys because it has been found to cause liver damage in rats.

The chemical, which makes plastic flexible, has been widely used in many types of toys from baby teething rings to dolls since the 1980s.

While the chemical industry acknowledges that the chemical, known as diisononyl phthalate, caused liver damage when given to rats, it says that was at a much higher dose than the exposure from toys, and tests have shown the process that caused the liver damage in animals does not occur in humans.

Nevertheless, Greenpeace and the National Environmental Trust maintained that the chemical poses enough of a health threat to young children who chew or suck on toys that it should not be used.

David Ozonoff, chairman of the Department of Environmental Health at Boston University, said little is known about the health risks posed by phthalates to children. "These compounds do have a biological effect. ...What we know is that they can cause kidney and liver damage in animals," he said.

At least seven European governments have banned the use of phthalates in certain toys such as teething rings that commonly are put in children's mouths. The U.S. government has taken no action, but several toy manufacturers, including Mattel Inc., have said they plan to phase out use of the additive.

The American Council on Science and Health, a New York-based health advocacy group that gets some funding from industry, announced the formation of a panel headed by former Surgeon General C. Everett Koop to review the safety of phthalates.

Clinton says...

U.S. will not stand for Iraqi defiance

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States pressed ahead with preparations Saturday for a possible airstrike against Iraq as the White House demanded "concrete and demonstrable actions" that Saddam Hussein will allow the return of U.N. weapons inspectors.

An overnight diplomatic gesture from U.N. Secretary-General Kofi Annan to the Iraqis left the situation unchanged, the White House said, just days after President Clinton ordered an air and sea armada and thousands of fresh ground troops to the Persian Gulf.

A senior Iraqi official said Saturday that Iraq's government is expected to respond positively to Annan's pleas to resume dealings with U.N. arms inspectors, but the Clinton administration said it was looking for actions rather than words.

"Public commitment by Iraq must be followed by concrete and demonstrable actions," David Leavy, spokesman for the National Security Council, said Saturday before the Iraqi statement was publicized.

Meanwhile, military planners who work for the Joint Chiefs of Staff met this morning at the Pentagon in another round of daily consultations on the crisis.

"None of us can tolerate an Iraq free to develop weapons of mass destruction with impunity," Clinton said Friday, and "the (U.N.) Security Council and the world have made it crystal clear now that this is unacceptable."

The Security Council, united in its condemnation of Iraq's noncooperation, has not unanimously endorsed unilateral U.S. military action. Russian President Boris Yeltsin sent a message to Clinton Friday restating Russia's opposition to the use of force, and President Jacques Chirac of France said any military operations against Iraq should have the council's support.

The deployment of heavy bombers, jet fighters and ground forces to the gulf to bolster the U.S. military presence there could presage air strikes to cripple Iraq's potential for developing and using nuclear, biological and chemical weapons.

Iraqi President Saddam Hussein, in his first statement since halting the monitoring of all weapons sites Oct. 31, insisted his "just and balanced demands" must be met — an apparent reference to lifting an 8-year-old U.N. trade embargo and other economic sanctions.

Starr's unpleasant surprises await Bill, Hillary Clinton

WASHINGTON (AP) — As he prepares to face hostile questioning in the House impeachment inquiry, Independent Counsel Kenneth Starr is coming up with a few unpleasant surprises for President Clinton.

Starr obtained an indictment accusing presidential friend Webster Hubbell of committing 15 felonies in order to conceal his and Hillary Rodham Clinton's work on failed Arkansas land deals that benefited Hubbell's father-in-law, Little Rock businessman Seth Ward.

Starr also turned over new evidence for House investigators to decide whether they should expand the impeachment inquiry to include allegations against Clinton by former White House volunteer Kathleen Willey.

Democrats were furious at Friday's developments.

Starr is engaging in "a transparent attempt to change the subject" of "the Judiciary (Committee) hearings next week," said Sen. Robert Torricelli, D-N.J.

As the first witness in the impeachment inquiry, Starr will undergo questioning Thursday from committee Democrats about his aggressive pursuit of the Monica Lewinsky investigation last January before getting formal approval from the Justice Department.

Starr's transmittal allows the House committee to determine whether Mrs. Willey's allegation of an unwelcome sexual advance by the president should be included in the inquiry.

United Way nears '98 campaign goal

Scurry County United Way is just 15 percent shy of its 1998-99 campaign goal of $64,000.

The current total is $54,084.69.

"We need $9,915.31 to reach our goal. If everyone in Scurry County gave $1, we would surpass the goal," Zola Schlegel, executive secretary said.

The drive ends Dec. 1.

Schlegel gave a breakdown of how each dollar will be spent.

Of each dollar donated, Snyder Child Day Care and the Boys and Girls Club of Scurry County will each receive 27 cents while Noah Project - West will receive 16 cents.

West Texas Girl Scouts of Scurry County and the Buffalo Trail Boy Scouts of Scurry County each receive eight cents out of every dollar raised.

Six cents from every dollar goes to the Snyder Area Council on Alcohol and Drug Abuse and two cents of every dollar goes to the Scurry County Food Cupboard.

A half-cent of every dollar goes to the West Texas American Red Cross.

Five and a half-cents goes towards campaign costs and administrative expenses.

"All funds collected benefits Scurry County people as 94.5 percent goes to only local agencies who serve Scurry County," Schlegel said.

Only 5.5 percent goes towards administration and campaign costs and all campaign materials including pledge cards and videos are made in Scurry County by local businesses.

"The eight agencies we raise funds for serve Scurry County. They work hard to try to make Snyder and Scurry County a better place to live."

She added, "Many of them do not totally depend on United Way for their funds. They also receive grants for it takes a lot more than the $64,000 we are raising for them to do all that they do for Scurry County."

The United Way board includes Ed Barkowsky, president; Dr. Bryan Cave, vice-president; Francene Noah, second vice-president; Bobby Beard, treasurer; Leslie Cooley, secretary; and Zola Schlegel, executive secretary.

Drive coordinators are Bill Dryden, Carter Wiggins, Kent Wright, Gary Landes, Joe Kelley, Marsha Lovelady, Jerry Pechacek, Lannie Lee, Eloise Pruitt, Wilma Dillard, Gayle Lomax, Cave and Barkowsky.

Locals' granddaughter world champion

A recent trip "down under" took the granddaughter of Clay and Faye Mullins of Snyder to the top of the world.

Megan Dacy, 12, of Burleson won her second World Age Group Champion title in competition Oct. 8-19 at the World Age Group Games in Sydney, Australia.

She was a double medal winner, taking the gold in power tumbling and a bronze medal in double mini-trampoline competition in her 11-12 year age group. She also placed 16th in trampoline competition.

Megan was one of 40 girls from across the country invited to represent the USA in the sport of power tumbling, trampoline and double mini-trampoline at the biarinual World Age Group Games.

In 1996, Megan was also a member of the USA Age Group Team, competing at the World Age Group Games in Canada. There she won her first World Age Group Champion title in double mini-trampoline in the 9-10-year-old division.

Approximately 1,100 athletes from 23 countries competed at the World Championships and World Age Group Games in Sydney. The competition was held at the State Sports Centre, which will be one of the venue sites for the 2000 Olympic Games.

The sport of trampoline, power tumbling and mini-trampoling has long been a member of the U.S. Olympic Committee and will be merging next year with USA Gymnastics to form one national governing organization.

Trampoline will make its debut as a medal sport in the 2000 Olympics, and it is hoped that the events of power tumbling and double mini-trampoline will become medal sports at a later date.

1998 has been a banner year for Megan, who also won three national champion titles at the USA Trampoline & Tumbling National Championships in July in Minnesota. She placed first in her age group in power tumbling, trampoline and double mini-trampoline at that annual competition.

Megan, the daughter of Jennifer and Joe Dacy of Burleson, trains with the Tumbletown USA team in Waxahachie. One of her teammates in Waxahachie also competed in Australia, placing fourth in 15-17-year-old male power tumbling.

Megan is continuing in her sports training and is planning to move to the junior elite level of competition next season.

