'Criminal intent' takes center stage in McLaren trial

By D. Lance Lunsford
Staff Writer

Defining the jury's role and responsibilities dominated court proceedings Monday in the trial of Richard McLaren and four others, as the defense repeatedly asked jurors to determine whether or not there was "criminal intent" during the Republic of Texas' 1997 standoff with law enforcement.

In his opening statement, Robert Scheidt, one of the defendants, told the jury there are two elements of a crime: the actual criminal action and the intent to commit the crime.

"There is a lack of criminal intent. Ladies and gentlemen, we're not criminals," Scheidt said. "Intent defines the action."

Scheidt, McLaren, Robert "White Eagle" Otto, Gregg Paulson and Richard Keyes, members of the Republic of Texas, are in federal court defending themselves on federal charges stemming from the 1997 standoff in the Fort Davis Mountains resort area.

The charges against the five involve a series of weapons and explosives allegations. Limiting both the defense and prosecution, United States District Judge Royal Furgeson stressed the issue of time constricting the trial, insisting on the need to get witnesses heard just once except in special situations.

While most of the defendants were flanked by "stand-in" counsel as the result of their seeking self-representation, one defendant, Paulson, did select actual representation in the case.

Wasting little time after securing a jury Monday morning, the prosecution led off the trial with their opening statement followed by a series of defense opening statements shared by Otto, Scheidt and Scott Johnson, the attorney selected by Paulson.

Furgeson warned not only the defense, but also the prosecution, to restrict statements about the defendants' positions regarding Texas as an independent nation.

"Their views are not on trial here," Furgeson said.

The judge also said he would not let the jury be subject to testimony or statements regarding certain information pertaining to Texas as a separate nation. Recent pretrial hearings resulted in allegations from McLaren and his co-defendants claiming the court had no jurisdiction in the matter of their case.

While Furgeson stressed to jurors that the prosecution must prove guilt, he added the uniqueness of this case required a stronger sense of direction on his part. He added that witnesses speaking from the witness box would be the only form of spoken evidence delivered, not the statements made by either the prosecution or the defense.

"I've probably gone into this more than I normally would," Furgeson told the jury.

U.S. Attorney and lead prosecutor, Gerald Carruth, called only one witness on the opening day of the trial: Jeff Davis County Sheriff Stephen Bailey. Carruth asked Bailey a series of questions regarding the actual day the standoff began in 1997.

In addition to the charges against the five men on trial, Karen Paulson, wife of Gregg Paulson, faced similar charges but agreed to accept a plea agreement offered by Carruth, although the finality of that agreement will not be reached until October when Furgeson rules.

Currently, McLaren is serving 12 1/2 years on federal fraud charges.

Heatstroke on minds of coaches as drills begin

By Stewart Doreen
Staff Writer

Recent tragedies on football fields across the nation aren't causing wholesale changes as Midland's high school football teams prepare for the 2001 season.

Triple-digit temperatures are nothing new to Midland, and the people running Midland's football programs are very aware of the dangers the heat can cause.

"We treat the heat with great respect," said Lee High head football coach John Parchman.

The issue of heatstroke on America's football fields has made headlines in the past week as Minnesota Vikings' Pro Bowl offensive lineman Korey Stringer, 27, died last Wednesday after being overcome by the heat at the team's training camp in Mankato, Minn.

Stringer's death came six days after a University of Florida football player died of heatstroke complications.

According to the National Center for Catastrophic Sports Injury Research in Chapel Hill, N.C., 18 high school or college players died of heat-related causes in 1995.

Monday, the same day funeral services were held for Stringer, Lee and Midland Christian high schools started their two-a-day workouts. The two join Trinity, which started its workouts last Wednesday.

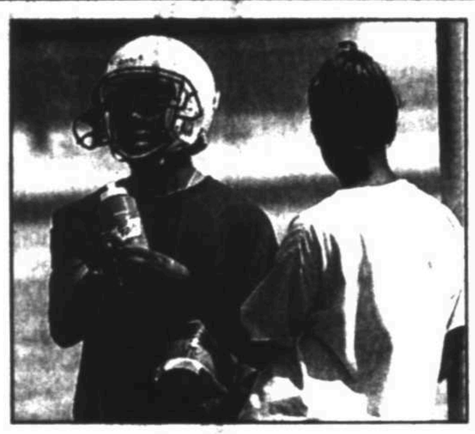

Midland High begins football workouts next week.

In all four cases, the heat has the attention of the coaches. According to the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, about 300 Americans die from extreme heat every year. That is a higher toll in a typical year than from floods, tornadoes, hurricanes, lightning and earthquakes — combined.

Heatstroke occurs when the body's internal thermostat rises uncomfortably, usually above 106 degrees within a few minutes. Victims stop sweating — which is the body's way of using evaporation to cool the blood just below the skin surface, lowering body temperature. As internal temperatures rise, the brain and other vital organs begin to fail.

It was reported that Stringer was unconscious and had a temperature of 108 degrees when he arrived at a Mankato hospi-

Mourners pay tribute to Vikings' Korey Stringer

WARREN, Ohio — From high school teammates to NFL stars, hundreds of mourners paid tribute Monday to Minnesota Vikings lineman Korey Stringer, who died last week of heatstroke.

About 1,300 people filled the First Assembly of God church in the hometown of the former Ohio State star. An additional 300 watched the funeral on closed-circuit television in an adjoining gym.

The funeral was "a rejoicing — that he's moved on," said St. Louis Rams offensive lineman Orlando Pace, who left early for the Pro Football Hall of Fame exhibition game later Monday. "We're sad about that, but hopefully he's gone to a better place."

Stringer, 27, was hospitalized after practicing last Tuesday and died in the hospital overnight. His body temperature had risen to 108 degrees.

"It's a big loss. It's a tremendous loss," Vikings wide receiver Cris Carter said before entering the church. "It's devastating for the team.

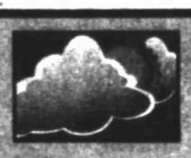

"He was probably the most popular player on the team and one of the most popular I ever played with. It's just unexplainable."

Stringer's family issued a statement Monday thanking friends and fans for their support.

"It is in times like these that the outpouring of individual and national expressions of support and the overwhelming measure of God's love have given us the stamina to sustain such a loss with the dignity and grace that Korey so reflected and deserves," the statement said.

Should Election Day be a national holiday?

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

Making the federal Election Day a national holiday to lure more voters to the polling places seemed to gain the favor of West Texans, including Midland veterans and political leaders.

But, wedding the traditional Election Day on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November with Veterans Day on even-numbered years was not such a popular proposal.

Veterans Day, which began in 1919 as Armistice Day under President Woodrow Wilson to commemorate the end of World War I in Europe on Nov. 11, 1918, was changed by Congress to Veterans Day in 1954. That change came following World War II and the Korean War to honor all American veterans who served in both wartime and peacetime.

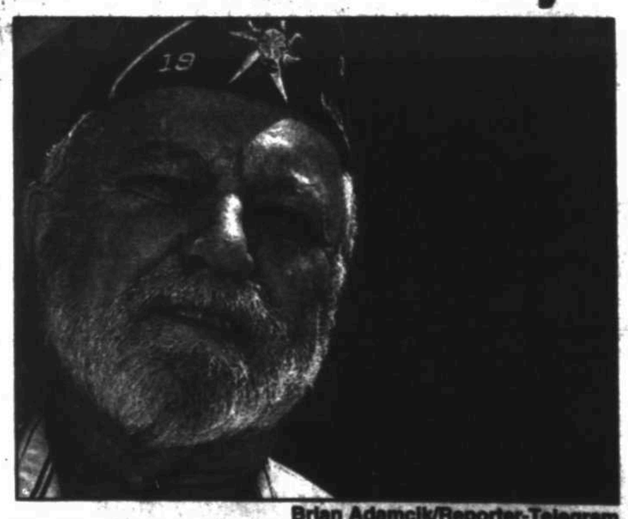

"It doesn't set good," said Ron Henderson, a 66-year-old Korean War veteran and past commander of American Legion Post 19 in Midland, of a joint Election Day-Veterans Day holiday.

"Veterans Day is kind of sacred," he said. "We've been so satisfied with that day. It's a day that we can recognize (veterans), and it's not confused with anything else. We'd like to keep it that way.

"Just in talking with people around the post here, ... they'd like to see the government quit messing with these days," Henderson said.

The 2.8 million member American Legion and the 1.9 million member Veterans of Foreign Wars (VFW) both have rejected "the most dramatic" recommendation by the National Commission on Federal Election Reform designed to overhaul the federal elections, according to the Associated Press.

DRILL: Precautions in place for teams

tal.

Heat-related complications are not on the rise around Midland's programs. One reason is the precautions area coaches and trainers take. According to a Midland Independent School District statement, "The athletes during a typical high school football practice consume between 120-140 gallons of fluid during practice," and then rehydrate with electrolyte fluids after practice.

"We do a good job of providing water," said Midland High head coach David Browning. "As long as it doesn't interfere with a drill, and by that I mean the kid is physically involved, they get water any time they want it. We have water laying around all the time."

Another reason the worries around West Texas football camps aren't as great is due to the lack of humidity. The day of Stringer's last workout, the temperature was in the low 90s, but the high humidity pushed the heat index as high as 110 degrees.

"The lack of humidity (in West Texas) allows your body to cool off by evaporation," said Hondo Schneider, a trainer for Lee High school. "When you have that high humidity in the air, it reduces the amount of evaporation you can have and the water sits on the body, and it doesn't allow the cooling effect to take place."

Browning said, "Our guys are schooled to know if a guy stops sweating. When you have been in the business long enough, there are a lot of signs you can look for, and you can tell right off the bat if there is a problem."

The heat index is such an important factor that the Fort Worth Independent School District has called for restrictions for varsity teams when the heat index reaches 105. When the index rises to 108, "everyone goes home."

On Monday, the high in Midland was 100. The humidity index reached 17 percent.

"Out in West Texas, the heat index is what the temperature is," Parchman said. "I have been in other places where you get 90 degree weather, but the heat index is up around 112 or 114 because of the humidity. Those are the people who really have to worry, not that we don't. We have always been good about getting kids water."

There are some other factors that may put the players of today at more risk. One is an earlier start to school and the football season.

Second is the fact that players carry around more weight.

Tim Fischer/Reporter-Telegram

Lee football players practice blocking drills Monday afternoon during the first two-a-day practice.

Another is players may not be spending as much time outdoors as they used to. Spending time outdoors has given way to remaining inside and playing video games.

"Climatization is a big part of the fight," Browning said.

Still, it has always been and always will be hot in West Texas, and as long as there is football to be played, two-a-days and other pre-season workouts will be needed and emphasized. For Midland High and Lee High, the season starts Aug. 31 and Sept. 1 respectively.

"I can't ever remember two-a-days being a happy, warm fuzzy time for anybody," Parchman said. "I think it has always been hot. It seemed like it when I played."

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

TRIBUTE: High school friends mourn

(From 1A)

Survivors include Stringer's wife, Kelci; their son, Kodie; Stringer's parents, a brother and a sister.

"Korey was just a ball of fire. Everybody loved him. He was a joy to be around — a real joy to be around," Brandon Taylor, a friend of the family, told reporters outside the church, which was closed to the media.

Pallbearers included Stringer's former teammates at Warren G. Harding High School and Ohio State. Honorary pallbearers were Vikings' wide receiver Randy Moss and former running back Robert Smith.

Mourners included two-time Heisman Trophy winner Archie Griffin; Joey Galloway, wide receiver for the Dallas Cowboys and former Ohio State teammate; and Eddie George, running back for the Tennessee Titans and former Heisman winner.

The Vikings resumed training camp Monday, without coach Dennis Green and several others who attended the funeral.

Stringer had struggled with weight problems early in his career before slimming down and having a Pro Bowl season last year.

Picked by the Vikings in the first round of the 1995 draft, he started every game at right tackle the past two seasons.

Stringer was a first-team All-American selection in the 1994 season for the Buckeyes. He quit Ohio State after his junior year to go pro.

He also was a two-time first team All-Big Ten player.

Stringer played in 35 of the team's 37 games during his three years and started in 30 contests. He was the 1992 Big Ten freshman of the year.

Frederick Harris, director of public safety in Warren, said Stringer gave much to the city's children.

"He was somebody they could see on TV, but they could get to. They didn't have to stand in line or go through agents," Harris said. "He'd walk down the halls at Harding High School and was out on the streets of Warren."

Harris said: "In my 58 years, this is the biggest funeral I've ever seen in the city of Warren."

DAY: Local veterans express dislike of plan

(From 1A)

Former Presidents Jimmy Carter and Gerald Ford head up the commission to merge Election Day and Veterans Day into one national holiday every two years "to increase the availability of poll workers and suitable polling places" and to "make voting easier for some workers."

But to combine the two days into a single holiday "would detract from" the gravity and meaning of Veterans Day, Henderson said.

World War II veteran Pat McMullan, who was a commander and 1946 charter commander of VFW Post 4149 in Midland, said a national holiday for Election Day would offer working people a chance to vote without missing workdays or work hours. "And they hate to knock off (of work) to go vote.

"I think they ought to leave Veterans Day alone and also make a holiday for Election Day — National Election Day," McMullan said.

If the two days were merged into a single holiday, McMullan said his concern would be that some people would be prevented from "participating in their Veterans Day programs or preventing from voting.

"On Veterans Day, you've got so many different programs going," McMullan said. "I don't know it would affect the voting situation or not."

Midland County Republican Party Chairman Sue Brannon said making Election Day a national holiday "would be a wonderful idea."

However, Ms. Brannon said Veterans Day should remain on Nov. 11 — "on Armistice Day as it has been for years. It's a tribute (to veterans) that should be kept."

Veterans Day: 'Sacred Day'

Norma Rowland, chairman of the Midland County Democratic Party, said, "I don't see any problem with Election Day being a national holiday.

"I'm not sure that we want to mess with Veterans Day," she said. "To me, that's a pretty sacred day. My husband (Pete) was in Vietnam and my father was in the second World War. Veterans Day is a day veterans should be able to call their own."

Midlander Ciro Sanchez, a World War II veteran in Europe, said making Election Day a national holiday and merging that with Veterans Day "would be a good idea.

"People can't go to vote because they are at work" on that Election Day Tuesday in November.

"You ought to have Election Day where you are free to go vote rather than have to go to work," Sanchez said.

Midland County Democratic party leader David Weaver said in nations where election day becomes a national holiday, "(voter) turnout has increased."

Weaver said if "veterans groups object" to Veterans Day coinciding with Election Day, "then you can pick any day in the calendar and say 'this is going to be national Election Day,' and it's going to be essentially a holiday.

"It would make more sense, probably, from an economic standpoint, to do it (make Election Day a holiday), when government offices and the banks and all that are already closed anyway," said Weaver, who noted the federal government "doesn't shut down on Election Day currently."

Weaver said he's "sure the folks working at the post office would be in favor of adding a holiday" and some others, too.

Other than Election Day, Texas voters have ready opportunity to vote early — before Election Day.

"Texas has some of the easiest, most accessible early-voting laws of any state in the country," Weaver noted. "The (Texas) Legislature has gone out of its way to try to encourage that and made it very easy. In the old days you had to give an excuse," such as being out of town, to vote absentee.

"Now, if you want to vote early, you vote early," Weaver said. "You just show up. Many states don't do anything like that. They have very restrictive laws. The whole (voting) concept is going to a national standard."

Election Day vote on decline in Midland

In Midland County, more and more voters are voting early — 59 percent in the November 2000 general elections, according to records in the Midland County Elections Administrator's office.

Fewer Midlanders are casting ballots on Election Day.

All told, 41 percent cast ballots on Election Day 2000. In that presidential-election year vote, then- Gov. George W. Bush was elected president.

In 1988 when his father, then-Vice President George H.W. Bush was elected president, the reverse was the case: More people in Midland voted on Election Day than in early voting — 58 percent to 42 percent.

In 1980, only 20 percent of Midland voters in the general election voted absentee. Eighty percent voted on Election Day to help elect Ronald Reagan president and to elect the senior Bush vice president.

In 1952 in helping the ascent of Dwight D. Eisenhower to the presidency, only 18 percent of Midland voters in the general election voted absentee, and 82 percent voted on Election Day.

From his standpoint as a political observer, Weaver said, "Obviously, the system is not working very well.

"Fewer and fewer people are participating" in the voting process. "After the last election cycle, people don't have a lot of confidence in the way we process votes in some states, and the technology is just a nightmare," Weaver said.

"I know, working as a political consultant, going from county to county to county, every rule is different and every place has a little different technology," Weaver said. "It's really a circus, and it's hard to deal with.

"In Midland and Odessa, we are so lucky because between (Ector County Elections Administrator) Sharon Wilson and (Midland County Elections Administrator) Pat Eastup, we have two of the best elections administrators in the state of Texas. We don't have the problems that other places have."

Ms. Eastup and Ms. Wilson "both know what they are doing," Weaver said. "They run well-organized offices. If you have a question, they can answer it. The answer is going to be correct."

Win Brown, a Republican leader and former Midland County commissioner now living on a ranch in Christoval, suggested that creating a national holiday out of Election Day would make for an "extra day to go travel somewhere, go out for a picnic."

Armistice Day: 'Very Honorable'

Win's wife, Lou Brown, who for years in Midland served as a Republican Party leader and also at the national level, said she was "not sure if it (Election Day) should be tied to Veterans Day or not.

In America, making Election Day a national holiday would be "worth giving it a try because we have become so jaded," Ms. Brown said.

"Americans have become very jaded about the electoral process that we have," Ms. Brown said. "And with the antics going on in Washington, D.C., people are getting less and less appreciative of their governmental officials."

And even if Election Day were declared a national holiday, "I don't know how you would entice people to go to the polls if they had a day off.

"In West Texas, it's a little harder to get yourself to the polls if you are working in the oilfields or working in the fields in agriculture," she said.

"We need to make it (voting) probably a little bit more voter-friendly so that people would exercise this great freedom we still enjoy to vote for our choice of (public) officials. I think it's worth a try" but "not tied to a weekend ... where people can take a four-day weekend."

Of observing Veterans Day, "I think the veterans deserve their own day — the original Armistice Day" that was first celebrated to commemorate the end of World War I and "which a lot of people no longer remember," Ms. Brown said.

"Armistice Day was considered a very honorable day," she said. "I don't want to tie the elections process to Veterans Day."

California court says gunmaker not liable for use of weapons in killing spree

By David Kravets
Associated Press

Every state high court and federal appellate court in the nation to consider such lawsuits has ruled that makers of legal, non-defective guns cannot be sued for their criminal misuse.

