In fighting escalates...

PLO moderate shot

GAZA CITY, Occupied Gaza Strip (AP) — A leading PLO moderate and longtime friend of Yasser Arafat was shot dead in front of his 12-year-old son today, sharply escalating the infighting that followed the Israel-PLO accord.

Assad Saftawi, 58, was one of the founders of Fatah, Arafat's main faction of the PLO, and the third man from the group shot to death since the PLO and Israel signed a Palestinian autonomy agreement on Sept. 13.

Saftawi served as an intermediary among Israel, Egypt and the Palestine Liberation Organization before the accord was signed. In April, Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin spent 20 minutes at Saftawi's house, stopping to drink tea. The visit was broadcast on Israeli television.

There was no immediate claim of responsibility for the assassination.

From the moment the autonomy accord was signed in Washington there have been fears that internal struggles within the Palestinian community could unravel plans to start transferring authority to the PLO starting Dec. 13.

"We are really worried about it," Rabin said of that turmoil after hearing of the assassination. He spoke at an Israeli army camp in the Gaza Strip after touring the Khan Younis refugee camp.

An internal struggle erupted inside Fatah over which faction would gain power once the PLO takes over the Gaza Strip. Younger leaders were summoned to Tunis this month for talks in an effort to stop the killings.

There has also been tension from more radical elements within the PLO and Islamic militants opposed to the accord. But the Islamic Resistance Movement, or Hamas, issued a statement condemning the killing.

"We in Hamas strongly condemn these physical liquidations."

FIELD ARTIST — Tony Daves, an SISD employee, paints the SHS football field Wednesday to prepare for Friday's 7:30 p.m. battle with the 2-4A favorite, the Plainview Bulldogs. Daves said the painting task usually takes him and his co-workers four or more hours to complete, and is done before all home games. (SDN Staff Photo)

Pennzoil is tops...

Top taxpayers in county are noted

1994 tax bills have been mailed and are in the hands of taxpayers. While local property rates have risen due to the decline in mineral values, oil producing companies still pay a substantial part of the local tax bill.

Pennzoil Petroleum Co. tops the list of taxpayers within Scurry County, according to information from the county tax assessor's office.

Pennzoil, which operates SACROC, was billed $1,805,158 for county, college and Snyder school taxes combined for 1993.

The second highest tax bill was sent to Exxon Corp., for $764,652.

The combined city, county, college and Snyder ISD taxes are just over $2.50 per $100 valuation. Tax rates set by elected officials of the various entities amount to $1.36 from Snyder ISD; 49.97 cents from Scurry County, 39.84 from the City of Snyder and 25.13 from Western Texas College.

Pennzoil's tax bill for Snyder ISD is $1,174,338. Exxon Corp. was billed $491,016 in local school district taxes.

Others in the "top ten" tax list for Snyder ISD are Oryx Energy Co., $364,605; Southwestern Bell Telephone, $164,060; Texaco Producing, Inc., $156,894; TU Electric, $154,816; Texaco E&P, Inc., $74,099; HAT Oil & Gas, Inc., $66,744; Cynara Co., $48,061; and Anadarko Petroleum Corp., $46,016.

The list for county taxpayers is Pennzoil, $419,420; Exxon Corp., $181,950; Oryx Energy Co., $130,660; Anadarko Petroleum, $79,266; Southwestern Bell Telephone, $71,865; TU Electric, $68,970; Texaco Producing, Inc., $50,758; Southwest Royalty, Inc., $39,241; BTA Oil Producers, $34,175; and HAT Oil & Gas, Inc., $32,069.

Top taxpayers on the Western Texas College tax rolls are Pennzoil, $211,350; Exxon Corp., $91,686; Oryx Energy Co., $65,841; Anadarko Petroleum, $39,943; Southwestern Bell, $36,213; TU Electric, $34,755; Texaco Producing, Inc., $25,577; Southwest Royalty, Inc., $19,774; BTA Oil Producers, $17,221; and HAT Oil & Gas, $16,160.

Due to limited oil production in the city limits, top taxpayers for the City of Snyder are utilities. The top city taxpayers are Southwestern Bell, $20,350; TU Electric, $15,190; Seidenfeld Lily, $7,094; Key Brothers Implement Co., Inc., $6,614; Consolidated Tool & Supply, $6,474; Wal-Mart, $6,170; West Texas State Bank, $5,296; Reef Chemical, $5,275; OTR, an Ohio General Partnership, $4,801; and Dolling, Claus & Peter, $4,603.

SSC supporters seek conditions

WASHINGTON (AP) — Backers of the super collider have all but conceded its death and now are trying to negotiate the best possible funeral arrangements.

Supporters of the $11 billion scientific machine under construction in Texas opened negotiations Wednesday with the Energy Department and opponents in hopes of salvaging some of the atom smasher's technology and equipment.

The talks were initiated after congressional proponents acknowledged that further battles were doomed to failure. The House on Tuesday reiterated its overwhelming opposition to the collider, for the third time in 16 months rejecting new spending on a project that's already cost $2 billion.

Twice previously the Senate restored funding. But the chamber's most vocal collider booster, Louisiana Democrat Bennett Johnston, appears to have conceded defeat in the face of the House's enduring opposition.

"I don't know anyone that is suggesting that the project as conceived is viable any more," said a key collider ally, Rep. Jim Chapman, D-Sulphur Springs. "The question is in the process of closing it down, can we salvage at least part of the investment in science?"

CROP walk slated Sunday

The sixth annual CROP Walk, sponsored by the Scurry County Ministerial Alliance, will take place Sunday.

Walkers will meet at the courthouse at 1:30 p.m., and the actual walk will start at 2 p.m. This year's walk is again a 5k route to Tiger Stadium.

Over the past years, the walk has raised thousands of dollars to aid victims of natural diasters around the world and in the United States.