4 WTC students get scholarships

Four Western Texas College golf and landscape technology students received $500 scholarships from the recent Southwest Turfgrass Conference in Ruidoso, N.M.

The recipients are Geoffrey Sanders, Rey Gomez, Dale Simpson, Lester Lombard. Lombard is a repeat recipient of a $500 scholarship.

In addition to the scholarships, they were provided rooms and meals for the three-day conference.

Gomez, a freshman at WTC, is a 1987 graduate of Snyder High School. He serves as secretary of the Western Texas College Golf Course Superintendents Association of America Student Chapter.

Ramirez'ship wins honors

Navy Airman Angelica M. Ramirez, daughter of Francisco Ramirez and Antonia Avila of Snyder, is among the many crew members aboard the amphibious assault ship, USS Wasp, home ported at Norfolk, Va., who recently earned honors as the winner of the 1999 Captain Edward F. Ney Memorial Award, for food service excellence in the large afloat category.

The 1995 graduate of Snyder High School joined the Navy in June, 1996.

Basic training over for Clifton

Navy Seaman Recruit Jeremy H. Clifton, son of Mike D. and Jane L. Clifton of Snyder, recently completed U.S. Navy basic training at Recruit Training Command, Great Lakes, Ill.

He is a 1997 graduate of Snyder High School.

No crystal ball needed

NEW YORK (AP) — Alyssa Milano didn't need to gaze into a crystal ball for advice when her old boss Aaron Spelling called and asked her to read a script for his new WB show "Charmed."

Milano, 25 and fresh from a yearlong stint on Spelling's steamy "Melrose Place," remembers getting his phone call about the new show. The rest was like, well, magic.

On Thursday, the Thanksgiving dinner will begin serving at 11:30 a.m. Barbara Tune will entertain with piano music. The raffle quilt will be displayed and raffle tickets available for those who would like to purchase or to sell.

On Friday, the bridge tournament and the blood pressure clinic will begin at 9:30 a.m., and the sing-a-long begins at 11:30 a.m.

Billy Joel awed by R&R museum

CLEVELAND (AP) — Billy Joel seemed awed after taking his first stroll through the rock 'n' roll temple where he will be enshrined next year.

The Piano Man toured the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame and Museum before a concert Thursday evening at Gund Arena. He learned this week that he will be inducted into the rock hall next year.

The experience was unreal for Joel who was in the company of R&R greats.

Pledge nuptial vows...

Dennis, Love wed in Methodist church

Late afternoon sun sent streams of stained glass light to touch the bride and groom, Somer Rae Dennis and Mark Alan Love, like a blessing as they pledged vows before close friends and family at the First United Methodist Church on Friday, Aug. 21.

The 6 p.m., double-ring ceremony was officiated by the Rev. Miller Robinson in front of the illuminated carved replica of Rembrandt's painting of The Last Supper at the church altar.

The bride is the daughter of Jal and Michele Dennis of Snyder and Sheri Dennis of Austin. Her grandparents are Dean and Elda Willeford of Mission, and the late Janice Willeford, and paternal grandparents are E.B. and Pat Dennis of Snyder.

The groom is the son of Rodney and Teresa Love of Snyder and Steve and Kelli Bulls of Canyon Lake. He is the grandson of Clydie Love of Childress, and the late Norman A. Love.

Guests were seated to compositions performed by an ensemble from Lifescapes Wedding Collection. Grandparents and parents were seated to the music of Bach's "Joy of Man's Desiring."

The wedding procession began with Handel's "Air From Water Music." Following an alert from Wagner's wedding processional, the bride was escorted by her mother and her father to the music of Pachebel's "Canon in D."

The bride was radiant in an exquisitely romantic gown of white satin, designed by Demeterios of Ilissa of New York. The A-line skirt flowing to floor-length was accented with a detachable silk tulle cathedral train. The bodice of the gown featured an empire waist embellished with beaded and sequined lace. Tiny double rolled straps crossed the back of the gown to meet a row of silk covered buttons.

To complete her attire, the bride wore a white pearl hair comb in her hair accented with white flowers and silk illusion veiling. Her only jewelry was a pair of pearl and rhinestone drop earrings, a gift from her paternal grandmother, Pat Dennis.

The bride carried silk mauve roses, fashioned in a nosegay arrangement atop a ruffled silver and white lace carrier, with sprigs of lily-of-the-valley and pearl worked into the flowers.

The bride's attendants wore simple fitted bodice gowns of mauve silk which featured A-line floor-length skirts. The gowns echoed the design of the bride's wedding dress with replica narrow single shoulder straps.

Mollie Gilmore of Austin was maid of honor. Bridesmaid was Jody Dennis, cousin of the bride, and Kelly Gilmore of Austin was junior bridesmaid.

Each of the attendants carried a single stemmed mauve rose adorned with silver baby's breath and tied with a white tulle bow with silver overlay ribbon. They wore matching mauve shoes and each had silver hoop earrings.

At the end of the ceremony and the reading of traditional wedding vows, the white unity candle was lit by the bride and groom as the instrumental version of "Your Song" was played in its entirety. The classical instrumental music of Windor's "Toccatta" accompanied the couple's departure from the altar.

The groom selected a black four-button tuxedo, white shirt, silver silk tie and black shoes. The groom's boutonniere was a mauve colored rose accented with a cluster of silver baby's breath. The male attendants wore identical tuxedoes and other attire reflecting the choices of the groom.

Male attendants included best man Scott Love, brother of the groom, groomsman Greg McAden and junior groomsman Trace Dennis, brother of the bride.

Ushers for the wedding were Mac McCraw and Brandon McCraw, stepbrothers of the groom. They wore matching brown suits and ties with brown shoes. Their lapel pieces were matching mauve roses with silver accents.

Michele Dennis, the bride's stepmother, chose a pastel pink suit for the wedding. Teresa Love, the groom's stepmother, wore a pastel mauve dress with a matching jacket. Kelli Bulls, the groom's mother, wore a pastel cream colored dress, and Sheri Dennis, mother of the bride, chose a pastel blue dress.

Corsages for the mothers were made from mauve, white and silver flowers, accented with baby's breath and ribbon.

The groom's father, Rodney Love, and Jal Dennis, the bride's father, wore a black four-botton tuxedo with white shirts and silver silk ties.

Bows for the church pews were made of mauve satin ribbon with a white tulle overlay and caught with silver ribbon. White tulle and English ivy were draped along both sides of the altar rail with white tulle bows.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held in the fellowship hall of the church. A picture collage of the couple from infancy was displayed on a table where guests entered.

The bride's table featured a full, white floor-length skirt swagged with a white lace overlay tied with white bows. The white cake offered four tiers of butter cream icing decorated with silk mauve roses, white roses and silver baby's breath cascading over the sides of the confection. The cake was topped with a Precious Moments bride and groom inscribed with the words, "May The Lord Bless You and Keep You." Each side of the cake also showed butterflies and a small bird nest with birds and bees. The table was centered with a white lace and pearl bouquet pedastal which held the bride's bouquet during the reception. The holder was a gift made by Sallie Bailey.

Other decorations for the party room included a backdrop at the bride's table which held clusters of mauve and silver wedding balloons and a large heart at the center made from smaller silver and mauve balloons, A ribbon swag across the heart proclaimed, "Mark and Somer."

Almond punch was served from a silver fountain, and mints and nuts were offered in crystal dishes. The cakes were made by Sandy Hall who also designed the two serving tables. She was assisted with serving by Trina Rogers, Samantha Cunningham, Jane Brown and Krystal Graham.

The bride and groom toasted each other from mauve and crystal goblets given to them by the mother of the groom, Kelli Bulls. Servers for the bride's table were Brooke Gober of Lubbock and Magan Thomas of Dallas.

A white cloth also covered the groom's table. It too, was draped with white lace, bows and silver balloons. A red velvet cake with chocolate icing was served along with nuts and mints. A fruit platter and trays of chocolate strawberries completed the array of foods. The centerpiece for the table featured framed pictures of the couple when they were three years old.

Teresa Love, stepmother of the groom, was hostess at the groom's table, and Carma Branden served. Kim Wallace of Austin registered guests for the celebration.

