U.N. body orders embargo

■ Continuing its siege of Kuwait, Iraq says it "cannot be frightened" as military and economic pressure is brought to bear.

Associated Press

The U.N. Security Council on Monday ordered a worldwide embargo on trade with Iraq to punish the Arab oil and military power for its invasion of Kuwait. A defiant Iraqi leadership vowed to resist the economic and military pressure being marshaled by the United States.

The Iraqi people "cannot be frightened," Iraq's army commander said.

The Security Council vote, 13-0, came on a U.S.-sponsored resolution and represented the first such total trade and arms boycott by the United Nations in 23 years. Two members of the 15-nation council, Cuba and Yemen, abstained.

If successfully enforced, the sanctions could cripple the heavily oil-dependent Iraqi economy. In Washington, President Bush declared, "These sanctions will be enforced — whatever it takes."

Britain's visiting Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher said after meeting with Bush that the West would have to consider a naval blockade of the Persian Gulf if the U.N. sanctions proved ineffective.

The vote in New York came on the fifth day of a crisis precipitated by the Iraqi army's blitzkrieg takeover of neighboring Kuwait.

In occupied Kuwait, meanwhile, Iraqi troops rounded up some Americans, Britons and other foreigners Monday, but they appeared to be in no danger, British officials said.

Tension remained high along the Saudi Arabia-Kuwait border. Saudi Arabian forces were reported moving northward into areas close by Iraqi units in Kuwait.

Diplomats in the Persian Gulf — in reports otherwise unconfirmed — said U.S. rapid deployment units had been dispatched to the Middle East.

In other developments:

■ In Jiddah, Saudi Arabia, U.S. Defense Secretary Dick Cheney conferred with Saudi leaders about how to defend the oil kingdom against any attack by Iraq. The White House said it was discussing "military possibilities" with Gulf states to stop Iraqi aggression.

■ The U.S. aircraft carriers Independence near the Persian Gulf and Eisenhower in the Mediterranean Sea moved within range to launch warplanes to the gulf and as far as Iraqi targets, Pentagon sources said.

■ Major stock markets worldwide plummeted again, worried that an oil crisis could touch off a recession. Oil prices rose more than 10 percent Monday. Many motorists in the United States and elsewhere were paying sharply higher prices for gasoline.

Iraqi tanks and infantry poured into Kuwait on Thursday after President Saddam Hussein complained that the Kuwaitis' violation of OPEC production quotas had driven down world crude prices, lowering Iraqi oil revenues. Saddam also accused Kuwait of stealing oil from a border oilfield both countries claim. Together, Iraqi and Kuwaiti output equals 9 percent of world daily oil production.

Bush says Iraq's "naked aggression ... will not stand," and White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said Monday that "the defense of Saudi Arabia is of paramount concern."

But Iraq defied the diplomatic, economic and military pressure.

Oil prices jump $3.50 on Monday

Staff Report

Oil prices leaped to their highest levels in nearly five years, and the Dow Jones industrial average took its biggest dive since last October as the financial markets continued to wrestle Monday with the Persian Gulf crisis.

The posted price for West Texas Intermediate jumped $3.50 Monday close at $26.50 per barrel, according to Permian Corp.

On the spot market, the New York Mercantile Exchange, the September contract for West Texas Intermediate soared $3.56 to settle at $28.05 a 42-gallon barrel.

It was the highest level for the the benchmark grade of U.S. crude since August 1985, when the price reached $28.08 per barrel.

"At this point I think the price of oil will be whatever (Iraqi) President Saddam Hussein wants it to be," said Jim Henry, a Midland oilman. "Even after the conflict, I think he will be in a position to influence oil prices, and Iraq will replace Saudia Arabia as the dominant influence on oil prices."

Henry noted that current high oil prices will benefit the oil industry by increasing investor appetite and competiton and providing more money for

No regrets

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — B.F. Skinner, the psychologist who popularized behavior modification, is facing his approaching death by leukemia with no regrets, a fitting end to a life he claimed was governed by rational rules.

Skinner, 86, is preparing what may be his final work, a defense of controversial research that explored the uses of positive and negative reinforcement to improve human behavior.

For years, Skinner has endured a battering by many American psychologists who scorned his belief that behavior could be engineered to make society better.

Souter show

AUSTIN (AP) — Jill and Stephen Souter don't know if they're related to the U.S. Supreme Court nominee who shares their last name. But the San Antonio couple is enjoying the benefits of David Souter's sudden prominence.

For one thing, people now pronounce the name correctly, said Ms. Souter. That's with a "sue" sound.

The couple happened to be visiting Washington with their 10-year-old nephew, Kevin McEwen, when Bush announced his nomination of Souter, who is from New Hampshire and serves on the 1st U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Boston.

TV roles?

RADNOR, Pa. (AP) — Jack Nicholson says TV interviews destroy an actor's credibility, but he wouldn't mind acting on the tube.

Nicholson

"You can say anything in the printed word and both sides admit that it's open to interpretation," he said in the Aug. 11 issue of TV Guide.

Nicholson said of TV interviews: "There is no way you can get people to believe you on screen if they know who you really are through television."

The actor's latest movie, "The Two Jakes," a sequel to "Chinatown," opens Friday.

He said he would have liked working on the CBS miniseries "Lonesome Dove" and might want to turn to television for a long-cherished project about Napoleon.

Monday's wet weather brought out the umbrellas and caused a fair amount of puddle splashing in Midland. The National Weather Service said 1.63 inches of rain have fallen in the area since Aug. 1 and put the chance for more thunderstorms at 30 percent for today.

Midlander says father part of CIA conspiracy

■ Claiming he found evidence of his late father's involvement in the assassination of John F. Kennedy in a now-missing diary, Ricky Don White says Lee Harvey Oswald never fired a shot.

By Charles Richards
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS — A 29-year-old former oil equipment salesman claimed Monday that his father was one of three Central Intelligence Agency operatives who killed President John F. Kennedy on Nov. 22, 1963.

White

The CIA immediately denied the claim, calling it "ludicrous."

The accusation is the latest in a long string of theories about who killed Kennedy. None of the theories, some of which also have pointed to the CIA, has been proven.

Ricky Don White has been shopping his version of the assassination for some time, and claimed a year ago that the third co-conspirator still was living in Texas.

White, who now lives in Midland, said his father, Roscoe "Rocky" White, joined the Dallas Police Department in September 1963 in order to carry out the assassination.

Ricky White told dozens of reporters that Oswald and police officer J.D. Tippit, who was killed following the assassination, were "patsies." Oswald was a part of the conspiracy, while Tippit was uninvolved, White said.

White said much of his information came from his father's diary, but White could not produce the book. He suggested FBI agents had taken it.

Liberian rebels seize foreigners

WASHINGTON (AP) — Liberian rebel forces seized 14 or 15 foreigners, including one American, in Monrovia on Monday and moved them to an insurgent headquarters outside the city, the State Department announced.

Spokeswoman Margaret Tutwiler said the hostages were taken from the Hotel Africa and sent to the headquarters, in the town of Caldwell, of rebel leader Prince Johnson. He heads one of two factions fighting the government of President Samuel K. Doe.

She said the U.S. Embassy reported to the State Department late Monday, Liberia time, that Johnson's forces "have seized hostages."

There was no indication any of the hostages had been harmed. The nationalities of the non-American hostages were not disclosed.

Johnson had said on Saturday that he would start arresting foreigners in an attempt to provoke outside intervention in ending Liberia's worst crisis in more than 140 years of independence.

Psychiatric services may be Clearview's future

EDITOR'S NOTE: During the last year and a half, Clearview Hospital has seen the number of its patients dwindle, a high number of staff resignations and more than half of its board resign. In the final part of this three-part series, the Midland Reporter-Telegram looks at the facility's future, which may depend on the development of outpatient, psychiatric and day treatment programs.

By Brian Pearson
Staff Writer

Clearview Hospital is a microcosm of the Midland economy, with the hopes for a financially secure future weighing heavily upon diversification.

While the city's economic survival may depend on expanded airport operations and new industry, Clearview officials are banking on implementing outpatient, psychiatric and day treatment programs.

"Those are big moments for this hospital," said Bob Rabidoux, Clearview administrator. "There's no doubt about that.

"You have to be innovative. You have to come up with new programs."

The three additions to the facility's services are expected to be in place within two months, Rabidoux said.

Clearview has strictly been an inpatient chemical abuse treatment program since it opened in 1985. Midland Memorial Hospital bought the facility in late 1988.

Despite the extensive care Clearview patients receive, the national trend in treatment is leaning toward outpatient programs, which insurance companies view more favorably, Rabidoux said.

The opening of an outpatient center at 4500 W. Illinois Ave. has been stalled because MMH is waiting to complete negotiations to begin the Optifast weight reduction program, he said.

Optifast, an MMH program, will be housed with the outpatient program in the same 13,200-square-foot facility, which the hospital purchased last year for about $100,000, he said.

Clearview attempted to get the outpatient program going in January in an office at 701 Indiana Ave. The program, which had a patient load of two, was temporarily abandoned after three members of the staff resigned.

Rabidoux, during a Clearview Hospital Meeting in June, said he felt the resignations were due to "a lack of goal congruency."

However, recruiting efforts have been under way and the program should be open in early September at Clearview facilities off West Loop 250 near Thomason Drive, he said.

"That outpatient program has got to be an intensive outpatient program," Rabidoux said. "It will allow us to treat patients who don't need to be confined as an inpatient 24 hours a day."

Outpatients will either spend three nights for eight weeks or four nights for six weeks in the program, which will cost patients $3,600, he said. The program's opening will create one new counselor position, he said.

Cool weather continuing

Staff Report

Today's forecast indicates another day of cool weather and intermittent thunderstorms, said forecasters at the National Weather Service in Midland.

The thunderstorms result from moisture from the Gulf of Mexico and Baja California interacting with hot air in the Permian Basin, NWS said.

The area has had 1.63 inches of precipitation since Aug. 1, forecasters said.

Today's forecast calls for mostly cloudy skies, with a high near 80, 5 to 15 mph southeast winds and a 30 percent chance of thunderstorms, NWS said.

Tonight is expected to be mostly cloudy with a 30 percent chance of thunderstorms and a low in the lower 60s, forecasters said.

Wednesday's forecast calls for partly cloudy skies, with a high in the mid-80s and a less than 20 percent chance of thunderstorms, forecasters said.

Monday's temperature extremes were a mere 10 degrees apart at 76 and 66. The record high for Aug. 6 of 107 was set in 1964. The record low of 61 for today's date was set in 1936, NWS said.

STATE

Scattered thunderstorms fell near Lukfin and then drifted east into Louisiana. Winds blew from the north and northeast at 5 to 15 mph.

Monday was unseasonably cool for Texas, with thermometer readings staying in the low to mid 80s. Extremes at 3 p.m. ranged from 77 degrees at Abilene and Stephenville to 89 degrees at Temple.

In South Texas, a weak cold front stretched into the lower Rio Grande Valley. A flood warning remained in effect for the Devil, Pecos and Rio Grande rivers. Some low-water crossings in Val Verde County were still flooded and several roads remained closed Monday.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

CLEARVIEW: Day treatment possible

(From 1A)

"The approach is to build a patient base," Rabidoux said. "We'll add (staff) people as we feel it is necessary."

Rabidoux estimated that about 60 percent of those who come to Clearview seeking help for substance abuse never get much farther than the front door.

They either can't afford inpatient treatment or have commitments to jobs and families, he said.

Some inpatients may even be transferred to the outpatient program before they enter Clearview's 12-month aftercare program, he said.

A new psychiatric program, set to open later this month at Clearview, also will go hand in hand with the inpatient program, Rabidoux said.

Because of critically low inpatient occupancy, which dropped below 30 percent in May, Clearview took 18 of 49 beds out of circulation in June.

The 18 beds will be used for the psychiatric program, which should have an initial census of eight to 10 patients, Rabidoux said. Stays could last from 15 days to three months, he said.

"That's a really good thing for this place," Rabidoux said of the program. "It will certainly help the census significantly. It will also help us deal with a series of problems we haven't been able to deal with.

"There would be very few restraints on the type of psychiatric patients we would treat."

Like the chemical dependency program, psychiatric patients will enter group and individual therapy and be taught living skills, he said. Recreational, art and music therapy also are included in the $400-a-day treatment, he said.

A formal classroom setting for adolescents will be provided when needed, he added.

The program will have a staff of up to nine psychiatric nurses to assist patients 24 hours a day, Rabidoux said. A Midland psychiatrist already has indicated that he would place his patients in the program, he said.

"I know there's a market there," Rabidoux said of the expected success of the psychiatric program. "I'm absolutely convinced there is."

Because a number of psychiatric patients suffer from alcoholism or drug abuse, Clearview will have a dual diagnosis for those cases, he said.

"We could treat all of that in one house," Rabidoux said. "It's a departure from being just a chemical dependency hospital."

A day treatment program, also set for an early September start, would be structured similar to the inpatient program for chemical dependency patients, he said. The patients, though, would only come for treatment during the day and go home at night, he said.

"There are people who can go through our program, but they can't stay here at night," Rabidoux said, adding that patients would be charged less than $400 a day. The fee has yet to be finalized, he added.

Day treatment would especially benefit single parents, some of whom must care for children, and people who hold night jobs, he said.

The program is for those who need the intensive, structured environment of an inpatient program but have enough family and friend support to ensure that they can remain sober outside the hospital, Rabidoux said.

The day patients, though, need more help than those in the less intensive outpatient program, which is similar in treatment approach but is less time-consuming, he said.

Kingdon Hughes, a Clearview Hospital Board trustee, said the success of the inpatient, outpatient, psychiatric and day treatment programs will hinge on an extensive public awareness campaign.

"We have to turn out our own marketing efforts," Hughes said. "We've got to go one-on-one with the medical profession in Midland and Odessa and sell them on Clearview."

He said the key is to cultivate an existing market for the program.

A February 1989 survey conducted locally shows that in 6,390 Midland households — or about 15.5 percent of the city's homes — at least one family member has a drinking problem.

The study, sponsored by a number of community representatives, also shows that 5 percent of the households have at least one family member with a drug problems.

Rabidoux said reaching those people will mean deploying an intense marketing strategy. The effort will range from making presentations to employee assistance programs in area business to putting promotional stickers on telephones in doctors' offices.

"The question is whether we have gotten to all the players," he said. "You have to assume there's a demand out there.

"We have a good marketing strategy. We have a lot of people involved."

Hughes said the publicity effort will take a lot of time and dedication.

"It's a hard sell," he said. "We've got to send people out there and start making these cold calls.

"In my judgment, that's the the No. 1 change we're going to make happen. That ought to put it on its financial feet."

Lois Barry, assistant administrator at Glenwood Hospital in Midland, said a tenacious campaign to recruit health care professionals is essential to a growing treatment center business.

"We live in a fantastic area," Ms. Barry said. "I think both (Odessa and Midland) communities are effective in bringing health care professionals to the area. The people here are the answer to recruiting."

In addition, heightening public awareness of treatment programs also plays a major role, she said.

"We need people to know it's OK to ask for help," she said. "Education is the key."

Rabidoux said he doesn't see Clearview's expansion plans clashing with services offered by Glenwood and other West Texas treatment centers.

"I'm not sure it's a head-on competition," Rabidoux said. "We would get to serve markets we're not serving. I think there's an underserved market here."

Ms. Barry said there is enough room for two psychiatric facilities in Midland. "There's enough need that we need to be here to fill it," she said.

But Dr. Wilton Jones, medical director of the Rivercrest facility in San Angelo, said substance abuse treatment centers in West Texas will likely have to butt heads to survive. "I think it's highly competitive," Jones said.

Jones said his facility plans to open small outpatient services in neighboring towns so residents there do not have to drive far to receive treatment.

Dana Rains, marketing director of Charter Plains treatment center in Lubbock, said her facility has seen an inexplicable decline in patients from the Permian Basin area.

"Midland-Odessa has historically accounted for 10 to 20 percent of our patient census," Ms. Rains said. "However, over the last year we've seen a significant decrease."

However, Charter Plains has been able to keep its Midland-based outpatient program at 3325 W. Wadley Ave. alive, she said. The program serves five to 10 people, most of whom are former Charter Plains inpatients, she said.

Nevertheless, there will always be patients who want to go outside their communities for treatment, Ms. Rains said. "For those people who want to go away, we'd like them to know we're here," she said.

But Ms. Rains predicted that the chemical dependency treatment industry will only become more competitive.

"The psychiatric industry is seeing a lot of changes," Ms. Rains said. "The strong, quality competitors will stay in. Those who can't provide the quality service will shake out."

OIL: Price near its five-year high

lease acquisition and drilling. "If oil prices stay in the $20s for the remainder of the year, I think we will see 170 rigs working in the Permian Basin."

He added there will also be increased competition for drilling deals and qualified employees.

Harry Spannaus, executive vice president of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association, said he does not see how any operator can drill on the volatile oil prices now in the market.

"There is no telling which way oil prices will go from here. If (Saddam) Hussein ceases aggression they could come back down to a moderate level. However, if he spreads his aggression to Saudi Arabia they will go out of sight."

Among refined petroleum products, wholesale unleaded gasoline jumped 9.34 cents to 81.52 cents a gallon. Wholesale home heating oil was up 8.97 cents to 75.55 cents.

Analysts said Monday's soaring prices were the result of Turkey shutting down oil pipelines from Iraq. The higher prices brought havoc to the financial markets, the dollar also fell sharply against most currencies in foreign exchange, shedding its historical role as a safe haven during times of political turmoil.

Money flowed instead into Treasury bills, among the most secure short-term investments available.

"We have a selling panic going on in the stock and bond markets and a flight to quality to T bills," said Edward Yardeni, chief economist for Prudential-Bache Securities Inc. "When investors are nervous they tend to pull back."

On Wall Street, the Dow Jones industrial average slid 93.31 points to close at 2,716.34, after slipping as much as 105 points earlier in the day.

The plunge — the biggest since last October's "mini-crash" — tripped so-called "circuit breakers" designed by the nation's financial markets to cushion market declines in stocks and stock index futures.

Monday's drop extended a week-long slide in the market that has erased just just over 200 points from the Dow average.

In oil-dependent Japan, the Nikkei Stock Average of 225 selected issues closed at 28,599.53 points, down 916.23 points, or 3.1 percent. In Britain, the Financial Times-Stock Exchange 100-share index dropped 64.4 points, or 2.9 percent, to 2,220.2.

In the United States, traders blamed the rout on continued worries that sharply higher oil prices, stemming from Iraq's invasion of neighboring Kuwait last week, could trigger higher inflation and push the nation into a recession. "The economy is in pretty bad shape now. This could make things worse," Yardeni said.

Market observers said that if the United States and its allies move aggressively to end the conflict in the Middle East, the economic impact may be minimal. But if allowed to linger for weeks, the crisis could erode business confidence, resulting in job layoffs or lower production, the ingredients for a recession.

"We're in the hands of a very, very unpredictable ruthless madman running Iraq, so most people's investment portfolios are being held hostage to what Saddam Hussein does next," Yardeni said.

Part of the nation's economic future also hinges on the Federal Reserve's credit policies, economists said.

"The policy options were not good even without thinking about what hostilities lie on the horizon," said Robert A. Brusca, chief financial economist for Nikko Securities Co. International. "The Fed has these conflicting signals."

A move by the Fed to lower interest rates could stimulate the economy, but it could also further aggravate the inflation outlook.

Speculation that the Fed will cut rates helped push the dollar lower against all major currencies, except the Japanes yen. Among the dollar's biggest drop was against the German mark, where it slipped to 2½-year lows.

Interest rate concerns, coupled with worries about oil prices, contributed to Monday's drop in the bond market.

Investors, unwilling to lock their money into anything long range, sold long-term Treasury bonds. The government's bellwether 30-year issue, for instance, plunged about 2½ points, or $25 per $1,000 face amount. The drop was far less dramatic in shorter-term bonds and notes.

Also hurting bonds were concerns about the budget deficit and how it might be affected by the Mideast turmoil.

"With higher oil prices you won't have an energy tax (as lawmakers have discussed) ... and you won't see cuts in defense spending," said Maury Harris, chief economist for PaineWebber Inc.

LIBERIA: Rebels take 15 hostages

(From 1A)

The United States has been closely allied with Liberia for decades but has said it has no intention of intervening militarily in the conflict.

Concern over the situation in Liberia has been growing since last week when government troops killed hundreds of Liberians who had sought shelter in a Monrovia church.

Meanwhile, U.S. Marines operating from a flotilla of vessels offshore evacuated an additional 20 persons from Liberia on Monday. Six of the evacuees were Americans and the rest were foreigners, Ms. Tutwiler said.

he evacuations began over the weekend with the departure of 62 Americans and 12 foreigners to neighboring Sierra Leone. About 35 of the Americans had left Sierra Leone for the United States by Monday.

The maneuver, code-named "Sharp Edge," was launched from four warships that have been stationed in international waters off Liberia since early June.

Highlighting the increasingly desperate situation in Monrovia, Ms. Tutwiler said all major stores remained closed on Monday and there was no public water, electricity or phone service. Food shortages were intensifying.

The United States has had a standing offer to facilitate Doe's departure from the country but he has shown no interest in accepting it.

U.S. officials said they also understood that Nigeria and perhaps other countries in West Africa were planning to evacuate citizens stranded in Liberia.

CIA: Agency denies Midland man's assassination story

(From 1A)

The FBI issued a statement saying in 1988 it received the same information as White divulged Monday but "determined that this information is not credible."

The CIA, which seldom responds to inquiries, had a strong rebuttal Monday to White's claims.

"These allegations — that this was done on CIA orders, that this guy worked for us and that CIA had any role in the assassination of President Kennedy — are ludicrous," CIA spokesman Mark Mansfield said in Washington.

"This individual, Roscoe White, was never employed by the CIA or associated in any way with the agency," Mansfield added. "Normally, we never confirm nor deny employment, but these allegations are so outrageous that we felt it necessary and appropriate to respond."

