Sharing views

Soviet missiles a concern, Shultz says

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz said Friday that "all of Central America" is a target of Nicaragua's subversion, and expressed concern that the Soviet Union may deploy nuclear missiles in that country.

In a wide-ranging review of the administration's Central America policy, Shultz also said a solid majority of the people of El Salvador view the prospect of a guerrilla victory there as a "frightening phenomenon."

Shultz's remarks were in a speech in Dallas to the World Affairs Council and the Chamber of Commerce. A copy of the speech was released at the State Department.

Shultz made no reference to allegations by some members of Congress that the United States is engaged in a covert operation in Nicaragua aimed at toppling the Sandinista government.

But he made clear his view that vital American security interests are at stake in Central America.

"Central America is so close that its troubles automatically spill over onto us, so close that the strategic posture of its countries affects ours, so close that its people's suffering brings pain to us as well," he said.

After decades of repressive rightist rule, he said most Central American countries are faced with a "new form of dictatorship," characterized by a "command economy, a self-appointed elitist vanguard, and guerrilla war. Nicaragua has become its base, all of Central America its target."

Bolstering his contention that U.S. strategic interests are at stake in Central America, Shultz cited reports last week that Nicaragua's Minister of Defense, Humberto Ortega, said that Nicaragua would consider accepting Soviet missiles if asked.

Ortega was reported to have said that Nicaragua "will examine the proposal and make our own decision" if the Soviets do ask.

On Tuesday, U.N. Ambassador Jeane Kirkpatrick raised the same issue when she said the Soviets and the Cubans are "talking about implanting in Central America missiles aimed at the United States."

Shultz said that "Some of you may not have noticed that Nicaragua's minister of defense said on April 9 that Nicaragua would consider accepting Soviet missiles if asked."

But Shultz offered no evidence that the Soviets have done so, or are even entertaining that idea. State Department officials, who asked not to be identified, referred reporters solely to published accounts relating to the issue when pressed as to why the secretary had raised it.

Israel to commemorate 35 years of independence

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israel marks 35 years of independence Monday with its troops still entrenched in Lebanon and its citizens troubled by ethnic and political rifts that are gnawing at their cherished unity.

The economic and social problems tend to overshadow celebrations like the ones planned Monday, which will include torch-lighting ceremonies and the start of a government-proclaimed "Year of Valor."

Reflecting Israeli divisons, the opposition Labor Party and the Peace Now anti-war movement plan a protest during public ceremonies at which Israeli authorities will turn over a military outpost near the West Bank city of Nablus to civilian authority.

Israel marks Independence Day by the Hebrew calendar, although it won independence from Britain on May 14, 1948.

While most wars since then have united the nation, the Lebanon campaign has divided it. Israel has its first sizeable anti-war movement, and two dozen Israelis have been jailed for refusing reserve army duty in Lebanon.

But for every critic of the war, there is an Israeli who strongly supports it, especially in the Galilee, where border settlements will celebrate their first independence day in a decade without fear of Palestinian bombardment. It was to guarantee "peace for Galilee" that Prime Minister Menachem Begin said he sent troops into Lebanon on June 6, 1982.

The debate on the war also is shaded by ethnic and economic conflicts.

Begin's government draws much of its support from the lower-income Sephardic Jews of North African and Near Eastern extraction. The opposition is dominated by more affluent Ashkenazim, of European extraction.

"Political, religious, ethnic divisions, all these gaps as we call them, breed violence," says retired Supreme Court Justice Haim Cohen. "People have lost their inhibitions."

Recent examples of religious-political violence are numerous, but one of the most troubling came in February, when a hand grenade thrown into a peace demonstration outside Begin's Jerusalem office killed a young protester.

At the time, the Cabinet was considering the judicial report on the Beirut massacre, which blamed top officials for allowing the slaughter of hundreds of Palestinians by Lebanese Christian militiamen and forced Ariel Sharon to resign as defense minister.

Meanwhile, newspapers assault the reader with depressing developments:

Inflation is rising above last year's 131.5 percent. State-paid doctors are on strike and refuse to perform surgery.

Front-page stories tell of daily bloodletting in Lebanon while Israeli negotiators try to extricate the army from Lebanon without conceding all the gains from a war that killed 474 Israelis.

Haaretz newspaper columnist Yoel Marcus believes Israelis are losing their drive and optimism and sinking into "national apathy."

But the problems obscure improvements in the quality of Israeli lives.

Peace with Egypt, which came in 1979, and demonstrations of military superiority have removed from many minds the constant fear of Arab attack.

Many Israelis are making money on the stock market and are spending it on consumer goods like the 90,000 video recorders they bought last year despite stiff import duties.

Better restaurants and more comfortable movie theaters are springing up in the cities. Businesses are computerizing.

Government spokesmen point to the low unemployment rate — below 5 percent — and take pride in the country's advances in high technology.

Israeli electronics are making inroads on world markets, including the United States. Israel builds ultramodern warplanes and ammunition and competes with armaments giants like the United States, the Soviet Union and France.

But there is a price for affluence: The government has allocated nearly half of its $21.4 billion budget this year to make payments on a $26 billion foreign debt.

"Our economic situation is very bad," says economist Michael Bruno.

Embezzlers do not get sympathy

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Three former bank tellers and a loan secretary who admitted they embezzled bank funds because they were in financial straits on Friday won no sympathy from U.S. District Judge Lucius D. Bunton.

"You, too, violated a position of trust — employed by the bank — and took something that wasn't yours," the judge told one of the ex-tellers. "I don't have a great deal of sympathy and compassion for you; you knew better."

Three of the four embezzlers were ordered confined to the federal penitentiary for six months and afterward to be placed on probation for five years.

The fourth defendant, ex-teller Callie Annette Jackson, 20, of Midland, was ordered to serve an unspecified sentence under the federal Youth Corrections Act.

All told, the four defendants embezzled more than $21,400 from two Midland banks. They were indicted following FBI investigations.

Judge Bunton meted out six-month prison terms to Ann Bonham, 35, of Midland, a former commercial loan secretary for First National Bank, and former FNB tellers Cynthia Rene Hall, 23, of Odessa, and Ray Teetoe Jones, 24, of Stanton.

Prior to sentencing, Judge Bunton asked each defendant, who had pleaded guilty March 10 to embezzlement, to explain why she stole money from the bank.

"Well, your honor, we just moved to Midland and didn't have much money and didn't know what else to do," Mrs. Bonham said. Her attorney, Rusty Wall, said the woman was "capable of making restitution." The attorney asked for "all possible leniency from the court."

"As far as I know, you haven't paid a nickel back to the bank," Bunton told the woman, who was accused of embezzling more than $10,000 from the bank in 1981. The judge said he didn't know "what your problem is, Mrs. Bohnam."

Bunton noted many other families underwent financial hardships in the Midland-Odessa area.

"And they didn't steal money, and they did make it without stealing money. The time you took it you were in a position of public trust," Bunton said. "I don't have a great deal of sympathy for you, Mrs. Bonham. I do have sympathy for your children, because their mother's a thief."

The judge ordered her to make restitution of "at least $4,000."

Ms. Hall, who was accused of embezzling $2,400 in 1982, said "at the time I was doing this — taking money from the bank — I was in a financial bind. I was just getting divorced, I have two children, I was having car problems, and it seemed there was nothing else I could do.

"I let the bank down, my family down, I let myself down," Ms. Hall said. "I'm asking for another chance."

In pleading for his client, attorney Edward T. Garza said Ms. Hall "did not use the money to go to Las Vegas," but rather paid doctor bills, the babysitter and other bills.

"You, too, violated a position of trust," Bunton told the former teller. He told her there are "other ways" rather than stealing to handle a financial crisis. "I don't have great sympathy and compassion for you... You knew better...You have a good education."

Ms. Jones, who was accused of embezzling more than $1,500, said she had stolen the money after she "had just gone out on my own."

"I was trying to make a life for myself and my daughter. Like everybody else, I was in a financial bind. I know I did wrong."

Her attorney, Brian Martin, said Ms. Jones "has definite potential, has a job and can and will make restitution."

Clarence Allen Lackey sits in 238th State District Court Friday after being found guilty of capital murder in a retrial. The sentencing phase of the trial, which got under way after the guilty verdict was returned, resumes this morning.

Lackey found guilty of murder

By RICHARD ORR
Staff Writer

"We find the defendant guilty of capital murder as charged."

With those words, a Midland jury late Friday afternoon ended four hours of deliberations in the retrial of Clarence Allen Lackey, a 28-year-old former Lubbock construction worker charged with the July 31, 1977, abduction, rape and murder of Toni Diane Kumpf.

The attractive 23-year-old Texas Tech secretary was kidnapped from her apartment about 6 a.m. that Sunday and had told friends shortly before her death that she felt a man was watching and possibly following her at times.

Lackey was found guilty of raping and murdering her in his apartment only an hour or so before his live-in girlfriend was due home from working the night shift at Texas Instruments.

Ms. Kumpf's throat had been slashed to the point of decapitation, according to a mortician's testimony, and her body dumped in a cotton field about two miles from where Lackey lived.

Twenty-two witnesses and 122 pieces of meticulously detailed circumstantial evidence bound Lackey so tightly to the murder that Lubbock County Assistant District Attorney Gail Robertson told jurors during summation that all they had to do to find him guilty was "use common sense."

His court-appointed, three-lawyer defense team tacitly conceded his guilt by not offering any witnesses to refute the charges, and Lackey did not take the stand.

Grand jury exonerates officers in mauling

The Midland County grand jury Friday exonerated officers involved in the police dog mauling of a church custodian April 6.

In a statement issued at the conclusion of the daylong probe, the grand jury said:

"(We have) completed an in-depth investigation and discovered no indication that criminal prosecution of any party concerned would be in order.

"Moreover (we are) of the opinion that the K-9 Unit should be continued as an arm of law enforcement, and that the unit should be enlarged as available funds permit."

The custodian, 31-year-old Raul Paredez, works for First United Methodist Church. He suffered severe facial lacerations and one of his ears had to be re-attached after the dog was released in the building to search for a burglary suspect about 2 a.m. that night.

Police conducted a room-by-room search and said they had trouble getting into the small mop closet where the animal apparently cornered Paredez against the door, which opens inward. He had been sleeping in the church after a falling-out with the people he had been living with.

Chief of Police Wayne Gideon called for the grand jury probe after allegations of police impropriety surfaced, and Sheriff Dallas Smith began his own investigation of the matter at the request of Paredez' attorneys.

It is not known if the grand jury's decision not to issue indictments will affect Smith's investigation.

Walesa defies police, meets union leaders

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Solidarity chief Lech Walesa defied Polish police Friday and vowed to meet again with underground leaders of the outlawed union.

"I will hold another meeting," Walesa told Western reporters.

He spoke to reporters as he waited in a car outside Gdansk police headquarters for officers to release his driver, Mieczyslaw Wachowski, detained for questioning earlier in the day.

Asked how he eluded heavy police surveillance to meet with the fugitive union leadership over the weekend, Walesa said, "I just did a better job than they did and I had to lose them."

"I guarantee it's safe," Walesa said of his technique for eluding police. "I'll do the same thing again...and if it's not safe, I won't do it."

In Warsaw, underground Radio Solidarity criticized the government for three minutes before the regime jammed the broadcast with loud popular Western music. One of the radio's transmitters was reported seized earlier in the week.

Walesa was interrogated by police for five hours Wednesday about the weekend meeting with the fugitive unionists, and his wife Danuta for three hours on Thursday. Both said they told police nothing.

Mrs. Walesa said Wachowski, a Solidarity employee who was assigned to the labor chief as driver before martial law and has stayed on ever since, got a police summons Friday morning but was picked up before he could answer it.

Walesa, who had counseled her not to answer the authorities' questions about the weekend meeting, went to the police station to wait for Wachowski's release, she said.

The Solidarity underground, apparently acting in accord with Walesa, issued a communique Thursday calling for nationwide protest demonstrations on May Day, a major workers' holiday in the Soviet bloc.

The demonstrations would be the the first organized by the underground since last November. The November demonstration failed to gain widespread support.

Walesa declined to publicly endorse the protest call, but said before the communique appeared that he and the underground would coordinate their policies.

Walesa's weekend meeting with the underground was his first reported contact with the five members of Solidarity's Temporary Coordinating Commission since he was released from 11 months martial law internment in November.

Several score Solidarity leaders have eluded authorities since the Dec. 13, 1981 declaration of martial law, when Walesa and most of the union leadership were interned without charge.

Police seized a Radio Solidarity transmitter in Warsaw Wednesday night, the Communist Party newspaper Trybuna Ludu reported Friday.

It said that "tentative investigation proved that it was a powerful transmitter, and that this kind of equipment is used by Western intelligence centers."

Shultz says Central America is a target

Though no Soviet official is known to have publicly threatened to deploy missiles in Nicaragua, Theo Sommer, editor-in-chief of the weekly Die Zeit published in Hamburg, West Germany, raised that possibility following a week-long visit to the Soviet Union. In the April 4 international edition of Newsweek, Sommer wrote of his conversations with Soviet officials: "Mexico and Nicaragua are some of the place names dropped when I asked them where they planned to stage their counterweapons."

On March 17, a senior Soviet official, Georgi Arbatov, wrote in the newspaper Pravda that the Soviet Union would have to deploy missiles "near American borders" if the United States and NATO nations move ahead with plans to install new cruise and Pershing 2 medium-range missiles in Europe late this year. But Arbatov, director of the U.S.A. and Canada Institute of the Soviet Academy of Science, did not specify where such missiles might be placed.

Other Soviet officials have warned repeatedly that they could put the United States in an "analogous position" if the American missiles were indeed deployed in Europe.

Such remarks raised some speculation that the Soviet Union might again be eyeing Cuba — not Nicaragua — as a base for missiles that could hit the United States, as it did, only to withdraw in the face of President John F. Kennedy's counterthreats, in 1962.

But on Thursday, a top Soviet general, Yuri V. Lebedev, an adviser to Soviet arms negotiators, said "There is no need to do it...It's enough to deploy new systems in Soviet territory."

Other Soviet officials have indicated that if there were any missile deployment close to U.S. shores, it would be aboard submarines.

On El Salvador, Shultz dismissed the notion that the adminsistration has been exaggerating the dangers of a guerrilla victory.

He cited the statement of Cayetano Carpio, widely regarded as the leader of Salvador's guerrilla forces, in an August 1980 interview with a Mexican magazine.

"The revolutionary process of Central America is a single process. The triumphs of one are the triumphs of the other...Guatemala will have its hour. Honduras its. Costa Rica, too, will have its hour of glory. The first note was heard in Nicaragua," Shultz quoted Cayetano as saying.

He said Carpio has his allies are exploiting the continuing social and economic inequalities in El Salvador "for anti-democratic ends."

Shultz said the people throughout Central America "will tell you, as they have told us — through their governments, in their public opinion polls and in their newspaper and radio editorials — that the revolution about which Carpio boasts is a frightening phenomenon: a direct threat to their democracy and well-being.

"They will tell you that North Americans should also be concerned. Not because Mr. Carpio will lead a batallion across the Rio Grande, but because the cause of democracy and human rights is our cause too."

Jury finds Lackey guilty of capital murder

Instead, the bulk of their defense throughout the four-day trial focused on the fine points of law, a tactic that was successful in keeping the murder weapon from being introduced as evidence.

Lubbock District Judge Robert Wright granted their motion that the weapon — a large, wood-handled butcher knife found in Lackey's apartment — should not be allowed because the indictment did not spell out that a knife had been used in the slaying.

Apparently rendered before all the physical evidence had been collected, the Aug. 3, 1977, indictment merely referred to a "sharp instrument" as the weapon.

The tall, blond-haired defendant stood with his hands clasped across his abdomen and displayed no reaction when the verdict was read, an emotional stance he maintained throughout the trial.

The victim's father, Dallas businessman Jim Kumpf, said: "I'm relieved — very relieved. And mentally exhausted."

Lubbock County District Attorney Jim Bob Darnell, who prosecuted the case in a reserved but doggedly persistent manner, gave a one-word response when asked his reaction to the verdict: "Tired."

The jury opted to take a supper break and return at 7:45 p.m. to deliberate the sentence: life in prison or death by injection.

But the sentencing phase of the trial was postponed shortly after it began when it was learned that a scheduled defense witness would be unable to appear until today.

A San Angelo jury sentenced Lackey to death in 1978. But an appeals court overturned the verdict on a technicality in the jury selection process and he was retried here on a change of venue.

The trial was scheduled to resume at 9 a.m. today in 238th State District Court.

Embezzlers don't get sympathy

The judge said the woman seemed "remorseful and sorry" for what she did and alluded to the woman's mentioning that she is responsible for her daughter.

"I have a responsibility, too," said the judge, who then sentenced her to six months in prison and ordered her on probation for five years.

The sobbing Ms. Jackson said she was "sorry from the bottom of my heart." She was accused of embezzling more than $7,500 in 1981.

"When I was taking the money, I knew it was wrong...My family, they've all been there when I needed them," she said. "I would like to have one more chance to try to make everything all right."

The judge considered the plea. Her attorney, Allen McFall, alluded to the thievery, and told the judge, "Fortunately, foolishness is not a crime in the United States."

"You were given a position of trust," the judge told Ms. Jackson, "and you violated that trust. You knew better...You may well have learned your lesson." The judge sentenced the woman under the Youth Corrections Act and said her conviction would be set aside and "wiped off" her record were she successful in serving the sentence and in being rehabilitated.

Red Cross funds being depleted

Swollen rivers are receding, but Red Cross disaster relief funds are already bone dry as volunteers armed with mops, pails and squeegees clean the damage from almost two weeks of flooding in the marshlands of southeastern Louisiana.

According to Elvis Curb, executive director of Midland's Red Cross chapter, more than 5,986 homes and 756 apartment units were either damaged or destroyed by flooding which left thousands homeless.

Curb, whose wife, Donna, is in Baton Rouge, La., supervising volunteer services, said 95 Red Cross mobile units were mobilized to provide meals for about 35,000 victims. Union halls in New Orleans and Jackson, Miss., were opened to refugees from the floods.

Red Cross expects to handle about 4,700 relief cases at an estimated cost of $3,150,000. But disasters earlier this fiscal year, including flooding in Missouri and Illinois, have depleted Red Cross relief funds.

Curb said while additional disaster relief funds will be available when the 1984 fiscal year begins in July, tornado season still lies ahead during the current fiscal year.

"We are kind of between a rock and a hard place," said Curb, who advised Red Cross is seeking contributions to sustain its emergency relief efforts.

Rabid skunk found on Boyd Avenue

Residents in the vicinity of 3400 Boyd Avenue are being advised to make sure their pets have current rabies vaccinations after a Midland Animal Control officer captured and destroyed a rabid skunk which roamed the area Tuesday.

Prior to being captured, the skunk was sighted in several places, including the 3600 blocks of Andrews Highway and Humble Avenue, according to an Animal Control spokeswoman.

Rice Freeman Zachery said officers sighted several dogs running loose as they tracked the skunk, which was eventually captured inside a garage in the 3400 block of Boyd Avenue.

Ms. Freeman Zachery said pet owners in the area should ensure their dogs and cats have current vaccinations. She recommended that any pets that might have been scratched or bitten be taken to a veterinarian immediately.

Twenty-two rabid skunks have been found in Midland County this year, an increase of 700 percent compared with the same period in 1982.

The Texas Health Department reported that in Region 12, a 17-county area that includes Midland, confirmed rabies cases have increased by 800 percent this year as compared with 1982.

India pursues national language

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — When the framers of India's constitution got to the section on language they thought it only right to cast out English and adopt something native.

They had 1,652 native tongues from which to choose, and not surprisingly, they picked the most widely spoken — Hindi. This was in 1950, and the constitution writers estimated it would take 15 years for Hindi to supplant English, language of their former colonial rulers.

And so it was deemed that in 1965, Hindi would take over in practice as India's national language. Until then, English was to be used "for all official purposes of the Union."

Thirty-six years after independence from Britain and 18 years after the changeover date, Hindi remains controversial — often leading to violence and protests — and unaccepted as a nationwide official language, while English still is widely used.

By 1963 it was obvious Hindi was not going to flower as a national language, so Parliament passed the Official Languages Act that allowed for the use of English in the courts and government.

The basic resistance to Hindi is that India is a polyglot country. Hindi is the single, most widely spoken language, but still is native to only about a quarter of the population.

The 1971 census, the last year for which language statistics are available, found that Hindi was the first tongue of nearly 158 million people, then about 28 percent of the population. Telegu and Bengali followed with just under 45 million speakers each.

The government does not know how many Indians speak English. A spokesman for the Home Affairs Ministry's department of languages said the information does not exist. Census takers carefully note each individual's native tongue, but not additional languages spoken. Unofficial estimates put the total as low as 2 percent of the population, or about 14 million English speakers.

Andre Beteille, chairman of the Center for Advanced Studies in Sociology at Delhi University, cast the resistance to Hindi into two broad categories.

"The first is strictly material," Beteille said in an interview. "If a civil service examination is given in Hindi, a native Hindi speaker has an automatic advantage."

So entrance examinations and college instruction are given in English. The result is an educated class fluent in English and a bureaucracy that functions in English.

The second basic reason is ethnic and cultural pride. Hindi is foreign to 72 percent of the population, and many of these people feel their own language is superior.

Also, non-Hindi speakers feel it is unfair that they have to learn three languages — their native tongue, English and Hindi — if they want to succeed in modern India.

Because India is a democracy it lacks the ability to impose a national language on its 700 millon people, as China did a few years ago in declaring Mandarin the official tongue. Even attempts to promote greater use of Hindi have led to trouble.

Bloody riots broke out last year in southern Karnataka state when the Kannada-speaking majority objected to the increased use of Hindi in their primary schools.

English is the other side of the language coin in India, and while it almost certainly will never be the national language, it has become more palatable over the years.

Major airlines struggle to survive

By CHRISTOPHER LINDSAY
AP Business Writer

The skies may never clear for America's major airlines, even with falling fuel costs and an improving economy, company executives and analysts say. Lean and hungry competitors are skimming off the industry cream, and more new entrants are poised to attack.

The latest worries add to the burdens of tough times for major airlines, including losses of more than $1 billion over the past two years. And these fears run counter to conventional hopes that an economic revival would increase air travel while falling oil prices lower operating expenses.

John Van Ardsdale, chairman of Providence-Boston Airways, a swiftly growing New England and Florida vacation carrier, noted new airlines had already been challenging mature competition. Other new entrants will spring up when the economy improves and it becomes that much easier for a new line to go into business, he predicted.

For 40 years, the airlines weathered recessions, wars, periods of stunning growth, always with their routes protected from competition and their future ensured by the federal government.

In those four decades, the Civil Aeronautics Board rejected scores of applications from would-be new carriers to serve major markets.

As a result, the entrenched airlines made money, expanded their fleets and put up with the costliest labor settlements of any industry in the country.

A recent CAB study quoted various 1980 and 1981 government reports showing that airline ground employees were routinely more highly paid than comparable workers in business and industry in general.

Costly cities cheap

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — The strength of the U.S. dollar is making the world's most expensive cities cheaper for American businessmen, according to a survey by a business research firm based in Geneva.

But improving dollar values also have pushed three American cities — San Francisco, Chicago and New York — back into the top 20 on Business International Corp.'s list of highest-priced living places.

The survey, released Wednesday, is designed to help companies determine living cost deferentials for executives working outside their home country. The weighted index is based on costs for food, household supplies, recreation, transportation and selected other items.

According to the survey, the strength of the U.S. currency made nearly all of the cities on the list cheaper for Americans compared with a similar survey last year.