Selections of music from Lifescapes Traditional Contemporary Wedding Collection were played during the reception with Newell Oler's "Wandering and Remembering" and "Romancing the Movies, Too."

Sandra Robinson served as wedding coordinator and Debra's Flowers provided floral designs for the wedding and reception.

Guests were from Austin, San Antonio, Mission, Lubbock, Snyder and Oklahoma. As the couple departed for a trip to Cancun, Mexico, guests showered them outside the church with bird seed.

The bride is a 1997 graduate of Snyder High School. She attended Western Texas College and is now a junior at The University of Texas at Dallas pursuing a degree in education, specializing in math and English.

The groom is a 1995 graduate of Snyder High School and a 1998 graduate of Texas Tech with a major in finance. He is employed with Daisy Tech in Plano.

A rehearsal dinner was hosted at The Shack on Aug. 20 by Kelli and Steve Bulls, mother and stepfather of the groom.

Bridge

From the beautiful islands

By Phillip Alder

New Zealand is a beautiful country, which you should visit. And when you get there, you will find a thriving bridge community. Club duplicate tournaments are the norm, not home-based rubber-bridge. Yet the atmosphere is always very friendly, often with excellent food included in the low entry fee. You can get cheap drinks during and after the session, too.

There is also a bimonthly magazine, New Zealand Bridge. Each issue contains 80 small pages with articles for everyone.

North's one-club opening showed any hand with at least 16 high-card points. But what do you think of West's double of six spades?

After winning the first trick with dummy's club ace, the declarer played a spade to his jack and West's ace. Back came a diamond, solving that problem. Now South led a low trump and finessed dummy's nine. Bingo! A moment later, the declarer, Sam Simpson from Otago (a picturesque town in the South Island), claimed.

At the other table, North was in six diamonds. East led his singleton spade and got a ruff at trick two for one down. This gave Otago 19 international matchpoints — and the Open Inter-Provincial Teams title by 10 IMPs.

West's double was triply stupid because it lost the title for Wellington, it told declarer how to play the trumps, and it gave North-South a chance to run to six no-trump, which would make if declarer takes the percentage play in diamonds. Don't double a slam for one down; don't double the only slam you might beat.

An annual subscription costs $20 surface and $33 airmail. To subscribe, call (+64-9) 636-8262 during business hours in New Zealand.

Word is Life Church ceremony unites pair

Amy Elizabeth Baker and Wesley Tyson Shifflett were married in a double-ring ceremony at 5 p.m. on Sept. 5 in Word Is Life Church. Vows were officiated by Charlie Reynolds.

Mike and Moira Lindsey of Snyder are parents of the bride. Howard and Linda Shifflett of Comanche and Rodney and Patsy Bryant of Sonora are parents of the groom.

Mothers of the couple lit candles. George Anne Brown was pianist and vocalists were Mike and George Anne Brown and Jackie Hackfeld.

Matron of honor was Belinda Pittman and bridesmaids included Marsha Ann Baker, sister of the bride, and Kim Shifflett, sister-in-law of the groom. All are of Snyder.

Kayla Pittman was flower girl and Jady Pittman was ring bearer.

Male attendants included Jimmy Pittman, best man; groomsmen, Kevin Shifflett, brother of the groom, and Birdwell Burney, grandfather of the groom; and ushers, Michael Campbell and Michael Lindsey, brother of the bride. They wore black and blue suits.

The reception, following the ceremony, was held in the Union Community Center. The bride's table, covered with a pink and lace cloth, held the three-tiered wedding cake topped with heart-backed bride and groom. A punch bowl held raspberry punch and the table was centered with a floral arrangement. Serving were Tracy Proulx, cousin of the bride, and Cristy Griffith.

The groom's horseshoe-shaped chocolate cake was on a table covered with a blue cloth and was centered with a family Bible and a money tree. Serving was Tammy Cox, cousin of the groom.

The couple's honeymoon trip was to Lubbock and they have made their new home in Snyder.

The bride attended Snyder High School and plans to attend college in Dallas and the groom, a 1995 graduate of Whiteface attended SPC in Levelland and TSTC in Sweetwater. He is a professional painter for Farmer's Designs.

District VIII Garden Clubs met in Snyder

Snyder Garden Club and Colorado City Garden Club hosted the District VIII fall meeting in Snyder last weekend.

Pre-convention activities, a luncheon and program, were held at the Wagon Wheel Ranch Party Room. Max von Roeder and his live puppet show program followed the meal.

On Saturday, registration and a coffee, hosted by the Colorado City Garden Club, was held at the Christian Student Center at WTC. An executive board meeting was held at 8:30, followed by a general assembly at 10.

Boy Scouts of American, Troop 27, led the pledges of allegience to the Texas Flag and the American Flag.

State president Ina Brundrett of Tyler addressed the group.

District VIII director Lela Midkiff conducted the business. Following the session, over 70 members convened at the Martha Ann Woman's Club for lunch and a program by Sue Travis of Snyder.

Other clubs represented were Abilene, Stamford, San Angelo, Breckenridge, Del Rio, Haskell, Cross Plains, Rankin and Big Lake.

Another guilty plea entered in Laredo corruption probe

LAREDO (AP) — A man has pleaded guilty to paying an $8,000 bribe to have drug charges against him dropped, marking the latest twist in a federal probe of the Webb County district attorney's office.

Roy McCoy III, 20, of Nashville, Tenn., entered the plea Thursday before U.S. District Judge George Kazen in Laredo.

In exchange for leniency, McCoy agreed to tell investigators all he knew about an alleged payoff to have an assistant prosecutor not file charges against him for possession of marijuana, Valium and other drugs smuggled across the U.S.-Mexico border in 1996.

McCoy, who has admitted to drug addiction, could get probation, depending on his testimony.

"He'll accept responsibility for his involvement and we'll recommend a sentence at the low end of the sentencing guidelines," said assistant U.S. attorney Don DeGabrielle.

Federal prosecutors allege some officials in the district attorney's office engaged in a case-fixing scheme in which defendants paid money to get charges dropped or to ensure light sentences.

The federal investigation first came to public attention in May when FBI and Internal Revenue Service agents raided the office of District Attorney Joe Rubio, hauling away thousands of files in a rented truck.

SHS FFA teams advance to area

At the Lone Wolf District Contest, held recently at Snyder High School, the Snyder FFA chapter advanced seven teams to the area contest. To do so, the members had to win either first or second place in their respective contests.

Qualifying teams and individuals will next compete on Nov. 19 at Howard College in Big Spring. The top teams in this contest will then advance to the state contest later this month.

Among those that will advance are:

•Riley Tatum, first in creed speaking.

•Junior Chapter Conducting team, first place. Members are Kristin York, Morgan Miller, Shay Franks, Brodie Pierce, Zach Rollins, Bradley Bynum, Zach Billingsley, Cliff Beights, Jeremy Miller.

Q&A

What is a relationship addict?

(In response to a growing concern among parents, educators and other members of the community, Snyder Daily News, in cooperation with Al-Anon support groups and the Snyder Area Council on Alcohol and Drug Abuse, is devoting this column to your questions about the increasing threat of substance abuse. The current series is dedicated to supplying general information to our readers. Getting back to the basics, we are using the ABC's as a structured guideline. Each week, the column will concentrate on such topics as "October 23rd-31st", Peer Pressure, "Quick" List, etc. Readers may want to cut out the articles and save them as a resource for future reference.)

ABC's of Substance Abuse
(Article 18 of 26)

R ~ RELATIONSHIP ADDICT

A relationship addict is someone who attempts to stay in a relationship even though any objective analysis would see the relationship as chronically painful and destructive. In other words, a relationship addict is someone who chooses the "wrong" partner and stays with him/her, no matter how much it hurts.

Robin Norwood, author of Letters From Women Who Love Too Much, offers a working definition of addiction:

> In spite of ample evidence that something isn't good for us we cannot stop our involvement with it. We do not stop, even though we have experienced negative consequences both emotionally (through humiliation and degradation) and physically (through declining overall health and the possibility, occurrence or recurrence of serious illness or injury) and those who best understand our condition (professionals who understand addiction or others with similar histories who are now recovering) tell us that as unhappy and unhealthy as we already are, unless we change our behavior we will get even worse. Receiving more information doesn't take care of the compulsion to repeat our behavior; nor does further suffering, no matter how great that suffering is (p. 85).

