DALLAS — Fourteen winning tickets were sold in Saturday night's Lotto Texas jackpot, the state's largest yet at about $50 million, state officials said. State lottery officials worked past midnight trying to determine if any winning tickets had been sold, then made the startling announcement about 12:30 a.m. that 14 tickets with the winning six numbers had been purchased. The winning numbers on six ping-pong balls that popped out of the lottery hopper at 9:59 p.m. were: 7, 10, 11, 23, 34 and 43.

Gun bill won't die

AUSTIN — Will Texans get to vote on whether to allow citizens to carry concealed handguns? It looks doubtful, but the "right-to-carry" bill is one that refuses to die. And while legislators can argue whether the proposal would result in more gun deaths, they agree that continued debate would result in the death of other bills they would like to see become law this session./10C

Three incumbents ride in

Schneider joins Morrow, Cuevas, Brooks

By Darren J. Waggoner
Staff writer

■ Area voting roundup/7A

An aggressive door-to-door campaign carried City Council challenger Pat Schneider to a convincing victory in the District 1 race Saturday night.

In the other races, three incumbents — Bill Morrow, Jose Cuevas and Juluis Brooks — will return to the council, although one at-large seat was decided by less than two percent of the vote.

Mrs. Schneider — who has spent about four hours a night combing the streets for support since announcing her candidacy in March — garnered 62 percent of the vote to defeat incumbent James Devenport by a 2,660 to 1,642 margin.

Mrs. Schneider, 66, said she plans to hold town meetings to help develop close ties with her constituents.

"I think that meeting the people and letting them get to know me was the key to this victory," she said. "I had all of my family helping — one of my daughters ran my campaign. Poor Tom (her husband) hasn't had dinner for six weeks because I've been out walking the streets."

"When this thing hit, it was like a truck. It was like an explosion. It hit hard," said police detective Mark Wohleking amid the destruction downtown.

Flying debris at the event caused three people to be transported to the hospital and five others treated at the scene, officials said. Late Saturday, one person had been admitted and was in stable condition, another was still undergoing evaluation, and the third treated and released, hospital officials said.

Sudden gusts startle, strike fear in those attending arts festival

By Tonie Miller-Uzzel and Myra Lee Salcedo

Fear was the dominant thought in the minds of people attending the Celebration of the Arts Saturday when a dust storm carried by 68 mph winds tore through the festival site.

"I've lived in Midland all my life and I've never been in anything like this before," said Cliff Chalmers, who was operating a food stand on Loraine Street between the courthouse and the Midland Center.

He was scared.

And, he watched in fear as a freezer blew over and almost hit his wife.

Voters reject school plan; Krueger, Hutchison in runoff

Sen. Bob Krueger

AUSTIN (AP) — Interim Democratic Sen. Bob Krueger and Republican state Treasurer Kay Bailey Hutchison immediately launched into their runoff battle Saturday after walking away from the special U.S. Senate election field.

The two easily outdistanced the other 22 candidates on the ballot, with each receiving more than twice as many votes each as the third place finisher.

Texas voters rejected the Save Our Schools constitutional amendment Saturday and left lawmakers with 30 days to accomplish something they haven't been able to do in 25 years: Find a constitutional way to fund public education.

Proposition 1, known to supporters as SOS and to opponents as Robin Hood II, was failing 61 to 39 percent with 62 percent of the statewide vote tallied. Two other education-related constitutional amendments also appeared headed for defeat.

Krueger said the runoff, to be held in late May or early June, was "a referendum on who do you trust." Mrs. Hutchison said she expected plenty of mudslinging.

"The people of this state are going to say that rather than have someone who is fighting for the interests of Wall Street investment bankers, they want people who are fighting for the families right here in Texas," Krueger said.

Troops' opinions vary on Somalian intervention

MOGADISHU, Somalia (AP) — Marine Gunnery Sgt. Bob Adwell figures the U.S.-led intervention in Somalia was worthwhile. Cpl. Craig Fisher isn't so sure.

The American military contribution to Operation Restore Hope reached a peak of 25,800 men and women in mid-January, of a total force of 38,000 that included troops from 23 other nations.

The operation cost more than $750 million, and eight Americans and nine others in the coalition force died. What has that bought?

■ The war, starvation and disease that killed an estimated 350,000 people last year have virtually ended.

■ The streets remain hazardous but are much safer than the days when gunmen brandished automatic weapons openly and bandits stole and killed with little threat of reprisal.

■ A new police force is in place and the groundwork has been laid for a new government and court system.

"Our mission is completed," said Adwell, of Glasgow, Kentucky. "We've made a big difference. There are a lot of good people out there. They didn't have a chance to thrive. They do now."

But a significant group of Marines and soldiers — most of whom will only talk privately for fear of reprisals from their officers — are disillusioned with the animosity that remains.

"We've helped a little bit, but I don't think what we've done has changed much," said Fisher, of Carson City, Michigan. "The people are ungrateful. They don't care about us. I can't wait 'til I get home."

Adwell has had his share of close calls. A fresh scar over his right eye marks the four stitches needed to close a cut from a rock.

"The guys have taken things a little more seriously," he said. "And they've seen the hardship these kids go through. It gives you some new appreciation for freedom."

Assailants kill police officer, wound 4 others

PHNOM PENH, Cambodia (AP) — A member of the U.N. mission in Cambodia was killed and four others were wounded in two attacks, a U.S. spokesman said Saturday.

U.N. spokesman Eric Falt said unidentified gunmen sprayed a U.N. vehicle with automatic weapons fire in Kompong Cham province Friday night, killing an unarmed Colombian police officer, Caicedo Venancio, 28.

He was the 11th member of the U.N. mission to be slain, Falt said.

A Malaysian officer and a Cambodian believed to be an interpreter were wounded, Falt said.

In another attack Friday night, unidentified assailants fired small arms and two rocket-propelled grenades at a house used by Uruguayan peacekeepers in the neighboring province of Kratie, Falt said. Two Uruguayan soldiers suffered minor shrapnel wounds.

The U.N. contingent is in Cambodia to monitor a cease-fire and prepare for elections planned for May 23-28.

The United Nations has said it will go ahead with the elections despite the violence and opposition from the Khmer Rouge. The guerrilla group killed hundreds of thousands of Cambodians when it ruled Cambodia in the mid-1970s.

Report: France's ousted premier commits suicide

PARIS (AP) — Pierre Beregovoy, ousted as France's premier when his Socialist Party was crushed in March elections, shot himself in the head Saturday and died hours later on the way to the hospital.

Beregovoy died shortly after 10 p.m. (4 p.m. EDT) in the helicopter en route from his hometown of Nevers to a military hospital in Paris, 150 miles to the north, a Defense Ministry spokesman said on condition of anonymity.

Among those awaiting Beregovoy at the hospital were President Francois Mitterrand, a longtime friend, and Edouard Balladur, the conservative who took over as premier March 29.

Balladur said in a statement late Saturday night that he was "profoundly shaken by the tragic disappearance of Pierre Beregovoy."

Political colleagues said Beregovoy had been deeply stung by the Socialists' landslide defeat. They said he also was dismayed by the disclosure in February that he received an interest-free $180,000 loan in 1986 from a businessman later jailed on corruption charges.

Authorities said Beregovoy shot himself with his bodyguard's gun while walking along a canal near Nevers. They said he asked his driver and bodyguard to let him walk alone, then shot himself with the gun, which Beregovoy apparently had taken unnoticed.

Earlier in the day, Beregovoy had conferred with local union leaders and presided at the start of an amateur bicycle race.

Beregovoy, a loyal colleague of Mitterrand's, served almost exactly one year as premier after replacing controversial Edith Cresson. Earlier, he served two widely praised stints as finance minister.

Colleagues said he held himself responsible for the Socialist defeat and was depressed that doubts about his honesty had surfaced despite his insistence he had done nothing wrong in accepting the interest-free loan.

"He became the target of many unjust, personal attacks," said Pierre Mauroy, another former Socialist premier. "As a man of honor, he suffered a great deal."

Beregovoy resigned as premier on March 29 after the Socialists won only 12 percent of the seats in parliamentary elections.

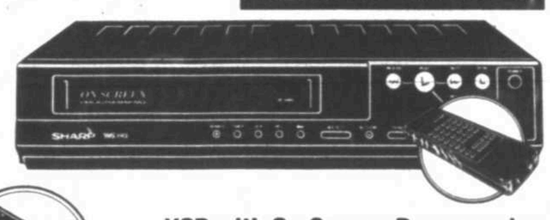

With a blue-collar background, Beregovoy's career was atypical among French politicians, whose careers generally are formed in the nation's elite schools.

Suicide bicycle bomber kills Sri Lankan president, 11 others

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka (AP) — A suicide bomber on a bicycle killed President Ranasinghe Premadasa and at least 11 others at a crowded May Day parade Saturday. Police suspected Tamil guerrillas, but a rebel spokesman denied involvement.

The assassination — eight days after a leading opposition politician was slain — threatened to plunge the war-wracked island nation into a political crisis. Premadasa held all important Cabinet posts, including the Ministry of Defense.

There were no immediate claims of responsibility for the attack, which injured at least 60 people. Police suspected Tamil rebels, who have often used suicide bombings against opponents and recently stepped up their anti-government campaign.

The Tamils' 10-year struggle to break away from the Sinhalese-dominated government has claimed more than 17,000 lives.

But Lawrence Thilakar, a Tamil Tiger spokesman in Paris, said the rebels "deny any responsibility" for the attack.

In the past, however, the group has issued similar denials for attacks they carried out.

Minutes before the blast, Premadasa, wearing white clothes and a green cap, was greeting people from atop a jeep and then got down to mingle with the crowd.

The assassin, who had explosives taped to his body, crashed his bicycle into Premadasa before detonating the bomb, state-run television reported. The president had been talking to his governing party activists when the bomb went off.

The explosion blew off the bomber's head and splattered the street with blood and pieces of flesh. Police said that in addition to the president and the assassin, at least 11 other people were killed.

Among the victims were two top police officials escorting the 68-year-old president and a presidential aide. Several Cabinet ministers escaped unharmed as thousands of panicked people fled, leaving the street littered with shoes.

Premadasa's body was mangled. Other bodies lay in pools of blood.

One of Premadasa's top aides, Evans Cooray, had left the president's side moments before the blast to answer a telephone call.

"I looked around and saw some people thrown in the air," he said. "Others were lying on the ground."

Prime Minister Dingiri Banda Wijetunga was sworn in as interim president, and a curfew was imposed. The parliament must choose a new president within a month.

Hours after the assassination, the streets of the capital of 1 million people were deserted. Soldiers patrolled the roads and air force helicopters hovered overhead.

In Washington, the U.S. State Department advised Americans to avoid Sri Lanka for all but essential travel until further notice.

President Clinton called the assassination "a brutal act of terrorism" and praised Premadasa for working "tirelessly to promote his country's development and raise the standard of living of all Sri Lankans."

Premadasa rose to his country's highest office in 1989. He was popular for his anti-poverty programs and had urged talks to end the Tamil insurgency.

A Tamil suicide bomber killed former Indian Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi in 1991 in southern India.

Opposition leader Lalith Athulathmudali was slain by an unidentified gunman at a political rally on April 23. Government officials blamed the rebels, but many people in Athulathmudali's party accused the government.

Athulathmudali had quit the governing United National Party after sponsoring an unsuccessful impeachment motion against the president in 1991.

Look for sun, low 70s today

Staff report

Today's forecast calls for sunny skies with a high in the lower 70s and north winds at 15 to 25 miles per hour. Tonight should be clear with a low near 50, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Monday should be sunny with a high in the lower 80s.

After an overnight low of 49, Saturday's high reached 86 compared with the record high for that date of 96 set last year. The record low for that date is 36 set in 1967.

NATION

Showers and thunderstorms prevailed Saturday in the central gulf coast, with strong wind and heavy rain in some spots. Snow fell in portions of the West.

Several trees were felled by wind in the southwestern Louisiana town of Oberlin and power lines were toppled in Ville Platte, about 30 miles east.

Elsewhere, skies were cloudy and showers were scattered in the Mississippi and Tennessee valleys.

Snow fell in southern Colorado, with more than 6 inches in Walsenburg, Rye and Westcliffe.

Rain ahead of a cold front fell in the northern Pacific Coast region. Skies were sunny in the Northeast. The afternoon temperature soared above 90 degrees in Southwest deserts.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

State leaders look to alternative school plans

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Ann Richards and other top state leaders began looking toward alternative school funding plans Saturday after voters rejected the plan they had pushed for months.

"We've got to go back to square one. We've got to see what we can get the leadership to agree on . . . and try to get this thing resolved," Richards said.

Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock said voters "have spoken loud and clear."

Bullock said he would meet Sunday with staff and lawmakers "to begin working immediately on a plan that will be acceptable to voters and which most importantly will provide accountability to taxpayers and a quality education for our children."

House Speaker Pete Laney also said lawmakers would quickly get to work.

With 73 percent of 8,087 precincts reporting, Proposition 1 was failing by a wide margin. The vote was 62 percent, or 1,023,908, against and 38 percent, or 615,857, in favor.

The so-called "Robin Hood" proposal would have made it constitutional for some property tax money to be shifted from richer to poorer school districts.

It was designed to meet a Texas Supreme Court order for a constitutional way of making similar money available to school districts that tax locally at similar rates. Schools rely on state aid and local property taxes.

Leaders, headed by Richards, had called Proposition 1 the best chance to meet the court deadline and avoid potential school closings. Laney said despite its defeat, "We intend to keep the schools open . . . but there are few methods left to meet the court's requirements."

But opponents said the proposed constitutional amendment would mean higher property taxes and wouldn't end the continuing court battle over fair school funding. They said lawmakers should find a better way to address the court order.

Texans also rejected two other school-related amendments:

■ Proposition 2 on school mandates. With 73 percent of the precincts reporting, it was failing with 51 percent, or 805,612, against, and 49 percent, or 764,465, in favor.

It would have kept school districts from having to comply with state educational mandates that are not funded by the state and are enacted after Dec. 31. There would have been exceptions for mandates imposed to comply with the state constitution or federal law, or enacted by a two-thirds vote of the Legislature.

■ Proposition 3 on school bonds. It was failing with 56 percent, or 885,261, against, and 44 percent, or 690,812, in favor.

City sends 'Robin Hood' plan packing

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff writer

Voters in Midland and around the state sent the "Robin Hood" proposition packing. The proposition, intended to equalize funding by shifting some property tax money from rich to poor districts, lost by a landslide in Midland.

Almost 80 percent of more than 16,000 voters cast ballots against Proposition 1 in Midland, while it was failing by more than a 61-39 percent margin with 50 percent of the votes counted statewide.

The ramifications of Proposition 1 "were confusing," said Midland Independent School Board Trustee Adela Marmolejo. "Our board split on it, like everybody else (in the state)."

Ms. Marmolejo, running unopposed for her seat in District 2, watched proposition results come in at the elections office Saturday night, precinct by precinct.

Midland voters also overwhelmingly struck down Proposition 3, with 74 percent of the voters saying "no" to providing up to $750 million in state general obligation or revenue bonds to help school districts build and renovate facilities. The proposition was being defeated by a 52-48 percent margin statewide late Saturday night with half of the votes reported.

Local school administrators had predicted dire financial straits for Texas school districts if Proposition 1 failed.

Midland school board vice president Gary Willis said the immediate impact of the proposition failing is that there will be a hiring freeze until the next school board meeting.

With five weeks of school left, Willis said, "We have the resources to finish the school year and graduate our seniors, and to even hold summer school with tuition. But unless the Legislature can solve the problem — now that voters have said 'no' to Proposition 1 — and satisfy the courts, we could see Judge McCown have the state stop sending checks."

If legislators can't solve the problem by June 1, it has been indicated that Texas school districts could be impacted by not receiving a June 25 check from the state.

"If checks stop coming," Willis said, "we won't have the resources to open the schools come August. We are hoping legislators can solve a problem in the next 30 days that they couldn't solve in 2 or 3 years. It's in their hands now."

Midlanders supported Proposition 2, with 63 percent of the voters in favor of school districts not having to comply with unfunded state mandates.

Statewide, however, the proposition was being shot down with more than half of Texans voting against it.

But the race was close with 52 percent against — and 48 percent in favor — of the proposition.

As votes were still being tabulated statewide, Willis noted the tally could change by time the final vote was counted.

"I'm still hopeful that Proposition 2 will pass (statewide)," Willis said. "I really wanted to see it pass, it is near and dear to my heart."

As for what comes next in the school finance issue, trustees agreed it has been turned over to legislators, and is just a "waiting game" for Texas school districts.

The total Midland County breakdown for the three propositions is as follows:

■ Proposition 1: 3,217 (or 20.25 percent) for. 12,664 (or 79.74 percent) against.

■ Proposition 2: 9,686 (or 62.55 percent) for. 5,795 (or 37.44 percent) against.

■ Proposition 3: 4,081 (or 26.16 percent) for. 11,468 (or 73.83 percent) against.

COUNCIL: Schneider, 3 incumbents win

president of the League of Women Voters — has attended council meetings for nearly two years and written summary reports of important council decisions for the League of Women Voters.

A former pilot — she flew her own plane into Midland in 1954. After moving to Eagle Pass in 1971, she returned to Midland in 1980.

In the at-large race — where the two top vote-getters are elected — incumbents Bill Morrow and Jose Cuevas were returned to the council by earning 7,567 and 5,871 votes, respectively. Cuevas — 36-year-old owner of Jumburitto, Inc. — edged challenger Dale Brown by 311 votes, or one percentage point, to win the second position.

Challenger Bill Rodriguez — owner of Bill's Fence and Bill's Fireplace Center — finished fourth with 994 votes, which equaled five percent of the vote.

Brown, who said he has no immediate plans for another council bid, was pleased with his first attempt at city politics.

"We had a lot of people who worked awfully hard for me. We had respectable results for being newcomers," Brown said.

Morrow also credited the volunteers who helped with his campaign.

"All I had to do was show up and speak," Morrow said. "It was very gratifying. We had an awful lot of nice folks working out there."

Morrow, a 57-year-old local attorney, said he plans to return to "business as usual" on the council.

"I think we've done a fine job. We just need to keep holding the line on taxes," he said.

In the District 2 race, appointee Juluis Brooks defeated challenger Jose Alfredo Zertuche by an 871 to 487 tally.

Brooks, 53, expressed optimism with his chance to return for an elected two-year term. He was appointed to the seat last summer following the resignation of the Rev. Michael DeVaughn.

"We hope to get the southeast side of Midland back on the map again. I look to see a lot of changes for the better for District 2," he said. "It's going to take cooperation between the district and the entire city."

Brooks, owner of two Brooks Barbecue restaurants, also said he looks forward to working with Zertuche.

"I think there is some good that came out of this race. We've gained a friendship and I hope we work together for the district," he said.

Zertuche, 32, was narrowly defeated by DeVaughn in a recount in 1991. On Saturday, he took 36 percent of the vote, compared with 64 percent for Brooks.

City election results in brief

Staff report

James Brooks, longtime incumbent, won re-election to the Greenwood Independent School District board of trustees, capturing 60 percent of the vote in his race against Gary Pfannenstiel.

The final vote breakdown was:

■ Brooks, 304 votes, or 60.07 percent.

■ Pfannenstiel, 202 votes, or 39.92 percent.

In the other GISD races, James B. Mashburn and Price Robinson were both unopposed. Mashburn is the Place 4 trustee while Robinson serves in Place 5.

Meanwhile, four spots on the Midland County Hospital District were up for election Saturday. Elected without opposition were:

■ District 1: Margaret C. Williams.

■ District 2: Josie D. Ramirez.

■ District 5: Richard Key Dulaney.

■ District 6: Stephen L. Wiesenfeld.

Likewise, two incumbents ran unopposed for the Midland Independent School District board of trustees. They were:

■ District 2: Adela Marmolejo.

■ District 4: Jackie Hamilton.

RUNOFF: Both candidates express eagerness for Round 2

joy. I am so ready to draw distinctions between her record and mine. I think it'll be a hard race. But I certainly expect to win," he said.

Mrs. Hutchison said she, too, was eager for the second round despite what she predicted would be negative campaigning against her.

"I'm prepared for that. I want to run on the issues. I think the people of Texas deserve that," she said. "I'm going to go to every person who wants a new voice, an outsider, in Washington, D.C."

Mrs. Hutchison had been accused during the campaign of striking a former employee with a notebook, a charge she strongly denied. She said the results showed that voters don't like such attacks.

"The people of Texas were a lot smarter than the politicians gave them credit for. I am so proud that the people said no more of this dirty campaigning, let's talk about the issues," she said.

With 79 percent of the 8,087 precincts reporting, each of them had more than twice as many votes as the third-place candidate.

Krueger, who succeeded Treasury Secretary Lloyd Bentsen in January, had 512,474 votes, or 30 percent.

Mrs. Hutchison, a rising GOP star who promised to be "a different kind of senator," had 497,823 votes, or 29 percent.

Two Republican congressmen, Jack Fields of Humble and Joe Barton of Ennis, were well behind. Barton had 235,409, or 14 percent. Fields had 230,619, or 13 percent.

The two other leading Democrats followed them. Former Ross Perot adviser Richard Fisher had 138,512, 8 percent, while Dallas lawyer Jose Angel Gutierrez, had 44,765, 3 percent. The remaining 18 candidates received about 4 percent combined.

State GOP Chairman Fred Meyer, elated that three of the top four finishers were Republicans, said Saturday was a bad night for Richards.

"Here you have an incumbent senator with a 'united' Democrat party and the governor of Texas behind him and we're getting more votes. That has to be very discouraging," Meyer said.

But the governor dismissed his comments.

"I have never looked at this in political terms for me," she said.

Krueger, a former congressman and member of the Railroad Commission, was tapped by Richards in January after a lengthy search.

An Elizabethan scholar, Krueger is making his third bid for the Senate after losing in 1978 and 1984. He was backed by the State Democratic Executive Committee and received high-powered campaign help from Richards, Vice President Al Gore and Henry Cisneros, the U.S. Housing and Urban Development secretary.

Mrs. Hutchison, a former television reporter, state legislator and one-time member of the National Transportation Safety Board, followed Richards into the treasurer's office, winning that post in 1990.

In 1991, she campaigned hard against legislative proposals to create a state income tax.

The race was the first special Senate election in Texas since 1961, when Wichita Falls college professor John Tower defeated 71 candidates and became the state's first Republican senator since Reconstruction. That seat remains in GOP hands, now held by possible 1996 presidential candidate Phil Gramm.

Krueger, 57, served two terms in the U.S. House in the 1970s before losing a 1978 challenge to Tower. He failed to win the Democratic Senate nomination in 1984, but won a statewide Railroad Commission race in 1990.

He was appointed by Richards in January and immediately sought to build an anti-spending reputation. He cut his salary and office budget by 20 percent.

"Government isn't working right. We're not getting what we pay for. And we've got to change that," he said.

Mrs. Hutchison, 49, who won the treasurer's post in 1990 and was temporary chair of the 1992 GOP National Convention in Houston, joined other Republicans' anti-tax call but stood alone among them in favoring some abortion rights. She geared much of her campaigning to women voters.

"Women voters are very important," she said. "I think we need another voice at the table, and I will be that voice."

Her campaign was hit by the charges — strongly denied — of a former Treasury employee, Sharon Ammann, that Mrs. Hutchison had struck her with a binder. Both the candidate and Ms. Ammann, daughter of former Gov. John Connally and a Fields backer, took lie detector tests to back up their arguments.

Fields, 41, denied any involvement in that fuss. The 12-year House veteran portrayed himself as a "blue collar" Republican who could appeal to working Texans.

Midland voters strongly support Hutchison

Staff report

Midland voters Saturday strongly supported Republican Kay Bailey Hutchison in her U.S. Senate race against 23 other candidates.

Ms. Hutchison, the current state treasurer, garnered 6,576 votes in Midland County, representing 41.68 percent of the total ballots cast here. That was more than twice as many votes as her nearest opponent, Joe Barton, a Republican congressman from Ennis. He got 2,783 votes, 17.68 percent. Jack Fields, a Republican congressman from Humble, followed closely with 2,722 votes, or 17.28 percent.

Meanwhile, Democrat Bob Krueger, who was appointed by Gov. Ann Richards to fill the seat when Lloyd Bentsen resigned to become Treasury Secretary in the Clinton Administration, received 2,248 votes in Midland County. That represented 14.27 percent of the total vote.

Statewide, Ms. Hutchison and Krueger were the two leading vote-getters and will meet in a runoff. Gov. Richards has not determined the date of the runoff, though there is speculation that it will be held June 5.

The total Midland County vote in the U.S. Senate race is as follows:

■ Kay Bailey Hutchison: 6,576.

■ Joe Barton: 2,783.

■ Jack Fields: 2,722.

■ Bob Krueger: 2,248.

■ Richard Fisher: 576.

■ Jose Angel Gutierrez: 253.

■ Stephen Hopkins: 250.

■ Charles Ben Howell: 45.

■ Don Richardson: 43.

■ Gene Kelly: 42.

■ Rick Draheim: 38.

■ C. (Sonny) Payne: 37.

■ Herbert Spiro: 23.

■ Lottie Hancock: 20.

■ Clymer Wright: 20.

■ Roger Henson: 17.

■ Billy Brown: 17.

■ James Vallaster: 12.

■ Chuck Sibley: 12.

■ Lou Zaeske: 6.

■ Louis C. Davis: 6.

■ Rose Floyd: 3.

■ Thomas D. Spink: 3.

■ Maco Stewart: 1.

Hard-line protest leaves 140 injured at Russian parliament

MOSCOW (AP) — Rock-throwing Communist supporters battled police then erected barricades at parliament Saturday in a May Day protest that injured at least 140 people, the worst clashes in Moscow since the 1991 coup attempt.

Unconfirmed reports said one person was killed in the violence, which came six days after President Boris Yeltsin defeated hard-liners in a national vote of confidence.

Organizers of the march had warned of a confrontation with the government, and some Yeltsin opponents hinted at further unrest.

The clashes erupted during rallies in which nationalists and pro-Communists marched through the streets demanding the ouster of President Boris Yeltsin and blaming the United States for Russia's ills.

May Day — which honors workers — was one of the country's major holidays under communism. It still is observed as a holiday, but without the Soviet-era fervor and pageantry.

"We're heading toward civil war!" Nikolai Yakovenko, 55, his bloody forehead wrapped in gauze, said while helping erect makeshift barricades at the parliament building.

Protesters took over the building's rear square and fenced themselves in with trucks, iron grates, trash bins and tires. They demanded the parliament convene to remove Yeltsin and the Cabinet.

Helmeted riot police were withdrawn except for a line guarding the adjacent U.S. Embassy, which had warned its employees to avoid the area.

"Everybody must remain here today, tonight, tomorrow until the Congress convenes to remove this fascist government," Viktor Anpilov, a leader of the Trudovaya Rossiya (Russia Labor) movement told the crowd at the parliament.

Moscow Mayor Yuri Luzhkov had given permission for pro-Communist demonstrators to march on the south side of the city, across the Moscow River from the city center.

Authorities temporarily banned political demonstrations in the city center saying the measure was necessary to ensure order following the April 25 referendum, in which most voters expressed confidence in Yeltsin and approved of his economic policies.

Yeltsin wants to use the momentum of the referendum to push through a new constitution that would strengthen the presidency and replace the Soviet-era parliament, which has been trying to slow down free-market reforms.

"Having lost the referendum, the Communist and national-chauvinistic leaders took to organizing mass disorders," presidential spokesman Vyacheslav Kostikov said in a statement.

The violence broke out after police prevented thousands of demonstrators from marching beyond their prescribed rally area around the former October Square, about four miles south of the parliament building.

When police blocked the demonstrators from marching to the city center, they moved south toward Moscow State University. But they were met by a wall of riot police, trucks and fire hoses on Leninsky Prospekt one of Moscow's main avenues.

Protesters hurled stones, bricks, bottles, metal rods and wood sticks at police and riot troops who fought back with rubber truncheons near a statue of Yuri Gagarin, the first man in space.

The protesters set fire to two trucks and hijacked a fire engine.

Police reinforcements came from several directions and pushed the crowd back to the rally's starting point from where they went by subway to the parliament building.

Russian Interior Ministry spokesman Igor Vorontsov said 70 protesters and 77 policemen were injured. Seventeen of the officers were hospitalized, with four in serious and one in critical condition.

Anpilov, the rally organizer, said one of his group's supporters died in the fighting, but he gave neither the name nor the circumstances. There was no confirmation from police or hospital officials.

Initial reports said that a policeman also was killed. But a receptionist at Clinical Hospital No. 1 said the officer was in "very grave condition."

Many of the protesters blamed the United States, as well as Yeltsin, for soaring inflation, rising crime and ethnic unrest in the former superpower.

"It's a whole plan to destroy the Russian people," said 57-year-old Vadim Nikitin.

Serbs, Muslims meet to discuss peace process

VOULIAGMENI, Greece (AP) — Bosnian Serbs, now under the gun with President Clinton's decision to pursue military involvement in the civil war, gathered with their enemies Saturday to discuss peace. But time was running out.

"The clock is ticking," Secretary of State Warren M. Christopher told reporters in Washington.

The success of the talks at this seaside resort 12 miles south of Athens hinges on Bosnian Serbs accepting division of Bosnia-Herzegovina into 10 semi-autonomous regions, as called for by a U.N.-mediated peace plan.

The Serbs' foes — Bosnia's Muslims and ethnic Croats — have already accepted the plan. The Bosnian Serbs have repeatedly rejected it, but there was hope fear of Western military action could force concessions.

U.N spokesman Fred Eckhard said after the first day's meeting that "the talk of ultimate military intervention has most likely provided a degree of pressure that has been helpful for the negotiating process."

Serbia, under a U.N. embargo for supporting the Bosnian Serbs fighters, has also exerted pressured for a settlement.

Christopher refused to give details of Clinton's plan, saying only that it "involves a number of specific recommendations, including military steps."

The main options under consideration were launching air strikes against Bosnian Serb positions and lifting an arms embargo against the Muslims.

Christopher planned to head to Europe on Saturday night to coordinate the new strategy with Washington's allies.

Lord Owen, a co-author of the peace plan, was optimistic the conference would lead to the end of the war.

"Peace, which has so long eluded the former Yugoslavia, is now I think within our grasp if only everyone has the courage to seize it," Owen said at Athens' airport.

The year-long war, which began after Bosnia's Muslims and Croats seceded from Serb-dominated Yugoslavia, has left more than 130,000 people dead or missing.

Bosnian Serb leader Radovan Karadzic vowed Friday not to sign the peace agreement unless he got major concessions. The Bosnian Serbs want the territories under their control to be linked, keeping alive hopes for a "Greater Serbia."

Serbs forces have captured about 70 percent of Bosnia, but the land is not contiguous.

"We do not want more territory but we want the territory we have connected," Karadzic said.

Serb demands for contiguous territories are opposed by the international community as well as by the Muslims and Croats. They feel that would allow the Serbs to secede from Bosnia and unite with neighboring Yugoslavia.

Memories haunt former cult member

POMONA, Calif. (AP) — More than a year after breaking free from cult leader David Koresh's spell, former believer Jeanine Bunds struggles to piece her life back together.

Mrs. Bunds and her daughter both were numbered among Koresh's many wives, devotees in the Branch Davidian cult's once-thriving California congregation in this suburban area 30 miles east of Los Angeles.

They left the group in 1991, but the cult members' shootout with federal agents on Feb. 28 and the deadly fire that destroyed the cult's Waco, Texas, compound April 19 have made it impossible for them to escape the past, Mrs. Bunds said.

"I knew those people. I'm just wrenched about it," she said, standing on the porch of the two-bedroom house she shares with her daughter, Robin Bunds.

A couple of miles away, in nearby La Verne, the curtains are drawn at a large, two-story house that was Koresh's California headquarters from the late 1980s until 1991.

In those days, some 18 female cult members lived there, segregated from male followers who stayed in the smaller house where the Bunds now live.

Three cult members who are staying in the bigger house have been moving items out during the past week, neighbors said.

The 76-year-old home was up for sale last year for $359,000, but was taken off the market in July, according to real estate listing records. The owners, Jeffrey Little and Sherri Jewell, both are believed to have died in the Waco fire.

Besieged by journalists and curious onlookers who gathered on the lawn after the shooting and again after the fire, the current residents seldom venture outside, said Scott Munro, who lives across the street.

They've become so reclusive that they wait until after dark to mow the lawn, Munro said.

No one answered a reporter's knock on the door last week.

Mrs. Bunds said past and current cult members alike are unhappy with their sudden notoriety.

"I think these people are just trying to recoup. They're devastated," she said.

Two years ago, in the heyday of the Branch Davidians' California recruiting drive, the house jumped at night to the beat of Koresh's rock 'n' roll band. Followers arrived by the busload.

"They would get together late at night and play their music," said neighbor John Phillips. "Every now and then the music would get loud and somebody would call to complain. It was hard stuff. It was a pretty radical sound."

Branch Davidian children did not mix with other kids in the neighborhood, he said.

Results leave questions on Senate, school funds

DALLAS (AP) — Texans provided more questions than answers while voting on a vacant U.S. Senate seat and three school finance propositions in Saturday's election.

As expected, the state's first special U.S. Senate election in 32 years left no clear winner. Instead, Democratic interim Sen. Bob Krueger will face Republican state Treasurer Kay Bailey Hutchison in a runoff in late May or early June.

With 94 percent of the precincts counted, both Mrs. Hutchison and Krueger had 29 percent. Krueger had 563,774 votes compared with 552,218 votes for Mrs. Hutchison. Their nearest challenger, Democratic Congressman Joe Barton, garnered 14 percent of the vote.

Krueger said he was ready to meet Mrs. Hutchison head-to-head.

"It's going to be a race I'll enjoy. I am so ready to draw distinctions between her record and mine. I think it'll be a hard race. But I certainly expect to win," he said.

Mrs. Hutchison predicted that Krueger would run a negative campaign.

"I'm prepared for that. I want to run on the issues. I think the people of Texas deserve that," she said. "They are looking for fresh faces, and I'm going to try to give it to them."

Voters' landslide rejection of three school-related constitutional amendments left state lawmakers facing a June 1 deadline for a court-ordered cutoff of state aid to schools.

Proposition 1, designed to meet a Supreme Court order on equalizing school funding, would have made it constitutional for some property tax money to be shifted from richer to poorer school districts.

With 94 percent of the votes counted, the amendment was failing by a 62-38 percent margin. The measure was opposed by 1,192,047 voters, while 718,688 approved.

State leaders, headed by Gov. Ann Richards, had called Proposition 1 the best chance to meet the June 1 deadline and avoid potential school closings.

But opponents said the proposed constitutional amendment would mean higher property taxes and wouldn't end the continuing court battle over fair school funding. They said lawmakers should find a better way to address the court order.

"I think the voters of Texas demonstrated they can't be blackmailed, they can't be misled, and they don't like Ann Richards' tax increases," said state GOP Chairman Fred Meyer.

Mayoral votes dominate local ballots

DALLAS (AP) — Three Texas mayors were easily winning reelection Saturday, but early returns in El Paso had incumbent Bill Tilney behind.

In El Paso's 12-candidate mayoral field, retired businessman Larry Francis appeared to be unseating incumbent Bill Tilney.

With about 17 percent of the votes counted, retired businessman Larry Francis led a 12-candidate field with 5,735 votes, or 34.8 percent. City councilman Joe C. Pickett was second with 3,907, or 23.7 percent, followed by civil engineer Carlos Ramirez with 3,425, or 20.8 percent. Tilney had 3,391, or 20.6 percent.

In San Antonio, incumbent Nelson Wolff beat three challengers for a second two-year term. The 52-year-old Wolff, who spent no money on the race, appeared to have won handily.

With 38 percent of precincts reporting, Wolff had received 45,555 votes, or 85 percent.

Fort Worth Mayor Kay Granger, 50, appeared to be on her way past 59-year-old challenger Tillie Ransom for a second two-year term.

Area rejects 'Robin Hood,' backs Hutchison

By Ed Todd
Staff writer

West Texans overwhelmingly rejected the "Robin Hood" school-finance plan, which shifts educational tax money from "richer" school districts to "poorer" districts, and favored Republican Kay Bailey Hutchison over Democrat Robert "Bob" Krueger for United States senator from Texas.

Ms. Hutchison, the Texas state treasurer, and Krueger, the interim United States senator, were among 24 candidates vying for the senator's seat, which had been held by Lloyd Bentsen until President Bill Clinton appointed him as his Treasury Secretary. Subsequently, Texas Gov. Ann Richards had opted for Krueger to succeed Bentsen.

Statewide, Ms. Hutchison and Krueger were the top two votergetters and will meet in a runoff in either late May or early June.

MARTIN COUNTY

In Stanton, voters bucked the trend to favor conservative Republican Congressman Jack Fields for the senate seat. Fields garnered 210 votes in Martin County. Ms. Hutchison received 171 votes, Krueger polled 155 votes, and Republican Congressman Joe Barton got 82 votes.

In decidedly voting against the Robin Hood plan in Proposed Constitutional Amendment No. 1, Martin County voters rejected the plan with 5 to 1: 633 votes against the proposal and 140 in favor of the plan.

Proposition 1 would have fulfilled a Supreme Court order to equalize school funding by shifting funds from richer school districts to poorer school districts.

"Robin Hood isn't popular here," noted Martin County Judge Bob Deavenport.

Proposition 2, however, was approved by Martin County voters by 412 votes to 357 votes against the measure. Proposition 2 would keep school district from having to comply with state educational mandates that are not funded by the state.

Proposition 3, which would provide for up to $750 million in state general obligation or revenue bond to help school districts build and renovate facilities, was failed in Martin County with 540 votes against the measure and 226 in favor of the proposal.

In Stanton's City Council at-large election, Councilman Gene Wheeler won re-election to a two-year term, but Councilman James Johnson was ousted by Valentino Sotelo, the election's top votegetter.

Four candidates were vying for two positions.

Sotelo, who heads up the Stanton public schools' transportation systems, received 309 votes. Wheeler, who operates a water-well drilling company, polled 302 votes, and Johnson, a Church of Christ minister, received 288 votes. Jose "Joe" M. Villa, who works for Martin County Road and Bridge Department, received 286 votes.

ANDREWS COUNTY

Andrews voters heavily favored Barton, a congressman from Ennis, as their choice in the senate race.

Barton took in 427 votes, while Ms. Hutchison garnered 312 votes; Fields, 232 votes; Krueger, 199 votes, and Democrat Richard Fisher, 110 votes.

Andrews voters, who as taxpayers are funneling some of their educational funds to Midland and Greenwood public schools under the Robin Hood plan, resoundingly rejected Proposition 1 by 1,332 against the plan to 206 in favor of the proposal.

"It's costing Andrews County considerably," Andrews County Clerk F. William Hoermann said of Robin Hood. He estimated that Andrews taxpayers annually are shipping more than $10 million in school funding to Midland County.

"I'm not surprised at these numbers I see here," Hoermann said.

Andrews voters approved Proposition 2 by 815 to 703 votes, but rejected Proposition 3 by 1,051 against and 468 in favor of the measure.

In the Andrews City Council race, candidates James W. "Jimmy" Kilgore and Bob Holden were top vote-getters and will be in an runoff election. Kilgore received 317 votes, and Holden got 178. A third candidate, Dr. B.B. Stephens, received 140 votes.

The incumbent, Duane Ratliff, was not seeking re-election to the Place 2 post.

Place 4 incumbent Lloyd Eisenrich, who was unopposed, received 574 votes. Patsy Hoermann received 597 votes to win the Place 5 post.

REAGAN COUNTY

Big Lake voters favored Ms. Hutchison over Krueger and Fields in the Senate race.

DAWSON COUNTY

In Lamesa, Ms. Hutchison garnered 565 votes to lead other candidates in the race to the U.S. Senate. Fields attracted 374 votes; Barton took in 296 votes; Krueger took home 290 votes, Democrat Jose Angel Gutierrez captured 191 votes.

In the school finance election, Dawson County voters rejected Proposition 1 by 1,375 against to 447 votes for the measure. Proposition 2 passed by 960 to 820, and Proposition 3 failed by 1,386 to 399.

GLASSCOCK COUNTY

In Garden City, Fields took top billing in the senatorial race by collecting 117 votes to Ms. Hutchison's 92 and Krueger's 57. Barton received 36 votes, and Fisher got seven votes. Gutierrez took in two votes, and Don Richardson and Charles Ben Howell each received one votes.

Glasscock County voters heartily rejected Propositions 1 and 3, and rejected Proposition 2 with less vigor.

In the Garden City Independent School District election for two at-large positions, Jimmy Bednar received 235 votes, and Lilly Havlak, the incumbent, got 168 votes. Losing out was Linda Frysak, who received 117 votes. Not running for re-election was Randy "Butch" Halfmann.

HOWARD COUNTY

Big Spring voters favored Ms. Hutchison in the race to the U.S. Senate. She received 989 votes or 29 percent of the votes cast in that race, and Krueger received 901 votes. Fields took in 556 votes, and Barton won 473 votes. Stephen Hopkins took 46 votes

Howard County voters rejected all three constitutional amendments.

In the City Council elections, candidate Stephanie Horton edged out veteran Council member Pat DeAnda by 118 votes to 117.

In another race, Vicki Cole will be challenged by Charles "Chuck" Cawthon in a runoff election. Ms. Cole received 141 votes, and Cawton, 97. Others in the race were A. Katharine Vanslyke-Lusk, who got nine votes, Dub Clinton, 67 votes; and Stacy Rawls, eight votes.

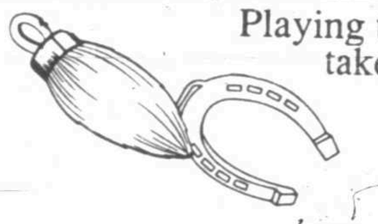

ECTOR COUNTY

Odessa voters opted for Ms. Hutchison as their choice for U.S. Senator from Texas. The Texas treasurer received about 25 percent of the vote here.

Odessa voters rejected all three proposed constitutional amendment. The Robin Hood proposal was rejected by almost 70 percent.

UPTON COUNTY

In the Rankin Hospital District election, voters re-elected Sarah Whisman and Pat Bearden.

Three astronauts aboard shuttle receive experimental infusions

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Two more astronauts aboard Columbia were infused with saline solution Saturday as part of an experiment to help space travelers overcome the effects of weightlessness.

German physicist Ulrich Walter said it wasn't so bad.

"The infusion of the saline itself isn't a very big problem because the liquid is heated up to body temperature prior to infusion. So you actually don't feel anything," physicist Ulrich Walter said in a space-to-ground news conference.

"The only thing you feel after one or two hours is that you have the urgent need to see the toilet," Walter said.

Each of the four men working in the shuttle laboratory is taking part in the experiment, intended to relieve dehydration and other space symptoms such as puffy faces and skinny legs.

Walter's infusion was the second ever given in space; the first was Friday night, to German physicist Hans Schlegel. No. 3 occurred Saturday night, and the patient was the doctor — astronaut-physician Bernard Harris Jr.

German payload official Walter Brungs was sympathetic — and glad he wasn't the one getting the injection.

Blood and other body fluids shift upward when gravity is absent, resulting in dehydration.

"It's not a nice thing to do for the crew," Brungs said. "But I think they knew it beforehand.

"If you are a crewman, you cannot refuse, after all," he added.

The infusion experiment is one of the few U.S. investigations being conducted during the German Spacelab mission, which probably will be extended to 10 days because of energy-conserving measures taken by the seven astronauts.

NASA flight director Lee Briscoe said, "barring anything unforeseen," mission managers expect to add a day to the nine-day flight so more research can be conducted. Adding a day would allow Columbia to stay up until Thursday.

Harris inserted the needle into Walter on Saturday, as he did for Schlegel on Friday night. Another crewman performed the task for Harris' infusion.

It took about 20 minutes for each infusion. Each man received about a half-gallon of saline solution, the amount of body fluid each had lost in space.

Blood and other body fluids shift upward when gravity is absent, resulting in dehydration. While that's not serious in itself, it leads to reduced blood pressure and dizziness when the body encounters gravity at the end of a flight. Those would be potentially dangerous conditions if astronauts had to evacuate a spaceship fast.

Researchers hope the infusions will eliminate or at least alleviate these symptoms.

The first casualties of the mission were reported Saturday. Some of the 240 young fish on Columbia have died. There are also 240 tadpoles on board, all reportedly doing well.

The German scientist in charge of the fish experiment suspects that the dead ones may have been sick from the start, Brungs said, noting that many more have survived.

Researchers are studying the development and behavior of the aquatic animals in weightlessness.

Man helping hurt motorist has car stolen

LOS ANGELES (AP) — When Lorne Murdock saw a delivery truck collide with a car, he got out of his car and rushed over to calm the bleeding motorist until help arrived.

In the meantime, somebody stole Murdock's car.

"It's incredible, you try and save someone's life, do the right thing, help somebody out, and this happens," said Murdock, 29. "C'est la vie. What are you going to do?"

The victim of Friday's crash was recovering in the hospital from facial cuts. The truck driver wasn't injured.

Police said Murdock's 1980 AMC Spirit hadn't turned up as of Saturday morning.

"That's what you get for being a good Samaritan," said Officer Kirk Hunter. "It's really sad. It demonstrates the state of the general area. I bet it's the last time he'll do that."

But Murdock said he would indeed do it again.

After fierce winds hit Midland shortly after 5:30 p.m. Saturday, merchants and vendors at Celebration of the Arts quickly cleared the booths, above. Fitzco Sound Inc. employee Rob Dennis, left, untangles equipment wires and cords on the celebration's stage.

Winds whip city

As storm hits, sense of dread replaces sense of pleasure

EDITOR'S NOTE: Staff writer Georgia Todd Temple was attending the Celebration of the Arts activities when the high winds roared through. This is her account of what followed.

By Georgia Todd Temple
Staff writer

Imagine a beautiful West Texas May Day: warm, verging on hot, with a slight breeze. Place yourself outside at Centennial Plaza in downtown Midland enjoying the soothing and exotic sounds of Khenany, a performing group from Sonora, Mexico, which plays music that carries one mentally into South American jungles.

A sense of pleasure fills the air. The event is the 10th annual Celebration of the Arts and people are having a good time.

On the horizon, multi-tone-gray storm clouds move in from the north. We watch the clouds. But, frankly, we've seen clouds like these before. Especially here. They move fast, and often they move over. No one seems concerned.

A companion travels in front of the storm clouds. This cloud is brownish-red, yet it's hard to see. From our vantage point, the Briercroft Building blocks most of the view.

Suddenly, there's no doubt. Dust.

As a native Midlander, I've even seen this type of cloud before. Although other people are getting up to leave, I and many others are still sitting, transported by the music to another time and place.

I look over my left shoulder again, revise my decision and get up to leave. Dust storms may not scare me, but I'd rather not get caught in one.