For the second straight year, Lagos, Nigeria, topped the list of 86 cities, followed by Tokyo and Cairo. Mexico City was at the bottom with an index of 41 against Lagos' 144, and New York's 100.

Oslo, ranked No. 3 last year with an index figure of 125, remained Europe's most expensive city but dropped to ninth overall place with an index of 109, followed by Zurich, 102 and 14th among the top 20.

Prosecutor: Suspect matches story to tape

BROWNSVILLE (AP) — A prosecutor suggested Friday that a young farmer changed his story about how he killed two people after he learned one of the slayings had been tape recorded.

Cameron County District Attorney Rey Cantu said Paul Wolf, 21, of La Feria, fixed his testimony to go along with an insanity defense.

Wolf is on trial in state district court for last summer's slaying of school teacher Leticia Castro, 26. He also is charged with killing Miss Castro's fiance, Billy Staton, who unwittingly recorded his own death.

He has pleaded innocent by reason of insanity to the two killings.

"Isn't it true that the defendant's first story to you doesn't match the facts of the objective tape recorder," Cantu asked a psychiatrist who examined Wolf at the request of a defense attorney.

Dr. Richard Coons of Austin said it was true Wolf had changed his story, but said that was common among distraught patients.

Coons also testified that Wolf tried to protect his wife, Sherry, and friend, Glenn Henderson, by saying he acted alone.

Wolf originally had told psychiatrists he killed Staton after Staton first attacked him. Wolf also originally said Miss Castro attacked him first.

Then, Cantu alleges, Wolf discovered the existence of the "murder tape."

Wolf testified Thursday that he killed the pair in a sudden act of desperation over love of a child and fear for her mental health.

Cantu alleges that Miss Castro and Staton were ambushed and beaten to death because of problems the Wolfs were having with Staton, Mrs. Wolf's former husband, over their daughter.

Wolf testified that he watched repeatedly as the child he considered his own daughter cried and kicked when she was with Staton.

"He didn't love that girl," Wolf said of Staton's daughter Melanie.

White still wants teachers' salaries raised

AUSTIN (AP) — Forced to choose between two campaign promises, Gov. Mark White said Friday he would rather back a general tax increase than renege on his pledge to raise teacher salaries.

White said he still believes a "sin tax" — on cigarettes, liquor and arcade games — will pay for the two-year teacher pay raise of 24 percent contained in his proposed budget.

But if not, he told a newspaper editor who asked, if a tax increase would be required, "I'm prepared to do that if necessary.

"I have laid out a proposal for taxing certain luxuries and I think before we have a general tax increase, we ought to tax luxuries," White told Cox Enterprise Inc. newspaper editors holding a national meeting here Friday.

When he campaigned for office last year, White promised "we won't have to raise taxes while Mark White is governor." He also pledged, however, to raise Texas teachers' salaries, which have fallen below the national average. Two major state teachers' organizations endorsed and campaigned for White.

But Comptroller Bob Bullock has reduced the state's revenue estimate twice since White's budget was issued on March 1, and Bullock says he probably will reduce the estimate again in May.

The Legislature cannot spend more than the revenue estimate without increasing taxes to cover the difference.

Later Friday, a teachers' group held a news conference to say its members feel betrayed by state senators who reduced proposed teacher salary raises to avoid a general tax hike.

In response to Bullock's pessimistic outlook for the state's income, the Senate on Thursday passed a public school finance bill that would give teachers a maximum 9 percent raise in 1984-1985.

"I'm sticking to 24 percent. I think that's realistic," White told the newspaper editors.

John Cole, president of the Texas Federation of Teachers, told a Capitol news conference his group was "greatly appreciative" of White's position, but insisted "legislators must face up to the fact that a tax increase is necessary and unavoidable."

House speaker sued for recovery of $450,000

FORT WORTH (AP) — A federal court lawsuit accuses Texas House Speaker Gib Lewis and an associate of setting up a corporation for the primary purpose of reducing tax liability on a failing business.

Rufus Garrett, a court-appointed trustee for the corporation, filed the suit Thursday that seeks recovery of $450,000 in debts owed by W.W. Shipman & Son Inc., a produce firm owned by Lewis and James L. Odom.

Court documents show the corporation filed a bankruptcy petition on April 8, 1982.

Lewis and Odom each bought a half-interest in the company from the Shipman company in 1973, according to the suit.

Bomb explodes at service station

GRAND PRAIRIE (AP) — A bomb exploded Friday at an Exxon U.S.A. service station where a police officer was awaiting telephone instructions from suspects in an extortion plot against the oil company, authorities said.

The officer was not injured, but a phone booth where the bomb exploded and a police car were damaged, Grand Prairie Police Officer Gene Kilgore said.

Tom Kelly, FBI special agent in charge of the Dallas office, said agents were "in the midst of an extortion investigation."

"We haven't established a connection between that bomb and the extortion attempt," Kelly said.

Officials received a call from security employees at Exxon's district offices in Dallas shortly after noon Friday informing officials of a bomb threat, Kilgore said.

Utilties company requests account

AUSTIN (AP) — Gulf State Utilities Co. has asked the Public Utility Commission to set up a special account for about $112 million in refunds that will eventually go to Gulf States customers in Texas and Louisiana.

The Beaumont-based utility asked creation of the the special interest-bearing escrow account before the second week in May until the PUC determines exactly how to make refunds to 250,000 customers in Texas, a PUC statement said Friday.

Cecil Johnson, Gulf States legal services manager, said the refund money stems from settlement last month of a lawsuit between Gulf States and one of its natural gas suppliers, United Gas Pipeline Co, over natural gas pricing.

The 1974 suit concerns United's alleged inability to supply gas under the provisions of a contract signed in 1965. Gulf States claimed gas was supplied at higher than contracted prices with occasional curtailments of gas deliveries in the early 1970s.

Senate candidate to stump in Dallas

AUSTIN (AP) — Sen. Lloyd Doggett, D-Austin, who says he is considering a race for the U.S. Senate in 1984, said Friday he will be in the Dallas area Sunday meeting with neighborhood organizations.

Doggett said he spoke in Fort Worth, Weatherford, Arlington, Grand Prairie and Dallas during the past week telling listeners that "the Democratic Party can beat (Sen.) John Tower (R-Texas) in 1984 but not with a look-a-like warmed-over-Republican type candidate."

Doggett said he anticipates an aggressive Democratic primary in 1984 in which there would be candidates with diverse records and perspectives.

"Democrats can't afford not to have sharp debate on the issues," he said. "The person we will be electing will represent us in the U.S. Senate into the 1990s, and that's too long to have someone who runs as a Democrat in Texas but votes as a Republican in Washington."

Apartment fire injures three people

HOUSTON (AP) — A three-alarm fire gutted six apartments at a northeast Harris County complex Friday, injuring at least two people, authorities said.

Four volunteer fire department responded to the fire at the Capewood North Apartments.

Buddhist monk goes through grueling 12-year regimen

MT. HIEI, Japan (AP) - High on this mountain perch overlooking central Japan's Lake Biwa, a modern monk who remembers Mickey Mantle and Sonny Liston is finishing the last years of an ancient Buddhist rite of passage.

Ajari, 39, has weathered eight years of a grueling 12-year regimen of isolation, fasting, prayer and physical feats that only 18 others have completed in this century.

"My life is not that different from the average salaryman's (white-collar worker's)," he says. "Every man should be very involved in his profession. The goal is devotion."

Ajari (he uses no other name) sits on a square cushion with his legs crossed and his back erect, methodically inscribing scores of wooden "omamori," or talismans, with scarlet Sanskrit symbols.

Ajari is a descendant of a line of Tendai Buddhist monks who brought their religion from China and have lived in the forest atop this 2,800-foot mountain for more than a millenium.

For 600 years, the sect's bellicose monks held sway over emperors in Japan's old capital of Kyoto, a few miles to the southwest, and vanquished religious rivals at will. They razed temples, raped women, and rampaged until their influence was briefly snuffed out in 1571, when the forces of Gen. Nobunaga Oda burned their mountain stronghold.

Many of those monks were "good-for-nothing pretenders," Ajari says. Then he smiles and recounts an old saying: "Three things cannot be tamed: the roll of the dice, the waters of the Kama River, and the monks on Mt. Hiei."

Ajari first came here as a frightened 15-year-old sent by his father, whose cloth business in southern Japan had failed. Since then, his rigid pursuit of Buddhist discipline has earned him the respect of acolytes and the public.

"He always wears white. That way he's always prepared to die," says a 21-year-old disciple.

His single-minded devotion also has caught the imagination of reporters, filmmakers, and a mix of believers and the curious — some of whom one disciple describes as "fans." "You know," he says, "like the Beatles."

Ajari says most of those who straggle down a winding path to pray and seek serenity at his temple are "middle-aged ladies with family problems." His devotees include men and women of all ages.

"My world here is not so small," he says. "People come to see me."

A year ago, several disciples carried an emaciated Ajari down the stone steps of his mountain redoubt after the monk spent eight days praying before a fire in an ordeal that allowed him no food, drink or sleep.

"I wanted to drink more than anything," he says. "The concentration was always there, but the body didn't want to obey."

In eight years, his vows have allowed him to descend from a prescribed eight square-mile area on his mountaintop only once, on a ritual visit to Kyoto's ancient imperial grounds.

The hardest of his ordeals was the walking discipline, he says. For seven years, he marched a fixed distance of up to 50 miles a day for 100 or 200 straight days. In typhoons, sweltering heat, in good health and bad, he walked. Each time, he trudged over the steep, rugged terrain of the mountain wearing a long hat, straw sandals and white robes.

"One day I was so sick I thought I might die," he says. "It was May 28, 1977. But I left it to fate and to Buddha."

At 5 o'clock one recent morning, Ajari began the day chanting a sutra under the gaze of a Buddha glowing by candlelight. Six acolytes accompanied him in the darkness as he scampered from hall to hall performing his rites.

When he finished, he stopped his disciples in a foyer and demanded to know who left a pair of toilet slippers out of place.

"It's tough being a disciple," he says later with a broad smile. "You always get scolded. I scold my disciples, but it's an expression of love."

Ajari's philosophy, briefly, is that strict obedience and training are essential, that perseverence and devotion pay off, and joy comes from keeping active.

"Being a monk is a matter of accepting orders, of willingness to be taught. If I see my teacher make a mistake, I say nothing and accept it as a lesson."

Ajari readily concedes that his life of austerity on this mountain is not as harsh as that of the monks who preceded him. A few accoutrements of 20th century living — a gas heater, a telephone, stereo and home video equipment, instant coffee, tins of cookies — have crept into his spartan Buddhist haven. But he shuns all this when he undergoes his disciplines.

Ajari eats a strict but varied vegetarian diet that excludes eggs and fish. At breakfast, he uses chopsticks to eat toast in a meal that includes shredded cabbage with mayonnaise, papaya, soup and coffee. In a playful mood, he holds up a glass of milk and says in English, "white whiskey."

Then he rubs his shaved head and slowly recalls the names of American athletes: "Mickey Mantle, Sonny Liston, Cassius Clay..."

Learning mathematic principles by rote may be obsolete, educator says

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's schools should stop wasting time teaching children how to divide long numbers and concentrate instead on giving them a better understanding of mathematic principles.

That's the conclusion of a new report from the National Assessment of Educational Progress, which says schools may have succeeded in getting students back to the basics — but not much beyond that.

The testing agency, which is financed by the federal government, reported a marked improvement between 1978 and 1982 on 13-year-olds' scores on its math tests.

But it said the improvement was largely confined to answering routine math questions, such as recognizing geometric figures and solving simple, one-step problems. The teenagers ran into trouble when given an extra number or an additional computation to perform.

The report said it is easier to use calculators to divide large numbers, and schools should not waste time teaching children to do it the long way.

Shirley A. Hill, professor of education and mathematics at the University of Missouri-Kansas City, said public demands for "back-to-the-basics...and rote memory may be a formula for obsolescence."

She said it was ironic that at a time when the Japanese are trying to develop computers with artificial intelligence, "we are spending the better part of our educational energies teaching our children mechanistic skills."

The agency, which periodically surveys the educational skills of American children aged 9, 13 and 17, tested 46,000 students for the math report, which follows similar surveys in 1973 and 1978.

The agency said that 17-year-olds, who lost ground between the first two assessments, leveled off this time. There was no significant change for 9-year-olds.

Black and Hispanic students at each age, while performing well below national levels, made greater gains than their white classmates.

The test combined both multiple-choice and open-ended questions. The agency's statisticians say they need to ask only 2,000 students a question to predict how all American schoolchildren would fare on it.

Beverly L. Anderson, director of the testing agency, said students have trouble doing math in their heads or estimating answers, skills that "are critical in an age of calculators and computers."

"Only 20 percent of the 9-year-olds could do a problem like '58 minus 9' in their head, while 70 percent could do a similar calculation using paper and pencil," she said. "Just 55 percent of the 17-year-olds could successfully multiply 90 times 70 in their heads."

"Doing an adequate job...simply is not what it's about in this world today," said North Carolina Gov. James B. Hunt Jr. at a news conference.

Hunt, the chairman of the Education Commission of the States, which runs the testing agency, said the United States must raise its education standards to solve its economic problems.

Conservationists battle over park land

WASHINGTON (AP) — Conservation groups say they will wage a major battle in Congress over legislation called "the most bald-faced, wholesale assault on our national park system in its history."

The bill, proposed by Senate Majority Whip Ted Stevens, R-Alaska, would allow big-game hunting on 12 million acres of national parkland in his home state.

The proposal has 17 sponsors in the Senate and 75 sponsors in the House, plus the support of the National Rifle Association and the Wildlife Legislative Fund of America.

Conservation groups including the Sierra Club, the Wilderness Society and the National Parks and Conservation Association say they do not want to fight hunters. In fact, they said they feared the battle would be used to drive a wedge between them and hunters who often have been their allies.

But they said they cannot allow more than a third of the national park acreage in Alaska to lose full protection less than three years after the parks were created, particularly when 340 million acres of Alaska already are open to hunting.

"The integrity of the entire national park system, not just parks in Alaska, is central to the real issue," said former Interior Secretary Cecil Andrus.

"If Alaska parks are not safe from tampering, how long before Congress will be asked to take parkland from Yellowstone, or the Great Smokies, or Yosemite, and turn it into hunting grounds?" he asked.

The groups said they were reactivating the Alaska Coalition, the lobbying group that worked to create the Alaska parks.

At its peak during congressional debate on the Alaska lands bill in the late 1970s, the Alaska Coalition included 53 conservation groups. Sponsors said that 29 groups have signed on to fight the new bill.

"This is the kind of issue on which there simply can be no middle ground," said Michael McCloskey, executive director of the Sierra Club. "Sen. Stevens' bill is, on its face, the most bald-faced, wholesale assault on our national park system in its history."

Under Stevens' bill, 12 million acres in eight national parks would be redesignated as "national park preserves," where sport hunting is allowed.

The parks affected are Gates of the Arctic, Lake Clark, Wrangell-St. Elias, Kenai Fjords, Denali, Glacier Bay and Katmai national parks and Anaikchak National Monument.

Kenai Fjords, near Anchorage, would be completely reclassified as a preserve. The others would have portions reclassified, ranging from 88,000 acres for Aniakchak to 5.1 million acres for Gates of the Arctic.

Propane tank blasts rock U.N. Plaza Hotel

NEW YORK (AP) — Two propane tank explosions atop the 40-story United Nations Plaza Hotel rocked the skyscraper and set fire to its top floor today, but the blaze was quickly extinguished, authorities said.

No injuries were reported.

The explosions in the hotel right across the street from the U.N. complex occurred minutes before noon as four workmen were tarring the roof, using propane for heating, said police spokeswoman Alice McGillion.

The men "apparently had some warning" and managed to escape unharmed, she said. She said the propane tanks "apparently had a problem."

The chain of events went from "smoke, fire and then the blast," she said.

Several witnesses said they saw a smaller fire first, then heard two explosions that blew off part of a rooftop facade. The cause of the first blaze was not known.

Patrick J. Kennedy, 28, of Lindenhurst, N.J., a steel worker on the roof of a wing opposite the explosion site, said he saw the fire first. "Two men threw a blanket over it and it looked like they had it out," he said.

But as he left for lunch, he said he heard the explosions high above him.

After the blast, a second alarm fire was sounded, and as traffic was blocked off on First Avenue from 42nd to 46th streets. About 1,500 people were evacuated from the building, and 70 firefighters quickly put out the blaze, said Fire Department spokesman Arthur Manfredi.

Joe Wallace, a former doorman at the hotel, said the top floor of the hotel contained mainly air conditioning and other building maintenance equipment.

"There's a few big tanks up there like a water tank," he said. "There are no rooms up there. It's just a big open space enclosed by the skin of the building."

'Pauper' leaves money to church

SHREVEPORT, La. (AP) — Secret funeral services were held Friday for Margaret Siders, who lived in squalor but left $250,000 to the United Pentecostal Church.

She was buried in Greenwood Cemetery in a plot purchased by the United Pentecostal Church as close as possible to the grave of her late husband, who died six years ago.

Judge denounces plan to curb milk overproduction

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — A federal judge ruled Friday that the government's plan to curb milk overproduction is constitutuional, but he denounced the measure and the legislators who passed it.

"I am compelled to uphold the dairy provisions of the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act even though it is bad law and the statute is unwise," U.S. District Judge Howard G. Munson said.

"I do not agree with Congress," he added. "I must support a measure which may, inevitably, bring the decline of many dairy farmers in a day when the very existence of the individual farmer is threatened."

The act authorizes Agriculture Secretary John Block to deduct up to $1 per 100 pounds of milk sold by dairy farmers in efforts to slow down excess milk production, which the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Commodity Credit Corp. is required to buy. Last year the USDA paid $2.4 billion to underwrite a $13.10-per-hundredweight support price.

Munson reserved decision on arguments by Syracuse lawyer John B. Carroll that Block violated the U.S. Administrative Procedures Act. But he rejected Carroll's seven-point constitutional challenge and his request for a restraining order to keep the USDA from implementing the act today.

Justice Department lawyer Stephen E. Hart, who represented the government, said the law would apply to milk sold beginning Saturday, but the first surcharge collection would not begin until May 8. After Sept. 30, the full $1 is to take effect, he said.

Judges in Utah and Idaho earlier this year rejected similar constitutional challenges. The case also was in court in South Carolina, Pennsylvania and Wisconsin.

Block originally hoped to implement a 50-cent assessment on Oct. 1, 1982.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Sunday, April 17, 1983

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: This was the birthdate of Nikita Khruschev, novelist Thornton Wilder, financier J. P. Morgan and baseball's Cap Anson. Also sharing your birthday: CBS newscaster Harry Reasoner and actor Lon McCallister. People and opportunities from the past will return this year. Use self-discipline to set things right. You find new romance by expanding your circle of friends. Take advantage of an invitation to travel. Someone could try to deceive you at place of employment this coming autumn. Don't fall for it. Guard your financial security! With patience, you will be able to establish a new rapport with parents or offspring. Move slowly.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Spell things out for a nosy neighbor. Your time with your family is too limited to be interrupted by needless intrusions. Romance could send someone the wrong signals. Set the record straight.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Short trips are fun today. A picnic could be the best way to entertain. No elaborate preparations are needed. Family member makes a surprise announcement. Withhold judgment until things settle down.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A romantic interlude makes this a day you will long remember. Do not dismiss youngster's demands. Socializing with the boss may not be a good idea. Raise extra cash by selling attic clutter.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Forgive and forget a difficult romantic partner. You will probably find greater happiness in just being friends. Share your assets with a loved one who has suffered a setback.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): New friends provide intellectual stimulation. Meet your family obligations before going off to a concert or sports event. Others are depending on you. Maintain your confidence. Success is just around the corner.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A visit with an old friend heals an emotional wound, setting you free. An up-and-down love relationship is depressing. Cut the tie once and for all.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): An apology helps clear the air at home. Plan a day that will be rewarding and fun for the whole family. A phone call accelerates romance. You are viewed as an exciting date.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Be good to yourself today. Let others do more of the work. You enjoy the company of intelligent members of the opposite sex. Try out a new recipe on an understanding date.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Although money isn't everything, it is easier to relax when there is no cash flow problem. Be a good listener. A short trip could lead to a marvelous romantic interlude.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Your energy tank remains full despite a busy schedule. Use your personal magnetism to gain the support of a wealthy individual. Socializing could increase your earning power. Plan ahead.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A family discussion could put you on the spot. Your social graces can be useful in promoting romance. Do not let a tricky friend manipulate you. A lost heirloom is found.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Fireworks are likely if you fail to explain why you recently had lunch with an old flame. Your current love is ready to explode and a foe is fanning the flames.

Disney goes cable

BURBANK, Calif. (AP) — You can wake up with Mickey Mouse and go to bed with Davy Crockett. It's the Disney Channel on pay TV.

The new network premieres Monday on about 400 cable systems in 43 states. It has four million charter subscribers, but the number is expected to double within the year.

"It's a natural for us to go into cable television," says Ron Miller, president of Walt Disney Productions.

"We have a personality. When you speak of Walt Disney you speak of family entertainment," he says. "Parents don't have to worry about what their children are going to see.

The Disney Channel makes its debut as the long-running Walt Disney television series is leaving the air. The Disney show was introduced in 1954 on ABC. It switched to NBC in 1961, and two decades later moved on to CBS.

The Disney studio is not deserting commercial television. It will continue to make series like "Zorro and Son," currently in limited run on CBS.

Miller says he has no worries about cable, despite the fact that at least two networks, CBS Cable and The Entertainment Channel, had folded in recent months.

"We've got a $2 billion set in Florida (Walt Disney World) and we're going to do two shows a day from there," he says. "We've got the entire Disney library going back more than 50 years to draw on, including 'Alice in Wonderland' and 'Dumbo.'"

But 13 of Disney's greatest classics, including "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" and "Pinocchio," will not be shown. Miller says they are being withheld until it becomes technically possible to prevent viewers from videotaping shows off of television.

James P. Jimirro, president of the Disney Channel, says the network will present 16 hours of programming a day. The programming will come from three sources, the Disney library, new shows produced by the studio, and programs purchased from other producers.

"We've husbanded our library over the years and we have 30 years of Disney TV shows that have never been syndicated," he says. "We've never allowed our cartoons to be shown on Saturday morning, and we've got 450 cartoons never seen on television. We have 'True Life Adventures' that have not been on television in many, many years."

In addition, Jimirro says, Disney has invested $45 million in 13 new series for the channel.

George Plimpton will be the host of a cartoon show called "Mouseterpiece Theater."

Tom Wilhite, Disney's vice president for production, is producing "Disney Studio Showcase." "It's a chance for us to experiment with new filmmakers," Wilhite says. "There are many talented filmmakers who aren't ready yet to make a feature."

Other new shows include:

"Contraption," a half-hour weekly game show for young contestants featuring a life-size, three-dimensional gameboard.

"Dreamfinders," in which six children join the affable Dreamfinder and an excitable dragon in solving problems and seeking out new information.

"Mousercise," a daily half-hour show of exercise and health and nutrition tips.

"New! Animal World," in which host-producer Bill Burrud brings his world of animals to cable television.

The network also has in production a variety show featuring the best performing talent from college campuses around the country.

Traumatic brain injuries afflict many

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — A young man's severe brain injuries left him partially paralyzed, blind, speechless and unable to function without constant supervision.

Another man appeared normal but can no longer withstand the rigors of academic life and has abandoned a career as a college professor.

Both suffer from the effects of traumatic brain injury, a "silent epidemic" that experts say may afflict more people than the total number of victims of cerebral palsy, muscular dystrophy, multiple sclerosis and spinal cord injury combined.