Relationship addiction, she goes on to explain, is the driving need to have another person on whom to focus (p. 107).

One of the primary features of relationship addiction is tremendous dependency, often but not always masked by apparent strength. The dependency is extreme because so many unmet needs have been brought forward from childhood. Relationship addicts will never be able to forge a healthy partnership until he/she becomes willing to approach more than one appropriate supply for his/her needs. The relationship addict needs other wholesome sources such as friends, interests, a spiritual practice, etc., to validate us, support us, and fill our emptiness and heal our dependency (p. 68).

How does a relationship addict enter the world of recovery? In Facing Love Addiction, Pia Mellody lists five concurrent processes in recovery from the addictive relationship as follows:

1. Growing up ~ learning how to have self-esteem, boundaries, sense of self, self-care, and moderation;
2. Facing reality ~ taking a look at who you are and who others are;
3. Grieving losses ~ having feelings about what you lost in childhood and what the addictive relationship has cost you in adulthood;
4. Learning to re-parent yourself ~ learning how to affirm self, nurture self, and limit self without shaming self; and
5. Learning to forgive ~ giving up the desire to have abusive people in your life sufficiently punished.

Mellody then encourages the person recovering from an addictive relationship to exchange the manipulative, controlling things previously done for healthy behaviors. According to Mellody, the characteristics of a healthy relationship as follows:

- Each partner views the other realistically;
- Each partner takes responsibility for personal growth;
- Each partner takes responsibility for staying in an adult ego state;
- Each partner can focus on solutions to problems;
- Each partner can be intimate with and support the partner a reasonable amount of the time;
- Each partner has developed a life of "abundance" (value);
- Each partner can negotiate and accept compromise;
- Each partner can communicate simply and directly; and
- Each person is usually able to enjoy the partner despite the differences between them.

Addiction, whether to a mind-altering chemical, or to a relationship, ultimately affects every area of the addict's life in a progressively disastrous way. If you are, or know someone who is, in an addictive relationship, seek, or urge your friend to get, help.

Worker dies in grain elevator accident

EDMONSON (AP) — A worker at Edmonson Wheat Growers Co-Op who failed to emerge from the elevator at lunchtime was later discovered under tons of corn.

The body of Jose Armando Herrera, 39, of Plainview was recovered Tuesday night almost eight hours after co-workers discovered he was missing and speculated he might have fallen into the corn.

Recovery crews worked non-stop throughout the afternoon and evening to extricate the body, but shifting corn kernels made it a difficult and dangerous chore.

"That stuff is just like quicksand in there," Hale County Sheriff David Mull said.

Seek second opinion on fibromyalgia

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I was recently diagnosed with fibromyalgia, after suffering decades of stiffness, muscle pain, trigger points and a variety of symptoms. The doctor, who is a recognized specialist in fibromyalgia, prescribed many medicines, which I will list below. After six months of therapy, I am no better. In fact, I feel like an addict. Is fibromyalgia a death sentence? My medicines are Ultram, Neurontin, Robaxin, Klonopin, Ambien, Wellbutrin, Coenzyme Q10, magnesium, creatine and DHEA. Help!

DEAR READER: I see from your letter, which I have excerpted, that you are a 30-year-old man. This may be important, as I'll mention in a minute.

Fibromyalgia is a chronic constellation of symptoms that includes muscle pain, aching and stiffness associated with trigger points. It is much more common in women, especially those in middle age.

There are no tests to confirm fibromyalgia. The diagnosis is one of exclusion, meaning that other, similar diseases — such as lupus — must first be discarded. Many authorities believe that fibromyalgia is a functional disorder, one in which the function of muscles is somehow impaired. Depression is often an important consideration, and stress frequently plays a role. No therapy is consistently effective.

Without intending to be politically incorrect, I must point out that fibromyalgia is extremely rare in men. In your case, I'd want to make sure that you don't have a look-alike, such as Lyme disease, lupus or rheumatoid arthritis, all of which are diagnosable with blood tests.

At this point, I am concerned about the effect the prescribed drugs may be having, as well as their potential interactions.

Ultram is a non-narcotic analgesic. It may be appropriate for you, but it can cause sleepiness and poor coordination.

Neurontin is an anticonvulsant that has a truckload of potential side effects and interferes with a variety of other medicines.

Robaxin is simply a muscle-relaxant.

Klonopin is a powerful medication used to treat seizures and panic disorders. It, too, has a long list of unfavorable consequences and drug interactions.

Ambien is a sleeping pill that is safer than most.

Wellbutrin is an antidepressant with extensive side effects and drug interactions.

Coenzyme Q10 has not been shown, in suitable scientific studies, to be useful in treating any medical conditions, including fibromyalgia.

Magnesium is a mineral that is plentiful in most normal diets.

Creatine, which is supposed to build muscle mass, has not been proven to affect afflictions such as fibromyalgia.

DHEA is touted to improve levels of testosterone, the male hormone. This is clearly not your problem.

In reviewing your medications, I was struck by two conclusions: Your diagnosis is still in doubt, and the drugs you have been prescribed clearly indicate a shotgun approach by your "recognized specialist."

Be sensible and listen to your body. Stop the drugs that aren't helping you (most of them), and seek a consultation with a reputable diagnostician in internal medicine. Yes, you might have fibromyalgia, but let's confirm this. Sure, you might need all the drugs prescribed by your "specialist," but let's see. In my opinion, most of them could be discontinued without affecting your health an iota. Once you have followed up on this, let me know the results. Fibromyalgia is not a death sentence.

To give you related information, I am sending you a copy of my Health Report "Medical Specialists." Other readers who would like a copy should send $2 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 2017, Murray Hill Station, New York, NY 10156. Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Is it possible to have a heart attack that doesn't show up on a cardiogram? I've had two episodes that may doctor thinks are heart attacks. With both, I felt severe pain in my left chest, radiating down my arm, and I experienced difficulty breathing, profuse sweating and profound weakness.

DEAR READER: Heart attacks sometimes fail to produce changes in the cardiogram, particularly if the coronary occlusion is small. In addition, patients can have heart attacks that cause no pain; these are called "silent myocardial infarctions." In ruling out a heart attack, doctors routinely use blood tests that measure leakage of cardiac enzymes into the bloodstream. Also, special tests may be necessary; these include stress testing, isotope imaging and coronary angiography, the "gold standard" of diagnosis.

From your brief description, I suspect that you may have had one or more heart attacks, or you may be suffering from a severe form of angina — a definite warning that trouble lies ahead. I am sure that your doctor will want to perform additional tests, as I mentioned above, to investigate your heart's functioning and to reveal what treatment would be most beneficial.

To give you related information, I am sending you a copy of my Health Report "Understanding Heart Disease." Other readers who would like a copy should send $2 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 2017, Murray Hill Station, New York, NY 10156. Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR DR. GOTT: At 42, with three beautiful children, my husband decided that he should have a vasectomy. I agree completely. However, his coworkers claim that the procedure leads to heart disease, strokes and impotence. Please advise.

DEAR READER: I hate to say it, but this rumor has been going around for decades. Your husband's co-workers should be ashamed. I'll bet they are all men.

Vasectomy, a reliably safe and inexpensive method of birth control, is not associated with any particular consequences. Specifically, those men who have it are not susceptible to heart disease or stroke, nor do they experience any physical consequences — such as impotence — from this minor surgery, which can be performed in the doctor's office. Honestly, when you consider the risks, inconvenience and expense associated with female sterilization, I am surprised that more men are reluctant to choose the vasectomy option, which is generally free of complications.

DEAR DR. GOTT: My husband and I are over 70, and we still enjoy sex two or three times a week — although we've had to make some modifications due to age. Just because there is snow on the mountain doesn't mean there's no heat in the furnace! What those grumpy grandmas need is some vitamin P.

DEAR READER: Vitamin P? What's that? Hey, if you can bottle it, you'll make a fortune!

