Marion Barry's victory shows racial divide in D.C.

Barry's victory

WASHINGTON — The triumph by Marion Barry, ex-mayor and ex-convict, in Washington's Democratic mayoral primary laid bare the racial divide in the nation's capital. He called on whites to put aside their "hangups" about him.

Jackpot rolls over

No tickets bought correctly matched all six numbers drawn Wednesday night for the twice-weekly Lotto Texas game, state lottery officials said. The jackpot was worth an estimated $20 million. The numbers drawn from a field of 50 were: 1, 2, 15, 17, 41 and 49. Lottery officials estimate the jackpot for Saturday night's game will be an estimated $30 million.

Tragic memory

FORT WORTH — Death, as in birth, was premature for Amy Lynn Thatcher. Her regular walk to Handley Middle School ended tragically five years ago, when a preacher's son paroled from prison only nine months earlier dragged her into his car and sped away. She was found strangled with the lace from her sneaker. Police described the girl as a random victim, but said she was not Smith's only prey./5B

Brinkley match

TELLURIDE, Colo. — Christie Brinkley is engaged to the millionaire developer she survived a helicopter crash with last April, a friend of the model who spoke on condition of anonymity said Wednesday. Brinkley, 40, the model for Billy Joel's song "Uptown Girl," divorced the singer last month.

Haiti regime stands defiant in face of imminent invasion

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — Haiti's army-installed government stood defiant Wednesday night as the threat of U.S. invasion loomed.

"We will maintain the chosen direction," President Emile Jonassaint said in a late night news conference at the national palace.

The news conference capped a day of rising tensions in Haiti, as low-flying planes dropped American propaganda leaflets on the Haitian capital and a U.S. warship steamed within sight of the port.

The de facto government's Ministry of the Interior and Defense declared a 7 p.m.-7 a.m. partial curfew, prohibiting traffic on inter-city highways and banning the departure of boats

U.S. official tours campuses in MISD bid for unitary status

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

Although it is no secret that Midland Independent School District is seeking unitary status to get out from under a court-ordered desegregation system, attorneys involved in the issue apparently want to keep the discovery process quiet.

Wendy Marie Parker, attorney with the Education Opportunities Litigation Section of the U.S. Department of Justice, began touring Midland public school campuses Wednesday morning. She plans to tour 35 MISD campuses by Friday afternoon.

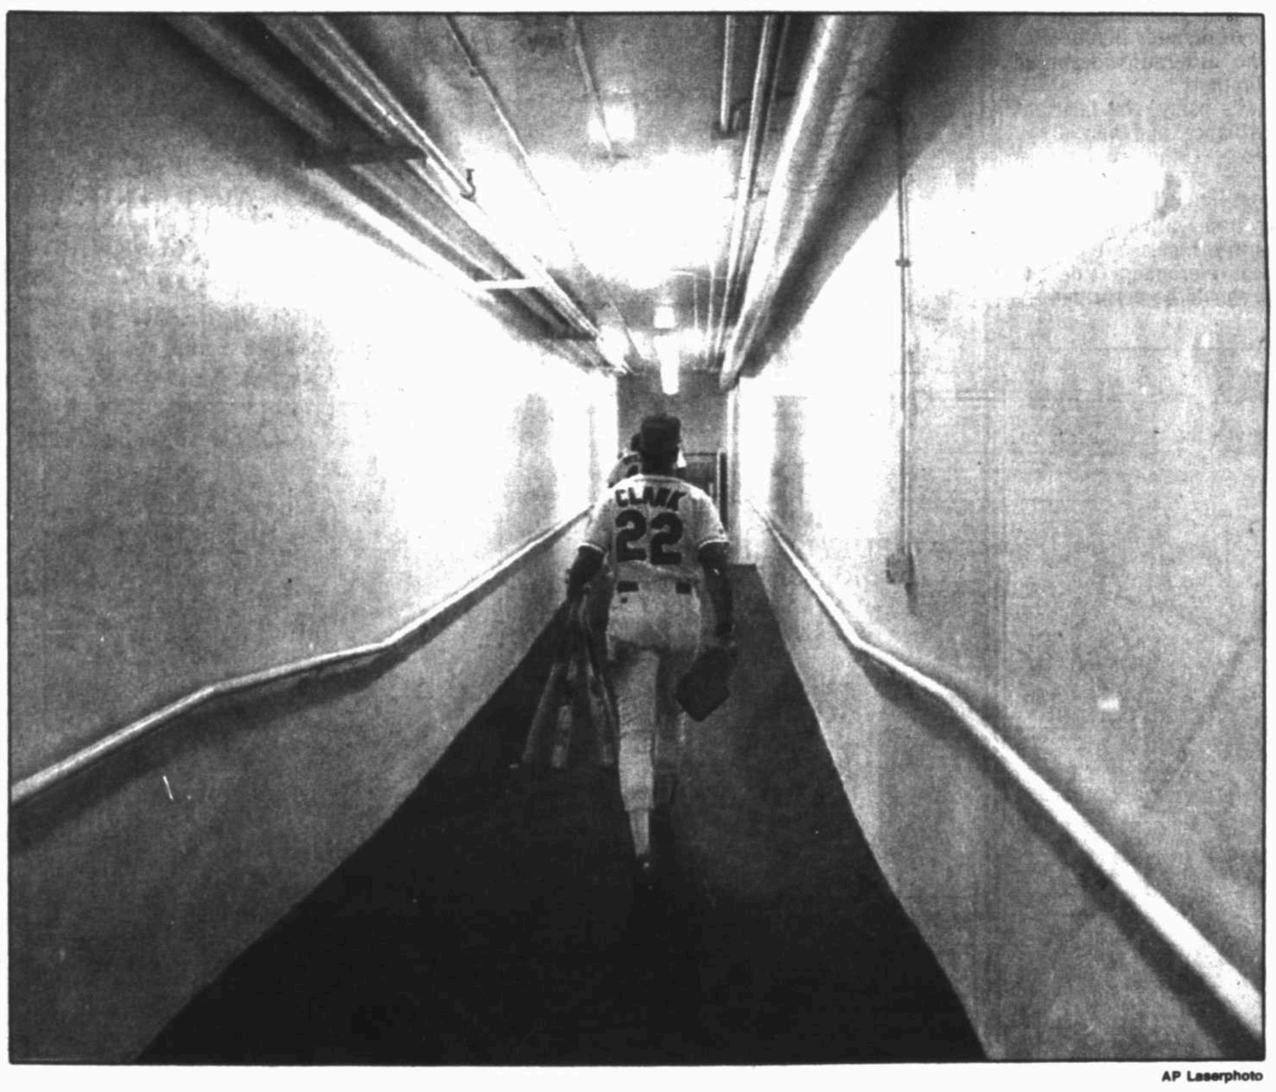

Ms. Parker said she could not comment on her reason for touring the schools or any aspect of the Justice Department's involvement.

However, at a July 29 unitary status conference, U.S. District Court Judge Royal Ferguson said

Baseball owners bury '94 season, World Series

Texas Rangers first baseman Will Clark walks up the tunnel after the team's game against the Seattle Mariners in Arlington on Aug. 10, the Rangers' last game of 1994. The owners canceled the season on Wednesday.

■ Unforgettable year ends with whimper of conference call, a fax.

By Mitchell Landsberg
Associated Press

Major league baseball ended its 1994 season not with a homer, not with a strikeout, not with a catcher leaping triumphant into his pitcher's arms. No, the season died Wednesday with the whimper of a conference call and a fax.

Football, anyone?

On the 34th day of a strike by players, major league owners canceled the remainder of the season, including the playoffs and World Series.

■ STRIKE UPDATE: Call Cityline, 560-2400, 6770.

The last time the World Series was canceled was 1904; the last time the regular season was cut short was in 1918, during World War I.

So into the record books will go an asterisk explaining that the 1994 season foundered on a dispute over the owners' insistence on a cap on player salaries. The final decision was made in a conference call of team owners led by Milwaukee's Bud Selig, acting commissioner of baseball.

"This is a sad day," Selig said in a fax announcing the shutdown. "Nobody wanted this to happen, but the continuing player strike leaves us no choice but to take this action."

What comes next for the national pastime is anybody's guess.

So farewell for now to Matt Williams of the San Francisco Giants, who could have been the baldest man ever to hit 62 home runs in a season. And the only

Courtroom-curious basin attorneys check out Judge Bunton's new digs

By Gary Shanks
Staff Writer

At the request of Senior Federal Judge Lucious Bunton, attorneys with the Midland and Ector Bar Associations toured a new courtroom on the first floor of the Midland Federal Building Wednesday.

The new courtroom was recently completed to provide a place for Bunton, in accordance with his status as a senior judge, to hear a smaller, but still substantial docket of cases in Midland. Federal court officials are awaiting word on a replacement for Bunton to handle cases in the old third floor courtroom.

Bunton scheduled the reception to give area attorneys an opportunity to familiarize themselves with the courtroom and adjacent facilities, including

Fisher fumes, Hispanic GOP asks: Kay Bailey, que paso?

By Carlos Guerra
Hearst News Service

SAN ANTONIO — While Democratic Senate challenger Richard Fisher is working for a big Hispanic turnout by campaigning in Spanish, a pair of memos surfaced Tuesday that have some hard-core Hispanic Republicans asking: "Kay Bailey, que paso?"

Mexican-Americans have become a force potent enough to tip some statewide races, which is why memos issued while Kay Bailey Hutchison was Texas state treasurer startled them.

One memo, dated Feb. 10, 1993, was sent to six staffers, two of whom speak Spanish.

City's sales-tax rebate drops slightly; county's return soars

Staff Report

The City of Midland this week received its September sales tax rebate check for $653,267 from the State Comptroller's office, which represents a small 0.29 percent decrease from September of 1993.

The latest check brings Midland's year-to-date total to $7,475,123, or 4.37 percent more than the $7,161,965 the city had received during the same nine-month period in 1993.

September's check includes taxes collected on July sales and reported to the Comptroller in August by businesses filing monthly tax returns. Economists generally agree that sales tax rebates are one of the best indicators of a city's economic strength, particularly when comparing one year's total to that of the previous year.

Meanwhile, Midland County re-

France's Muslim-scarf ban in schools rekindles debate

PARIS (AP) — Teachers are upset, Muslims outraged. The extreme right, for once, thinks the government is right on target.

All agree on one thing: By decreeing that Muslim girls cannot wear traditional Islamic head coverings at public schools, the Education Ministry has rekindled one of the France's most divisive social debates.

A coalition of moderate Muslim groups, mostly supporters of secular education, said the "climate of intolerance developing in our country" has prompted them to consider pulling Muslim children out of state schools.

"What crime have these girls committed to deserve a punishment?" the coalition asked in a statement, warning that Muslims risk feeling increasingly excluded from French society.

The coalition demanded a meeting with Education Minister Francois Bayrou, who ignited the controversy by disclosing in a magazine interview published Saturday that he is prohibiting Islamic scarves at state schools.

Teachers and school administrators were almost unanimously dismayed by Bayrou's tactics.

The National Union of Secondary School Teachers said it was stunned by the "suddenness" of Bayrou's pronouncement, and the fact that he didn't consult with school personnel beforehand.

The main union of school principals also questioned Bayrou's ban, saying its members preferred to deal with the controversy on a case-by-case basis through negotiation and compromise.

When Bayrou informed the principals of the ban on Sunday he encouraged them to use their powers of persuasion with scarf-wearing girls before taking more drastic action, such as expulsion. No girl has been expelled yet.

Many educators and Islamic leaders are concerned that Muslims will feel discriminated against because Bayrou's ban does not extend to skullcaps and religious jewelry worn by some Jewish and Christian students.

Bruno Megret, deputy leader of the far-right National Front, said there was no need to treat Islam equitably with "traditional European religions." He described Islam as "incompatible with our civilization and our laws," thanked Bayrou for imposing the ban and said local party officials would try to ensure that the policy was enforced.

Italy mulls dropping decades-old laws against prostitution, brothels

ROME (AP) — The right-hand traffic lane buzzed with the sounds of the night: the hum of idling cars, the murmur of bargaining, the click of high heels.

But new noises are invading the roadside prostitution trade in Rome and across Italy. Police sirens cry. Paddy wagon doors slam shut.

One of the most aggressive anti-vice campaigns in recent years is under way against street walkers, who have moved off sidestreets to main boulevards in some cities. Authorities also have begun seizing cars of clients and giving their names to reporters.

The crackdown, however, goes deeper than simple law and order. It touches on such sensitive issues as illegal immigration, public health and the limits of Italy's expansive tolerance on matters involving sex.

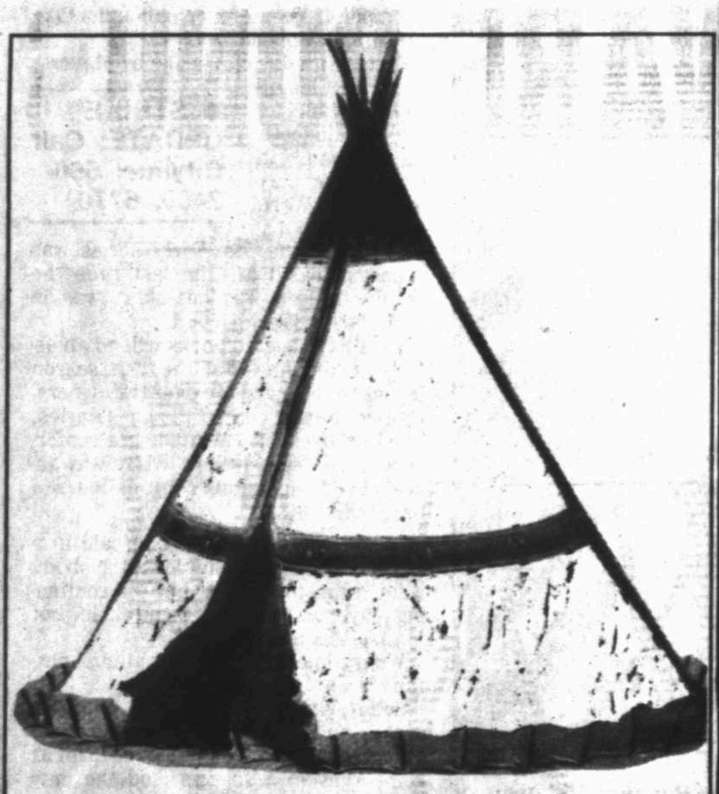

Debate has grown serious over whether to drop the decades-old ban on brothels, known in Italy as "closed houses," and establish a legal red-light district similar to Amsterdam, Netherlands.

Supporters, including many parliament members, say it would be a way to check prostitutes for AIDS and break the influence of pimps and organized crime. A few finance officials have wistfully calculated the potential tax revenue from bordellos.

"Reopen the 'closed houses,'" urged Alessandra Mussolini, a lawmaker and granddaughter of World War II dictator Benito Mussolini, who ordered widespread raids on brothels.

Mussolini's party, the far-right National Alliance, and their ally in government, the Northern League, may offer a proposal to bring back brothels.

Even in conservative Sicily, city councilors in Siracusa are considering a local referendum to decide if brothels should be permitted.

The World in brief

■ Trouble erupts 2 weeks into cease-fire

BELFAST — Gina was rounding up "the boys." There had been trouble at the Crumlin Road courthouse, a pitched battle between Catholics and Protestants, and the police had waded in with truncheons against Gina's people, the Protestants.

Gina, with short platinum-dyed hair and gold-loop earrings and a fearsome reputation among people who follow sectarian violence, was working the phones. Her summons was successful: a knot of men and boys began gathering behind the courthouse at 2 p.m. It grew to about 40 or 50. Some of them carried axe handles and cudgels.

Soon the anger and frustration felt by the Protestants would erupt in a confrontation with the police and army. For an afternoon and part of the night, the men engaged in hit-and-run forays, tossing rocks and firebombs, firing guns, dodging plastic bullets fired by police, and hijacking cars and vans and setting them on fire.

■ Algeria lets Muslim leaders out of prison

PARIS — The Algerian government has allowed the top leaders of the banned Muslim opposition party to leave prison for house arrest, inviting them to negotiate an end to the conflict between secularists and militants that has taken the lives of more than 10,000 people over two-and-a-half years.

The move represents an admission by the military-civilian government that it has failed to end a 30-month-long quest to drive the Islamic Salvation Front from politics.

■ U.S., North Korea end 5 days of talks

BERLIN — Negotiators from the United States and North Korea Wednesday ended five days of preliminary talks aimed at arranging the transfer to North Korea of a nuclear reactor that does not produce plutonium.

Diplomats familiar with the talks said progress was made toward arranging the transfer, although some disagreements remain. One North Korean negotiator, asked during a break how the talks were going, smiled broadly and replied, "Look at my face."

As the Berlin talks were under way, separate talks between the United States and North Korea were being held in Pyongyang. It was the first time a delegation from the United States government had made an official visit to North Korea.

Haitians begin to feel long arm of Pentagon

N.Y. Times News Service

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti — A propellor-driven airplane swooped noisily over the Haitian capital just before 3 o'clock Wednesday morning, awakening thousands of people and seeding the city with thousands of leaflets bearing the image of the ousted president, the Rev. Jean-Bertrand Aristide. Hours later, a pair of U.S. military helicopters flew lazily over the port and adjoining seaside slum areas as curious residents gaped.

Washington may say that its preparations for an invasion of Haiti are not yet complete, but the long arm of the Pentagon is already being felt here.

To ordinary Haitians who have watched for nearly a year as the Clinton administration has vacillated over military intervention, recent shows of force here and the imminent arrival of a flotilla offshore are seen as signs that maybe Washington finally means business.

"I really believe that the Americans are going to come this time," one businessman said Wednesday morning. "They wouldn't be sending a pair of aircraft carriers and all these other things down here just to do nothing, because then the United States would become the laughing stock of the world."

Until Wednesday afternoon, however, there were few indications that Gen. Raoul Cedras and other leaders of the Haitian military, the real target of such displays of might, have drawn the same conclusion. At military headquarters downtown, a ragtag civilian militia continued to drill with World War I rifles, and Haitian officers went about their business as usual, seemingly calm and disinclined to budge from their defiance of Washington's demand that Cedras step down.

"Either they think we're all still bluffing or they have resigned themselves to whatever fate brings them," a diplomat said. "In either case, they still seem prepared to play their hand."

Wednesday afternoon, the government announced that a 7 p.m. to 7 a.m. curfew would go into effect beginning Wednesday night on all "main roads." The decree did not spell out which highways and streets are included in that category, allowing security forces to apply the order as they wished."

Rain chances linger in basin

Staff Report

Today's forecast calls for mostly cloudy skies with a 30 percent chance of rain, a high in the mid-80s and south winds at 5-10 mph. Tonight will continue to be mostly cloudy with a 30 percent chance of rain and a low in the lower 60s, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Friday should be mostly cloudy with a 20 percent chance of rain and a high near 80.

After an overnight low of 68, Wednesday's high reached 91, compared to the record high for that date of 99 set in 1965. The record low was 47 set in 1993.

STATE

Scattered showers and thunderstorms peppered parts of Texas as a muggy mass of air covered much of the state Wednesday.

Moisture drifted over the state from the gulfs of Mexico and California fueled scattered showers and thunderstorms from South Texas to near the Red River.

Partly cloudy skies were the rule over most of North Texas, although some late-afternoon showers and thunderstorms drifted from the Panhandle to the southern edge of the Edwards Plateau.

West Texas also had partly cloudy skies, except for near scattered showers.

South Texas had mostly cloudy to cloudy skies with scattered showers and thunderstorms.

Temperatures were generally in the 80s and lower 90s, except for 70s during rain showers.

In North Texas, morning clouds should give way to partly cloudy skies by midday with a chance of evening and nighttime thunderstorms. Highs will be in the mid- to upper 80s. Lows should range from the mid-60s to lower 70s.

West Texas should see partly to mostly cloudy skies with a chance of showers or thunderstorms through Friday. Highs will range from the 70s in the Panhandle to the 90s along the upper Rio Grande. Lows will range from the 50s in the Panhandle to near 70 along the river.

Mostly cloudy skies are in the South Texas forecast for today, with scattered showers and thunderstorms expected to reappear. Highs again will be in the 80s to near 90.

NATION

Thunderstorms stretched across the Northeast on Wednesday as a slow-moving front meandered through the region while heavy rainfall hit the Gulf Coast.

A cold front in the West dropped temperatures in the Rockies and the Southwestern deserts.

A line of storms stretched from Massachusetts to Minnesota along the eastern edge of a low pressure system over the northern high Plains.

To the West, the cold front extended over the Rockies into the Southwestern deserts.

Showers and thunderstorms hit several Gulf Coast states, with torrential rains falling in some areas of Texas. One storm dumped 1.73 inches of rain in a six-hour period near Corpus Christi.

A low pressure system moving across the Gulf of Alaska caused showers in the Northwest.

Rainfall in the 24-hour period ending at 7 a.m. CDT included 3.87 inches in Fort Lauderdale, Fla.; 2.65 inches at Minneapolis; 2.13 inches in La Crosse, Wisc.; and 2.13 inches in Miami.

Overnight temperatures were fairly high, in the 60s and 70s across much of the nation, with cold spots down to the 30s and 40s in the Rockies. The coldest spot in the Lower 48 states was Ely, Nev., at 29 degrees.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

TOURS: Justice Department official visits

(From 1A)

MISD must show it has done away with vestiges of desegregation, including showing school buildings across the district are equal. Midland citizens and the media also were not informed of the July 29 unitary status conference that local judges said was a public hearing.

At a lunchtime gathering at Washington Elementary School Wednesday, MISD Executive Director of Auxiliary Services Wilson Heidelberg said attorneys were concerned that the media learned of the campus visits.

MISD attorney Charles Tighe said reporting that the school buildings were being toured could put the school district "in an adversarial position with the community."

At the July hearing, Ms. Parker said, "You look east of Big Spring Street and the school facilities are not equal to those west of Big Spring Street."

Heidelberg told Ms. Parker, and an unidentified man who accompanied her on the Wednesday tour, that the district has 17 more campuses that need renovation. The school board has attempted to renovate one campus per year by carving out approximately $2 million from the budget each year.

State Comptroller John Sharp, after auditing MISD, suggested a bond election would save money and get the renovations done faster.

Heidelberg said a bond election to renovate the 17 schools would cost about $32 million. The Midland Federation of Teachers publicly announced Tuesday it would support the bond election. Schoolboard trustees have discussed holding a bond election in the spring, but the issue is still in the discussion stage.

Judge Ferguson has asked for briefs, reports, and responses prepared by MISD and the plaintiffs with various deadlines through June 26, 1995. Attorneys are representing the original plaintiffs in the Aug. 12, 1976, lawsuit that forced desegregation in Midland public schools.

It all began on Aug. 7, 1970, when members of Midland's minority community filed a lawsuit alleging that MISD unconstitutionally segregated African-American and Mexican-American students into separate school buildings. The plaintiff in the lawsuit was the the United States of America. Intervenors were Dr. Viola Coleman, Avelino Carrasco and E.O. McCormick.

On Aug. 28, 1975, the U.S. Court of Appeals for the 5th Circuit ordered the district court to "immediately take the necessary steps to completely dismantle the dual system." The court noted "21 years after Brown vs. Board of Education MISD is still maintaining separate schools for African American and Mexican American students.