SAN FRANCISCO — Victims cannot sue gunmakers when criminals use their products illegally, California's top court ruled Monday, rejecting a suit stemming from the 1993 massacre of eight people in a skyscraper.

The 5-1 decision by the California Supreme Court kept in step with other courts in insulating weapons manufacturers from liability.

Every state high court and federal appellate court in the nation to consider such lawsuits has ruled that makers of legal, non-defective guns cannot be sued for their criminal misuse.

Monday's decision said the Legislature's rules regarding product liability do not allow for such suits against gun manufacturers.

"In reaching this conclusion, we are not insensitive to the terrible tragedy that occurred on July 1, 1993," Justice Ming W. Chin wrote. "The Legislature has set California's public policy regarding gun manufacturers liability under these circumstances. Given that public policy, plaintiffs may not proceed with their negligence claim."

The decision was an important victory for weapons manufacturers and Navegar Inc., the maker of the weapon used in the San Francisco skyscraper massacre. The justices overturned a lower court decision that was the nation's only state appellate ruling allowing victims to sue a gun manufacturer for someone's criminal acts.

Surviving victims of the rampage claimed that Navegar was liable for damages because it marketed the TEC-DC9 to appeal to criminals, and that Navegar should have foreseen it would be used in a massacre.

Their case, originally thrown out by a judge, was resurrected two years ago when California's 1st District Court of Appeal ruled that the survivors were entitled to a trial on their claims.

The appellate court said Miami-based Navegar "had substantial reason to foresee that many of those to whom it made the TEC-DC9 available would criminally misuse it to kill and injure others."

In a lone dissent Monday, Justice Kathryn Mickle Werdegar agreed with the appellate court decision, arguing that the victims' case should proceed to trial on grounds that Navegar was negligent in marketing the fast-firing weapon to the general public. She said Navegar should have restricted its sale to firing ranges, police and military users.

She added that, had a conventional handgun been used in the firestorm, there may have been fewer deaths. Werdegar also said her colleagues misconstrued California's product liability laws, which she said allows such suits against gunmakers.

Until the law is amended, she said, "gunmakers ... will apparently enjoy absolute immunity from the consequences of their negligent marketing decisions."

Monday's decision could insulate gunmakers in a suit by Los Angeles, San Francisco and 10 other California cities and counties, claiming faulty design, manufacture and distribution of firearms. At least 16 similar suits have been filed by local governments elsewhere.

The Navegar case dates to July 1993, when Gian Luigi Ferri, a mentally disturbed man with a grudge against lawyers, entered the skyscraper and opened fire in a law office with two TEC-DC9s and a revolver. He killed eight people and wounded six before killing himself.

"My son wouldn't be growing up without a father if it weren't for that," said Carol Kingsley, whose husband, attorney Jack Berman, was killed when a hail of bullets punctured Berman's closed office door. "These guns were designed for mass killing and they were marketing, targeting these types of folks like Ferri."

Ernest Getto, a lawyer for Navegar, said there was no evidence of any connection between the manufacturer's legal activities and Ferri's criminal conduct.

He urged the court to prevent "the imposition of potentially boundless liability on those engaged in legal manufacturing, marketing and distribution activities when their products are criminally misused."

Dennis Henigan, who argued the case on behalf of Ferri's victims, said Navegar should be sued.

"It was their decision to sell a combat weapon to the public and promote it to the high-risk users who intend to kill," Henigan said. "We would have no qualms against them if they just marketed it as a high-quality weapon."

Found in Ferri's suburban Los Angeles apartment were copies of Soldier of Fortune and similar magazines, in which Navegar commonly advertised the TEC-DC9.

The TEC-DC9, a high-capacity pistol easily converted to fully automatic fire, was one of the guns used by two students to kill 12 fellow students and a teacher in Littleton, Colo.

Arthritis Pain Mystery Solved

Horse Liniment is the secret!

OCALA, FL. -- An ingredient used to treat inflammation in thoroughbred racehorse legs, is now recognized as safe and effective for human use. The ingredient has been formulated into a product called ARTH-Rx™ and comes in a strength designed for humans. Researchers are excited and say the formula can relieve arthritis pain for millions.

Developed by the Phillips Gulf Corporation, ARTH-Rx is a breakthrough in the treatment of painful disorders ranging from minor aches and pains to more serious conditions such as arthritis, bursitis, rheumatism, tendonitis, backache and more.

Scientists suggest that ARTH-Rx works by intercepting the pain messenger substance that sends pain signals to the brain. Although the mechanism is not totally clear, pain is relieved in the affected area because the pain signal actually disappears.

ARTH-Rx is the only product on the market with Neurocaine and is available in a convenient, pleasant scented roll-on applicator without a prescription. According to a spokesperson for the company, ARTH-Rx is available in pharmacies, nutrition stores, and even some feed stores. ARTH-Rx can also be ordered by calling 1-800-729-8446. © 2000 PGC

Notice of Public Hearing on Tax Increase

The Midland Community College District will hold a public hearing on a proposal to increase total tax revenues from properties on the tax roll in the preceding year by 26.26 percent. Your individual taxes may increase at a greater or lesser rate, or even decrease, depending on the change in taxable value of your property in relation to the change in taxable value of all other property and the tax rate that is adopted.

The public hearing will be held on August 14, 2001 at 4:00 pm, Roadrunner Room.

FOR: Neil Florer, Joann Foster, Will Green, John James, Steven Kiser, William Kleine, Kenneth Peeler, Ralph Way
AGAINST: none
PRESENT: none
ABSENT: Charlene Wurtz

The following table compares taxes on an average home in this taxing unit last year to taxes proposed on the average home this year. Again, your individual taxes may be higher or lower, depending on the taxable value of your property.

	Last Year	This Year
Average residence homestead value	$70,687	$72,428
General exemptions available (amount available on the average homestead, not including senior citizen's or disabled person's exemptions)	$ 0	$ 0
Average taxable value	$70,687	$72, 428
Tax rate	0.1633	0.1832
Tax	$115.43	$132.69

Under this proposal, taxes on the average homestead would increase by $17.26 or 14.95 percent compared with last year's taxes. Comparing tax rates without adjusting for changes in property value, the tax rate would increase by $ .0199 per $100 of taxable value or 12.18 percent compared to last year's tax rate. These tax rate figures are not adjusted for changes in the taxable value of property.

Never miss a bet

Pop Quiz! What business is the best "packaged" business in the world? I'm going to cheat and give you an answer: McDonald's. Why pay attention to "packaging?" Your business is like a cattle ranch because it carries your brand. Packaging includes the physical packaging of your products or services, the bundling of them together to increase your average sale, and the impressions your entire business delivers.

Call N. Mott Williamson today at 686-9992 to attend our next workshop scheduled Tuesday, August 14, 2001 from 2:00-5:30 p.m.

Sure, McDonald's is a whole pocket full and most businesses are small. But, McDonald's once was a little bitty store at one location. A big business is just a small business that did the right things. There are lessons here for all businesses. The "golden arches" are identifiable everywhere. You know what their people will look like. You know what they're going to say to you when you order. Even their buildings have the same earmarks.

Does McDonald's make the best tasting hamburgers? No. But, McDonald's does offer its customers a unique sense of control and security. When you eat there, you're confident. You know what you're going to get. Their packaging allows their customers to make safe assumptions. That's the confidence your business needs to create. To do that, you must make sure your business shoots seeing eye bullets. You need to create a sense of sameness for your customers. Here are some tips on how to do this.

First, make sure your letterhead, business cards, fax sheets, invoices, statements and other firm documents look the same. Next, create a business logo that gives everyone a means of identifying you easily. Then use it on everything your business produces. Make sure your business signage makes you easy to spot and promotes your business. It's important for signage to be uniform in format. If customers see your cars and trucks, make sure the vehicles are shined up, and spotless inside and out. If your business is trade, retail, or nonprofessional service, why not have your car match your firm's logo and color scheme? For example, Coke vehicles are always red and the words Coca-Cola written on them match the styling on the bottles and cans. Those pink Mary Kay cars help them make sales too.

"A big business is just a small business that did the right things."

Another important sales tool is the appearance of your business premises and employees. If your premises appear well organized and in order, customers assume you'll take care of their needs in an appropriate way. McDonald's employees wear uniforms. IBM salesmen wore white shirts for years. Every business can benefit from uniforms or consistent dress standards. Again, your customers feel more confident when dealing with your business if there is at least some degree of sameness with each and every team member. It's also important to answer the telephone in ways that invite a customer or potential customer to do business with you. And, the list goes on and on.

Call AWW Consulting Group L.L.C. at 686-9992 today for your complimentary copy of this publication, "35-Point Power Packaging Checklist for Your Business." Use these techniques to increase sales and the overall quality of your business.

How to work with your financial consultant

As the investing world becomes increasingly sophisticated, complex and unpredictable, more and more people feel the need for professional guidance. Certainly, it is important to have a highly trained, qualified individual working with you to help you reach your financial goals. But how do you determine what works, what doesn't and what qualities you should look for in a financial professional? Here are some simple steps you can take to ensure that you get the most out of your relationship with your financial consultant, and hopefully, your investments.

Daniel Watts

Choose Wisely. Be prepared to go through several interviews before you find the right financial consultant. Select one who works in a stable, financially secure and reputable firm. Become acquainted with their education, background and investment philosophy. Make sure they can provide the full range of products and services you require, and have access to specialists in relevant disciplines. Discuss how you want the working relationship to be, and how you like to work best, i.e., on the phone, in person, through e-mail. Beware of anyone who tries to guarantee annual performance—no one can, or should, do that. It's all a matter of trust, so look for someone with whom you can develop a good rapport and communication.

Who's in charge here? Having the guidance of a financial consultant doesn't mean surrendering complete control. Your participation is vital so stay as involved as you want to, but be objective when determining the desired level and quality of your input. Interest rates rise and fall, corporate earnings slump, companies merge—what's the effect on your portfolio? Do you have the time and desire to keep pace with those types of daily changes?

Financial Consultants are not psychic. When you're planning for, or making, major life decisions, communicate with your financial consultant, sooner rather than later. If you've chosen the right FC, he or she will have some well thought-out ideas about revising your investment strategy so it keeps working hard to help you meet your new objectives.

Stay connected and informed. The Internet can be a great investing and financial management tool. In fact, it makes the perfect complement to your relationship with your financial consultant. For education and keeping yourself informed on an up-to-the-minute basis, the Internet seems tailor-made for the financial industry. However, you probably have access to more information than you really want or can use.

Instead of trying to sift through all the investment, economic and financial news and data yourself, ask your financial consultant to provide you only with what you need. Any qualified financial consultant will have a pipeline to all of the latest equity and fixed-income research, market reports and updates from analysts. You can stay on top of financial reports, research companies you are curious about and communicate with your FC through e-mail.

Know when to say when. If you feel your investments have outgrown the time and expertise you have to devote to them, ask your financial consultant about the options open to you in money management. Money management not only provides a high degree of efficiency, it helps keep emotion out of the equation by giving the money manager added responsibility for investment selection, portfolio reporting and monitoring.

Finally, review, reassess and revise. Your financial consultant can help you develop an investment plan that meets your goals, no matter what they are. Along with the importance of keeping your financial consultant informed about changes in your goals and objectives, is making sure you're kept informed about the performance of your investments. Nothing can substitute for regularly scheduled reviews with your financial consultant. Whether it's once a month, once a quarter or year-end, or even regular phone calls, it's important for you to know, and feel comfortable with, exactly how your investments are doing and why.

Take your vehicle to Midland Muffler for a/c repair

Don't drive around in a hot car this summer

It is said that summer time temperatures inside a vehicle can reach 150 degrees or more. Up on the dash, it can get hot enough to bake cookies. In other words, if your air conditioner fails you could be driving around in an oven!

Midland Muffler's cool staff can help you keep cool in your car, truck, van, SUV, etc. this summer, even in West Texas heat.

Mike Murray, owner of Midland Muffler and Brake, has the solution. Two years ago, Mike brought in experienced air conditioning man Dale Warden to help you keep your cool. "Dale has been in the auto repair business for almost 30 years," Mike notes, "so there's almost no problem he hasn't already seen and fixed." Dale is fully certified to handle vehicle refrigerants, which is required by law.

Whether your vehicle uses the older R-12 refrigerant or the more recent R-134a, Midland Muffler can do the repairs you need. In fact, if you're R-12 a/c needs major repair, such as a new compressor, that might be a good time to have Dale upgrade it to R-134a. That could save you money in the long run, because R-134a costs about 75 percent less (or even better) than the no-longer-made R-12. All vehicles made from 1994 on use the newer refrigerant.

Maybe your air conditioner hasn't failed completely, it just doesn't seem to be cooling like it should. Any slight deficiency will be magnified when outside temperatures approach and surpass 100 degrees. It's still a good idea to have you're a/c checked out, in order to possibly prevent greater problems later on.

In fact, a/c checkups every few years are a really good idea anyway. "All mobile air conditioning systems leak tiny amounts of refrigerant because of rubber hoses and seals," Dale explains. While your vehicle stores some extra refrigerant, even that may eventually leak out. When your system runs under those conditions, it can cause expensive damage to the compressor and other components.

The bottom line? Just like anything else, your car's a/c will run better with regular maintenance.

That maintenance can include occasionally checking and cleaning the fins in front of the radiator—something you can probably do yourself. Those fins tend to catch bugs, dirt and other things that can slow or block the air flow, reducing the efficiency of your a/c.

Along with air conditioning repair, Midland Muffler still does the work you've come to expect since 1983—brakes, exhaust systems, alignments, shocks and struts—and other minor repairs such as alternator or water pump replacment.

Why drive around in an oven? Thanks to Midland Muffler, you can keep your cool when all those around you are losing theirs!

Midland Muffler and Brake has been locally owned since 1983. They are located at 3200 W. Front. Hours are 7:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Monday through Friday, and 7:30 a.m. to noon on Saturday. The phone number is 699-7924.

Window film from Mid West is a good business investment

If your building has large windows, or if it has lots of small windows, especially on the west side, the West Texas sun can be merciless.

Windows let in light, but they also let in too much heat and too much of the sun's damaging ultraviolet rays. Closing off windows with dark drapes may not be a good answer.

Window film from Mid West Glass can be the perfect solution because it lets you decide what to let in and what to keep out. Film can eliminate up to 100 percent of the UV rays that fade furniture, carpet and other furnishings. It can cut the sun's heat by as much as 80 percent (think of the savings in air conditioning you can realize from that). It can also soften the glare of the sun.

Reflective film makes it harder to see inside, giving more protection from theft where you keep merchandise or office equipment or machinery. Security protects glass from shattering when broken—the toughest film is almost impossible to break with a hammer and very difficult to cut with a knife—reducing "smash and grab" thefts, which account for 64 percent of all burglaries.

Because window film comes in a wide variety of attractive architectural colors, you won't sacrifice beauty—you can really improve the appearance of your building.

Film is one of the most economical window solutions there is. Its heat reduction features alone can help pay for the installation.

No matter what kind of windows you have—if they take up a whole wall or are wallet-sized—if they are double pane or single pane, decorative, oddly shaped, on sliding doors or anything—Mid West can cut window film to fit perfectly.

All these benefits are true of home windows as well. Residential films come with a lifetime warranty on the color and against peeling, cracking or bubbling.

Fight back against the harsh West Texas sun. Window film lets in the light you want while curbing the sun's heat and the damaging UV rays.

The large, west-facing window at Pond's Picture Framing used to? let in a lot of heat. When Mid West Glass installed attractive window film there, it made a big difference.

Mid-West Glass offers glass and windows for any use, as well as patio enclosures. Located at 906 W. Front, for a free estimate call 682-7373.

Williams wise to reject Garza's RBCA proposal

We are pleased to see the chairman of the Texas Railroad Commission has dropped consideration of the proposed Risked Based Corrective Action regulation, which promised to be a paperwork boondoggle for the state's petroleum producers.

Railroad Commission Chairman Michael Williams had said he wanted to roll out the proposed regulation, which would have fundamentally changed the way in which oil spills are reported and remediated, and give the industry a chance to test market the idea.

It wasn't long before Williams got his answer. It was a resounding "no."

Williams got an earful from producers at this past month's State of the Industry conference in Austin.

In the wake of that raucous meeting, Williams pledged he was keeping an open mind.

In the form in which we had seen it, RBCA appeared vague in its treatment of phrases such as "proximity to water" and lumped five-barrel and 5,000-barrel spills into the same general category. It also would have put on the oil industry paperwork and recordkeeping burdens that preferably would be shouldered by staff at the Railroad Commission.

While the rejection of RBCA by the chairman of the Railroad Commission might be hailed as a victory for our state's oil producers, the entire issue points to a bigger question about the Railroad Commission.

During a visit to Midland one day after the July 25 State of the Industry conference, Williams had kind words to say about his fellow Railroad Commissioners, Tony Garza and Charles Matthews.

But there appear to be simmering rivalries between the commissioners, and the political elbowing appears to be trickling down to staff levels.

During this so called "test period" on RBCA, the proposed regulation drew harsh criticism. Even Matthews called the 250-page rule, "the most onerous and liberal rule in the history of the commission."

In the wake of Williams' decision to yank the idea from consideration, Garza, father of RBCA, said the Railroad Commission was failing to show leadership.

We respectfully disagree with Commissioner Garza.

The Railroad Commission must perform a delicate balancing act, weighing our state's need for treating the environment in a responsible, caring manner against our nation's ravenous appetite for energy. As a regulatory body, the Railroad Commission shouldn't be overly eager to jam paperwork and red tape down the throats of producers.

In this case, the chairman accurately sized up the situation and understood that RBCA threatened to put an unnecessary burden on the industry.

The next meeting of the Railroad Commission is set for Aug. 21.

RBCA may be dead, but it will be interesting to see if the rivalry on the Railroad Commission starts to get a little livelier.

Today in History

Today is Tuesday, Aug. 7, the 219th day of 2001. There are 146 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Aug. 7, 1942, U.S. forces landed at Guadalcanal, marking the start of the first major allied offensive in the Pacific during World War II.

On this date:

In 1782, George Washington created the Order of the Purple Heart, a decoration to recognize merit in enlisted men and non-commissioned officers.

In 1789, the U.S. War Department was established by Congress.

In 1912, the Progressive Party nominated Theodore Roosevelt for president.

In 1927, the Peace Bridge between the United States and Canada was dedicated during ceremonies attended by the Prince of Wales and Vice President Charles Dawes.

In 1934, the U.S. Court of Appeals upheld a lower court ruling striking down the government's attempt to ban the controversial James Joyce novel "Ulysses."