White died in 1971 in what his son called a suspicious fire and explosion at his job. White, then 35, died from third-degree burns over 99 percent of his body, his son said.

White said he believes a CIA "witness elimination" squad killed his father.

He said his father not only helped kill President Kennedy, but also killed Tippit in the Oak Cliff section of Dallas about an hour after the assassination. Tippit's killing has been blamed on Oswald.

Ricky White said his father's code name, referred to in his diary, was "Mandarin." The two other CIA operatives were code named "Lebanon" and "Saul," White said.

In 1989, Ricky White and three other men contacted Associated Press reporter Mike Cochran about writing a book about the elder White's purported involvement in the assassination. Cochran said White told him one of the two other co-conspirators is still alive and resides within 45 miles of Dallas.

"I told him, 'Let me talk to (the co-conspirator). If he convinces me that what you say is true, I will get involved.' I never heard back from (White)," Cochran said Monday.

The only mention of the two other purported assassins during Monday's news conference was White's statement that, according to his father's diary, "Lebanon" was part of an air conditioning crew in the School Book Depository Building at the time of the assassination and "Saul" was a City of Dallas janitorial service employee in the county Records Building across the street.

Oswald did not fire any shots, White said.

Roscoe White was on a grassy knoll in front of the presidential caravan, Ricky White said he read in the diary.

However, he never showed the diary to anyone else, and it is now missing, White said.

Midland District Attorney Al Schorre said Monday that White approached him in 1988 and asked for help in locating a safe-deposit box he believed contained evidence linking his father to the assassination.

White provided Schorre and his chief investigator, J.D. Luckie, with the deposit box key, but Schorre said they were unable to track down the box.

"He came to us with kind of a partial story," Schorre said. "And the gist of the story was that his father may have somehow been peripherally involved in the assassination attempt and he asked our assistance in helping to find the box."

Schorre said White told him about his father's diary, but did not produce it when Schorre asked to see it. Schorre said he turned the case over to the FBI because he didn't have jurisdiction in the matter.

Monday's news conference was held at the JFK Assassination Information Center, only blocks away from where JFK was slain. The center caters to assassination conspiracy buffs.

Gary Shaw, vice president and a director of the center, said nothing was said at the news conference about the co-conspirator still living in the area "because we want to approach this in a way not to make them run. There were a lot of things that weren't mentioned."

Asked what he was gaining from the revelations, Ricky White said "Nothing, at this point." He has talked to different people about a possible book or movie, but nothing has materialized yet, he said.

A cleanup crew prepares to vacuum up oil from the water in a boat ramp in Beach City, Texas, Sunday.

HOUSTON (AP) — Cleanup crews Monday scooped up several oil patches that washed ashore after a massive oil spill, while the tanks of a crippled barge that leaked the oil were cleaned so the vessel can be cut up and moved out of Galveston Bay.

After dismantling the damaged barge, the pieces will be moved out of the bay so unrestricted two-way traffic can resume in the Houston Ship Channel. Booms were placed around the barge to prevent any remaining oil from escaping during the operation.

An estimated 700,000 gallons of oil spilled into the seafood-rich bay July 28 when a tanker collided with two barges in the ship channel.

Cleanup crews were scouring the damaged barge Monday.

"We want to get whatever oil is on it, off of it. We don't want to cut it open and have a mini-oil spill added to what we've already got," U.S. Coast Guard Chief Warrant Officer Rick Meidt said.

The tanks also must be cleaned of any oil because a spark from cutting torches could set off an explosion, the Coast Guard said.

The channel remained open Monday to two-way barge traffic, but deep-draft vessels could only travel one way because the Coast Guard is concerned their wakes could disrupt the salvage operations.

Meidt, meanwhile, said a morning flyover showed that there was little oil left to clean up. A patchy, light sheen stretched from a seven-mile area of shoreline along Houston Point out about two miles into the bay. The sheen was created by shifting overnight winds that scattered heavier concentrations of oil along the shore.

A few heavy patches remained to be cleaned up along the shoreline.

"There's not much oil out there right now," Meidt said. "The heavier concentrations are just splotches here and there along the shore."

"I think that's good because the heavy stuff is right at the shoreline where it can be collected by the vacuum trucks. The sheen is more susceptible to natural breakdown," Meidt said. "Most of the oil that was in the water, that was visible, is gone. It's been picked up by vacuum trucks."

The oil stained several beaches, most recently Houston Point, an area on the north end of Galveston Bay leading into Trinity Bay.

Oil seeped into some marshes and collected around several residential docks, but officials said the gooey mess has not washed into additional marshlands further into Trinity Bay.

The cleanup is expected to last about a week, and the total cost is estimated at $5 million.

Volunteers search for missing girl

The FBI and the San Antonio Police Department investigated the disappearance of Heidi Seeman, a sixth-grader who vanished about noon Saturday.

"We pray that we find her safe," the girl's 36-year-old father, Air Force Master Sgt. Curtis Seeman, said Sunday. "We're willing to do anything to get her back — whatever it takes."

Her mother, 35-year-old Theresa Seeman, said: "Please, if you've got my daughter, let her come home."

Police say they are investigating a report that a man driving a red car with tinted windows passed by Heidi and a friend several times as they walked along the road.

The friend said she left Heidi halfway along the road just after the car passed a third time. When she later turned to look back, both the car and Heidi were gone.

"We feel there is enough information to carry it as a kidnapping," said police Detective Sam Balleza of the homicide unit, which investigates abductions. "The fact that the family hasn't heard anything since Saturday is an indication this is kidnapping."

On Sunday, FBI spokesman Claude Martin pleaded with the public to come forward with any information that could help.

A police dog team joined the search after security guards at a construction and quarry site reported hearing "the screams of a young girl" at about 4 a.m. Sunday.

Lightning blasts open tombs in New Orleans

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Lightning blasted open a mausoleum wall in one of New Orleans' oldest cemeteries, scattering bricks across a Garden District sidewalk and opening dozens of tombs to the street.

"We've been trying to clean up all the debris and get everything all packed up and moved out of the way," said Pearl Cantrell of the city property management office.

She said the city was trying to estimate repair costs Monday and may hire a contractor to repair the plastered brick wall of Lafayette Cemetery No. 1, a national historic landmark across the street from one of New Orleans' premiere restaurants, Commander's Palace.

One preservationist worried about the future of the cemeteries said the incident may have been a blessing in disguise.

"Maybe this bolt of lightning has brought us together," said Mary Lou Cristovich of Save Our Cemeteries, a volunteer group which gives tours of New Orleans' above-ground tombs to get money to help repair them.

A big oak tree which stands near the wall may have acted as a lightning rod during an intense thunderstorm Sunday night, officials said.

The marble headstones inside the cemetery were undamaged. And there appeared little damage to the concrete and brick vaults themselves — or at least those which could be seen by peeking between pieces of canvas workers stretched onto a wooden frame to cover the open graves.

Salvageable bricks were piled on the grass between the sidewalk and the street.

Many of the 50 to 60 damaged tombs apparently were empty, their contents either removed or long since dust.

Only seven were marked. The rest had been closed in with plain marble tombstones because the original stones were broken past repair.

The most recent burial date was 1914; the others were all in the middle to late 19th century.

STATE IN BRIEF

Accidental shot injures 2 people

HOUSTON (AP) — A man accused of accidentally discharging a gun and wounding two people at a firearms show was charged with aggravated assault, police said Monday.

Gready William Hunter, 27, of Alief, was charged with two counts of aggravated assault in the Sunday shootings inside a convention center. He was released Sunday night on $4,000 bond, said Houston police Sgt. Ralph Gonzales.

A woman holding her infant daughter was one of the shooting victims. Both victims were treated at the George R. Brown Convention Center by paramedics, then taken to Ben Taub Hospital, where they were treated and released.

Witnesses told police that a man accidentally pulled the trigger of a .32-caliber automatic Walther that he had brought to the gun show to sell or trade.

The man allegedly violated show rules that prohibit loading any guns when he slipped an ammunition magazine into the weapon about 2:30 p.m. to demonstrate for prospective customers.

3-pound baby critical

FORT WORTH (AP) — An infant girl who was born premature Sunday, a month after undergoing experimental fetal surgery, was listed in critical but stable condition Monday, hospital officials said.

A medical team put the 3-pound, 2-ounce baby on a ventilator that administers pure oxygen.

"I can't tell you yet how the baby is going to do," said Dr. David Turbeville, the baby's neonatologist. "She has a long way to go."

She was born three months early.

Soon after the child's birth Sunday, Turbeville gave her 50 percent chance of survival. But he upgraded his estimate to 75 percent Monday.

"She looked great coming out. She cried up a little storm," said Laurie Lee Jones, a registered nurse.

Ms. Jones said the infant has dark hair, pink skin and a breathing tube in her lungs.

Doctors began performing a Caesarean section on the mother, Teri Alexander, 30, shortly after she went into labor Sunday afternoon. Mrs. Alexander was listed in good condition Monday at Harris Methodist in Fort Worth.

Her husband, Mike Alexander, 28, remained in the operating room during the delivery. The couple has been married 18 months and Faith is their first child.

2 hurt in jet-plane crash

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — An Air Force jet and a single-engine private plane collided Monday over southeast Bexar County, sending the military aircraft plunging to the ground in a fireball, authorities said.

Two military crewmen ejected from the T-38 jet as the aircraft collided shortly before 3 p.m., and at least one crewman activated a parachute that was recovered by Air Force security police.

An Air Force spokeswoman identified the military crewmen as 2nd Lt. James Kline, 23, of Freemont, Ohio, and 1st Lt. Steven Perlman, 25, of Eastchester, N.Y.

The two were taken to Wilford Hall Air Force Medical Center but were not believed to be seriously injured, said Charles Metzger, chief of the Sandy Oaks Volunteer Fire Department.

A flight instructor and teen-ager in the private Cessna escaped injury after the instructor landed the small plane, minus its front nose section, on Loop 1604.

Crash involves family

DALLAS (AP) — When Joyce Copeland's car collided with a police cruiser Sunday, she had no idea she had just been involved in an accident with her son.

Mrs. Copeland, 45, of Lancaster, hit Senior Cpl. Joe Copeland's squad car after he slowed down on a Dallas freeway to avoid striking a rolled tarpaulin that had fallen from a truck, said Sgt. W.D. Elsey, who investigated the accident.

Copeland, 26, was slightly injured in the 12:30 p.m. accident. His 16-year-old sister was a passenger in his mother's car.

Sgt. Jay Cooper, a Dallas police dispatch supervisor, said Mrs. Copeland initially didn't know whose squad car she had hit.

Elsey said the three Copelands were slightly injured and stayed in their cars until other officers arrived.

Hunger relief slower since Leland's death

N.Y. Times News Service

A year ago this week, a plane carrying Rep. Mickey Leland and 15 others slammed into an Ethiopian mountain, killing all aboard and ending a mission to help the starving.

Some say the federal government's efforts to feed the world's hungry have yet to recover from the death of Leland, who helped found the House Select Committee on Hunger in 1984 and was its chairman when he died.

"In the Congress, there's been a slowdown (in hunger relief efforts) because no one in the government has been able to replace or supplant Mickey Leland," the Rev. Jesse Jackson said last week.

The Houston Democrat was the "conscience for the hungry," Jackson said, adding: "Mickey used the government to protect the hungry. He used the government to spread bread and not bullets."

Licia Green, an aide to Leland, agrees.

"Unfortunately, we have not done enough on the struggle that Mickey embarked on," said Green, now an administrative assistant to Rep. Craig Washington, who was elected to Leland's 18th Congressional District seat.

Leland was the most visible fighter of world famine in the federal government, said former Texas District Court Judge Louis Sturns, a Republican.

"He stood for the idea that no person in this world should suffer from hunger when we have so many resources," Sturns said. Sturns was appointed in April to an unexpired term on the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals, making him the first black to hold a statewide elective office since Reconstruction.

Statewide office was a milestone Leland hoped to achieve when he seriously considered running for the U.S. Senate, said his wife, Alison Leland.

She said last week that her husband had planned to run for Sen. Lloyd Bentsen's seat had Bentsen and Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis succeeded in their bid for the White House.

During his 11 years in Congress, Leland ventured to Ethiopia six times to learn more about the famine-plagued country.

On Aug. 7, 1989, at the beginning of what would be his last visit to the African country, the congressman and his entourage flew out of the Ethiopian capital of Addis Ababa en route to the desolate camp of Fugnido — home for thousands of emaciated refugees from war-torn Sudan.

It was believed that Leland, 44, and his group, including government officials from the United States and Ethiopia, died instantly.

Williams calls for Richards' resignation

AUSTIN (AP) — Republican gubernatorial candidate Clayton Williams called Monday for his opponent to resign as state treasurer. But a spokesman for Democrat Ann Richards said the state couldn't afford it.

"As state treasurer, Ann Richards is earning $1 million a day for the taxpayers of Texas. Can Clayton Williams say as much?" asked Bill Cryer, Ms. Richards' press secretary.

The Republican said his call was part of his effort to bring business management experience to state government.

But Ms. Richards' aides suggested that it was a bid to divert attention from news articles about his business dealings.

According to reports over the weekend, a researcher hired by one of Williams' opponents in the GOP primary said half of the 26 companies Williams founded have been sold or dissolved. Williams' net worth was reported to have fallen by almost two-thirds since 1982, when he estimated it at $300 million.

Analysts said Williams escaped financial disaster by selling one of his most successful companies, Clajon Gas Co., in a $230 million junk bond-financed leveraged buyout.

Audio Acoustics offers free hearing screening, personal service

Bill Walker was hesitant at first about getting a hearing aid 13 years ago, but he says now that he has never regretted his decision. "I was leary, but my wife encouraged me to do it," the retired Midland letter carrier recalled. "Like a lot of people, I didn't think I wanted to wear a hearing aid, but I'm happy now that I do."

Audio Acoustics Hearing Centers, Inc., located at #32 Village Court behind Walgreens, has fitted Walker with several hearing aids which have been specially designed for his needs.

Audio Acoustics works with eight different hearing aid manufacturers to provide West Texans with the best variety of quality hearing aids to serve individual problems.

That's just part of the personal service people have come to expect from audiologists Orland Purcell and Kelley Wald at Audio Acoustics. "Believe me," noted Walker, "I'm dealing with someone I can trust. They won't sell me anything I don't need. I want the public to know they can get a fair deal for their money."

"I'm happy that I can hear, and my wife is too. A person should never go without an aid if they need one. I've come out satisfied."

Since 1975, Audio Acoustics has specialized in the total hearing health care of the individual by providing diagnostic audiology with special knowledge and special emphasis on hearing aids.

To assess your hearing needs, you are encouraged to make an appointment soon for a free hearing screening. "This tells whether or not one has a significant problem which needs to be looked into with further testing," explained Purcell. "We can determine if a medical referral is needed or if amplification will be a benefit."

As professional audiologists, Purcell and Ms. Wald have solid backgrounds with which to serve their clients. Purcell received his undergraduate degree in audiology at Eastern New Mexico University in Portales and his Master of Science degree from the University of Oklahma Health Sciences Center.

Ms. Wald, currently pursuing her fellowship year, has a B.S. degree from Moorhead State University, a Master's degree from Idaho State University and an internship from the Minnesota Ear, Head and Neck Clinic.

They not only are trained in hearing testing and hearing aids, but also the anatomy and physiology of the hearing mechanism as well as extensive testing techniques which include brainstem response and balance testing.

As audiologists, Purcell and Ms. Wald are also trained in hearing rehabilitation and hearing conservation services for industry. They are two of only three certified audiologists presently employed in Midland.

At Audio Acoustics, all hearing aids come with a complete 30 day trial period, at the end of which, if you are not completely satisfied, you will be refunded the entire price of the hearing aid.

Clients are encouraged to drop in monthly to have their hearing aids cleaned and checked at no charge. This preventative maintenance contributes to the working life of the hearing aids.

On hand at all times is a large stock of repair materials. The majority of the time, most non-functioning hearing aids can be repaired in the office in a matter of minutes. In the event that a hearing aid needs to be sent to the factory for repairs, loaners are available.

And equally important, when you buy a hearing aid at Audio Acoustics Hearing Centers you can count on a full two year warranty that will be honored in Midland, Odessa, Lubbock, Hobbs, and Roswell

Office hours are Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Call 682-5033 today for more information on a free hearing screening from the professional audiologists at Audio Acoustics.

Audio Acoustics Hearing Centers, Inc. professional audiologists Kelley Wald, standing, left, and Orland Purcell, right, help assess the needs for client Bill Walker. Audio Acoustics offers a free hearing screening and quality service. For an appointment, call 682-5033.

New classes forming soon at Avalon Vocational-Technical Institute

Careers begin at Avalon Vocational-Technical Institute in Odessa and you can start work on improving your career success right away.

It's no secret that in today's challenging job market, education increasingly makes the difference in measuring career success. Avalon provides specialized business, technical and vocational training for marketable skills in the constantly changing business world.

In fact, classes in a number of exciting, marketable and profitable fields are taught at night especially for students who have day jobs.

Tom Hines, evening dean of students, said that all classes with the exception of the medical assistant courses are taught at night. Classes meet Monday through Thursday from 6 p.m. to 10:15 p.m.

Two courses are taken per three week term and most classes start every three weeks. Air conditioning classes begin every three weeks for day classes and every six weeks for night classes. Electronics classes begin every six weeks.

Admissions representatives are on campus each evening until 7:30 for your convenience. Another Avalon advantage for Midland students is the free daily transportation between Midland and Odessa.

"Night school is really good for people who work during the day," noted Carole Paul, school director. "This way, they can better improve their skills while bringing home a paycheck."

Avalon offers courses of study in a number of challenging and interesting career fields such as:

- Office Specialist
- Data Entry Specialist
- Computer Operator (in the near future)
- Credit and Collections Specialist (in the near future)
- Computer-Accounting Specialist
- Computer-Word Processing Specialist
- Executive Secretary
- Legal Secretary
- Electronic Technician
- Advanced Electronic Technician
- Air Conditioning, Heating and Refrigeration

With emphasis on practical, professional training, job placement, financial aid for qualified students and free transportation for Midland students, Avalon is a school which genuinely cares for its students.

For example, each Avalon student benefits from taking the Professional Development course because it prepares him/her for successful, secure job training. Topics include preparing an effective resume, standing out in a job interview and job advancement for the electronic specialist.

The course emphasizes completing employment applications with correct and accurate information expressed in industry related language, the correct job search procedure and following through with job opportunities.

Active student participation is required in all phases of the course, including contact with potential employers, interviewing techniques and follow up contacts.

Bill Lewellen remains at helm of Lewellen Construction Company

Lewellen Construction Company, a longtime "benchmark" to the siding and window industry in this area will remain just that, according to Bill Lewellen, president.

"I just simply made a bad decision," stated Lewellen, referring to a recent notice that he was closing down the company he founded 14 years ago. There will be no merger with any other company and Lewellen Construction Company is doing "business as usual," he said.

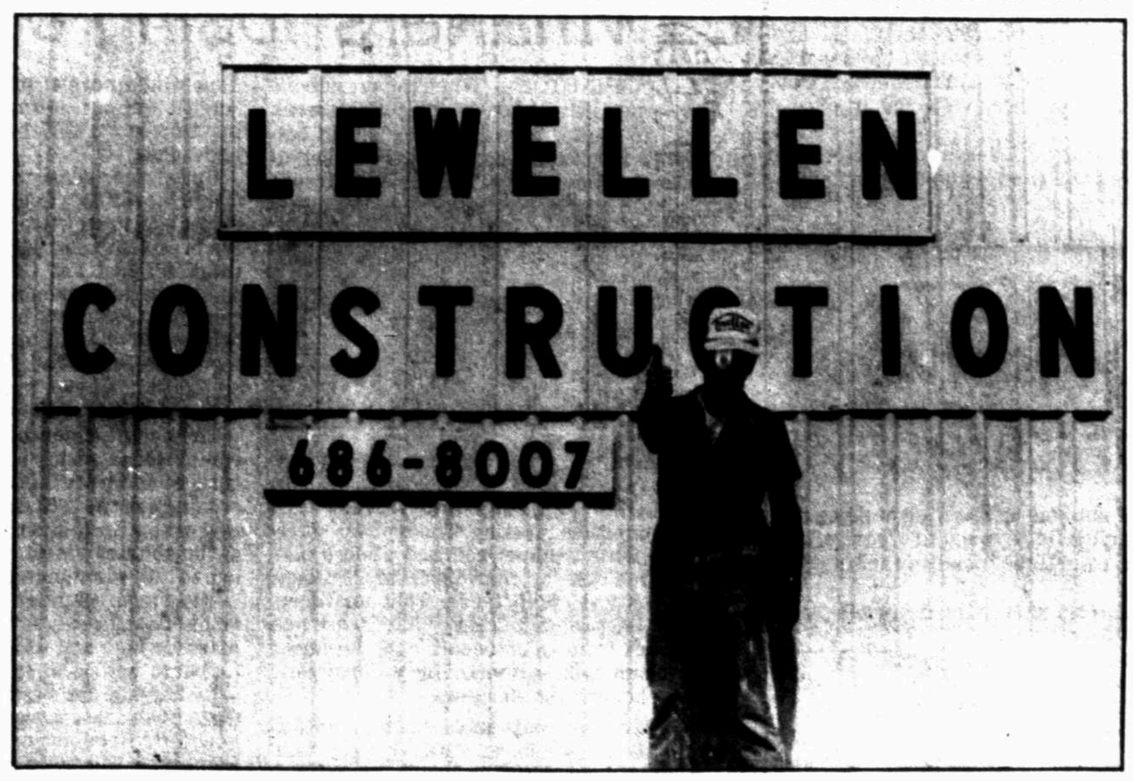
Lewellen has reduced his overhead and will give his customers top quality at fair prices. He will continue to offer a 10 year written warranty on workmanship as well as a lifetime manufacturer's warranty on siding materials.

