$3,000,000 STATE BOND ISSUE IS ORDERED

TO BE EXCHANGED FOR PERMANENT TEXAS U. FUNDS

REASONS FOR ISSUANCE GIVEN IN LETTER TO STATE TREASURER

AUSTIN, April 7. (AP)—Governor Miriam A. Ferguson today notified W. Gregory Hatcher, state treasurer that she will issue manuscript bonds of the state to be exchanged at par value for the permanent University of Texas fund amounting to "some $3,000,000." She stated that in due time "the same shall be offered to the state board of education and the treasury at par and bearing five percent interest per annum."

"I am taking this action for many reasons," the letter read. "In the first place, if the permanent university fund is invested in U. S. bonds, the state will have to pay such premium as will make said bonds net the fund scarcely more than three percent interest. The bonds which I shall issue will net the permanent university fund five percent interest, a saving of $60,000 a year, which saving alone in ten years would erect a permanent fire proof building having floor space equal to that of all the unsightly shacks now on the university property. The university has been so handicapped in its building program that it ought to have all the income that can be obtained by the proper investment of this fund."

"In the second place, when this fund is invested in these bonds this $3,000,000 will be available for appropriation by the Legislature. The amount required for general appropriations will be reduced by that sum and the tax

Mystery Surrounds Disappearance Of Son Of U. S. Official From College

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Apr. 7. (AP)—Mystery surrounded the reported disappearance today of Douglas Robinson, son of the Assistant Secretary of the Navy, a Sophomore at Harvard College.

Although it was said officially at Harvard that he had been "reported attending classes this morning," no one could be found who had seen him. At his rooming house in Linden St., all information concerning his whereabouts was refused, nor would Miss Malone, who manages the house, say whether he had been in his room last night or during the past few days. Earlier in the day she had reported he had gone to New York but later refused to confirm or deny this statement.

The University later received word that the student's father was leaving Washington by train, abandoning his earlier intention to come by naval airplane, and would arrive at ten o'clock tonight.

Three Planes Ready
WASHINGTON, April 7. (AP)—Two naval airplanes were ordered put in readiness to take Assistant Secretary Robinson to Boston where his son is reported missing.

BUCKNER MAKES CHARGES BEFORE PRO COMMITTEE

SAYS 60,000,000 GALLONS OF LIQUOR DIVERTED IN U. S. ANNUALLY

WASHINGTON, April 7. (AP)—An intimate picture of the trial of lawlessness and corruption uncovered in prohibition enforcement in New York was given to a Senate committee today by Emory R. Buckner, Federal District Attorney for the Metropolitan.

"An atmosphere of collusion" in the Federal building was described by the witness. He told of finding a seething mass of "fixers," bootleggers, waiters, and others in the building when he took office thirteen months ago.

Says Jurors Bribed
Jurors were bribed even in the Federal building itself, Buckner said, but these conditions are now improved and the courts are catching up with their dockets.

Alcohol diversion was described by the witness as the major difficulty in enforcement. Diversion now amounts to 60,000,000 gallons a year, he said, over the entire country.

"You mean sixty millions in one year?" asked Chairman Means. "Yes, one year," Buckner said. To speed up the proceedings, the committee decided to hold a session tonight.

Committee members dwell for some time on the witness' declaration that 60,000,000 gallons of alcohol was diverted annually.

"The only way I can visualize that sixty millions gallons to you is in the terms of bootleg liquor," Buckner explained. "Taking the formula for 'splitting' whiskey given yesterday by General Andrews, and placing the price at five dollars a bottle, you get the astounding total of $3,000,000,000."

"It's ten dollars a bottle out of my country," said Senator Reed of Missouri.

"You ought to know," cut in Chairman Means. "I do," returned Senator Reed, and the crowd which jammed the committee room howled.

"Isn't some of that alcohol captured and destroyed?" asked Senator Harreid, Republican, Oklahoma.

Poison Found In Bootleg
Buckner thought the percentage destroyed very small. The District Attorney said the chemists found traces of poison in 25 percent of the bootleg liquor seized.