In 1959, the United States launched Explorer 6, which sent back a picture of the Earth.

In 1964, Congress passed the Gulf of Tonkin resolution, giving President Lyndon Johnson broad powers in dealing with reported North Vietnamese attacks on U.S. forces.

In 1974, French stuntman Philippe Petit walked a tightrope strung between the twin towers of New York's World Trade Center.

In 1976, scientists in Pasadena, Calif., announced that the Viking 1 spacecraft had found the strongest indications to date of possible life on Mars.

William F. Buckley Jr.

Terrorism remains way of life in Middle East

On one day, the papers ran an obituary on an American flier who in 1943 shot down the plane carrying Adm. Yamamoto from a Japanese base in Rabaul, New Britain. There was jubilation in America over that nice coordination of intelligence and warmaking, and I remember the special glee of a 15-year-old who had quivered with indignation when the Japanese admiral a year or two earlier had broadcast that he looked forward to dictating the terms of surrender to the Americans in Washington, D.C.

Buckley

On the same day there was news of the Israeli helicopter attack on Nablus in the West Bank. The targets were two leaders of the Hamas, and they were killed, as also four others and two boys walking past the building when the helicopters struck.

The perspectives by which the two episodes are judged have to do with civil protocols. We were at war with Japan, which meant that anything we proceeded to do, including bombing civilian centers, was OK. If we elected not to bomb the emperor, that was because we thought him more valuable alive than dead. If there was a scruple on this matter, it was of the kind felt by heads of state. When we commissioned the assassination of Fidel Castro, in the Bobby Kennedy days, word got around that reciprocity was conceivable, and for a few hot hours after the shots fired out in Dealey Plaza, some suspected the killer Oswald was doing the work of Fidel Castro, repaying the compliments of (failed) U.S.-led assassins.

That situation has cooled off, but hardly that of Israel and the Palestinians. But of course they are not "at war" with one another, so that the protocols do not fall quite in place when a helicopter attack singles out two Hamas leaders and incidentally kills a few others while at it.

The reactions were absolutely predictable at one end: The Palestinians are enraged and threaten retaliation.

Every now and then, after a sortie of this kind, the Israelis clam up. But not this time. The office of Prime Minister Sharon issued a statement: The doomed Hamas figures "were in the process of planning further terrorist acts." The helicopter attack was therefore pre-emptive. Palestinians have denied complicity in terrorism. "Jamal Mansour was arrested by the Israelis more than 13 times," one spokesman said. "They deported him to Lebanon once. That should have been enough for the Israelis to know who Jamal Mansour was. If he was Hamas military, they never would have released him."

Are these stipulations all the way around? The Israelis charge that the victims were planning terrorist attacks; the Palestinians deny they were terrorist-bound? If so, analysts from the outside are left to weigh the probabilities, which are that Israeli intelligence was accurate, and that Mansour and his confederate Jamal Salim were indeed involved in the terrorist Palestinian cause, even if one wonders why Israelis didn't hang on to Mansour when they had their hands on him.

The only thing absolutely settled by the Israeli strike is the future of Mansour and Salim. The Israelis can always hope they have gotten rid of two critical members of the terrorist operation. This is unlikely, any more than, after a while, we could sustain a reasonable hope that bringing in the marginal Vietcong operative would collapse the communist effort in South Vietnam.

Working for the Israelis is the counterterrorist's ultimate card: We know who you are, Abdul, and one of our people will visit you in due course, so say your prayers. The Palestinians have to hope their own terrorism will one day effectively demoralize the enemy, usher in a Quisling government, and result in the gradual disappearance of Israel as we know it today.

The U.S. government, which prefers to stay away from day-by-day moralizing on the Mideast 100-year war, did reproach the Israelis this time around, and the European press, as ever, was all but unanimously critical.

The Israeli killer operation is explained by two standards. One says, like capital punishment, such treatment of terrorists may deter. A second says, we derive satisfaction from executing such as were directly or indirectly involved in the terrorist operation in Tel Aviv last June that killed 22 of our citizens.

It is left for private speculation what it is that keeps Arafat alive, beyond the seamless protective domes characteristically lived in by despots. Perhaps the Israelis bow to Machiavelli's doctrine that one should not cut off the enemy's line of retreat. On the other hand, if Arafat were to retreat, the assassin would probably be a kinsman.

News media have entertainment in mind

How many of you know the names of the admirals who command, respectively, our Pacific and Atlantic fleets? Do you know the names of the joint chiefs? How about the names of the three people currently occupying the international space station? Or the commander of the last space-shuttle flight?

Reese

Well, don't feel bad. I don't know those names either, but I bet all of us, whether we wish to or not, are familiar with names like Britney Spears or Tom Cruise or Regis Philbin.

My point is simply this: America's news media are far too oriented toward entertainment. They tell us far more than we need to know about unimportant matters and almost nothing about important issues, such as national defense, the space program, the state of America's agriculture, our immigration problems, public health problems and so forth.

With still nearly 2 million men and women under arms, surely there are people in our armed forces who have led more interesting lives, whose thoughts would be far more interesting to hear, than those of performers. With all due respect, actors, dancers, professional athletes and singers perform the same function as trained dogs in the circus. They perform for people's amusement. In the great scheme of things, that is simply not a very important function.

I guess I was spoiled by growing up during World War II. Sure, I knew the names of Roy Rogers, Gene Autry and Gary Cooper. I loved the movies when I was child. But I honestly cannot recall ever having been aware of an Academy Awards ceremony or who might have won one. But more importantly, even barefoot and in short pants, I also knew names like Roosevelt, Churchill, Stalin, Hitler, Mussolini, Tojo, Eisenhower, MacArthur, Patton, Guderian, Rommel, Zhukov, de Gaulle, Chiang Kai-shek, "Vinegar Joe" Stillwell, Doolittle, Nimitz, Halsey and a host of other men in the war.

I guess I got into the habit of thinking that newspapers were supposed to be about serious topics and not the latest gossip about which actor was sleeping with which actress. Those stories were left to the movie-fan magazines. Today one is likely to find those stories in the main pages of newspapers. Most newspapers have whole sections devoted to entertainment and to commercial sports — another form of entertainment — but no sections devoted to more important matters, such as agriculture, trade, national defense, science, industry, aviation and space.

Who is the best industrialist in American today? Or is there one? What does it take to do a dead-stick landing with a multiton shuttle? What condition is our Navy in? Who's considered the best test pilot in the United States? Which Marine still on active duty has the most combat service? What do our GIs in the Balkans actually think about their duty there? Who are considered the most important thinkers in the field of the law?

It seems to me that there are far more interesting stories out there than partisan squabbling or entertainers promoting their next film or CD. I sometimes get the strong impression that newspapers are becoming about 80 percent hype — hype for entertainment, hype for commercial sports, hype for the government and hype for the corporations.

Self-government only works if the people receive accurate, unbiased information about important topics. If instead they are given hype and propaganda, the system will fail. One day, if Americans wake up unfree, they will have the corporate owners of most of the media to thank for their slavery.

The American ideal was that the press would be the people's independent source of information — independent from the government, independent from the corporate establishment and independent from any kind of elite or establishment. A news organization should have only one goal — to find the truth — and only one loyalty — to its readers.

I fear we have strayed far from that ideal and are much the worse for having done it.

Bush loves tearing up old treaties

George W. Bush was in a treaty-tearing mood. He tore up the treaty on global warming before signing it, rejected protocols on germ warfare and illegal sales of small arms, and he vowed to withdraw the Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty unilaterally.

Buchwald

One of the president's White House aides said to a State Department treaty expert, "Don't we have any more treaties Mr. Bush can tear up?"

"How about the one banning genocide?"

"That's good. It is not in our national interest."

"What about the Panama Canal treaty signed in 1978?" the expert said.

"Who needs it? Let's tear it up."

"Did you suggest tearing up the Mexico Border treaty of 1977?"

"Only if Mr. Bush can do it unilaterally," the White House aide said.

"What about the Kyoto Protocol?"

"It's fatally flawed. We were thinking of signing it and then tearing it up. As a matter of fact, all the treaties the president is walking out on are fatally flawed. The SALT II Treaty of 1979 is one we don't care about. The Nuclear Test Ban Treaty of 1963 can go, as well as the one we signed with France in 1798.

"There are so many treaties and so little time. How does it work?"

"After you people at State dig one up, the White House takes it from there."

"Does the president make the decision all alone?"

"When it comes to tearing up treaties, the buck stops there."

"Does Mr. Bush burn the treaty or use a shredder?"

"He prefers to burn them in the fireplace. He's not against every treaty we ever signed, just the ones that are not in the interest of the United States, such as banning biological warfare."

"Does that mean we're still working on biological warfare?"

"No comment."

"Is the president doing this to make the allies mad?"

"He offered to let the allies join him in burning the treaties, but they refused. He told them just because you sign a treaty does not mean you have to honor it. Mr. Bush believes in "a la carte multilateralism."

"What's that?"

"Think of it as a Chinese restaurant menu. We'll abrogate one treaty from A, one from B, and one from C."

The State Department expert said, "I have a good one. It's the agreement we signed protecting migratory birds flying to and from Canada."

"Good work. We haven't torn up a Canadian treaty in a long time."

Clinton will publish memoir with Knopf

By Hillel Italie
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Ending months of speculation, former President Clinton said Monday that he will write his much sought-after memoirs for publisher Alfred A. Knopf.

Terms were not disclosed but a source close to the deal said Clinton's advance will top the previous record of $8.5 million for a nonfiction book. The memoir, currently untitled, is scheduled for 2003.

"I am very pleased to be associated with the distinguished publishing house of Alfred A. Knopf," Clinton said in a statement issued by the publisher.

"President Clinton is one of the dominant figures on the global stage," said Sonny Mehta, Knopf's president and editor in chief. "He has lived an extraordinary life, and he has a great story to tell."

Asked in a telephone interview whether Clinton would write about the Monica Lewinsky scandal, Mehta said: "All I know is I came away from my discussions with him feeling it was going to be a pretty thorough and candid telling of his life, and that he was going to talk about all the principal events of his presidency.

"The heart of the book is what you'd expect it to be. The heart of it will be his presidency," Mehta said.

Asked about the size of the advance, Mehta replied: "We're very comfortable with the price we agreed to."

The record advance for nonfiction was $8.5 million for worldwide rights to a book by Pope John Paul II in 1994. Clinton's wife, Sen. Hillary Rodham Clinton, received an $8 million advance from Simon & Schuster for her memoir.

The Washington Post and The New York Times reported on their Web sites Monday that Clinton's advance is more than $10 million. Clinton's representative, Washington attorney Robert Barnett, and officials at Knopf declined comment.

Barnett said Clinton plans to write the memoir himself, although he will have "plenty" of research assistance. Barnett said Clinton already has written an outline and has completed much of the book "in his head."

"He's thought it out very carefully," Barnett said.

A division of Random House Inc., whose parent company is the German conglomerate Bertelsmann AG, Knopf is regarded as one of the industry's most prestigious publishers. Clinton's book will be edited by Robert Gottlieb, whose other authors have included Nobel laureate Toni Morrison, the late historian Barbara Tuchman and the late publisher Katharine Graham.

"Knopf is an interesting choice. It's consistent with how Clinton's trying to change his image," said Judith Regan, president and publisher of ReganBooks, a division of HarperCollins.

"Normally, with a book like this, you go around and have personal meetings and he didn't do that. Hillary invited everyone to the White House."

Regan, who had expressed interest in the book, called Gottlieb a "very distinguished editor" and said Knopf was an "appropriate publisher if you want to low-key it."

Like so many other things about Clinton, his book plans were subject to endless gossip. Reports started even before he left office and continued for months. There were stories that his pardon of fugitive financier Marc Rich and other controversies delayed his decision. There were rumors he was writing a novel.

Barnett said the novel "never was happening." He said Clinton, who received "numerous" offers both in the United States and abroad, simply followed his own schedule in getting a book deal.

"The president, upon leaving office, wanted to have some rest, get his charitable work in line, get his speech deal done and then move on to the announcement we made today," Barnett said.

Barnett added that Clinton hoped eventually to write several books and that a novel was a possibility.

Smoking, weight, disease all affect childbearing, group says

WASHINGTON (AP) — Adults who want to have children should pay closer attention to their habits, weight and advancing age, says a new ad campaign.

Using the Internet and public service announcements displayed on city buses, the American Society for Reproductive Medicine asks men and women in their 20s and early 30s to curb smoking, drinking and using drugs. The ads also say that people could have trouble conceiving children if they've contracted sexually transmitted diseases such as gonorrhea.

"Actions people take long before they may be ready to have children can impact their ability to eventually conceive," said Mike Soules, president of the reproductive group. "And just like diseases such as lung cancer or HIV/AIDS, infertility can often be prevented."

In the United States, roughly 6.1 million women and 2.1 million married couples suffer infertility or other conditions that impair the ability to have children, according to figures from the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

The ASRM also attributes reproductive problems to advanced age and unhealthy body weight. The group said 12 percent of all infertility cases occurred in adults who were well above or well below healthy body weight.

The group will use provocative bus ads to reach young adults. One ad, depicting a baby bottle with a cigarette in it, reads, "If You Smoke This Might Be Your Only Use for a Baby's Bottle." Cigarette smoking and substance abuse lead to abnormally shaped sperm and decreased sperm mobility and production.

The bus ads will go up this September in New York City, Seattle and suburban Chicago. So far, transit companies in those areas are the only ones to approve the ads, said spokesman Sean Tipton, although other areas are planned.

IRA offers disarmament move to save peace accord

By Shawn Pogatchnik
Associated Press

BELFAST, Northern Ireland — Going further than ever toward disarmament, the Irish Republican Army has agreed on a secret method for getting rid of its weapons — but offered no commitment on when it would start, an independent commission announced Monday.

The governments of Britain and Ireland called it a breakthrough and urged leaders of Northern Ireland's major Protestant party, the Ulster Unionists, to drop their threat to scuttle the province's Catholic-Protestant administration this weekend.

The disarmament commission, led by Canadian Gen. John de Chastelain, said it agreed not to reveal the IRA's method of disarming.

But, it emphasized, "based on our discussions with the IRA representative, we believe that this proposal initiates a process that will put arms completely and verifiably beyond use."

Deep divisions and suspicions within Protestant ranks, however, left the survival of Northern Ireland's power-sharing government in doubt.

Ulster Unionist Party leader David Trimble noted that his central demand — an actual start to "decommissioning" IRA weapons — appeared no clearer.

"We're glad to see that the IRA has taken a significant step toward decommissioning, but it hasn't actually begun decommissioning, and of course we want to see that happen," said Trimble, who triggered the political crisis by resigning last month as the senior Protestant in the Northern Ireland administration.

AP Photo
A man walks past an Irish Republican Army mural in East Belfast, Northern Ireland, Monday.

After meeting with leaders of his party, Trimble struck a harder line, saying the party opposed Britain's plans to grant an amnesty to IRA members wanted for crimes in Northern Ireland. That was part of a wider package Britain presented last week.

Trimble said he wouldn't seek re-election as the administration's "first minister" unless the disarmament commission confirmed that the IRA had begun scrapping weapons in the coming week. If no Ulster Unionist fills the top post, the law requires Britain to suspend or dissolve the local administration by Monday.

The Democratic Unionists, hard-line Protestants who joined the power-sharing government despite opposing the peace pact, said after meeting the Canadian general that he had been conned.

"We asked him: Where would the IRA decommission, how would it decommission, and most importantly when? He said he didn't know the answer to where or when. As to how, he said if it eventually did happen, it would all be kept completely secret from the public," said Ian Paisley, the Democratic Unionist leader.

Paisley said de Chastelain had told him he met the IRA negotiator Sunday at a location kept secret from the general himself. "I can't depend on a man who doesn't know where he is or who he's even talking to," Paisley said.

De Chastelain's office declined requests to comment beyond the commission's three-sentence statement.

Sinn Fein leader Gerry Adams dismissed Protestant complaints.

"Anyone who knows anything about arms, about insurrection, about conflict has to know that this is a historical breakthrough," said Adams, a reputed former IRA commander.

He urged the Ulster Unionists to stabilize Northern Ireland's government and allow de Chastelain's work to "start to bear fruit."

Britain agreed. The Northern Ireland secretary of state, John Reid, said the IRA move "provides the basis and the potential for rapidly resolving the arms issue."

Irish Prime Minister Bertie Ahern heaped praise on the development.

"A lot of people, particularly unionists critical of David Trimble, never thought we'd get this far, and they have been proved 100 percent wrong," Ahern said. "People should see the historic significance of what has happened, rather than seeing all the difficulties still in it."

In Washington, State Department spokesman Richard Boucher welcomed the statement.

"We do see this as a significant step toward the Good Friday agreement's agreed goal of putting paramilitary weapons completely and verifiably beyond use," he said.

Probe of ex-auditor's allegation continues

Frank Conard, a Sweetwater lawyer and former Nolan County district attorney, has been appointed the special prosecutor in a Midland County case that alleges wrongdoing in the application of Midland County District Attorney's discretionary drug-forfeiture funds.

Conard, who was chief prosecutor for the 32nd Texas Judicial District Court in Sweetwater for eight years from 1989 through 1996, was appointed to handle the case by 238th Texas Judicial District Court Judge John Hyde, who is administrative judge of the Midland Judicial District.

"At the appropriate time, we will decide what to do," Conard, 53, said of the case, which, upon Conard's discretion, may be presented to a Midland County grand jury.

The case was rooted in a report by former Midland County Auditor Carole Wayland. She had alleged that an investigator had misappropriated funds from District Attorney Al Schorre's drug-forfeiture account.

Schorre had requested the Texas Rangers investigate the allegations.

"We recused ourselves early," Schorre said, due to the conflict of investigating one's own office. And that made way for the special prosecutor.

"I called the Rangers and asked them to handle the investigation," Schorre said.

Midland-based Texas Ranger Jess Malone is conducting the investigations into the allegations.

While Malone noted that he can "not really comment" on specifics concerning "an active criminal investigation," he said there is "a bunch of issues that she (Ms. Wayland) addressed."

Those include administrative, operational and criminal issues, he said.

'We recused ourselves early ... I called the Rangers and asked them to handle the investigation.'
— District Attorney Al Schorre

"We've about got to the point where we have completed the investigation," Malone said on Monday. "We are going to have Mr. Conard present (the results) to a grand jury in the near future in Midland County."

In noting that he cannot reveal names of the "suspect or suspects" in the case, Malone did say the case "does involve the discretionary bank account" under Schorre's control.