He added, "I will not sacrifice quality for price, but even if you've had a previous bid from us and felt you could not afford the price, call now and let me review that bid with you."

If you're tired of painting every few years, toss that old paint brush and give Lewellen Construction Company a call. Whether your home is brick, frame or stucco, it can be made virtually "maintenance-free" with the installation of steel siding or trim.

Custom-built replacement windows and storm windows are also a specialty of Lewellen Construction Company. Call now to be assured of having your home weatherized before fall.

Now you don't have to settle for "second best." Call Lewellen Construction Company at 686-8007.



Bill Lewellen gives a "thumbs up" sign as he reopens his longtime Midland siding and window business, Lewellen Construction Company. Call 686-8007 for a free estimate.

Limited insurance can save system

A $100 billion bill for next year's payment by taxpayers toward the savings and loan bailout underscores the need to see that such a debacle never happens again.

L. William Seidman, chairman of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp., told Congress that the government needs $100 billion for next fiscal year for the bailout, which will eventually cost taxpayers half a trillion. Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady suggested changes in federal deposit insurance rules that are at the crux of the S&L scandal. Brady said the Treasury Department may limit the amount of federal deposit insurance to $100,000 per person, instead of the present $100,000 per account.

The Treasury Department also may charge more for deposit insurance to banks and S&Ls that have risky investments.

And Brady suggested requiring bank and S&L owners to invest more of their own money in their institutions through higher capital requirements.

Such measures are needed to reduce taxpayers' liability for bailing depositors out of failed thrifts and banks. Limiting federal deposit insurance would limit S&Ls' ability to attract large depositors by promising high interest rates. That would reduce deposits, since depositors likely won't put more money in an account than can be insured. That, in turn, would cut down the hyper-growth that characterized many failed thrifts of the 1980s, when deposits ballooned and loans flowed freely. When risky loans turned bad, the S&Ls didn't have the capital base to cover losses.

Unfortunately, the Treasury Department is moving too slowly on deposit insurance reform, promising an exhaustive study to be completed next spring. Congress should move ahead swiftly on such reforms, instead of proposing an unnecessary commission to study the problem.

Federal deposit insurance began during the Depression to protect people from losing their savings when banks failed, and to protect banks against disastrous runs by depositors. The Banking Act of 1933 originally set coverage at $5,000 per account. That amount was increased over the years to adjust for inflation, most recently from $40,000 to $100,000 early in the 1980s, but there never has been a limit on the number of accounts an individual could have at different banks or thrifts.

Deregulation of S&Ls early in the Reagan administration allowed the thrifts to offer high interest rates and gave them a free hand in investing. But federal deposit insurance was left intact, thus indemnifying depositors against S&L failures. In that way, a train of gunpowder was laid that eventually razed the S&L industry in this country.

Deposit insurance originally was intended to protect the life savings of the little guy. But in the high-flying 1980s, it protected millionaires who deposited $100,000 in each of many thrifts and benefited from federal protection for huge sums on which they collected the S&Ls' high interest rates.

The taxpayer will have to pay. But limiting federal insurance to one account per person is one way to keep from running up another billion-dollar tab in years to come.

JACK ANDERSON

Legislator calls for firesafe cigarette

WASHINGTON — The tobacco industry could develop a "firesafe" cigarette, but it won't. Now, in a rare defeat for the tobacco lobby in Congress, the industry will be forced to come up with a cigarette that is less likely to start a fire when it is dropped.

Anderson

The impetus for the new cigarette came from a member of congress who has refused to take campaign money from the tobacco lobby, and is finally in a position to call in favors from those who do.

Rep. Joseph Moakley, D-Mass., has tried since 1979 to get Congess to mandate firesafe cigarettes. In 1979, a fire caused by a cigarette killed an entire family in Moakley's district. He figured those deaths, and the 1,500 deaths and 7,000 injuries caused every year by cigarette fires in the United States, could be avoided, along with the $400 million in annual property damage.

The notion of a firesafe cigarette was debated for several years, but Moakley didn't have the clout in Congress to get past the interests of the Tobacco Institute, a lobbying organization that, in the last congressional election, handed out $194,557 in campaign contributions.

Finally in 1984, Congress agreed to at least study the idea of a cigarette that was less likely to ignite bedding, furniture and rugs. It is possible through changes in the paper, packing and dimensions of cigarettes to make them safer. A Technical Study Group created by Congress took three years to conclude that, yes indeed, such a cigarette was technically possible. But the committee couldn't decide whether the idea was commercially feasible.

The Tobacco Institute, which represents most of the major American tobacco producers, still had an out. As long as the government had not declared the product to be commercially feasible, the industry had a powerful excuse not to tinker with its product.

But the Tobacco Institute hadn't counted on Moakley, who has picked up some power of his own since he began his crusade in 1979. Moakley is now chairman of the House Rules Committee, and last month he used that position to call in favors from fellow members of Congress who need his cooperation on other matters.

Moakley pulled some strings and rushed through Congress a new law on firesafe cigarettes that will make them necessary without making them mandatory. Moakley's bill orders the Consumer Product Safety Commission to set federal testing procedures for firesafe cigarettes.

Tobacco companies wouldn't be required to put their cigarettes to the test. But sources in the industry and in Congress told our associate Tim Warner that the effect will be the same as a mandatory standard. Once Congress sets up a testing mechanism, even a voluntary one, tobacco companies are at greater risk in lawsuits resulting from fires if it can be proved that they didn't do everything possible to make the cigarette safer. And Congress will be more inclined in the future to require firesafe cigarettes once the test is available.

Moakley had tried a tougher bill — a federal standard for firesafe cigarettes within one year and mandatory compliance after that. But Moakley was only using that to scare the tobacco industry into a compromise — development of tests within three years and a determination by the Consumer Product Safety Commission, not the tobacco industry, of whether the firesafe cigarette is commercially feasible.

Moakley's success at convincing his fellow members of Congress indicates that the tobacco industry may be losing some of its bought-and-paid-for clout on Capitol Hill. As Moakley sees it, the industry "realized that the time had come that they were no longer that sacred industry that nobody was going to bother."

MINI-EDITORIAL — Congress is talking about requiring the military academies to teach ethics to the up-and-coming young officers. We'll be curious to see what kind of textbook on ethics can override the underground lessons taught at the academies: I'm right because I say so; follow any order, even an illegal one and; keep the shredder warmed up. Oliver North learned those lessons well in spite of the honor code at Annapolis.

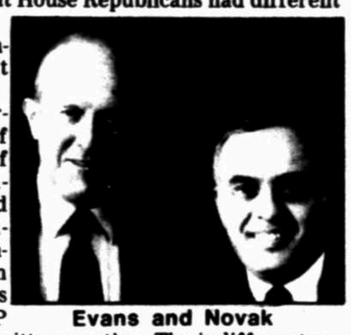
Lawmakers losing confidence in Bush

WASHINGTON — When the president's men traveled to Capitol Hill this week to sound the trumpet for all-out battle against the Democrats, they were chilled to discover that House Republicans had different war aims.



Evans and Novak

It certainly was not pacifism that undermined Chief of Staff John Sununu and Budget Director Richard Darman at Tuesday's House GOP Policy Committee meeting. The indifferent reaction to their trumpet call had a more ominous source: loss of confidence in President Bush's political competence. That loss deepened the next day when the White House had to pull back from an erroneous announcement of a Bush ultimatum demanding a Democratic budget plan within 48 hours.

While the Democrats smile, the Republicans frown. Eleven weeks of futile budget summitry, combined with the worsening savings and loan crisis and a feeble economy, have transformed national politics.

When Sununu and Darman said the president would not permit Congress to recess for August without seizing the offensive by blaming Democrats for the budget stalemate, nobody cheered.

Outspoken conservative Rep. William E. Dannemeyer of California, who on NBC's "Meet the Press" two days earlier had seared the president's strategy, said what others were thinking: Bush and GOP lawmakers no longer share the same agenda. Sununu said he had a response to that but had promised Republican leaders he would not be nasty. Nevertheless, moderate Rep. Paul Henry of Michigan seconded Dannemeyer's comments, and additional congressmen followed suit.

The congressmen believe the president has committed a series of blunders with fateful consequences for their party. Trouble was preordained in the 1988 campaign for the nomination when Bush enshrined the budget deficit as the country's most important issue and that led to his summoning the budget summit.

The bigger blunder was Bush's repudiation of his no-tax pledge, followed by specific tax hikes (on beer and wine, plus lower deductions for state and local taxes).

Democrats are beside themselves with joy that Bush has jettisoned the anti-tax role honed by Republicans the past decade. These Democrats will not budge an inch toward taxes, unless marching behind a Republican president who guarantees Republican votes in Congress. It is a delicious position for a party divided, demoralized and defeated on taxes only a year ago.

In fact, Republicans will not follow the president into a tax-boosting budget deal acceptable to Democrats. House Minority Whip Newt Gingrich's valiant effort to bridge the gap between the Hill GOP and the White House exposed him to withering cross fire. He was assailed by his colleagues after he told the summit he could support tax increases as part of a "good" budget agreement.

Then the president's men were incensed when twice last weekend Gingrich criticized Bush's strategy on national TV. Over breakfast with reporters Tuesday, he suggested the president should quickly revert to "Classic Coke" tax policy: the "read my lips" pledge.

A more partisan line has long been pressed on the president by Sununu. Bush's rhetoric is intended to blame the devastating spending cuts of Gramm-Rudman on the Democrats. But Democrats doubt that the president can pull it off, and their Republican colleagues fear they are right.

Further souring this bad news is the increasingly poor prospect for a capital gains tax cut, essential to spur economic growth. The Treasury doesn't like the move all that much, and Bush now ignores it. The upshot: fear and loathing among Republicans as the mid-term campaign begins.

WILLIAM MURCHISON

UT quickly solves class controversy

As I recall, we were sitting here not long ago, talking of plans by the University of Texas English Department to organize its freshmen composition course around the theme of racism and sexism.

Yes, it was a lousy idea, but we can relax at last. The course, in its revised form, is off. The dean of liberal arts, Dr. Standish Meacham, noting strenuous opposition within the faculty, has shelved "Difference — Racism and Sexism" for a year's study. Cremation would have been a more fitting solution, but you can't have everything, as Dr. Johnson or Yogi Berra or somebody once said.

Murchison

Physically or spiritually, I have been close to the University of Texas a long time, and seldom have I seen a campus controversy arise so quickly, or meet with such quick resolution. But, then, seldom have I seen my university poised to commit folly on a par with "Difference — Racism and Sexism."

What a stinker! In Stygian darkness, a faculty committee was toiling over a syllabus to which 3,000 freshmen would have been subjected this fall.

Were the students going to learn to write clear English, or to think Correct Thoughts? The new, improved English 306 sounded more like Indoctrination 101, a point made accidentally clear by the head of the committee drafting the course syllabus.

"I'm concerned about the message (the course postponement is) going to send out to minority students," said Dr. Linda Brodkey. "I'm afraid the message may be that the lives and intellectual histories of these students is of no interest to the university."

The primary purpose of retooling English 306, if I take Prof. Brodkey's point, was to teach multiculturalism; to expose students to the viewpoints of groups singled out as deprived and misunderstood. Singled out by whom? By the English Department itself.

Nobody denies, I hope, that educated people need to understand the various cultural strands that make up America. The argument is: Do you center an English composition course on the viewpoint that it's time to write about great evils that society must combat and overcome? How does this make for objective thinking? Or for objective grading?

The University of Texas, which likes to call itself a university of the first class, shows wonderful class in quashing "Difference — Racism and Sexism." Those profs who invite "white America" to take a guilt trip about its past and present will get no encouragement from what has happened in Austin. Others should be tickled pink. What happened in Austin, when concerned professors saw what they knew to be wrong, and stood up to be counted, could inspire beleaguered colleagues at other campuses around the country.

Hook 'em, Horns.

CHARLEY REESE

Legislator David Duke bad, dangerous man

I am concerned about David Duke, the Louisiana legislator running for the U.S. Senate. I believe he is bad man and a dangerous man.

He is bad because he is a bigot, and he's dangerous because he's smart. But what really makes him dangerous is that liberals are handing a bad man several good issues on a platter.

Reese

An objective look at Adolf Hitler's career shows clearly that it was the combination of a bad man but good issues which put him into power. Had Germany been prosperous, had the French and British not been greedy and foolish in humiliating Germany with the Treaty of Versailles, Hitler likely would have remained an evil eccentric in the shadows of the Munich streets.

But in fact Germany had been humiliated and it was economically prostrate, so what Hitler had to say on raising living standards, correcting injustices and restoring German pride was so legitimate that people overlooked the other, not legitimate, things he was saying.

Racial quotas and the injustices of affirmative action — which punish people who never committed a wrong and reward people who never suffered a wrong — are legitimate issues with which Duke can make political hay. Furthermore, the Louisiana economy is in bad shape. The incumbent senator, J. Bennett Johnston Jr., is no statesman. Thus it looks like circumstances and good issues are going to coalesce around a bad man with brains enough to exploit them.

What we have in this country are three categories of demagogues playing on the race issue and inflaming the situation. You have black demagogues who are as racist as any man who ever put a bed sheet over his head. Rep. Gus Savage, Benjamin Hooks, Al Sharpton, Jesse Jackson, and Louis Farrakhan are examples. They are continuously spreading their own versions of "there's a white racist under every bed."

The second category are white liberal demagogues whose political bases are the urban areas with large concentrations of black voters. The liberals echo the black racist's charge of racism and jump through any hoop that the so-called Civil Rights establishment holds in front of them. Their chief characteristics are cowardice and lack of integrity.

Robert Bork's nomination for the Supreme Court, for example, was defeated because these civil rights groups demanded that it be defeated and Democratic senators, relying on black votes, were fearful of offending them.

The third category of demagogues, of course, is the garden variety white racists who normally are so crude as to be ineffective. They have in David Duke, however, a man smart enough to craft carefully their message in what appears to be a legitimate concern for social justice.

To add fuel to this simmering witches' brew of trouble are irresponsible media types like Phil Donahue and Geraldo Rivera, who are more than happy to provide public platforms for anyone if it helps their ratings. Consequently Duke and Farrakhan get more media play than Nobel laureates.

The way to avoid trouble, of course, is to tolerate no injustice against anyone. To do that, we will have to reject all the demagogues and their poisonous lies as well as the political cowards.

James Meredith, the first black man to enroll in the University of Mississippi, put the matter well when he said that he never fought for civil rights, only for his rights as a American citizen.

There should be no rights, and no privileges, beyond those of an American citizen, and those must be assured for every citizen.

20 Oregon families lose homes in forest fire

BEND, Ore. (AP) — Residents chased from their homes by a forest fire that consumed 20 houses and was still burning Monday returned to find the blaze had roasted meat inside freezers and melted wine bottles.

"That's the way I like my pork chops, well done," Brett Morelock said as he pulled cooked meat from inside a freezer that had been turned into an oven by Oregon's worst such fire in 54 years.

Fire crews held the line around the 3,300-acre Awbrey Hall fire for the second day in a row; officials believed they would be able to declare the fire contained Tuesday night and controlled Wednesday, said state Department of Forestry spokesman David Morman.

Nearly 1,440 firefighters battled the blaze Monday, aided by 122 fire engines, 70 bulldozers, 12 helicopters and six air tankers, said Don Ferguson, another Department of Forestry spokesman.

The central Oregon fire broke out Saturday, and raced from treetop to treetop in a swath 12 miles long and two miles wide just a few miles from Bend, a city of about 19,000 on the eastern slope of the Cascade Mountains.

The fire split around the Entrada Lodge motel, but roared through three rural subdivisions, leveling homes in a seemingly random pattern.

By Sunday morning most of the damage was done: 20 homes and eight outbuildings with an estimated worth of $4 million and timber valued at $1 million, according to Morman.

An earlier estimate put the number of homes destroyed at 28, but that figure was revised downward after officials went through the area Sunday night and checked ruins against tax rolls, Morman said.

Still, the number of buildings destroyed was the worst in the state since 1936, when a forest fire leveled the city of Bandon, said Jim Fisher, another Department of Forestry spokesman.

The cause of the fire remained under investigation, but Morman said arson had been ruled out.

The 2,800 people who evacuated 2,000 homes Saturday night were allowed back Monday morning. Authorities reopened major streets in the fire area, including the road leading to the Mount Bachelor ski resort.

Sightseers will be kept out for a couple of days to hold down traffic as firefighters continued moving equipment around, Morman said.

In the Sunrise Village subdivision, Morelock's father, Don, and mother, Jerrie, searched for anything that might have survived the flames in the house they leased. Little did.

What once had been bottles of wine had melted into puddles of glass. Nothing was left of a water bed but the concrete piers that had held it up.

Pat Thomas said the fire destroyed paintings collected over 35 years and melted his wife's jewelry.

"There's nothing to salvage up here," Thomas said. 'Just get a bulldozer and knock it down, I guess."

Morelock said he and his wife had watched the fire approach the back of their home before they fled with the few family pictures and other mementos they could gather in a hurry.

The wind generated by the fire, "was incredible," Morelock said. "I told one fellow the sound was like a thousand horses running by."

ABA votes neutral on abortion

CHICAGO (HNS) — Lawyers attending the American Bar Association convention here Monday voted by a narrow margin to overturn the group's policy favoring abortion rights and adopted a neutral stance.

After two hours of heated debate in the ABA Assembly — open to all who registered for the convention — members voted 885-to-837 for a resolution saying the organization takes no position on abortion one way or the other.

However, the vote does not constitute the official position of the nation's premier legal organization.

The 460-member House of Delegates — the ABA's only official policy-making body — is to take up the resolution on Wednesday, but is under no obligation to follow the Assembly's lead.

Last February, ABA delegates to the mid-year convention in Los Angeles pushed through a resolution that said government should not interfere "with the confidential relationship between a pregnant woman and her physician" in deciding on abortions.

Baptist editors start up new news agency

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — The leader of Mississippi's largest religious newspaper pinned his beliefs to a fledgling news agency when the battle among Southern Baptists moved into the newsroom.

Don McGregor, editor of the 100,000-plus circulation Baptist Record for 16 years, is among a handful of state Baptist newspaper editors who chartered the Associated Baptist Press three weeks ago.

"With us, freedom of the press or freedom of information is a very dear concept," McGregor said. "I never thought they'd leave the idea of wanting a free flow of information."

McGregor, 66, is not alone in his belief that the Southern Baptist Convention abandoned those ideas when the group's executive committee fired two top editors of the denomination's news agency on July 16.

Al Shackleford and Dan Martin, both of Nashville, ran the Baptist Press news service for years before their firing in a closed meeting guarded by armed guards. The editors were not given a reason for their termination, but Baptist leaders said they wanted a press service that cast the denomination in a more favorable light.

The editors' dismissal deepened the 12-year-old rift between fundamentalists and moderates among the 14.9 million members of the nation's largest Protestant denomination.

Conservatives within the denomination believe in the inerrancy of the Bible. Moderates are more open to doubts about the absolute reliability of the scriptures.

The Rev. Ken Alford, pastor of Morrison Heights Baptist Church in Clinton, said he wished editors of state Baptist newspapers would have given the convention's leadership more time before creating their own agency.

"I'm a bit dismayed to see what almost looks as if we're disintegrating," Alford said. "I just believe that we're disintegrating before our very eyes."

Alford said he is a staunch supporter of the conservative resurgence in the Southern Baptist Convention. He also said the firing of the two Baptist Press editors has been misinterpreted.

"I take issue with the continued charge that this is a blow against freedom of the press and a blow against fairness," Alford said. "I feel, if anything, it's a blow for freedom."

Camarena trial concludes with guard's conviction

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A drug lord's bodyguard was convicted Monday of slaying two American tourists whom he mistook for U.S. agents when they walked into a Guadalajara restaurant during a party for Mexican drug kingpins.

Javier Vasquez Velasco, the last of four defendants sentenced in the latest trial over the death of U.S. Drug Enforcement agent Enrique Camarena, was convicted of committing violent crimes in aid of racketeering in the murders of tourists John Walker and Alberto Radelat.

All four defendants were convicted of various crimes connected with the 1985 kidnapping and torture deaths of Camarena and his pilot. Two were charged with slaying Camarena; they were acquitted of murder but found guilty of kidnapping.

The four were tried together but the jury delivered verdicts on them one at a time.

"We can take no pleasure in the final outcome of this trial, due to the grisly events outlined by the evidence presented," U.S. Attorney General Dick Thornburgh said. "However, there is justice in the fact that many of those responsible for the brutal kidnapping, torture and murder of DEA Special Agent Enrique "Kiki" Camarena have now been held accountable for their dreadful acts."

The trial was the second stemming from the Camarena murder. In 1988, two defendants were convicted of multiple charges, including murder, and a third was convicted of aiding the escape of Mexican drug lord Rafael Caro Quintero after the slayings.

The DEA has vowed to capture every person involved in the slaying. So far, 22 people have been charged in this country. More than 20 have been imprisoned in Mexico, including Caro and drug baron Ernesto Fonseca Carrillo. Fourteen others are at large in Mexico, including Miguel Aldana Ibarra, former head of Mexico's Interpol.

The Camarena case has aired testimony about dealings between corrupt Mexican law enforcement officers and drug dealers. Many of the trial witnesses were paid informants who had been Mexican law enforcement officers in the past.

Prosecutors said the slayings were revenge for Drug Enforcement Administration raids on marijuana plantations and cocaine processing centers that cost drug barons $5 billion in profits.

Defaced

Boston police say they believe it was an individual obsessed with the late actress Marilyn Monroe who defaced the John F. Kennedy memorial statue with spray paint Monday morning. The head and jacket were sprayed and an apparent stencil of the word "murderer" can be seen at the statue's base.

