Aircraft disappears off Soviet coastline

Associated Press

TOKYO — An aircraft believed to be from the Soviet national airline Aeroflot disappeared off the Soviet coast today, the government said.

The mysterious incident occurred north of Japan, in the region where a Korean passenger jet was shot down by a Soviet fighter in September 1983.

Japanese officials would not say whether the plane was known to have crashed, and they said they were trying to check details such as the aircraft's course, type, and altitude. They said they did not know whether it carried cargo or passengers.

An Aeroflot official, who refused to be identified, told The Associated Press by telephone that he had "no report from Moscow" on the incident and hung up. A Soviet Embassy official also said he had no information.

Soviet authorities rarely disclose commercial or military plane mishaps.

Speaking in English, Foreign Ministry spokesman Yoshio Hatano said, "The information we have needs further confirmation, but it appears that an Aeroflot plane was missing somewhere between Primorskiy and Sakhalin."

Primorskiy is a city just west of Vladivostok, the major Siberian seaport and naval base on the Sea of Japan coast.

Sakhalin is an island off the Soviet coast and north of Japan near the location where Korean Air Lines Flight 007 was shot down by a Soviet fighter on Sept. 1, 1983, after it flew off course. All 269 aboard died.

The Kyodo News Agency and Japan Broadcast Corp. said no Japanese military or civilian planes were in the area at the time the plane disappeared from radar.

In Washington, State Department spokeswoman Anita Stockman and Pentagon officials said they had no information on the missing plane.

Sources in the Japan Defense Agency, who spoke on condition they not be identified, said the plane vanished from Japanese military radar screens while flying over the Sea of Japan, north of Japan's main island of Hokkaido.

Shinji Yazaki, director of the agency's Defense Policy Bureau, said the plane disappeared between 8:00 and 9:00 a.m. (7 p.m. EDT and 8 p.m. EDT Wednesday).

Yazaki said the plane disappeared outside a Japanese air defense zone that extends 250-312 miles from Japan's coast.

Hatano said the aircraft was not over international waters when it disappeared. He offered no other details, and would not say how Japan had determined that the aircraft belonged to Aeroflot.

Kyodo news agency said the defense agency's information was obtained by the Self Defense Force's information-gathering network, the same source used to collect data on the downed Korean Air Lines jetliner.

A Transport Ministry official refused to discuss today's incident with reporters, but noted that one Japanese news report said the source of Japan's information was "U.S. military eavesdropping" on Soviet communications.

Marine Master Gunnery Sgt. Edward Evans, spokesman for U.S. forces in Japan, said he had no knowledge of the news report.

The lack of detailed information about the plane may have stemmed in part from concern that Japan's secret military monitoring capabilities could be compromised if too much data was divulged.

DA awaits word on gambling bill

HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

Members of the Midland County District Attorney's Office today were awaiting news on the status of legislation they feel would exempt carnivals from gambling restrictions.

District Attorney Al Schorre, Assistant District Attorney Robin Sams and Investigator J.D. Luckie joined the Houston Police Department Vice Detail and a San Antonio agent from the Department of Public Safety Intelligence Unit in Austin Tuesday to lobby and testify against Senate Bill 914, sponsored by Sen. Ike Harris of Dallas.

The joint bill passed the House as House Bill 1776, sponsored by Rep. Bill Messer of Belton.

The Senate Jurisprudence Committee, chaired by Sen. Oscar Mauzy, was expected today to vote on the bill, which would exempt carnivals sponsored by fraternal and religious organizations from state gambling laws.

"It doesn't cost that much (to go to Austin and testify), but if you let a bad bill pass through, it does," Schorre said. "This one was sailing right through until we interrupted their 'game' plan."

A lobbyist from the carnival industry, which is pushing the bill, was present, Schorre said. "They were pretty mad we were there. But my guess is Mauzy really had not gotten a clear picture about what the bill was about. We also visited with (Sen. John) Montford, who said he'd had problems with carnivals while he was in Lubbock as a DA."

The Midland district attorney's office began its fight for fair carnivals in April with the arrests of seven employees, including the owner, of Love's Carnival on promotion of gambling charges.

A worker transports the remains of a body found in the debris of a house occupied by the radical group MOVE in west Philadelphia Wednesday. At least 11 bodies have been recovered.

Mayor defends raid on MOVE

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The police assault that incinerated at least 11 people in the fortress of the radical cult MOVE came under official attack and was targeted by lawsuits, but the mayor again defended the raid and a poll indicated he had strong public support.

Police and fire investigators, assisted by federal weapons agents, found guns, ammunition, a mortar and a basement bunker Wednesday while searching rubble from the MOVE house, which burned with 60 others after officers bombed the home's rooftop bunker on Monday.

Police also found the remains of five bodies Wednesday, bringing the toll to 11: four children and seven adults. They estimated that up to 15 people were in the house belonging to the cult organization that espouses a back-to-nature, anti-establishment philosophy.

Amid the MOVE debris, a charred, soaked tablet bore the message: "The cops will be coming for us. Don't be impressed by their numbers. Pick them out one by one."

Police, armed with warrants for four of the radicals, assaulted the house on Monday with bullets, water hoses, tear gas and finally a two-pound bomb. The ensuing fire left homeless at least 255 people who had been evacuated Sunday.

As the homeless began trying to rebuild their lives, criticism mounted. U.S. Civil Rights Commissioner Mary Frances Berry said she may consider asking the commission to investigate the assault on the MOVE row house.

Two lawsuits were filed on behalf of the homeless. One, filed in U.S. District Court, alleged that the damage is twice the city estimate of $5 million and named Mayor W. Wilson Goode, city Managing Director Leo Brooks and Police Commissioner Gregore Sambor. It was filed by attorney Richard Greenfield.

The second suit, filed by attorney Anthony Dennis Jackson in Common Pleas Court, seeks $10 million in damages. It names Goode, Sambor, Gov. Dick Thornburgh and the unidentified helicopter crew that dropped the bomb.

State Rep. Hardy Williams, a Democrat representing the neighborhood, called for the resignation of Brooks, a former Army major general who directed the assault.

"I haven't got anything against generals, but anytime you bomb a house, it's about time they get rid of you," Williams said.

City Councilwoman Joan Krajewski called for the resignation of Goode's entire administration, including Sambor and Fire Commissioner William Richmond.

"They have been poor leaders and they should be removed," she said.

Goode bristled at the suggestion.

"I'm not second guessing ... one single person that I gave authority to act on my behalf," Goode said. "I stand full-square behind all the people in the field who made decisions."

Goode said no one would be fired because of the tragedy.

"The whole purpose of the operation was to preserve life. What happend was an accident. ... I am fully and totally responsible," he said.

A poll, conducted by WCAU-TV and Steve Teichner and Associates, showed that residents in the five-county Philadelphia area did not share the criticism. The poll, which carried a margin of error of 5.8 percent, showed 71 percent of those surveyed looked at Goode's actions favorably.

Meanwhile, city officials began backing away from their original statements that the bomb, designed to blow off the rooftop bunker and open the roof, caused the fire that raged out of control for four hours.

Sambor said Wednesday he thought MOVE members started the blaze 10 to 15 minutes after the explosion. Although television film shows flames immediately after the explosion, dense smoke did not begin billowing from the rowhouse until 15 minutes after police dropped the bomb from a helicopter.

Islamic group issues kidnapping 'warnings'

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The Islamic Holy War group has sent color pictures of six missing Frenchmen and Americans to Beirut newspapers and threatened "catastrophic" consequences unless alleged terrorists held in Kuwait are freed.

The stark "final warning" was published in Beirut newspapers today along with photographs of the men, kidnapped in Lebanon between March 16, 1984, and March 22 this year.

Saying it will not wait long for Kuwait to act, the group declared: "We shall terrorize America and France forever."

The photographs, sent in plain envelopes to the dailies, were accompanied by three typed Arabic-language statements signed by Jihad Islami, or Islamic Holy War, a shadowy group which is believed to be holding seven westerners hostage.

The three different statements were addressed to the families of the hostages, to the Rev. Jesse Jackson and "the international public, namely the American people."

It was not clear whether Jihad Islami meant it would punish the hostages if Kuwaiti authorities did not free the alleged terrorists, or take some other action.

Loeffler hires Gramm campaigner to study governor's race

By KATHRYN BAKER

WASHINGTON (AP) — Republican Congressman Tom Loeffler has taken a giant step toward a race for governor next year by hiring the man who engineered Phil Gramm's successful campaign for the U.S. Senate last year.

Richard McBride has been named director of Loeffler's committee "to explore the possibility of a gubernatorial bid in Texas," a spokeswoman in Loeffler's congressional office said Wednesday.

Democratic incumbent Gov. Mark White is up for re-election next year.

"Richard McBride is one of the top political hands in Texas and I'm proud to have him on my team," Loeffler, R-Hunt, said in a statement released by his office.

McBride, who lives in Round Rock near Austin, could not be reached for comment Wednesday afternoon.

Before running Gramm's campaign, he was a political coordinator for the National Republican Party.

Loeffler was elected to Congress in 1978. Before that, he was a congressional liaison officer under President Ford and chief legislative counsel to then-Senator John Tower.

According to friends, Loeffler is willing to give up his steady climb up the Republican leadership ladder in the House so he can move his family back to Texas.

Former Democratic congressman and unsuccessful Senate candidate Kent Hance switched parties two weeks ago and is rumored to be weighing a bid for governor.

On the day that Hance announced his defection at a Washington news conference — Gramm by his side — Loeffler was in the state talking to Republicans about the governor's race.

Gramm and Hance were fellow members of the Conservative Democratic Forum in the House, a group also known as the "Boll Weevils" for its support of President Reagan's economic policies.

When the Democratic House leadership kicked him off the House Budget Committee, Gramm switched parties and resigned, then re-won his House seat in a special election in 1983.

He ran for the Senate last year, soundly defeating Democrat Lloyd Doggett, who had defeated Hance in a close primary runoff.

Gramm deferred to Hance when asked at the news conference if he was encouraging a Hance candidacy for governor. But Gramm said Hance "has always been a leader," and said the Republican party operates on a "merit system" not a "seniority system."

Uncut heroin confiscated before planned sale to Austin resident

AUSTIN (AP) — Federal drug agents have seized four pounds of uncut heroin estimated to be worth more than $6 million from two Lebanese men who authorities say planned to sell the drug to an Austin resident.

The confiscated "China white," the purest and most potent form of heroin, has the highest street value of any heroin confiscated in Austin, said police, who estimated its value at $6.4 million.

Federal Drug Enforcement Administration (DEA) agents arrested Gabriel Youssef Rizk, 27, and Hanna Elias Mina, 62, Tuesday at a Marriott Hotel.

U.S. Magistrate Philip Sanders set $1 million bail for both men on charges of possession with intent to distribute heroin. Rizk and Mina remained in the Bastrop Federal Correction Institution Wednesday.

The agents seized Rizk's briefcase, loaded with 1,922 grams of estimated 95 percent pure Lebanese heroin, a drug agency spokesman said.

An affidavit filed in federal court in Austin said agents had information that Rizk and Mina were to sell the heroin to an Austin resident.

According to DPS reports, Burt's 1982 Chevy pickup was in the westbound lane of the service road about 7.6 miles west of Midland when it veered into the eastbound lane and struck a 1080 Mack tractor-trailer driven by Mark Andrew Valdez on the left front.

Valdez, 23, 4315 Esmond Dr. in Odessa, was treated for head and back injuries and released from Medical Center Hospital, according to a spokeswoman for the Odessa hospital.

Amendment would allow entry to plant wiretap as 'last resort'

Washington

STATE

AUSTIN (AP) — A Senate filibuster on proposed extension of the state's wiretap law came to a halt early today after proponents agreed to allow new restrictions on the use of covert entry to plant electronic devices.

Sen. Craig Washington, D-Houston, began the filibuster at 11:40 a.m. and kept the floor for 12 hours and 14 minutes. Washington said the present law is like using a "shotgun to kill a mosquito. It's overkill."

The filibuster ended at 11:54 when Senate leaders including Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby compromised on an amendment by Washington that would allow covert entry for planting of a "bug" only as a last resort.

Language on the compromise was drafted overnight to be taken up on the Senate floor.

"I'm glad we worked something out," Washington said early today, after his filibuster ended. "What I was trying to do all along was to help the innocent, but at the same time not handcuff law enforcement to the extent that they couldn't get at the bad guys."

However, despite the compromise, Washington said he will vote against the bill when it comes up for a vote.

Before the filibuster, Washington and Sen. Ed Howard, D-Texarkana, sponsor of the bill, debated the pros and cons of wiretaps, which were first authorized by the Legislature in 1981. The statute included a "sunset" provision requiring that the law expire in 1985 unless given new life by the Legislature.

In objecting to provisions in the law that allow covert entry for planting listening devices, Washington said "This is not a law-and-order issue. This is a Fourth Amendment issue. This is an encroachment on our right to privacy."

Howard accused Washington of overreacting. He said there are adequate safeguards already in the law to protect individual rights and that law enforcement agencies have shown a trend toward less use of wiretaps, but that authorities need to have the authority to use electronic surveillance when necessary.

Massachusetts man sentenced to die in girl's rape, death

BROWNSVILLE (AP) — A Massachusetts man has been sentenced to die for the rape and strangulation death of a 9-year-old girl.

A seven-man, five-woman jury deliberated 48 minutes Wednesday before agreeing that Emile Pierre Duhamel should die by lethal injection for the slaying of Jonette Edmunds of Harlingen.

Prosecutors claimed Duhamel, 38, of Lowell took the girl to a cornfield last July 1, strangled her and then sexually assaulted her. Her partially clothed body was found in the field the next day.

The jury had deliberated less than an hour on Tuesday before returning the guilty verdict on capital murder.

Dinosaur remains may be oldest

By STEPHEN J. SIMURDA

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — The bones of a clumsy prehistoric creature that lumbered through swamplands in northeastern Arizona 225 million years ago may be from the world's oldest dinosaur skeleton, researchers say.

The skeletal remains discovered in Arizona's Painted Desert are believed to be those of an early ancestor of the brontosaurs family, the largest animals that ever roamed Earth.

Scientists at the University of California at Berkeley announced the discovery Wednesday and estimated the skeleton is three million or four million years older than the oldest known dinosaur skeleton, approximately 225 million years.

The animal, about the height of a German shepherd, is believed to have weighed about 200 pounds and had a long neck and tail characteristic of the brontosaurs.

"It was rather clumsy," and walked around on all fours while munching on plants, said Bob Long, leader of the team of paleontology researchers that discovered the bones.

The site of the find, Arizona's Painted Desert, is a part of Petrified Forest National Park about 200 miles northeast of Phoenix.

Long, who has spent 20 years sifting through Arizona's fossil-rich parklands, said that although the area is primarily desert today, it was once full of streams and swampy lowlands.

"The dawn of the dinosaurs was a totally alien world," Long said. "There were no flowers, no birds, no mammals, no butterflies, no colors — only green and brown."

Until the Berkeley find, the oldest known skeleton came from a similar rock formation in New Mexico, although it was discovered at a higher level, he said. Long estimated the new find was three million to four million years older than the other skeleton.

Michael Greenwald, curator of the Berkeley Museum of Paleontology, one of the largest in the world devoted to the discipline, said, "It's the oldest dinosaur in the world, no doubt about it."

The bones of one complete hind leg, several thighs, ribs, vertebrae, and other large bones are preserved at the discovery site, Long said.

Brian Small, a graduate student in paleontology from Texas Tech University working with Long, made the find last summer less than two miles from the Petrified Forest park headquarters.

"We knew its significance instantly," said Greenwald, but the discovery came too late in the year to launch a full-scale excavation. Researchers from Berkeley have been working in the Petrified Forest since the 1920s, he said.

Greenwald said that although chunks of other bones have been discovered that may be as old as the new find, it has not been determined if they are dinosaur bones.

Long also said fragments of dinosaur bones found in South America in the late 1960s were estimated at the same age, but recent examination has shown they may be younger.

He said the dawn of dinosaurs came during the Triasic Period of the Mesozoic Era, starting about 248 million years ago.

ISLAMIC

The six men in the color photos were identified as U.S. Embassy official William Buckley, the Rev. Benjamin Weir, the Rev. Lawrence Jenco and Terry A. Anderson, the chief Middle East correspondent of The Associated Press, all Americans; and Frenchmen Marcel Fontaine and Marcel Carton.

There was no picture and no mention of Peter Kilburn, 60, a U.S. citizen also said to be held by Jihad Islami. Kilburn, a librarian at the American University of Beirut, was reported in poor health when he disappeared on Dec. 3, 1984.

The packages were the first public communication from Jihad Islami and the first time any conditions for the release of the hostages were publicly spelled out.

The letter to the hostages' families said: "For the last time, we wish to stress that all contact with your abducted relatives will be cut off and the consequences will be catastrophic if you do not act seriously and force your governments to intervene for the release (of the alleged terrorists in Kuwait)."

The statements gave no details of the number or nationality of the people Islamic Jihad wants released in Kuwait.

Seventeen men, most of them allegedly pro-Iranian Shiite Moslems, were convicted by a Kuwaiti court last year for a series of December 1983 bomb attacks against targets in Kuwait, including the French and U.S. embassies.

Five people were killed and 86 wounded in the blasts.

The statement directed at the "international public" said: "Kidnapping is not our hobby and it is not our habit to deal negatively with matters. We are a specimen of a tortured nation that has suffered numerous tragedies from America's tyranny and oppression ..."

The six kidnap victims in the set of individual photographs all appeared gaunt. There was no indication when or where the photographs were taken.

Three photos showed wallpaper of different patterns in the background, one was taken against a striped curtain, one had a plain cloth backdrop and the sixth was taken against a dark-colored wall.

The statements and photographs were delivered after gunmen on Wednesday kidnapped Irishman Aidan Walsh, 49, deputy director of the U.N. Relief and Works Agency that aids Palestinian refugees in Lebanon.

He was abducted as he drove to work in Moslem west Beirut. The Christian Voice of Lebanon radio reported that a telephone caller claiming to speak for Jihad Islami said the group kidnapped Walsh.

But John Rowan, first secretary of the Irish Embassy in Beirut told The Associated Press today, "We still don't know who has Mr. Walsh."

Islamic Jihad is believed to be a fundamentalist Shiite movement that follows the policies of the leader of Iran's revolution, Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini.

The lengthy statements signed by Jihad Islami said Kuwait was "an agent of the United States."

The statement addressed to Jackson said it answered an appeal he made last month to Lebanon's Shiites to help secure the release of the hostages.

BILL

According to investigators, the games and contests at the traveling carnival set up on Midland Drive and Illinois Avenue were rigged.

In addition, officers arrested a "kiddie-ride" operator on a murder and escape warrant out of Georgia and another man on two misdemeanor charges for possession of drugs.

Following those arrests, Schorre and Luckie went to the Midland City Council to request a city ordinance which would require carnival operators to have licenses to operate within city limits and have available mug shots and fingerprints of employees, similar to permits required for street vendors.

Luckie, who has attended law enforcement seminars on gambling investigations, said many of the "carnies" use their association with local sponsors such as fraternal and religious organizations as a means of ducking the law.

Although most sponsors get a 15 percent cut in revenues from rides, profits from the often "weighed" games go directly to the carnival operators, according to Luckie.

Some carnies also re-sell tickets, making it impossible to determine the actual gross, he said.

"The DPS intelligence agent brought in some games and gave a preview of how they work," Schorre said. "He told how the operators of carnivals claim that the bill is for the benefit of non-profit organizations and how, in all of the contracts we've seen, the sponsor (organization) is not getting a percentage off of the games."

If passed by the Senate, the bill would exempt the term "bet" in Sec. 47.01 of the Texas Penal Code from "an offer of merchandise with a value not greater than $25, made by a proprietor of a bona fide carnival contest conducted at a carnival sponsored by a non-profit religious, fraternal, school, law enforcement, youth, agricultural or civic group, if the person to receive the merchandise from the proprietor is the person who performs the carnival contest."

"We just hope it doesn't make it out of committee," Luckie said.

HEROIN

"We're still trying to identify one person. We know they met with him," said Ronael Steadman, agent in charge of the Austin office of the DEA.

Agents Tuesday followed Rizk and Mina to Austin from a hotel near Houston Intercontinental Airport, Steadman said.

Federal agents, assisted by Austin police, arrested Rizk as he left his hotel room Tuesday afternoon, while other officers arrested Mina in the hotel bar, court records said.

Neither of the arrested men, who are Lebanese, speaks English, according to authorities. Judge Sanders appointed an attorney for Mina, who he said had been in the United States about four days.

Rizk, who gave an Austin address, has lived in the United States 2½ years, Sanders said, and was enrolled in classes at Austin Community College.

About five years ago, police seized 26 pounds of lower grade Mexican heroin, estimated at more than $1 million, said Lt. Pete Taylor, narcotics detail commander.

He said Tuesday's seizure probably will not slow existing Austin heroin traffic because the white heroin represents a new drug market.

"We haven't had that much white heroin in Austin, and there's a big difference between it and the Mexican heroin, which is mostly what we get," Taylor said. "We just started seeing white heroin here last summer.

"The DEA probably just got into a group that was setting themselves up to do business here," Taylor said.

Proposed change may make it harder for farmers to get insurance

By PEGGY ROBERSON
Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON — The Agriculture Department is planning to turn over the federal crop insurance program to private insurance companies soon and some farmers fear they won't be able to afford the increased premiums.

Texas farmers may find it difficult to find or pay for adequate crop protection.

If premium subsidies are wiped out, as proposed in the president's budget, Texas farmers would see an increase in premium cost from the $7.66 per acre they paid in 1984 to an average of $30.58 per acre, said Claiborn Crane, agriculture coordinator for the Texas state office in Washington.

The crop insurance program was never popular in Texas until it became a "total risk" program in 1980, replacing the low-yield disaster insurance program.

While it was slow to catch on, in the past two years many agricultural banks have required crop insurance when borrowers planted a crop.

In West Texas, researchers from Texas A&M University recently found that a drought or hail was almost sure to strike some parts of the area every year. Crop insurance made sense, therefore, even at a higher cost.

Private reinsurance companies approve of the phase-out of federal crop insurance, but they oppose the end of premium subsidies.

State Sen. Bill Sarpalius, D-Canyon, last year offered a bill that would have made some state money available to supplement premium costs, but because of the budget crunch it failed.

At a hearing last fall in Angleton, several rice farmers testified they found it difficult to justify insurance premiums.

"Reinsurance companies have done a good job of marketing crop insurance," said Crain, "but there is some concern among farmers about how claims would be paid and services delivered once it is out of federal hands."