Earlier this year, Ms. Wayland, who was the Midland County auditor from April 1995 through late June 2001, said the allegations involved "a lot of duplicate receipts ..., duplications of reimbursements, that had been submitted within that (forfeiture) fund," a discretionary account controlled by Schorre, who has been Midland County's district attorney since 1985.

"You take any allegation like this seriously," Schorre had said of Ms. Wayland's report, which was submitted to him and to the Texas Rangers, the investigative arm of the Texas Department of Public Safety (DPS).

Last May, Ms. Wayland said she had turned over to the Texas Rangers "the audit report and all supporting records and documents."

While she was still auditor, Ms. Wayland noted that "the issue with any of those discretionary funds" is that "even if the official (Schorre in this case) has control," the funds have to be spent for "public purpose" even though they are not tax-generated dollars.

"And they still are public funds," Ms. Wayland said. "But they are not subject to the Commissioners' Court-type control. That's really the only difference. Instead of having a governing body that has the oversight of those funds, it's the officials themselves."

Hyde, who is one of four state judges who make up the Midland Judicial District that biennially appoints the county auditor, said Ms. Wayland's auditor's report "questions the propriety of expenditures from the District Attorney's forfeiture account during 1998 and 1999.

"It was Al (Schorre) who contacted the Rangers, I think quite appropriately," Hyde said of the investigation's launch, "since it involves his office."

Community Children's Ministry calls on community for help

By Jonathon Carrasco
MRT Correspondent

The baby wakes up in the morning crying. The parents rush into her room to discover the little girl has an earache and a high temperature. She needs a doctor and medicine to get well. But her parents, like many low income families, feel helpless because they simply cannot afford a visit to the doctor.

It is a scenario all too familiar in households around the country. There are children who, for one reason or another, don't have access to affordable insurance or Medicaid, so visits to the doctor and costly prescriptions are a virtual impossibility.

At the Community Children's Ministry, parents who aren't otherwise able to afford visits to a pediatrician can come to the clinic. There they will see a doctor, get necessary prescriptions filled and ensure their children get the medical attention they deserve.

The clinic charges only $5 per child, which covers the visit and the medication and any necessary lab work.

"We take care of sick children of families that are low income," said Anne Swendig, co-executive director of the Children's Ministry. "Our services are available to the kids who fall through the cracks, to those who need our help the most."

But now the clinic is needing help from the community it serves. In order to keep providing their services they are in desperate need of doctors to regularly see patients.

"I don't want to see our doors close," Ms. Swendig said. "We do have volunteers that come in to see patients, but what families need is familiarity and continuity with their doctors.

"We're looking to hire one or two doctors that are willing to work mornings to treat our children."

Since the job is only for the mornings, it would be the perfect opportunity for a doctor looking to start a practice and earn money to pay for his or her overhead or for doctors who are also parents who don't want to put in long hours, explained Ms. Swendig.

"In the past, many of our doctors have been women who wanted to work but still wanted time to spend with their own kids," she said.

Since the patients pay only $5 for their visit, the other costs are met through private donations

MC moves on tax increase, awaits input from public

By Hillary S. Condon
Staff Writer

The Midland College Board of Trustees started the process of raising taxes Monday by tentatively accepting a tax rate of 0.1832, and opening it up for community input at a public hearing next week.

The rate will not be final until the board approves it, as well as the entire budget for the next school year, at its Aug. 21 meeting. The trustees must first hear from Midland residents at their scheduled public hearings, the first of which will be held Aug. 14.

If the board approves the new tax rate, the average taxpayer, with the rise in values and the increase in the tax rate, will see an increase of about $17 a year, college officials said.

The Midland Community College District has not raised taxes in six years, and leaders say they are proud of the school's unprecedented growth in that time without an increase in taxes. MC has added about 250,000 square feet, worth more than $25 million, in that time, entirely

Little-used pool at MHS losing 5,000 gallons each day

By Hillary S. Condon
Staff Writer

The pool at Midland High School is losing 5,000 gallons of water a day and the district doesn't know how or why it's happening.

Midland Independent School District officials claim the seldom-used pool costs the district about $35,000 per year for maintenance and upkeep. The pool was not used at all this summer, and during the school year it is only used by the junior varsity swim team and physical education classes. The pool is not regulation size and most swim team members use the City of Midland Aquatics Center's facilities for free, a practice that may soon end, now that COM is asking MISD to pay $15,000 for next year's use of the facility.

With the pool leaking about 5,000 gallons every day, at a cost of about $12 a day for the lost water, MISD Executive Director of Construction and Auxiliary services Wilson Heidelberg said, the pool, which was built in 1959, no longer meets competition standards.

Gore coming back ... 'Saturday Night Live' will be funny again

More rambling thoughts ...

— The late Percy Williams Bridgeman, an American scientist, once said, "There is no adequate defense, except stupidity, against the impact of a new idea."

— Actually, when you stop and think about it, "stupidity" is a wonderful defense against just about everything.

Ott

— It is sort of like that old Russian proverb: "Wisdom is born, stupidity is learned."

— In other words, learn to be stupid, and you've got the perfect built-in excuse for everything.

— It has been said many times before, but it remains true today: As long as there are tests, there will be prayer in public schools.

— The older a man gets, the more he can relate to this classic line from old-time comedian Milton Berle: "I feel like a 20-year-old. But there's never one around."

— They say Al Gore is about to re-emerge in public. And, as a result, "Saturday Night Live" is about to get a whole lot funnier.

— Speaking of Gore, it was one year ago today that he selected Connecticut Sen. Joseph Lieberman as his running mate.

— And wasn't it nice that the fact Lieberman was a Jew never really became a major part of the campaign?

— Maybe the country is changing for the better, after all.

— For what it's worth: I don't like Dennis Miller on "Monday Night Football."

— He tries too hard to be clever.

— Bring back Don Meredith.

— Overheard: "We are born naked, wet and hungry. Then things get worse."

— Also overheard: "The things that come to those who wait may be the things left by those who got there first."

— Why is the third hand on the watch called the second hand?

— Sometimes there is no greater pleasure than feeling sorry for yourself.

— But it gets kind of old after a day and a half.

— George Gissing once astutely noted, "That is one of the curses of poverty; it leaves no right to be generous."

— But then again, it is possible to be generous without possessing material goods. It is called giving freely of yourself ... and your feelings.

— I like books that take place in the Deep South.

— Happy birthday wishes to Garrison Keillor, a truly gifted storyteller who can be heard on public radio. He turns 57 today.

— Some people, it seems, are so lucky they can indeed have their cake and eat it too.

— And they are usually people you don't particularly like ... or respect.

— It is this time of the year, as high school football players begin two-a-day workouts in 100-degree temperatures, that I recall why I quit the sport as a freshman at dear ol' Plainview High.

— Basketball just seemed so much more civilized.

— Wisest words ever uttered: "Life is not always fair."

— Shoppers in grocery stores always seem to be in a good mood, probably because they know they are about to become fat and jolly.

— Is there a more irritating commercial on television than that female psychic with the thick accent who is always telling her callers something shocking about their personal lives?

— Do you get the feeling President Bush would rather not have to make a decision regarding stem cell research?

— Who can blame him?

— It is too bad that we rarely follow through with the nice gestures we're always telling ourselves we're going to do for others.

— When I die, I want "Precious Memories" sung at my funeral.

— Childhood Memory No. 1: Being ordered by your parents to not slam the screen door.

— Childhood Memory No. 2: Being ordered by your parents to not use your new sling shot to shoot birds.

— Childhood Memory No. 3: Doing both anyway.

— And today's final quote comes from David Lloyd George, who once said, "It is always too late, or too little, or both. And that is the road to disaster."

Upgrade

The Health and Human Services Commission is implementing a new PeopleSoft statewide administrative system, Sept. 1. This implementation coincides with normal schedule changes associated with the end of the state fiscal year. These changes will require HHSC to limit payment processing for about two weeks during the latter part of August.

As part of the effort to convert the most accurate and current data into the new system, they are asking if there are any outstanding amounts owed to anyone for past goods and/or services for the 2000/01 state fiscal years, to send them an invoice so that they can process payments against current purchase orders. This will allow them to convert accurate open purchase order information into the new system and eliminate additional cleanup work after the system conversion.

For more information call Scotty Burks at (512) 424-6559 or Lori Trank at (512) 424-6527.

HELP: Clinic assists those kids who would otherwise go without treatment and contributions from local churches. Projected expenses for the 2001 year will be more than $200,000, all money that will be privately donated.

"We do pay our doctors, but we still have a few who donate their time and services. We rely on volunteer nurses, interpreters and receptionists to keep things going," Ms. Swendig said. "Our clinic provides a service to the community and our patients are truly appreciative of the help, but it is expensive to maintain and we do need doctors to keep us open."

The clinic is open four mornings every week, five during winter months, and sees an average of 14 patients a day and more than 3,000 children annually. If the Community Children's Ministry is unable to find doctors, it is likely the thousands of patients they treat would not be able to get medical attention elsewhere.

One group of kids who depend on the Children's Ministry are asthmatics. A large number of patients treated at the clinic are asthmatics who otherwise wouldn't get treatment, said Ms. Swendig.

The asthma medication is expensive, especially to those who are low income. In the past, without the help of the clinic, the condition would go untreated until the situation demanded a trip to the emergency room.

The Community Children's Ministry will continue to help children and search for doctors to keep the place open. Unless someone steps up soon, the clinic may be forced to reduce the help it is able to provide, Ms. Swendig said.

TAX: Community will give input at hearing next week through existing funds and grants.

"The tradition of this college, from the get-go, has been to be in the top tier," said MC President David Daniel. "And we've been able to keep the tax rate relatively low. We believe this is a good step for our employees, and to keep up our service to the community."

MC administrators also say recent additions to the college, like the Advanced Technology Center, provide a valuable service to the community, and may make Midland residents more receptive to an increase in the tax rate.

"I'm sure we're going to have some people who want to know we're doing certain things, but it's important to show them what we've done," said Gay Hickman, MC's vice president of Administrative Services. "The ATC is a big part of why Cingular came here and helped out our job market."

ATC Director Rebecca Bell agreed.

"Cingular has said on more than one occasion that the reason why they're here is because of the ATC," she said.

The MC board also voted a construction change to the ATC Monday, which would allow for the facility to take on courses to introduce students to medical careers. The additions include a medical simulation lab and other equipment to train students from Midland College and the Midland Independent School District in medical fields.

MISD Director of Secondary Education Ricardo Torres said the new program will be a benefit to the community and the school district.

"We have had a difficult time in attracting and retaining certified personnel to teach that type of course work in either of our high schools, so at one point, we had classes combined," he said. "Given that often times what we pay folks is not attractive enough to have them stay for a long period of time, this really maximizes not only a staff opportunity, but a facilities opportunity with Midland College at the ATC. They will be furnishing the teachers and the location, with all of the state-of-the-art technology that goes with that.

"It all works to the advantage of MISD," he continued. "Any time we have an opportunity to meet a need of the community, and we are told there is a large need in the community for health care workers, it not only a very good opportunity for our kids as far as employment, it's good for the community as well."

Ms. Bell said the program will help students with other goals keep a good job while in school.

"These classes will give an overview and allow students to learn about other medical careers other than nurses and doctors," she said. "Then, they can also work in other jobs, like a nurse's aide, and continue towards another degree in the field."

The preliminary plans for the ATC included these plans, but planners briefly considered eliminating the health careers segment. Then, they realized the college could keep the program and still stay within the original budget of $9.5 million.

"For the medical simulation lab, the original estimate was in the $240,000 range," Hickman said. "But the bid came in at $186,888."

Daniel said aside from the cost, the public need for health care workers in the area is too great to eliminate the program.

"If you read the want ads, you'll see the critical need in the community," he said.

The board also voted unanimously to lease part of the Oryx building for the upcoming school year, a nine-month lease for $12,780. Daniel said the lease with Oryx was a better deal than the portable classrooms the college was considering.

"This space is good, it's near, and the parking's good," he said. "At this point, we just need more space ... The (portables) we have are in good shape, and they're maintained well, we just need more."

Hickman said the school expected bids for portables to start at $10,000 or $12,000, but actually started at $18,000 and went up. That's when they looked into local buildings with extra space.

MHS: Pool is used by junior varsity swim team

(From 1B)

"At the time it was built, it may have been satisfactory, but it's not a regulation pool for a high school," Heidelberg said. "This is what's going to happen more and more at Midland High and Lee High — we're going to have more and more things that just flat wear out. Just flat need replacing."

Midland High Principal David Adams said the pool is used for swimming classes, too. He said the varsity swim teams meet and practice at COM Aquatics, but due to transportation problems, the junior varsity team practices at Midland High. If the pool were closed, he said, those sophomore students would have to be transported to and from another facility.

"As long as we have a good relationship with COM and the kids can use that, then there would be no problem," Adams said. "The rest are just time and travel logistics."

Heidelberg said MISD maintenance has searched for where the pool is leaking, but cannot find where the water is seeping out.

"What we're finding is it's not just something you go in and replace like a piece of pipe, it's the pool itself," he said. "Basically, to fix that, you just need to redo it. The pool has been well-maintained — it's not maintenance, it's old age."

Every year, the pool costs taxpayers about $35,000 per year, including chemicals and supplies, a city permit that must be updated annually, paint and other equipment like filters, heaters, regular maintenance, electricity, water to fill the pool, pumps and other pool related expenses.

MISD maintenance estimates both pools at Midland High and Lee High cost the district a total of $70,000 every year to maintain.

Because they cannot find the leaks, MISD maintenance also cannot tell where the water goes. City of Midland's Director of Utilities Kenneth Jones said the water goes underground and will continue to do so.

"That's a considerable amount of water that goes down underground," he said. "It'll go down, ... but its tendency is to go down until the ground won't accept any more, and then the water will rise up to whatever water level is maintained in the pool."

Heidelberg said the problem could potentially be solved with a "quick fix" of pouring a fiberglass shell into the pool. But then, the pool would still not be regulation size. In the 12 summer weeks when the pool has not been used, the leaks have cost the district — and Midland taxpayers — about $670.

So now, administrators say it may be time to retire the pool.

"We're going to discuss whether to fix it or to close it down, maybe at the next board meeting," said Heidelberg. "If we repair it ... you're still repairing something that's not regulation size."

If MISD decides to move all of its swimming instruction to COM, it will come at a price. COM officials said allowing MISD to use the facility for free is costing both COM and the groups who pay for use of the pool.

"MISD uses other facilities other than COM like the (Chaparral) Center and they pay for it," said COM Aquatics Executive Director Brad Swendig. "We've allowed them to use the facilities for years and have never been paid a cent. Everybody uses the facility here has to pay their way, everybody except MISD, so another program has to support MISD."

Although Swendig emphasized he wasn't complaining about MISD's past relationship with COM, he felt it was only fair that the district start paying to use the pool like other organizations do. Swendig said MISD has never paid for use of the facility for swim meets or swim practice. MISD has been using the center for practice for about seven years and for swim meets for more than 20 years. Swendig also said often MISD's use of the pool sometimes conflicts with times when paying individuals and groups are trying to use the facility, costing COM more lost revenue.

"Our costs are real on the expense side and they are real on the income side," Swendig said. "The only way can get money is through operations."

Swendig said COM allowed MISD to use the pool for free for so long because the center was built and paid for by the community and Swendig said COM felt letting the district use the pool was a good way to give back to Midland, but after 20 years, he said it was time "MISD pays for what they're getting."

Heidelberg also said the problem with the pool is not unique — many other parts of both high schools are undersized and in need of serious renovations.

"It's kind of like all of the classrooms at Midland High are too small, they don't meet the standard size of classrooms for (Texas Education Agency) regulations nowadays," he said. "That building was just built in a different era, and all of the standards have changed. So when you just repair what's there, you're not building to current standards — and it's not cost-effective to continue band-aiding that school. We need to renovate it and bring it up to code, or we need to quit using parts of it."

It also is not possible to drain the pool temporarily, or partially. The physics of pool maintenance show that the Midland High pool's walls are actually held up, in part, by the pressure of the approximate 100,000 gallons of water. Most pools can only be empty for a few months at the most before severe cracking and other damage take place — in a pool as old as Midland High's, it may take only days.

"It's impossible to tell how long it would take," said District Architect James Riggen. "It could take days, it could take months. But if you leave any pool empty for long enough, it will eventually crack and collapse without the pressure from the water."

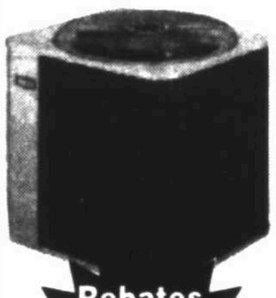

Riggen also said if the pool were below a certain water level for a long time, serious problems with algae and growing matter would take place. If the problem set in long enough, it would be extremely expensive for the district.

Ventura tells Christopher Darden facts of life — about marriage

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — O.J. Simpson prosecutor Christopher Darden has gotten some free marriage and family advice from Minnesota Gov. Jesse Ventura.

The two happened to run into each other Friday at a fishing derby here and Ventura asked Darden to join him on the governor's live, weekly radio show.

The former prosecutor said he has settled into a more normal life — practicing law in private practice, writing novels and serving as one of the attorneys on the television show "Power of Attorney."

Darden also is married with two children, ages 3 and 4.

"They're at the great age because they're just past carpet commando now," Ventura said. "Enjoy them because time is going to go so fast. It's like in the blink of an eye, before you know it, your kids are graduating from high school."

After reminiscing about his own children, Ventura offered Darden a few marriage pointers. Darden celebrates his fourth anniversary this month.

"Oh, you're a youngster," said Ventura, who has been married 26 years.

Darden laughed. "She's still breaking me in."

"Oh yeah," Ventura quipped. "I'll give you the little key. You know what it is? ... Communication. That is the key to it. You have to communicate. If you lose your communication, you're going to be in trouble."

"Even the little things — you can't let them build up inside," Ventura offered.

NEW YORK — Kid Rock is not dumb. That's according to Sheryl Crow, who recently dated him.

"He has an overview of what entertainment is that just blows my mind, a great scope of what people want and what's considered kind of challenging to the audience," Crow said in the September issue of Esquire magazine. "The other thing is, he's wildly talented. As he gets out and plays with other people, people are shocked at how talented he is."

Kid Rock, whose real name is Robert Ritchie, is known for his sometimes racy lyrics. But the 30-year-old rocker also performed a duet with Aretha Franklin at a VH1 tribute in April and had a small role in the David Spade movie "Joe Dirt."

As for her own career, the 39-year-old Grammy winner said she's had a hard time with her latest album — she's been working on it for nearly a year — and she'd like to start a family.