Nationally, 500,000 people survive severe traumatic brain injury each year. Between 30,000 and 50,000 never return to normal life, according to the National Institutes of Health.

Most TBI victims are male, between the ages of 15 and 30, says the Traumatic Brain Injury Support Group, Inc., a private, non-profit organization, based in Norwich. Sixty percent are injured in motor vehicle crashes and another 14 percent are hurt in falls or sports. The rest are victims of assaults, gunshot wounds, swimming and bicycle accidents, and child abuse.

Their injuries range from a bump on the head to severe blows.

FOR MANY, LIKE the former college professor who bears no outward sign of injury, life is filled with misunderstanding, frustration and withdrawal.

"I have a young woman who was a respiratory therapist and now she is unemployed because she's so fatigued she can no longer work a full day," said Jean Harkens, director of the Traumatic Brain Injury Support Group.

Often TBI victims are misdiagnosed as mentally retarded, she said. They usually cannot hold a job because employers cannot cope with their special needs for repeated and explicit instructions.

Because of their dependence they place financial and emotional burdens on their families. "People who formerly lived in a better way, they must now accept doles in order to get by," Ms. Harkens said.

The injuries frequently result in a rebounding of the brain within the skull, leading to damage far from the initial injury location.

Since specific areas of the brain control various intellectual and physical functions, each injury usually produces a unique set of problems. They can include temporary or permanent disability in concentration, memory, learning, abstract thinking, social adjustment, oral and written communication and physical coordination.

BECAUSE OF THE complexity of brain injury, complicated and individualized rehabilitation programs are needed. But until recently, treatment consisted mainly of neurosurgery and convalescence.

"Many...hospitals have established separate head injury units in recognition of the fact that very special therapeutic approaches are required," said Dr. Martin L. Spivack, president of the National Brain Injury Foundation based in Framingham, Mass.

"Even in these units, however, there are rarely personnel trained to treat the cognitive and behavioral" problems that arise in the patients, he said.

Still, the medical profession is convinced that the condition of the traumatic brain injured can be improved, although treatment and rehabilitation require long periods of time and can be difficult to ascertain.

In Connecticut, Gov. William O'Neill has appointed a task force to study existing services, possible alternative programs, and the need for financial and other forms of assistance to families of victims.

This Traumatic Brain Injury Task Force — composed of medical experts, representatives of seven state agencies, private groups and relatives of TBI sufferers — "will have to focus its work on the need for acute care when injury...first strikes, as well as short-term and longer-term rehabilitation," the governor said.

BARBARA DEL Buono of Waterbury was among the speakers at a recent task force hearing in Stamford. Her 31-year-old son suffered serious brain damage when he was assaulted five years ago. He was in a coma for eight months.

Although Del Buono was left blind, unable to speak and paralyzed on his right side, he has learned to communicate through a specially designed, one-handed sign language consisting of 150 gestures.

Two give birth almost in unison

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Two women who share the same doctor, and gave birth on the same day at the same hospital, returned 23 months later to do it again.

On May 5, 1981, Denise Weldon of Tuscaloosa and Cheryl Tynan of Birmingham gave birth at Baptist Medical Center-Montclair.

Mrs. Weldon had a boy and Mrs. Tynan a girl.

Last week, the two women again entered the Birmingham hospital and at almost the same moment, on April 5, they again had children.

The only change in the new scenario was that Mrs. Weldon had a girl and Mrs. Tynan a boy.

All four children were delivered by Dr. Ronald Goldberg.

The women said they had no idea Dr. Goldberg had been the doctor for both of them. As it turned out, both had visited him, usually on Mondays, during their pregnancies, and both had visited him on the Monday before the births last week.

After the women delivered, Mrs. Weldon recovered in room 419. Mrs. Tynan was next door, in 417.

The hospital staff is wondering if the couples are planning another encore.

Mexico incensed by ban

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The Reagan administration's decision to withdraw 55 Mexican products from a preferential trade agreement represents a painful blow to the Mexican economy, the government newspaper El Nacional said.

Partial elimination of the trade agreement, whereby certain Mexican products entering into the United States are granted especially low import tariffs, "affects the backbone of President Miguel de la Madrid's economic policy."

In an unsigned editorial recently, the government-run daily said the decision was out of line with "certain statements by high-ranking North American authorities.

Holocaust survivor finds event impossible to forget

WICHITA FALLS (AP) — Certificates of achievement line the walls of Steve Landon's office, attesting to his business career. But one success in his life carries with it no letters of merit.

Landon is a survivor of the German Holocaust. Although no reminders of the event 40 years ago exist in his office, the retired manufacturing plant owner doesn't want to forget it.

"It's not something you can forget. It's impossible to forget," he said, rubbing the bridge of his nose beneath his wire-frame eyeglasses. "We still suffer from it. There isn't a week that goes by that we don't wake up with nightmares, having to shake ourselves to know that we're not there."

The U.S. Holocaust Memorial Council has designated this week as a memorial for the Jewish victims of World War II.

Sitting at his desk, Landon calmly went about his day's business, talking long-distance to a business associate in Canada about the advantages and disadvantages of different kinds of industrial sprinkler systems.

Steve Landon

ON TOP of his bookcase are several framed photographs, one a group portrait of Landon, his wife and three children, the others picturing a daughter's graduation and marriage.

A consultant for his manufacturing company and some former customers, Landon finished his telephone conversation and returned to the subject at hand. He spoke with the aid of several small notecards printed in the precise hand of an engineer.

Landon was recalling events that changed his life, his family's and his people's beyond anything imaginable. Sitting in his comfortable office surrounded by the evidence of a successful business career and happy family life, it was hard to believe that the conversation was about the murder of six million people.

Landon prefaced his remarks with the hope that this wouldn't be the only Steve Landon story. For most of the four decades since World War II, he said, he never had spoken of his 2½ years in an SS special military forces collection camp in Belgium. His wife, Erica, is a survivor of the Auschwitz extermination camp.

THE ANNIHILATION of Jews, carried out by the German state under Adolph Hitler in World War II, defies understanding.

"The Germans did this for no reason — no military gain, no strategic reason," Landon said. "It was sheer murder, which the Nazis professed as their sacred goal.

"This is where the misunderstanding is: Genocide has happened throughout history — there hasn't been a country in the world in which it hasn't happened — and it always has served some purpose," Landon said.

"But this wasn't genocide as defined in the Nuremberg trials. This was sheer, sadistic murder. How he (Hitler) justified it, I can't understand to this day," he said.

"The Holocaust went beyond war crimes or genocide that had occurred throughout history," he said. "It was a unique event: man's inhumanity against man...not for military or strategic gains, not for land or property, not within the range of normal human events.

"When Pope John Paul visited Auschwitz, he saw the monuments of the different nations with plaques in various languages. These plaques testify only to the different languages spoken by the victims, who were of but one nationality,' the pope said. 'They were Jewish.'"

LANDON PAUSED, then said in a quiet voice, "This was the magnitude of the Holocaust: a story like 'Exodus,' 'The Winds of War' or 'Sophie's Choice' multiplied by six million. Every one of these six million has a story of prewar home, persecution, cruelty, hunger, survival and despair.

"The final chapter is only different for the survivors," he said.

Landon was 21 years old and living in Amsterdam with his parents and two sisters when World War II began.

"On May 10, 1940, Germany invaded Holland," he said. "We didn't know what Hitler's plan was.

"We had hoped Holland would remain neutral like it was in World War I. But the Germans conquered Holland and Belgium in four days, and after that, there was no escape," he said.

Soon after Holland was occupied, the Gestapo and SS troops began blocking off streets in Jewish neighborhoods, seizing young people and sending them off to what the Germans called work camps. In a week or 10 days, their parents would receive a note saying their son or daughter had been shot while trying to escape.

Landon narrowly avoided one of these seizures and then decided it was time to get out. He went to Belgium and was trying to make it into unoccupied France when he was caught at the border by the Gestapo.

THE GERMANS didn't check his fake identification papers carefully enough to discover he was Jewish, Landon said. Instead, they turned him over to the Belgian police, who held him in prison for a week and then deported him back to Holland.

Landon again traveled to Belgium, ending up in Brussels, where he said the Belgians were better able to cope with the German occupation than the Dutch. He was caught again and put into what was known as a collection camp after he was identified as a Jew by the Gestapo.

"The camp was located between Brussels and Antwerp," he said. "Its purpose was to gather all Jews from Belgium and northern France and send them from there to the extermination camps. We didn't know this at the time; we had no idea that the Germans would do something like this."

Landon was fortunate. He fixed a watch for an SS officer, and that officer took him out of the line "going on transport," as the prisoners called the journey in cattle cars to the death camps.

He remembered the winter of 1942 as "bleak and bad," with severe beatings, hunger and other privations.

Thatcher chastises shipyard workers, strikers

LONDON (AP) — Extolling "eternal" Victorian values of hard work and self-reliance learned from her grandmother, Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher chastised uncompetitive British shipyards and striking automobile workers Friday.

"I was brought up by a Victorian grandmother," said Mrs. Thatcher, 57-year-old daughter of a grocer. "You were taught to work jolly hard; you were taught to improve yourself; you were taught self-reliance; you were taught to live within your income; you were taught that cleanliness was next to godliness," she said in a radio interview.

She said it was a "tragedy" that no British shipyard could meet the Cunard Line's eight-week deadline for a $3-million refit on the liner Cunard Countess — prompting the line to have the work done in Malta.

"We have got to compete!" she declared. "It's no earthly good people saying, 'No matter how long it takes us to deliver, we have got to have the business.'"

She also said the 5,000 striking auto workers who have halted production on British Leyland's new Maestro car "are going to put jobs into the countries of our competitors. That is ridiculous."

Mrs. Thatcher espoused the volunteerism advocated by her counterpart across the Atlantic, President Reagan, and said:

"There are some values which are eternal, and in fact you found a tremendous improvement in conditions during Victorian times because people were brought up with a sense of duty.

"Many of the...improvements that were made, were made voluntarily in those times, for example people built hospitals, there were voluntary hospitals."

After hearing the interview, one of Mrs. Thatcher's political opponents, Adrian Slade, Liberal Party leader on the Greater London Council, said:

"I'm appalled. The Victorian age was the peak of poverty and privilege. Heaven help us if she wins another term."

Despite the near-trebling of unemployment during her administration to 3.17 million, or 13.6 percent of the work force, Mrs. Thatcher pledged to stick to her tight-money policies if returned to office in the next general election.

She expressed "cautious optimism" over Britain's economic prospects and said, "One of our great achievements is that everyone now recognizes that Britain commands respect the world over."

Police break up campus riot

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — An estimated 500 riot police stormed onto the campus of Korea University on Friday and broke up a noisy anti-government demonstration, witnesses said.

They said about 70 students were detained for questioning.

A small group of students started the campus demonstration, shouting anti-government slogans, and the rally soon snowballed with several hundred joining a march led by a torch-carrying leader, the witnesses said.

When the police moved in, many students fought back by throwing rocks, and the police fired tear gas, they said.

Gunmen steal $130,000 from van

CORK, Ireland (AP) — Six masked gunmen in combat fatigues raked a security truck with bullets and stole $130,000 in a hold-up near Cork, police said Friday.

They said the gang struck Thursday, firing a dozen shots into a van delivering the cash to banks in the area and forcing it to crash into a stone wall.

They shot at a police car escorting the van before disarming the three officers inside and forcing them to lie on the road. The gang then rifled the van, manned by two security men.

General takes command in Europe

HEIDELBERG, West Germany (AP) — Gen. Glenn K. Otis took command of the U.S. Army in Europe Friday, replacing Gen. Frederick J. Kroesen, who will retire.

Kroesen, who survived an assasination attempt by the terrorist Baader-Meinhof gang in September 1981, was presented with two distinguished service medals during the hour-long change-of-command ceremony.

Otis, 54, last served as the commander of the U.S. Army's Training and Doctrine Command at Fort Monroe, Va.

Hijacker surrenders to police

ATHENS, Greece (AP) - A lone Turkish hijacker surrendered to Greek police early Saturday morning after releasing 114 other people, including six Americans, from a Turkish airliner he commandeered Friday afternoon, police said.

Police said the hijacker was between 25 and 30, was armed with a knife and a bottle filled with an unidentified substance, and was suspected of being a member of the ultra-leftist Turkish organization Dev-Sol.

The hijackers released 40 passengers after the Turkish Airlines Boeing 727 landed in Athens at 6:57 p.m. but held 67 other passengers and seven crew members hostage for seven hours while he demanded safe passage to Sydney, Australia.

A U.S. Embassy spokesman said the freed Americans were David Taylor and five members of a family from South Carolina, Donald and Shirley Simms, their two sons, Joe and John, and his mother, Sarah Simms.

Beaumont makes Cubs yearn for Mesa

BY TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

It was a typical West Texas pitchers' battle...plenty of pitches, plenty of pitchers and plenty of new baseballs.

Beaumont, beginning to make the Cubs wish they'd stayed in Mesa or El Paso, beat Midland, 16-14, in 10 innings at Cubs Stadium Friday night, making it four losses in a row for the Bruins.

It was a Texas League game that had everything, even, surprisingly, good defense and an old-fashioned dugout clearing brawl.

Among the barrage of 31 hits, 17 by Beaumont, there were seven homers, all by the garishly golden Gators. Midland didn't hit a one, and is still wondering how it lost. How do you lose when the other teams issues 10 walks, commits seven errors and surrenders 14 hits, not to mention a hit batsman?

Beaumont centerfielder John Kruk hit two homers, but it was his two run triple in the 10th that won it. Kruk wound up with six rbi for the night and his heroics with the bat were lengendary even before the deciding triple off Midland's Jim Gerlach.

THE CUBS led at one point, 8-3, then rallied in the eighth to take a 13-11 lead, but a walk and Kruk's opposite field homer to left off Ray Soff tied it in the ninth at 13. Then, with two out in the ninth, Ozzie Guillen hit a solo homer to the opposite field, left, that's where the wind was blowing. In fact, five of the six Gator homers were hit to left by left-handed batters.

Midland tied it at 14 in the home ninth when George Borges singled to open the inning and Tom Lombarsky rattled the left field fence with a two-out double.

But the run only delayed the inevitable. Gerlach walked Ronk to start the 10th. After Martin's sacrifice, Mark Gillaspie, the only Gator to go hitless, but who one who had been a headache in the two previous games, was passed intentionally. The law of averages should have been working against Kruk, but he still drilled a triple into right-center.

THE BRAWL came in the second after 10 Midland batters had trekked to the plate, thanks largely to starter Jim Leopold's wildness, to give the Cubs a 4-3 lead in the first. Rick Baker, who had three hits for the night, beat out a bunt single and took second on the wild throw by relief pitcher Jim Oberbruner. He then tried to score from second on a fly ball to center.

Catcher Martin was waiting with the ball, so Baker tried to conceal his embarrassment by bowling over Martin. It was his only hope.

It was a fine collision. Martin held the ball and nudged Rick with a knee while he was still on the ground. It didn't look like he was saying, "Nice slide, kid." Next came words. Then, a serious shoving match. And, then, both dugouts at a gallop...John Wayne leading one side and Errol Flynn the other.

Order was restored, but the brawl, with both sides using bats, continued into extra innings.

The teams play again tonight with Stan Kyles getting the "Stopper" role for Midland while Bob Patterson tries to make it four straight for the Gators.

IN ADDITION to Baker, Lombarsky and Bill Walsh each had three hits for the Cubs who appeared on the way to a come-from-behind win when newest addition Mike Anicich hit a three-run double in he four-run eighth that gave Midland a 13-11 lead.

Defensively, there were some breathtaking plays, like Walsh, a rolling catch of Purpura's sinking liner to right, after a long run to his left...Gillaspie copy-catting the catch to rob Tommy Johnson in the 10th...and innumerable others that would have been the talk of the game another time. But with all that offense, who noticed the defense.

NL umpires up in arms over George

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — National League umpires are considering a trip to New York City next week to protest remarks by New York Yankees owner George Steinbrenner, but the action would not be a walkout, their attorney said Friday.

"I am very seriously considering having the umpires come into New York next week," said Richard Phillips, general counsel for the Major League Umpires Association.

"I don't really anticipate a walkout," he added. "There will be games that umpires can get to and there are games they can't get to.

"We're not doing this to miss assignments. We're doing this because it's something important."

The dispute arose over remarks attributed to Steinbrenner, who was quoted saying that National League umpires tend to call plays in favor of the league's players during exhibition games between the National and American Leagues.

The umpires, who consider the remark defamatory, want Kuhn to suspend Steinbrenner, Phillips said.

Kuhn is investigating the matter but has declined comment.

Charles Feeney, NL president, said Thursday he was unaware of a strike threat but said he had been informed by Phillips that the umpires wanted to go to New York next week to meet with Kuhn.

"As far as boycotting a game," Feeney said, "they better not do that."

Phillips declined to say when the umpires would go to New York or how long they will give Kuhn to act.

"I don't want it to appear like we have a gun to their heads," he said.

"We will do so (go to New York) if the commissioner's action is not quickly forthcoming. And we will then have the umpires come into New York to Bowie's doorstep and also they will go to the U.S. federal courthouse where we will institute litigation."

Bulldogs hope home field helps

By ROBERT BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

If the home field is going to be an advantage for the Midland High Bulldogs this season, now is the time to use it.

Starting with today's 2 p.m. game against Abilene Cooper, MHS has three of its last five games at Memorial Stadium Field. They host Odessa High on Tuesday and then Abilene High on April 26. The San Angelo and Midland Lee games are the only ones left on the road.

However, it has made little difference so far for the Bulldogs where they play their games since they've compiled a 3-6 District 4-5A record and are 10-12 overall.

HITTING HAS been a big area of improvement for the Bulldogs in the last few outings and it has been a major reason for two wins in their last three games. They had enough hits to get a victory against Big Spring on Tuesday, but ended up losing in 10 innings, 9-8.

Keith Clay is still leading the Midland High attack with a .348 average, but James Pitts is making a strong comeback and has now improved to .345. Though all of his hits have been singles, he has the speed to stretch them to doubles through stolen bases. Pitts leads the team in that category with six.

Doug Daehling, used sparingly at the plate, is 3-for-10, and now has the Bulldogs' only home run of the 4-5A season. He took a pitch from Big Spring's Jinx Valenzuela and put it over the left field fence Tuesday.

MIDLAND LEE was, at one time, playing the best baseball in 4-5A after getting off to a 6-0 start for a two-game lead. However, the Rebels have been struggling in their last three outings and have dropped into second place at 6-3 behind the streaking San Angelo Bobcats, 7-2 with seven straight wins.

Today the Rebels start a two-game road trip in Abilene against Cooper, 3-6.

ELSEWHERE IN 4-5A today, league-leading San Angelo hosts celler-dweller Odessa Permian and Odessa High and Big Spring fight for control of third place and a possible move into second when the Steers host the Bronchos. All games will be played at 2 p.m.

Elway still has to clean third floor

STANFORD, Calif. (AP) — The work schedule on the board of the Delta Tau Delta fraternity house shows John Elway's chore for the week. Clean up the third floor.

It doesn't matter that Stanford's All-America is about to decide whether to become a millionaire outfield prospect for the New York Yankees or a millionaire "can't miss" quarterback in the National Football League. Among the Delts, Elway is just another frat brother.

The house on the hill in the corner of the campus is abuzz with strangers. The telephone rings constantly. Everyone, it seems, wants to know whose money the 22-year-old senior is going to take.

THE BIG date is April 26, when Elway is expected to be the top choice in the NFL draft — if he hasn't signed first with the Yankees.

The Baltimore Colts, by virtue of their winless season in 1982, have that No. 1 pick, but Elway could force them to trade it by refusing to play in Baltimore. He already has hinted he'd prefer Seattle, the Los Angeles Raiders, San Diego or Dallas — if he plays football.

He turned down a reported $2.5 million contract with the Oakland Invaders of the United States Football League, but hasn't closed the door to them. If the numbers and team in the NFL aren't right, and if he decides against baseball, Elway could wind up in the new league next year.

As an economics major who will graduate with his class in June, Elway appreciates the power of his position. He is perhaps the most sought-after two-sport athlete of all time.

He knows it doesn't make good business sense for him to talk about which sport or which team he prefers, so he'd rather talk about other things.

"I don't want to jeopardize my options," he said after a round of golf last week. He said he's in contact with his agent and his father almost daily, keeping track of the wheeling and dealing around him.

GEORGE STEINBRENNER, the Yankees' blustery owner who doesn't like to lose pennants or bidding wars, is wooing Elway with sonnets of gold and the allure of the big city. It is a sophisticated, high-powered campaign, sometimes reminiscent of the devil's tricks to get Joe Hardy in "Damn Yankees."

Steinbrenner teased Elway with about $140,000 for playing six weeks of Class A ball for the Oneonta, N.Y., Yankees last year. Elway teased back with a .318 batting average and 25 RBI in 42 games.

This weekend, the blue-eyed blonde with the innocent looks is Steinbrenner's guest in New York. Elway said before leaving that he's eager "to see Yankee Stadium for the first time" with his girlfriend, Janet Buchan, and his mother and father.

A source close to Elway says Steinbrenner already has put a bid on the table: $7 million for seven years with an option for Elway to back out after two years.

Elway, his agent, Marvin Demoff in Los Angeles, and his father, Jack, insist that no concrete offer has been made.

Bill Bergesch, the Yankees' vice president for baseball operations, said Wednesday night that representatives of the American League club have not seen Elway "in quite a while. I don't know if we will have a face-to-face meeting, but we will have some discussions (with him) before the NFL draft."

So far, the Yankees have not made a money offer, Bergesch added.

Steinbrenner is a hard man to turn down when he's in a check-writing mood, but friends of Elway say his heart belongs to football.

MIKE DOTTERER, who played football and baseball at him at Stanford, thinks Elway will choose pro football if "the right deal, with the right organization," can be worked out.

"He's more of a family-type person," Dotterer said. "Football is more conducive to family life. Baseball is a long season and you're on the road a lot. I think John would prefer being close to home. But when you're dealing with George Steinbrenner, you never know what to expect."

Elway's girlfriend also feels he wants to play football.

"I want John to be playing whatever he's most happy with, but I'd like to see him play football," said Buchan, a member of Stanford's swimming team. "If he ended up playing baseball, it would be a whole new experience."

SHE SAID the money being offered Elway is "almost too much for me to fathom. It almost doesn't seem realistic." But she added that "it's not going to be money," that will ultimately influence Elway's choice.

"It's a landmark labor agreement in professional sports." — NBA Commissioner Larry O'Brien, on the tentative four-year pact, which will make the NBA the first pro league to guarantee players a share of gross revenues.

Ray Patterson fears coin flip in race for Sampson

HOUSTON (AP) — Coin flips have been good to Ray Patterson, who was the Milwaukee general manager when the Bucks won the rights to Lew Alcindor in 1969. But Patterson, now president and general manager of the Houston Rockets, doesn't much like the idea of getting ready for another one, this time for another franchise-saver, 7-foot-4 Virginia All-American Ralph Sampson.

Patterson says the Rockets are so bad they deserve to get Sampson outright, with no game of chance.

It may not happen that way.

UNDER NATIONAL Basketball Association rules, the teams with the worst records in the Eastern and Western conferences flip a coin for the first pick. Houston, as worst in the West, has its own No. 1 pick plus the one of Cleveland's. If the Calvaliers finish last in the East, Houston has both No. 1 picks without a coin flip. But if Indiana finishes last in the East, the Pacers and the Rockets will toss for Sampson.

And if Indiana and Cleveland tie for worst in the East, then a blind draw will be held to determine which goes first in the college draft. If it's Cleveland, again there will be no coin toss; if it's Indiana, there will be.