Kennedy 'won't confirm blank slate'

CHICAGO (AP) — Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., accused the Bush administration Monday of trying to "muzzle" the Senate Judiciary Committee when it questions Supreme Court nominee David H. Souter next month.

"One thing is certain," Kennedy said in a speech to the American Bar Association. "The Senate Judiciary Committee intends to find out what Judge Souter thinks about the Constitution. The Senate will not confirm a blank slate to the Supreme Court."

Kennedy, a committee member, said, "I reject the unseemly attempts made by Attorney General (Dick) Thornburgh and the Bush administration to muzzle the Senate confirmation process."

Souter, nominated to replace retired Justice William J. Brennan, is scheduled to appear before the Judiciary Committee beginning Sept. 13. Little is known about the views of the former New Hampshire Supreme Court justice on major constitutional and national issues.

NATION IN BRIEF

Gun program's slow-moving

NEW YORK (NYT) — On the first day of a citywide amnesty program for people with illegal guns, only three weapons were turned in — all by the same person.

Officers at the 105th Precinct station house in Queens Village said that a man walked in at 12:40 p.m. and handed over the three guns — a .357 Magnum, a .45-caliber Colt automatic, and a .380 Beretta automatic.

The 60-day amnesty campaign was announced last week by Mayor David N. Dinkins in response to recent shootings. The mayor and Police Commissioner Lee P. Brown promised to see that those who did not turn in their guns and were caught would face a minimum of a year in jail.

Jury trial not required

TRENTON, N.J. — The New Jersey Supreme Court ruled Monday that motorists accused of drunken driving are not entitled to jury trials, even though those convicted for the third time can be jailed for six months, fined $1,000, pay thousands of dollars in insurance surcharges and lose their right to drive for 10 years.

Despite the severity of the penalties, the court found that the Legislature, in drafting its laws governing driving while intoxicated, did not intend to treat the violation as "the functional equivalent of a crime."

The court ruled that the six-month sentence remained below the threshold that would require a jury trial and that the other penalties, although severe, were essentially civil and not criminal in nature and did not therefore make the total penalties so onerous that a jury trial was required.

The 6-0 ruling means that New Jersey, along with Nevada and Utah, remains one of three states that do not require jury trials for drunken-driving offenses at any stage.

Report results leaked

WASHINGTON (AP) — The lives of 10,000 babies could be saved each year and another 100,000 could be spared a lifetime of disability if the United States applies the medical skill it already has, a draft report to the president says.

That would represent a 25 percent reduction in infant deaths and disabilities.

Some pregnant women don't get needed medical care for themselves and their unborn children because they can't afford it, can't get to where it is or can't fill out the forms to get the government to pay their bills, the report said.

Copies of the draft report by the White House Task Force on Infant Mortality have been leaked by those who complain that the Bush administration has shelved the study.

States hold elections

ATLANTA (AP) — Andrew Young recalled his days in the civil rights struggle Monday as he implored Georgians to defy the pollsters and give him the Democratic nomination Tuesday to become the state's first black governor.

In Michigan, Republican candidates wrapped up campaigns in primaries to choose challengers to Democratic Gov. James Blanchard and U.S. Sen. Carl Levin.

And Kansas Republican Gov. Mike Hayden braced for a strong primary challenge from wealthy real estate agent Nestor Weigand.

Missouri also has primaries Tuesday, but no statewide races. U.S. House Majority Leader Richard Gephardt, D-Mo., is expected to have no trouble winning renomination.

Talks not confidential

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — Conversations between a psychologist and two brothers after their parents were slain can be allowed as evidence in the brothers' murder case, a judge ruled Monday.

Superior Court Judge James Albracht said the psychologist, L. Jerome Oziel, had believed Erik and Lyle Menendez made threats during their psychotherapy sessions with him and it was necessary to disclose their conversations to prevent danger.

The tapes of counseling sessions "concern the brothers' emotional and psychological state after the murder of their parents," Albracht said.

The brothers are charged with shooting to death their parents, Jose and Kitty Menendez, in the family's Beverly Hills mansion last Aug. 20.

Prosecutors say the gruesome shotgun slayings were prompted by the brothers' greedy hurry to collect their parents' $14 million fortune. Jose Menendez was president of Live Entertainment, a video production company.

Erik, 19, and Lyle, 22, who have pleaded innocent, remain in jail without bail. They could face the death penalty if convicted.

Jurors weigh charges

WASHINGTON (AP) — Jurors in Marion Barry's cocaine and perjury trial completed their fourth day of deliberations Monday amid signs they were in for a long stay.

Deliberations were to resume Tuesday morning.

Over the weekend, the jury asked U.S. District Judge Thomas Penfield Jackson for another look at more than 150 prosecution and defense exhibits from the mayor's six-week trial.

That request came Saturday shortly before the jurors took the rest of the weekend off. They deliberated four hours on Saturday.

Barry's lawyer has acknowledged the mayor was an "occasional" user of cocaine but has contended the government has not proven charges concerning use at specific times and places.

Local residents win suit against Odessa

■ After a two-year legal battle, three Midland landowners were awarded $221,708 in damages by jurors Monday in the Monahans Draw case.

By Erin Blair
Staff Writer

Jurors Monday awarded $221,708 in damages to three Midland County landowners who sued Odessa for flooding their land at the conclusion of the five-day Anderson-Gay versus Odessa civil trial.

The 142nd District Court jury deliberated for 4 hours 15 minutes before arriving at a verdict that ends, at least for the moment, the plaintiffs' two-year legal battle over effluents discharged from Odessa's water reclamation plants into Monahans Draw.

"I'm elated with the verdict," said George Anderson, Jr. He and his father, George Anderson, Sr., received a total of $115,708 to restore their nutrient-leached soil and to compensate for the temporary loss of revenue from cattle and crops caused by flooding in 1986.

"We set out to do something and we did it; I'm just happy this turned out in our favor," he said.

"We proved our point about the draw flooding."

George Anderson, Sr. said it would be in Odessa's best interest to solve the effluent discharge problem now.

Louise Gay, the third plaintiff in the suit, echoed the Andersons comments. "I hope something will be done about the water in the draw now," she said.

Mrs. Gay's property was found to be a permanent loss and she was awarded $106,000 for its decline in cash market value as a result of the 1986 flooding.

This is the second lawsuit concerning Monahans Draw that the city of Odessa has lost. Earlier this year, an appellate court upheld a Stanton jury's award of $103,000 to Lee Bell for water damage sustained to his Midland County farm.

James M. O'Leary, Odessa's attorney, said he did not know if the outcome of this case would bring on a spate of new lawsuits filed against the city.

"I don't believe it's our water," he said.

But he added that there seems to be an unconscious jury sympathy for the "underdog position — individuals suing municipalities, corporations and such.

"I feel sorry for Mrs. Gay. She sunk her whole life's savings into that land," said O'Leary.

He believes Odessa will study alternatives to discharging its effluent into the draw in the wake of this trial.

"Water's a valuable resource in West Texas," O'Leary said.

"And cities don't belong in courtrooms."

Paul Bohannon, the plaintiffs' attorney, said he would be watching Odessa carefully to see how it responds to its second courtroom loss.

"I've talked to a number of others who would like to file a suit who have said they'd be happy if Odessa will reduce its discharge to a level that gets it off their property," he said.

Bohannon said the city still lacks easement permits for the South Dixie and East water reclamation plants' effluent discharges onto private property.

Emcee for charity events stays appropriate, but seeks the edge

By Anntoinette Moore
Associate City Editor

Deep within the maze-like corridors of a ClayDesta office building lurks a geologist with humor in his heart.

Bill Dingus, a senior geologist with Exxon Co. USA's Southwestern Division, currently is master of ceremonies for this year's series of Midland United Way campaign luncheons. Earlier this year, Dingus kept the audience laughing during a spelling bee to benefit Midland Need to Read Inc.

"I really enjoy it," Dingus, 31, said of acting as master of ceremonies for charity events. "It's an outlet for me. There's only so much you can do creatively — that has no boundaries — at work or at home."

Dingus' career as an emcee began two years ago when he was asked to be one of Exxon's group leaders for the United Way campaign. Last year, he conducted Exxon's United Way rally, where Patti Groce of Midland Need to Read Inc. heard him.

The rest, as they say, is history.

"I never know quite what I'm going to say," Dingus readily admitted.

"Sometimes I don't get the jokes until they're out of my mouth.

"The trick, of course, when you're working unconsciously like that, is to stay within the realm of the appropriate. But you have to find the edge, too.

"The little old ladies will titter and the men will guffaw, but you won't upset anybody," he said.

As a master of ceremonies, Dingus is constantly introducing people.

Often, he receives information about the next speaker right before introducing him or her.

"You're trying to think, 'Well, what am I going to say about these people that I've never met? while these very people are walking up and bothering you!" he said, laughing.

"The jokes I make about people usually have nothing to do with them.

If someone's bald, I don't make bald jokes; if someone has a big nose, I don't make big-nose jokes."

Most of Dingus' humor is spontaneous.

"I'll jot down little notes as they occur to me. A lot of my jokes are just there, at the time.

"Some of the worst jokes you can make are the ones where you think, 'Come hell or high water, I'm going to make this joke.' A lot of people do that and the joke's not appropriate," he said. "Part of doing this well is knowing when not to make a comment or joke, knowing when to stop."

Midlanders say Williams' business expertise proven

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

Republican gubernatorial candidate Clayton Williams has proven his business expertise despite a copyrighted article in Sunday's Dallas Morning News that suggested the otherwise, several Midlanders said Monday.

The article criticized Williams' image by describing his business history as less successful than portrayed to the public.

"The author's intent was to poke holes in Williams' business background as an asset in running for governor," said Rick Davis, Republican Party Chairman for Midland County.

The lengthy article — a result of a four-month scrutiny of Williams' finances — stated that Williams' net worth has dropped nearly two-thirds since 1982 from about $300 million to around $116 million.

"The objective business facts in the article are positive. Williams paid back all his creditors and still has over $100 million. It speaks well of his business ability," Davis said, pointing out Williams faired especially well during the turbulent Texas economy of the 1980s.

Ernest Angelo, Republican National Commiteeman for Texas, agreed.

"Show me someone's net worth that hasn't declined since 1980 in Texas in those businesses," Angelo said, adding that the article took an unfair slant "comparing the best and worst day in the oil business."

Angelo said the idea that Williams' achievements are exaggerated are unfounded and easily dismissed if one looks at where Williams is today compared to 20 or 30 years ago.

"I do not believe that someone who reads the article would come to the conclusion this man was not a successful businessman," Angelo said.

Williams' record "speaks for itself," Angelo said, adding that the article tried to make Williams' business savvy look bad but does just the opposite.

As far as Williams' expansive image differing from his business record, Angelo responded, "You're not a success unless you have a lot of confidence (in yourself)."

Chris McCormack, Midland County Democratic Chairman, said whether Williams' is successful or not in business is not a true measure of his ability to being a good governor.

"I don't think it's fair to say he is not a good businessman," McCormack said, adding that Williams' does possess good entrepreneurial skills.

"It takes more than being a good businessman to be a good governor," McCormack said. "Being able to promote yourself in not the same as being a leader (in government)," he added.

McCormack said that managerial skills play a part in being a good governor.

"If he had an asset he mismanaged, the people of Texas need to know that," McCormack said.

West Texas cotton held up by trade embargo on Iraq

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

West Texas cotton apparently is among agricultural products usually exported to Iraq being held up by President Bush's trade embargo against Iraq.

"Right now, on the cotton part on the Iraq (trade), there are 65,000 bales (of U.S. cotton) that have been registered to be exported to Iraq that's not been shipped," said Bert Kyle, vice president for marketing for the Lubbock-based Plains Cotton Cooperative Association.

"They market it wherever they can get get the best price," said Wright.

Kyle said annually that about 200,000 bales of U.S. cotton are exported to Iraq. At $350 to $400 per bale, the cotton export would amount to between $70 million and $80 million.

Mid-America contempt hearing delayed

■ Judge admonishes defendants to adhere to conditions of injunction issued against the clinic in April.

By David Morris
Staff Writer

A Midland judge Monday postponed until September a contempt of court hearing involving a Midland chiropractic clinic, citing the fact that some of the defendants did not have legal counsel.

The hearing had been scheduled in response to a motion filed last month against Mid-America Inc. by the State Attorney General's office. The attorney general filed suit against Mid-America and some of its operators in April alleging that the clinic used deceptive trade practices.

The attorney general's suit claims that Mid-America employees gave unauthorized medical exams to patients and falsely represented themselves as medical doctors.

Named as defendants in the suit are Mid-America Clinics Inc., also known as Med-America Health Center, and former Mid-America employees Dr. R.W. Bratcher, Dr. Joe T. Boyd and Dr. James H. Crockett.

Pat Baskin, 142nd District Court judge, admonished the defendants to adhere to the conditions of an injunction he issued against the clinic in April. Robert E. Reyna, assistant attorney general, said he filed the motion for contempt against Mid-America because its associates have been violating that injunction.

The injunction allowed the clinic, formerly at 700 W. Louisiana Ave., to continue operating but forbade it from engaging in certain practices.

Those practices include falsely representing clinic chiropractors as physicians and failing to identify clinic doctors as chiropractors. Reyna claims that the injunction has been violated numerous times since it was issued.

Reyna alleged that Boyd, former Mid-America president, in June lead a Dallas woman to believe Boyd was a medical doctor and gave her a medical examination.

"We're alleging he scooted over to Dallas and opened up a copycat operation over there" after the April ruling against Mid-America, Reyna said.

Proposed code change would permit halfway house

By David Morris
Staff Writer

The groundwork was laid Monday for a proposed Midland halfway house when the city planning and zoning commission voted to recommend an amendment to the city's zoning code.

David Thurbon, the city's assistant director of planning and development, said the amendment will allow "group care dwellings" like the halfway house to locate in the city.

"The intent was to amend the code to allow group care dwellings to be considered," Thurbon said. Examples of group care dwellings are certain types of senior adult day-care centers and homes for delinquent children, Thurbon said.

The halfway house would be a for-profit "community treatment center" for non-violent convicts, developers say.

Such institutions are not addressed in the city zoning code, Thurbon said. Under the amendement, they will be allowed to seek "specific use permits" required by businesses such as bars which wish to locate in a particular area of town.

"It's essentially a zone change," Thurbon said of specific use permits.

Thurbon said city councilmen are expected to vote on the recommended amendment at their Aug. 28 meeting. If approved, the amendment will allow halfway-house developers to apply for a specific use permit allowing them to locate at the Leisure Colony Motel, 1000 W. Interstate Highway 20.

The permit application process will include public hearings before the city council and the planning commission, Thurbon said.

Members of the Otus Group, the coalition of Midland businessmen hoping to open the halfway house, said they were pleased by the zoning commission's unanimous approval of the amendment.

"I'm ecstatic that they approved it and now it's just a matter of going to the city council," said Otus Group representative Ed Burger. He said he did not know how long it would take to file a specific use permit application should councilmen approve the amendment.

Neighbors of the proposed halfway house, meanwhile, complained to zoning commissioners that the amendment represents another step toward placing an unwanted "minimum security prison" in their back yard.

"We feel like we have enough burglaries and auto thefts in town and we don't need to import another hundred," said Camp Street resident Dorothy Gallagher, who lives about a half mile from the proposed halfway house. She said she wanted commissioners to recommend exclusion of halfway houses from the zoning amendment.

"They're lumping them (halfway houses) in with some good things," said Ms. Gallagher, who has lived on Camp Street since 1957.

But Thurbon said the amendment was designed, at city councilmen's request, to allow for the development of the halfway house.

"We feel that by state law they have to be allowed somewhere," Thurbon said. Under the amendment, institutions such as the halfway house would be allowed to locate anywhere in town as long as zoning commissioners and councilmen approve.

Burger, meanwhile, said residents' fears about the safety and security of the halfway house are unfounded.

"It's an alternative sentencing," he said. "It's not even referred to as incarceration."

Developers have said the halfway house will not house criminals with a background of violence, sex offenses or sociopathic behavior.

About 95 percent of the 100 or so men who would live in the facility will be parolees, with the rest sent there in lieu of serving prison terms, developers say. The average halfway house stay is expected to be about six months.

The halfway house will contract with federal and state officials to house men convicted of crimes such as hot-check writing, vehicle theft, burglary, embezzlement, tax evasion and other white-collar crimes.

Developers had originally planned to open the halfway house in October, but the need for the zoning amendment and a location change have delayed the opening for possibly five months, Otus Group representatives have said.

Committee will study boundary

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — A special Oklahoma Senate committee organized Monday to look into the ticklish issue of setting a permanent boundary between Oklahoma and Texas.

The original boundary between the two states was defined in the Louisiana Purchase as the south bank of the Red River.

The problem with that, said Sen. Paul Taliaferro, committee chairman, is that the river keeps changing its course, placing in doubt whether thousands of acres are in Oklahoma or Arkansas.

Taliaferro, D-Lawton, said he became interested in the boundary question when he toured land near the Red River in Jefferson County in Oklahoma that would have made "a great public hunting area."

He said he was told the boundary question could tie up any efforts to establish such a reserve.

Over the years, there have been disputes in southwestern Oklahoma as to what branch of the Red River was the main branch. In past years, the disputes became heated.

COTTON: Iraq depends on imports

(From 1B)

"A lot of this cotton could come from Texas or from Mississippi," Kyle said.

Iraq and Kuwait both heavily depend on imported fibers and foods.

Among Texas exports to Iraq are rice, feed grains, oil seed, and cotton. Annually, Texas product exports amount to well over $100 million.

"Iraq was and is a major importer of agricultural products — cotton, rice, wheat," noted Mike Kurtzig of the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) in Washington, D.C.

John Parker, market analyst for the USDA in Washington, said Monday that Iraq depends on foreign imports for 80 percent of its food, and that Kuwait depends on imports for 97 percent of its food.

"The thing that puzzles me is why Iraq did not stock" up on food products prior to its invasion of Kuwait, Parker said. The country, which produces dates and vegetables, is "ruining on thin treads" for staple items.

The United States and Australia are Iraq's No. 1 and 2 suppliers of foods, Parker said.

Kuwait produces a "few tomatoes and shrimp," he said.

Last year, the United States exported $133 million's worth of rice of Iraq, and exported $199 million in rice to that country in 1988, Parker said.

The United States also exports huge volumes of chicken feed to that Middle East nation.

Assailants beat, stab Odessa boy

Staff Report

ODESSA — A 15-year-old Odessa boy was reportedly beaten and stabbed by two unknown assailants on Sunday, police said.

Francisco Abila reported to police that he was walking in the 300 block of Geneva Avenue when a car drove by and a beer bottle was thrown at him.

Abila said he then threw the bottle back at the car, striking the vehicle.

The car came back toward Abila, who was then beaten and stabbed in the stomach and cut on the right arm by an unknown weapon.

Four plead guilty to fraud scheme charges

Staff Reports

ODESSA — Two men pleaded guilty in federal court Saturday to bank fraud and conspiracy to commit fraud in a scheme which left an Andrews savings and loan out more than $500,000, officials said Monday.

Wade Patrick Hogan, 38, of Mesa, Ariz., and Gary Lee Fradd, 39, of Great Bend, Kan., entered their pleas before U.S. District Judge Lucius Bunton, who held court in Odessa Saturday.

Assistant U.S. Attorney William W. Torrey said the two men swindled about $760,000 from the Andrews Savings and Loan Association between October 1981 and August 1986.

Through repossessions and other means, the savings and loan was able to recover about $200,000 from the men and ended up with a net loss of about $572,000, court records indicate.

Torrey said the men, who moved out of the area two or three years ago, borrowed money from Andrews Savings and Loan to buy mobile homes. However, title to some of the homes was never officially transferred to the thrift.

"In these 31 or so transactions, the defendants ended up with the ... title after the S&L had financed the things," Torrey said. He said the men would then sell the titles to buyers and other banks and not give any of the proceeds to the Andrews S&L which originally financed the homes' purchase.

"When the trailers were ultimately sold, Andrews Savings and Loan was not repaid," he said.

Sentencing for the men, both out on bond, is scheduled for Sept. 10. They each face up to five years in prison and a $250,000 fine for each of the counts to which they pleaded.

Each pleaded guilty to one count each of bank fraud and conspiracy to commit bank fraud.

PROVEN: Overall success important

(From 1B)

"(Mismanagement) says he is not going to do well as a manager second time around either."

Gordon Hensley, Williams' press secretary in Austin, said Williams' financial survival during the last decade is a "testament to his managerial skills" and that the article's attempt to make Williams appear less successful than he is, failed.

As for business ventures that have taken a downward turn — including ClayDesta Communications — Hensley said Williams' financial downfalls don't compare to his overall success.

"Mr. Williams has proven time and time again that he is a battle-hard survivor," Hensley said.

As far as the article and any intentions, it "will not have any affect one way or the other" on Williams' campaign, according to Hensley.

David Jones, president of ClayDesta Bank, who was quoted in the article, agrees. "(The article) definitely had a negative turn on Clayton ... (but) I don't think it hurt. I don't think the article lost him a vote," he said.

A prepared statement from the campaign office of Williams' gubernatorial opponent, Ann Richards, criticized Williams' "dictatorial" management style that led to the failure of his communications company.

The Morning News article stated that Williams sold Clajon Gas for $230 million in 1987 and that the leveraged buyout was financed by junk bonds.

"If this guy were in charge of state government, he'd turn Texas into a third-world country run by a tin-horn dictator and owned by New York Junk bond dealers," the Richards' campaign statement said.

Three jailed on drug charges

Staff Report

ODESSA — Three people remainded in jail Monday after law enforcement officials on Sunday confiscated five and a half pounds of marijuana, with a street value of about $3,700, Odessa police officials said.

The arrest resulted from information officials received about a woman arriving at Midland International Airport from El Paso.

Officials watched the woman, Joyce H. McNeil, 53, of El Paso, arrive at the airport and depart with a couple.