Monies also go to help develop the economies of third world countries. Also, 25 percent of the funds remain in Scurry County to help the hungry through the Gentle Dove food ministries.

Walkers are taking pledges for each kilometer walked. Individuals, groups or churches interested in participating in the 1993 CROP walk are asked to contact Dr. Tim Griffin at the First Christian Church, 573-6115.

The SDN Column

The feller on Deep Creek says, "You have to keep jumping to have the opportunity to jump at an opportunity."

It's been a long time since we've heard the expression, "Don't throw a shoe."

Today, we think that means to "chill out."

We read today that shoes say everything about a man, especially to a woman. A national survey commissioned by a Nashville shoe company surveyed women ages 25 to 44 to see what they had to say about men's shoes.

For one thing, they are not viewed as sanitary. Almost 90 percent said they would never drink champagne from a man's slipper. That's good, 'cause the moisture would make 'em squeak.

But almost 40 percent of the women interviewed admitted that they have used a man's shoe to throw at him. Since women use them as weapons, that may explain why 63 percent accompany their gentleman friend to buy his shoes. Another 40 percent give final approval to their man's shoe selection and purchase.

Loafers and sneakers won the highest sex appeal approval among the gals. When women envisioned "Mr. Right," 22 percent said he was wearing loafers, and another 22 percent saw him wearing sneakers.

Only seven percent said the perfect hunk would be wearing wingtips. Ole what's-her-name suggested that maybe those over 44 may be the only ones who know about wingtips.

The last time we checked the price of a pair of wingtips, they were too valuable to throw around.

It may all be a matter of marketing. A business journal reports that the bridal registry telephone number for a Chicago department store is:

1-800-2-I Do I Do.

SHS merit scholars are announced

Three Snyder High School seniors have received recognition through the National Merit Scholarship Program.

Kurtis McCathern, son of Glen and Jan McCathern, has been named one of 15,000 semifinalists in the 1994 National Merit Scholarship Program.

Terrell Jones and Jennifer Early have both been named "Commended Students" in the 1994 National Merit Scholarship Program. Jones is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James Black. Early's parents are Dr. and Mrs. Jerry Early.

SHS Principal Larry Scott made the announcement.

McCathern's status as a semifinalist gives him the opportunity to continue in the competition for more than 6,500 Merit Scholarships, worth over $25 million, to be awarded next spring.

The nationwide semifinalist pool includes about half of one percent of each state's high school graduating class.

Jones and Early join the approximately 35,000 Commended Students throughout the nation who are being honored for their outstanding academic performance.

Commended Students have shown exceptional academic promise by placing among the top five percent of more than one million program entrants.

More than one million juniors in over 19,000 U.S. high schools entered the 1992 Merit Program by taking the 1992 Preliminary SAT/National Merit Scholarship Qualifying Test (PSAT/NMSQT), which served as an initial screen of program entrants. The number of semifinalists designated in each state is allocated according to the state's percentage of the national total of graduating high school seniors.

Semifinalists are the top scorers in each state, and they must now advance to the finalist level of the competition in order to be considered for Merit Scholarships.

To qualify as a finalist, a semifinalist must fulfill additional requirements. The semifinalist and an official of the high school must complete a detailed scholarship application that provides information about the student's educational interests and goals, as well as participation and leadership in school and community activities.

The student must also have an outstanding academic record, be endorsed and recommended by the high school principal and submit SAT scores that confirm his or her earlier PSAT/NMSGT perfor-

Denny verdict draws angry reaction in L.A.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The calls started coming in by the dozens to the First African Methodist Episcopal Church just minutes after the final verdict in the Reginald Denny beating case.

"They should ship you back to Africa," one angry caller told an operator at the church with the city's largest black congregation.

"I imagine you people are being Christians," the caller continued.

On Wednesday, the panel acquitted Williams, 20, of attempted murder in the Denny attack on April 29, 1992, as rioting swept the city.

The verdict brought fresh outbursts of dissatisfaction with justice and race relations in the nation's second-largest city. Calls into the offices of the mayor, the district attorney and talk radio shows.

The jury earlier had convicted Williams of one felony count of mayhem, for hitting Denny in the head with a brick. The jury also found him guilty of four misdemeanor assaults in attacks on four other motorists caught in the intersection of Florence and Normandie avenues at the outset of the riots.

Sentencing is scheduled for Dec. 7.

Henry Watson, 29, was convicted of assault, for placing his foot on Denny's neck so Williams could throw the brick.

Watson walked out of the courtroom Wednesday, free on his own recognizance.

The verdicts prompted strong emotions across the city. Jubilation. Anger. Relief.

"What they said was it's OK for a bunch of thugs to beat the hell out of a [illegible] said Tim Bodine, 25, [illegible] security guard at a condominium overlooking the suburban Santa Clarita Valley.

In Koreatown, hard-hit by the riots, gunshop manager David Joo called the verdicts "100 percent wrong."

"I strongly believe those black men should be guilty and should be sentenced to jail," Joo said. "In terms of justice this verdict is 100 percent wrong. In terms of the community's safety the verdict is a very good decision."

For many black citizens, the Rev. Cecil Murray said, the verdicts were a fair response to the acquittals on most charges of four white policemen in the first Rodney King beating trial, which prompted the riots.

"We are rejoicing because for once it seems justice was done," said Murray, pastor of First African Methodist Episcopal.

"There is a lot of white anger, there is a lot of black anger," he said. "But it's healthy because it says we are out of the closet, we are dealing with the racism in the justice system."

Denny himself has urged people to move forward and put the turbulence behind them.

To accomplish that, the city must overcome one more hurdle: Williams' sentencing.

He faces up to eight years in prison for the felony mayhem conviction, and comparisons inevitably will be made between his sentence and the 30-month terms given to two policemen convicted in the second King [illegible]

However the city reacts to its next test, it's clear it will take time for tensions to cool.