The air is suddenly still. Then, as unexpectedly as it comes, the stillness is gone. Immediately, dirt and wind whip people, equipment and tents.

A sense of dread replaces the pleasure that had moments before filled the air.

I'm scared. And I'm not alone. People try not to run, but they can't help it. It's too sudden, too fast. There is no warning. It's just here.

Some people can't stand against the wind. They are being blown down. Others shout, "Seek cover" or "Lie Down."

Children are crying.

Mothers, whose children are not next to them, are desperate.

Adults are screaming.

I move, as do many others, as if I am being pursued by some unseen and unknown terror. Crossing the alley between Centennial Plaza and Midland Center I see arms reaching out and hear people saying, "This way. This way. Come inside."

The lobby of Midland Center, with all its glass, does not feel much safer than the outside, which by this time is filled with flying debris. Some people instinctively head for the basement. I am among those folks.

So is Tiffany Avants.

"I saw people fly off the stage and instruments flying, and I took off," she said. "I thought it was a tornado. It came up too quick. All this wind, then all of a sudden no wind. Then all of a sudden it hit."

Blake Newman and her husband were buying tickets to the street dance when the storm hit.

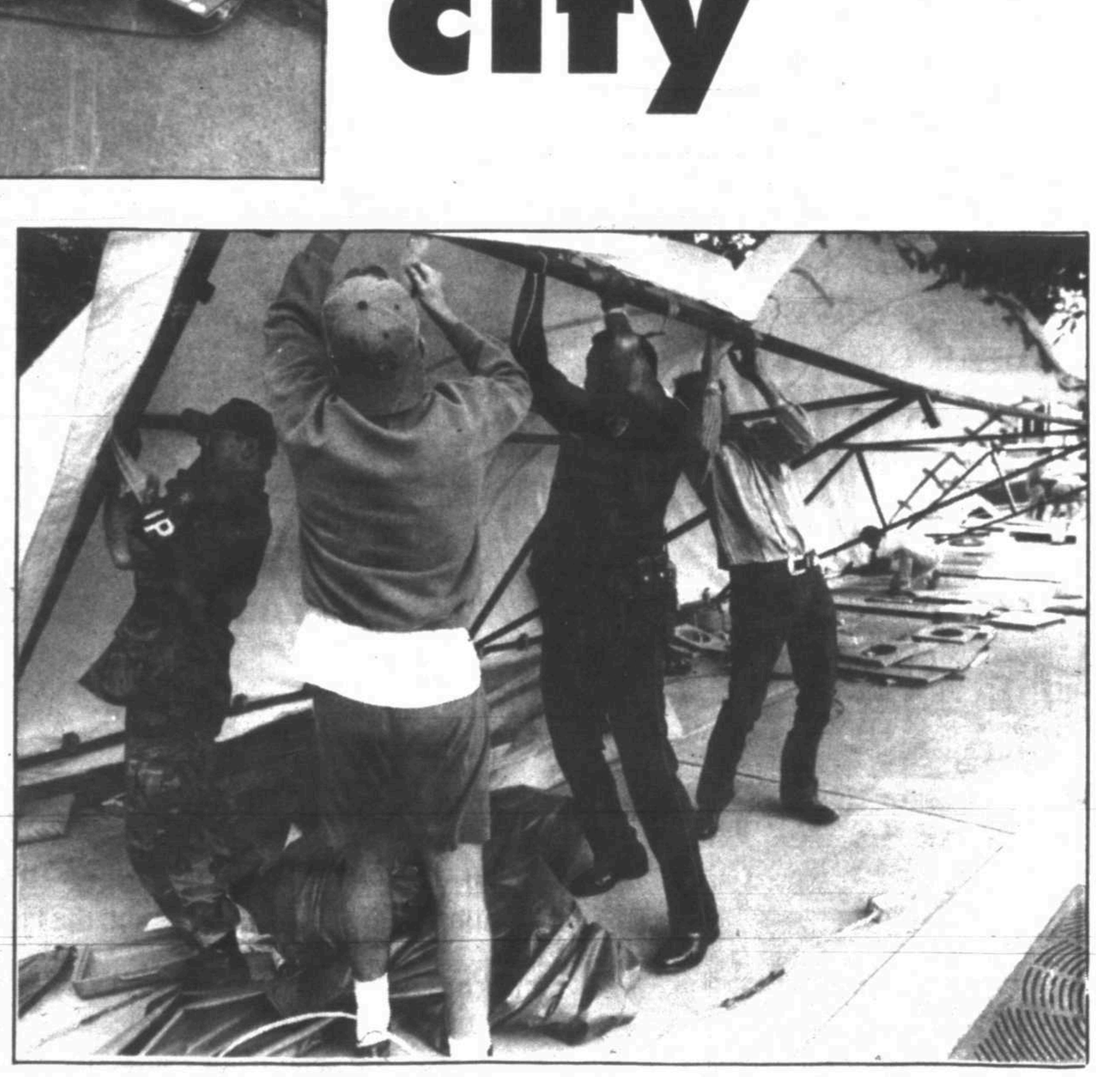

"The whole fence just fell down," she said, explaining that her husband and his friend tried to hold it up. "Kids were running everywhere. They didn't know what to do. I should have stayed at home. Scared? Yes."

"I was so scared I had to lay down on the ground," said Betty Starnes, a concessionaire from Booth No. 77. She was still shaking.

After waiting some time downstairs, we are told there was no tornado, just high wind and dust.

When Lynn White, who was celebrating her birthday Saturday and was working in the same booth with Betty Starnes, heard that announcement, she shook her head and said, "If that was just a straight-line wind, I don't ever want to be in a tornado."

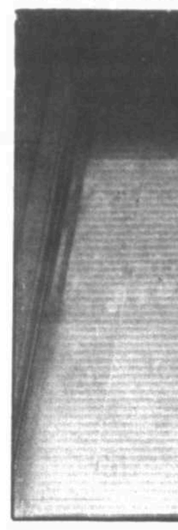

I'm with you Lynn, and I bet I'm not alone.

Volunteer and emergency workers dismantle tents Saturday to prevent loss and further damage at the celebration held annually at Centennial Plaza.

ter she had been hit by a canopy. He also described seeing children literally "lifted off the ground" by high gusts of wind.

Thousands of celebrants were startled by the sudden change in weather when the high winds blew in and flattened dozens of food booths and tents.

Chalmers called it "chaos."

"People were running for cover, getting behind anything they could," he said.

"People were crouched down underneath these little brick walls," Midlander Bill Moss said, referring to the fountain area in Centennial Plaza.

"Port-a-potties were chasing people down the sidewalk. At one point we were running and we stopped and turned around and saw one chasing us. We didn't know which way to go," he added.

Moss said he was scooping up children in the plaza and carrying them to shelter inside the Midland Center while the blowing dust stung his face.

Ricky Evans was about to pour another funnel cake when he felt a sudden drop of temperature and saw a wall of grey moving through the sky.

"I thought rain was coming, so I grabbed a tarp," Evans said. "Within 15-20 seconds this wind just hit and lifted things up."

Evans, who was manning the booth as a fund-raiser for a girls' softball team, saw a co-worker injured as debris flew through the air.

"She had a head injury and had to be taken to the hospital. Something flew right into her head. I couldn't see what," Evans said.

Evans and dozens of other volunteers and vendors huddled behind glass doors on the southside of the Briercroft building across the street from the festivities. Glass windows and a door blew in on the westside of the building, resulting in a block of Marienfeld being covered with shattered glass.

Inside Midland Center, about 5:50 p.m., a father and daughter singing act was interrupted by screams as raging winds damaged the booths outside the building.

Lucy Woodside, executive director of the Arts Assembly of Midland, calmly walked to the stage, grabbed the microphone and asked everyone to move to the basement of the civic center.

Folks outside were advised to take shelter by law-enforcement personnel because the area was under a tornado warning. But police Detective Mike McLain said police had only a two-to-three minute warning, so many of the festival-goers and vendors didn't get the word in time to take shelter.

'Port-a-potties were chasing people down the sidewalk. At one point we were running and we stopped and turned around and saw one chasing us. We didn't know which way to go.'

— Bill Moss

Hundreds of people walked downstairs to the basement from both inside the center and immediately outside. Police officers and paramedics on the scene praised the crowd for reacting calmly and not panicking.

Although one mother entered the stairwell sobbing. "I can't find my boys," she said. "They took off running. I hope they're not out there."

The youngsters found their way to the basement a few minutes later.

Within 15 minutes of evacuating the building, it was announced that the tornado watch was over and people climbed the stairs and braved heavy winds to search for family members separated when the wind struck.

Paramedics John Pinkstaff and Cliff Hogan, who were manning a booth inside the Midland Center, said after the all-clear they ran outside and treated injured spectators.

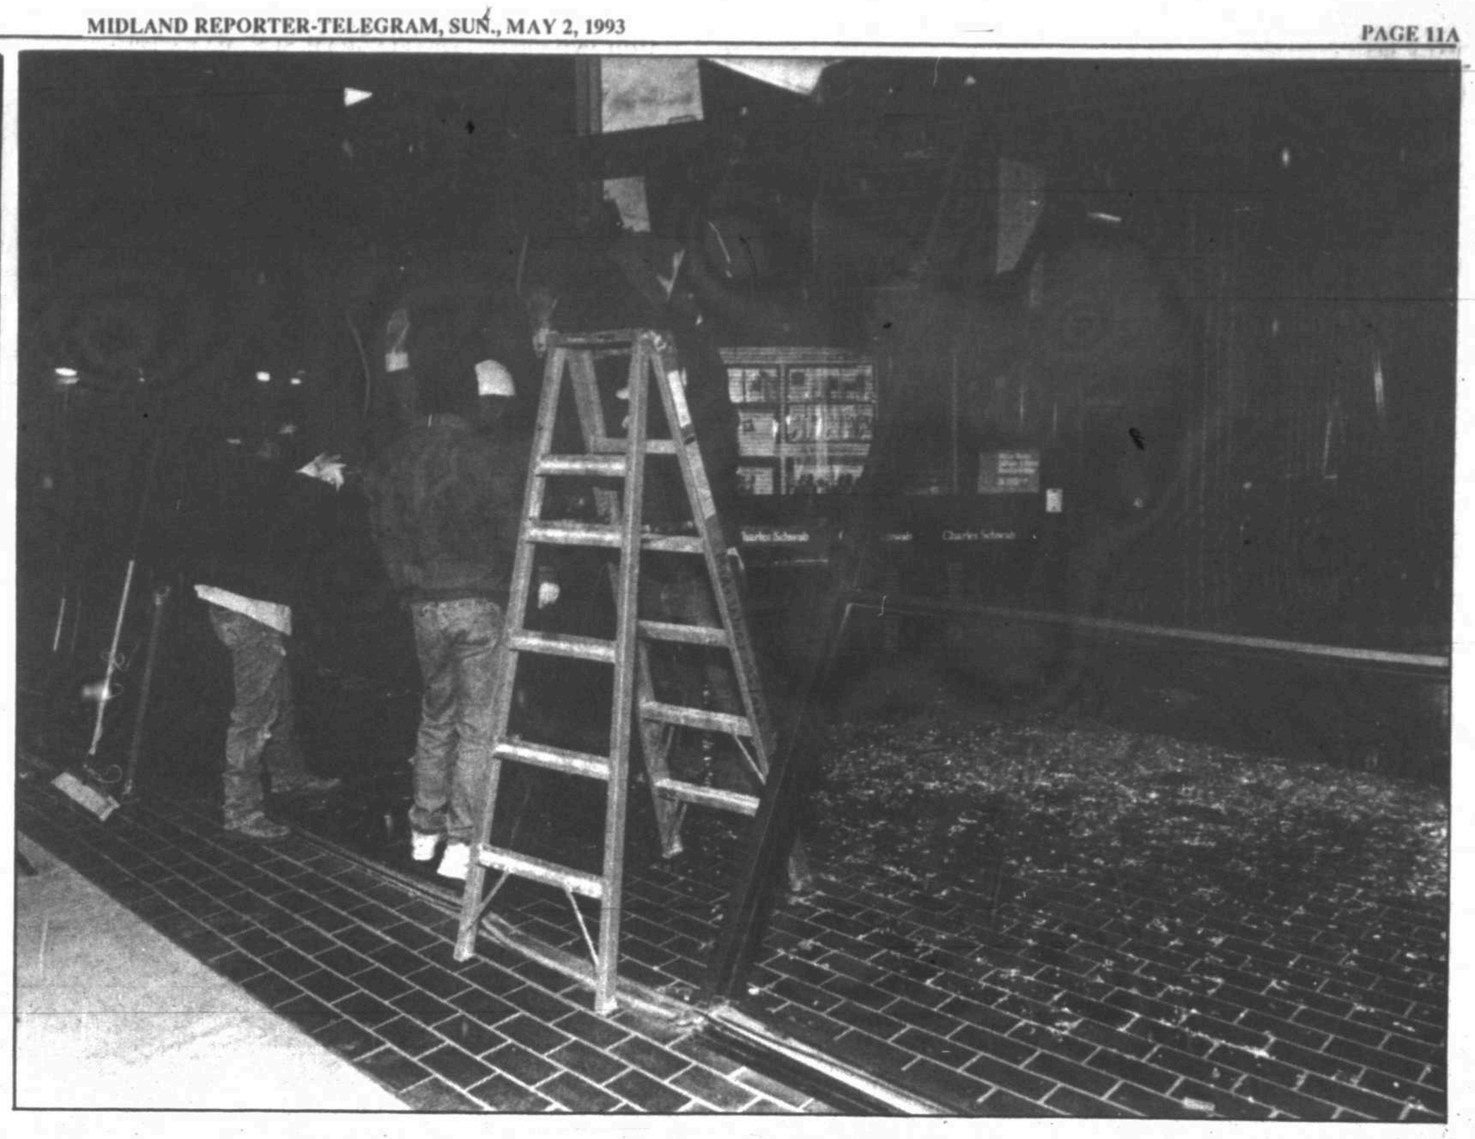

Following the high winds and dust cloud, vendors were rummaging through the rubble of their tents in search of merchandise and personal items left behind when they sought cover.

Everything from chairs and signs, in addition to the booths and tents, were blown from their original spots and scattered throughout the festival site.

"It's just devastation," one vendor said, shaking his head as he picked up what was left of his booth. Several vendors said much of their equipment and food would be deemed a total loss.

"And to think, all day all everybody said was: 'It's sure is great that it didn't rain today," said food vendor Price Haynes, shaking his head, and surveying some of the wreckage from a shelter. "Nobody expected anything like this."

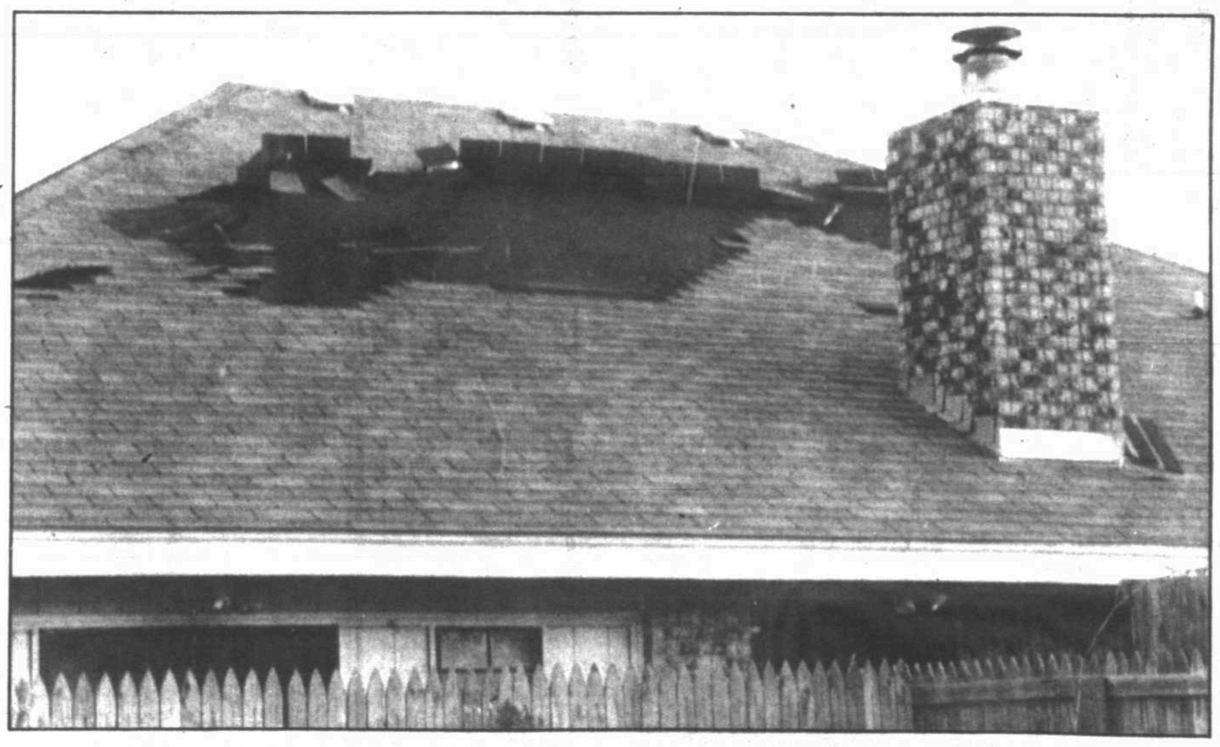

Celebration of the Arts volunteers, law-enforcement officers and area residents were assisting merchants gather their valuables and load them up to take home.

the wind about 5:52 p.m. at the Westgate Mobile Home Park, 5007 W. County Road 116, officials said. He was taken to the hospital for observation where he remained late Saturday.

Across town the high winds ripped power lines and poles, leaving thousands without electricity, damaged roofs, and knocked down trees and broke branches, officials reported.

A 65-foot electricity pole at Highway 80 and Loop 250 went down about 7 p.m., which caused law enforcement officials to close the highway to traffic, according to LuAnn Morgan, District Manager for TU Electric.

"We have about 4,000 customers off right now. It's rather sporadic," she said at about 8 p.m.

The windstorm hit town about 5:45 p.m. when winds surged to 68 mph at Midland International Airport, according to the National Weather Service. Winds were believed to have exceeded 70 mph elsewhere.

"It was real sudden . . . and was pretty unusual," a NWS spokesman said.

In addition to the high winds, the temperature plummeted from 77 degrees at 5:53 p.m. to 57 degrees in an hour, the NWS officials said.

Within the two-block area, booths were destroyed, fences flattened, and a large window panel blown out at Briercroft building at Loraine Street and Texas Avenue.

"It was such a pretty day to start," said Meline Knago, as she rubbed her arms after the cooler wind overtook the Celebration of the Arts event in downtown Midland.

The severe weather was caused by an outflow of a thunderstorm north of Midland that merged with a cold front coming from New Mexico, officials said.

"We had probably three or four minutes warning. They came in and said high winds are coming," said David Pitt as he looked over the remnants of his Texas Taters booth downtown.

"It blew away. It's gone," he said, adding that the event was "wonderful" until the winds came.

"Everyone was commenting on how beautiful the day was, and bang," Pitt said.

About 2,000 people were visiting the Celebration of the Arts when the storm arrived, said Lucy Woodside, executive director of the arts assembly, or as she said "what's left of it."

People scattered, taking shelter inside and alongside buildings and parking garages. Several parents reported being separated from their children.

"When it hit, it was beyond high winds. It was totally uncontrollable," Ms. Woodside said.

As a result, the remainder of the celebration — Saturday night and Sunday — was canceled, she said.

Ms. Woodside said she had not assessed a monetary loss, but acknowledged that artwork and music systems sustained damage.

Within the two-block area, booths were destroyed, fences flattened, and a large window panel blown out at Briercroft building at Loraine Street and Texas Avenue.

People scattered, taking shelter inside and alongside buildings and parking garages. Several parents reported being separated from their children.

The winds subsided after several hours with no more inclement weather expected for Midland, NWS officials said.

Surrounding Midland County, several grass fires, suspected to have been set by downed power lines, were fueled by high winds in Ector County, fire officials reported.

Nickel-sized hail was reported in Dawson County.

Christopher seeks allied support for 'military steps' against Serbs

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton dispatched a tough-talking Secretary of State Warren Christopher to Europe on Saturday to seek allied support for possible "military steps" to halt Serb aggression in Bosnia.

"The Serbs know that they have exhausted the patience of the international community," Christopher declared after a five-hour strategy session between Clinton and top military and foreign policy advisers.

Clinton, who has been wrestling with the Bosnian situation since taking office, "decided on the direction that he believes the United States and the international community should now take," Christopher said.

"This direction involves a number of specific recommendations, including military steps," he said. Christopher did not provide specifics, saying the United States wanted to consult first with its allies.

"The clock is ticking," Christopher warned.

The administration previously has considered lifting the arms embargo against outgunned Bosnian Muslims and air strikes against Bosnian Serb positions.

Christopher specifically ruled out the use of large numbers of American ground troops in the absence of a peace plan, which has long been Clinton's position.

He ticked off a series of measures that the United States and the world community had taken to curb the violence, including tough economic sanctions against Serbia and enforcing a "no-fly" zone to prevent the use of air power.

And yet, he said, "The outrages continue in the former Yugoslavia."

"I think the Serbs know what they have to do and they know that they need to do it promptly because our course of decision is well set here," he declared.

Christopher said Clinton would make no final decision before consulting with European allies and Russia, and suggested the president was open to some fine-tuning of his strategy. But he was adamant that "by no means do the allies have veto power" over U.S. plans.

Christopher said he was "quite hopeful that we can find a consensus."

"I am certainly going to try to persuade the allies that the directions the president has laid down are ones that they ought to embrace," he said.

Christopher was departing Saturday night to consult with leaders in Britain, France, Russia, Germany and NATO and European Community officials in Brussels. NATO officials for months have been studying various contingency plans for military action in the Balkans.

U.S. allies have expressed wariness about tougher measures, fearing a backlash against British, French and other forces already on the ground in the Balkans to administer humanitarian relief.

In addition to rallying international support, Clinton also needs to boost his backing at home for stronger action in Bosnia.

A Newsweek poll Thursday and Friday found a 49 percent to 44 percent split against getting involved, and 60 percent opposition to use of U.S. ground forces. The poll of 750 adults has a margin of sampling error of plus or minus 4 percentage points.

A Time-CNN poll Wednesday and Thursday had 52 percent saying the United States already has done enough to stop the war, and the same percentage opposed to bombing Serb forces. The Time poll of 1,000 adults, which has a 3-point margin of error, found 62 percent not sure whether they want the Bosnians or Serbs to win.

"Clearly in order to engage in any kind of action we have to have the sustained support of the American people," said Press Secretary Dee Dee Myers. She added that Clinton at some point would present his plan to the public, although she was not sure of the timing or forum.

Hillary Clinton calls on youth to restore spirit of community

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — Hillary Rodham Clinton on Saturday urged young Americans to work to renew a sense of community responsibility in an individualistic society.

"Throughout the 1980s, we heard too much about individual gain, about the ethos of selfishness and greed. We did not hear enough about what it meant to be a member of a community," Mrs. Clinton said, delivering the commencement address at the University of Michigan.

"What we now have an opportunity to do is to work to right the balance again," she said. "It does not mean sacrificing individual rights. But it does mean that promoting the common good in our democratic system requires us to work together to help each other."

About 50,000 people, including some 5,000 graduates, greeted Mrs. Clinton with thunderous applause and cheers as she delivered her first commencement address as first lady.

But she had at least one visible critic. A plane flew over Michigan Stadium trailing a banner that read, "Equal Respect for Unborn First Ladies," a slam for her support of abortion rights. Later, the plane flew past with a new banner that said, "The College of the Unborn Impeaches Hillary."

Mrs. Clinton did not visibly react to the banners.

In her speech, Mrs. Clinton recalled when, in 1969, she became the first student to deliver a commencement address at Wellesley College. She criticized the keynote speaker, then-U.S. Sen. Ed Brooke, R-Mass., for giving what she said was a superficial talk.

"Going back and reading it (the commencement speech) now, I see the idealism, I see the excitement," she said, although she acknowledged that at 21, she was politically and socially naive.

"But I am glad I felt like that at 21. I've always tried to keep those feelings with me. I want to be idealistic, I want to care about the world, I want to be connected to other people. I hope you do as well."

Mrs. Clinton noted that President Kennedy outlined his plans for the Peace Corps at a University of Michigan rally in 1960. She said there is similar work to be done at home today.

"We watch our cities crumbling under the dual assault of drugs and guns that create a level of violence that is unacceptable," she said. "It is not any longer possible for us to postpone concerning what we are doing to our children in these cities where they cannot even leave their homes in safety to walk to school."

Mrs. Clinton briefly addressed the health care reform task force she heads but offered few specifics.

"... If you are a physician or nurse or pharmacist or dentist, ... you will no longer be spending 20 to 40 percent of your time and income to fill out meaningless forms for the checkers who check the checkers in our current system," she said.

PROPERTY TAX PROTEST AND APPEAL PROCEDURES

The law gives property owners the right to protest actions concerning their property tax appraisals. You may follow these appeal procedures if you have a concern about:

* the value placed on your property
* an exemptions that may apply to you
* the cancellation of an agricultural appraisal
* the taxable status of your property
* the local governments which should be taxing your property
* any action taken by the appraisal district that adversely affected you.

Informal Review: If you have a question concerning your property value, you are welcome to visit informally at 4631 Andrews Highway, Midland, Texas or by telephone at (915) 699-4991. One of our staff appraisers will go over our records with you.

Review by the Appraisal Review Board
If you can't resolve your problem with the appraisal district staff, you may have your case heard by the appraisal review board (ARB).

The ARB is an independent board of citizens that reviews problems with appraisals or other concerns listed above. It has the power to order the appraisal district to make the necessary changes to solve problems.

If you file a written request for an ARB hearing (called a notice of protest) before the deadline, the ARB will set your case for a hearing. You'll receive written notice of the time, date & place of the hearing. The hearing will be informal. You and the appraisal district representative will be asked to present evidence about your case. The ARB will make its decision based on the evidence presented. You can get a copy of a protest form from the appraisal district office at 4631 Andrews Highway.

Note: You shouldn't try to contact ARB members outside of the hearing. The law requires ARB members to sign an affidavit saying that they haven't talked about your case before the ARB hears it.

Review by the District Court
After it decides your case, the ARB must send you a copy of its order by certified mail. If you're not satisfied with the decision, you have the right to appeal to district court. If you choose to go to court, you must start the process by filing a petition within 45 days of the date you receive the ARB's order. If the appraisal district has appraised your property at $1,000,000 or more, you must file a notice of appeal with the chief appraiser within 15 days of the date you receive the ARB's order.

More Information
You can get more information by contacting your appraisal district at:
Midland Central Appraisal District
4631 Andrews Highway
Midland, Texas 79708
(915) 699-4991
You can also get a pamphlet describing how to prepare a protest from the appraisal district or from the State Comptroller's Property Tax Division at 4301 Westbank Drive, Building B, Suite 100, Austin, Texas 78746-6565.

Deadline for Filing Protests

Usual Deadline
On or before May 31 (or 30 days after a notice of appraised value was mailed to you, whichever is later).

Late protests are allowed if you miss the usual deadline for a good cause. Good cause is some reason beyond your control, like a medical emergency. The ARB decides whether you have good cause.

Late protests are due the day before the appraisal review board approves records for the year. Contact your appraisal district for more information.

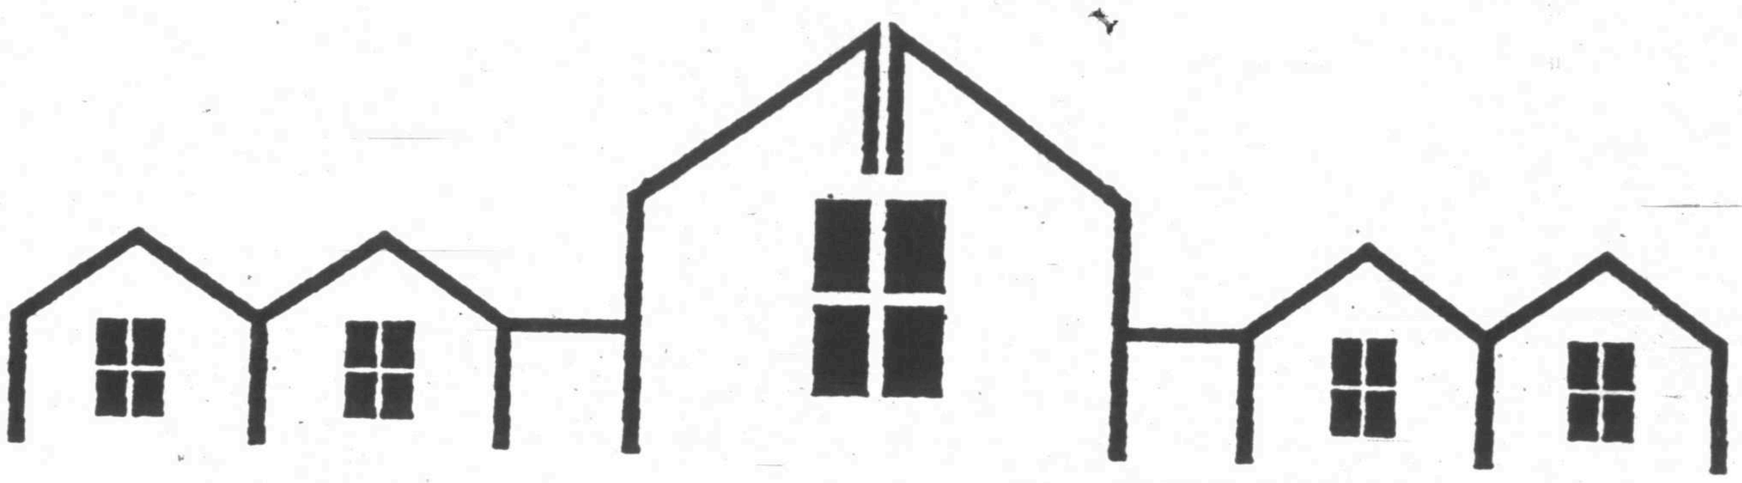

Special Deadlines
For change of use (the appraisal district informed you that you are losing agricultural appraisal because you changed the use of your land), the deadline is before the 30th day after the notice of the determination was mailed to you.

For ARB Changes (the ARB has informed you of a change that increases your tax liability and the change didn't result from a protest you filed), the deadline is before the 30th day after the notice of determination was mailed to you.

If you believe the appraisal district or ARB should have sent you a notice and did not, you may file a protest until the day before taxes become delinquent (usually February 1). The ARB decides whether it will hear your case based on evidence about whether a required notice was mailed to you.

The deadline is postponed to the next business day if it falls on a weekend or holiday.

Project Blueprint to honor ARCO executive

Staff report

"Vision" and "enthusiasm" are two qualities that describe both the guest speaker and a corporate executive to be recognized at Monday's Project Blueprint 16th Board Institute graduation.

The event will begin at 6 p.m. with a reception. The graduation ceremony will start at 7 p.m. at Casa de Amigos, 1101 E. Garden Lane. It is free and open to the public.

J.K. "Ken" Thompson, senior vice president of the Western District of ARCO Oil and Gas Company, will be honored for his commitment to Project Blueprint through encouragement of his employees' participation and his company's financial support.

Thompson's leadership resulted in the ARCO Foundation awarding $50,000 in grants to Project Blueprint over the last three years. That includes a $20,000 grant that was awarded recently for 1993 operations.

ARCO employees who are Project Blueprint graduates include Jil Jefferson, Jennifer Davis, Rhiny Williams, Forrest Allen, Linda Bailey, Sue Roseberry, Trina Dorn, Brenda Jones, Horencia Robledo, Rebecca Zuniga, Ray Del Llano, Joyce Nolly and Lorenzo Ramirez.

In announcing last year's ARCO Foundation award, Thompson described it as a "bulls eye" grant. "It hits the ARCO bulls eye of leadership development, minority involvement and wide-ranging community service," he said.

Thompson, who is a member of the United Way of Midland Board of Directors, is being transferred to Plano as vice president of ARCO Exploration and Production Technology.

Guest speaker for the event will be Mary Martha Arana-Cook, executive director of the Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce. She started her career in the Permian Basin, working as a reporter, photographer and computer graphics operator at KOSA-TV 7.

She served five years as director of Public Information Office for San Antonio Independent School District, where whe garnered 24 awards for finance and public relations campaigns, writing, photography, graphics design, cable television programming and newletter/newspaper publication.

She also has worked as a producer for Christian television programming, executive director of Target '90/Goals for San Antonio, corporate grants coordinator for Santa Rosa Health Care and director of public information and promotions and executive editor of FOCUS Magazine at PBS station KLRN TV 9 in San Antonio.

When selected recently for the chamber position, a member of the search committee commented, "Mary Martha has the vision, enthusiasm and skills to promote and achieve the goals and objectives of the Hispanic Chamber of Commerce and work concurrently with other organizations for the betterment of our community,"

Project Blueprint was initiated in 1988 by United Way of Midland as a program to recruit, train and place minority volunteer leaders within the United Way system. Since then, about 300 minorities have graduated from the 12-hour Board Institute and a majority are placed within the United Way agencies and other committees.

Graduating Monday will be Albert Ayala, Olivia Bueno, Lorena Carrasco, Barbara M. Cooper, Lisa Kay Garces, Iris Hall, Myrtle Hall, Terril Q. Littlejohn, Beverly Pardue, Abel Saldana Sr., Abel Saldana Jr., Josefina Saldana, Sophie R. Scholosser, Faye Taylor, Nicholas Terrazas and Joyce Wilson.

Funding for Project Blueprint, in addition to the ARCO Foundation, comes from Conoco, Inc., Southwestern Bell Telephone, Chevron U.S.A. Inc., and the Permian Basin Area Foundation.

For more information about Monday's graduation or Project Blueprint, call the United Way office at 682-4358.

2 weeks later, observers still wait for Koresh

WACO, Texas (AP) — For 51 days, the world waited for David Koresh to walk out of his sprawling prairie fortress.

Almost two weeks after the compound was leveled by fire, the doomsday prophet still has observers waiting and wondering.

Each day officials don't announce they've identified his corpse among the 72 bodies they pulled from the burned ruins, the whispers grow louder:

Could he be alive? Did he flee the burning building? Is he hiding in one of the underground tunnels? Or did he use one of them to flee to safety?

Investigators hear the questions, too. They've tried to dispel them, but they realize the stories likely will continue until Koresh is found.

The fury hit a fever pitch Friday night when several reports circulated that medical examiners had found a body next to some of Koresh's personnel items, fueling speculation it was him.

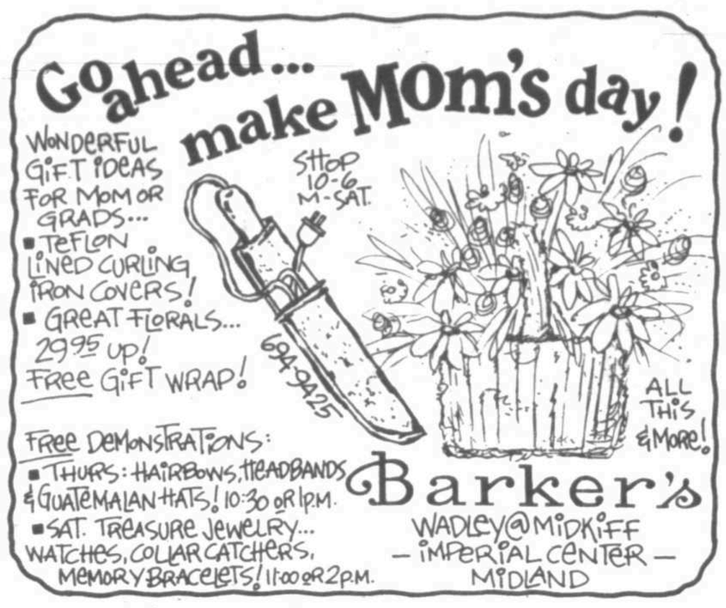

Officials denied the story. The lead investigating agency called media outlets to refute it and several county officials said they were dumbstruck by it.

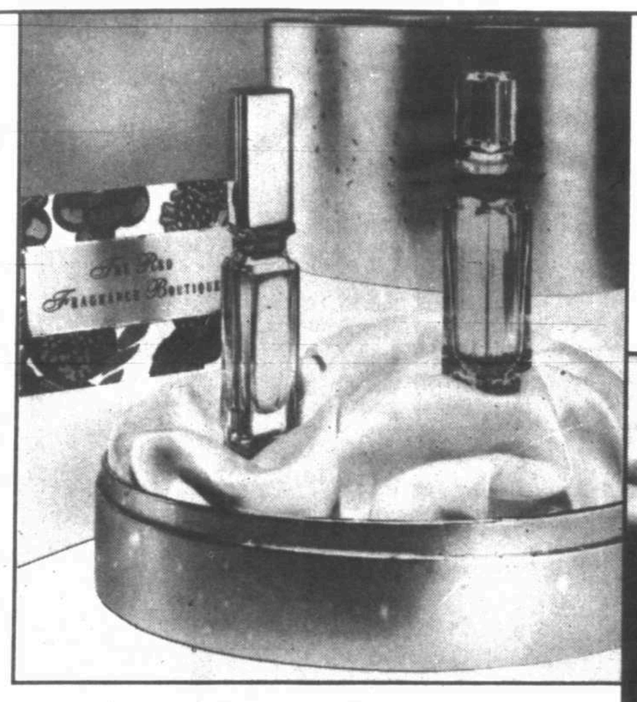

The head of a team of fire specialists investigating the April 19 blaze caused a stir Friday when he said cult members could have avoided the flames had they sought refuge in a cool, dry, underground tunnel.

But Paul Gray of the Houston Fire Department said it was unlikely that Koresh escaped through the pathway, noting the tunnel ended within an FBI boundary.

"Perhaps he's having lunch with Elvis as we speak," Gray added.

The underground tunnels have been the focus of most escape theories, the most popular being that Koresh either snuck out through one that extended for miles or that he used the pathway to reach a hidden room.

LUBBOCK — Midland Lee's Tanisha Mills is a Region I champion again — but hold onto your hat — not in the 400 where she won a state championship last year, but in the shot put, an event she took up about a month ago.

El Paso Andress' Tasha Stroman placed a dent in Mills' state crown by pulling a stunning upset of the defending Region I and state champion with a region record run of 54.64 seconds. However, Mills was second, earning a second consecutive state berth and still has time to make amends.

"That was the toughest race I've ever been in," said a dejected Mills, who finished second in 55.30. "I'm disappointed in my performance, but in two weeks (at the state meet in Austin) is when it really counts."

Stroman was elated with the win and she surprised herself with the win over Mills.

"She's a state champion and she beat me earlier in the year in the 200 meters," Stroman said. "I think she had me psyched out a bit, but I had to forget about that and run. I can't believe I won."

But Mills never fails to give you something to remember. She won the shot put with a career best 40-1, climb-

Derby has new Hero

Jockey Jerry Bailey rides Sea Hero to the finish line at Saturday's Kentucky Derby.

■ Two of horse racing's elder statesmen — 86-year-old owner Paul Mellon and 71-year-old trainer Mac Miller — have plenty to be happy about, thanks to their Sea Hero.

By Ed Schuyler Jr.
AP Racing Writer

LOUISVILLE — The story of the Kentucky Derby was one of Two Old Men and a Sea Hero.

Sea Hero stormed home along the rail on Saturday and won the Derby for Paul Mellon, a major figure in international racing who will be 86 on June 11, and his 71-year-old trainer, Mac Miller.

"It has been a long lifetime and I'm very happy to have made it by this age," Mellon said of his Derby victory in his fourth try and on his 46th wedding anniversary.

"We're running out of time and I can't think of anything more exciting than for him to do it," Miller, a Hall of Fame trainer and a native Kentuckian, said of Sea Hero before the Derby.

After the race, Miller said, "This is the greatest, this is the epitome, this is

Rebels lose in seventh

■ A close call at home ends Midland Lee's hopes for the District 4-5A baseball championship.

Staff report

ABILENE — Abilene Cooper scored a run in the bottom of the seventh inning to break a 1-1 tie and hand the Cougars the District 4-5A baseball championship, 2-1 here in Saturday's district playoff against Midland Lee.

The loss sends the Rebels (22-5) into the state playoffs as the No. 2 seed from 4-5A, and sets up a bi-district playoff against Lubbock Coronado. Cooper (18-9) will receive a bye in the first round of the postseason, while San Angelo, which finished third in 4-5A, will face Amarillo High.

The Lee-Coronado pairing will be a best-of-three series beginning at 4:30 p.m. Friday at Coronado's O'Banion Field in Lubbock. The series then moves to Midland for a 2 p.m. start Saturday at Angels Stadium. Game 3, if necessary, will immediately follow. Coronado, the third-place team from District 3-5A, is 16-9-1 for the season.

The last time the two teams met in the postseason was in a 1991 bi-district series that the Mustangs won 2-1.

Saturday's game saw the two teams involved in a pitching duel, as Lee's Jason Baker and Cooper's Josh Martinez each allowed just four hits while going the distance.

Blazers get even with Spurs

Associated Press

PORTLAND, Ore. — Clyde Drexler scored 21 points in his first extensive playing time in a month and Portland came from behind in the final quarter to beat San Antonio 105-96 Saturday to even their first-round playoff series 1-1.

Drexler, who missed virtually all of the final 12 regular season games with a strained left hamstring, put Portland ahead for good 94-92 with a tip-in with 2:09 to go. The Blazers, who outscored San Antonio 27-13 in the final quarter, went on to score seven straight points in a 29-second stretch of the final minute to put the game away.

Cliff Robinson, suffering through a 3-for-27 performance from the field in the series, scored three points in the final minute and made several crucial defensive plays in the fourth quarter for the Blazers.

He had a steal and three of his six blocked shots in the final period which began with San Antonio up 83-78.

David Robinson and Terry Cummings led six Spurs in double figures with 15 points apiece, but Robinson had only 3 points in the second half and none in the final quarter. Robinson had 14 rebounds.

Rod Strickland had 11 points, 8 rebounds and 9 assists as well as a crucial steal during the decisive final Portland surge.

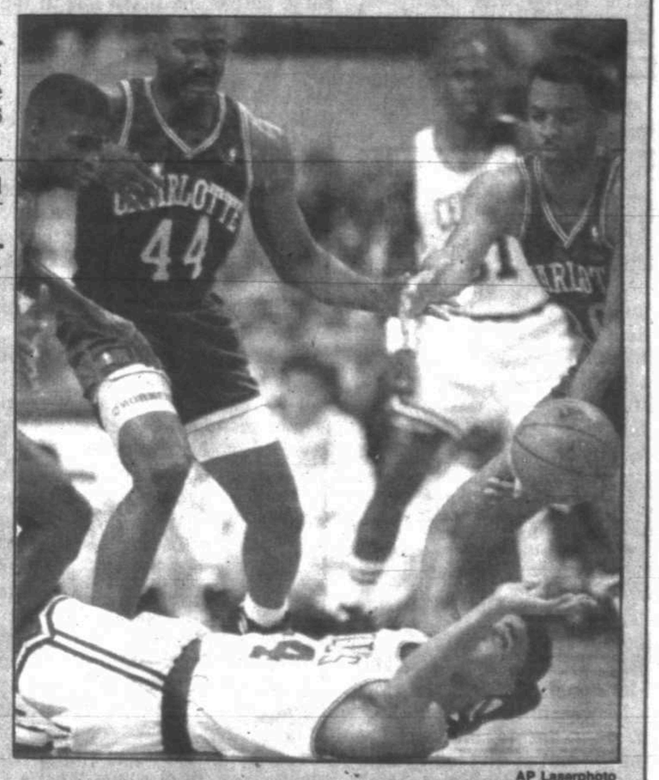

The last two minutes were all Portland.

Two free throws by Buck Williams followed Drexler's go-ahead tip.

Then San Antonio's Sean Elliott made two from the foul line to cut Portland's lead to 96-94 with 1:20 to play.

Robinson's tip-in with a minute left ignited the decisive late run. He added one of two free throws with 49.6 seconds

Wind blows out Angel game, Phillie Phanatic

By Pete Herndon
MRT Correspondent

The Midland Angels will play a doubleheader today to make up for Saturday's game that was postponed due to high winds.

Gusting winds, which reached 68 miles per hour, caused some minor damage to Angels Stadium, a team official said.

Rick Carden, the Angels assistant general manager, said the damage is nothing that will affect play today when the Angels host the Wichita Wranglers. Game time for the opener is 6 p.m. Gates open at 3:30 p.m. for Drug Awareness Day.

"The wind ripped up the picnic tarp on the first base side and it knocked out a panel in the centerfield fence," Carden said Saturday. "We had some things blowing around that don't normally blow around. We had program stands blowing down the concourse."

Area athletes qualify for state

Class 2A

ABILENE — Jeremy Stallings swept the 800 and 1,600 while the Stanton girls won three relays here Saturday in the Region I Class 2A track meet, conducted at Abilene Christian University.

Stallings ran a 1:51.13 in the 800 — where he is the two-time defending state champion — to coast to a nine-second victory. In the 1,600, he put up a 4:30.06, then he ran on the Buffaloes' state-qualifying 1,600 relay.

Eric Martel, Ricky Lucas, Cody Hirt and Stallings passed the baton to the tune of 3:24.27 for second place behind Panhandle.

Kristin Wyckoff, Stacy Tollison, Laura Herm, Lupe Chapa and Sandy Bundas will all head to state after the Lady Buffs ruled the relays. Stanton ran a 49.90 in the 400 relay, a 1:44.29 in the 800 and a 4:04.59 in the 1,600.

Class A

LEVELLAND — Jeff Jones of Rankin qualified for the state meet in three individual events, leading the Red Devils to a second-place finish in the boys standings of the Region I Class A track meet here Saturday.

Ranking ended the meet, run at South Plains College, with 66 points while Sudan was the winner with 69.33. In the girls standings, Rankin finished eighth.

Jones won both the 110- and 300-meter hurdle events and was second in the triple jump to advance to the state competition in Austin. He just missed qualifying in the long jump with a third-place finish.

Also going to state for Rankin are the boys 400 relay, which was second behind Motley County, boys 200 meter winner Roy Abalos (22.98), and Jenny Evridge, who was second in the girls 800. Becky Abalos, whose time of 48.54 in the girls 300 hurdles, was just edged for a state spot by Forsan's Laurie Light, who ran a 48.43.

Here are the results of area interest from the Region I Class A boys and girls track meet, conducted Saturday at South Plains College in Levelland:

Boys

Wind slows play at Partnership

Winds reported in the 60-70 mph range wrought havoc with the Midland Country Club Partnership golf tournament Saturday.