"I want a husband who wants to be a part of a team. And it's hard to find people that want to be with someone who's in the public eye and who is gone a lot ...," she said.

"I mean, honest to God, I can't even know what it's like to have kids. ... But I'm sort of up for that. I'm a little bit burned out on everything being about me in my life."

NEW YORK — Penelope Cruz has reluctantly gotten used to the rumors that she's dated her co-stars Matt Damon, Nicolas Cage and Tom Cruise.

"This happens to every actor and actress who's in the public eye and sometimes it goes too far," Cruz said in the September issue of Vanity Fair magazine. "Just because I'm in this profession doesn't mean I have to deal with that and it's OK. Sometimes it is not OK.

"I don't get angry anymore because most of those things that they write are lies. I have been dealing with this since I was 16," the 27-year-old actress said. "Finding things in magazines saying that I was going to marry a man, and I didn't even know him."

While working with Cruise on "Vanilla Sky" — an American version of the Spanish film "Open Your Eyes," in which she appeared in 1999 — Cruz said she wasn't dating her co-star. The two started going out after shooting ended.

"They did the rarest thing: They fell in love with someone on-screen," Cameron Crowe, director of "Vanilla Sky," said of Cruise and Cruz. "You watch them actually go through that hideous, great, awful, intoxicating moment. Without it, we wouldn't have a movie."

LOS ANGELES — Antonio Banderas said he and Angelina Jolie had no problem getting physical with each other in their new movie, "Original Sin."

"It's just not being afraid of our bodies, I guess," he said. "The love scene — because there's only one love scene in the movie — was shot in a couple of hours, no more than that. I figure we did no more than three takes."

Banderas, who turns 41 on Friday, said he wanted the moment to look raw and real.

"We didn't want to do that kind of love scene in which it doesn't show anything but it looks very stylish. You see an arm, and you know the arm is an arm, or is it something else?" he said.

"Original Sin," a romantic thriller starring Banderas as a rich coffee merchant and Jolie as his mail-order bride, opened Friday. It made $6.4 million in its opening weekend.

JACQUELINE BIGAR'S STARS

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have: 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Tuesday, Aug. 7, 2001:

Others count on your willingness to help them. You express yourself clearly, and you are full of good ideas. Creativity, romance and children score unusually high on your list of priorities. If you're working in the arts or any field involving imagination, your work benefits. If you are single, your dance card will be full. Don't be callous, but break free of any bond that might not be working. There's something better around the corner. If you're attached, the two of you could have a lot of fun together. Allow the frivolous to become more important. PISCES helps you make money.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) ★★★ Stop. Did you wake up on the wrong side of the bed? If so, consider why you are feeling the way you are. Questioning what it is you want and what is ailing you helps you center yourself. Initiate a conversation with others who can respond. Tonight: Again, do something just for yourself.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) ★★★★★ Dealing with another's woes might be far from your cup of tea. Discussions clear the air of some suppressed feelings and open up the flow in relationship. Make a must meeting. You zero in on what you want from working with others. Tonight: Where your friends are.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) ★★★★ Though a partner is combative, you open up discussions. You quickly understand what is bothering this person. You can help. Focus on what you need to do so you can get your work done. By concentrating, you'll let others see what happens when you separate work from pleasure. Tonight: In the limelight.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) ★★★★ Sometimes you push yourself across the line. You tend to be accident-prone when you are tired. Do as much mental work as possible as your body says, "Enough!" Weigh the pros and cons of a moneymaking venture. Tonight: Pace yourself.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) ★★★★ Work out frustration through exercise. As a result, you'll center and will willingly discuss what has been a thorn in your side. Reach out for someone at a distance who cares a lot about you. Examine your long-term needs with someone who understands you. Tonight: Opt for togetherness.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) ★★★★ Others continue to call the shots, whether you like it or not. Deal with another. Recognize that you might have hit your frustration peak and could lose it. Your ability to get to the bottom of a problem points you in a new direction. Don't say what you should, but say what you feel. Tonight: Out with others.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) ★★★★ Feelings distract you. Speak your mind rather than allowing it to overload. Emphasize getting the job done. Do whatever you need to do to clear obstacles. Tonight: Off to the gym.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) ★★★★★ Your imagination leads you in new directions. Be forthright in your decisions with others, especially those involving a financial commitment. What seems to be a bit difficult to say becomes easy once a discussion begins. Don't let details slip. Tonight: A must appearance could develop into something else.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) ★★★ You fly out of the starting gate, pushing someone else out of the way. Whether symbolically or physically, this person feels displaced by you. Discussions will help to clear the air. Give up games and be real, and you'll build better foundations. Do something special for a family member. Tonight: Find a cool breeze and relax.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) ★★★★★ Your ability to communicate takes you to another level. Recognize that someone might be saying things just to please you. Honestly speak your mind, and the gesture will be reciprocated. Think through a decision. Tonight: Hang out at a favorite spot.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) ★★★★ Deal with someone one on one. Your more possessive side emerges with regard to a loved one. Stop. Consider what will make you feel more secure. Take a personal inventory and see how much you offer. Clear out shopping at lunchtime. Tonight: Continue to indulge yourself.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) ★★★★★ Despite another's overly assertive manner, you make him smile. Good news heads your way if you stay open to this person. Remember, not everyone has your diplomatic style. A co-worker needs to talk. Be a good listener, but don't support negative behavior. Tonight: Smile and you'll get what you want.

Opening lead: King of ♣

Follow the bidding and play of this deal. Who, if anyone made an error?

North took an aggressive position in the auction, mainly by cue-bidding three clubs, suggesting four-card heart support. When South made a move toward slam, implying five hearts in the process, North decided to gamble on the quality of the trump suit, and leaped to slam.

West led the king of clubs, on which East dropped the five. West shifted to a diamond, won in dummy with the queen. Declarer cashed the ace of hearts, noting the fall of the jack. Since West rated to be distributional to compete with so little in the way of high cards, South elected to play for a 4-1 split. The seven of hearts was led and run when East followed with the five, and after West showed out, it was a simple matter to draw trumps, set up diamonds with the help of a ruff and claim the rest of the tricks.

It might seem that, other than North's unilateral decisions, nothing untoward occurred. Nevertheless, the slam should have been defeated and it is East who must shoulder the blame for the defense's failure to accomplish that.

To the first trick, East should follow with the seven of clubs. With the Q 9 6 5 missing, West should work out that East was playing an intermediate club, requesting a club continuation. (The nine of clubs could be misread as a plea for a spade shift.) Declarer must ruff the club continuation on the table, and now all East has to do is cover the low trump lead from dummy to assure a heart trick for the defense and the demise of the contract.

WICHITA FALLS — Dallas Cowboys coach Dave Campo was actually talking about the fun of replacing Troy Aikman at quarterback.

After the initial performances by Tony Banks and rookie Quincy Carter in the Cowboys' preseason opener, Campo had reason to feel better about finding the new starter to take over for the retired future Hall of Famer who won three Super Bowls.

"This is going to be a fun situation," Campo said as the Cowboys resumed training camp Monday. "We felt we got positives from both guys."

Banks, the starter for now, was 5-for-9 passing for 36 yards in the Cowboys' 21-14 loss at Oakland on Saturday night. Carter, the Cowboys' top draft pick, completed nine of 15 passes for 167 yards and two touchdown passes.

"There is no question in my mind that Tony's our quarterback, and we're going to have a battle for the next spot," Campo said. "Tony handled the team well. I think with Quincy, heads are turning. That's why we drafted him."

Campo said he was also pleased with how Anthony Wright (4-for-9 for 45 yards), a starter for two games last year, performed with the third-team. And the coach still wants to get a look at Clint Stoerner, who played just once for Dallas last season before spending this spring in NFL Europe.

"The quarterback situation, in our mind, has not changed from that first preseason game," Campo said. "We'll go status quo right now."

That means all of the quarterbacks will continue to get work in practice. Campo said it would probably be another week before he determines which two quarterbacks will get the majority of work the last half of training camp.

The Cowboys lost tight end Chris Fontenot for at least six weeks. He broke his left wrist early in Saturday night's game and will have surgery Tuesday.

Receiver Wane McGarity will miss 2-to-3 weeks with a high right ankle sprain suffered on a 71-yard punt return that was nullified by penalty. Rookie defensive end Colston Weatherington is out for the same amount of time with the same injury on his left foot.

Campo said defensive end Ebenezner Ekuban (right hip contusion) and offensive guard Al Jackson (right ankle and knee sprain), both injured in the preseason opener, were day-to-day.

The Cowboys made some roster changes Monday, releasing defensive tackle Noel Scarlett and signing three free agents.

The signees were rookie defensive tackle Jamie Carter (6-foot-3, 327 pounds) from Alabama, rookie safety Travis Ortega (6-2, 218) from Rice and receiver Reggie Swinton (6-0, 175), who played arena football in Arkansas this summer but has been to NFL camps with Jacksonville and Seattle since coming out of Murray State in 1988.

Vikings not whole, but back at practice

MANKATO, Minn. — Instead of a scrimmage in front of cheering fans, the Minnesota Vikings held a subdued workout on Monday while their coach led a delegation to the funeral of a fallen teammate.

About 1,000 fans, half the usual number, turned out for the session, many leaving balloons, bouquets and signs in tribute to tackle Korey Stringer outside the training facility gates.

Stringer, who died of heatstroke after practice last week, was buried Monday in Warren, Ohio.

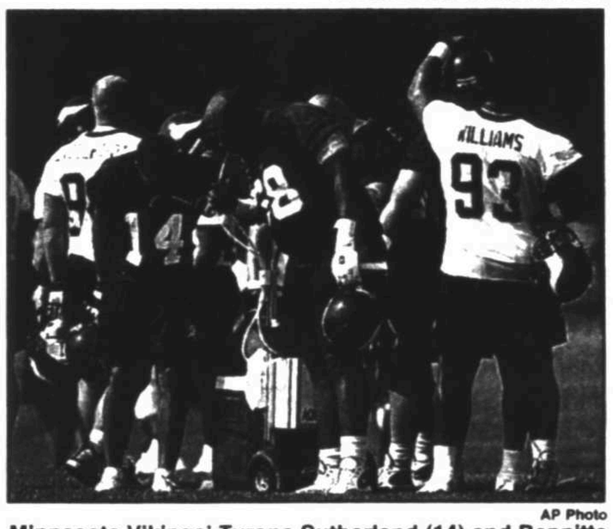

A scheduled scrimmage against the Kansas City Chiefs on Monday was canceled, as coach Dennis Green led 14 Vikings — including their biggest stars — to the funeral services.

There wasn't much for the fans to cheer. Todd Bouman made a nice throw to Nate Jacquet, but it just wasn't the same.

The players participated in a light practice, run by a committee of coaches, without pads on another sultry day. The temperature was 81 when practice began and soared into the 90s.

There were no outward signs of emotion or tribute on the field to Stringer, who was stricken Tuesday and died early

Tagliabue: NFL will not change training schedule due to heat

Associated Press

BEREA, Ohio — NFL commissioner Paul Tagliabue does not believe the league will change its training camp schedule to reduce the risk of heatstroke, which killed Minnesota Vikings lineman Korey Stringer last week.

Stringer was buried Monday in his hometown of Warren, about 40 miles east of Browns training camp, where Tagliabue spoke. Stringer collapsed during practice in Minnesota, where players worked out in pads on a hot and humid afternoon. His death has raised questions about the wisdom of having players engage in heavy outdoor practice in the heat of July and August.

"We don't at this point see any changes in the training camp schedule," Tagliabue said Monday. "We feel very positive that this issue of heat, heat-related illness, is something our physicians and trainers have been on top of and will continue to be on top of."

The commissioner noted that the players union has never raised heat as a concern.

"Of all the medical issues we talk about with the players

MIDLAND ROCKHOUNDS

Landry steals 2 for 30-30 season

■ Round Rock survives to defeat Midland, 6-5.

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

There are times in a long Texas League season when the side note is bigger than the win and loss. Such was the case at Christensen Stadium Monday night.

The Round Rock Express survived a ninth inning scare to beat the Midland RockHounds, 6-5, but it was Midland's Jacques Landry who stole the show.

Landry stole two bases to give him 30 for the season. Since he also has 33 home runs this season, Landry becomes a 30-30 man. And that's rare in the Texas League.

Landry's 30-30 season is only the fourth time that feat has been accomplished in 108 years of Texas League history. Paul Easterling of Beaumont (36 stolen bases and 30 home runs) was the first to do it in 1932. Jose Cardenal of El Paso (36-35) did it in 1963 and Darryl Strawberry of Jackson (34-45) did it in 1982. Now Landry joins that elite list.

"This is the biggest accomplishment of my baseball career, so I'm very proud of this," Landry said. "I knew this was a big thing, but I don't think I realized how big it was until they announced it over the loud speaker. To be only one of four to have a 30-30 season with the likes of Strawberry and Cardenal is special to me. It's nice to be mentioned in the same breath as those guys.

"I just felt chills all over when they announced that."

Landry stole second base in the sixth and eighth innings. He was also 3-for-3 at the plate with all singles.

Unfortunately for Landry, the RockHounds didn't win the game.

"This night would have been much nicer if we could have won the game with that rally in the ninth," Landry said. "In a way, it was kind of bittersweet."

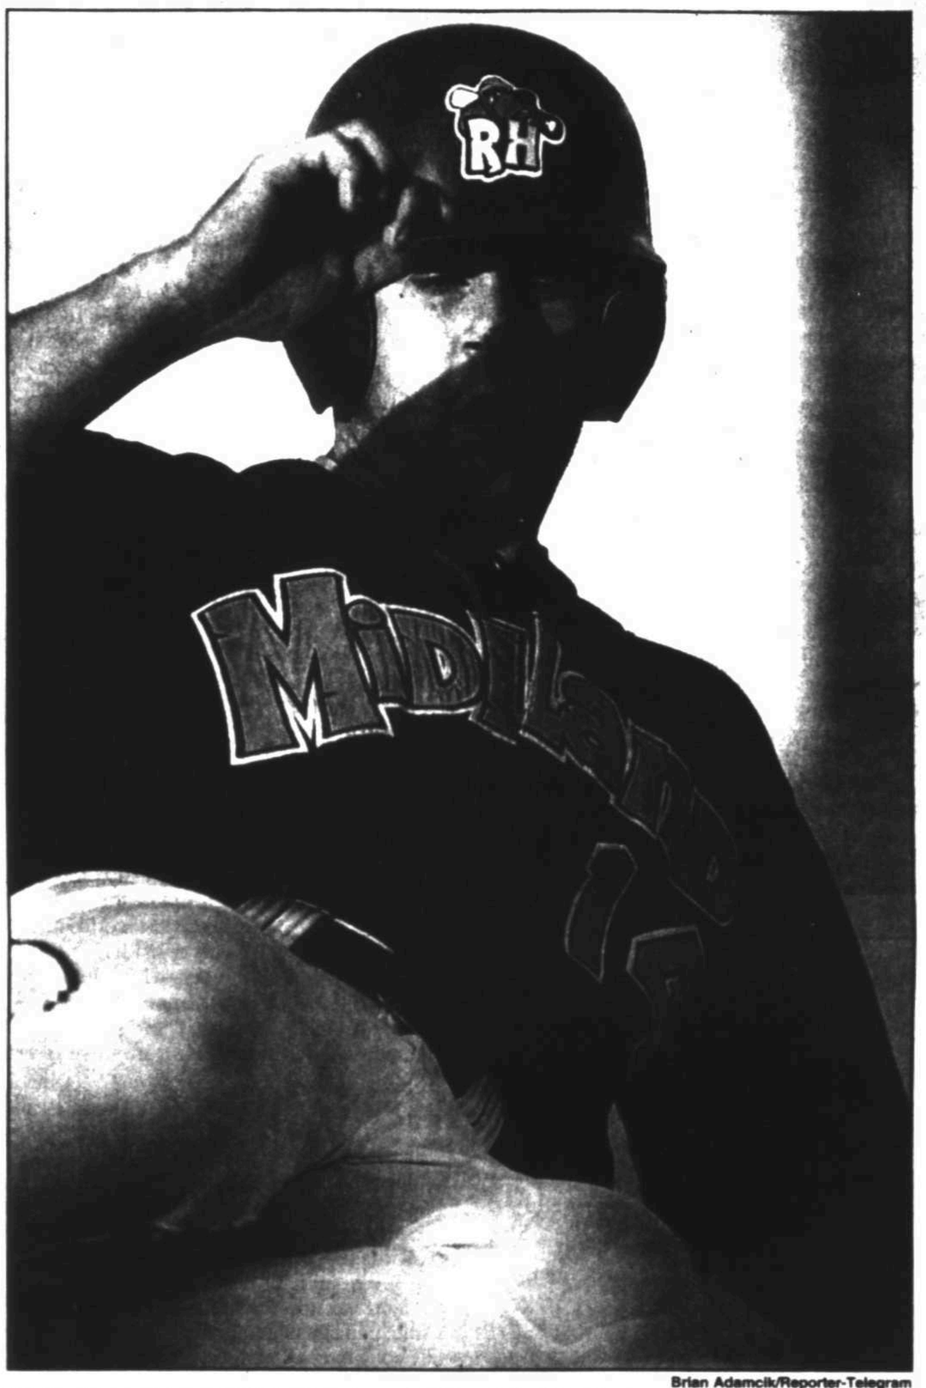

As far as stolen bases go, Landry is smashing his own personal best.

"The most stolen bases I've ever had was 19 in a season," Landry said. "I've never done anything like this before."

Why is there such a spike in the Landry steal numbers in 2001?

"(Midland manager) Tony (DeFrancesco) gave me a lot more opportunities than I've ever had early in the season. I was successful in stealing bases and then Tony gave me the green light to go when I felt I could steal a

Baseball Hall of Fame revamps voting

By Alan Robinson
AP Sports Writer

COOPERSTOWN, N.Y. — Hall of Famers will have a much larger say in who joins them in Cooperstown under changes announced Monday aimed at making it harder to enter baseball's shrine.

The revamped process eliminates the closed-door Veterans Committee meetings held since 1953 and gives new Hall of Fame hope to 1,700 players who had failed to receive at least 5 percent of the votes cast by writers.

Those with renewed eligibility include former stars such as Jeff Reardon, Al Oliver, Bill Madlock, Ted Simmons, Lou Whitaker and Larry Bowa.

The changes will likely make it more difficult for Negro League and pre-1900 players to be enshrined and also will make it tougher for players not elected by the baseball writers to be enshrined.

Players not elected by the writers will be considered only once every two years, beginning in 2003, and executives, umpires and managers only once every four years, beginning in 2004. Previously, Hall of Famers could be chosen from both groups every year.