The three — driving toward Odessa in a 1980 pickup truck — were stopped on Interstate 20 and arrested. The drug was found in McNeil's luggage.

All three were charged with possession of a controlled substance Monday morning.

Bond for McNeil, along with Darryl W. Masterson, 24, and Karolyn C. Masterson, 26, both of 611 Lasiter Ave., was set at $10,000 each by Municipal Judge J.E. Weatherly.

CONTEMPT: Motion claims injunction violated

(From 1B)

Boyd and his fellow defendants could face up to six months in jail and fines totaling $300,000, Reyna said. The new date for the contempt hearing is Sept. 10.

Boyd, whose practice is now located on West Ohio Avenue could not be reached for comment Monday evening. The former Mid-America location on Louisiana has been closed for several weeks.

Mid-America attorney Paul White confirmed that Boyd's chiropractor's license will be revoked later this week if his appeal in an old case against him fails.

District Judge Dean Rucker ruled last week that Boyd's license should be revoked because of supposedly false claims Boyd made about his healing ability in 1987, White said.

He said Boyd and the other defendants are no longer employed by Mid-America, which has not seen a patient in several months.

In the past, Boyd has denied any wrongdoing by Mid-America and in April filed a lawsuit against the attorney general's office alleging harrassment.

However, Reyna said the suit was "dead in the water."

"That suit was filed by an attorney who is no longer on the case," Reyna said.

White said that the three individual defendants in the Mid-America case may have been under the impression that he was representing them. However, he told Baskin that they needed to provide their own legal counsel because he could not represent them and the Mid-America corporation.

Baskin said that the three defendants needed more time to prepare their cases and postponed the contempt hearing.

Defendant Crockett, who now works for the Big Spring Chiropractic Clinic in Big Spring, said Mid-America essentially ceased to exist after the April injunction was issued.

"Unfortunately, the (attorney general's office) tried us through the media and shut Mid-America down," Crockett said. He said he was not aware of any scams perpetrated by Mid-America and added that he couldn't understand why he'd been named a defendant.

"(Reyna) has since found that I am a fully licensed chiropractor and never represented myself as a medical doctor and basically he's got no case," said Crockett, adding that he had worked only part-time at Mid-America from January to April.

"Then, there was so much media damage that there was no work to be done there."

Crockett said he did not know if he will hire an attorney to represent him on the case. Defendant Bratcher could not be reached for comment Monday evening.

Baskin said he did not know when the Mid-America case will come to trial, but it will be sometime after the Sept. 10 contempt hearing.

He authorized the attorney general's office Monday to seize Mid-America's records and transport them to the Midland County Courthouse for storage and examination.

EMCEE: Dingus enjoys his volunteer work

(From 1B)

Dingus avoids making obvious jokes or puns.

"What makes humor funny, if you break it down, is that people laugh at the unexpected. When you see the punchline of a joke coming, it isn't as funny as one that catches you off guard."

Acting as master of ceremonies for the United Way luncheons "is a little tough, because your job is to create some levity, and the subject is very serious, in a way. That's a challenge," he said.

Although Dingus enjoys "the accolades" that come with hosting the luncheons, he said others deserve more praise.

"These other people in United Way do a hundred times more work than I do and get far less attention."

Lana Cunningham, Midland United Way's communications director, said Dingus is just what the luncheons need.

"He was great. He made the pilot kickoff luncheon lighthearted and fun," she said. "We need someone like Bill to set the tone for these things because we want people to have fun."

There is one drawback to being funny, Dingus said. "People don't take you seriously." He stressed that he's a "good geologist, too," and recently had a paper published by the American Association of Petroleum Geologists.

Dingus is a native of Pampa — "where wheat grows and oil flows" — and moved to Midland in 1987, after receiving his master's in geology from the University of Texas at Austin. He and his wife, Mary Anne, who also is a geologist, have been married for just six months.

"It's harder to make her laugh, because she's used to me," he said.

"I don't want it (serving as a humorous master of ceremonies) to get in the way of my job or family life," Dingus said. "I do think there's some value in always looking at the odd side of things. As long as you can get that different perspective on life, you can help yourself in a lot of ways.

"It is a demand on my time and I figure I'll have less and less free time (with work and family duties), unless, of course, somebody offers me that television contract."

Motivation needed for buying luggage

By Deborah Blumenthal
N.Y. Times News Service

Luggage is coming out of the closet as people prepare to pack for August vacations.

And while most will carry bags they have toted on previous trips, others will head for department stores, luggage shops, chain stores and discount stores.

But unlike the impulse to shop for a new summer outfit, the motivation to buy new luggage is largely need rather than whim, according to a recent study by the Gallup Organization. Most people, the researchers reported, buy new pieces only if theirs are stolen, lost or falling apart.

Last year Americans spent $2.6 billion on luggage, the Luggage and Leather Goods Manufacturers of America, an industry group, estimated.

The purchases were based more on practical needs like durability and ease of handling rather than style. With that in mind, manufacturers have developed new lines of luggage designed to ease the burden of packing and toting vacation or business essentials.

"The public is saying, 'I don't want a bag that weighs 30 pounds before I even put anything in it,'" said Michele M. Marini, editor in chief of Showcase Magazine, a trade publication.

"And as a result manufacturers have been introducing some new lines to meet those criteria."

Samsonite recently introduced the Ultralite bag, which it says is 30 percent lighter than other structured soft-side bags.

The 26-inch suitcase, the most popular size, weighs about five pounds and is on wheels. It costs $115.

Another Samsonite bag has a built-in luggage cart and comes in a carry-on size for overhead storing on a plane.

The Piggyback Carry-On is a hard-side molded bag that can be pulled down an airplane's aisle.

It is also made with a retractable strap so that up to two other bags can be pulled along with it. It measures 14 1/4 by 21 3/4 by 8 inches.

It will be on the market next month at $179.99.

While the airlines differ in their allowances for size, weight and number of pieces that can be carried aboard, the Air Transport Association offers these guidelines:

—Underseat bags, 9 by 14 by 22 inches with total dimensions of 45 inches.

—Garment bags, 4 inches by 23 inches by 45 inches with a total of 72 inches.

—Overhead bags, 10 inches by 14 inches by 36 inches with a total of 60 inches.

A need for portability and easy storage led to the Hartmann Luggage Co.'s new Trifold Hangbag.

Extended, the garment bag measures 48 inches and can carry two suits. Folded, it reduces to 12 to 14 inches and will fit under a seat.

It ranges in price from $305 to $680, depending on the material.

The new Hartmann Extended Hanger is 10 inches longer than the standard 44-inch bag, for the dresses of taller women, or an evening dress.

The extra 10-inch flap folds up and the bag folds in half to measure 44 inches.

It's $380 to $960.

Then there are the large-capacity bags and bags within bags, for items acquired on vacation. The bags are so big they are on wheels.

One is made by Baltimore Luggage of especially sturdy nylon. It measures 32 by 15 by 15 inches and costs $125.

Samsonite's new Oyster Sport Edition is a hard-side case with a removable sport tote inside that can be carried separately.

It comes in 24-inch, 26-inch and 29-inch sizes and sells for $90, $120 and $140.

Checking bags

N.Y. Times News Service

The Luggage and Leather Goods Manufacturers of America offer these tips:

COVERING: The material should be tightly woven and smooth to avoid snags. Look for bags treated to be stain- and water repellant.

CONSTRUCTION: Cases with reinforced narrow sides and corners wear best. Hard-sided cases should close tightly, with no gaps. Lids should stay open for easy packing and unpacking. Look for even stitches, with double-stitching at stress points.

HARDWARE: Solid brass and die-cast metal hardware are stronger than plastic or stamped metal. Look for secure shoulder-strap attachments and detachable straps that resist when you pull on them.

WHEELS: Wheels should be solidly affixed and the wheel system should handle turns easily.

GARMENT BAGS: Does the top of the bag have a bar support? A center bar in the middle of the case will anchor the handle and keep the case from sagging. A double track that allows hangers to be staggered maximizes space. A pocket or snap should secure the hanging hook when it is not in use.

HANDLES and STRAPS: Double screws or rivets are more secure than prongs. Look for adjustable shoulder straps and pull-straps that are long enough so you can pull the bag comfortably while standing upright.

Office chocoholics taste test brownies

By Linda Anderson

Anderson

This time of year, when summer's getting older and boredom has set in, it's nice to have something a little special. That's why we decided it was time to taste-test two new brownie mixes that both claim to have chunks (not chips) of chocolate in the mix. (Chocolate can soothe even the most ruffled feelings, you know.)

One of the mixes was Martha White Double Fudge Chunk Brownie Mix, and the other was The Ultimate Fudge Brownie Mix from Pillsbury (with a name like that, it's almost a challenge to see if it's true).

Both were baked according to package directions, and then checked out for taste, price and advertising accuracy by a lot of chocolate lovers.

The first noticeable difference in the two mixes was the price — Martha White's mix cost $1.99 and The Ultimate Brownie mix was $2.19.

The advertising continued: "If chocolate's your passion — not tiny bits of chocolate — but big chunks of chocolate, then you'll adore this brownie from Martha White. Thick chunks of real semi-sweet chocolate are smothered in a rich fudge brownie. Indulge your passion in chunky-chocolate goodness!"

Pillsbury's brownie mix didn't carry much advertising — I guess if your name is "Ultimate" and your family name is Pillsbury, you don't have to advertise much. All I found was the fact that the box contains "A Separate Pouch Of Fudge Glaze And Real Chocolate Chunks In A Fudge Brownie Mix." The box also lists a telephone number consumers can call if they have any comments or questions or "are not satisfied with the quality of this product..." — 1-800-328-4466.

To bake both mixes, you had to add eggs and oil — that's easy enough. The brownie dough for the Martha White brownies was a lot harder to spread than the Ultimate Brownies' dough, but both baked up nicely and chocolatey (yes, both did have chocolate chunks in the mix although the ones in the Martha White mix tasted more semi-sweet that the Ultimate Brownies' did).

I brought both pans of brownies to work for the professional chocoholics to taste. The debate raged all day (while the pans of brownies got emptier and emptier) and votes were changed, until finally the general consensus was reached — the Ultimate Brownies got top grades for being gooey and chocolatey, and the Martha White brownies got top grades for being "more like my mother's brownies."

Both pans of brownies were thoroughly enjoyed by all. They were, after all, chocolate. And there's nothing like a good brownie to brighten up a day.

Copley News Service

Compared with today's available high-tech gadgetry, handymen's tools seem rather elementary. After all, everyone knows how to use a hammer or a screwdriver, right?

Wrong.

The Hand Tools Institute says the most commonly used tools at home, including hammers, screwdrivers, wrenches, pliers and saws are all dangerously misused.

Recently released figures by the Consumer Products Safety Commission show that approximately 75,000 people receive emergency hospital treatment each year for serious injuries due to tool misuse.

Some safety tips:

Claw hammers are for driving finishing nails and removing nails. Don't strike other tools or masonry with this kind of a hammer. Use ball peen hammers of appropriate size or hand-drilling hammers to strike chisels, punches and star drills.

Don't use a screwdriver for prying, punching, chiseling, scoring or scraping. Use it only to drive or remove screws.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

TUESDAY, AUGUST 7, 1990

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: You should feel more settled and content in the months ahead. The right timing is essential for professional and personal success. Wait until December to announce a major change. Enrolling in high-tech courses next Janaury will increase your earning potential. Overseas contacts could be more important than ever in 1991. Be careful not to burn any bridges between now and then. Vacation travel is best postponed until next spring. Keep business trips short.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: spy Mata Hari, writer Garrison Keillor, marathon runner Alberto Salazar, singer B.J. Thomas.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Avoid straying off the beaten path now. Get financial promises in writing, even if doing business with your best friends. Be more gentle with your loved ones. Listen to their concerns.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Jointly held funds have many useful applications today. Choose the ones most vital to your success. Send a small gift to someone who may be feeling neglected.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Those of you who are artistically inclined should show it! Dust off an old manuscript and give it a new twist! A thirst for adventure could lead you astray if you go chasing rainbows.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Do not be afraid to break off relationships that are counterproductive. Phase out outmoded business practices, too. Your well-known charisma helps you influence others.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Postpone making important decisions until another day. Meld your desire for excitement with common sense; you could find a pot of gold. Wear deep colors if you go out tonight; you shine!

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Your interest in doing something new and different is at odds with your growing desire to settle down. A compromise may be possible. Loved one could misunderstand your restlessness.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Forge ahead even if it means treading on a few toes. New faces and places add glamour to your day. Lost articles surface under mysterious circumstances. Avoid asking too many probing questions!

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Discuss a ticklish situation with great diplomacy. Be sensitive to the bigger issues involved. A close friend provides a shoulder to cry on. Do not overdo it! Self-improvement activities are favored.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Long-distance communications hit the mark. New contracts are forthcoming! An attractive out-of-towner puts thoughts of happy romance in your head. Take the initiative.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Your family is your refuge now. Show how much you appreciate their loving support. A phone call or letter has tremendous impact on your plans; think things through before responding. Romance looks great!

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): The ball is in your court where business and romance are concerned. You are ready to play! Showcase a creative idea. Follow up immediately when an influential person offers a job lead.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Learning takes center stage. Scholarship money becomes available in the nick of time. Rearrange your schedule to accommodate others' needs. Take a compliment with a grain of salt.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are energetic, masterful and a little bit ruthless. To them, all is fair in love and war! Their excellent memories and analytical skills give them a decided advantage in business. Never expect these Leos to look backward. To them, the past is gone and forgotten. These children enjoy active sports but always expect to be made team captain. They make poor losers but gracious winners!

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
Pass	Pass	1 ♡	Pass
2 ◇	Pass	3 NT	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Ten of ♣

South made a practical decision when North, a passed hand, responded in South's short suit. Chances for slam were virtually nil, so South simply bid what he expected to make.

With eight fast tricks in sight, declarer won the opening club lead in dummy and took a losing heart finesse. West persevered with clubs, but when declarer gave up a second heart trick, the defenders needed tricks fast. West found the way to get them by shifting to the king and another diamond. The defenders banked three diamond tricks to go with the two hearts—down one.

Declarer was in too much of a hurry. A careful inspection of the combined assets would have unearthed a ninth trick in a way that would almost guarantee the contract. Declarer should have gone after diamonds for his ninth trick!

To do that, declarer will probably need all the entries to the table he can muster, so the opening lead should be won in hand and the ten of diamonds run to East's jack. If the cards are distributed as above, the defenders are helpless. Suppose East shifts to a heart (best). Declarer rises with the king, crosses to dummy with the jack of clubs and leads a high diamond. West wins the king, but he cannot continue hearts into South's tenace. In due course, declarer will return to dummy with a club to force out the defense's remaining diamond winner, and the king of spades serves as the entry to cash the good diamonds. Declarer romps home with 10 easy tricks. The power of the diamond spotcards is so overwhelming that there are only a few improbable distributions where this line won't deliver the contract.

With music critics around, New Kids must defend turf

NEW YORK (AP) — The New Kids on the Block say critics who complain that the teen idols are more marketing than music are being unfair.

"We're getting lynched, man!" said front man Donnie Wahlberg, 20, in the Aug. 13 issue of People. "Why is it such a crime that we're 'only singers?' " Did Frank Sinatra write his own songs or play an instrument?"

Along with wanting to be respected like Sinatra, the Kids say they'd like to attract the kind of fans he got in his heyday.

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Pop singer Janet Jackson passed out backstage after performing three songs at the St. Louis Arena, a spokeswoman says.

Jackson

Jackson, 24, was treated for exhaustion Sunday at Barnes Hospital and was released, said a hospital administrator who would not give her name.

"She opened with 'Control,' 'Nasty' and then 'What Have You Done For Me Lately,'" said Maureen O'Connor, her spokeswoman. "Then she excused herself and passed out backstage."

The singer, who canceled a performance last Thursday in Lexington, Ky., has suffered from exhaustion and flu-like symptoms, O'Connor said. Sunday night's show in St. Louis had been postponed from the night before, O'Connor said.

Jackson's tour began March 1 and concludes Sept. 4 in Richfield, Ohio.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Roseanne Barr's husband, Tom Arnold, clashed with paparazzi at Los Angeles International Airport, and three photographers accused him of assault, police said.

Barr

No injuries were reported, and no arrests were made.

Arnold and Miss Barr, star of ABC's "Roseanne," had arrived on a flight Sunday from Minnesota when Arnold tangled with four or five photographers, said airport police Sgt. Allen Chu.

Three photographers, Gary Aloian, 38, Robert Scott, 39, and Ralph Dominguez, 43, filed police reports accusing Arnold of striking them several times and damaging their cameras, said city police Sgt. Michael Apodaca.

The reports did not say where the photographers worked.

George Freeman, a spokesman for Miss Barr, did not immediately return a telephone call Sunday.

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — John Denver hasn't had a hit record in 10 years, but says his voice has improved with age.

Denver

Denver, who will perform Wednesday at the Deer Creek Music Center north of Indianapolis, said he struggled during the 1980s to keep his career afloat.

"It was always hard to get my songs on the radio," he said. "But when they did get airplay, a lot of people liked the music, and I still have an unusually large audience for not having had a hit record in that time."

Denver's album "Earth Songs," which is sold through the National Wildlife Federation, includes new versions of the hits "Sunshine on My Shoulders," "Rocky Mountain High," and "The Eagle and the Hawk."

"I'm singing so much differently than I was 20 years ago," Denver said. "There's a much greater range of emotion in each and every word. And I'm singing better."

NEW YORK (AP) — After producing albums by George Harrison, Roy Orbison, Tom Petty, Randy Newman and the Traveling Wilburys, Jeff Lynne says he's ready for a break.

"A lot of people have been asking me to produce their records," Lynne said in a recent interview. "I had to say no to all of them for the moment. I haven't really had a break for a couple of years."

Lynne, who established himself in the 1970s as leader of the Electric Light Orchestra, also has released a solo album, "Armchair Theatre," and is working on a second Wilburys record, scheduled for release in the fall.

"I think working with all these other people has helped me a lot," Lynne said of "Armchair Theatre." "I feel much better about my voice. I left it dry and simple. Before, I would have covered it with echo and tried to hide behind that."

The first Wilburys' album included Lynne, Harrison, Petty, Bob Dylan and Orbison, who died shortly after the record's release. The new album will feature the four remaining members.

Standard-parts debate clouds view for cable TV users

By Barry Meier
N.Y. Times News Service

Consumers' easy access to cable television's wide range of extra programs is being impeded by the inability of cable operators and television manufacturers to agree on standardized equipment.

In Sacramento, Calif., cable television subscribers are confronting an offer they would just as soon refuse. If they want their television sets to respond to remote control, they have to pay $3.50 every month to rent a control device from the city's cable operator. Why? The remote control device that comes with a television set is not compatible with Sacramento's cable system.

Even those customers who have universal remote control devices, which operate a variety of electronic devices including cable TV, must still pay the $3.50 fee.

"All I can do is apologize," said Richard Esposto, the city's cable coordinator. "This is an unregulated industry and there is nothing we can do about it."

And that problem is turning up around the country, from Sacramento to New York City.

SUBSCRIBERS TO various cable companies are forced to spend thousands of dollars renting devices from cable companies.

These problems are so widespread that they are part of a current congressional debate over whether to regulate the cable industry.

One proposal would require the Federal Communications Commission to develop coherent technical standards for cable operators, much as it did for the telecommunications industry.

"There is a lack of coordination in this marketplace that is nickel-and-diming the consumer to death," said Gene Kimmelman, legislative director of the Consumer Federation of America, an Washington-based group that favors greater federal control over cable.

Consumer advocates like Kimmelman assert that equipment-rental fees are simply an indirect way of generating more money for cable companies.

Cable television's technical mess is complex. Why does it exist?

Also, manufacturers of TV sets and videocassette recorders are busy competing with one another on price, and thus have few incentives to adapt to cable television's changing picture.

"Historically, there has been very poor communication between the two industries," said Thomas G. Elliot, vice president of science and technology for Cable Television Laboratory Inc., an industry-backed research organization in Denver.

For consumers, these problems may worsen as more cable operators change to "addressable" transmission systems. This technology, which involves sophisticated scrambling of signals, helps to deter signal theft.

IN MANHATTAN, one out of five households steals cable signals, said Richard Aurelio, president of Time Warner's New York City cable group.

"Addressable" systems allow cable operators to sell services like "pay per view" movies and to repackage the channels received by a customer without visiting his home.

Such systems provide both conveniences and problems for the viewer. For example, some viewers in Manhattan were recently notified by a Time Warner unit that they would have to begin paying a fee for t[illegible]e of a remote control. As a result of that and other similar moves, three New York State assemblymen introduced a bill that would bar the forced rental of such equipment.

Cable systems vary from locale to locale but a principal problem is the converter box that is provided by some cable companies to unscramble signals. Many converter boxes now in use are controlled only by the company-owned remote device.

Once you have an addressable system," said Esposto, the Sacramento official, "you might as well use the remote that came with your television as a paperweight."

Pending House and Senate measures are considered likely to push cable operators toward more scrambling: the bills would create a basic price-regulated cable service largely consisting of regular television and community access channels.

Such standard fare as what is offered by ESPN, CNN and MTV would be shifted to another service that would remain unregulated.

SOME CABLE operators are already moving in that direction. In Maryland, Montgomery Cablevision announced last month that it planned to split its current basic service in Montgomery County into a basic subscription service and a "preferred basic" service offering, for instance, ESPN, CNN and MTV.

That would require added scrambling and would require even those who chose only the basic service to rent remote controls if they wanted them. The consumer would also have to rent one more converter to use his VCR and television set at the same time, said George Rose, the Montgomery County administrator of consumer affairs.

County officials challenge the proposed move; Frank Green, a spokesman for Montgomery Cablevision, said that for the moment the company was delaying action.

In other areas, local actions against the cable companies have not been successful.