Buckner told of a single still in New Jersey, recently seized, which redistilled 4,000 gallons of completely denatured alcohol a day. Turning to "bootleg druggists," he said that drug stores in New York City drew out 480,000 gallons of liquor a year, whereas the amount for which doctors could legally issue prescriptions was for only 240,000 gallons.

"This illegal business," he said, "was on a retail price of $8 a quart."

ITHACA, N. Y., April 7. (AP)—A gain of twenty feet in length in a two-mile race, an increase of ten percent in power, conservation of energy and reduction of the possibilities of infection are claimed for changes in shell construction devised by Guy E. Long, assistant coach of Cornell's varsity crews.

Fonken, Buffalo southpaw ace, who beat out the local amateurs here last summer while playing with Amarillo was master of the occasion throughout giving up only seven safe hits including a circuit and a triple by Marshall. Six errors on the part of his teammates, however, would have proved disastrous but for the heavy stick work of the visitors.

Eleven Georgetown University stars each traveled 1,134 miles to and from Washington, D. C., to compete. They came farther than the members of any other team, and the eleven men allowed a rebate on the basis of having traveled 34,474 miles.

The improvements, growing out of study made by Long since the intercollegiate regatta at Poughkeepsie last June, consist primarily of a sliding ball-bearing car lock, a rocking foot-rest and pneumatic pads for the sliding seats of the shell.

Wright was relieved at the opening of the fourth by Hancock, another southpaw, who showed good form and a good delivery but a clear lack of sequencing. Hancock retired in the eighth in favor of Walker, big right-hander, who due to his lack of training on the diamond, was wild. Walker had been devoting the most of his time to track work, and his lack of control due to this was his main fault.

Among other athletes allowed a rebate were those from Oklahoma University, Oklahoma A. and M., Kansas University, Kansas A. and M., Missouri University, Illinois University, Ohio State, Ohio Wesleyan, Northwestern, Drake, and Haskell Institute.

The rocking foot rest, as installed by Coach Long, gives from 18 to 14 inches more slide, thus keeping the car in the water much longer on the pull and driving the boat approximately three feet farther on each stroke. The inventor said this is accomplished with much less leg strain and drudgery than under the present system of rowing.

Wright was relieved at the opening of the fourth by Hancock, another southpaw, who showed good form and a good delivery but a clear lack of sequencing. Hancock retired in the eighth in favor of Walker, big right-hander, who due to his lack of training on the diamond, was wild. Walker had been devoting the most of his time to track work, and his lack of control due to this was his main fault.

Much of the success of the Texas University relay carnival is attributed to the splendid showing of Coach Littlefield's proteges at Kansas and Drake.

The pneumatic seat pads are installed to take up much of the wasted motion as well as to counteract any unevenness or roll of the shell. Coach Long believes the pneumatic seat pads also will reduce chances of infection now a bugbear of rowing.

HOUSE TO HOUSE SELLING IS MORE COSTLY PLAN

As the result of an actual investigation to determine whether a well-known manufacturer should change from the retailer to the canvasser method of distribution, the Harvard Business Administration at Harvard University says:

"House-to-house selling is not a means of lowering distribution costs. The inherent difficulties in house-to-house selling make the task of securing, training and retaining salesmen a very perplexing problem, and the supervision of a large and scattered force of comparatively low-grade salesmen considerably increases expenses.

"Because salesmen for house-to-house canvassing are hard to secure, companies using this method of selling must offer relatively high rates of commission on all sales.

"When a manufacturer assumes the function of the retailer, his costs must also be assumed. Consequently, the cost of selling directly to the consumer by a canvassing method does not result in lowering the expenses of distribution.

Merchandise comparable in quality to that offered by canvassers and equal or lower in price is invariably carried by retail stores.

TREES CANNOT VOTE

If trees could vote we would not have to speak for them. Plenty of attention would be paid to their welfare. Since they don't go to the polls we all have a duty toward them.

Fifty years ago the first organized effort to help the forests was made by the United States government. The American Tree association, with headquarters at Washington, D. C., is observing the centennial by the publishing of the "Forestry Primer," by Charles Lathrop Pack.