On Sept. 16, 1976, the federal court entered a consent decree that primarily covered assignments of students in kindergarten through sixth grade to particular school buildings. The cluster system was designed as part of that decree.

More recently, at the May 24 school board meeting, hundreds of people turned out, many of them speaking against seeking unitary status, but the board voted 5-2 to go forward with it. (James Fuller and Adela Marmolejo opposed the motion).

Some administrators have said the court order prevents the district from trying any new programs such as Controlled Choice or setting up pilot magnet schools.

Many Midlanders have said there must be better options to desegregate schools than through the cluster system. However, minorities fear some Midlanders want out from under the court decree in order to resegregate the schools.

Midland school board president Jackie Hamilton said, "This is my opinion. But I voted (in favor of seeking unitary status) because I feel like the community is at a disagreement and a third party needs to make a decision. We can't seem to make that decision ourselves."

On May 31, MISD filed a motion to dismiss the court decree.

Ms. Hamilton said the school district's attorney, Tighe, has estimated the yearlong legal proceeding should cost the district about $20,000.

MISD has until Dec. 2 to file a report with the court that explains:

- The methods by which MISD has been in good faith compliance with the court's prior orders.
- To show why the dual system of MISD has been eliminated in the areas of transportation, extracurricular activities, student assignments, faculty, staff, and building facilities.
- Plans MISD has developed to ensure there is no return to a dual system.

Judge Furgeson has scheduled a final hearing for MISD on June 26, 1995.

DIGS: Attorneys tour Bunton's new courtroom

a library, space for office staff, judge's chambers, jury room and break room. There also are two separate witness rooms for use by the defense and prosecution, or more correctly, plaintiff's and defendant's attorneys since Bunton intends to primarily hear civil cases.

"They have to furnish me a courtroom . . . and this is it," Bunton said motioning to the new construction.

The courtroom, chambers and all adjacent facilities are decorated in the same pattern — dark, ornate wood paneling and trim with matching upholstery and carpeting throughout.

An atrium at the main courtroom entrance provides added sound protection through a double set of double doors.

"I don't know of a better facility anywhere," Bunton said of the new courtroom area.

Existing space in the Federal Building provided a challenge for Lubbock architects.

Six weight-bearing pillars run through the courtroom, but sport the same dark-wood and fiber facades as the walls, allowing them to blend in unobtrusively, Bunton explained.

Architects and interior designers made use of the pillars as a decorative feature to enhance the courtroom's appearance, standing sentry-like at the bar and flanking the judges bench.

A central podium between the defendants and plaintiff's tables is outfitted with microphones to allow judge, jurors and court reporters to hear everything said.

Much attention was given to jury box placement. With jurors being in close proximity to the witness stand and judges bench. The witness stand is roomy and has a foot rail in front of each chair so jurors with short legs can rest their feet. "We had a problem with that upstairs . . . they'd lose circulation," Bunton said.

Bunton said he was very pleased with the facilities and has already utilized the courtroom for hearings and other functions. "We haven't had a jury trial down here yet . . . but I'm ready anytime," he said.

Judge Royal Ferguson of El Paso is expected to take over Bunton's primary case load when Ferguson's replacement in that city is appointed.

NOW: Baseball ends '94 season with a fax

one. He wasn't — our loss, and his.

Farewell to Tony Gwynn of the San Diego Padres — could he have batted .400? Not even Ted Williams knows.

Farewell to Barry Bonds and Ken Griffey Jr., the two best sons of major leaguers ever to play the game, who are losing more money each and every day of the non-season than most Americans earn in a year.

Farewell to the Cleveland Indians. Nice new ballpark. Nice team. Better luck next time.

Farewell to Seattle's leaky Kingdome — may it never spritz again.

Farewell to the Chicago White Sox's Frank Thomas, he of the thigh-thick forearms and triple-crown potential. It was quite a show while it lasted.

And farewell to Marge Schott, George Steinbrenner, Selig and the rest of the owners. They will be missed (by someone, somewhere, maybe).

Say this for the end of the 1994 baseball season: It was unforgettable. How many season finales can you say that about?

Only a few:

- 1905. Christy Mathewson strikes out the side in the ninth inning of Game 5 of the World Series. The New York Giants beat the Philadelphia Athletics and win the series!
- 1960. The best ever. It's the bottom of the ninth, in the seventh and final game of the World Series, when Bill Mazeroski of the Pirates steps to the plate at Forbes Field in Pittsburgh. On a 1-0 pitch from the New York Yankees' Ralph Terry, a high fastball, he rockets the ball — up, up, over the left field fence and the head of Yogi Berra. We can imagine Yogi muttering, "It's not over 'til it's — oh, hell, it's over." Pirates 10, Yankees 9!
- 1993. Mitch "Wild Thing" Williams serves up a watermelon that Joe Carter sends into orbit in the bottom of the ninth to win the World Series. Toronto Blue Jays 8, Philadelphia Phillies 6, Mitch Williams gets a one-way ticket outta Philly!
- 1994. Uh, when does basketball season start?

MEMO: Hutchison action startles Hispanics speak English. If you are speaking Spanish I will assume you are on yet another personnal (sic) call which are to be kept to a minimum. Please set a good example!"

Hutchison campaign spokesman Dave Beckwith acknowledged the memo's authenticity, but said it was directed only at "a disappointed office-seeker who was notorious for making personal calls" while on the treasurer's staff, he said.

"Donna (Reynolds, director of personnel and Maddox's boss) was trying to stop her personal calls" to "Hispanic political people."

The former part-time receptionist, however, says that "personal conversations" were impossible, "because the calls were just coming in too fast to talk to anybody."

She claims "an anti-Spanish, anti-Hispanic atmosphere existed in the office" and says she frequently fielded complaints of rude treatment from Hispanic citizens.

"All you had to do was look around to see that it was all blondes with blue eyes," she said.

Spanish-speaking callers were routed to her because only she and another staffer spoke the language, she recalls. But as "a 10th-generation Texan, I speak Spanish sometimes just because I enjoy it."

And how, Beckwith was asked, would Maddox's non-Spanish-speaking boss know that Spanish conversations were personal?

"You just do," he said. "There's a certain way people talk, no matter what language they're talking."

On March 23, a second memo this one "Forwarded from: Donna Reynolds; From: Leslie Rawl." Rawl complained about receiving a call from a woman who asked for Maddox and another from "a man with a VERY HEAVY Spanish accent (I could hardly understand him). . . ."

Were these memos connected to Hutchison's gaffe in which a reporter asked her to speak some Spanish and she responded by saying "nolo contendere," a legal term in Latin meaning "I will not contest the charge?"

Beckwith asserted that "30 percent of the senator's staff is black or Hispanic" and called back to report on his consultation with Sen. Hutchison.

JUNTA: Haiti's president vows not to bow and planes during those hours.

Jonassaint's remarks came a day before President Clinton, seeking to build public support for military action, was to address the American people about Haiti.

In an interview with The Associated Press and other news agencies on Wednesday, Clinton said the United States has "exhausted every available alternative" short of invasion to ousting Haiti's military leaders. "It is time for them to get out of there," he said.

Jonassaint said Clinton's threat to Haiti's "survival" was politically motivated, with U.S. congressional elections less than two months away. He also noted the invasion was apparently not popular among the American people.

"The approaching enslavement of our people has been calmly announced," Jonassaint said in French. "The immense majority of the American people have not been convinced" of the need to invade Haiti.

An ABC News poll released Monday night found 73 percent of Americans oppose a U.S. invasion of Haiti and 60 percent say the country's vital interests are not at stake.

Exiled President Jean-Bertrand Aristide, Haiti's first freely elected leader, was overthrown in an army coup three years ago this month. Since then, the United States and other nations have tried to arrange for Aristide's return by imposing a series of trade embargoes, but they have met only with army defiance.

Jonassaint spoke after a day of meetings by the military high command and the de facto civilian Cabinet.

Haiti's legislative elections will go forward as scheduled in December, Jonassaint said. New presidential elections will be held soon after, he said.

Presidential elections had been scheduled for December of 1995, when Aristide's term expires.

Any elections under the current regime wouldn't be recognized by the international community, which has condemned the de facto government as illegal.

Researchers isolate breast cancer gene

By Lauran Neergaard
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Researchers have isolated one gene that causes the inherited form of breast cancer — and discovered the existence of a second.

Scientists say the breakthrough, to be published in the journal Science next month, will allow them develop a test, probably within two years, to help determine women's risk for inherited breast cancer.

"This is a very exciting time in genetics cancer research and women should take home the fact that there is real progress," Dr. Harmon Eyre of the American Cancer Society said Wednesday.

Only about 5 percent of all breast cancer is inherited, but identifying the estimated 600,000 women at risk early could save their lives.

"It's knowledge that can allow them to make an appropriate choice" about cancer detection and treatment, said gene discoverer Dr. Mark Skolnick, of the University of Utah and Myriad Genetics Inc.

Women who inherit a mutated form of BRCA1 have an 85 percent chance of contracting breast cancer by age 65, as well a highly elevated risk of ovarian cancer.

Scientists first discovered BRCA1's existence four years ago, launching an international race to isolate the gene.

Skolnick, with colleagues from Myriad Genetics and the National Institutes of Health, last month succeeded, using complicated DNA techniques to clone the BRCA1 gene. Now, they will use that cloned gene to develop a test for BRCA1 mutations.

BRCA1's isolation, first reported Tuesday by NBC News, will be published Oct. 7 in Science, but the paper was released Wednesday.

And, in another Science study released Wednesday, other researchers discovered a second gene, BRCA2, that also causes inherited breast cancer.

The researchers, led by Dr. Douglas Easton of London's Institute of Cancer Research, studied 15 cancer-stricken families who did not have mutations in BRCA1, which is located on the 17th chromosome.

They discovered this second cancer gene at work on the 13th chromosome, and mapped it to a very specific region. Now, they must go through the hundreds of genes in that tiny region to isolate BRCA2, explained Easton, who is on loan to the University of Utah.

"We think that BRCA1 accounts for perhaps half of the inherited cases and BRCA2 accounts for a good fraction of the rest," Easton said. "But we think there is still another gene to be found."

Unlike BRCA1, the second gene doesn't greatly raise women's risk of ovarian cancer and is responsible for the very rare cases of inherited breast cancer in men, Easton said.

But scientists who had hoped that isolating BRCA1 would cast new light on all breast cancer may be disappointed. The hereditary mutations don't appear similar to those found in non-inherited cancer — the majority of breast and ovarian tumors, wrote NIH's Dr. Roger Wiseman.

Discovery of BRCA2 means the first available test for inherited breast cancer will catch only one of the genes responsible, and the millions expected to be tested will have few options, Eyre warned.

Astronauts prepare for untethered spacewalk

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Discovery astronaut Carl Meade figures it's bound to happen one day, no matter how many precautions are taken: A spacewalker's lifeline to a station or ship will break or come loose.

And the spacewalker will float away helplessly into the void, right?

Not if a jet pack to be tested by Meade and Mark Lee during a rare untethered spacewalk Friday proves successful.

NASA doesn't call its new jet pack Safer for nothing.

The two Air Force pilots will relinquish their lifelines to the shuttle to test the jet pack, becoming the world's seventh and eighth human satellites.

It will be the first free-flying spacewalk in 10 years. Every other spacewalk since then has involved tethers — lots of them.

"We tether tools. We tether people. We tether objects," Meade said in orbit earlier this week. "If you can imagine, with several hundred tether swaps during a typical (spacewalk), it would be reasonable to expect some day for one of these tethers not to work so well, either by human error or by mechanical fault."

"It's something that can happen, and I think fairly easily."

As for venturing out with just a jet pack, Meade expects that to be "pretty cut and dry and just a professional walk right through the numbers."

Commander Richard Richards will keep close watch on Meade and Lee as the two men take turns flying Safer over Discovery's open cargo bay, venturing never more than 25 feet from the shuttle. If the jet pack fails, Richards will immediately fly the shuttle under the stranded spacewalker so he can grab on.

Only one man will be untethered at a time during the 6½-hour spacewalk.

The spacewalk has been practiced so many times on the ground "that we're not nervous about it to any significant extent," flight director Wayne Hale said.

NASA hopes to use such jet packs during the space station project. Unlike the shuttle, a space station cannot race after a spacewalker whose tether breaks. A shuttle docked at a space station would be just as useless; the shuttle couldn't undock fast enough, Richards said.

Even if the spacewalker drifted away from the station at just one foot per second, "it doesn't take much mathematics to figure out that if it's dark the individual's going to float out of our floodlights," Richards said.

"And once you lose sight of them, it's going to be very difficult to be able to find them again," he added.

NASA designed the $7 million Safer — short for Simplified Aid for Extravehicular Activity Rescue — to fit easily on a spacewalker's back and not interfere with routine chores.

The jet packs used by six spacewalking astronauts in 1984 were too cumbersome to be worn as an emergency device. NASA mothballed them.

New penal code 'mugging' Texas

For every crime, there is a cost society must pay. The price tag eventually will get filtered through the multiple layers of government and reach the taxpayer.

Before the Texas Legislature enacted the new penal code, which took effect Sept. 1, there had been an outcry across the state for legislators to "do something" about the twin problems of crime and overcrowded prisons that were creating revolving-door justice. Legislators reasonably could have either bit the bullet and built more prisons or passed the buck to local counties by decriminalizing crime. They chose the latter course — the new penal code and construction of state jail facilities.

Now it's becoming clear, as was pointed out by staff writer Tonie Miller-Uzzel in the series "Injustice For All" in the Reporter-Telegram earlier this week, that the likely result of enactment of the new penal code will not be less crime and safer streets, but more crime, greater danger for citizens and potentially overcrowded jails and higher crime costs.

At least that was the assessment of local officials interviewed for the series. The officials noted that because state jail felonies require mandatory probation, crime will increase and court dockets will become even more crowded. Many, if not most of the criminals shuffled through the court system, will end up back on the streets faster than they did under the old system, even though it was plagued by the revolving door due to overcrowded prison conditions.

And the taxpayers will bear an even higher cost of paying for crime — both in higher court costs and expanded jail facilities, along with the deadly risk of facing more criminals on the streets.

What would have been wrong with simply building more prisons? Is our society too averse to actually punishing people for doing wrong?

We've said it before and we'll say it again if necessary, decriminalizing crime only makes what is wrong OK. It gives the criminal the advantage. The new penal code is no help to Texas society.

Lewisville land buy was deja vu for Dallas

The news in March that Dallas Mavericks owner Don Carter had helped underwrite a feasibility study for a new sports arena in Lewisville sent a wake-up call to city officials. They responded by stepping up efforts to plan a new arena downtown. Had they not, the news that Mr. Carter had signed a contract last week to purchase 75 acres in Lewisville, which Denton County officials have targeted as site for a new sports arena, would have been a highly discouraging bombshell. In the words of Yogi Berra, it would have been deja vu all over again for those who remember the Dallas Cowboys' flight to Irving.

Instead, Dallas officials say they took the news in stride. That's because they had known about the prospective purchase months in advance, thanks to the new discussions with the Mavericks and the Dallas Stars on building an arena in Dallas.

Professional sports teams are big businesses. The Lewisville arena study and land purchase by Mr. Carter may well be a business decision aimed at creating other options for the future. But city officials hardly view it as a way to strengthen his hand in their negotiations, or his intent to renege on the remaining nine years of the Mavericks lease at Reunion Arena. By all indications Mr. Carter has been a good business partner with the city over the past 14 years, and there is little reason to doubt that he will continue to be.

Fencing off El Paso border won't promote free trade

Silvestre Reyes presents a reasonably solid argument. A 1.3-mile steel fence along the border at Sunland Park, the Border Patrol chief says, would help curb not only illegal immigration but growing gang violence that has put his agents at risk.

There, in the dusty desert dividing Sunland Park, N.M., from Anapra, Chihuahua, Reyes envisions a solution, a "steel fence" that will help his agents keep gang violence at bay as they dutifully watch the line.

This vision — one that the Border Patrol is skillfully touting along with props and statistics that underline Reyes' message — should never become a reality.

If Reyes' boss, President Clinton, truly wants to promote free trade, improve relations with Mexico and treat our neighbor with the respect and diplomacy it deserves, this fence cannot be erected. ...

It would be the last symbol the United States would want to erect along this particular part of the border, where free trade promises improved economic ties between the United States and Mexico.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Thursday, Sept. 15th, the 258th day of 1994. There are 107 days left in the year

On this date:

In 1776, British forces occupied New York City during the American Revolution.

In 1917, Russia was proclaimed a republic by Alexander Kerensky.

Black majority worries about street minority

All at once Sherman was aware of the figure approaching him on the sidewalk. . . . It was the deep worry that lives in the base of the skull of every resident of Park Avenue south of 96th street, a black youth, tall, rangy, wearing white sneakers.

—"The Bonfire of the Vanities," Tom Wolfe

PHILADELPHIA — But in real life the black youth probably would be worried more often than Sherman McCoy. In inner cities, where life is a slow-motion riot, young black men live worried, which is one reason why they often live briefly. Elijah Anderson understands why they worry.

Will

Anderson, a black professor of urban sociology at the University of Pennsylvania, and a superb reporter of real life, says the inner city black community is divided, socially, between two orientations, "decent" and "street." The street code is a quest for respect by people who are apt to have thin skins and short fuses because they feel constantly buffeted by forces beyond their control. Writing on "The Code of the Street" in The Atlantic Monthly, Anderson says respect in the streets is hard won and easily lost, and losing it leaves the individual naked to the aggression of others seeking to acquire or preserve respect.

Amid the congenial academic clutter of an office overlooking the campus, itself an island of calm in urban turmoil, Anderson says lack of confidence in the police and criminal justice system produces a defensive demeanor of aggression. This demeanor expresses a proclivity for violent self-help in a menacing environment. A readiness to resort to violence is communicated by "facial expression, gait and verbal expressions — all of which are geared mainly to deterring aggression" and to discouraging strangers "from even thinking about testing their manhood."

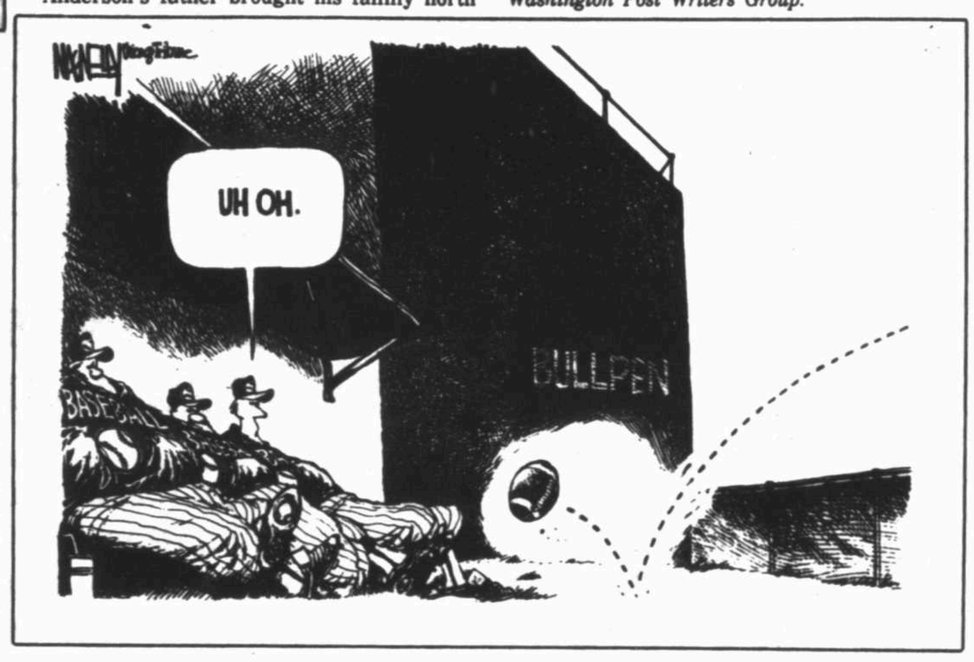

The street is the alternative source of self-esteem because work experiences are so often unsatisfactory, partly because of demeanors and behaviors acquired in the streets. A prickly sensitivity about respect causes many black youths to resent entry-level jobs as demeaning. And, Anderson says, employers, black as well as white, react with distrust to a young black man "with his sneakers, 'gangster cap,' chain necklace and portable radio at his side."

For such a person, work becomes a horizontal experience of movement from one entry level job to another. And the young person's "oppositional culture" is reinforced by the lure of the underground economy of drugs. Furthermore, says Anderson, some young people develop "an elaborate ideology in order to justify their criminal adaption" to their situation, an ideology "portraying 'getting by' without working as virtuous."

Anderson's father brought his family north from Arkansas to do war work in the Studebaker plant in South Bend, Ind., (making fighter planes that anticipated the look of post-war Studebaker cars) and by 1948 was making $5,500 a year, equivalent to more than $30,000 today. Such jobs are scarce now in cities, even for youths who have not adopted the demeanor, or succumbed to the temptations, of the street.

Also, says Anderson, many inner city parents who love their children nevertheless parent harshly to prepare their children for the harsh world beyond the front stoop. A child who comes home from a losing fight may be sent out to re-fight it, and parents yell at and strike their children for small infractions of rules. As a result, says Anderson, children "learn that to solve any kind of interpersonal problem one must quickly resort to hitting or other violent behavior."

MIKE ROYKO

In age of jerks, no one is 100 percent safe

The reporters' questions bordered on being laughable. They wanted Secret Service officials to guarantee that nobody would ever again crash a plane near the White House.

Royko

The Secret Service firmly declined to make such a promise. Nor would they say what they might do to make it less likely that someone with a suicidal streak might again drop out of the sky.

The reporters at the press conference sounded surprised. But what is really surprising is that they didn't recognize the simple message they were getting.

That message is that in this country nobody is 100 percent safe. A person can't be given total foolproof protection, short of locking him in a vault. Not you, me, or the president of the United States. Not if someone else is determined enough to sacrifice his own life or freedom.

But why should that be surprising? It's part of the trade-off we make. We want a maximum of freedoms with a minimum of restraints.

In many countries it would be virtually impossible for someone to crash a small airplane near the residence of the head of state.

In those countries there is no private ownership of aircraft. There is no access to such planes. And if someone somehow managed to get such a plane into the air, he would be detected almost immediately and probably shot down.

But we have tens of thousands of private planes. Not only can you buy or rent one, you can buy a kit and build your own. And we have tens of thousands of people licensed to fly private planes.

As the world's most mobile and transient people, we believe it is our right to drive our cars and boats and motorcycles, fly our planes, pedal our bikes, surf our boards, roll our Rollerblades or jog in traffic.

Hoping to maintain some order, we have all sorts of traffic laws for those who travel on the ground, in the air and on water.

But since we don't have enough cops and other government agents to enforce our many rules, we mostly rely on the common sense, the decency and the civility of individuals.

And that's where the system breaks down. With each passing year, we have less common sense, decency and civility, and more and more social madness.

We've had outbreaks of strangers shooting at strangers on highways because someone was rude in traffic. A few days ago, a couple of motorists lost their temper just outside of Chicago and played bumper tag until a car turned over. The result: One dead woman and one man up to his ears in legal trouble.

The other night, a guy stood on Fullerton Avenue, near once-peaceful Logan Square. He shouted insults at passing drivers and threw bottles at their cars. Someone got angry and shot the man in the head. Now we have another corpse and another wanted killer.