The changes take affect immediately. But, because the new Veterans Committee doesn't vote for two years, there's a chance that no one will be inducted into the Hall of Fame next year if the writers fail to select any candidates.

The election process was changed not just because some Hall of Famers complained that less-worthy candidates were being inducted, but because players deserving of consideration were being dropped too soon, Hall of Famer Joe Morgan said.

"At the Hall of Fame dinner (Sunday) night, one of the great players said, 'It's becoming too easy to get into the Hall of Fame,'" said Morgan, vice chairman of the hall's board of directors. "This came from the players, and it should

Gordon getting older and maybe even better

By Mike Harris
AP Motorsports Writer

INDIANAPOLIS — Winning the Brickyard 400 for the third time is only the latest in a long list of accomplishments by Jeff Gordon. And at 30, NASCAR's golden boy is just reaching his prime.

Gordon, whose birthday was Saturday, didn't win his first Winston Cup event until he was 22 and in his second full season in the stock car series.

Since then, the victories have come in clusters, adding up to 56 after Sunday's triumph at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway. Gordon, the winningest active driver on the circuit, is now in sole possession of seventh place on the all-time victory list, one ahead of Lee Petty and 20 behind the late Dale Earnhardt, who is sixth.

Since most Winston Cup drivers begin their peak years in their early to mid-30s, the best of Gordon's career could be in front of him. Does that mean that the record 200 victories by Richard Petty — Lee's son and the longtime King of NASCAR— could be within his reach?

"You know, I try not to think too far ahead," Gordon said. "I think I've always been like that where I kind of live in the moment. ... I never dreamed, never imagined that I'd be in this type of position."

Gordon hopes that success at 30 "means that I'm coming into my prime.

"If the next 10 are as good as these last 10 have been, I'm not going to know what to think. But, in our business, just getting to 40 means something, too. That's why I think sometimes you've got to live in the moment."

Gordon, a fan favorite here because he is a former resident of nearby Pittsboro, felt a tidal wave of cheers from the more than 300,000 fans at Indy — a rarity for the driver who more often hears the boos.

He admitted he had tears in his eyes when he heard the overwhelmingly positive reaction following his 10 car-length win over Sterling Marlin.

Through most of his career, people have not given Gordon credit for his accomplishments, laying the results on his good fortune in driving for a big- money team like Hendrick Motorsports or having a mentor like former crew chief Ray Evernham.

After one so-so — for Gordon — season, during which he and new crew chief Robbie Loomis got used to each other while winning three races and finishing ninth in the points, the team is apparently well on its way to a fourth Winston Cup title.

Gordon will now head to the road course in Watkins Glen, N.Y. — where he has won three of the last four races — with a 160-point lead over runner-up Dale Jarrett after 21 of 36 events.

Rick Hendrick, for whom Gordon has driven his entire Winston Cup career, saw potential, of course, but never dreamed what he had when he first put Gordon into one of his Chevrolets for his debut in the season-ending race in Atlanta in 1992.

"He amazes me every time I see him in the car," Hendrick said after joining Gordon for his latest victory celebration, kissing the yard of bricks on the start-finish line at the Indy track.

"When he started, he had this raw unbelievable talent and brains beyond anything I've seen," the team owner added. "But Jeff matured so quick."

Hendrick has been particularly impressed at how Gordon has stepped up as a leader since Evernham left late in the 1999 season to start his own team and help Dodge re-enter the Winston Cup series after 16 years.

"Before, I think he didn't have to be a leader,"

Jones beaten in 100 final; Greene pulls out of meet with leg injury

By Bert Rosenthal
AP Track Writer

EDMONTON, Alberta — Marion Jones flies out of the blocks with such speed and force that a race is usually hers from start to finish. On Monday night, a Ukrainian sprinter never let her pull away.

Zhanna Pintusevich-Block edged Jones at the finish in the 100 meters at the World Championships, ending Jones' magnificent winning streak of 42 consecutive finals and thwarting her bid for a third consecutive world title.

The winner clocked a world-leading 10.82 seconds. Jones finished in 10.85, her first loss since her final race of the 1997 season when she was beaten in Japan by Merlene Ottey of Jamaica.

Since then, Jones has dominated the women's 100, winning the Olympic gold medal and establishing herself as the second-best sprinter in history, behind the late Florence Griffith Joyner, the world record-holder.

But on this day, she didn't appear to have the fierce determination and drive that carried her to those heights.

"I didn't expect to win every race the rest of my career," Jones said. "I ran a 10.85 today, so I don't think the world is falling apart. I've won so many races I think I got spoiled somewhat.

"Of course, I'm a bit disappointed," she said, "but I'm not a sore loser. I give all the credit to Zhanna. She was the better sprinter today."

Ekaterini Thanou of Greece got the bronze medal, running 10.91.

Meantime, Stacy Dragila, the world record-holder in the women's pole vault, outdueled Svetlana Feofanova of Russia to win her second straight world title. Both cleared 15 feet, 7 inches, but Dragila won on fewer misses.

In the 100, Jones and Pintusevich-Block ran virtually side by side the entire way, before the Ukrainian edged ahead just before the finish with a last-ditch push. When she realized she had won and stopped Jones' streak, Pintusevich-Block dropped to one knee and covered her face — as if she couldn't believe it.

Four years ago, Pintusevich-Block thought she had beaten Jones in the 100 final and was celebrating when Jones was declared the winner in a photo finish.

"I'm so, so happy," she said. "I still remember '97. Finally, my dream came true."

Pintusevich-Block, the 1997 world 200-meter champion, also beat Jones in the semifinals, finishing in 10.94, .01 ahead of Jones.

Both Dragila and Feofanova missed three times at a world record 15-9 3/4, in a four-hour competition marred by officials twice setting the standards at incorrect heights.

"We're both No. 1 today," Dragila said, after embracing Feofanova. "This is awesome."

In other finals, Avard Moncur of the Bahamas won the men's 400 in 44.64, becoming the first champion in that event other than Michael Johnson since 1991; world record-holder Jonathan Edwards of Britain took the triple jump with a world-leading 58-9 1/2; and world record-holder Osleidys Martinez of Cuba won the women's javelin at 228-1.

Maurice Greene and John Godina had hoped to win more than one gold medal apiece at the championships. Those hopes were dashed Monday.

A day after winning his third straight 100-meter title, Greene withdrew from the rest of the meet because of injuries to his left leg. Two days after winning his third shot put title, Godina failed to advance to the discus final.

Greene, who ran the third-fastest time in history Sunday, 9.82, limped across the finish line, then said Monday he had a strained left thigh.

After the 100, Greene ruled himself out of the 200, which he won at the last worlds in 1999, but still was considering running the 400 relay, which he anchored to a gold medal at the Sydney Olympics. However, his condition did not improve overnight.

and that the players have raised, heat and how we deal with heat has not been among them," Tagliabue said. "We think that's a confirmation that it's been addressed."

Nevertheless, Tagliabue believes the league needs to examine potential health issues facing increasingly massive players.

"Are there things that we need to know and understand better about the very largest football players?" Tagliabue asked, adding that 15 years ago there were fewer than 20 players over 300 pounds. Now the league has more then 300 players weighing 300 pounds or higher.

"You can intellectualize about the risk of the game, you can understand all the risks theoretically, but you never expect to lose a player, have a player die playing the game." Tagliabue said. "It's our obligation now to try to learn from that."

NASCAR: Gordon feels like he's coming into his prime at age 30

(From 1C)

Hendrick said. "Ray kind of led the team, and he was always telling Jeff, 'Do this. Come here.' Last year, Jeff stepped up and became involved in the chassis and telling them on the radio what he thought the car would need.

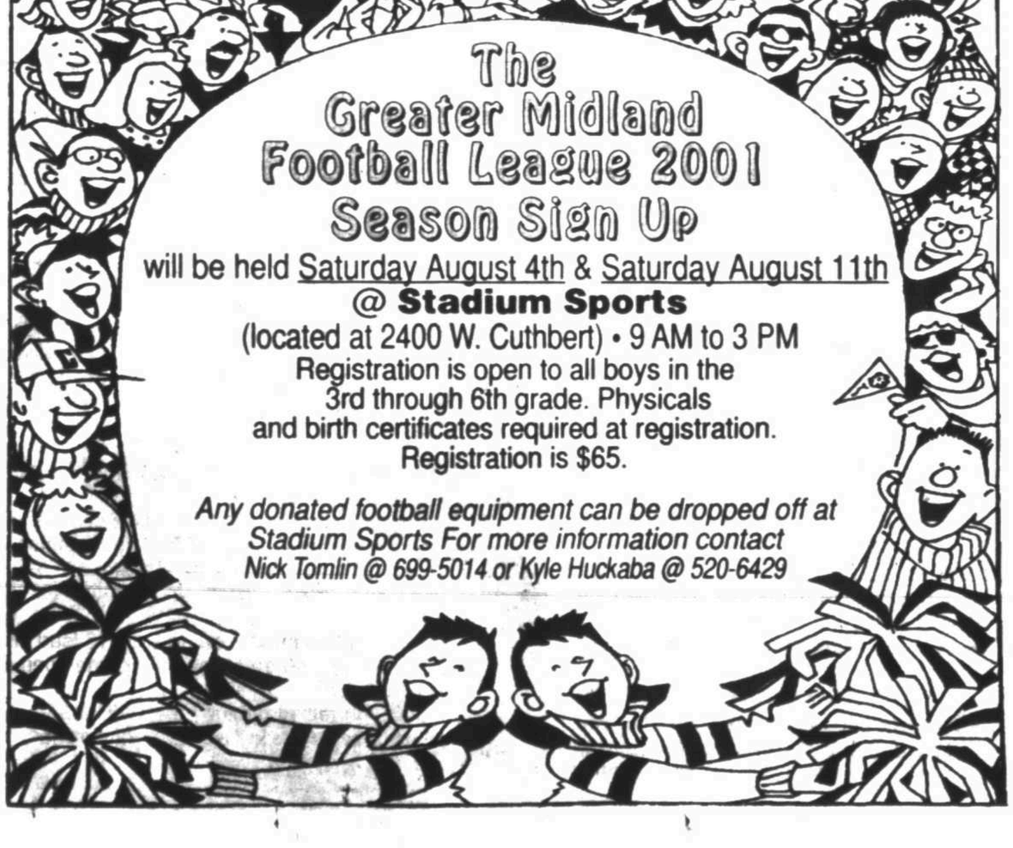

"I saw him mature to another level, I mean way beyond a 30-year-old. I've seen some 50-year-olds out here that are not as mature as he's been."

Hendrick doesn't expect Gordon to lose any of his ability any time soon, despite all his success and adulation at such a young age.

"He's got the whole package, and you'd think it would flatten out and level off, and it hasn't," Hendrick said. "It just keeps getting better."

As for Gordon, he just wants to make sure he doesn't overlook how good life is right now.

"I have no regrets," he said. "I've been very blessed and have enjoyed it very, very much. So, no matter what happens, I'll always say that I've had a wonderful life."

Word, Bryan tied for 4th

AMARILLO — Bryan Word and Larry Bryan, two area golf professionals, are among six players who are tied for fourth place after Monday's first round of the Northern Texas PGA Western Championship.

Word is an assistant pro at Green Tree Country Club in Midland, and Bryan is the head pro at Big Spring Country Club. Both players shot rounds of 67 at the par-71 Amarillo Country Club and trail a trio of leaders by only one shot. The leaders are Baylor University golf coach Tim Hobby, as well as Greg Smith and Bruce Smith, who are pros at different Dallas-area courses.

Midland Country Club's Jeremiah Luttrell is in the hunt, too. He shot a round of 70, which leaves him tied for 18th but only four shots back.

Big Spring's Bryan is among 21 golfers in the field of 93 who are trying to qualify for the Buy.com Permian Basin Open, which will be held Aug. 16-19 at The Club at Mission Dorado in Odessa. Word and Luttrell are not among the players who are eligible for PBO qualification, and neither are the three leaders. In fact, there are two PBO spots up for grabs, and only seven of the top 37 golfers after Monday are eligible.

Monday's first-round results for area players at the Northern Texas PGA Western Championship, which is being played at Amarillo Country Club (the lead is a three-way tie at 66):

4. (tie) Bryan Word, GTCC, Larry Bryan, Big Spring CC, and four others, 67; 13. (tie) Shaun McDonald, Gaines County Golf Course, and five others, 69; 18. (tie) Jeremiah Luttrell, Midland CC, and five others, 70; 45. (tie) Randal Stricklin, Masters Golf, and 11 others, 74; 57. (tie) Brett Boynton, Gaines County GC, and five others, 75; 63. Mitchell is sixth at TOC

WYLIE — Midland's Sterling Mitchell stood sixth after Monday's first round of the Westcott Tournament of Champions golf tournament.

Mitchell shot a round of 78 and is tied with Chance Williams of Tyler for sixth in the boys' 14-15 age division. Five golfers are tied for the top spot at 75.

The tournament, which is run by the Northern Texas PGA Junior Golf Foundation, will conclude today. To qualify for this tournament, young golfers had to either finish in the top three at one of three area championships, or they had to win four events on the Westcott Tour this year.

Two other Midland golfers are in the tournament. In the girls' 12-14 division, Narissa Mahaklan shot a 95 and stood tied for sixth, 14 shots off the pace. In the boys' 12-13 division, Brian R. Scherer shot 85 and stood 12th, 12 shots back.

Blake Parks of Odessa is leading the boys' 16-18 division after a round of 68. Another Odessan, Mark Jones, shot 77 and is tied for second in the boys' 12-13 division, four shots behind Ryan Myers of Flint.

Monday's first-round results for other area players who are competing in the Westcott Tournament of Champions, plus leaders in those divisions:

Girls' 15-18: 1. Laura Cross, Midlothian, 73; 7. (tie) Halli Richards, Andrews, 85. Boys' 10-11 (nine holes): 1. Sang Yi, Irving, 35; 4. (tie) True Graves, Odessa, 42; 8. Eric Kelton, Andrews, 46; 9. Austin Gray, Andrews, 49.

COM swimmers do well at USC

COLUMBIA, S.C. — Several City of Midland swimmers performed well at the long course Southern Zones Championship, which was hosted by the University of South Carolina from July 31-Aug. 4.

COM saw six of its swimmers — Sarah Maurer, McCall Keathley, Mallory Keathley, Keleigh Wentworth, Tommy Brown, Kyle Edens and Travis Floyd — bring home medals by swimming in the finals of their events.

The Southern Zone is divided into 20 regions, each of which sends one team to the meet. Most states in the southeastern part of the country have only one team each representing them, but Texas is divided into five regions. The West Texas region includes the cities of Abilene, San Angelo, Lubbock, Amarillo, Odessa and Midland (but not El Paso). And COM swimmers took up 28 of the 31 spots on the team.

Following are the events in which COM swimmers medalled (times and places were not available):

13-14 girls: Sarah Maurer, 200 butterfly; McCall Keathley, 100 breaststroke and 200 breast.

15-16 girls: Mallory Keathley, 200 fly; Keleigh Wentworth, 200 individual medley, 400 IM, 400 freestyle and 800 free.

15-16 boys: Tommy Brown, 200 free; Kyle Edens, 400 free, 800 free and 200 fly; Travis Floyd, 200 backstroke and 400 IM.

Football player collapses, dies after game

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Curtis Jones loved football so much that he kept playing into his mid-30s, running the ball and anchoring the defensive line in a second-tier indoor league.

While playing for the Utah Lyonzz of the United States Inside Football League, the 35-year-old Jones collapsed and died Sunday night after a game in Las Vegas.

"After the game, he just collapsed into the arms of some of the other players," team owner Michael Curran said. "The doctor who treated him thinks his left ventricle collapsed. They shocked him. He didn't recover."

Jones was taken by ambulance to a Las Vegas hospital as players prayed at the arena. Leslie Luke, hospital chief executive officer, said Jones' heart stopped by the time he arrived at the emergency room at 7:54 p.m.

He was pronounced dead 10 minutes later.

Lester Johnson, a linebacker with the opposing Northwest Fire, told the Las Vegas Review-Journal that doctors told players that Jones died of a heart attack or aneurism.

Clark County Coroner Ron Flud said Monday that toxicology and laboratory analyses could take two weeks. He said there was no indication of foul play, trauma or any criminal activity involved.

Johnson told the Las Vegas Sun that no medical personnel were at the arena and said the USIFL does not require players to undergo physical exams.

A league administrator, Chris Boudreaux, did not return repeated messages left at his Las Vegas office.

The coroner said Jones measured at 6-foot-6 and 276 pounds.

His death comes on the heels of three others in the college and pro football ranks in recent weeks. A funeral was held Monday for Korey Stringer, the Minnesota Vikings tackle who died last week of heatstroke.

A Northwestern University safety died Friday following an asthma attack during sprint drills. A Florida freshman collapsed during practice on July 19 and died a week later.

VIKINGS: Green attended funeral

(From 1C)

Wednesday morning. The players on campus appeared sullen as they left a 35-minute memorial service, and reporters weren't allowed to talk to them.

Players who were missing to attend the Ohio service included quarterback Daunte Culpepper, receivers Cris Carter and Randy Moss, defensive backs Robert Griffith and Orlando Thomas, linebackers Ed McDaniel and Carl Kidd, guard Dave Dixon, punter Mitch Berger and defensive tackle Fernando Smith. Offensive line coach Mike Tice, team executive vice president Mike Kelly and coordinator of medical services Fred Zamberletti also were in Ohio.

Stringer's agent, James Gould, didn't return a phone call Monday to see whether Stringer's family had decided whether to make public the results of an autopsy.

Blue Earth County medical examiner Dr. Dennis Gremel, also a pathologist at the Mankato hospital where Stringer died, conducted the autopsy. Though Minnesota law specifies that some autopsy information is public, Gremel said that since he performed the autopsy on behalf of the hospital and not as medical examiner, he isn't obligated to release the results.

The Minneapolis Star Tribune filed a motion seeking to make the results public, but a hearing Monday was postponed at the newspaper's request.

The state office of Occupational Safety and Health is investigating Stringer's death. James Honerman, an OSHA spokesman, said the investigation will continue for more than a month but that no one currently was on site because of the funeral.

The Vikings were expected to resume a normal practice schedule Tuesday. The team leaves Thursday for San Antonio, where they have a Saturday exhibition against the New Orleans Saints.

Hunting buddy sues Knight

MADISON, Wis. — Bob Knight pressured a friend into falsifying details of a 1999 hunting accident to avoid potential legal problems, according to a lawsuit filed Monday.