Reaching out...

You know, sometimes modern medical science gets a wee bit carried away with itself.

There were these conjoined twins, see. (Used to be called "Siamese" twins) Two little girls; with the beautiful names of Michaela and Gabrielle. And they were joined in ways that, in times past, would have been impossible to separate: at the pelvis.

But doctors did it.

Somehow, they managed to split the infants down the middle giving each 8-month-old child one kidney and one liver and one leg and half a colon. (Later surgeries will reconstruct bladders and other necessary organs for the children.) The operation was a phenomenal success, and the little girls would have begun a rapid recovery if it wasn't for one little thing.

The doctors and nurses put the infants in separate beds.

And when the babies regained consciousness, they began a pitiful, heart rending wailing and weeping that gave goose bumps to the nursing staff.

It was loneliness!

So the hospital staff, realizing that the girls' recovery was in jeopardy, quickly put the babies back into the same bed.

And as soon as they could see each other and reach out and touch one another for comfort, they began a rapid recuperation. Now they're ready to go home from the hospital.

I can relate.

Both my kids went off to college this year. Not that they are weeping and wailing for Mama — far from it. Each is thriving in their respective universities. They love their new lives. Even so, our phone bill is huge each month, which lets me know that they feel the separation too.

It's hard, when you've been joined by the umbilical cord, to have it amputated, so to speak, and to find yourselves inhabiting separate worlds. Lord knows it's healthier for everybody concerned.

Kids need to feel separate from their parents if they ever want to develop into their own person, savoring their own dreams, making their own mistakes, finding their own way.

And parents, too, need to rediscover that selfhood they buried so long ago in car pools and teacher conferences. They need to devote time to each other, learn to enjoy one another's company without the conversation being devoted totally to the kids and their needs.

Still, one can't help but feel a bit like an amputee, waking up in an echoing house with nobody close by to reach out and touch for comfort. It's not just the silence. It's the loss of energy and electricity that young people bring to a household. When they first move out, it sounds a bit like molecules settling.

As a mother, especially, you realize what a tremendous investment you have made in the lives of your children from the first moment you learned you were pregnant and had to start thinking twice about something so inocuous as taking an aspirin or drinking a glass of wine with dinner. You never let up that vigilance., You watch over them and fight for them with every sinew of spit and spirit you possess.

It is, indeed, like being cojoined.

When your child makes a bad mistake. YOU feel like a failure. And when your child triumphs and overcomes that mistake or accomplishes something in the world. YOU feel like a success.

And if you do your job right, then when the time comes, they can't wait to get out of the house and go explore this world on their own. They launch forth from the nest on timid wings, and it takes every ounce of courage you can summon not to take flight after them, not to spread your strong wings beneath them to catch them should they fall. You continue to stand watch until they disappear over the horizon.

Like the separated babies, you weep and wail for them, albeit silently.

But in time, you learn that although you may be separate in body, you are never separate in soul. Little Michaela and Gabrielle are figuring this out as they learn to stand, each on their own sturdy leg. I discovered it for myself one day in the Chinaberry grove.

I'd gone to that lovely glade of trees, glittering golden beneath a sky so blue it made my eyes ache, and thought, How will I ever be able to come here anymore without feeling sad, without sensing the ghosts of childhoods past? Without seeing their rope swings hanging motionless and stumbling over their leaf huts, fallen through now and empty?

Then the wind whispered through the trees and said, "This place will always be in their hearts, just as it is in yours. It will be part of them, as they are a part of you. And they will carry it with them, Wherever they go."

I felt peace steal over my soul, and I walked back to the house, only to spot the blinking light on my telephone answering machine and find that, just at the same moment I'd been listening to the wisdom of the wind ... my daughter had been calling home, reaching out for a touch of comfort.

Truth in politics

Dear Editor:

I would like to thank Keith Collier and Hassie Sneed for taking a public stand for truth in political advertisements.

Being elected Scurry County Sheriff and County Commissioner for years, they understand county budgets and expenses and know what the truth is.

Knowing the truth does not make it easy to inform the voters about political deception.

If all of us would seek the facts and take a public stand for truth, there would be less political deception.

My hat is off to Keith and Hassie.

C.D. Gray, Jr.

Apology given

Dear Editor:

This letter is again in response to WANDA 8's letter.

Wanda, I would like to apologize for upsetting you. I didn't mean to hurt your feelings. I was simply stating the way I feel about your incident. You don't have to agree with me.

I didn't say you were elderly, either. I was simply stating that sometimes older people don't even realize their driving errors. And I used the little old lady that swerved out in front of me as an example. I didn't say that you were her.

I'm glad to hear that you take care of people, I do too.

I wish that there were more people who care enough to do what you do. But that is irrelevant in what we are discussing.

Anyhow, you stated in your letter, "Get a life lady and stay out of mine."

If you didn't want this to be my business (and everyone else's that reads the paper), then you shouldn't have even written a letter to the editor to begin with.

There is one more point that I would like to make. It seems that in the past couple of years, there have been several people from Scurry County that have died in car accidents. I wish someone would have called 911 on them before they wrecked, instead of after they were found on the side of the road.

Sincerely,
Joni Hembree

Thank you!

Dear Editor:

Angels do exist and some of them wear uniforms.

Thank you, Cpl. Keith Ward, for your support and understanding. You truly made my day.

Thank you Sgt. Patrick Coggins for your help on Oct. 8 when I had trouble with my '65 Mustang near Wal-Mart and to the very courteous dispatcher who called a tow truck for me.

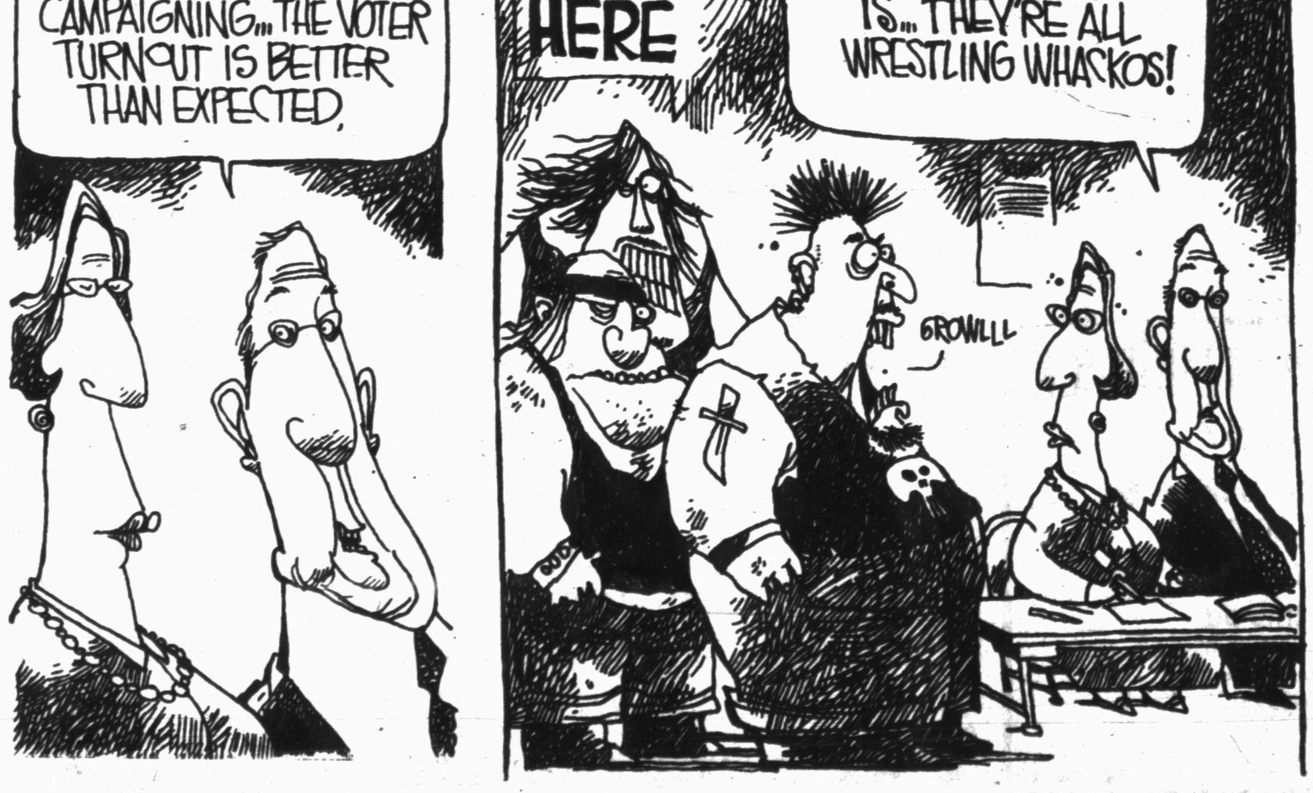
Thank you Snyder EMS and officers who responded so quickly to my 911 call earlier this year when my brother passed out at home.