House OKs fine for not wearing seatbelts

AUSTIN (AP) — The House has joined the Senate in voting to fine Texans up to $50 for riding in the front seat without wearing seat belts.

The 79-56 preliminary vote Wednesday advanced the measure to the formality of a final House vote that would send it to Gov. Mark White.

House members praised the bill as a life-saver but criticized it as typical of over-protective government.

"Next thing after seat belts and next thing after air bags is going to be helmets in cars," said Rep. Ketih Valigura, R-Conroe.

The U.S. Department of Transportation has said air bags would become mandatory in cars in 1989 if seat belt laws are not enacted in states representing two-thirds of the nation's population.

The bill would require seat belt use by drivers and front-seat passengers in autos and pick-up trucks with a load capacity of 1,500 pounds or less.

Violators would face fines of $25-$50. The law would go into effect Sept. 1, but penalties would not be meted out until Dec. 1.

Rep. Rick Perry, D-Haskell, offered an amendment that would exempt more pick-up trucks. But the House voted 84-52 to kill Perry's plan to exempt passengers in pick-ups with 1,500 pounds of carrying capacity.

The West Texas lawmaker said the so-called "¾-ton pick-ups" are commonly used as work vehicles in rural Texas.

"They're used out in the country. You're in and out of them a lot," he said.

Rep. Patricia Hill, R-Dallas, said the federal threat seemed to be the only reason the bill was being pushed.

"We are really passing this bill so the auto manufacturers don't have to put in air bags," she said.

Messer disagreed, saying the intent is to save lives.

The bill does not meet the federal requirements because it does not include a provision allowing juries in auto wreck cases to know whether the parties were wearing seat belts.

Messer said the federal requirements may change.

Several lawmakers have said the proposed seat belt law has drawn more constituent correspondence than anything else this year.

Rep. Foster Whaley, D-Pampa, said, "People like to be left alone" and don't want to be forced into wearing seat belts.

Whaley failed with an amendment to exempt farmers working along highway right-of-way.

STATE IN BRIEF

Hearing will decide if Bush can vote in Texas

HOUSTON (AP) — A June 3 hearing has been set to decide whether Vice President George Bush is a resident of Texas and therefore entitled to vote in the state.

The hearing was scheduled after State Rep. Clint Hackney, D-Houston, filed a complaint before last November's election challenging Bush's voter registration in Texas.

The vice president lists a home in Maine as his residence.

A Bush spokesman, however, said the vice president intends to return to a Houston residency and continue to vote in Texas once his public service career is completed.

Bill would create panel

AUSTIN (AP) — The Senate approved a bill Wednesday that creates a 15-member commission designed to make state government more efficient and less expensive.

The measure was sponsored by Sen. Ted Lyon, D-Rockwall.

House OKs dump bill

AUSTIN (AP) — House members have approved a hazardous waste dump bill that would set waste reduction as the top priority.

A 144-0 Wednesday vote sent Killeen Rep. Stan Schlueter's bill to the Senate.

NATION in brief

Reagan hopes Duarte visit spotlights policy victory

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration is hoping a nine-day visit by Salvadoran President Jose Napoleon Duarte starting today will call attention to what it regards as the principal U.S. policy victory in Central America.

During a half-hour meeting with Duarte in late morning, President Reagan was expected to praise the gains in El Salvador's democratic development and in the Salvadoran army's five-year struggle to subdue leftist rebels.

U.S. officials said the situation in El Salvador has changed dramatically since 1981 when the country was confronted with a raging civil war, 500 politically motivated killings a month, a declining economy and an ineffectual, unelected government.

According to those officials, the Salvadoran army has been successful in combating leftist guerrillas in recent months. The level of political assassinations, they said, has dropped to about 30 a month, most of them committed by leftist forces.

Convicted killers escape

CHICAGO (AP) — Two convicted killers described as "great threats to the public welfare" were telling the government about planned jailbreaks before they broke through a 3-inch wide window and slid down a 75-foot extension cord to freedom, authorities said.

A nationwide manhunt was launched Wednesday for Bernard Welch and Thomas Colomb after they slipped through a sixth-floor window at the Metropolitan Correctional Center, a federal facility.

Welch, 45, of Great Falls, Va., was a prolific burglar serving a 143-year prison sentence for the 1980 murder of Dr. Michael Halberstam, a Washington, D.C., cardiologist.

Colomb, 31, of Rutland, Vt., was serving 48 years on voluntary manslaughter, armed robbery and other charges. Both men had prior escape records.

Welch shot Halberstam, 48, on Dec. 5, 1980, apparently after Halberstam surprised Welch as he burglarized the doctor's home. Halberstam, the brother of journalist David Halberstam, managed to leap into his car and run down Welch before dying.

Man fatally injured in siege

HENDERSON, Nev. (AP) — A former security guard who begged police to shoot him as he held a pistol to the head of his infant son was fatally wounded by a police sniper, ending a five-hour siege.

"Do your job!" shouted the man police identified later Wednesday as 35-year-old John Thomas Walker of Las Vegas. "Shoot me, man, shoot me, man."

Shortly after 3:30 p.m. Wednesday, as Walker held the baby in a residential street of this Las Vegas suburb, the police marksman fired, hitting Walker in the head. He was pronounced dead 20 minutes later at St. Rose de Lima Hospital.

Police said Walker fell on the infant after he was shot, but the boy was unhurt and released to his mother after a hospital checkup.

Pony Express spirit lives on in founder's home

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Kansas City's newly restored Alexander Majors home was the centerpiece in the 1850s of an 800-acre farm surrounded by gardens, grape arbor, apple orchard and smokehouse, with a commanding view of the prairie that spread to the West.

Majors, a founder of the Pony Express, made it headquarters for his freighting business, which is regarded as having played a significant role in opening up the West.

And today, tour guide Paula Smith tells visitors of the "eight wagon trains of 25 wagons each, pulled by six teams of oxen that would arrive and depart from the house every day."

Mrs. Smith knows her history well; she is Majors' great-great-great-granddaughter.

Majors, who built his reputation developing freighting routes westward from the Missouri River, formed the partnership of Russell, Majors and Waddell in the 1850s. Their Central Overland California and Pikes Peak Express became the route for the famous Pony Express and later for the railroads.

Majors was also Kansas City's first millionaire, whose wealth was apparent in his vast home. Glass was transported from the East for its 43 windows, says Mrs. Smith, one of many volunteer guides. With its architectural origins in the South, the double portico antebellum home is unusual in the Kansas City area.

Now restored to its original splendor, the house is furnished with both family heirlooms and donated period pieces, such as the rosewood grand piano, a wool looped rug, kitchen implements including an apple press and candle mold, and a now-rare "bride's basket" of cranberry glass and coin silver, a popular gift of the day. There is also Majors' dispatcher's desk in the south parlor.

"He was a deeply religious man," Mrs. Smith says of her forefather. "He gave his drivers Colt revolvers as a defense against Indians and snakes, and a Bible against moral contamination," she says as she points to a Bible still clearly embossed with "Presented by Russell, Majors and Waddell, 1859."

Nearby is a copy of Majors' "Seventy Years on the Frontier," which he wrote as an old man at the urging of Buffalo Bill, a lifelong friend and Pony Express rider. On the wall is a map showing the stations of those daring and adventurous rides across the West.

Mrs. Smith, 39, is related to Majors through his oldest daughter, Rebecca, who later took over the house.

Move forward

Now that Midland County voters have given commissioners a decision on how to proceed on the jail dilemma, it's time for the commissioners to move ahead.

Not everyone is happy with results of last Saturday's election during which a majority of those voting approved only Proposition I. That proposal allows commissioners to spend no more than $3 million to bring the county jail into compliance with Texas Commission on Jail Standards guidelines, along with federally mandated improvements at Culver Youth Home and a comprehensive look at long-range courthouse and jail space needs.

But voters overwhelmingly rejected the other proposal on the ballot which called for construction of a new $8.4 million jail apart from the current courthouse. That proposal had been strongly supported by commissioners and County Judge Bill Ahders.

Turnout for the election was predictably low with only 4,670 voters casting ballots. That's regrettable, but perhaps to be expected since voters were asked to vote for two proposals, both of which called for the expenditure of tax dollars for what many people consider "frills" for county prisoners.

Regardless, an expenditure of tax funds was necessitated simply by the jail commission's requirements.

All Midlanders should appreciate the work the county judge and commissioners have done so far on the jail issue, and the work they'll do in the future. But the commissioners should recognize that the voters of the county — at least the 4,670 who voted in last Saturday's election — want the county officials to proceed in the least expensive manner possible, at the present time.

In proceeding along that route, we urge commissioners to solicit the input from some of the concerned individuals who have committed a lot of time and effort to the jail issue in recent months. That input will be vital not only to completion of the current project but also to any forthcoming construction programs resulting from the study which voters already have approved.

With the efforts of elected officials and others in the community, the county jail situation can be resolved in the best interests of all concerned.

Lingering doubts

Gov. James Thompson of Illinois delivered a Solomonlike decision in the Gary Dotson rape case. Unfortunately, it's one that will have lingering effects.

The governor chose not to pardon the defendant nor to reject his appeal for freedom. Instead Thompson took a middle course by commuting Dotson's original sentence of up to 50 years for rape and kidnapping to the six years the defendant already has served — giving Dotson his freedom but leaving his criminal record intact.

It was a tough decision in a case that reached national attention when rape victim Cathleen Crowell Webb suddenly recanted her testimony eight years after the crime. Mrs. Webb, now married and a mother, says she lied about the rape because she feared she was pregnant after having sex with her boyfriend.

The governor spent many hours on the case, reviewing numerous investigative reports and taking part in three days of hearings where he listened to testimony from 24 witnesses.

The governor was convinced Mrs. Webb must have lied at the hearing. "I don't believe the testimony for the most part that she gave here," he said, "because it was either inherently incredible or flatly contradicted by other witnesses who had no motive at all to lie."

Finally, the governor concluded that Dotson was properly convicted but had served more time than the average for rape in Illinois.

It was a just decision, but unfortunately the case may become another burden for rape victims, instilling a lingering doubt in the minds of jurors in future trials.

Another View:
Need to sacrifice

We are in receipt of this Mailgram from James Keogh of The Business Roundtable:

"Editors: The Business Roundtable is making a direct appeal to citizens across the country to join with hundreds of thousands of others in its campaign to urge Congress and the president to reduce the soaring federal deficit.

"Specifically, the Roundtable asks all Americans who haven't done so yet, to return the postage-paid 'Halt the Deficit' reply card which appears on the inside cover of the May Reader's Digest.

"The Digest is collecting the responses and forwarding the names and addresses of senders to their respective representatives and senators as well as to the president.

"The Roundtable urges you to ask your readers to join the campaign."

About which, the following:

— Who would have predicted five years ago that Reader's Digest in 1985 would launch a nationwide campaign to try to force Ronald Reagan to stop deficit spending?

— The problem with the deficit is not getting people to say "Stop It" but getting them to agree on how to stop it. Almost everybody in America is willing to send in a stop-the-deficit postcard until you start getting specific.

Do you want to eliminate the deficit by raising taxes?

Abolish Amtrak and the Small Business Administration?

Eliminate the direct-loan program of Export-Import Bank, low-income energy assistance, student loans for the middle class, Urban Development Action Grants, REA loans, urban mass transit aid, the Job Corps, the Legal Services Corporation?

Reduce farm subsidies, charge boaters for use of Coast Guard services, freeze Medicaid and Medicare, cut subsidies for public radio and television and for the arts and for magazines like Reader's Digest, cut back the Peace Corps and nuclear energy research, charge more to get into federal parks?

Send in your postcards today and tell the president what sacrifices you personally are willing to make to balance the budget. Be specific. Don't offer to cut somebody else's subsidy; tell which one of yours you would be willing to abolish or reduce.

JACK ANDERSON
Overzealous whistle blower fired

WASHINGTON — A government engineer has been fired because he persisted in a vain attempt to save the taxpayers billions of dollars.

Jack Anderson

The engineer, Floyd Stanek, was fired last February, after we disclosed his determined efforts to get the Federal Highway Administration to use prestressed concrete on federally funded roads. The technique requires far less cement and steel than standard paving methods.

His dismissal notice, which had the sickening flavor of a Soviet political trial, accused him of undermining "the confidence of the public in the integrity of the government."

A report he wrote and sent to Congress "unfairly and injudiciously attacks the origins, legitimacy, integrity and worth of a program endorsed by the FHWA," Stanek's boss wrote.

It's hard to deny that Stanek was injudicious — perhaps even a bit rash. But if anyone was unfair, it was Stanek's superiors.

They hired a cement industry association to study the paving technique Stanek had advocated. It was hardly a surprise that the cement manufacturers recommended using substantially more cement than Stanek says is necessary.

Internal agency documents obtained by our associates Corky Johnson and Indy Badhwar show that Stanek's bosses were determined to muffle the troublesome whistle blower.

On Dec. 29, 1983, for example, Stanek received a memo from Richard E. Hay, director of highway operations research and development, threatening to charge him with absence without leave if he used government work time to criticize the agency. Among the forbidden activities were "self-initiated media contacts and other discussions and meetings not specifically authorized by FHWA wherein you present your personal views on FHWA activities, policy and procedures."

This was shortly after Stanek forthrightly informed his bosses that our office had contacted him.

In a bizarre interpretation of the situation, Hay accused Stanek of trying to intimidate others. "Attempts to intimidate, involve or implicate your fellow employees by sending them copies of your so-called documents of record ... shall cease," the director ordered.

Last June, Stanek drew a two-week suspension for using government time and property to prepare the report he sent to members of Congress.

Last January, officials rifled Stanek's desk and confiscated his computer disks. "The disks were not, as you contend, stolen from the desk in your office," Stanek was informed by memo. "Rather, they were removed from the government desk in a legitimate and appropriate exercise of FHWA's management authority. The disks are in our possession."

Highway officials say the notes on the seized disks show that Stanek was intruding in matters that were none of his business. This was reflected in his dismissal notice, which said: "That the FHWA or some other government agency may be concerned with such subject areas, as you have written, does not mean such areas are official duties of Dr. Floyd Stanek. Your official duties are those assigned to you or approved for you by your supervisor."

Stanek was even accused of soliciting a gift or favor from a potential government contractor. Stanek readily acknowledged that, in a letter to the inventor of the paving technique, he asked for advice on raising money to "expose doings that are not in the best interest of the nation's highway technology."

Stanek added that he had already spent $1,000 of his own money on one report, in which he claimed he could save the government $300 million. He was not permitted to attend the Transportation Research Board's annual meeting, where he had planned to distribute the report.

DISGUSTING DISCO: What's a poor commissar to do? In a complaint that could have been voiced by the parents of an American teenager or the mayor of River City, Iowa, the official Soviet army publication offers this hair-raising glimpse of decadence:

"A discotheque should assist in raising the people's moral and cultural level. But in a garrison officers' club ... you were hit in the face by the slovenly apparel — washed-out jeans held up by braces displayed over shirts; jumpers and sweaters tied around the hips. The girls were not wearing evening dresses but T-shirts, gym shoes, jeans, trainers and flipflops ....

"For almost the whole evening they played foreign songs. There was a projector displaying weak-looking, long-haired Beatles and foreign clothing fashions....

"Drums can drive people to a frenzy, depending on how they are played. Neuropathologists have confirmed that thunderous stereo sounds and irritations caused by lights can lead to psychiatric disorders. In girls it can lead to infertility .... Almost all the girls and youths who go to this form of entertainment smoke. What's more, some even drink before they go."

SPARTACISTS WIN ANOTHER: The Spartacist League has won a noteworthy victory over the Justice Department. Dragged into court, the department has agreed to stop saying — as the FBI had done over the years — that the self-proclaimed Marxist group believes "that eventual violent revolution to overthrow the present capitalist system ... is inevitable."

GEORGE F. WILL
Decency question not for judges

WASHINGTON — If you are enjoying your evening coffee, this column might best be read later.

George F. Will

A few years ago Barbara Tuchman plunged deep into the 14th century and surfaced with fists full of startling facts, including this: "In village games, players with hands tied behind them competed to kill a cat nailed to a post by battering it to death with their heads, at the risk of cheeks ripped open or eyes scratched out by the frantic animal's claws." That vignette, although appalling, illustrates something heartening and relevant to a facet of U.S. constitutional law: Human sensibilities evolve.

The evolution of standards of decency is relevant to the argument about capital punishment, which is in part an argument about the meaning of the Eighth Amendment prohibition of cruel and unusual punishments. Recently the Supreme Court refused a writ of certiorari from Jimmy Glass, who has been sentenced to die by electrocution in Louisiana. A refusal of a writ — a refusal to review — rarely makes news, and this one did not. But it detonated a dissent from Justice William J. Brennan.

Glass says electrocution involves "gratuitous infliction of unnecessary pain and suffering and does not comport with evolving standards of human decency." Louisiana's Supreme Court has said that his claim is without medical or scientific merit. Justice Brennan says, as he always does in capital punishment cases: Not so fast.

In 1888, New York became the first state to adopt electrocution. It did so for humanitarian reasons. In 1890, the Supreme Court authorized New York's first execution, making two arguments. It accepted the "historical" construction of the Eighth Amendment, arguing that electrocution is not cruel and unusual in light of contemporary norms at the time the Bill of Rights was adopted. And it said electrocution was certain to produce instantaneous and therefore painless death.

Brennan says the Court has long since rejected the "historical" construction, insisting that the words "cruel and unusual" draw their meaning from "evolving standards of decency that mark the progress of a maturing society." That such standards evolve is obvious. What is far from obvious is that judges are better than elected representatives at discerning current standards of decency.

Swerving around that difficulty, Brennan adduces testimony that questions the instantaneous and painless nature of electrocution. He relentlessly piles on details about the physical effects of electrocution, which he considers the "technological equivalent of burning people at the stake." He describes eyeballs popping out, flesh burning, tendons snapping, skin rupturing, the brain reaching the temperature at which water boils, the liver still too hot to touch during autopsy.

Brennan cites various Court rulings that the "cruel and unusual" clause forbids punishment that involves unnecessary pain, violence, mutilation or "lingering" death. He says electrocution involves all four and cites people he describes as "electrical scientists" who say that electrocution can cause excruciating pain of several minutes' duration. It is unclear that those scientists are qualified to make that determination, but if the question is truly open, it has a legislative, if not a constitutional, dimension.

Legislatures, more than judges, should respond to the evidence. And indeed some legislatures are uneasy. In some states, where community standards support capital punishment, legislatures are voting to abandon electrocution in favor of lethal injection, for humanitarian considerations.

The power of Brennan's argument is diminished by the fact that he will seize any stick for beating down capital punishment. But that fact about him is irrelevant to his argument, which turns on certain empirical claims that are, as yet, disputable. If established, they would establish, at most, the unconstitutionality not of capital punishment but of one way of inflicting it. Public-opinion polls confirm what the actions of state legislatures demonstrate: A substantial majority of Americans considers capital punishment compatible with civilized standards of justice.

Brennan believes that what is true about electrocution would be true enough about any alternative method of execution. As Albert Camus said about the guillotine, "The man who enjoys his coffee while reading that justice has been done would spit it out at the least detail."

Perhaps. But revulsion is not an argument, and justice need not be easy to gaze at. Brennan believes he has made a case for "measured judicial consideration" of the compatibility of the Eighth Amendment and one facet of American justice. Actually, he has used a judicial instrument — a dissent — to demonstrate the case for, and to initiate, a public debate that should be conducted and resolved by those responsible for representing community standards of decency: elected representatives.

ART BUCHWALD
'Award' ceremony on hold

January 2, 1985
Dear Freddy,

I know you haven't heard from me for some time. But I'm writing to ask you if you would attend a dinner in which I'm going to be honored as the "Good Citizen of the Year" at the Grand Milkwood Hotel on June 3.

Art Buchwald

I guess you've been wondering what happened to me since I stopped selling encyclopedias door-to-door in Bethesda. Well, believe it or not, I'm a hotshot banker in Maryland. I know what you're thinking. What do I know about banking after selling encyclopedias for the last ten years?

It's a business just like any other business. People are always looking for bargains and if you can offer 'em a better deal than the guy down the street you've got a customer.

Banking is really a snap if you know anything about human nature. The trick is to have a solid-looking building with lots of marble and a guard standing by the door with a gun on his hip, who looks real serious about protecting the customer's deposit.

Since I pay more interest than other banks in the area, the money just keeps pouring in. People are standing in line in front of my window right now with paper bags full of currency, scared silly our safes will be full up before they can open an account with us.

I don't have any problems attracting deposits. My difficulty is figuring how to spread it around. Heh, heh, heh. What I mean, Freddy, is if I'm paying 7 percent to the depositors I have to loan it out at 15 percent to make any money. Well, fortunately, there are a lot of people in America who are more than willing to pay more than the going rate to borrow money. Most of them were turned down by the other banks for one silly reason or another.

These guys and dolls are salt of the earth. They're real estate developers, commodities speculators, oil drillers, takeover artists and horse-racing enthusiasts.

Besides the money I make on loans, my bank also invests with go-go securities firms in Florida and New Jersey. They pay us interest rates you wouldn't believe.

So you can see I've got a foolproof thing going. The depositors are getting rich, businessmen are getting their loans, and the bank is earning a huge return on its money.

The reason I'm being made "Citizen of the Year" is I have just bought new uniforms for the high school football band and the people of Milkwood don't know how to say thank you. Hope you can make it.

Best regards,
George

May 10, 1985
Dear Freddy,

The dinner has been called off. I don't know if you saw it in the papers or on TV but my bank has been taken over by the state. What happened was this dipsy doodle securities outfit in Florida walked away with our money.

We could have survived that, but the news of our losses got into the papers, and suddenly the depositors made a run on the bank. It was a small run until the TV stations showed the people with their beach chairs and paper bags waiting to take their dough out. Then all hell broke loose.

Obviously we couldn't give everybody their money back since it was all out on loans or lost somewhere in the swamps of Florida and New Jersey. What with the unfortunate publicity the bank examiners decided to come in with their crummy little hand calculators. They found some discrepancies on the books, which they claimed were fraudulent but which were really mistakes in bookkeeping. They also said I took out several million dollars for my own personal expenses, which they're going to have to damn well prove.

Anyway, the governor is blazing mad and the people who lost their savings are kinda upset, so we decided to postpone the "Citizen of the Year" dinner until I could work out some sort of plea bargain with the attorney general. Besides, I'm now living in the Bahamas and it's hard to pin me down for a date when I can pick up the award.

City of Brotherly Love lives up to its historic reputation

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The sign reads, "It's not home, but it's all we have."