Looking ahead another 50 years to 1976, Mr. Pack asks if the country will have advanced any toward economic forestry independence. He shows in his primer, briefly and pointedly, how the cost of living is increased through dwindling forest resources. The book is worthwhile and may be had by any organization or person for simply a three-cent stamp.

NOT ALL FLAMING YOUTH

Kansas City business men, in a page advertisement, appeal to "flaming youth" to give up the tawdry pleasures of the world and come into "the big tent" which is the church.

Why shouldn't the church combat the world of tinsel pastimes by fighting it on its own ground?

The church can offer the solid substance in place of the shadow.

But we shouldn't make the mistake of thinking that all youth follows after the doubtful pleasures of the world to the total exclusion of better things.

Millions of young people take an active part in church affairs today, and find real pleasure in it.

They are not all "flaming youths."

Congress has gradually been cleaning up its slate. And so have the hard coal operators.

STEWART'S WASHINGTON LETTER

ANYHOW, THE SENATOR DOES LOOK LIKE A KEWPIE

By CHARLES P. STEWART NEA Service Writer.

WASHINGTON. — Congressmen vary. By congressmen, I mean senators and representatives, both.

Publicity is very valuable to a congressman. He likes it. If he gets his job. Most of them are, at least to the extent of knowing that it pays a politician to figure, good and plenty in print.

One type enjoys praise but resents adverse criticism. The other type welcomes anything it can get. If it gets praise, good. If not, it extends the glad hand to vilification, ridicule, anything, as far better than nothing at all.

Senator Guy D. Goff of West Virginia falls in classification No. 1.

Goff has brains. He makes a dandy speech, but he's sensitive and evidently a thoroughly serious-minded chap. In contrast with this mental slant, physically he's a roly-poly guy, who makes you laugh when you look at him—not a disagreeable laugh, a good natured one.

Well, Goff made a speech one day, which I had occasion to refer to in one of these letters I write, and, so help me John Rogers, it was a complimentary reference, but I did remark that Goff looked like a kewpie, as he got his oratory off his chest.

Believe it or not, in less than no time I'd had half a dozen representations made to me, by Guy D. Goff's friends, that that was a darned mean thing I'd said. Finally an emissary called formally to find out why I hated the senator so.

Migosh! I don't. Making due allowance for the fact that he's a "regular of regulars," which some people consider quite all right and others consider absolutely all wrong, I think he's one of our leading senators, in character and ability. But he looks like a kewpie. I stand by that.

"I do like music," Parrish said. The girl sat on the organ stool and arranged the steps on the instrument. This organ can do double duty. It plays by electricity when I'm lazy; when I'm feeling energetic I do the playing myself. There's a Wagner roll in here now.

THESE WOMEN

BEGIN HERE TODAY HARRY MORTON, rich, handsome and unmarried, has an adopted daughter, AUDREY, with whom he lives in Peoria, but whom he takes with him on frequent trips to Chicago, where he has an apartment. The town gossips never have learned his real business.

A man whom Morton calls "MITH," and who claims to be Audrey's stepfather, appears after 18 years' absence and Morton ships him hurriedly to South America. NONA a Chicago girl, madly in love with Morton, falls into a jealous rage and seeks to humiliate him with the aid of a man and another girl. He laughs at the plot and leaves. She comes to his apartment to plead for forgiveness and is overheard by Audrey, who declares her own love for Morton and asks him to marry her. He refuses. He hires JOHN PARRISH as his secretary and tells the young man he must undertake to be a companion to Audrey. He takes him to his apartment to dine. Audrey whispers to Morton, asking him to point blank if he has introduced Parrish as a candidate for her hand.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY. (The names and situations in this story are fictitious.)

thing lively," he urged. There was a pucker of mischief about her eyes as she answered. "All right, I'll play 'Oh Promise Me.'" She kept her eyes on him and sang the words lightly as she played: "Oh promise me that some day you and I—"

Morton's face was rather grim as he signaled to her that he understood. At the end he stood up and said: "Parrish doesn't know how to dance. Let's give him a lesson. I'll strum on his guitar and you try him out on the two-step. That's easy and almost fashionable."