The young woman that got there first still asks about him when I see her.

And — on behalf of my brother and others who benefit from it, thanks to the officers who work so hard for the Special Olympics.

All of you are very special and I salute you.

Wanda Bennett



EDITORIAL ROUNDUP

Texas education

Wichita Falls Times Record News on Texas education:

Now that the fall elections are behind us, there's no question that education will be the top priority of the next session of the Texas Legislature.

That's what Gov. George W. Bush promised, that's what Lt. Gov.-elect Rick Perry promised, and that's what just about everybody else elected to state office this past Tuesday promised.

If there's no question that education will be the top priority, there is also no big question about which part of education is going to get the lion's share of the attention come January in Austin.

That will be the public elementary, junior high and high schools, because that's whats been promised.

But we join Dr. Thomas P. Hoffman, an English professor at Midwestern State University and president of the Texas Association of College Teachers, in urging the governor, lieutenant governor and legislators to put higher education on the agenda, also, and to keep it there until several key issues are resolved.

In an open letter to the governor published on our Op-ed page recently, Hoffman called on the governor to expand his concern about the state of Texas educational system to include colleges and universities in three areas:

-- Increasing faculty salaries,
-- Restoring lost benefits,
-- And restoring academic freedom.

Texas college teachers continue to see their compensation drop. Over the course of the last six years, according to Hoffman, Texas "has dropped to 10th place in faculty salaries among the 10 most populous states."

And the salary situation seems to be worse at schools the size of MSU. Data from the Higher Education Coordinating Board indicate that the average salary paid a full-time teacher at MSU is the lowest among Texas public colleges and about $7,000 lower than the nearest competitor.

What that means is obvious, if it's true that you generally get what you pay for. In highly competitive fields, Texas simply cannot compete for the best and the brightest, which deprives our students of exposure to those professors. Anecdotes abound on Texas campuses about professors who cannot retire because the places they are vacating cannot be filled because no candidates want to come to Texas.

The salary situation is bad enough, but, like Hoffman, we're mystified by why the Legislature cut the optional retirement benefit. It should be restored.

And finally, few top-notch competitors will come to a state where academic freedom is threatened. They don't have to. They can go to other states where professors are allowed to teach what they believe should be taught in their classrooms.

Clearly, higher education in this state is at risk of becoming mediocre.

Hoffman wants higher ed on the agenda this next session, and so should all who understand the value of a solid college education to a state that wants to grow and be competitive in the next century.

Electoral fraud

The Dallas Morning News

If Americans don't vote in adequate numbers, it's not because voting is difficult. Voting has never been easier, thanks to laws designed to increase registrations and to permit mail balloting for the sick and elderly.

However, those same laws have also made voter fraud easier than ever. The United States needs to keep the good parts of the more wide-open system, eliminate the bad and punish those who would abuse it.

The television news show 60 Minutes brought the problem startingly to light on Nov. 1 with a report about the 1993 motor voter law, which allows people to register to vote when applying for a driver's license or welfare.

The motor voter law is noble and well intentioned. However, it is also flawed because it forbids government officials from asking people to produce identification showing that they are eligible to vote.

The result has been many noncitizens registering even though they are ineligible and people registering more than once. 60 Minutes even described cases of people registering dogs, cats, a donkey and an elephant.

This wouldn't be so bad if it were easier to prevent ineligible votes from being cast. But illegal voting is rarely prosecuted because the laws regarding it are soft as well. Most states don't even require identification when voting; Texas only did so this year. And mail ballots are notoriously easy to manipulate.

In Texas, the 1997 Legislature cracked down on mail ballot fraud, which was the preferred manner of stealing elections in the state. But Texas Secretary of State Alberto Gonzales recently discovered 74,000 duplicate voters on Texas rolls and 43,000 others who may be dead.

Texas must do more. Mr. Gonzales has some good ideas. He would clarify existing laws to make it easier to prosecute fraud, forbid campaign operatives from helping voters to complete mail ballots and empower his office to refer fraud complaints to the Department of Public Safety, thus bypassing overwhelmed or complicit district attorneys.

At the federal level, Congress and the president should restore integrity to voter registrations, perhaps as part of some omnibus election reform bill that also restricts campaign financing.

No one benefits from an electoral system that invites fraud. Democracy is eroded when the credibility of its elections can no longer be assumed.

State board of education

Corpus Christi Caller-Times

"The Legislature ought to rid the state of what is rapidly becoming an embarrassment and, perhaps most importantly, an obstacle to raising the educational profile of Texas, by taking the State Board of Education off the ballot.

Republicans in particular ought to join in this effort. The extremist wing of the party has sought to take control of this board and use it for their own ideological ends. On Tuesday night, the hard-liners came a step closer by taking several key seats, though they are still short of a majority.

The Legislature already has taken much of the power out of the hands of the board. It ought to finish the job by making the board appointive, and removing a opportunity for political mischief."

Lynx bound for southwestern Colorado

DENVER (AP) — The first of 80 lynx will begin arriving in southwestern Colorado next month in a plan to reintroduce the wild cats to the state following a nearly 25-year absence.

The Colorado Wildlife Commission approved the plan Thursday, which will reintroduce lynx to the Weminuche Wilderness, a remote area in the eastern end of the San Juan National Forest in southwestern Colorado.

The commission's 5-1 decision came less than a month after an environmental group claimed responsibility for fires on Vail Mountain to protest the ski resort's expansion that it said would ruin the best lynx habitat in the state. The Oct. 19 fires destroyed three buildings and damaged four ski lifts. Total damage was estimated at $12 million.

Vail Mountain is about 150 miles north of the Weminuche Wilderness.

Forty lynx will be purchased from trappers in Alaska and in Canada's British Columbia, the Yukon and the Northwest Territories, and flown and driven to the high mountain Weminuche Wilderness in December.

If all goes well, another 40 will arrive next year.

Critics wonder whether the lynx, rarely found south of the Canadian border, can survive.

Biologist John Seidel, a predator mammal expert with the Colorado Division of Wildlife, said there are no guarantees.

Though he would prefer to get the cats later in the winter, when temperatures are less extreme and the snow depth lower, there is a need to move quickly because the lynx population follows cycling of hare populations, usually about every 10 years.

Lynx populations now are at a maximum.

The lynx, equipped with radio collars, will be closely monitored for the next two to three years to see how they adapt, he said.

Biologists want to determine whether the cats have specific habitat preferences in Colorado, whether they are able to compete with other predators for prey, and if they die, why.

Nobody knows exactly how many lynx roam in the United States, but environmentalists think the figure is fewer than 2,000.

Ventura will be 'most exciting governor'

WILMINGTON, Del. (AP) — Jesse Ventura of Minnesota says he will be the "most exciting governor." First he has to learn how to be one.

Ventura, the former professional wrestler whose only previous political experience was as a suburban Minneapolis mayor, said he "made some new friends and made some contacts I needed to make" at a conference for new governors.

Ventura impressed his new colleagues. Wisconsin Gov. Tommy Thompson predicted he would be "a star." Delaware Gov. Tom Carper said he's "got his head screwed on straight."

Eleven of the 13 governors-elect, including Democrat Gray Davis of California and Republican Jeb Bush of Florida, were expected to attend seminars led Friday and Saturday by 20 sitting governors.