And for a 6-month-old child and a woman in her 70s, two of the 255 people whose houses were charred ruins after the MOVE assault, the temporary shelter was a haven from the streets and a sign that the City of Brotherly Love had not forgotten them.

Temple University opened its 11-floor Jefferson Hall dormitory, lawyers and carpenters offered their services, and food, clothing, and other necessities began piling up as the community pulled together to try to ease the pain of neighbors who became refugees overnight.

In the devastated west Philadelphia neighborhood, 53 homes were burned to rubble and eight others were severely damaged during the confrontation Monday between police and members of the radical group. The runaway blaze came after police dropped a bomb on the roof of MOVE's row house and firefighters were unable to move in because they feared snipers.

Damon Robinson, 18, one of 56 people staying at Temple, looked like a typical Temple student Wednesday in his jeans, red sneakers and white T-shirt — the clothes he was wearing when police evacuated his block Sunday.

"We were supposed to come back (home) the day after. It really was 'The Day After,'" Robinson said, referring to a television movie about a nuclear holocaust.

But Robinson, who plans to attend Temple this fall, had nothing but admiration for Mayor W. Wilson Goode. "He took full responsibility," Robinson said of Goode's decision to assume the blame for the destruction of the neighborhood.

Robinson said he returned to the site of his home, across the street from the MOVE house, and found "a big empty space. Just a frame with no front, no second or third floor."

"I didn't even know it was my house. A police officer had to point out 'this is your house right here.'"

The university tried to connect their previous phone service to the service in the rooms, offered free change to make phone calls, allowed them to use the swimming pool and gym.

A clothing collection bin was placed in the main entrance of each Temple building. Meals were provided in the dorm cafeteria.

Goode backs up subordinates' decisions

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Mayor W. Wilson Goode, facing criticism from a state legislator, the mayor of New York and members of the media, stands firmly behind subordinates who oversaw efforts to remove the radical group MOVE from its fortified rowhouse.

Goode himself received strong support in a poll of 300 residents, which showed a 71 percent favorable rating for his handling of the incident that has led to the deaths of at least 11 people in the charred house occupied by MOVE.

"I stand full-square behind all the people in the field who made decisions," he said at a crowded press conference Wednesday afternoon.

"I'm not second guessing...one single person that I gave authority to act on my behalf."

State Sen. Hardy Williams, whose district includes the devastated area, called for the resignation of city Managing Director Leo Brooks, a former Army major general who directed the efforts of police and firefighters in Monday's shootout, bombing raid and ensuing fire.

Goode replied that "there will not be any scapegoats" and said there would be no changes in his administration.

New York Mayor Ed Koch had said Tuesday that "if I had a police commissioner that was so stupid to allow a bomb to be thrown into a house, I would remove him before he allowed that to go through."

"Ed Koch should run his city and leave mine alone," Goode said at the press conference.

A survey of the city, suburbs and south New Jersey by WCAU-TV and Steve Teichner and Associates taken after Goode's televised address to the city showed that 71 percent gave a favorable rating to the mayor's actions. The figure was 74 percent in the city. The poll has a margin of error of 5.8 percent.

Rome paper plays up 'pyre in Philadelphia'

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — "A pyre in Philadelphia," read the headline in the Rome tabloid La Repubblica. "Blunder, American Style," trumpeted the independent Swiss newspaper Tribune de Geneve.

A Japanese newspaper summed up the fire that destroyed scores of houses in Philadelphia Monday with the headline "Police Drop Bomb on Black Extremists."

Mayor W. Wilson Goode had said he had feared the radical group MOVE would "blow up the entire block" to "make international headlines."

In the end, Goode was wrong about the source of the bomb: Police dropped it on the house that served as headquarters for the group. But he wasn't wrong about the result. So far, 11 bodies have been recovered from the charred wreckage of the MOVE house.

Television crews from Japan and Australia and numerous foreign newspaper reporters joined scores of American reporters, photographers and broadcast crews covering the standoff between police and the radical group erupted into a gun battle in the morning and an inferno in the evening.

"Our desk thought this was an astonishing story," said Trevor Fishlock, 44, a reporter for The Times in London who was on the scene Wednesday. "There are so many facets, so many stories to be told."

The Times featured a story of the MOVE shootout and fire a back-page spread in Wednesday editions, Fishlock said.

"It was not just a shootout, which you see from time to time. You had the bomb on top of that, then the fire. There was general astonishment at how it progressed."

In Italy, the story knocked the Pope's European tour off the front page. A headline in the moderate La Repubblica said, "A pyre in Philadelphia," while Rome's Il Messaggero had the words "Fire, Death, Anger" under a picture of the burning neighborhood.

Fire's victims try to cope with their losses

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — As police picked brick by brick through the rubble of the MOVE house, the neighbors left homeless by one of the city's worst fires tried to rebuild their lives.

The living victims of the MOVE conflagration shuffled in shock through a nearby gymnasium Wednesday, filling out forms listing their losses and needs beneath "No Dunking" signs at the Cobbs Creek Recreational Center.

Basic concerns such as where to live and eat competed with memories of what had been destroyed in the fire that left 255 homeless.

A mental health official compared the anguish to grief at the loss of a loved one.

Alan Watkins, a 30-year-resident, lost his model railroad.

His 73-year-old father, Earl, a 37-year resident, lost the sound of Tommy Dorsey, Duke Ellington and others in his collection of 500 jazz records.

For others at an emergency center, treasures included family photos, jewelry, the mementos of a lifetime — all of it in ashes because they were neighbors of MOVE.

"It's a lot like mourning," said Velma Carter, a mental health clinician and supervisor for The Consortium, a mental-health services agency.

"People dealing with this are reacting at first with shock. Then they'll go through stages of total disbelief, denial and anger. Eventually, they'll reach some kind of resolution. It can take six months to a year," she said.

Ms. Carter's agency was one of about a dozen set up in the converted recreation center about a block from Osage Avenue, where walls are all that remain of most of the rowhouses charred by the fire that claimed at least 11 lives.

"I'm absolutely numb. All I have is a few papers," said Amanda Dorsey, who lived on the block in west Philadelphia for 28 years.

MOVE co-founder calls current members 'insane'

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A MOVE co-founder who broke with the organization when it took a violent turn says he felt no surprise when the police siege ended in death for members of the radical cult.

"They're insane. They're out of touch with their senses," Donald Glassey, 38, told the Philadelphia Inquirer in an interview Wednesday. "The strongest instinct is survival, and they were even out of touch with that."

Glassey, a one-time campus activist with a master's degree in social work, founded MOVE in 1972 with third-grade dropout and handyman Vincent Leapheart, who Glassey said shared his idealism and a belief in a simple, peaceful life style.

The bearded, slightly balding Glassey said he broke with the group in 1977.

Thunderstorms possible for Permian Basin

From Staff and Wire Reports

A chance of thunderstorms, a few possibly severe, are forecast throughout the Permian Basin tonight and Friday, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Air Terminal.

Forecasters call for a 20 percent chance of thunderstorms tonight with temperatures expected to dip to the low 60s. Winds will be southeasterly at 5 to 15 mph. A 30 percent chance of thunderstorms are predicted for Friday with highs expected to reach the mid 80s. Winds will be from the east at 5 to 15 mph.

Wednesday's high of 89 was 12 degrees below the record set in 1937. The low today of 42 was 24 degrees below the record set in 1945.

STATE

Most of South Texas bathed in a steamy tropical air mass this morning while a mass of cool, dry polar air filtered into the Panhandle.

The National Weather Service said it was that mass of cool air that caused Wednesday's torrential rains across the lower Rio Grande Valley. By this morning, the precipitation had moved completely out of the state and flash flood watches and warnings issued late Wednesday had long since expired.

However, more storms — some quite heavy in the Valley — were expected this afternoon and tonight in South Texas from the Hill Country to the Rio Grande. The afternoon's temperatures were expected to be generally in the 80s and 90s across the state, with some readings in the 100s along the Big Bend.

On the weather map today, a warm front curved from the gulf coastal waters to Galveston, Austin, Junction and Del Rio. A weak cool front extended from near Wichita Falls to just north of Lubbock.

Temperatures were in the mid 70s early today south of of the warm front, fell off into the 60s over West and North Texas, and readings in the 50s were common in the Panhandle.

Winds were 5 to 10 mph across the state.

NATION

Low pressure over Wisconsin spread rain through the eastern Dakotas and upper Mississippi Valley today while showers and thunderstorms were scattered in the West and along the eastern seaboard.

Court puts 5A baseball playoffs on hold

HOUSTON (AP) — A court dispute over the eligibility of two Aldine High School players has taken the state Class 5A high school baseball playoffs off the diamond.

University Interscholastic League Director Bailey Marshall started notifying the 32 Class 5A teams Wednesday that playoffs in their classification would cease until the court dispute is settled.

Playoffs in the other four classes will continue, Marshall said.

Marshall made the move after State District Judge Marsha D. Anthony extended a temporary restraining order that prohibits the Aldine school district from enforcing the state's education rules that prohibit a student from participating in extra-curricular activities if he or she is not passing all subjects.

Judge Anthony is hearing the cases of seven school districts that have challenged the new statutes that went into effect in January.

The case involving Aldine is last on the list of those pending and the state playoffs can't resume at least until it is resolved, Marshall said.

Marshall acted under provisions of another restraining order obtained by the mother of a West Orange Stark parent which asks postponement of the playoffs if Aldine is allowed to play. A hearing in that case is scheduled Mayu 23.

Aldine defeated West Orange Stark last week in the first round of the Class 5A baseball playoffs using two players school officials said did not qualify under state guidelines that require students to pass all courses to be eligible for extra-curricular activities.

Bennie Dallas, mother of West Orange Stark third baseman Johnny Dallas, obtained the Orange restraining order. Mrs. Dallas said her son was ineligible at the start of the season but that she abided by the stricter rules and thought other students also should comply with those rules.

Marshall said the playoffs likely would be delayed at least until the weekend.

"We'll just have to wait until the courts decide," Marshall said. "But the big problem is when this is over with and we have to decide how to resume the playoffs. Then everything we do will be wrong."

Marshall said the UIL, which administers high school competition throughout the state, could decide to play games over a shorter period of time or complete the Class 5A schedule one week later than the rest of the state playoffs.

The judge began hearing the case of the Spring Branch Independent School District, involving Houston Stratford football player Nick Stamos, who was declared ineligible after failing a geometry class.

The student's father, Chris Stamos, testified that his son should be able to play in the school's final spring practice game Wednesday night.

The judge allowed the youth to participate in the game without ruling on the restraining order.

Stamos testified he did not understand the rule at the time it was implemented. He also said the rule was too strict and arbitrary.

The Stamos case was the only one considered so far in the day-long proceedings.

Rader apparently out

Mets' Valentine reports job offer

NEW YORK (AP) — Doug Rader is apparently about to be fired as manager of the Texas Rangers.

Rumors that Rader's job was in jeopardy were confirmed Wednesday night when New York Mets' third base coach Bobby Valentine said he had been offered the Texas post.

Valentine was to meet today with Rangers' majority owner Eddie Chiles, team President Mike Stone and General Manager Tom Grieve in Houston, where the Mets are playing the Astros.

"I've been offered the Rangers' job. Grieve gave me a verbal OK, but he said everybody has to agree. They might just drag it out until the weekend," Valentine told the Stamford (Conn.) Advocate.

"Tom told me that Eddie and (Stone) have to finalize everything and that's why they're all flying down here," he said. "I'm asking for a three-year contract. If they decide to offer me only one year, well, I guess that's something that could go wrong. Grieve gave me a verbal OK, but he said everybody has to agree. They might just drag it out until the weekend.

THE METS had no comment on Valentine's dealings with the Rangers Wednesday. Valentine played nine years in the majors, ending in 1979, with the Los Angeles Dodgers, California Angels, San Diego Padres, Mets and Seattle Mariners.

Reports began circulating early this week that the Texas management had decided to fire Rader. The Rangers, who were last in the American League West last season, lost their fifth straight game Wednesday night to the New York Yankees, 6-5 in 10 innings, as their record fell to 9-22, worst in the major leagues.

"Sometime this week everything will be cleared up, all the doubt, suspicion and speculation," Chiles said early Wednesday, commenting on the speculation that Rader would be let go.

Rader insisted Wednesday that he had not been officially informed of his status.

"I haven't been told anything by the front office," he said. "All my information is second hand.

"But if it's the worst, I can handle it. I'm just holding tight right now."

Last September, Rader's contract was extended through the 1987 season. Earlier this year, he passed Pat Corrales — now manager of the Cleveland Indians — for being manager the longest in the team's 13-year history, just 324 games over two years and two months.

In 1982, after Don Zimmer was fired, Grieve, then the Rangers' farm team director, recommended Valentine to then-General Manager Joe Klein. Rader was later hired by Klein, who has since been fired and replaced by Grieve.

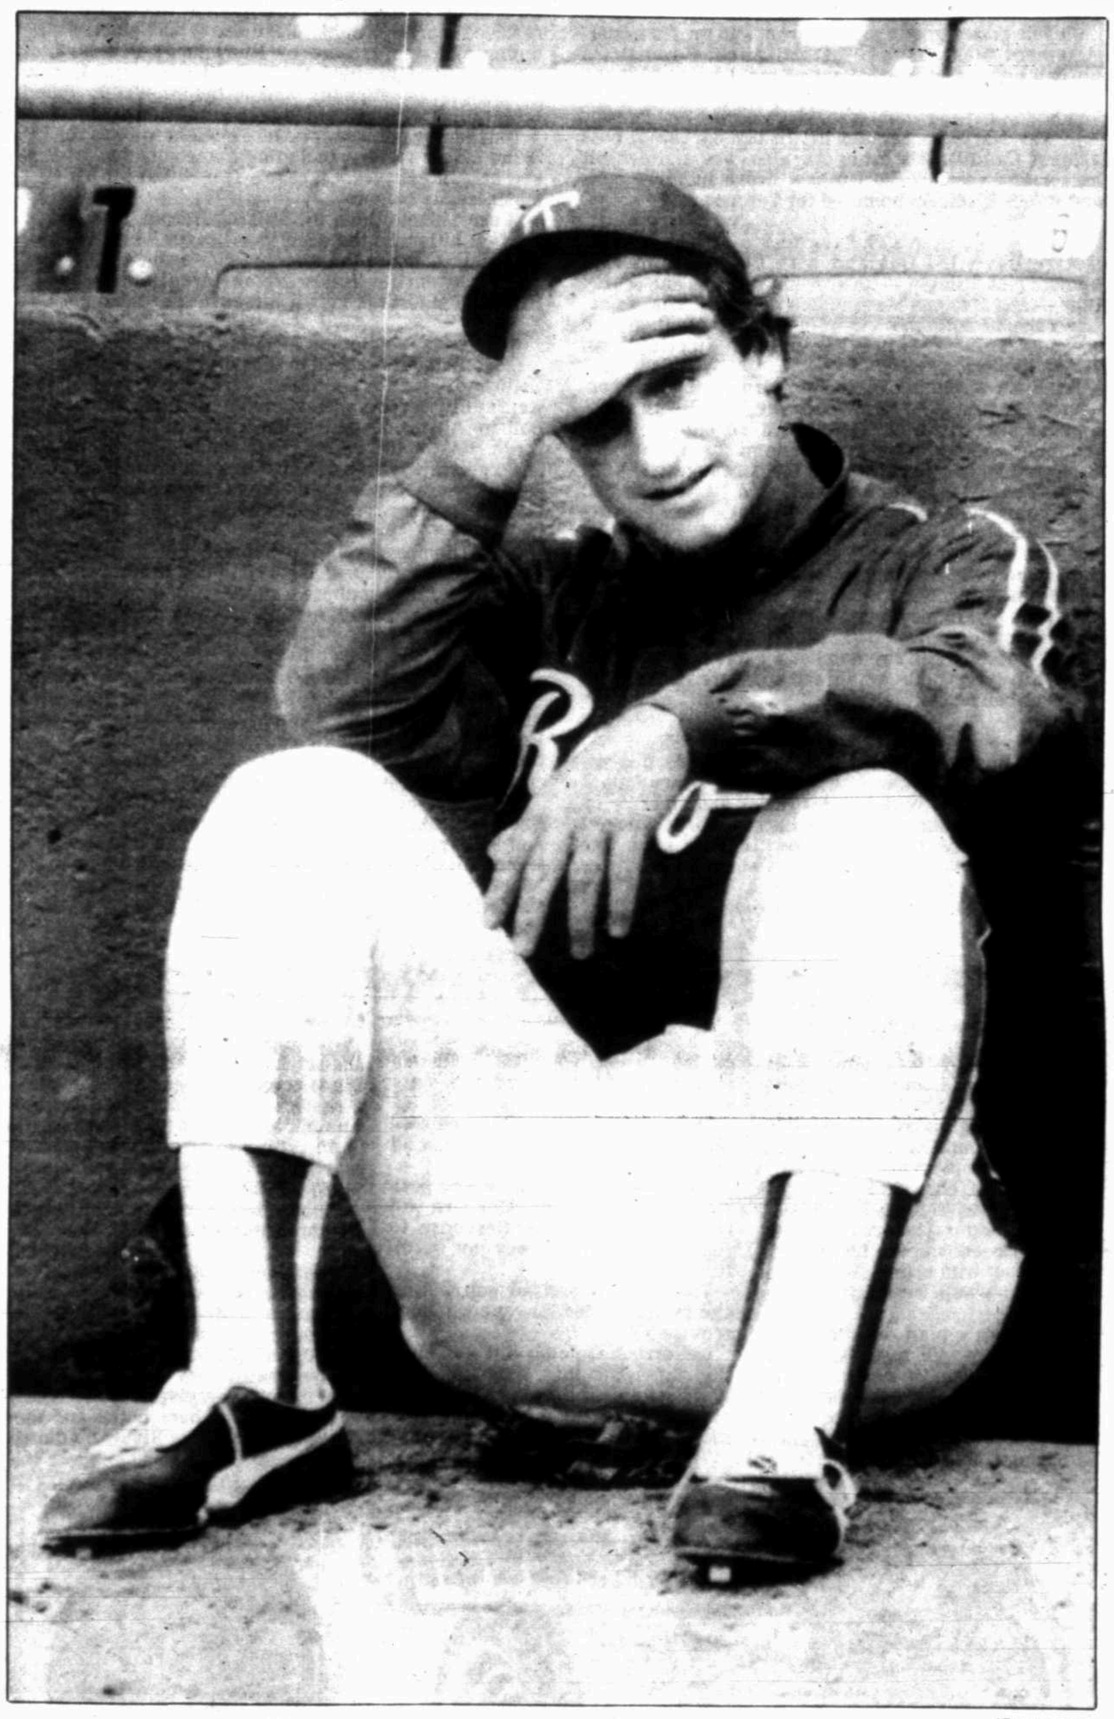

ZIMMER, WHEN he was fired, was told of the decision on a Monday but was asked by Chiles to keep running the team until a successor was named. Darrell Johnson was hired to replace Zimmer two days later.

Valentine said he would welcome the opportunity to try managing, though he would be leaving the team with the best record in baseball for the team with the worst mark.

"I have to find out if I'm cut out for managing," Valentine said. "I see managing as a challenge. And there's no greater challenge in all of baseball than the Rangers."

"Of course I'm interested, but I owe the Mets, (General Manager) Frank Cashen and (Manager) Dave Johnson a lot," he said.

Rader, 40, took over the Rangers in 1983 and guided them to a third-place finish in the AL West with a 77-85 record, an improvement of 13 games over the previous season. Texas slumped to last place with a 69-92 mark last year.

Beleagured Ranger manager Doug Rader may be on his way out as his Texas team is off to a 9-22 start, the worst in the major leagues. Texas lost again Wednesday to the Yankees, 6-5.

National title evades MC as Palm Beach takes lead

From Staff Reports

OCALA, Fla. — Wednesday turned out to be a back-breaker for the Midland College women's tennis team as they dropped out of the running for a national title here in the National Junior College Athletic Association tennis tournament.

Palm Beach, Fla., and defending champion Tyler Junior College took control of the team standings, heading into today's final round of play. Palm Beach owns 33 points while Tyler has 32. Indian River has 27 and MC follows with 26. The best the Chaps can hope for is third place, but fourth may be more practical.

MC's Karen Wild, seeded No. 1 in the No. 6 singles competition, will shoot for an individual national title today after defeating Patty Pharis of Jefferson State, 6-0, 6-1 in the quarterfinals Wednesday before nailing Cooke County's Lissa Rocha, 7-5, 6-2 in the semis. Wild will play Maria Johnsson of Palm Beach in the finals today.

MC's No. 1 and No. 3 doubles teams are still alive, but everyone else was eliminated Wednesday. Helene Lebeller and Sarah Swan defeated Temple's Salinas-Flores, 6-0, 6-2, in the quarters and will face Gough and Walker of Cooke in the semis today. No. 3 Jane Howe and Charissa Pruim def. Pease's Pennington-McLean, 7-6, 6-2 in the quarters and will play Nunnalley and Ojala of Tyler today in the semis.

Lebeller, MC's No. 1 singles player, lost to Palm Beach's Jonrak Srieub, the tournament's top seed, 6-1, 6-4, in the quarterfinals while Pruim lost to No. 2 seed Brigette Pardoel of Indian River in the No. 2 slot, 6-3, 6-3. Swan defeated Angie Flores of Temple, 6-3, 6-0, in the No. 3 slot, but lost to Sylvia Bailo of Indian River, 3-6, 7-5, 6-2, to fall out of contention.

MC's Rachel Hostutler won a quarterfinal match over Temple's Janell Roye in a No. 4 match, 6-0, 6-1, but fell to Tyler's Sophie Barlemont, 6-2, 2-6, 6-3. Howe, playing No. 5, won in the quarters against Pease's Robin McLean, 6-0, 6-3, before losing to Kirsi Ojala of Tyler, 6-4, 6-1.

MC's No. 2 doubles team of Hostutler and Wild fell in the quarterfinals with a 6-2, 5-7, 6-3 loss to Tyler's Olesen and Barlemont.

The Chaparrals went into Wednesday's play with high hopes of making a run at the national title. MC had all of its players alive, but casualities mounted quickly as the day progressed. The Chaps are now left with a shot at five more points for a total of 31. Palm Beach already has 33 going into today's play.

The top five teams in the tournament are either from Florida or Texas.

Red hot Caps slay Angels, 3-2

From Staff Reports

SHREVEPORT — The Shreveport Captains, once mired in the cellar of the Eastern Division race after a dismal start in Texas League play, are on a rampage.