Thomas Mikunda of Exeland claims in the federal lawsuit Knight also wanted to avoid any problems with his job at Indiana University.

Mikunda was shot in the back and upper shoulder with Knight's 20-gauge shotgun while the two were hunting grouse in northern Wisconsin two years ago.

Knight was cited in the Oct. 12, 1999, incident for failing to report a hunting accident and hunting without a nonresident small game license in 1999 and 1998. He pleaded no contest to each count and paid $582.10 in fines.

Knight told investigators that as he turned to aim at a grouse, his finger slipped off his 20-gauge shotgun's safety and hit the trigger, accidentally firing the gun before he was ready to shoot.

Mikunda was hit by 16 pellets, causing wounds that were not life-threatening but required medical attention.

The suit claims Knight fired the gun intentionally, even though Mikunda was clearly in the line of fire.

The suit seeks compensatory and punitive damages, as well as legal costs.

Calls to Mikunda's home went unanswered Monday morning.

Knight said Monday he had not seen the lawsuit.

"I have no comment," he said.

Indiana fired Knight for violating a "zero-tolerance" policy it imposed following an internal investigation that turned up a videotape showing Knight with his hand around a former player's neck.

Texas Tech hired the Hall of Fame coach this spring.

Comets 62, Mercury 48

HOUSTON — Janeth Arcain had 18 points and five assists as the Houston Comets spoiled Phoenix coach Cynthia Cooper's return and eliminated the Mercury from playoff contention with a 62-48 victory on Monday night.

Cooper, who helped lead the Comets to four WNBA championships before retiring at the end of last season to become the Mercury's coach, faced her former teammates for just the second time this season and for the first time at the Compaq Center.

Trisha Fallon scored 12 points and Maria Stepanova had nine points and 11 rebounds for the Mercury, who needed to win their five remaining games to qualify for the postseason. Phoenix (11-17), which will miss the playoffs for just the second time, fell to a league-worst 3-11 on the road.

Houston (18-10) built its lead to 20 points late in the first half.

Phoenix used a 12-3 run midway through the second half to close within eight points, 53-44, with 3:32 remaining. Houston outscored Phoenix 9-5 down the stretch to seal the win.

The Comets moved out to a 17-15 lead in the opening 6:46 and broke the game open with 19-1 run.

Houston rallied behind consecutive 3-pointers by Amanda Lassiter, who finished with eight points.

Hatteberg makes up for TP with grand slam vs. Texas

Associated Press

BOSTON — Boston's Scott Hatteberg performed the ultimate baseball opposite.

Hatteberg hit a grand slam one at-bat after lining into a triple play Monday night, powering the Boston Red Sox to a 10-7 win over the Texas Rangers and a four-game sweep.

"That's from the outhouse to the penthouse right there," Hatteberg said. "I was trying to get the ball in the air, trying to stay out of the double play. It was a great feeling going around the bases."

The Red Sox moved within 2 1/2 games of AL East-leading New York with their first four-game sweep of Texas since July 10-13, 1975.

Manny Ramirez hit his 35th homer for Boston to give him 101 RBIs. Nomar Garciaparra went 3-for-4 and added a solo homer for the Red Sox.

Alex Rodriguez hit his 32nd homer for the Rangers.

Casey Fossum (1-0) worked two scoreless innings of relief for his first major league win. Derek Lowe pitched the ninth for his 23rd save in 26 chances.

The Rangers turned their third triple play in club history in the fourth inning when Hatteberg lined to shortstop with the runners on first and second moving on the pitch. Alex Rodriguez flipped to second baseman Randy Velarde, who forced the first runner and tagged the second.

The Red Sox then rallied from a 7-5 deficit in the sixth. Carl Everett reached on an infield hit that knocked out starter Rob Bell.

Troy O'Leary singled off reliever Juan Moreno (2-2) and Brian Daubach walked to load the bases. After Chris Stynes' single made it a one-run game, Hatteberg hit a 2-1 pitch for his second career grand slam to move Boston ahead.

Red Sox starter Hideo Nomo, the club's winningest pitcher with 11 victories, left the game in the fifth inning with a torn callous on his right thumb.

With the Red Sox leading 4-2, Nomo walked Ivan Rodriguez to load the bases before he was replaced. Bill Pulsipher allowed a bases-clearing double to Ricky Ledee that moved the Rangers ahead 5-4.

Texas added two more runs in the inning on Gabe Kapler's RBI double off Rich Garces and Craig Monroe's run-scoring single off Fossum.

The Red Sox cut it to 7-5 on Garciaparra's second homer in the bottom of the fifth.

Alex Rodriguez's two-run homer gave Texas a 2-0 lead in the first. Boston tied it in the bottom half on consecutive RBI doubles by Trot Nixon and Garciaparra.

Ramirez's two-run homer gave Boston a 4-2 edge in the third.

■ AL Roundup

Angels 3, Yankees 1

NEW YORK —Emergency starter Lou Pote limited New York to four hits over five innings Monday, helping the Anaheim Angels to a 3-1 victory over the Yankees.

Pote (2-0), making just his second major league start, pitched just twice in Anaheim's previous 17 games. He took the start in place of Scott Schoeneweis, who was sidelined by a stomach ailment.

Against the Yankees, Pote bordered on brilliant, allowing only a pair of harmless hits by Bernie Williams and shutting out New York until David Justice hit his 11th home run of the season in the fifth inning. Troy Percival pitched the ninth inning for his 30th save.

The Angels nicked loser Sterling Hitchcock (1-1) for a run in the second and two in the fifth.

Athletics 6, Tigers 3

DETROIT — Oakland's Johnny Damon hit a tiebreaking three-run homer in the ninth inning off Danny Patterson (4-3) to give the Athletics their first four-game sweep in Detroit in 46 years.

The A's hadn't swept a four-game series in Detroit since July 1955, their first season in Kansas City. Oakland has won five straight and 21 of 28 overall to move into wild card contention. The Tigers have lost six straight games.

Luis Vizcaino (1-0) got one out for his first career win, and Jason Isringhausen pitched the ninth for his 21st save in 28 chances.

White Sox 5, Devil Rays 2

CHICAGO — Dan Wright took a no-hitter into the seventh inning of his second career start, leading Chicago over Tampa Bay.

Wright (2-0) was effectively wild, walking seven batters and allowing no runs before being replaced after Chris Gomez's double with one out in the seventh broke up the no-hit bid. Keith Foulke pitched the ninth for his 27th save.

Jose Canseco and Paul Konerko each hit two-run homers off Jeff Wallace (0-3).

Mariners 8, Indians 6

CLEVELAND — Paul Abbott won his 10th straight decision, Ichiro Suzuki had three hits and Seattle didn't let any leads slip away.

One day after the Indians became the third team to rally from a 12-run deficit to win a game, the Mariners took the lead in the first and never gave it up.

Bret Boone homered off Charles Nagy (4-5) as the Mariners scored at least once in each of the first five innings to win for the ninth time in 11 games.

Abbott (12-2) remained unbeaten since May 22 — a span of 14 starts — by allowing six runs and seven hits in seven innings. Jose Paniagua, Sunday's loser, got Juan Gonzalez to fly out with two runners on for his third save.

Orioles 9, Royals 6

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Cal Ripken kicked off his final trip to Kansas City in style, capping a five-run fifth inning with a two-run double that led Baltimore to the win.

Ripken, who is retiring at the end of the season, earned a standing ovation just for showing up and then drew applause for helping beat the hometown team.

Melvin Mora and Mike Kinkade had three hits apiece and Jeff Conine homered for Baltimore, which broke a four-game losing streak.

Baltimore starter Jason Johnson (10-6) gave up four runs — two earned — and nine hits in 5 2-3 innings.

Agassi loses again in 1st round

Associated Press

MASON, Ohio — Andre Agassi lost to Gaston Gaudio 6-4, 7-6 (7-3) Monday night in the Tennis Masters Series-Cincinnati, the second first-round loss in as many weeks for the world's No. 2-ranked player.

The second-seeded Agassi was thoroughly outplayed by Gaudio, who is 56th in rankings. Last week, at the Tennis Masters-Canada in Montreal, Agassi lost in straight sets to Ivan Ljubicic of Croatia, who was ranked 58th.

The 22-year-old Gaudio said his solid play frustrated Agassi.

"I think I ran a lot, and when you run a lot, he doesn't like that," Gaudio said. "I was returning back all of the balls that he was hitting, and that made him crazy."

base. Having the green light, has helped a lot. I've just had a lot more chances."

With Midland leading 3-2 going into the eighth inning, Round Rock put up two runs in the eighth on Kevin Burns' 13th home run of the season and then added two more runs in the ninth on RBI singles by David Matranga and Jason Lane. The Express would need all of those runs as it turned out.

Midland got a one out, two-run home run from Ryan Ludwick, his 25th of the season, in the bottom of the ninth off of Express reliever Travis Wade to pull to within one run at 6-5. Todd Mensik then singled to bring the winning run to the plate.

But Wade would be up to the task this time getting Oscar Salazar to hit into a double play to end the game, recording his 21st save of the season to tie him for the Texas League in saves with Jeff Verplancke of Shreveport.

Burns was 2-for-4 and drove in three of the six Round Rock runs. He singled in a run in the fourth.

Midland outhit The Express by a 14-8 margin. Tyler Yates (3-5), who have up the Burns home run in the eighth inning, took the loss. Yates hurt himself in the eighth by starting off the inning by hitting David Matranga with a pitch. Burns followed one out later with his blast, making the hit batter a major mistake in this one run game.

This game marked the beginning of a long six-game series between these two teams.

HALL: Voting rules will be changing

(From 1C)

be more difficult to get into the Hall of Fame.

"We also felt there should be an appeals process for players dropped off. This gives them a second look. They have new hope."

Bill Mazeroski's name was not mentioned Monday by Morgan or other hall officials, but some Hall of Famers — including Ted Williams — were unhappy the fielding whiz was elected this year by the former Veterans Committee headed by Joe L. Brown. The Pittsburgh Pirates' general manager throughout Mazeroski's 17-year Pirates career, Brown will not be on the revamped 90-member Veterans Committee.

Mazeroski, a career .260 hitter, never received a high percentage of votes during his 15 years on the writers ballot and did not begin receiving substantial Veterans Committee consideration until Brown became chairman.

Another change is that all voting — not just by the writers, but by the expanded Veterans Committee — will be made public. Previously, a 15-member Veterans Committee elected Hall of Famers in secret meetings in which the balloting was not revealed.

The changes do not affect the annual balloting by more than 500 members of the Baseball Writers of America Association. They do include:

■ The 15-member Veterans Committee composed of five former players, five media members and five former executives will be replaced immediately by a 90-member group made up of the living members of the Hall of Fame (61), the recipients of the J.G. Taylor Spink award for writers (13), the Ford C. Frick award for broadcasters (13) and current Veterans Committee members (3) whose terms have not expired. As a result, two-thirds of the new Veterans Committee will be Hall of Famers.

■ Sixty baseball writers will identify 25 candidates for the players' ballot and 15 for the composite ballot (managers, umpires, executives). The Hall of Fame board of directors also will appoint a screening committee of six Hall of Famers to identify five candidates for the players' ballot.

■ All candidates receiving 75 percent of the vote will be elected, just as in the writers voting.

■ The special ballots for 19th century players and Negro League players were dropped. The 19th century players will be folded into the players ballot that will be drawn up every two years. After a Hall of Fame-sponsored study of black baseball from 1860-1960 is completed, the board of directors will determine how Negro League players will be considered for induction.

Crude oil up

NEW YORK — Early selling gave way to some late buying, lifting crude oil prices a touch higher Monday at the New York Mercantile Exchange.

There was little market moving news, and analysts said action was largely technically driven.

"The market spent a long time between ticks all day," said Chris Schachte, an analyst at GSC Energy in Atlanta.

September gasoline futures fell .11 cent to 77.54 a gallon.

Concerns that Tropical Storm Barry might turn into a hurricane and threaten refinery operations in the Gulf region and offshore oil and gas operations helped prop up prices Friday.

But Barry was downgraded to a tropical depression Monday morning as it moved inland into the Florida Panhandle and Alabama, veering away from refineries in neighboring states.

Refiners along the Gulf Coast, the nation's main refining region, reported no damage from Barry, though several oil and gas companies operating in the Gulf of Mexico shut in production over the weekend as a precautionary measure.

The U.S. Minerals Management Service estimated that less than 1.5 billion cubic feet a day of natural gas and 325,000 barrels a day of crude oil were shut in over the weekend.

Most of that came from Royal Dutch Shell Group's Shell Exploration and Production, which shut in 1.2 billion cubic feet a day of natural gas and about 300,000 barrels per day of oil, a company official said.

The Louisiana Offshore Oil Port, one of the main shipping points for crude oil in the Gulf, avoided any delays or closure over the weekend, a company official said.

Schachte of GSC Energy said trading is likely to remain range-bound today as traders await weekly inventory data from the American Petroleum Institute and the Department of Energy.

Other energy futures also finished higher. Light sweet crude for September delivery rose 12 cents to $27.74, but September heating oil fell .06 cent to 72.56 cents a gallon. September natural gas gained 5.6 cents to reach $3.027 per 1,000 cubic feet.

Dollar rises

LONDON — The U.S. dollar rose against most other major currencies in European trading Monday.

The euro was quoted at 87.94 cents, down from 88.54 cents Friday. Later, in midday trading in New York, the euro traded at 88.00 cents.

Other dollar rates in Europe, compared with late Friday, included 123.84 Japanese yen, up from 123.36; 1.7128 Swiss francs, up from 1.7018; and 1.5264 Canadian dollars, down from 1.5348.

The British pound was quoted at $1.4186, down from $1.4290.

In midday trading in New York, the dollar bought 123.77 yen, and the pound was worth $1.4181.

Based on late European euro rates, the dollar was worth 2.2235 German marks, down from 2.2082; 7.4574 French francs, down from 7.4061; 2.5054 Dutch guilders, up from 2.4881; and 2,201.31 Italian lire, up from 2,186.15.

Gold falls

Gold closed in London at $267.10 bid per troy ounce, down from $268.70 on Friday. In Zurich the bid price was $266.95, down from $268.15. Gold fell 10 cents in Hong Kong to $268.65.

Silver closed in London at $4.21 bid per troy ounce, down from $4.23.

EchoStar bids for Hughes Electronics

LITTLETON, Colo. (AP) — EchoStar Communications Corp. made an unsolicited $32 billion bid to buy Hughes Electronics Corp., kicking off a potential bidding war with News Corp. for the DirecTV owner.

The stock-for-stock swap offer, dubbed a "bear hug" proposal, comes only weeks after General Motors Corp., Hughes' largest shareholder and corporate parent, nixed a previous offer from the Littleton, Colo.-based EchoStar.

GM reportedly declined EchoStar's original offer amid federal regulatory and antitrust concerns.

Hughes' DirecTV, with more than 10 million subscribers, is the nation's largest satellite-television broadcaster. EchoStar's satellite service has nearly 6.1 million subscribers.

EchoStar hopes regulators would not consider the combined company a monopoly because it would compete with cable operators, who offer a similar service, Echostar chairman and chief executive Charles W. Ergen told analysts in a conference call Monday.

EchoStar said Sunday it offered .75 of its shares for each Hughes share, valuing El Segundo, Calif.-based Hughes at $23, an 18 percent premium over its closing price Friday of $19.36 on the New York Stock Exchange. Shares of EchoStar closed at $30.44 in trading on the Nasdaq Stock Market on Friday.

GM said last month it was moving forward in talks with Rupert Murdoch's News Corp. to sell Hughes.

Steve Harris, vice president of communications for GM, said the automaker hasn't had a chance to review the offer, but said GM's board would "give it a thorough review and consideration" as it would with other offers.

News Corp. spokesman Andrew Butcher said he had no comment on EchoStar's bid.

In a letter to GM's board of directors Sunday, EchoStar chief executive Charlie Ergen said a merger would create a $56 billion company better able to compete with the cable industry for subscribers.

He touted the ability of a combined company to increase programming for customers and to roll out HDTV and interactive services sooner.

"Together, EchoStar and Hughes can also provide a range of services that will bridge the 'digital divide' — providing high-speed broadband solutions to consumers and businesses in rural areas otherwise far from the information superhighway," Ergen wrote.

Ergen said EchoStar had been prepared to offer cash to acquire Hughes, but revised the proposal after being rebuffed by Hughes management.

GM shares rose 53 cents to $63.81 in trading Monday morning on the New York Stock Exchange, while shares of Hughes — a GM tracking stock — were up 84 cents, or 4.3 percent, to $20.20. EchoStar shares dropped 54 cents to $29.90 on the Nasdaq. News Corp. shares were down 96 cents, or 2.5 percent, to $37.29 on the NYSE.

David Neeleman, founder and CEO of jetBlue Airways, wields a vacuum cleaner as he pitches in to help out the cleaning crew prepare an aircraft for the airline's inaugural trip to New Orleans, at New York's John F. Kennedy International Airport, July 26. Neeleman admits he is obsessed with the business.

JetBlue finds success by combining cheap airline tickets with hip appeal

By Rachel Beck
Associated Press

NEW YORK — It's rare for an airline to make money while offering cheap tickets and good customer service, and on top of that, be deemed the hippest carrier around.

But it's that combination that's making JetBlue the buzz of the airline industry after just a year and a half in business. Whether it's the free satellite TV at every seat or the smiling faces greeting passengers at the gate, JetBlue is packing its planes with new and repeat customers.

Its rise has come so fast that some industry onlookers wonder whether it can last. Most, however, bet that JetBlue's success will continue as long as it keeps doing what it's doing now.

People like Betsy Casados of Colton, Calif., are fueling its rapid growth. She became a JetBlue convert during a recent trip from Ontario, Calif., to New York City.

"It was delightful," said Casados, who used to fly low-cost leader Southwest Airlines between the coasts. "I don't remember the last time I called a flight delightful."

Its fares run as low as $49 each way, which stand to become ever more attractive to budget-minded travelers during the economic slowdown.

JetBlue is the brainstorm of David Neeleman, who knows what it takes to build a successful startup carrier because he's done it before. His first effort was Morris Air, which he sold for $130 million to Southwest in 1993, and then he helped found Canada's WestJet.

In early 1999, he raised $130 million from investors, including Western Presidio and J.P. Morgan Chase, that had helped finance his other startups. He also persuaded billionaire George Soros to come on board.

Neeleman, 41, wanted its home base to be New York, a huge market that lacks a prominent low-cost carrier. Instead of the constantly delayed La Guardia Airport, he set his sights on John F. Kennedy International. While farther from midtown Manhattan, JFK is much less crowded.