The advice runs like this: choose your advisers well; learn to "live in a fishbowl"; and above all, be bipartisan, a suggestion the governors say Congress and President Clinton would do well to follow.

Governors think they have been ignored in Washington over the past two years, after having played a key role on several issues in 1995-96, including the overhaul of the welfare system.

"Governors tend to be more pragmatic. We're more interested in solving problems than in ideology," Carper said.

Nevada's new governor, Kenny Guinn, did not need the lesson. The utility executive and banker who has never held public office will be the state's first Republican governor in 16 years.

"Once you're elected you don't have a 'D' or 'R' on your forehead," he said.

Ventura's presence alone would serve to warn governors about the perils of partisanship. His election on the Reform Party ticket in a three-way race was the biggest surprise of this year's election.

He has impressed Vermont Gov. Howard Dean, a Democrat, as a "straightforward tell-it-like-it-is guy."

Ventura was easily the biggest attraction at the conference, even though he cut out early Friday afternoon to Minnesota to help coach a high school football game. He is the volunteer conditioning coach at Champlin Park High.

He will miss sessions on building coalitions, developing an agenda, dealing with the media and working with legislators.

In case anyone was wondering, Ventura does not feel any particular pressure in his new job.

"I've done many pressurized things in my life," he said at a news conference Thursday night, one of two he was to hold while in town. He was dressed in a fringed leather jacket, black pants and white boots, holding forth outside the $270-a-night Hotel DuPont.

"I haven't been in the ring for 12 years, but I sold out Madison Square Garden three times. There's a little pressure there."

Before that he was a Navy SEAL.

"I was a demolitions expert. Connect the wrong wire. That's pressure. Jump out of an airplane, that's pressure. Dive 200 feet under the water, that's literally pressure."

Symposium devoted to singer's life

HEMPSTEAD, N.Y. (AP) — Frank Sinatra's life was an open book. So it's only fitting that it will now be studied accordingly among academia's elite.

"Frank Sinatra: The Man, The Music, The Legend," a three-day conference at Hofstra University, is billed as the first academic conference dedicated to the entertainer, who died this year.

With 43 panels and 80 discussion groups, the Sinatra symposium that opened Thursday brings fans, colleagues and intellects together to dissect the legacy of Ol' Blue Eyes.

"I think it's a great idea to take this time and examine the life and work of a man who personally I regard as the single most important singer, actor, performer and most unique human being of the 20th century," producer Quincy Jones said Thursday.

Some of the discussions include: "Frank Sinatra and the Politics of Cool," "Sinatra, Gender and Masculinity," and "Prophet, Padrone, Postmodern Prometheus: Moral Images of Sinatra in Contemporary Culture." More than 2,000 people were expected by the close of the conference Saturday.

But conference attendees should not expect the schmaltz of an Elvis Presley convention or a Beatles fan fest, said Eric Schmertz, one of the conference co-directors and a professor emeritus at Hofstra. In fact, dozens of Sinatra imitators who wanted to perform were rejected out of hand, he said.

Judge won't hear man's guilty plea

LAREDO (AP) — A state district judge has refused to accept a man's guilty plea on an auto theft charge.

Jaime Paramillo, who had one of his legs amputated because of cancer, went before 49th District Judge Manuel Flores on Thursday and admitted that in June he drove a 1986 Buick Skylark that did not belong to him.

When he stole the car, he was under the influence of alcohol and prescription medication, he said.

"I was on medication and I mixed it with beer and I had like a blackout," Paramillo told Flores.

But the judge rejected his plea and set the case for trial starting next week.

Seeds of smallness — fifteen factotrs for failure

(Last of a two-part series) In part one of this series, I gave you seven of the 15 factors for failure. One of the best ways to identify failures is to listen to what they say. The failure's words are negative, uncaring and self-serving. Their words become the seeds they plant for a harvest of smallness.

Read on my friends, and study the words of flops. If you avoid sowing the seeds of failure, you can reap a harvest of success and great achievement.

Thoughts for failure

•I don't care. This phrase actually means, "I want what I want this moment and the consequences down the road are of no concern to me." Watch people who say, "I don't care." You will often find them focused on now while avoiding the results that come later.

•It's too late. What the failures are actually saying here is that they are unwilling to pay the price. This is a cop out and a way to avoid work. It is seldom too late to do the right thing. Failure is easy; success carries a high price tag made up of work and diligence.

•I didn't think. Henry Ford said, "Thinking is the hardest work there is, which is the probable reason why so few engage in it." James Allen said, "You are today where your thoughts have brought you, you will be tomorrow where your thoughts take you." I might add that if you think "after" you act it will increase your chances for failure.

•I don't have an education. This phrase means "I dropped out of high school" or "I don't want to go to college." "I can't afford to go to college," is not true today. Though education is costly, it is much less expensive than ignorance. A lack of education is no excuse except to the failures.

•I quit. When the going gets tough, quit. Failure is achieved by those who quit. (Especially, by those who quit just a little too soon.) I remember reading a story as a child. It was about a man caught in a blizzard. He walked for hours trying to get home. Finally, he gave up, laid down in the snow and rested. The following morning his family found his frozen body just a few yards from his front door.

•I'm just as good as my friends. The real question here is, "Are you soaring with the eagles or trotting with the turkeys?" Failures are always happy to be just like everyone else. It's the "I'm OK, you're OK," syndrome. This may mean: I'm happy being mediocre if you're happy being mediocre. Choose your friends carefully, or they'll ensure your failure.

•I'm so tired. One of my favorite sayings is this: Everyday about 5 p.m. we must decide whether we are genuinely tired or just lazy. The failure quits at the first sign of fatigue. Those who rise above, understand that what you achieve after you feel like stopping is the main difference between you and failure. When fatigue sets in, take a short break. Sit if you've been standing; stand if you've been sitting. Enjoy a healthy snack and then tackle one more task.

•I'll do it tomorrow. One guaranteed-to-grow failure seed is procrastination. Kay Lyons said, "Yesterday is a cancelled check; tomorrow is a promissory note; today is the only cash you have — so spend it wisely." The failure will put it off, the successful person will tackle it now.

Your life is like a field. What seeds will you sow? Seeds of failure, or those to make you grow.

Your Birthday

Sunday, Nov. 15, 1998

Several matters of extreme importance will experience a steady, continuous growth in the year ahead. Don't get upset if events don't move as quickly as you might like them to progress. Be content with the way things are instead of trying to accelerate the pace.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Although you need to be sincere, try complimenting friends in the company of others today. It will go a long way towards guaranteeing that pals will have nice things to say about you when the time comes. Get a jump on life by understanding the influences that'll govern you in the year ahead. Send the required refund form and for your Astro-Graph predictions by mailing $2 and self-addressed stamped envelope to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 1758, Murray Hill Station, New York, NY 10156. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) In career situations today, use your head so you can be counted among the winners. The race is more likely to go to the smart and not necessarily the swift.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Try to associate today with those whose thinking and interests parallels yours. It could prove very boring to be with people who aren't in tuned to your wavelength.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) If you are trying to promote or sell something today, don't make your pitch until you're sure you have the complete attention of your prospective buyer. Timing is everything.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Before making any important decisions today, try to get as much feedback as possible from associates you admire. The input of others could reveal factors you overlooked.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) If you have an idea that could help working conditions or procedures at your work place, this is the day to talk to the boss. He or she should be receptive.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Keep in mind today when dealing with others that associates will emulate your behavior. So it might not be such a bad idea to remember the adage, "Judge not, lest yea be judged."

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) A debate over a serious issue won't be won today by getting in the last word. Instead, it will be graded on the quality of the comments. Let others lose their head, keep yours.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Don't waste time today on idle chatter. Use your extremely effective communicative skills to get your points across to those who can help advance your latest endeavor.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Listen to the suggestions of a colleague today who has some ideas as to how you can strengthen your financial position. His or her advise will have real merit.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Even though they might be small, be grateful for any potential profitable developments that arise today and take advantage of them. The Bank of England wasn't built in a day.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Today, your inner voice may convey information to you unavailable elsewhere, so don't discount your hunches. Use them in a logical, practical manner, especially in commercial dealings.