District Attorney Gil Garcetti, whose office prosecuted the Denny case, said his office had also been flooded with angry phone calls

He disagreed with the outcome, but said, "Justice is not perfect. It's certainly not perfect in this case. Perhaps justice is always imperfect."

Town & Country chairman inducted into Hall of Fame

SAN ANGELO — F.L. "Steve" Stephens, chairman and chief executive officer of the San Angelo-based Town and Country Stores, Inc., has been named to the "Convenience Store Industry Hall of Fame."

More than 800 convenience store operators and suppliers gathered in San Francisco at a reception during the National Association of Convenience Stores (NACS) annual meeting in September to celebrate the induction of Stephens into the "Hall of Fame."

The award was created seven years ago to recognize the unselfish giving of time and resources by leading convenience store operators.

In presenting the award to Stephens, Convenience Store News executive editor Maureen Azzato said, "Steve has played a vital role in the growth and development of the c-store industry."

Other accomplishments cited during the induction ceremony were:

—Stephens' participation in NACS, including a year as NACS chairman and associated work with the board of directors.

—His involvement in the Texas Retail Grocers Association, including a year as president in 1979.

—His numerous civic efforts, including work for the West Texas Rehab Center, Texas Board of Criminal Justice, and the Texas Chamber of Commerce.

Stephens was selected by a blue-ribbon panel of 30 retailers representing large and small c-store chains, both traditional and petroleum marketers.

During the nominating process, one fellow retailer said of Stephens, "He is truly a people-oriented man, dedicated to basic good values and a sense of fairness. His committment to this philosophy, coupled with outstanding leadership and communicative skills earned him the sincere respect and admiration of his employees, his community, food industry people at the state level, as well as his peers in the convenience store industry across the nation."

Another long-time c-store operator said simply, "As a competitor, I have been very impressed with the development of Town and Country as a quality convenience store company."

Past "Hall of Fame" inductees include John and Jere Thompson of the Dallas-based Southland Corporation (7-Eleven Stores) and Erich Wendl of Maverick Markets, headquartered in Corpus Christi.

Town and Country Food Stores, Inc. operates 141 stores in Texas and New Mexico, including seven T&C Village Market grocery in various West Texas cities and the West Texas Ice Company located in San Angelo.

Sorority chapter at UNT suspended

DENTON (AP) — Alpha Kappa Alpha sorority has been kicked off of the University of North Texas campus for five years and will face probation afterward, the school says.

The sorority received a five-year suspension for hazing, a misdemeanor for which five of the sorority members were sentenced to 90-day jail terms last month. The suspension started Oct. 18.

The sorority will have to be on probation for five years after the suspension, the Denton school announced Wednesday.

"The AKA sorority will effectively cease operations on the UNT campus for the next decade as a result of repeated infractions of anti-hazing rules," the school said in a prepared statement.

Seven members of the sorority were charged with misdemeanor hazing. Five of the members were convicted last month and sentenced to 90 days in jail. They were accused of striking the pledges with paddles and food, and forcing them to eat hot peppers.

The two other members have not yet been tried.

Clark gives pastel demonstration

Vicky Clark, guest artist for the Palette Club's recent meeting, gave a demonstration in pastel and displayed many of her works.

Clark said her school notebooks were often filled with more drawings than classwork. Although she majored in art at Abilene Christian College, it was not until her children were grown that she became serious about an art career. She has since studied with many well-known artists.

During the past six years, her work had been accepted in 36 national juried exhibitions, 12 of which were in New York City. The recipient of more than a dozen national awards, competition inspires her to continual growth in her work.

She works primarily in pastel, but is adept in oil, pen and ink, and pencil as well. Filling her work with dramatic lights and shadows played out through brilliant colors, she works with designed realism in an impressionistic manner.

Clark is a signature member of the Pastel Society of America and the Catharine Lorillard Wolfe Art Club of New York City.

When not painting, she teaches workshops and gives demonstrations.

Her studio is located at 607 SW Avenue I in Seminole and her work is in Jones VirMar Gallery, 2714 50th in Lubbock.

The Snyder Palette Club meets in the airport terminal building on West 37th St. every second and fourth Thursdays, September through May, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Empty spaces can be dangerous

You are faced with a two-way finesse for a queen. If you know, say, 10 of East's cards and seven of West's, there are only three empty spaces for the queen in East's hand, whereas there are six spaces in West's hand. It seems twice as likely that West has the queen. But you must be careful, as David Bird pointed out in a recent article featuring the monks of St. Titus. His deal is given in today's diagram.

The two-no-trump response showed a balanced hand with about 11 points. It is a bid used by most experts in North America today.

West led the spade six: two, ace, five. East returned the spade eight, West playing the three under South's queen to retain communication with his partner. Now South, Professor Barclay, played a diamond to dummy's king and a diamond to his 10, picking up the suit and making his contract. (A priori, this second-round finesse is about two percent worse than cashing the ace and king.)

East, the truculent Abbot, grumbled about this "inspired view."

South replied: "I always play with the odds. You would hardly expect otherwise from a professor of applied statistics. The spades were 5-3, so your partner had only eight empty spaces to your 10."

Some professor, as the Abbot pointed out. "Spades wasn't a random suit. Suppose your partner had played the hand. I would have led a heart, showing up with five to my partner's three. Applying your reasoning, your partner should then have played West for the diamond queen."

South didn't have enough information to apply the empty-space principle.

Lady Tigers host L'land in key loop volleyball match

Snyder's Lady Tigers open the second half of the District 2-4A slate, knowing they have to get past Levelland to get a shot at a fourth straight appearance in the playoffs.