Mike Aldrege homered to lead off in the bottom of the ninth inning to give Shreveport a 3-2 victory over the Midland Angels Wednesday night to begin a five-game series between the two teams. The victory was Shreveport's third in a row, sixth in the past seven games, and eight in the past 10.

Further, the Captains were the only Eastern Division club to win Wednesday night, so Shreveport made up another game on every other team and pulled to within two games of first-place Tulsa.

The Shreveport victory was the fourth in a row for Randy Bockus, now 5-2. He allowed only six hits, walked four and struck out none.

Billie Merrifield had a two-run homer for Midland in the top of the seventh. Everett Graham had a solo homer for Shreveport in the fifth.

Aldrege is also on a Texas League tear and is a big reason the Captains are so hot right now. His game-winning homer extended his hitting streak to 13 games and 19 of the last 20.

The two teams meet again tonight with the Angels facing the problem of cooling off the hottest team in the Texas League.

Since Midland was the only Western Division team to lose, the Angels lost ground on everyone, remaining in last place.

In other league action, Western Division frontrunner San Antonio held onto its two-game lead over El Paso by beating Arkansas 5-1, Beaumont defeated Tulsa 5-1, and El Paso pummeled Jackson 9-3.

El Paso finished off Jackson early, taking a 4-0 lead in the third on consecutive run-scoring doubles by Dan Purpura, Billy Joe Robidoux, and Glen Braggs. Robidoux singled, doubled twice and had three RBIs. Joey Meyer singled, doubled and also had three RBIs.

1933 — Cecil Travis of the Washington Senators made his major-league debut with five hits in a 12-inning game.

1939 — The Cleveland Indians defeated the Philadelphia Athletics 8-3 in 10 innings at Philadelphia's Shibe Park in the first night game in American League history.

1953 — The Chicago White Sox loaded the bases against the New York Yankees in the ninth inning, but Vern Stephens, who had 10 grand slams to his credit, was lifted for a pinch hitter. Pitcher Tommy Byrne, the substitute batter, hit a grand-slammer off Ewell Blackwell.

Stewart seeks tarnish eraser

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Payne Stewart, golf's tarnished golden boy, says it may be this week, next week or next year, but he will erase the nightmare that began here a year ago on the banks of the Trinity River.

"Hey, keep giving me the chance, and one day I'll finish it off," said Stewart, 28, prior to the start of today's $500,000 Colonial National Invitation Tournament.

The former SMU sharpshooter was ruled as one of several favorites in the select field of 102 competing for a $90,000 first prize and the red plaid jacket that symbolizes a Colonial championship.

"I know I'm going to win again," said Stewart, who lost the NIT title here last year under conditions almost identical to his well-chronicled collapse Sunday at the Byron Nelson Classic.

"It may be this week, next week, two weeks or three years, but I'm goin to win again," vowed the colorful Stewart, who won the Quad Cities Open in 1982 and the Walt Disney World Classic in 1983.

He brought a one-shot lead into the 72nd and final hole here a year ago but had to scramble for a bogey that took the tournament into sudden death.

Peter Jacobsen beat him on the first hole of the playoff, where Stewart again worked overtime for a bogey.

After squandering a 3-shot lead on the 72nd hole last week, he took a double bogey 6 on the first hole of sudden death and lost the Nelson crown to Bob Eastwood.

"This wasn't my week," he sighed after a lonely trek through the woods. "This wasn't my time to win. Maybe I'll have to win the Colonial."

For the man who brought pastel plus-fours, argyle socks and cap back to the links, and who won a record $288,795 last year without a tournament victory, that may be no easy task.

Curtis Strange, twice a winner this year and the Tour's leading money winner, and eight former NIT champions head the field along with Tom Watson, Tom Kite, Ray Floyd, Lanny Wadkins, Mark O'Meara and Eastwood.

Besides defending champion Jacobsen, the former Colonial winners include Lee Trevino, Fuzzy Zoeller, Ben Crenshaw, Bruce Lietzke, Jim Colbert, Dave Stockton and Al Geiberger.

The rose-ringed Colonial course is a 7,096-yard, par-70 bit of treachery built along the turbulent Trinity River and known as Hogan's Alley, a tribute to five-time winner Ben Hogan.

Narron's slam sinks Jays

Oakland soaks Brewers, 19-3

Associated Press

Catchers Jerry Narron of California and Charlie Moore of Milwaukee are prime candidates for American League Understatement of the Month.

"I was just trying to hit it back up the middle," Narron said of his pinch-hit, grand-slam home run off Toronto relief ace Bill Caudill. The clout came with two out in the ninth inning Wednesday night and capped a six-run outburst that gave the Angels a 9-6 victory over the Blue Jays.

"I really thought I called a good game," Moore said, although six Milwaukee pitchers were bombed for 19 hits and issued eight walks in a 19-3 loss to the Oakland A's, the worst shellacking in the Brewers' history.

California went into the ninth trailing 6-3 but Darrell Miller opened with a triple off Gary Lavelle and scored on a grounder by Gary Pettis. Walks to Juan Beniquez and Reggie Jackson brought on Caudill, who got Bobby Grich to pop out.

BRIAN DOWNING followed with a routine grounder that should have ended the game but was mishandled by shortstop Tony Fernandez for an error, allowing Beniquez to score. After Ruppert Jones walked to reload the bases, Narron batted for shortstop Craig Gerber and slammed his third home run of the year.

"It felt pretty good," said Narron, still on his understatement kick. "He's a fastball pitcher and I'm a fastball hitter and he challenged me. I knew I hit the ball pretty good, but you can't tell in this park with the winds."

It was Narron's second hit in six career at-bats against Caudill. His other hit also was a pinch-hit homer last year. Willie Upshaw drove in three runs and Rance Mulliniks homered for Toronto.

A's 19, Brewers 3

Mike Davis led Oakland with his 11th and 12th homers plus a single — he drove in six runs and scored four — and Dwayne Murphy also homered. The A's got five runs in both the second and eighth innings and scored off every Milwaukee pitcher, starting with Teddy Higuera.

Davis hit a solo homer in the third inning and connected again in the fourth following Mike Heath's double. He also drove in a run with an eighth-inning grounder and had a two-run single in the ninth. Mark Brouhard had a two-run homer for Milwaukee.

"We're playing team baseball," said Davis, who had nine home runs all last season. "That's the beautiful part. This club is capable of doing that. We're solid all the way around. When I slow down, it'll be others there who will be swinging for the base hits. I'm not a home-run hitter. I'm a line-drive hitter. I'm just trying to put the ball in play. I don't know why the home runs are just coming now."

Said Moore: "I can't remember a game like this ever. They hit everything we threw up there. Good, bad, it was unbelievable."

Twins 5, Tigers 4

Randy Bush rapped a tie-breaking, bases-loaded single with two out in the 11th off Aurelio Lopez following an intentional walk to Kent Hrbek and an error by Detroit first baseman Barbaro Garbey. Kirby Puckett singled with one out and Mickey Hatcher hit a line drive off Garbey's glove for a two-base error. After Hrbek was walked to load the bases, Tom Brunansky grounded into a forceout at the plate before Bush's hit.

American League

The Tigers tied the game on Kirk Gibson's two-run homer, his fifth of the season, with two out in the ninth inning off Minnesota starter John Butcher, who also yielded a two-run homer to Darrell Evans in the sixth.

Yankees 6, Rangers 5

The Yankees were held hitless by Texas relievers Greg Harris and Dave Schmidt after the third inning but Dave Winfield led off the 10th by drawing a walk and stealing second. He moved to third on Don Baylor's fly ball to deep left center, barely beating the throw. After Ken Griffey was intentionally walked, Butch Wynegar hit a chopper that first baseman Pete O'Brien charged but bobbled for his first error of the season.

New York relief ace Dave Righetti, 2-2, went 1 1-3 innings for the victory, pitching out of trouble in the ninth and 10th. Willie Randolph and Dale Berra had two-run singles for the Yankees, while Buddy Bell drove in three Texas runs with a double and triple.

White Sox 5, Orioles 2

Greg Walker blasted a tie-breaking, three-run homer off reliever Don Aase in the bottom of the eighth. Aase replaced starter Dennis Martinez at the start of the inning and was greeted by Rudy Law's double. Law was sacrificed to third by Scott Fletcher and Harold Baines was intentionally walked before Walker foiled the strategy with his fourth home run of the year.

Tom Seaver allowed four hits in eight innings for his 292nd career victory, including home runs by Cal Ripken and Jim Dwyer. Chicago's Tim Hulett hit his first major-league homer.

"I can't blame them for walking Harold. He's one of the best hitters in the American League," said Walker, who singled home the winning run against Cleveland one night earlier following an intentional walk to Baines. "I'm just taking advantage of the situations."

Royals 5, Indians 1

Steve Balboni cracked a two-run homer and Charlie Leibrandt fired a six-hitter. Jorge Orta opened the Kansas City second with a double off Don Schulze and Balboni hit his seventh home run. The Royals added three runs in the eighth. Orta doubled with one out and Balboni was safe on third baseman Brook Jacoby's fielding error. After the runners moved up on a wild pitch, Dane Iorg was intentionally walked to load the bases.

Rich Thompson relieved Schulze and Frank White hit a sacrifice fly to make it 3-1. The other two runs scored on Jim Sundberg's single and shortstop Mike Fischlin's throwing error on Onix Concepcion's grounder.

Mariners 7, Red Sox 1

Mark Langston held Boston to one hit in seven innings and Gorman Thomas, Alvin Davis and Jim Presley belted solo home runs. Langston walked seven but the only hit he surrendered was Marc Sullivan's first major-league homer in the fifth.

With the score tied 1-1 and two out in the sixth, Thomas broke up a pitching duel between Langston and Al Nipper with his ninth home run and Seattle's second hit of the game. Davis belted his third homer on Nipper's next pitch and Presley hit his 10th homer to start the seventh.

Cards steal at torrid pace

By BILL CENTER
Copley News Service

SAN DIEGO -- Whitey Herzog smiled when asked to define the offensive philosophy of the St. Louis Cardinals.

"Run 'em," said the Cards' manager. "To your marks, get set, go."

And go, and go.

Four more stolen bases Wednesday night — one short of their season high — gives the Cardinals 68 in 32 games, a pace that would put the Cards close to the major league record of 347 steals by the 1911 New York Giants.

HERZOG, OF course, is hoping for more than records. In 1982, the Cardinals ran their way to a World Series title while stealing a paltry 200 bases.

"They call them runs don't they," reasoned Herzog. "If the idea was to hit every ball out of the stadium, it'd be homers, hits and errors."

Speed has been the backbone of the Cardinal attack since Lou Brock stole a then-major league record 118 bases in 1974.

"We've got one of the biggest ballparks in baseball," Herzog said of the Cardinals' Busch Stadium. "A power hitter could go bananas trying to hit homers in St. Louis."

So to save on the club's psychiatry bills, Herzog has contoured his teams around speed.

The Cardinals last year topped 200 steals for the third straight season — the first major league team to do that since the St. Louis Browns ended a four-year, 200-steal streak in 1916.

So what if they were last in the National League in homers for a third straight season with but 75. The Cardinals last year had 160 infield hits — 12 percent of their total hit production.

"Speed can't be measured just in steals," said Herzog. "Team speed can get you from first to third on a single...it can do a lot of things."

For example, in their six-run first inning Wednesday night, the Cardinal baserunners twice hurried San Diego pitcher LaMarr Hoyt into a balk. Vince Coleman and Willie McGee both stole bases and Cardinals baserunners routinely took the extra base on any hit.

Coleman led off with a single, stole second on the first pitch to McGee and scored on McGee's single. McGee then stole second on the second pitch to Tommy Herr, moved to third on a balk and scored on Herr's single. Herr scored on a double by Jack Clark, etc....

Speed kills.

"Stolen bases are just one barometer of team speed," said Herzog. "Baseball people joke a lot and say you can't steal first. Well, we've got some guys who are going to make infielders hurry their throws. Somewhere along the line, we'll get a stolen first."

And a first in steals.

THE PRESENT league-leader is Coleman, whose two Wednesday night gives him 25 in 23 games. If Coleman's steals were added into his total bases, the rookie center fielder would rank second in the league in slugging percentage to Atlanta's Dale Murphy.

"If Vince gets on first, he'll get to second," said Herzog. Then he'll move to third, which he stole for the 10th time this season Wednesday night.

Two years ago, Coleman set a professional single-season record when he stole 145 bases in only 113 games at the Class A level. Last year he stole 101 in Triple A.

Ueberroth outlines drug program

NEW YORK (AP) — A memo has been sent from Commissioner Peter Ueberroth to major-league baseball clubs outlining his new drug-testing program, promising privacy, counseling for offenders and no penalties for a first offense, the New York Times reported in today's editions.

In the memo, Ueberroth reportedly expressed concern for "inevitable" contact with criminals and gamblers that would result from drug dealing.

Ueberroth's plan as announced would apply to all baseball employees except the major-league players.

Details of the commissioner's testing plan were not revealed in the memo, according to the Times, which attributed the report to an unidentified club official. The memo sent out was said to contain only guidelines.

The first guideline expressed concern for "the privacy concerns of all individuals."

The second stated that a first positive test result for an employee will result in no penalty. Response to repeated violations was not specified.

The third promised counseling and treatment for "anyone who may require it."

Ueberroth's memo did not mention the grand jury drug investigation in Pittsburgh, which allegedly has heard testimony from at least 12 major-league players.

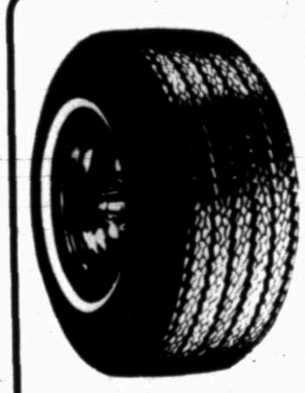

The Times quoted sources saying the actual number of players testifying is actually closer to 20. The May 20 issue of Sports Illustrated put the number at between 20 and 30.

According to SI, the investigation was aimed at suppliers, not users. Many of the players who testified were granted immunity from prosecution in return for their cooperation.

The Times quoted a club owner as saying he believed as many as 10 dealers were the probe's targets. The owner said he didn't think any of the 10 were players.

The grand jury has heard evidence from the players concerning cocaine deals in bars, hotels and the parking lot at Three Rivers Stadium, SI said.

Braves score three in one game

Associated Press

Steve Bedrosian figured the frustration of the Atlanta Braves couldn't continue much longer and he was right — barely.

"I know these guys are going to score some runs," Bedrosian said Wednesday night after Gerald Perry homered in the ninth inning to tie the game and Terry Harper hit one out in the 10th to give the Braves a 3-2 victory over the Philadelphia Phillies.

Those three runs exceeded — by one — Atlanta's total for its previous seven games, five of which were shutouts. Atlanta, getting 6⅓ strong innings from Bedrosian, won for just the third time in its last 11 games.

"That ball almost tore down the teepee," Perry said of Harper's blast into the left-field seats off loser Kent Tekulve. "Hopefully, this will get us going. We haven't been supporting our pitchers at all."

Philadelphia led 2-0 on the strength of an RBI double by Tim Corcoran off Bedrosian in the seventh inning and Mike Schmidt's run-scoring single off reliever Terry Forster in the eighth.

PINCH-HITTER Ken Oberkfell began the Atlanta ninth with a single off Larry Andersen, who then surrendered Perry's first homer of the season.

Harper hit loser Kent Tekulve's second pitch of the 10th inning against Chief Nok-Ahoma's teepee in Atlanta Stadium.

Tekulve said he knew he missed his landing spot in front of the rubber and should not have thrown the pitch.

"I don't know why I did it," he said. "I just went ahead and made the pitch.It was a hanging slider, and Harper jumped all over it.

NL Roundup

"I'm not a home-run hitter but I can hit home runs," Harper said. "That's got to be my sweetest one because of the losing streak."

Harper said Manager Eddie Haas told him to scoot up in the batter's box and pull something foul.

"He knows I never pull anything foul," Harper said. "That was like telling me to hit it out."

Bedrosian called the victory, which also was Philadelphia's eighth loss in its last nine games, a "pick-us-up game." At one point, he retired 13 consecutive batters, but the victory went to relief ace Bruce Sutter, 2-0.

Steve Carlton, who remained winless, worked six innings for the Phillies, gave up three hits, walked five and notched three strikeouts, lifting his lifetime strikeout total to 3,893 — 29 behind all-time leader Nolan Ryan of the Houston Astros.

Mets 5, Astros 3

Dwight Gooden, 6-1, the major-league leader in strikeouts with 57, fanned just one Houston batter in 6⅓ innings, but relief ace Jesse Orosco made up for it by fanning five in 2⅔ innings of perfect relief to gain his fifth save.

"I didn't have my best hard curveball tonight," said Gooden. "It's a good feeling to know that you have guys in the bullpen to pick you up when you don't have your best stuff."

Mookie Wilson had two hits, drove in a run and stole his 200th career base in leading the Met attack. Danny Heep, replacing the injured Darryl Strawberry for New York, hit his first home run of the year.

Terry Puhl drove in both Houston runs with singles in the fifth and seventh innings.

Cardinals 14, Padres 4

Jack Clark homered, doubled and drove in four runs and Andy Van Slyke added three RBIs as St. Louis routed San Diego.

Joaquin Andujar, 6-1, went 6⅔ innings to collect the victory, allowing 10 hits, walking one and striking out three.

The Cards launched their biggest inning of the year — a six-run first — off LaMarr Hoyt, 2-4, who gave up four consecutive hits to open the game.

Vince Coleman singled, stole his major-league-leading 24th base and scored on Willie McGee's single. Coleman later swiped his 25th. McGee then stole second and Hoyt balked him to third, where he scored on Tom Herr's single.

Clark, who would add a three-run homer in the eighth inning, doubled home Herr to make it 3-0.

Cubs 3, Dodgers 2

Scott Sanderson and Lee Smith combined on a five-hitter and Chicago survived two ninth-inning errors to hold off Los Angeles.

Sanderson, 2-1, who won for first time in a month, pitched 8⅓ innings. Smith got the last two outs to record his ninth save after Ron Cey's error spoiled Sanderson's bid for his first shutout since 1981.

Cey, who scored twice, slugged his fifth homer of the season with none aboard after two were out in the second inning to get the Cubs rolling.

He was replaced in the ninth by Chris Speier after an error on a grounder by Pedro Guerrero permitted pinch-runner Bob Bailor to score. Speier immediately booted Mike Marshall's ground ball to put runners at first and second. Smith gave up a run-scoring single to Greg Brock, but retired Ken Landreaux and R.J. Reynolds to end the game.

Pirates 3, Giants 2

San Francisco reliever Scott Garrelts was disgusted with himself after walking Pittsburgh pinch-hitter Jason Thompson with the bases loaded in the ninth inning to score Bill Madlock with the winning run.

"On the 3-2 count, I tried to throw a perfect pitch," Garrelts said. "That was stupid. I should have thrown the ball down the middle and taken my chances."

Madlock had singled off Garrelts to start the inning, went to third base one out later on a double by Tony Pena and scored after pinch-hitter Steve Kemp was intentionally walked.

Garrelts had fallen behind 3-0 on Thompson and worked the count full before walking him to make a winner of Pirate reliever Don Robinson, 2-0, who worked two perfect innings.

Reds 2, Expos 1

Cincinnati's Joe Price was interrupted during a meal and told he'd be starting against Montreal in place of Mario Soto, who had a sore arm. Price performed like a hungry pitcher, allowing just three hits over eight innings.

Making his first start of the season, Price struck out eight and retired the last 17 Expos he faced. Though he had little time to prepare for his start, Price said he had no trouble adjusting.

"I've been around long enough to be able to do this kind of thing," he said.

Eddie Milner and Dave Parker had two-out, run-scoring hits in the fifth inning to provide the offense for Price.

Ted Power pitched the final inning for his sixth save.

Pete Rose had two hits to give him a career total of 4,123, 69 shy of Ty Cobb's all-time major-league mark.

Jordan earns Seagram award

NEW YORK (AP) — There are times when Michael Jordan settles in front of a television screen to watch tapes of Chicago Bulls games and can't quite believe the moves that fellow wearing No. 23 makes on the court.

"I just feel like I play my natural game," Jordan said. "Sometimes, it surprises me. Sometimes, it amazes me. That's why I like to watch the replays."

Jordan's basketball repertoire dazzled other people as well as the computer which digests season-long National Basketball Association data to decide the Seagram Sports Award as the league's top player. He is the first rookie to earn the award, which carries with it a $10,000 check.

Sixers face two problems

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Philadelphia 76ers resumed practice today with at least two major problems to solve if they hope to get back into their best-of-seven National Basketball Association semifinal playoff series with the Boston Celtics.

The Sixers, who trail the Celtics 2-0, returned home for Games 3 and 4 here Saturday and Sunday. Only four teams in the history of the NBA playoffs ever have rallied to win a best-of-seven series after losing the first two games; none have done so against Boston.

Philadelphia's big needs are stopping the inside dominance of Boston's 7-foot Robert Parish and 6-10 Kevin McHale, and a return to form of the Sixers' outside shooter, Andrew Toney.

In the first two games of the series, Parish and McHale outscored the 76ers' front court trio of Moses Malone, rookie Charles Barkley and Bobby Jones 89-66.

And when the 76ers sagged to combat Parish and McHale, they were hurt by the perimeter shooting of Larry Bird, Dennis Johnson and Danny Ainge.

The 76ers, who split the season series with Boston, winning three at home and losing three in Boston, are concerned about Toney.

The 6-3 guard scored 16 points in the first game, but took just two shots in the first half, both layups. It was almost 30 minutes before he started shooting.

In Game 2, Toney was 3-for-17 and had five turnovers.

"If I'd hit half those shots, we'd have won," Toney said. "I was terrible."

Toney said he had some good shots in the 106-98 second-game defeat.

"I'd turn around and I'd be wide open. I didn't have to force anything. I don't think I took two bad shots all night. I just couldn't get anything to fall."

Dennis Johnson, who guards Toney, observed, "I haven't shut Andrew down. The first game he shot 7-for-11. By my count that's only four misses."

But the Sixers need Toney hitting about twice that many baskets if they hope to win.

In the four games he played against Boston this year, Toney averaged 13 shots and 13.7 points per outing. His high against the Celtics was 17 points.

Philadelphia Coach Billy Cunningham said, "The most important thing, and I've told him (Toney), is that I have confidence in him. We have not seen the real Andrew Toney. He tried to get it going, put the pressure on himself."

Forward Julius Erving said he intended to talk with Toney.

"We need him if we intend to win," Erving said after the second game.

Ewing loses family secret

NEW YORK (AP) — Patrick Ewing, Georgetown's All America center and the top prize among this year's graduating college basketball players, is the father of a son about to celebrate his first birthday, the New York Post said Wednesday.