The only way Houston can avoid some kind of game of chance would be for Cleveland to lose its last two games and Indiana to win its last two. The Cavaliers and the Pacers played at Indianapolis Friday night, with Cleveland closing its season at home Sunday against Washington and Indiana finishing at home Sunday against New Jersey.

The Rockets got into this situation by trading two-time NBA Most Valuable Player Moses Malone to Philadelphia. The deal included Cleveland's No. 1 pick, which the 76ers had acquired in an earlier trade.

REGARDLESS, Patterson says the whole situation is unfair.

"To have so much riding on luck is wrong," Patterson says. "You'd think a team with the worst record in the NBA wouldn't have to flip a coin.

"I would like to see a balanced schedule (with all teams playing each other) and the team with the worst record getting the first pick."

Houston's record was 14-66, a .175 winning percentage, going into this weekend's final regular-season game.

It was Patterson's good fortune as general manager of the expansion Bucks in 1969 that allowed Milwaukee to win a coin flip with Phoenix for the rights to Alcindor, the UCLA star who later changed his name to Kareem Abdul-Jabbar.

All risk aside, Patterson says getting Sampson is not quite as critical to the Rockets as getting Alcindor was to the Bucks.

"I REALLY thought it (selecting Alcindor) was a matter of having a franchise or not having a franchise," Patterson said. "If we hadn't gotten Jabbar, I wouldn't have been there very long."

But the Rockets could survive if they lose Sampson, Patterson said.

"NBA franchises of 13 years ago were not nearly as prestigious as they are today," Patterson said. "I think the Rockets are among the top five or six franchises today because of our ownership, and I've got 12 more years of experience."

The Rockets are assured of no worse than picking two of the top three players in the draft.

"The advantage of getting Sampson would be an immediate surge in ticket sales," Patterson said. "But if we don't get him, two of the first three picks won't be bad. That wouldn't have the sudden effect of getting Sampson but in the long run it would come out about the same."

PATTERSON SAYS the Rockets weren't trying to finish last, even it meant being rewarded with Sampson. Even Malone's departure, he insists, didn't make the Rockets the worst team in the league. The final blow, he says, was forward Robert Reid's retirement.

"I really didn't think we'd finish last until Reid left," Patterson said. "After that I didn't see anyone else with less talent than the Rockets."

Andretti wrecks Newman's Indy car

HAMPTON, Ga. (AP) — The new glamour team of Indy-car racing, featuring Mario Andretti driving for actor Paul Newman, ran into its first real problem Friday.

Andretti, who already had turned in a fast lap of nearly 199 mph at Atlanta International Raceway, lost control of his new Budweiser-sponsored Lola and slammed into the wall.

The crash during a practice session for the Indy-car end of Sunday's Kraco Dixie Twin 200s set the new team, co-owned by Newman and Chicago businessman Carl Haas, back a bit.

"I just lost it," explained the uninjured and imperturbable Andretti. "Believe it or not, I was going to come in (to the pits) on the next lap. The car was running real good, but, before we went out, we made some adjustments on the height of the car and it didn't stick (to the surface) the way it had been."

The front end of the low-slung Lola was damaged beyond repair and Andretti said he was lucky his feet and legs were not injured. The 1969 Indy 500 winner and 1978 Formula One world champion said he pulled his legs back up under him.

Tigers' Wilcox flirts with no-hitter

By The Associated Press

Milt Wilcox pitched 8⅔ innings of perfect ball, losing his no-hitter when pinch-hitter Jerry Hairston singled with two out in the ninth inning, as the Detroit Tigers defeated the Chicago White Sox 6-0 Friday night.

Wilcox, who had struck out eight, was only one out away from the 11th perfect game in major league history when Hairston came to bat for Jerry Dybzinski, who had grounded out and fanned in two previous at-bats.

Carlton Fisk had led off the Chicago ninth by flying out routinely to Larry Herndon, only the fourth ball hit out of the infield against Wilcox to that point. Wilcox then went to a 3-2 count on Mike Squires, batting for Vance Law, before getting Squires to ground to first.

That brought Hairston to the plate, and the White Sox pinch-hitter lashed Wilcox's first pitch, his 104th of the game, up the middle on a line for a clean single, ending the no-hit bid.

There hasn't been a no-hitter in the major leagues since Nolan Ryan pitched his fifth, a 5-0 gem against the Los Angeles Dodgers, on Sept. 26, 1981. The last perfect game in the majors and in the American League was by Len Barker of the Cleveland Indians on May 15, 1981.

Then Wilcox, a right-hander who is only five days from his 33rd birthday, left Hairston stranded on first, however, when Rudy Law grounded out to first baseman Rick Leach for the final out of the game.

The White Sox, who had scored 27 runs in their previous three games, were baffled by Wilcox on this cold, blustery night at Comiskey Park before 19,483 paid patrons.

Red Sox 4, Rangers 1

Jim Rice had three hits, including a two-run homer in the first inning, and the Boston Red Sox rolled to a 4-1 victory over the Texas Rangers on the eight-hit pitching of Dennis Eckersley and Bob Stanley.

Eckersley, 1-1, surrendered a home run to Billy Sample on the first pitch of the game but settled down to blank the Rangers on five hits until giving way to Stanley at the start of the eighth. Stanley checked Texas in the last two innings in earning his second save.

Royals 4, Brewers 3

Frank White tripled in one run and scored the winner later in the sixth inning on a sacrifice fly by Jerry Martin as the Royals defeated Milwaukee 4-3 to spoil the defending American League Champion Brewers' chilly home opener for 54,049 fans.

Larry Gura, 3-0, scattered five hits over seven innings in 37-degree temperatures and occasional snow flurries to become the major leagues' first three-game winner. He received two innings of relief help from Dan Quisenberry, who earned his third save.

The crowd was the fourth largest Opening Day turnout and the sixth largest ever at home in Brewer history.

Angels 8, Twins 2

Home runs by Reggie Jackson, Fred Lynn and Bobby Grich carried the California Angels to an 8-2 victory over the Minnesota Twins behind the eight-hit pitching of Ken Forsch.

The game began about four hours after the Metrodome roof was reinflated following a quick patch job to repair a rip caused by Thursday's heavy snowfall.

Blue Jays 6, Yankees 5

Ernie Whitt's two-out, tie-breaking single in the ninth gave Dave Stieb and the Toronto Blue Jays a 6-5 victory over the New York Yankees.

Dave Collins led off the ninth with an infield single, chasing Rudy May, 0-1, who was replaced by Goose Gossage. Collins moved to second on Damaso Garcia's bunt and after Willie Upshaw, who homered in the third, was intentionally walked, Whitt singled to center field.

Stieb, 2-1, allowed eight hits while walking five and striking out seven.

Astros 7, Expos 6

Craig Reynolds' 10th-inning single gave the Houston Astros their first victory of 1983 following a record-tying nine-game losing streak, a 7-6 triumph over the Montreal Expos.

Phil Garner led off against reliever Ray Burris, 0-1, with a single to right field. He took second on a grounder by Jose Cruz and Burris intentionally walked pinch-hitter Alan Ashby. Reynolds then drilled his single to center. The victory, his first in the major leagues, went to Bill Dawley, called up earlier in the day from Tucson of the Pacific Coast League.

The Astros share the National League's modern-era record for the most consecutive victories at the start of a season with the 1918 Brooklyn Dodgers, 1919 Boston Braves and 1962 New York Mets. The all-time NL record is 11 by Detroit in 1884 and the major league all-time mark is 13 in a row by Washington in 1904 and the Detroit Tigers in 1920.

Cardinals 5, Mets 2

George Hendrick slugged his third home run in three games to lead the St. Louis Cardinals to their fifth consecutive victory, 5-2 over the New York Mets.

John Stuper, making his first start of the year, scattered seven hits and struck out three batters in eight innings before Bruce Sutter took over and recorded his first save of the season.

Hendrick's third-inning homer, a two-run shot, came off Scott Holman, 0-1. It helped send New York to its fifth consecutive loss.

Mac O'Grady chips to the 10th green during Heritage golf action Friday and he went on to become the first round leader.

Time pays O'Grady

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. (AP) — Mac O'Grady, a 31-year-old rookie who made 17 tries at the PGA tour qualifying school before gaining his playing rights, shot a 6-under-par 65 and took a one-stroke lead Friday in the rain-delayed and uncompleted second round of the $350,000 Sea Pines Heritage Classic.

"When you've waited as long as I have to get here, when you've played some of the places I have, it's absolutely Christmas every single day out here," O'Grady said after he put together a 36-hole total of 133, 9-under-par on the rain-soaked, 6,650-yard Harbour Town Golf Links.

A heavy shower delayed play for two hours and 13 minutes in the morning, a delay that eventually stranded 13 players on the course and claimed Jodie Mudd as disqualification victim.

Mudd, who had shared the first round lead with a 66, had played three holes — all in par — when the rains came. When Mudd and the others in his group, Mike Holland and Clarence Rose, returned to the course to resume play, Mudd's caddy, Eugene Dozier, was among the missing. And the caddy had Mudd's clubs. Lacking clubs, he could not play. After Holland and Rose had played two shots, Mudd was disqualified.

"I have no statement. I don't want to say anything about it to anybody," Mudd said and left the course immediately.

He and the others unable to finish, marked their position on the course and will return at 8:30 a.m. EST Saturday morning to complete their rounds. The field then will be cut to the low 70 scorers and third round play will be held later in the day.

Chaps suffer defeats

Both the mens' and womens' tennis teams at Midland College suffered 5-4 defeats to Angelo State Friday, capping a four-match week of play.

The women won three of their four matches during the week, defeating South Plains twice and New Mexico Military Institute once. All matches were won by 6-0 counts.

Against Angelo State, three automatic defaults did in the Lady Chaparrals as they dropped the 5-4 decision. It was only their fifth defeat of the year against 16 victories in dual match play. In Western Junior College Athletic Conference play, MC is 5-0.

The men defeated Angelo State last fall by the same 5-4 score they lost by Friday.

During the week, the Chaps scored two 5-4 victories over South Plains and lost one to NMMI, 7-2. On the year, the MC men are 12-19 and 2-3 in WJCAC play.

On Tuesday, the MC women will travel to Odessa to take on the University of Texas Permian Basin at 2 p.m. and on Thursday the men and women will host NMMI on Thursday in the final dual match of the year. Friday the conference tournament gets underway at 9 a.m. and will conclude on Saturday. On April 29-30, Midland College will host the Region V Tennis Tournament.

Now it's tendinitis

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Rollie Fingers reports that what had been a career-threatening muscle tear in his right arm has completely healed, but the Milwaukee Brewers' star relief pitcher has another injury to worry about.

Fingers, who began the American League baseball season on the disabled list, is eligible to be activated Saturday. But he will remain sidelined for an indefinite period because of tendinitis in his pitching elbow.

"After you don't pitch for seven months it's hard to be patient, but it's just something I have to deal with," Fingers said Friday.

He tore the muscle in his right forearm last Sept. 2 and was sidelined for the rest of the season, including the AL playoffs and the World Series.

"The tear has completely healed, but the tendinitis bothered me for most of spring training," Fingers said. "It comes from not throwing."

Islanders blank Rangers

By The Associated Press

Duane Sutter scored three goals for his first National Hockey League hat trick and the New York Islanders toyed with the New York Rangers Friday night, winning the second game of their Patrick Division finals 5-0.

The Islanders lead the best of seven series 2-0, entering games three and four of this quarterfinal matchup Sunday and Monday nights at Madison Square Garden. The Islanders have won five straight postseason games on the Rangers' ice.

Islander goalie Billy Smith stopped 23 shots in posting his fourth lifetime playoff shutout. His most uncomfortable moment came late in the game, when the Islanders were forced to kill off 1:27 while two men short.

The three-time Stanley Cup champions dominated Friday's game from the outset. John Tonelli blasted a slap shot past Ranger goalie Glen Hanlon just 54 seconds into the contest and the Rangers never came close to catching up.

Bruins 5, Sabres 3

Mike Krushelnyski scored two goals and the Boston Bruins survived a late comback by the Buffalo Sabres to post a 5-3 second-game victory and even their NHL playoff series.

NHL Playoffs

The Bruins rebounded from a 7-4 thrashing by Buffalo Thursday night to tie the best-of-seven quarterfinal series 1-1. The next two games are scheduled in Buffalo Sunday and Monday nights.

The Bruins led 4-0 after two periods, but Phil Housley spoiled Boston goalie Pete Peeters' shutout bid with a goal at 12:19 of the final period.

Black Hawks 7, North Stars 4

Bob Murray and Tom Lysiak scored lightning-quick goals in the second period and Denis Savard added two third-period goals to lead the Chicago Black Hawks to a 7-4 playoff victory over the Minnesota North Stars.

The triumph gave the Hawks a 2-0 lead in the best-of-seven quarterfinal Stanley Cup series, which now moves to Minnesota for the third and fourth games Sunday and Monday.

Blasting to a 3-0 lead in the first period, the Hawks locked it up in the second period when Murray scored a power-play goal from the point at 6:06 and Lysiak made it 5-0 with his third playoff goal at 6:41.

Despite having to play in the afternoon because of a conflict with the Chicago Sting soccer team, the game drew a standing-room-only crowd of 17,506.

Oilers 5, Flames 1

Jari Kurri scored for the Edmonton Oilers on the first shot of the game and the Oilers went on to beat the Calgary Flames 5-1 to take a 2-0 lead in their best-of-seven National Hockey League quarterfinal playoff series.

The series now shifts to Calgary for games Sunday and Monday.

Kurri's goal came only 39 seconds into the game as the Flame defense left him all alone on the left side of the net, from where he put home a pass from Glenn Anderson.

Calgary defenseman Jari Eloranta tied the game at 4:36 but goals by Randy Gregg and Don Jackson, the first in the playoffs for both, put the Oilers ahead 3-1 before the period ended.

Garvey goal comes today

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Steve Garvey's return to Dodger Stadium Friday night was more than just a homecoming for the former Los Angeles first baseman.

It was a chance to tie Billy Williams' National League record for consecutive games played — 1,117.

Garvey, who now wears a San Diego Padres uniform, can break the mark when he plays against his former teammates in a night game today, which like Friday's, is a sellout.

Garvey's streak dates back to Sept. 2, 1975, when he sat out a game with San Francisco because of the flu.

If he breaks the record, he'll rank third, behind Lou Gehrig (2,130 games) and Everett Scott (1,307 games), on the all-time list of iron men.

"I've probably thought about this weekend every day since I signed with San Diego," said Garvey, who signed a free agent contract with the Padres on Dec.21 after more than 12 years as a Dodger.

NMJC takes conference win

HOBBS, N.M. — New Mexico Junior College used the Hobbs Country Club course to its advantage Friday while firing a team score of 288 to win a Western Junior College Conference golf tournament.

Odessa College was second with a 291 while Western Texas College had a 293. Midland College posted a 299 while South Plains had 301 and New Mexico Military Institute 317.

Medalist honors were shared by OC's David Montelongo and WTC's John Rucker with two-under par rounds of 70. Midland College freshman Jeff Cranford had an even par round of 72, qualifying him for the Region golf tournament later this year. MC's Scott Ananogstelis also had a good round of 74.

Other MC efforts were Mike Swartz, 76; Emil Hale, 77; David Stilwell, 78; and Dan Kloza, 80.

The WJCAC teams travel to Odessa Friday for the next conference tournament.

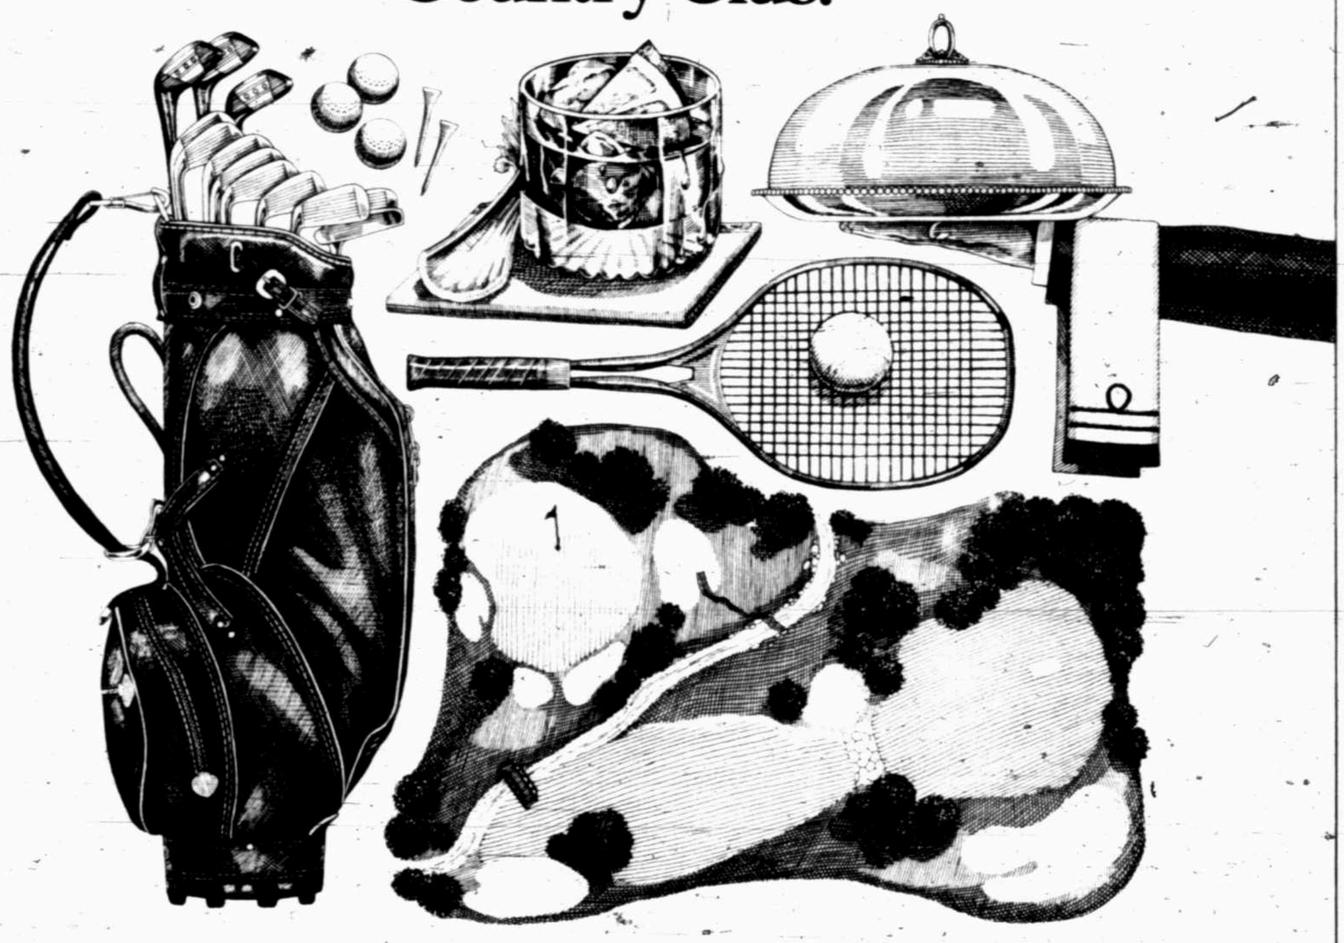
Mission Country Club.



Never has so much been so easy to attain.

The most beautiful, well-planned, comprehensive golf and country club in West Texas is on its way toward completion. And now, for a limited time and as little as $1500 down, you can be on your way to enjoying the most desirable membership opportunity Midland-Odessa has ever seen.

With its man-made lakes, waterfall, hundreds of trees, and magnificent clubhouse, Mission Country Club is destined to be one of the most dramatic social and athletic gathering places within the Permian Basin.

As part of Mission Dorado, a totally planned residential, commercial and business center sprawling over 2,262 acres, Mission Country Club has been carefully designed to provide an open and comfortable center of activity for members and their families.

Its clubhouse was conceived by world-famous architect O'Neil Ford. And in addition to an excellent championship golf course, Mission Country Club's plans also include a separate Athletic Center, with tennis, racquetball, steam room, exercise room and swimming pool.

Mission Country Club's new 18 hole course is opening in July of this year. An initial payment of $1500 now will secure your private or corporate membership, and entitle you to the immediate use of all existing facilities. Once your initial corporate membership has been acquired, subsequent memberships will be available at a substantial reduction.

Mission Country Club promises to be the most exciting country club in our part of the state. Call us today, or take Highway 80, then exit north to Old Bankhead Highway.

There's never been anything like it. And there's never been a better way to attain such a quality membership.

MISSION COUNTRY CLUB
Let it be yours.

Bill Rodgers battles cold as Boston Marathon nears

BOSTON (AP) — Bill Rodgers, four-time Boston Marathon winner, is fighting a cold that could keep him out of Monday's 87th running of the prestigious 26-mile, 385-yard race.

"I'm doing everything to get rid of it," Rodgers said Friday about the illness that hit him last Sunday. "But it has left my resistance low and made me very tired. I've been sleeping a lot the last few days.

"Also, when I've run, I've gotten a little dizzy."

The 35-year-old Rodgers, who is considered the cofavorite with Greg Meyer, one of his closest friends, in his 10th Boston Marathon, said he was suffering from "just a head cold."

"I don't think it's the flu," he said.

He said he had "a tiny fever," but had not seen a doctor.

"In my mind, I'm running," said the fiercely competitive Rodgers. "But I probably will not decide until Sunday or even Monday morning. I hope I can get rid of it by Sunday."

Charlie Rodgers, his brother, said "Bill was sort of lucky that he got sick when he did — when he had started to cut back on his training."

Rodgers, who has been pointing for the race "for a long time," had been putting in heavy training — an average of 122 miles per week — in quest for his fifth Boston Marathon victory and a berth on the United States team that will compete in the inaugural World Track and Field Championships at Helsinki, Finland Aug. 7-14. The first three American finishers Monday will qualify for the U.S. squad.

"It would be quite a setback if I couldn't run Monday," said Rodgers, the Boston Marathon champion in 1975, 1978, 1979 and 1980, and winner of a total of 20 of 37 marathons in his distinguished racing career.

In addition to trying to close in on Clarence DeMar's record of seven Boston Marathon victories and shooting for a berth on the American team for the World Championships, Rodgers has two other goals in mind Monday.

"I want to join the 2:08 club," he said, referring to the small group of marathoners who have run the distance in less than 2 hours, 9 minutes. "And I want to run well enough to be ranked in the Top 10 in the world this year."

Alberto Salazar, the 1982 Boston winner who is not defending this year, has the fastest marathon time in history — 2:08:13 at New York in 1981. Rodgers' best is 2:09:27 at Boston in 1979.

Until suffering the cold, Rodgers said he had been "in very fit condition" for the race.

He had won his last two marathons — at Melbourne, Australia last year and the Orange Bowl Marathon at Miami Jan. 22. He also has won two of his last three road races — 10-kilometer events at Mobile, Ala., March 20 and at Little Rock, Ark., April 2.

Last year, Rodgers was ranked No. 5 among American marathoners, with only the top three — Salazar, Benji Durden and Dick Beardsley — cracking the world Top 10 list.

"I want to get back into the world rankings," said Rodgers, who was No. 1 in the world in 1975, 1977 and 1979.

In his last two Boston Marathons, Rodgers finished third in 1981 and fourth last year, in 2:12:39, his slowest in the race since 1974.

"I think I am in better shape this year for Boston than I was last year," he said. "Last year, I had traveled a lot and raced a lot before Boston. I haven't done that as much this year."