Your Birthday

Monday, Nov. 16, 1998

Your tendency to be more pragmatic in taking proper measures to make your dreams realities will be heightened in the year ahead. Your hopes and aspirations have excellent chances of being achieved.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Serious matters must not be handled in a cavalier fashion today. Make certain you guard against any inclinations to treat your duties and responsibilities nonchalantly. Major changes are ahead for Scorpio in the coming year. Send the required refund form and for your Astro-Graph predictions by mailing $2 and self-addressed stamped envelope to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 1758, Murray Hill Station, New York, NY 10156. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) If you display any intolerance to accept your friends for what they are today, you can bet this behavior will serve to call attention to traits you possess that need correction.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Taking a position of "do as I say, not as I do" will result in setting a very poor example for your family and children today. You must lead by example, not dictation.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Associates won't put any credence in what you have to say today unless they believe you know what you're talking about. Dwell only in the facts, not suppositions.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Guard against financial frivolity, because you're in a brief cycle where things could get a bit rocky from time to time in this regard. Today might very well be one of those days.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Usually you're a direct and straightforward individual, but you could confuse some issues and actually upset the apple cart because of your inability to make up your mind today.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You could be quite harsh and judgmental on someone today who is simply asking for your assistance, which is out of your character. Don't let your usual kindness and compassion desert you.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) If you get mixed up with the wrong crowd today, it might turn out to be quite a negative experience. Be extremely selective regarding persons you get to know.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Be mindful of your behavior in public and try not to do anything that could provide fodder for your detractors. Your image is a trifle fragile under today's aspects.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Although you are usually the dominating factor within your bailiwick, your associates could have a strong negative influence on your thinking today. Be careful and remain steadfast.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Be sure to test the waters before diving into a joint endeavor today, especially in arrangements where an investment is required on your behalf. You could get taken for a ride.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Whenever cooperation is required, you would rather be a team player than a lone eagle without any hesitation. However, your desires for independence may be stronger today.

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

Anonymous 'Angel' Gives Teen A Summer She'll Never Forget

DEAR ABBY: Early last fall, my mother committed suicide. It was very hard on our family, both emotionally and financially.

Our house was full of old memories, mostly sad ones. My father could no longer bear to live there, so he moved us to Georgia from Boston where my parents had lived since before I was born. Of course, he had to change jobs. Although his new job paid better than the one he held previously, without Mom's income, times were hard. My three brothers and I had to give up many of the extras we had always taken for granted.

One of these extras was summer camp. I had gone to camp in Maine every year since I was 9. I'm now 15, and this would have been my last year to attend. Although I hated the idea of missing camp this year, there was no money for it.

In early January, an anonymous letter arrived. It seems our grandmother told her women's club about our situation. Enclosed with the letter was a cashier's check for $10,000! A member of the club felt so bad that on top of the grief for our mother, we would miss out on camp, that she wanted to help. Because of her unbelievable generosity, not only were we able to go to camp, there was money for school clothes for all of us.

I don't know who the lady was, but because of her I had the best summer of my 15 years. She and my friends at the camp are responsible for an amazing summer for which I am totally grateful.

Abby, if you print this letter, maybe that wonderful woman will read it and understand that I would thank her a million times if I could. She has confirmed my faith that there are good people in this world with kind and generous hearts.

Mom didn't mean to cause anyone any problems, and she would have wanted us to continue our summers as we had in the past. Thanks to this kindhearted stranger, we were able to do that.

FOREVER GRATEFUL IN GEORGIA

DEAR FOREVER GRATEFUL: Indeed, there are wonderfully generous people in this world, and your "angel" is one of them. Although the newspapers and television news are filled with the misdeeds of people, along comes someone like your anonymous benefactor, and the basic goodness of mankind is reaffirmed. One day, you, in turn, will be able to pass along the kindness she showed to someone who needs a helping hand. The power of good deeds can be infinite if all who are affected by them are inspired to repeat them.

***

DEAR ABBY: My sister is getting married for the third time to a man who also has been married twice before. What kind of gift should I get, or can I just settle for sending my good wishes? I want to do the right thing, but I'm getting weary of "getting hit" for gifts every time she goes to the altar.

MAGGIE IN NORTH CAROLINA

DEAR MAGGIE: You do not have to give your sister as expensive a present as you perhaps gave at her first wedding, but you should give the happy couple a modest gift, especially if you attend the wedding. A suggestion: momogrammed towels so the new husband will not be reminded of his predecessors. Better yet, ask them what they could use.

DEAR ABBY: Your good advice to "Romantically Rocky," the man who wanted tips on how to be romantic with his wife, reminded me of a definition of love I learned from a woman acquaintance in New York many years ago. A life crisis had driven her to a psychotherapist to whom she complained about being "unloved." The therapist asked her to describe what being loved would be like. After some thought, my friend said that if someone really, really listened to her, that would be her idea of being loved.

The therapist concluded that the woman needed additional support, and insisted that her troubled client look into a self-help group. She arrived late at an address in a commercial neighborhood that had seen better days. With some apprehension she climbed a flight of dingy stairs and found her way into a room where a group of shabbily dressed people sat around a beat-up table listening intently as one of the group told his story. She was dumbstruck at observing the very definition of love she had offered her therapist, believing it could not exist. This was the first of many Alcoholics Anonymous meetings in which this woman found the healing power of a love that really, really listened and cared.

For me, this story illustrates that becoming a good listener requires no more than willingness, practice, and the kind of genuine regard for another human being one can find in AA or any Dear Abby reply. And, "Romantically Rocky" may find that one of the most seductive lines in the English language is a heartfelt, "I just love to listen to you talk!" You may use my name.

GEORGE MARCELLE, LOS ANGELES

DEAR ABBY: I can educate "Romantically Rocky" on how to romance his wife:

A woman loves to have little things done for her, things that say, "I thought about you today." Bring her a CD by her favorite artist for no reason except that you were thinking of her. Tuck a note in her purse saying, "Hi, I love you." Unload the dishwasher and reload it without being asked. Give her a foot massage with lotion while she watches her favorite TV show. Sit behind her on the bed and brush her hair with her favorite hairbrush. Fold the clean laundry and put it away.

Call your beloved at mid-morning and invite her to lunch. Slip a small stuffed animal in her car with a silly note. Bring her the newspaper, coffee and doughnuts when she awakens on a lazy Saturday morning. Give her a big hug when you return from work, and say, "I love you. I'm glad to have you to come home to."

Consider how many relationships would be happier if men would do just one unexpected romantic thing each day.

I'm fortunate to have a very romantic fella as my soulmate. Trust me — any woman would appreciate these sweet gestures. Sign me ...

Ex-DA ordered back to prison

TYLER (AP) — The former Henderson County district attorney has been ordered to return to federal prison for three months after violating terms of his supervised release.

U.S. District Judge Richard Schell has ordered former E. Ray Andrews returned to federal prison after Andrews admitted that he was arrested for driving while intoxicated while under supervision for other charges.

Andrews, who served as lead prosecutor in Henderson County for two years, is scheduled to report to federal prison in Three Rivers, Texas, on Jan. 4, according to court documents.

Andrews also admitted to the court that he failed to report his DWI arrest to the U.S. Probation Office within 72 hours as required.

In September 1994, Andrews pleaded guilty to allegedly agreeing to accept a $300,000 bribe to dismiss capital murder charges against Corsicana businessman Jerry Mack Watkins, who was accused of killing his wife.

Andrews, who has since lost his law license, was sentenced to 30 months in federal prison.

"Thanks, Pilgrims!"

At Texas Cellular, we believe that everyone has a lot to be thankful for. We give thanks for this great nation, and the Pilgrims of Plymouth Rock who began this wonderful tradition of Thanksgiving.

We give thanks every day for all the bright smiles and warm handshakes from the good friends and neighbors we've made throughout the year.

Texas Cellular is proud to serve this great area as your home-owned and operated quality cellular communication provider.

Happy Thanksgiving to you and your pilgrims this holiday season!

WE TAKE CARE OF OUR NEIGHBORS.