They'll get their second shot at second-place Levelland today as the Loboettes visit for matches beginning at 6:30 p.m.

year and 1-2 in loop matches, are fending champion Lamesa Saturday, while Levelland, 13-7 and 2-1, enters today's battle following a 15-9, 15-10 Saturday win over Estacado.

The Lady Tigers were led in the Lamesa match by senior all-district hitter Kristen Kallemeyn, who had eight kills, six coming in Game 1. Vicky Green added two and Lindsey Griffin chipped in one.

Top Snyder servers were Misty Roquemore, who slapped three points, including the team's only ace of the day, C'Ella Clayton, who punched one, and Sterling Cave and Trish McGrew, each with one.

Levelland beat SHS, 15-1, 4-14, 15-8, when the two teams met in the league opener, Oct. 9 at LHS.

Grimmett refuses to get down about her team's chances to get into the playoffs.

"Right now, we have to play them one at a time," she said. "Our next job is to beat Levelland. We have everybody one more time, but we can't worry about anything except our next match.

"We'll be ready for Levelland. We'll work hard getting ready for them and we'll go out and try to take care of business."

Action begins at 6:30 p.m. when the freshmen host the Loboettes at Snyder Junior High and the SHS JV entertains Levelland at Snyder High School.

The Lady Tiger varsity will face off with LHS following the JV tilt.

Toronto wins Game 4, 15-14...

Blue Jays rally past Phillies

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Don't even try to figure out what happened in Game 4 of the World Series. The players and managers sure couldn't sort it all out.

Calculators were busted, record books were marked in red and the official scorers almost needed some late-inning relief.

When the mist finally settled, the Toronto Blue Jays rallied for an incredible 15-14 victory over the stunned Philadelphia Phillies to take a 3-1 Series lead. Game 5 is scheduled for tonight (8:12 p.m. EDT) when Game 1 starters Juan Guzman and Curt Schilling will try to make some sense of things.

The Blue Jays scored six runs in the eighth inning, and after that it seemed nearly impossible for even the determined Phillies to come back.

Where to start?

The score was tied 7-7 after four innings as starters Todd Stottlemyre and Tommy Greene were just awful. The Phillies took a 12-7 lead with five runs in the fifth, using two bunts and two homers along the way. Then, the Blue Jays started to chip away.

"I knew we would have to score a lot of runs because our bullpen was tired," Phillies manager Jim Fregosi said. "We just didn't score 20 runs."

Everyone else was weary, too, after watching the Phillies relievers blow it again in the postseason. Fregosi used Roger Mason, David West, Larry Andersen, loser Mitch Williams and Bobby Thigpen. The nine relievers in the game combined to allow 16 runs and 21 hits in 13 2-3 innings.

Finally, Mike Timlin and Duane Ward pitched like major leaguers and got the last six outs. The game took a Series record four hours, 14 minutes for nine innings and it all ended at 12:28 a.m. EDT.

It turned out the bullpen phones broke down for Toronto. No doubt it was from overuse.

"It was the wildest game I've been in," manager Cito Gaston said. "It was all happening so fast. Just about everything happened."

Andersen started the eighth with the Phillies leading 14-9 and gave up a single and walk with one out. Dave Hollins misplayed Paul Molitor's hard grounder to third for an error allowing a run to score and sending the runners to second and third.

Williams, 2-0 and two saves and in the AL playoffs despite some shaky pitching, relieved and gave up an RBI single to Tony Fernandez to make it 14-11.

Pat Borders walked and one out later, Rickey Henderson hit a two-run single and Devon White delivered the go-head two-run triple. None of the 62,731 left Veterans Stadium though, realizing they were watching history in the making.

White said he didn't even realize two runners were on base, he just wanted a hit.

The two teams made more records than Frank Sinatra ever dreamed of.

— The four-game total of 65 runs broke the mark of 56 set by the Yankees and Cubs in 1932.

— The combined 29 runs established a mark for a single Series game, shattering the record of 22 when the Yankees beat the Giants 18-4 in Game 4 in 1936.

— It was the first time ever in the Series that each team combined for three or more runs in the first inning.

— The Blue Jays became only the third team in Series history to rally from a five-run deficit to win; the Phillies scored the most runs and lost.

"It was a nightmare," CBS-TV stat head man Steve Hirdt said.

There were also several remarkable individual performances, particularly by Lenny Dykstra. He hit two homers, a double, walked and drove in four runs. He also scored four runs and now has nine career postseason homers.

White continued his terrific postseason hitting with four RBIs on a single and triple, making him 7-for-17 in the Series. Fernandez had five runs batted in and set a Series record for a shortstop with nine overall.

Milt Thompson also drove in five runs for the Phillies as he and Fernandez came up one short of Bobby Richardson's record in 1960.

It was sort of overlooked, but Tony Castillo got the victory in a game the pitchers must of thought seemed like a workout for spring training.

"I used to think a lot about losses like this," Hollins said. "But not anymore. Too much happened tonight, too fast to break this down to one turning point or another. It seemed every inning was the turning point."

The last time a team rallied from a five-run deficit in the Series was Game 2 in 1956 when Brooklyn beat the Yankees 13-8 after trailing 6-0. Don Larsen started for New York and came back to pitch a perfect game in his next start.

Nothing was close to perfect in Game 4 of this World Series.

Snyder, Frenship face tests in crucial 2-4A grid battles

By PHIL RIDDLE
SDN Sports Editor

District 2-4A playoff hopefuls Snyder and Frenship are both in critical games Friday as the 1993 grid schedule rolls into Week 8.

Both sets of Tigers are 1-1 since opening the loop slate, and both have lost to preseason playoff picks.

Snyder, after starting district play with a 14-0 shutout of Levelland, was edged by defending 2-4A champ Estacado, 26-20, Saturday. The SHS Tigers host No. 5 ranked Plainview, a 42-0 winner over Levelland a week past, in this week's tilt.