Even though the championship through third flights were able to get their rounds in before the wind storm hit late Saturday, five flights were still on the course. Each flight had five to six holes remaining Saturday and will complete that round this morning before today's final round begins at about 2 p.m.

In championship flight play, the team of George Tucker and Steve Whiteside put together a score of 65 to go with Friday's 67, seizing the lead of the tournament. John Bettis and Philip Karper are in second place after their 69 on Saturday put them at 137. First-round leaders Lee Roy Pearson and David Rodawalt shot 72 Saturday to drop into a third-place tie with Jobe Moss and David McCauley at 138.

Four other teams are tied at 139 entering today's final round.

Here are the partial results of the second round of the Midland Country Club Partnership golf tournament, a portion of which was delayed by Saturday's wind storm:

Championship Flight: 1. George Tucker-Steve Whiteside, 67-65—132; 2. John Bettis-Philip Karper, 68-69—137; 3. REBELS: Lee loses on close call at the plate first in the top of the fourth as Sean McIntosh's single scored Eric Benavidez, who had reached second on a double. The Cougars tied the game with a run in the bottom of the fourth.

Jay Pugh drew a lead-off walk and then Baker hit Michael Kendrick with a pitch. Eric Gibson then bunted the runners up a base. That brought up Judge Roberts, who hit a grounder to Benavidez at second base. Pugh was running on the play and Benavidez threw home, where Pugh was called safe under the tag of catcher Brian Graham.

"The call at the plate was questionable. Pugh never made it to the plate. But that's the breaks of baseball," said Lee head coach Jesse Benavidez.

Cooper scored the winning run in the seventh after Gibson hit a lead-off double. With Jordan McDonald running for Gibson, Roberts hit a slow chopper to Alex Hale at third base. Hale slightly bobbled the ball then rushed his throw to first, causing the ball to sail over McIntosh and allowing McDonald to round third for home.

"That's a tough way to lose a ball game. You hope in a game like this somebody ends it on a hit. It's hard on Alex because he's made some great plays for us all year long," Benavidez said.

Jinx on Derby favorites continues

Associated Press

LOUISVILLE — Once again, the Kentucky Derby produced a failed favorite Saturday when Prairie Bayou came up short, beaten by Sea Hero.

No favorite since Spectacular Bid in 1979 has won the Derby. Until Saturday just Easy Goer, second to Sunday Silence in 1989, and Chief's Crown, third to Spend a Buck in 1985, even finished in the money.

Prairie Bayou at least came in second, a consolation considering what has happened to other betting choices in this race. "He tried hard," trainer Tom Bohannan said. "He was second best today. We'll see what happens next time."

Prairie Bayou was hardly an overwhelming pick at 4-1, longest odds for a favorite in the 119 years of the Derby. He was quoted at 5-2 in the early line on entry day Thursday, but by Derby day, faith was dwindling.

For a while Saturday, Bull Inthe Heather became the betting choice. But about an hour before post time, Prairie Bayou was the pick again, probably on the basis of four straight victories coming in. Still 4-1 was hardly an enthusiastic endorsement.

Previously, the longest odds for a Derby favorite belonged to Nellie Flag, who went to the gate as the 7-2 choice in 1935 and finished fourth behind Omaha.

Shug McGaughey, who trained Easy Goer, said betting favorites have nothing to do with the first horse across the finish line at the Derby.

"I think it's just ironic," he said of the favorite's jinx. "It just has to be the horse that wakes up that day and has the best trip.

"We are judging the horses fine. It's just tough for a horse who is a top 2-year-old to keep him going and not have something go wrong."

The most dramatic case of a failed favorite, who, like Prairie Bayou, ran under the colors of John Ed Anthony's Loblolly Stable. In 1987, the colt was a can't-miss sure thing — until the race.

Outrun early, he never was in the race. He bled in the backstretch and was eased by jockey Pat Day, failing even to finish the race. It would not be the last case of bad luck on the first Saturday in May for Anthony.

the best. It makes you want to cry a little bit."

Mellon, who now adds the Kentucky Derby to a list of international victories that includes the Derby at Epsom and the Arc d'Triomphe, is the first owner ever to win those three prestigious international races.

Sea Hero, winning for the first time this year, circled a horse on the turn for home at Churchill Downs and then ducked back on the rail to shoot into the lead past Personal Hope just outside the eighth pole.

"It was like the Red Sea. When I got there, it parted," jockey Jerry Bailey said of the opening that set up the victory.

"There was just a wall of horses," Bailey said as he straightened for home. "He was not stopping; he was full of speed."

Sea Hero got to the wire 2½ lengths in front of favored Prairie Bayou, who was trying to become the first gelding to win the race since Clyde Van Dusen in 1929. Instead, Prairie Bayou became the 14th consecutive beaten favorite. The winning time was 2:02 2-5.

"He made his run and he tried real hard. That's all we wanted," said Tom Bohannon, Prairie Bayou's trainer. "We were second-best today. We'll see what happens next time."

Next time will be the Preakness at Pimlico in two weeks. Miller said that Sea Hero will take the second step in a bid for the Triple Crown.

Prairie Bayou got to the end of the 1¼ miles a head in front of Wild Gale, a member of the mutuel field, who was a neck ahead of Personal Hope in the field of 19 3-year-olds, largest since 20 contested the 1984 Derby won by Swale.

Finishing fifth, three lengths behind Personal Hope, was Diazo, the first Derby starter as a trainer for Bill Shoemaker, who won four Derbies as a jockey in 26 tries.

Diazo ran as an Allen Paulson entry with sixth-place Corby. Paulson was co-owner of Arazi, who finished a disappointing eighth as the favorite in the 1992 Derby.

Finishing eighth, behind Kissin Kris, was Silver of Silver, whose trainer, 74-year-old Skippy Shapoff, was in Louisville's Jewish Hospital, where he was admitted Friday. Churchill Downs announced that Shapoff was suffering congestive heart failure and respiratory heart failure and his condition was listed as serious.

Sea Hero paid $27.80, $12.80 and $8 in earning $735,900, boosting his career bankroll past $1 million. He also picked up 10 points for the $1 million bonus that goes to the horse earning the most points in the three Triple Crown races.

Prairie Bayou, ridden by Mike Smith and losing for the first time in five races and first time in three starts at Churchill Downs., returned $7.20 and $4.80. Wild Gale, ridden by Shane Sellers, paid $4.20. He was a member of the seven-horse mutuel field. The last field horse to win a Derby was Canonero II in 1971.

Storm Tower, the Wood Memorial winner, broke on top from the inside post, as expected, and led the field past the stands the first time, around the clubhouse turn and down the backstretch to the half-mile pole. Then, on the turn, Personal Hope, the Santa Anita Derby winner ridden by Gary Stevens, took the lead and held it until Bailey shot Sea Hero past him with a little more than an eighth of a mile to go for his first Derby victory.

"It kind of blew my mind that Sea Hero was able to blow by him when my horse went into overdrive," Stevens said.

"It's been a long time between drinks of water," said Miller, whose only previous Derby starter was Jig Time, fifth in 1968.

For this race, Miller took the blinkers off of Sea Hero, who had earned his Derby start with a fourth-place finish on April 10 at Keeneland after running poorly in two races in Florida in February.

"This was a very evenly matched bunch," Miller said of the field. "There's not a Secretariat or a Seattle Slew in it, but I'm not condemning that, especially not now."

Sea Hero's victory came on the 20th anniversary of Secretariat's Derby victory.

Completing the order of finish after eighth-place Silver of Silver were Ragtime Rebel, Truth of it All, Bull Inthe Heather, Dixieland Heat, Wallenda, Mi Cielo, Union City, Storm Tower, Rockamundo, El Bakan and Tossofthecoin.

"Everything I want is wrapped up in this horse," said Miller.

Sea Hero, 10th with a half-mile to go and seventh with a quarter-mile remaining, wrapped up Miller's dream package when he found room on the rail in the stretch.

Houston Open trimmed to 54 holes

THE WOODLANDS, Texas (AP) — Blaine McCallister took a two-shot lead and tournament record 15-under-par 129 into Sunday's final round of a soggy Shell Houston Open trimmed to 54 holes thanks to three days of rain.

Saturday's scheduled third round, already pushed back to midday because of rain during the first two rounds, was washed out by a more than three-hour deluge that flooded the par-72 Tournament Players Course at The Woodlands.

Jim McGovern, a non-winner on the PGA Tour, and John Huston were at 13-under 131, with Donnie Hammond and Larry Mize another stroke back.

Loren Roberts, Payne Stewart and Jeff Maggert were another two behind at 10-under 134.

Seventy-eight golfers whose rounds were interrupted by rain and fog Friday had to finish the second round Saturday morning. And just 30 of the 78 players who made the cut at 140, 4 under par, had teed off before play was suspended at 12:47 p.m. because of storms.

Saturday's entire third round was scrapped 3 1/2 hours later.

McCallister, bidding for his first win since 1991, was 10-under after seven holes when second-round play resumed early Saturday. He had four birdies and an eagle before bogeying the final hole for his 65. His 129 broke Maggert's 36-hole mark of 130 set two years ago.

"It's Houston, it's springtime, you get rain," he said. "We deal with it. We're professionals. It's part of the game.

"I've got a chance to win the tournament. And that's what I wanted."

But he said the constant interruptions were a problem.

AQUILA SOUTHWEST PIPELINE CORPORATION announces an expansion to its newly acquired Cibolo Pipeline System in Kimble, Menard and Concho Counties, Texas.

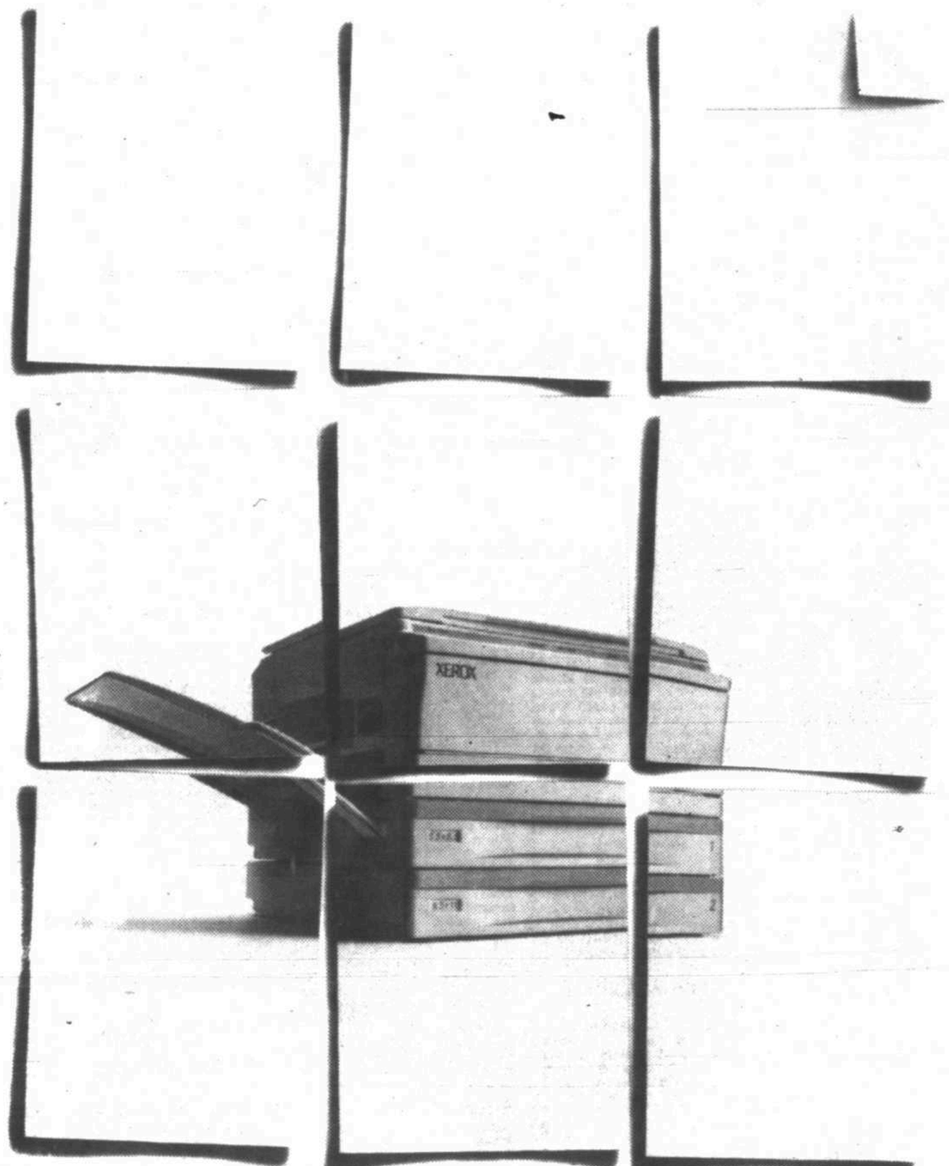

Aquila Southwest has just recently constructed approximately 50,000 feet of 8" steel pipeline to connect gas production from the Live Oak area of Cibolo County to its Cibolo Pipeline System. In addition, construction of an extension to the east side of Highway 83, north of Eden, Texas should be completed within 120 days.

Aquila Southwest is an aggressive intrastate pipeline company that purchases and gathers natural gas from wellhead producers and sells such gas to its extensive market network throughout Texas and the United States. Aquila Energy Marketing is one of the largest independent gas marketing companies in the United States with sales of approximately two billion cubic feet per day.

If you have gas available to sell or have plans to develop your leaseholdings in Kimble, Menard or Concho Counties, Texas and would like to discuss the sale of your gas, please contact Travis H. Lynch, Vice-President - Gas Supply.

to go, then consecutive Portland steals led to a stuff by Drexler and layup by Terry Porter to make it 103-94 with 41 seconds remaining.

Porter added 20 points and Mario Elie 14 for Portland.

Cummings, in his finest showing since returning from major knee surgery, scored 10 in the fourth quarter, when San Antonio led by as many as eight.

Portland, down 83-78 after three quarters, scored the first 10 points of the final quarter, four apiece by Porter and Kevin Duckworth, to take an 88-83 lead on Duckworth's 15-footer with 8:54 to go.

San Antonio came back with a 6-0 run to tie the score at 92-92 on Dale Ellis' 20-footer with 3:23 remaining. Porter missed four outside jumpers, three of them 3-pointers, during the Spurs' surge.

After a 54-54 halftime tie, the Spurs went ahead by as many as eight twice in the third quarter, the last time 75-67 on Elliott's driving layup with 3:08 to go in the period.

The best-of-5 series shifts to San Antonio for Game 3 Wednesday night.

Hornets 99, Celtics 98, 2 OT

BOSTON — Larry Johnson got the only basket in the second overtime, and the Charlotte Hornets survived Kevin McHale's 30 points for a win over the Boston Celtics that evened their playoff series 1-1 Saturday.

It was McHale's missed free throw with 1:38 left, Boston's only miss in 17 attempts, that allowed the Hornets to preserve their one-point lead and go on to the first playoff win in their five-year history.

The next two games of the best-of-5 series are scheduled Monday and Wednesday nights in Charlotte.

McHale, who is expected to retire after the playoffs, had his high point total for at least the past two seasons. It was four points less than his high for 167 career playoff games. He added 10 rebounds.

Johnson, who led the Hornets with 23 points, connected from the top of the key on the first shot of the second overtime. That gave Charlotte a 99-97 lead with 4:49 remaining.

Both teams then went cold, and Boston had a chance to tie when Kendall Gill fouled McHale. But McHale missed the first shot and sank the second.

The Celtics, who missed all six of their shots in the second overtime, lost another chance to go ahead when Dee Brown missed a jumper with 54 seconds to go.

But Charlotte missed its next two shots, by Johnson and Gill, and Boston called timeout with two seconds left. Rick Fox inbounded the ball from midcourt to Brown, but his 3-pointer at the buzzer bounced off the front of the rim.

Boston played without Reggie Lewis, who collapsed on the court Thursday night in Boston's 112-101 opening win.

A series of medical tests conducted Friday and Saturday were negative but one test still had to be done Saturday, Celtics senior executive vice president Dave Gavitt said an hour before the game.

He said no decision had been made about Lewis' availability Monday night.

Alonzo Mourning, who fouled out with 3:06 left, and Gill had 18 points each for Charlotte. Robert Parish had 19 points and 16 rebounds for the Celtics.

The score was 91-91 after regulation before Johnson's baseline drive gave Charlotte a 97-95 lead with 1:06 left in the first overtime. Dell Curry then missed a foul-line jumper that would have put the Hornets up by four points with 29 seconds to go, and Boston's Sherman Douglas rebounded.

McHale tied the game with a 7-footer from the right baseline with six seconds to play. The game went into a second overtime when Johnson missed a 14-footer at the buzzer.

Trailing 69-65 after three quarters, Boston tied the game 91-91 after the fourth behind 13 points by McHale.

After Charlotte went ahead 78-74 with 8:06 left, McHale scored the next 11 points for Boston as the Celtics took an 85-82 lead with 4:52 to play.

A jumper by Gill and two free throws by Mourning with 41 seconds left in regulation gave Charlotte the lead 91-89. But Xavier McDaniel, who had missed all 10 of his shots, hit a baseline turnaround with 25 seconds remaining.

The Celtics controlled the boards and the pace, slowing the game down, in the first half and led 47-42 at intermission. The game was tied 10 times in the half.

Trailing 61-57, Charlotte went on a 10-0 run over two minutes starting with Gill's three-point play with 3:57 left in the third quarter and ending with Johnson's layup with 1:58 to go.

Nets 101, Cavaliers 99

RICHFIELD, Ohio — Chris Morris rebounded Derrick Coleman's missed shot with seven seconds left and the New Jersey Nets ran most of the remaining time off the clock, clinching a victory over the Cleveland Cavaliers and tying their best-of-5 playoff series at one game each.

Coleman had 27 points and 14 rebounds for the Nets, who bounced back from a blowout loss in Thursday night's opener. Drazen Petrovic scored 21 and Morris 20.

Larry Nance and Mark Price scored 17 each for Cleveland, which had won 18 of its previous 19 games against the Nets in Richfield Coliseum.

Coleman's follow-up dunk with 1:17 to play put the Nets ahead 100-94, but it was their last field goal. Baskets by Nance and John Williams brought the Cavaliers within two, and Coleman's short jumper deflected against the rim as the shot clock wound down with less than 10 seconds to go.

The Cavaliers seemed to think the ball never touched the rim, and by the time they fouled Morris there were only six-tenths of a second left.

Morris made one of two foul shots, and Cleveland's Danny Ferry was fouled on the ensuing inbounds play. He made one free throw before Craig Ehlo was called for a lane violation as the Cavs tried to tip in Ferry's intentional miss.

Clippers 95, Rockets 83

HOUSTON — Gimpy-kneed Ron Harper scored 12 of his 29 points in the third quarter to lead the Los Angeles Clippers over Houston and even their NBA playoff series at 1-1.

The Clippers snapped a 15-game Summit losing streak and beat the Rockets for the first time this season in six tries.

Harper, who suffered a sprained knee Thursday night, highlighted an 18-6 run by the Clippers to start the third period. Although Houston countered with 19-8 charge, the Clippers never relinquished the lead.

Hakeem Olajuwon led Houston with 30 points, but he shot only 6 for 19 from the field and hit 18 free throws.

The Clippers, who fell behind early and never caught up in the first game, came out playing a ferocious defense. They scored the final seven points to grab a 46-41 halftime lead.

Houston, down 64-47 with 5:42 left in the third quarter, cut the deficit to 72-66 going into the final period.

Aggies hush Longhorns, 9-1

Associated Press

AUSTIN — Trey Moore scattered five hits over eight innings and top-ranked Texas A&M pounded out 13 hits as the Aggies thrashed No. 5 Texas 9-1 in Southwest Conference action Saturday.

■ SWC Baseball

A season-high 7,135 fans at Disch-Falk Field watched as the Longhorns (43-12 overall, 10-7 in the SWC) lost their fourth consecutive game and fell into third place in conference standings for the first time since 1989.

Texas A&M (47-6, 14-2) baffled Texas for the second straight night and solidified its position at the top of the national rankings.

Moore (11-0) marked the victory by stumping the Longhorns with a variety of off-speed pitches. He held Texas to a lone unearned run while his teammates were busy with four Longhorn pitchers. Moore struck out seven and walked six.

Brian Parker pitched the ninth for A&M and struck out two while walking three.

Baylor 4, Houston 3

HOUSTON — Aaron Lineweaver scattered eight hits over 8⅓ innings and Jason Marshall hit his ninth homer as the Baylor Bears held off Houston.

Brent Bearden pitched out of a two-on, one-out jam in the bottom of the ninth to earn his fourth save, and Baylor improved to 35-17 overall and 9-7 in the Southwest Conference.

Houston fell to 21-22 and 3-13.

Texas Tech 9-8, Texas Christian 5-11

FORT WORTH — Beto Garza-Gongora sparked a seven-run fourth inning with a bases-loaded triple as Texas Christian salvaged a 11-8 victory in the nightcap of a double-header with Texas Tech.

The Red Raiders used an eight-run sixth inning to win the opener, 9-8.

The Horned Frogs finished the season with a 34-22 overall record, but were just 5-13 in the Southwest Conference. Tech, which advances to the four-team SWC tournament, is 43-13 and 11-7.

The Philly Fanatic was supposed to appear at Saturday night's game. Angels officials said they would try to reschedule the mascot for a later date, but he would not appear at the doubleheader.

The Angels and Wranglers are both 8-14, tied for third place in the Texas League West Division.

Right-hander Bryce Florie (1-2, 5.40 ERA) was scheduled to start for the Wranglers Saturday against Shad Williams (1-1, 2.93). Wichita's A.J. Sager (0-2, 2.39) was peciled in to face Chance Gledhill (1-2, 5.55) today. There was no word if the pitching rotation would be affected by the doubleheader.

The Region I-3A track championships, held Saturday in Odessa, concluded before the severe weather reached the city.

At the Midland Country Club Partnership, some golfers in lower flights were unable to finish their Saturday round, but the championship flight, which started play early Saturday morning, finished before the late afternoon windstorm. Golfers who failed to finish will complete the second round today.

Jarrett goes for second leg

Associated Press

TALLADEGA, Ala. — The Chevrolet Lumina in which Dale Jarrett won the Daytona 500 has become something of a shrine.

On Sunday in the Winston 500 at Talladega Superspeedway, Jarrett hopes it is the fastest shrine on the 2.66-mile oval.

"We have a shop that everybody can go through and look at the cars," Jarrett said. "But we kind of set that (Daytona car) aside. We didn't want any accidents taking place close to it. We were kind of scared to even paint the front end where it got sandblasted at Daytona. We didn't want to mess anything up."

Since February, Jarrett has been reaping the benefits of that Daytona victory — only the second of his NASCAR Winston Cup career, and certainly the biggest. On Sunday, he'll have an opportunity to step up and make that Daytona win even more important, if he can win the Talladega race and take the second step toward the Winston Million.

The $1 million prize goes to any driver who can win three of NASCAR's Big Four events — the Daytona 500, the Winston 500, the Coca-Cola 600 in May and the Southern 500 in September. Two of the four is worth $100,000.

"To me," Jarrett said, "the second leg is the most important leg, to get two victories out of the way and have two opportunities to win one race makes your chances a lot better. It also eliminates anyone else from being in play except for the $100,000.

"I'm not concerned with anybody else but our car. And our car is good enough here. ... I feel like we're as strong as we were at Daytona and have a shot at getting this. I know (winning the Winston Million) has only been done one time, but we feel like our chances are very good."

Bill Elliott won the $1 million bonus in 1985, the first year it was offered.

There will be plenty of competition for Jarrett on Sunday, with

■ Winston 500

Dale Earnhardt running away with the pole — beating runner-up Jimmy Spencer by nearly 2 mph in the battle for the front row.

Jarrett was a solid third, followed by Rick Wilson and Davey Allison, who won a $100,000 bonus in 1992 by taking the Daytona and Talladega races.

Besides the battle for the big dollar bonuses, the other major item on Sunday's menu is the battle for the Winston Cup point lead.

Rusty Wallace comes into the 188-lap, 500-mile race with three straight wins, four in eight starts and a 106-point lead over Earnhardt.

Delicious Way To Make Money
New to West Texas This Summer

Have you ever bought a "LEMON"? This Lemon is a sweet deal.

LEMON CHILL is a frozen, Lemon-Ice product and is eaten with a spoon. The snowy, creamy texture is uniquely refreshing and has a high value perception to its long-lasting consumption time. The product is viewed as a healthful & natural alternative to more artificially flavored products.

LEMON CHILL is packed in a 16 ounce, 1 pint serving with a plastic top, shrink wrapped, packaged 12 cups to the case. Optimum extended storage temperature is zero degrees fahrenheit. Serving temperature is most appropriate at about 12-15 degrees. with an eating time of approximately 30 minutes. The product shelf life exceeds six months.

SUMMER CHILLS, INC., the distributor for LEMON CHILL, a product that has only been sold in Theme Park atmospheres and special events primarily in larger metropolitan areas, is now being offered for concessions in the West Texas and New Mexico area.

Retail sales have been known to average as high as one out of three people at concessions or special events locations. It has been proven that the serving cart with special graphics greatly enhances sale of the product.

This product, having a unique taste, high volume, delicious, fresh and natural, should be offered to your patrons. The delight would be theirs, the profits would be yours.

Just to mention a few successful marketing areas would be Six Flags Over Texas, Texas Stadium, and Wet and Wild.

As Early as May of 1993, We will also be shipping CHERRY CHILL AND STRAWBERRY CHILL.

We at SUMMER CHILLS, INC. ask that you review this article as an intent to solicit this novelty frozen snack for your concessions in the 1993 season.

We would appreciate a call at your convenience to further discuss the sales and marketing techniques of LEMON CHILL at your concessions.

Seles 'very depressed' after knife attack

■ A visit from Steffi Graf fails to revive Monica Seles' spirits after the world's top-ranked female tennis player was attacked Friday.

By Nesha Starcevic
Associated Press Writer

HAMBURG, Germany — Although she escaped without a major injury, tennis star Monica Seles was hospitalized and "very depressed" Saturday after being stabbed by a fan during a match.

Steffi Graf, ranked No. 2 in the world behind Seles, visited her rival at Hamburg University Hospital.

"I came into the room and saw her surrounded by her parents and her brother. She seemed to be feeling badly, especially mentally," Graf said. "We both found it difficult to talk. We just cried.

"I told her that I was very sorry and that we are all thinking about her. She is very depressed. It came back to her more this morning than last night."

A hospital report said "the psychological condition of the patient has been attacked."

The 38-year-old German who stabbed Seles on Friday told police he was a Graf fan, and wanted to injure Seles so that Graf could be the world's top player again.

"It hurts me even more that it happened in Germany, (by) a German guy and guy who is apparently a fan of mine," Graf said.

Although the attacker apparently had no political motive, a group of Serbs demonstrated support for the Yugoslav-born Seles outside the hospital. They shouted "Monica, Monica" and carried posters of the player.

Fearing that the situation could get out of control, officials brought Seles' mother, Esther, to address the crowd. She spoke in a quivering voice and broke into tears.

"Thank you very much for coming today," Mrs. Seles said. "I am sorry that Monica could not come. It is impossible for anyone to visit her."

Seles, 19, is an ethnic Hungarian who was born in Novi Sad, capital of the Serbian province of Vojvodina. She has lived in the United States since 1986 and lists her residence as Sarasota, Fla.

Seles has declined to comment on the ethnic strife in what used to be Yugoslavia.

■ More Sports 10B

According to police, the German man apparently had planned an attack for a long time and had spent the entire week attending matches, waiting for a chance to assault Seles.

Tournament doctors said the wound was about a half-inch deep and didn't injure Seles' lungs or other organs. She is expected to be out of action for one to three months, meaning she will almost certainly miss the French Open later this month.

"Monica had a lot of luck," the doctors said in a statement. "With this weapon she could have been killed."

Officials decided to continue the Citizen Cup tournament after consulting with the four players left in the field, including Graf and Maleeva.

But they increased security by moving the players' chairs closer to the court and placing a bodyguard behind each player during changeovers.

"The attack was a warning to every tournament that it can happen," said Jana Novotna, who lost to Graf 6-3, 3-6, 6-1 Saturday.

Gerard Smith, chief executive officer of the Women's Tennis Association, said the tour's board would probably hire a consultant to recommend improvements in security.

New gang 'ritual' shows dilemma

A couple of recent news reports concerning the deadly AIDS virus cause us to wonder whether (1) the ongoing educational effort to warn Americans about the disease and ways to avoid contracting it can ever overcome its spread, and (2) if the changing picture of the AIDS crisis is a true reflection of the dilemma facing our society.

Americans have known for more than a decade that AIDS — the acronym for Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome — is most commonly transmitted through homosexual sex or by drug-users sharing needles. The virus is transmitted from one person to another in an exchange of blood or other bodily fluids.

Yet with all the media attention focused on the disease in the interest of informing the public of the danger, an article in the San Antonio Express-News recently reported that several 14- and 15-year-old girls had bragged to Planned Parenthood counselors there of proving their "toughness" by having sex with an HIV-infected gang member as part of a gang initiation rite.

Since the spread of AIDS through heterosexual sex has been increasing in recent years, the report is a real concern. While the typical San Antonio gang member may not be a regular newspaper reader or routinely exposed to other news outlets, one would think that knowledge of the AIDS crisis in this country would be fairly common in general.

Perhaps that's the underlying problem in the spread of AIDS: there is a segment of the population that not only does not share the common concern about infectious diseases, but that will actually go out of its way to flaunt the concern exhibited by others.

While San Antonio police were attempting to verify the account, no legal action was expected since the girls apparently consented to the so-called test of "toughness."

We'd more aptly term it a test of "stupidity."

The second report indicated that a new AIDS definition now in use by federal health officials is creating a surge in new cases. In fact, using the new definition 35,000 new AIDS cases were reported during the first three months of this year.

Of even more concern is the fact that the number of AIDS cases not attributable to the new definition still showed a 21 percent increase — double the rate for the same period last year.

"Some of that 21 percent is a sign that the AIDS epidemic is continuing to grow," observed Dr. John Ward, chief of AIDS surveillance for the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

Yes, and the attitude of the young women in San Antonio illustrates one reason why that is so.

It could be that a new, expanded AIDS prevention strategy is needed.

Health-care reform requires courage

WASHINGTON — Judging from the backstage maneuvering that doomed the last major health-care reform initiative, U.S. senators should be swapping copies of John F. Kennedy's "Profile in Courage" to help steel themselves from the onslaught of special interests now gearing up against Hillary Rodham Clinton's task force.

Anderson

Three years ago, the bi-partisan Pepper Commission was working with little fanfare tc draft a blueprint of the "pay or play" model for health-care reform, a blueprint Bill Clinton adopted as his own until shortly before the election.

As the commission was preparing to vote on its final package, armies of special interests, led by the National Federation of Independent Businesses, were working to subvert the final recommendations. They were alarmed by the plan's requirement that all companies either provide their employees with health insurance, or contribute to a general fund, which at the time was estimated to cost about $66 billion.

The final vote promised to be a cliffhanger. That's when commission supporter Sen. David Pryor, D-Ark., thought the moment was ripe for some political payback with his friend and fellow senator, Max Baucus, D-Mont.

Pryor's memory was still fresh over how Baucus paid a surprise visit to his home one rainy evening to lobby for his vote on a non-health care issue. Pryor opened his door to find Baucus on the doorstep clutching a copy of Kennedy's "Profiles In Courage."

The vote was the next day, and Baucus was trying to coral Pryor's commitment on a politically sensitive issue. Baucus presented the book to Pryor, along with a speech about the book's significance. Pryor had gotten the message by the time the vote came the next day, and voted with Baucus.

On the Pepper Commission, it was Baucus who was fence-sitting on a politically vexing issue. The commission had spent two years working on its plan, yet Baucus had yet to make up his mind which way to vote. That's when Pryor gave his friend a taste of his own medicine by returning "Profiles In Courage," along with a note reminding Baucus of the doorstep politicking.

Baucus waited until halfway through the commission's vote before abandoning Pryor's advice and voting against the recommendations, mainly because he felt it hurt rural and small business interests. But the package still passed by an 8-7 margin, thanks to a conservative member of the commission who also changed his mind at the last minute. Congress ultimately rejected the package.

This incident should serve as a parable to all members of Congress, who will soon battle it out over one of the most ambitious pieces of domestic legislation in 20 years. The Clintons have promised nothing less than to revolutionize the way health care is delivered and paid for by all Americans. Today, as the administration's health-care task force is putting the final pieces of the plan together, health-care interest groups are again arraying outside the palace gates.

Some senators already worry that their colleagues are getting cold feet about the package, and the White House is more concerned about keeping unity within Democratic ranks than about a Republican attack. Demoralized after their defeat on the stimulus package and fretting about Clinton's recent drop in approval ratings, about 40 Senate Democrats convened recently with the Clintons for a weekend retreat in Jamestown, Va.

Jack Anderson's and Michael Binstein's column is distributed by United Feature Syndicate.

GEORGE WILL

President's choices imply protectionism

WASHINGTON — It is the least that Harvard could do. Having saddled the Clinton administration with many of the people and ideas under which it is sagging, Harvard has now produced an alibi for the sagging: Reagan had a better beginning because he was dumb. Clinton is too smart. Hence his diffuse focus and, according to most critics, his themeless presidency.

Will

The author of this alibi, Professor Michael Sandel, a political philosopher and a gentleman, put it delicately:

"The risk is that he (Clinton) knows too much. Reagan did not have that problem. For Reagan, a thematic presidency was easy because he did not know very much. All he had were broad themes on three-by-five cards. Clinton has a CD-ROM in his head."

(A CD-ROM is a computer thing. I didn't know that, but have noted it on a three-by-five card.)

Actually, most of Clinton's critics are precisely wrong. He is in trouble because his theme is alarmingly clear. It is: Americans do not spend their money or otherwise exercise free choice sensibly, so government, run by sons and daughters of John Harvard, and by other people with CD-ROMs in their heads, should do more spending and choosing for Americans.

Reagan had two advantages over Clinton. Reagan was doing what he campaigned on doing — cutting taxes and re-arming — and what the country wanted done. Clinton's core problem is the pervasive belief that he campaigned disingenuously, and began governing the same way when, after election day, he feigned shock about "new" deficit projections of more than $300 billion that, he said, required huge tax increases. Trouble is, way back on July 6, 1992, he said: "When I began the campaign, the projected deficit was $250 billion. Now" — four months before the election — "it's up to $400 billion."

The administration also is in trouble because of its "Through the Looking-Glass" use of language. ("'When I use a word,' Humpty Dumpty said in a rather scornful tone, 'it means just what I choose it to mean.'") "Investment" means spending, a tax increase on Social Security is a "spending cut," other tax increases are "contributions," and a surtax on people earning a quarter of a million dollars is a "millionaire's tax." A CD-ROM is not needed, a three-by-five card will do for this rule: Americans are not as dumb as many clever people think they are. They understand the casual misuse of words.

And of promises. From the transparent truth-stretching of the "25 percent cut" in White House staff, to the abandonment of pressure for a 25 percent cut in Congress' staff and a line-item veto (both abandoned at Clinton's first post-election meeting with Democratic leaders of Congress), to the incredibly vanishing middle class tax cut and the incredibly shrinking interest in ending welfare "as we have known it," to Leon Panetta's talk of two dollars of spending cuts for every dollar of tax increases, promises have been treated cavalierly.

Panetta, director of OMB, caused commotion last week when he said that much of Clinton's agenda is in trouble in Congress and the North American Free Trade Agreement is "dead." But of course. Clinton killed much of his agenda (see above) and other Democrats are mangling much of what remains (from higher grazing fees to the investment tax credit).

'Full, horrible truth' must be told again

As difficult as it is for (Holocaust) survivors . . . to recall the horrors of half a century ago — to speak the unspeakable — there is a compelling need to remember what man has done — and can do — to his fellow man. The other day, on the Mall in Washington, President Clinton officially dedicated the U.S. Holocaust Memorial Museum, as both a testament to the dead and a reminder to the living. . . .

Museum chairman Harvey M. Meyerhoff said it is his institution's intent that "every visitor leave not just with knowledge, but with the determination to speak out and act against injustice and racism and the denial of basic human rights." At a time when the world is against witnessing mass exterminations in Africa, and in the former Yugoslavia, the Holocaust museum's consciousness-raising message remains as relevant as ever. As wrenching as it is, the full, horrible truth of this tragedy must be told again and again.

Rio Grande 'cesspool' needs cleanup effort

Will national humiliation provide enough of a catalyst to spark the cleanup of the Rio Grande?

For years, anyone with decent eyesight and a smattering of logic has known that the Rio Grande was not the cleanest river around. But . . . an environmental group called American Rivers went further than that, calling the Rio Grande a virtual cesspool and ranking it as the most endangered river in North America.

So now the world has been reminded of the ugly truth about this river that flows for 2,000 miles from its source in Colorado to South Texas, where it empties into the Gulf of Mexico. But will international embarrassment cause a new look at the river's problems? We hope so.

Unachievers excel in unaccomplishments

I was startled to read in Art Buchwald's syndicated humor column the other day that he does not play golf. I know for a fact he plays polo, because when I first met him years ago in Srinagar he challenged me to a chukkar.

Baker

I had to confess I couldn't even ride a horse, much less play polo. So he challenged me to water polo, and I had to admit I'd flunked high-school swimming.

"Never mind," he said, inviting me into a club for chotapegs at the bar. We could play the match game to decide who paid the bill, he said.

"Sorry, old chap," I told him, for India was still British that year, "but I don't know what a chotapeg is, never learned to play the match game and have been blackballed from this club."

Whether because of the blackballing or my impressive list of unaccomplishments I do not know, but he cut me in Calcutta next time I saw him. The circumstances were these:

I had read in The Ronald Colman of India Times that Buchwald had challenged the Viceroy to a bit of pigsticking. Not surprisingly, the C. Aubrey Smith Arena proved to be sold out when I sought a ticket for the event.

I say "not surprisingly" because arenas, stadiums, theaters and even gymnasiums showing high-scnool operettas are always sold out when I try to buy tickets, even though they always seem to have plenty of tickets left for people who know how to buy tickets. I never learned to buy tickets.

Still, hadn't Buchwald once challenged me to a chukkar and chotapegs? There was an old saying in India that year: "He who has issued a chukkar-chotapeg challenge should ever after be good for a couple of house seats."

In his memoirs, Buchwald denied cutting me on the Squash Club steps that afternoon. He had just finished giving Rudyard Kipling the worst squash thrashing of his life and was too exhilarated, he said, to study the baksheesh seekers on the club steps.

He wouldn't have looked for me there in any case, he asserted, since he knew it was one of some 500 clubs on the Subcontinent from which I had been blackballed.

Here he errs. I couldn't have been blackballed from the Calcutta Squash Club because I have never applied for membership. Why should I? I don't play squash.

After returning to the States via Penang and London, where my unaccomplishments were vastly expanded by years of wondering what the point of it all was, I enjoyed a small reputation as the man you'd most hate to spend a long weekend with.

Besides not playing golf, tennis, squash, volleyball, polo, water polo, softball, hardball, two-hand touch, basketball, hopscotch, jacks, croquet and Scrabble, I did not dive off the high board, jump fences on horseback, jog, hike, camp, work out on the weight machine, fish, hunt or listen to police calls on shortwave radio.

When people said, "Try my new $240,000 Italo-Teutonic sports car with the Simplexiconic transmission that goes from here to there in tenths of fractionated seconds," I said, "I can't drive a car with a manual gear shift."

When people said, "Just send a fax," I said, "I don't fax." I didn't dare speak the truth, saying, "I'm afraid to fax because I don't know how to fax, and I'm afraid if I try to fax I'll hit the wrong button and wipe out all of Fax World, and it will get in the newspapers, and I'll be too embarrassed to go dancing."

Ah, there was another truth I was hiding: I didn't want to go dancing. I couldn't dance any more than I could play a chukkar with Prince Philip.

The not dancing worried me. Suppose Buchwald and I were sitting in Venice's Piazza San Marco one day during the Hoover administration when Clara Bow, the "It" girl, came to our table, took my hand and said, "May I have this dance?"

I would have to say, "I don't dance," leaving Buchwald, who taught Vernon Castle everything he knew, to waltz her away in a fast Charleston.

Now suddenly Buchwald is boasting that he doesn't play golf. I don't believe it, of course, but hearing a nolo contendere from the master of chic competence brightens my day. After all these years, unaccomplishment may at last be the wave of the future.

Brave FBI agents deserve our thanks

Do you think the FBI acted appropriately in its tear gas assault on the Waco encampment this week?

Don't you think there is enough judgment without encouragement from you?

The FBI is composed of human beings just as our army is. We chose them, we trained them and they are the best we have. These men and women were outside of Waco in all kinds of weather from rain, to hail, heat and cold for a longer period of time than our army was in the Gulf War. They were there with no one to relieve them. They died and were wounded and their lives were on the line so who do these armchair generals think they are to judge what is or is not appropriate for them to have done?

Our best people were there and our best did their best. It is over. I pray that the would-be experts will stop their bitching and just say "thank you" to those who put their lives on the line in the best that they know how, to serve warrants on those whom they knew had broken the law.

Not only people in our country but other countries had asked us for years to do something about the situation near Waco.

It is time that gun-toting, Bible-thumping criminal Christians be treated the same as any other criminals.

It just compounds the problems when Bibles and children are used as a shield to fend off law enforcement officers.

These brave men and women deserve our thanks and they have mine.

Clinton sent FBI to do military job

As I watched the events in Waco unfold over the past six or seven weeks, the nagging thought of "when are they going to send in the national guard" kept rattling around in my mind. As time wore on, my feeling of unease grew stronger. Then, Monday's (April 19) holocaust confirmed my worst fears.

I think that the FBI performed as well as they could have under the circumstances. But I fault the Clinton administration for sending in the FBI to do what was clearly a job for the military.

The FBI is an excellent organization, staffed with well trained and dedicated people, but they are not extensively trained for assault missions using military tactics and equipment. It was the military that got Noriega out of Panama; it was the military that got the American students out of Grenada. David Koresh was a real nut case but if anyone could have saved those children, the military could have. They are the ones with the required training, experience and the successful track record.

The only explanation for such utter incompetence is that Bill Clinton feels so guilty about his own military record that he cannot even be civil to the military, much less use them even when the situation demands it. Sadly, his administration reflects his attitude.

Such gross mismanagement must be ended before it becomes a pattern of disaster. Janet Reno and Bill Clinton should resign immediately. Al Gore might do worse, but I doubt it.

Russian president duels old guard

In the wake of his victory at the polls, President Boris Yeltsin seems to be doing a very smart thing. He's giving the surly Parliament, dominated by ex-Communists, a chance to negotiate its own suicide — before he tries to kill it outright.

Gelb

"If there is a one-in-a-thousand chance that the present deputies will accept the referendum results and take this path of constitutional reform, (we) are obliged to give them this chance," was how Deputy Prime Minister Sergei Shakhrai explained step one. Then came the twist into step two: "I'm not saying it will necessarily work."

Such a strategy preserves constitutional niceties, which many Russians will appreciate. It also goes down well with Americans, forever finicky about legalities. And it leaves parliamentary hard-liners worrying whether Yeltsin now actually has the power to override them, if push comes to shove.

Many Yeltsin loyalists and key U.S. Russian experts, however, don't like the two-step strategy. They want him to act right away on the mandate given by a solid majority of voters in Sunday's referendums — to dump the old Soviet Constitution, hold new elections, get rid of the existing Parliament and go full speed ahead with economic reforms.

While Yeltsin should resist these all-in-one-step advocates, he ought to keep their arguments very much in mind.

"The votes were somewhere between a reprieve and a mandate," argued Michael Mandelbaum, a Clinton adviser on Russia. "But Yeltsin has to treat it as a mandate and take decisive action now. The situation in Russia will get worse in any event, and if he hoards his power, it will get worse in a destructive way."

The thinking of one Russian expert, Stephen Sestanovich, followed similar lines. "Yeltsin should overcome his democratic nature and capitalize quickly on the vote," said the former adviser to President Reagan. "If not, he'll be back to where he was months ago — in a dead-end bargaining process with Parliament and steadily losing power."

They're right to warn Yeltsin about getting trapped in another unseemly slugfest and stalemate with Parliament. They're also right to urge him to move swiftly and not get trapped in an endless bargaining process. But they're wrong to be quite so impatient, and to skip the chance to persuade Parliament to go along with its own demise.

Obviously it would be better for a nation struggling to establish constitutional norms to follow the law. And the law, albeit the old Soviet one, does require parliamentary consent to change the Constitution and hold snap elections.

What's more, it might actually be possible to gather the necessary majority to change the system legally. Parliament contains many former Yeltsinites who favor reforms but felt Yeltsin was going too fast. These reformers must have been impressed by Sunday's vote and could be brought back into the Yeltsin fold. And he needs them to forge a future ruling majority — whatever this hard-line Parliament decides to do.

It's also possible that many anti-Yeltsin conservatives will be tempted to cut a deal to keep their seats in the next Parliament. A new constitution will have to establish new voting procedures, and Yeltsin can use that bait to strike a bargain.

Yeltsin, his old reform allies and some conservatives should also seek common ground on basic policy. Russia requires revolutionary change, but Russian history and culture call for a period of adjustment. These are contradictory notions, but unless Russian leaders manage the contradiction, they will face endless political deadlock — and perhaps revolutionary violence.

Clinton officials are well aware of the contradictions and pitfalls. And they are wisely keeping their advice to themselves. "Yeltsin understands Russian politics better than we do," one said. "And our main job now is to deliver the billions in aid we promised him."

It's not clear whether promises of Western aid helped Yeltsin in the referendums. But they didn't hurt.

To actually receive the aid, Yeltsin would do well to exhaust all reasonable paths to constitutional change. After that, Russians and Americans alike will be ready for him to lower the people's boom on Parliament.

Couple is just trying to make city beautiful

A young couple that is an asset to the Midland community was maligned in your Sunday edition of April 25th. This couple has been involved in trying to recover a Midland eyesore from its dilapidated and vandalized condition. They are willing to take this property on a major thoroughfare and restore it to a family home. Before they have been able to make the house a home again, they have found themselves involved in a dispute with a "bird rehabilitation center" next door.

Why is this "bird rehabilitation center" allowed to do business in this obviously single family area?

Why is the media being used to try to discredit someone who is trying to improve a part of Midland?

As the young couple has refused to abandon the project, the people who have the bird rehabilitation center have appealed to the Midland community to become involved and sustain their position as if the two parties are not governed by the same set of laws. As a member of this community for 26 years, I would find it a great contribution to have the property rejuvenated that has fallen into disrepair. I abhor seeing the media cooperate with someone who manipulates that same media to try to injure an adversarial party.