In deciding where to fly, he looked for opportunities at secondary airports close to large cities. Instead of Miami, he went for Fort Lauderdale. Oakland was picked over San Francisco. It's a system developed and perfected by Southwest founder Herb Kelleher, who Neeleman considers a friend.

Neeleman purchased only new aircraft — 16 A320s from Airbus Industrie, each with 162 seats. His philosophy is that new planes give an airline "instant credibility" with travelers.

On average, JetBlue says it is filling about 80 percent of its seats, compared with about 68 percent for the industry. It now operates 80 flights a day to 16 cities nationwide, with Long Beach, Calif., to be added later this month and Washington in October.

JetBlue now employs 1,800 people, among them an executive team that includes top players from Continental and Southwest. The airline expects to bring in $300 million in revenues this year. It was first profitable last August and has made money consistently since November.

With its limited fleet, planes must make repeated trips. To ensure that everything is kept on time, Neeleman insists on a speedy 35-minute turnaround. His ideal stopover includes about eight minutes to get passengers off the plane, five minutes to clean and then 20 minutes to board the next group.

While relishing the low prices, travelers are also drawn to the airline's "cool" factor. There's satellite TV at every seat. There's no prepared food, but unlimited supply of soda and snacks.

Stocks trade lower as Intel confounds market, investors

NEW YORK (AP) — Sullen investors sent stocks lower Monday, forcing the Dow Jones industrials down more than 100 points as Wall Street retreated from last week's optimism about a recovery in the semiconductor industry.

Uncertainty about the economy and earnings ruled the market after Salomon Smith Barney reduced its profit and revenue targets for Intel and Lehman Brothers said the chip maker will cut prices in half on its Pentium 4 processor. The news disturbed investors who last week bid chip stocks higher on bullish comments from other analysts and Intel itself.

"Whenever we think we can go back in and play again, something like this happens," lamented Charles Pradilla, chief investment strategist for SG Cowen Securities.

The Dow Jones industrial average finished the session down 111.47 at 10,401.31. One of the Dow's biggest losers was Intel, which ended down $1.40 at $30.28. The market's broader indicators also declined. The Nasdaq composite index fell 32.07 to 2,034.26, and the Standard & Poor's 500 index fell 13.87 to 1,200.48.

Stock prices had been expected to trend higher this month as investors got a respite following the dismal second-quarter earnings results most companies released in July. Instead, Wall Street has been stymied as few companies can say they expect business to improve and virtually none can prove that it already has picked up.

"There is just no indication that this market will turn on a dime," said Alan Ackerman, executive vice president of Fahnestock & Co.

Chip makers tugged the tech sector down with Intel's chief competitor, Advanced Micro Devices, falling $1.63 to $17.62 and Micron Technology declining $1.44 to $42.01. The wavering sentiments on the semiconductor industry illustrate the uneasiness that is pervasive on Wall Street.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Can't have both high expected investment returns and high safety

By Eric Tyson

Q: My 21-year-old grandson recently came into a sum of money ($30,000) and asked me for help. I hesitate to do so because I don't want to take a chance with someone else's money, and I'm not qualified to do so. How can he get the highest return and greatest safety?

Tyson

A: You're smart in being cautious about giving investing advice to someone you really care for, because you wouldn't want things to turn out badly. But if you've had investing success, you could certainly try to give broad advice. How your grandson should invest this money should largely depend upon what purpose and when he envisions using it.

Assuming that for emergency purposes he already has three to six months worth of living expenses tucked away in a money market fund, perhaps he would earmark this money for a home purchase, starting a business or his retirement. The longer the time frame, the greater the portion of your grandson's money should be invested in growth vehicles such as stocks, both domestic and foreign. If your grandson expects to use this money within the next decade for a home or other major purchase, he should commit the bulk of the money to more lending-type investments, such as bonds.

You and he both should recognize that you can't have both high expected investment returns and high safety. While offering higher potential long-term returns, growth-oriented investments such as stocks and real estate will be the most volatile in the short run. Losses of more than 10 percent and even 20 percent in one year can happen with growth investments. Mutual funds would be an ideal investment vehicle for him to use. The best funds offer low-cost access to high-quality investment managers. No-load funds allow buyers to invest all of their money directly with the investment company and not pay any sales commissions to an intermediary broker.

Q: How can a company with billions of dollars in business file bankruptcy? Don't stockholders have any protection in this matter, and where is the Securities and Exchange Commission?

A: Companies of any size — small, medium and large — can and do go bankrupt. Just because a company is selling billions of dollars worth of their products or services doesn't make them immune to bankruptcy. Companies go bankrupt for many reasons: Betting too heavily on one product or service has sunk some companies; others go down because of poor expense control, large lawsuits or borrowing too much. These reasons generally have little to do with the size of the company.

While news that a company you're invested in has filed for bankruptcy is financially depressing, you should — to a certain extent — be happy that the company has done so. If creditors are beating down a company's door for overdue interest and debt payments and the company is unable to meet these obligations, bankruptcy can actually save the company from demise. Companies file for bankruptcy protection when their liabilities greatly exceed their assets. If our legal system agrees, an approved bankruptcy filing can actually lead to a company's reorganization and restructuring of their debts. Some companies have successfully resurrected themselves from bankruptcy.

Parents come up with unusual plan for raising funds for home, college

By Matthew Purdy
N.Y. Times News Service

MOUNT KISCO, N.Y. — Jason Black blames it all on a fortune cookie.

A few weeks ago, Black and his then-pregnant wife, Frances Schroeder, were eating takeout in their two-bedroom apartment when she cracked her cookie and pulled out a fortune: "You'll have a new home by the end of the year."

What a lovely fortune, they thought. But as parents expecting their third child and living on Black's salary as an editor at an Internet magazine in Manhattan, they decided they needed help to make their cookie come true. "Wouldn't it be great if we could convince somebody else to pay for it?" Black thought.

So they looked around for an asset to sell. Their car was leased, and not theirs to sell. Instead they settled on their unborn child. That's how Jason Black and Frances Schroeder became the parents who are trying to find a corporate sponsor to buy the naming rights to their child.

The baby boy, whom we'll call Nasdaq for the meantime, was born July 27 and returned home to much media attention as Black hawked the blank spot on his son's birth certificate for the suggested retail price of $500,000.

"We're creating an opportunity for a corporate entity to involve itself in a very large media event," said Black, referring to the unveiling of his son's name. And that's just for starters. "There would be recurring interest in this young man. There would be life cycle events. Birthdays. Graduation. His first Little League game." Not to mention 13-year-old "Black and Decker" Black's inevitable lawsuit against his parents.

The couple is now double-parked at the intersection of various trends: communal resignation to corporate influence; parent-centrism; disorientation caused by sleep deprivation following childbirth.

Sitting with his 4-year-old daughter, Josephine, at a coffee house here, Black, 32, incongruously mourned the closing of a local bookstore that once occupied the cafe's space, but apparently lost out to a nearby Border's. He misses that "personal touch." It's the kind of thing you get from the hometown bookseller, or clothier or mechanic. Or from giving your child a name with meaning.

But all that's useless sentimentalism. What's in a name except for the memory of some old relative?

At least this couple is willing to acknowledge what most parents are too defensive to admit: children are a bad investment. High overhead. Long-term capitalization. No assurance of return in an investor's lifetime. Zero goodwill.

Two weeks ago, Black and his wife placed the naming rights to their baby on two Internet auction sites. No one bid. But Black said he has had initial exchanges with someone who says he represents a consumer package goods company. Black doesn't know the product yet. Beer, perhaps?

"Do we want our kid to be named Budweiser?" he asked. "I don't know. My wife and I would have to sleep on it and see the ramifications."

They've ruled out cigarette or gun companies, not that any have offered. For the moment they are calling their son names like "Cutie Head" and "Chunky Monkey," which may threaten to draw them into a trademark dispute with Ben & Jerry's ice cream.

Black said he had heard plenty of criticism. But he said he was just trying to secure his children's future.

"That's one of the nice things about living in this era," Black said. "There's the chance to try many different things and challenge the previously held notions and concepts."

But it turns out Black is pretty conventional. If no corporate sponsor appears, they've got one of those free names picked out. Zane. But he said his wife was still holding out hope for an offer from Campbell Soup, "because of the association with family, nutrition and wholesomeness."

Moms worry about kids' school backpack burdens

Call them what you like — backpacks, backsacks, knap-sacks, or book-bags -- they are wreaking havoc on the backs of the children who tote them.

About 8 million students nationwide complain about back problems, according to the American Academy of Pediatrics, and if the back problems seem cured come Monday morning, they may be attributed to school day backpack burdens.

"A backpack is too heavy for a kid if it is more than 5 to 10 percent of his or her body weight," explained Dr. Stacy J. Meeks, a chiropractor with Advanced Chiropractic Care. "For a 100-pound kid, that's five to 10 pounds."

Yet according to the most recent studies on the subject, some kids are toting bags up to 40 percent of their total body weight.

"I put everything in there," said Nyree Stephens, a senior at Andrews High School, during a recent visit to Midland Park Mall. "I don't really notice it (the weight), but my mom worries about me."

"Sometimes I pick it up and wonder how she carries it around all day," said her mother, Beckie Stephens.

Justin Willmon, a fifth-grader at Parker Elementary, and his mother Vonda attribute the weight of some backpacks to an increase in homework.

Ms. Willmon's three children complain "all the time" about the weight they must tote, "especially when they have to walk home."

Strength and exercise can help alleviate the problem, but not to any great extent, Meeks said.

"The bottom line is that some of these kids are too small to carry so much, and there is a lot of improper usage.

"A lot of kids carry everything they have," he added. "I would suggest talking to teachers about leaving heavier books in the classroom."

Beckie and Nyree Stephens think another solution could be to have a set of books just for the classroom so students could keep their set at home and avoid carrying them to and fro.

Nyree also believes there is not enough time between classes for some kids to reach out-of-the-way lockers to change out their books.

"My locker was far away from all of my classes, so I had to carry all my books with me all day," she explained.

For Justin, the problem is locker size.

"They have lil' bitty lockers," his mother said.

Parents may have several possible solutions to the problem, but sometimes their kids dodge them.

"I tried to get him (Justin) one of those roll backpacks, but he said, 'Those aren't cool,'" Ms. Willmon said.

Meeks said damage from carrying heavy loads is accumulative.

"A large (number of people) may suffer from the results for years before they seek medical help. I only see about 10 to 15 percent of them," he said. "They should seek medical attention if they experience discomfort, such as back soreness and stiffness, change in posture, or if their parents become concerned. It is unusual for kids to have neck or back problems."

Guidelines for preventing backpack injuries

- Use a hip strap for heavier weights.
- Use a backpack with padded, wide straps and a padded back.
- Use both of the backpack straps, firmly tightened, to hold the pack two inches above the waist.
- Engage in exercise to condition your back muscles.
- Use the correct lifting techniques. Remember, bend with both knees when picking up a heavy back-pack.
- Place the heaviest items close to the back.
- Neatly pack your backpack and try to keep items in place.
- Try to make frequent trips to your locker, between classes, to replace books.
- Consider purchasing a backpack with wheels.
- The backpack should be no wider than the chest.
- The backpack should weigh less than 10 percent of body weight.
- Shift or remove any sharp or bulky objects from the back of the pack to avoid them rubbing or digging into the back.
- Padded shoulder straps help cushion the load and keep straps from digging into the shoulder muscles.
- Shoulder straps should always be adjustable. Each back-pack should be fitted to each child. Straps should not be allowed to dangle uncomfortably.
- Be careful about the popular practice of clipping many long and dangling key chains and other assorted novelties to the zippers of the backpacks. These can catch on doors of cars, buses, and elevators. Keep them short and to a minimum.
- Voice your opinions. If your child's backpack is too heavy, speak to their teachers about options on lighter hand-outs, as opposed to bringing each book home every day.

PARENT'S PERSPECTIVE

Innocent children are among the world's best evangelists

By Lana Cunningham

"Mommy, I need to pway," Christopher said one evening after he had called me into his room. It was already bedtime and I thought he was trying one more stalling tactic before actually closing his eyes.

"You have played long enough today," I said, misinterpreting his intention.

"No, not pway like that," he said, pointing to toys on the floor. "I mean pway, like this," and he folded his hands together.

This was a "first" for Christopher. We always pray at the dinner table, but I'd never forced him to pray at bedtime. I wanted it to be something he really wanted to do.

I was curious about what he wanted to say to God. That night he asked God to take care of his friends and he listed them. Then he asked God to stay with him until morning.

Over the weeks Christopher's prayers have changed to fit whatever has happened in his life. One day I picked him up at pre-school and on the way home he mentioned that a friend, Bobby, said he didn't believe in God. "Why Mommy?"

Oh no, I thought. The questions are starting that I can't answer. "God, you better put the right answers in my mouth because right now I don't know what to say." All I could tell Christopher was that Bobby didn't understand all the wonderful things God would give him.

Christopher didn't say anything and I thought he had forgotten about it. ... until that night. During his prayers, he said, "And God, please make Bobby believe in you."

Evangelism — right out of my kid's mouth. And I'm the worst evangelist in the world (that's not a "gift" given me by God). I don't know if Christopher ever talked to Bobby about God, but praying for his friend showed me he wants others to know God.

Christopher, like many other children, seems to have an innocent acceptance of God. It doesn't matter to children that they can't "see" this person — one of those little problems we adults seem to have with religion.

They somehow understand that God exists and is there to help them.

But there's a limit as to how much time he wants his parents, or himself, to spend with God.

One Sunday morning, my husband was assisting with communion, which meant he could not sit with us. "Why is Daddy up there?" Christopher whined.

Looking for a way to explain it for his understanding, I said, "Jesus needs your Daddy to help Him." It didn't ease his mind.

"I'm tired of him helping Jesus!" he retorted loudly.

Christopher also uses God to help him out of sticky situations at home.

One evening during his prayers, he wanted me to put my hands together and repeat what he said, word by word. "God, please make Mommy (I opened an eye and raised an eyebrow at this word) be nice to me."

I leaned close to Christopher. "Why are you asking this?"

He pressed his forehead against mine and stared into my eyes. "Because you weren't very nice to me today."

That's all I need — a child who doesn't put in a good word for me with God.

DEAR ABBY

Teen racing toward legal age doesn't know rules of the road

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Our daughter will be 18 in a few weeks. She has announced that at that time she will be of "legal age" and will no longer have to obey us. She believes she can drive anywhere (in our car), buy anything she wants (with our money), and not have to abide by a curfew (while living under our roof and paying no rent).

Pauline & Jeanne Phillips

We have tried to explain that this is not how "legal age" works if she intends to continue living in our house. She insists she has the "right" to demand our money and make the rules.

Would you please shed some light on what "legal age" means? She reads your column. Thank you. — DISTRAUGHT CHICAGO PARENTS

DEAR DISTRAUGHT: Gladly! It's time your daughter learned the realities of life. First among them is that as long as she lives under your roof and is supported by you, she must be respectful and obey the rules of the house. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: I thought you and your readers might be interested in what our local parent-teacher organization publishes for the families of high school students. It's a list of legal documents students should have when they reach their 18th birthday and are legally adults.

■ A will. A will is a document that provides for the way a person's property will be distributed upon death. Without a will, the owner's property will be distributed according to the state statute governing descent.

■ Living Will. This additional document gives specific directions in the event of a terminal condition.

■ General Power of Attorney. Through this legal document, a person appoints or empowers another person to act on his or her behalf. A young adult usually appoints a parent. For example, if the child is away at school, the parent can legally handle banking, motor vehicle and tax return obligations for the student. The document could become especially important should the child become disabled, incompetent or incapacitated, as might happen in an accident.

■ Durable Power of Attorney for Health Care. This is similar to the general power of attorney. In this case, the appointed person can make only health care decisions, and they can be made only if the individual does not have the capacity to make informed decisions.

For an unmarried teen, the typical cost of these four documents, prepared by a legal firm, is about $200 to $300. — OHIO MOM

DEAR OHIO MOM: I'm sure your letter will be a wake-up call to any teen who wants to be a responsible adult.

DEAR ABBY: Recently I was informed that two of my poems are to be published by a prestigious poetry organization. My wife and I are delighted and decided to celebrate.

At first we planned to go to Busch Gardens. Upon reflection, we decided that I should go to the beach alone. We remembered the old adage: "A bard in the sand is worth two in the Busch." — MARTY IN FALLBROOK, CALIF.

DEAR MARTY: You win. I'm speechless. Not only are you a published bard, but from my perspective, you're quite a card.

Dear Abby is written by Pauline Phillips, aka Abigail Van Buren, and daughter Jeanne Phillips. Their column is distributed by Universal Press Syndicate.

Koch Industries faces class-action lawsuit

AUSTIN (AP) — Koch Industries, which has settled lawsuits in recent years for tens of millions of dollars, faces a new class-action lawsuit over operation of its pipelines in Texas and several other states.

The lawsuit, filed in federal court in Lufkin, seeks to force the oil and gas company to inspect, test, maintain and repair thousands of miles natural gas and hazardous-liquid pipelines.

The lawsuit claims that the pipelines pose an immediate danger of leaks, fires or explosions and that federal regulators have failed to monitor them.

A spokesman for Wichita, Kan.-based Koch said the case has no merit. Marc Palazzo said the company "is among the safest pipeline operators, and that pipelines are the safest way to transport oil and gas."

The lawsuit was filed by P.D. Hamilton, who oversees a family trust that owns ranch property near Groveton, in East Texas, that is crossed by a Koch pipeline.

Hamilton's lawyers want Koch to spend $11 billion to $19 billion on pipeline improvements over five years.

The lawsuit doesn't seek monetary damages, although Hamilton's lawyers — including experienced class-action attorneys such as Arthur Miller of Harvard University and Samuel Issacharoff of Columbia University — would get a share of the money earmarked for improvements.

The director of a group opposed to lawsuits said the case doesn't belong in the courts.

"Rather than remedy harm, the plaintiff is asking the court to regulate business activity, and that is inappropriate," Jon Opelt, executive director of Citizens Against Lawsuit Abuse, told the Austin American-Statesman.

In the past three years, Koch has settled several high-dollar lawsuits.

In 1998, it agreed to pay commercial fishermen $10.5 million after a pipeline spill near Corpus Christi.

In 1999, a jury ordered Koch to pay $296 million to the father of a teen-ager killed in a pipeline explosion in Kaufman County. The company appealed and settled that case and a related claim by the father of another teen-ager killed in the blast, both for undisclosed amounts.

Last year, Koch agreed to pay $35 million to settle lawsuits filed by the federal and state government for oil pipeline spills into Texas streams and bays from 1990 to 1997.