That's all part of the trade-off. We believe in our right to our wheels, so it is inevitable that we will have wacky people driving cars and killing each other.

We believe it is our right to own guns, so it's inevitable that we'll have evil people owning them and shooting others.

We have a truly great society, a truly great constitution, a truly great democracy. The trouble is, we also have a large population of jerks, and it is getting bigger by the minute.

Should it be a great shock that somewhere there was a man who knew how to fly, and he was apparently a drunk with a busted marriage and many other demons flitting between his ears, and he stole a plane and killed himself by crashing on the White House lawn? It is easily explained in popular psychobabble: He was making a statement.

After all, if you kill yourself by sitting in a garage with your car engine running, it might not even make the local newspaper. But if you try to crash the White House, you get your 15 minutes of fame.

So how does the Secret Service give a press conference guarantee that it won't happen again? It can't. If a guarantee were possible, John F. Kennedy, Robert Kennedy, Martin Luther King, George Wallace and Ronald Reagan would not have been shot.

The mayor of Chicago, much as he would like to, can't guarantee that no more 11-year-olds will be killers or victims of killers. Not as long as we have a growing population of moronic parents who were themselves abused and neglected and raise even bigger generations of misfits.

Law-abiding citizens break more laws than most

The phrase that I heard the most during the debate on the Senate crime bill was "law-abiding citizens," as in, "Will you deprive law-abiding citizens of their right to bear arms under the Second Amendment?" or "The law-abiding citizens of my state will not stand by if you take their semiautomatic weapons away from them."

Buchwald

I can't speak for others, but I don't know any law-abiding citizens. That doesn't mean they don't exist — it's just that I have never met them.

Take Rubbishon, who owns a Rapid Death .45 semi-automatic pistol. He broke all the environmental laws when he constructed his house and boasts about cheating on his income tax.

Charlie Tender is no better. He sports a sawed-off Jezebel Glockmeister and has an autographed photo of Charlton Heston on his wall. Charlie would be a law-abiding citizen except for the fact that he refuses to separate his bottles from the rest of his garbage.

Instead he pays the refuse people $20 so they will look the other way. He also owns a bottling factory which is one of the biggest polluters in America.

Petty crime, you might say, but as Arnold Schwarzenegger said in "Les Miserables," "The law is the law."

Senators who believe that their constituents who keep firearms in their homes are protecting their private property are living in a dream world.

Most of the people killed at home are victims of a law-abiding loved one (or former loved one), who keeps a weapon in the house.

Professor Joe Skalet, who has been unsuccessfully searching for a law-abiding citizen ever since he graduated from Stanford, told me: "If there are any law-abiding citizens who own guns, they are very careless about where they keep them. Some time ago a man in No Drink, Mich., hid his semi-automatic under the floor, sealed it with cement and then put a refrigerator over it.

"In just two days, his 8-year-old son found it by moving the refrigerator, borrowing a jackhammer and digging up the floor. The boy took the gun to school and sprayed the entire fifth-grade gym class with gunfire."

John Dillinger once said, "There is no way a law-abiding citizen can hide a gun from an 8-year-old child."

Professor Skalet's studies indicate that law-abiding citizens go through as many red lights and exceed the speed limit twice as much as non-law-abiding members of society. They also brag a great deal about breaking the law, except, of course, where their guns are concerned.

In many cases, although they will fight to the death to preserve the Second Amendment, which provides them with the right to bear arms, they keep asking for the First Amendment to be thrown out of court on a technicality.

I mention all this only because I'm sick and tired of senators referring to their constituents as "law-abiding citizens" when they break more laws than the rest of us.

DNA fingerprinting may reunite mother, son

BOSTON (AP) — Twelve years have passed since Maria's 6-month-old son was taken away. Salvadoran soldiers wrested him from her arms and carried him and other children to a helicopter.

"I went to look in the window of the helicopter, but there were so many children, I couldn't distinguish my son," she said.

In an orphanage near San Salvador, however, is a 12-year-old boy who resembles Maria. She believes he is her son. And in a few weeks, she will know for sure.

Maria and the boy recently underwent genetic testing to see if they are related.

DNA fingerprinting, most commonly associated with criminal cases, has become a tool for human rights groups trying to reunite parents and children separated by war.

Genetic testing was used to reunite children with parents and grandparents after Argentina's "dirty war" of the 1970s and 1980s. But the Boston-based Physicians for Human Rights said Maria's case marks the first time it has been employed on a mother and child in El Salvador.

The organization plans to use it in 10 more cases in the Central American country, and eventually in Guatemala and Rwanda.

"By starting this program and expanding it, we think it's going to be a significant program in protecting the human rights of children," said Dr. Robert Kirschner, a board member of the physicians group and deputy medical examiner of Cook County, Ill.

Kirschner took the blood samples from Maria and the child last weekend. He refused to identify them further, citing patient confidentiality.

Maria, who told her story in a videotaped interview released by the doctors group, learned by word of mouth that the child in the orphanage was probably hers, and she has been able to spend time with him there, Kirschner said.

Maria said her son was taken during a nine-day counterinsurgency campaign in the northern mountain town of Chalatenango. Her husband was among 230 people killed, her child among 50 kidnapped, Kirschner said. The fighting was part of the civil war that lasted 12 years and claimed 75,000 lives.

In the videotaped interview, Maria described how her mother tried to stop the soldiers from taking the child. "They hit my mother in the face, pulled her away and they took him from me," she said.

Children taken from Chalatenango were eventually turned over to the Red Cross of El Salvador.

Investigators to reassemble pieces of plane

CORAOPOLIS, Pa. (AP) — Investigators are reassembling the thousands of shattered, blackened hunks of USAIR Flight 427 in hopes of learning why the plane suddenly dropped out of the sky, killing all 132 people aboard.

More than 20 people sweated in the heat of a hangar near the Pittsburgh airport late Wednesday afternoon, laying out pieces on the floor in the shape of the plane.

Two windows with the glass missing were evident in one piece of silver fuselage. Part of USAir's logo — the bright red painted letters "U" and "S" — were evident on another piece from the side of the plane.

The plane's tail rested on the floor in the rear of the hangar.

"It's like working a big jigsaw puzzle," said Tom Haueter, chief investigator for the National Transportation Safety Board. "You do the outside edges first and work your way around."

Some of the larger pieces are about the size of a small car. The smaller ones are no more than splinters.

Dozens of blue bins about the size of laundry baskets were lined up on the hangar floor, filled with charred and twisted bits of metal.

Engineers and technicians from the companies that made the various parts are scrutinizing each piece.

"We are looking for fractures. We are looking for punctures. We are looking for stress in the metal," said Michael Benson, an NTSB spokesman.

Less than a mile away, investigators of a different sort sifted through the remains of the people on board, trying to identify them.

Officials have said there is no clear explanation of why the jetliner, a Boeing 737-300, suddenly dropped 6,000 feet last Thursday and nose-dived into a ravine at 300 mph. The tremendous force of impact disintegrated both the plane and the people.

"This bears a lot of resemblance to a military crash because of the high speed involved," said Lt. Col. David Hause, leader of a nine-person team from the Armed Forces Institute of Pathology that is trying to identify the remains. "Civilian airliners usually crash when they're taking off or landing, so they aren't going nearly as fast."

At two makeshift morgues on an Air Force Reserve base near the airport, Hause, 48, is going over the remains with forensics experts, anthropologists, dentists, fingerprint experts and others.

Simpson's defense moves to suppress items of evidence

LOS ANGELES (AP) — O.J. Simpson's lawyers moved Wednesday to suppress more than 100 items of evidence seized from Simpson's home and cars in five different searches they claim were illegal.

The defense motion, an amendment to papers filed earlier, listed 112 items of evidence. New items from Simpson's bedroom included two sets of gloves and two knit caps. Other items mentioned were blood samples, hairs and fibers.

Another glove listed, found outside his house, is known to be a key piece of evidence against Simpson. A knit cap was found outside the condominium where Simpson's ex-wife Nicole Brown Simpson and Ronald Goldman were found slain on June 12.

Simpson, 47, is charged with the slayings. He has pleaded innocent and is scheduled for trial Sept. 26.

In another development, the defense filed a motion opposing the prosecution's bid to have jurors sequestered throughout the trial. The papers were filed under seal and court officials said they would not be released.

Superior Court Judge Lance Ito was on vacation until Monday, when he is scheduled to hear arguments on suppression and a defense dismissal motion. He's also expected to address the issue of sequestration.

City votes against white power establishment

By Mike Feinsilber
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The triumph by Marion Barry, ex-mayor and ex-convict, in Washington's Democratic mayoral primary laid bare the racial divide in the nation's capital. He called on whites to put aside their "hangups" about him.

Analysts said that Barry's was largely an in-your-face vote by both the city's black dispossessed and its solidly law-abiding, churchgoing and conservative black middle class. One political observer suggested that Barry, as a free-spending mayor for 12 years, practically created the black middle class here.

In the city's predominantly white neighborhood west of Rock Creek Park, home to people drawn to Washington as the federal seat of government, Barry took only 3.4 percent of the vote.

"People voted against the white power establishment's attempting to dictate their lives," said Ronald Walters, who teaches political science at Howard University.

■ Analysis

And political scientist Alvin Thornton of Howard said entrepreneurial blacks never forgot that Barry's three terms as mayor broadened the black middle-class in Washington. Barry encouraged minority contracting and made the city government the employer of last resort — providing jobs to nearly a tenth of the city.

Ignoring his own rocky record in office, often campaigning in African-themed clothes and with religious undertones, Barry made himself the issue — that and his renunciation of alcohol and drugs after serving six months in 1991 for cocaine possession.

He said that both he and the city deserved another chance. He registered the poor and homeless and got them to the polls in a record turnout.

Barry took 81 percent in the poorest ward, which elected him to the city council two years ago in a first step toward post-jail salvation.

Citywide, Barry took 47 percent, defeating Mayor Sharon Pratt Kelly, who won four years ago as an anti-Barry reformer, and councilman John Ray, who had the support of the city's establishment, including The Washington Post. Ray, taking most of the white vote, got 37 percent, Kelly only 13 percent. Both, like Barry, are black.

Patrick Stroh, a political scientist at Carnegie-Mellon University in Pittsburgh who studies voter behavior, drew a parallel with other city elections in which blacks rally around a member of their race and whites around a white.

"It seems to be the stereotypical racially polarized election with the strange anomaly that there was no white candidate," he said. "Whites voted their racial and social and economic interests."

In a news conference Wednesday, Barry said whites should set aside the racial aspects of his victory.

"Those white people, whatever hangups they have — get over them," Barry urged.

"I'm the best person for Washington," he said. "I know best how to protect their investments, their businesses. I know best how to balance this budget. I know best how to save our city from financial collapse. I know best how to get us moving."

Barry faces a black independent and a white Republican in November. But with Democrats outnumbering Republicans 9-1, he is likely to win without trouble. Walters predicted he would get 70 percent.

Officials lean toward suicide scenario, investigators say

WASHINGTON (AP) — A pathetic trail of depression, drugs and alcohol has led investigators to suspect that Frank Corder's plane crash at the White House was suicide — not a botched prank.

Stressing that the inquiry is in its early stages, a senior government investigator said Wednesday that officials are leaning strongly toward the suicide scenario. But he and other government officials said they probably will never know for sure why the Maryland trucker made the fateful flight.

Investigators have said they do not believe Corder intended to kill President Clinton.

The senior investigator, noting Corder's history of depression and alcohol and drug abuse, summed up the early reading of the crash as, "a pretty pathetic thing — a final act of desperation." He spoke on condition of anonymity.

The investigation continued as signs of the tragedy were disappearing from the White House on Wednesday. Gardeners were scraped away a thin layer of dirt where the plane came to rest, preparing it for fresh sod.

In another development, the National Air Traffic Controllers Association said that two air traffic controllers who could have spotted the tiny Cessna 150 entering the restricted White House airspace were performing "administrative duties" — not monitoring their screens — when the crash occurred.

The group said current procedures require the controllers to monitor the radar only when aircraft are scheduled to enter their airspace — and none were scheduled when Corder crashed about 2 a.m. Monday. The two controllers "were conducting their duties as required," spokesman Jeff Beddow said.

Clinton tries to make case for Haiti invasion

By Donald M. Rothberg
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Haiti is a threat to democracy in the Western Hemisphere. Fleeing Haitians create a refugee crisis. Those who stay in their country are victims of a murderous regime.

For those reasons and more, President Clinton will argue that the United States must act, finally, to remove the military regime from Port-au-Prince.

Making his case to a skeptical public, Clinton will portray the situation in Haiti as a threat to U.S. interests and suggest that a failure to act would weaken American credibility around the world. No doubt he also will mention that 3,500 U.S. citizens are in Haiti.

"The United States must not be in a position to walk away from a situation like this," he said in an interview Wednesday.

But when the president speaks to the nation tonight he'll have to counter a steady drumbeat of arguments portraying a U.S. invasion of Haiti as a needless risk of American lives. "The national security interests of the United States are not at stake here," argues Sen. John Breaux, D-La.

■ Analysis

"I have told the president he has not made a case for an invasion of Haiti," said Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., one of Clinton's strongest supporters on Capitol Hill. He added, "I'm not suggesting the president can't make a case for this, by any means. I think he very well could."

Opposition to an invasion is vividly reflected in public opinion polls. An ABC News survey this week said 56 percent of Americans oppose using force to restore democracy to Haiti and 78 percent said Clinton should get permission from Congress.

Clinton aides clearly hope that once U.S. troops go ashore in Haiti, public opinion will strongly support them, if not the policy that put them in harm's way. And if an invasion proceeds with minimal U.S. casualties and ends quickly, the public may decide the president did the right thing.

That possibility carries an obvious risk.

Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, referred to "the Dover test," a reference to the Air Force base in Delaware where the bodies of U.S. service personnel are taken. "When the flag-draped coffins come back, will the American people support it?"

Clinton's arguments in favor of an invasion are clearly forecast by senior administration aides who have laid out the rationale repeatedly.

Leon Panetta, the White House chief of staff, defined the issue Wednesday as a question of "what is in the security interest of this country?" In an NBC interview, Panetta went on to define that interest as "Are we going to allow a few military dictators to basically tell us where to go? That cannot happen in this country and it can't happen in this world."

The State Department issued a report Tuesday describing Haiti as "among the worst human rights violators in the world today."

John Shattuck, the assistant secretary of state for human rights, said more than 3,000 Haitians have been murdered and the country is in a "pervasive climate of fear."

Clinton also is likely to make an appeal for unity, to argue that opposition to the plan for an invasion makes it more difficult to convince Haiti's military leader, Lt. Gen. Raoul Cedras, to give up the power he snatched almost three years ago.

"The worst thing right now is if the military dictatorship thinks that somehow this country is not going to come together to send a very clear message to them," said Panetta.

Weak support

AUSTIN — Leaders of environmental groups say their longstanding support for Gov. Ann Richards may be weakening because she has sided against their cause on two issues in the past three months. A spokesman for the governor said Wednesday that Richards has taken positions, not against the environment, but against over-regulation by the federal government./5B

Halcion criticism

HOUSTON — The Upjohn Co. paid at least one physician to discredit a Scottish physician critical of their sleeping drug Halcion, the Houston Chronicle reported Wednesday. The Chronicle said some recipients of Upjohn's payments, in order to fulfill Upjohn's implicit expectations, regularly endorsed Halcion while ignoring credible evidence about the dangers of the drug./3B

Snatched baby

EDINBURG — A woman Wednesday was granted visitation rights with the 2-year-old boy she claims was snatched from her at birth in a Mexican clinic. "I'm very glad with the results," Laura Lugo Alaniz said Wednesday, minutes after state District Judge Robert F. Barnes allowed her limited visitation with the boy, who is currently in a McAllen foster home./5B

City plans annual auction

■ Merchandise from local government entities to be up for sale at annual event, Saturday.

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

Local government entities have cleared out their surplus and unused inventory to auction this Saturday. The sale is open to everyone.

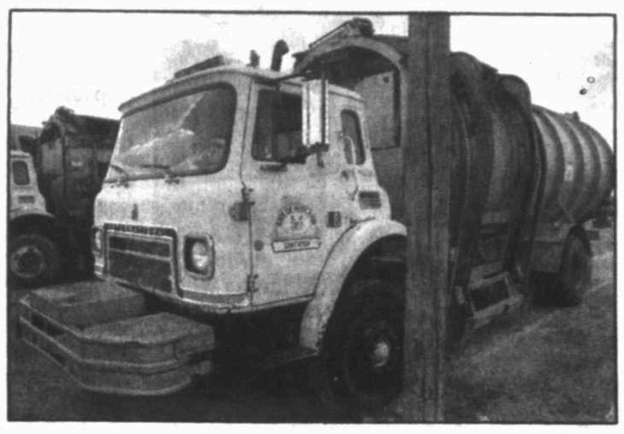

Police cars, ambulances, sanitation trucks and an array of miscellaneous items including computer equipment, restroom fixtures and office furniture are among the items up for sale.

Merchandise from the city of Midland, Midland County and the Midland Judicial District will be auctioned by Rene Bates Auctioneers Inc. The auction is an annual event for the city.

"We attract people from all over the state, Mexico ... and places as far away as New Jersey if we have the right mix of items," said Mark Phillips, the city's department of facilities and fleet management director.

Customers have included smaller cities interested in vehicles like ambulances, Mexican municipalities and businesses looking for sanitation trucks

Jurors hear city woman's story of attempted rape

By Gary Shanks
Staff Writer

A determined Midland woman told a Midland jury her nightmare story of attempted rape and protracted terror in the trial of David Paul Villa, 31, of Midland.

Beginning Wednesday afternoon, a four-woman, eight-man racially mixed jury listened to the woman's ordeal that began in the early morning hours of June 27, 1992. The attack came at the woman's home in the rural estate area off N. Lamesa Highway near the Midland Country Club.

The victim was 32 years old at the time of the alleged attack, and had gone to bed in a towel that evening after an extended telephone conversation that began after her shower and ended after midnight, according to testimony.

Living only with her teen-age son, the victim had sent her son to stay with relatives in San Angelo since she was working late each day and he was bored, she testified.

She testified that she awoke startled when something touched her. "I remember thinking — why did I just wake up like this?" she said.

It was then that she felt a second touch, a hand along her back and right side. The man began to climb on top of the victim, who then began swinging her fists and arms into the attacker. "I was kicking wildly," she said.

Her attacker then pinned her arms over her head and attempted to hold both wrists in one hand, she said.

When the would-be rapist moved to unfasten his pants, the victim was able to pull an arm free, she said. "And I started hitting him again," she said.

This scenario was repeated several times, with the woman being able to pull a hand free each time the attacker tried to hold both of her wrists in one of his.

After several minutes of struggle, the attacker sat up on the edge of the bed and the victim scrambled to the far corner away from the attacker and wrapped herself in bed coverings.

"I thought, if he's going to rape me, he was going to have to kill me to do it," she testified.

"Is that what you thought was going to happen," asked Teresa Klingman, prosecuting attorney in the case.

"Yes it is," the victim testified.

Nutrition consultant: Children need breakfast

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

Eating right is smart.

That's a message on nutrition and education from Marsha Rede, a nutrition consultant for the Associated Milk Producers Inc. (AMPI) in El Paso.

School children who ate nutritious breakfasts "scored in the upper percentile on standardized tests," Ms. Rede said of studies by the University of California at Los Angeles (UCLA).

A wholesome breakfast "enables them (the students) to concentrate," she said, and could mean better grades.

"If they are not eating breakfast, they are concentrating more on their hunger pains than on the subject matter and on what they are supposed to be learning. They'll behave more negatively."

The academic studies indicated that, in some cases, a wholesome breakfast "can mean the difference between making A's rather than B's or between passing and failing," according to a report on the UCLA studies.

In one study, 69 percent of 237 third-graders ate inadequate breakfasts and did not obtain "the proper amount of energy needed for optimal learning," the report said. Of that group, 12 percent ate no breakfast at all. And 31 percent of those surveyed ate nutritious breakfasts.

Children who fail to eat nutritious breakfasts may suffer hunger symptoms such as fatigue, headaches, stomachaches, cold sweats and hyperactivity.

The United States Department of Agriculture (USDA) recommends that growing children "should have enough nutrition and calories to fuel them before lunch."

Ms. Rede suggested that a child's breakfast might include milk on whole cereal, fruit juice, peanut butter on toast, a banana or other fruit and yogurt.

And it is not just poor or poverty-level children who suffer from inadequate nutrition. "It's across the board" on the socioeconomic sale, Ms. Rede said.

Ms. Rede noted the health-imparting habits of consistently eating nutritious breakfasts each morning.

And parents should be "good role models" for their children at the breakfast table, said Ms. Rede. Cereals of whole wheat, rice or oats can be sweetened with fruit.

Dinner to honor Erskines, work of Eos rehab center

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

A barbecue dinner to honor Midge and Woody Erskine and to benefit their Eos Bird Rehabilitation Center will be held from 7 p.m. to 9:30 p.m. on Friday at 3402 Cardinal Lane in northwest Midland.

Hosts for the $100-a-couple benefit are members of the Eos board of directors.

"We are honoring their work" over the past 24 years, said Irene Munzer, a charter member of the Eos board.

The Erskine couple established the center, which is licensed by wildlife arms of the federal and state governments, on their five-acre home site in Midland in 1970. Except for contributions of limited funds and food

Doggett begins 'uphill fight' for comptroller

By John Paul Pitts
Business/Oil Editor

Teresa Doggett, Republican candidate for Texas comptroller, admits she is in for an uphill fight against John Sharp, but says she has a good chance of winning, "if I can just get around the state and let enough people know who I am and what I stand for."

Doggett was in Midland Tuesday on one leg of a statewide tour that took her and former Attorney General Edwin Meese from Austin to Houston, Midland, Amarillo and Dallas. Speaking to a GOP group at Clayton Williams' home, she said she has a chance to win the race because she has a simple one-page economic plan that will work and because John Sharp has overstated

Midlanders to celebrate Mexican Independence Day

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

Celebrations to commemorate Diez y Seis de Septiembre (Sept. 16) will be held tonight and Saturday.

"It's a celebration of the Mexican Independence Day. It's like the Fourth of July in the United States," said Miguel Marquez, assistant consul of Mexico in Midland.

The Mexican Consulate Office and General Consul Jose-Luis Suarez will host the traditional "El Grito de Independencia," tonight at Midland Christensen Stadium (formerly Angel Stadium).

On Saturday, the First Association of Mexican Americans (FAMA) will host a celebration at Cuellar Flea Market, located at Terrell Street and Interstate 20.

Tonight's festivities, which will run from 6:45 p.m. to 9:15 p.m., will include an honor guard presentation, musical groups Los Palmeros de San Carlos and Grupo Tropical, singers Pepe Franco, Rufino Lopez and Rafael Vargas, and presentations by Ballet Folklorico Azteca and Asociacion de Charros de Midland.

"This ceremony will be a festival with music and Mexican dancing and the last (portion of the) ceremony will be the El Grito or the cry of independence by Consul Jose Suarez," Marquez said.

"Each year on the 15th, the president of Mexico and representatives of Mexico around the world commemorate the El Grito ceremony," he said.

The traditional ceremony commemorates "El Grito" (the cry), or the summons for a rebellion made 184 years ago by a priest who led Mexico's independence from 300 years of Spanish rule.