Patrick Ewing Jr., who weighed 7 pounds, 13 ounces when he was born May 20 last year, lives with his mother, Sharon D. Stanford, and grandmother in Massaschusetts, according to the basketball star's father.

"When he (Patrick) comes home, the baby stays with him," Carl Ewing Sr. told the Post Tuesday night.

The newspaper said the child was registered for birth certificate No. 72202 on April 19, 1985 and the witness was listed as "L. Rice, MD."

The birth, which has been a closely-kept family secret, was filed with Boston's Registry Division and stamped officially by the city's acting Registrar, but the birth record is not public, the Post said.

"He's fun and exciting," said Stanford of her son. "He's a very friendly baby who caters to everybody. He doesn't have a problem with anybody. He's very loveable."

Stanford, who is 21, and is 5-foot-8 and 120 pounds, attended Morgan State University in Baltimore for a year where she studied accounting.

Of her relationship with the 7-foot Ewing, she said, "We're still friends, he's a great guy," and she added that Ewing "loves him (his son) to death."

She said that while she will not attend Ewing's graduation from Georgetown, their son will.

While the player was not quoted in the Post story, his father said, "Sometimes she (the child's mother) brings him by. I saw him about a month ago ... the baby is well cared for."

He said he could not give any information about the present relationship between his son and Stanford.

Lakers lose psychological edge

Sports Analysis

LOS ANGELES — Are you ready for a Lakers-Boston Celtics series for the championship of the National Basketball Association?

You may be ready. The Lakers are not.

They proved this point rather conclusively Tuesday night in the Forum when they lost their composure and a rather important basketball game to the Denver Nuggets, 136-114.

Suddenly, surprisingly, alarmingly, this semifinal series in the NBA's playoff tournament is even. Each team has won once at the Forum.

"Well, we've lost the home court advantage," said Pat Riley, the Laker coach.

HIS PLAYERS lost a lot more than that. They lost the psychological edge they had been building by playing championship basketball during recent months.

But now thoughts of the manner in which the Celtics mugged them to win the last NBA crown must be discussed.

"We know what the message was," Riley said. "We'll respond."

They'll have to if they are going to get past Denver, much less battling Boston (or Philadelphia and a rather rough fellow named Moses Malone).

Discussions about this game will focus on the early departure of Kareem Abdul-Jabbar.

The Lakers were without Abdul-Jabbar because he became more interested in fighting Danny Schayes, the third Denver center to lean on him during the long evening, than he was in playing basketball.

Actually, he was more interested in yelling at Schayes than hitting him, which would go right along with the Laker style of play against the Nuggets.

In the game, Abdul-Jabbar went after Schayes. Game official Wally Rooney jumped in his way. Abdul-Jabbar pushed Rooney out of the way. This earned him a technical foul.

Abdul-Jabbar completely lost his dignity seconds later. Schayes had elbowed Magic Johnson under the Laker basket. When play stopped at the Denver end of the court, Johnson let Schayes know that was not very nice. Abdul-Jabbar interrupted the conversation by jumping Schayes from behind. This earned him his second technical and automatic ejection from the game.

Could the Lakers have pulled this one out if Abdul-Jabbar had been around for the finish? Probably not. They were behind by 16 when he was banished. But strange things happen out there on the basketball court, as Denver proved by taking the play away from the Lakers.

THE OUTCOME was determined much earlier. The Nuggets let the Lakers run and gun them down in the opener, 139-122. This time they were dedicated to holding more than a foot-race/shooting contest. They changed to a bump-and-run-and-shoot game plan.

What they did was not exactly complicated. They had their centers — Dan Issel, Wayne Cooper and Schayes — leaning against Abdul-Jabbar the moment he wandered near the basket. Then, whenever a pass went in to him, they would send one, two and even three players scrambling and scratching for the ball.

This gave the Lakers two choices: (1) Pop the ball back outside and try to win with long-range shots; (2) Hammer away inside.

They selected the path of least resistance and tried to shoot over the Nuggets. It did not work. They shot only 47 percent. This from the team that in the previous game shot 64 percent.

"We cannot rely on our offense all the time," said a calm Riley after the game.

He wants and needs a harder defensive effort.

The effort was lacking because it's been too easy for the Lakers for too long. They played the game as if they could take charge whenever they got the urge.

It looked for a while as if this would be the plot. The Nuggets were ahead early in the game. Then the Lakers got moving. Before you could blink, they were on top by seven. Take that, Denver.

Only the Nuggets refused to take anything. They ran off 10 points and were on top by three at the end of the first quarter.

The Lakers wilted under the pressure. Oh, they managed to pull even late in the third quarter. But they still seemed flat. Abdul-Jabbar and Johnson seemed to be spending as much time complaining to the officials about calls as they were playing basketball.

"Maybe this will open our eyes," Riley said.

It had better.

"It was more physical than the first game," said Larry Spriggs, one of the few physical Lakers.

How physical?

"Pretty physical," Spriggs said.

Would a game against Boston be more physical than this?

"Yes," Spriggs said. "We'd better get used to it because they'll play a lot more physical than this."

Bridge terminology is graphic. Some of it is borrowed from sports; some of it, according to Ely Culbertson, has sexual overtones. When you sever communications between defenders by sacrificing a trick you don't need to lose, it is known as a "Scissors Coup." Here's an example from the Spring North American Championships, held in Montreal.

Taking advantage of the favorable vulnerability, East-West were busy in the auction. Note that five hearts doubled would have been set only three tricks for 500 points—a good save against the vulnerable game that North-South can make. Not surprisingly, however, South thought better of his hand for offensive rather than defensive purposes, so he pulled to five spades. Unfortunately, so much of the opener's strength was in the opponents' suit that the final contract was perilous.

West led his singleton diamond and the declarer, Joe Stepanovic of Worcester, Massachusetts, saw that there was a danger of losing the two black aces and a diamond ruff. Since West's lead was almost surely a singleton, South realized he couldn't afford to start on trumps—it was certain that East would be able to gain the lead in one of the black suits to give his partner a ruff.

Since there was a shortage of entries to dummy, declarer temporarily gave up on the chance of a free finese in diamonds in favor of winning the ace. On the ace-king of hearts he sluffed two of his clubs, then led the jack of hearts. When East played low, declarer sluffed his last club. Now the defenders could get no more than the ace of spades, for West had no way to get to his partner's hand for a diamond ruff. Later in the play declarer crossed to the table with a trump to take the diamond finesse for his contract.

Security tight at Springsteen reception

LAKE OSWEGO, Ore. (AP) — Rock star Bruce Springsteen and his new wife, Julianne, held their wedding reception Wednesday under sun-washed skies at the country estate of a friend of the bride's family.

Guests leaving the gathering said about 100 people attended what was essentially a traditional reception, complete with wedding cake and champagne.

The party, which began at noon, was held under tight security, with an officer not allowing anyone near the house unless his or her name was included on the guest list.

After the party, the bride's father, William L. Phillips Sr., said the wedding initially was scheduled for 11 a.m. Wednesday, with the reception to follow at noon. But the couple was married Monday night in a secret ceremony.

"You can see we just did everything backwards," he said. He added that the schedule change was ordered by Springsteen's manager, Jon Landau, who said the situation was "getting out of control" and was turning into a "three-ring circus."

"He said something to me today that maybe he doesn't want me to say, but Bruce said, 'I give my entire energy to the public and those who follow me. This is different. Things that are private should be kept private.'"

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — People who are doing well in difficult situations should be sought out by the news media to provide young people with "new heroes," evangelist Billy Graham said.

Graham, who opens a weeklong crusade in Hartford on Sunday, spoke Wednesday of helping the poor in places like the New York City borough of the Bronx, which he said looked during a recent visit like it had been hit by an atomic bomb.

He said that in one of the poorest churches there he found an 80-year-old man who was willing to preach where no young priest would go.

"There are Mother Teresas in almost every city in America," Graham said, referring to the 1979 Nobel Peace Prize winner. "They're unknown, unnoticed, unheralded."

He said the news media should search out such people to provide American youth with "new heroes and some new type of people."

Villechaize

BURBANK, Calif. (AP) — Herve Villechaize, who played Tattoo on the television show "Fantasy Island," said he went to a hospital with a gun in his bag because he had stress-related pain from a series of threatening phone calls.

"Somebody's doing a number on me, they're scaring me every night," Villechaize said Wednesday.

"For the past month, I've been getting phone calls in my office and my house, threatening phone calls. When I call the police, they say, 'Well, we need proof.'"

Villechaize, 42, was booked by Burbank police Wednesday for investigation of receiving a stolen gun and carrying a loaded and concealed firearm, Sgt. Scott Wilson said.

Villechaize said he was released from jail after posting $1,000 bail.

NEW BRUNSWICK, N.J. (AP) — Robert Prosky, the gruff roll call sergeant on television's "Hill Street Blues," will have two reasons to smile next week when two of his three sons graduate from Rutgers University.

Prosky, who plays Sgt. Stanislaus Jablonski in the show, holds the distinction of having three sons enrolled at once at the school, something university officials don't remember ever occurring.

Stefan, John and Andrew Prosky will end their overlapping college careers on May 23, when Stefan and John graduate from the state university.

Stefan, 24, said Wednesday that he will receive his bachelor of science degree in microbiology. John, 23, and Andrew, 19, want to follow their father's footsteps and are enrolled in the school's acting program.

ATLANTA (AP) — Bobby Ewing should be gored by a moose or possibly lost in space, and Lucy Ewing could die of a mascara overdose or be eaten by the Loch Ness monster, according to some imaginative viewers of the hit show "Dallas."

The readers were responding to a television critic's call for innovative season endings to the prime-time soap opera.

John Carman, the television critic for The Atlanta Journal and The Atlanta Constitution, awarded the first prize of a videotape recorder to Judy McGee, who knocked off Lucy Ewing by having her crushed by a cabinet full of her makeup and brushes.

Bobby Ewing, she said, should reunite with ex-wife Pam, then by shot by a man appearing to be Pam's lost love, Mark Grayson. The assassin, however, would peel off a latex mask and show himself to be the evil J.R.

The contest was inspired by the CBS show's need to account for the loss of actors Patrick Duffy and Charlene Tilton in Friday night's final episode of the season.

AURORA, Ohio (AP) — It's a good thing that ballerina Ellen Costanza only has 24 counts to get out of her penguin costume before diving into a 55-degree whale pool.

"That doesn't give you time to think about anything," she said Wednesday at dress rehearsal for a Cleveland Ballet benefit at Sea World of Ohio. "And once you get in, all you think about is getting over to the side."

Reagan settles on tax overhaul plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan has settled on major elements of a tax overhaul plan that would mean a higher personal exemption, lower rates and fewer deductions for most Americans.

Reagan, however, will delay the proposal a week while the House struggles with the 1986 budget.

The president plans to launch a speaking blitz on behalf of the plan with a televised speech from the Oval Office on May 28, White House spokesman Larry Speakes said Wednesday.

Reagan agreed to the delay at the request of Senate Majority Leader Robert J. Dole and House Minority Leader Robert Michel. A splashy introduction of the sweeping tax measure could divert House members' attention from the urgency of slashing the deficit by reducing spending, the GOP leaders contended.

Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., whose House Ways and Means Committee originates tax legislation in Congress, the delay could be costly. "Delay saps the cause of tax reform — and raises doubts about the president's nerve," Rostenkowski said.

According to an administration official, who asked not to be quoted by name, the president's proposals will include:

— Reduced individual tax rates. Present law has 15 rates for couples and 16 for single people, ranging from 11 percent to 50 percent. Reagan wants to compress those brackets into three: 15 percent, 25 percent and 35 percent.

— Boosting the personal exemption. Present law permits a taxpayer to avoid taxes on $1,040 for himself or herself, the spouse and each dependent. Inflation is expected to put the exemption to $1,090 in 1986. The president's plan would raise it to $2,000.

Senate OKs $14.8 billion in foreign aid

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Republican-led Senate has approved a $14.8 billion foreign aid measure which provides help for anti-communist resistance forces worldwide, cracks down on countries producing illegal drugs and gives big increases in assistance to both Israel and Egypt.

The legislation — reluctantly supported by the Reagan administration — passed 75-19 on Wednesday and now goes to the Democratic-controlled House, where votes are unlikely before early June.

Throughout two days of debate, there were a series of successful moves to provide both humanitarian and military aid to groups battling communist occupation forces, including $15 million in humanitarian relief for the victims of the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan and $5 million for non-communist resistance fighters inside Cambodia.

The Senate also approved amendments providing a cutoff of aid to Bolivia unless that nation shuts down 10 percent of its coca production, the raw material for cocaine, and it agreed to pressure Peru to crack down on the illegal flow of drugs to the United States.

The bill also includes $2.8 billion in emergency economic assistance for Israel, Egypt and the Israeli-occupied West Bank and Gaza strip.

And for fiscal 1986, the Senate voted approval of hefty increases in military assistance for Israel and Egypt. Israel would get $1.8 billion, compared to $1.4 billion last year and Egypt $1.5 billion compared to $1.3 billion last year.

Reagan had sought $193 million more in military aid than the Senate approved, and Sen. Richard J. Lugar, R-Ind., chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, indicated he would seek to restore those funds if the legislation reaches a congressional conference committee.

The aid bill also includes a resolution designed to press Philippine President Ferdinand Marcos into instituting democratic reforms in his country.

Sponsored by freshman Sen. John Kerry, D-Mass., the resolution calls on Marcos to guarantee free elections, prosecute fully the killers of Philippine dissident Benigno Aquino, establish a free press and release political prisoners.

Shultz: Invitation to Gorbachev 'on the table'

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan still may host a summit meeting this year for Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev, but the United States is not pressing Moscow to agree to a time and place.

"There's an invitation on the table," Secretary of State George P. Shultz said before his meeting in Vienna on Tuesday with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko. "I don't know if the Soviets will respond."

Following the six-hour session, and two briefer talks Wednesday, that is where the matter stood.

"The situation remains as it has been," Shultz told reporters on the flight back to Washington. "The two leaders have exchanged messages saying a summit meeting would be a good idea. No time or place has been set."

Shultz was scheduled to meet with Reagan today to discuss the status of the summit, plus other issues raised in his meeting with Gromyko and his four-day swing through the Middle East.

During his trip, Shultz apparently made more headway in Israel, Egypt and Jordan than he did with Gromyko.

The Israeli government signaled its willingness to hold peace talks with Palestinians, provided they are not identified with the Palestine Liberation Organization or subscribe to its covenant calling for the destruction of the Jewish state.

Jordan's King Hussein, for his part, apparently will keep working with PLO Chairman Yasser Arafat in trying to devise a mixed Jordanian-Palestinian delegation.

The king has the support of Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak.

Shultz also was impressed with a statement by Arafat that inched closer to conditional recognition of Israel. Shultz said it was a good sign that the Jewish country and the U.N. Security Council Resolution 242, supporting Israel's legitimacy, were being explicitly cited.

But the impasse in U.S.-Soviet arms control negotiations could be lengthening.

House committee tentatively OKs SS benefit hikes

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Budget Committee, meeting in unprecedented secrecy, has a tentative agreement to preserve next year's Social Security cost of living increases, but no accord so far on a package of spending cuts needed to reduce huge federal deficits.

"There was really very little enthusiasm on either side" for curtailing the Social Security benefits, Rep. Charles Schumer, D-N.Y., said as the panel met for nearly five hours, breaking up shortly before midnight with an agreement to resume in the morning.

In addition to the Social Security agreement, Rep. Pat Williams, D-Mont., said there was a consensus for granting full inflation allowances for low-income programs.

But several sources, who spoke only on condition they not be identified by name, said the panel made little progress on domestic or defense spending, despite what one participant described as a "lovefest atmosphere" free of the partisan wrangling that characterized open debate earlier in the day.

The decision to clear the committee room of reporters, television cameras, lobbyists and the public came on a bipartisan, 26-3 vote.

Democrats went into the session seeking Republican support for a freshly minted plan to trim spending by $56 billion next year without raising taxes or curtailing Social Security benefits. The proposal also calls for more domestic spending and less defense spending than many Republicans would like.

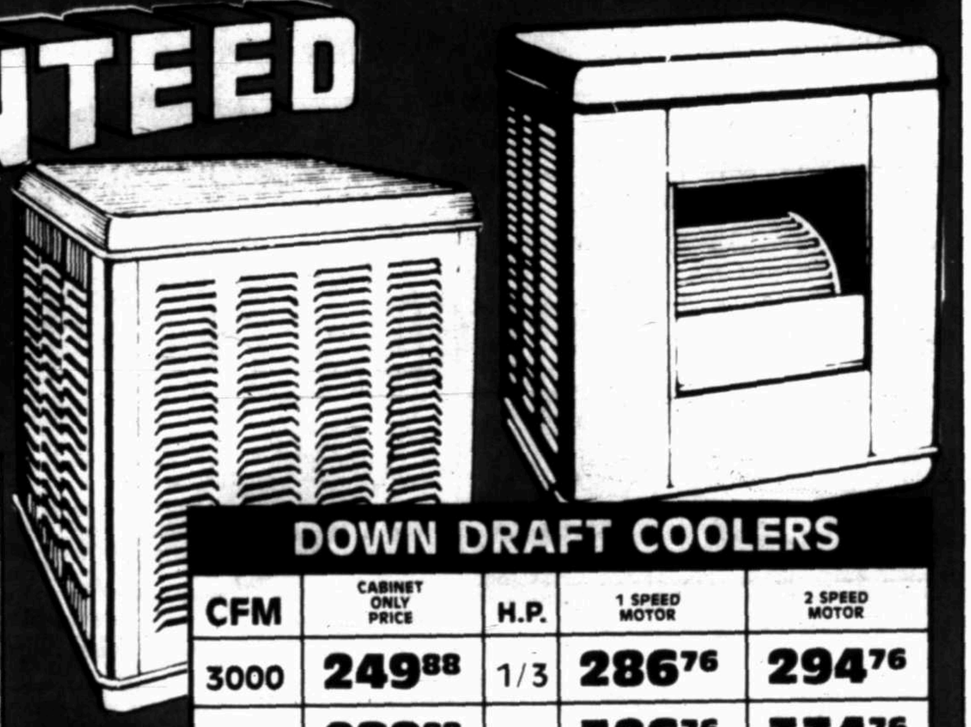

Several sources said Schumer suggested Democrats increase their proposed level of defense spending for next year by $6 billion — in exchange for Republican agreement to the balance of the Democratic budget. Schumer could not be reached to confirm the proposal, but sources said no vote was taken.

The committee is drafting an alternative to the budget approved narrowly last week in the Republican-controlled Senate. That plan would freeze Social Security benefits for one year, reduce defense below what Reagan had said previously he would accept, and trim billions more from domestic programs to achieve savings of $56 billion next year and $295 billion over three years.

Odessan could face life in prison for conviction

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — A 70th District Court jury of 11 women and one man deliberated less than two hours Wednesday evening to find a 32-year-old Odessan guilty of the September 1984 murder of 47-year-old Curtis D. Smith.

Kenneth Wayne Richards took the witness stand in his own defense and admitted he had shot Smith after Smith made what he perceived to be threatening moves toward him.

Richards, contradicting a voluntary statement he made to investigating officers following the Sept. 5 killing, said he had sold Smith about 2,500 gallons of diesel fuel he had stolen from his (Richards') employer and Smith had not paid him the $1,200 he had coming. Richards claimed Smith had told him he'd pay him the money if he brought another load of diesel.

Richards said he told Smith he didn't think he could get anymore because he thought his employer was suspicious, that pump locks had been changed.

Michael McLeaish, one of Richards' attorneys, categorized the killing of Smith as the end result of an argument between two thieves about money owed. In his closing argument, McLeaish urged the jury not to allow any bias, sympathy, or any other emotion affect its deliberations.

Standing in front of Smith's widow, who became very emotional during prosecutor Dennis Cadra's description of how her husband died, McLeaish, referring to her weeping, urged jurors not to let their decision be affected by "these sounds we've heard for two days."

District Attorney Eric Augesen described Richards' admitted killing of Smith as an "attempt to cut his losses." Augesen characterized Richards' testimony as a fabrication, a story he's never told before that he was telling now only to establish that the killing of Smith was voluntary manslughter rather than murder.

Smith's widow broke down and cried as Richards described how he shot Smith twice then, as he lay on the ground moaning, went back and shot him again.

In response to questions concerning the statement he gave investigating deputy sheriff Jerry Davis, Richards claimed he signed the statement only after Davis promised the capital murder charge against him and his $100,000 bond would be reduced.

In his closing argument, Augesen questioned who they should believe, "a man who, by his own admission, is a thief, who steals diesel, who steals trucks and writes hot checks," or a man who has spent many years in law enforcement protecting the public interest? The district attorney read the final line on the statement signed by Richards which stated he had been promised nothing to induce him to sign the voluntary statement.

Richards would have faced a two to 20 year prison sentence had he been found guilty of voluntary manslughter. The murder conviction means he faces a maximum sentence of life in prison.

Theft-by-computer trial ends without defense witnesses

HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

The trial of a 51-year-old Midland grandmother accused of stealing from patients $880 in cash by making erroneous entries in the computerized accounting system of a local medical clinic closed this morning without the defendant or defense witnesses taking the stand.

Paula Lovett of rural Midland, an employee of Midland's Women's Clinic, 2009 W. Wall, could be sentenced to two to 10 years, or probation, and a $5,000 fine if found guilty of the third-degree felony theft. The Texas Penal Code, Sec. 31.09, allows theft amounts to be aggregated if they are of "one scheme or continuing course of conduct."

In addition, the seven-man, five-woman jury can consider two Class A and a Class B misdemeanor charges against Mrs. Lovett, who is accused of stealing $500 Dec. 1, 1983; $200 Dec. 5; and $180 Dec. 21.

Although she is suspected in the theft of more than $3,000, Mrs. Lovett was charged only with the three thefts, chosen because they totaled a felony theft but also to avoid "a 20-page indictment," according to prosecutor Assistant District Attorney Jack Connors.

The jury selected Monday before 238th State District Court Judge Vann Culp retired at 10:30 a.m. to deliberate guilt-innocence. Jury selection was delayed Monday because of last-minute changes in the indictment and not computer problems as defense attorney Jim Osborn of Odessa told jurors during opening arguments.

According to testimony from 21 state witnesses, including the four doctors and 13 employees at the clinic in December 1983, Mrs. Lovett was suspected of the thefts because she was the only employee trained to post accounts received in the computer.

Osborn, who called the state's case "bits and pieces" of circumstantial evidence, did not place Mrs. Lovett or any defense witnesses on the stand.