Property laws are written to give protection when investments as major as home purchases are made, almost all Midlanders can appreciate this fact. As Midlanders, let's not encourage someone who places themselves above the law and uses the media to malign the reputation of a young couple doing their bit to "Beautify Midland" and restore a family home.

Columnist's 'expertise' is not from experience

May I please respond to a recent Steve Edwards column regarding the psychological concerns of retirement (Reporter-Telegram, April 23)? It's the scariest thing I ever did read.

I have been retired for 12½ years — quite happily so — but if I had read that column before retirement, I would have been intimidated into sitting at my desk until I grew a long grey beard — and I'm a woman!

Edwards wrote of changed marital relationships, loss of friends, difficulty with curbs, stairs, loss of memory, etc. ad infinitum, ad nauseum. One would think that if one retires on Friday afternoon, he wakes up Saturday morning to find his friends and marriage gone, his financial stability wrecked, and that his brain and every muscle in his body has atrophied overnight! If one's marriage falls apart when one or both partners retire, it probably was pretty shaky to begin with. If one's entire circle of friends is in the confines of his employment, this is not friendship — it's geography. And didn't his friends grow older one day at a time, just as he did? Different ages entail different attitudes. All of us got through teens, our 20's, etc., with their changes and didn't go nuts.

It is my understanding that Edwards is a young man at least two decades away from retirement, so we can assume his "expertise" does not come from experience. If he is gleaning such expertise from other magazine articles, books, etc., we submit that he is reading the wrong authors. We suggest that he forget about support groups (I call them commiseration groups) and talk to the retirees with whom he is supposed to be working. He may discover that growing older is not a curse; it is an accomplishment.

Retirement can bring marriages a new closeness because of proximity; can bring new physical vigor with more time to exercise; can make one's memory sharper due to absence of workaday distractions. Dwelling on negatives can make one old when he still is two decades away from retirement.

There is more than one high school in Midland

I have realized for some time that the local press was partial to Midland High over the Lee Rebels, but I cannot go without speaking out on the last fiasco.

If you were looking for the write-up of the Lee-Permian game, which was a very important game as far as the district championship race is concerned, you found it in the small print on page 4. Meanwhile at Angel Stadium the Bulldogs took a loss to drop out of the playoffs and this made page one in big print with a photo.

It is a shame when Lee plays such a great ball game, paced by a complete game shut-out, including 13 strikeouts and only one hit and it takes back seat to the Midland High loss. Where is your local spirit? There are two high schools in Midland and it is time you realized it.

We need to arm our children with education

According to a survey done by the human sexuality class here at Midland College, roughly 85-95 percent of those surveyed approved of age-appropriate sex education within the schools.

Why are sex education programs being blocked from coming into the schools? With the threat of HIV/AIDS we should have sex education in the masses everywhere including the schools so that we may inform and educate our children about their bodies and to protect themselves from such horrific diseases such as AIDS.

The only sex education programs that I have been made aware of in the Midland-Odessa area are in association with the church, heaven forbid! This program is run by the Cler Ministries, however, it is an independent program and is very informative.

It is true that abstinence is the best way to avoid HIV/AIDS, but there are more and more cases reported every month and the figures are tripling every three months. This is basically due to unprotected sex and sharing needles. This problem also occurs in Midland and we have reported cases within Midland.

Midland College did a great thing by having AIDS awareness week on campus. Why don't junior high and high schools have these awareness programs as well? Why are we restricting the amount of knowledge that these kids have? They should know all there is to know about sex and AIDS so that they don't come home to mom or dad telling them that he/she is HIV positive. We can't turn our backs on this problem. That is how it spreads.

German teachers article had wrong quotations

I would like to refer to your article about "German exchange teachers returning to Germany" from Sunday, April 18, 1993.

This article contained inconsistencies and wrong quotations or quotations taken out of context. In your article you made it sound as if our mentors Diana Carmona and Susan Grimes only helped us in our first year in Greenwood. That is not true. Even though we did not need that much support during our second year, they were always available for us whenever problems arose.

Diana Carmona and Susan Grimes did an outstanding job helping us to adjust to the Texan way of life and the American school system.

Another quotation I want to clarify is that not all students in Germany are allowed to leave the campus during their breaks. It depends on their age and grade level.

Usually starting in 10th grade they can leave the campus but not in elementary school as the article indicated.

Although discipline in German schools is handled in a different way, I fully comply with the Greenwood established disciplinary measures e.g. to line up students behind each other whenever they leave their classroom.

Now that my husband and I are preparing to go back home to Germany we will not only miss our students and mentors but also all of our colleagues who made us feel at home in Greenwood.

Landslide vote in Yeltsin's favor is victory for Russia, U.S.

Editor in Chief, Hearst Newspapers

NEW YORK — The landslide vote in Russia for President Yeltsin and democracy gave me great satisfaction. It is a tremendous tribute to the Russian people's common sense. It has stalled, if not blocked, the plot by the communist-nationalist-controlled parliament to thwart his free-market reforms and pro-Western foreign policy.

Hearst

The mandate Yelstin received from a strong majority of the people in a referendum to endorse his democratic presidency and to hold early elections to replace the hardliner clique with democratic, reform-minded deputies in a new legislature, strikes me as one of the most encouraging developments in the entire history of Russia.

America and the rest of the civilized world should show our gratitude to the Russian people for supporting democratic freedom by rushing additional emergency food supplies between now and the parliamentary elections. The aid could help Yeltsin win a decisive victory for democracy. The food must, of course, be distributed to the people under U.S.-led, United Nations supervision. Individuals here who favor democracy in Russia should send whatever money they can spare to the American and/or International Red Cross.

Following is a more detailed report on the fateful developments from Joe Kingsbury Smith, Washington-based national editor of The Hearst Newspapers:

President Clinton played a major role in helping Yeltsin win the referendum by a strong majority. Shortly before the April 25 voting, our president emphasized America's economic as well as vital strategic self-interest in maintaining the democratic reform program. Washington Post columnist Mary McGrory wrote that President Clinton had "bravely backed Yeltsin to the hilt and, against many odds, insisted on meeting him in Vancouver, (British Columbia), hailing Yeltsin as a duly elected president who reflects 'the enduring values' of his country." The Russian Embassy sent this information to Moscow. At the same time, it received wide coverage in the Russian press and on TV.

Clinton also telephoned Yeltsin the day after the vote to congratulate him and praised the voters who backed him. Later that day at a White House ceremony, Clinton said the reaffirmation of Yeltsin's policies was "a tribute to the farsightedness of the Russian people." He also said Yeltsin's victory was "very, very good, not only for the people of Russia, but for the people of the United States and all the people of the world." All of this should encourage a good majority of the Russian people to vote again for Yeltsin's constitutional proposals.

It was also reassuring for the Clinton Administration and Congressional supporters of the proposed $1.8 billion aid package for Russia. That aid plan would be killed if Yeltsin is defeated in Russia's next elections.

Yeltsin's communist and hardline military foes have launched a campaign to demonize the courageous president between now and the elections. His most dangerous foe is Alexander V. Rutskoi, whom Yeltsin made vice president in the hope of winning him over to the reformist movement and with whom he was prepared to compromise. In strident demagogic speeches, this tough ex-air force pilot accused Yeltsin officials of corruption, including alleged acceptance of kickbacks by foreign trade officials in return for export licenses. Rutskoi failed to substantiate the allegations. In one speech, he declared, "We wallow in this dirty puddle called democracy."

Ruslan Khasbutalov, parliamentary chairman who hopes to become president of Russia if Yeltsin is defeated, is striving to convince the people that Yeltsin did not win a majority in the referendum vote — that the polling was crooked.

The danger now is that if the parliamentary gang becomes convinced Yeltsin will win, it may attempt a coup or an assassination of Yeltsin. There is fear in Moscow that if the hardliners win, there will be civil war.

TRACK: Lee, MHS boys shut out in Saturday's track events

ing from third place to first on her last throw of the day. Her career isn't long, having picked up the event a month ago, but it was over two feet better than she had ever done.

"Scott McLeod (who won the boys shot put title on Friday) came over and calmed me down," Mills said. "I knew I could win it because I had 42-feet in practice this week. I never dreamed this would happen though. I didn't even dream of winning district. This was an event to keep me occupied between running events."

OK, that's good, but let's add one more. Mills is also state bound with Lee's 1600 relay team, which placed second to Fort Worth Dunbar.

Sonya Matchull took the third leg baton from Tasha Franklin-Mayberry in third place, ran into problems and dropped to fifth before giving Mills the baton in third place. Mills tracked down Odessa Permian to finish second and send the team on. Farrah Fisher ran Lee's first leg.

That was the extent of the state bound hopes, however. Lee's Tony Olivas could manage only a sixth place 143-4 in the discus and teammate Marlon Henry was sixth in the 200 with a 22.03. Michael Nunn did not make the triple jump finals.

Midland High's Chris Anderson placed tenth in the 3200 with a 10:22, but that was up six places and down 20 seconds from his effort last year. It was a career best. MHS sophomore Elaine Salgado was eighth in the 100 hurdles with a 15.75 in her first taste of region competition.

Odessa Permian won the boys competition and Abilene High won the girls team title in different ways. Permian won six events and scored 89 points, qualifying a state potential of 80 points for Austin. On the other hand, Abilene High's girls repeated as the Region I champs with 66 points, but qualified for state in only two events — the 800 relay and discus.

El Paso Hanks' Karen Boone qualified for state in five individual events with two firsts and three second place finishes.

Saturday's state qualifiers and other District 4-5A results from the Region I-5A track meet in Lubbock.

Johnson wants players to forget Super Bowl

N.Y. Times News Service

IRVING — The Dallas Cowboys haven't even received their rings — they learned yesterday the jewelry won't be ready until July 13 — and already they are being told to forget the Super Bowl.

The last thing coach Jimmy Johnson wants is for his team to duplicate the hangover suffered by past Super Bowl champions. That in mind, players said he delivered a fiery speech to open the weekend minicamp at Valley Ranch.

"He told us that what we did in the past was history," tight end Alfredo Roberts said. "He made it very clear that he's not going to tolerate us resting on our laurels. He said he doesn't want us promising to go to work in September. He wants to see the work now."

Despite that message, the minicamp shouldn't be confused with the serious grind of training camp. Johnson left workouts Friday and yesterday to attend functions related to his charity golf tournament, scheduled for tomorrow at Bear Creek. Tonight, Johnson hosts a gala that will feature him sharing the stage with predecessor Tom Landry. And yesterday, Southern Cal coach John Robinson patrolled the sidelines, while Johnson's parents, C.W. and Allene, and his brother Wayne toured the facility.

"We've got a long way to go," Johnson said. "We're actually closer to the Super Bowl today than we are to our season opener."

That is food for thought. Though last season officially became this season with the opening of minicamp Friday, the Cowboys are only 91 days removed from Super Bowl XXVII and 129 days away from the 1993 season opener at Washington.

And they are 21/2 months from getting their precious Super Bowl rings.

"July 13? That gives us one day to wear them before July 15, when we start training camp," moaned tackle Mark Tuinei.

BRIEFLY: Rookies Kevin Williams (knee) and Dave Thomas (hamstring) left practice but could return to work today, the final day at Valley Ranch for rookies until June 1.

Receiver Tyrone Williams is expected to arrive in time for today's workout after paying a $65 fee for his work permit from Canada.

Milwaukee nips Rangers in 12

Associated Press

■ AL Roundup

ARLINGTON — Tom Brunansky, batting just .125, hit his first home run of the year with two outs in the 12th inning Saturday, giving the Milwaukee Brewers a 4-3 victory over the Texas Rangers.

Brunansky's home run came off reliever Bob Patterson (1-2), who also served a game-winning homer Friday night to Milwaukee's Greg Vaughn. Brunansky has been taking injured Robin Yount's spot in the lineup.

The Rangers blew a bases-loaded, no-out threat in the 10th inning and left the bases loaded in the 11th when Juan Gonzalez struck out.

Red Sox 3, Angels 1

BOSTON — Roger Clemens pitched five-hit ball for eight innings, struck out 11 and beat California for the seventh straight time in Fenway Park, leading the Boston Red Sox over the Angels.

Clemens (4-1) struck out every starter in California's lineup except Gary DiSarcina and Luis Polonia, who had three hits. Polonia singled, doubled and tripled, and scored the Angels' run in the first inning.

Twins 5, Tigers 2

DETROIT — The Minnesota Twins stopped their longest losing streak in three seasons at eight games, beating the Detroit Tigers as Shane Mack drove in three runs.

Kevin Tapani (1-3) broke his seven-start winless streak, winning for the first time since last Sept. 26 against Kansas City. He allowed two runs and six hits in 6 2-3 innings, struck out four and walked two.

Rick Aguilera pitched the ninth for his sixth save in six chances. The losing streak was the Twins' longest since a nine-game skid from Aug. 15-24, 1990.

Indians 1, Athletics 0

CLEVELAND — Jose Mesa pitched a four-hit ball for 8⅓ innings and Albert Belle doubled home a run in the first as the Cleveland Indians beat the Oakland Athletics 1-0 Saturday and stopped a four-game losing streak.

Mesa (2-1) struck out five and walked three before coming out in the ninth. He allowed a third-inning single to Rickey Henderson, a leadoff double to Dave Henderson in the fifth and singles to Ruben Sierra in the sixth and ninth innings.

Yankees 6, Mariners 2

NEW YORK — Mike Witt won for the first time in three seasons, pitching three-hit ball for seven innings to lead the New York Yankees pover the Seattle Mariners.

Witt (1-0), who made his second start this season, missed the second half of 1991 and all of 1992 because of an ailing elbow and began this year on the disabled list with a groin injury. He hadn't won since a victory over Boston on Sept. 23, 1990.

Witt struck out three and walked three as he led New York to its fifth victory in six games. He allowed a run on Jay Buhner's home run in the sixth inning, his third home run of the season.

White Sox 8, Blue Jays 2

CHICAGO — Joey Cora's two-run single started a five-run fifth inning against Jack Morris, and the Chicago White Sox beat the Toronto Blue Jays for their sixth straight victory.

Cora also had an RBI single during a three-run sixth. He is batting .364 in his last 10 games.

Wilson Alvarez (2-0) gave up two runs on six hits in seven innings. He struck out seven and walked three. He had pitched 19 straight scoreless innings until Joe Carter led off the sixth with his seventh home run.

Morris (1-4), who took an 11.50 ERA into the game, was the victim of three unearned runs in the fifth. Morris left in the sixth inning, having allowed eight runs, five of them earned, on six hits.

Royals 5, Orioles 4

BALTIMORE — Mike Macfarlane led off the ninth inning with a tiebreaking home run and the Kansas City Royals overcame a strong effort by Fernando Valenzuela to beat the Baltimore Orioles.

Macfarlane, who earlier hit a two-run double, drove a pitch from Alan Mills (0-2) into the left-field seats to break a 3-3 tie that had lasted since the first inning. The Royals added a run on a triple by Greg Gagne and a single by Brian McRae.

Bill Sampen (1-0) went 1 1-3 innings for his first major league win and Jeff Montgomery pitched the ninth for his seventh save. The Orioles closed to 5-4 when Brady Anderson hit an RBI double with one out.

Astros win again in fight-marred game

Associated Press

■ NL Roundup

HOUSTON — Doug Drabek beat his former team for his first victory at home with Houston, and the Astros defeated the Pittsburgh Pirates 7-3 Saturday night in a fight-interrupted game.

The benches emptied in the fifth inning after Houston's Eric Anthony was knocked down by a pitch from Randy Tomlin. Anthony charged the mound and grabbed Tomlin, and a five-minute fight ensued.

Marlins 7, Rockies 6

MIAMI — Rich Renteria fouled off five pitches with two strikes, then singled home the winning run with two outs in the 12th inning, giving the Florida Marlins a victory over the Colorado Rockies.

Jeff Conine, who earlier hit a grand slam for his first major league home run, singled with one out in the 12th against Steve Reed (1-1), the Marlins' first hit since the sixth inning.

Reds 9, Cubs 4

CINCINNATI — With owner Marge Schott once again cheering them on from a front-row seat, the Cincinnati Reds rode an eight-run third inning — their biggest in three years — to a victory over the Chicago Cubs.

Cincinnati sent 12 batters to the plate in the third against Mike Harkey (3-1) and Jose Bautista. Bip Roberts and Barry Larkin each singled twice and drove in a pair of runs in the Reds' first eight-run inning since June 23, 1990, against Los Angeles.

It was their first game since Schott returned to the stands. She was allowed to sit in a box seat again Saturday under terms of her one-year suspension for using racial and ethnic slurs. She had to watch games in April from an executive booth.

Cardinals 10, Braves 3

ATLANTA — Todd Zeile broke out of a 2-for-20 slump with a tiebreaking, bases-loaded double in the sixth inning as the St. Louis Cardinals routed the Atlanta Braves.

St. Louis broke open the game with a five-run seventh that included a three-run double by Mark Whiten and a two-run double by Tom Pagnozzi off Marvin Freeman.

John Smoltz (2-3) gave up four runs and six hits in six innings as the Braves lost for the sixth time in seven games.

Giants 7, Expos 3

SAN FRANCISCO — Darren Lewis hit a two-run homer, highlighting a six-run first inning and leading the San Francisco Giants over the Montreal Expos for their fifth straight win.

Jeff Brantley (2-1) pitched six innings, giving up three runs on seven hits. Jimmy Jones (4-1) gave up seven hits and got only one out before being knocked out.

Dodgers 5, Phillies 1

LOS ANGELES — The Dodgers' Tom Candiotti baffled the Phillies with his lively knuckleball, and rookie Mike Piazza continued his hot streak with a solo homer as Los Angeles beat Philadelphia.

The victory was the first of the year for Candiotti, who allowed five hits, struck out nine and walked one in eight innings. Jim Gott pitched the ninth, allowing one hit.

It also was the Dodgers' first win over the Phillies in the last eight games dating back to last season.

GOLF: Lady Rebels win by 20 strokes

a three-stroke lead slip away in the final 18 holes of play to lose the medalist competition to sophomore April DeVries of Cooper by four strokes.

For King, she balooned to an 80 after an opening round 75.

"I was very disappointed with the way I played today," said King. "I've been doing this all year, letting leads slip away. I just gave it away today."

As the saying goes "drive for show, putt for dough" and the putter let King down time and time again on the final nine holes.

King, with a two stroke lead after eight holes, found the water of the par-3, 130-yard ninth hole. King settled for a double bogey and was tied with DeVries at the turn.

King scrambled for a par on the 486-yard 10th hole after hitting a tree on her second shot.

She took a double bogey on 11 after burying her second shot in the sand trap guarding the front of the green, giving DeVries a two stroke lead with seven holes to play.

King's putter failed her down the stretch. Two putting for bogey on 14, three putting from 15 feet away for par on 15, two putting from point-blank range on the 16th for par and two putting for a bogey on 17.

Nevertheless, King will be making her second trip to Austin in as many years and the first time for the team since the 1970's.

"I am real excited for our team," King said. "We've been working hard all year and this is something that we set out to do at the beginning of the year. I can't believe that it's finally happened."

Again, steady play from all five players proved to be the difference for Lee. Kaimi Fuller had the team's best round of the day with a 79, despite a double bogey on the final hole.

"I know I could have done better after hitting that double bogey," said Fuller. "I was kind of nervous starting the day but I felt better after we got started."

Kim Fisher shot an 83 while Jennifer Dickson had an 85 and Heather Albright an 88 despite cooler temperatures and high winds that swept through the area midway through the round.

"The (cool) weather really didn't affect me that much," said Dickson. "Once we got started, I just concentrated and forgot about the weather."

"We've just been playing together for a year and a half and we've come so far," said Albright.

"I just started playing a year and a half ago," said Fisher. "I remember last year when I was shooting 120's in tournament play and to be going to state is great."

Here are the final results from the Region I girls golf tournament played at Reese Air Force Base Golf Course:

Lee boys finish sixth at region

LUBBOCK — The Midland Lee boys golf team found an eight-stroke deficit and the longer Meadowbrook layout too much to overcome as they finished sixth in the Region I Golf Tournament Saturday.

The Lee boys couldn't take advantage of ideal weather conditions early in the day before cloudy, cool and windy weather during the final nine holes of the tournament.

El Paso Coronado Gold and runner-up Denton advance to the state tournament May 12-13 in Austin with 590 and 594 totals, respectively.

El Paso Ysleta Hanks finished third with a 597, Flower Mound Marcus was fourth with a 597, Amarillo High was fifth with a 600 and Lee sixth with a 602.

Marcus' Alan McGill fired a 68 for the second consecutive day to win the medalist competition. Greg DiDonna of El Paso Coronado Gold was the runner-up with a 143 after a final round 75.

Lee's duo of K.J. Sanchez and Eddie Hatch, who fired 73's the first day, slipped back in the final round. Sanchez, a sophomore, shot a 79 for a 152 two-day total while Hatch, the 4-5A medalist, fired a three-over-par 75 for a 138.

Mitch Spence, the district's runner-up behind Hatch, shot a 77 to go with an opening round 75 for a 152. Matt Clements tied the team's best round with a 75 for a 154 and Brian Jeffereys shot a 77 for the second straight day for a 154.

Here are the results of the 5A Region I boys golf tournament being played at Meadowbrook Golf Course:

Team Standings: 1. El Paso Coronado, 290-300-590; 2. Denton, 292-302-594; 3. El Paso Ysleta Hanks, 303-294-597; 4. Flower Mound Marcus, 293-304-597; 5. Amarillo High, 302-298-600; 6. TENNIS: Suspense builds in 3rd place match doubles team of Kevin McIlvain and Allan Neighbors about the rule, they'll just answer with ear-to-ear smiles.

The MHS duo used the rule to their advantage for the second consecutive tournament, advancing to the 5A state tennis tournament May 13-14 in Austin despite losing to third-seeded John Cole and David Robertson of Abilene Cooper in the championship match.

McIlvain and Neighbors lost to Cole and Robertson in the District 4-5A finals two weeks ago but advanced to the regional tournament thanks to the playback rule. Saturday the outcome was the same but the stakes included a trip to Austin.

Cole and Robertson made quick work of the 'Dog duo, winning 6-3, 6-1 early in the day in a match that took slightly more than one hour.

"They did everything right," said coach Tom Heiting. "Give them credit, they didn't make mistakes. That's the best we have seen them all year.

"Robertson has a big serve and we had trouble getting the ball to their backhand. We didn't do much wrong other than maybe keeping a few more balls in play. They just played well."

After the loss McIlvain and Neighbors had to await the results of the Marco Pope-Matt Harrison and Kevin Worley-Justin Quest matchup to see if they would be forced into a playback match for the right to advance to Austin.

A win by El Paso's Pope and Harrison would automatically propel them into the state tournament. A Worley-Quest victory would force the playback match.

The wait began ...

Pope and Harrison won the first set 6-4. The second set was forced into a tiebreaker.

Tied at 6.

Tied at 8.

Tied at 10.

Finally, Pope volleyed a winner down the center line to put El Paso ahead, 11-10. Pope returned another for the winner and the MHS duo was in the state tournament.

"I was really nervous watching that," said McIlvain. "It makes you want to be out there playing yourself. But I'm just thrilled to be going to state."

Neighbors, a senior, used the most of his final season to advance to the tournament.

"I'm just happy we were able to make it," said Neighbors. "With this being my last year it means a lot to me to be able to go to state."

Results from the 5A Region I tennis tournament, played at the Lubbock Municipal Tennis Center (players seeding in parathesis).

Tucker pleads

DALLAS — A drug investigator accused of stealing thousands of dollars in drug-sting money during an undercover operation in West Texas has pleaded guilty to two misdemeanor charges of official misconduct.

Ronnie Tucker, 44, of Childress was being tried Friday in a Dallas County state district court on felony charges of felony theft by a public servant when attorneys abruptly agreed to a plea bargain.

Tucker was placed on two years unsupervised probation and fined $4,000 on the two Class A misdemeanors.

Tucker denied doing anything illegal.

"I didn't take any money," he said.

Tucker was a free-lance narcotics investigator for the Texas Department of Public Safety and a free-lance undercover narcotics investigator for Midland County Sheriff Gary Painter.

While posing as a drug lord, he sold 500 pounds of marijuana to a drug dealer during a reverse sting in Sherman, prosecutors allege.

Tucker received $275,000 cash, from which he paid $68,750 to an informant before appropriate forfeiture documents were filed in a Ward County court in Monahans, Texas, prosecutors said.

Two days later at Dallas Love Field, Tucker met the informant and accepted a $34,000 kickback, placing it in his boot, prosecutors added.

"I was told to pay it off the top, and I did," Tucker said. "I don't know where you can show me in the law that you can't pay an informant off the top."

A condition of Tucker's plea bargain bars him from again working as a licensed police officer in Texas or from participating in undercover drug stings.

Cinco de Mayo offers cause for celebration

■ Midlanders celebrate Cinco de Mayo holiday.

By Ed Todd
Staff writer

George Enriquez's cause to celebrate is life itself. And when there's a holiday, such as Cinco de Mayo, he has cause to enjoy life even more.

"I celebrate life everyday," Enriquez said Saturday, before the Cinco de Mayo celebration, disturbed by cyclone-like heavy winds, was moved from outdoors to inside the Crown Royal Club, which last year attracted 20,000 party-goers in the three-day Cinco de Mayo celebration.

"I don't need no reason to celebrate ... (other than) just being here," Enriquez said. "I am grateful to wake up every morning."

Mexican-Americans traditionally celebrate the holiday in recognition of the Mexican army's victory over an invading French force on May 5, 1862.

Mexico holds its annual Independence Day celebration on Sept. 16 in celebrating Mexico's rebellion from Spain in 1810.

"I am positive," Enriquez, 50, said of celebrating life and Cinco de Mayo, "just like I am positive I am going to win the (Texas) lottery one of these days. I am very positive."

Enriquez said that he "just came out to help celebrate everything" in honor

Winds halt upbeat arts festivities

■ Winds put damper on very upbeat Celebration of the Arts.

By Georgia Todd Temple
Staff writer

Saturday dawned bright and sunny, seemingly perfect weather for the 10th annual Celebration of the Arts at Midland Center and Centennial Plaza.

"We couldn't have asked for better weather," said watercolorist Ruth Moore from Austin. "This is my first show here. I did do Septemberfest and it was great so I came back."

Ms. Moore's booth was outside, tucked in between several oak trees in the plaza.

"I didn't get my fees in in time to get indoor space, and I'm almost as happy outside," said Ms. Moore, who had received an honorable mention for one of her pieces at Friday's preview party. "The location is terrific. I've been in shows that were nothing but space in the street. This way the art is protected."

She also was pleased with the event's organizers, the Arts Assembly and its numerous volunteers.

"They've done a beautiful job of taking care of the artists and feeding us. The food last night was wonderful and it was really packed. I love it. I'll be back. Definitely."

By 4 p.m. on Saturday COA planners were delighted.

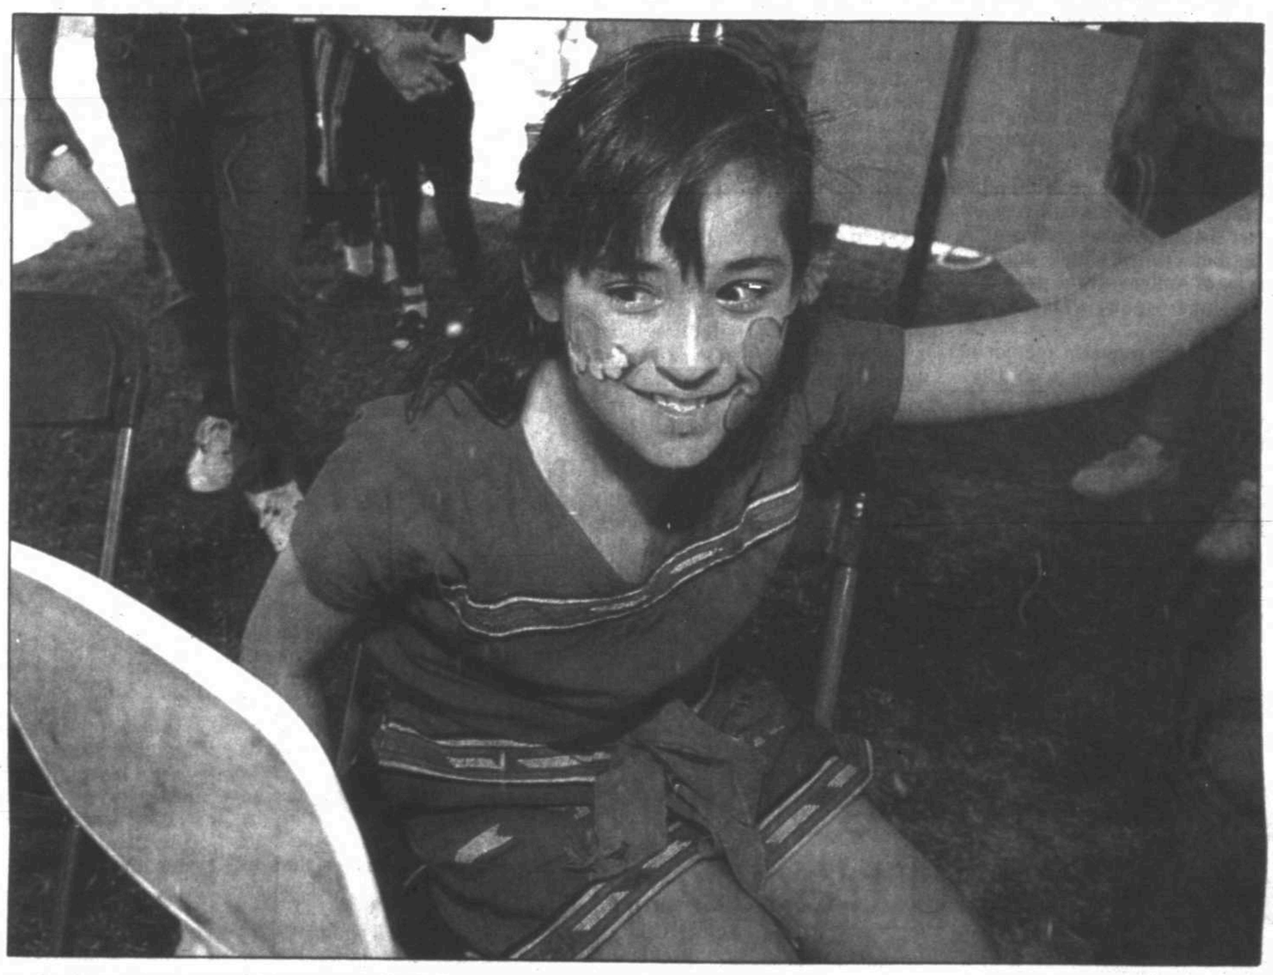

"We've had a good celebration," said Linda Neely, president of the Arts Assembly board of directors. "We had a wonderful concert on Thursday evening, an outstanding preview party — we've never had the attendance at the preview party that we had last night — and we've had a great day today. The artists have indicated sales have never been better."

San Antonio resident Susan Baker, whose booth also was outside in Centennial Plaza, was another first time artist at COA.

"I've never been to Midland before, and it's fun," said Ms. Baker, whose booth, Prize Possessions, featured antique button jewelry. "I think it's the kind of place where people who are from here, love it."

She was pleased with the sales she

GARY OTT

It's time to attend one more seminar

It is one of those things that is going to happen to you once or twice a year, whether you like it or not.

Ott

Your boss gets something in the mail, gives it a quick read, decides it sounds worthwhile and announces that you will be attending a seminar within the next three or four weeks.

"Great," you say, while fighting back a mild grimace. "Sounds interesting."

You mark the date on your calendar and then more or less forget about it until the fateful day draws nearer. It's a mild irritant that periodically nags at your gut, but when you get right down to it you realize attending a seminar is not the end of the world.

After all, you've been to a hundred of them before. They are basically harmless. You get to avoid the office for a whole day and the worst thing that can happen is that at some point during the day-long festivities you might have to stand up in front of the entire group and make a fool of yourself.

But so what? You do that daily at your own office, so why worry about it now? Indeed, you have become something of a pro at making a fool of yourself in public. There's no real harm in doing it in front of strangers.

Besides, you might learn something new at the seminar. OK, you won't learn anything new, but you might hear something positive you already know, and it is always good to have positive ideas reinforced.

Most seminars are exactly the same.

You arrive at the host hotel and ask the information clerk for directions.

"Down the hall, second door on your left," she says.

Once there, you sign the registration form and receive your name tag. To your immediate left is the coffee table. You grab a cup and find a seat near the rear of the room, not unlike you did in high school algebra.

You yawn and immediately begin checking out the women, another trick you learned in that algebra class. You make a mental note to flirt with the brunette on the second row during your lunch break and then begin browsing through the pile of reading material that has been supplied to you.

"This is going to be dreadful," you sigh to no one in particular.

Finally, at precisely 9 a.m., the speaker — or "presenter," as he is now known — steps forward and officially welcomes everyone to — and I quote "the team." He possesses a bubbly personality and uses such phrases as "personal growth," "verbalizing your feelings" and "establishing a win-win environment in which to work."

He walks around the room a lot, waving his arms and cracking one-liners, some of which are actually funny. He describes what will be involved in the seminar and concludes his comments by assuring those present that "there will be NO test at the end of the day."

Everyone cheers.

Then it begins. The presenter — who, despite his decidedly upbeat outlook on life, is really quite good at his job — leaps into his speal, offering helpful hints on how better to perform your work duties. If you're lucky, he will also teach you how to establish that elusive "win-win" environment in the office, the kind that will enable all employees to love one another and "pull together" in an effort to create "the best darn product" known to man.

During the course of the day, at least three circumstances will arise. No seminar would be complete without them. They are:

(1) The presenter will require everyone to break up into smaller groups — "so you can get better acquainted with your neighbors" — and a "team spokesman" (most likely you) will be selected to announce the results of your group's project.

(2) Someone in the audience, probably a middle-aged woman with a perky personality, will quickly emerge as the most vocal participant. She will constantly ask questions and will always provide long-winded answers when the presenter poses hypothetical situations. By mid-morning, you will be contemplating ways to jam a sock down her throat.

(3) As the lunch hour approaches, the sound of crashing dishes will emanate from the kitchen area. No one knows for sure when this somewhat irritating development became a requirement for seminars, but it did.

Finally it ends. After eight hours of learning how to be a better person — and/or employer — everyone slowly files out of the room. As you manage to maneuver yourself next to the good-looking brunette, you ask her for a date.

She laughs in your face.

Only then do you realize that the seminar entitled, "How to Pick Up Women," was to be held NEXT Thursday.

DEATHS

Hollis Shanks

Services for Hollis Barton Shanks of Midland are set for 10 a.m. Monday in the Ellis Funeral Home Chapel with the Rev. Bob Gardner, Single Adult Minister at First Baptist Church, officiating. A graveside service will be held at 4 p.m. Monday in Clyde with the Rev. H.B. Terry officiating. Ellis Funeral Home is in charge of arrangements.

Shanks

Shanks died early Saturday in a local hospital.

He was born Nov. 30, 1927 in Abilene. He moved to Houston prior to enlisting in the U.S. Army in 1946. He married Juanita Fewell on Jan. 12, 1949 in Clyde while in the service.

After his honorable discharge, he worked briefly with M System before joining Kraft Foods in 1953. His route for Kraft encompassed most of West Texas.

He was a member of First Baptist Church.

He was preceded in death by his parents, Carl and Meddie Shanks, two brothers, Lucian and John Shanks, and two sisters, Lois Berkman and Lenora Swafford.

Survivors include his wife; three sons, Carl Shanks of Andrews, Harry Shanks of Gresham, Ore., and David Shanks of Midland; a brother, Cleon Shanks of Houston; three sisters, Louise Collins of Seattle, Bea Craig of Clude, and Beth Taylor of Abilene, three grandchildren and many nieces and nephews.

The family requests memorials be donated to a favorite charity.

Willie Mae Gamble

Services for Mrs. Willie Mae Gamble, 67, of Midland, are pending with Midland Funeral Home.

Mrs. Gamble died Friday at her home.

Douglas Stephenson

Services for Douglas Stephenson of Ruidoso, N.M., and formerly of Midland, are pending with Ellis Funeral Home.

He died Saturday in Ruidoso.

Lenore Abernathy

ODESSA — Graveside services for Lenore E. Abernathy, 76, of Midland will be at 10 a.m. Monday at the Ector County Cemetery. Frank W. Wilson Funeral Directors is in charge of arrangements.

Mrs. Abernathy died Thursday at her home.

She was born April 1, 1917, in Roaring Springs, and she married Thomas Anthony "Tom" Abernathy on June, 3, 1939, in Odessa. He preceded her in death on Jan. 21 of this year.

Mrs. Abernathy moved to Midland in 1965 from Roswell, N.M. She was a homemaker and a member of the Catholic church.

Survivors include two sons, Tony Abernathy and Jack Abernathy, both of Midland; one brother, Weldon Reddock of El Paso; one sister, Perry Lou Butler of Arlington; seven grandchildren; one great-grandchild and several nieces and nephews.

The family requests memorials be directed to Hospice of Midland.

David Watkins Sr.

LaPORTE, Ind. — Services for David Lee Watkins, Sr., of LaPorte, father of a Midland man, were held April 23 in LaPorte with Charles Bagley and Paul Coldiron officiating. Graveside services were held in Gary, Ind.

He died April 19 in a LaPorte hospital.

He was born May 31, 1925, in Gary. He married Mary Turner on July 27, 1985, in Hamlet, Ind.

Watkins was employed by Kentucky Fried Chicken, attended South Center United Baptist Church and was a veteran of World War II, serving in the Marine Corps.

Survivors include his wife; three daughters, Donna Peres of South Haven, Ind., Maralee Smith of Baltimore, Md., and Stephany Watkins of LaPorte; three sons, Dennis Watkins of Gary, Ind., Jeremy Watkins of LaPorte and David Lee Watkins of Midland; two sisters, Lydia Lyons of Gary, Ind., and Margaret Gardner of Wisconsin; 10 grandchildren and six great-grandchildren.

He was preceded in death by three brothers and one sister.

ARTS: Winds interrupt celebration

(From 1C)

had made by Saturday afternoon.

"We have done very well," Ms. Baker said. "The preview party was outstanding, and we've done well today. Our work is so different from what people in the area are used to seeing. It's a draw."

Those attending COA Saturday had the opportunity to browse thorough the artists stalls inside Midland Center as well as those located under tents outside on Centennial Plaza.

The food and beverage concessionaires were set up on Loraine Street and the children's activities and stage, all under tents, were located on the courthouse lawn. Three stages provided continuous entertainment, one was located inside and the other two are outside, one at the plaza and the other at the corner of Texas Avenue and Loraine Street.

Most of the seats were taken at the Centennial Plaza stage as Khenany, a popular performing group from Sonora, Mexico, began performing its 5 p.m. concert.

"I've never heard this kind of music before," said Judy Henson. "It's absolutely fascinating. It's the kind of music you can come home from work, get a wine cooler and turn the music on and relax."

Mrs. Henson had heard the group perform during its earlier concert inside Midland Center, and her husband, Joe, had insisted they stay.

"I'm the reason why we're here," Henson said. He laughed. 'I sat through all the little kids' acts to hear this."

At the time, the day was hot. It was not to stay that way long.

Although fans hadn't seemed particularly disturbed by the dark clouds moving in from the north which seemed to hover behind the Briarcroft Building at the corner of Loraine Street and Texas Avenue, when the color of one of the larger clouds in the forefront was obviously brownish red, people began leaving. Dust is an old acquaintance for West Texans. It's certainly not an old friend.

"The rain is coming," said one of the band members. "We must take an intermission. Before you go, please buy a cassette."

The weather appeared to take a breath and pause. Those who were still there laughed and applauded.

Suddenly, dirt and twisting wind hit, whipping tents, equipment and poles into the air. People began moving, fast. Some were picked up off their feet and blown along with the wind. Others yelled, "Lie down. Lie down. Seek shelter."

Parents searched for their children. Children's cries for their parents were lost in the wind.

Many headed for Midland Center, where all, including those inside the center, were herded into the basement for shelter.

"It was quick," said Mrs. Baker of Prize Possessions. "It was about as fast as I've been in. Children were terrified. I hope no one got seriously hurt. Property can be replaced. Our jewelry is under the table, and unless a tornado picks it up, it's okay. The important thing is we're safe."

Mrs. Baker was in a high wind storm in Brimfield, Mass.

"Most of the people had glass. We heard glass shatter for two hours. We survived that one in a tent. We had just bought it and we were not even sure we had put it up right. I'm grateful for a basement."

Those outside had no warning other than the ominous-looking clouds.

"We got a two-minute warning about high winds," said Lucy Woodside, the Arts Assembly executive director. "And we started running to try and cover work and cover the electrical band equipment.

"Becky (Bailey, her assistant) and I were trying to help put a tarp over the main stage that Palomino Road was going to play on, and the wind caught all of the band equipment and blew it off the stage and caught us in the tarp and dragged us across the plaza.

"A lot of the food booths came over on top of the vendors and ticket booth tents were blown over, and we couldn't get out of the way of it. It seemed like a tornado, but the weather says there was no twister reported and no sight of a twister.

"It sounded and felt like a tornado, because it was twisting and it knocked everybody down."

Mrs. Woodside and COA volunteer Jamie Owen stayed in the street and tried to help people out, including holding an injured woman until an ambulance arrived to protect her from the wind. Finally, they had to seek shelter behind a wall.

"One of the problems we had — we could not make people go on and get in. They were trying to protect their work and their property until it became impossible."

Ms. Moore, the watercolorist, managed to salvage most of her work, but it is "real dirty" and even has "dirt under the mat.' She felt that the live oak trees saved her booth. She, like many of those who went through Saturday's scare, was able to laugh afterwards.

"Gee, Midland is fun," she said.

While the wind howled outside Midland Center, inside, Mrs. Woodside said, "The people had not a clue. I ran on stage to tell them to move to the basement. I think I looked like I had been through a tornado."

Although this is not the first time bad weather has struck COA, it is the first time the annual event has been halted by severe weather. In one of the early years of COA, the event had to be held entirely inside due to rain, but it was held.

"It seems like every year during the set-up we've had the threat of bad weather, but we've always managed to enjoy basically beautiful weather for the festival days," said Kathy Schorr, former executive director of the Arts Assembly of Midland. "And Saturday was no exception until the storm hit."

Saturday's wind storm caused enough damage to cancel the street dance that night and today's festival.

"We've had some injuries," Mrs. Woodside said, referring to the four people who were injured during the high wind and dust. "There's a lot of artists work that has been damaged.

"We feel we need to pay attention to the people who have been hurt. We feel like our energy needs to be totally directed to helping our artists clean up after the devastation rather than going ahead and putting on a festival."

As for Saturday's storm,. Mrs. Woodside said, "We were real lucky."

Sgt. Ron Brown of the Midland Police Department agreed. Brown was standing outside the southwest door of Midland Center, facing Centennial Plaza, when the wind hit.

"When it funnels, it can eat your lunch downtown," Brown said. "It's not pretty, but we made it through.

"We got real lucky. There could have been a lot more injuries; it could have been a lot worst than it was."

More Texans speak foreign language

Hearst News Service

NEW YORK — The number of Texans who speak a language other than English grew from 2.8 million in 1980 to 3.9 million in 1990, rising from 21 percent to 25 percent of the state's population, according to Census Bureau statistics released Tuesday.

In the 1980s, Texas' foreign-speaking population grew in size and percentage, making the state home to more languages than all but three other states, Census Bureau figures showed.

From Spanish to Tagalog to German, Texans now speak 169 languages other than English. Only three other states are home to more foreign languages — California (239), New York (184) and Washington state (181).

Texas mirrored the national trend of the 1980s, when the number of Americans who speak a language other than English rose from 11 percent to 14 percent of the total U.S. population. The numbers include people who speak both English and a foreign language and people who only speak a foreign language.

Of Texans who speak a second language, 20 percent, or 812,000, admit they speak English either not well or not at all. That's about the same rate as the national average of 21 percent or 6.6 million people.

These figures were cited by Christopher Doss of U.S. English — a group that supports legislation making English the official growing numbers of people who speak a language other than English and don't speak English, that portends disaster in the future," he said. "That creates linguistic apartheid."

Doss complained about Spanish-language of American government — for his claim that the report forecasts a separatist America where those who don't speak English don't have access to jobs or education.

"To the extent that we have only government grant programs in Miami and multi-lingual education in New York that alienates immigrant parents who want their children to learn English.

But Sonia Perez, of the National Council of LaRaza, a national Hispanic rights group, took the optimistic view of those same numbers. She said the report showed that most Americans who speak a language other than English — 79 percent — speak English well or very well.

"There is a proportion that cannot speak well enough and we have to be able to address that," she said. "But we should not view the population as a whole as not being able to function."

Nationally the figures show Spanish remains the most popular non-English language in all regions of the nation, with 17.3 million Americans speaking Spanish in 1990, up from 11.1 million in 1980. In distant second was French (1.7 million), followed by German (1.5 million), Italian (1.3 million) and Chinese (1.2 million).

During the 1980s, the number of Americans speaking an Asian or Pacific Island language also grew, from 2 million to 4.2 million.

In Texas, Spanish remained the dominant foreign language — rising from 2.4 million to 3.4 million in the last decade and accounting for the majority of Texans who speak a language other than English.

Spanish-speaking Texans were generally more fluent in English than Spanish-speaking Americans on average — 21 percent said they spoke Enlish not well or not at all, compared to 25 percent for Spanish-speakers nationally. By comparison, 32 percent of Spanish-speaking Californians said they had English fluency problems.

Texas also experienced a dramatic increase in Asian language speakers during the 1980s. The number of those who spoke Vietnamese at home grew from 23,100 to 57,700; the number of Chinese-speakers rose from 21,700 to 48,000, and Korean-speakers grew from 11,300 to 26,000.

By 1990, languages from throughout Asia were represented in Texas, from 22,000 who speak the Filipino language of Tagalog to 52 who speak Micronesian. Four of eight Chinese dialects were represented.

While the Southeast Asian and Mainland Chinese populations grew dramatically in Texas during the 1980s, European languages were forced off the top of the list by rising only marginally. The number of German-speakers dropped from 169,800 to 165,900, and Italian from 131,700 to 111,133.

of his "Mexican background."

Carlos Martinez II has been attending Cinco de Mayo celebrations for 20 of his 21 years "just to have a good time."

"It's a good tradition," said his wife, Patricia Martinez, 20. "It's the same thing every year — the same people."

The Cinco de Mayo parade earlier in the day attracted fancy horses and the popular low-rider cars.

"The horses, you always expect to see horses," Mrs. Martinez said, "and the Mexican dancers and the low-rider cars."

Rudy Lopez, who was operating a food booth, said that Cinco de Mayo "gives us another reason to come out and party, know what I mean?"