The girl arose and obeyed without demur. While Morton was tuning the instrument she instructed Parrish in the proper positions for his hands and feet.

He was a willing pupil. With knitted brows and clenched jaw he followed her instructions carefully. In time to the "plunk plunk" of the guitar he ventured forth on the dance. He was by no means awkward, and, after five minutes of serious effort, gained confidence in himself enough to speak as he tripped laboriously around the room.

"I'm trying not to step on your feet now," he told Audrey.

She gave a quick smile. "Really you're doing very nicely," she assured him.

He fell out of step at this and there was a moment's confusion until she

"You weren't cruel," she said. "You're never cruel. I know I was a little beast, but oh—daddy dearest—my mind was so full of what I wanted to say to you that I could not talk to him at all."

Morton touched the girl lightly on the arm.

"I'll tell you everything you want to know after Mr. Parrish has gone, but child—don't embarrass the poor boy by holding whispered conversations in corners."

He turned away and Audrey followed him. Her manner was subdued and she took little part in the conversation until after dinner. When they left the dining room she took a chair to the dark street outside. The two men chatted at the other end of the room. Morton's eyes seeking from time to time to catch those of the girl. Then, at length, she looked up. She caught the slight frown upon his brow. In quick understanding she arose and walked slowly toward the organ console.

"Do you care for music, Mr. Parrish?" she asked.

Parrish's face lighted with pleasure. Morton watched him in an effort to determine whether the pledge from his receiving any notice from her at all.

"I do like music," Parrish said. The girl sat on the organ stool and arranged the steps on the instrument. This organ can do double duty. It plays by electricity when I'm lazy; when I'm feeling energetic I do the playing myself. There's a Wagner roll in here now.

She thrust the starting lever and the organ thrummed into the "Wedding March."

The music stopped abruptly. "I thought that was another roll," the girl said, hugging herself with the mechanism. Her face had colored.

"I like that," said Parrish. "It's pretty."

She did not answer, but taking out a perforated roll, she placed it back in its container.

"I think I'd rather do the playing myself," she said at length. She swept into the "Dead March" from "Haul." Parrish listened, happily enough, and Morton was smiling a little as he studied the bowed head of the girl. When she had finished and without pause began the tremolo of a Scottish dirge, Morton interrupted.

"Shush!" he exclaimed. "Let's postpone the funeral service." She let her hands fall to her lap. "I'll play whatever you want me to play," she said, obediently. "Try some ballad music or some-is your acceptance," he said. "If you want to sign now I'll have the notary down at my office attest your signature in the morning and we'll shoot these papers back to them."

"I never made a million any easier," Morton said, seating himself at the table and picking up the pen. "I bid—"

He expected them to offer more than twenty or twenty-five cents on the dollar at most.

The other man pointed with his finger at a line on which Morton was to sign. "You have too big a reputation down in that country for winning lawsuits," he suggested.

Morton signed his name in the three or four places indicated by his attorney and laughed. "I've put how much actual money I've won into that scheme?" he asked.

The other man shook his head. "It was exactly two hundred and sixty-one dollars," Morton laughed.

"But—" his face grew serious—"I put in five years of the hardest work I ever did in my life. And that money was as big to me then as five million would be now."

"That's getting a bargain," his visitor said, as he buttoned his coat preparatory to leaving.

Morton let him out by a door leading directly to the main hall of the building. For a few minutes Morton leafed over the carbon copies that lay on the desk and then put them away with an air of complete content.

He returned to the drawing room, but one pace inside the door he stopped and looked around.

Audrey was sitting there alone. "Where's Parrish?" he demanded.

The girl arose, and coming to him laid her hands on his breast.

"I asked him to go because I said I had a headache," she said, her eyes lowered. "I couldn't stand talking to him for some reason."

Morton took her hands in his and moved away from her a step.

"That was not well done," he said, his voice kind but firm. "You had no headache and you shouldn't have treated him that way."