An initial bid by public officials to prevent scrambling by Riverview Cablevision, which serves Hudson County, N.J., was dropped after the public utilities board there decided it did not have the authority to prevent the move.

Some progress is being made toward resolving cable's technical problems.

Several television manufacturers, including Panasonic, Quasar and Bang & Olufsen, have introduced new sets that allow converters to be positioned so they do not interfere with the operation of a television set's features, said Thomas Lauterback, a spokesman for the Electronic Industries Association, a trade group in Washington.

DEAR ABBY

Mother-in-law's visits last much too long

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My problem is my mother-in-law. She is a widow and visits us at least twice a year. We usually visit her once during the summer. She lives four or five states away. Every time she comes to visit, she stays a month and a half to two months.

Van Buren

I think this is too long. My limit is about three weeks for any company — including my own parents. I have tried to let her know she is welcome to come for two to three weeks, but each time she comes, she keeps extending her visit and changing her plane ticket. She is very sensitive but domineering, and my husband won't say anything to her, although he feels the same as I do about the length of her visits.

How can I tell her without hurting her feelings? We have a new baby, and it's very disruptive to have company that long. Am I being unreasonable? — TIRED OF COMPANY

DEAR TIRED: Not in my book, but you will need the cooperation of your husband to resolve this problem. Together, you must tell his mother exactly what you have told me. Don't delay. The longer you put it off, the more difficult it will be.

DEAR ABBY: Because of an unfortunate accident that occurred nearly a year ago and left me blind in one eye, I am writing to you in the hope that you will warn others not to make the mistake I made.

Wanting to give myself a coat of fingernail polish, I noticed that my polish was quite thick. Being in a hurry, instead of running the bottle under hot water to "thin" it, I placed the bottle in my microwave oven to warm it quickly.

When I removed the bottle, it exploded in my hand, sending the shattered pieces of glass in every direction! One sliver of glass penetrated my right eye, and another sliver struck me less than an inch below my left eye! Fortunately, the rest of my face was left unscathed. The rest of the glass and fingernail polish flew in every direction all over my kitchen.

Abby, I learned the hard way that fingernail polish is an extremely volatile substance! If one person learns from my misfortune, this letter will be worth printing.

I have adjusted, and have since discovered that there are many people who have vision in only one eye. My feeling is, "It's not what I've lost — it's what I have left," that counts. I thank God I am not totally blind. You may use my name. — PATTI WALTER, GRAND HAVEN, MICH.

DEAR PATTI: Thanks for sharing your experience in order to warn others. Perhaps others will think twice before placing any container in a microwave oven.

DEAR ABBY: You recently printed some letters from people who wrote to defend the "masculinity" of boys who take piano lessons. In one example, an 18-year-old was a weight lifter who lettered in soccer and had girls calling him for dates. In another, a 16-year-old boy weighed 200 pounds, had a black belt in some martial art and played varsity football.

Abby, those things are fine, but please let's not try to prove the rule by citing the exception.

Most music students don't fit that mold, and more important, they shouldn't have to. If the kid weighs 140, has zits, thinks a date is an exotic fruit, and plays the harp like he was born in heaven, now what do we have? A "sissy"? Is he expected to compensate for his shameful interest in music by taking up football or karate?

Albert Schweitzer played the organ and probably never touched a football. Winston Churchill painted. I believe that when we face the only judge who counts, he won't consider our masculinity or feminity — only our humanity.

We have more important matters on the planet to worry about. — ANONYMOUS IN HOUSTON

Everything you'll need to know about planning a wedding can be found in Abby's booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." To order, send a long, business-size, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included.)

Hobbyists' collections contain more than dust

By Erma Bombeck

When I worked as a cub reporter on a newspaper, I was always assigned to cover the stories about people who collected things. They were human interest pieces right up there with Boy Scouts policing the cemetery and a supermarket redeeming cash register tapes for a new station wagon for the nuns.

Bombeck

I interviewed one woman who had collected a bed full of Spanish dolls. An elderly man had a garage full of old license plates nailed to the walls. One collector had a display of peanut shells that he fashioned into faces with little hats perched on top. My personal favorite was Queen Elizabeth.

I had forgotten about these collectors until a few Sundays ago when I was watching "Lifestyles of the Rich and Famous." I've never seen so many serious collectors before. They collect trains, toy soldiers, Faberge eggs, art, classic cars, hot air balloons, lacquered boxes and rare first editions.

They were people who had found a relaxing hobby that brought them together with other people who shared their same interest. The message was clear. I was the only woman in North America who did not collect something.

As I looked around the house, I figured it ought to be something that I had a lot of to begin with ... a head start, so to speak. I had a lot of plastic butter containers, but everyone did. Same thing with bread ties and rubber bands from newspapers.

It wasn't until I entered my closet that I saw my future as a collector. Shoulder pads. I was going to be a shoulder pad buff.

I had collected more loose shoulder pads than any other woman on this planet. I had enough shoulder pads to make a quilt and put it on tour. I had enough to make a raft and float down the Mississippi.

As I sifted through them, my mind raced. I could plan a shoulder pad convention, put out a magazine just for shoulder pad collectors and go to shows where I could trade them back and forth like baseball cards.

I could pad a room with them, or make things like pillows with cute sayings on them. On second thought, I could make them into puffy faces and put hats on them. The face of Queen Elizabeth comes to mind.

Perkins signs

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Sam Perkins, an unrestricted free agent, has signed with the The Los Angeles Lakers.

The NBA club called a news conference for late afternoon at which time it said the announcement would be made.

No terms were announced, but it was reported Perkins will be paid as much as $3 million per year.

Perkins, 29, played six seasons for the Dallas Mavericks after they made him the fourth overall pick in the 1984 NBA draft. A 6-foot-9½, 257-pounder, Perkins averaged 15.9 points and 7.5 rebounds while playing in 76 games for the Mavericks last season.

Ryan honored

NEW YORK (AP) — Nolan Ryan, the 43-year-old pitcher who won his 300th game last week, and rookie Alex Cole of the Cleveland Indians were named American League co-players of the week on Monday.

Ryan got his 300th win last Tuesday in Texas' 11-3 victory over Milwaukee, striking out eight and allowing six hits in 7 2-3 innings.

Cole stole eight bases last week to lead the AL and scored a major league-leading 11 runs. He was 11-for-24, a .458 average, with five walks.

Cal Ripken of the Baltimore Orioles, Wade Boggs of the Boston Red Sox and Dave Winfield of the California Angels also were nominated.

Missions cool off Angels

By Bill Price
Staff Writer

All the conditions at Angels Stadium Monday night were ripe for a low scoring game.

The air was relatively cool and damp for a West Texas August and the wind was uncharacteristically blowing into the yard, making it difficult for a baseball to carry in the air. So what happened?

San Antonio took advantage of a six-run seventh inning and a 21-hit attack to blow the Angels out 12-4 in a game that looked docile enough in the first five innings.

It was no home run derby, which Angels Stadium has seen plenty of in the past, but the Missions singled and doubled Midland to death, with center fielder Tom Goodwin leading the pack on the strength of a 5-for-6 hitting binge, scoring three runs and batting in a pair. Second baseman Eddie Pye also swung a hot stick, going 4-for-5 with three RBI.

The Angel loss makes the teams 2-2 through the first four of a five-game series, and put the last-place Haloes (17-25) 11 games behind Western Division leading San Antonio (28-14) in the second half of the Texas League season.

With that fact and only 26 games to make up ground facing the Angels, nothing galled Midland manager Eddie Rodriguez more than to have taken Monday's loss to the Missions.

"It's tough, but it had to happen," Rodriguez said after Midland dropped its second straight game to the division front-runners. "We've been going so well we had to hit a wall some day. Today was that day.

"It's just one game, but we needed it. When you're in the position we're in, at Aug. 6 and playing the first-place team, you need to win. If it's going to happen, it's got to happen now."

Through five innings Monday, it looked like Angel starter Tim Meeks might make it happen. That's how many innings the former bullpen ace threw in his first start of the season, and even though he gave up eight hits, he left the mound ahead with a 3-1 lead in the sixth after giving up a single to Steve Finken.

■ Hundreds of fans turn out to watch golf pros practice for the PGA Championship later this week, despite the threat of protests in the wake of comments by the founder of the host course.

Associated Press

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. — Lee Trevino, the winner the last time the PGA Championship was held at Shoal Creek, said Monday "it's good to be back" despite a controversy over the country club's formerly all-white membership.

Instead of protests, which were planned by civil rights groups before the club admitted one black and began processing another's application, the golf pros were met by hundreds of fans anxious to watch them practice.

Trevino, who won at Shoal Creek in 1984, said he didn't keep score during his practice round Monday. "Why would I do that?" he asked. "I hit 'em pretty good, though."

Although he now plays on the Senior PGA Tour, Trevino said he had no second thoughts about coming to this tournament, although he had said he might reconsider when the racial problem arose earlier in the summer.

"I like the tour I'm on," he said. "The seniors is a lot easier."

Shoal Creek's founder, Hall Thompson, said in a newspaper interview in June that the swank club 15 miles south of Birmingham would not be pressured into accepting black members.

He later apologized, saying his remark was taken out of context, but civil rights groups said they would picket the tournament, and some corporations withdrew television advertising scheduled during the PGA.

After weeks of negotiations involving Birmingham's black mayor, Richard Arrington, business leaders and Shoal Creek's governors, the club announced a week ago that Louis J. Willie, a black Birmingham insurance executive, had been given an honorary membership.

The club also said that its by-laws would not keep blacks from being considered for membership.

The Professional Golfers Association of America said Monday it would announce on Wednesday a new policy regarding selection of sites for future PGA tournaments.

Champ careful not to belittle Holyfield

Douglas, who took the heavyweight championship from Mike Tyson with a shocking, 10th-round knockout last February, will defend his title against Evander Holyfield on Oct. 25.

At 24-0, Holyfield is the No. 1 contender despite being a natural cruiserweight who moved up in class. But Douglas is not making the same mistake many believe that Tyson made against Douglas.

"Evander is a worthy opponent," Douglas (30-4-1) said at a press conference Monday. "I respect his ability."

AP Laserphoto

"They've built Evander up on top," said John Russell, Douglas' co-trainer. "But look at his legs. He's still a cruiserweight down there."

Naturally, Holyfield's handlers disagree.

"They're both good fighters, but Evander's got the heart," trainer Lou Duva said. "That's what's going to win it."

"I feel that I have just as much ability," Holyfield added. "When it comes down to the clinches, I feel that deep down inside I can make Buster quit."

The betting lines have taken the challenger's side so far, making Holyfield a 2-5 favorite to win the 12-round bout. Beating Tyson did little for Douglas' stock in the eyes of gamblers who had him 42-1 to win the title.

"I don't care if anyone respects me as champion," Douglas said. "I've earned it."

But Duva doesn't like the circumstances either.

"Evander's kind of in a no-win situation," he said. "If he wins, people will probably say 'Douglas wasn't for real.'

"But we'll see. The big fight is the one after you become champ ... whether you can sustain it."

Holyfield compiled an 18-0 record as a cruiserwieght before stepping up in class against James "Quick" Tillis in July 16, 1988. As a heavyweight, he is 6-0 with six knockouts, and was mentioned as the most likely candidate to dethrone Tyson before Douglas' surprising victory in Tokyo.

In fact, so unexpected was Douglas' victory that Tyson was already slated to fight Holyfield. When Douglas became champion, promoter Don King had the rights to a Tyson-Douglas rematch.

But Douglas said that he thought Holyfield "deserved" the title shot.

Palmer, Morgan inducted inside

■ Despite heavy rains, two of the best players of the last 25 years were inducted into the Baseball Hall of Fame.

Hall of Fame

The induction ceremonies are usually held outside, allowing the Hall of Famers to bask in the sun and the glory. But two straight days of heavy rain forced a change in the program.

Palmer and Morgan made their induction speeches from the stage of the Cooperstown high school auditorium, with Ted Williams, Bob Feller, Stan Musial and Willie Stargell sitting with them.

The annual Hall of Fame exhibition game, scheduled between Baltimore and Montreal, was cancelled.

It was just another crisis to deal with for Commissioner Fay Vincent, who has already handled an earthquake during the World Series, a lockout, an All-Star game rain delay and George Steinbrenner.

"I'm sorry a lot of people who came to share this moment with me didn't see it," Palmer said. "This is a celebration of what the game is all about."

Seating in the auditorium was limited to invited guests and media members. Just in case someone didn't know where to go, the superintendent of schools was on hand to direct traffic.

Another group watched on a big-screen TV wheeled into the carpeted cafeteria. The lunch tables were moved out of the way and seats were borrowed from classrooms.

Most of the fans, however, stood outside in the rain and listened to the ceremonies on loudspeakers that are

Hough, 'D' help Rangers

Associated Press

Charlie Hough outpitched Dave Stieb and the Texas Rangers trapped two runners in the ninth inning to hold off Toronto 4-3 Monday night and finish with four victories in the five-game series against the Blue Jays.

Texas led 4-2 when Kenny Rogers relieved with two on and one out in the ninth. Manny Lee hit an RBI single, but pinch runner Kenny Williams was thrown out at third base by center fielder Gary Pettis. Mookie Wilson then reached on shorstop Jeff Huson's throwing error, but first baseman Rafael Palmeiro recovered and threw home, catching Lee in a rundown for the final out.

Toronto went 3-5 on its road trip and fell two games behind Boston in the American League East. Texas won for the seventh time in eight games.

Stieb (14-4) had not given up a run in two victories over Hough and the Rangers this season, but was tagged for four runs on seven hits in six innings. He had been 7-0 on the road this season.

Hough (9-7) gave up two runs on six hits in seven innings. He struck out seven and walked two. Rogers got his 11th save.

Toronto scored twice in the third for a 2-0 lead. Wilson doubled and scored when Luis Sojo's single rolled under right fielder Ruben Sierra's glove for an error. Sojo later scored on George Bell's sacrifice fly.

Texas rallied for three runs in the third, its first runs off Stieb this year after 15 scoreless innings. Geno Petralli drew a leadoff walk, Pettis singled and Julio Franco hit a two-out, two-run double. Palmeiro followed with an RBI double that extended his hitting streak to 12 games.

The Rangers made it 4-2 in the fourth. Harold Baines, back in the starting lineup for the first time since the birth of a daughter last Thursday, singled and later scored on Steve Buechele's squeeze bunt.

The rare five-game set drew 160,026 fans, an Arlington Stadium series record. The game was a makeup of one that was postponed by the April lockout.

AL Roundup

Royals 5, White Sox 4

Gerald Perry's double and two errors by catcher Carlton Fisk keyed a five-run third inning, as Kansas City snapped a six-game winning streak by the White Sox.

The loss dropped Chicago three games behind idle Oakland in the American League West. Kansas City's victory, coupled with Minnesota's loss, lifted the Royals out of last place for the first time since June 26.

Melido Perez (10-9) dropped to 4-2 lifetime against Kansas City, his former team. Storm Davis (5-7) went five innings, giving up five hits, for the victory and Jeff Montgomery got his 16th save.

Bob Boone led off the third with a single, Kevin Seitzer walked and George Brett singled with one out for a run. Danny Tartabull followed with an RBI single, and Brett went to third and Tartabull to second when Fisk mishandled the throw home. Perry made it 4-0 with his two-run double to right, giving him six RBIs in his last 11 games.

A moment later, Perry stole third and sped home when Fisk's throw sailed past third baseman Robin Ventura. Fisk began the game with only two errors this season.

Brewers 6, Twins 0

The Brewers won at the Metrodome after completing an 0-8 homestand on Sunday. Minnesota's scoreless streak was extended to 18 after Sunday's 4-0 shutout against Seattle.

Robinson (5-3) pitched a six-hitter, struck out two and walked one. It was just his third complete game in 82 career starts.

Dave Parker and B.J. Surhoff each got three of Milwaukee's 14 hits and Paul Molitor had two doubles. Roy Smith (5-10) fell to 1-4 since returning to the starting rotation June 26.

Yankees 2, Indians 1

Rookie Kevin Maas broke a sixth-inning tie with his 11th home run in 92 major league at-bats and Roberto Kelly also homered for New York.

Andy Hawkins (3-9) gave up seven hits in eight innings, walked two and struck out three.

HALL: Duo accepts honor

From 1C

usually used to announce the end of recess.

As the Hall of Famers and other baseball big shots arrived in their limos, they passed the school bus depot and county highway headquarters.

"This was not a typical Cooperstown day," Mayor Harold Hollis said. "We did the best we could."

But not everybody was impressed or sympathetic.

"Greetings to the mayor, who should think about getting a canopy," said By Saam, who was inducted into the broadcasters wing.

Then it was time for Morgan, Palmer, Saam and sportswriter Jerome Holtzman to tell their stories. For that, the location really didn't matter at all.

Holtzman, recipient of the J.G. Spink award, spoke of a daughter who died in February. It was a daughter he brought to seven or eight baseball games a year and taught how to keep score.

"She knew she was dying and said, 'I won't be in Cooperstown with you.' She's in my thoughts today," Holtzman said.

Palmer traced his success to the day he was born.

"I was adopted at birth," Palmer said. "You wonder about the spiritual part of you. How does this happen that you have parents that want you, that love you and were always there for you."

ATTACK: Missions connect for 21 hits

From 1C

lowed Finken, Homar Rojas and Luis Martinez to score, and gave up the lead in the process.

Moore, who took the loss to go 1-1 for the season, gave way to Mike Hook after starting the seventh by giving up a single to Eric Karros to finish the night with one walk, two wild pitches, a balk and three runs during the one complete inning in his line.

Hook was as bad. He faced four batters in the seventh, with a balk, a wild pitch and three runs. By the time Mark Zappelli was called to the mound, the Angels were down 8-3 and still had not retired a Mission in the seventh. Zappelli forced the first batter he faced, Martinez, into a double play, but gave up another two runs before earning the final out of the inning.

San Antonio starter Dennis Springer had a little trouble of his own, allowing 11 hits in his 7⅓ innings. But the righthanded knuckleballer also took the win to move his record to 8-4 after reliever Mike Pitz mopped up.

"When you give up that many hits you expect to give up more runs. But our offense did a good job; it's always nice to get that kind of lead to work with. But 21 hits, that's amazing," Springer said.

According to Goodwin, it was no surprise the Missions were able to produce that many runs, and after a disappointing third-place finish in the first half they are now proving it.

"We were always capable of playing good ball, we just had to put it together. There's a lot of talent on this team and we have depth too. We're capable of winning ball games in a number of ways, regardless of who's in the lineup," Goodwin said.

Surging 'Stros nip Giants behind Doran, Gullickson

Associated Press

Bill Gullickson pitched his first complete game in almost three years and Bill Doran hit a two-run homer, leading the Houston Astros to a 4-1 victory over the San Francisco Giants on Monday night.

It was Houston's fifth straight win and dropped the second-place Giants five games behind idle Cincinnati in the National League West.

Gullickson (8-8), who spent the last two seasons in Japan, last pitched a complete game for the New York Yankees on Sept. 14, 1987. He had a shutout until Ernest Riles hit his fifth home run with one out in the ninth.

The Astros snapped the personal five-game losing streak of Don Robinson (8-2), who gave up four runs and five hits in six innings.

Houston took a 2-0 lead in the fourth. Doran and Franklin Stubbs walked and Craig Biggio and Glenn Wilson delivered RBI singles.

Cardinals 5, Mets 1

Joe Magrane, whose start was pushed back three days because of back spasms, scattered five hits over 7 2-3 innings and Jose Oquendo hit a two-run double in a five-run second inning as St. Louis beat the Mets for the third straight time.

Magrane (7-12), who pitched 7 2-3 scoreless innings against the Mets in his previous start on July 28, gave up an unearned run in the top of the second on a two-out walk and center fielder Willie McGee's three-base error by Ron Darling's fly ball.

Pirates 10, Phillies 1

Randy Tomlin came within one out of a shutout in his major-league debut, Bobby Bonilla had a career-high five hits and Barry Bonds drove in five runs as Pittsburgh hammered Philadelphia in the opener of a twi-night doubleheader.

The 24-year-old Tomlin, who pitched a five-hitter, had a two-hit shutout with two out in the ninth when singles by Von Hayes, Dale Murphy and Carmelo Martinez produced Philadelphia's run.

Until then, the Phillies had not advanced a runner beyond first base as Tomlin kept them off-balance with a sweeping curveball. He struck out six, walked two and hit a batter.

Giants' Leach suspended

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — San Francisco Giants outfielder Rick Leach was suspended for 60 days by baseball commissioner Fay Vincent on Monday because of a positive drug test.

Leach, 33, disappeared twice from his teams during the last four seasons. He had been ordered to undergo drug counseling after marijuana was found in his hotel room last year.

"I am truly sorry this has happened," Leach said in a statement released by the Giants. "I know I have disappointed my family, my teammates and the Giants."

Associated Press

Like tourists on a whirlwind holiday, the NFL keeps jetting around the world. Last week, it was London and Tokyo. This week, it's Montreal and West Berlin.

The Kansas City Chiefs and Los Angeles Rams began practicing in Berlin's Olympic Stadium on Monday and the New England Patriots and Kansas City Chiefs prepared for Thursday night's game in Montreal's Olympic Stadium.

The Thursday game won't just be a chance for New England to judge new players. New head coach Rod Rust will have to judge himself and his assistants.

Exhibition games "are invaluable for any coaching staff," Rust said Monday. "They're even more valuable when there's a new group of people working together (to see) how we conduct ourselves in the press box and sidelines and how we communicate."

Some coaches have play lists and follow them no matter what. Others make considerable changes depending on the flow of the game. Rust said his philosophy is somewhere in between.

"You can't be a slave to the script and you can't be indifferent to planning," he said.

Miami Dolphins

Defensive end John Bosa had major reconstructive knee surgery to repair a torn ligament and will be out all season.

Bosa, who has not been at full speed since injuring his left knee in October 1988, hurt his right knee Saturday in a scrimmage against the Tampa Bay Buccaneers.