His partner, Rene Salcido, said that the booth's prize feature was chopped, barbecued and pressure-cooked "cheeks of cows," which he called "barbacoa."

"It's the true, original (Mexican) barbecue," Salcido, 31, said cow cheeks. "We are just trying to keep our heritage together, as far a Mexican people" are concerned.

Mary Pena was boiling and frying the popular Mexican food treat, calf testicles, calf-fries, which, she said, tastes like fried shrimp.

Prior to Saturday's Cinco de Mayo parade, Midland County Commissioner Louisa Valencia had read the Commissioners' Court proclamation which hailed May 5 as "Cinco de Mayo" Day in Midland.

"In evidence of a unified citizenry," the proclamation said, "the citizens of Midland County rejoice with our good neighbors to the south and with area residents of Mexican heritage in their continued growth, prosperity and peace with the world and join to celebrate Cinco de Mayo."

Dallas voters endorse redistricting

DALLAS (AP) — Voters on Saturday appeared to have endorsed a single-member city council plan imposed by a federal court two years ago to correct Voting Rights Act violations.

With 23 percent of the precincts counted, 29,857 voters, or 57.5 percent, supported Proposition 1, which asked for an official endorsement of the 14-1 city council plan. The proposition was opposed by 21,996 voters, or 42.4 percent.

After three years of legal wrangling and resistance by city officials, U.S. District Judge Jerry Buchmeyer ordered the system implemented in February 1991. A council was elected under the plan in November 1991.

The redistricting battle started in 1988, when two failed black city council candidates filed a voting rights lawsuit contending the existing system, which included three at-large seats, was discriminatory.

Buchmeyer agreed, and in March 1990 struck down the 8-3 system.

Record $50 million jackpot sparks Lotto mania

AUSTIN (AP) — Sales of Lotto Texas tickets were reaching record levels Saturday as thousands of would-be millionaires bought $1 chances to win an estimated $50 million jackpot.

The jackpot is the largest in Texas since lotto started Nov. 7, 1992.

"It looks like they're (ticket sales) running about a million per hour and it's just going to keep going up," lottery spokeswoman Carmen Luevanos said.

Ms. Luevanos said lottery outlets combined to sell $25 million worth of tickets since Wednesday's drawing.

Friday's sales totaled $11 million, an unofficial record for a non-drawing day, Ms. Luevanos said. The single-day sales record is $19.5 million, set on the Wednesday before Saturday night's drawing.

By noon Saturday, $6 million worth of tickets had been sold, she said.

"It looks like people are taking our advice and buying their tickets early," Ms. Luevanos said.

State Comptroller John Sharp predicted ticket sales will reach $3 million per hour between 5 p.m. and 9 p.m. Saturday.

Natural caverns to be transformed into state park

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The state will pay a quarter million dollars to develop a secluded 10-square-mile state park near Brackettville — "an undiscovered gem" that is home to 15 mostly undisturbed caves.

Officials with the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department said Friday that the Kickapoo Cavern State Park is slated to be transformed into a public-use park by the end of 1994.

The park is about 125 miles west of San Antonio. It straddles Kinney and Edwards counties about 23 miles north of Brackettville, just west of Farm Road 674.

The state park, named for the migrating Kickapoo Indian tribe that once traveled through the region, is on the Edwards Plateau and lines the southwest corner of the Texas Hill Country. Elevation at the park ranges from 1,580 to 2,010 feet.

The park currently is open by reservation only and exclusively to holders of a Texas Conservation Passport, an agency-issued permit available to the general public for $25, park superintendent David Stuart said.

"It's an undiscovered gem," said Tom Harvey, a spokesman for the state agency.

Of the 15 caves in the park, one measures more than 2,400 feet in length, and another is longer than 1,800 feet, Harvey said.

"Wouldn't it be nice to have a lower mortgage payment?"

"You know, if you're feeling like you're roped and tied by a high mortgage payment, why don't you ride on over and talk to AmWest Savings about refinancing. With interest rates at a 20-year low, refinancing might lower your mortgage payment by as much as a couple hundred dollars. Or, it might even save you thousands by shortening your term. In some instances, you can even include your closing costs in your loan amount. And, if you head on over now, the folks at AmWest will even give you $100.00 off your closing costs. That's good enough reason for me to refinance at AmWest. How 'bout you?"

Federal officials question NASA subcontractor

HOUSTON (AP) — Federal officials are investigating a Clear Lake-area NASA subcontractor for possible contract overcharges, authorities say.

The Omniplan Corp., with about 200 workers, produces graphic and technical documents for the Rockwell Space Operations Co. Rockwell, NASA's largest contractor at the Johnson Space Center, received about $12 million annually in federal funding.

The FBI conducted a search at Omniplan's offices on Thursday and seized a truckload of documents.

An unidentified congressional source told the Houston Chronicle Omniplan is suspected of submitting overcharges to Rockwell for the lease of office space in Clear Lake.

William Hager, the assistant director for investigations in the NASA inspector general's office said Thursday's action was part of an ongoing investigation into contract fraud.

Karen Broussard, a spokeswoman for the U.S. attorney's office in Houston confirmed that an investigation was being conducted, but refused to provide details.

Omniplan officials would not comment Friday.

Buy Rockwell said it was terminating two contracts with Omniplan immediately.

Midland ISD trustee Gary Willis was among 35 Texas school board members gathering in El Paso recently to discuss the board's role in promoting multicultural understanding between schools and families. The trustee met in El Paso for the fourth of five training sessions in the new Texas Association of School Boards (TASB) education leadership program, Leadership TASB.

"Valuing diversity" was the common thread that linked the program's sessions, which began with "Understand Diversity Through the Legal and Professional Responsibilities of Policymakers." Maria Montano-Harmon, Ph.D., California State University professor of secondary education and linguistics, led the discussion, explaining the important function school boards play in building cultural bridges between schools and communities.

LETTER FROM COLLEGE

About 200 students to participate in MC's commencement ceremony

By H.A. Tuck

Friday night about 200 students will participate in the 20th annual Midland College Commencement ceremony. The event begins at 7 p.m. in the Al G. Langford Chaparral Center.

Tuck

Before the event, thousands of students will be sweating out final exams to conclude the 1993 Spring Semester.

There isn't a graduation speaker this year. Instead, college president David E. Daniel is going to talk for a few minutes about the Chaparral Circle Endowment Fund, the new Ex-Students' Association, and the success of some former students.

For a change, the starting dates of the Summer Interim session and both Summer sessions are being delayed by a week.

MC is finishing earlier than most other colleges and universities and almost a month earlier than the public schools. That means some of the college's potential customers for the summer sessions aren't going to be available for a while.

This year's three-week Interim Session begins May 17 and ends June 3. Registration is at 8 a.m. on May 17 with classes meeting four hours per day Monday through Thursday.

Summer I begins with registration on June 7. Classes start June 8 and end July 13. Summer II starts with a registration July 14, with classes from July 15-Aug. 19.

More information and all the course listings for the summer sessions are available by consulting the summer bulletin, which is available at the Student Services area of the Student Center. The bulletin also will be inserted into the May 9 issue of the Reporter-Telegram. The summer bulletin also lists all the Continuing Education classes being offered this summer, along with the registration scheduled for the popular Kids' College sessions. Registration for both sessions of Kids' College will be May 19. Session I is June 14-24 and Session II is July 12-22. Kids' College is open to children who have completed first through sixth grades.

If you need other information, you should call 685-4501 for credit course answers and 685-4518 for Continuing Education and Kids' College details.

If you plan on seeing the 1993 Spring Student Art Show ... HURRY! Today is the final day for the exhibit of water colors, drawings, paintings, ceramics, sculpture, collage, and photography done by current students. Some of these students are extremely talented, while others are just beginning to emerge.

The show may be seen in the McCormick Gallery, Allison Fine Arts Building, from 1-5 p.m.

This is the final show of the academic year for the gallery. Another series of exhibitions begins next September.

Special thanks to Dan Buckley, gallery director, for all his hard work in locating and arranging for the shows, getting them up, getting them down, and often getting them shipped to other locales.

Pets and their people are great combinations. The college's Veterinary Technology Program is presenting Animal Health and Appreciation Day next Saturday, May 8, from 10 a.m.-6 p.m. It's being held at the County Extension Building, 4425 East Highway 80 ... and it's free.

Among many other attractions, there'll be animal health exhibits, animal care demonstrations, pet contests, art displays about pets done by elementary students, hourly drawings for prizes and much, much more.

Steve Betton, DVM, director of the college's Vet Tech Program, and his students have put this together, organizing a large activity very well in their limited spare time.

You can even have your picture taken with your pet for a very nominal fee.

Contests include "pet-human look-alikes", "Ugliest Dog", "Best Pet Trick" and a "Cute Kitten Photo Contest". One caution: all pets must be on leash or in carrier to attend.

Chaparral golfers have but one task left in a remarkable season. That is to repeat as Division I champions in the National Junior College Athletic Association's national tournament. The Division I teams are playing again at Scottsdale, Ariz. on the McCormick Ranch Resorts course.

The tournament is June 8-11 for the 72-hole event on the same course where the Chaps took their first-ever men's golf title after having finished second in 1991 when the tournament was played in Midland.

The MC golfers have been dominating most of the events played this year. The number one player, Stephen Dundas, won the British Amateur title last summer and played in the 1993 Masters Tournament at Augusta, Ga., last month. But Dundas finds plenty of competition among his teammates. Dundas is slated to play in the British Open later this summer and also has accepted a personal invitation from Jack Nicklaus to play another PGA event in Ohio later this spring.

Continuing Education courses are just about finished for this semester. You could register for a four-week Nurse Aide Training course, a Real Estate class, or Swing Dance II. The Nurse Aide Training begins May 3 and ends May 27. The course meets from 8 a.m.-1:30 p.m. Monday through Thursday and costs $271. The real estate review class meets May 8-9 from 8:30 a.m.-5 p.m. at a cost of $99. The Swing Dance II class meets for three weeks on Monday and Wednesday from 7:30-9 p.m. for a fee of $28.

Register at the Continuing Education Office, Administration Building, or call 685-4518 to register by credit card or to obtain other information.

Oh yes, MC offers two Defensive Driving Courses each week. The same registration information applies.

H.A. Tuck is public relations director for Midland College.

"Do some homes really save more energy than others?"

Yes, just look for an Energy Action Home with a heat pump. It's built to save energy and provide year round comfort.

In summer, the heat pump pumps heat out of your house and replaces it with cool air.

In winter, it uses the solar heat trapped in the earth's atmosphere to keep your house warm and comfortable, even on the coldest days.

Which means you save on energy, natural resources and your monthly bill.

So, if you're looking for savings, look for the Energy Action sign.

By earning first division ratings in both concert and sight-reading, as well as in marching contest last fall, the Lee High School honor band earned a sweepstakes trophy at UIL competition in Odessa recently. This was the band's 23rd consecutive sweepstakes award.

For its program, the honor band performed Washington Grays by Grafulla, Colas Breugnon Overture by Kabelevsky, and the Mass and Carnival movements of Reed's La Fiesta Mexicana.

"Excellent French horn work today," Judge Bill Dean said. "Beautiful phrasing, and above all else, so well in tune — Wow!"

Dean was equally complimentary of the entire band.

"Beautiful band on stage," he said. "Excellent mature sounds, and fine control of quality. I like the dynamic contrast."

Judge Paul Orosello commented on the "nice light march style, yet played with agressiveness."

"Its obvious that a lot of hard work has gone into Colas," he said.

Odessa High, Permian, and Midland High also performed at the contest. All received first division ratings in concert and MHS earned a II in sight reading. Lee's symphonic (non-varsity) band participated the day before and earned second division ratings in both concert and sight-reading. The only sweepstakes band at the non-varsity level was Lee Freshman.

Directors of LHS bands are Randy Storie and Duane Young.

Concealed weapon bill refuses to die

By John Powers
Reporter-Telegram Austin bureau

AUSTIN — Will Texans get to vote on whether to allow citizens to carry concealed handguns? It looks doubtful, but the "right-to-carry" bill is one that refuses to die.

And while legislators can argue whether the proposal would result in more gun deaths, they agree that continued debate would result in the death of other bills they would like to see become law this session.

The House approved the bill April 26 by a 95-47 margin, with House Speaker Pete Laney not voting and six members absent. One House seat is vacant.

Gov. Ann Richards said she would veto the bill if it cleared the Legislature. It would take a two-thirds majority, or 100 of 150 House members, to override a veto.

Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock said the Senate would not waste time debating a bill that would not survive the governor's veto.

The Senate approved a similar bill in 1991, but it died in the House when the session ended before it came up for a vote.

Supporters could pick up the additional five votes needed to override a veto from members who were absent, or they might even be able to change the minds of a few opponents.

But that is not likely, and voting patterns indicate that even the 95 votes in favor are not firm. As supporters tried to beat back amendments that would weaken the bill, they were able to muster only 75 to 80 votes on their side.

The bill may have picked up a few votes when lawmakers added an amendment requiring a statewide referendum on Nov. 2 before the measure could take effect.

But the bill also had a few votes from lawmakers who were "shooting a blank," said Rep. Zeb Zbranek, D-Winnie.

Legislators who otherwise opposed the bill could vote for it — for the record back home — knowing it would not survive a veto, Zbranek said.

Also, the Texas Constitution makes no reference to binding referendums — only to constitutional amendments.

Secretary of State John Hannah later said the referendum portion of the bill would not pass court muster.

If the bill made it through the Legislature, but voters turned it down, the courts likely would rule the referendum illegal. The bill would become law and only the referendum amendment would be removed.

The bill's sponsor, Rep. Ron Wilson, D-Houston, then announced he would try to get around the governor's veto threat by proposing a constitutional amendment that would allow citizens to carry guns.

If the House and Senate approved HB 1776, and the constitutional amendment, that would bypass the governor. The amendment would not go on the ballot until November 1994.

Wilson said he was using the maneuver so the Senate might go ahead and vote on the bill.

However, he still would face the task of getting 100 votes in the House, because a constitutional amendment requires a two-thirds majority.

Bullock said he would reconsider his decision not to debate the bill in the Senate, if the House approved the constitutional amendment. But he said he wasn't sure that would happen.

"If this bill is doomed, then we should devote no more time to it," he said. Sen. Kenneth Armbrister, D-Victoria, who had agredd to carry Wilson's gun bill in the Senate, said he would not sponsor the proposed constitutional amendment.

Debate on the controversial measure would hold up other important legislation, particularly with the threat of a filibuster, Armbrister said.

Meanwhile, hundreds of bills face a lingering death on the House calendar.

Debate on the gun bill took almost eight hours, spread over two days. During that time, the House could have voted on probably two dozen or more non-controversial bills.

Rep. Mark Stiles, D-Beaumont, chairman of the House Calendars Committee, said dozens of bills in his committee are near death, "gasping for breath like a fish out of water."

More debate on concealed handgun legislation would ensure there isn't enough time for other bills to make it to the floor before the Legislature adjourns May 31.

Thirty-seven other states allow citizens to carry handguns, but two polls in Texas reported 65 and 70 percent of voters surveyed opposed a concealed weapons bill.

The National Rifle Association is pushing the bill, while the Texas Police Chiefs Association and the Texas Council on Family Violence oppose it.

West Texas family sees 18th graduation

Associated Press

LORAINE, Texas (AP) — The look of pride and a little sadness in the eyes of Lydia Alvarez is no different from that of other mothers whose child is about to graduate from high school.

Mrs. Alvarez, though, has grown accustomed to that look. When her son, Fabian, graduates May 28, he will be the last of the Alvarez children to do so. There were 17 before him.

Fabian's graduation is special to his mother and to his father, Anastacio. His plans to attend Angelo State University next fall are special, too. If he didn't, he would be the only Alvarez child not to go on to college. Nine have earned college degrees, one has a master's, and more diplomas are on the way.

A retired teacher who taught some of the children, Irene Preston, recalls them fondly.

"They were all real smart and they were all real nice," she said.

No other compliments could make Anastacio, 69, and Lydia, 63, happier. They sum up what the parents tried to instill in their children. One son, Sammy of Sweetwater, recalled that early in his life, his father said, "we would have an education even if he had to go barefoot."

Today, Anastacio Alvarez' dream for his family has come true — and his feet are not bare.

No one in the family ever had to go without shoes or any other essentials although times were not easy. Their father is a farmer, and up until about 10 years ago he also worked at the cotton gin. And family members are quick to point out their mother's numerous contributions to making the large group run smoothly.

"It took a woman as dedicated as my mom was to help out," Sammy said. "He (Anastacio) couldn't have done it by himself."

Just keeping the family going from day to day was quite an accomplishment. But the parents' emphasis on education and the payoff from their encouragement is the real story of the Alvarez family's achievement.

Neither Anastacio nor Lydia, both Mitchell County natives, graduated from high school. Anastacio soon realized that with an education he could have gotten a better job and more money. When he and Lydia married in 1947 and began their family a year later, Anastacio knew what he wanted for their future — education.

"That was my priority when I got married," he said.

When the firstborn child, Anastacio Jr., went to school, he set off a chain reaction of learning in the Alvarez family. Spanish was spoken at home until Anastacio Jr., now 44, entered first grade. As the other children came along and went to school, English became the primary language at home, even for the parents.

"We turned into a bilingual family," Sammy said.

Almost every year since then, the Alvarez name has appeared in the list of top graduates at Loraine High School.

Although school work apparently wasn't too difficult for any of the children, coming from such a large family sometimes posed problems. Staying out of trouble was a must.

"You always watched what you did at school because you knew someone would tell," said David, 35. "There was no place to hide."

And, of course, comparisons were inevitable. The second oldest child, Daniel, 43, and Sammy attended Howard College at the same time. One day two letters arrived at the family home from the school. One concerned Daniel and one concerned Sammy.

Daniel, the first valedictorian in the family, had been named to Who's Who in American Junior Colleges. Sammy had been named to the academic probation list.

Their father opened Daniel's letter first. After seeing what Sammy had "accomplished," Anastacio remarked, "the other boy I was proud of."

Being the last in the family had its advantages for Fabian. His older siblings insist he got away with things they never dreamed of, but those aren't the advantages Fabian talks about.

In school, he constantly heard, "You're so-and-so's brother."

"It was an honor for me for people to say that," Fabian said.

Back at home, everyone did his part in the daily family operation. From his stint in the Army, Dad taught the kids how to do "military corners" when making their beds — a job required by everyone each morning. And Lydia lived and taught "re cycling" long before it became a household word.

"She had a knack for putting leftovers together and coming up with a new casserole," Sammy said.

Even leftover ice cubes were recycled into water for plants.

As efficiently as the family operated, there were moments of confusion. Sammy recalled that some times when his mother was mad at him, she would shake her finger at him and say in an exasperated voice, "Sam, David, Joe, you, you — you know who I'm talking about!"

'As I look at my life and wonder what could have been different without Mom, what comes to mind the strongest is my faith in God. She influenced by words as well as by example.'

Mike,
an Alvarez son

Other fond memories of home life include the strong emphasis on religion. Members of St. Ann's Catholic Church in Colorado City, the Alvarez family had a daily rosary recitation. One son, Mike, 30, wrote a letter of recollections about his family.

"As I look at my life and wonder what could have been different without Mom, what comes to mind the strongest is my faith in God," he wrote. "She influenced by words as well as by example."

Lydia agrees that her religious beliefs helped guide her in raising her family.

"I wouldn't have made it without God," she said.

Fabian's upcoming graduation brings part of the Alvarez family's life to a close. And his mother doesn't mind admitting she's a little bit emotional about not having a child in the house.

"I'm going to feel lonesome," she said.

People may shake their heads in amazement at Anastacio and Lydia Alvarez' achievement. They had little money and a lot of family. They had a deep love for that family and a determination that their children would have the education they missed.

Anastacio and Lydia Alvarez have much to be proud of.

"Looking back, I don't even know how I did it," Mrs. Alvarez said.

MHMR recognizes MC nursing director

Staff report

Celia Harris, director of the Midland College Associate Degree Nursing Program, has been recognized by the Texas Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation (TXMHMR) and the TXMHMR Nurse Practice Organization.

Ms. Harris, R.N., M.S.N., Ed.D., was honored at the annual nurse administrator conference for her numerous contributions to TXMHMR during the past four years.

From 1989 through 1992, Ms. Harris served as a member of a special task force for the agency which was charged with promoting public academic linkages.

This intitiative was overwhelmingly successful. Following completion of the task force assignment, TXMHMR organized its first agency-wide nurse practice organization.

Ms. Harris was asked to serve as a charter member of the TXMHMR Nurse Practice Organization Executive Council as a representative from academia.

She was recognized, in particular, for the consultation she provided to nursing schools interested in forming academic affiliations with TXMHMR and community centers. Capitalizing on her positive experiences as a Midland College faculty member taking nursing students to Big Spring State Hospital for psychiatric clinical rotations, Ms. Harris was able to provide practical and useful consultation in developing the academic linkages.

Ms. Harris also has been active in promoting professionalism in nursing within the TXMHMR systems, contributing to a number of articles and making a presentation at a national conference for nurses working in developmental disabilities settings.

Ms. Harris earned her Associate in Applied Science degree from Odessa College, her B.S.N. from West Texas State University; her M.S. from the University of Texas at Austin; and her Ed.D. from Nova University. After extensive work in nursing and as a nursing instructor, she came to Midland College in 1981 as director of the Associate Degree Nursing program which was to start the following year. She left that position to return to the ADN faculty while competing work on her doctorate. She was asked to reassume the director's position again last year. She has announced her intention to retire from Midland College in December, 1993.

NOTICE

The Housing Authority of the City of Monahans, Texas (hereafter called the Local Authority-LA) will receive sealed bids for a single construction contract for the modernization of 11 dwelling units, office building, and site work and parking lot, demolition work, plumbing, and electrical work at Project TEX 408-002 and all work specified and/or shown on the drawing until Thursday, May 27, 1993, 10:00 a.m. C.D.S.T. Authority Office, Monahans, Texas at which time and place all bids will be publicly opened and read aloud.

Proposed forms of contract documents; including plans and specifications are on file and available for inspection at the office of the Housing Authority of the City of Monahans, Texas, 209 S. Dwight, Monahans, Texas 79756, 915/943-5962 and the office of Fields & Associates Architects, Inc., 2817 Parkway, Building C, Suite 202, Odessa, Texas 79762, 915/367-4829, and at plan rooms in various cities of the state.

Copies of the documents so obtained by depositing $50.00 (checks made payable to the Monahans Housing Authority) with the Architect for each set of documents so obtained. Such deposits will be refunded on return of the plans, specifications and other documents in good condition within 10 days after bid opening.

A certified check or bank draft, payable to the LA, US Government bonds, or a satisfactory bid bond executed by the bidder and acceptable surety in an amount equal to five percent (5%) of the bid shall be submitted with each bid. Also two (2) original signed copies of HUD 2530 "Previous Participation Certificate" shall be included with bid documents.

The successful bidder will be required to furnish and pay for satisfactory performance and payment bond or bonds.

Attention is called to the provisions for Equal employment Opportunity as set forth in these documents.

Attention is called to the fact that not less than the minimum salaries and wages as set forth in the specifications must be paid on this project.

The LA reserves the right to reject any or all bids and to waive any informalities in the bidding.

No bid shall be withdrawn for a period of ninety (90) days subsequent to the opening of bids without consent of the LA.

DOES YOUR TEACHER DESERVE AN "A"?

Teacher Appreciation Week is the perfect time to tell your teacher he or she deserves an "A" grade. Your teacher's "A" grade printed in The Midland Reporter-Telegram is the perfect way to let them know how much you appreciate him or her!

All entries will be printed on a special page honoring the grade "A" teachers on Friday, May 7.

The teacher receiving the most "A's" will receive a dozen red roses and a complimentary dinner for two. In case of a tie, we will conduct a drawing.

The cost is only $3 per entry

To give your "A" grade, complete the form below, using 15 words or less to tell why your teacher deserves an "A". Mail or bring your entry to The Midland Reporter-Telegram Classified Dept. by 4 p.m. Wednesday, May 5, and include your $3 per entry.

And would some pretty story tell
Or kiss the place to make it well?
My mother.

Jane Taylor
(1783-1824)

Wish your Mother a Happy Mother's Day on Sunday, May 9th.

On Sunday, May 9th we will publish messages from children all over the city of Midland. To get your Mother's Day message published, simply tell us in approximately 45-50 words why you love your mother and what makes her special to you. Send us your message on a 3x5 card and be sure to include your name and age as well as your mother's name.

The cost is $7.50 for a 1 inch ad under a special heading for Mother's Day. The deadline for this page is Thursday, May 6th at 5:00 p.m. Send or come by The Midland Reporter-Telegram, 201 Illinois, Midland, TX 79701.

For more information call 687-8813.

HOMES & CLASSIFIED

A TOUCH OF CHARM

This wonderful custom built home lends a little bit of classic period charm to one of the more prestigious neighborhoods in Midland.

Although only four years old this house gives an impression of timeless elegance as soon as one walks up the front path.

The first thing that one notices is just how light and airy the house is; the front door opens into a lobby area which shares its high vaulted ceiling with the main living area. The spacious lobby area has its own large closet and plenty of space for a hall table providing comfort and convenience.

The high ceiling in the living area sets the tone for the whole house. Pale pastels on the walls and floors emphasize the space and coolness of the room. Period detailing on the woodwork gives an ageless Southern flavor.

When the weather turns nasty the tiled fireplace provides a stylish focal-point for this comfortable family home. Flanked by windows overlooking the pretty yard, it adds to the relaxed feel.

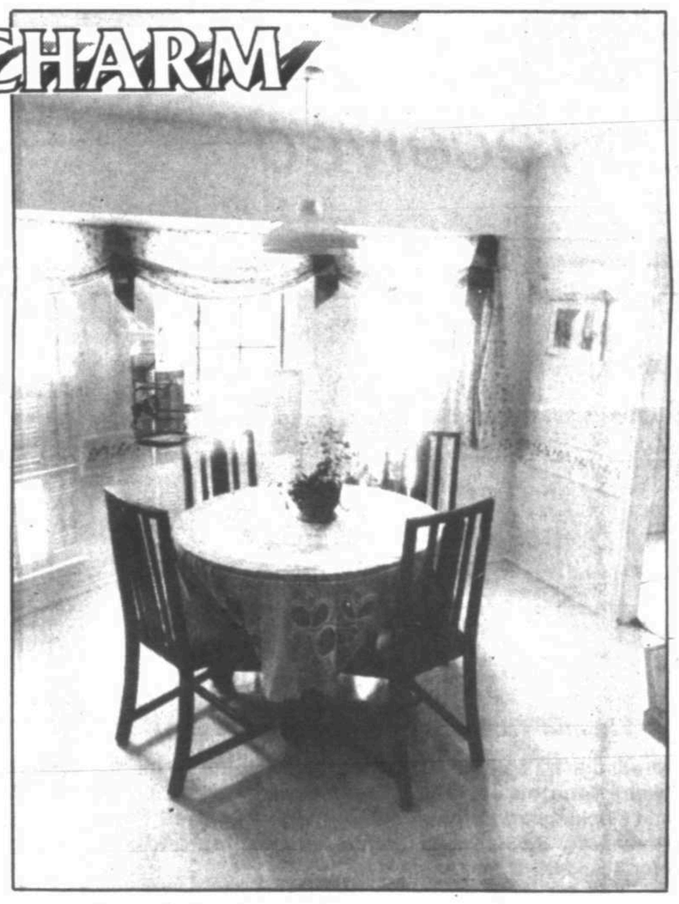

Gourmets will be especially pleased with the wonderful dine-in kitchen. With a dining area set into a bay window complete with louvered shutters it is perfectly positioned to catch the morning sun. The woodwork details follow the pattern that has been set throughout the house with pretty pastel colors.

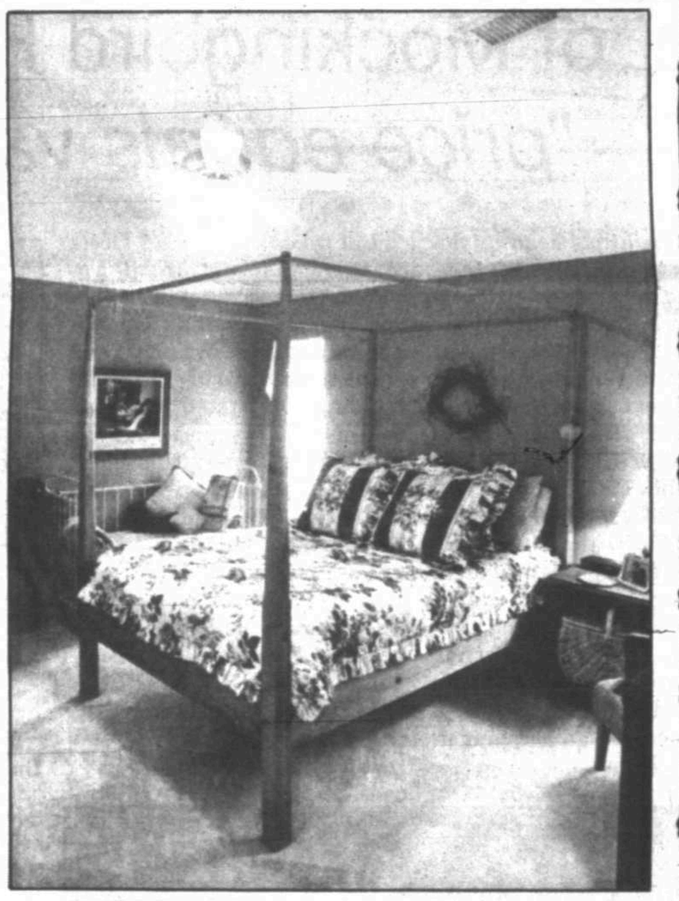

An elegant L-shaped counter follows the length of the room and has recessed amenities built in. A good sized garage with adjacent utility room leads off from the kitchen providing space for two cars plus plenty of storage space.

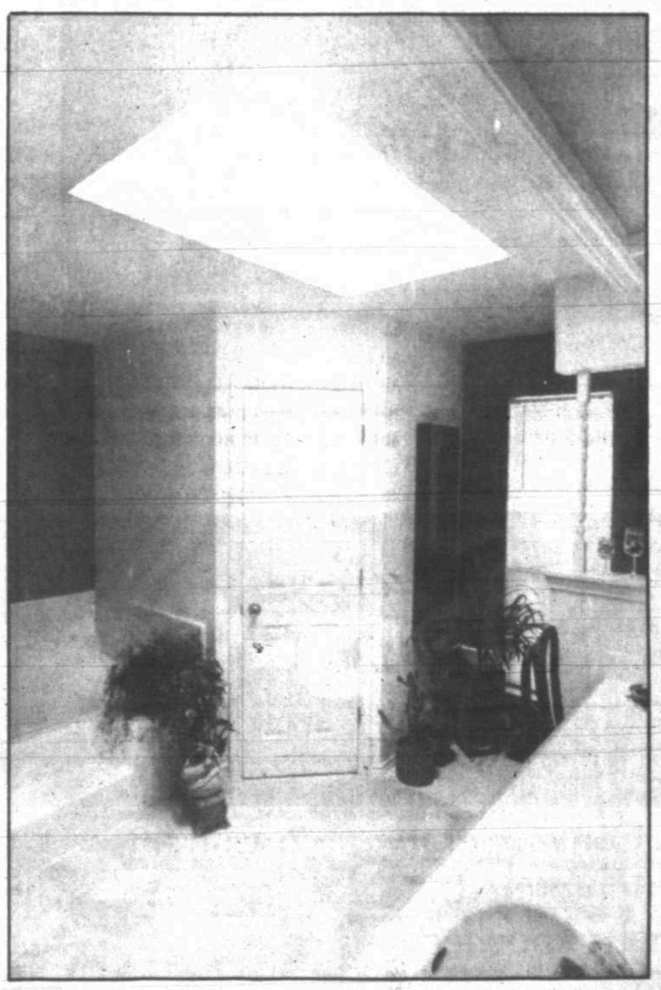

The bedrooms and bathrooms are set on the other side of the house. Connected by a hall they feature two bedrooms ideal for children which share a pretty bathroom. Built in cabinets and facilities are finished in scrubbed wood for that extra touch of luxury.

The big master bedroom has a similar ceiling to the front room and leaves plenty of room even for people who like large four-poster beds. The master bathroom is luxurious to an extreme; from the elegant white tiled vanity area through the sunken bath and separate shower to the high skylight which floods the room with natural light providing a haven for plants and people alike. Large built in closets and mirrors complete the picture.

This beautiful home will be open for viewing today, May 2nd from 2 through 4pm. For more information call Beverly Dwyer - 683-5333.

American Home Week marks first-time-buyer opportunities

Kay Sutton

"With low interest rates, modest appreciation in home prices and continuing gains in family income, the Baby Boom generation, those born between 1946 and 1964, is discovering that now is the best time to buy that first home, "says Kay Sutton, president of Midland Association of REALTORS, Inc.

During "American Home Week," May 3 through May 9, the Midland Association of REALTORS, Inc., encourages all Americans to reflect upon the value of home ownership and its importance to the stability of our society. "Housing has always been and continues to be one of the highest personal and social priorities in this country," Sutton explains. "Decent and affordable housing is considered essential to the quality of life for all. By becoming homeowners, people acquire personal incentives to work for better neighborhoods, toward less crime, better education and greater family stability."

Should first-time buyers wait for interest rates to drop slightly further? "No, they should buy that first home now," Sutton recommends. "They can begin to reap the appreciation, tax and other benefits that have made home ownership so desirable throughout our history. America is one of the most home-owning nations ever; nearly two-thirds of us live in our own homes."

Baby Boomers constitute one-third of the population; 75 million Americans. Along with practically everything else in America, they are changing the profile of the first-time homebuyer. Baby Boomers are better educated and economically more sophisticated than their parents. They see a home not only as a basic necessity, but as a sound investment and an expression of their individualality.

With two incomes assured, the "new" typical American family can easily satisfy its housing needs. A National Association of Realtors homebuyer survey, which reveals that two-income families purchase more than one-half of all homes sold in the United States today, confirms that fact.

"Baby Boomers have discovered real estate," Sutton says. "They understand that real estate traditionally has outperformed all other investments over the long run and they want to participate. But economics only tells part of their housing story. The Baby Boomer lifestyle of smaller families and great expectations is having a profound effect on the housing market."

Their demands are contributing, for example, to significant renovations of our older urban areas. Innovative developments in New Orleans, New York, and other big cities now provide exciting housing opportunities in former warehouses, textile factories and other buildings long thought to have outlived their usefulness. Baby Boomers are helping change the face of urban America.

But as they and their families expand, they won't stray far from their parents' footsteps either. "They want to fulfill the dream of a single-family home in a good neighborhood," Sutton says.

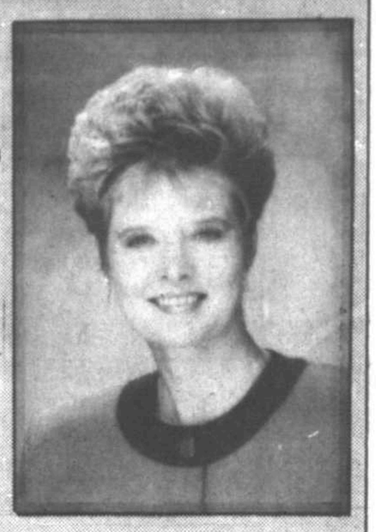

"They look to life in the suburbs, with all the advantages of public schools, quiet streets and convenient shopping as the place to raise children."

As they approach retirement, Baby Boomers also will create increased demand for the types of planned retirement - with all the amenities - that America's senior citizens have come to expect and enjoy over the last 20 years.

The challenge for the Baby Boom generation is to take advantage of today's favorable home buying conditions and get on the housing ladder. Now is the opportune time for them to begin to realize the American dream of home ownership.

The Midland Association of REALTORS, Inc., is one of more than 1,800 local boards and association of Realtors nationwide that comprise the National Association of Realtors. Understanding your homeowner's insurance

Jan Melton

Most Texas homeowners do not understand the coverages and conditions of a homeowners insurance policy. Often there ar exclusions that the homeowner is not aware of until a casualty happens. Homeowners should study their policies and question the insurance carrier on any provisions they do not understand. Here are the basic principles of property insurance to help you better understand your homeowners' policy:

First, insurance is purchased to cover two risks: casualty and liability. A casualty or loss is sudden and unexpected, such as fire, storm and other natural disasters. Theft damage and property damage are also considered casualties.

A liability occurs when the homeowner is legally obligated to protect another person from injury or another's property from damage. To obtain casualty or liability insurance, the purchaser must have insurable interest (purchaser would suffer loss or be legally liable)>

In Texas, all homeowners policies are promulgated by the State Board of Insurance; all policies are alike.

The State Board of Insurance also regulates rates in insurance carrier may charge for a policy. This allows homeowners to shop best rates and be selective in choosing a stable insurance carrier.

Since policies are alike, the purchaser must personalize by purchasing needed endorsements.

Casualty policies have coverage ion one of two forms or in combination: specified peril and all risk. A specified peril specifies the types of perils (causes of loss). All risk policy describes the types of perils excluded-not insured-to the inclusion of all others.

The actual insurance contract contains (not in any order) five basic parts: declarations, endorsements, perils insured against, exclusions and conditions.

The front page which summarizes the policy's coverage and cost, and provisions is the declaration page.

Endorsements provide additional coverage tot eh policy upon the homeowners request, of course there is additional premium charge.

The loss caused by an insured peril is often referred to as perils insured against.

Exclusions are the restrictions, limitations and denials of coverage a policy may have.

The homeowner policy has three parts relating to conditions; conditions affecting the insurer's obligations for casualty losses, liability claims, and both casualty losses and liability claims.

Bill Brown, homebuilder, co-developer of Mockingbird Heights boasts "price equals value received"

Bill Brown has been in the construction business since 1960 and has been building homes in Midland since 1981. Currently he is building in Mockingbird Heights where he and Gilbert Bates are the developers. His homes are in the 3,100 to 4,100 square foot range. Bill actually designs all of his homes then lets his architect draw the blueprints. His ideas for room layouts and finish work come from magazines as well as visiting new homes in Dallas and other cities. Brown is probably the only builder that has built a spec home with a basement in Midland.

Bill takes pride in all facets of the construction of his homes. Only the best materials and appliances will be found in his structures. When asked about his philosophy on homebuilding, Bill stated "I always ask myself this question, "If I were going to buy this home would I feel the price equals the value received?" Also, I build homes for the man and woman because children come and go. That's the reason I put a lot of built-ins in the master bedroom." As each home nears completion Bill's wife Rosemary starts planning the interior decorating. "She is a real plus to my busi ness because she has a unique talent for color coordinating" Brown remarked.

This 4 bedroom, 3 1/2 bath, 3 car garage home located at 3930 Baybrook in Mockingbird Heights has approximately 3,650 sq. ft. and sells for $214,900. It features elaborate built-ins in the master bedroom and a storm protection closet with stressed concrete walls and ceiling and a metal door.

Bill Brown, homebuilder, makes a final check of the kitchen before he is satisfied that all aspects of the home meets his approval.

Mockingbird Heights is located north of Loop 250 off Midland Drive on Mockingbird Lane. This area is on a high hill and provides safety from heavy rains that would flood most other areas in Midland. In addition a drainage system has been incorporated to insure additional removal of water from the terrain. The development is planned for three phases. Phase 1 should be completely built within 18 months to 2 years. When all three phases are completed there will be 400 plus homes in the development. Homes built built in Mockingbird Heights are on the top side of the market ranging from $200,000 to $300,000. In addition to Bill Brown and Gilbert Bates, other builders in the development include James Morris, M.R. Lary and Paul West. The home featured is located at 3930 Baybrook and is listed by Dene Kelly Realtors, 2302 W. Wadley. Call 687-0595 for a private showing of this home.

HOME SWEET INVESTMENT

A home is where you and your family are most often together. It's enjoyment and memories of this that can make selling a home traumatic.

A house, on the other hand, is real estate. It's property. It's walls and a roof. It's a commodity.

REALTORS®, members of our local board of REALTORS® and the NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF REALTORS®, know the difference between a home and a house. These real estate professionals are sensitive to what a home means to a buyer. Yet, they'll work hard to help you sell your home with minimum delay for every dollar it's worth.

Only REALTORS® have agreed to adhere to the strict Code of Ethics of the NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF REALTORS®. This obligates them to be fair to all parties involved in a transaction. That's why they'll help make one of your most important investments—one of your best investments.

DELIVERY
MOONLIGHTING!
The Midland Reporter-Telegram has several distributorships which need to be filled with responsible individuals

OFTEN ASKED QUESTIONS:

Is it worthwhile for adults also?
Yes! Our current distributor force is already 90% adult and 10% youth. Morning newspaper routes are attractive for:
- ADULTS who have full-time jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job.
- MOTHERS who can't justify a small job and daycare, because as a distributor, you do not need daycare!
- STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
- SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added income, or just want to work with people, neighbors, and friends.

How much money can I make as a distributor?
Depending on the size of distributorship from $300 to $700 monthly! Some make even more!

How long does it take?
The actual delivery takes 1-2 hours Monday-Saturday, and 2-3 hours on Sunday, again depending on the size of the distributorship. Also, a few hours a month are needed to collect from subscribers. Many distributors choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in subsribers' papers. Collecting in person will be necessary though!

When do papers have to be delivered by?
6 a.m. Monday-Friday and 7 a.m. on Saturday, Sunday and holidays.

Do I ever get a day off?
The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, distributors do take days off by finding a friend or a family member to substitute a for them!

RESERVE YOUR DISTRIBUTORSHIP NOW!
$100.00 deposit required

Serving 54 counties in West Texas and New Mexico

BRIEFING

Steady prices

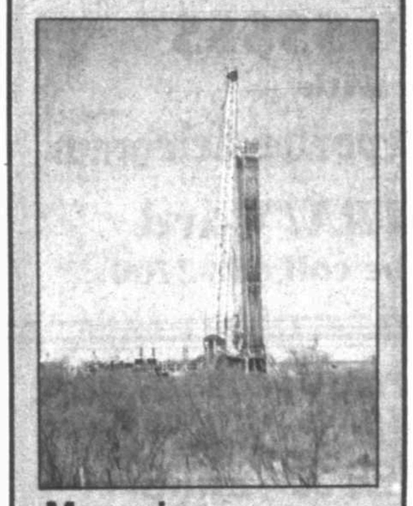

A rusted tank near Spraberry, creates an interesting pattern of colors and texture.

Oil prices on the New York Mercantile Exchange traded in a narrow range this week as there was little news to move the market sharply up or down. Inventory figures from the American Petroleum Institute met trader expections, leaving traders free to turn attention again to the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

June contracts for delivery of West Texas Intermediate held around $20.19 late in the week.

Abilene publication

The Abilene Geological Society has completed publication of an update of stratigraphic distribution of oil and gas fields in the Abilene area. The publication features an index map of each county followed by maps that show production distribution from important stratigraphic horizons within the county. Also included are production statistics reflecting field, horizon, number of wells, discovery date and cumulative production. For information call (915) 673-7310.

More rigs

A Hurt rig making hole near Midkiff.

Baker Hughes Inc. reported an increase in both the Permian Basin and U.S. rig counts during the week ended April 23.

In the Permian Basin, the count inched up three to 100 and is above the year-ago tally of 88.

Nationwide, the count gained five to 608 during the week and remains below the year-ago levelof 623.

Among major oil producing states, Texas was unchanged for the week.

A centuryof oil

Friends, employees and guests helped Hanley Petroleum celebrate its 100th birthday this week with a barbecue at the company yard near Midkiff.

The company was formed in 1893 at Bradford Pennsylvania by W.L. Hanley, a farmer from Toronto Canada.

The company was established in West Texas at Abilene in 1951 and later joined the Spraberry boom in 1954.

Today the company produces 2500 barrels of oil per day and 30 million cubic feet of natural gas.

Coiled tubing program set

Staff report

Coiled tubing is increasingly becoming a major technology in the Permian Basin oilpatch, and Midland College will offer a new courses to acquaint producers, engineers and others with its applications and possibilities.

Since 1985, coiled tubing technology has steadily grown in integrity and popularity and is poised to displace many of the operations performed by conventional workover and drilling rigs.

Midland College's Petroleum Technology Program will sponsor the 27-hour course which is entitled "Coiled Tubing Utilization and Design," and is set to begin Tuesday, May 11.

Larry Adams, a Petroleum Engineer with Chevron USA Production Company in Midland, is serving as the main lecturer for the course.

Adams is acknowledged as one of a few multifaceted experts in the industry and one of the leaders in application of coiled tubing technology, including establishment of a 20,500-foot world record for permanent coiled tubing installation.

His work has been featured through articles in the Oil & Gas Journal, Petroleum Engineer International, Society of Petroleum Engineers, and Oil Gas European magazines. Adams has delivered presentations to the DEA-67 Forum in Houston, the 1992 Society of Petroleum Engineers' Annual Technical Conference and Exhibition in Washington, D.C., and a coiled tubing symposium sponsored by World Oil magazine in Houston last month.

Support for the course also has also been obtained from three specialized industry experts who will aid in presenting critical knowledge areas of the course.