"I have tried to be Mrs. Lovett's voice here," he said today during closing arguments. "But Mrs. Lovett will need voices from the jury too. When you go into the jury room you need go into that part of yourself where reason, justice and love reign supreme and do the right thing. I know you will."

Although Osborn attempted to subpoena the clinic's computer as well as personal financial records of the physicians for 1983.

Connors argued successfully in quashing the subpoena for the computer, citing expense as well as the "ruinous" effects of disassembling and reassembling the computer. Culp also ordered the physicians to bring personal financial records from only November and December 1983 to court.

The defendant, who was employed at the obstetrics-gynecology clinic from April 1982 until she took a leave of absence in April 1984, became suspect after patients whose records showed delinquent accounts came to the office with cash receipts in their hands.

Bess Pruitt, office manager of the clinic, testified receipts gathered from patients plus those from the office books indicated cash payments in December 1983 equalled $4,527.79. But cash deposits at First

Craddick's speed limit proposal fails

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Rep. Tom Craddick, R-Midland, lost Wednesday in an attempt to add provisions for increasing the legal speed limit to legislation requiring Texans to use seatbelts.

Craddick offered an amendment to the bill sponsored by Rep. William Messer, D-Belton, allowing Texas' speed limit to increase to 65 miles per hour, if that is approved by the U.S. Department of Transportation.

Past efforts to increase the speed limit have been vetoed on grounds Texas would face the loss of federal highway funds if the state doesn't conform to the 55-mph limit.

Craddick said the amendment would take effect only if the DOT approves the change for states which have mandatory seatbelt laws — a move which has been reported

Local health departments will receive funds for AIDS-testing sites

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

The Midland City/County and Ector County health departments will receive up to $7,000 in federal monies to create alternate sites to test for the virus believed to cause Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome, according to spokesman Jim Davis.

The monies, part of a grant issued by the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, will cover the actual cost of the test designed to detect whether an individual has developed antibodies to the HTLV III virus — identified in 1984 as the cause of AIDS.

Screening tests for the HTLV III virus currently are manufactured by five companies nationwide. "Offering the screening test to those in the high-risk AIDS group may prevent these individuals from flocking to blood banks under the pretext of giving blood," he said.

AIDS, the often-fatal disease that reduces the body's ability to fight infection, primarily is found in four high-risk categories — Haitians, actively sexual homosexual and bisexual men, hemophiliacs and intravenous drug abusers. However it is not limited to those four groups.

An estimated 2,100 confirmed cases have been reported between 1981-84 which have resulted in about 920 deaths. The figure represents about 40 to 45 percent mortality rate, he noted.

According to Davis, the testing sites will serve only as "collection and counseling centers" while the actual test will be completed at the State/Regional Laboratory in El Paso.

"The state laboratory has set up six sites in the state where the test will be done. We will take the blood samples and provide counseling here, but the samples will be sent to El Paso for testing," he said.

The grant is sufficient to offer 60-day clinics at both Midland and Ector counties locations, Davis said.

Testing will be offered from 5:30 to 8 p.m. Monday and Wednesday beginning May 22 at the Ector County Health Department, 211 N. Texas, Odessa; and from 5:30 to 8:30 p.m. Tuesday and Thursday beginning May 21 at the Midland City/County Health Department, 501 Andrews Highway.

"We hope to have a good response in order to protect the blood supply," said Davis. "If the response is not sufficient (within a 30 day period), the clinics will be shut down."

Davis added that the screening is not a guaranteed test for AIDS.

"Even if a person shows positive on this test it doesn't mean the person is going to develop AIDS. It just means they've been exposed to the virus," said Davis, noting "there is such a thing as a false positive or a false negative."

He added that the county health departments are working closely with area blood banks in asking members of the high-risk categories to refrain from donating blood.

"We can't ask anyone if they're gay," said Davis. "But if we suspect they are and they donate blood, the blood banks will throw it away."

Avoiding crime easier than trying not to get caught

Crime is relative. I've just discovered that in a mini-investigation that wasn't intended to be that. My devious mind labors in figuring out how to avoid the penalties of criminal acts. The most effective way, I do believe, is to avoid those acts. That's less stressful than trying not to get caught.

Yesterday, in heading to the bank to deposit my paycheck to ensure it gets divided among my creditors, I was blocked in my usual route to the bank. As usual somewhere in Midland, the streets were torn up on the premise, I presume, that they'll get better. They're still ailing; the gremlins were busy. Anyway, blocks of streets on my route to the bank were barricaded.

I said, "All right, here we go again," turned this way and that way, was a bit stressed by the inconvenience — road detours are so blasted common — but got to the bank. Now due to my route, I missed pulling into the bank's free parking area. I blamed that inconvenience on the one-way street system and the detour. So, I pulled up to one of the city's revenue generators, one of those money-grubbing pole clocks that run on nickels, dimes and quarters. I was without a cent to feed the parking meter to entice it to hide its ugly red tongue which was created to flag "expired."

Not totally unfamiliar with skirting the law in minor matters, I calculated I could scamper into the bank, quickly take care of business, and get out before the meter maid made her rounds.

This time, I was wrong. I got caught.

What really ticked me off was having to shell out three bucks for five or 10 minutes of overparking. Besides, I could blame the city for the disrepair of the streets which, coupled with my lack of change, contributed to the crime of which I was accused. More than that, the $3 fine for overparking seemed a bit much; a dollar would suffice. Ten years ago, the overparking fine was an outrage at the same $3 fine; it then should have been no more than 50 cents. The city folks seem to forget that they are not the only taxpayers in town who live on limited income. Those $3 whacks are pretty stiff.

I got some bills at an eatery that noon, folded them and begrudgingly stuffed three $1 bills into that tan envelope.

That afternoon, I again crawled into my sardine-tin blue car and headed toward Greenwood via Fairgrounds Road.

Moments after I turned off of U.S. Highway 80, headed south and crossed the railroad tracks on Fairgrounds, a considerate motorist, a lady, as I recall, briefly flashed her headlamps. By that, I knew a radar-equipped, ticket-writing police officer was ahead. So, amply forewarned, what did I do? I got on the lookout and then speeded right along at about 55 mph in what turned out to be a 40-mph zone. I reasoned that the speed limit reasonably ought to be 55 mph on the barren stretch up to the Cloverdale Road stop light. My reasoning did not prevail.

Sure enough, a cop, a man of the law, was parked alongside the roadside. And, as I eased my hold on the foot-feed and slowed down, I just resigned to a big-time fine somewhere between $1 and $200 but likely around 30 smackers. At the same time, I knew the officer was in a bind; four or five cars, maybe six, were in a pack. And I figured he'd single out one of us to punish in the name of law and order, safety and money making.

It wasn't I.

Some unfortunate soul trailing the pack of speeders got the black mark and benefit of the flashing police lights.

I felt relief for once again having escaped a law-breaking act. But I'll guarantee that afterward I'll hold my speed down along that strip.

But I also sensed an air of unfairness; probably so did the ticketed motorist. All were guilty but only one suffered. Well, that's just an inequality of man's law.

Thereafter, I didn't feel so badly about getting the $3 parking fine. So, I drove by Municipal Court, handed the money-stuffed envelope to the clerk and told her, "Well, I got caught," and left. I hope I smiled.

Police investigating robbery of gas at 7-Eleven

From Staff Reports

Midland police today are investigating the convenience store theft early this morning of $32.82 of gasoline, which turned into a robbery after the suspect is alleged to have thrown hot coffee in the clerk's face before fleeing.

According to reports, a white female had filled her car with 26.7 gallons of super unleaded at the 7-Eleven convenience store, 4401 W. Illinois Ave., at 3 a.m. today. She then entered the store and selected several items and approached the clerk at the counter. He said she threw the hot coffee in his face, ran out of the store and was last seen traveling east on Illinois in her car.

In other reports filed this morning, Pat Watson, 2439 Whitmire No. 39F, told police she was awakened at 1:40 a.m. when she "felt" the presence of someone in her apartment.

Reports indicate she had fallen asleep on the living room sofa at 11 p.m. before she heard someone walking near the kitchen area. A person's shadow, caused by the light from the television set, could be seen standing over a dining room table before crossing toward a bathroom, Ms. Watson reported. When the bathroom lights flicked on, she said she ran to a neighbor's house for help.

After they returned, a bedroom window was discovered open but the screen was still in place and her child was safely asleep in bed. Reports indicate a sliding glass door may have been left unlocked.

Police Roundup

In other complaints filed with city police, Linda Hill, Route 10 Box 10720, reported her 1981 Mazda GLK was burglarized while parked at the Eagles Club between 5:30 p.m. and 11:50 p.m. Wednesday. Entry was gained by breaking a window, valued at $80, reports said. Taken were cassettes and a carrying case, $100 in cash, an attache case and three checks. Total loss was placed at $1,188.

Juan Olbera, 4625 Crockett, reported his residence was burglarized between 7:30 p.m. and 10:13 p.m. Wednesday. Taken were two television sets valued at a total of $830, according to reports. There were no signs of forced entry.

Irene Crevier, 2409 College, reported the burglary of St. Vincent de Paul's thrift shop at Carver and Garden Lane. Entry was gained between 2 p.m. Monday and 9:30 a.m. Wednesday through a kitchen window, reports said. Taken were an air conditioner, stereo, children's clothing and drapes, valued at a total of $811.

John Joseph Casella, 415 E. Scharbauer Drive, No. 6, reported his car was burglarized between 10 p.m. Tuesday and 10 a.m. Wednesday while it was parked at his residence. Entry was gained by using a coat hangar to unlock the car, reports said. Taken were a citizen band radio, police scanner and speakers, valued at a total of $505.

Mike Patel, 301 Mariana, told police a $400 coin mechanism in a candy machine at the Metro Inn, 3708 W. Wall, was stolen at 10 p.m. Wednesday. Reports indicate the part was stolen when Patel, who was refilling the machine, went into the office for change.

Midland sheriff's office deputies are investigating the burglaries Tuesday of two county residences in which camera equipment was stolen but stereos, television sets and guns were left behind, according to reports.

Craig H. Harris, who lives on County Road 56½, east of County Road 1242, said $600 worth of cameras and equipment were stolen from his home between 6 a.m. and 6:30 p.m. Entry apparently was gained by prying open a sliding glass patio door with a screwdriver.

Deborah L. Guy of County Road 56W, also east of CR 1242, said $460 worth of camera equipment was taken from her home. A screwdriver apparently was used to pry open a back window, reports said.

Court upholds decision against Lozano family

From Staff Reports

The 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans has upheld a Midland federal jury's decision against the family of Larry Lozano, who died as the result of a jail struggle with Ector County sheriff's deputies in January 1978.

The Midland jury Feb. 2, 1984, held that deputies Jackie Perkins and Randy Tenney did not use excessive force in the Jan. 22, 1984 incident that resulted in the death of Lozano.

That ruling was made in the civil lawsuit filed by Lozano's ex-wife, Rufina, on behalf of his children, which alleged Perkins and Tenney acted "wantonly and mailiciously" and violated Lozano's civil rights by using excessive force. The suit sought $4 million in punitive damages.

The appeal, which named Perkins and Tenney, also named William French Smith who was U.S. Attorney General at the time the lawsuit was filed.

The February 1984 trial of Perkins and Tenney was the result of an earlier ruling in an August 1981 civil trial in which a Midland jury ruled in favor of former Ector County Sheriff Elton Faught, county commissioners and the deputies.

But, in November 1984, the 5th Circuit Court reversed the portion of the Midland federal court jury's decision relating to Perkins and Tenney and ordered a new trial. The appeals court has now upheld the verdict of that trial and exonerated Perkins and Tenney.

At the conclusion of the Feb. 2, 1984 trial, defense attorney Jim Nelson contended that the jury's verdict then upheld the findings of previous proceedings. "In six years and five different court proceedings," he said, "the result has been essentially the same every time."

Perkins is now a lieutenant with the Ector County sheriff's office and Tenney, at last report, was an officer with the Stanton police department.

The various court proceedings stemmed from the death of the 27-year-old Lozano, who died from a fractured larnyx received during a struggle in the Ector County jail in January 1978 as deputies attempted to subdue him.

During the four day trial in February 1984, Perkins and Tenney testified they entered the padded cell Lozano was in and tried to restrain a man they described as having gone "berserk."

to be under consideration.

Messer argued that the seatbelt and 55-mph laws are intended to save lives, commenting, "I would hate to save lives by seatbelts and lose them by people driving too fast."

Craddick's amendment was tabled, 75-63.

Craddick also lost, on a 75-62 vote, an amendment to provide that a conviction for failure to use a seatbelt could not be considered for cancellation, non-renewal or increase of premium insurance.

Messer said that situation already was covered in the bill — although Craddick argued it was "unclear" that that was the case.

Inmates reflect on number of executions

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — Death row inmates, reflecting on the execution of fellow prisoner Jesse de la Rosa, say executions in Texas now are "like eating potato chips — it's hard to stop."

De la Rosa, at 24 the youngest convict executed in Texas since the Supreme Court reinstated the death penalty in 1976, was put to death early Wednesday.

He was the third Texas Department of Corrections' inmate to die by lethal injection this year and among the seven to die since the state resumed executions in 1982. Five other convicts have death dates set through July 22.

Henry Martinez Porter, scheduled to die July 9, said de la Rosa had hoped he would get a stay.

"He was hopeful and his family was hopeful he'd get a stay from a court," Porter said. "He never expected to get a stay from (Gov.) Mark White."

White, as in previous last-minute pleas from inmates, refused to grant de la Rosa a 30-day reprieve.

The next Texas inmate with a death date, G.W. Green, said the increasing number of executions "is like eating potato chips — it's hard to stop."

But Green, convicted of killing a Montgomery County deputy sheriff, said he isn't worried about his fate.

"When they kill me, they'll accomplish nothing," he said. "I'm just a particle of matter."

Porter, convicted of the 1975 slaying of a Fort Worth police officer, said, "It does no good to be hopeful when you have no reason for hope."

He said he has lost all his appeals from the courts. His only stay would have to come from White, he said.

"But when it gets down to it, you never do get one from him," he said. "I just have to accept it."

De la Rosa was pronounced dead four minutes after the lethal chemicals were injected into his arms.

He was convicted in the 1979 slaying of Masaoud Ghazali, a former Iranian Air Force captain who had worked as a 7-11 convenience store clerk in San Antonio for about three weeks.

Odessa home burglary probed

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — Police continue to investigate the burglary of a north Odessa home that resulted in the loss of $22,000 in cash.

Sherry McCollum, 620 E. 52nd St., notified Odessa police early Wednesday evening someone had entered her home and removed the money from record album jackets where she had hidden it before she left with a friend about 2:30 p.m. When they returned about 6:30 p.m. the money was gone, she told investigating officers. Ms. McCollum said nothing else, including jewelry, was missing.

Investigating officers said there were no signs of forced entry and that Ms. McCollum said the front door was locked when she returned home.

The lost money, she said, was the proceeds from the sale of a pickup truck. She had cashed the check she received and hid the money because she planned to buy another car.

TRIAL

City National Bank during that month only came to $1,243.50, she said.

According to testimony from Mark Price of American Physician Services, which programmed the clinic's computers, the in-house investigation resulted in the discovery of "more than 100" erroneous entries, including physician discounts and adjustments instead of cash payment credits.

The contest was conceived by SJSU English professor Dr. Scott Rice, self-proclaimed BLFC Grand Panjandrum. Rice still uses entries to instruct his students in how not to approach composition and to help develop playfulness that unleashes writing creativity.

Bulwer-Lytton, himself, was deadly serious (not to mention dull) about his own writing. The epitomy of mediocrity, he gave the language such trite phrases as "the Great Unwashed" and "the pen is mightier than the sword" — although Rice notes that Bulwer-Lytton's own pen probably was on par with a letter opener.

"It was a dark and stormy night," Bulwer-Lytton's most portentious opening line, from his novel "Paul Clifford," inspired not only the "Peanuts" literary beagle, Snoopy, but the BLFC itself.

Timothy Gerard Moore, son of Mr. and Mrs. Victor E. Moore and student at The University of Texas-Permian Basin has been selected as one of the country's most outstanding campus leaders by the Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges editorial staff.

MARKETS

Dollar up

LONDON (AP) — The dollar advanced in trendless London trading early today, with most currency and bullion markets in continental Europe closed for a holiday. Gold prices drifted lower.

An exchange dealer at London's Citibank attributed the dollar's rise to overnight short-covering in New York. In a short sale, a trader sells borrowed dollars in hopes that the dollar will fall before he must buy dollars in the market to complete the deal.

Otherwise, the dealer said, morning trading was extremely quiet with most continental markets closed for Ascension Day observances.

In Milan, where markets remained open, the dollar rose to 1,966.00 Italian lire, up from 1,959.00 lire late Wednesday.

London midmorning dollar quotes, compared with levels of late Wednesday, included:

—3.0855 West German marks, up from 3.0715.

—2.5840 Swiss francs, up from 2.5775.

—9.4200 French francs, up from 9.3700.

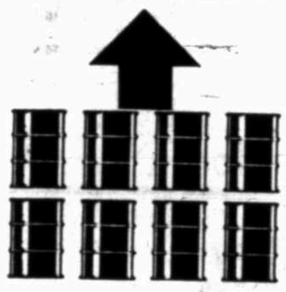

London's five biggest bullion houses fixed a recommended gold price of $320.40 an ounce, down from $322.80 late Wednesday. Zurich markets were closed.

Earlier in Hong Kong, gold lost $3.21 dollars to close at a bid of $320.91.

The metal was quoted at $322 in New York late Wednesday.

Silver was bid at $6.50 an ounce in London, down from $6.52 late Wednesday.

Local geologist named AAPG president-elect

By JOHN PAUL PITTS
Business-Oil Editor

Bernold M. Hanson

Midland geologist, Bernold M. "Bruno" Hanson, has been elected by popular vote to the office of president-elect of the 43,000-member, American Association of Petroleum Geologists, it was announced Wednesday by AAPG headquarters in Tulsa.

Hanson will begin his term as president-elect July 1, 1985, and will serve until July 30, 1986, at which time he will become president of the world's largest geologic association at the AAPG Annual Convention in Atlanta.

He will become the second member of the West Texas Geological Society to hold the distinguished office. The first was John Emergy Adams, a geologist with Standard of Texas, who held the post from 1953-1954.

Officers of the AAPG are presented for election by a nominating committee, and are approved by the executive committee. Candidates are permitted to attend all the section meetings of the geologic organization, but are not permitted to campaign actively for he office.

Hanson was an unsuccessful candidate for the office of president in 1978, after serving on numerous committees, and as secretary of the association from 1973 to 1975. He also served as president of West Texas Geological Society, and is an honorary member of both organizations.

"I feel it is a great honor to be chosen by one's peers to serve such a large and distinguished organization," said Hanson. "I only hope we don't have too many crises during my term of office." He said one of the biggest issues facing the professional organization would be putting graduating geologists to work in the business of finding oil and gas.

Hanson said there were still reserves to be found onshore and offshore in the U.S. and that those who insist otherwise are misguided.

"We are suffering from an oil glut now because of our successes," he said. "There are still tremendous plays to be made, all that remains is the capital to finance them."

A geology graduate of the University of North Dakota, Hanson entered the oil business as a geologist for Magnolia (Mobil) in 1951, before serving in the Korean War from 1952-1953. Upon leaving the service he received his masters degree in geology from the University of Wyoming in 1954 and went to work for the Humble Oil Co. (Exxon) in New Orleans. After a two-year tour in Alaska, he returned to Midland in 1957, and left Humble in 1960 to become an independent.

"I wear many hats," said Hanson, "but I still consider myself more geologist or oil-finder than dealmaker."

Prime lending rate drops

Associated Press

A major bank's lowering of its prime lending rate had been expected in the credit markets because other interest rates have been falling recently, analysts said.

Bankers Trust, the nation's eighth-largest bank, cut its prime rate Wednesday to 10 percent from 10.5 percent, the lowest level in more than 6½ years.

There was more bad news on the economic front in Washington on Wednesday.

U.S. industrial production fell 0.2 percent in April as the economy showed further signs of weakening under the onslaught of foreign competition, the government said.

The government also said businesses, faced with weaker-than-expected demand, cut back on building up inventories in March, the first decline in inventory levels in two years.

While Bankers Trust was the first to reduce its prime, or benchmark, lending rate since January, analysts have been predicting such a move among major banks for several weeks because of recent declines in other interest rates.

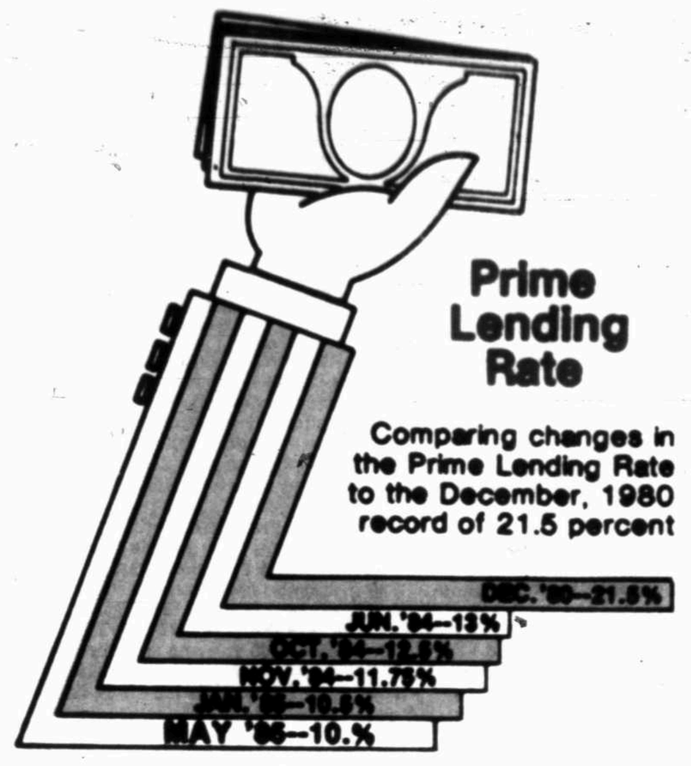

"Interest rates have been trending down since March," said Livia Asher, who follows bank stocks for the investment firm First Boston Corp. "If anything, I'm kind of surprised that it hasn't happened sooner."

Lawrence Cohn, who follows the banking business for the investment firm Dean Witter Reynolds Inc., said other major banks probably would match Bankers Trust's cut. But, he added, "they will probably drag their heels."

He said the banks want to savor as long as they can an environment in which the interest rates they are paying for funds have been falling more rapidly than the rates they get on their loans.