"I wanted to talk to you," she said. "Audrey," he said, "little white lies are as mean as any other lies, actually. They are not meant to the people we tell them to; they are meant to ourselves. They get us in a habit of mind where we automatically tell falsehoods—and I don't want you ever to tell falsehoods, dear."

He went to his arm-chair and sat down, leaning slightly forward with his fingers clasped together and his elbows on the arms of the chair. His face told where he left her, her eyes still upon the floor and her hands clasped before her.

"My dear little girl," he went on, "you were being unkind to him and he knew it. It is all right, if you desire, to be unkind to people who are powerful. They can take care of themselves—they're not easily hurt."

"But he is helpless. I am his employer and you're a beautiful girl. He is poor and you are rich. You have the means to hurt him and he cannot strike back. It is up to you and me to be considerate and helpful to everybody who is humble and weak. If he were a rich young man, with an assured social position, you could have him thrown out of doors on his ear. I wouldn't care. But don't ever attack those who are defenseless, Audrey dear."

He made an ejaculation of concern. The girl had begun to cry. He arose hastily and took her in his arms.

"There, there! I didn't mean to be cruel!"

She was sobbing with her cheek against his coat.

"You weren't cruel," she said. "You are never cruel. I know I was a little beast, but oh—daddy dearest—my mind was so full of what I wanted to say to you that I could not talk to him at all."

He patted her cheek and smoothed the ringlets back from her ear.

"Come over and sit down," he said, and tell me what it was you wanted to say."

She wiped her eyes and dabbed at her nose with a tiny pad of silk that she drew from her vanity box.

As he seated himself she drew a chair beside him and sat leaning over and embracing his forearm.

"Daddy," said she, "you are trying to marry me to that young man!"

Morton temporized. "What makes you think so?"

"When a woman's in love she has an intuition about those things," she said.

She took his hand and thoughtfully separated his fingers, one by one. "I always have felt your thoughts, just as if you had spoken them, ever since I was a little girl," she went on. "But there is one thing I don't know—one thing I'm not sure about. I want you to tell me, daddy.

"Are you in love with Nona—are you going to marry her?"

BEAUTY CONTESTS

A young lay who represented a peopled eastern city in one of the recent bathing beauty contests has sued for divorce. Her husband replies that she "has never been the same" since she won the contest.

The chief objection to bathing beauty contests, like the objection to over-emphasis on college football, lies not in the effect on those who take part.

How anyone could expect a young, immature girl to remain level-headed and poised after going through a big bathing beauty contest is a mystery.

EXPERTS DISCUSS FRECKLES AND HIS FRIENDS CONTRASTS IN HOME LIFE

WASHINGTON, Apr. 7.—The elements favoring and hampering real home life and the development of children in the city home, as opposed to the suburban or country home, are discussed by two specialists on the subject, Dr. John M. Gries and James Spear Taylor, in the current issue of the "Child Welfare Magazine" published today. The entire issue is given over to the advancement of the cause of better homes in America. Dr. Gries is chief of the Division of Building and Housing of the Department of Commerce, and a director of Better Homes in America. Mr. Taylor is his assistant.

City life has certain advantages, in most instances, such as the convenience of running water which eases the burden of housework considerably. Also, there is commonly less danger from polluted water, and many city homes are connected with gas or electric lines, or both. Laundry may be called for and delivered on short notice. Groceries and fresh milk are delivered to the door. Restaurants can furnish meals inexpensively when it is inconvenient to prepare them at home. Favored side walks minimize the dirt tracked into the home. All of these elements greatly reduce the labor required for many housekeeping tasks.

On the other hand, the article points out, cities are sooty, necessitating more frequent washing and house-cleaning. There must be more laundering for members of the family who must make a presentable appearance. Luminous and other tasks performed outside the home must be paid for. Frequently the mother must seek employment outside the home—a serious handicap in the upbringing of children. In many other cases children of the family go to work, often under none too satisfactory conditions.