Amoco plans to develop CO2 supplies

Staff report

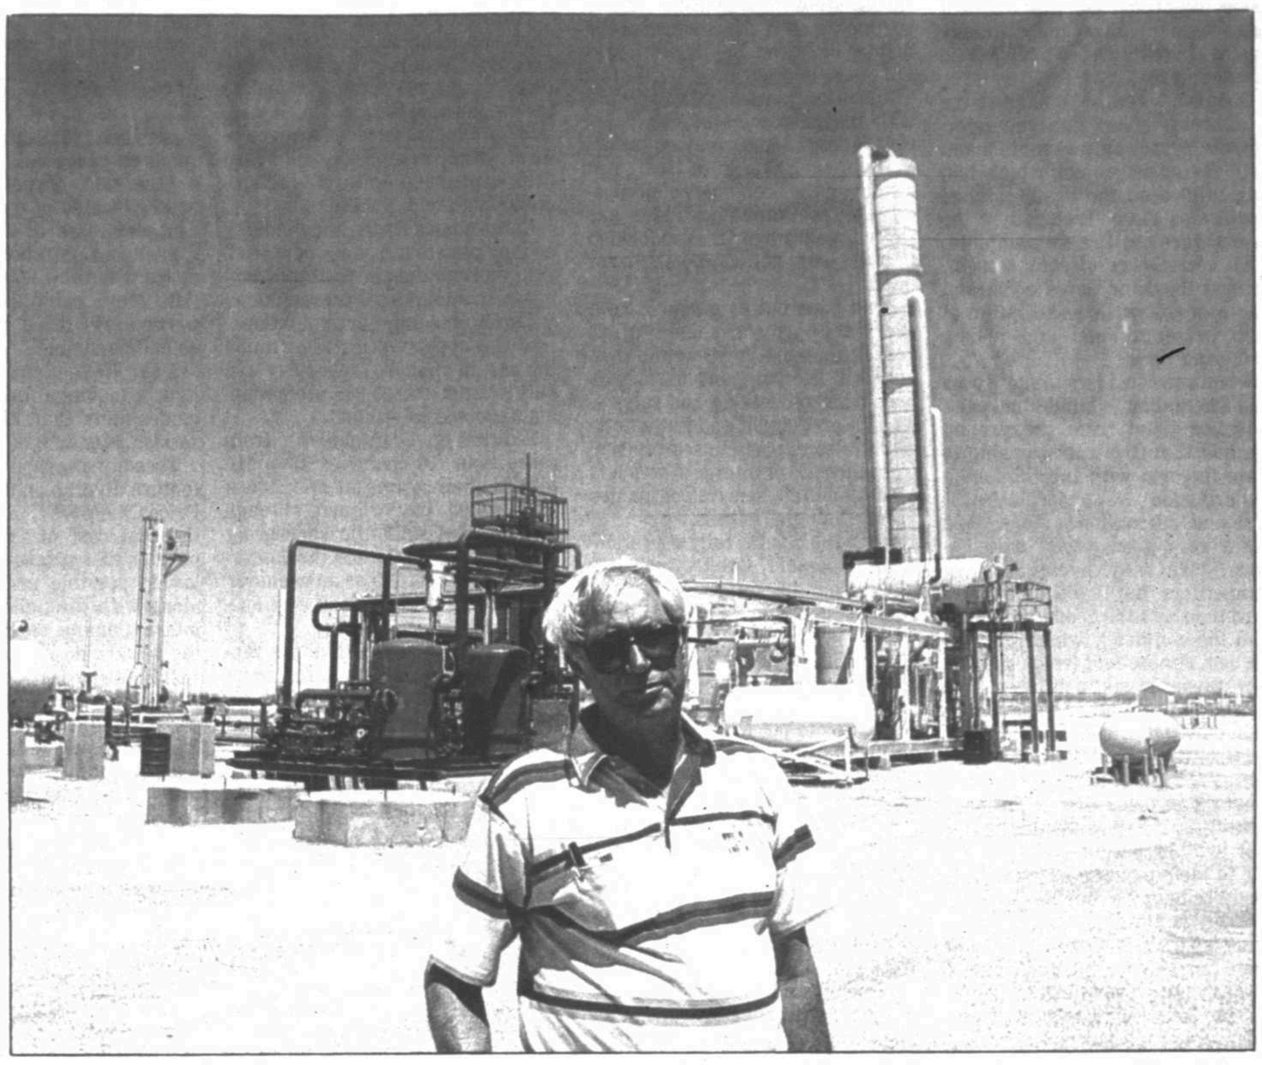

CLAYTON, N.M. — Amoco Production Co. has announced a $26.2 million program to develop additional carbon dioxide supplies in the Bravo Dome Carbon Dioxide Gas Unit in northeast New Mexico.

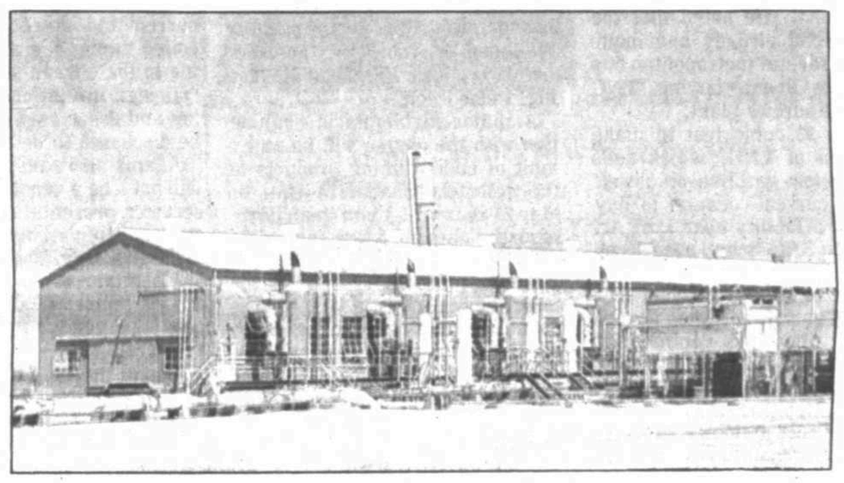

The program will increase production of carbon dioxide, which is used for enhanced oil recovery, by about 80 million cubic feet per day, bringing total production up to about 400 Mmcfd.

Scheduled for completion this year, the Amoco field development program includes the drilling of 56 carbon dioxide wells to an average depth of about 2,500 feet. In addition, Amoco will lay about 90 miles of pipeline to connect these wells, plus 13 previously drilled wells, to the field's gas gathering system.

Amoco also will expand the cooling and dehydration capacity of the facility serving the Bravo Dome unit to better accommodate the additional gas volume.

Amoco initiated this additional development of the Bravo Dome resource to meet demand for carbon dioxide in eastern New Mexico and West Texas, according to Jim Posey, vice president of Amoco's North Permian Basin Business Unit.

James Wright, plant manager for Orbitron, helps oversee the nitrogen rejection unit, back, which could bring new hope for the nitrogen contaminated gas of the Yates formation. New hope offered for Yates gas

■ A nitrogen rejection plant in Andrews County is opening new possibilities for a trillion cubic feet of contaminated gas.

By John Paul Pitts
Business/Oil editor

ANDREWS — Had the shallow, gas-laden Yates formation that blankets most of Andrews and Ector counties come up with a little less nitrogen, it could have been an oil and gas fairy tale — of a trillion cubic feet of reserves, thousands of wells and billions of dollars for Permian Basin producers.

But, alas, it is a different story — of a massive formation laden with almost worthless gas and dangerously high pressures (1600 psi) that some say has caused more drilling rigs to burn than any other formation in West Texas.

Located at 2,700 to 3,100 feet, the Yates has a nitrogen content ranging from 10-31 mole percent, giving it a heating value far below the 1000 Btus needed to make it a commercial fuel.

Considered a worthless waste gas, oil and gas operators drilled slowly and carefully through the formation only to get to the vast San Andres oil reserves in Andrews County. Approximately 9,000 wells have been drilled through the Yates; only a small number have been completed either to supply compressor fuel for gas processing plants or to blend with higher Btu casinghead gas for pipeline sales.

Now, however, thanks to completion of a nitrogen rejection plant which strips nitrogen from the Yates gas to make it salable, producers in the Permian Basin may soon be taking a fresh look at the estimated one trillion cubic feet of Yates gas in Andrews and Ector counties as a means of keeping hundreds of marginal wells alive.

And while no one is willing to talk boom yet, there has been speculation that the plant, which offers a market for Yates gas, could help kick off a significant number of drilling and re-completions in the county and become the catalyst for causing similar plants to be built in the area.

"We have launched a project to take advantage of very large quantities of natural gas that has been considered for years as a nuisance," said Ben Lasseter, vice president of Orbitron Oil & Gas, which recently revitalized the idea of cleaning up Yates gas and making it a viable, salable product.

A subsidary of Orbitron Capital Corp., the oil and gas unit recently signed its first contract with Westar Transmission Co. to deliver pipeline quality gas from the nitrogen rejection facility, which was built on the site of an old Northern Natural Gas compressor station.

The contract, which is the first step to bringing new hope for the Yates, calls for initial delivery of 100 percent of production and take-or-pay up to 10 Mmcfd of gas for $1.60 per Mmbtu, with a provision which allows Orbitron to obtain further price escalations on an annual basis.

JOHN PAUL PITTS

What's real motivation behind Btu tax?

Pitts

Call me paranoid. Call me a redneck, right wing radical. Call me what you will, but I smell political agenda all over Clinton's Btu tax.

When talk first surfaced about a new Clinton energy tax to deal with the national deficit, a gasoline tax was put forward as a means of raising revenue, as was an oil import fee. Also mentioned, as a long shot, was a carbon tax. A Btu tax was so far out in left field, so farfetched, so complicated, inequitable and Carterish that it was not even considered as an option.

So, what are we talking about today? Could it be — an Btu tax?

The next question is: Why an energy tax?

Personally, I suspect the real reason is because the Clintons want it all to finance their leftist political agenda — a Btu tax, an income tax, a new withholding tax and a value-added tax. Further I expect we will see overtures to all of the above taxes being written before the end of their term.

Like the new religion of environmentalism, which has nothing to do with the environment — saving the whales and the ozone, the Btu tax apparently has little to do with reducing the deficit, as some groups have demonstrated. Both are purely about political power and agendas — about who controls America.

It's about political ploys by liberal, social-engineers to gain control of the nation's power centers — the courts, Congress, military, schools, and business — in order to refashion America to their liking. It's about making all Americans get in step with the value system of the politically correct.

While that may be distasteful to those of us on the right, it is not necessarily wrong. In a democratic system, one political bloc or another will always control the power centers. It is the right of Americans to seek power by voting, protesting, preaching, spending, compromising or other legal actions.

So what does that have to do with a Btu tax? Simply put, the Btu tax is seen by many as an attempt to put a ring in the nose of America's cash cow — the energy business and the free enterprise system — just a political ploy to advance an agenda.

Historically, the most difficult power center for the left to control has been American business. When it comes to the world of producing goods and services for free markets, social engineers, leftist academics and utopians have traditionally found themselves on the outside — neither seeking entrance nor being invited into the loop of commerce. This has produced a political polarity that has probably served the nation well.

American politics have been leaning to the left for the past five decades, but the fact that America, alone among nations, has not become a fully functioning socialist nation with total government control and central planning extending into every single facet of American life is probably due to this polarity.

However, put a pervasive tax such as Clinton's Btu tax on all the energy consumed and produced in the nation

YATES: New plant OTC to begin Monday in Houston

(From 1E)

David Kocian, president and CEO of Orbitron Capital Corp., said the delivery of the first gas from the facility was a milestone for the Yates formation and for the company. He said the major reason the nitrogen rejection facility was able to become operational and finally bring to reality the longtime dream of making Yates gas commercial was because of a deep discount given the company by the Dutch bank which owned the facility.

Orbitron was able to acquire the total assets of the nitrogen rejection project for only $4 million and thus revive a project which had originally been the brain child of Regal Gas Corp. Included in the assets were the 41 acre plant site, 8,000 horsepower of compression, several thousand acres of oil and gas leases, 50 wells and 65 miles of high pressure steel and plastic gathering lines.

When one considers that it would cost $25 million to build a nitrogen rejection plant from the ground up, and that Orbitron was able to close the deal with Internationale Nederlanden N.V. for $100,000 cash and $3.9 million in stock, "We got a very good deal," said Kocian. "We may eventually get competitors, but it will be awfully hard to repeat the economics." He said the company, which entered the deal almost debt free, could expect payout in six months.

About 4-5 Mmcfd of the gas processed by the Orbitron facility will be Orbitron production, and the company expects to start a drilling program in the Yates in the near future, but Ben Lassater noted that if other producers could get gas to their pipeline system, they would be happy to buy it. Capacity is about 20 Mmcfd.

Kocian says Orbitron will pay 60 cents per Mcf for the contaminated gas. Jerry Tochterman, geologist for John Parrish, an Andrews independent oil and gas operator, said that at that price the economics are still viable, for an independent could still recomplete in the Yates and add a little to the bottom line.

Tochterman said it would cost approximately $25-30,000 to put cement behind the pipe, perforate and do a small frac and acid job in the Yates, and that the minimum production needed would be 50-100 Mcfd. To drill and complete a new well in the Yates and San Andres would cost about $95,000.

At 100 Mcfd and 60 cents per Mcf, a Yates well would gross only about $1700 a month or $20,160 a year, bringing payout to over a year with operations and royalty included.

"The real advantage might be that $25,000 could delay a $10,000 plugging and abandonment cost on a one barrel per day San Andres well for many years down the road," said Tochterman, who noted that some of the Yates wells, especially those on highs, could return a good profit.

Lasseter says the Yates wells are generally long life, and that some of them have been producing since 1962. He estimates reserves per well at approximately .3 billion cubic feet.

When Regal Gas Corp. operated the 54 wells, now owned by Orbitron, they reportedly produced 198,000 Mcfd from 24 wells for seven months. "We have four wells that make over 500 Mcfd," said Lassater.

But if independents can operate with the economics of the Yates contaminated gas, majors probably cannot. Exxon supposedly ran a study of the economics of producing the contaminated Yates gas several years ago, and concluded that it was not economical for them.

If all pans out as planned, however, the project should prove very economical for Orbitron. Not only will the company earn revenues from processing and sales of its own production and that of others, it also expects to see revenue from the sale of nitrogen, which is used by oilfield service companies to frac and clean wells.

When the plant is fully operational at 20 Mmcfd, Orbitron expects to drop out 5-6 Mmcfd of of nitrogen. At the same time the company will position itself for a future position in the LNG (liquid natural gas) market.

"We now have to reheat the liquefied gas to put it in the pipeline, but with the current nationwide move toward alternative fuels and especially clean-burning natural gas, the company will be positioned for sales of LNG," said Kocian. He said Orbitron plans to finance expansion of the project through institutional lending, the sale of common stock and debt securities.

Lasseter said that by using the cryogenic technique to drop out nitrogen and other impurities, Orbitron will be able to supply a purer form of LNG. He noted that the company had already had inquiries from several metropolitan bus companies about buying LNG from the Andrews plant.

It takes 93 cubic feet to make one gallon of LNG, which sells slightly below gasoline or diesel. The only current location to buy LNG is at a facility near Port Arthur where LNG is imported from Algeria.

Whether or not the nitrogen contaminated gas of the Yates formation finally becomes commercial or not will depend largely on the Orbitron project. If the project succeeds, Orbitron may expand. Estimated cost to double capacity of the present facility is $4 million. At the same, time others may build facilities to compete and more Yates wells could be drilled and completed. The prospects are rosey to say the least, but only time will tell.

PITTS: Tax agenda?

and the benefits of the natural polarity wanes. A broad-based tax on energy effectivly extends government control to everything that moves. The oil and gas industry complains now of being overly controlled by the tax codes and government regulation, but it will not know control until it sees a Btu tax. It will be like Jimmy Carter forever.

The tax will become a permanent ring in the nose of the energy business, and through increases and decreases, a tug here, a jerk there, government will be able to make this big cash cow move at will in any direction. Coupled with environmental regulation, it will make government's hold on the energy business total. Presidents may come and go, and Congress may shift from liberal to conservative, but the ring will still be there and the invisible anti-business bureaucrats will always be the master.

For a liberal social engineer who believes in central planning big government, big taxes and big spending the prospect of leading the energy industry around by the nose and making it jump through environmental hoops is a dream come true.

Clinton, by his tax and medical reform proposals has clearly shown that he is a true believer in big government and big spending. And, by his actions and appointments in the first 100 days he has shown that he is highly motivated by a political agenda and not above cramming his agenda down throats in quick fashion, without little apology.

But is he so attuned to ideology that he would slap a heavy, pervasive, and permanent energy tax on the back of American taxpayers just to further his own political agenda? One would hope not, but his actions and broken promises leave little room for trust.

Many major oil companies and a number of other energy-related industries have suggested a value added tax might be a better means of reducing the deficit, but that is just a ring of a different color in a different nose. A value added tax would be a good idea, but only if it is linked to a sunset clause. A sunset clause keeps taxes and programs from becoming permanent and is the one true test of political motivation.

If Clinton is truly serious about reducing the deficit and saving America and not promoting his own agenda, he would do well to consider adding a sunset clause to his tax proposals.

A value-added tax or national sales tax would probably be acceptable to all taxpayers if it were for a limited period. The tax could be collected by IRS and would not require the creation of a new bureaucracy. All the proceeds would go directly to the national deficit, and after two or three years, however long it took to reduce the deficit to a sufficient level, a sunset clause would mandate that the sales tax die, without the possibility of being extended by Congress or revived for a lengthy period of time — say five years.

Staff report

Practical technology improving efficiency and safety will be showcased at the 25th annual Offshore Technology Conference, set for Houston May 3-6.

The OTC has been the central forum for the worldwide offshore industry to share technology advances since its first meeting in 1969.

This year's conference, to be held at Houston's Astrodomain Complex, features an exhibition of more than 1,200 leading manufacturers and suppliers of offshore-related products, services and equipment. Many companies will spare little expense in featuring million-dollar high-tech exhibits.

Hundreds of firms have indicated they plan to introduce new products through demonstrations ranging from audiovisual presentations to hands-on computer simulations. And the opportunities to examine the best in offshore technology will help attract the 35,000 professionals expected to attend.

Exhibiting companies from more than 100 countries have displayed their wares at OTC since 1969, when the original 11 engineering and scientific sponsoring organizations launched the conference and exhibition as an event for introducing efficient and cost-efficient offshore technology.

This year alone, exhibitors represent more than two dozen countries including Argentina, Australia, Austria, Belgium, Brazil, Canada, CIS, Denmark, Finland, France, Germany, Italy, Japan, Korea, Mexico, Nigeria, Norway, The Netherlands, Saudi Arabia, Singapore, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland, Venezuela, U.K. and the U.S.

"It's my impression that this year's exhibition will focus more on economic ways to develop what has already been found, rather than on the more glamorous deepwater frontier," said OTC Chairman Dennis E. Gregg, retired vice president, exploration production, Conoco Inc. "Of course, the displays will showcase the latest equipment and services available for offshore drilling, completion and production."

As a result of six years of continued growth at OTC — the number of registrants and the size of the exhibition have increased each year since 1987 — the conference's main entrance will shift this year to the new ExpoCenter on the southeast side of the Astrodomain Complex. Use of both the ExpoCenter and Astrohall as exhibition space will allow OTC to accommodate more exhibiting companies, particularly those requiring higher ceiling space.

Two OTC general sessions highlight a technical program that includes more than 250 papers in 49 session.

Tuesday afternoon's session will feature diverse opinions on "What Price Cheap Oil?" and will explore the real cost of "cheap energy" policies that support energy at the lowest possible price. The issue, along with the policy's impact on international economies as well as the worldwide petroleum industry will be discussed by panelists Bill McKnight, Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources, Canada; Ian Seymour, editor of Middle East Economic Survey magazine; Jeremy K. Leggett, scientific director for Greenpeace International, London; W. David Montgomery of DRI McGraw-Hill; Michael L. Beatty, former energy company executive and energy advisor to President Bill Clinton's administration; and Daniel Yergin, president of Cambridge Energy Research Associates.

In Wednesday's sessions, experts will discuss lessons learned in "What It's Like Doing Business in the CIS" and will examine the international oil community's experiences in fostering new working relationships following the breakup of the Soviet Union. Oil production — formerly the main source of hard currency — has declined rapidly in the new states with the turmoil accompanying changes from controlled to market economies. And while foreign investments are welcomed, innovative approaches are necessary to make it work.

Panelists include Dale P. Jones, president, Halliburton Co.; Eddie Whitehead, general manager of CIS operations for BP Exploration; Richard H. Matzke, vice president of Chevron Corp. and president of Chevron Overseas Petroleum Inc.; and Andrey A. Konoplyanik, deputy minister of the Russian Federation Ministry for Fuel and Energy. Roger L. Abel, until recently Conoco's exploration production vice president and general manager for Russia and now regional vice president for Europe, will moderate this session.

Four OTC topical luncheons, held Monday and Wednesday, will include informal meetings with specialists on operating strategies.

Monday's luncheon topics are "Partnering, a Joint Perspective," chaired by Larry Broussard, project director with Brown & Root Inc. and David Gair, procurements manager at BP Exploration & Operations Co. Ltd., and "Impacts of Hurricane Andrew."

Wednesday's luncheons will feature an address from a senior representative of the U.S. Minerals Management Service on "The Expanding and Changing Role of the MMS in the Offshore Oil Industry" and "Total Quality Management in the Offshore Industry," chaired by Terry Wood, technical support manager in the construction department of Amoco Production Co.

The OTC awards luncheon on Tuesday will feature a keynote address on a timely issue and will honor significant contributions to offshore technology. F.P. "Pat" Dunn, manager, head office-civil engineering for Shell Oil Co., is the recipient of the 1993 OTC Distinguished Achievement Award for Individuals and Freeport-McMoRan Resource Partners will be recognized as the 1993 OTC Distinguished Achievement Award for Companies, Organizations and Institutions. Additionally, the Honorable Lord W. Douglas Cullen will accept the first-ever OTC Meritorious Achievement Citation on behalf of the Cullen Inquiry. Lord Cullen chaired the public inquiry into the North Sea's Piper Alpha disaster. The committee's report and recommendations are acknowledged as the most thorough and comprehensive project yet undertaken on the critical issue of offshore safety.

"The present-day social, regulatory and economic issues and concerns require fresh, innovative approaches to offshore engineering problems," Gregg concluded. "OTC has prevailed for a quarter-century as the most important conference and exhibition of its kind in the world precisely because it is the meeting place that addresses these kinds of issues."

COILED: Seminar offers exhibits

(From 1E)

They are: Larry Smith, President, Precision Tube Technology; Leslie Smith, President, Specialty Wellhead & Tool Co.; and Ted Lembcke, Vice President-Marketing, Petro Tech.

A major highlights in conjunction with the course will be an exhibit of coiled tubing products at the college's Chaparral Hall on May 25-26 from 1-6 p.m. both days. Industry personnel are invited to visit the exhibit.

Fifteen companies within the coiled tubing industry will be represented. Product areas represented are coiled tubing manufacturing, running equipment, wellhead equipment, downhole equipment, and drilling motors/directional equipment.

"This course is designed for persons with exploration, drilling, completion, workover or production responsibilities," Adams said. "It is especially appropriate for engineers, technicians, drilling and production supervisors, and field foremen and superintendents."

Adams pointed out that this is a comprehensive course focusing on current and future applications for coiled tubing operations and drilling in the oil and gas industry.

Design limitations of coiled tubing and associated equipment will be discussed in detail.

Adams also said that the course will not a be a vendor products and services presentation, but will focus on applications of equipment and technology. The exhibit will allow seminar participants and industry visitors to gather data concerning vendor products and services.

Among the topics to be covered in the seminar are: history of coiled tubing and associated equipment, potential developments and applications, manufacturing processes and capabilities, quality assurance in manufacturing and purchasing, mechanical and metallurgical properties, failure analysis and monitoring, injector heads, equipment limitations and capabilities, wellhead equipment and configurations, use in conventional and remedial applications, and horizontal/vertical drilling.

Firms committed to the Coiled Tubing Service and Equipment Exhibit include: Cymax Southwestern Pipe, Inc., Quality Tubing, Inc., and Precision Tube Technology in manufacturing; Cudd Pressure Control, Dowell Schlumberger, Halliburton Services, and Nowcam Services in running equipment; Pedcor, Inc., Specialty Wellhead & Tool Co., and Wellhead Control Products in wellhead equipment; Baker Oil Tools and Petro Tech in downhole equipment; and Drilex Systems, Inc., Christensen/Inteq, and Sperry Sun in downhole motors and directional equipment.

The course is scheduled from 6-9 p.m. on Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday evenings beginning May 11 and concluding May 27.

The enrollment fee for the course is $75 and seating is limited. Registration ends Tuesday, May 4. Registration may be made by contacting the Midland College Continuing Education Department, Administration Building. Registrations also are accepted by telephone, (915) 685-4518, or by fax, (915) 685-4714.

MARY SCOTT NABERS

Commissioner
Railroad Commission of Texas

Mary Scott Nabers was appointed by Governor Richards as a Commissioner of the Railroad Commission of Texas (TRC) and sworn into the position on February 24, 1993. Prior to her TRC appointment, she was appointed to head the Texas Employment Commission (TEC) by Governor Mark White in 1984 and continued on in that position under Governors Bill Clements and Ann Richards until accepting her new position with the TRC.

Through the innovations of Commissioner Nabers, the TEC was transformed into the most valued business serving bodies in state government. She developed communication channels and services such as her publication Texas Business Today: the Texas Business Council program of statewide conferences bringing business owners face-to-face with government leaders and regulators; the Jobs for Texans Today and Tomorrow program providing statewide conferences giving job seekers a competitive advantage by linking them directly to employer prospects; the taxpayers' 1-800-TEC-MARY hotline to eliminate bureaucratic delays and waste by putting the Commissioner in touch with her constituents; and initiating the Classroom to Boardroom - Reaching for Tomorrow Today statewide teleconferences providing high school students special career opportunities with prominent business leaders of Texas.

Mary Scott received her B.A. degree from Howard Payne University and an M.B.A. from the University of Texas at Austin. She is the former president and general manager of a media corporation; serviced as an instructor at Baylor and Howard Payne University and as a host of a daily public affairs program.

Commissioner Nabers comes to the TRC with numerous achievements and awards including the Spirit of Texas Award and Leadership Texas in 1987, and served as a delegate to Emerging Leaders World Conference, in Baltimore, Maryland in 1992. She is a board member of the National Association of Women Executives in State Government, the Board of Trustees at Howard Payne University, a member of the State Advisory Council for the Literacy Volunteers of America and the Joint Task Force on Expanding Career Counseling.

Mary Scott is married to Joseph L. Nabers and they have two sons.

ACTIVITY HIGHLIGHTS

Atoka production opened in Eddy field

Staff report

Atoka production has apparently been opened in the Crooked Creek field of Eddy County.

YATES PETROLEUM CORP. reentered the No. 1 Lechuguilla Canyon "AJ" Federal, a Morrow producer in the field, testing it in the Atoka formation to flow 107 Mcfd on a quarter-inch choke from perforations 9,657 to 9,728 ft. The interval was acidized with 2,000 gallons of 7.5 percent HCL.

Yates completed the well as a dual producer with Morrow production from 10,083 to 10,096 ft. and added additional Morrow perforations at 10,026 to 10,034 ft.

Drilled to 10,500 ft., where 5 1/2 inch casing was set, the well was plugged back to 10,245 ft.

Location is 660 ft. from south and 1,980 ft. from east lines of Section 8, T24s, R24e.

Lea recompletion nets Delaware find

A former Bone Spring producer in the Red Tank field of Lea County, N.M. has been recompleted as a Delaware (Bone Spring) discovery, 29 air miles west of Eunice.

POGO PRODUCING CO. reentered the No. 1 Red Tank "23" Federal, completing it to pump 105 barrels of crude, 98 Mcfd and 212 barrels of water from perforations 8,626 to 8,656 ft. No treatment was reported.

Originally drilled to 10,066 ft., where 5 1/2 inch casing was set, the well was plugged back to 8,900 ft.

Location is 360 ft. from south and 660 ft. from east lines of Section 23, T22s, R32e.

Details of the earlier completion in the Red Tank field were not given.

Concho field gets 10-barrel reopener

WESTERN PRIDE RESOURCES has reopened the Red Appaloosa (Cross Cut) field of Concho County, a half-mile northwest of 3,698 ft. production in the Henderson (Camar Sand) field, 9.5 miles southwest of Eden.

On potential test, the No. 4 Henderson "59-A" pumped 10 barrels of 35 gravity crude, 7 Mcfd and eight barrels of water from perforations 3,358 to 3,366 ft. The interval was acidized with 1,000 gallons of 15 percent acid and fractured with six sacks of sand.

Permitted as a 4,400 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to 3,856 ft., where 4 1/2 inch casing was set, and plugged back to 3,603 ft.

The well topped the Cross Cut at 3,351 ft. and Camar Sandstone at 3,708 ft. on ground elevation of 2,148 ft.

Location is 1,547 ft. from north and 721 ft. from west lines of Section 59, Block 8, H&TC survey.

Concho field gets oil production

Oil production has been opened in the Fritzess (Odom) field of Runnels County with recompletion of a former Gardner producer in the Fritzess East field.

JAMES K. ANDERSON INC. recompleted the No. 2 Odell "B" to flow 20 barrels of 44 gravity crude, 38 Mcfd and three barrels of water on an 18/64 inch choke with flowing tubing pressure of 35 psi. The well flowed from perforations 5,236 to 5,265 ft., which had been acidized with 3,000 gallons of 15 percent NeFeHCL acid.

Originally drilled to 5,305 ft., the reentry was permitted as a 5,265 ft. wildcat workover. The well was plugged back to 5,285 ft., with 4 1/2 inch casing set at 5,302 ft.

Formation tops, on ground elevation of 2,048 ft., include the Capps Limestone at 4,584 ft., Goen Limestone at 4,794, Gardner Limestone at 5,034, Gardner Sandstone at 5,065, Gray Sandstone at 5,114, and Odom Limestone at 5,230 ft.

Location is 4,647 ft. from north and 1,286 ft. from west lines of John Early survey 449, Abst. 130, two miles west of Wingate.

Parker drills in Argentina

TULSA — With the purchase of five Argentine drilling rigs and the receipt of three contracts for 48 wells, Parker Drilling Co. announces it has reentered the active Argentina drilling market.

Additionally, the Tulsa-based drilling contractor announced the awarding of drilling contracts in Colombia and Peru.

The five rigs were purchased from YPF, the Argentina national oil company. Three of the rigs will now drill 48 wells for YPF in the Comodora Rivadavi area in southern Argentina.

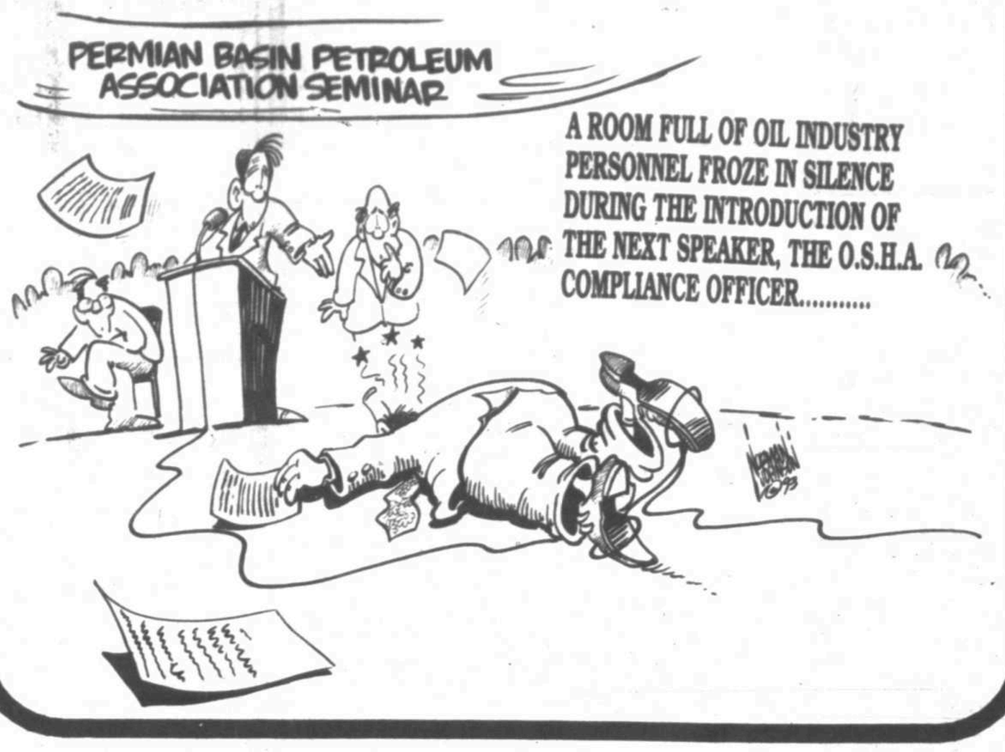

Ecopetrol, the Colombian national oil company, has contracted a Parker rig and crews to drill a multi-well program along that country's northwest coast. The program could include up to four wells.

Another rig in Parker's Colombia fleet has drilled an appraisal well for American International Petroleum Corp. and is currently drilling an offset well.

In Peru, Occidental Petroleum Corp. of Peru selected Parker to drill three wells in Oxy's Block 1AB in the Amazon area. Work on this project began early last month.

Now offering Coiled Tubing Services to The Permian Basin.

Clean-up perforations, remove scales, paraffins and debris with the PerfClean Tool's® powerful shock waves.

Restore the permeability and porosity of your wells by economically treating with the PerfClean Tool. It is a safe and efficient way of cleaning new perforations prior to other stimulation treatments, as well as formation testing, and removal of scales, paraffins and other debris. This lightweight tool has no moving parts and is easily transported to remote or offshore locations.

With the PerfClean® Tool...

- Remove scale from the perforation tunnel and/or wellbore pipe
- Remove skin damage caused by perforating operations and wellbore damage prior to formation testing and/or stimulation
- Lower treating pressures required for stimulation treatments
- Enhance matrix acidizing operations
- Increase effectiveness of chemical treatments
- Increase effectiveness of horizontal well stimulation treatments

Case History 12 '92

Gaines County, Texas: Wolfcamp Formation

Operator called to run the PerfClean tool on a well that had a history of scale and paraffin problems. Production was at 6 bbls of oil, 20 bbls of water/day prior to the PerfClean treatment. The treatment was performed by moving the PerfClean tool through the perforated interval while pumping 190 bbls of an acid/solvent blend at approx. 2.8 bbls/min. Immediately after completing the treatment the operator put the well back on pump.

Following the recovery of the treatment fluid the well produced 60 bbls of oil, 62 bbls of water/day. Forty-five days after the treatment the well stabilized at 100 BBLS OF OIL, 60 bbls of water/day. The operator stated that this single treatment substantially increased the overall production of the lease.

The hardest-working contractor in the nation is the pace-setting contractor in the Permian Basin: Grace Drilling Company.

We've drilled thousands of wells from Alaska to Florida - put our experience to work for you today.

Working hard is how we acquired some of the best rigs in the oilpatch- and the talent to run them right. And we'll be around next year, working for you, because we're backed by the strength of Grace energy Corporation. So when you're ready to go work with the best crews in the business, give us a call - we'll be there.

Grace sets the pace in the Permian Basin. Call 915/550-7808

MEETINGS

Delaware formation topic for SPE group

The Trans-Pecos section of the Society of Petroleum Engineersd woll meet Thursday at the Odessa Country Club beginning at 11:30 a.m.

Vithal Pai of the Western Co. will give a presentation on "New Techniques and Methods of Treating the Delaware Formation of Southeast New Mexico."

With the improved oil and gas pricing, the Delaware formation of southeast New Mexico has seen a substantial amount of renewed activity. This presentation will present information such as lithology, formation rock characteristics, x-ray diffraction and SEM analysis. Also, information on completion practices, casing and perforating programs, along with a review on stimulation fluids, volumes, injection rates, types of proppants and fracture geometries to provide an optimum completion program.

Pai has worked with The Western Co. for the past 19 years in the Permian Basin and South Texas. He has been the Region Technical Manager for the Southwest region for over nine years.

Cost is $12 per person. Reservations can be made by Wednesday afternoon by calling 368-1618.

SPE group plans one-day short course

The Continuing Education committee of the Permian Basin section, Society of Petroleum Engineers, will host a one-day short course Tuesday, May 11 at the Texaco Heritage Center, 500 N. Loraine. The course will be held from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m.

I. Fields Roebuck Jr. of Roebuck Associates in Dallas will host a course on "Economic Evaluation of Oil & Gas Investments."

Cost for Permian Basin and Trans Pecos section members is $95; for other SPE members, cost is $185 and for non-members, $235. Lunch is included in the fee.

Further information is available by calling 688-2954.

SPE seeks golf tournament sponsors

The Permian Basin section, Society of Petroleum Engineers, has issued a call for sponsors for its 1993 Annual Golf Classic.

The tournament is scheduled for Friday, September 10 at Hogan Park Golf Course in Midland. It will have a four-man scramble format.

There are three levels of sponsorship:

■ The basic sponsorship, for $100, allows the sponsor to have his name included on all correspondence concerning the tournament and to have a sign displayed on one of the holes. A basic sponsor can reserve one team slot in advance.

■ The watering hole sponsorship, for $250, provides the sponsor with the basic level benefits plus a hole that will be stocked with soft drinks and beer (by the SPE) for the duration of the tournament. The sponsor may elect to man the hole for greater exposure. This level can reserve up to two team slots in advance.

■ The hole-in-one sponsorship, for $500, provides the sponsor with the basic level benefits plus a par 3 hole with a golf trip prize, provided by the SPE, for any hole-in-one scored during the tournament. The sponsor will be required to man the hole to verify any awards. This level can reserve up to three team slots in advance.

Team slots are $350.

Further information is available by contacting Greg Leyendecker at 685-6860.

SPE to hold picnic at Angel Stadium

The Society of Petroleum Engineers will hold a Midland Angels Garden Picnic Friday, May 14 from 6 to 8 p.m.

For $10 each — children five and under are free — SPE members gain admission to the Angels-Tulsa Drilelrs game and the picnic area adjacent to left field. There will be an all-you-can-eat picnic of hot dogs, popcorn, chips, peanuts, cotton candy, soft drinks and beer. The ball game starts at 7 p.m.

Tickets can be purchased from SPE officers and directors or at the Unocal office, 1004 N. Big Spring, Suite 303. They can also be purchased by mail — check made out to SPE — from Greg Leyendecker, c/o Unocal, P.O. Box 3100, Midland Texas 79702.

Arco earnings up, Unocal income off

N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — Atlantic Richfield Co. reported a big jump in first-quarter earnings while Unocal Corp. said its income dropped from year-ago levels because of a one-time charge of $130 million related to accounting-rules changes.

Los Angeles-based Arco said it earned $260 million ($1.60 a share) during the quarter ended March 31 compared with a loss of $212 million ($1.31) in the like period a year ago.

The company initially said that it earned $180 million ($1.12) during the 1992 first quarter but later restated earnings to reflect a one-time charge associated with new rules regarding the way businesses account for retiree benefits and income tax.

Revenues totaled $4.5 billion, up from $4.3 billion.

Arco said that its average price for domestic crude oil was $12.31 a barrel in the 1993 first quarter, up from $10.60 a barrel a year ago. Domestic natural gas prices averaged $1.71 per thousand cubic feet vs. $1.31 per thousand cubic feet.

The refining and marketing segment earned $93 million in the 1993 first quarter, up from $78 million in the same quarter of 1992, reflecting higher margins on the West Coast.

Meanwhile, Unocal said that it earned $11 million (1 cent) during the quarter after taking the $130 million charge for costs associated with changes in accounting rules. Before taking the charge earnings were $141 million in the quarter. During the 1992 first quarter the company earned $40 million (17 cents), which included a one-time gain of $24 million.

First-quarter revenues were $2.32 billion, down from $2.42 billion. The drop was attributed to Unocal's selling several businesses during 1992 as part of its debt reduction strategy.

Since 1985, the Los Angeles-based company has cut its debt from a high of about $6.1 billion to $3.7 billion.

The cost-cutting also helped improve Unocal's cash flow. Cash flows from operations in the first quarter were $363 million, up from $213 million last year.

Unocal is among several oil companies that in January signed a preliminary agreement with the state oil company of Azerbaijan concerning the 1.8 billion barrel Azeri field. Unocal has a 25 percent stake in the foreign interest in the project.

Absent the charge, analysts said Unocal had a strong first quarter and that Unocal and Arco benefited from improved natural gas prices and refining margins.

"At first blush Arco's numbers look like they were in line with expectations and Unocal's numbers were a little better than anticipated," said James S. Jordon, an analyst at Williams MacKay Jordon & Co. in Houston.

"The West Coast refining business has been quite strong," said John E. Hilton, an analyst at Argus Research Corp. in New York. "I think there is some further improvement on the horizon, although it may prove to be a bumpy road.

"Natural gas prices are quite high for this time of year and that will contribute to a fairly strong showing ... for the second quarter of 1993."

Mobil earnings jump

N.Y. Times News Service

Oil giant Mobil Corp., a major North Texas employer, posted sharply improved first-quarter results.

Meanwhile, Oryx Energy and Maxus Energy, two large independent oil companies based in Dallas, reported lackluster results that were nevertheless an improvement over their performances a year earlier.

Mobil recorded first-quarter earnings of $490 million, or $1.19 per share, on revenues of $15 billion. That compared to a net loss of $319 million, or 84 cents per share, on revenues of $15.2 billion in the first quarter of 1992.

The 1992 loss included a cumulative charge against earnings of $446 million that reflected a change in accounting standards for retiree benefits and income taxes and an $86 million charge against earnings for costs associated with corporate restructuring.

Mobil Chairman Allen E. Murray said he was "generally encouraged" by the first-quarter results, which showed improvement as a result of higher natural gas prices, a strong performance in the company's Pacific Rim operations and lower operating costs resulting from restructuring actions that included employee layoffs.

Mobil's exploration and production earnings of $433 million were $258 million higher than in the first quarter of last year, when the financial results included $57 million in charges for restructuring. Excluding that charge, exploration and production earnings were $201 million higher in this year's initial quarter.

Mobil said it posted operating earnings of $117 million for its U.S. exploration and production activities, a big $98 million increase over the first quarter of 1992. The improved results reflected higher oil and gas prices and the effect of cost-cutting measures.

Mobil, the nation's second-largest oil company behind Exxon Corp., employs nearly 4,000 people in Dallas County. Dallas is the headquarters for Mobil's U.S. exploration and production operations. Mobil's corporate headquarters, formerly in New York City, are now in Fairfax, Va.

Oryx Energy reported a net loss of $7 million, or 8 cents per share, on revenues of $283 million in the first quarter. That performance, though unspectacular, represented an improvement over the company's net loss of $46 million, or 61 cents per share, on revenues of $332 million in the first quarter of 1992.

"We expected 1993 to be a transition year for Oryx, with some challenges early on," said Robert Hauptfuhrer , the company's chief executive officer. "With stronger (natural) gas prices and increasing production volumes late in the year, we expect to see improved results."

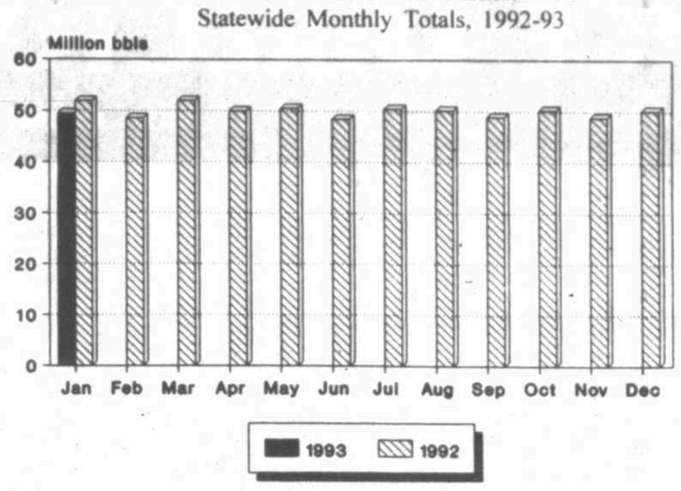

The company said its improved showing resulted in part from a $32 million after-tax savings in total costs that resulted primarily from reduced outlays for interest charges and exploration expenditures. Stronger natural gas prices partially offset lower U.S. oil and gas production volumes that resulted from natural declines in some wells and the sale of others.

Oryx employs 1,500 people worldwide, including 800 in Dallas.

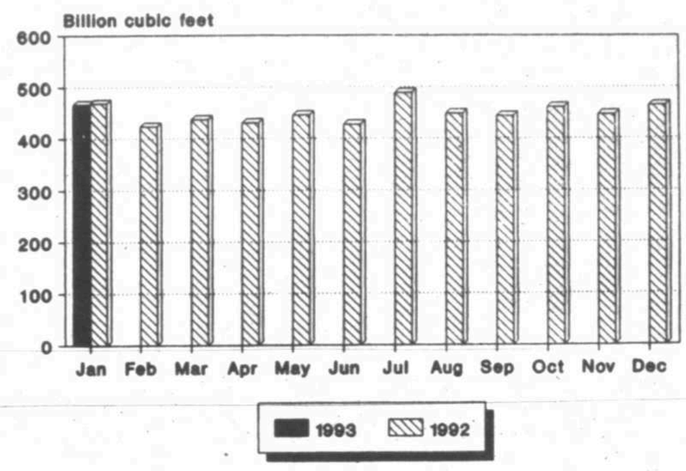

Maxus Energy reported a loss applicable to common shares of $10.2 million, or 8 cents per share, after payment of preferred dividends totaling $10.4 million. Prior to payment of preferred dividends, the company reported a net income of $200,000 on revenues of $192 million.

That was a significantly improved performance over the first quarter of 1992, when the company logged a loss applicable to common shares of $48.7 million after paying preferred dividends of $10.4 million. Prior to payment of the preferred dividends, the company posted a net loss of $38.3 million on revenues of $171.7 million. The loss was heightened by a $19.6 million charge against earnings that resulted from an unfavorable court ruling.

Texas production

The Texas Railroad Commission reported Texas preliminary crude oil production for January averaged 1,597,059 barrels daily, down from the 1,670,975 barrels daily average in January 1992. Preliminary Texas oil production figure for January is 49,508,814 barrels down, fromt he 51,800,218 barrels reported in January 1992. Texas oil and gas wells produced 466,295,379 Mcf of gas in preliminary production for January, down 0.4 percent compared to January 1992's gas production of 468,368,803 Mcf.

Oilman plans Civil War museum

N.Y. Times News Service

FORT WORTH, Texas — For nearly a decade, Fort Worth oilman Ray Richey has collected Civil War relics ranging from long-barreled muskets to a soldier's wooden leg.

His collection has become a passionate and expensive hobby. Now, it's becoming the focal point of a brand new career.

Richey, 37, who has headed his own oil company for 14 years, plans this year to move his family to the booming tourist town of Branson, Mo., where he is opening a Civil War museum.

His collection of 600 war relics will be the heart of the museum's display.

Richey says he plans to retain his profitable oil firm, Ray Richey & Co., an eight-employee business that operates 280 wells in north and west central Texas and produces more than $10 million in annual revenues. But he doesn't know whether he'll drill any new wells in coming years and expects to be preoccupied with his museum.

"This is a strong commitment for me," he says. "It's no retirement play deal. If it doesn't work out, I'll be financially strapped.

"This is not one of those nonprofit enterprises. I expect it to pay for itself and make me a living. But there's a risk to it, just like any other business."

Richey says he is confident that his museum will be profitable because of its location in Branson, a once-sleepy community that last year drew 5 million tourists, attracted primarily by live country-music performances.

"Branson estimates there will be more than 6 million tourists up there this year," he says. "To break even on operations, I need one-half of one percent of those people. And that's not very many people."

He is investing $1.4 million in the project, including $875,000 that he is borrowing. The money will pay for construction of a 12,600-square-foot museum and the 2.5-acre site on which it will sit. The $1.4 million figure doesn't include the cost of Richey's collection of Civil War relics, for which he declines to publicly disclose a value.

Construction of the museum is already well under way, and Richey says he expects to open it by August.