The cry for independence refers to the speech, "El Grito de Dolores," given by a Roman Catholic Priest, Miguel Hidalgo y Costilla on Sept. 15, 1810. At his church in the town of Dolores, the priest, before a group of Indians and mestizos, called for a rebellion against Spanish rule.

A revolt ensued but ultimately failed. Hidalgo was captured and executed by Spanish troops in 1811. Insurgencies followed and Mexico finally gained its independence in 1821.

Diez y Seis de Septiembre recognition in Midland continues this Saturday from noon to 1 a.m. with a celebration hosted by FAMA.

"We are going to have a festival," said Charlene Romero-Wurtz, executive director of the Hispanic Chamber of Commerce. The chamber is one on nine organizations that make up FAMA.

"We're having bands coming in and game booths and food booths," Ms. Romero-Wurtz said.

All proceeds will go to the planned Unity Park in memory of the late Oralia Corrales.

Commission: Teen committed suicide

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Youth Commission says a teenager serving time for attempted capital murder has committed suicide at Giddings State School.

Neil Nichols, the commission's general counsel, said the 17-year-old apparently killed himself between 12:30 p.m. and 12:40 p.m. Tuesday.

The Harris County youth received a five-year sentence in 1992. He was awaiting a review hearing to determine whether he would be transferred to the Texas Department of Criminal Justice to complete the sentence, the commission said in a statement.

The youth was being held in the school's security dormitory for assaulting a staff member the previous evening, the commission said.

Nichols said the suicide is being investigated. He said the teen-ager apparently hung himself from a vent with a strip of cloth torn from a sheet.

Commission policy would have required the youth to be checked at least every 15 minutes by staff, he said. Indications are he was checked at 12:30 p.m., and his body was discovered at 12:40 p.m., Nichols said.

"He apparently was prepared and acted very quickly," he said. "It's a real sad deal."

The commission did not release the youth's name. Nichols said commission records are confidential under the law, and could be released only with court approval.

Giddings is about 50 miles east of Austin.

his ability to manage state finances.

Republicans at the meeting, including Meese, acknowledged that Bill Clinton also would give her an added advantage in the November election. "Clinton is pulling down the Democratic ticket all across America. Democrats are running scared."

Doggett, who is half black and half American Indian, is quick to point out that she has the conservative qualities that many American voters are looking for. "I am from Kansas, and I can't remember when I wasn't a conservative Republican."

She said her father, an American Indian, had a background that included three generations of successful entrepreneurs, and her mother, an African American, came from three generations of college-educated people.

Doggett, 44, who has a law degree from Creighton University and a master's in Public Administration from Harvard, is an international trade and banking consultant. With her husband, John — who had a brief fling with the spotlight as a witness in the confirmation hearing of Supreme Court Justic Clarence Thomas — they own and operate Doggett and Company Inc., and IMDC, both of which develop global markets for agri-business, aerospace and high-tech clients.

"We advise our clients on how to become more efficient in their exporting and economic growth," Doggett said.

Doggett said she can bring improvement to Texas finances with a simple one-page economic plan that includes budget reform, a savings incentive program, privatization and simplification of the tax structure.

■ Reform the budget process: Sum-certain budgeting, which limits the amount an agency can spend to the amount approved by the Legislature and the governor in the budget.

Zero-based budgeting that starts budgets at zero dollars. Fund requests would be based on previous demonstrated ability to achieve results and on the availability of necessary resources to attain specific goals.

Putting teeth in the constitutional spending cap by amending the constitution to require at least a super majority (three-fourths or two-thirds) vote in both houses to declare an emergency and spend more than the constitutional limit.

■ Savings incentive program: We need to free up good state government workers to do what is right and support innovation, savings and efficiency. One-third of the savings would go to education. One-third would go toward reducing the state's $10 billion debt. The rest would go to incentive pay based on real savings, not smoke and mirrors.

■ Simplify the tax structure: The tax structure must be simplified so businesses can proceed without needless and costly interference from the government. The cost of compliance often acts as a surtax that drains business resources away from more productive uses. Compliance with taxes should be a simple and straightforward process that every taxpayer can understand and follow at minimal cost. A clear tax structure also would allow the Comptroller's office to give accurate information and forecast revenues more effectively.

■ Privatization: The services that government cannot provide effectively and efficiently should be provided by the private sector. Privatization holds the service providers directly accountable for their performance. For example, if private providers for welfare services had their compensation and future contracts with the state tied to meaningful performance measures, they would make sure that welfare recipients get off welfare and stay off welfare. The taxpayers of Texas expect and demand that they get the most out of their hard-earned tax dollars. Accountability and competition from the private sector act as powerful catalysts to insure this.

In addition to her economic plan, Doggett says she has a strong spiritual foundation, which she feels is crucial to holding public office. "I am not running for public office because I see it has a career move. I see it as a mission."

TRIAL: Woman testifies about sexual assault

(From 1B)

An hour of additional terror began when her attacker began talking, prefacing himself with, "I don't want to hurt you," she said.

For 45 minutes they talked, her attacker admitting several items that point to the defendant in the case, Ms. Klingman explained.

The attacker said he'd just gotten out of prison and had not had sex in 13 months and was from New Mexico, all points that Ms. Klingman maintains will implicate Villa as the attacker.

After 45 minutes of talking, the attacker lay down and invited the victim to "get some sleep," she said.

For some time he lay on the bed and the victim testified she began memorizing the attackers facial and other physical features. "...because I knew I was going to have to identify him," she said.

Saying she needed to relieve her self, she was granted permission to go to the bathroom. She left the room and went to the hall bathroom and locked herself in.

The victim had been obviously moved to emotion during parts of her testimony, but was able to smile at this point when telling about locking herself behind the flimsy bathroom door. "It was then I thought that this was the dumbest move I'd made all night," she said.

The woman, wrapped in a comforter, listened for footsteps and when she heard none, bolted from the house and awoke a male neighbor who called the police, she said.

Police testimony to be heard today is expected to show that Villa was arrested that night in the driveway of the home next door to the victim.

Villa is charged with burglary of a habitation with intent to commit sexual assault and faces a possible sentence of five to 99 years or life and a fine of up to $10,000.

and construction vehicles, major buyers of used equipment for reconditioning and resale and individuals.

"A lot of our cars go to individuals and a lot of our small trucks go to small contractors," Phillips said.

Miscellaneous items, historically, are primarily sold to individuals and second-hand dealers.

There is no guarantee and no warranty on anything sold although officials try to be up front about the condition of items to the best of their knowledge, Phillips said.

Vehicles are generally sold because of either high mileage or age and other surplus is sold because it is worn out or outdated, he said.

Officials anticipate a successful auction, as is usually the case.

"In the past we've run anywhere from $80,000 to $140,000 one year," Phillip said.

Sales are estimated to be about $75,000 to $80,000 this year.

The sale will begin at 10 a.m. Saturday at the Municipal Garage located at South and Carver streets. Registration to receive a bidders' number will begin at 8 a.m. Prospective buyers can inspect items for sale after 7 a.m.

The vendors will accept cash, cashiers checks, and personal checks. A bank letter of guarantee is required with personal checks for vehicles, otherwise the check must cleared before the property is released.

for their wildlife, the Erskine couple have used their own resources to operate the center.

The Erskines have restored to health and released to the wilds thousands of birds, from hummingbirds and kites to hawks and eagles, and other young wildlife, such as deer, antelope, javelina and bobcats.

Most of the baby mammals brought to Eos for care are from Midland's Animal Control Shelter and from federal and state agents, Mrs. Erskine noted. Birds, mostly young and injured, are brought to Eos for treatment through those avenues and from private citizens.

Upjohn paid doctor to discredit Halcion criticism, paper says

HOUSTON (AP) — The Upjohn Co. paid at least one physician to discredit a Scottish physician critical of their sleeping drug Halcion, the Houston Chronicle reported Wednesday.

The Chronicle said some recipients of Upjohn's payments, in order to fulfill Upjohn's implicit expectations, regularly endorsed Halcion while ignoring credible evidence about the dangers of the drug.

The Chronicle offered the specific example of Dr. Anthony Nicholson, a Royal Air Force psychiatrist in England. According to a 1982 Upjohn memo, Nicholson was paid a $5,000 consultant's fee to help the company "ascertain the best way to counter any contributions by Ian Oswald which are inimical to our interests."

Upjohn had tried to recruit Dr. Ian Oswald of Edinburg, Scotland, in 1972 to support Halcion.

However, twice during the early 1980s, Oswald published studies concerning the drug's adverse effects outweighed its benefits. Upjohn blasted Oswald as a practitioner of "junk science" and sued him for libel.

Nicholson countered Oswald in two letters to the British Medical Journal, expressing reservations about the "misleading" way Oswald's data had been presented.

So as "not to appear an Upjohn man," Nicholson attacked the design of Oswald's study rather than expressing obvious support for Halcion, according to another Upjohn memo.

Upjohn rejected the allegations Wednesday by reiterating a Tuesday statement to The Associated Press.

"Our first concern is for the patients who use our products, and Upjohn puts nothing ahead of patients' health," said Kaye Bennett, spokeswoman for Upjohn. "We stand by the fact that our science is sound and that Halcion is a safe and effective medication when it's used as recommended in the labelling."

The newspaper said the extent of Upjohn's attacks on critics has come to light belatedly through court cases in which consumers have tried to hold the Michigan-based pharmaceutical firm responsible for damages resulting from the drug's side effects.

The newspaper said its information came from an exhaustive review of court documents, Upjohn memos and FDA records.

Environmentalists criticize Richards

AUSTIN (AP) — Leaders of environmental groups say their longstanding support for Gov. Ann Richards may be weakening because she has sided against their cause on two issues in the past three months.

A spokesman for the governor said Wednesday that Richards has taken positions, not against the environment, but against over-regulation by the federal government.

"She is the strongest environmental governor this state has ever had — period," said Richards' press secretary Bill Cryer.

On Monday, Richards wrote a letter to Secretary of the Interior Bruce Babbitt saying the federal government's Endangered Species Act "has become so overreaching that it undermines public support for protecting our wildlife."

Richards said the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service should "abandon all plans" to set aside parts of 33 Central Texas counties as critical habitat for the endangered golden-cheeked warbler. The federal agency is studying the idea.

In July, Richards withdrew her support for designating several waterways in Texas as "outstanding national resource waters." The proposal was aimed at curbing pollution of the waterways, including Caddo Lake in East Texas and Barton Springs in Central Texas.

Landowners said the ONRW designation would lead to federal control of the lakes and take away their ability to develop property. Last month, landowners rallied at the Capitol to denounce any federal action that would infringe on private property rights.

Ken Kramer, director of the Lone Star chapter of the Sierra Club, which earlier endorsed Richards, said the governor's position on the warbler may affect support.

Girl's family grieves, fights for justice system changes

By Stefani G. Kopenec
Associated Press

FORT WORTH — Death, as in birth, was premature for Amy Lynn Thatcher.

Her regular walk to Handley Middle School ended tragically five years ago, when a preacher's son paroled from prison only nine months earlier dragged her into his car and sped away.

The next day, Sept. 16, 1989, a captured Kenneth Reed Smith led police to Amy's partially clad body in a heavily wooded area near Lake Arlington. It was at a dump site on the western shore, surrounded by old mattresses, tires and clothes.

The 14-year-old had been strangled with a 54-inch shoelace pulled from her high-top sneaker. At the crime scene, police found one end of the shoelace tied around her neck and the other attached to a low tree branch.

A year later, jurors in Tarrant County convicted Smith of capital murder in the kidnapping, rape and strangulation. They spared him death by injection and ordered him to prison for life.

Police described the schoolgirl as a random victim, but said she was not Smith's only prey.

The irony of Amy's death and birth is not lost on Mary Thatcher, who delivered the 3-pound, 14¾-ounce baby girl a week early.

"It's kind of strange that way," Mrs. Thatcher said of the circle of Amy's life. "I know she struggled to live and . . . struggled in death."

Such thoughts are heart-wrenching, Mrs. Thatcher said on a recent day while sitting on a park bench in Granbury, where the Thatchers moved shortly after the loss of their eldest child.

"It's not something you get over," she said. "The loss is always there."

To help cope, the Thatchers fought for changes to the criminal justice system.

In 1989 they met with then-Gov. Bill Clements, presenting him petitions with almost 80,000 signatures asking for stricter laws to keep violent offenders behind bars. Clements declined to put the issue on the agenda of the next special session.

But the Thatchers kept the pressure on state officials, traveling to Austin to tell their story and to lobby for bills aimed at keeping violent offenders behind bars longer.

In 1993, a crime amendment to the Texas Constitution sponsored on their behalf by state Rep. Kent Grusendorf, R-Arlington, won legislative and voter approval.

The amendment gives judges the option of denying bail to people charged with violent or sexual crimes committed while on probation, parole or mandatory supervision for a prior felony.

Such was the case with Smith, who was paroled a second time in December 1988.

The following January he was arrested in connection with an attack on a 37-year-old woman outside a church. Two months before Amy's death, Smith was freed from jail after parole officials dropped a revocation case against him and a judge reduced his bond. By then, he was awaiting trial on the aggravated sexual assault charge.

When he was arrested in Amy's death, Smith also was being sought on a warrant accusing him of the August 1989 attack on a 13-year-old girl who told police Smith raped her in the basement of his father's church.

Jurors convicted Smith of both aggravated sexual assaults, sentencing him to life in prison for one and 55 years for the other. He is eligible for parole in 2034.

Report: States to spend millions on illegal aliens

WASHINGTON (AP) — Texas and six other states with the largest numbers of undocumented aliens will spend nearly half a billion dollars this year to imprison illegal immigrants convicted of crimes, according to a government-commissioned study.

Those states also spent $3.1 billion to educate undocumented aliens in fiscal 1993, and $422 million on their Medicaid costs, according to the analysis released Wednesday by the Urban Institute.

The study, commissioned by the federal government and based on data from official government sources, did not calculate the net costs of undocumented immigrants on state budgets.

Nor did it tackle the thorny issue of whether the federal government should reimburse states for costs they incur because of illegal immigration.

The analysis was undertaken in response to complaints by the states that the federal government should pay some of the costs of educating, imprisoning and providing emergency health care for undocumented aliens.

Four of the seven states — Texas, California, Arizona and Florida — have sued the federal government to recover some of this money. The other states in the study were New York, Illinois and New Jersey.

Judge allows woman to visit child she claims was stolen

EDINBURG (AP) — A woman Wednesday was granted visitation rights with the 2-year-old boy she claims was snatched from her at birth in a Mexican clinic.

"I'm very glad with the results," Laura Lugo Alaniz said Wednesday, minutes after state District Judge Robert F. Barnes allowed her limited visitation with the boy, who is currently in a McAllen foster home.

Ms. Lugo said she's even more pleased that the family of Paulyna Botello — whom she claims stole and raised the baby — was denied visitation rights.

"I don't want them near my child anymore. This is my child. They have no bearing on this anymore," Ms. Lugo said.

Ms. Lugo, 27, said the baby was stolen after a Caesarian section at a clinic in Matamoros Sept. 2, 1992.

Ms. Botello, 33, still maintains the child is hers, said her attorney, Enrique Juarez.

The judge based his decision on DNA tests indicating a 99.11 percent probability that Ms. Lugo is the mother.

"The record also indicates that Paulyna Botello is excluded from possibility of being the mother," said Jaime Aleman, a Hidalgo County assistant district attorney representing the Texas Department of Protective and Regulatory Services.

Aleman said a Child Protective Services case worker will supervise Ms. Lugo's visits, which will begin at one hour a week.

"We want to make sure this child meets the mother slowly but surely under a supervised, controlled environment," he said. "Our main focus is trying to keep this child calm, safe."

The judge granted a motion by Ms. Botello's attorney for independent DNA tests on Ms. Lugo, Ms. Botello and the child.

Attorney Juarez said he will present expert testimony to challenge the data collection process of the first tests. "If the collection process is compromised, then the whole test is compromised," he said.

Barnes scheduled a Sept. 22 hearing on the new tests.

Ms. Lugo said she wasn't concerned about a second round of tests.

"As long as this child is not near her anymore, that's fine with me. I don't care how many tests have to be done. He is my son and the same thing is going to come back every time."

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 15, 1994

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Because you really care about doing a good job, you will find great success professionally. Romance will be happiest with someone who shares your intellectual interests. Do not let a strong physical attraction blind you to someone's weaknesses. Early in 1995, be on the lookout for accounting mistakes. One who boasts of great credentials may have a less than stellar track record. Check references carefully.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: quarterback Dan Marino, pianist Bobby Short, actor Tommy Lee Jones, mystery author Agatha Christie.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Your relations with a co-worker show decided improvement. A trip or visit could be part of today's plan. Give top priority to projects that promise large financial gains.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A real estate opportunity improves — thanks to an expert's advice. Your contagious optimism will sway others where joint ventures are concerned.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Private worries or a heavy workload could sap your energy. Take a short break and regroup. Spending quality time with your loved ones is a wonderful tonic for jangled nerves.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Financial backing you counted on may be delayed or unavailable. Do not despair! Slow-ups could work to your advantage. The news from those at a distance is promising. Keep close tabs on spending.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A relationship reaches a crossroads. A live-wire friend may get on your nerves at times. Rethink your living arrangements. You may want privacy more than companionship.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Uncharted waters are tricky. Go slow. A financial offer or flirtation could call for immediate action. Say "no" if you have any qualms. A change of attitude will improve the chances for lasting romance.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Your first impression of a member of the opposite sex is probably correct. Proceed with caution if considering a new investment of time and money. Catch up on your professional reading this coming weekend.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Those connected with the arts feel truly inspired today. Romance is heavenly; recent doubts disappear in love's warm glow. An evening visit with old friends should be great fun. Avoid putting mate on the spot.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Tackle a problem that arose yesterday. Artistic energy is plentiful but should be used judiciously. Avoid putting too much stock in the promises of people you barely know. Leave romance on the back burner.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Friends and relatives share good news. Put more time and effort into your professional relationships. The good will of your co-workers can help you come to terms with what seem like insurmountable problems. Repay favors.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Do not let faulty hunches tempt you into taking wild risks today. A cool head will keep you out of hot water. Cost-cutting ideas could protect joint funds. Find out more. Consult experts.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Your social life could slow to a snail's pace. Touch base with relatives. Make better use of your creative and artistic talents. A hard worker, you would benefit from taking up a relaxing hobby.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are well-organized and methodical, able to complete tough tasks in record time. Following a schedule often makes these youngsters feel more secure and productive.

THROWN TO THE DOGS

	NORTH ♠Q62 ♡A974 ◇A3 ♣AQ96
WEST ♠4 ♡J65 ◇KJ98654 ♣85		EAST ♠AK105 ♡83 ◇2 ♣K107432
	SOUTH ♠J9873 ♡KQ102 ◇Q107 ♣J

The bidding:

WEST	NORTH	EAST	SOUTH
3◇	Dbl	Pass	4♠
Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Eight of ♣

Larry Cohen, author of the excellent book on the Law of Total Tricks, can play as well as he writes. This hand is from an early match of his squad's triumphant march to the Grand Nationals Team championship.

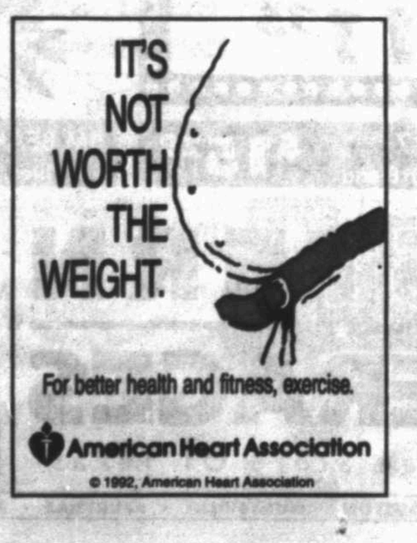

After the takeout double, a cue-bid of four diamonds, forcing North to select a major, would have resulted in a four-heart contract. That would have been touch-and-go, depending on the defense. It might seem that four spades is unmakable, but declarer's technique was beautiful to behold.

Declarer rose with ace of clubs at trick one and ran the six of spades. Since West almost surely was short in spades in light of the minor-suit preempt, this was undoubtedly the correct move. A low spade was continued to East's king and the diamond two was returned, covered by the ten and jack and taken by the ace.

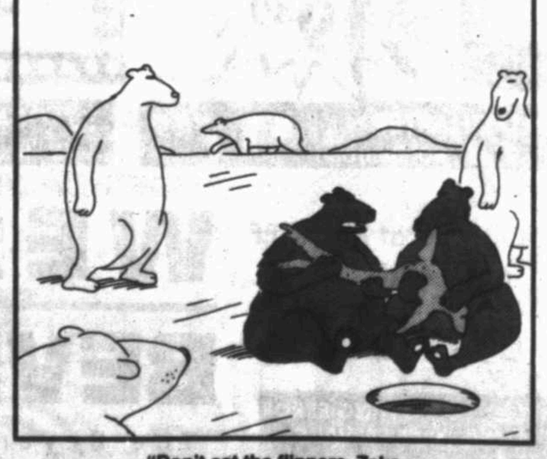

The queen of spades was captured by the ace and East exited with the remaining spade. Reading the hand perfectly, Cohen cashed the king and queen of hearts, overtook the ten of hearts with the ace, then led the queen of clubs from dummy. When East covered with the king, declarer left the defender on lead by discarding a diamond.

Down to nothing but clubs, East had a choice of losing options. The return of the ten of clubs would be ruffed and the nine of hearts would be the entry to the table for declarer to discard the remaining diamond loser on the high nine of clubs. If East returned a low club, declarer would simply discard a diamond immediately and the nine of clubs would be the fulfilling trick.

Patti Davis is at it again: Reagan's daughter appears in buff on video

LOS ANGELES — Patti Davis is at it again, this time appearing in the buff on video.

Reagan daughter Patti Davis makes Playboy video.

The rebel daughter of former President and Nancy Reagan said she liked her Playboy magazine layout so much that she made a Playboy video.

The video, due to be released in early 1995, features Davis kickboxing in a gym, in the nude, with a young man.

In an interview to be broadcast Thursday on "Entertainment Tonight," Davis said that women seemed to like her magazine photos.

"I think a lot of women appreciated that at 41 I did this," she said.

The Reagans had no comment Wednesday.

LOS ANGELES — Clayton Moore does more cable surfing than Hi yo-ing these days, but he hasn't abandoned the virtues of the Lone Ranger.

Clayton Moore keeps Lone Ranger virtues.

"You do your best to keep your country on top. The fair play and the honesty, this is important," he said.

Moore, who turned 80 on Wednesday, lives a few miles from the rocky, oak-studded hills where TV's "Lone Ranger" was made. The show ran from 1949 to 1957.

He made public appearances as the Lone Ranger until 1979, when the folks who own the licensing rights had him barred from wearing the mask.

Moore now spends much of his time in front of the television.

"I'm a great sports fan. I keep tabs on tennis and football, everything," he said. "I'm doing very well, though. Everything is fine in retirement."

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Garth Brooks likes the friends in low places he discovered overseas.

Garth Brooks likes friends he found in low places.

"They've all got traditions on how to act," the country star said Tuesday of audiences during his foreign tour, especially those Down Under.

"They have chants — this olay, olay, olay — that's usually used during Australian-rules football. It's more rehearsed, and it's really intense. They get into it."