Rodgers recalled that in the 1982 Boston Marathon, he stayed with the swift early pace set by Salazar and Beardsley, the eventual runner-up, for the first half of the race (run in 1:04:40) before fading.

"I knew I couldn't hold on going that fast," he said. "And eventually I pooped out and got left in the dust. There was a stretch of about seven or eight miles in the second half of the race where I ran alone.

"Then, with about a mile to go, John Lodwick passed me for third place.

"That was disappointing. I like to finish at least in the top three. I consider that a successful race."

At 35, Rodgers is one of track and field's older competitors.

Valvano stays put

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina State basketball Coach Jim Valvano, who led the Wolfpack to the 1983 NCAA championship, squelched reports Friday that he might take a job with the New Jersey Nets of the National Basketball Association and said he plans to stay at N.C. State.

"I would emphatically like to lay to rest the rumors that have abounded over the last week or so concerning the possibility of my coaching the New Jersey Nets," said Valvano.

"North Carolina is my home and State is the only place where I have any intentions of coaching. My family and I are looking forward to many more happy years here. I only hope the coming years are as enjoyable as the first three."

Valvano also said he plans to continue coaching college basketball and said he has had no contact with anyone from the NBA.

OC hires Myers

ODESSA — Archie Myers, head basketball coach at Big Spring and former Midland College assistant under Jerry Stone, has been named as assistant basketball coach for the Odessa College Wranglers.

According to head OC basketball coach Jim Yeakel, Myers will help with Wrangler recruiting and will also act in a supervisory position for OC's multipurpose facility, currently being built on the school's campus.

Myers guided the Big Spring Steers to respectabililty in District 4-5A this past season, keeping Big Spring in the playoff hunt until the final night of the season when they lost to San Angelo.

Myers played college ball in the Western Junior College Athletic Conference at Howard College, scoring 2,199 points for the Hawks. As an assistant to Stone at Midland College, the Chaparrals won the National Junior College championship.

Myers, formerly from Cleveland, Miss., is married and has two children.

OCC to host Basin tourney

The Permian Basin Regional Golf Tournament will be held Wednesday, May 4, at the Odessa Country Club with a sunup to sundown format.

The two-man scramble will be flighted after nine holes and there will be no tee times between 11 a.m. and 1 p.m. Fee is $29 and includes green fees, cart and entry fee.

Call club pro Jack Bechtold at 366-4445 on Tuesday, May 3, for a tee-time. Prizes will be awarded on Thursday, May 5, at a luncheon at Holidome Country Villa in Midland. Winners must attend to get prizes.

Wheeler gets hole-in-one

Dave Wheeler produced his first hole-in-one Friday while playing at Green Tree Country Club with Rick McCormick and Tim Lawrence.

Wheeler used a 3-wood to ace the 175-yard, par 3 No. 12 hole.

Dollar dips lower in Europe, Japan

NEW YORK (AP) — The dollar was mixed against major currencies in late U.S. trading Friday after drifting lower in Europe and Japan, which enabled the French franc to recover from its record low of 13.66 cents in Paris.

Gold prices also were mixed, but wound up the week with gains of about $15 an ounce. Silver prices climbed above $12 an ounce in U.S. trading.

The dollar's declines were slight in quiet, end-of-the-week trading and dealers attributed the drop to a rally Thursday in the U.S. bond market that pushed long-term interest rates to their lowest levels since last November. Short-term interest rates on dollars on deposit in Europe fell a quarter of a percentage point.

As rates fall, so do yields on dollar-denominated investments. That often lowers demand for dollars over other currencies.

Otherwise, "it was pretty featureless trading with no surprises" Friday, said Peter Rogers, assistant chief dealer at Manufacturers Hanover Trust Co. in New York. Ge said U.S. trading also showed no reaction to the Federal Reserve's late-afternoon report of a $2.2 billion increase in the basic U.S. money supply for the week ended April 6.

In Tokyo, where trading ends before it begins in Europe, the dollar declined to 237.70 Japanese yen from 238.45 yen on Thursday and 238.40 yen at the end of last week.

In London, the British pound improved against the dollar despite cuts in key lending rates Thursday, reaching a late rate of $1.5460, up from $1.5382 on Thursday and more than 4 cents higher than last Friday's $1.5054. Sterling also rose in U.S. trading, to $1.5470 from $1.5445.

Other dollar rates in late European trading compared with Thursday were: 2.4380 West German marks, down from 2.4395; 2.0432 Swiss francs, down from 2.0515; 7.3135 French francs, down from a record high of 7.3185; 1,451.85 Italian lire, down from 1.452.50; and 1.23275 Canadian dollars, down from 1.23325.

Other dollar rates in U.S. trading as of 5 p.m. EST and compared with late Thursday were: 2.4372 West German marks, up from 2.4338; 7.3025 French francs, up from 7.3000; 2.0390 Swiss francs, down from 2.0430; 237.70 Japanese yen, down from 237.95; and 1.2342 Canadian dollars, up from 1.2324.

Gold, meanwhile, closed in London at $435.75 a troy ounce, down from $436 on Thursday. But in Zurich, bullion climbed to $436 an ounce from $434.25.

Earlier in Hong Kong, gold fell $1.05 to close at $435.25.

On the Commodity Exchange in New York, gold for April delivery slipped 80 cents, closing at $437.40 an ounce. That was up $15.70 from a week ago.

In later trading, Republic National Bank in New York quoted gold at $436.50 as of 4 p.m. EST, down 50 cents from Thursday's late bid.

Silver, a major industrial metal, rose in U.S. and European trading after the Federal Reserve reported that U.S. industrial production rose 1.1 percent in March — the fourth straight monthly advance in output.

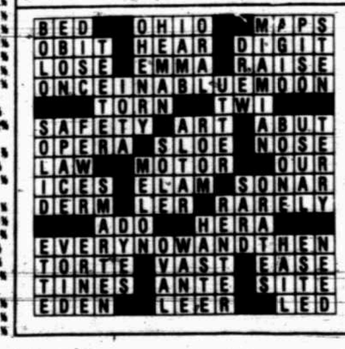
Answer to today's Crossword Puzzle



Rubinoff: Music should give a thrill

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — "Rubinoff and his violin" are still playing partners and making tours 50 years after his concert music lifted the spirits of a national Depression era radio audience.

At 85 years, a third the age of his precious "Strad," David Rubinoff's step is not so firm, his hair no longer black nor his eyesight so keen, but music is still his life.

Even his wife plays second fiddle to it. She calls him "Maestro," deferring to the sparkle in his eyes when he straightens his back, raises his chin and puts his Stradivarius in place.

The violin was made in 1731, and after he acquired it in 1928 he named it the "Romanov" for the imperial family which once ruled his native Russia. It is one of several violins in his house, but to Rubinoff it is the violin. The instrument is insured for more than $100,000 but he won't set a value, saying only, "Who knows, maybe $300,000."

During 1931-35, "Rubinoff and his violin" were a regular feature of the NBC Eddie Cantor radio show. In all that time, he never spoke a word on the air because of his heavy Russian accent. The stand-in voices of Lionel Stander or Ted Bergman introduced his numbers. Rubinoff has composed many numbers for violin and piano, including, "Russian Rhapsody," "Dance Russe," "Fiddlin' the Fiddle," and "In a Spanish Garden," and frequently played them for the radio audience.

"I LET CANTOR be the comedian. I didn't like to talk on the radio and besides, with Cantor, who could compete?" he says.

Rubinoff credits old-time comedy star and close friend Will Rogers with persuading him to play for public school assemblies and encouraging him to go on national radio.

> "The custom is for the teacher to play the student's composition first. I wanted to trick the teacher and make it so difficult he couldn't play it. I made it so tough nobody could play it. Now I can hardly play it myself."

"When he suggested it, I said 'No, not with my accent,'" says Rubinoff. "But Will said, 'Music has no accent,' and so I did...

"What is music? It is interpretation and emotion. If music doesn't give you a thrill, it's not music. It can scare you sometime, but it's still thrilling."

Rubinoff was born Sept. 3, 1897, in Grodno, Russia, and was 5 years old when he persuaded his parents to buy him a half-sized violin.

He studied five years at the Royal Conservatory of Warsaw where, for a recital, he composed "Dance of the Russian Peasant."

"THE CUSTOM is for the teacher to play the student's composition first," he says. "I wanted to trick the teacher and make it so difficult he couldn't play it. I made it so tough nobody could play it. Now I can hardly play it myself."

He was performing at the Warsaw Conservatory in 1911 when he met composer Victor Herbert, who was so impressed he brought the entire Rubinoff family — parents, three sons and a daughter — to his home in Pittsburgh. Rubinoff studied at the Forbes School there, helping to pay his way by working part-time jobs.

He later became soloist with the Pittsburgh Symphony, and has served as guest conductor for many orchestras in this country and abroad.

This past winter, he toured Florida, playing 10 concerts in two weeks and brought back a plaque from a high school at Sarasota. Music and patriotism go hand-in-hand during his public appearances.

"I love Russia," he says. "The Russian people are wonderful. I don't like the government there but that's something else.

"Here, I play concerts all over. I've played as many as four different schools in one morning. I talk to the students about what it means to be in America. I tell them how hard I worked in Russia, walking to school, practicing by oil lamps."

HE PERFORMED at the White House for presidents Herbert Hoover, Franklin Roosevelt, Dwight Eisenhower, and John Kennedy. He played for soldiers during World War II and made a tour of Vietnam.

Shelves in Rubinoff's basement are stacked with loving cups, plaques and other awards presented by presidents, symphonies, cities and theaters across the nation. He frequently wears a diamond-studded medallion presented by the Chicago Symphony after he played to a crowd of 225,000 people in that city's Grant Park in August 1937.

"They could only seat 50,000, but hundreds of thousands were standing all over the field," he says. "It had to be memorable."

Rubinoff lived in Detroit many years because his two brothers were there. One was his manager and the other an attorney.

In 1972 he played to a grade school audience here in Columbus. A lad in the audience was so impressed that the next day he took his mother to another school where Rubinoff had a second concert.

"By the time we found the school and the auditorum we were late and Rubinoff was standing in the spotlight telling the story of 'Clair de Lune,'" Mrs. Rubinoff says. "Then he began to play and I was hooked.

"I WAS A widow with eight kids and selling real estate but when he finished I went up to speak to him. I put my business card in his pocket and asked him to read it later."

He called her a few days later, came to dinner and 10 months later they were married. He moved into her suburban home.

There the decor has become all Rubinoff — Western art and artifacts, a la Will Rogers, mixed with family portraits and music memorabilia.

A large oil portrait of Rogers is near the entry foyer, next to what Rubinoff calls his "quartet of strings" — two violins, a viola and a cello.

Rubinoff says school children give him some of his best memories.

He concludes his school talks by reciting a poem engraved on the back of an oversized pocket watch given him by Rogers, entitled "The Clock of Life."

"After one assembly," he says, "this little girl, she may have been 9 years old, came up to tell me how much she enjoyed the program. She finished by saying, 'May the clock of life never stop for you.' It was emotional for me."

Santeria is melange of magic, spiritualism

MIAMI (AP) — The two grieving disciples met at the Rivero Funeral Home to mourn their dead mentor, a sorcerer. As one man lay with his head in his girlfriend's lap, police say the second pumped three bullets into his skull with a .38-caliber revolver.

Police arrested Miguel Cardenas, 21, on a first-degree murder charge and blamed Santeria — the Cuban-style voodoo — for the slaying.

"It was a black magic thing," said Miami Homicide Sgt. Luis Albuerne. "Apparently the murderer thought the victim had passed along to his spiritual godfather all the bad spells on his head, and that's why he had died."

Such can be the violent and deadly ways of Santeria, the Cuban cult of magic and sorcery that permeates Spanish-speaking Miami, but usually remains hidden behind Main Street-style storefronts.

"If you drive around here, you can't help running into Santeria, if you know what you're looking for," says Dr. Charles Wetli, Dade's deputy chief medical examiner.

Much of Santeria is placid, like the scattering of cowrie shells to tell fortunes or the offering of half-filled glasses of water to honor dead relatives. But to Americans like Wetli, other rites seem exotic, bizarre — an unexpected eruption of Black Africa and the mysteries of the River Niger in the land of frozen food and time-share real estate.

—Headless bodies of goats and chickens float limply down the Miami River, sacrifices to jealous and angry gods. "We get hundreds," complains Dade water control chief Paul Hardy.

—Outside the chambers of Circuit Judge James S. Rainwater, a clerk stumbled on an apple anointed with oil and impaled on a cross, an attempted hex. "It was supposed to cloud my mind and confuse me in a civil suit," says Rainwater, who immediately took himself off the case.

—In Miami Beach, numbing drums sometimes break the night stillness. In nearby Sweetwater, colorful shrines to unfamiliar saints dot neatly trimmed lawns. Across Dade County, more than 20 boutiques sell herbs, talismans, human bones and sacred stones to believers.

"It's not my bag, but I respect it," says Miami Mayor Maurice Ferre, who joined in a ritual feast and dance to pay off a campaign debt. Shunning the wizards of the Afro-Cuban religion in Miami would be "like telling a politician in Boston he shouldn't go to the St. Anthony's parade or the St. Patrick's Day parade," says the mayor.

Santeria, the secret faith of Yoruba tribesmen in Nigeria carried to the New World in the holds of 16th century slave ships, has taken root in south Florida's soil and flowered.

Very early in the New World, Santeria became a secret faith for initiates only. Under the overseer's lash, Cuban slaves converted to Christianity, but cloaked their beliefs in the garments of their new religion's saints.

It is a melange of black and white magics and spiritualism where St. Peter is Ogun, owner of all metals and weapons, and the Christ child is Elegua, god of the tricksters.

Cubans fleeing Fidel Castro's communism in the 1960s brought Santeria to the United States, where sociologists say it became one of their survival tools.

"Santeria seems to give people a faith, a hope," says University of Miami Afro-American Studies Professor O.R. Dathorne. "I would say 40 percent of all Cubans here partake of Santeria. And only 5 percent would have a negative attitude."

In the gloom of Dade County Jail, criminals from the 1980 Mariel boatlift have built tiny altars of cardboard and paper to St. Barbara, worshipped as the fire-breathing warrior god Chango. In homage, believers offer cups of cole slaw. On their backs are tattoos to the Seven African Powers, Santeria's pantheon.

"This is a religion that is very old," says high priest Rigoberto Zamora. "It dates back to the slaves' time and we can't let it die."

But animal lovers, State Attorney Janet Reno and some Cuban-Americans have now allied to condemn some of Santeria's bloodier practices, like the nipping off of pigeon heads and the mutilation of sea gulls to tell fortunes or to appease the religion's gods.

"The primitive worship of gods through the sacrifices of birds and animals has reached epidemic proportions in Dade County," says wildlife activist Jack Kassewitz Jr. "Daily, we receive reports and bodies of sacrificed animals and birds."

Kassewitz's National Wildlife Rescue Team has joined with the Humane Society to offer a $2,000 reward for information leading to the conviction of ritual animal killers. "We're also identifying the priests and priestesses," Kassewitz said.

In retaliation, Zamora and a band of Santeria believers are printing fliers to teach the English-speaking public why their faith requires the ritual slaughter of birds, lambs, goats and deer. They plan to distribute leaflets at supermarkets to show why Santeria has a rightful place in Miami's ethnic and spiritual life.

"We are respectful of the law, but we should be allowed to practice our religion in our churches and in our homes," the high priest says.

Printer has been banished to restroom

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — State officials tired of noise from a high-speed printer finally gave it the silent treatment — banishing the machine to a women's restroom in the House Office Building.

The machine is in the corner of a small lounge area, out of earshot of all but the women who come in to use the facilities or relax.

"When you just want to put your feet up in the lounge, all of a sudden it goes off," said one second-floor secretary. "It's irritating."

Last fall, House Sergeant-at-Arms Wayne Westmark had computer terminals and printers placed in House committee offices as part of a data network used by staffers to keep track of legislation.

One of the printers went to the House Judiciary Office, but as pre-session work picked up, so did the machine's clattering.

"It didn't give you any warning when it would come on," said intern Chris Lombardo, who added that the machine sometimes ran 30 minutes at a stretch. "I had people on the other end of the phone ask me why there were jackhammers in the office."

About six weeks ago, Judiciary staffers decided to evict the machine. Because the printer is shared by two other House committees, it had to stay on the second floor, Westmark said. The only place available for the move was the women's restroom.

Westmark said he hasn't gotten any complaints.

Skydiver erringly lands on her car

AUBURN, Ala. (AP) — Campus police got the jump on a champion skydiver who landed on top of her own car in a crowded parking lot after her parachute was blown off course.

Linda Dickey, a 22-year-old Auburn University senior from Ozark, was supposed to join two members of the Auburn University Parachute Club as part of a charity stunt, but she drifted off target and into the 150-car parking lot.

Ms. Dickey, who won a national collegiate parachuting championship in December, was treated for a few abrasions at the Student Health Center and released, a spokeswoman said.

When Ms. Dickey finally had time to check on the dent she made in her car, she also discovered that university police had given her a ticket for illegal parking.

A sale of any kind is basically for one reason, that being to reduce the amount of inventory so new items may be purchased. This sale in that regard is no different than any other, however, the difference is that we are not gathering merchandise just to have a sale for the sake of having a sale. Our reasons are: (1) We have many one of a kind or discontinued items we need to close out for new item floor space. (2) Through the course of a year items get damaged in one way or another and cannot be sold at regular price. Therefore, we want to emphasize the savings you get on quality merchandise that could easily cost you double at other times.

Illinois doesn't always follow Chicago's lead

An Analysis

By WALTER R. MEARS

WASHINGTON (AP) — As Chicago goes, Illinois does not — not in the past four presidential elections. The days of the big city kingmakers are over, and Mayor-elect Harold Washington need only scan the record of his predecessors to see what can't be done.

Chicago is the most Democratic of major American cities, but Illinois has gone for every Republican presidential nominee since Richard M. Nixon in 1968. Indeed, it has been almost 20 years since the Chicago Democratic organization has been able to get its candidate nominated and elected governor of Illinois.

Richard J. Daley was mayor and Democratic boss of Chicago for 21 years, long enough to see his clout in national Democratic politics wither away. Outgoing Mayor Jane M. Byrne tried to deliver votes for Sen. Edward M. Kennedy of Massachusetts in the last presidential primary election, and all she got was embarrassed.

Washington, the first black mayor of Chicago, will have an impact on the 1984 Democratic presidential campaign, but not as a power broker. His more likely role will be as a symbol, perhaps a catalyst, to black voters in 1984, particularly in the Democratic presidential primaries.

"The whole nation is watching, and Chicago has sent a powerful message," Washington said after his narrow victory on Tuesday. Because of the racial rancor that marked the Chicago mayoral campaign, it took on a special meaning for black leaders who want to unite and mobilize black voters in 1984.

They already are talking of running a black candidate in the Democratic presidential primaries. "It's as logical as a black running for mayor of Chicago," Washington said.

The Rev. Jesse Jackson, the Chicago black activist, said the mayoral campaign had stirred interest and activism "not seen since the Selma-to-Montgomery march" for voting rights in Alabama.

A survey of voters leaving the Chicago polls showed Washington got 97 percent of the black vote on Tuesday. With anything approaching that kind of solidarity in Democratic primaries next year, blacks could make their numbers felt and their demands enforceable at the national nominating convention.

Jackson says that 14 million black voters will be registered by next August, and that both national political parties will have to pay attention to them.

Democratic presidential candidates already are. Former Vice President Walter F. Mondale endorsed a Washington rival in the Chicago mayoral primary. "You make a mistake and pay the wrong debt, you're in trouble," Washington said at the time.

Ali hams it up while car in shop — again

SILVERTHORNE, Colo. (AP) — Muhammad Ali, en route to California, was delayed for three hours in this mountain town by problems with his custom-made Stutz Bearcat.

The former world heavyweight boxing champion made the most of it Thursday, engaging in his usual antics and shadow-boxing with daring mechanics.

It was the second day in a row that Ali's car was sidelined for mechanical repairs. The first breakdown occurred Wednesday in Bunker Hill, Kan., where Ali passed the time signing autographs.

"The way things are going, I'll only get another 300 miles before I'll have to pull over again," Ali said.

While here, Ali addressed several hundred students, gathered in the nearby high school gymnasium, on the subjects of life, love and fortune.

With one hand, he lifted junior Katya Main — a shotputter — into the air, then kissed her hand. He also drew a wad of $100 bills from his pocket and feigned a toss at the crowd.

SCENERY HILL, Pa. (AP) — Few news reporters receive a telephone call from the president. And fewer still win presidential compliments on their stories.

Well, Joe Smydo, 13-year-old part-time reporter for The Bentleyville Courier, has become a member of the elite few and fewer.

President Reagan called the youngster Thursday to compliment him on his sympathetic first-person account of Reagan's speech to a National Alliance for Business conference in Pittsburgh on April 6.

"It was him. It really was. It was his voice," Smydo said enthusiastically. "It was mostly just stunned silence. I said a lot of 'Yessirs' and 'Thank yous.' There was no warning...It was a complete surprise."

Smydo wrote his account for The Pittsburgh Press, which put it on the front page.

"I think that he really knows and feels the pain and heartache of unemployment," the eighth-grader reported in his story.

Smydo said Reagan told him the article had "just reached his desk and that it really brightened his day. He just wanted to thank me for the kind words."

Charlie Daniels

LEBANON, Tenn. (AP) — Country fiddler Charlie Daniels, to avoid problems with a complaining neighbor, has abandoned plans to to build a calf-roping arena on a 15-acre tract he owns in rural Wilson County.

Daniels, 36, withdrew his request for a zoning variance Thursday although several members of the Wilson County Zoning Board said later he probably would have gotten the variance.

Daniels, who lives on his 75-acre farm in a Nashville suburb, had promised area residents that he wanted the arena for family entertainment. There would be no concerts or night events, he said.

But neighbor James Robinson told the zoning board, "I'm still against it."

Daniels responded, "That's all I need it hear. I don't want to cause problems. We can go somewhere else if you don't want us."

Prince Charles

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — Prince Charles, fitting the description on a "wanted poster," was told by a sword-flourishing "trooper" that he would have been arrested had he not showed up with so many loyal followers at his back.

The prince responded by thrusting his equerry, Wing Commander Robert Meares, in front of himself.

The prince and Princess Diana, who was also described on the "wanted" poster, were visiting the restored gold rush town of Sovereign Hill.

The royal couple took a stagecoach ride around the historic site just outside Ballarat, an hour north of Melbourne.

The royal couple then flew from Ballarat to Bendigo, another old mining town.

Their plane, a Hawker Siddley 748 of the Royal Australian Air Force, developed trouble as it approached the small airport.

The pilot was forced to abort his first landing attempt after he was unable to lower the wings' flaps. But he managed to lower them manually and the couple arrived unharmed.

Pony Express back in mail business

POLLOCK PINES, Calif. (AP) — As a volley of pistol shots echoed in the Sierra Nevada, the first Pony Express rider in 122 years galloped into the mountains Friday, his saddlebags stuffed with mail for communities isolated by a landslide.

Malcolm "Mac" McFarland, a 49-year-old California Highway Patrol officer, flourished his Stetson hat and raced from the tiny Pollock Pines post office with his mochila — special leather pouches — crammed with 366 pieces of mail.

McFarland, on his steed Buck, was the first of nine riders in relay who will be carrying the mail on the 40-mile path to snowbound Little Norway near the Sierra summit.

The relay expects to return with quite a few tax returns — in time for canyon residents to beat Friday's midnight filing deadline.

About 120 people gathered to watch McFarland's departure as members of the Judge Roy Bean Club fired blanks from their six-guns into the air.