"This is disappointing because we'd hoped he'd come through for us to have a big year," Dolphins coach Don Shula said. "It looked like he was healthy and ready to go."

Green Bay Packers

Tight end Clint Didier, part of three Washington Super Bowl teams, retired after two seasons with the Packers. The 31-year-old Didier had caught 12 passes since signing with the Packers as a free agent in 1988.

"I know he's real close to his family," Packers coach Lindy Infante said, "and I know there is a lot of concern about being away from them and the children at the point he was in his career."

Didier retired on a day that two veterans, defensive end Robert Brown and defensive back Ron Pitts, showed up for their first practices after ending two-week contract holdouts.

New York Giants

Veteran linebacker Dwayne Jiles was among four players waived. Others released were wide receiver Philip Ng, guard Gary Barlow and linebacker Aaron Chubb, all free agents.

"Basically, he asked me to release him," Parcells said of Jiles. "I talked with him about it. He gave me an indication he was apprehensive about playing football."

Detroit Lions

Jerry Ball, a Pro Bowl selection at nose guard last season who is holding out, showed up at training camp but said he was there only to meet a teammate for lunch. Ball reported no progress in his contract talks.

There was no reported progress with the club's other holdouts: first-round draft pick Andre Ware and veterans Kevin Glover, Eric Williams and Jimmy Williams. Glover wants to renegotiate, while the others are free agents without contracts.

Cincinnati Bengals

"I've been working out and I'm in good shape," Brooks said, "but now I've got to get used to getting hit. What I need is a lot of repetitions. Once you do that, you'll be all right. Conditionwise, it's no problem."

Phoenix Cardinals

Running back Ron Wolfley and defensive tackle Gary Hadd will need additional tests for lingering injuries. Hadd has been out since last week with a bruised back and Wolfley hyperextended his left knee last Friday.

ANDERSON, Ind. (AP) — Eric Dickerson's status became more uncertain Monday after the star running back reportedly failed a physical he took in Indianapolis prior to reporting to the Colts' training camp.

Three Indianapolis television stations and WIBC Radio reported that the Dickerson, a holdout, had failed one physical and was to be reexamined later Monday evening.

WTHR-TV reported that Dickerson had a problem with his left knee. However, other broadcast reports quoted Dickerson's new agent, Leigh Steinberg, as saying Dickerson had a hamstring problem.

Steinberg was unavailable for comment at his office and a Colts' spokesman said the club would have no immediate comment on the report.

Dickerson, the NFL's all-time leading single-season rusher, has been a holdout since July 26, accumulating $1,500 a day in fines. The Colts had threatened to place him on the reserved-left squad list, which effectively would have suspended him without pay for the 1990 season without nullifying the year remaining on his contract.

The absence followed months of demands for a trade, threats of retirement and criticism of teammates and management. That was supposed to end Monday, when Dickerson was scheduled to report following a physical.

"We're looking forward to the prospect of working with him. When Eric is productive I think his record speaks for itself," coach Ron Meyer said.

Dickerson, who needs only 11 yards rushing to move into sixth place on the NFL's career rushing list, will find a new offense awaiting him if he's able and willing to play.

"We've changed, most notably in our running attack. We've instituted more of a two-back offensive flavor," Meyer said. "That will be new and ultimately he'll be involved in the blocking and running back aspects."

Unser is better after son wins

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Pain from the worst injuries of Al Unser Sr.'s career were eased by his son's victory in the Marlboro 500, a race the elder Unser had to watch from the hospital.

The 51-year-old Unser, a four-time Indianapolis 500 winner but now a part-timer on the Indy-car circuit, suffered a broken thigh and collarbone and three cracked ribs in a crash during practice at the Michigan International Speedway on Thursday.

He was flown to Indianapolis, where he underwent surgery at Methodist Hospital, the customary home-away-from-home for injured Indy drivers. He is expected to be released by this weekend.

Unser watched from a wheelchair as Al Unser Jr. won Sunday's race and told his father — and a national television audience — "This was for you, dad. I wish you were here."

"It made me very happy," the elder Unser, still in pain, said Monday. "It meant a lot to me when he said that on TV. It would have been neat if I could have been there to race against him."

SEATTLE (AP) — Two world records in 17 days, poor television ratings, a labor dispute, potential sponsorship problems: These were the elements that could turn the 1990 Goodwill Games into the 1990 Farewell Games.

Sometimes jokingly referred to as the Games of the II Goodwilliad, the Goodwill Games may have overstayed their welcome after only the second time around.

They had their moments:

— Janet Evans and newcomers Nicole Haislett and Summer Sanders made the United States the dominant force in women's swimming once again.

— Cory Baze won a wrestling gold for the United States as his mother cried in the stands.

— The youngest boxer in the tournament, 17-year-old Oscar de la Hoya, won a gold medal and stamped the U.S. team as a real threat to the Soviets and Cubans in two years at the Barcelona Olympics.

— Fu Mingxia of China, at 11 the youngest competitor at these games, won a gold medal in platform diving. She weighed barely 75 pounds, dripping wet, and you wondered if she'd ever hit the water.

— The U.S. women's basketball team picked up where the men once again failed, winning the gold medal by beating the Soviets and establishing themselves one of the most dominant teams, in any sport, in the world. They haven't lost a game of this magnitude in four years.

— And, finally, there was the U.S. hockey team, a bunch of college kids, who came within 21 seconds of their first victory in a competition of this type over the Soviets since the Miracle on Ice in Lake Placid in 1980.

These were the moments that Ted Turner, games founder and head of the sponsoring TBS cable network, would like to have remembered. Remember them well, for they may be the last such moments at a Goodwill Games.

These games were born in a cold-war atmosphere in 1986, when politics had kept the United States and Soviets apart on the field of play since the 1976 Montreal Olympics. They had a purpose, and the people of both nations were curious to see how their heroes would do against their archrival's heroes.

Now, with such extravaganzas many times more expensive to stage and with the words "cold war" disappearing from our daily vocabulary, do these games make sense anymore?

"We have a saying: 'Sports is not politics, but it is the most important politics,'" said Pyotr Reshetov of Gostelradio, the Soviet TV network that broadcast more than five hours of Goodwill Games competition a day back to the U.S.S.R.

Perhaps, the Soviets speculate, the Goodwill Games and such events had something to do with melting the political iceberg that separated the two countries.

"The first time the Goodwill Games were broadcast in 1986 from Moscow, the impression was that the Soviet Union was the enemy," said Nikolai Rusak, head of the Soviet sports ministry known as Goskomsport. "Now, the situation is greatly different. That image is almost entirely destroyed."

If the idea has merit, it might be pragmatics that kill it.

Turner estimates his network will lose as much as $26 million on its telecast of the games. Others figure more. Hard figures won't be available for a while yet, and Turner said it will be six weeks before the TBS board decides whether to continue its affiliation with the games.

Dollar drops

NEW YORK (AP) — The dollar lost more ground Monday against all major foreign currencies except the Japanese yen amid speculation that recent signs of economic weakness will lead to lower U.S. interest rates.

Gold prices climbed.

By the end of trading in New York, the dollar had risen to 150.35 yen, up from 149.925 yen late Friday. But the dollar lost ground against the British pound. In New York, the pound rose to $1.8725 from $1.85375 late Friday.

On New York Commodity Exchange, gold for current delivery rose $7.30 an ounce to $384.70. At Republic National Bank in New York, an ounce of gold was quoted at $384 an ounce as of 4 p.m. EDT, up $6.75 from late Friday.

Dow hit hard

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market took its worst hit since the "mini-crash" last October amid panicky selling sparked by fears that consequences of the Persian Gulf crisis could topple the teetering U.S. economy into recession.

It plunged about 105 points in the first 45 minutes of trading and never managed to recover much ground. The day's point loss was the largest since the widely watched market barometer fell 190.58 points on Oct. 13, 1989.

Declining issues swamped advances in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 1,530 down, 255 up and 265 unchanged.

But volume on the floor of the Big Board still came to a heavy 240.40 million shares, the third highest of the year and compared to 292.30 million shares on Friday, which was the 1990 high.

Energy tax now seen as doubtful

■ Speaker says Congress may have tough go to pass energy tax in wake of Iraq invasion.

Hearst News Service

WASHINGTON -- House Speaker Thomas Foley said Monday Iraq's invasion of oil-rich Kuwait makes it "more difficult" to raise energy taxes as a way to help close the U.S. budget gap.

"Common wisdom dictates that with gasoline prices rising, it would be more difficult to have an overall energy tax," the House Democratic leader told reporters. But he said no decision has been made "either way on this tax."

Neither the Democrats nor Republicans have formally submitted proposals to raise taxes but Sen. Pete Domenici, R-N.M., who works with the Bush administration on budget matters, has privately discussed a tax package that includes a 5 cents a gallon boost in gasoline levies.

The budget negotiators are trying to cut the fiscal 1991 budget deficit by between $55 billion and $60 billion, or face across-the-board reductions – known as sequester – required by the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings budget-balancing law.

The Bush administration projected last month that without changes in taxes or spending, the deficit for fiscal year 1991, which begins Oct. 1, would be $168.8 billion, not counting spending for the savings and loan bailout. With the bailout plan, the deficit projection is $231.4 billion.

Both Congress and the Bush administration have agreed that $25 billion in new revenues must be found next year in fashioning the deficit reduction package.

Foley said both Republicans and the Democrats will "simulatenously lay their proposals on the table" after Congress returns from its August recess Sept. 6, but that he doesn't expect agreement until mid-September, "a couple of weeks before the sequester would take place."

At that point, he said, "they (members) will see clearly that in the matter of weeks or days there is going to be the most horrendous, disruptive, chaotic, damaging sequester ever conceived."

Congressional leaders, Foley said, will write a budget bill that will "make it difficult for members to duck an up or down vote."

"They will have to make a hard decision, either vote on the record for the budget or accept the consequence of sequestration," Foley added.

The speaker also warned that budget negotiators may fail to reach an accord if the "economic projections indicate a weakening of the economy."

If that happens, Foley said, there will be a "likelihood that those arguing that the economy is too weak to assume the burden of either increased revenues or spending cuts will prevail."

Oil prices blessing for Mexico

N.Y. Times News Service

The sharp jump in oil prices after Iraq's seizure of Kuwait comes as a minor blessing for Mexico, a nation that enriched itself in the early 1980s by exporting high-priced oil but can no longer increase production to benefit from a new windfall in prices.

The good news is that Mexico might collect an extra $10 million a day in oil revenue.

The bad news is that Mexico has invested so little in oil exploration in recent years that production has declined to about 2.5 million barrels a day, from a peak of nearly 3 million barrels a day in December 1982.

About half the production is sold domestically, and 1.2 million barrels are exported each day.

"Maybe they can squeeze an extra 15,000 barrels a day from their wells, but that's minuscule," said George Baker, a Mexican oil industry expert at the Consortium for Research on Mexico, at the University of California at Los Angeles.

Pemex, the state oil company, cut capital spending from nearly $6 billion in 1981 to just over $1 billion today.

"Without new investment, the company sees a gradual decline," Baker said.

Venezuela, by contrast, has roughly a million barrels a day in idle production capacity that could be used to increase sharply the 1.6 million barrels that it currently exports daily, most of it to the United States.

The United States, then, would turn to Venezuela rather than to Mexico if its oil supplies from the Mideast were restricted, said Philip K. Verleger Jr., an oil analyst at the Institute for International Economics in Washington.

The United States imports more than 8 million barrels of oil daily, getting from Mexico only 600,000 barrels, or 7 percent of the total.

Most of the output is purchased by four oil companies: Shell, ARCO, Chevron and Exxon. The rest of Mexico's exports go principally to Japan, which buys 150,000 barrels a day, and to Spain and Israel, which buy smaller amounts.

Whoever buys Mexico's crude oil, Pemex is unlikely to realize any benefit from the sharply higher prices if Iraq withdraws from Kuwait in the next week or so and world oil prices subside to their June levels.

One reason is that Mexico will need at least 18 months before exploration could begin to raise production levels, Baker said.

And, secondly, the contracts that Mexico signs with foreign purchasers of its oil fail to recognize a short-lived price spike.

Mexico sells nearly all its oil under contracts that specify a single price for the oil shipped abroad in a given month. The single monthly price is the average of the daily prices in that month. A price increase would have to be sustained for a week or two for the monthly average to rise significantly.

The prices of Mexico's three types of crude — Isthmus, Olmeca and Maya — ranged in June from about $9.35 a barrel to $14.57 a barrel. Since then, each of the prices has risen by about $8 a barrel, with much of the increase coming last week.

The various benefits of a higher oil price begin to show up for Mexico after a month or so, oil experts and economists say.

At an extra $8 a barrel, revenue would rise by nearly $10 million a day and $3.6 billion a year. That would greatly reduce Mexico's merchandise trade deficit, which DRI/McGraw-Hill, an economic consulting agency, estimates at $3 billion for this year.

The extra money would also ease the burden of interest payments on Mexico's $80 billion in foreign debt.

Fed expected to lower rates

■ Analysts say the Federal Reserve will probably lower interest rates to mitigate effects of Iraq invasion on U.S. economy.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Federal Reserve Board will lower short-term interest rates soon to stimulate a tottering economy that faces a damaging new blow from higher oil prices resulting from Iraq's invasion of Kuwait, analysts predicted Monday.

An economy that already had slowed to barely perceptible growth during the first half of the year is threatened further by embargoes imposed by the United States and many other Western nations on imports of Iraqi and Kuwaiti oil.

As a result, many analsysts said the Federal Reserve probably will nudge its federal funds rate down from 8 percent to 7¾ percent to stimulate growth.

The federal funds rate, the interest charged by the Fed for overnight loans to banks, has remained high for more than a year as the central bank sought to slow the economy and reduce inflationary pressures.

"Historically, the Fed has actively fought inflation only as long as the economy was not threatened by recession," economist Samuel D. Kahan wrote in the current issue of Perspectives, the Fuji Securities Inc. weekly commentary.

"When it appears that the U.S. economy is about to fall into a recession, the Fed must shift its policy efforts," he said. "Recent economic releases suggest that we have entered this zone and we look for the Fed to shift its policy directive and emphasize economic growth."

"We expect the Fed to ease the federal funds rate to 7¾ percent any day soon," said Mark M. Zandi, an economist with Regional Financial Associates in West Chester, Pa.

If the United States manages to escape a recession induced by Middle East developments, some analysts said higher energy costs combined with rising unemployment would produce something similar to the "stagflation" of the late 1970s.

"Its won't be as severe ... but it's an unpleasant combination," said Donald Straszheim, chief economist with Merrill Lynch Capital Markets in New York.

Charles Schultze, former chairman of the White House Council of Economic Advisers in the Carter administration, suggested during a weekend TV interview that the Iraqi invasion could produce a "mild recession" if nothing else happens.

Many private economists believe the stagnant economy is as close to no-growth as possible without actually being negative. "Right now, we're skirting the edge" of a recession, says Robert G. Dederick, chief economist of Northern Trust Co. of Chicago. "The economy is just creeping ahead."

U.S. worker productivity jumps

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The productivity of American workers improved for the first time in 18 months, climbing at an annual rate of 1.6 percent, the government said Monday.

Analysts said they were encouraged by the gain in non-farm productivity — defined as output per hour of work — especially in light of recent data showing rising unemployment and stagnant economic growth.

However, economists said the 1.6 percent gain was still below the level needed to dramatically boost Americans' standard of living and improve the nation's ability to compete internationally.

They also were disturbed at the report's findings on hourly labor costs, a major inflation measure for businesses. Those costs rose at an annual rate of 5.6 percent the second quarter of 1990, well above the 3 percent rise for all of 1989.

"The inflation numbers for the rest of the year look horrible, especially with the shock of the Middle East oil crisis," said Michael K. Evans, who heads a Washington economic forecasting firm.

The rise in productivity in the second three months of the year was the first increase since productivity climbed 0.5 percent in the final quarter of 1988, the Labor Department said.

Though the report offered good news on American workers' performance in the April-June period, the agency said revised figures on last year showed productivity actually fell 0.3 percent rather than increasing 0.9 percent as first reported.

Sakowitz sees frenzy on final day of business

■ Customers were in shopping heaven at Sakowitz where discounts reached as high as 90 percent on their final day after 88 years in business.

HOUSTON (AP) — Customers even took down the walls at venerable Sakowitz, where discounts up to 90 percent off fine attire sent shoppers into a frenzy on the 88-year-old shop's final day of business.

The store will be open until Saturday selling fixtures, but sales of merchandise ended over the weekend.

Esther Traylor, a longtime Sakowitz shopper, sat on an emptied sales floor Saturday, guarding two stacks of merchandise she and her daughter-in-law were ready to make.

"I got the best deal in the store," she said, displaying a $100 pair of silk and rayon pants that was marked down to $3. "I made the best buy because I've been coming here long enough to get one."

Customers were even taking down the walls.

Buddy Albro stood on a ladder with his electric drill, removing the laminated wood veneer that had covered a wall for a merchandise display. He planned to use the display case and other fixtures to outfit his tennis and running shop.

Margaret Beavers, a 40-year employee who has made hundreds of veils for Houston brides as part of her millinery work at the store, said she'll "retire and play."

She said she was sad to see throngs hording up merchandise.

"Garage sales are mild compared to this," she said. "People do not realize this is not old, damaged merchandise. It hurts us to see the way they treat things."

On Aug. 14, the lease for the Post Oak store will be auctioned in a New York City bankruptcy court.

Paul Buxbaum, whose firm is handling the liquidation sale, said shoppers cleared 12 of 22 racks of merchandise left when the doors opened Saturday. He estimated the sale already had brought in $6.7 million.

The business was started by two brothers who opened a men's clothing store in Galveston.

In the 1950s, Sakowitz was a leader in establishing suburban locations and by the 1980s had a chain of 18 stores in three states under the leadership of Robert T. Sakowitz, grandson of one of the founders.

Sakowitz became a victim of the downturn in the oil industry and was forced into bankruptcy in 1985.

Oil spill studies weak

By Jerry Urban
Hearst News Service

HOUSTON — Scientific study of the long-term impact of oil spills is so limited, uncoordinated and tied up in litigation that often it is ineffective, some scientists say.

"There's really not a follow-up to see how areas have recovered after a spill," said Jay Rodstein, scientific support coordinator for the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration's hazardous materials response branch in East Lansing, Mich.

"It's possible that there are long-term effects we don't know about. But what we know about oil is that it's less toxic in the long term to humans and the environment than other chemicals," he said.

Rodstein said government agencies have difficulty obtaining money for damage assessment studies from a responsible party because the issue of liability often ends up in court.

"Studying damages is not an exact science," Rodstein said. "It's very tough to prove that damages were directly attributed to a certain spill."

When the tanker Mega Borg exploded in the Gulf of Mexico last month, spilling almost four million gallons of crude oil, a team of Texas A&M scientists spent a week gathering data for a study. But now the scientists fear that their efforts may be wasted.

Dr. Jim Brooks, director of the Geochemical and Environmental Research Group, a Texas A&M extension team, said there is uncertainty whether either government or industry will analyze the hundreds of water, sediment and organism samples taken during the spill.

The team also is having difficulty in being reimbursed the $140,000 that Brooks said the U.S. Coast Guard agreed to pay it for collecting the samples.

Coast Guard officials had agreed that the team would be reimbursed for the work if the results were provided to the government, he said. But a Coast Guard spokesman at the District 8 Headquarters in New Orleans said no study was commissioned.

The A&M team is not undertaking a similar study of the current spill affecting large portions of Galveston Bay.

Dr. Roy Hann, a Texas A&M University professor of environmental engineering and a longtime observer of oil spills, has proposed a scientific cooperative made up of representatives of industry, academia and private consultants.

"But as long as you're going to have the government managing the spill from one side and the industry cleaning it up from the other, then each group needs to have its own team. You don't mingle the prosecution and the defense in a court case, do you? Industry needs to have its own group to say which is the proper way to go."

Typically, the only sampling conducted at an oil spill is to confirm that the oil came from a specific vessel, Hann said. And if a damage assessment study is done, the results often are biased in favor of the party paying for the research, such as industry, scientists say.

WORK: Productivity up

(From 4C)

The report showed that from April to June, the number of hours Americans worked fell 0.1 percent — a likely sign that workers were being laid off in the face of slower economic growth and businesses just weren't hiring as many new workers, analysts said.

"It's a good news-bad news thing," Evans said. "The good news is that producers are starting to cut costs and lay off (inefficient) workers and the bad news is that when they lay off too many workers, we have a recession."

In revising numbers for the first quarter of 1990, the agency offered slightly better figures, saying productivity fell 1.9 percent rather than the 2.7 percent plunge first reported.

Monday's report showed that unit labor costs, a key gauge of future price inflation, rose 3.9 percent for the April-June period, compared with a 3.3 percent increase during all of 1989.

In the manufacturing sector, productivity increased 3.7 percent, a big improvement over the 2 percent increase during all of 1989. Unit labor costs in that sector rose 2.6 percent, compared with the 2.2 percent increase during all of last year.

Total business productivity, including farming, rose 1.9 percent for the first quarter, compared with a 0.2 percent drop for all of 1989.

Since 1982, productivity growth has averaged 1.4 percent a year.

Increasing productivity is considered basic to boosting living standards because it allows businesses to pay workers more as their output rises without risking higher inflation.

MEXICO: May have largest untapped crude oil reserves

(From 4C)

"Mexico should plow all this money back into oil," said Christopher Whalen, an international trade analyst in Washington.

He and others argue, however, that even with higher oil revenues to ensure repayment, foreign banks are not likely to renew lending to Pemex.

"People are scared of Pemex debt," Baker said. "All the money that Pemex earned during the oil boom years really went to the central government as general revenue."

Nevertheless, Mexico might have the largest untapped oil reserves of any nation outside the Middle East and the Soviet Union, according to an estimate by a petroleum engineer for the U.S. Geological Survey.