Frenship opened league play with a 49-21 loss to Plainview, then squeezed past Lamesa last week, 13-7. The FHS Tigers host Estacado in this week's game.

In other action within the district, winless Lamesa visits 1-6 Levelland, also on Friday.

All three games begin at 7:30 p.m.

No. 5 Plainview (7-0, 2-0) at Snyder (4-3, 1-1)

The Tigers have the toughest two-game stretch in the district, facing the Matadors, then the Bulldogs.

Estacado racked up 380 rushing yards against SHS a week past, including Talion Scott's 165 and two TD's.

This week, the Tigers will have to stop Plainview's ground attack, led by fullback Damian Nails, who gained a whopping 282 yards on 30 carries against Levelland, and an offensive line that averages about 230 pounds from tackle to tackle.

One thing in Snyder's favor is the emergence of its passing game.

Quarterback Matthew Cave completed 11 of 23 passes against the Matadors for 249 yards, a team record, and a TD.

Split end Larry Thompson caught seven for 222 yards, including an 11-yard scoring strike, also a team mark.

Estacado (5-2, 2-0) at Frenship (5-2, 1-1)

Estacado had trouble stopping Snyder's passing attack a week ago, and the Mats should face a similar problem against the Tigers this week.

Frenship scored the most points given up by Plainview this season two weeks ago, before struggling to beat Lamesa last week.

Quarterback Shane Stewart and wideout Kendrick Hollie lead a Frenship team that is picking up over 325 yards a game, while the Tiger defensive unit is limiting opponents to 260.

The Matadors running game is paced by Scott, who leads the district with 1,139 yards.

The EHS defense has been vulnerable to the pass, being burned for over 1,400 yards thus far, but has been solid against the run, giving up just 76 against Snyder last week.

Lamesa (0-7, 0-2) at Levelland (1-6, 0-2)

The Golden Tornadoes, having suffered through six consecutive losses, had a chance to break that string last week in a solid effort against Frenship.

Levelland changed offenses to start the season, then switched back in the middle of the season.

If the numbers are any indication, this should be a close one.

Both teams are averaging under 200 yards a game offensively, but Levelland may have the statisical advantage, limiting opponents to 270 yards, while Lamesa gives up over 350 a game.

Pokes' bye week gives Haley chance to rest

IRVING (AP) — With the Dallas Cowboys riding a four-game winning streak, a week off seems like the worst thing that could happen to the defending world champions.

Not so, says wide receiver Michael Irvin.

"It's nice only because we've got Charles Haley hurt," Irvin said. "It comes at a perfect time."

Haley is nursing a bruised back and a pulled groin but "he should be ready in time for the Philadelphia game" on Oct. 31, coach Jimmy Johnson said. "He'll get some rest this week."

"Charles Haley got a little banged up against the 49ers, so I'd rather rest just to get him back," Irvin said. "If he was healthy, then I'd rather play."

"Charles is a major factor in our game plan every week, a major factor in our defense," Irvin said. "So, if he's banged up just a little bit, then we want to rest to get him healthy and get him ready for the big stretch coming up."

Dallas (4-2) faces three straight NFC East opponents: Philadelphia, New York and Phoenix after the off week.

In Sunday's 26-17 victory over San Francisco, Haley recorded his first two sacks of the year and also forced a Steve Young fumble that Dallas rookie linebacker Darrin Smith recovered at the 49ers' 18-yard line. During the play, Haley also caught a foot in his back, but stayed in the game.

Haley's pass-rushing helped San Francisco win two Super Bowls and his constant pressure last year helped Dallas take the title.

But prior to Sunday, Haley had just six sacks in 24 games as a Cowboy. By comparison, Philadelphia's Clyde Simmons and Anthony Smith of the Los Angeles Raiders had 21 sacks since the start of the 1992 season. Even Lawrence Taylor of the New York Giants, battling injuries and age, had eight in that span.

Could all those quarterback pressures and so few sacks justify Haley's $2.336 million salary this year, second-highest on the team?

"Getting that first sack should silence the critics a little bit," Haley said. "People will know I haven't lost a step or that I'm close to retiring. Whenever I do, I'm going to do it on my own and that's the way it's going to be."

Haley said his satisfaction arose from finally getting some sacks and not from beating his former teammates.

"Most of my aggression and anger I got rid of last year, so it was just a football game to me," Haley said. "It wasn't a revenge factor for me because the biggest revenge was when we went to the Super Bowl, so this was just another game to play."

In the early days of college basketball, a player dribbling the ball could not shoot for a field goal.

Dickerson announces retirement

SUWANEE, Ga. (AP) — Eric Dickerson's stint with the Atlanta Falcons ended as the NFL's No. 2 career rusher informed the team he was retiring.

Dickerson had only 26 carries for 91 yards with Atlanta, which traded him to Green Bay for John Stephens last week. Dickerson failed a physical because of a neck problem and returned to Atlanta's roster.

In 11 seasons, Dickerson rushed for 13,259 yards, topped only by Walter Payton's 16,726 gained with the Bears.

Valentine to apply for Astros job

HOUSTON (AP) — Former Texas Rangers manager Bobby Valentine says he will interview for the Houston Astros' vacant managerial position.

Valentine said general manager Bob Watson asked him Monday if he is interested in pursuing the position. The Houston Post, citing a source close to Valentine, reported the former Rangers manager would get an interview within the next few days.

Among others expected to be interviewed by owner Drayton McLane Jr. and Watson are Baltimore Orioles first base coach Davey Lopes, Philiadelphia third base coach Larry Bowa and Astros coach Matt Galante.

Valentine resigned Monday as Davey Johnson's third base coach in Cincinnati.

Congress won't let draft die

By Walter R. Mears
AP Special Correspondent

WASHINGTON (AP) — Now it turns out that Uncle Sam might want you after all. Not that anybody is going to be drafted — that ended 20 years ago. But just in case, Congress is keeping what's left of the Selective Service System.