Brooks' tour resumes later this month with concerts in Spain, Denmark, Germany, England and Scotland.

Among his hits are "Friends in Low Places" and "The Dance."

MIAMI — With baseball on strike, Cuban-born slugger Jose Canseco has been spending his time trying to help youngsters from his homeland.

The Texas Rangers ballplayer, who came from Cuba when he was an infant, said Tuesday he is leading a campaign to collect toys and sports equipment for Cuban and Haitian children held at U.S. refugee camps in Cuba and Panama.

A Sept. 23 telethon on a Spanish-language radio station in Miami will be held to collect toys.

"Today, commerce rolls not just on asphalt highways, but along information highways," said Vice President Al Gore last December, in a ringing endorsement of the computer revolution. "Tens of millions of American families and business now use computers."

In the 10 months since, the tens of million have multiplied, and traffic along the highway has grown dense. A report from roadside:

■ "Does anybody find it completely satisfying," asks one Internet user of his fellow participants in "alt.cereal," "more so than out-of-the-fridge cold milk, to place one's cereal in the freezer for 10 minutes or so to really get that bowl cold?"

■ A Boston subscriber contributes: "I distinctly remember that Corn Pops used to have a mascot. Not only one, mind you, but two. The first one ... was a squat little cowboy in a huge yellow hat. The second was Pops the porcupine."

Rangers give up on Grieve

Rangers' general manager Tom Grieve, center, looks on as team president Tom Schieffer announces Grieve's firing. Sandy Johnson, right, was named interim GM. Grieve was named Schieffer's assistant.

■ Texas fires general manager Tom Grieve after 10 seasons, names Sandy Johnson interim replacement.

By Jaime Aron
Associated Press Writer

ARLINGTON — For the last decade, Tom Grieve always found a way to stock the Texas Rangers' lineup with sluggers.

But weak pitching and shoddy fielding kept the Rangers from winning a division title.

It all caught up with Grieve on Wednesday.

Texas fired him as general manager, making him an assistant to club president Tom Schieffer.

"We haven't won — it's not more complicated than that," Schieffer said. "You don't have to look very hard to find the problems: pitching and defense. It's a recurring problem beyond the realm of something that just happened. He worked hard to fix it, but it was never resolved."

Texas player personnel director Sandy Johnson, who was in charge of the scouting department that discovered the team's young stars like Juan Gonzalez and Ivan Rodriguez, was named interim GM.

Schieffer said he'd like to complete the search within 30 days. He says he'll consider Johnson a candidate for the job.

Grieve's new responsibilities have not been outlined, and with Wednesday's cancellation of the remainder of this season there's no hurry. He has one year left on a contract extension he signed in October 1993.

He leaves as the longest-tenured GM to have never won a division title. Only Oakland's Sandy Alderson and Toronto's Pat Gillick held their posts longer than Grieve, and each has won a World Series.

All Grieve can claim is an asterisk — the Rangers were leading the revamped American League West by one game over the A's when the season ended. Although he had guaranteed the di-

SANTA CLARA, Calif. — With the baseball season gone, Deion Sanders wasted no time closing in on a new job with the San Francisco 49ers.

Sanders

A free-agent cornerback and Cincinnati Reds outfielder, Sanders shopped his services to several NFL teams while idled by the monthlong baseball players strike. On Wednesday, the owners called off the season.

With his baseball job gone, at least for this season, Sanders was ready to turn his attention to football, said his agent, Eugene Parker.

Sanders told an Atlanta television station he had decided against rejoining the Atlanta Falcons and intended to sign with the 49ers.

Sanders rejected a more lucrative offer from the Miami Dolphins, plagued by injuries in the secondary and badly needing a reinforcement.

"I'm disappointed," coach Don Shula said. "I thought we were in it and had a good chance. We pursued it hard these last few days."

In the 49ers' bid to sign Sanders, they freed $1.3 million under the salary cap by restructuring the contracts of linebackers Gary Plummer and Ken Norton and safety Tim McDonald.

Club president Carmen Policy said Sanders, a three-time Pro Bowler in five seasons with the Falcons, flew to the San Francisco Bay area on Wednesday. Policy said he hoped to conclude a deal within the next 24 hours.

"There are some very sensitive negotiations going on," Policy said. "We're talking numbers. We're talking incentives. We're talking a variety of things. We're even talking philosophy."

Just two weeks ago, Policy said the 49ers couldn't afford Sanders because of salary-cap constraints. Now he was optimistic the two sides could come to terms. However, he was wary of competing offers.

"We're not in there alone," Policy said. "If I was to stand here and tell you it was done, I would be really acting foolhardy. I don't know what's going on behind the scenes. His coming out here may be nothing more than priming the pump to get Atlanta to really come through with a final offer."

Falcons president Taylor Smith said the team still assumed Sanders would give Atlanta a chance to match the best offer from another club.

"If the (money) is what it's rumored to be ... then I know we can be competitive with that kind of offer," Atlanta coach June Jones said. "Deion knows we want him here, and he knows this is the best fit for what he wants to accomplish."

Should Sanders sign with the 49ers, he would be the sixth defensive free agent added to the team. San Francisco (1-1) earlier added Norton, Plummer, Toi Cook, Rickey Jackson and Richard Dent.

Baseball will never know

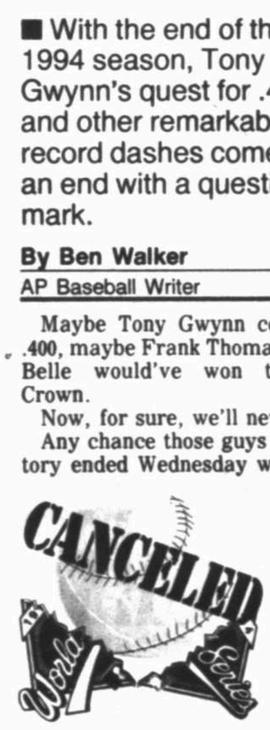

■ With the end of the 1994 season, Tony Gwynn's quest for .400 and other remarkable record dashes come to an end with a question mark.

By Ben Walker
AP Baseball Writer

Maybe Tony Gwynn could've hit .400, maybe Frank Thomas or Albert Belle would've won the Triple Crown.

Now, for sure, we'll never know.

Any chance those guys had at history ended Wednesday when acting commissioner Bud Selig announced the cancellation of the season. The strike, in its 34th day, already had cut off any hope Ken Griffey Jr., Matt Williams and others had at reaching one of baseball's most-hallowed records: Roger Maris' mark of 61 home runs.

But even though the season is over, all statistics count.

That means Gwynn finished at .394, the highest since Ted Williams hit .406 in 1941 and the best in the NL since Bill Terry batted .401 in 1930. Gwynn won his fifth batting title.

In a normal, 162-game schedule, it takes 502 plate appearances to qualify for the batting title. Gwynn had 475 plate appearances; had he gone 14-for-27, he would've been a .400 hitter without any asterisk at all.

Williams won his first home-run championship and led the majors with 43. He was on a pace for nearly 61 when the strike started Aug. 12.

In a year highlighted by offense, Greg Maddux had one of the best seasons ever by a pitcher. The Atlanta ace had a 1.56 ERA — the NL ERA was 4.21, and never before has any pitcher had a figure that much lower than the league average.

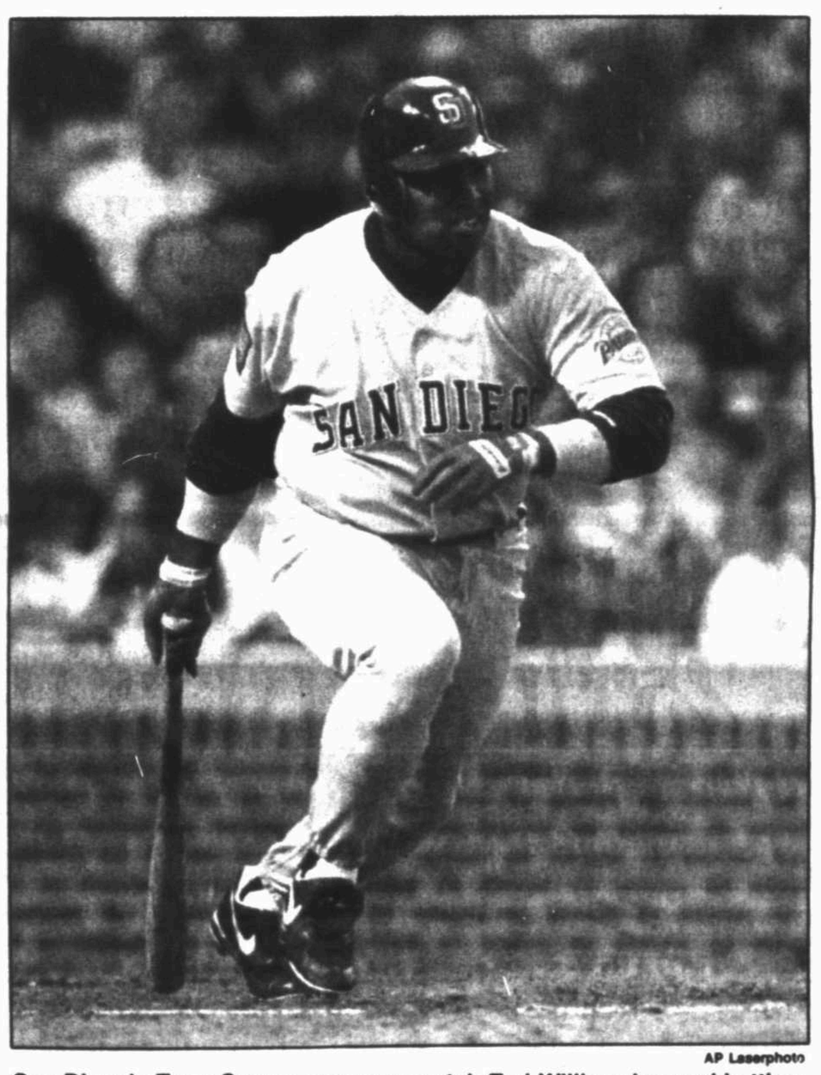

There will be postseason awards, just like always. The ballots for Most Valuable Player, Cy Young, Rookie of the Year and Manager of the Year will be mailed this weekend and the results will be announced starting in October, about a month ahead of schedule.

That means Maddux should be sure to become the first pitcher to win three straight Cy Youngs. Maddux finished tied for the league lead with 16 wins with Ken Hill, led the majors with 10 complete games and tied for the NL lead with three shutouts.

Barry Bonds' bid for an unprecedented third straight MVP award ended with him batting .312 with 37 home runs and 81 RBIs for San Francisco. Jeff Bagwell led the majors with 116 RBIs and batted .368 with 39 home runs for Houston, and also scored a league-leading 104 runs.

Griffey (40) won his first AL home run title, Paul O'Neill (.359) won his

San Diego's Tony Gwynn can never catch Ted Williams' record batting average of .406. Gwynn's batting average will stay at .394, the mark he had reached 34 days ago when the strike began.

Mustang clash has new look

By Mike Butts

It had the makings of a top West Texas Class 4A matchup. Region I finalist Andrews facing former district rival Sweetwater, a perennial power, on the season's third Friday night.

Lawrence

Gore

But after a disappointing start for both teams, Friday's game in Andrews now takes on a decidedly different look. Instead of a clash of unbeaten titans, it's two teams fighting to avert disastrous predistrict campaigns.

Andrews has stumbled to an 0-2 start after losing only two regular season games in the last three years. The Mustangs had 3-0 starts in all those seasons.

"A lot of times, particularly early in the year, a loss can be the best thing that can happen to you," said Sweetwater coach Mike Ritchey, whose team fell to Big Spring 10-8 last week. "And that's the way we're looking at it."

■ Area Roundup

Andrews improved their play in week two in a 21-7 loss to Lubbock Estacado, coach Mike Lebby said. But both the Sweetwater Mustangs and Andrews Mustangs have struggled on offense, further crimping potential excitement with the matchup.

Sweetwater, which moved from Andrews' district to District 5-4A this year, squeezed out only 141 yards total offense against Big Spring. Andrews has scored just two touchdowns in their two games — one on a long pass play in a 17-10 loss to Snyder and the other on a short drive against Estacado.

But two fumbles in each game and the inability to make good on scoring

SWC gets preview of Big Eight merger

The Southwest Conference showed the nation last week that they still have a little fight in them after battling the nation's best to respectablility.

Petitt

Last Thursday, Texas Tech fought Nebraska on relatively even terms for two-and-half quarters before folding. SMU gave UCLA all it could handle before losing in the final minute 17-10. The Ponies had the ball first-and-goal at the three yard line, but could not push it across for the possible game winning two-point conversion.

Texas A&M humiliated Oklahoma at home and TCU showed its future conference home that they could be a conference contender with a win over Western Athletic Conference's New Mexico.

This week, it's a time warp to 1996 when SMU is in the WAC and Tech and Baylor are in the Big Eight.

Baylor 40, Oklahoma State 17: The Bears went into the season with a strong defense and needing a quarterback to guide the offense. They found the quarterback in A&M Consolidated freshman Jeff Watson. The Bear defense intercepted five passes against San Jose State last week. The Bears are maturing into a Cotton Bowl contender with every week. The true test will come next week against Southern Cal.

Missouri 25, Houston 16: This season has the making for the first winless season in Houston history if the Cougars are not able to right the ship. The Cougars must find a running game. They are averaging 60 yards per game through Week 2. Without the run, sophomore quarterback Chuck Clements will be scrambling to make something happen.

Kansas State 28, Rice 17: A disappointing loss to Tulane makes this game with Kansas State a big one for Rice coach Ken Hatfield. The Wildcats have had two weeks to prepare after a win over Southwest Louisiana. The 'Cats are in the middle of a three game home stand to open the season.

New Mexico 30, SMU 23: The Lobos were considered a bowl team before season-opening losses to Texas Tech and TCU. Senior quarterback Stoney Case had more than 400 yards passing in a 44-29 loss to TCU last week. A win over SMU is important for recruiting and as a spring board heading into WAC play. SMU may be mentally and physically worn after a 17-10 setback to UCLA on the West Coast.

TCU 30, Kansas 24: The Horned Frogs are abuzz after a 44-29 win last week at Albuquerque. The Frogs thought they should have beaten North Carolina on the road and are expecting a crowd of nearly 40,000 — the second largest crowd ever for a non-conference home opener. Running back Andre Davis leads the league in rushing with 181.5 yards per game and quarterback Max Knake is 37th in the nation in passing effiency.

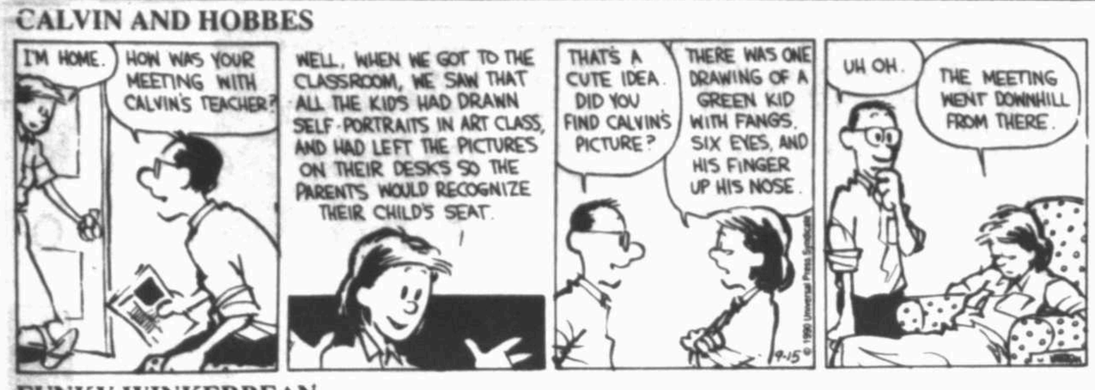

Oklahoma 37, Texas Tech 10: The Sooners have beaten Tech the past two season by a 37-10 margin. The Sooners will make their home opener at Memorial Stadium on natural grass, replacing the artificial turf which has been there in the past. Tech's freshmen have played well at home, but Saturday will be their first encounter with a hostile crowd.

Last week 5-3, Season 11-4

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 15, 1994

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Because you really care about doing a good job, you will find great success professionally. Romance will be happiest with someone who shares your intellectual interests. Do not let a strong physical attraction blind you to someone's weaknesses. Early in 1995, be on the lookout for accounting mistakes. One who boasts of great credentials may have a less than stellar track record. Check references carefully.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: quarterback Dan Marino, pianist Bobby Short, actor Tommy Lee Jones, mystery author Agatha Christie.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Your relations with a co-worker show decided improvement. A trip or visit could be part of today's plan. Give top priority to projects that promise large financial gains.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A real estate opportunity improves — thanks to an expert's advice. Your contagious optimism will sway others where joint ventures are concerned.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Private worries or a heavy workload could sap your energy. Take a short break and regroup. Spending quality time with your loved ones is a wonderful tonic for jangled nerves.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Financial backing you counted on may be delayed or unavailable. Do not despair! Slow-ups could work to your advantage. The news from those at a distance is promising. Keep close tabs on spending.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A relationship reaches a crossroads. A live-wire friend may get on your nerves at times. Rethink your living arrangements. You may want privacy more than companionship.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Uncharted waters are tricky. Go slow. A financial offer or flirtation could call for immediate action. Say "no" if you have any qualms. A change of attitude will improve the chances for lasting romance.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Your first impression of a member of the opposite sex is probably correct. Proceed with caution if considering a new investment of time and money. Catch up on your professional reading this coming weekend.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Those connected with the arts feel truly inspired today. Romance is heavenly; recent doubts disappear in love's warm glow. An evening visit with old friends should be great fun. Avoid putting mate on the spot.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Tackle a problem that arose yesterday. Artistic energy is plentiful but should be used judiciously. Avoid putting too much stock in the promises of people you barely know. Leave romance on the back burner.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Friends and relatives share good news. Put more time and effort into your professional relationships. The good will of your co-workers can help you come to terms with what seem like insurmountable problems. Repay favors.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Do not let faulty hunches tempt you into taking wild risks today. A cool head will keep you out of hot water. Cost-cutting ideas could protect joint funds. Find out more. Consult experts.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Your social life could slow to a snail's pace. Touch base with relatives. Make better use of your creative and artistic talents. A hard worker, you would benefit from taking up a relaxing hobby.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are well-organized and methodical, able to complete tough tasks in record time. Following a schedule often makes these youngsters feel more secure and productive.

The bidding:

WEST	NORTH	EAST	SOUTH
3◇	Dbl	Pass	4♠
Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Eight of ♣

Larry Cohen, author of the excellent book on the Law of Total Tricks, can play as well as he writes. This hand is from an early match of his squad's triumphant march to the Grand Nationals Team championship.

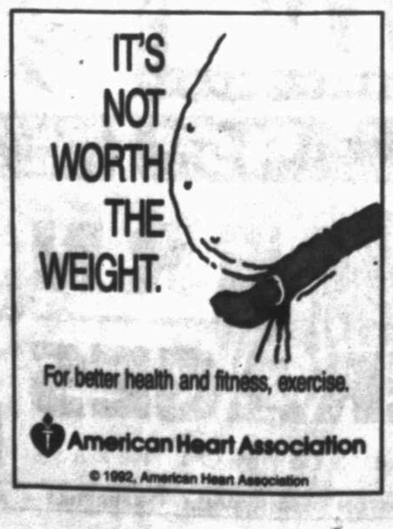

After the takeout double, a cue-bid of four diamonds, forcing North to select a major, would have resulted in a four-heart contract. That would have been touch-and-go, depending on the defense. It might seem that four spades is unmakable, but declarer's technique was beautiful to behold.

Declarer rose with ace of clubs at trick one and ran the six of spades. Since West almost surely was short in spades in light of the minor-suit preempt, this was undoubtedly the correct move. A low spade was continued to East's king and the diamond two was returned, covered by the ten and jack and taken by the ace.

The queen of spades was captured by the ace and East exited with the remaining spade. Reading the hand perfectly, Cohen cashed the king and queen of hearts, overtook the ten of hearts with the ace, then led the queen of clubs from dummy. When East covered with the king, declarer left the defender on lead by discarding a diamond.

Down to nothing but clubs, East had a choice of losing options. The return of the ten of clubs would be ruffed and the nine of hearts would be the entry to the table for declarer to discard the remaining diamond loser on the high nine of clubs. If East returned a low club, declarer would simply discard a diamond immediately and the nine of clubs would be the fulfilling trick.

Patti Davis is at it again: Reagan's daughter appears in buff on video

LOS ANGELES — Patti Davis is at it again, this time appearing in the buff on video.

Reagan daughter Patti Davis makes Playboy video.

The rebel daughter of former President and Nancy Reagan said she liked her Playboy magazine layout so much that she made a Playboy video.

The video, due to be released in early 1995, features Davis kickboxing in a gym, in the nude, with a young man.

In an interview to be broadcast Thursday on "Entertainment Tonight," Davis said that women seemed to like her magazine photos.

"I think a lot of women appreciated that at 41 I did this," she said.

The Reagans had no comment Wednesday.

LOS ANGELES — Clayton Moore does more cable surfing than Hi yo-ing these days, but he hasn't abandoned the virtues of the Lone Ranger.

Clayton Moore keeps Lone Ranger virtues.

"You do your best to keep your country on top. The fair play and the honesty, this is important," he said.

Moore, who turned 80 on Wednesday, lives a few miles from the rocky, oak-studded hills where TV's "Lone Ranger" was made. The show ran from 1949 to 1957.

He made public appearances as the Lone Ranger until 1979, when the folks who own the licensing rights had him barred from wearing the mask.

Moore now spends much of his time in front of the television.

"I'm a great sports fan. I keep tabs on tennis and football, everything," he said. "I'm doing very well, though. Everything is fine in retirement."

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Garth Brooks likes the friends in low places he discovered overseas.

Garth Brooks likes friends he found in low places.

"They've all got traditions on how to act," the country star said Tuesday of audiences during his foreign tour, especially those Down Under.

"They have chants — this olay, olay, olay — that's usually used during Australian-rules football. It's more rehearsed, and it's really intense. They get into it."

Brooks' tour resumes later this month with concerts in Spain, Denmark, Germany, England and Scotland.

Among his hits are "Friends in Low Places" and "The Dance."

MIAMI — With baseball on strike, Cuban-born slugger Jose Canseco has been spending his time trying to help youngsters from his homeland.

The Texas Rangers ballplayer, who came from Cuba when he was an infant, said Tuesday he is leading a campaign to collect toys and sports equipment for Cuban and Haitian children held at U.S. refugee camps in Cuba and Panama.

A Sept. 23 telethon on a Spanish-language radio station in Miami will be held to collect toys.

"Today, commerce rolls not just on asphalt highways, but along information highways," said Vice President Al Gore last December, in a ringing endorsement of the computer revolution. "Tens of millions of American families and business now use computers."

In the 10 months since, the tens of million have multiplied, and traffic along the highway has grown dense. A report from roadside:

■ "Does anybody find it completely satisfying," asks one Internet user of his fellow participants in "alt.cereal," "more so than out-of-the-fridge cold milk, to place one's cereal in the freezer for 10 minutes or so to really get that bowl cold?"