The report by the Federal Reserve Board on industrial production showed output dropped for the first time in six months, since a 0.4 percent setback in October.

The decline was widespread and reflected the battering U.S. industry has been taking from a deteriorating foreign trade performance.

Analysts have said this problem, which they blame on the strength of the U.S. dollar, was the primary reason that economic growth during the first three months of the year slumped to an anemic 1.3 percent — the lowest level since the end of the last recession.

The April decline left the index of industrial production at 165.4 percent of its 1967 base. Since last August, the index has declined by 0.4 percent as weak gains in some months have been offset by setbacks. The index had risen 0.3 percent in March.

"The virtual stagnation of industrial production since last summer reflects the fundamental imbalance in the recovery with manufacturing paying the price for huge federal deficits, high interest rates and an overvalued dollar," said Jerry Jasinowski, chief economist for the National Association of Manufacturers.

The Commerce Department, meanwhile, said that inventories held by retailers, wholesalers and manufacturers declined by 0.1 percent in March to $578.2 billion. It marked the first drop in inventory levels since a 0.6 percent setback in March 1983.

Analysts said it showed businesses were attempting to cut back on unwanted backlogs in the face of weak demand. They said that if businesses are successful in reducing inventories and demand picks up in coming months, then industrial production will begin growing again.

House draws nearer to solution to ocean oil controversy

By PEGGY ROBERSON
Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON — The House of Representatives is nearing a legislative solution to a long-running controversy over how to divide money from joint federal-state ocean oil lands, Rep. John Breaux, D-La., said Wednesday.

Breaux told reporters he has won agreement from key committee chairmen to include in pending budget legislation a mandate to give coastal states 27 percent of bonuses, royalties and interest included in the $6.7 billion being held in escrow by the federal government.

Two states — Texas and Louisiana — have sued the federal government for a "fair and equitable" share of the wealth, but a high-ranking Interior Department official was quoted recently as saying court action could continue "indefinitely."

"In the meantime, all that money is setting in a shoebox in Dave Stockman's backyard," said Breaux, referring to the director of the Office of Management and Budget.

"The federal government can't use it to help balance the budget and the states can't use it for important programs," Breaux said.

Breaux said he has a pledge from Budget Committee Chairman William H. Gray III, D-Pa., to add the oil money formula to the non-binding budget resolution being welded together in a late night session Wednesday.

Also, he said, he has an agreement from key members of the House Interior Committee to attach the language to budget "reconciliation" instructions, which are binding on authorizing committees.

Asked by a reporter if he believes the oil money deal would invite the President to veto the bill, Breaux shot back: "He wants a budget, doesn't he?"

The formula Breaux has settled on to divide the escrow money does not include taxes nor royalties which are still in dispute. He said it does not prejudice any future agreement on those royalties – the smallest part of total.

Texas' share of the $6.7 million pot, at 27 percent, is $372 million; California's, $375 million; Alaska's, $323 million; Alabama's, $73 million, and Florida's, $20.03 million.

On April 15, governors of six coastal states wrote to Interior Secretary Donald Hodel offering to settle for 37.5 percent of all revenues in the escrow fund – not only the bonuses, royalties and interests in Breaux' plan. California did not participate in the settlement offer which was a counteroffer to Interior's proposal last year to give the states 16 2/3 percent. The governors have not received an answer to their latest bid.

Texas Gov. Mark White, who sued the U.S. government on behalf of the state when he was attorney general, and won a judgment in Beaumont federal district court which was appealed by the federal government, was aware of Breaux' maneuvers but had no immediate comment, said a staffer in the Texas office in Washington.

Pickens-Unocal hold takeover talks

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Unocal Corp. and a group of Texas oilmen have held settlement talks for the first time since corporate raider T. Boone Pickens Jr. began his attempt to take control of Unocal three months ago.

The Pickens-led Mesa Partners II investment group issued a two-sentence statement saying the talks Tuesday and Wednesday were held at the request of Unocal, parent of Los Angeles-based Union Oil Co. of California and the nation's 13th largest oil concern.

The group said no further negotiations were scheduled, but Pickens spokesman Warren Vieth said he couldn't say whether that meant simply that no date for future talks had been set or whether Pickens had ruled out more talks.

Vieth said Pickens was involved personally in the negotiations, but he said he didn't know if Unocal Chairman Fred Hartley participated.

Meanwhile, the Delaware Supreme Court planned to hear today an appeal of a lower court order allowing Mesa Partners II to participate in a lucrative stock repurchase plan offered to Unocal shareholders.

Unocal filed the appeal after a Delaware Chancery Court judge ruled that the Pickens group could not be barred from participating in Unocal's offer to repurchase 50 million of its shares at $72 each. The offer was a defensive scheme to counter Mesa Partners' takeover maneuver.

However, Hartley has said he had no intention of buying back Pickens' stock at higher than market value, but he hasn't ruled out the possibility of buying out Pickens at the existing market price.

In its attempt to acquire Unocal, the Pickens group has paid $1.1 billion, or an average of $46.41 per share, for 23.7 million Unocal shares and is the company's biggest stockholder with 13.6 percent.

Mesa Partners is offering to buy another 64 million shares at $54 each to boost its stake to 50.1 percent.

BUSINESS BRIEFS

Coastal finals ANR acquisition

HOUSTON (AP) — The Coastal Corp. said Wednesday it has completed its $2.4 billion takeover of American Natural Resources Corp., a Detroit-based energy firm.

Coastal acquired more than 90 percent of ANR in a $65-a-share cash tender offer that expired April 2. The takeover was carried out through Colorado Interstate Corp., a Coastal subsidiary.

Under the takeover, ANR headquarters and its pipeline subsidiary will remain in Detroit.

Chevron to sell Utah production

SAN FRANCISCO — Chevron announced today that it will sell its interest in Utah's Bluebell-Altamont field to help pay for its $13.3 billion purchase of Gulf Oil Corp. last year. While Chevron declined to put a price on the interest, the firm's share of production from 330 oil wells in the field is 8,400 barrels per day. Chevron also announced that it would close it Utah shale oil operation.

Chevron Vice President, Roger Loper, said the field was chosen to sell because its value could be easily estimated and it offered a good representation of Chevron and Gulf interests.

Discounts could erode oil prices

NEW YORK — Drastic discounts of up to $5 per barrel by war torn Iran could erode OPEC control on oil prices, causing them to plunge dramatically. A Wall Street Journal report reveals that Iran has signed a two-year contract with an American firm to deliver 150,000 barrels per day at a price substantially below the OPEC price.

OPEC oil prices are currently supported by Saudi Arabia's all-time low production rate of 2.8 million barrels. Some oil analysts see a continued erosion of oil prices unless producers inside and outside OPEC hold down production.

S&L crises: Isolated or spreading across nation?

WASHINGTON (AP) — The shock waves from the thrift institution crisis that has hit Ohio and Maryland could well spread beyond the borders of those two states, some industry observers are warning.

However, others contend that the only lasting affect from the current upheaval will be the disappearance of private insurance funds for savings and loan institutions.

Financial experts who believe that the problems may spread point to past difficulties that they contend are far from being corrected.

"The savings and loan industry in general has some serious problems," David Wyss, a financial analyst for the consulting firm of Data Resources Inc., said Wednesday. "If the S&Ls were held to the same accounting standards as banks, many of them would be bankrupt."

He said the fact that thrifts in general face lower requirements for capital on hand has been a key to their remaining solvent.

Wyss said the basic problem is that many savings and loans are saddled with a "lot of low interest loans that they can't get rid of and they are paying more for deposits than they are getting from these loans."

Willard C. Butcher, chairman of the giant Chase Manhattan Bank, expressed fears that the current problems would spread to other parts of the country.

"We've got billions of dollars of assets in the thrift industry with inadequate capital under it and my guess is the banking industry will be called upon" to help avert a nationwide crisis, Butcher told reporters last week. Butcher's bank has already applied to buy two Ohio savings and loans which were ordered closed during the crisis there.

The governors of both Maryland and Ohio were forced to act after panicky depositors began withdrawing their money from savings and loans operating without federal deposit insurance.

In Ohio, 71 savings and loans were temporarily closed in March while in Maryland, 102 savings and loans were placed under state control on Tuesday with restrictions placed on the amount of money depositors could withdraw.

In addition to Ohio and Maryland, the states of North Carolina, Pennsylvania and Massachusetts have private insurance funds for thrift institutions.

Another approximately 18 states have private insurance funds which serve other types of financial institutions such as credit unions but which may serve some thrift institutions as well.

Various members of Congress expressed the belief Wednesday that the Ohio and Maryland troubles would accelerate a trend by thrifts in these states to apply for federal insurance.

Sen. Jake Garn, R-Utah, chairman of the Senate Banking Committee, predicted the private insurance funds would eventually "go away and more institutions will meet the requirements of having federal insurance."

Worldwide oil production below last year's levels

HOUSTON — Worldwide oil production continues to run behind year-earlier levels, according to Petroleum Information Corp.

Production during the first quarter of the year averaged 53,309,000 barrels a day, or 2.1 percent below production for the first quarter of 1984 which was 54,462,000 barrels daily.

The 2.1 percent decline is the same as that for the first two months of the year.

However, some strengthening in production was indicated in the production total for March, which was put at 53,533,000 barrels a day.

Significantly, oil production in the Middle East continues below the year-earlier level. Regional production for the first quarter was off 17.3 percent at an average of 9,824,000 barrels a day.

Thus, the Middle East, which accounts for the major portion of production by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, continues to bear the brunt of the reduction in world demand for crude oil.

Western Hemisphere production increased 3.7 percent during the quarter with a boost of 306,000 barrels a day in United States production the biggest factor. Brazil, Ecuador, Trinidad and Tobago recorded significant increases in output on a year-to-year basis during the quarter, PI International says.

Production in Western Europe rose 3.6 percent during the quarter. The rise amounted to 204,000 barrels a day, most of which was the result of increased operations on the United Kingdom continental shelf.

*Current and compound yields are based upon an annualization of the dividends paid by the Fund during the period April 1, 1985 through April 30, 1985. The compound yield assumes that all such dividends paid by the Fund are reinvested when paid. An investor's principal in the Fund and the Fund's yield are not guaranteed and will fluctuate according to market conditions, and an investor's shares when redeemed may be worth more or less than their original cost.

Scrubbing removes black substance on potatoes

By SONJA HEINZE

Q. On many potatoes there are flecks of a tarry substance that can be dislodged only by hard scrubbing or scratching with a fingernail. I suspect this is a sprouting deterrent or a pesticide, although I was told by a county agricultural agent that these spots must be the breathing pores of the potato! Pores they are not. What are they, and how toxic is this black substance? Virginia Weston, Linwood, N.J.

A. As a child I peeled thousands of potatoes grown in my mother's garden and don't remember ever seeing these black spots. I do see them frequently now and also wondered what they were. Al Wagner, Ph.D., extension food technologist with Texas A&M, explains that this is an infection caused by a soil-borne fungus.

The symptoms of the disease include the presence of small black or brown hard bodies on the surface of the tubers. These bodies are called sclerotia, or black scurf.

The spots are not known to be toxic and have nothing to do with sprout inhibitors or other chemicals. Some garden potatoes will have this problem and some will not.

If you wash your potatoes, Wagner assures us there is nothing to worry about as far as eating the peels is concerned.

Q. I have a collection of Chock Full o' Nuts plastic coffee measures, and they are so colorful I hate to throw them out. Is there any other use for them? Jean Buckner, Margate, N.J.

A. Jeff Morris, Chock Full o' Nuts vice president, sent us a list of suggestions that customers had sent to this company stating their uses for the measuring cups. Other than using the cups as Christmas tree decorations or turning them into pin cushions, all the suggestions revolved around using them as decorations for place settings — ideas like filling them with candy and attaching chicks, bunnies or flags on the handles.

Would any reader with some more imaginative uses for these plastic cups please send them along?

Q. Somebody told me that turkeys are unable to mate. My question is rather obvious — how do they reproduce? Jane Vinson, Stamford, Conn.

A. Turkeys grown on large commercial turkey farms are able to mate about 30 percent of the time, but the tom turkeys are bred to be so large that often the females are maimed or killed if they mate naturally. Wild turkeys have no problems.

Female turkeys chosen for reproduction are artificially inseminated either manually or by machine. One inseminator, Rita Minkin of California, was able to service 800 turkeys in an hour by machine.

Q. Can you tell me what I'm doing wrong? My 26-year-old son's shirts and T-shirts turn yellow under his arms. He perspires a lot but uses deodorant to control this. He wears his shirts and undershirts only once and they go into the washer. I use one of the popular detergents such as Bold, Cheer, Fab, Yes and Dynamo, but the yellowish stain still comes. It seems to make no difference as to what material the garment is made of. Ethel Larson, Bettendorf, Iowa

A. "Yellowing is most often a build-up of body soil caused by any one of a number of factors," according to the Soap and Detergent Association. To correct the problem, try the following:

— Increase the amount of detergent and/or use a product containing enzymes, detergent booster or bleach.

— Increase wash water temperature, washing items in the hottest water safe for the fabric. The hot water setting on the washer is the temperature of the house hot water supply when it reaches the washer. The temperature of the hot water should be 130 degrees or above at the washer.

— Wash synthetic fabrics in hot water, at least 130 degrees. Use a permament press cycle (with a cool-down that lowers the water temperature before the first spin).

— Synthetics that are extremely discolored and cannot be bleached with a chlorine bleach should be soaked in a product containing enzymes or a detergent booster, or treated with a color remover according to package directions. Then wash in a washer.

READER RESPONSE: After a reader wrote this column asking if there were any ways to liquefy soap to use in a pump container and make use of soap slivers, the following suggestions came in:

— B.L., Marmara, N.J.: "I cut the bar end up into an old pump container, add hot tap water, shake and refill as needed. The soap does not totally dissolve, but it can be used for washing hands for months. I keep mine at the kitchen sink and use it before I do any food preparation."

— Kris Whaley, Fresno, Calif.: "I melt all the soap slivers together and pour the mixture into small Jell-O molds. By doing this you can make your own decorator soaps.

DEAR ABBY

Christian unity important

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: As a minister of the Christian Church (Disciples of Christ), I want to applaud your response to "Cut Off in Virginia," whose son-in-law has forbidden her and her minister husband from visiting their home. You said, "Until you respect your daughter's right to religious freedom, forget about your 'rights' as a grandparent. You have none." Good for you!

"Cut Off's" letter indicates a lack of understanding of both the Gospel and of the Christian Church (Disciples of Christ). Sure we believe in "believers baptism" and understand that to be immersion. However, we have never claimed to be the only Christians, and have worked to bring the unity of Christ's people, recognizing all Christians, whatever the denomination, to be brothers and sisters in Christ.

I can only pray that "Cut Off" will someday be able to ask the forgiveness of her daughter and son-in-law and come to know their love and the love of the grandson. — RONALD E. NOWLIN, A DISCIPLE MINISTER, REDONDO BEACH, CALIF.

DEAR DISCIPLE MINISTER: I heard from many Disciple ministers, including Kenneth L. Teegarden, general minister and president of the Disciples of Christ in the United States and Canada, conveying the same message.

However, not all my readers agreed with me. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: Your curt response to the grandparents who told their son-in-law that his son was going to hell indicates that you are as intolerant as you accused these grandparents of being.

If you were in a burning building, would you be insulted by a warning from a fellow man? The intent of religious zealots is not to insult, but to warn.

It would behoove us all to examine and re-examine our beliefs. For just because the Constitution of the United States guarantees us freedom to worship God in any manner that we choose, it does not guarantee that God will be pleased with that choice.

We must put aside the popular misconception that as long as we are sincere, we'll be pleasing to him. Many, many examples in the Bible show that he wants and demands our very best in the way that he commanded it. — AN ASPIRING PLEASER OF GOD

DEAR ABBY: In response to "Cut Off in Virginia": How sad that a Christian couple alienated themselves from their daughter and grandchild because they accuse her of "condemning" their grandchild to hell for being christened in the Episcopalian church!

Our beautiful granddaughter was recently christened in an Episcopalian church, and we are so proud that our daughter and her husband are providing our grandchild with the love and support of the Christian faith in whatever church they feel comfortable in. When so many other families are burdened with illness and severe problems, "Cut Off" should thank God that she has a healthy grandchild with loving parents.

"Cut Off" and her minister husband should reread the rich heritage of the Christian Church (Disciples of Christ) and remember that one of the founders, Barton Stone, was a Presbyterian, and the purpose of the Christian Church was to unite Christians.

Your advice was strong, but as usual, excellent. Religious freedom must come before freedom to be prejudiced!

I will pray for Pastor and Mrs. Cut Off, that they might set aside their pride, embrace forgiveness and love, and enjoy their family. — ANOTHER MINISTER'S WIFE, MRS. JAMES BRADFORD, WATSONVILLE, CALIF.

BETTER BUSINESS

Policy satisfies customers

By LINDA TRUITT

When selling and dealing with the public, occasional errors and misunderstandings are bound to occur. While business owners may believe they don't have many unhappy customers, the truth is, they don't know. Studies have shown the average business does not hear from 96 percent of its dissatisfied customers. They are the least likely group to buy from that company again, and on the average will tell nine or 10 other people about their unhappy experience.

While no one can please all of the people all of the time, businesses can and should develop an effective customer relations program that will turn customer dissatisfaction into customer loyalty. Surveys indicate that they can win back between 54 percent and 70 percent of these complainers by resolving their complaints. Actually, up to 95 percent will become loyal customers again if their complaints are handled well and quickly.

We offer the following guidelines to implement an effective customer relations program:

— Establish a policy. It's very important to have a written Customer Relations Policy which employees at all levels understand and practice. A reasonable policy seeks to prevent problems and to deal with them quickly and fairly if they do occur. The policy should cover everything relating directly to customers: advertising, sales promotion, selling methods, pricing, service, warranties and refunds. It should be conspicuously posted to remind customers they can count on the business.

The policy should specifically state how, when, where and by whom complaints and questions are handled. One person within the company should have ultimate authority and responsibility for handling customer complaints and realtions. Customers should not get the "run-a-round." The designated person should be readily available to handle customers with problems or questions.

— Establish complaint handling procedures. The complaint handling system must operate simply, effectively and quickly; speed is essential in assuring customers the business cares. A solid complaint handling system should include these procedures:

— Logging-in: To allow for proper follow-through, set up a procedure whereby the date a complaint is called to attention is recorded along with any pertinent information.

— Acknowledgement: When an issue can't be resolved immediately, the customer should know it's receiving attention and, if possible, he should be told how long it will take to complete the action.

— Investigation: A high priority must be given to reviewing the facts involved. Records should be organized to allow quick access for complaint investigation.

— Decision: Decisions should be made ethically and be consistent with the established, written Customer Relations Policy.

— Response: The response should be clear and address the issues raised in the complaint. An explanation of an adverse decision may preserve goodwill.

— Follow-up: Contact the customer following the response to verify whether the matter has been resolved satisfactorily. Even though it's not possible to please everyone, valuable feedback can improve customer relations.

Stress the importance of prompt complaint handling, policy and procedures with employees and understanding policy and procedures. Handling complaints effectively can only result in increased customer loyalty and confidence, and customer loyalty and confidence will result in repeat business in 1985.

Osteoporosis: 'Silent epidemic'

By DENESE ALBRACHT

Osteoporosis has been called "the silent epidemic" for good reason. Osteoporosis — a weakening of the bone structure — is a condition that develops over time. A woman may not know she is developing this condition until she develops a "dowager's hump" or experiences broken bones from even minor falls in her later years.

The best prevention for osteoporosis is an adequate supply of calcium daily over the lifespan. Yet research studies show that most adult women are consuming less than the recommended two-servings-a-day of dairy products.

Nutritionists are also concerned about the future of the growing number of teenage girls who drink carbonated beverages rather than milk with meals and snacks.

No matter what age, it's not too late to change eating habits so it is possible to get the calcium necessary for strong bones throughout life. Just add more dairy products to your diet:

— Drink milk at meals and for snacks.

— Eat cheese as a snack or add it to other foods, such as sandwiches.

— Eat yogurt.

— When making creamed soups, use milk instead of water.

— Serve calcium-rich desserts, such as ice cream, custard or pudding.

— Add powdered milk to soups, casseroles, sauces and beverages like cocoa.

While increasing calcium intake is the key step in preventing osteoporosis, other activities also help. Regular exercise, getting enough vitamin D, eating a nutritionally adequate diet and stopping smoking will also helps keep bones strong.

CONSUMING INTERESTS

'Bubbly' is child-pleasing

By LINDA ANDERSON

Ever notice that kids, when given the choice between soft drinks and fruit juice, nine times out of 10 will pick soda? Why is that? Both drinks are cool, refreshing, sweet, thirst-quenching and delicious. So why do they prefer junk drinks?

Juice has a lot of nutrition that soft drinks don't have, but soft drinks have bubbles! Maybe that's it ...

Martinelli's Gold Medal Sparkling Cider may fool kids into thinking they are drinking soda when they are really drinking fruit juice. Its label claims the beverage contains no alcohol, but does contain carbonated apple cider and vitamin C.

We tested the cider for taste, price and advertising accuracy. Several adults and children participated in the taste-test.

Label information claims the drink has "no added sugar or preservatives" but is "crisply refreshing ... highly sparkling juice of sound, ripe California apples" and is "espcially good with cheese, turkey and other fine foods." The cider is manufacturered by S. Martinelli and Company of Watsonville, Calif.

Nutrition information on the label claims each 6-ounce serving of the cider contains 100 calories and 100 percent of the U.S. recommended daily allowance for vitamin C.

The drink is not all that easy to find. It comes in a bottle that looks just like a wine or champagne bottle, but it is stocked in the gourmet section of the supermarket. A 25.4-fluid ounce bottle of the "sparkling" juice costs $2.65; a 6-ounce can of frozen apple juice, which makes a 24-ounce pitcher of juice, costs 55-cents. And a two-liter bottle of soft drinks costs $1.59. (Prices listed are from a local supermarket. Prices at other locations may vary.)

The juice, a clear amber color, makes a very pretty drink. And it really does taste carbonated apple juice — which is what it is.

The adult taste-testers had mixed opinions. Some thought it was delicious, some thought it was fine or OK and one thought it was terrible. The teenage tester said it tasted like apple juice.

But the children were united in their opinion. They thought the juice was terrific. They both drank two glasses and begged for thirds. They liked the cider as well or better than their favorite soft drinks. Or their other favorite juices.

Apple juice has always been a favorite at our house, so, though it is expensive when compared with frozen apple juice or bottled soft drinks, we will probably buy Martinelli's again, once in a while. It isn't often that kids can find some "good-for-you" food they like that much.