Many city families live in such congested districts that sufficient air and sunshine for children and infants is hard to obtain. City homes are frequently smaller than country homes, and the problem of bringing up children increases greatly as the space and number of rooms in the home go below a certain point. In a small flat it is much harder for children to do effective work in their lessons and take an interest in reading or find scope for developing aptitude for mechanical contrivances or handicraft things. It is harder to maintain high standards where a room is used jointly for cooking and living purposes. Also, families living in apartments are subject to the annoyances of neighbors with differing tastes respecting the radio and the phonograph, and who may be boisterous, particularly at the time children should go to sleep.

The article points out that some of these difficulties may be overcome through home reading, home guests, and other means. Home guests, which makes for progress. For that reason it is our belief that Better Homes demonstrations embodying the results of careful research into the problems of the city home deserve a high and established place among the many activities of the modern city.

Concluding the article says: "The family with a city home has a very wide range of problems to solve, as all of this discussion may have served to indicate. It is in line with the whole development of our modern civilization that the specialized study of recurring problems by individuals and the joint consideration of their conclusions leads to the birth of new means of solving old problems and to a spirit and attitude of mind which makes for progress. For that reason it is our belief that Better Homes demonstrations embodying the results of careful research into the problems of the city home deserve a high and established place among the many activities of the modern city."

TEXAS PIONEERS TO GATHER AT SAN ANTONIO

SAN ANTONIO, April 7. (AP)—Friends of long ago, some of whom, as early settlers of Texas, prepared the way for the state's millions of inhabitants of today, will be reunited here April 19, to live for a day in the memories of the past.

The occasion will be the eighth annual meeting of the State Association of Texas Pioneers. Always held in San Antonio during the week of the Fiesta de San Jacinto, the assembly is limited to one day, so as not to be too much of a strain on the older members.

But that one day is crowded with entertainment for the pioneers, culminated by the annual ball. And this year the ball will have an added feature, in that it will be held in the magnificent municipal auditorium, if present plans do not fall. This event would be the first to take place in the Mission style edifice now nearly completed.

The cost of having the ball in the auditorium would be $400, which is to be the minimum rent charged by the city except when the building is used for church or charity purposes when the rent will be $250. Officials of the association said this sum would be a heavy drain upon the treasury, but there is no other place in the city which can comfortably accommodate the crowds attending the ball. Too, they feel that it is only fitting that to the pioneers should come the honor of opening the new auditorium, even though that opening is informal, by it would be April 19.

There are 1,999 members of the association, of whom 1,999 are in good standing. All parts of the state are represented in the membership, which is open to persons who lived in Texas prior to 1880 and their husbands and wives and descendants.

"The ball is a distinctive social event in that it marks a return to the

YOUTHFUL SET IN ASSASSINATION OF MUSSOLINI IS ATTEMPTED

There is a certain set of boys of public school age in this city who are now treading a path that may later not only send them to a house of correction or to a state institution for the lawless, but may also send their parents to an early grave if something is not done to check the degenerations of the youngsters. Chief of Police T. E. May told the Daily Journal Wednesday.

TO BE EXCHANGED FOR PERMANENT TEXAS U. FUNDS

rate will be further reduced by approximately thirty percent. The Legislature could then appropriate the money for any purpose permitted by law. The amount could be appropriated for completion of the Texas A. and M. college-building program, or it could be appropriated for building purposes for the State Teachers college, or a substantial sum could be appropriated for additional buildings at the West Texas Technological College. However, what I would like to see done, and I shall so recommend to the Legislature, is that this sum be appropriated to supplement the common school fund which would run the appropriation next year up to approximately $15 per capita without any additional increase in the state rates for that purpose. This would provide next year a school term of more than seven months in the common schools.