"...I believe in our heritage," McFarland said. "This will renew our ties with our past."

The original Pony Express lasted only 18 months — from April 1860 to October 1861 — and lost only one rider. Billy Tate, 14, was ambushed by Indians as he raced along a Nevada trail.

The Express carried mail between California and St. Joseph, Mo. Much like the modern Postal Service, it suffered continuous financial problems and lost more than $600,000 in its brief history.

Although the Pony Express has since operated occasionally as a bit of history, as during its centennial in 1960, it never before has carried first class mail. During its heyday it toted private mail and government contracts and in 1960, the riders carried commemorative postage only.

The Pony Express riders, all members of the National Pony Express Association, a group of history buffs, offered to tote the mail after U.S. 50 was severed April 9 by a 1,000-foot-long mudslide.

The slide covered the major trans-Sierra highway with a 50-foot mound of earth and debris and formed a lake half a mile long behind the natural dam.

State officials say it will be at least two weeks before they can reopen the road. Walter Harmon, speaking for the riders, said they will carry the mail through the Sierra until it is repaired.

"We'll make four mail stops — Pacific House, Kyburz, Twin Bridges and Little Norway — six days a week, until the road is back in service," Harmon said.

The riders range in age from 14 to 72. The government sought youngsters in the 1800s — "Young, skinny fellows, not over 18, preferably orphans willing to risk death daily," rugged country boys who rode their horses through Indian country and burning deserts along a 1,966-mile trail.

One rider, "Pony Bob" Haslam, rode 120 miles in 8 hours and 20 minutes with Abraham Lincoln's inaugural address. A historian said Haslam, shot in the jaw with flint-tipped arrows, "lost a few teeth" after his record ride.

The modern-day ride will take the nine riders a total of 4 hours, Harmon said. From Little Norway, a tiny resort near the 7,000-foot level, the mail will be transferred to regular postal distributors.

"It's a pretty poor trail right now," said McFarland. "We'll be going way up around the slide and above it."

"There are logs down on the trail — it's pretty good in parts but bad in some spots, especially over the slide," said 72-year-old Walt Allen, oldest of the riders. Allen, a rugged cowboy in a red bandana and hat, said he's "retired, but I still run a few cattle."

Mail renews widow's faith in man's goodness

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Barney Clark's widow says the "boxes and boxes" of sympathetic mail she continues to receive have given her new faith in the goodness of mankind.

"It's been a revelation to me to know there are so many caring people around the world," said Una Loy Clark, the 61-year-old widow of the first permanent artificial heart recipient. "People have been very, very supportive and caring."

Mrs. Clark said she is swamped by the mail, which she spends "a lot of time" reading. But she dreads the day it stops coming.

"I see the mail coming in and I say, 'Oh dear, what am I going to do with it?' But then I think I'll hate to see the day when it stops," Mrs. Clark said late Thursday.

The Clarks, who spent most of their lives quietly in the Seattle area, were thrust into the public eye Dec. 2 when the Utah artificial heart was implanted in Clark's chest by a team of University of Utah surgeons. Clark lived 112 days with the heart and died March 23.

"I had no idea this would receive the worldwide attention it did," she said. Those who write "seemed to have gained strength from our experience," Mrs. Clark added.

Mrs. Clark denied a statement by implant surgeon Dr. William DeVries, quoted earier this week by The New York Times, that she had received death threats.

DeVries also said his car had been sabotaged and that he had received hate mail from people who believe the artificial heart is contrary to the will of God.

Merman satisfactory after removal of brain tumor

NEW YORK (AP) — Broadway musical comedy star Ethel Merman was listed in satisfactory and stable condition Friday after a four-hour operation to remove a brain tumor, a hospital spokesman said.

Miss Merman, 74, who underwent the surgery Thursday, was removed from intensive care Friday and moved into a private room, said Bernie Wisneski, a spokeswoman for St. Luke's-Roosevelt Hospital Center.

Ms. Wisneski said doctors would only say that the operation was successful and would not detail the tumor's size or say if it was benign or malignant.

Miss Merman was hospitalized April 7, a day after her regular visit to the hospital to entertain patients.

The illness prevented her from attending Monday's Oscars ceremony where she was to have performed a musical tribute to songwriter Irving Berlin.

Ms. Wisneski said the singer was "heavily sedated" and was expected to remain in the hospital for more than a week.

"She'll need to be under observation for quite a while," she said.

Miss Merman, a former secretary from Queens, became an overnight sensation with her rendition of "I Got Rhythm" in the 1930 Broadway production of "Girl Crazy."

She has received "an awful lot of calls from old friends and celebrity pals," Ms. Wisneski said. "Her room is already filled with flowers."

The only visitor she would allow was her son Robert, she said.

Hells Angels subject of movie

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — One definition of a nightmare, the old joke goes, is having your car horn get stuck when you're driving behind a pack of Hells Angels.

"That's probably a pretty good representation of how people see us," says long-time Angel Sonny Barger, president of the group's Oakland chapter.

"But we're just a bunch of guys who like motorcycles and like to hang around together," he said.

Barger, 44, and Sandy Alexander, 40, founding president of the group's New York City chapter, were in town for the world premiere of "Hells Angels Forever," a documentary-style film on the renegade group.

Why San Antonio for the premiere?

"I don't know," shrugged Alexander, who works as an actor and stuntman. "We hear the Southwest is a good market for biker films."

Alexander dreamed up the idea for "Hells Angels Forever" in 1972, acted as co-producer and is featured in the film.

"It's the first Hells Angels movie that isn't a Hollywood script," Barger said. "It's the first time we get to show our side of it."

The 90-minute movie, in Dolby stereo, also showcases some musical "outlaws": Willie Nelson, Jerry Garcia, Johnny Paycheck and Bo Diddley.

The Hells Angels started in San Bernardino, Calif., in 1947, but both men refused to say how many members or chapters the group encompasses now.

AP Laserphoto

Sonny Barger, left, president of a Hells Angels chapter in California, traveled to San Antonio recently for the premiere of "Hells Angels Forever," a documentary-style film about the renegade motor club. Barger, shown with his wife Sharon in this August 1980 file photo, says that the film is not a Hollywood script.

"Why should we help the government out?" Barger asked. "Why not let them figure out how many Hells Angels there are? The police call it a gang, anyway. We call it a club."

He scoffed at recent testimony before a U.S. House subcommittee that the Angels had a long-time contract out on the life of Rolling Stones lead singer Mick Jagger.

"I don't personally like the guy," Barger said, "but that don't mean I want to kill him.

"Let's just say that there are seven chapters in England and he comes over here enough that if there was a contract out on him, he wouldn't be singing anymore," he said.

Barger and Alexander, both burly blue-jeaned men with tattoos, chalked up the Angels' repeated brushes with the law to government persecution.

Barger, who said he works in a Nautilus health club, spent almost six years in a California prison for possession of heroin.

"We're the easiest ones to frame," he said, gesturing at himself and Alexander. "Our names are in the papers all the time.

"Sure we have a few bad apples," he conceded. "But so does every other group.

"They've got rising crime in the United States and they (the government) can't do anything about it," he said. "But when they throw a few of us in jail, everyone feels better. They take groups like us and bring up outrageous charges."

The Hells Angels, Barger said, are simply a misunderstood bunch.

"It's so hard to tell a whole story in 90 minutes," he said. "I don't think the film can change anyone's mind about us, but that's not what we set out to do."

President waits for staff to play catch up

By MICHAEL PUTZEL

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, sometimes accused by his critics of being a creature of the aides around him, has been out ahead of his underlings this past week — waiting for them to catch up.

Dozens of people work for the White House to plan Reagan's schedule, get him places on time and make sure he wants for nothing. When you're president, your time is supposed to be so valuable that you never have to wait for anyone.

Well, almost never.

Returning from his Maryland mountaintop retreat last Sunday, Reagan and his wife, Nancy, and their weekend guests, Secretary of State and Mrs. George P. Shultz, went by limousine from Camp David's Aspen Lodge to the helicopter landing pad a few hundred yards away.

The Reagans got out of the car and boarded the helicopter. Shultz disappeared into a small bunker beside the landing strip to use the phone. His wife followed the Reagans aboard.

Long minutes passed as the president waited for his secretary of state.

Marine One, of course, has telephones aboard; but conversations while airborne are less secure than those over land lines. Shultz was discussing developments in the Middle East, where King Hussein of Jordan had just announced that his effort to represent the Palestinians in peace talks had collapsed.

CLEP offers way to beat high cost of college

By CHARLES WEBB
Copley News Service

Higher education is expensive. A single years stay at an Ivy League school like Harvard will set you back over $12,000. And the cost of attending even a state university is escalating.

Cost isn't the only drawback to going to school. Doing so takes a lot of time, something especially important to older students with families to support.

One way to save money and time is to make use of the College-Level Examination Program (CLEP). It allows you the opportunity to receive college credits for many undergraduate courses without having to enroll in a class. You merely take a test to show you are already knowledgeable in the area the course would cover.

Successfully completing CLEP tests can reduce a traditional four-year stay in college by up to 50 percent. That could save you thousands of dollars in tuition. And it would give you a head start on your career.

CLEP exams are offered for the following subjects:

Composition and literature: American literature, analysis and interpretation of literature, college composition, English literature, freshman English.

Foreign languages: Levels 1 and 2 of college French, German, and Spanish.

Science and mathematics: Calculus, college algebra, college trigonometry, general biology, general chemistry.

Social sciences and history: American government, American history from colonization to 1877, American history from 1865 to the present, general psychology, educational psychology, human growth and development, introductory macroeconomics, introductory microeconomics, introductory sociology, Western civilization.

Business: Computers and data processing, introduction to management, business law 1, introductory marketing, introductory accounting.

CLEP tests are not easy. They are developed by college professors to determine a student's proficiency in a particular subject.

These 90-minute tests cost $25 each. The price drops a little for each additional exam you take during the same week. CLEP tests are held on a regular bases at over 1,000 colleges throughout the United States. For information on testing dates, contact a campus near you.

For more information on CLEP, write to: The College Board, Box 886, New York, NY 10101. Or contact the admissions department of any institution of higher education.

Spritz a day keeps monsters away

MILWAUKEE (AP) — The 3-year-old son of David and Lynn Himes used to keep his parents awake with tearful tales of things that went bump in the night — in his bedroom.

So Mrs. Himes and her friend, Gary Sennett, invented Monster Spray. A spritz from the 8-ounce pump bottle dissolves monsters and other bedtime fears, Sennett said Thursday.

"Since we have insecticides and room fresheners, why not something to make monsters go away?" he said. "Obviously, it's just a placebo, but it really does what it's supposed to do."

Sennett and Mrs. Himes decided that since the water-based spray worked so well on her son, Rugger, they would sell it commercially in two scents — bubble gum and grape.

It has been on sale nearly a year and Sennett said about 800 to 1,200 bottles have been sold in the Milwaukee area. He said his company, Shimera, hopes to market it nationwide. A bottle costs less than $2.

"Initially, it's all done very seriously," he said. "Parents come in the bedroom and spray. Then, because it smells nice, the kid sprays it and he's taken control of getting rid of his nightmares.

ALERT!

Every muscle tense . . . every sense attuned to their surroundings . . . they're ready! A scent, a sound, a glimpse of the unexpected and they will streak silently into the forest. They're alert, but their alertness indicates a readiness to run away.

Rightly man scorns that kind of alertness. For human achievement is born of a different alertness. When men are awake to their opportunities, alive to their responsibilities, brave to their challenges . . . then progress is realized, goals are reached.

Our religion helped to establish this human standard of alertness and our churches constantly inspire men to achieve it. For when the mind is attuned to life's environment, and the soul is attuned to God, then a man has the wherewithal to go forward to greater goals.

True alertness begins when we discover the riches and fulfillment regular worship can add to our lives.

St. Luke's Methodist Church begins new Genesis phase

St. Luke's United Methodist Church, 3011 W. Kansas Ave., will launch Series III of Wednesday Night Genesis beginning Wednesday and continuing through May 25.

Wednesday Night Genesis is a mid-week ministry for all ages. Classes being offered during Series III and the instructors include beginning quilting, Bernice Hughey; The Parables, Kenneth Jones; recreation and games, Ray del Llano; Hymnody, James Fuller and Bert Bostic; and United Methodist beliefs, the Rev. Jarrell Sharp.

Children ages 6 through junior high will continue their practice on the musical "Get a Board Children or Things to Do on a Rainy Day in an Ark."

Classes are provided for children ages 2-5 and a nursery is provided for infants.

Wednesday Night Genesis begins with a meal, served from 5:30 to 6:15 p.m. Cost is $2 for adults and $1.50 for children 12 and younger. Group singing is held from 6:15 to 6:30 p.m. and the classes, which are free, are held from 6:30 to 7:20 p.m.

The public is invited.

Youth to attend triennium

Goddard

Kimberly Goddard has been selected to participate in the 1983 Youth Triennium at Purdue University in West Lafayette, Ind., July 11-16.

As one of 3,800 participants from five denominations, she will be participating in forums calling for youth to discover a new sense of purpose and commitment to Christ.

The daughter of Linda and Richard Goddard, Kimberly is a sophomore at Midland High School where she is active in Youth Life. She is a member of Trinity Presbyterian Church, where she is active in the church's youth fellowship and youth choir programs as well as being a member of Trinity's Christian Education Committee.

Special meetings to begin

The Christian Church of Midland, 2608 Neely St., will begin a series of special meetings Sunday at 7 p.m. The meetings will conclude Wednesday.

Roy Weece of Columbia, Mo., will be the speaker and Red Florence, an Irish tenor from Greenville, Ill., will be singing solos and leading the singing.

Weece is director of Christian Campus House at the University of Missouri. He has preached in 38 states, Mexico and Canada and has had articles published in 13 magazines and periodicals.

Florence has been preaching and singing Christian music for 25 years. In addition to releasing seven albums, he has been involved in over 300 revivals.

The Rev. Robert Blazek, minister of the Christian Church of Midland, invites the public.

Kelview Heights plan revival

The Rev. David Cavin, president of the Baptist Bible Fellowship International, will be the special speaker for Kelview Heights Baptist Church's revival which begins Sunday and ends Tuesday.

Cavin, who has had three pastorates in 44 years of pastoral ministry, has been pastor of High Street Baptist Church, Springfield, Mo., for the past 19 years. High Street averages 2,000 each Sunday and is the second largest giving missionary church in the Baptist Bible Fellowship.

Cavin will speak Sunday at 9 and 11 a.m. and 6:30 p.m. Service time Monday and Tuesday is 7:30 p.m.

The Rev. Frank Johnson, pastor of Kelview Heights, invites the public to attend. The church is located at 407 W. Alta Ave.

Foursquare speaker slated

Shu'el Oppenheim will be speaking at Midland Center, Main Street at Wall Avenue, today at 7:30 p.m. He also will minister at the Midland Foursquare Church, 415 Alta Ave., Sunday during the 10:45 a.m. service.

Oppenheim, a graduate of L.I.F.E. Bible College in Los Angeles, ministered with Foursquare Gospel Churches for 10 years as a district and national youth minister. He also served Foursquare Churches as an international minister, spending almost three years in Central and South America conducting campaigns and speaking at conferences and churches.

For the last seven years, Oppenheim has been the leader of Kehilat Ben David, a Messianic Jewish synagogue in El Paso. Synagogue members include Jews and gentiles who profess a belief in Christ.

The public is invited.

Bible fellowship meeting set

Temple Baptist Church, 4303 Thomason Drive, will be hosting the Permian Basin Baptist Bible Fellowship monthly meeting Monday and Tuesday.

Featured speaker will be the Rev. Bob Gray, pastor of Longview Baptist Church. Longview Baptist was listed as third in baptisms and professions of faith in a recent listing of the 33 largest churches in the United States. This year the church is averaging over 50 baptisms each Sunday.

Gray will be preaching at 7:30 p.m. Monday and at 11 a.m. Tuesday. The public is invited.

Gaithers to appear here

Bill and Gloria Gaither will perform in concert at Chaparral Center Monday at 7:30 p.m. Joining the Gaithers will be Gary McSpadden, Sandi Patti, Carmen and the New Gaither Vocal Band.

Tickets, priced at $7 and $8, are available at Rudd Christian Bookstore, in Midland and Odessa; Sonshine Corner, Robbie's Bookstore in Andrews, Abundant Life Christian Book Store in Big Spring, Rudd Bible Shop in San Angelo, Good News Book Store in Lubbock and Chaparral Center.

Calvary Assembly in revival

Mark and Sandra Little will be the speakers at Calvary Assembly of God's revival planned for Sunday through Friday.

Revival times are Sunday 11 a.m. and 7 p.m. and Monday through Friday 7:30 p.m. The church is located at 908 S. Jackson St.

Landorf film to be screened

The fifth film in the Joyce Landorf Film Series, "His Stubborn Love," will be shown at 7 p.m. Sunday in the sanctuary of First Christian Church, 1301 W. Louisiana Ave.

The film addresses why many couples stop communicating and live in an emotional or spiritual divorce.

The public is invited to attend.

Youth to conduct services

The Youth Fellowship at Trinity Presbyterian Church will conduct church school and worship service Sunday.

Bobby Evans, a senior at Lee High School, will deliver the sermon and the Youth Choir will sing. The church is located at Louisiana Avenue and Andrews Highway.

Change in title suggested

DAVENPORT, Iowa (AP) — With controversy surrounding Sister Mary Mansour's heading of Michigan's Department of Social Services, a noted theologian suggests she drop the title, "sister."

"Priests or nuns should be allowed to serve in political office but they should not use their clerical or religious titles," writes the Rev. Richard McBrien in a syndicated column in the diocesan weekly, The Catholic Messenger.

Detroit's Archbishop Edmund Szoka has ordered the nun to resign because the agency she heads dispenses Medicaid funds, some used for abortion. Her order, the Sisters of Mercy, has supported her holding the post.

Vatican reports say orders for her to resign have been transmitted to the U.S. apostolic delegate, Archbishop Pio Laghi, in Washington, but a spokesman for him has denied it.

TV time won't be provided

NEW YORK (AP) — In the running feud between church leaders and CBS over its "60 Minutes" TV program accusing church councils of backing Marxist causes, the network has contended there are no grounds for providing TV time for church leaders to reply.

CBS maintained the program was fair in a letter to the Federal Communications Commission in response to a complaint filed by five U.S. Protestant denominations, which had asked a chance to broadcast their side. After receiving their reaction to the CBS response, the FCC is to rule on the matter.

Black United Methodists close fellowship meeting at Hollowell

The second Fellowship Meeting of Black United Methodists closes today at Hollowell United Methodist Church, 400 S. Marshall St. Black United Methodists of the Northwest Texas and New Mexico Conference are attending the two-day event.

Today's session begins with an 8:30 a.m. registration followed by a 9:30 a.m. worship conducted by the Rev. J. LaVon Kincaid Sr. Dr. Kincaid will lead workshop sessions on "Stewardship in the Black Churches" for the remainder of the day.

Kincaid is from the Board of Discipleship of the UMC in Nashville, Tenn. He has conducted workshops for ethnic minorities in stewardship development to benefit and strengthen leaders for their local congregations.

A native of Bristol, Tenn., Kincaid has a degree from Morristown Junior College, a bachelor of arts degree from Clark College, a master of divinity from Interdenominational Theological Center and Gammon Theological Seminary and a doctor of divinity from Marietta University.

His writings include "God's Faithfulness: Stewardship in the Ethnic Minority Local Church," a column "Stewardship Work Area" in the Interpreter Magazine and several articles and leaflets.

Paul's miraculous conversion launches his life-long mission

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the second installment of a five-part series about Paul, the once-violent foe of belief in Jesus, who became a prime exponent of it.

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

A road has an open, unanswered quality about it. It always comes to turning points, to divergences. And the direction that is taken yields destiny. That's how the life of Paul shifted course — at a fateful intersection on a desert road.

His horse trotted rapidly along beneath scudding clouds. Muscular companions rode behind him, goading a pack camel to keep up.

After his strenuous efforts in Jerusalem to crush what he considered a debasement of Judaism by the spreading frenzy about a resurrected Nazarene, Paul was now pursuing fomenters who had scattered elsewhere.

He had obtained credentials from Jerusalem's high priest to extend the crackdown to the Syrian city of Damascus. His orders were that "if he found any belonging to the Way, men or women, he might bring them bound to Jerusalem."

But he now hastened to fight the movement in Damascus. The time was about A.D. 32, two years after the crucifixion of Jesus, and persecutions in Jerusalem had driven foreign-reared Jews converted to him to other cities.

The possibility they could be right appeared ridiculous to Paul. A condemned criminal, shamelessly hanged, yet called "savior." What absurdity! "King of the Jews," the Romans had titled him on the cross, an insult to Judaism. The crucified were considered accursed. Then came the "ressurection" boasts — a sheer hoax as Paul saw it.

That was Paul's obsession and he now pursued it in vengeance, yet with lashing inner turmoil. Obviously, he realized something unexplainably overwhelming must have happened to that Nazarene's backward cohorts.

They had panicked after the Crucifixion and cowered in hiding. But then they suddenly became boldly defiant in their delirium about an alleged resurrection. Something uncanny surely caused that drastic, abrupt change. They persisted despite imprisonments, floggings and threatened death. Why?

Paul squinted into the sun, a dull throb beginning at his temple. He had a persisting, unspecified affliction, which some conjecture was migraine, those severe, recurring headaches that usually affect intense, sensitive individuals.

One came now, along with a nagging revulsion at his harsh assignment.

Suddenly a dazzling white light exploded around him, like a lightning bolt. "Brighter than the sun," he described it later. He was hurled to the ground. A voice rang out of the radiance, speaking in Hebrew, using his Hebrew name. "Saul, Saul, why do you persecute me?"

Stunned, bewildered, wracked by suppressed torment, he implored weakly, "Who are you, Lord?" Who, what was this overpowering intruder into the struggling recesses of himself?

"I am Jesus whom you are persecuting." In the ensuing moment's hush, the reality burst in Paul and rushed through him like a shattering, healing, renewing tide. He lifted his head, seeing something, a translucent figure, magnanimous, welcoming.

RELIGION

"Rise and enter the city, and you will be told what to do; for I have appeared...to appoint you to serve and bear witness."

Paul strained forward, but fell back to the ground, the shimmering light gone. When next he opened his eyes, he couldn't see. His men clustered around him, talking confusedly, having heard but not seen, mystified at those strange, bodiless sounds. Paul got up, trembling, still blinded.

They guided him to his horse and led him through the guarded gates of Damascus. On its broad, colonnaded main thoroughfare, a street called Straight, they found the house of the synagogue elder whom they had been directed by the Sanhedrin to contact.

Paul seemed near death. For three days, he lay without food or liquid, hardly stirring, sightless. He scarcely knew where he was, or who, himself or another, yet somehow that he was wholly changed, another self, that out of some abyss of darkness, he had been catapulted to a fresh, wondrous height. He wept, sorrowing at past iniquities, yet flooded with gratitude and an immense joy.

The storming destroyer had turned into a dauntless proponent, an "ambassador for Christ." He never considered it abandoning Judaism, but rather a lifting of its beacon higher and further. It transformed him.

One of the Jesus believers, Ananias, heard of the notorious persecutor's collapse and was moved to go to him, comforting him, bathing his crusted eyelids. Something "like scales fell from his eyes" and he could see.

He had been blind to the truth, but through that rending personal experience, now saw it vividly, that "Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners. And I am the foremost of sinners." He was baptized in the Abana river outside the city's northern wall.