Producer fields charges of racism on Kenyan set of 'Out of Africa'

By BARRY SHLACHTER

ENTERTAINMENT

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — The local lions were a little feisty so eight cats from California were flown in. And the extras had to wear fake ears because they no longer stretch their lobes and decorate them with ornaments in the traditional way.

Those were the minor problems filmmakers encountered shooting "Out of Africa," starring Robert Redford and Meryl Streep. Then there were the major problems: The movie company had to deal with charges that white extras were being paid more than twice as much as black extras.

Co-producer Terry Clegg said the gap in pay had to do with "supply and demand." Black Africans would receive a higher daily rate in Europe than white extras, he said.

Peter Njau, a 22-year-old mechanic, sat patiently one morning as drooping ears of foam latex were attached. Africans having their heads shaved or false ears glued on receive higher pay — $15 instead of the minimum $9 a day.

"They are paying very low," Njau said. "The white people are getting much more and they don't have to put anything onto their ears."

The white extras, who ranged from the local Mercedes Benz dealer to an American Presbyterian missionary and a young, unemployed West German backpacker, all received the equivalent of $25 a day.

"I have learned that I am going to get the stick for it and I have to be thick-skinned because I can't actually solve the problem," Clegg said in an interview. "We've been to the president's office, the ministries of information and labor and they can't solve the problem either."

He said that if he paid whites the same basic rate that the Africans receive, he wouldn't be able to recruit the hundreds needed for the movie. On the other hand, if he offered $25 in a country where many earn less than $3 a day, "it would cause a riot," said Clegg.

Clegg said government officials urged him not to offer pay above the local scale since it would encourage Kenyans to abandon their regular jobs for a few weeks' work, disrupting businesses here.

The issue created a stir in Nairobi when the ruling party newspaper, The Kenya Times, carried stories attacking the film's production pay policy and for allegedly forcing blacks to perform in the nude.

The government, an editorial said, "should not allow foreign film firms to come here and insult us on our own soil just because some racist author wrote a racist book ages ago."

"Out of Africa" chronicles the love affair between Karen Blixen (Meryl Streep), author of the 1937 book from which the movie takes its name, and the Oxford-educated hunter, Denys Finch Hatton. The $28 million production is directed by Sydney Pollack ("Tootsie").

One recent early morning, several weeks into the shooting, a battery of barbers gave an assembly line trim to 500 whites so they would all have an Edwardian look.

Dressers fitted them in jodhpurs, leggings, bush jackets and pith helmets or floppy "double terai" hats — two-layered felt hats early Kenyan settlers thought gave better protection from the equatorial sun.

Meanwhile, several dozen African men had their hair fixed according to the tribe they represented, and some had artificial ears fitted with silver dollar-sized wooden rings or beadwork.

"The Masai tend to come with their own ears," chief makeup artist Mary Hillman said of the perforated lobes. Others get the prosthetic variety, shipped out twice a week from London at $18 a pair.

Trainer Hubert G. Wells said all but two of the lions shipped in have been to Africa before to make other movies. The oldest, named Asali, has been here five times, and like the other veteran animal actors has had no problem adjusting.

Kenya has been the location choice of many European and American films with an African theme because of the moderate climate, good hotels and communication system. "Hatari," "Born Free," "Mr. Moses" and "Sheena Queen of the Jungle" were among motion pictures made here.

Miniseries reveals psychotic's 'Deadly Intentions' for wife

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES — Charles Raynor seemed to be a brilliant and pleasant young physician when he married Katherine Livanos. But little by little, a violent and schizophrenic personality emerged, and his terrorized wife became his chief target.

"Deadly Intentions," a two-part, four-hour movie Sunday and Monday on ABC, tells the story of how Raynor was finally stopped by a prosecutor who successfuly tried him for intent to kill Katherine, who had by then divorced him.

Michael Biehn stars as Raynor, Madolyn Smith as Katherine, Cloris Leachman as Raynor's jealous and possessive mother, and Cliff De Young as the prosecutor. "Deadly Intentions" is based on a true story. The names and locations have been changed.

"One of the reasons I was anxious to play this role is that Raynor is somewhat the same character I played in 'The Fan,'" said Biehn. In that movie, he was the psychotic fan obsessed with a star, played by Lauren Bacall.

"ABC and the producers were willing to let me take the character and explore his psychotic nature much more than I was allowed to in 'The Fan.' When I did the feature they weren't interested in doing that or in my ideas. So I felt this was a chance to play the character again and do it right."

Biehn said his only slant on Raynor was what was in the script and what was in the book, co-written by Raynor's ex-wife and the prosecutor.

"I felt their viewpoint of him was biased," he said, "and it should have been. So I had to develop my own character. I didn't have any input from the character I was playing. Even though this is based on fact, the character I play is...a figment of my imagination."

Biehn portrayed the hero in the movie "The Terminator" and was the rookie cop suspected of killing a prostitute in NBC's "Hill Street Blues." He also was in "Lords of Discipline" and the CBS movie "China Rose." His only series was "The Runaways" in 1978-79.

Wearing a flattop, Biehn shook his head when asked if he had cut his hair for a role. "It's for myself," he said. "I like my hair short. My father used to wear it like this. But it is a little limiting for roles."

Biehn (pronounced the same as bean) came to Los Angeles from Nebraska about 10 years ago and immediately began doing guest work on episodic television. He had a drama scholarship to the University of Arizona but left after one year.

Houston's Hart Galleries offers Superior Oil's art collection at sale

HOUSTON — Jerry and Wynonne Hart of Hart Galleries are handling the Public Auction of the corporate art collection and selected antique furnishings of the recently acquired independent energy firm, Superior Oil Company of Houston.

The collection is a varied group of "museum quality art" and traditional English and Continental antique furnishings "that are very collectible and sought after by private as well as corporate collections," said Barry Horn, director of public relations for Hart Galleries.

The Public Auction being held at Hart Galleries showroom at 2311 Westheimer in Houston's River Oaks area is at 7:30 p.m. Friday and 1:30 p.m. Sunday and will contain the Superior Oil collection.

Artists represented in the auction will be Thomas Hill; George H. Smillie, NA; Ben Foster, NA; Henry Pember Smith; William Lewis Sonntag, NA; Sir Joshua Reynolds, RA; Sir Henry Raeburn, PRA; Eugene Laermans; Adrien de Braekeleer; Robert Wood; Profirio Salinas; sculpture by Harry Jackson; bronzes from Ming Dynasty China and a vast collection of 19th-century Chinese bronzes and sculpture; a varied collection of English and Continental decorative furnishings, both period and 19th century as well as contemporary architectural and lighting pieces.

"The actual acquisition of one of the United States' largest independent oil companies, Superior Oil, by the third largest business in the United States, Mobil Oil, is one of the most fascinating tales of big business in our history," Horn said. "The multibillion dollar mega-merger by Mobil Oil (and) Houston-based Superior Oil was a heatedly debated topic and a corporate and family battlefield for several years."

Founded by an enigmatic oil producer, William Keck, of Los Angeles, Superior Oil Company grew to be one of the highest-traded stocks on Wall Street.

The care of the family company was put into the hands of the eldest son, William Jr. This arrangement did not satisfy Keck, who relieved the eldest son of his authority and appointed his son Howard to the position of Chief Executive Officer and empowered him with dictatorial powers over the Board of Directors.

Eventually, Howard's sister, Willametta Keck Day, was a key factor in Superior's sale, which was opposed by Howard. Shareholders in 1983 approved a resolution sponsored by Mrs. Day that was aimed at encouraging bids to acquire the independent oil company and limiting the power of her brother over the board.

In October 1983, Howard Keck resigned as a director of Superior and hired an independent banking firm to find a buyer for a large block of Superior stock he controlled. That triggered outside interest and Mobil's acquisition.

Various Superior executives did not make it across the corporate merger bridge to Mobil Oil. While these top-ranked executives had to relocate their experience elsewhere, Mobil did acquire the art and antique furnishings that decorated their multiroom suites on five floors of the First City Bank Tower in downtown Houston.

Huston's 'Under the Volcano' blasted by Mexican critics

By CONCEPCION BADILLO

MEXICO CITY (AP) — John Huston's film version of the classic novel, "Under the Volcano," finally opened here to mixed reviews and some irate feelings about what critics say is a negative portrayal of Mexico.

The major Mexico City newspaper Excelsior wrote that the movie "is a humiliating vision of Mexico."

The movie was made in Morelos state southwest of Mexico City in 1983 and opened to enthusiastic reviews at last year's Cannes Film Festival. It also was treated respectfully by critics in the United States, and was nominated for two Academy Awards — one for Albert Finney as best actor for his portrayal of the drunken consul headed toward his destruction.

However, its opening this spring in Mexico has been less successful.

"The tropical jungle, the bordello, the Little Virgin, the bull, the tequila, the sugar candy skull, return to showing, for what is now a tiresome time, the image of Mexico in this movie. It seems that Mexico has nothing else going for it in the eyes of the foreigner, specifically of the American," the Excelsior article said.

Malcolm Lowry's novel is set in the 1930s in Cuernavaca, the resort city and capital of Morelos state 45 miles southwest of Mexico City. It has become something of a cult work over the years and, although many scripts were written, none was brought to the screen until Huston filmed it.

The Mexican government is a co-producer of the movie.

Pope says many people 'dazzled by prosperity'

By KEVIN COSTELLOE

LUXEMBOURG (AP) — Pope John Paul II told almost 40,000 Roman Catholics at an outdoor Mass today that too many people are "dazzled by progress and prosperity," leaving them slaves of work or entertainment and prone to disillusionment.

John Paul was on the second day of a brief stop in Luxembourg, where he earlier appealed to Common Market nations to give more surplus food to African famine victims.

The pope said Mass on a raised altar at a city parking lot on Ascension Thursday, the feast marking Christ's return to heaven and a national holiday in Luxembourg.

Police estimated the crowd at almost 40,000 people. Church officals say 97.3 percent of Luxembourg's 366,000 people are Roman Catholic. Grand Duke Jean was among those attending the Mass, as were the mayors of most of the country's 313 towns and cities.

After the Mass, the pope planned a trip to Echternach, about 20 miles northeast of Luxembourg city, to visit the tomb of St. Willibrord, who founded a Benedictine monastery there in the year 698.

After noon, the pope was to fly to Brussels' Melsbroek military airport just outside the capital of bilingual Belgium. To avoid a linguistic dispute, the pope was to be taken by helicopter into Brussels, which is officially bilingual ground, from Melsbroek which is Dutch-speaking territory.

AP Laserphoto

Pope John Paul II listens as Cynthia, the 4-year-old daughter of a Luxembourg woman married to a native of Krakow, Poland, speaks to him in Polish.

The Belgian royal family and Belgian church leaders were set to welcome him at the Cinquantenaire Park.

In his homily, which the pope delivered in French and German, he told the Luxembourg crowd, "Open up your working week to God by keeping the Sabbath holy and partaking regularly of the Eucharist,"

"Respect the Lord's Day as a precious gift," he added. "In this way we can avoid becoming the slaves of work or entertainment."

He also decried the trend away from religion in many countries. "People today have been dazzled by progress and prosperity and often look only to Earth," John Paul said. "They look no further than the world in which they are enclosed, they accept secularization."

"Man's blindness leads him to cherish illusions and to make idols of earthly realities, which results in deep disillusionment and suicidal behavior," he said.

During an earlier meeting with priests and nuns, the pontiff defended the church's ban on married priests, saying celibacy provides "greater freedom for undivided service" to the church. He also cited the "pressing question" of a decline in Catholic religious vocations in many parts of the world.

DO YOU WANT A NORMAL LENS?

We don't think so. In the past the so called "normal lense" was far less expensive than lenses of other types, especially zoom lenses. Now for only $80 more than the price of a 50mm lens you can get a 35-70 2.8 macro zoom lens. We call this lens a "super normal" because it drastically increases the versatility of your 35mm camera. You get 3 different lenses in one small package. Wide angles for scenery and groups, telephoto for sports and portraits plus the added bonus of macro for close-ups of flowers, etc. When you buy any of today's exceptional 35mm cameras, match it with the Sigma 35-70 12.8 Macro "Super Normal"

Beirut paper gets photos

Sister of missing U.S. newsman encourages trip to seek release

AP Laserphoto

A Shiite Moslem woman shows her daughter damage created when an artillery shell hit the roof of their kitchen in the southern suburbs of Beirut.

Aidan Walsh

BATAVIA, N.Y. (AP) — When the State Department reported an abducted newsman's picture was among those of six hostages sent to a Beirut newspaper, his sister's first reaction was to fly to the Mideast and beg for their release.

"If I had the money I think I'd do it, even with only the slightest possibility it would do any good," said Peggy Say, sister of Associated Press Chief Middle East correspondent Terry Anderson, who was abducted March 16 in Beirut.

The color picture of Anderson, 37, was released Wednesday by the terrorist group Islamic Holy War along with the pictures of three other Americans and two French diplomats kidnapped between March of 1984 and March 1985.

The photographs were accompanied by three statements addressed to the families of the hostages, to the Rev. Jesse Jackson and to "the international public, namely the American people."

The terrorists, demanding that the Kuwaiti government free alleged terrorists it has imprisoned, said Wednesday that they had given conditions for release of the six hostages "for the last time."

Mrs. Say said she learned of the captors' demands at about 6:30 p.m. Wednesday when a State Department official called her.

"It's terrifying. We don't know what to think, what we're supposed to do," Mrs. Say said.

The other captives were identified by the independent west Beirut daily newspaper An Nahar as Presbyterian Rev. Benjamin Weir, U.S. Embassy official William Buckley, Catholic missionary Martin Lawrence Jenco — all Americans — and French diplomats Marcel Fontaine and Marcel Carton.

The kidnappers did not mention a fifth American missing in Lebanon, 60-year-old Peter Kilburn, a librarian at the American University of Beirut who vanished from his west Beirut apartment in November.

The newspaper said there was no way to confirm the identity of all six men beyond doubt. Nothing in the pictures indicated when they were taken.

Mrs. Say said she wanted to talk to Jackson in Chicago to find out what he intends to do.

"I'm going to ask him to please go to Kuwait," she said. "It may be irrational, but he's the only one addressed" specifically in the captors' ultimatum.

Mrs. Say said she moved from Florida to be near her sister, Judith Blouin of East Bethany, about 35 miles from Rochester in western New York. She said she felt helpless because the terrorists called on the hostages' families to help bring about the release of their loved ones.

Mrs. Say and Mrs. Blouin met with Jackson last week in Washington, D.C., where he told them he would fight for the release of Anderson and the others.

Jackson, like Anderson's sisters, made a videotaped plea for the hostages' release that is to be broadcast soon over Lebanese television, Mrs. Say said.

Jackson also bought several full-page advertisements in Beirut newspapers last month, calling for the release of all kidnapped foreigners as a sign of good faith.

The Islamic Jihad statement addressed to Jackson said last month's appeal showed Jackson's "ignorance" because the group is not confined to Shiites, but includes all "Moslems of various sects who are defending Islam against American aggression."

She said she understands the U.S. government's position that it cannot "trade body for body" with the terrorists.

"But in this case," she said, "I'd give them anybody they want."

She said she does not intend to pressure the State Department for negotiations. "I really believe they're doing everything possible. My harassing them won't help any," she said.

Five persons killed; Summit talks prepared

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Battles in central Beirut killed five more people today, and newspapers said President Amin Gemayel is preparing for summit talks with President Hafez Assad of Syria on the new outbreak of factional violence.

Christian and Moslem militias battled with mortars, rocket-propelled grenades and machine guns across the Green Line that separates Beirut into Moslem and Christian sectors.

The blast of shellfire echoed sporadically through the city as the overall casualty toll since April 28 climbed to 108 killed and 543 injured, according to police count.

All but one crossing along the Green Line remained closed by intense sniper fire, said a police spokesman, who declined to be identified in keeping with government regulations.

The independent newspaper an-Nahar and leftist as-Safir said a summit between Gemayel and Assad would probably take place within two days.

Press reports said that in the past three days, Vice President Abdul-Halim Khaddam, the architect of Syria's 1976 military intervention, had conferred with Gemayel's political adviser Michel Samaha, Lebanon's Druse warlord Walid Jumblatt, his Shiite Moslem ally Nabih Berri and Saudi Arabian mediator Rafik Hariri.

Tamil-speaking Sri Lankans slain

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka (AP) — About 50 Tamil-speaking Sri Lankans were hacked and burned to death by attackers seeking revenge for the deaths of almost 150 people in a raid by Tamil separatists, government and news reports said.

Police said sailors from the Sri Lankan navy attacked a coastal ferry off northern Jaffna Peninsula on Wednesday, and hacked about 40 people to death with axes, swords and knives.

However, a senior official in Colombo, the capital, said the navy was not involved in the attack. He said 31 people died and many more were hospitalized in Jaffna, the major city of northern Sri Lanka, where Tamils are the majority. "The navy has flatly denied that any of their boats were anywhere in the region. The navy commander, Rear Adm. Asoka de Silva, has personally checked on this and reported to the government," said the official, who spoke on condition he not be identified.

Tamils, who constitute about 18 percent of Sri Lanka's population of 16 million, have been waging a three-year violent campaign for a separate homeland in northern and eastern parts of the island.

The United News of India said 28 Tamils were butchered, including a 4-year-old girl, and that 30 were wounded. A Sri Lankan journalist reported from the city of Jaffna the assailants were said to be wearing khaki uniforms.

At least 13 other Tamils were reported killed and at least a dozen homes set on fire around Anuradhapura, site of the Tamil guerrilla raid Tuesday. Authorities said 146 people died in the guerrilla attack, most of them in a hail of gunfire at a bus stop.

There also were reports of attacks on Tamils in western and southern Sri Lanka, but no details were available. Sri Lanka formerly was known as Ceylon.

Anuradhapura, 122 miles south of Jaffna, is mainly inhabited by the majority Sinhalese population, which is predominantly Buddhist. The Tamil minority is mainly Hindu.

More than 500 people, mostly Tamil civilians, have died since last November in Army reprisal attacks, according to official count. More than 8,000 Tamil refugees have fled to India from Sri Lanka since early this year in plastic boats, saying they wanted to escape atrocities by the Sinhalese-dominated army.

India's Tamil Nadu state, home to India's 50 million Tamils, has several Tamil militant organizations, who maintain close links with Sri Lankan rebels. The Indian government denies it shelters or trains Tamil guerrillas. Militant groups in Tamil Nadu often issue statements condemning army attacks on Tamils and claiming responsibility for rebel strikes against troops.

A government spokesman said the Tamils who raided Anuradhapura had been spotted by a military helicopter Wednesday in the Wilpattu game preserve 30 miles west of the city. He said they fired at the helicopter, wounding one commando.

"Villagers have said that they have broken up into two groups of 14 and 11 and the larger group was carring three men on stretchers. They have got two vehicles, a tractor and a jeep," said the official, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

The attack in Anuradhapura was the first major Tamil guerrilla strike in the predominantly Sinhalese area south of the Jaffna Peninsula and the first major attack on unarmed civilians.

Most Tamil groups seeking an independent homeland in the north have denounced the attack in Anuradhapura.

"It is a barbaric and uncivilized act, to be condemned, whoever has done it. It is true our people are being killed every day by the army but that doesn't justify killing innocent people," Sri Sabaratnam, spokesman for the Tamil Eelam Liberation Organization, said Wednesday in Madras, India.

A government spokesman said earlier that Sabaratnam's group had claimed responsibility for the raid.

Transportation ills hurt famine relief

Associated Press

Relief agencies say a host of transportation problems are imperiling efforts to move food to about 2 million famine victims in Sudan, and to more than a million Ethiopians working to prevent future famines.

Arthur Holcombe, director of the U.N. Development Program, told AP correspondent Robert Reid in Khartoum, Sudan, on Wednesday that about 1.6 million tons of cereals and other foods have been allocated by foreign donors, enough to supply Sudan's needs until the October harvest.

However, he said: "It's becoming increasingly clear that this amount cannot be delivered in the balance of this year. A whole range of logistical factors constrain the ability to deliver cereals."

The food must be delivered to storage areas in the drought-stricken Kordofan, Darfur and the White Nile regions before annual rains begin in June or early July. The rains are expected to begin about the time that food supplies from last year's poor harvest run out.

Officials of U.N. and private relief agencies said they probably could get enough food into eastern Sudan, where more than 400,000 Ethiopians have settled in refugee camps. However, they said millions of Sudanese and 60,000 Chadian refugees face starvation or severe malnutrition in areas to the west.

"A lot of people will die in Darfur, and it's a great shame because the food is there," said Andrew Timpson of Britain's Save the Children organization.

Holcombe and others say the transportation problems include an inadequate rail system between Kosti, 150 miles south of Khartoum, and Nyala, about 600 miles to the west.

"They could probably move 500 tons of food a day out of Kosti," Timpson said. "But they're not moving nearly that much. They don't have enough rolling stock, the rail lines are poor and there have been administrative delays."

Relief workers also say bandits have been ambushing truck convoys which carry grain from Nyala to feeding centers. Most convoys travel at night to avoid daytime temperatures of 110-120 degrees.

Several relief officials said the bandits are believed to include men who cross into western Sudan from Chad and the Central African Republic, which have also been severely affected by the drought.

Black crowd kills man in Soweto township

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — A crowd of about 150 blacks killed a 27-year-old black man with spades and pitchforks in Soweto township outside Johannesburg, police said today.

There was no immediate explanation for the Wednesday afternoon slaying, police headquarters in Pretoria said in a statement. Attacks by blacks against other blacks seen as collaborators with the white-minority government have increased in recent months.

After a proliferation of recent stoning incidents, government buses refused to enter Soweto Wednesday evening. Thousands of commuters trudged to their homes from the edge of the township, witnesses said.

Police reported isolated incidents of stone-throwing and firebombings late Wednesday and early today in seven black townships, but violence appeared to be waning after several days of anti-apartheid rioting. Police said they used birdshot and rubber bullets to break up black crowds in some cases.

Nearly 350 blacks have been killed in nine months of unrest, most of them in clashes with riot police, according to groups opposed to the government's system of institutionalized racial separation, known as apartheid.

The United Democratic Front, a coalition of anti-apartheid groups, said its office in Cape Town was searched Wednesday by security police who confiscated some documents. Sixteen leaders of the group are facing treason charges.

Trevor Manuel, the Front's Cape Province secretary, said police objected to the choice of Zoli Malindi, a "listed" person who may not be quoted in South Africa, as president of the Western Cape branch. Manuel said the interference in the group's internal functions amounted to "harassment."