For the generations of men whose lives were influenced and altered by the draft, that's no surprise. Selective Service was too pervasive and persistent to be easily erased, even now, when only the vestiges remain.

Reversing an earlier decision to scrap the whole thing, the House has approved a $25 million appropriation for Selective Service operations for another year, to keep collecting names and data on young men as they turn 18.

There are about 14 million names on the lists of 18- to 25-year-olds — a military insurance policy according to advocates of the system, an anachronism to its opponents.

"This is a dinosaur in the post-Soviet world," Sen. Bill Bradley, D-N.J., had said in a losing effort to block the appropriation in the Senate.

The House, which voted four months ago to cut the funds and so end Selective Service registration for the draft that doesn't exist, turned around Tuesday and voted to keep it going.

One day, said Rep. G.V. "Sonny" Montgomery, D-Miss., "we may again need the draft and need it quickly." With registration, his side said, the draft could be cranked up again in 13 days; without, it would take up to a year.

The opposition case: Pentagon projections show no need for a draft unless Russia somehow reclaims superpower military might; there's no place to train a flood of inductees; and besides, the volunteer army has handled every crisis for 20 years, including the Persian Gulf war buildup of 500,000 troops.

What's more, military leaders wouldn't want the draft back. The volunteer military works better.

But they do want the Selective Service process continued. Rep. Gerald Solomon of New York, Republican sponsor of the push to keep it going, said it produces a roster of prospects for military recruiters.

"Many times the only place we can make these names available to recruiters is from Selective Service lists," he said.

It's a system of mail-in registration at age 18; Selective Service says 97 percent of young Americans comply. That's been the process since 1980, when registration was revived after a five-year lapse. President Carter got it renewed following the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan, in part as a signal of U.S. will.

The modern draft began in 1940 and continued until 1973, with one year out after World War II, before Cold War pressures brought back the draft. It has come under fire before — from the congressional struggle that led to renewal by the margin of a single vote in the House in 1941 to the draft card burnings of the Vietnam War era.

It was the shared experience of American men coming of age through all those years; drafted or not they were eligible, classified, sometimes deferred, always subject to the summons of Selective Service.

The name didn't change when the system did, in 1970, to a lottery that eliminated the selectivity of draft deferments.

President Clinton had to cope with campaign criticism for avoiding the Vietnam draft before a high lottery number spared him anyhow.

It still comes up; in the first House debate, Republican Solomon said it would be "awkward and embarrassing" for Clinton to effectively pardon people who have violated the registration law by signing a repeal.

That long reach notwithstanding, it hasn't been an issue lately. Montgomery said there's been no clamor among the people who have to register to do away with it.

"It seems that the House of Representatives is really the only group that wants to eliminate the Selective Service System," he said in urging it not to.

But that calm wouldn't hold if it were dropped and had to be revived, Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., said when the Senate debated it. "Starting over on Selective Service is not possible politically," he said. Try it, he said, and there would be protests all over the country.

EDITOR'S NOTE — Walter R. Mears, vice president and columnist for The Associated Press, has reported on Washington and national politics for more than 30 years.

Critics: fast food places are still dishing out the fat

WASHINGTON (AP) — The consumer group that labeled Chinese food as surprisingly fatty now is going after McDonald's, Burger King and other giants of fast-food who say they have cut cholesterol from their fare.

The Center for Science in the Public Interest charged that some of the nation's leading fast-food chains are not living up to their claim that they cook with pure vegetable oil, which is supposed to help people avoid clogged arteries and heart disease.

"They are not cooking in 100 percent vegetable oil," said Michael F. Jacobson, the group's executive director.

The center argues that when the fast-food companies abandoned the practice of frying foods in beef fat or coconut oil, they switched to hydrogenated shortening instead of vegetable oil.

Jacobson said hydrogenation creates high levels of trans fatty acids that can be just as damaging to a healthy heart as animal fats.

"Hydrogenated shortening clearly is not vegetable oil, and the difference is measured in clogged arteries and coronary heart disease, the number-one cause of death in America," he said Wednesday.

CSPI contends that trans fats increase blood cholesterol levels just about as much as saturated fats.

"They have absolutely the wrong information about McDonald's," McDonald's spokeswoman Ann Connolly said. "McDonald's uses 100 percent vegetable oil, which is a blend of corn and soy oil. It's a liquid oil that's minimally hydrogenated. ... Hydrogenation is simply a process for making sure it's more stable to preserve."

"Whether you call it shortening or oil, it all starts out as a plant," said Gary Gerdemann, a spokesman for Kentucky Fried Chicken. "We use shortening, but it begins life as a soybean. Somewhere in between oil and shortening is for scientists to argue about."

Treating oil with enough hydrogen turns it into solid fat. The hydrogenation gives the product a longer shelf life.

"We acknowledge the fact that we fry in vegetable shortening," said Bill Chiccarelli, director of public relations for Dunkin' Donuts.

Margo G. Wootan, a nutritional biochemist for the consumer group, said hydrogenation "increases the saturated fat content of the oil and it creates trans fat."

Cori Zywotow, spokeswoman for Burger King, said the corporation "will certainly look at any new evidence regarding the nutritional composition of our product."

When Burger King announced in 1990 that it would no longer make french fries in animal fat, she said, "it reduced product fat levels by more than 50 percent and totally eliminated dietary cholesterol from the french fries."

CSPI said, however, that Burger King's french fries are highest in heart-unhealthy fat: "They actually contain more now — 58 percent — than when they were fried in beef fat (52 percent)."

Janis Smith of Taco Bell said her company continues to look for alternatives to the hydrogenated oil used for its products. "We are and have been looking for ways to reduce the total fat in our menu items," she said.