After Paul's traumatic change, he retreated to the desert for three years. On his return to Damascus, his turn-about views and resulting hostility toward him upset Rome's ethnarch, the Nabean King Aretas. Assassins were hired to eliminate the troublemaker.

But Jesus' followers, hearing of the plot, hid him in a tunnel in the city wall and on a dark moonless night to avoid sentries, lowered him in a large basket by rope to the ground outside.

Returning to Jerusalem, he was keenly resented by some Jesus followers for his past depredations, hated by others as a turncoat. But the bighearted fisherman apostle Peter sheltered him privately for 15 days of talk about Jesus. Paul met none of the other apostles except James. The others "were afraid" of him.

Because of the general distrust, he was sent out of town. He spent 15 years in his native Cilicia and adjoining Syria, preaching his expanded faith.

"We are afflicted in every way, but not crushed; perplexed but not driven to despair; persecuted, but not forsaken; struck down but not destroyed; always carrying in the body the death of Jesus, so the life of Jesus may also be manifested in our bodies."

'Mysterious' epidemic sends hundreds of West Bank school girls to hospital

RABA, Occupied West Bank (AP) — The mysterious epidemic struck this remote West Bank village at 8:05 a.m. on March 21. Before it ended two weeks later, more than 800 Palestinian schoolgirls had been hospitalized.

They were the victims, say Israeli health authorities, of hysteria and "provocateurs," charges Palestinians strongly deny. They say the Israelis were somehow poisoning their children.

Investigators from the International Committee of the Red Cross, the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and the World Health Organization examined the victims, but so far have issued no reports on the puzzling events that started in Arraba, a village of 7,000 Palestinians 45 miles north of Jerusalem.

It began at a girls' high school when several teen-age girls were sickened by the odor of rotten eggs. Dr. Baruch Modan, an epidemiologist and director-general of Israel's Health Ministry, believes the cause was hydrogen sulfide gas from a pit latrine at the school.

Two hours later, dozens of other girls, complaining of dizziness, nausea and blurred vision, became ill at the midmorning recess. It was the start of mass hysteria, Modan said. Arraba's mayor Mahmoud al-Fatah al-Arda said 69 girls were sent to hospitals.

On March 26, a second outbreak hit six girls' schools in and around Jenin, six miles northeast of Arraba. Almost 250 students were sent to the hospital. Modan believes the outbreak was caused by the rumors of poison gas.

On March 27, Palestinians stoned Israeli cars in Jenin, and sections of the town were placed under curfew. Israeli military sources, paradoxically, contributed to the poisoning rumor by saying that Palestinian militants might be spreading poisons to place Israel in a bad light.

The total of victims climbed to 320, but no one was reported seriously ill.

The next day, Modan announced that army, police and health ministry investigators found no evidence of deliberate or inadvertent poisoning. Modan says he would not rule out a psychosomatic cause for the illnesses.

That evening, a car or van, spewing smoke from its exhaust, drove through a residential neighborhood in Jenin. Almost 80 people were taken to hospitals. Modan called it wave three in the epidemic. The victims still were genuinely ill, he said, but no physical cause could be found.

On March 29 Jenin was sealed off by Israeli troops and placed under a curfew. Reporters were not permitted to enter. In Arraba, al-Arda and other West Bank leaders demanded an investigation to determine "what the poison is and the people responsible for doing it."

Palestinian doctors repeatedly attributed the illness to "poison gas" though they acknowledge they have no idea what the gas is.

One doctor who said he believes a poison was at work said he also agrees that psychological factors contribute to the symptoms. "But underground there is a triggering factor, and that's what we are searching for," he said.

None of the Palestinian doctors would permit use of their names, saying they feared they would be fired from government-supported hospitals if they dispute the Israeli position.

Modan held a news conference April 1 with the head of the Israeli medical corps to repeat that there was no evidence of poison.

Brig. Gen. Shlomo Ilya, the head of the Israeli West Bank administration, charged that Palestinian extremists were trying to stir up a frenzy against Israel.

On April 3, a fourth wave of the epidemic hit, striking a village near Nablus and in Hebron, in the southern part of the West Bank. About 400 schoolgirls went to hospitals, bringing the total number of girls affected to over 800.

New encyclopedia depicts 'Southern experience'

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — A storyteller named Ray Lum once said, "You live and learn, and you die and forget," but a project at the University of Mississippi aims to make sure the "Southern experience" is never forgotten.

Bill Ferris, director of the Center for the Study of Southern Culture, and Charles Wilson of the university's history department are co-editors of a volume to be called "The Encyclopedia of Southern Culture."

The 1,000-page book will look into every aspect of Southern life, hoping to preserve a picture of it in layman's language for scholars and the general public.

Ray Lum is just one of the hundreds of people who have been interviewed by Ferris, Wilson and some 300 contributors from throughout the South.

Ferris conceived the idea five years ago when he was at Yale University, and work on the book itself has been under way for two years.

Most of the material is being edited now, with publication by the University of North Carolina Press planned for 1985.

"It will cover the myth and the reality of the South, as it relates to women, ethnicity, blacks, southern business, literature and history," Ferris said.

Much of the volume will explore the relationships between blacks and whites, which Ferris says is basic to every aspect of culture in the South.

"It is probably the most extensive and deeply connected group of white and black populations in the the country," Ferris said.

The relationship has touched all parts of Southern life, including writers, historians and political scientists.

"This linked black-white experience cannot be understood in other parts of the nation," he said, since it has no counterpart.

The encyclopedia will point out the long history of the South, where many people, black and white, can trace their ancestry for several generations, often in the same locations.

Much of the special culture of the South still is in place, and can be studied as it has been for years, he said.

"Southerners have a strong love of the places where they grew up" that is "central to an understanding of the region," Ferris said.

A third theme of the encyclopedia will be an examination of the importance of family and religious experiences in the South.

Part Seven: Bing and his friends

MY LIFE WITH BING by Kathryn Crosby

Bing, Dean Martin, Frank Sinatra and Bob Hope

Phil Harris

Phil Harris and his lovely wife Alice Faye were the first of Bing's close friends that I got to know well. Phil was famed as the greatest adlibber of his time, and no written account could do him justice, but I'll include two stories that Bing brought back from a trip through the South in 1957.

In New Orleans he had shared a hotel suite with Phil. Returning from a walk, Bing found his roommate happily entertaining a group of characters, noses broken and ears cauliflowered, wearing conspicuous bulges under the armpits of their coats. He summoned Phil into the next room and announced. "You have to get those mobsters out of here. We could be caught in the cross fire."

"We can't send Benny away," Phil objected. "He just got out yesterday."

Bing and Phil had also paid a flu-induced visit to a steam room. A stranger, whom they'd noticed shadowing them all morning, finally followed them into the bath, where they sat swathed in percale. The intruder hesitantly edged forward, then said, "Oh Mr. Crosby, Mr. Harris, it's wonderful meeting you. I've waited years for this opportunity."

The two neophyte sheiks, whose communication was often wordless, made a simultaneous decision to prolong their victim's visit. They inquired about his life history, wife, family, and job, expressing great interest in each nervous response. Since the gentleman weighed some three-hundred pounds, and was still wearing his overcoat and muffler, he became quite red in the face.

"I'd really like to get an autograph, if you don't mind." The paper he was clutching in his left hand had wilted, and was threatening to dissolve into a wad of wood pulp. But their interest was insatiable, their interrogation endless. He was flattered, of course, so for a time he stayed.

Finally in desperation he said, "Listen, I think I'd better get out of here. Would you please sign this for me?" He held out a pencil and the very damp paper, until Bing took them and somehow dropped the pencil between the slats of the wood floor. The stranger was verging on apoplexy. Who would believe his story without a signature?

Bing turned to Phil and asked blandly: "Do you have another pencil?"

And Phil replied on cue, "I'm sorry, Bing: I left it in my other sheet."

Sammy Davis Jr.

After they finished filming Robin and the Seven Hoods, Bing and I dined at the home of Sammy Davis Jr., who regaled us with his incredible repertoire of songs, jokes, and dramatic recitals. He knew Cyrano by heart, obviously identified with the position of the outsider, and was the only person I've ever heard who could match Jose Ferrer's performance on the great monologues.

When we finally settled down to dinner, Bing related anecdotes from the running "race war" between Sammy and the other members of the rat pack. They had painted the name Smokey on his golf cart, had placed a sign over his star's dressing room that read Downstairs at the Back, and had dismissed his hard-won proficiency in the complicated dance routines as "natural rhythm."

Sammy himself had brought the joke home with constant reminders of the topsy-turvy world in which his miniscule self was wedded to a statuesque Swedish beauty, and their brown offspring had a white nursemaid. When newsmen asked him what sort of children he hoped to have, Sammy had replied. "Black, brown, grey, white, or pinstriped, we'll love them just the same."

On and on the stories went until I finally ventured to ask, "Don't you ever get tired of so many variations of the same old joke?"

"Yes," said Sammy Davis Jr.

John Wayne

In June of 1962 Bing and I visited Hawaii with my mother, the children, and John and Pilar Wayne. Mother was the beauty in our family, and there in muumuu, with black waves cascading to her waist, she put the loveliest of the native girls to shame. After a day of swimming with the children, Bing invited the Waynes for a late-afternoon mai-tai.

Now mother was a strict Baptist who had never touched alcohol, but she found these "fruit punches" delicious, so we said nothing to disillusion her. "That was so refreshing that I think I'll have another," she told John Wayne, who dutifully fetched her another and another, and another, and true knight of the saddle that he was, joined her each time.

By the fifth round of mai-tais mother and the Duke were busily holding each other up, while she explained that he had always been her ideal of American manhood, and he insisted that she was the cutest little thing on the beach.

Shortly thereafter the thing between them became too big for mere talk, so they launched into a gloriously off-key rendition of "Oh the moon shines tonight on pretty Redwing. . .the breeze is sighing. . .the nightbirds crying. . .far, oh, far beneath the sky her brave is sleeping. . .while Redwing's weeping her heart away."

Evidently feeling that the melody was in desperate need of surgery, Bing made a half-hearted attempt to join in, but was immediately and unanimously rejected on the grounds that be obviously had no feeling for music. Nothing personal, you understand.

This could have gone on forever, and it almost did, but Bing and I finally managed to save my mother's virtue; and possibly her life, by pushing her off in one direction, while a furious Latin lovely dragged her husband off in the other. I never did learn what happened to Big John, but my mother, a true Grandstaff, passed blissfully into never-never land. where she remained for the next 12 hours. Upon awakening she complained of a slight headache, exhibited a ravenous appetite, and to all appearances had completely forgotten her erstwhile attempt to wreck the Waynes' happy home.

Bob Hope

On August 3, 1961, son Harry and I flew, as he phrased it, "off to Yurrup" to watch Bing film The Road to Hong Kong. In England we shared Cranbourne Court, originally Lord Duveen's country house, with Bob Hope and his family. It was conveniently close to Sunningdale golf course, Ascot race track and Shepperton studios. What more could the men ask of life? They finished work at 4 in the afternoon, raced off to the golf course, and played a full round in the long British summer twilight.

On August 25 we visited Nice for a long weekend, returning to London for the orgy scene before Bing and Bob replaced the monkeys that were to be sent to the moon. At the witching hour of 4 p.m. Bing was still lying on a chaise and eating grapes while his brow was fanned by scantily-attired harem cuties, and Bob was sharing the sybaritic environment and having his toenails painted. When the head gaffer pulled the light switch, everyone broke for the front of the studio, Bing and Bob in the lead and headed for golf.

In sharp contrast to the scene which they had just left, the locker room at Sunningdale had a naked light bulb in the ceiling and a few nails on the wall. As the erstwhile sybarites were madly changing clothes, hurling trousers in one direction and shirts in another, and grabbing for spiked shoes, two Colonel Blimps walked in and stared in consternation at all the American-style commotion. Suddenly one of them froze. He was gazing at the ten twinkling toes of Bob's still-naked feet.

Finally Bob became aware of the silence, looked up, then down at his brilliant toenails, and finally up again in mute appeal. It was the first time that anyone had ever seen Hope speechless.

The climax came when the larger of the colonels moved over to Bing and asked in a whisper that must have reached the first tee, "Mr. Crosby, is your friend with the ballet?"

After waiting six years to be offered a part in a Bing Crosby Christmas special, I finally lost patience and demanded that I be included. It took Bing a while to get used to the idea, but in the end he agreed to discuss the matter with his producers, who reluctantly decided that I might be allowed to read a short commercial.

This was too much. Had I not recently starred in Sunday in New York, not to mention other short-lived disasters? Why couldn't I sing and dance like the talented guests?

The hand that rules the cradle rocks the world. To the astonishment of all concerned, Bing agreed to read the commercial himself, while I sang a glamorous solo and danced a number with Peter Genero.

This was more than I had hoped for, and it seemed that I might have overreached myself. I promptly caught cold dancing in the air-conditioned studio, and what little voice I had was reduced to a croak. There I was, standing before a symphony orchestra and backed by a full chorus, but feeling like a princess recently turned into a frog. Hopelessly I entered the isolation booth, sang a few rasping notes, and suddenly dissolved into tears.

At this juncture Bob Hope, who as ever was guest-starring on the show, stepped quickly up to cover my embarrassment by informing everyone that he had a detached retina in his left eye: "Would Kathryn mind if I get my number over with right now so I can fly north for a spot of laser?"

Watching the way that courageous man ran through his jokes and his song with Bing, without exhibiting a trace of his fear of blindness, I felt my little problem pale into insignificance. The next day Rosemary Clooney, always my friend, told me that a lyric often got to her, and assured me that I would be fine when the big day came. When John Scott Trotter and I took a cold run at the ballad, it sounded much better. When Bing stopped to listen, I knew we had a hit on our hands.

It was only one of countless times that Bob Hope had gallantly stepped in to rescue a weaker colleague, while always making it appear that it was the other person who had helped him. As I pen these words he has just phoned to ask if I will permit him to write the introduction to this book about his dead friend and my lost love, a favor that he knew I longed for, but would never have dared ask. Bob, best of comrades, Bing and I are eternally grateful.

Sellout stuns Neil Diamond

By ROBERT HILBURN
The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

Neil Diamond

HOLLYWOOD — Neil Diamond smiled broadly when asked if he was surprised that he was able to sell out a record seven nights at the 18,600-seat Forum at nearby Inglewood almost as fast as tickets went on sale.

"Surprised?" he said. "Stunned was more like it. When Jerry (manager Jerry Weintraub) said we could do that many nights, I didn't believe him. I still find it hard to believe because the only thing I can relate it to is when Elton (John) did a series of nights at the Forum, and he was sizzling at the time."

On the pop charts, Diamond's career does seem to be calm these days. "Heartlight," his recent salute to "E.T.," was a Top-10 single and his last album went platinum (1 million sales) in what is considered a soft record market these days.

But those are modest figures when measured against Diamond's blazing 1969-to-1974 stretch, when he had 17 Top-40 hits, including five Top-10 singles. Among them: "Cracklin' Rosie," "Song Sung Blue," "Sweet Caroline" and "I Am...I Said."

SO WHY did 130,000 people buy tickets to his June 13-19 concerts at the Forum?

One reason is the shows are his first local appearances since the release of his movie, "The Jazz Singer." More importantly, they're his first shows here since he played the Greek Theatre in 1976.

To many industry observers, Diamond's decision to stay away from local stages for nearly seven years was a clever move to build anticipation (and ticket sales) for a dramatic return.

Yet Diamond insists the long absence was not tied to a mystique strategy. Instead, his plans were thwarted by an illness that threatened the singer's career.

Though that illness — a tumor that was growing on his spinal cord — was alluded to in hospital bulletins, Diamond has avoided going into details. But the incident is apparently far enough behind him that he can now speak freely about it.

"I had felt that something was wrong for a number of years," Diamond said. "I was losing some of the feeling in my right leg, but it happened so gradually that I was able to convince myself that it wasn't anything serious."

The turning point was the night Diamond fell on stage in San Francisco early in 1979. "I didn't have enough strength in either leg to get up," he said. "I knew then that I had to get to a doctor."

IN A SERIES of tests, Diamond's doctors discovered the tumor which, though benign, was crushing the singer's spinal cord. Diamond wanted to postpone the operation until late summer. But the doctors ordered him into the hospital immediately for what turned out to be a 12-hour operation.

"It was really a life-and-death situation," Diamond recalled. "They didn't know how much damage had been done. The night before the operation, I wrote all my 'last letters' to friends."

After the operation, Diamond was confined to a wheelchair for months, not knowing for part of the time whether he'd eventually be able to walk. Even when he did stand again, he had to use a cane. The first time he left the cane at home was the day he caught a plane to London to sign the contract for "The Jazz Singer."

Considering the recovery from the spinal operation and the excitement of the ticket sales, Diamond figured to be in good spirits these days. But there was something about his relaxed manner during the interview that suggested an even deeper confidence.

Despite his success in the early '70s, Diamond used to be a difficult person to interview. He'd try to loosen up, but he was an extremely introspective person in those days who seemed caught up in a web of self-doubt. He often spoke about the struggle to gain confidence.

RETURNING IN 1976 from a four-year sabbatical, Diamond said, "I'm a different person now than I was three or four years ago. I feel better about a lot of things. I've grown up in many ways. When I stopped touring, I was still tied to whatever it was that drove me toward this business at 17. The main goal was an intense desire to be accepted by an audience. But I began to find that it wasn't enough. I had reached the heights of what I felt I had to prove with these shows. But I did have to fill in some missing pieces in my life."

Despite the words, Diamond was unusually tense in those days; uneasy in front of photographers and weighing his words carefully before he spoke. He still has an intensity about him, but he is far more comfortable with himself and others.

"It's not like I'm without the doubts and fears," he said when asked about his more relaxed manner. "There's always the worry about how much more music you can do and how much you want to do. But I do feel much more at ease these days. To me, getting through the "Jazz Singer" was a major step.

"It was an enormous project which made me ask more of myself than anything I had ever done. The music, this time, was just the starting place. The fact that I got through it with my skin reasonably intact helped me believe in myself a little bit more."

AS A RESULT, Diamond feels he's also more open on stage. "I used to stand rigid at the microphone, holding onto the guitar like a security blanket," he explained, "I've been gradually getting away from that for years. Now I feel like I have total freedom onstage."

Diamond, 42, also feels he has opened up in other ways. Where he used to write alone, he now frequently writes with collaborators. "Heartlight," for instance, was written with Burt Bacharach and Carole Bayer Sager.

Mariachi 'king' comes to Tucson

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Everto Ruiz says having Silvestre Vargas as a tutor represents "80 years of tradition of mariachi music," something "you can't get" from a book.

Bridget Keating says studying with the group Mariachi Vargas, "the masters of the music," is "something every mariachi player dreams about."

Fred Tarazon says the mariachi conference he organized is the fulfillment of a dream.

Yet Don Vargas, the 81-year-young who remains Mexico's king of the mariachis, is awed too — by the enthusiasm among Americans and their efforts to learn the music that has been his life, well beyond what he says is being done in his own country.

Vargas displayed his style, flair and magic Thursday, as male and female mariachis and would-bes from 9 to 60, from Tucson, California, Texas, even Virginia, learned from the master and his men — El Mariachi Vargas de Tecalitlan, or the Mariachi Vargas.

His musicians were instructing, and Vargas was listening, looking, nodding his approval at the students' playing.

And he was smiling. And clapping.

AP Laserphoto

Members of Mexico City's Mariachi Vargas join in with mariachi enthusiasts from Arizona, California and Texas during Thursday's session of the Tucson International Mariachi Conference in Tucson. The Mexican musicians, considered the world's finest mariachi group, are instructing people in their country's musical folklore during the meeting.

SLIGHT AND SHORT, neat in brown sport coat and tan vest, tie and checkered slacks, Vargas told them, "You've got to sing, sing the song."

He told the violinists to team up in facing pairs and tap their bows together in-between strokes. Then he told them, always speaking in Spanish, that one time he and a partner were doing tapping their bows so earnestly that his snapped, and the mariachi broke up.

And then, he invited all those practicing to provide the encore performance for tonight's final concert, featuring Mariachi Vargas, Tucson's Mariachi Cobre, renowned composer Ruben Fuentes, Mexico's Barbra Streisand — Lola Beltran — and the Tucson Symphony Orchestra.

The pupils' immediate acceptance resounded.

"To see the enthusiasm and love and care for learning the music of the mariachis, that can't be compared," said Vargas, whose father Gaspar in 1898 in Guadalajara, Jalisco, founded the group, known as the best in the world.

"In Mexico there isn't the progress and the knowledge as to what is going on in the United States with mariachis," Vargas said, suggesting it will be "quite a while" until there is anything comparable to such musical conferences or formal efforts at teaching mariachi. "There isn't the importance of learning the music of mariachi, the drive, the ambition," he said. Earlier, he said mariachi music is taken for granted in Mexico.

HE AND HIS players were the guests of honor — but working as hard as the several hundred musicians attending the first Tucson International Mariachi Conference, teaching the music, which has an aural tradition, with the help of written scores.

"This was one of my dreams and those of the Mariachi Cobre, to have the conference here," said Fred Tarazon, coordinator of the four-day affair, a former member of the Tucson-based Cobre group and a violin-playing staff member of Sen. Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz. Tarazon, 29, who is on vacation from his full-time job, called Vargas the "Arthur Fiedler" of Mexico — "he's more."

He said that on Wednesday, the first day of the conference, Vargas started crying, happily, after hearing the high school, college and older minstrels play music that Mariachi Vargas has made famous throughout Mexico. According to Tarazon, Vargas said, "'It took me two weeks to learn this piece and they did it in four hours.'"

The roots of the Mexican love ballads lay among Jalisco's poor field workers, or campesinos. Originally, the music was played only with string instruments — guitar, harp, violins. A trumpet sound was added in the late 1930s and expanded in the 1950s, said Tarazon.

MARIACHI, VARGAS said, originated from an Indian word meaning derived from a tree, whose bark and wood were used to make some of the early instruments.

The guitarron is a bass-pitched, lead instrument, while the vihuela delivers a higher-pitched tone that complements the guitar.

The music, Vargas added, "comes from within, from the heart," and what originally had been considered only music of the poor has been accepted worldwide. He said seeing and hearing women playing his music, a recent development, gives him "great satisfaction."

'Happy is he who's hobby becomes his work'

By MARY CAMPBELL
AP Newsfeatures Writer

"Happy is he whose hobby becomes his work," quotes Kevin Rowland, adding, "That's me really.

"The greatest passion in my life is the group. It is everything. There is nothing else for me."

Added to that, Rowland's hobby-work-passion right now is extremely successful. Kevin Rowland and Dexys Midnight Runners, a British group whose name sounds Irish, had the No. 2 best-selling single and the No. 21 best-selling album in America as of today. Both were climbing.

Rowland says the single, "Come On Eileen," was the biggest-selling single record in England in 1982, the only single to sell more than a million copies there. The Mercury album it's on is titled "Too-Rye-Ay."

Influences on the group's music are many, Rowland says. "I listened to black music for three months before I formed my first group. I don't look to music for inspiration now. It comes from within now.

"I don't go for rock 'n' roll, I must admit. It's got its place but it's not where I want to be...

"We use traditional instruments but not folk influences. I wanted a pure sound. The only thing I like about folk music is that it's a people's music, with songs people can sing."

For a long time, Rowland knew vaguely the sound he wanted the group to have, and now has, but it took meeting a girl at a bus stop to crystalize it.

He grew up in England, in a large Irish family. He's 29, and didn't learn to play guitar until he was 21.

"I wouldn't have started then but for the fact my brother was in a group, playing weekends. I moved in with him. He told me his guitarist was leaving in six months, and if I learned guitar I could join the group. So I did. I'm very thankful to him." That brother now is a teacher, married, has children, and plays music on weekends.