■ A Boston subscriber contributes: "I distinctly remember that Corn Pops used to have a mascot. Not only one, mind you, but two. The first one ... was a squat little cowboy in a huge yellow hat. The second was Pops the porcupine."

SANTA CLARA, Calif. — With the baseball season gone, Deion Sanders wasted no time closing in on a new job with the San Francisco 49ers.

Sanders

A free-agent cornerback and Cincinnati Reds outfielder, Sanders shopped his services to several NFL teams while idled by the monthlong baseball players strike. On Wednesday, the owners called off the season.

With his baseball job gone, at least for this season, Sanders was ready to turn his attention to football, said his agent, Eugene Parker.

Sanders told an Atlanta television station he had decided against rejoining the Atlanta Falcons and intended to sign with the 49ers.

Sanders rejected a more lucrative offer from the Miami Dolphins, plagued by injuries in the secondary and badly needing a reinforcement.

"I'm disappointed," coach Don Shula said. "I thought we were in it and had a good chance. We pursued it hard these last few days."

In the 49ers' bid to sign Sanders, they freed $1.3 million under the salary cap by restructuring the contracts of linebackers Gary Plummer and Ken Norton and safety Tim McDonald.

Club president Carmen Policy said Sanders, a three-time Pro Bowler in five seasons with the Falcons, flew to the San Francisco Bay area on Wednesday. Policy said he hoped to conclude a deal within the next 24 hours.

"There are some very sensitive negotiations going on," Policy said. "We're talking numbers. We're talking incentives. We're talking a variety of things. We're even talking philosophy."

Just two weeks ago, Policy said the 49ers couldn't afford Sanders because of salary-cap constraints. Now he was optimistic the two sides could come to terms. However, he was wary of competing offers.

"We're not in there alone," Policy said. "If I was to stand here and tell you it was done, I would be really acting foolhardy. I don't know what's going on behind the scenes. His coming out here may be nothing more than priming the pump to get Atlanta to really come through with a final offer."

Falcons president Taylor Smith said the team still assumed Sanders would give Atlanta a chance to match the best offer from another club.

"If the (money) is what it's rumored to be ... then I know we can be competitive with that kind of offer," Atlanta coach June Jones said. "Deion knows we want him here, and he knows this is the best fit for what he wants to accomplish."

Should Sanders sign with the 49ers, he would be the sixth defensive free agent added to the team. San Francisco (1-1) earlier added Norton, Plummer, Toi Cook, Rickey Jackson and Richard Dent.

Rangers give up on Grieve

Rangers' general manager Tom Grieve, center, looks on as team president Tom Schieffer announces Grieve's firing. Sandy Johnson, right, was named interim GM. Grieve was named Schieffer's assistant.

■ Texas fires general manager Tom Grieve after 10 seasons, names Sandy Johnson interim replacement.

By Jaime Aron
Associated Press Writer

ARLINGTON — For the last decade, Tom Grieve always found a way to stock the Texas Rangers' lineup with sluggers.

But weak pitching and shoddy fielding kept the Rangers from winning a division title.

It all caught up with Grieve on Wednesday.

Texas fired him as general manager, making him an assistant to club president Tom Schieffer.

"We haven't won — it's not more complicated than that," Schieffer said. "You don't have to look very hard to find the problems: pitching and defense. It's a recurring problem beyond the realm of something that just happened. He worked hard to fix it, but it was never resolved."

Texas player personnel director Sandy Johnson, who was in charge of the scouting department that discovered the team's young stars like Juan Gonzalez and Ivan Rodriguez, was named interim GM.

Schieffer said he'd like to complete the search within 30 days. He says he'll consider Johnson a candidate for the job.

Grieve's new responsibilities have not been outlined, and with Wednesday's cancellation of the remainder of this season there's no hurry. He has one year left on a contract extension he signed in October 1993.

He leaves as the longest-tenured GM to have never won a division title. Only Oakland's Sandy Alderson and Toronto's Pat Gillick held their posts longer than Grieve, and each has won a World Series.

All Grieve can claim is an asterisk — the Rangers were leading the revamped American League West by one game over the A's when the season ended. Although he had guaranteed the di-

Baseball will never know

■ With the end of the 1994 season, Tony Gwynn's quest for .400 and other remarkable record dashes come to an end with a question mark.

By Ben Walker
AP Baseball Writer

Maybe Tony Gwynn could've hit .400, maybe Frank Thomas or Albert Belle would've won the Triple Crown.

Now, for sure, we'll never know.

Any chance those guys had at history ended Wednesday when acting commissioner Bud Selig announced the cancellation of the season. The strike, in its 34th day, already had cut off any hope Ken Griffey Jr., Matt Williams and others had at reaching one of baseball's most-hallowed records: Roger Maris' mark of 61 home runs.

But even though the season is over, all statistics count.

That means Gwynn finished at .394, the highest since Ted Williams hit .406 in 1941 and the best in the NL since Bill Terry batted .401 in 1930. Gwynn won his fifth batting title.

In a normal, 162-game schedule, it takes 502 plate appearances to qualify for the batting title. Gwynn had 475 plate appearances; had he gone 14-for-27, he would've been a .400 hitter without any asterisk at all.

Williams won his first home-run championship and led the majors with 43. He was on a pace for nearly 61 when the strike started Aug. 12.

In a year highlighted by offense, Greg Maddux had one of the best seasons ever by a pitcher. The Atlanta ace had a 1.56 ERA — the NL ERA was 4.21, and never before has any pitcher had a figure that much lower than the league average.

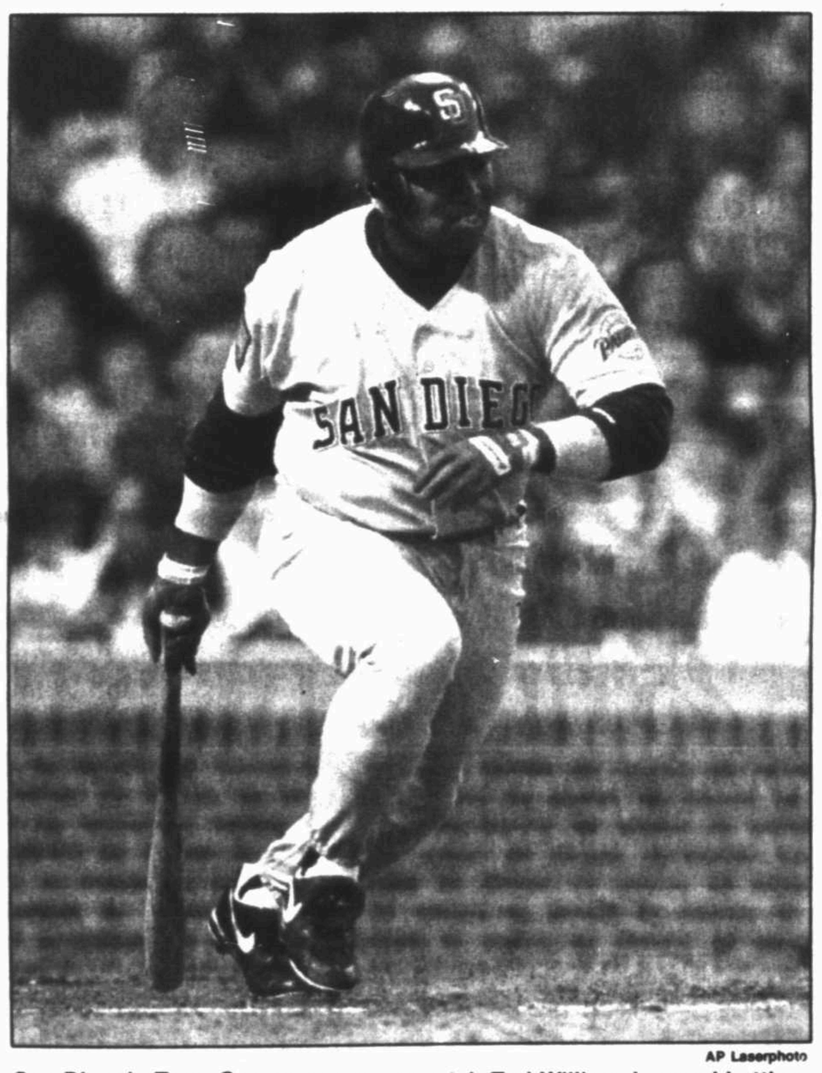

There will be postseason awards, just like always. The ballots for Most Valuable Player, Cy Young, Rookie of the Year and Manager of the Year will be mailed this weekend and the results will be announced starting in October, about a month ahead of schedule.

That means Maddux should be sure to become the first pitcher to win three straight Cy Youngs. Maddux finished tied for the league lead with 16 wins with Ken Hill, led the majors with 10 complete games and tied for the NL lead with three shutouts.

Barry Bonds' bid for an unprecedented third straight MVP award ended with him batting .312 with 37 home runs and 81 RBIs for San Francisco. Jeff Bagwell led the majors with 116 RBIs and batted .368 with 39 home runs for Houston, and also scored a league-leading 104 runs.

Griffey (40) won his first AL home run title, Paul O'Neill (.359) won his

San Diego's Tony Gwynn can never catch Ted Williams' record batting average of .406. Gwynn's batting average will stay at .394, the mark he had reached 34 days ago when the strike began.

Mustang clash has new look

By Mike Butts
Staff Writer

It had the makings of a top West Texas Class 4A matchup. Region I finalist Andrews facing former district rival Sweetwater, a perennial power, on the season's third Friday night.

Lawrence

Gore

But after a disappointing start for both teams, Friday's game in Andrews now takes on a decidedly different look. Instead of a clash of unbeaten titans, it's two teams fighting to avert disastrous predistrict campaigns.

Andrews has stumbled to an 0-2 start after losing only two regular season games in the last three years. The Mustangs had 3-0 starts in all those seasons.

"A lot of times, particularly early in the year, a loss can be the best thing that can happen to you," said Sweetwater coach Mike Ritchey, whose team fell to Big Spring 10-8 last week. "And that's the way we're looking at it."

■ Area Roundup

Andrews improved their play in week two in a 21-7 loss to Lubbock Estacado, coach Mike Lebby said. But both the Sweetwater Mustangs and Andrews Mustangs have struggled on offense, further crimping potential excitement with the matchup.

Sweetwater, which moved from Andrews' district to District 5-4A this year, squeezed out only 141 yards total offense against Big Spring. Andrews has scored just two touchdowns in their two games — one on a long pass play in a 17-10 loss to Snyder and the other on a short drive against Estacado.

But two fumbles in each game and the inability to make good on scoring

BILL PETITT

SWC gets preview of Big Eight merger

The Southwest Conference showed the nation last week that they still have a little fight in them after battling the nation's best to respectablility.

Petitt

Last Thursday, Texas Tech fought Nebraska on relatively even terms for two-and-half quarters before folding. SMU gave UCLA all it could handle before losing in the final minute 17-10. The Ponies had the ball first-and-goal at the three yard line, but could not push it across for the possible game winning two-point conversion.

Texas A&M humiliated Oklahoma at home and TCU showed its future conference home that they could be a conference contender with a win over Western Athletic Conference's New Mexico.

This week, it's a time warp to 1996 when SMU is in the WAC and Tech and Baylor are in the Big Eight.

Baylor 40, Oklahoma State 17: The Bears went into the season with a strong defense and needing a quarterback to guide the offense. They found the quarterback in A&M Consolidated freshman Jeff Watson. The Bear defense intercepted five passes against San Jose State last week. The Bears are maturing into a Cotton Bowl contender with every week. The true test will come next week against Southern Cal.

Missouri 25, Houston 16: This season has the making for the first winless season in Houston history if the Cougars are not able to right the ship. The Cougars must find a running game. They are averaging 60 yards per game through Week 2. Without the run, sophomore quarterback Chuck Clements will be scrambling to make something happen.

Kansas State 28, Rice 17: A disappointing loss to Tulane makes this game with Kansas State a big one for Rice coach Ken Hatfield. The Wildcats have had two weeks to prepare after a win over Southwest Louisiana. The 'Cats are in the middle of a three game home stand to open the season.

New Mexico 30, SMU 23: The Lobos were considered a bowl team before season-opening losses to Texas Tech and TCU. Senior quarterback Stoney Case had more than 400 yards passing in a 44-29 loss to TCU last week. A win over SMU is important for recruiting and as a spring board heading into WAC play. SMU may be mentally and physically worn after a 17-10 setback to UCLA on the West Coast.

TCU 30, Kansas 24: The Horned Frogs are abuzz after a 44-29 win last week at Albuquerque. The Frogs thought they should have beaten North Carolina on the road and are expecting a crowd of nearly 40,000 — the second largest crowd ever for a non-conference home opener. Running back Andre Davis leads the league in rushing with 181.5 yards per game and quarterback Max Knake is 37th in the nation in passing effiency.

Oklahoma 37, Texas Tech 10: The Sooners have beaten Tech the past two season by a 37-10 margin. The Sooners will make their home opener at Memorial Stadium on natural grass, replacing the artificial turf which has been there in the past. Tech's freshmen have played well at home, but Saturday will be their first encounter with a hostile crowd.

Last week 5-3, Season 11-4

Strike Chrono.

The Associated Press Chronology of key events in baseball's labor negotiations:

1992

Dec. 7 — Owners vote 15-13 at Louisville, Ky., to reopen collective bargaining agreement as of Jan. 10 in sections on free agency, salary arbitration and minimum salary.

1993

Jan. 13 — Talks begin with Player Relations Committee president Richard Ravitch announcing he will recommend to owners that there be no lockout during 1993.

Jan. 25 — Sides meet for 4½ hours, with Ravitch expanding on his view of the industry's economic condition.

Feb. 17 — Owners vote to tie revenue sharing to a salary cap.

Aug. 12 — After failing to reach a revenue-sharing agreement, owners pledge not to lock out players during the 1994 season and not to unilaterally change terms of the collective bargaining agreement through the conclusion of the 1994 season.

Dec. 31 — Collective bargaining agreement expires.

Jan. 18 — Owners agree to a new revenue sharing formula among themselves but condition it on players agreeing to a salary cap.

March 7 — Talks resume in Tampa, Fla., with Ravitch addressing about 75 players.

May 23 — Ravitch proposes eliminating termination pay, trade demands and major league service for players called up in September.

June 8 — Owners vote to require 75 percent of clubs to approve a collective-bargaining agreement during a strike.

June 14 — Owners make salary cap proposal, asking players to split revenue 50-50 in exchange for limiting payrolls to 84-110 percent. Owners propose to eliminate arbitration but lower free agent eligibility to four years of service from six — with the provision that a player's former club can match any offer until he has six years of service.

July 18 — Players reject salary-cap proposal and ask owners to lower threshold for arbitration to two years, eliminate restriction on repeat free agency within five years and raise minimum to $175,000-$200,000.

July 27 — Ravitch rejects players' proposals.

July 28 — The union's executive board votes unanimously to set an Aug. 12 strike date.

Aug. 12 — Strike begins after another bargaining session. Both sides agree to federal mediation.

Aug. 18 — Mediators announce owners will come to bargaining table.

Aug. 24-25 — Two days of bargaining fail to produce movement.

Aug. 31 — Union head Donald Fehr and his brother, Steve, a union advisor, meet secretly with Colorado Rockies owner Jerry McMorris and management lawyer Chuck O'Connor.

Sept. 2 — Acting commissioner Bud Selig announces tentative Sept. 9 deadline for canceling the season if there's no agreement. Owners provide additional revenue-sharing date to the union.

Sept. 7 — Bargaining teams return to New York. McMorris, Boston Red Sox CEO John Harrington, Milwaukee Brewers vice president Wendy Selig-Prieb and O'Connor meet secretly for three hours with Fehr brothers and union lawyers Eugene Orza and Lauren Rich.

Sept. 8 — Players present a proposal calling for 1½ percent "tax" on revenues and payrolls of the 16 largest clubs by revenue and payrolls — money that would be distributed to the bottom 12 in each category. It also calls for home teams to share 25 percent of their gate receipts.

Sept. 9 — Selig announces that the owners have rejected the players' offer, but postpones canceling the rest of the season.

Sept. 14 — Owners cancel the World Series for the first time since 1904.

Avg. Salary

NEW YORK (AP) — Average baseball salary as compiled by the Major League Baseball Players Association and the minimum salary. The 1994 figure is based on a survey by The Associated Press. Beginning in 1979, salary deferrals without interest are discounted at 9 percent per year. For 1987-93, signing bonuses are increased at 9 percent per year:

Rangers' losing record now on the books

ARLINGTON (AP) — The scrubbing of what was left of the baseball season on Wednesday came as no surprise to the Texas Rangers, who held their annual end-of-the-year meetings last weekend.

Before acting commissioner Bud Selig announced the season was over, the Rangers already had made their first postseason move by firing general manager Tom Grieve.

The end of this season means no division flag to fly over The Ballpark in Arlington despite Texas being in first place when the season stopped.

Then again, there's no guarantee the Rangers would've remained atop the restructured American League West had the season lasted even another day. Texas lost its last six to go crashing into the strike at 52-62.

"I'm not happy about finishing the season the way we did," Rangers manager Kevin Kennedy said. "Yeah, we were in first place, but there's no World Series or playoffs to show we're a better team than our record."

George W. Bush, managing general partner of the Rangers, said: "I am very sad about it. It's bad for our industry, and it's bad for America. It's a sad moment."

Bush, who is also the Republican nominee for governor of Texas, said he doesn't think the strike and canceled season will affect his campaign.

"No, I'm not concerned in the least. The players struck — not the owners. ... It sounds like the players miscalculated," Bush said.

Although there's no indication of when baseball will return and what the game will look like when it comes back, team president Tom Schieffer said the team must look ahead.

"We have to start doing the things you do to get ready for '95 season," Schieffer said. "Baseball didn't die today. It will survive with these owners and these players. It will be played again."

Texas Rangers player representative Kevin Brown and fellow pitcher Kenny Rogers called the owners' decision an attempt to break the union.

"This has been pretty much their desire from Day One," Brown said.

Rogers had one of the season's highlights by throwing only the 12th perfect game in modern baseball history on July 28, the day the strike date was set.

Yet he says the strike has washed that memory out of his mind and instead left behind bitterness.

"I really don't have any joy from this year at all," Rogers said. "It was great to throw that game, but it's forgotten basically."

Kennedy is now left wondering where he'll pick up next year. He plans to begin looking at players by attending the Arizona Fall League, then he'll go scouting in the Dominican Republic.

The feeling is even more hollow for Schieffer, who was expecting an extremely profitable season thanks to the record crowds filling the new stadium to see a first-place team.

Texas already had smashed its single-season attendance record with more than 2.5 million customers after 63 home dates.

Scheiffer said the strike will end up costing the team several million dollars.

"If we had completed the season and drawn 2.5 million, we would have made money," he said. "We didn't, though, and we had to refund broadcast and some of the advertising dollars, and we didn't get the revenue from the World Series and playoffs.

"Put all that together and we wind up losing even though we didn't have to pay all the salaries," Schieffer said.

The big concern now for Texas is that a settlement is reached in time to save the 1995 All-Star Game, which is scheduled to be played in Arlington next summer.

"I think it's reasonable to think about that, but I find it hard to imagine a scenario in which baseball won't be played in '95," Schieffer said.

vision title in spring training, he didn't expect Texas to be 52-62 and sinking fast.

"We finished in first place, but we were 10 games under," Schieffer said. "I don't think you can take real comfort in that fact."

Grieve appeared uncomfortable at Wednesday's news conference. He sat stifly and wore a sour look while flanked by Schieffer, Johnson, manager Kevin Kennedy and general partner Rusty Rose.

Yet when Grieve spoke, he was mostly complimentary of the organization that made him baseball's youngest GM when he was hired at age 36 in 1984.

"I feel a great level of disappointment today," said Grieve, who learned of the move Tuesday. "I don't feel one ounce of bitterness. I don't have any regrets.

"And although I have strong emotions about leaving, I leave feeling good about the job that we've done."

As much heat as Grieve has taken for not building a solid rotation, there's been even more speculation that ownership tightened the budget when it came to signing pitchers.

The question of whether Grieve had the financial backing to win came up repeatedly Wednesday and each time he insisted money was never an issue.

"We had every opportunity to succeed and unfortunately we didn't," Grieve said. "I'm very disappointed in that, in my own performance, and although it might sound trite, I feel very disappointed for the fans."

Under Grieve, the Rangers clawed from cellar-dwellers to contenders by 1986, then slipped back to also-rans before again challenging for a division title last season.

first batting championship and Kirby Puckett (112) led the league in RBIs.

Thomas and Belle, however, both had a chance to win the Triple Crown. As it is, Thomas (.353, 38 home runs 101 RBIs) and Belle (.357, 36 homers, 101 RBIs) will never know.

The AL win leader was Jimmy Key (17-4) and Steve Ontiveros (2.65) was the surprise ERA leader.

Randy Johnson (204) was the major league strikeout leader for the third straight year. He got his last strikeout on what turned out to be the final pitch of the season, fanning Ernie Young in Oakland. Andy Benes' 189 strikeouts topped the NL.

Kenny Lofton (60) led the majors in stolen bases. Craig Biggio (39) led the NL with one more than Deion Sanders. Biggio also tied Larry Walker for the league lead with 44 doubles.

The strike stopped any chance Chuck Knoblauch had at baseball's record for doubles in a season, set by Earl Webb with 67 in 1931. Knoblauch had 45 and was on a pace for 64 when play stopped.

"It's 4U" Game Rules
Anyone 18 years or older can enter except employees (and family members of employees) of the Midland Reporter-Telegram, Brite Systems Inc., Associated Publishing Co., and their advertising and promotion agencies. The "It's 4U" Game is designed for people who live in the Midland and Odessa calling areas and no purchase is required to play or win prizes, although long distance toll charges may apply if you call from outside the Midland-Odessa calling area. Look for the "It's 4U" Game ad in advertisers' service directory in the Midland Reporter-Telegram every day until Nov. 5, 1994. Call 560-2400 and enter any four-digit advertiser's code listed in the directory. You will hear a brief advertiser's message and, if you are one of five instant winners chosen at random each week, you'll win one of that week's prizes. If you are an instant winner, listen for details about claiming your prize. In order to claim your prize, you will be required to give your name, age, address and telephone number. The more often you call, the better your chance of winning a prize. You can also enter a second chance drawing for unclaimed prizes by hand-printing your complete name and address and daytime phone number on a 3"x5" piece of paper and mailing it in an envelope to "It's 4U" Second Chance Game, P.O. Box 1650, Midland, Texas 79702, so that it is received before the deadline, Nov. 5, 1994. Enter as often as you wish, but submit only one entry in each envelope. Entries become the property of the sponsors. None will be returned. Each game begins at 12:01 a.m. Monday and ends at 11:59 p.m. Sunday. Each week for eight weeks ending Nov. 5, 1994, five entries will be selected at random and will win that week's prize. The total value of all prizes to be awarded in the "It's 4U" game will equal $4,000 or more. The names and cities of winners will be published in the Midland Reporter-Telegram Classified Ads pages. No substitution of prizes is permitted. Only one prize will be awarded to each winner. By entering, winners authorize the use of their names, cities or photos for publicity purposes. Winners may be required to sign an affidavit of eligibility and release. Taxes are the responsibility of winners. Void where prohibited. © 1994 HEARST CORPORATION. ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

AREA: Andrews seeks first win; Rangers try 2 QBs opportunities are what has really hurt Andrews.