Lotto Texas

by The Associated Press

No tickets purchased in the latest Lotto Texas, with an estimated $25 million jackpot, correctly matched all six numbers drawn for the twice-weekly game, state lottery officials said today.

The numbers drawn Wednesday night from a field of 50 were: 3, 6, 7, 10, 31, 39.

Although no jackpot winner surfaced, 354 tickets were sold with five of the six numbers, with each ticket worth $1,223. Another 18,642 tickets with four of six winning numbers, each received $83.

Another 341,441 tickets were sold with three of six numbers. Each was worth an automatic $3.

The estimated jackpot for Saturday night's game is $40 million if sales continued as expected, lottery officials said.

Helms amendment rejected

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a triumph for President Clinton, the Senate refused today to limit his ability as commander-in-chief to commit troops to Haiti.

The 81-19 vote was a rejection of a provision by Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., who launched a scathing attack again today on Haitian President Jean-Bertrand Aristide, the ousted leader whose return to power under international guarantees has been blocked by military and police leaders.

Instead, the Senate voted 98-2 to enact a non-binding provision that says Clinton should seek approval from lawmakers before committing troops to Haiti, but is not required to do so.

Sens. Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., and Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., cast the dissenting votes.

Ally kidnapped

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — A parliamentary ally of exiled President Jean-Bertrand Aristide has been kidnapped by gunmen, two private radio stations said today, in another blow to U.N. efforts to return Aristide to power.

The report came nine days before a deadline for the return of Haiti's first democratically elected president and for the removal from their posts of military and police leaders behind the 1991 coup that ousted him.

Editing of 'The Program' stirs concern over censorship issue

LOS ANGELES (AP) — In some towns, kids lying down in the middle of a busy road are called foolish. In Hollywood, they're called a public relations nightmare.

The Walt Disney Co. took the bold step of re-editing "The Program" after one teen-ager was killed and two others seriously injured by imitating a stunt in the film.

Disney's $300,000 move follows changes to the animated film "Aladdin" and the MTV cartoon "Beavis and Butt-head" after complaints about their content.

Taken together, these changes raise troubling questions of censorship and also dramatize the delicate balance between artistic freedom and social responsibility — especially when millions of dollars are involved.

Should filmmakers be held accountable and take responsibility for reckless behavior? If children start leaping off tall buildings, will Superman be grounded? What if a "Beverly Hillbillies" fan shoots a neighbor while "hunting for oil" in his backyard?

"I have a lot of faith in the intelligence of the audience," said Michael Mann, the director of "The Last of the Mohicans" and the target of complaints for his TV shows "Crime Story" and "Miami Vice."

"That's why I'm against caving into this kind of pressure, because it leads to censorship. But Disney is Disney," he said.

"I have two concerns," said Mike Medavoy, the chairman of TriStar Pictures. "One, what does this stuff do to a society? And two, at what time does censorship ... destroy the creator's ability to create their works? It's a very fine line."

Earlier this week, MTV moved "Beavis and Butt-head" to a later hour after excising the cartoon show's references to fire. Both moves came when an Ohio woman blamed the program for the death of her 2-year-old daughter in a fire set by her 5-year-old brother.

In July, Disney altered lyrics of a song in the Oscar-winning animated feature "Aladdin" after Arab-American activists termed [illegible] dropped by a Time Warner record label earlier this year after 1991's "Cop Killer" song dispute.

What unites these incidents with "The Program" is the amount of negative publicity they all generated. And bad publicity can be as toxic as bad sales, particularly when your company name is Disney.

But executives in film, music and television found Disney, MTV and Time Warner's actions problematic. While the companies may have acted sensitively, the executives say, they implicitly are helping cement the debated proposition that fictional works prompt real-life behavior.

People who are injured lying in the middle of the road or set fire to houses may be predisposed to aberrant actions without the help of television and movies, they say.

The three youths who imitated "The Program" may be "naive and a little warped," said Angelo Pizzo, the screenwriter of "Hoosiers" and the new release "Rudy."

"If something is done from the filmmaker's perspective to depict negative behavior, you can't assume it will be interpreted as negative behavior by impressionable filmgoers," Pizzo said.

Lee Masters, the chairman of the cable network E! Entertainment and the former executive [illegible] was troubled by the "Beavis and Butt-head" incident.

"There's a real knee-jerk reaction here, to instantly blame," Masters said. His two young daughters, 3 and 8, are "absolutely fascinated by fire," he said — but neither watches "Beavis and Butt-head."

"People are blaming the cartoon for a lot of things that kids do anyway," he said. "I'm very nervous about what happens next: Are we gong to be so politically correct that we can't say anything?"

Chase name gone

LOS ANGELES (AP) — How quickly they want to forget.

The Chevy Chase Theatre was stripped of its name just days after "The Chevy Chase Show" was cancelled by Fox Broadcasting Co.

The front of the theater was repainted Tuesday, a Fox spokesman said.

M.D. should monitor pregnancy

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: My daughter is pregnant and has been going to an herbalist. She takes a variety of food supplements, one of which is desecrated adrenals. He claims her adrenal glands are not working correctly, which is the reason she craves sugar and is so tired all the time. Since I have Addison's disease, I'm afraid these herbs may be doing her or the baby harm. Do you agree?

DEAR READER: Without knowing the names of the specific herbs, I cannot comment on the possibility of harm to your daughter or grandchild.

However, I doubt that these substances are doing her any good. More important, by using an unconventional source of health care, she may be depriving herself of more effective medical therapy.

For example, most pregnant women are tired. The nutritional demands of a growing fetus are substantial and often stress the mother's body. In particular, pregnant women can become vitamin- or iron-deficient, a condition easily treated with inexpensive vitamin/mineral supplements.

Your daughter may not be receiving suitable replacement of these substances if she has chosen an alternative health practitioner. I believe she [illegible] would be better served by following her obstetrician's advice. With a few simple blood tests, the M.D. can assess your daughter's nutritional status and identify any deficiency that may be present.