The engineer, Bernardo Grossling, said there might be as much as 730 billion barrels of undiscovered crude oil in the Gulf of Campeche and in the jungles along the Mexico-Guatemala border.

What's more, the cost of recovering crude oil in Mexico averages less than $10 a barrel, even though a big percentage of the production is from offshore wells.

The low production cost, less than half the outlay in the United States, should make Mexico a major target for exploration.

But foreign companies express reluctance to invest in drilling, in large part because Pemex has declined to give these companies a percentage of the revenue from any oil they discover.

Fail says he didn't intentionally mislead

N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — An Arizona businessman testified Monday that he never intended to mislead federal officials who sold him 15 insolvent savings and loan institutions in Texas in a deal some congressmen want to overturn.

James M. Fail admitted to the Senate Antitrust Subcommittee that he signed an incomplete statement regarding past trouble with the law. It left out information that one of his insurance companies had pleaded guilty to fraud in Alabama, a fact that would have disqualified him as a purchaser.

"It might be construed as being incomplete," Fail testified, explaining that he often signs papers his staff prepares without first reading the contents.

"These forms were not presented with the intention to mislead," Fail said, adding that he assumed his lawyer at the time had given the information to federal officials verbally.

The subcommittee is investigating the December, 1988, sale of the S&Ls, which Fail merged into a single institution he calls Bluebonnet Savings Bank, as a bad and possibly illegal deal in which the government lost millions of dollars.

Fail purchased the 15 S&Ls for a total of $120 million, he said. He paid the initial $70 million around the time of purchase and the final $25 million installment is due by the end of this year.

The federal government will spend about $3 billion to subsidize the sale, money that will go for such expenses as paying off creditors of the defunct S&Ls or paying Fail for managing unprofitable properties the institutions owned.

Fail said he does not yet have financing for the final $25 million he owes, but insisted he would have no trouble rounding up the funds.

He made the initial payment partially through a $35 million loan from Banker's Life Insurance of Chicago. But congressmen revealed Monday that at the time federal regulators approved the deal, Fail had presented only what Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, called "a wishy-washy letter" that said the loan still was subject to negotiations on key terms.

STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE

WHAT IS STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE?

Stockquote Hotline gives you the latest stock prices direct from the wires of the Associated Press. Over 9,000 stocks are listed from NYSE, AmEx and OTC sources; all available 24 hours a day. You can receive up to 10 quotes with one easy phone call.

HOW TO USE STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE:

1) Call the Stockquote Hotline at 682-0861;enter your access code which is 78625*

2) You will be asked to enter your stock ticket symbol. These are based on industry-standard symbols, which can be found in a Standard & Poor's Ticker Guide, or by calling your local stock broker.

3) Once you've entered the numerical code for the ticket symbol, press the (*) star key and you will hear the current price and net change from the last Associated Press update; which is a few minutes behind market activity.

4) After the stock is quoted, you will be asked to enter another ticket symbol. You now have 2 options;
* You may request a quote for another stock by repeating steps 2 & 3.
* You may request additional information on the stock just quoted by once more pressing the Star Key (*). Now the volume, high and low will be given, and then you will be asked to enter another ticket code.
* You may enter up to 10 ticket symbols per call.

5) To exit Stockquote Hotline, simply hang up the phone.

Wainoco's Klein-Sanchez No. 1 flowed 990 barrels of oil and 740 mcf of natural gas on a 24-hour test through a 36/64 inch choke with a flowing tubing pressure of 225 psi. The well was drilled 2,425 feet horizontally in the Austin Chalk formation at a vertical depth of approximately 6,900 feet.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Treasury bills, notes and bonds, buy direct

By Bill Doyle

Q. I would like to purchase some U.S. Treasury securities but need information about how to do so. You wrote that an individual can open his own "Treasury Direct" account and buy Treasury bills, notes and bonds without paying the fees charged by banks and brokers.

I have inquired about this at several banks but no one seems to know anything about it. How can I get started?

Doyle

A. Go back to your local bank and ask for the name and address of the Federal Reserve Bank or branch serving your area. There are 12 Fed banks and 25 branches around the country, each one covering a different area.

Every local bank and savings and loan association deals with the Fed. The appropriate address you want is available at your local bank, even though the folks there seem to plead ignorance. They might prefer you keep your money there, rather than send it off.

Write to the address you obtain. Explain what you have in mind and ask for details. In return, you will receive an information package containing everything you want to know about U.S. Treasury securities and the Treasury Direct system.

Among other things, the package will include a new account request form and "tender" forms (applications to purchase) Treasury bonds, notes and bills.

When you want to buy a newly issued bond, note or bill. Mail a tender along with your payment. You will become the owner of a Treasury security.

After that, you will deal with the Fed by mail. You will receive a statement of account every time you make a purchase, roll over a matured security to buy a new one or when a bond, note or bill matures and is not rolled over and whenever interest and/or a discount is paid on a security you hold in your Treasury Direct account.

You will not receive engraved certificates, which no longer are issued for Treasury securities. Everything is in "book-entry" — recorded on computers maintained by the U.S. Treasury Department and the Federal Reserve. Your statement of account is your proof of ownership.

Q. The instructions for opening a Treasury Direct account say I must designate an account at a (local) bank or S&L to receive my interest and discount payments as well as the face value of any U.S. Treasury security in my Treasury Direct account when it matures.

Suppose I have a Treasury bill of more than $100,000 — the maximum Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. coverage — in my Treasury Direct account and the local bank I designate goes belly up. Is that bill considered an asset of the bank I designated?

A. Nope. Everything in your Treasury Direct account belongs to you. Your local bank never has possession of the securities in your Treasury Direct account.

Your interest, discount and amount of matured securities from your Treasury Direct account do go to your account at the local bank — by electronic funds transfer — on the very day due. If you are concerned about your local bank failing, make sure the amount you have in your local bank account does not exceed the federal deposit insurance limit of $100,000 per depositor.

Q. When a Treasury bond, note or bill I have in a Treasury Direct account matures, can I demand that a check be sent to me?

A. You can demand it until you are blue in the face. But it won't do you any good. The reply will come back a firm "NO!" Under the Treasury Direct system, all payments go by wire to the bank account the investor has designated.

That simplifies things and reduces costs for the U.S. Treasury Department and the Federal Reserve. It's also a good deal for investors who use the Treasury Direct system. Because the money reaches your account immediately, you can then write checks or otherwise withdraw the money the day you know it will reach your local bank.

AOI reports results

MIDLAND, Texas (SWN) — AOI Coal Company today reported a substantial loss for the 1990 second quarter and the six months period.

For the quarter ended June 30, 1990, revenues were $19,245,000, down $1,693,000 from the corresponding 1989 quarter. This decrease in revenues, coupled with a significant increase in operating expenses, resulted in a net loss of $2,762,000 for the quarter, compared to a modest net profit of $162,000 in the 1989 quarter.

For the six months period, revenues were $37,530,000, down $1,340,000 from the corresponding 1989 period, and the net loss for the 1990 period of $8,151,000 compared to a net profit of $143,000 for the 1989 period. A write-off of $2,428,000 during the first quarter of 1990 of certain mining properties and equipment deemed by the company to be no longer useful, and depreciation and depletion of $6,065,000 for the six-month period, contributed to the loss.

Pakistani president dismisses Bhutto

Bhutto

Ishaq Khan

The emergency declaration gives President Ghulam Ishaq Khan and a caretaker government the power to dissolve provincial assemblies, suspend civilian courts, and make laws and suspend individual rights.

Earlier, the army took over state-run television and telephone lines. Opposition leader Mustafa Jatoi was sworn in as acting prime minister of a caretaker government, and Khan said elections for a new National Assembly would be held Oct. 24.

Ms. Bhutto called the president's action "illegal and unconstitutional" and said the corruption allegations were part of a "slander campaign" against her government.

Ms. Bhutto, the daughter of a former prime minister, took office in December 1988 and became the first woman to head a modern Moslem nation. She was hailed as a heroine for restoring democracy to Pakistan after 11 years of military rule. However, the image steadily eroded amid allegations of corruption among senior members of her government and even members of her family.

Ms. Bhutto also has been accused of inaction for failing to control ethnic violence in her home province, Sindh.

"The government has willfully undermined and impaired the working of the constitution, resulting in discord, confrontation and deadlock adversely affecting the integrity, solidarity and well-being of Pakistan," Ishaq Khan told a hastily called news conference.

"Corruption and nepotism in the federal government has reached such proportions that the orderly functioning of the government does no longer carry public faith and credibility and despite being subject to wide public condemnation, the government has failed to take approriate action," he said.

Pakistan's constitution gives the president the authority to dissolve the National Assembly if he believes the government is unable to carry out its duties.

German party demands quick unification

BONN, West Germany (AP) — The Social Democrats, the second-biggest party in both German states, demanded Monday that the nations unite by mid-September, saying East Germany's social and economic conditions are "catastrophic."

Earlier in the day, German union leaders and the German Social Union, a small East German archconservative party, also pushed for quicker unification.

The Christian Democrats of West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl and East German Prime Minister Lothar de Maiziere insist unity must wait for united German elections that should be held Oct. 14.

The East German Social Democrats backed off a threat to pull out of de Maiziere's government this week over a disagreement on when all-German elections should occur. But they could resurrect the threat.

Wolfgang Thierse, head of the East German Social Democrats, said the party would seek a vote in the East German Parliament on Wednesday that would set Sept. 15 as the deadline for unification.

"The coalition question is not the decisive one," said Thierse. "The decisive question is what can be done for the people of the DDR (East Germany)."

The conflict had threatened to break up de Maiziere's broad coalition government and further fuel the political, economic and social upheaval in the young democratic nation.

Oskar Lafontaine, the West German Social Democrats' candidate for chancellor, said a "catastrophic situation" has developed in East Germany.

At the heart of the debate is an intense political struggle by parties jockeying to use unification to their political advantage in united German elections.

Japan mourns Hiroshima bombing victims

HIROSHIMA, Japan (AP) — Hiroshima on Monday mourned the 140,000 victims of the 1945 atomic bomb attack with a solemn look back and a note of optimism for the future as tensions ease between the Soviet Union and the United States.

For an eery moment, the city fell silent. Taxis and street cars stopped, and people throughout this industrial center of 1 million joined in a moment of prayer for the souls of those killed in the bombing.

Dignitaries, Hiroshima residents and foreign guests bowed their heads at 8:15 a.m., the exact moment the bomb exploded in a blinding flash of light.

"I pay my deep respects to the citizens of Hiroshima who have built this city of international peace from the ashes," Prime Minister Toshiki Kaifu said at a ceremony attended by 55,000 people.

"As the only country in the world to have experienced an atom bomb attack, Japan has resolved not to let it be repeated," Kaifu said. He reiterated Japan's appeals for total nuclear disarmament.

Kaifu told a news conference that his government was working to increase medical and financial support for those exposed to the bomb's radiation.

Hiroshima Mayor Takeshi Araki, in his annual peace declaration, praised the growing promises for disarmament in the United States and the Soviet Union.

Mattox seeks gas price probe

By James Cullen
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Gasoline prices increased by as much as 20 cents per gallon over the weekend, Texas Attorney General Jim Mattox said Monday as he asked federal authorities to investigate possible antitrust violations.

Mattox set up his own task force Friday to investigate complaints of gasoline price gouging in the wake of Iraq's invasion of oil-rich Kuwait, but he said the U.S. Department of Justice has the resources to investigate charges that oil companies may be illegally fixing gasoline prices on a national scale.

A spokesman for Mobil Corp. attributed the higher gas prices to an increase in worldwide oil prices over the past five weeks, as well as heightened oil market fears as a result of the Iraqi takeover of Kuwait's oil production.

He predicted that any investigation would show that the price increases were a result of free market forces, not a corporate conspiracy, as Mattox suggested.

The Texas attorney general's office received 125 complaints about gasoline price increases by 2 p.m. Monday, said Kelly Fero, a spokesman for Mattox, as retail dealers blamed the price increases on wholesale distributors, who blamed the oil companies.

Jack Wilson, manager of Harold's Exxon in Beaumont, said he has tried to keep the price down, but regular unleaded increased 5 cents, to $1.02 a gallon, at his station over the weekend. "There isn't too much we can do," he said. "It's going to increase more."

Fero said the task force has found the greatest price increases in unbranded gasoline sold to independent service stations, while "name brand" distributors appear to be holding down the price increases.

The task force received complaints that one unidentified chain in Beaumont increased its prices by 20 cents, which would be the largest increase reported in the state, he said.

In the letter to U.S. Attorney General Richard Thornburgh, Mattox said Texas consumers should not have to pay higher costs for gasoline that already was delivered to service stations when Iraq attacked Kuwait on Thursday.

"In Texas, gasoline prices to consumers at retail outlets have been hiked overnight by as much as 20 cents per gallon," Mattox said.

"The gasoline currently being purchased by Texas consumers was obtained, refined and shipped to the pumps long before the recent invasion," he said.

"To raise the price of gasoline already at the pumps is an unconscionable act of corporate greed perpetrated by the major oil companies," Mattox said. "After months of a stable world market, they have simply seized upon these events halfway around the world to raise their prices without justification."

John Lord, a spokesman at the Fairfax, Va., headquarters of Mobil Corp., said Iraq's invasion was not the only factor in the price increase, although it was the most dramatic.

West Texas intermediate crude oil prices, the costs that refiners must pay for their feedstocks, have increased 60 percent since July 1, to more than $27 a barrel Monday, with most of that increase coming before the invasion, Lord said. During that same period, he said, wholesale gasoline prices increased from 58 cents to 84 cents a gallon on the Gulf Coast spot market.

"Our costs have gone up dramatically all through July," he said. "Those costs haven't been reflected at the pump."

Lord said the volatility in the Middle East and the threat that the supply of oil may be interrupted caused brokers to bid up the price of oil in existing inventories.

Sanctions may cripple oil exports

By Kathy Chenault

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The U.N. Security Council on Monday imposed broad sanctions against Iraq for invading Kuwait, including a ban on trade aimed at cutting off the Middle Eastern nation's oil exports and arms supplies.

The 15-member council voted 13-0 to adopt a U.S.-crafted resolution calling for the measures in an effort to force Iraq to unconditionally withdraw its troops from Kuwait. Yemen, the council's only Arab member, and Cuba abstained.

The resolution, which was sponsored by 10 council members, said the Security Council is "determined to bring the invasion and occupation of Kuwait by Iraq to an end and to restore the sovereignty, independence and territorial integrity of Kuwait."

After the vote, Iraqi U.N. Ambassador Abdul Al-Anbari said his country regards the sanctions as "null and void" because the United States pressured other council members to support the measure.

The measure, which takes effect immediately, bans all imports from Iraq and Kuwait. It also prohibits any activities, including the transfer of funds, that would help Iraq and Kuwait export their goods and forbids loans to the two countries.

If successfully enforced, the sanctions could cripple the oil-dependent Iraqi economy. Its sweeping provisions would in effect bar U.N. members from importing Iraqi oil, and oblige Turkey and Saudi Arabia to shut down Iraqi oil pipelines running through their territory.

The Iraqis, fast losing customers for their oil, stopped pumping petroleum on Monday through one of their two pipelines that run through Turkey to the Mediterranean. They reduced the flow in a second pipeline there.

Turkish President Turgut Ozal, in an interview with ABC News, had indicated that Turkey would close down the pipeline completely once the Security Council adopted the sanctions resolution. "We will obey the U.N. embargo," Ozal said.

The resolution also bans the sale or supply of any commodities or products to Iraq and Kuwait, which would include weapons and military supplies.

Cheney confers with Saudi officials

WASHINGTON (AP) — Defense Secretary Dick Cheney held sensitive talks with Saudi Arabian officials Monday about U.S. military options for defending the oil-rich desert kingdom against a possible blitzkrieg by Iraqi forces massed along its border with Kuwait.

The U.S. aircraft carrier Independence and its escort of a dozen warships and supply vessels reached the Arabian Sea, putting the naval battle group close enough to launch air strikes against Iraq and other targets in the Persian Gulf.

The Independence joined the carrier Eisenhower, cruising in the eastern Mediterranean, in the Middle East to guard against the possibility of expanded hostilities by Iraq, which seized Kuwait last Thursday. A third U.S. carrier, the USS Saratoga, will leave Mayport, Fla., on Tuesday for the Mediterranean.

"The defense of Saudi Arabia is of paramount concern," said White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater, as Cheney began conferring with Saudi officials after an overnight flight from Washington to Jidda.

"Quite obviously, we are discussing a possible threat by Iraqi forces directly to that country," Fitzwater said. "... It's quite clear that would involve appropriate ways to defend their country."

Added the White House spokesman: "We have discussed military possibilities and our abilities with all the countries in the gulf."

One U.S. military official, who spoke only on condition that he not be identified, said Cheney's talks with the Saudis are crucial to U.S. hopes of halting further aggression by Iraqi President Saddam Hussein.

The official said it would be difficult to carry out a major air strike in the Persian Gulf without overflight or landing rights from friendly nations in the region.

Some assistance is available from Bahrain and Oman, he said, but those gulf states are loathe to acknowledge cooperation with Americans.

Officials account for eight Texans in Kuwiat

Associated Press

Six Texas refinery workers stationed in Kuwait, along with a basketball coach and his wife, have been accounted for in the wake of last week's Iraqi invasion, but at least one other Texan was still missing Monday, family members said.

Iraqi troops rounded up 28 Americans in Kuwait on Monday and placed them aboard buses heading for an unknown destination, the U.S. State Department said.

The Americans were among more than 300 British citizens and other foreigners picked up by the Iraqis at three hotels in Kuwait.

U.S. officials said they did not rule out that the foreigners would show up in Baghdad unharmed. Nonetheless, they issued a warning.

U.S. officials said Texans accounted for were Charles Amos, 59, a Santa Fe Drilling Co. employee whose family resides in Gilmer; Rainard L. Walterscheid of Dallas; Gary Carr of North Richland Hills; Edward Hale, 52, an oil rig supervisor from Spring, and Bobby Gene Parker of Vidor, near Beaumont.

Another American, John Henry Cole, 50, who like Hale and Carr works for OGE Drilling Inc. of Houston, was accounted for Monday.

Relatives of a San Antonio couple said they were relieved to learn that Jim and Phyllis Calvin are alive and well. Kelly Calvin told KKYX-AM radio that his father phoned him Monday afternoon.

The State Department said it had not been able to contact Steve Betts, 35, of Houston. He coaches the Kuwaiti national swimming team.

Bill Schaub, a drilling coordinator for OGE, told the Associated Press Monday that Cole was fine.

"The last thing that I know is that he was in his apartment in Kuwait waiting for things to cool down," Schaub said. "As far as I know he's safe and sound."

A curfew which had been imposed since last week's invasion was lifted on Monday, Schaub said. He said State Department officials said Americans could go out and shop and attend to their affairs between 7 a.m. and 7 p.m.

Kevin Calvin had earlier said he was concerned that his parents might have become hostages in Kuwait. He said a State Department telephone recording available only to families of the Americans in Kuwait warned them not to travel and to stay indoors and away from windows.

"Basically, they're telling them to keep their heads down," Kevin Calvin said.

Officials were also wondering about the fate of 15 pro-Iranian terrorists whose freedom was demanded by factions holding Western hostages in Lebanon.

Parker's relatives said State Department officials were vague about the status of the Americans, who were taken by Iraqi troops during Thursday's invasion.

Margie Walterscheid's 15th wedding anniversary is Tuesday. But she said she was celebrating early after news that her husband was safe.

WORLD IN BRIEF

ANC will end armed struggle

PRETORIA, South Africa (AP) — The African National Congress announced Tuesday it is immediately suspending all armed actions against the white minority government.

The agreement is a major step toward the beginning of formal constitutional negotiations to end apartheid and give the black majority a voice in national affairs.

"In the interest of moving as speedily as possible towards a negotiated peaceful political settlement, and in the context of the agreement reached, the ANC announced it was now suspending all armed actions with immediate effect," said a joint statement released by the ANC and the government after 16 hours of talks.

De Klerk's government has dismantled some aspects of the country's system of racial separation known as apartheid and opened the talks with the country's black majority.

Tuesday's statement was released at a press conference by a weary, but smiling President F.W. de Klerk and ANC Deputy President Nelson Mandela. They met from 9 a.m. Monday until just before 1 a.m. Tuesday, with breaks only for lunch and dinner.

WHO opposes smoking

LONDON (AP) — The World Health Organization on Monday urged a smoking ban on all passenger aircraft.

"We are now calling for all airlines to be smoke-free. We think it's sensible, we think it's possible and we think the airlines would support it," John Roberts, WHO's tobacco and health program manager, told reporters.

Martin Jarvis, senior scientist of the Imperial Cancer Research Fund, said separately: "Simply having non-smoking seats on aircraft is not an answer to the problem. Non-smokers are still exposed to smoke."

Air Canada last month became the first airline to ban smoking on all its trans-Atlantic flights. Smoking is banned on most domestic flights in the United States.

Israeli teens slain

JERUSALEM (AP) — Search teams Monday discovered the stabbed and bound bodies of two Israeli teen-age hitchhikers in a dry river bed in Jerusalem and police said they suspect the two were killed by Arab nationalists.

News of the killings sparked rioting and hundreds of Israelis, some chanting "Death to the Arabs!" hurled rocks and cinderblocks at Arab-owned cars. Seven Arabs were injured in the attacks.

Security forces clamped a curfew on one Palestinian village and searched other villages near where the bodies were found, but there were no reports of arrests.

Talks on Cambodia set

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The United States and Vietnam held their first formal talks on Cambodia on Monday, seeking a peace settlement to end the 20-year-old civil war that has killed millions of Cambodians.

The Communist Khmer Rouge has drawn world condemnation because it presided over the deaths of over 1 million Cambodians through executions, starvation and forced relocation when it ruled the nation from 1975-78.