"We controlled the ball against Estacado," Lebby said. "We had it 62 plays and they had it 45. We made 15 first downs and they made 11. (But) we didn't convert two crucial fourth down plays. One on the two (yard line) and one on the ten."

Estacado turned one Andrews' fumble into a touchdown and drove only 25 yards for another score after returning the second half kickoff.

Andrews has other problems. Senior linebacker Chace Gore, perhaps their best returning player on defense, left the team before the season started to play for former Andrews coach W.T. Stapler in Carlsbad, N.M. And Kevin Lawrence, who had over 1,600 yards in 13 games last year, could miss the Sweetwater game with a severely sprained ankle suffered in the first quarter against Estacado.

Lawrence is "day to day" Lebby said on Wednesday. He will probably play next week against Pampa.

"When you lose a player of that magnitude it puts a strain on your offense," Lebby said. "And he only played ten plays against Estacado."

Senior Brian McBeth will take Lawrence's place should he not play Friday. But senior Quentin Brown will have to take up most of the slack. The halfback-fullback has 99 yards on 27 carries and scored one of Andrews' touchdowns.

Sweetwater is led by quarterback Kerry Carr, an all-district free safety last year, and 260-pound defensive lineman Gabe Cherry. Receivers Travis Black (6-1, 215) and Lamar Blueford both had over 700 yards in receptions last year.

Andrews' only regular season loss last year was against Sweetwater, 51-40.

"It's turned into a big rivalry," said Lebby. "It takes a little bit away not being in district, which I'm tickled to death that it's not. They're coming off a loss so they'll be going 100 miles an hour."

In GREENWOOD (1-1), Ranger junior starting quarterback Josh Jones has rushed for 240 yards. But Casey Otho, another junior, has shown enough skill at the position that Ranger coach Bob Purser hasn't made a decision on a permanent starter.

"We're still probably going to split time with them at quarterback over the next two weeks," Purser said. "We'll get a chance to evaluate them and hopefully we can make a decision before district (Oct. 7 vs. Reagan County) or maybe we'll just keep going that way (splitting time)."

Ranger junior Bucky Smith ran for 182 yards and two touchdowns while intercepting two passes from his strong safety position in the Rangers' 36-12 win over Fort Stockton Friday.

The Rangers play at Denver City Friday. The 5-3A Mustangs are 2-0. They beat Fort Stockton 41-0 on the season's opening Thursday.

BIG SPRING will have to quickly get over celebration of their 10-8 upset over Sweetwater when it plays at Lubbock Estacado (1-1) tonight. The Steers had not beaten Sweetwater, formerly a district foe, since 1990, the year before Dwight Butler took over as head coach.

"That was the only team since I've been here as head coach we hadn't beaten," Butler said. "They were a thorn in our side and it was just a great feeling to get that thorn out. Now that we got the thorn out, we got to stop the bleeding."

By this time last season TAPPS six-man TRINITY had lost two games by a combined 99-12 score. Saturday, the Chargers went to 2-0 with a 46-0, 45-point rule win over Bethel Christian.

"I wouldn't have thought we had any business 45-pointing anybody," Trinity coach Robert Royer said. "We're a year older and a lot better."

But the real test of how far the Chargers have come is Friday in Welch against UIL Dawson County. Dawson County is only 1-1, but they have most of their players back from the team that last season beat Trinity 47-0.

STANTON (2-0) takes its speed show on the road against Merkel (2-0). Buffalo backs Jerele Lee and Todd Davis have combined for 475 yards in Stanton's 2-0 start. Both have five touchdowns.

Lee has 255 yards on 23 carries for an 11-yard average with Davis rushing 15 times for 220 yards and a 14.6 average. Lee's yardage has come in six quarters. Davis had only one carry in the second half of the Buffaloes 48-6 win over Garden City Friday.

MIDLAND CHRISTIAN hosts Loraine (0-2) at 7:30 Friday. The Mustangs will go six weeks before playing another home game. They have four away games and a bye week before hosting Abilene Christian Oct. 28. Midland Christian will play in Midland before then when it faces Trinity Oct. 21.

RANKIN travels to McCamey (1-1) after evening their record to 1-1 by beating Forsan 12-0. GARDEN CITY (0-2) will try to pick up its first win in Odessa versus Odessa High's junior varsity Saturday. LAMESA (1-1) hosts Reagan County (0-1-1).

"Think you know Football"
PLAY BLITZPICKS & WIN $2,500 EACH WEEK!
DRAFT
Any NFL players for these 5 positions: 1 QB, 1 RB, 2 WR/TE, and 1 Kicker. Write 'em down here and call the number below and follow the easy directions. Touch tone phone & credit card are required! You must enter by midnight on Saturday ET!

SCORE
Your players score one point for every point scored on the field:
• Touchdown = 6 pts. • Extra Point = 1pt.
• 2pt conversion = 2pts. • Field Goal = 3pts.
• 1pt. for every ten yards they pass, rush, receive or kick.
If Emmitt Smith runs for 210 yards, scores 3 TD's and a 2-point conversion, he scores 41 points for you. Scoring affected by injured players. Sunday & Monday games only.
WIN
$2,500 to the top scoring team in the country! Special Prizes to the top scorers in the local area. Watch every week for the winners of the previous week. To find your ranking, just call back Wednesday & Thursday. Enter a new team each week!
Top 3 MRT finishers:
1. Randy Brannon (108.8).
2. Sam Augsburger (94.9).
3. Tommy Lawson (89.7).
All three players win a chance at a free play in this week's BlitzPick game.
MIKE TRACY, of Kettle Falls, Wash., was this week's $2,500 BlitzPicks winner. Tracy's team scored 127.3 points.
CHOOSE ANY PLAYER FROM ANY NFL TEAM
Pick your 5-man team from ANY of this year's active pro players by punching in the first 3 letters of their last names on the phone pad, when prompted. (Players with common last names will prompt you for their first names). Here's a sample of some popular players to get you started!

Prices sink

NEW YORK — Energy futures fell Wednesday after weekly inventory figures showed sharply higher supplies of gasoline and home heating oil.

October deliveries of light sweet crude oil fell 41 cents per barrel to $16.71 on the Nymex, the lowest point in four months. Prices fell as low at $16.58 before rising to its closing price.

Local crude purchasers lowered their posted price 50 cents to $15 a barrel.

October deliveries of unleaded gasoline fell 1.29 cents per gallon to 43.65 cents Wednesday on the New York Mercantile Exchange. The contract had fallen more than 2 cents on Tuesday.

Gasoline prices have been sliding as demand falls with the end of the summer driving season and supplies run well ahead of year-ago levels. Tuesday night's report from the American Petroleum Institute and figures from the Department of Energy Wednesday morning showed gasoline supplies four to eight million barrels ahead of last year.

Natural gas for October delivery rose 0.9 cent to $1.684 per 1,000 cubic feet.

Dollar mixed

NEW YORK — The dollar was mixed in thin, volatile trading Wednesday, with reports of dollar-buying by central banks giving the greenback some support against the Japanese yen.

Gold prices retreated. On New York's Commodity Exchange, gold for current delivery fell $1.50 to settle at $389.10 a troy ounce.

In late New York trading, the dollar was quoted at 99.20 yen, up from 98.75 late Tuesday.

Other late dollar rates in New York compared with late Tuesday: 1.2810 Swiss francs, down from 1.2855; 5.2735 French francs, down from 5.2790; 1,566 Italian lire, up from 1,565; and 1.3530 Canadian dollars, up from 1.3488.

The British pound rose to $1.5656 from $1.5638.

Stocks rally

NEW YORK — Stocks rallied Wednesday, helped by lower interest rates and computer-driven program trading. Investors, however, ignored some mixed data on the economy.

The Dow Jones industrial average rose 15.47 to to 3,895.33.

Advancing issues narrowly outnumbered declines on the New York Stock Exchange.

Final volume on the floor of the Big Board came to 298.53 million shares, up from 293.20 million in the previous session.

Analysts see gasoline-price jump

■ Federal mandates for cleaner fuel could boost pump prices by 5 cents a gallon by year's end.

By Gregory J. Wilcox
N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — Federal mandates for cleaner gasoline could boost pump prices by 5 cents a gallon by year's end and cost drivers another nickel early in 1995, industry officials and analysts said.

Southern California refiners are readying for the annual Oct. 1 sale of specially oxygenated gasoline, so-called winter fuel.

But the winter fuel, which costs about 5 cents more to produce per gallon than the gasoline now being pumped, must be replaced by a cleaner and more costly new gasoline by Jan. 1, analysts said Tuesday.

"I can tell you that the consumer is probably going to pay for it," said Edward Reilly, senior vice president of marketing at Arco Products Co., which has the biggest share of the Los Angeles gasoline market. "It's going to cost more to produce and the industry will try to recover that (expense) where market conditions will allow it to."

The reformulated fuel will be sold year round in Los Angeles, San Diego, Houston, Chicago, Philadelphia, New York, Washington, Baltimore and Hartford, Conn., starting Jan. 1.

The new gasoline must be at refiner distribution terminals by Dec. 1., so consumer prices could start rising in early December.

Consumers might get the bill for both less-polluting fuels. Or, competition could pressure gasoline refiners and retailers to absorb part of the increase, as oil companies did last year when winter fuel prices barely rose.

The National Petroleum Council is predicting a 10-cent rise in the cost of gasoline. Environmental Protection Agency officials said higher production costs could see hikes of 3 cents to 5 cents a gallon.

Sylvia Dugre, mobile source coordinator for the EPA office in San Francisco, said the new motor fuel is less toxic and won't release hazardous fumes into the atmosphere at the rate fuel now in use does.

Using the cleaner gasoline will reduce ozone forming compounds and toxic emissions by 15 percent to 17 percent, she said.

Both oxygenated and reformulated gasolines are more expensive for refiners to make.

Oxygenated gasoline adds 3 cents to 5 cents a gallon to refining costs. The reformulated gasoline might be even more costly.

"We have to recover our costs at the pump. It's just like any other business," said Jim Hendon, spokesman at San Francisco-based Chevron Corp.

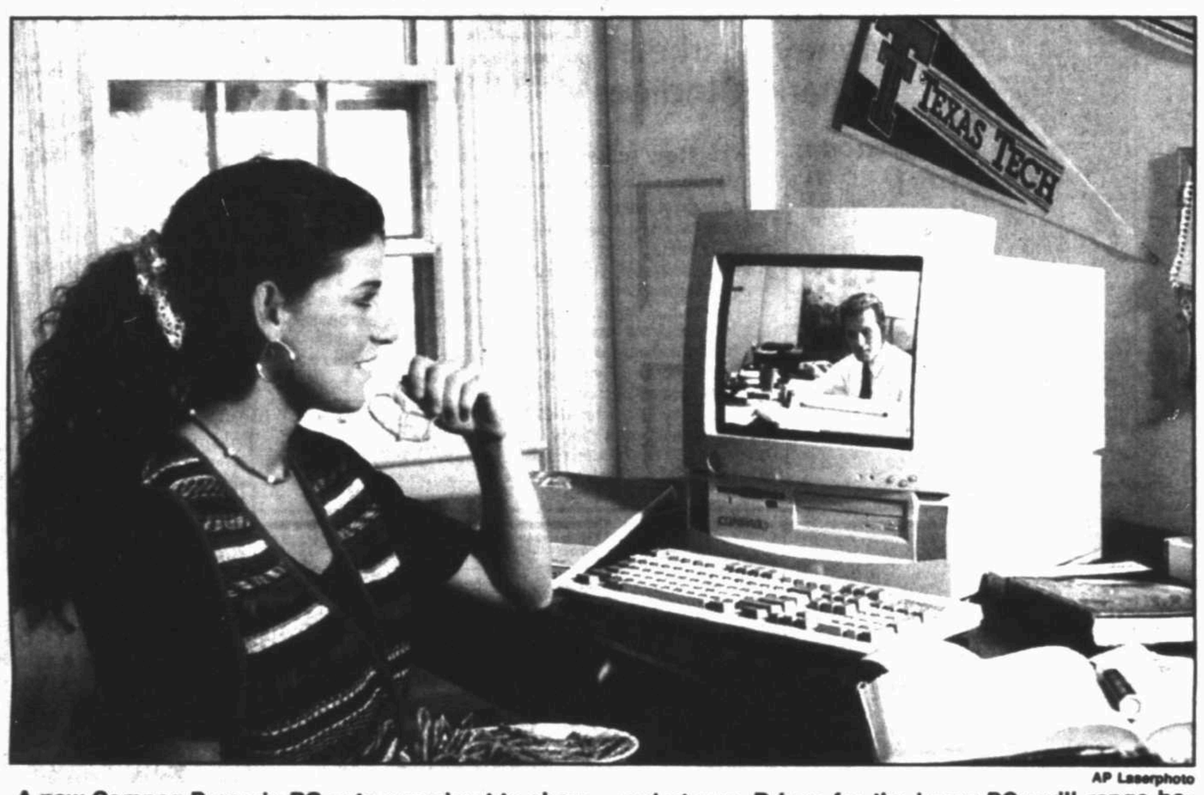

Whether consumers do in fact pay higher prices will depend on market factors of supply, demand and crude oil prices.

Prices could jump 5 cents a gallon by January, said McDonald J. Beavers, president of Whitney Leigh Corp., a petroleum industry market research firm in Tulsa, Okla.

Beavers said consumer demand usually stays flat after Labor Day through the next summer.

The fact that refiners are spending more to make the fuel is not a guarantee they can recover the costs in the marketplace, said Trilby Lundberg, publisher of the North Hollywood-based Lundberg Letter which tracks market trends.

"There have been times over the years where an important event like a cost increase for removing lead or a tax hike has been discernible (in the market place) and times when it hasn't," she said.

A new Compaq Presario PC gets a workout to show its capabilities as a computer, television, telephone and stereo. Prices for the home PCs will range between $1,499 and $1,899.

Compaq updates its PCs, relies on AMD chips

By Evan Ramstad
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Compaq Computer Corp. on Wednesday unveiled new models in its year-old Presario consumer line and base them on chips made by Advanced Micro Devices Inc. rather than market leader Intel Corp.

This is the first time a major manufacturer has used a chip maker besides Intel for an entire product line. While planned for some time, it was announced just after Compaq chief executive Eckhard Pfeiffer publicly criticized Intel at an industry conference in Spain.

By relying on AMD 486 microprocessors rather than the newer and more expensive Intel Pentium chip, Compaq is betting consumers are more interested in saving money than having leading-edge technology in their machines. It will spend tens of millions of dollars on TV ads this fall, competing with Intel's ads for Pentium.

"The big issue is practical functionality," said Mark Vena, brand manager for Presario products, saying most consumers don't require Pentium power, now chiefly used for graphics and video. "A Pentium model of these machines, you wouldn't see any benefit beyond the 486."

Compaq announced in February it had signed AMD as a second supplier of microprocessors, the "brain" of a personal computer. The company said it needed another large supplier because of its growth.

Analysts had expected Compaq would use AMD chips in the consumer PCs. AST Research is expected to soon bring out consumer models based on chips by Cyrix Corp., another Intel clone company.

Other PC makers, notably Dell, Gateway and Packard Bell, have placed a greater emphasis on Pentium models. Earlier this week, Acer, the Taiwan-based company that has been one of the fastest-growing PC makers this year, unveiled its fall consumer line with three of six models based on Pentium.

Compaq, which sold more PCs than any other manufacturer during the first six months of the year, sells Pentium-based machines to business. It will likely start selling Pentium machines in its Presario line next spring.

The company plans to promote the new Presario models as "home information centers" since each model has a built-in speaker phone and individual voice mailboxes.

Each model also has a CD-ROM drive, stereo speakers and a modem capable of moving data 14,400 bits per second, the current standard. Compaq's Presario machines a year ago were knocked for slow modems and no CD-ROM drives. Despite the criticism, the machines turned out to be the company's best-selling models.

Consumers go on buying binge during August

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Retail sales surged last month across a broad front after a quiet July, while a key government report said the economy is growing at a healthy pace with only moderate inflationary pressures.

Americans were buying more cars, home furnishings and back-to-school supplies in August, the Commerce Department said Wednesday, as sales rose 0.8 percent after remaining unchanged the previous month.

Analysts said the buying binge was spurred by job growth and there is still steam left in a consumer-driven expansion.

"The report is really quite positive for the economy," said economist Lynn Reaser of First Interstate Bancorp in Los Angeles. "The consumer has definitely not stalled out."

"The economy has nine lives, and maybe there are a couple of more to go," said Sung Won Sohn of Norwest Corp. in Minneapolis.

The outlook was bolstered by a Federal Reserve survey of business conditions around the country.

"Economic activity continued to expand through the summer," the report said. "Regions that have been lagging are generally said to be doing better while most of the stronger areas saw growth plateau."

The survey by the Fed's 12 regional banks found that higher interest rates are having an impact, particularly in slowing home building.

But the so-called beige book report said consumer spending — while slower — still remains strong, and retailers look forward to a good year-end holiday buying season beginning around Thanksgiving.

The Fed, which has boosted short-term interest rates five times since February to check inflation, sounded fairly optimistic about price stability.

"There are more reports of tightening labor markets than before, though wage pressures are still described as modest," the beige book said. "Industrial materials prices edged up further, but businesses say that competitive pressures continue to restrain price increases on finished goods."

Few rules place limits on IRA withdrawals

By Bill Doyle

Q: Having reached age 59½, can I withdraw any amount I wish, as often as I wish, from my individual retirement account and, on my income tax return, report those amounts as ordinary income for the year withdrawn?

Or, are there rules limiting the amounts of annual IRA withdrawals?

Doyle

A: The only rule that comes close to limiting IRA withdrawals is the one calling for a penalty equal to 15 percent of the total amount in excess of $150,000 you take out of IRAs and other retirement plans within one year.

Precious few retirees collect more than $150,000 annually from pensions, IRAs or other retirement plans. And this rule, which clearly is intended to "soak the retired rich," has a number of loopholes.

You are in what has been tabbed the "golden years" for taking money out of IRAs and retirement plans with similar withdrawal rules. From ages 59½ through 70½, you can take out as much or as little as you please and pay only regular income tax — no tax penalty — on that money.

For money to be taken out of your IRA without penalty before 59½, you generally must die or be permanently disabled. However, if the withdrawals are based based on your life expectancy or the joint life expectancy of you and your IRA beneficiary, they escape penalty if continued for at least five years or until you reach age 59½, whichever is longer.

After you reach 70½, you are required to make IRA withdrawals based on the life expectancy tables you can find in Internal Revenue Service Publication 590, "Individual Retirement Arrangements."

Failure to make adequate withdrawals after age 70½ can bring the revenooers' wrath down upon you. The penalty for underwithdrawing is 50 percent of the amount you should have taken out.

Let's say you were required to withdraw $2,000 last year but took only $1,000 out of your IRA. You would be socked with a $500 penalty.

Q: Even with with the increase resulting from last's year's passage of the Clinton tax bill, the top federal income tax bracket is 39.6 percent. And that is lower than the 50 percent penalty tax levied on underwithdrawals from IRAs.

Where did Congress come up with the 50 percent number?

A: That was the maximum federal income tax on ordinary income at the time IRA legislation was introduced in Congress and enacted into law.

So, our lawgivers set the tax penalty for leaving too much money in an IRA at an equally high percentage. The reasoning was to collect just as much tax from IRA participants who leave money in their accounts as is extracted from senior citizens who empty their IRAs.

Q: You mentioned that IRA contributions can be put into American Eagle gold and silver coins. Can my existing IRA be transferred into those coins?

A: Yes, if you are foolish enough to risk your retirement nest egg on such a speculative investment.

IRA legislation generally prohibits having collectibles in your account. However that prohibition was eased in 1987 to allow IRA holdings of gold and silver coins issued by the federal government. The only coins to qualify are American Eagles.

Mohair tickles fashion's fancy

By Francine Parnes
Associated Press

Mohair is winter's new wool, and it's appearing in shapes that are anything but the same old yarn.

Awaiting the terribly trendy is Jill Stuart's pink mohair backpack. So are Vivienne Tam's lipstick-red mohair boa and Anna Sui's feathery, plaid mohair minikilts that bear an uncanny resemblance to shag rugs.

"The fabrics in fashion today are ticklish, and there's a current emphasis on all things furry," says Hope Brick, fashion director for Foley's in Houston. "We're seeing a lot of textural interest, and mohair is probably the sublime texture."

On the downside, mohair may cling to your mascara and float up your nostrils. It may also shed all over your clothes — and those of others. So if you're bent on looking au courant, buy a lint brush and chalk it up to the price of style.

"Because mohair is such a new fashion story, we can tolerate some of the itchiness," Brick says. "Whenever fur blends are in style, that can be a challenge, but it's never been a deterrent."

Indeed, fashion promoters say mohair's soft personality makes up for the itchiness.

"With its surface interest, mohair adds another dimension," says Lynn Tesoro, vice president of public relations at Calvin Klein. "You put a mohair baby-blue vest under a charcoal wool pants suit, and it offers a completely different aspect to the look. Mohair takes it out of the realm of serious dressing and softens it up."

Calvin Klein's CK collection includes mohair in sherbet shades of pink, lemon and sky blue. Sweater vests, cardigans and V-neck minidresses run about $120 to $220 at Bloomingdale's, Saks Fifth Avenue, I. Magnin and Macy's.

"Pastels and softness really lend themselves to the fluffiness of mohair," says New York designer Cynthia Rowley. "I love mohair because it's so traditionally feminine and goes back to those really fluffy, cozy sweaters of the '50s. This is a season of glamour, and it's everything about being a girl."

Rowley's group of mohair pastels includes waist-cropped pullovers, A-line jumpers, and T-shirt dresses. They cost about $140 to $240 at Macy's East, Henri Bendel, and Barney's.

But there's more to the color story. On the racks, you'll find these fashions in every hue from snow white to plaids, even neons from Anna Sui.

Since it's lighter than wool, mohair absorbs dye better and can take the brightest or softest of shades.

"This fall, color is upon us, and mohair colors very well," Brick says. "The yarn looks so vibrant when dyed."

The last time mohair was truly trendy was in the 1960s, and many of those silhouettes have been revived this year. There are plenty of traditional sportswear items, inciuding classic mohair cardigans and kilts, blazers and sweater sets. Ralph Lauren uses shaggy plaid mohair in jackets, skirts and suits.

At Lord & Taylor, mohair classics include a taupe V-neck pullover from Adrienne Vittadini, $185; berets from A. Brod, $40; and 6-foot-long wraps, also from A. Brod, $110. They're please-touch items that'll keep you cozy, cuddly and classic.

Mohair, a fiber derived from the silky hair of the Angora goat, dates to Biblical times, according to Christie Ingrassia of the Mohair Council of America in New York. It likely originated in the Himilayas, was brought to Turkey and eventually was exported to the United States in 1849.

Today, the United States is a leading producer, with 96 percent of its mohair production coming from Texas.

This pale-pink mohair suit by Badgley Mischaka consists of a loose-fitting jacket with a matching skirt. Such soft and cuddly outfits are making a comeback this fall.

Here comes the fuzz!

N.Y. Times News Service

The fall buzz is fuzz, with mohair weaving its way into the spotlight. Airy, hairy sweaters in yummy pastels and vibrant hues are pictured on most of the covers of current fashion magazines.