"In 1976 and '77 I got in a punk group," Rowland says. "I thought this was a movement I could get involved in. I very quickly became disillusioned. It didn't mean anything."

In 1978, Rowland formed the first of three bands named Dexys Midnight Runners.

"I had strong ideas and lots of feelings I wanted to relate," Rowland recalls. "I took some months off and wrote for Dexys. The group was very brass-oriented; it was really fresh and new. We used the brass loud, right up front, two saxes and a trombone.

"We had a No. 1 single, 'Gino,' from our first album. Gino Washington was an American soul singer who came to England in the '60s and stayed.

"The group wanted to kick me out. I don't blame them. I wanted them to work ridiculously hard and perform superhuman feats they couldn't possibly do. I have to take full responsibility for that breakup.

"They left. I owned the name.

"I went back to Birmingham, where my folks were, to get a nucleus of musicians together. A lot of people I got in were fans of the first Dexys. Billy Adams, the guitarist, had followed us for a long time.

"We had what you could call a year in the wilderness, early 1981 to early '82, when we only released singles. The second group more or less dissolved during that period. I was working behind the scenes, very hard, on a new sound. In early 1982 I felt I had it. We started to record again.

"I wanted to use stringed instruments... I knew what I wanted but I didn't know how to get it. We had two cellos and a viola. One day I met Helen O'Hara at a bus stop.

"She was carrying a violin case, on her way to college. She looked pretty stunning, too. I told her about my group and tried to talk to her. She'd never heard of us and wasn't interested in pop music.

"I saw her there again. She thought I was trying to pick her up. I followed her home. I put a cassette with our music and a note with my phone number and address through her door's mail slot. She came down to rehearsal. She said, 'You need three fiddles.' That was like the final, missing link."

Miss O'Hara left school, joined Dexys and brought in two more violinists, making 11 in the group. Rowland sings and there is a drummer, bass guitarist, guitarist who can play banjo, pianist who can play accordian, trombo[illegible]

'Mama's Family' lets Lawrence have chance to be on her own

By ALAN L. GANSBERG
Copley News Service

HOLLYWOOD — When "Mama's Family" returns to NBC next season the audience can expect to see less of the characters originated by Carol Burnett and Harvey Korman and more of the Mama character created by Vicki Lawrence, as the producers and Carol see the series as Vicki's chance to be on her own.

"Carol's pushing me out of the nest," Vicki said, noting that it was Burnett who urged her to do the series. "Frankly, I was thrilled when the shows in which Carol was featured were not our highest rated; it means that Mama has a life of her own.

"And, Harvey never liked the character of Ed," she continued. "He'd be thrilled to death if he didn't come back on camera, but he is a marvelous director. I would like to see Betty White come back from time to time, though."

As Vicki sees it, "Mama has taken strides at being a woman. She had a boyfriend in one episode, and got a job in another. The audience loves it when she speaks out about things. Mama is growing."

The same could probably be said about Vicki. Off-camera her life is far removed from Hollywood. She lives in secluded Hidden Hills, at the farthest reaches of the San Fernando Valley.

Her life revolves around her husband, son and daughter, and such activities as the yacht club. Her son has a motorcycle, at the mere age of 7, something that seems right when there are no sidewalks or street lights and neighbors with horses.

"The farther from show business, the better," she insisted. "This business demands a lot of patience and perseverance. Instead of acting classes, people should take courses in politics and business education."

Needless to say, she doesn't want her kids anywhere near the cameras, nor do they have show business friends, save Carol and Harvey, but she quickly adds, "they're more like family."

"We've been through three years trying to get back into a series," she admitted. "I wouldn't want my kids to go through that."

Nor would she want to live in Los Angeles itself, a place she called "wonderful to work in, but the worst place to live...and I grew up here. Everyone is into status. The big house. The big car. It's all so superficial."

This is not to say that Vicki isn't having a good time. She doesn't mind playing a frumpy older woman, although she laughed, "I may freak out in a year and want to do a Playboy layout. There aren't many things on TV that are fun. I think of Mama as a clown. Do I care about the costume? Well, right now people are telling me that I look great in person."

Sotheby's may be on auction block

LONDON (AP) — A cartoon in the London Guardian this week showed a bow-tied Sotheby's auctioneer, gavel in hand, announcing with a look of surprise: "And the next lot is us."

American millionaires Marshall Cogan and Stephen Swid, two furniture-and-carpet company tycoons, have put in a $93 million bid to take over the world's most famous auction house.

After 239 years of selling other people's property, nobody at Sotheby's, which dived into the red last year, likes the American overture.

"It has been a shock and we shall fight it," group chief executive Graham Llewellyn said in a recent interview. "But it is one of the hard facts of life in a free society."

Outside the executive suite, life at Sotheby's fashionable Bond Street headquarters appeared normal.

In room after room within the maze of the Mayfair showrooms, experts compile catalogues for future sales and ponder the merits of ancient guns, Chinese porcelain, suits of armor, carpets, furniture, coins, medals and glass.

Sotheby's is a treasure house, but everything is simply passing through. Its greatest asset is its name.

"Two weeks ago, we had 10 to 15 million pounds ($15 million to $23 million) worth of property in the entrance hall," said Richard Camber, head of the works of art department. "The amount fluctuates from week to week."

Camber, 38, is one of 134 art experts and showroom managers throughout Europe and South Africa who signed a statement threatening to quit if the takeover bid succeeds.

"Names are worth a fortune," said Hugh Leggatt, a leading London art dealer. "If these Americans buy Sotheby's, they will get two things: one of the most famous businesses in the art world and also, at a relatively small price, a name that everyone has heard of — like Rolls-Royce."

Juliet Weir, an expert in China and porcelain, examines a piece brought into Sotheby's auction house in London for evaluation. After evaluation by two American millionaires, Sotheby's finds itself on the auction block, the subject of a takeover bid.

There was a scramble for Sotheby's stock when shares were offered to the public for the first time in 1977, and the firm seemed to be unstoppable until last year.

Then its international expansion and growing staff coincided with a slump for art and antiques in a deepening world recession.

A $10.5 million profit in 1981 changed to a $4.8 million loss in 1982.

The board retrenched by dismissing 550 employees, closing several offices and concentrating New York City operations in one auction house on 72nd Street, several blocks from its swanky old Madison Avenue headquarters.

However, Graham Llewellyn said that when the Cogan-Swid bid landed at Sotheby's "we had already turned the corner and are going full steam ahead with some marvellous sales lined up."

Americans already own more than half the Sotheby's stock and financial observers say the rest of the stockholders might be tempted by the 520 pence offer for each 25 pence share. The acceptance deadline is 3 p.m. Wednesday, May 4.

Sotheby's was founded in 1744 by Samuel Baker, a bookseller, who auctioneered private libraries to expand his business. The firm's namesake, John Sotheby, was his nephew. The first auctioneer was George Leigh, a showman on the rostrum whose ivory gavel is preserved in a glass case in the Bond Street entrance hall.

On Napoleon's death, Sotheby's auctioned the books he took into exile on St. Helena. The firm expanded into the arts in 1909 and now has offices in 50 cities on six continents and a staff of 1,450.

Generally assumed to exist mainly for the rich, 80 percent of its lots sell for under $775.

But its great coups made its name resound in the art world:

—The Earl of Roseberry's Mentmore Towers and its contents sold for $11 million in 1977

—The Robert von Hirsch art collection fetched $36 million in 1978

—Turner's "Juliet and Her Nurse" went for $6 million in New York in 1980, the highest auction price ever for a painting

—11.3 million Swiss francs (then $6.6 million) was paid in 1980 for a pair of diamond earrings in Geneva, still the record highest price of any object sold at auction.

The firm employs leading experts to decide authenticity and value and also consults the best outside. They don't all wear sharp suits and read The Times. Cyril Jacklin, 80, has blackened teeth, a rough London accent and craftsman's hands.

Smithsonian tactics come under fire

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Smithsonian Institution, a collection of museums and galleries known to tourists from all over the world, came under congressional fire Friday for methods used by a former curator credited with building the largest gem and mineral collection on earth.

Rep. Sidney R. Yates, D-Ill, chairman of the House Appropriations subcommittee that passes on the institution's budget, said he found it "incredible" that the museum requisitioned expensive watches and cigarette lighters seized by Customs agents and sold them to raise money to buy gems.

Yates also criticized the institution's chief lawyer, Peter Powers, for failing to tell his superiors about potential problems with conflict of interest statements filed by the former curator, Paul Desautels, during the three years before his retirement last year.

Those documents showed Desautels received $20,000 and $30,000 in consulting fees from two private gem collectors at the same time he was drawing his $55,000-a-year salary from the Smithsonian.

Powers said his assistant, Alan Ullberg, was directly responsible for reviewing Desautels' conflict of interest form, along with those from about 400 insitution employees with authority to spend money.

He said Ullberg never signed off on any of the last three forms filed during Desautels' tenure and was unsuccessful in attempts to get additional information from the curator.

But Powers acknowledged that the Desautels document was brought to his attention because of potential problems it raised and said he should have been more diligent in informing other institution officials.

No sanctions have been taken against Desautels, nor have any specific allegations of wrongdoing been leveled against him. But Phillip S. Hughes, the No. 2 official at the Smithsonian, said at Friday's subcommittee hearing that the whole matter has been referred to Justice Department officials.

One of the questions raised by Yates was a 1977 deal in which Desautels provided Barry Yampol, wealthy owner of the nation's largest radio paging firm, with 35 gems in exchange for Yampol placing $120,000 worth of his company's stock in an endowment fund for the Smithsonian.

The museum has a long-standing, although unwritten rule, against selling items, but builds its collections through exchanges.

A few years later, a firm set up by Yampol paid $20,000 in consulting fees to Desautels, who said he needed the money to pay for his mother's nursing-home bills.

Referring to the 1977 stock exchange deal with Yampol, Yates asked, "What's the difference in accepting money for gems and accepting stock for gems?"

The subcommittee chairman said he was "very much troubled about how the Smithsonian received some of the gems" it added to its collection under Desautels' 15 years as curator of that section.

"I just wonder whether there wasn't an artificial building up of values (of items to be donated) so donors could receive greater tax deductions," said Yates.

In a recent series of articles on Smithsonian activity, a Washington Post reporter cited museum and Internal Revenue Service records showing that one donor purchased a large topaz crystal for $750 in 1972 and by last year, when he gave it to the museum, had managed to have its value increased to what he and the museum agreed was $1 million.

The paper said records show the donor, Dale B. Durbin, a Florida plastic surgeon, has claimed $500,000 in tax deductions to date based on his giving the gem to the Smithsonian.

Desautels didn't testify at the hearing. In lengthy interviews with the Post, he acknowledged taking the actions attributed to him in acquiring items for the museum collection and defended their propriety. He said he was acting in the only way he knew to build the collection with the limited money available for actual purchase of gems.

He also acknowledged accepting the consulting fees but said there was no conflict of interest. He said his work in helping the private collectors find gems for purchase didn't conflict with his job as curator because they were considering items that were too expensive for the museum to consider buying.

Urban rooster to lose his cock-a-doodle-doo

AP Laserphoto

Hank Hathaway holds his pet rooster, Barney. Barney traveled to Colorado from Salt Lake City to have his voice box removed.

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Barney the rooster had a choice — give up his life of ease with an urban harem, or the raucous crow that roused neighbors at the crack of dawn.

"We decided it was better for him to be with his hens," said Barney's owner, Hank Hathaway. "So, they're going to take his voice box out."

Barney is to undergo surgery this weekend by a team of animal scientists at Colorado State University in Fort Collins, Hathaway said.

"There are only about three or four doctors in the country who can do this operation," he said. "It's dangerous because anytime you anesthetize a chicken, it's a delicate operation."

And Barney's going in style — with the University of Utah baseball team, which has a match in Fort Collins.

Hathaway, sports director at KCGL radio and the team's voice, said Barney would spend Friday night with the team at a motel before keeping his date with the doctors.

"They will be up at 5:11 a.m., guaranteed," said Hathaway, who kept the bird in his kitchen prior to the trip. "He woke me up this morning and I thought it was an earthquake."

Barney, named for the late artificial heart recipient Barney Clark because "this rooster is going into a dangerous surgical procedure," is a rare bird. He's the scion of a 2,000-year-old line of Peruvian Araconas whose liasons produce blue, green, avocado and pink eggs and brown speckled eggs.

"It's all in the breeding," Hathaway said.

Hathaway said his friendship with Barney — a veritable hen heart throb with his golden neck band and black, blue, white and green feathers — stems from being deprived of a rural upbringing.

"I'm a city boy and my wife's a farm girl. I've always wanted to be a farm boy," he said. "She said I could have two chickens about six months ago."

The law allowed them to have chickens, a cow or a goat in their eastside neighborhood, so Hathway soon had 17 chickens. "We kept them in the back yard."

But within weeks of getting Barney and another rooster, the complaints rolled.

"When they came into maturity, both of them started cock-a-doodle-dooing on the same morning. We had neighbors out in their bathrobes," Hathaway said.

"I'm afraid my reaction was that (they allowed) mating cats to run the streets at night, allow barking dogs to run the streets all the time, and a rooster's crow is a lot prettier sound than two mating cats or a barking dog," he said.

Still, Hathaway got rid of one rooster.

"I told the kids we'd find a way to keep (Barney), so I began looking into how to get him decock-a-doodle-dooed."

He said he made the decision after consulting with Dr. Harry Gibbons, Salt Lake City-County Health Department director, about his problem.

"The only time we'd go after roosters is if there was a noise complaint," Gibbons said. "Obviously, you're not going to get a noise complaint from a surgically altered rooster."

Treatment doesn't cure blindness doctor says

BOSTON (AP) — Soviet doctors have no proof of success with a controversial treatment for blindness that has drawn dozens of Americans to a Moscow clinic, a team of U.S. experts said Friday.

Dr. E.L. Berson

"There is a lack of any shred of evidence that this is helping anyone," said Dr. Eliot L. Berson of Massachusetts Eye and Ear Infirmary.

Among the best known patients to receive the treatment in Moscow was Todd Cantrell, 13, of Dalton, Ga. His father, Kyle, said the boy was helped "a little, not a lot" after he returned in January.

But Berson said, "Certainly nobody believes that Todd Cantrell has improved," including the Soviet doctor who treated him.

Berson was one of four U.S. experts who went to the Helmholtz Institute of Ophthalmology last November to review the widely publicized treatment for retinitis pigmentosa, a disease of the retina. The disease is a leading cause of blindness in the United States.

An estimated 50 American victims of the disease have gone to the institute to receive the treatment, called Encad. It involves twice-daily injections of an extract of RNA, the genetic messenger that carries the blueprints for assembling proteins needed by cells.

Eighteen of the Americans have been examined by Berson and other U.S. doctors since their return.

"We have not seen a single patient improve," Berson told a news conference. "Two-thirds were getting worse. I cannot recommend injections to people with this disease."

Berson, who also teaches at Harvard Medical School, was accompanied on the trip by Dr. Alan Laties of the University of Pennsylvania; Dennis L. Hartenstine, executive director of the National Retinitis Pigmentosa Foundation; and Edmund McManus, deputy director of the National Eye Institute.

Retinitis pigmentosa is an inherited disease that affects an estimated 100,000 people in the United States. Victims usually first have night blindness or tunnel vision, but eventually most lose all their eyesight.

About half of all victims are legally blind by age 40. There is no accepted treatment.

The U.S. doctors said the Soviets have no rational, scientific basis for thinking that the treatment works. And the instruments they use to measure patients' conditions are crude and imprecise.

In addition, they have not conducted any controlled clinical trials. In such experiments, one group of victims would receive Encad, while an identical comparison group would get a realistic-looking but inactive substitute.

The Soviets have used the treatment on about 1,000 people over the past 12 years. At one time, they claimed that as many as 45 percent of their patients were helped.

However, in their last published report last year, they followed 24 patients for 10 years. One was said to have improved. Half worsened, while the rest had stabilized.

Berson noted that the Soviets have an entire institute devoted to this treatment, and he doubted they will stop offering it.

"If they stick to their therapy despite a lack of rationale, I would hope that they would get better equipment" to measure its effect, he said.

Another patient to receive the Soviet treatment was Pat Livingston, 24, of the Boston suburb of Newton. She took three trips to Moscow, the first in 1976 after she developed tunnel vision.

"Initially, I thought I was seeing better," she said Friday. "But after my second trip, my vision got worse. Then I realized it wasn't working."

Gordon Gund, vice chairman of the Retinitis Pigmentosa Foundation, received an early version of the Soviet therapy in 1970 but went blind from the disease.

"To create false hope," he said, "is not right, ethical or fair."

Family accommodations.

Whether you're going on vacation, to the grocery store or just driving across town, you'll find the Honda Civic 4-Door Wagon very accommodating.

It has a wide-opening liftgate and flat loadspace for hauling. And five-passenger seating for people.

All of whom would be pleased to know that a tailgate lock indicator and child-proof rear door locks come standard on this Civic Wagon.

Not to mention a 5-speed manual transmission, front-wheel drive, steel-belted radial tires, reclining front bucket seats and rear window wiper/washer.

The Honda Civic Wagon. It's also very accommodating when it comes to family budgets.

THE SWITCH IS ON

Thousands of bottled water users have already changed to Reverse Osmosis (RO) Drinking Water Systems. At present there are over 3,000 Reverse Osmosis (RO) Systems in use in homes and offices in the Permian Basin. Why are so many turning to RO? The process of Reverse Osmosis has the remarkable ability to remove almost all pollutants from water and produce for you and excellent tasting drinking water at an affordable price. Water pollution is an age old problem. Today there are thousands of new toxic chemicals introduced into the environment and many have or will contaminate our drinking water sources. Some of these chemicals can cause cancer, genetic mutations and birth defects. Recently scientists from The World Health Organization and The National Cancer Institute estimated that up to 90% of all cancer is caused by chemicals in our air and drinking water "Safe Drinking water in this country can no longer be taken for granted". (L.A. Times January 2, 1980). Today after several decades of research and development costing many million of dollars reverse osmosis is reguarded as the most effective, efficient and economical of method of water purification. Little wonder thousands of people in West Texas are turning to these marvelous systems to provide for themselves and their families pure great tasting drinking water. At Pure Water Reverse Osmosis we are bringing to the Permian Basin the very best reverse osmosis systems at the best price. Best products. Best price. Our guarantee: Quality Product at the Best Price in the Permian Basin. To find out just how inexpensive a Pure Water Reverse Osmosis System is call 699-7378. Or when a pure water representative knocks on your door invite him in. You will appreciate the information he has to share with you.

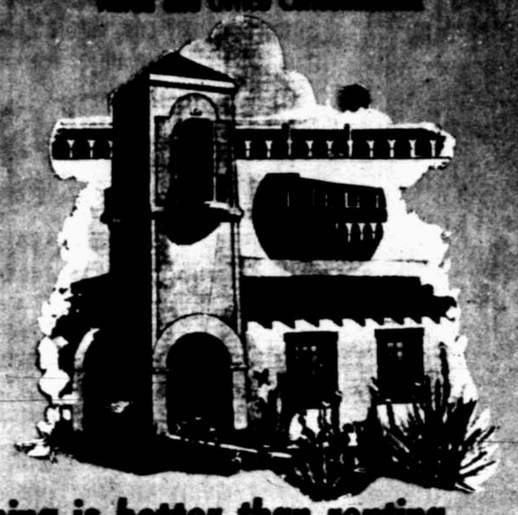
Mission Square Plaza
Retail and Office Condominiums



Owning is better than renting.

If you're presently renting retail or office space, you already know some of the disadvantages-frequent cost-of-living rent increases, leases that give the landlord all the advantages, costly sales overrides on your retail sales. In short, you're not in control.

From a pure economic standpoint, ownership beats renting. Consider these advantages:

* You mortgage payments are fixed and not subject to escalation or overrides to a landlord.
* You receive tax deductions for interest and tax payments.
* You get a tax deduction for depreciation over the next 15 years.
* You have control over your space, and no one can cancel your lease.
* You can buy enough space to meet your future growth plans and lease the expansion area until it's needed.
* All maintenance and upkeep is furnished through the Owner's Association.
* Your real estate investment gains value.

In addition to all this, Mission Square is strategically located in one of the city's fastest growing areas; North Big Spring and Loop 250, just northeast of ClayDesta Plaza.

Mission Square is an ideal location for professionals, service businesses, and a variety of retails stores. Contact our office now, for a full color brochure and further details.

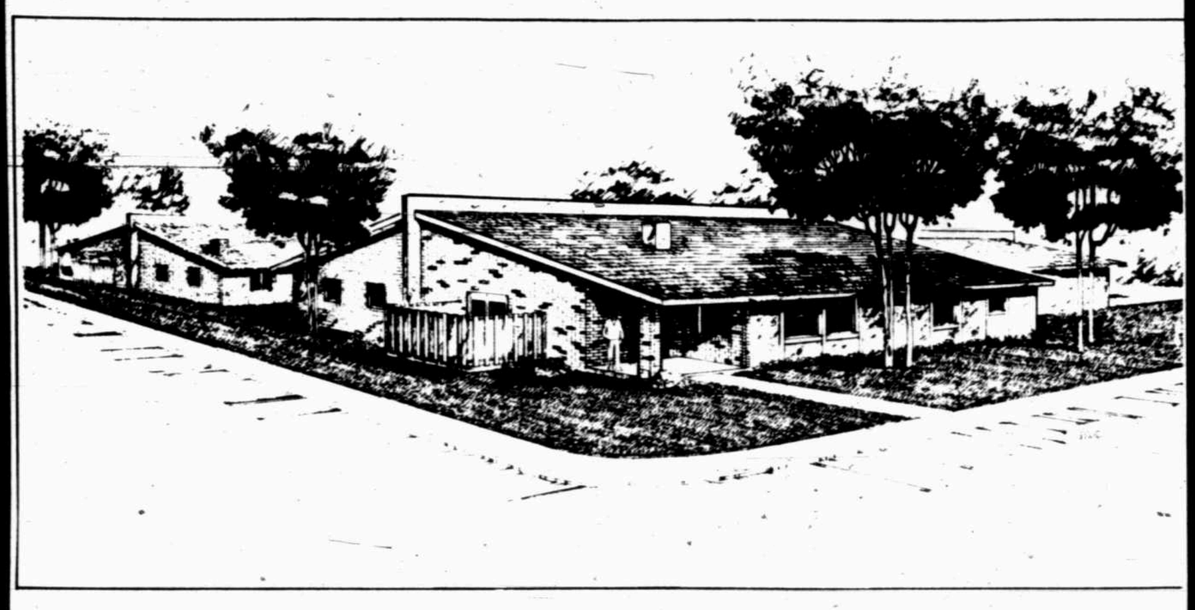
LIVE-IN TAX SHELTER



LUXURY FAIRGATE TOWNHOMES FOR $92,500

If you're like most renters, the tax man's got you down and you're ready to cry uncle. You have no interest to write off, and, to make matters worse, you don't own a home. Each month those rent dollars go out the window with no hope of retrieval.

LIVE-IN TAX SHELTER

At Fairgate you'll enjoy a beautiful home and tax relief. You can deduct a considerable amount of interest expense from your income tax, and because our homes are priced below market value but presently sell for $92,500, you have built-in equity.

DISTINCTIVE 2 & 3 BEDROOM FLOORPLANS

Besides saving you money, at Fairgate you'll get some great extra features as standards. A fireplace. Appliances. Ceiling fans. And much more.

To visit Fairgate in northwest Midland, take Wadley Avenue west to Midland Drive; then north to Fairgate and the models.