He is building the museum on a site near the so-called strip, the heart of Branson's tourist attractions. Richey's museum will be across from a 2,000-seat theater in which popular fiddler-violinist Shoji Tabuchi regularly sells out shows.

There are nine motels, four restaurants and a crafts village under construction in the vicinity, and by the time the museum opens, it will be within walking distance of 3,000 motel rooms, Richey says.

"There's going to be 40,000 to 50,000 people drive by my museum every day," he says.

Richey estimates that he will need only 100 museum visitors a day — about 10 per hour of operation — in order to "pay the bills."

He plans to charge about $5 per customer, with the price including admission to filmed re-enactments of Civil War battles. The films will be shown in a 176-seat theater in the rear of the museum.

The museum will include 9,000 square feet of exhibit space that will offer ample room for expansion, Richey says. There will also be a gift shop selling items ranging from Civil War books to T-shirts.

Richey says that he probably will buy more Civil War relics to add to the museum's collection if it is successful. His collection already includes such articles as guns, swords, knives, cannon balls, battle flags, uniforms, a saddle, a Union infantry snare drum, a U.S. Signal Corps telescope, a surgeon's field kit and an artillery grease bucket.

Richey's interest in Civil War relics was stirred after he visited historical sites in the Washington, D.C., area a decade ago. He bought his first Civil War relic at a Richmond, Va., gun show. He paid $425 for an 1863 model Springfield musket, which he says is now worth thousands of dollars.

Since he began collecting, prices for Civil War relics have risen steadily, Richey said.

"The good-quality pieces are really hard to find — especially cloth things like uniforms and flags," he says.

Union soldiers' uniforms tend to be in better condition because they generally have been kept in Northern states where insect damage to the material is less likely to occur, Richey says.

"There's lots of bug damage on the Southern cloth, lots of moth holes," he says. "Plus, a lot of the Confederates, when they came home from the war, tended to wear their uniforms because that was all they had to wear."

Richey says he decided to start the museum for two reasons.

First, he wanted a career challenge that would revolve around a hobby he greatly enjoys.

And, second, he has strong doubts about continuing to stake his future on the oil industry, where he feels it is likely that "the best I can do is to beat my head against the wall and stay even."

Oil and natural gas prices are still below their levels of 1985, notes Richey, who is primarily a gas producer.

He says that although his company remains profitable, it has dramatically dwindled in size and activity.

The company, which has its own 10,000-square-foot building in Fort Worth, has shrunk from 25 to eight employees.

In 1983, it drilled 49 wells, its peak level of activity. Last year, with Richey focused on planning the museum, the company didn't drill a single well.

In the late 1970s and early 1980s, it was easy to find investors willing to sink $3,000 to $5,000 each into drilling a well, Richey says. But that was before the oil bust.

"Now, if people have $3,000 to $5,000 ... they're not going to put it into an oil prospect," he says. "Or at least they're going to think awfully hard before they do it."

Richey, who grew up in Wichita Falls, Texas, and studied accounting at Midwestern University there, formed his own oil company at age 23 after working for the Fort Worth accounting firm Weaver & Tidwell.

Ref-Chem Corp. announces the addition of three to its Permian Basin division engineering department and seminar completion.

STEVEN R. ALLMOND is an electrical engineer with over 15 years experience in electrical and petroleum engineering, including designing and construction of an electrical substation specifying line sizes, routes, system protection and optimization. He was formerly employed with Bass Enterprises and Exxon Co.

G. MARK GOWER is a piping designer with 19 years experience in the petrochemical, engineering and construction fields that includes piping design drafting on projects such as refineries, petrochemical plants, compressor stations, sulphur plants and an offshore gas processing plant. He was formerly employed by Nesco Design.

TESSA JOHNSTON is a piping draftsperson with over six years experience in design/drafting in mechanical, structural and electrical fields which includes drafting from conceptual design to construction drawings; updating and distributing system maps, and using databases for inventory purposes. She was formerly employed with Chaparral Pipeline Co.

American Oil & Gas Corp. announces that SAMUEL H. CHARLTON III will join the company as vice president, marketing. He has over 18 years management and operating experience in the natural gas industry. He most recently served as vice president, marketing and transportation for Wintershall Energy.

Santa Fe Energy Resources has reorganized personnel in its Southeast Asia subsidiary, Trend International Ltd. in Jakarta, Indonesia.

DUANE C. RADTKE has been appointed president, effective July 1, on the retirement of John Vinje. He has over 20 years oil and gas exploration and production experience with extensive involvement in Southeast Asia. He was appointed Santa Fe Energy's International Production manager in 1992 when Trend became a subsidiary of Santa Fe Energy Resources as a result of the merger with Adobe Resources.

RANDAL I. ARNOLD has been named vice president exploration. He has been in exploration-related activities at Santa Fe for 19 years and is being transferred from the Bakersfield, Ca. office where he served as Western Division exploration manager.

MICHAEL A. PUGH has been named Controller. He joined Santa Fe Energy in 1981 and most recently was manager of revenue accounting in Santa Fe Energy's corporate headquarters in Houston.

Eastex completes Heath Petra purchase

Staff report

HOUSTON — Eastex Energy Inc. reported the completion of its previously announced agreement to acquire Heath Petra Resources Inc. and its affiliates for a combination of cash and stock.

Heath Petra had audited revenues and gross profits of $57 million and $2.9 million respectively for the year ended Dec. 31, 1992, as compared to Eastex audited revenues and gross profits of $175 million and $8.7 million, respectively, for the same period.

Eastex financed the transaction, in part, from excess working capital, the sale of $4.5 million of long-term notes and with Eastex common stock to be issued based upon the future performance of the combined companies.

Heath Petra is a natural gas marketing company headquartered in Charlotte, N.C. with offices in Owensboro, Ky., Knoxville, Tenn., Atlanta, and Houston. Heath Petra concentrates on providing natural gas sales and marketing services to municipalities, and industrial and commercial end-users located primarily in the Southeastern United States.

Commenting on the transaction, Eastex Chairman and Chief Executive Officer Robert G. Phillips stated, "We are very excited about the expansion of market opportunities and enhanced customer services which will result from the combination of Heath Petra and Eastex. The companies will benefit from the consolidation of business operations, customer relationships, management, personnel, service capabilities and long-term strategies."

Douglas D. Morgan, president of Heath Petra, observed that "We are looking forward to the contribution that this combination will make to the marketing services which we provide to our customers. The access to Eastex's Rotherwood and Houston Hub market center, larger supply base and greater financial resources will enhance our full service marketing and consulting capabilities and provide additional support to our customers in the new marketplace under Order 636."

Eastex, through its various subsidiaries, is a natural gas merchant specializing in the purchase, gathering, transportation, storage and sale of natural gas.

Stop to Smell the Roses...

These petunias are apparently a gift from last year's plantings in Hellen Lee's garden.

Most people recognized these flowers as Moss Rose, a desert plant, but their proper name is portulaca.

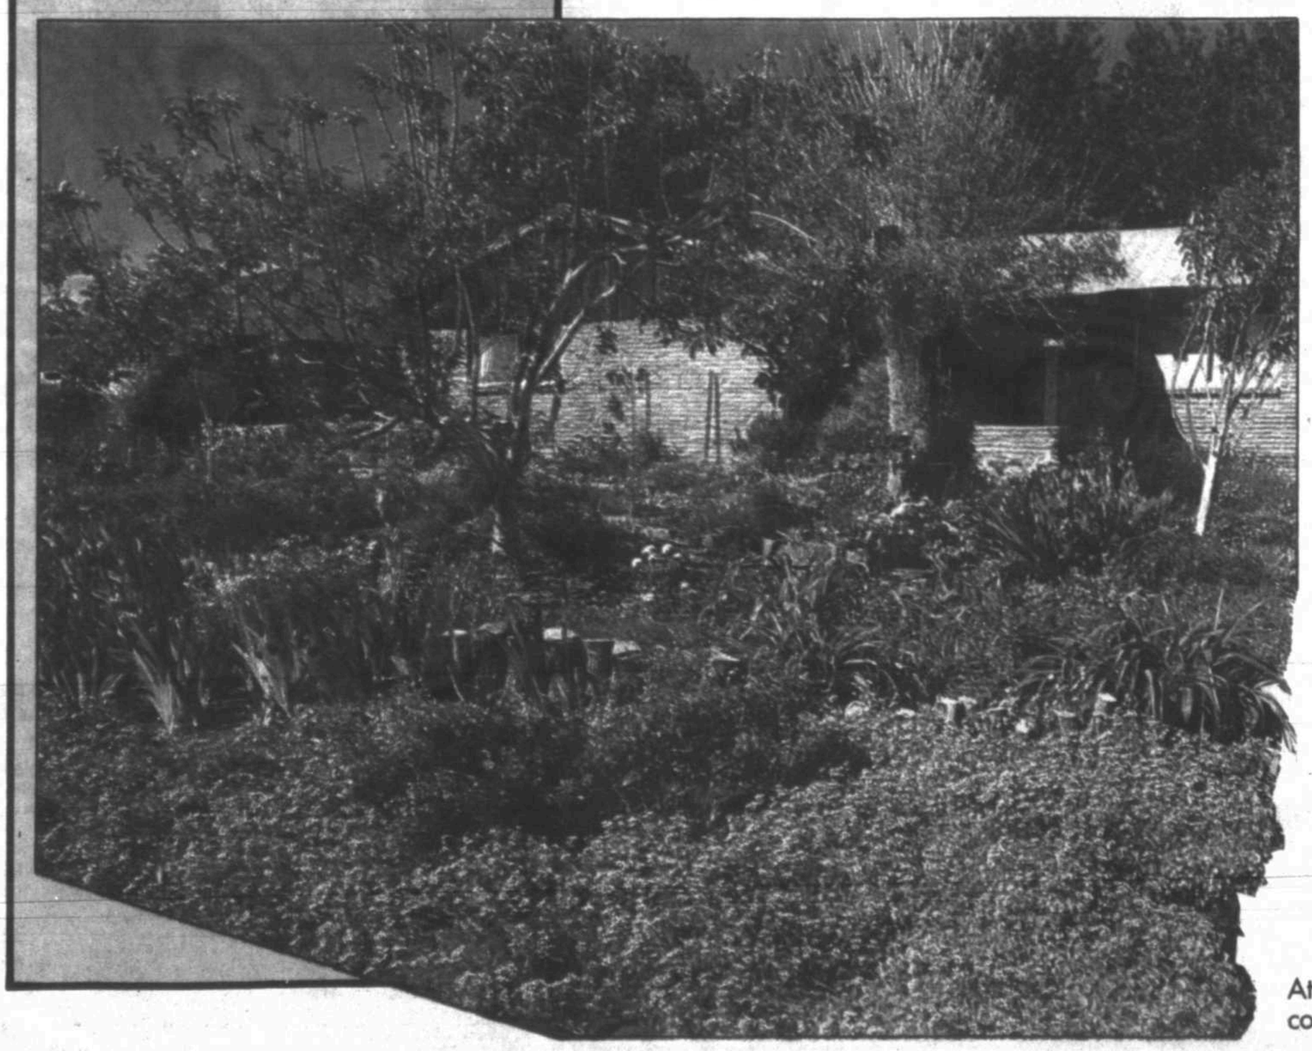

Cecil Brunner are more commonly known as sweetheart roses.

Hellen Lee sits in her garden amid some of the beautiful flowers she has planted to take the place of grass in her yard.

...and the hollyhocks, poppies, petunias, day lillies, marigolds, snapdragons, dill, rosesmary, larkspur, sweetheart roses, irises...

Photos by Joe D. Williams Text by Elizabeth Edwin

At 1405 Delmar, a colorful display of flowers and vegetation continually change throughout the summer.

She ought to charge people who walk by her house just for the smell. At least that's what one of Hellen Lee's neighbors says who regularly walks by her home.

And what is the smell? Flowers ... all kinds of flowers and other vegetation. Hollyhocks, vines, sweetheart roses, roses, petunias, day lilies, iris, poppies, larkspurs, oxalis, snapdragons, dill, rosemary, mustard, pansies, marigolds... and the list goes on. Her entire front yard is filled with flowers, trees and ground cover.

"To me, it looks like my grandmother's garden. Back then, they traded seeds and clippings and had all different kinds of flowers everywhere," Ms. Lee said. "I thought I was doing something old-fashioned, then I open my Horticulture magazine and find out it's something called Cottage Garden and it's becoming popular again."

A garden yard similar to Ms. Lee's is featured in the current issue of Horticulture magazine. The magazine terms it "Cottage Garden Chic."

Ms. Lee said she started her garden a couple of years ago. "Grass is boring, don't you think," Ms. Lee said. "Besides, I couldn't keep my lawn or my lawn mower going."

Consequently, she took all the grass out of her yard — leaving only the existing trees and flowers — and filled it with flowers, vines and herbs of all types.

In fact, a few of her plants are from bulbs, clippings and seeds that have been handed down.

Although this is only the third summer Ms. Lee's garden has filled her yard, it looks as though she has worked on it for years.

"I love gardening," Ms. Lee said. "Having a lawn was work for me, but my garden is fun."

She started out with just iris and poppies which were already in the original flower beds. Then she gradually added new plants, carefully planning each placement for color, size, water needs and blooming seasons.

HAVE YOU HEARD?

Garden club's display featured at museum

By Marilyn McKnight Harrison

If you didn't see the Green Thumb Garden Club's table top show, "Setting Pretty," last weekend, you missed a delightful event! Each of the club's 30 members decorated a theme table, ranging from whimsical to elegant, with place settings, centerpieces and accessories.

McKnight-Harrison

The show, held at the Museum of the Southwest, was part of the festivities celebrating the museum's 25 years at the Turner Mansion on West Missouri Avenue.

First place awards were as follows:

Most Creative: "Encore" (Dessert after the Theatre) by JoAnn (Mrs. George) Clark; Best Feminine: "Tea Time" by Carole (Mrs. Robert) Hobbs; Most Elegant: "Little Jack Horner's Christmas Pie" by Jan (Mrs. Robert) Fitting; Best Holiday: "Celebrate with George and Martha" by Joy (Mrs. Bill) Seltzer; Best Juvenile: "GI Joe's Mess" by Edna (Mrs. Russell) Sexton.

Also, In A Class By Itself: "What's Wrong With This Table?" by Lyn (Mrs. Paul) Breen; Best Informal: "On the Santa Fe Trail" by Donna (Mrs. Darrell) Smith; Best Masculine: "Fish Fry" by Ann (Mrs. Don) Wambaugh, and Best Foreign: "Un Dejeuner en Provence" by Bonnie (Mrs. Carl) Stewart.

After all their preparation and hard work, the members hosted a couples' party in the Stables at the Museum the night of the show's opening to relax and give their guests a sneak preview.

Mrs. Sexton was chairman of the show. Virginia (Mrs. Bob) Jones is club president. Judges were Gary Hood, Ron Huse and Janet Weston.

"'THE YEAR THAT the Sixteenth Amendment was enacted was noteworthy mainly because Harry Leroy Beckmann was born to Harry F. and Lydia Bader Beckmann in St. Louis on April 19." So began the clever invitations (with a picture of the Birthday Boy at an early age) to an open house given by his wife, Treva, at the Beckmanns' home on Club Drive.

The invitations sent guests scurrying to their encyclopedias to figure out from that one clue the year of his birth and from that, deducing it was his 80th birthday.

Friends were asked to bring along or wear mementoes of the early Twentieth Century days and advised that the honoree, who is known as Roy, Beck or Harry, depending on which set of friends or relatives you are talking to, would be wearing his father's gold pocket watch and sporting a walking cane. A display of the items was a popular feature of the party.

Among the guests who got into the spirit of the affair were Carol (Mrs. Henry) Page and Elinore Chase, who appeared as a pair of "flappers;" Fannie Bess Sivalls wearing her baccalaureate hat, Charlie Holtcamp sporty in his porkpie hat, with his wife, Susan, in her lovely heirloom jewelry, and Gloria and Bob Steelman, wearing early-day sunglasses and she with a black lace fan and he with a jaunty walking stick.

A number of friends and neighbors assisted Treva in "keeping things moving" during the all-afternoon event.

Beck's children and grandchildren taking part in the festivities were Vicki and Bill Sanders of Richmond, Paul David "Pancho" and Leslie Beckmann and daughter, Mica, of Carrollton, and Barbara Bratton of Houston and sons, David Black of Dallas and Gib Black of Houston. David's fiancee, Margaret Shaeffer, also was here for the occasion.

Other festivities included a family dinner hosted by the Sanders at Portofino Ristorante and a brunch for family members given by Sandra Self and her daughter, Susanna Kendrick of Houston. Sandra and Vicki's friendship dates back to their childhood years on Club Drive.

"PARIS IN THE SPRING" was the title of the fashion show presented by Julian Gold Inc. for the April luncheon meeting of the Midland Country Club Ladies Association.

Vicky DeShaw, manager of the shop, introduced the show, which featured romantic and wearable fashions by European and American designers. She told the audience that "skirt lengths are each woman's decision. Anything goes!"

The showing featured a Parisian sailor inspired grouping in navy and white; bright cottons in lively prints; suits in solid colors, accessorized with scarves and marvelous jewelry; a black and white group in a wide range of fabrics, and evening wear, showing lots of glitz and sparkle in a variety of solids and prints.

The luncheon menu featured Roasted Chicken Salad and Profiteroles with Chocolate Sauce. Colorful geraniums decorated the tables.

Hostesses for the social hour preceding lunch were Pat (Mrs. Tom) Schneider, Donnie Weiner and Bonnie (Mrs. O.J.) Hubbard.

Among those seen in the crowd were Beverly (Mrs. B.J.) Pevehouse, Lola (Mrs. Phil) Adams, Terry (Mrs. Edwin) Akin, Violet (Mrs. W.C.) Blanks, Norma Jean (Mrs. Bud) Boles and Mrs. Betty Barnes.

Marilyn McKnight-Harrison is social columnist for the Reporter-Telegram.

SEEDS FOR THOUGHT

Flowering plants add color to landscape

By Deborah A. Benge

Color can have a significant influence on people, it can lift spirits, attract attention and soothe and calm the worries of the day. Designers, advertisers and decorators have always known the secrets of color and have used them accordingly. Finding the colors you love and need in flowering plants is a combination that can't be beat. Whether you are landscaping your home garden or your place of business, don't forget to include flowering color.

Benge

What better time of the year to be making plans for the use of color in the home landscape than right now. Selections of flowering annuals and perennials are available through local nurseries and garden centers, mail order catalogues can provide you with the unusual, and gardening friends are always ready to share. Let's take a closer look at what flowering color is. Color can actually be offered in a lot of ways, such as flowering annuals, biennials and perennials. Less often but very interesting, color can be introduced in a landscape with foliage and seed heads.

Annuals are a common and very popular way to have color. Annual flowering plants are plants that grow from seed, which will grow, flower, set seed and die in one growing season. The growing season is determined by whether the annual plant is warm-season or cool-season in nature. For example, marigolds are famous warm-season annuals and pansies are famous cool-season annuals grown for their color show.

Biennials are much less common but are sources of color as well. A biennial plant germinates and grows into a rossette the first year, then sends up a flower stalk and flowers the following year. Hollyhocks are good examples of a biennial flowering plant.

Perennials are plants that germinate, grow and once well established this plant will live for three or more years. Some perennials live for many years; some only live three or four years. Many times a newly germinated perennial plant will need a year to grow before it will do much in the way of flowering. Perennials tend to get bigger and better with two or three years of growing.

All of these types of flowering plants can be used in landscapes, patios, containers, window boxes, at businesses, street corners and the list goes on. Use them anywhere color is needed, and remember, plant color is needed everywhere.

With any flowering plant, site selection, soil conditions and soil preparation are very important. To make the right site selection, you'll need to know a little about the plant's preference for light, water and soil fertility. These kinds of questions can be answered through gardening literature, knowledgeable nurserymen, extension agents and knowledgeable gardening friends.

For most all flowering plants, a well-drained soil is very important. The roots of plants must have oxygen in order to take up water and nutrients. When oxygen is driven out of the soil air spaces by too much water or soil compaction, plant roots begin to decline as well as the plant. These kinds of soil problems can be corrected by regulating water properly, adding lots of organic matter to the soil and working the soil at least as deep a the plants are expected to root. Even if you have good soil, adding organic matter such as compost, rotted leaves, grass clippings or rotted hay can still improve soils for better plant growth.

Because color is used in so many different locations, there is more than soil drainage to consider when planting. Other considerations include mature height and spread of the plant, flowering season, warm or cool colors, and neighboring plants.

Learn how to use flowering color in your landscape by attending the Landscaping With Color program Tuesday evening. Dr. William Welch, state horticulture specialist with Texas Agriculture Extension Service, and I will bring you the secrets of how to select, grow and use color in the landscape. In addition to being an extremely knowledgeable horticulturist, Welch is the recent author of "Perennial Garden Color for Texas and the South" and "Antique Roses for the South." He has worked in all areas of Texas and the Permian Basin and can help all gardeners create a magical garden, sensational store front, great containers by using and growing color.

Stop wasting your money on failing flowers. Join us 7 p.m. Tuesday at Ector County Annex, County Commissioners Court Room, 1010 E. 8th Street, Odessa. You'll learn soil preparation, growing techniques, the best annuals and perennials to grow in the Permian Basin and the many fascinating uses of color in the landscape. For more information and pre-registration details call 687-1351 or 335-3071. Registration at the door is $5 per household.

If you can't attend the Landscaping With Color program, there are two points of advice I would give anyone incorporating flowering color. One is to use the same plant in bold groups or drifts, and the other is to always improve the soil with additional organic matter well mixed throughout.

Remember what color can do for you and others. Don't let the summer go by without some color in your landscape.

On the heals of the Landscaping With Color program is the Pecan Grafting and Care Demonstration 4:30 p.m Wednesday at the Boyd Reece Pecan Orchard, 2010 Rankin Highway (south on Rankin Highway, just north of I-20 on the west side of the road). The two best grafting techniques of pecans — the four flap graft and the Texas inlay bark graft — will be taught. Other information will include summer care of pecans, watering, fertilizing, pest management and more. For more information call 687-1351 or 335-3071.

Deborah Benge is the extension horticulture agent for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service in Midland and Ector counties.

Gardening tips for healthy trees, bulbs shared

N.Y. Times News Service

If you plant a magnolia tree, remember that it is a shallow-rooted plant that doesn't cotton to a lawn mower, so plant ground cover from the base of the trunk to the drip line, the area where rain drips off the edge of the canopy. Magnolias like a good rich soil on the acid side, and like all trees, they should be planted in a generous hole and watered well.

Prune magnolias before they flower in the spring, or wait until June, after they have flowered. If you want to eliminate any stems of the star magnolia, which is a multistemmed tree, it's best to do it the first year or so, before the stems get too thick.

The same principle holds for saucer magnolias, which branch low on the trunk. Such pruning can safely be done in June, or from October through March.

Check your local nurseries for healthy potted trees, which can be planted easily now. Two good sources for unusual magnolias are Louisiana Nursery, at Route 7, PO Box 43, Opelousas, La. 70570, which offers a 150-page catalogue for $5 (318) 948-3696, and Gossler Farms, at 1200 Weaver Road, Springfield, Ore. 97478-9691, which has a catalogue for $2 (503) 746-3922.

In other areas of the garden, the rush is on to plant cool-weather crops, like peas, carrots, spinach, lettuce, cabbage, onions and leeks, as soon as the ground is workable. Keep an eye on your indoor seedlings. Don't let them dry out, and give them a half-strength dose of liquid fertilizer about every two weeks.

Make a note of the flowering bulbs that look garish and all wrong where they are, and move them to a better place once the flowers start to fade. If you wait until fall, you won't remember which ones to move, and if you prepare their new home well now, they'll hardly notice the change.

Author offers tips for organic methods of gardening

N.Y. Times News Service

Don't forget organic methods as you get into the swing of spring gardening chores. Here are some tips from "Howard Garrett's Texas Organic Gardening Book":

- Fertilize summer-flowering shrubs and roses with organic fertilizer. Spray rose foliage with Epsom salts and garlic tea. Apply organic root stimulator to newly planted trees and shrubs. Spray liquid organic foliar fertilizer on all foliage.
- Release green lacewings for thrips in roses and gladioluses and for general insect control. Release trichogramma wasps for pecan casebearers. Get rid of aphids with a blast of water, then release ladybugs.
- Treat black spot on roses with a baking-soda spray.
- Treat for ticks, fleas and chiggers with diatomaceous earth/pyrethrum products. Treat for fire ants by pouring vinegar with diatomaceous earth into the mounds, or use pyrethrum/rotenone products.
- Mow the lawn once a week, leaving clippings in place.

Hiking better with safe socks

By Paul McHugh
N.Y. Times News Service

Let's hike! You've got spiffy new lightweight boots, a crushable hat, fanny pack, sunscreen, walking stick and — oh, yes — that moleskin blister kit. So, hit that trail and put down some miles!

Not so fast, buster.

You may believe you've got your feet covered by simply buying the latest hiking boot. But if you haven't put care and concern into selecting socks, your preparation for bipedal locomotion isn't complete.

The facts are these: your socks are the genuine interface between foot and ground.

No matter how much sole your boot has, should your socks slip, sop up sweat, bunch, or press a thick seam into an uncomfortable spot, you'll wind up needing to use that blister kit. Incipient corns, bunions, bruises and hotspots will get inflamed, and by the day's end, your aching dogs will be very tired pups indeed.

"The problem with finding good socks in America is — hikers have shortchanged themselves by buying cheap, crummy socks for so long, that's what many retailers give them," says Michael Hodgson, a technical editor for Outdoor Retailer, Backpacker and Adventure West magazines.

"Nothing that even remotely resembles a tube sock is good for hiking," Hodgson says. "The best use for those things is pinning them up on a mantlepiece on Christmas Eve."

IN GENERAL, hikers should find quality socks by looking for a form-fitting weave, especially one that incorporates a distinct heel cup. All seams should be flat, non-bulky and unobtrusive. Examine labels to discover the relative percentage of ingredients in the yarns; wool is durable and warm, but modern technology is adding olefin, silk, nylon, acrylic, spandex and even kevlar fibers to yarns to enhance fit and durability.

The one thing you shouldn't worry about is price. Expect to pay between $8 and $18 for quality hiking socks. They're worth it.

For one thing, good socks last much longer than cheap ones. For two, they will help save a tender foot from corns, bunions and wear-and-tear problems that can begin by ruining your hikes and end by propelling you to a podiatrist.

Some makers stand ready to insert you into safe socks. Here's current models from industry leaders:

■ Thor-Lo: This North Carolina company began in 1953 to supply boot socks to the military. Jim Throneburg, son of the founders, developed rolltop socks for golfers, then patented socks that were custom-crafted (with weaves, stretch panels and pads) to serve an array of sports.

The Thor-Lo line now holds 268 different models. Hikers will be most interested in the Trekking, Light Trekking and Hiking socks. These use acrylic fibers to wick away moisture, stretch nylon and spandex for a durable fit, and wool for endurance and warmth.

HIGH DENSITY yarn pads under the toe ball and heel give protection from shock and abrasion. There's a low density pad under the arch, and stretch panels for ventilation. For dealer information, call: 800-438-0209.

■ Wigwam: In 1905, the mills that became Wigwam began by supplying wool socks and mittens to lumbermen. It evolved to supply accessories to many different trades, sports and activities, and today produces over 300 items, including matching socks, hats and scarves.

A good, classic ragg hikers' sock is the El-Pine, with 80 percent wool, 18 percent nylon and 2 percent spandex in the yarn. But Wigwam is shooting past tradition with its Trailblazer series, featuring blends of wool, acrylic, spandex, and Hollofil insulating fibers. Trailblazer models include: the Blue Ridge, Pike, Guide and Fjord.

More innovation from Wigwam comes with "breathable" fabrics in the Premier line; its Ultimax models use a water-repellent sole and wicking upper to keep feet dry. Wigwam, like other makers, can't use Thor-lo's patents on differential weaving to put thick pads at stress points. But they utilize a dense "terry" stitch for additional padding at ball and heel. For dealer information, call: 800-558-7760

■ Dahlgren: Former big league pitcher Ray Dahlgren founded his sock company in 1979 to make better athletic socks than he was able to find around him at the time. Now his company holds patents for several distinctive innovations, and provides products for many professional and amateur sports.

IN ITS Dri-Stride line, Dahlgren provides socks that put blended fibers in panels assembled in a "zone construction" to help remove moisture from the foot. In general, Duraspun acrylic is used to wick moisture away from the heel and toe. The arch is cushioned for shock absorbtion, and the instep is flat knit for greater breathability.

Hikers will be most interested in the Hiking/Outdoors model, designed to fit boots. It's constructed with Merino wool, Tussah silk, wool/cotton blends, with bands of Creslan acrylic to aid in wicking. The Alaskan model is similar, but has even heavier yarns.

Look for walking and hiking boots to come out from Dahlgren in the fall, to join with the socks in making a fully integrated foor care system. For dealer information, call: 800-635-8539.

DEAR ABBY

Ring payment for humiliation

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I totally disagree with your statement, "If an engagement is broken by either party, the lady should return the ring, or she's no lady."

Van Buren

I went with "Al" for nine years. In our eighth year, we announced our engagement with plans to marry a year later. My engagement ring was gorgeous — four carats. I quit a successful career to start a business with Al.

Well, umpteen wedding showers later, and only nine days before the wedding, with 600 invited guests, Al called the wedding off. I was crushed and humiliated. He claimed his feelings for me had changed due to flashbacks of "child abuse." (I later learned that he had been having an affair with my best friend!)

My poor parents had spent thousands of dollars, and I had foolishly taken money out of my IRAs and savings to make ours the perfect wedding.

I did not return the ring, and he gave me no argument. Am I less of a lady for having kept it? I felt entitled to it. I will never forget the pain and humiliation, but fortunately, the scars have healed.

This does have a happy ending. I am now happily married to a wonderful man, and I thank God daily for small miracles. Sign me ... A LADY WHO KEPT THE RING

DEAR LADY: Four carats is a lot of lettuce, but since Al gave you no argument, you are definitely no less a lady for having kept the ring.

P.S. I'm curious. What happened to Al and your former best friend?

DEAR ABBY: I am a widow who has been seeing a very special gentleman for the last five months. He has taken me out to dinner and shows, and we enjoy each other's company very much. He is a widower about my age. I have invited him to my home for dinners quite often, and he has contributed dinners by bringing them to my home, which was wonderful. We both hate eating alone.

After dinner (at my home), he said he had something very important to say to me. I thought he was about to propose marriage, but it wasn't that at all. To make a long story short, he took a check out of his wallet and handed it to me. It was for $200. I asked, "What is this for?" He replied, "Well, you have had me to your home for dinners so often, I just wanted to give you a little gift."

I explained that I had invited him to dinner because I enjoyed his company, and with that, I tore up his check in little pieces.

He looked so hurt, I regretted my hasty action, but I really didn't want any money from him.

Abby, is what I did so terrible? I hope it hasn't spoiled our wonderful relationship. But I was momentarily ... INSULTED

DEAR INSULTED: There was nothing wrong with your refusing to accept his check, but it would have been wiser to have simply handed it back to him.

DEAR ABBY: You were wrong to advise "Animal Lover" not to stop after hitting a raccoon on a busy highway. I got into a lot of trouble for hitting a sow on a dark country road two years ago.

We were coming back from a Mardi Gras celebration about 3 a.m., driving through Mississippi, when it happened. The sow was bloodied and stunned and nobody was around, so I pushed it off to the side of the road and continued on my way.

A month later, I got a letter from some farmer's lawyer, demanding $3,000 for what he swore was a prize animal. I showed it to my lawyer and asked what he thought my chances would be in court. He suggested I pay up. When I asked how the accident could be traced to me with no witnesses, he said, "Maybe the pig squealed." — REGINALD V. IN CHICAGO

DEAR REGINALD: After the item appeared in my column, I received a flood of letters from readers pointing out that, while it's unwise to handle an injured wild animal, the driver should have telephoned the state highway police — who could have either handled the matter themselves, or informed the nearest S.P.C.A.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 30-year-old female sailor in the U.S. Navy, stationed in Europe. I recently became acquainted with a 16-year-old American girl who told me there was this really cute guy she had the "hots" for. This "cute guy" is a 21-year-old sailor who, in my opinion, is going on 16 himself.

I had several heart-to-heart talks with her, explaining that sex was something precious that should be saved for marriage.

Well, needless to say, she didn't take my advice, and a month later she joyfully told me that she had been to bed with him. I asked her if this guy was protecting her. She answered, "Oh, I'm taking birth control pills!" I explained that that was not the question — was the fellow responsible enough to protect her from sexually transmitted diseases by using a condom? She then told me he had said condoms were only for one-night stands!

Abby, I just about passed out! We in the military were given a series of lectures about the dangers of unprotected sex. I tried my best to educate this girl. Two months later she said she thought she might be pregnant.

Of course, she was. I urged her to consider adoption, but she wants to keep the baby. Her immaturity is scary — she thinks it will be really "neat" to have a baby; she's told all her friends at school and they think it's "neat," too. All I can do is pray for her and the unborn baby.

Because of a careless relationship on the part of an irresponsible young man and a teen-ager with the "hots" for a cute sailor, a child was conceived. This is neither "neat" nor wonderful. It's a tragedy that has robbed a young girl of her childhood. Sign me ... BROKENHEARTED FRIEND

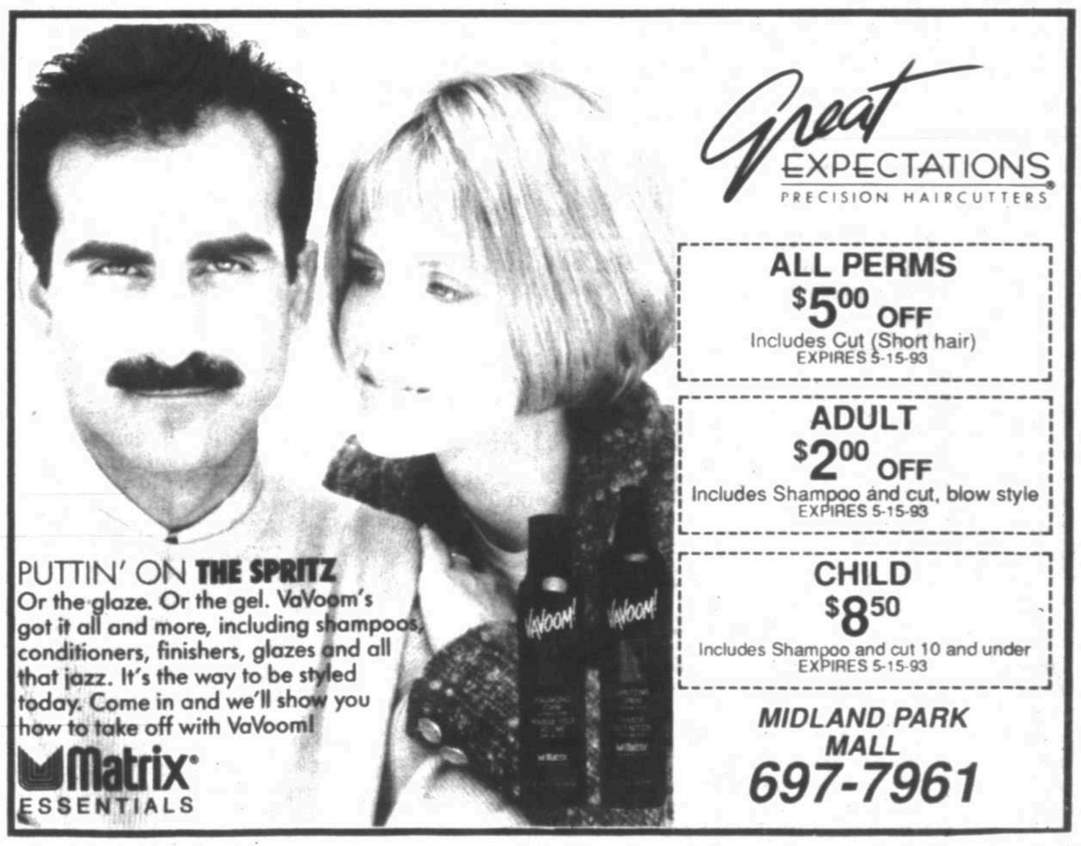

P.S. Abby, please do not use my name, rank or station. It would be apparent to persons here who know her, and I don't want to hurt her family any more than they already are. They are decent, churchgoing people.

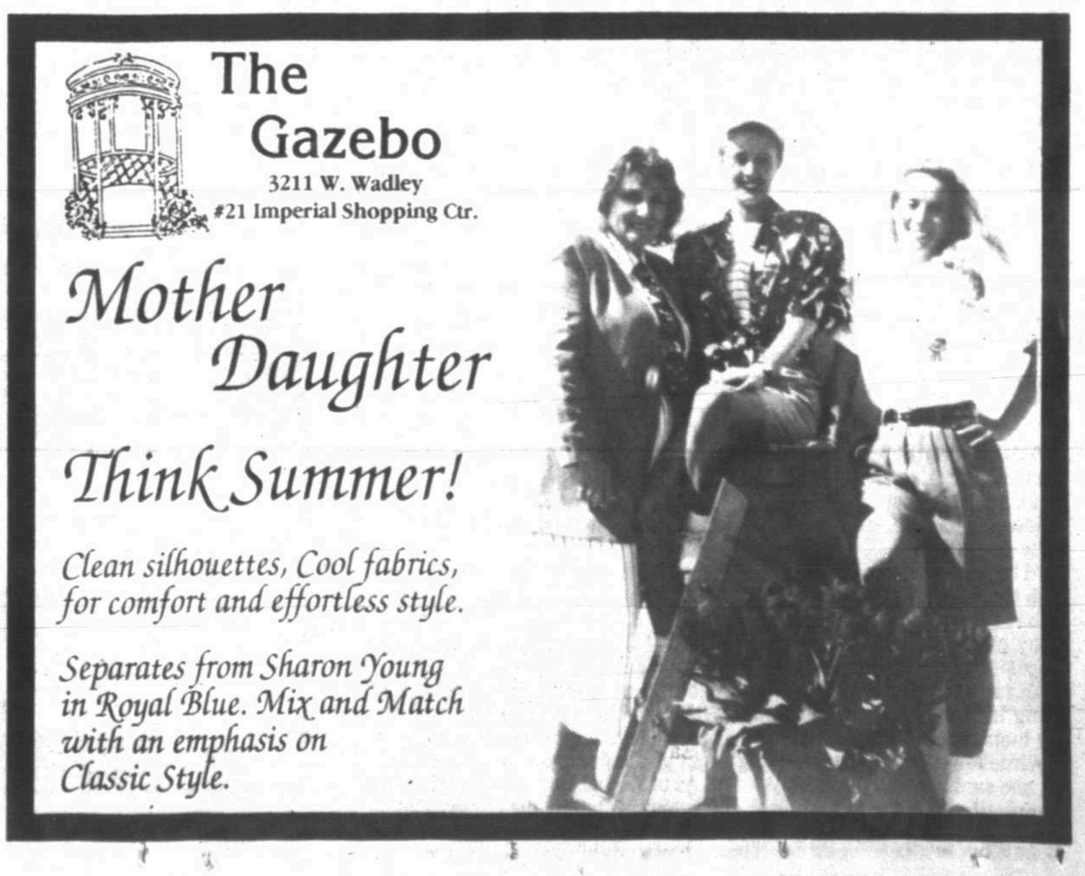

DEAR BROKENHEARTED: It's unfortunate that you couldn't save your young friend. (Doesn't the baby's father have any responsibility in this matter?)

Sadly, your young friend's fate can be multiplied by a million in the United States.

Abby shares more of her favorite, easy-to-prepare recipes. To order, send a business-size, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, More Favorite Recipes, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included.)

Abigail Van Buren's column is distributed by Universal Press Syndicate.

LEE: Garden is 'forever changing'

(From 1F)

In planning her garden, Ms. Lee used her talents as an artist as well. "I would picture how each area would look before planting it. I like curving lines and mixed colors," she said.

"And with the blooms all happening at different times, it makes my garden forever changing. You can come by today and not see the same things you will see next week, or even three days from now. Sections are planned to bloom one right after the other," Ms. Lee said.

"This yard is designed to use less water than a lawn would in this area too. We waste a tremendous amount of water," she said.

As an artist, Ms. Lee has created soft, curved lines of color in planting her flowers and has built small pathways that curve with the design to allow easy access into the garden. She also used a terrace-like system that helps hold water in each section of the garden, allowing each plant to receive the proper amount of water.

"I water it by hand, usually with a soaker hose. I made these barriers — I call them dams — to make sure the plants that need more water get it and to avoid runoff waste," she said. "I only have to water about once a week. I keep mulch in most of the areas to help hold the moisture in longer."

OTHER THAN watering, Ms. Lee said she pulls weeds occasionally, but otherwise, her garden pretty well takes care of itself.

"I just can't leave it alone though. I move things around and plant new things," Ms. Lee said. In fact, she already has seeds for sweet william, stocks and crystal palace lobelia she plans to plant soon. "These are biennial. They will make plants this year and bloom next year."

The oxalis that grace the garden are from bulbs her grandmother passed along to her, while the petunias that sprang up this year are "volunteer," Ms. Lee said. "I had a hanging basket of petunias last year and the seeds must have fallen here because I didn't plant them here this year."

She also has mustard plants that came up again this year from last year's plantings, and a grape vine that she isn't sure where it came from. "It's like getting something for free," Ms. Lee said.

One of her many treasures in her garden is a 30-year-old dwarf winesap apple tree. "It has beautiful apples every year," she said.

"The life expectancy of that tree is only 30 years, but that one keeps going and getting healthier," Ms. Lee said. "Look at the fruit already on it."

She also has pear, peach, red cherry and plum trees.

"I don't know why people don't think that fruit trees will grow here. It's the ideal climate for apples, pears, peaches and cherries. It gets just cold enough here for them to go into dormancy."

WHILE SOME people might consider a garden of this size to be a tremendous amount of work, Ms. Lee finds it fun, educational and relaxing.

She also has fun sharing her garden with the many passersby, particularly the children.

"The kids don't get a chance to see something like this very often. I love to pick a piece of dill and ask them if they want to taste a dill pickle, or have them taste rosemary and ask them if they want a taste of pizza. They're always amazed. They think all this stuff just appears in the stores. They don't know where it comes from," she said.

As for problems with bugs, Ms. Lee prefers the natural approach of using ladybugs, lace wings and praying mantis. "If you stop spraying for bugs, then the good ones will come and take care of the rest."

While Ms. Lee grew up learning about gardening from her grandmother, she said she still has a lot to learn. As of Wednesday, she just finished completing the Master Gardener classes presented by the County Extension Agency.

"I learned a lot. I just thought I knew a lot about gardening. But there wasn't a day in class that I didn't learn something. They bring in speakers from the A&M (University) Research Center where they're always learning new things," Ms. Lee said. "My grandmother taught me things growing up, but you must take a class to really understand, to learn the absolute facts.

"Each week there is a different subject. Master Gardeners teaches you all the things to do," she said.

ALTHOUGH THE name implies that this class is for experienced gardeners, Ms. Lee said no experience is needed to enroll in Master Gardeners. "Most people in the class don't have any knowledge (of gardening)," Ms. Lee said. "Once you've completed the course, you'll be a certified Master Gardener."

The $75 fee for the course doesn't begin to cover the costs incurred by bringing in speakers, so 50 hours of volunteer service are also required before a person can become a certified Master Gardener, Ms. Lee said. This volunteer work may include helping with city parks, schools, nurseries, handing out brochures from the Extension Agency and answering questions. "We also give tours for school children. One tour we gave was of a lady's wild flower garden," Ms. Lee, where the volunteers explain the gardens to the children.

But Ms. Lee's green thumb is not limited to her flowers. She also has a vegetable garden in her back yard. There, the list of edibles includes leeks, figs, strawberries, English peas, beets, spinach, currants, and again, the list goes on.

"I plan to move the grape vine from the front back here next year," she said.

Ms. Lee also has begun to sell some of her plants. "I have had so many people come by and ask me, 'Where can I get this or that,' and I tell them that some of them they can't because they are from handed down clippings or bulbs. But I keep changing my garden, and then you either have to dig them up and throw them away, or let others have them. So I decided to sell some of mine."

Gardener gives growing tips

Expert says gardens are simple as sunshine, soil, soluble fertilizer

By Barbara DeWitt
N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — The hummingbirds are humming, the bees are buzzing and the roses are in full bloom without an aphid in sight.

So, how does your garden grow?

If you feel like you've got a black thumb instead of a green one because everything you plant dies, listen up. According to Joel Rapp, a West Hollywood garden expert known to television viewers as "Mr. Mother Earth," it's as simple as sunshine, soil and soluble fertilizer. And also picking the right plants for the right location, adds gardening expert Florence Bright, past president of the Cherry Blossom Garden Club in suburban West Hills.

Rather than intimidating gardening novices, Rapp turns gardening into child's play. In his latest gardening book, "Let's Get Growing," (Crown Publishers; $7), Rapp writes in simple, easy terms especially for children, but it's a good primer for the black-thumb gardener, too.

"To have a great garden is a challenge that begins and ends with finding a spot where you'll get at least a half-day of sunshine," Rapp said.

For Bright, the key to a great garden is loving care and interest. "I spend a lot of time checking on them, pruning them and spraying with soapy water to rid them of aphids, which are common in the (San Fernando) Valley," she said. "They're like children and require a lot of nurturing, but no, you don't have to talk to them to make them grow," she said with a chuckle.

BESIDES SUN and love, you've got to prepare the soil properly by making it nice and rich and as light as possible to have good drainage and oxygen, Rapp and Bright agreed.

"If it's too clay-like, which is common in the San Fernando Valley, plants can drown, so you'll want to buy vermiculite and mix it with compost or peat moss," Rapp said.

And keep it activated, added Bright.

However, if it's too sandy it won't get enough water and you'll be watering your plants every day, said Rapp.

Prospective gardeners should then visit the nursery, see what they like, find out what it is and if it will grow in their garden. The direction of the sun in relation to one's garden will indicate how sunny or shady it is, Rapp said, so it's important to know if the garden faces east or west, north or south.

If you're an inexperienced gardener without a lot of time to fuss over plants, Rapp suggested the following flowers as best bets during Los Angeles' hot summers: gazanias, geraniums, petunias, marigolds, mums, daisies and roses. Poppies and ranunculus are good, also, but the season is almost over here, he said. Another spring favorite, pansies, are easy to care for, but they require a lot of water and are very tasty to slugs and snails.

BRIGHT AGREED that drought-resistant plants are best for hot summers. Pansies have to be watered every other day, she said, and they don't do well with full sun. "They look good at shopping malls, where they get lots of sun," she explained, "but they're also replaced regularly."

If you're looking for flowering shrubs or trees, Bright suggested the Matilija poppy with big white flowers and the crepe myrtle tree. "Crepe Myrtle has pretty flowers, doesn't need much water and isn't messy," she added.