The luxurious fiber floats among this season's designs by Geoffrey Beene, Ralph Lauren, Anna Sui, Marc Jacobs, Adrienne Vittadini, Liz Claiborne and Donna Karan for DKNY, to name a few. Designers took it beyond the usual realm into miniskirts, pants, bags, evening wear, slip dresses and bustiers, as well as coats, suits, sweaters and vests.

"Pale mohair and cashmere sweaters in soft blue, pink, yellow or green will be essentials," says Linda Larsen German, president of women's sportswear for Liz Claiborne.

Although it appears soft and delicate, mohair is a strong fiber, according to the Mohair Council of America. Taken from the Angora goat, it is lighter than wool, yet can appear heavier, especially when knitted. It has unique insulative qualities that add warmth without weight, says the council.

For Texans, who've been known to wear walking shorts in December, that warmth can be too hot for indoors except on very cold days. It's unlikely that a professional woman could stand wearing even a sleeveless mohair sweater under a wool jacket at the office for more than a couple of hours. (She could perhaps layer a white cotton shirt under a sleeveless mohair sweater without a jacket, though.)

Consequently, retailers expect outerwear styles such as sweaters and jackets to be more plentiful in North Texas than the trendy dresses and skirts pictured in recent magazines.

"I think we'll see more of it in outerwear, with lots of great color," says Hope Brick, vice president/fashion direcot of Foley's. "Mohair takes color well."

Along with mohair, watch for other light fibers such as cashmere and angora to turn up in soft, cuddly sweaters and vests, which look super teamed with a pair of jeans, charcoal slacks or a pleated skirt.

Fake furs are giant fashion trend

N.Y. Times News Service

Breakthrough fabrics are sending shock waves through the fashion world this fall with fuzzy-wuzzy textures and high-gloss finishes. Among the hottest materials to look for are faux furs and shiny vinyls.

"The animal trend is back, both in patterns and in faux fur," says Joan Kaner, senior vice president/fashion director for Neiman Marcus. "The whole shine story continues, as well," with satin, vinyl-and patent leather turning up in sportswear and other clothing suitable for daytime.

Designers especially have a soft spot for faux fur — the fakier and more colorful, the better. From hairy gorilla to curly lamb, the fabric gives weekend wear a fun side and dinner suits a glamorous touch.

Richard Tyler showed it on the cuffs and collars of elegant black jackets for Anne Klein. Anna Sui so heavily trimmed dresses, hats, jackets, vests and coats in brightly colored faux animal hides that her cuddly style was dubbed the Teddy Bear look.

Whimsical designer Todd Oldham, a Texas native, used faux skins in his recent collection, including his "tiger" miniskirts. He says he wants to accommodate women who love the luxurious look of fur — without compromising his animal rights beliefs.

"Every season we offer fake leather and fur for those women who want animal skins. We will absolutely not use real fur or leather," Oldham says.

Thanks to modern polyester, the new fabrics give designers more options than ever for creating stunning clothes. In some cases, they mix textured fur with glossy materials to project a unique mix that looks sensually smooth and soft. Designer Rifat Ozbek, for instance, put a fuzzy fabric coat over a vinyl sleeveless sheath. Isaac Mizrahi trimmed quilted satin jackets in brightly colored fur.

Vinyl, rubber, neoprene and nylon add polish this season to quilted down jackets, parkas, blousons, bombers, slacks, dresses and even shoes. Especially chic is slick, black patent leather trim on jackets and skirts, which makes a high-tech statement with subtlety for those who aren't daring enough to don an entire jacket or skirt made of it.

Donna Karan's trendy DKNY label has a short skating skirt/tank top dress in a shiny bright yellow nylon that resembles wet suit material. It's the perfect thing to wear for —uh, a hot tub party.

Local store brings style to fund-raising effort

Staff Report

Julian Gold is offering a unique opportunity to Midlanders — a chance to see the store's completed renovation project and a to help out local charities with every purchase made.

During the week of Sept. 19-24, 10 percent of the proceeds from all sales will be made to the local charity of the customer's choice.

In addition, there will be a Silent Auction of special merchandise throughout the store for customers to bid on during the week. The highest bidder for each item on Sept. 24 will receive the merchandise and the proceeds raised for each item will then be donated to the charity of each winning bidder's choice.

"When Dorothy and Julian founded Julian Gold nearly 50 years ago, they believed that the store was obligated to do more than serve its customers well, but also to serve the community well. This unique, week-long event will allow us to do both," said Bob Gurwitz, president of Julian Gold.

Turquoise jewelry has long and varied history

Associated Press

In the romantic language of gemstones, turquoise has some very nice things to say, reports Traditional Home magazine.

"In Victorian jewelry, forget-me-nots are almost always set with turquoise because turquoise was the symbol of young, soft, emotional expression," says Maryland antiques dealer Diane Grimes. "Turquoise says 'forget-me-not' in a vivid, unforgettable way."

Turquoise jewelry has a long and varied history. Highly prized in ancient Egypt, the 7,500-year-old pieces of turquoise adornments discovered in an Egyptian tomb may be the world's oldest wrought jewelry.

Many cultures invested turquoise with magical powers. Because it was said to guard against falls, turquoise was often worn by travelers; Turkish soldiers had their bridles set with turquoise amulets to protect their horses.

Persians guarded themselves against evil by looking at the reflection of the new moon in a polished piece of turquoise.

In medieval Europe the stone was thought to change color when its wearer was ill or in danger.

Turquoise was even believed to indicate the passage of time: if a nugget was suspended from a cord held between the thumb and index finger near a glass, the slightest movement was said to mark the hour.

Victorian jewelry makers rediscovered the magic of turquoise. "In the 19th century turquoise became very popular. Every monarch had a piece of turquoise in his or her crown along with diamonds, rubies and emeralds," says Grimes.

Fortunately, turquoise was a stone that could be afforded by many. The vivid color of turquoise created a striking contrast to the dark clothing worn by many Victorian women. "It's a beautiful color that enhances any skin tone," says Grimes.

Antique turquoise jewelry is still surprisingly inexpensive. "In general, one can buy a very nice piece of Victorian turquoise jewelry for under $400," says Grimes. "It is possible to find turquoise pieces that cost as much as $10,000, but those will be very elaborate or will have lots of other gemstones or heavy gold settings."

Early Victorian turquoise jewelry was almost always set in solid gold, but as the demand for turquoise jewelry grew, some jewelers began to create settings of less expensive "gilt silver" or gold electroplated silver.

"You'll see some pieces where the gold has worn away in places, revealing the silver beneath," says Grimes. "Of course, the piece can be regilt, but the worn pieces have a lovely soft look that some people prefer to the brighter solid golds."

"Victorian turquoise wasn't high-styled jewelry," says Janet Mavec, a New York antique jewelry dealer. "It suited the newly-wealthy middle class as a way to express themselves without being terribly formal."

Nineteenth-century jewelers favored Persian stones — still considered some of the world's finest - for their uniform, intense color and ability to take a high polish. Unlike Egyptian and American turquoise, which often has a green cast, Persian turquoise is a clear, intense pale to deep blue. The word "turquoise" itself is a reference to Turkish traders who supplied the Persian stones to Europe.

Although clear, unblemished stones and dark colors are the most valuable, turquoise crisscrossed with veins of some other material can be quite beautiful.

The centuries-old charm of turquoise never fades. "Turquoise is both more affordable and more informal than most other types of antique jewelry," says Grimes.

Wonderbra has finally arrived

By Meredith Moss
N.Y. Times News Service

DAYTON, Ohio — The company that brought us great cheesecake in the '50s is at it again.

Sara Lee has introduced the Wonderbra.

More heralded than the arrival of Princess Di (and, who knows, maybe even princesses need uplifting?), the United Kingdom's highly touted brassiere has reached our shores and is now being unveiled throughout the nation.

Daytonians will rise to the occasion with appropriate fanfare. At Elder-Beerman's Fairfield Mall store today, models wearing evening gowns over Wonderbras arrived in limousines at 10 a.m. Like Cinderella's fairy godmother, Sara Lee Intimates — and other major manufacturers engaged in this battle of the bulge — promise to make wishes come true. It's about how we look when we finally arrive at the ball in our low-cut gown. We're talking pumpkins.

THE IDEA of a cup that runneth over isn't so innovative. Look at "Dangerous Liaisons," "Gone with the Wind." Look at Marilyn Monroe, Jayne Mansfield. Frederick's of Hollywood introduced its "Rising Star" push-up bra in 1948.

"Cleavage isn't new," says Karen Bromley of New York's Intimate Apparel Council, a trade organization of designers and manufacturers.

What is new, she says, is the amount of promotion that's been devoted to today's version of the push-up bra and the confidence of the women who are buying it.

"Today's woman wants to feel sensual and feminine," says Bromley, who observes that most business women no longer feel obliged to dress like men to achieve success.

Though a flat-chested Twiggy was the rage in the '60s and waiflike Kate Moss is the supermodel of the '90s, fashion designers are filling their runways with low-cut suits, strapless evening gowns and — bosoms. Granted, some of them are manmade. Nevertheless, curves are in.

WHY ALL the hoopla? Why is everyone going bust?

Why are thousands of breasts anxiously awaiting the opportunity to stand at attention and salute these miracles of modern technology?

It's partly the result of the mammoth marketing blitz, of course. Talk about making mountains out of molehills.

The Wonderbra has actually been around since 1964. It was created for Canadelle, a Canadian lingerie company (now part of Sara Lee Intimates) by Louise Poirier, a designer who wanted a bra that would enhance her own slight silhouette.

Today's promoters tout its revolutionary construction — each Wonderbra is comprised of 54 pieces and removable contoured pads — called "cookies"— that provide lift and volume. The "plunge and push" effect is accomplished via an angled back and underwire cups. British Vogue called it a "wonderful piece of engineering."

The product — and the chests of models wearing it — have previously been launched via helicopters in Houston and Los Angeles, motorcycles in St. Louis, marching bands in Boston, cable cars in San Francisco.

STORES CAN'T keep the Wonderbra in stock. Boston's Filene's sold 800 between noon and 9 p.m. on the day they were introduced. In New York City, bras sold at a rate of one every 15 seconds and some stores imposed a one-to-a-customer limit. At Cincinnati's Elder-Beerman store, every Wonderbra had been grabbed up within 48 hours of its Aug. 18 arrival. Now it's our turn.

When Wonderbra arrives here today, women will buy them for a variety of reasons, says Elder-Beerman vice president Melinda Bailey.

"If a woman wants to be sexual, it's not a big taboo anymore. There's nothing wrong with an individual wanting to wear something to please her man.

"It's different for each person," she says. "A bra may make a woman feel sexier or help her fill out a suit or blouse better.

Though some advertising promotes the sexual appeal of the bras (Gossard's U.K. ads cried: "Lock up your sons!"), Wonderbra spokeswoman Nancy Brennick contends the attraction is that women want to feel and look good in their clothing, a theory underscored by local women who tried them.

THE REALIZATION that various bras fit various occasions is one of the concepts foundation folks are hoping to promote. They're banking on the fact that a woman will come into a store to sample a push-up, then try on other bras as well and begin to build a bra wardrobe.

Promoters must be doing something right. The figures don't need padding. According to Sandy Cooper of the NPD Group, Americans spend $7.9 billion on intimate apparel each year, $2.6 billion of it on bras. "The market share of push-up bras sold in department stores in May 1994 was 12.8, an share increase of 1.2 over May 1993," says Cooper. "It's a fairly significant increase. Fibre-filled and padded bras, some of which are push-ups, represented 17 percent of the market in 1992 and have now reached 21 percent.

That means more American women are giving the push-up a boost.

DEAR ABBY

Prayer in mother's memory is comfort to grieving son

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Some time ago you printed a prayer to honor the memory of a deceased mother. I believe it is said on Yom Kippur, the holiest day of the year for people of the Jewish faith. Although I am Catholic, I cut it out and saved it. I believe we worship the same God, and we are all his children.

Van Buren

My beloved mother suffered from Parkinson's disease and Alzheimer's. She passed away on Jan. 30, 1993. I miss her terribly, although I am grateful that she is no longer suffering. I am comforted by a supportive family and caring friends, and that prayer. I read it every day and it brings me a little peace.

Would you please print it again, Abby? I'm sure it would bring others the peace of mind that it has for me. The title you gave it was "In Memory of a Mother." — LARRY ZAGOTA, AGOURA HILLS, CALIF.

DEAR LARRY: Please accept my deepest sympathy on the loss of your beloved mother. The prayer came from my Union Home Prayer Book and is recited by Jews on Yom Kippur (the Day of Atonement) to honor the memory of a deceased mother:

IN MEMORY OF A MOTHER

"I remember thee in this solemn hour, my dear mother. I remember the days when thou didst dwell on earth, and thy tender love watched over me like a guardian angel. Thou has gone from me, but the bond which unites our souls can never be severed; thine image lives within my heart. May the merciful Father reward thee for the faithfulness and kindness thou hast ever shown me; may He lift up the light of his countenance upon thee and grant thee eternal peace! Amen."

DEAR ABBY: What's with this new practice of sending wedding invitations separately to children for a wedding that is 2,000 miles away?

Our 13- and 15-year-olds received their own invitations, which caused problems for us. They asked why they couldn't go by themselves and wanted me to buy three presents instead of one!

To add to the uncomfortable situation, the bride sent a form letter to all the Easterners, saying, "Thanks to all of you who are making great efforts to come to the wedding." (How do you suppose that makes those of us who can't afford to make the trip feel?)

This was done by a bride-to-be from an upper-class family. She should have known better. — EASTERNERS

DEAR EASTERNERS: It was very thoughtful of the bride to have sent your teen-agers their own wedding invitations. However, they should realize that most parents cannot afford to grant them their every wish.

The bride's "form letter" thanking those who were making great efforts to come to the wedding could have waited until all of the acceptances and regrets were in.

P.S. I hope your teen-agers acknowledged their invitations with thanks and regrets.

DEAR ABBY: Please advise me as to the proper etiquette for a groom wearing a hat in a wedding ceremony held inside a church sanctuary. — BETTY S., CARROLLTON, TEXAS

DEAR BETTY: It is inappropriate for a groom to wear a hat during a wedding ceremony unless his religion requires that men have their heads covered in a house of worship.

DEAR ABBY: Charles (not his real name) is married, and it's against my principles to go out with a married man. I first realized he was attracted to me when I would see him around town or at a football game, and he would always give me long looks (stares). This has been going on for about a year.

Charles asked me if I would have lunch with him sometime, and I said, "Maybe," with a smile, so I'm sure he is going to ask me again.

My question: Do you think it would be all right to go to lunch with him? He is really nice, and I'd like to become friends (just friends) with him. I have already told him that I wouldn't go out on an evening date with him, but I see nothing wrong with meeting him for lunch. Do you?

By the way, I'm 20 and single; Charles is 24. — CONFUSED

DEAR CONFUSED: Since you know there is a mutual attraction between you and Charles, why tempt the fates?

Many a relationship has started with lunch and ended with breakfast.

For everything you need to know about wedding planning, order "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." Send a business-sized, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054-0447. (Postage is included.)

AT WIT'S END

Youth grows up, adults grow old

By Erma Bombeck

When my son was in the third grade, the teacher asked for a show of hands of how many wanted to grow as old as their grandparents.

Bombeck

He was the only one who raised his hand.

Later, he asked me why. I told him one of the reasons was that he had a grandmother only 16 years older than his mother and a stepgrandfather near the same age. The rest of his class were probably seeing grandparents slowed down by the aging process.

For some reason old age is frightening to a child. It has wrinkles. It's pale. Sometimes it doesn't have teeth and can't hear well. It moves slowly, and when it sits, the knees fall apart. It forgets things or doesn't relate to what's going on. Laughter does not come easily.

The person in the frail body used to buy your Girl Scout cookies by the dozens and chances on a pony she had no use for. She attended all the school pageants and plays (when you were a bad tooth or a dangling participle) and never missed baking your birthday cake. The day will come when the same person will have trouble remembering who you are.

Old age is all around us. We can't help but notice it. I have always been fascinated by the struggle most of the elderly go through to hang onto their dignity. It's almost regal. Some give up and the slip strap slides from the shoulder, and there is no bra to support the soft lumps around their midriff. They pad around in bedroom slippers and use their fingers for a comb. We allow them to become invisible because they are too painful to watch.

But most of the elderly show up for each day and must question why they're there. They fight loneliness, prejudice, abuse, abandonment, poor health, lack of money, and a past that is too painful to compare to the present.

More than 30 years ago, Jenny Joseph wrote one of my favorite poems, "When I Am an Old Woman I Shall Wear Purple." She was middle-aged and without children when she published it. What she predicted for advanced years was a bonus — you could break the rules that had been imposed on your youth. It's a beautiful poem, and she vows to spend her pension on brandy and summer gloves, sit down on the pavement when she is tired, pick flowers in other's gardens and learn to spit.

We all can't be Auntie Mame, but maybe the struggle to keep going sets us apart from those just occupying space.

I cannot believe I'm already wearing purple. I always said it was worn by the shroud crowd. I can only hope that someday when a third-grade teacher asks for a show of hands of those who want to live as long as their grandparents, my granddaughter or grandson will wave their arms in the air. Maybe they'll take me for Show and Tell.

Customer chooses own hem length

By Amy M. Spindler

N.Y. Times News Service

Most stores will have to suffer through an indecisive fall, stocking every hem length imaginable, but a tiny shop in SoHo offers an alternative. At Wearable Energy, 73 West Houston Street, Frances Colon makes the most basic A-line skirts and simple tapered dresses. She will also lengthen or shorten any skirt and change the fabric, the sleeves or the buttons, depending on what customers want.

CONSTRUCTION PERMIT

TO ALL INTERESTED PERSONS AND PARTIES:

You are hereby notified that City of Midland Animal Control Shelter has applied for Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission (TNRCC) Air Quality Permit No. 25626. This permit, if approved, will authorize construction of a Pathological Waste Incinerator in Midland, Midland County, Texas. The location of the proposed facility is 1200 North Fairgrounds. This facility will emit the following air contaminants: particulate matter, nitrogen oxides, and carbon monoxide.

A copy of all materials in the public file is available for inspection and reproduction at the TNRCC Odessa Regional Office, Air Program, located at 1901 East 37th Street, Suite 101, Odessa, Texas 79762, telephone (915) 367-3871, and at the TNRCC Central Office, 12124 Park 35 Circle, Austin, Texas 78753, telephone (512) 239-1000. The facility's compliance file, if any exists, is available for public review in the regional office of the TNRCC. Inquiries about the permit application and any information concerning any technical aspect of this application can be obtained by writing Mr. Greg Nudd, TNRCC Office of Air Quality New Source Review Program, P.O. Box 13087, Austin, Texas 78711-3087 or the TNRCC Odessa Regional Office.

You may submit written comments concerning the permit application to the Office of Air Quality, New Source Review Program in Austin. All written comments received within 30 days after the second publication of this notice shall be considered by the Executive Director in determining whether to issue or not issue the permit. All written comments will be made available for public inspection at the TNRCC Central Office in Austin. This notice is to be published on September 15 and September 16, 1994.

Any person who may be affected by emissions of air contaminants from the proposed facility may request the Commission to hold an informal public meeting and /or contested case hearing on the permit application pursuant to Section 382.056 (d) of the Texas Health and Safety Code. The Commission is not required to hold a contested case hearing if the basis of a request is determined to be unreasonable. All requests for a contested case hearing must be received in writing within the 30-day comment period regardless of whether an informal hearing has been held or scheduled on this matter. If you wish to request a public hearing, you must submit your request in writhing. You must state (1) your name, mailing address and daytime phone number; (2) the permit number or other recognizable reference to this application; (3) the statement "I/we request a public hearing"; (4) a brief description of how you, or the persons you represent, would be adversely affected by the granting of the application; (5) a description of the location of your property relative to the applicant's operations; and (6) your proposed adjustment to the application/permit which would satisfy your concerns and cause you to withdraw your request for a hearing.

Requests for a public hearing on this application should be submitted in writing to Bill Ehret, Assistant Chief Hearings Examiner, Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission, P.O. Box 13087, Austin, Texas 78711-3087, Telephone (512) 305-9087.

Before a permit can be issued for this facility, the applicant must demonstrate that all the emission sources are in compliance with all TNRCC air quality Rules and Regulations and all applicable Federal Regulations. This includes the application of "best available control technology" to each new or modified emission source and compliance with all ambient air quality standards.

"It's 4 U" Game Rules:

Anyone 18 years or older can enter except employees (and family members of employees) of the Midland Reporter-Telegram, Brite systems Inc., Associated Publishing Co., and their advertising and promotion agencies.

The "It's 4 U" Game is designed for people who live in the Midland and Odessa calling areas and no purchase is required to play or win prizes, although long distance toll charges may apply if you call from outside the Midland-Odessa calling area.

Look for the "It's 4 U" Game ad here and in the advertisers' service directory in the Midland Reporter-Telegram every day until November 5, 1994. Call 560-2400 and enter any four-digit advertiser's code listed in the directory. You will hear a brief advertiser's message and, if you are one of five instant winners chosen at random each week, you will win one of that week's prizes. If you are an instant winner, listen for details about claiming your prize. In order to claim your prize, you will be required to give your name, age, address and telephone number. The more often you call, the better your chance of winning a prize.

You can also enter a second chance drawing for unclaimed prizes by hand printing your complete name and address and daytime phone number on a 3"x5" piece of paper and mailing it in an envelope to "It's 4 U" Second Chance Game, P.O. Box 1650, Midland, Texas 79702, so that it is received before the deadline, October 30, 1994. Enter as often as you wish, but submit only one entry in each envelope. Entries become the property of the sponsors. None will be returned.

Each game begins at 12:01 a.m. Monday and ends at 11:59 p.m. Sunday. Each week for eight weeks ending November 5, 1994, five entries will be selected at random and will win one of that week's prize. The total value of all prizes to be awarded in the "It's 4 U" game will equal $4,000 or more. The names and cities of winners will be published in the Midland Reporter-Telegram Classified Ads page. No substitution of prizes is permitted. Only one prize will be awarded to each winner.

By entering, winners authorize the use of their names, cities or photos for publicity purposes. Winners may be required to sign an affidavit of eligibility and release. Taxes are the responsibility of winners. Void where prohibited.

HAPPINESS IS AN EXTRA

$350-$800 A MONTH!!!

As a Midland Reporter-Telegram distributor you're an independent contractor running your own small business. Depending on the size of the route(s) you can earn from $350 to $800 monthly, and in some cases, even more!

Actual delivery takes 1 - 2 hours Monday - Saturday, and 2 - 3 hours on Sunday, depending on the size of the route. Papers must be delivered by 6 a.m. on weekdays and 7 a.m. on weekends.

You'll need a valid driver's license, and a dependable vehicle. A modest cash bond is also required to get your small business started.

For more information call the Circulation Department or apply in person

Midland Reporter-Telegram

201 E. Illinois

688-2700

The Midland Reporter-Telegram has an opening on one of its few "Special Allowance" routes. This larger route receives a $25 check each Friday in addition to the regular monthly route profits. The route is in the Loop 250 and Midkiff area.

As with all newspaper distributorships, this opportunity requires a 7 day a week commitment (when you go out of town, you must arrange a substitute for yourself) and it is early morning work.

Newspaper distributorships provide great supplemental income for anyone willing to work early morning hours. These routes require a small deposit.