Students Arrested For Attempted Putsch

BUDEPEST, Hungary, Apr. 7. (AP)—Frustrations of an attempted putsch of serious character is announced in a police report today. A band of fanatical university students, it says, was caught mobilizing last week for an armed rally into Czechoslovakia. Six of the ring leaders were arrested. An unofficial version of the affair has it that a former arch-duke was implicated.

of his testimony. "It seems to me to many people regard it as a treaty of peace." "I have no doubt that prohibition could be enforced in my district if we had the right kind of machinery. It has never been tried neither by the state nor the federal government, because with the kind of federal courts we have, where jury trials are necessary, police law cannot be enforced in such a congested district as New York City." Describes Conditions New York when he took office, Buckner said state and federal officers were arresting 50,000 persons a year for violations of the liquor law, many arrests are "I found the federal building a seething mass of bartenders, peddlers waiters, fixers, and the like," Buckner said. "The United States commissioner told me he threw out 85 to 90 percent of the cases brought for lack of evidence." "Federal judges told me the whole atmosphere of the federal building was one of collusion. Attempts were made to bribe jurymen even in the building. Before General Andrews took charge, prohibition agents were rated by the number of arrests they made." "I found that 99 percent or more of the arrests were of petty cases," he added. "They were not getting the men who were making the money, but subordinates." "My position with respect to petty arrests had been misunderstood," continued the District Attorney. "They have been petty arrests, but my plan has been to get the proprietor and issue padlock injunctions rather than arrest a waiter or a clerk." "Buckner testified that his office cooperated with the city police in efforts to break up dens of thieves and other crooks." "These criminals gather in these places," he said. "They don't hold each other up there; they aren't violating any state law. If the police find liquor there they make arrests and they are entitled to have federal trials

NEW OFFICIALS IN CITY TO TAKE OATH SOON

PARRISH AND HANKINS WINNERS IN ELECTION HERE TUESDAY Two new city officials will be sworn into office here within the next week as a result of the biannual election held yesterday. One of them is Pink L. Parrish, who it is safe to say is the biggest Mayor in Texas, will preside over the commission meetings and the other is J. H. Hankins, who will act as commissioner number three. Casting a total of 956 ballots Lubbock voters broke all records for municipal elections and in a measure wiped the slate clean of the past reputation the city has had for taking little interest in municipal offices. Mr. Parrish, who was for 11 years county judge of Crosby county, was given a total of 688 votes while Floyd M. Friend, present incumbent, drew 268 ballots. George C. Wolfarth, commissioner number four who has served on the board for the past eight years, lost his place to J. H. Hankins by a count of 482 to 458. Mr. Wolfarth has been acting as police and fire commissioner. Walter S. Posey, for years one of the city's business and civic mainstays was given a vote of confidence winning over E. L. Law, announced labor candidate, by 287 to 246 votes. Mr. Posey has served on the commission for the past eight years and has at different times had supervision over finances and utilities. J. O. Bud Jones, commissioner number one, and R. W. Blair, commissioner number two, were re-elected. Attempts made by the Journal throughout the day failed to locate Mr. Parrish for a statement regarding his plans. City officials however, estimated that the new commissioner and mayor would be sworn in within the next five or six days, when the remainder of the members of the board will be re-sworn as public officials. King Elected At Slaton SLATON, April 7.—S. P. King, present mayor of the city of Slaton, was elected to the mayoralty here yesterday for two more years when 580 citizens cast their ballots in a hotly contented race. Mr. King's majority was 24. He polled 296 votes, while H. W. Hagdale, his opponent ran up a total of 282. No vote was taken on the commissioners, and J. L. Bradley and John P. Lobley, who with Mr. King make up the city commission, retain their places for the next year. Mr. King announced today that he will continue his plans in the paving house and street numbering program and that many other details in connection with city improvements will also continue unchanged. PART OF TOMB IS TO BE SENT TO AMERICA

LIVERPOOL, April 7. (AP)—The Society of Lovers of Old Liverpool is searching for a fragment of the tombstone of Tom Paine, author of "The Age of Reason," the "Rights of Man" and other books, so that they can return it to America. J. M. Dow told members Tom Paine escaped from the French Revolution, came to London and then returned to the United States. Congress presented him with a farm at New Rochelle, New York State. He died in 1818 and shortly after his burial his tombstone was smashed by vandals on account of his anti-sectarian views and writings. William Cobbett, a friend of Paine, was in America at the time, and furious at the outrage, brought the larger fragment of the fractured stone to Liverpool. He presented it to Edward Rushton, a Liverpool magistrate who died in 1856. The stone was seen twenty years ago in a suburban garden but can not now be located.