I don't buy this nonsense about adrenal malfunction; I believe it's the herbalist's way of convincing her to take expensive and unproved therapy. As you yourself know, adrenal insufficiency (Addison's disease) is a serious glandular problem for which specific medical therapy, such as the replacement of missing steroids, is vital. If your daughter were to have this affliction, she and the baby would be in grave danger without appropriate treatment — which she won't get from an herbalist.

Encourage your daughter to work closely with her obstetrician. Herbalists and other alternative healers have no business treating pregnant women.

To give you more information, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report "Foods II — Herbs and Other Supplements." Other readers who would like a copy should send $1.25 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 2433, New York, NY 10163. Be sure to mention the title.

Even if it is slapstick...

Solons take dim view of TV violence

WASHINGTON (AP) — A pie in the face used to be considered classic comedy, but with Congress on the warpath against TV violence, scriptwriters had better think twice before suggesting such a scene for a sitcom.

Sen. Ernest Hollings, D-S.C., chairman of a Senate committee considering measures to regulate TV violence, said Wednesday he didn't think slapstick was particularly funny in an era of increasing real-life mayhem.

Nor did Attorney General Janet Reno find anything amusing about TV's dramatized mayhem.

With a bevy of industry heavyweights looking on, Reno told the committee the TV industry had better act quickly to end fictionalized violence or the government would step in.

"Government intervention is neither the best option nor the first we should try," Reno said, urging lawmakers to give the industry a few more months to prove it can change.

"But if significant voluntary steps are not taken soon, government action will be imperative," she said.

Hollings played a tape of a scene from the CBS-TV situation comedy "Love and War" that was broadcast Monday.

The show was set in a New York restaurant-bar and this week's segment opened with a brawl.

Punches and furniture flew and bottles broke over heads in a highly choreographed sequence reminiscent of saloon brawls in the cowboy movies of yore.

One of the characters tried to stop the fighting and shouted over the din, "You all see too much violence on television."

Even though the fighting was intense, "no one gets hurt," said Hollings. He and others say they oppose violence that is treated as funny or without consequence.

"That was slapstick," said Howard Stringer, president of CBS Broadcast Group. "The producer was satirizing TV violence. The attempt was not to glorify violence, but to make it look ridiculous."

The show's producer, Diane English, who also produces the popular "Murphy Brown" series, has been outspoken in her opposition to congressional efforts to legislate on TV violence.

"We are not responsible for American's ills, but it's very easy to blame Hollywood," she said recently at a National Association of Television Program Executives seminar.

English's writers took a dig at Congress later in the "Love and War" segment when a policeman came to the bar after another fight.

"It's not really the criminals' fault," the cop responded to a comment about the amount of violence in the streets. "I blame TV. Once we get a good labeling system you'll see this problem clear up real fast."

Among the laws Congress is considering is one by Sen. Dave Durenberger, R-Minn., that would require warning labels.

Parental advisories are being used now voluntarily. Entertainment executives told the Senate panel more action will be taken in response to congressional concern.

"We have become more thoughtful under pressure," said Stringer.

Anti-violence public service announcements are planned and a TV special on alternatives to violence will be broadcast simultaneously by all the networks, the executives said.

Reno told the committee the industry should be given until January to regulate itself, but said she supported legislating if television doesn't improve.

"Too much of today's programming neither uplifts, nor even reflects our national values and standards," Reno said. "Instead of disseminating the best in our culture, television too often panders to our lowest common denominator."

Dear Abby

Retired Couple's New Life Is Spoiled by Wife's Old Doubts

by Abigail Van Buren

© 1993 Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have been married 42 years. I love him with all my heart. We have six children whom he loved and for whom he provided until they all got married. He retired almost two years ago.

Our life after he retired started off just wonderful. We were together doing everything. Then he had an employee retiring at work; they were having a lunch for him, and my husband wanted to go.

It just didn't "feel" right for him to go, Abby. I have had the feeling before that he might be with other women — and I have seen the signs. I put it all behind me to start a new life. Well, that day he was gone more than two hours. I knew something was wrong because those employees have to go back to work at 12:20, and when he returned to the house he just didn't seem the same. I never said a word.

That night we went to bed and he had his undershirt on inside out. I asked why. He said, "I must have put it on that way this morning." I never, ever knew him to put his undershirt on wrong side out. (And inside his pants was evidence of something else.) I just don't know what happened to me. I don't want him to touch me or make love to me at all. But I look at him and say I love him.

He said he never went with anybody, but I know for sure he has. What do you think about this? And what should I do? Please don't mention my name or town.

BLEEDING HEART

DEAR BLEEDING HEART: You need to talk to a minister or a marriage counselor, and so does your husband. If he refuses to go, please go without him. Keeping all this disappointment inside will only make you sick.

DEAR ABBY: This old world is far too serious, so I try to lighten up my life with something to smile about. For example, not long ago, you printed some letters in your column about people with unusual names. One of the names was "Virgin." It reminded me of a story you (and your readers) might get a kick out of:

A kid went to Sunday school and the teacher asked the class, "Who was Christ's mother?"

All replied in unison, "Mary!"

Then the teacher asked, "And who was Christ's father?"

Nobody answered for a few moments; then one kid spoke up: "His name was 'Virg.'" Then he went on, "All I hear about is Virg and Mary."

Another little boy at Sunday school was told by his teacher that God lives in all our hearts.

The little boy replied, "No, he doesn't. Every morning, Dad knocks on the bathroom door and says, 'My God, are you still in there?'"

I am 84, and it interests me to read about the lives of so many different kinds of people as reflected in your letters. All the best to you!

DAVE JENKS, SUN CITY, ARIZ.

DEAR DAVE: All the best to you, too. Thanks for the chuckle.