For shady flower beds, Rapp suggested acid soil-loving gardenia and camellia bushes, as well as quick-growing impatiens and begonias. And Bright added calla lilies as another shade lover that do well in the Valley and don't require an acidic soil.

If you like butterflies to flock to your yard, consider planting daisies, sunflowers, heliotrope, lavender, petunias, phlox, marigolds and zinnias, the experts said.

And if you like hummingbirds buzzing around, as well as bees, plant a trumpet vine with purple flowers. Generally, they like anything to sip nectar out of, which could include honeysuckle, fuchsia and penstemon, although Bright favors the big red flowers of hibiscus.

RAPP SUGGESTED planting all flowers according to the instructions on the attached tags and making sure they're near a water source. "You'll have to inspect the garden daily," he said. "Feel the soil and make sure the roots are moist and when things get droopy, you've waited too long."

About that watering schedule.

Rapp says to water in late evening or early morning as mid-day watering evaporates the minute it hits the ground. Use organic mulch, such as grass clippings, sawdust, compost, cottonseed hulls or pine needles to slow down the evaporation of the water from the soil, protect tender feeder roots from the heat and control weeds.

Now, think about fertilizer. The idea of fertilizers, composts and special meals is to create the perfect natural environment for the plant, and an experienced nurseryman can advise you. But it's best if you use a combination of chemical organic types about once a month. And not to worry, said Rapp — the small amount of chemical fertilizer used in home gardening won't affect water tables.

ONCE THE garden is perfect, the uninvited dinner guests arrive.

"Slugs and snails are already in the soil, just waiting for you to plant pansies, for instance," he said. "But don't use chemical pesticides, when you can buy good bugs at the nursery to eat the bad bugs or a box of organic powder that you mix with water and spray on the plant."

So forget the notion that a good bug is a dead one. Bring home a box of ladybugs, green lacewing larvae, trichogramma wasps (they're harmless to humans) or praying mantises, introduce them to your garden and watch your black thumb turn green.

Plant with birds in mind

N.Y. Times News Service

Don't forget the birds this spring as you plant new shrubbery, trees and perennials. Instead of planting more forsythia and rhododendrons, which do not provide food for birds, plant holly, dogwood, crab apple, rosa rugosa, viburnum, winterberry and bayberry.

"Landscaping for Birds," a free brochure by Nancy Tim, the horticulturist at the Wildlife Conservation Society (formerly the New York Zoological Society), says that birds need a variety of layers: large trees; smaller trees like mountain ash, dogwood and shad blow; a layer of shrubs like blueberry, bayberry and firethorn, and ground covers like bearberry and bunchberry.

The brochure is available by calling (212) 439-6527.

'Phony pony' is environmentally correct toy

By Christopher Evans
N.Y. Times News Service

FORT WORTH — Tired of a non-swinging existence?

Need a toy for horsing around — that you can dangle from a rafter and ride like the wind?

Say yippy-ti-yi-yo to the Phony Pony, a Cowtown device with an Earth Day angle.

Made from a discarded tire, rope, a hickory stick, bolts and washers, the Phony Pony, aside from being Earth-friendly, is tough enough to withstand the rowdiest of day-care center horseplay; requires almost no maintenance once it's installed; and has a price that's right — $45 for the 13-inch-tire model, $55 for the 14-inch model and $65 for the 16-inch model.

What's more, mounting a Phony Pony is almost the same mechanically as getting on a real steed.

The only problem is getting one. "We just can't produce these things fast enough," says John McCullough, 54.

McCullough, Bob Kilman and Mike Scott, who make Phony Ponies, have no promotional literature on their toy and no mailing address for inquiries, even though their product is at play in at least a dozen area day-care centers and numerous residential settings.

"This is not my original idea, I just enlarged on it," confesses McCullough, a Fort Worth native and the entrepreneur of the three.

A DISABLED veteran who did two tours in Vietnam as a combat photographer and correspondent, McCullough got the Phony Pony idea several years ago in Ringold, Okla., where he saw a primitive version hanging in a tree. It almost looked like a real horse.

"But it didn't have the ears, the mane, the tail, the bridle and the stirrups like ours do now."

So, initially, McCullough experimented with how to make horse-style tire swings. "Once I figured out how to do it, I made some to raise money for the Ringold Volunteer Fire Department, we raised enough money to buy several firefighter suits," he said. "But when I came back to Fort Worth a year and a half ago, I got to thinking these things would sell anywhere."

He got with Kilman, his cousin, and the two of them went to work on an apartment patio. "What we've done mainly, besides trying to learn how to make them faster, is to improve on the product," said Kilman, 59.

They figured a way to cut the tires and make "ears that you can grab a-hold of if you want to and not hurt 'em," as McCullough put it. They found that ⅜-inch polyester rope works best for the hanging rope, that ⅜-inch nylon twist rope, when untwisted, makes a mean mane and tail. They found that by putting washers on the 5/16-inch carriage bolts that hold the "horse" together, the nuts on the bolts wouldn't come off easily. They put on tire-rubber stirrups to make the climbing on the "horse" easier. And only recently, they added the bridle.

"We're thinking about putting a yellow mane on some of 'em and calling it a palomino, then we've also considered putting out a gray-and-silver model for the Dallas Cowboys, and maybe a red, white and blue one for the Fourth of July. John and me, because we both served in the military, plan to give 15 percent of what we bring in to Vietnam veterans organizations."

— Bob Kilman
Phony Pony maker

"Way it is now, a kid has a choice of the ears or the bridle to grab," McCullough said.

"WE'RE THINKING about putting a yellow mane on some of 'em and calling it a palomino, then we've also considered putting out a gray-and-silver model for the Dallas Cowboys, and maybe a red, white and blue one for the Fourth of July," said Kilman, a Korean War veteran who works nights as a watchman for an iron works and formerly was in the plumbing, heating and air conditioning business. "John and me, because we both served in the military, plan to give 15 percent of what we bring in to Vietnam veterans organizations."

To help meet demand, McCullough has tutored Mike Scott, 27, in making Phony Ponies. "I can make maybe three a day now and I'm sort of like an apprentice to John," said Scott, a 1983 graduate of the Fort Worth Masonic Home and School. "He's been kind enough to show me all the secrets how to make 'em. Once I'm good enough, I'll be on my own. It's not like I'm going into business with him and Bob."

And while Scott would love it if the Phony Pony made it big — "I'd love to be able to make a good living doing this" — he, too, wants to "do the charity thing like John (McCullough) does."

"I do plan to give 10 percent of everything I make to the Arlington (Texas) Boys Club, which was really good to me while I was growing up," Scott said.

LINDY FOGLE, proprietor at Lindy's Little World Child Care Center in White Settlement, started with two Phony Ponies, is up to four and hopes to eventually have a stable of 12. "I keep 12 kids each shift and I'd love to have a pony for each one," Fogle said. "The kids interact with them, talk to them.

"The four we have now all have names," she added. "Thunderbolt, Aerial, Flash and Lightning. And what I really like about them is that they don't have anything sticking out that could scratch a child. Plus, there are plenty of things to hold on to.

"The kids don't fall off. And they'll play races or cowboys and Indians until you pull them off. I've had kids fall asleep on the ponies."

McCullough and Kilman, meanwhile, can make up to four Phony Ponies a day on the patio behind Kilman's apartment. Scott is up to about three a day "if I'm really into it ... But what I like about making them is that it's basically enjoyable and I can work at it as hard as I want to."

If making more Phony Ponies is a goal of McCullough's, making only a few a day doesn't seem to bother him.

"It's one of those handicraft deals where it's hard to expedite production speed without hiring a lot of people," said McCullough, drawing on an old tire with a ballpoint pen to make a pony pattern. "That's one aspect of it we sort of want to keep, the handicraft aspect. We're not into mass production, not yet. Maybe we never will be."

Million reasons why money can't buy love

By Erma Bombeck

Just when you think you've heard every far-out story ever pitched in Hollywood, along comes "Indecent Proposal," the story of a billionaire who offers $1 million to sleep with a man's wife.

Bombeck

I didn't have enough on my mind worrying about Bosnia, Mia and Woody, and crime in Miami. Now I have to think about what to do if faced with an infidelity lottery.

Frankly, the concept has shaken up the married community. It's all couples are talking about. Not since Michael Douglas and Glenn Close in "Fatal Attraction" forced us to consider the pitfalls of adultery have we dissected our relationships so intensely.

There isn't a woman who hears about the premise of the film who doesn't secretly wonder how her spouse would react to the proposal.

As my husband dozed in his chair, I kicked his foot and asked, "Would you consider sharing me for a million bucks?"

He remained silent for a moment. "Are we talking about a cashier's cash?"

"What difference does it make?" I shouted. "You've missed the point. This isn't Ed McMahon with a Publishers Clearinghouse winner. This is a man buying your wife!"

"Would we be having this conversation if the billionaire was played by Ernest Borgnine?"

"Redford isn't the issue here," I lied. "The money is."

"How did he find out about you in the first place? Is this a random sleepover?"

"I don't know. It's all just hypothetical."

"Then why is it important to know? Tell me when the offer is firm."

I stared at Redford's picture that topped the story I was reading. "Everyone could use a million dollars," I said wistfully. "Of course, I'd give the money to the president to apply to the national debt."

"How about the orphanage?" smiled my husband.

"The orphanage is good."

"Now I know what this is all about," he said. "It's a reprise of the old theme, 'Do you love me?' "

"If men would say it more often, we wouldn't have to set you up."

"We had this same conversation when Bette Midler was kidnapped in a film and ransomed, and they marked her down."

"You're just teasing," I said. "You wouldn't share me for a million dollars ... or 2 million or 3 million. Would you?"

I should have known better than throw that many zeros at a man who needs a new transmission.

Ladies association meeting set

Staff report

Ranchland Hills Country Club Ladies Association will meet Wednesday at the club. Social time will be 11:30 a.m. with luncheon to be served at noon. For reservations call 682-3729 by noon Tuesday.

Rebecca Papazian

Rebecca Papazian of San Angelo will give a talk on her life and travels. She was born in Jerusalem to Armenian parents and lived in that city for the first 20 years of her life. She attended Armenian elementary and junior high schools, and a British high school.

The second 20 years of her life Ms. Papazian lived in Uruguay, South America. She earned an accounting degree from Universidad de Contabilidad.

She moved to Texas and earned a bachelor of business administration degree and a Spanish degree from Abilene Christian University.

Ms. Papazian refers to herself as "a working woman, an accountant by profession and a grandmother by choice." Currently she is the county auditor for Tom Green County.

Magazine to publish 500th issue

N.Y. Times News Service

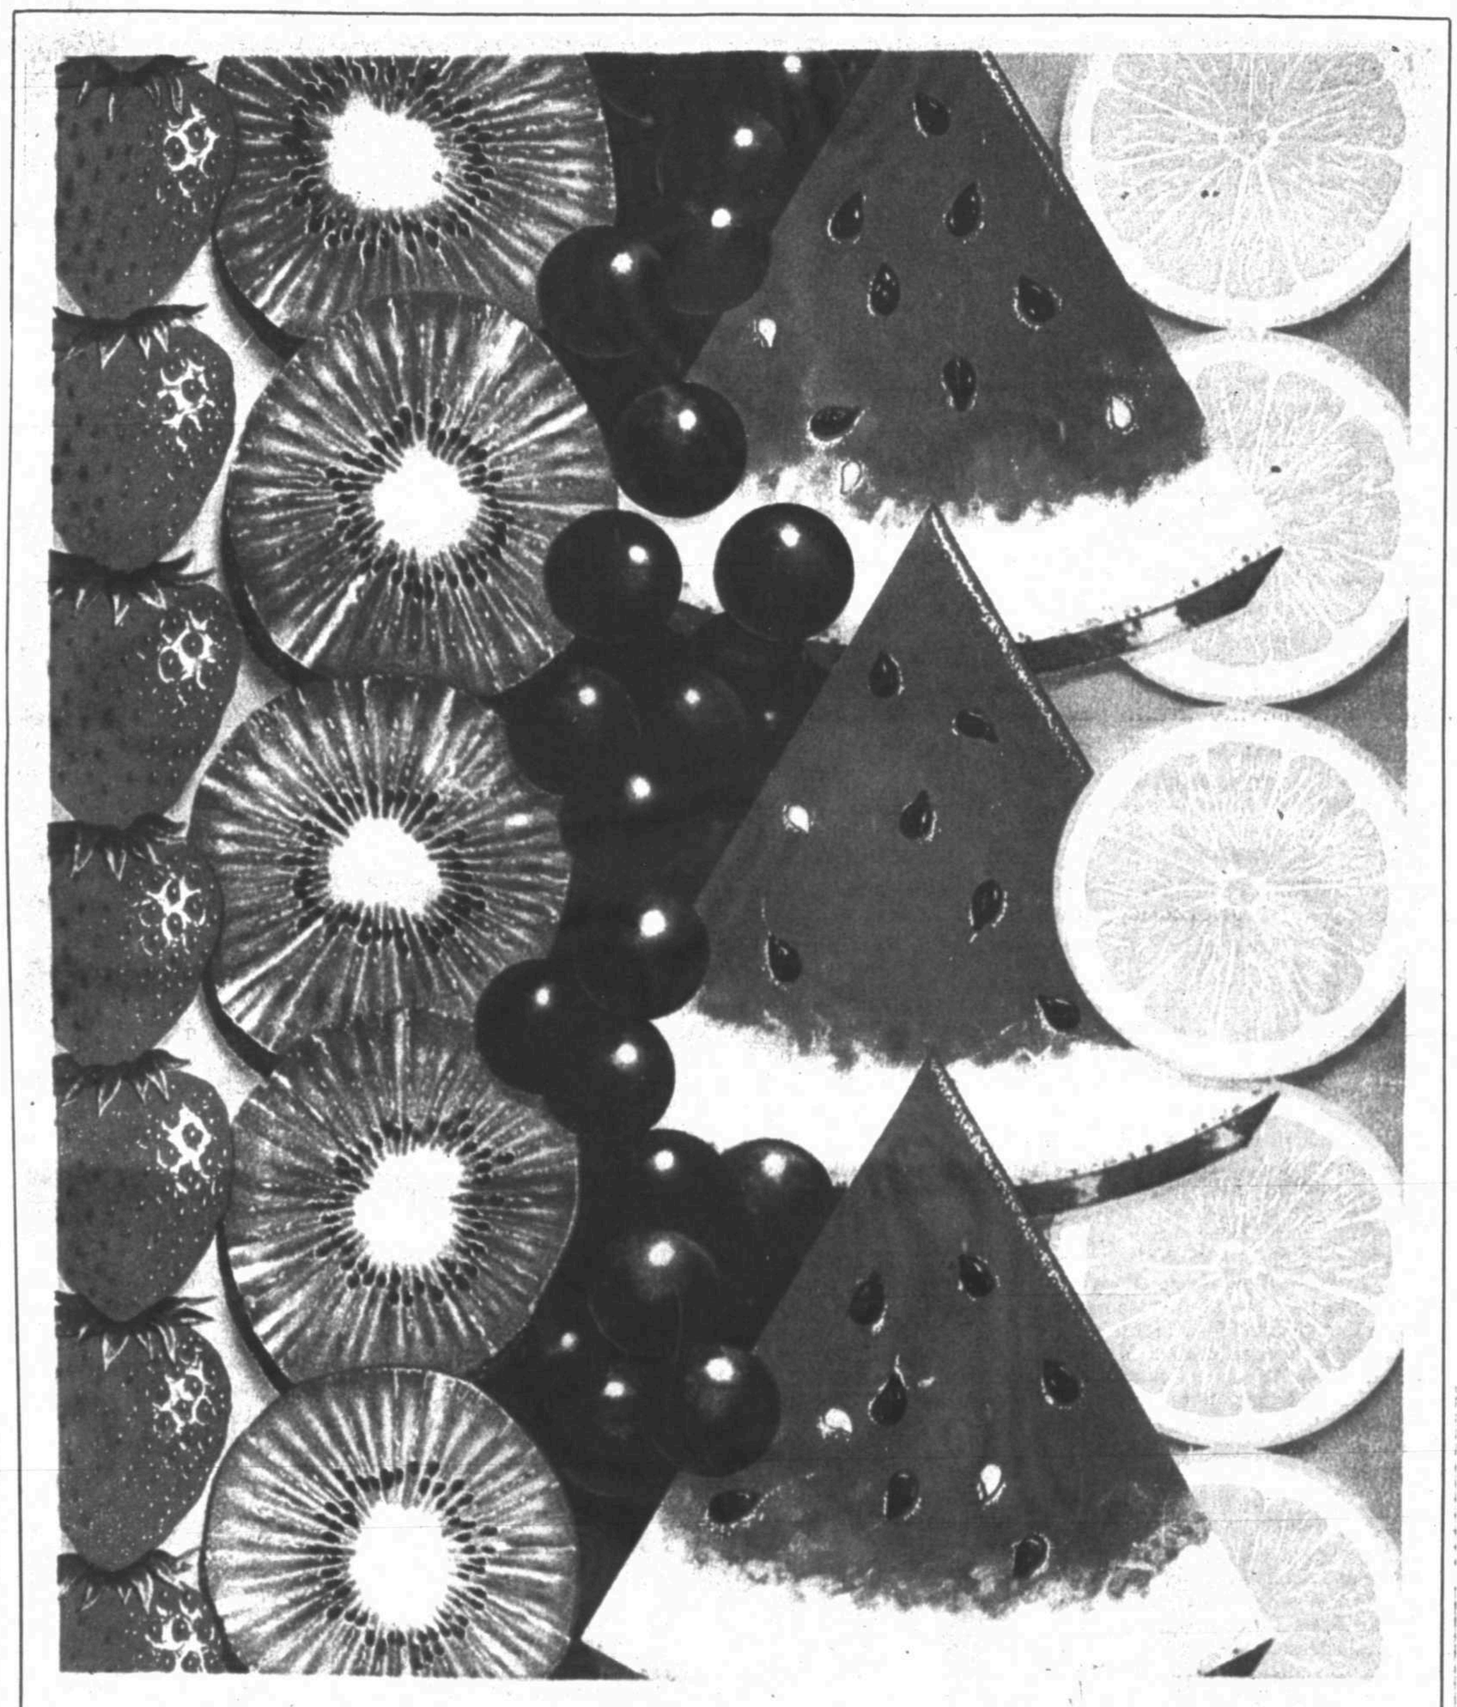

"Highlights for Children" is getting old, but it's trying not to age.

The venerable magazine that has been gently guiding children to literacy with pictures and stories since 1946 will reach a milestone in May when it publishes its 500th issue.

There have been changes between one and 500. For one thing, today's issues have color on every page. And another is that the little project started by a couple of Ph.D.s who couldn't get rid of 20,000 copies of the first edition, is selling 2.8 million magazines each month.

The philosophy hasn't budged. "Our goal is to develop thoughtful, literate citizens," said Editor Kent L. Brown Jr., grandson of the magazine's founders. "We very much see reading as a lifelong habit rather than a simple skill."

The mission is to entertain children into reading and thinking.

For pianist and singer Doug Montgomery, life has been filled with surprises.

"I was an avid ball player as a boy, and I thought baseball was where I was going to go based on my coordination and my tendency toward athletics," said Montgomery, who performs here with tenor Jeffrey Reynolds for Midland Opera Theatre at 7 p.m. May 9 at Theatre Midland, 2000 W. Wadley Ave.

In the fifth grade, Montgomery walked into his first music class and his life changed in less than a school class period. When he recalled the experience, he said he could still smell the ink on the mimeograph sheet containing the words to Harry Belafonte's "Yellow Bird" that the teacher passed out.

"When she struck the first few chords of the piano, I became mesmerized to the sound of the piano way more than singing a song. She was a music teacher for public schools, but she was a good enough pianist to grab my attention. From that moment on, I couldn't wait to go to music class just to hear her play that piano."

In less than a month, Montgomery was taking private lessons and practicing on the "old upright" at his parents' home in Chicago.

"My mother and father never really encouraged me to take lessons until I started begging for them."

His mother agreed to drive him to his lessons and his father agreed he would pay for them as long as he practiced. Montgomery not only practiced, he excelled.

"I understood it, and I loved it. I couldn't wait until the next lesson. I was getting double doses of the assignments. The teacher realized I was into it completely."

At first, Montgomery wanted to play popular music. His teacher encouraged him to learn a couple of classical pieces so he would understand music's foundation.

"I ended up absolutely loving the Bach, and Mozart and Beethoven and eventually Chopin and more difficult composers. It made sense to me. All of a sudden, popular music took a back seat."

Music became Montgomery's passion. He was involved in every aspect of his high school's music department — from the concert orchestra to playing piano concertos with the orchestra. He was the music director for the musicals and the pianist for the jazz band, which won numerous awards around the state.

By the time Montgomery was 15, he was attending Northwestern University pre-college where he studied piano under Gui Mombaerts.

He received his master's degree from Juilliard School of Music, where he studied under Martin Canin. Upon receiving his degree, he was awarded the Joseph Lhevinne Scholarship in Piano and remained to teach for one year at Juilliard.

Montgomery first attracted national attention as a top prize winner in the prestigious Robert Casadesus Piano Competition. He also won first prize in the Musical Arts Competition in Chicago sponsored by the Society of American Musicians.

Montgomery performed with numerous American orchestras and in festivals in Europe and South America.

"The problem was trying to get enough re-engagements and new concerts to sustain just living — paying rent and eating. There were plenty of playing opportunities, but they never paid anything. The same with music competitions. Plenty of them try to bring new talent forward, but they don't pay anything either.

"Artists don't need that much money. In that way, I guess we're lucky. We need just enough to sustain ourselves. We need a roof over our heads and some meals.

"But, when you can't even pay for that, then you have to start looking at ways to exist."

After showing so much promise and working so hard for years, Montgomery had to leave New York City.

"I had two months of rent due and they were after me. Three big shipping boxes — that's all I had to my name and two of those boxes were just music and books — I sent to my parents address in Chicago where I grew up and lived as a kid. And I had no choice but to take what money I had left in my account and get a one-way ticket."

In 1981, he went home to his parents' house, the only security base he had, to figure out his next move.

"I fell into an incredible depression. I didn't want to play the piano that was still there in my home. I felt like I was a complete failure. I had incredible low self-esteem.

"I was 28 years old. I had not a penny to my name. I had accomplished many things. I had spent countless hours practicing a profession that looked like it wasn't going to pan out at all."

A love affair with music

Trumpeter Bryon Stripling will share his love affair with the Midland-Odessa Symphony & Chorale audience on Saturday.

"What I will be doing with the symphony is what I call my 'love affair,'" said Stripling, who will be playing the music of Louis Armstrong at the final pops concert.

Stripling's acting, vocal and trumpet-playing abilities won him the 1987 role of "Satchmo" in the musical "Satchmo: America's Musical Legend" after an international search for a musician who embodied Armstrong's talent and charisma. During a recent interview, he spoke of musicians like Armstrong, Dizzy Gillespie and Duke Ellington with reverence.

"Through their music, you could tell they had a great love of their music. They also were able to spread it to other people.

"Duke Ellington was the one who said, 'Music is my mistress.' And Louis Armstrong claims to have broken up with his first girlfriend because he was 'quote' too wrapped up in his music."

Of his own life and career, Stripling said, "When you're a jazz musician and you have a relationship with a woman, you're automatically committing adultry. The music is your other woman so you have to have a woman that understands what you do."

Sing opera and see the world

By Georgia Todd Temple
Staff writer

Tenor Jeff Reynolds comes from a family of singers.

"We're from a fairly big German family, and everyone pretty much sang," said Reynolds, who performs here May 9 at Theatre Midland along with Doug Montgomery for Midland Opera Theater's "A Very Special Night."

"Mom always had the Texaco broadcasts on on the weekend. She had been a club singer in Chicago and New York and my father (tenor William Lewis) was an opera singer, and they were married a short time. He's been at the Met for about 35 years now. Singing was something I naturally did."

Yet, Reynolds is the only one out of nine brothers and sisters who pursued a career in music. A graduate of Indiana State University, Reynolds furthered his studies at the Civic Light Opera Theater in Los Angeles and with Sanford Meisner. He is a grant recipient of the Santa Fe Opera and NIMT's George London grant.

"I went out to Los Angeles first just to see what it was like, but I came back to New York to do my training. You have to go out there (Los Angeles) with your talent already intact, and New York is the best place to train for things, whether it be acting, dance or singing."

Reynolds, who is currently pursuing a successful career in opera, began his performing career in musical theater in productions of "The Most Happy Fella," "South Pacific," "Brigadoon" and "110 in the Shade." He appeared as Ephraim in "Seven Brides for Seven Brothers" both on Broadway and in the national tour. He was Aramis in the Hartman Theater production of "Three Musketeers."

"I did three Broadway shows, and two of them only lasted two weeks. I also did three other tryouts. It's so incredibly frustrating.

"You can't have a career for the rest of your life in Broadway now, there just isn't enough work, there's not enough shows," said Reynolds, who performed Tony in the Opera Pacific production of "West Side Story," a role he has performed on several other occasions, including the recent Broadway revival and for his European debut in the 1989 Lille Festival.

"It's a much more limited form," Reynolds said of Broadway. "Any one opera company in the country is probably going to do two or three operas a year. There's more opera productions than Broadway shows. No comparison."

It was this availability of work that encouraged Reynolds to expand his career into opera.

In the 1990-'91 season he debuted with the Wellington (New Zealand) City Opera as Tamino in "The Magic Flute," Christchurch City (New Zealand) Opera as Pinkerton in "Madama Butterfly" and the New Israel Opera as Anthony in "Sweeney Todd," returning there for Tamino as well as Ernesto in "Don Pasquale."

Last season he made his European operatic debut in Michael Tippett's "King Priam" with the Vlaamse Opera in Antwerp, Belgium, and returned to the United States for his debut with the Eugene Opera as Tybalt in "Romeo et Juliette." He also toured the Middle East as Pinkerton.

This seasor in addition to other engagements, he will make his debut at the Teatro Colon in Buenos Aires as 'The Painter' in "Lulu."

"The other reason I went into opera, initially was, I wanted to see the world," Reynolds said.

Although he has enjoyed the travel that goes with singing in opera houses throughout the world, dealing with some of the personalities has been a difficult adjustment.

"The opera world is so difficult, so many egos constantly at battle with each other, that sometimes it can just take the joy out of singing," Reynolds said. "That's why I make the traveling special. I see all the historical stops. I've been to Jerusalem three times and all over the Middle East. That is what really keeps it special for me, keeps it fresh and keeps me involved in my work."

One of his favorite places is in this country.

"I love Santa Fe," said Reynolds. "The best times have been in Santa Fe during the summer for the program out there."

Reynolds, who has spent four seasons in Santa Fe, performed with the Santa Fe Opera in Jurgen von Bose's "Sorrows of the Young Wether" and John Gay's "The Beggar's Opera."

It was in Santa Fe four years ago that he meet classically trained pianist Doug Montgomery, the featured entertainer at Vanessies Restaurant.

Through the years, the two have become friends and are now launching a tour that combines both their talents. They will premiere the program they have developed here May 8 when they perform for Midland Opera Theater at Theatre Midland.

"We are trying to give the people who aren't as familiar with opera and that art form more of a sense of familiarity with it and not letting it become a scary experience," Reynolds said. "People sometimes think opera is too complicated for them to get involved in."

The Midland audience will be furnished with translations for the operatic selections Reynolds sings which are not in English.

Sub-titles, which can be found in all U.S. opera houses except the Metropolitan and Santa Fe, have, Reynolds said, "changed the whole perspective for opera. It's more accessible. It now has become more like theater."

Working as a free-lance opera singer is not an inexpensive endeavor, Reynolds said.

"The overhead is high because of the cost of coaching for the pieces and the travel and hotels and the phone calls. You are constantly selling yourself. The promotion costs are really expensive as well."

Reynolds, who has a passion for college basketball, finds his life satisfying with one practical exception.

"I would like to be able to make enough money to have a decent lifestyle in the business."

The 35-year-old tenor said he knew, at times, he sounded cynical when he didn't intend to, yet his words came from experience and were not designed to discourage talented performers from pursuing their dreams.

"It's like I've lived two lives in it so I know how things can go," said Reynolds, referring to the experiences he has had in the business as well as those his father has had.

"I'm not as bright-eyed and bushy-tailed about it as I used to be. When I first came to Broadway, I was really naive. But, you just learn."

MOT to present 'A Very Special Night'

Staff report

Midland Opera Theater presents "A Very Special Night" at 7 p.m. May 9 at Theatre Midland, 2000 W. Wadley Ave.

Guest artists are pianist Doug Montgomery of Vanessies Restaurant in Santa Fe and tenor Jeffrey Reynolds, who appears frequently with the Santa Fe Opera.

"On any given night a singer will come up and ask if they can sing with me, or a violin player, or a trumpet player, or a saxophone player," said Montgomery, recalling how he met Reynolds.

"And, I don't really work with a group normally. I just have people sit in and we jam. They will tell me their key, and if I know the song, we'll just start making music. Jeff Reynolds is one of those people that has sung with me over the years."

Both are classically trained artists.

"Jeff, like myself, is versatile. He can go from classical to popular selections," Montgomery said.

The two have formulated an act for which Midland is the premiere performance.

The first half of the program will feature opera selections. Translations for those numbers not sung in English will be found in the program. The second half will feature Reynolds and Montgomery both singing selections from musical theater.

"Doug and I work well together," Reynolds said.

Ticket prices are $7.50 for general admission and $6.50 for students and senior citizens. A limited number of seats are available.

Co-sponsors for the event are Texaco Inc., Mr. and Mrs. Henri de Compiegne, Joanie and Bobby Holt and Kay and Charlie Bird.

Doors open at 6:30 p.m. A reception will follow the performance. For tickets call 684-4101 or mail check to MOT, P.O. Box 4504, Midland, 79704.

PIANO: Musician once had a modeling career expected turn the day his sister, Debra Montgomery, a professional photographer, stopped by and asked him to come to her studio for the day. He agreed. On the way to the studio, she told her brother she had to stop at a modeling agency.

He said when the people who ran the agency found out he was her brother, they asked if he could model. He said yes, and they told him, " 'We've got a job for you to go on this afternoon at 2 o'clock. One of our models cancelled, and we need you.' " he remembered.

"A new career opened up suddenly," Montgomery said. "I forgot all about my piano-playing problems. That first modeling afternoon led to a job the next day and the next day, and suddenly I was working everyday."

For at least six months Montgomery didn't play the piano.

"I was so busy becoming a clothes horse and figuring out the modeling profession. I paid off some of my debts, and I got myself basically back on my feet esteemwise, too, because I could open up any Sears or Montgomery Wards catalog and say, 'That's me.' "

After having a "nice hiatus" from playing the piano, Montgomery realized he wanted to play again. Also, he knew in terms of his future that he had to think past modeling. His answer came to him one night when he went to a piano bar with some friends.

"I realized suddenly it was only because I had had so much training in classical music that I was having a hard time justifying ever playing popular music. In my mind, I always thought I can play this stuff as a stepping stone to playing only classical music.

"But as I listened to this gentleman play, I realized, with my years of training and my classical ability, I could probably play those same things in my own fashion, in my own arrangements and feel good and take pride in my popular arrangements, which are really based in a lot of classical techniques."

Montgomery had hit another turning point in his life. He began modeling by day and practicing at night, setting a goal for himself of learning three to four song arrangements a week. When a friend of his, another pianist, who had left New York City for the same reason Montgomery had, called him from Santa Fe and said, "You've got to come out here and see this magnificent land," Montgomery accepted.

Again his life was to take an unexpected turn. While in Santa Fe, he walked past the construction site of what was to become Vanessies of Santa Fe, the piano bar where he would begin working full time beginning in 1983. The owner was at the site.

"We went down the street and found a piano, and I played three different styles for him and he says, shrugging his shoulders, 'Sounds good to me. What do I know? I'm just a soup merchant.' "

Unknown to Montgomery, he had found a home. Now a New Mexico resident along with his parents and his sister, he still plays full time at Vanessies of Santa Fe. He also performs concert dates elsewhere.

In 1986, he added another aspect to his performance. Singing.

"I had a very sweet, patient teacher who proceeded to tell me at the end of the eight lessons — 'Doug, you'll make a very adequate saloon singer, but I hope people continue to come to hear you play the piano because that's where you real gift is.' I would never argue with her on that.' Piano playing is the important thing. Singing is a bonus for those who like saloon stylings."

Today, Montgomery is quite satisfied with his life and his career.

"When you are in the lounge, you see everybody from truck drivers to presidents. I played for Gerald Ford a month ago.

"Obviously, the guys who do landscaping and electrical and construction ask for different things than the people who come in after the Santa Fe Opera. So there's never a dull moment in terms of repertoire.

"I'm not as burned out as a lot of lounge players. I know what great music is. I know how to appreciate it, and I know how to find it. I know how to play it, if I want to. But I've come to terms with the fact that I don't necessarily have to make my bread and butter performing it from one town to the next."

STRIPLING: MOSC great vehicle express his jazz, trumpeter says the fourth grade, is the son of a classical singer, Luther Stripling, and the brother of a classical conductor, Cedric Ravel Stripling.

(From 1G)

"I'm the black sheep of the family," Stripling said. "I'm a jazz musician."

His extensive formal background includes training at the Eastman School of Music in Rochester, N.Y., and the Interlochen Arts Academy in Interlochen, Mich., where he worked with Don Th. Jaeger, MOSC conductor.

"He's a great conductor, and it's a pleasure to be working with him again," Stripling said of Yeager. "The conductor — the person who's in charge — sets the tone and spirit of the whole organization. Luckily, Don Yeager's got a great spirit in his conducting, which brings out a lot in the musicians, so I'm really happy he asked me to play with his orchestra."

The 31-year-old trumpeter has earned acclaim for his performances as lead trumpeter and soloist with the Count Basie Orchestra, directed by Thad Jones and Frank Foster. He also has worked with the bands of Dizzy Gillespie, Woody Herman, Lionel Hampton, Clark Terry and the Lincoln Center Classical Jazz Orchestra.

His career working with symphonies began when the Boston Pops asked him to perform in their tribute to Louis Armstrong.

"I usually play jazz clubs and concerts for people. I never played with a symphony as a soloist except classically as a kid.

"I said, 'This is a great vehicle to express myself with jazz with a symphony orchestra.' So, I developed the whole program — 'my love affair.' "

The New York Times has described Stripling as "a powerful trumpeter, at ease with the most complicated and derailed bebop lines and open-arm Armstrong swagger."

During his performance he will also play works by other well-known Americans.

"Besides the tribute to Louis Armstrong that I am going to do, I'm going to play some music by Dizzy Gillespie, and 'Summertime' by Gershwin and a tune by Red Rodney. That encompasses three different types of jazz — swing, bebop and American popular song."

The concert, which will be held at Odessa's Holiday Inn Centre, will be at 8 p.m. The performance is sponsored by Texas Commerce Bank of Odessa, Sun Chrysler-Plymouth and Boldrick and Clifton, attorneys at law. For ticket information call the symphony office, 563-0921.

While he is here, Stripling hopes to have the opportunity to visit with students.

"I try to stress to them just because the music is what they might call 'old' — a lot of them consider symphony music that — it's totally new to you if you haven't heard it. If they haven't discovered the great classical composers or the great jazz composers, there's a whole world of music for them to discover."

He enjoys coming West. Although New York has, Stripling said, "The best and the absolute worst of everything," it is missing the ingredient he looks forward to when he comes West — "the homey atmosphere that I know people in Texas have because my parents live in Fort Worth."

In addition to his symphony and concert performances, the New York City resident does studio work and his trumpet can be heard on numerous television commercials, movies and soundtracks.

He also is the contractor for the musicians on "Jelly's Last Jam," starring Gregory Hines.

"I make sure everybody's there if we have a rehearsal," Stripling said. "I take care of the payroll and organize the musicians."

The job is more time consuming than it sounds, especially for a musician who does a lot of out of town work. In order to juggle his different roles and engagements, which included playing jazz on the most recent Grammy Awards, Stripling has devoted time to reading books on health, such as, Bernie Seagal's "Peace, Love and Healing" and "Love, Medicine and Miracles" and Bill Moyers' "Healing and the Mind."

Stripling also has, for the past two years, been a vegetarian largely due to the "mixed messages" about food groups he believes many Americans receive through advertising.

As an artist, he wants "to live life to its maximum in terms of its energy. The whole point in being alive is to be as vibrant and passionate about living. I wanted to be as healthy as I could so I could accomplish my life's passions and dreams."

Part of his health regime is meditating.

HOROSCOPE

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Living in the fast lane could jeopardize your business or career. Take the slow but certain road for long-term success. In August, bet on those who have always been there for you. You need to look before you leap into a new romantic relationship. In late fall, your sharp wit will attract the attention of those with power and money to share. Be true to your ideals in the face of temptation. Spiritually minded friends make the best allies as 1994 gets under way.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: model Naomi Campbell, country singer Larry Gatlin, actress Bianca Jagger, movie director Sayajit Ray.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Travel plans can be realized now. Be honest about your reaction to overtures from an attractive member of the opposite sex. Is commitment a real possibility?

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Participation in a family or neighborhood event could bring new happiness. Be creative when planning entertainment. Employ more tact when dealing with a prickly loved one.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): The social pace quickens. Although family members exercise a strong influence now, you should make your own decisions. Indulge a pet whim, as long as it does not harm yourself or others.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A face-to-face meeting helps clear the air. Events at a distance continue to occupy your thoughts. Your mate or partner will help you put things into proper perspective.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Family traditions are a source of joy today. Inspiration stems from memories of better days. Do not lose sight of what you and your mate can have in the future.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You could be a victim of unusual circumstances. A solution will be found if you reach deep within yourself. Travel will improve your chances for happy romance.Have fun!

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You are much more in touch with your emotions now and discover feelings you did not know you had. Bringing a secret out into the open results in new peace of mind.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Simple pastimes can bring true bliss today. Travel to visit friends or "a home away from home." It is easy to find gifts for your pals that will not cost a fortune.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Romance on the rebound can be dangerous! Avoid rushing into a new relationship just to prove you are desirable. Children or childlike amusements stimulate your imagination.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Welcome opportunities to socialize with dynamic people. Someone you admire gives you a really nice gift or compliment. Romantic partner's ardor increases.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Travel or transportation snags are possible today. Avoid brooding. Put the emphasis on having fun and creating a happy adventure for your friends.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Your ESP is a much appreciated blessing now. Go easy on a pal whose pride has been hurt. Let your words comfort, not criticize. Avoid saying "I told you so."

When you have to develop tricks, logic tells you that you should first most. If you've been playing the game for any length of time, however, experience will have taught you that other factors have to be considered.

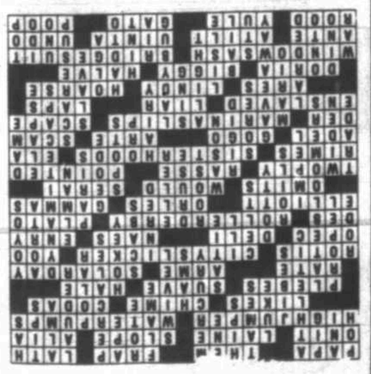

With eight points and a good five-card minor, there's a lot to be said for a jump to three no trump with the North hand. Instead, North settled for an invitational raise and South, despite a mere 16 points, elected to accept because of good intermediates and the fact that any lead was likely to be to North-South's advantage.

West started a spade and declarer captured East's jack with the queen. It might seem correct to try to set up the clubs, but declarer realized that could be hazardous. West was the danger hand whose entries had to be attacked first. If West held the king of clubs, that card could be neutralized via a finesse. The threat to the contract was that East had the monarch and West the ace of hearts.

In that event, the contract could still be brought home, if West's entry was eliminated immediately. At trick two, therefore, declarer led a heart to the jack and, when that held, persevered with the queen. West could do no better than take the ace and revert to spades. South ducked one round, then won the ace. With six tricks now available, declarer ran the eight of clubs to East's king. Good technique paid a small dividend because East was out of spades. No matter what the defenders did declarer could not be stopped from collecting 10 tricks.

LHS to stage the musical 'Guys and Dolls'

Staff report

Gamblers, chorus girls and a Salvation Army Band will take the stage when Lee High School presents the musical "Guys and Dolls."

Set against the color of New York City's highlights and low life, the musical fable is based on a story and characters by Damon Runyon with music and lyrics by Frank Loesser and book by Jo Swerling and Abe Burrows.

The multiple Tony Award winning show — Best Musical, Best Score and Lyrics, and Best Book — was recently revived on Broadway where it received the Best Revival Tony.

It will be staged by LHS's Choral and Drama Departments May 14 and 15 in the school auditorium. Curtain time is 8 p.m.

Tickets for the musical are $5 for students and $10 for adults. There are no reserved seats. However, theatergoers purchasing tickets in advance will be seated at 7:10 p.m. The box office will open for tickets sold at the door at 7:35 p.m. performance nights.

Tickets may be purchased in advance in the LHS auditorium lobby 7-8 p.m. Tuesday, Friday, May 10, and May 13. For more information call 689-1619.

Gallery to host Florida artists' 'Mysterious Lands'

Staff report

Gallery 1114 will host "Mysterious Lands," an exhibition of paintings by Ray Burggraf and Mark Messersmith, Saturday through June 6.

Burggraf will be present at the 7 to 10 p.m. reception Saturday and will talk at 2 p.m. May 9.

The artists' works reflect the environment and atmosphere of the North Florida area where they live.

"Burggraf is an abstract artist and color theorist," said Gallery 1114 member Travis Beckham. "His shaped panels of pure yet equivocal color suggest shifting landscapes full of space, light and serenit.

"Mark Messersmith sets modern and primitive imagery in the manner of a 14th century Book of Hours to deal with the themes of those works — such as good and evil, birth and death."

Both artists teach studio painting at Florida State University.

The showing of works by Midlanders Mary Lambeth Fish and Jack Hickman closes Thursday at the gallery.

Gallery 1114, 1114 N. Big Spring St., is a co-operative center for modern and contemporary art. Hours are 1 to 5 p.m. Thursday through Sunday.

ENTERTAINMENT IN BRIEF

■ Photos on display

ODESSA — The Art Institute for the Permian Basin presents photographs by jazz musician Milt "Judge" Hinton and cast aluminum sculptured works by Stanley Marcus this month.

Hinton, now 82, has photographed most of his legendary jazz musician friends during his own career as a renowned jazz bassist. Photographs of such jazz greats as Billie Holliday, Cab Callaway and Louis Armstrong, in jam sessions and on the road, have been the subjects of two books by Hinton — "The Bass Line: The Stories and Photographs of Milt Hinton" and "Overtime: The Jazz Photographs of Milt Hinton."

In the exhibit "Music in Two and Three Dimensions: Jazz Legends," 50 original photographs from this body of work will be on display at the Art Institute from Friday until June 30.

In addition, Hinton will speak about his life and his work at 2 p.m. May 20. The talk is free but seating is limited. For reservations call Brenda, 550-3811.

Also opening Friday is "Music Rings and The Cocktail Party," which features 15 life-sized pieces. Among the more recent "guests" at the party are the Mount Rushmore Four — George Washington, Abraham Lincoln, Theodore Roosevelt and Thomas Jefferson.

Hours at the institute, 4909 E. University, are Tuesday through Saturday 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Sunday 2 to 5 p.m.

■ Art hangs at club

Watercolors by former Midlander Joan Redding Scott are on display this month at the Midland Woman's Club, Hogan Park.

A reception for the artist is planned for 2 to 4 p.m. today.

A native of Midland and a graduate of Midland High School and Baylor University, Mrs. Scott is married to another former Midlander, attorney John Scott. Both now live in Dallas.

Mrs. Scott has studied art most recently with Leo Smith and Naomi Brotherton.

Earlier this spring she was one of 13 award-winning artists featured at the 1993 Flora Awards honoring former first lady, Lady Bird Johnson.

Her paintings are in numerous private collections and have been shown in juried shows throughout the Dallas area, including Montage in the Dallas Arts District.

On Memorial Day, her work will be displayed at Artfest, the largest annual visual arts show in Dallas.

She is a member of the Southwestern Watercolor Society, D-Art Visual Art Center, Artists and Craftsmen Associated and Richardson Civic Art Society.

The exhibit may be viewed Monday through Friday between 9 a.m. and 4 p.m.

■ OC has glass exhibit

ODESSA — The stained glass work of Rebecca Marcus is being exhibited in the Uptions Gallery of the Odessa College Learning Resources Center through May 13.

The artist has a master's degree from Columbia University in New York City, and is a retired nursing assistant professor at OC. She studied art at OC and the University of Texas of the Permian Basin.

She has participated in national exhibitions for stained glass and is represented by galleries in Odessa, Houston and Massachusetts. She frequently lectures on stained glass to community groups.

Gallery hours are 8 a.m. to 10 p.m. Monday through Thursday, 8 a.m. to 10 p.m. Friday and 2-5 p.m. Sunday.

■ Concert group to meet

Midland Community Concerts Association is holding its annual meeting at 3 p.m. Saturday at Midland Woman's Club, Hogan Park.

Results of the recent membership campaign will be reported and officers and board members will be elected.

Confirmation of dates for the coming concert season, which features Famous People Players, The Tennessee Waltz, Epic Brass and Helicon, will be released.

■ Black Crowes to sing

ODESSA — The Black Crowes perform Wednesday at Ector County Coliseum.

The Black Crowes sold more than five million copies of "Shake Your Money Maker," received a Grammy nomination, two MTV awards and were named best new band by Rolling Stone's Critics and Readers Poll.

Tickets, priced at $20, may be purchased at Midland Sound, Odessa's Endless Horizons and Big Spring's Circuit Electronics.

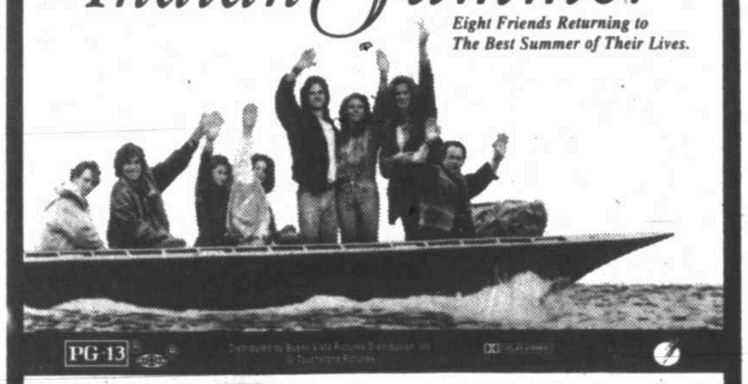

■ Mummers tryouts set

Auditions for "Summer Mummers" are set for Sunday through Tuesday at the historic Yucca Theatre, 208 N. Colorado Ave.
