OPEC ends talks minus agreement

BRIONI, Yugoslavia (AP) — OPEC today ended a six-day series of oil talks without reaching full agreement on how to reverse the decline of oil prices, sources said.

The ministers of the 13-member Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries planned to hold another conference in late July, said the sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Saudi Arabian Oil Minister Ahmed Zaki Yamani, appearing briefly at a balcony outside the hotel meeting room, said a final communique was being written. He declined to give details, but said there would be no more sessions in the current talks.

Iran's oil minister, Gholamreza Aghazadeh, told reporters before the end of the session that if OPEC failed to reach a unanimous agreement in Brioni, oil prices would stagnate, or fall further, during the summer.

Asked what Iran would do on its own to try to push prices higher, he said, "First of all we will pray."

Yamani said Sunday the crucial question of how any production pie would be divided among the members was unlikely to be resolved. Without a full agreement on a new production policy, OPEC IS unlikely to reach its goal of raising prices.

"What we have to do is for every minister to go back home and consult with his government and meet again, probably in a month's time, to take a decision," Yamani said in a telephone interview with CBS's "Face the Nation."

A majority of OPEC members support a target price $17 to $19 a barrel — up from the current range of $11 to $14.

But any target price would be virtually meaningless unless OPEC could agree on production quotas.

Nine members have has said they favor limiting OPEC's overall production to 17.4 million barrels a day this summer and 17.9 million a day for the final three months of the year. The 1986 average would be 17.6 million barrels daily.

That compares with OPEC's estimated current output of 19 million barrels a day — its highest since 1983.

Iran, Libya and Algeria have argued that production must be cut more drastically to restore prices to the $28-per-barrel level that prevailed last November.

Gabonese Oil Minister Etienne Guy Tchioba, who left the conference after Sunday's session, told reporters he suggested OPEC set a target price of $20 to $25 a barrel.

The split in opinions on pricing and production policy has virtually paralyzed OPEC.

Big Mac opening Tuesday

A ribbon cutting at 10 a.m. Tuesday will mark the official opening of Snyder's new McDonald's, but the restaurant itself will be open for business at 5:30 a.m.

Tuesday will begin the chain's seven-day-a-week schedule. The business will be open at 5:30 a.m. each day. Closing hours will be 11 p.m. except Friday and Saturday, when these will be extended to 1 a.m.

A flag raising ceremony will be conducted Tuesday at 10 a.m. along with the ribbon cutting. The color guard unit of the local National Guard will conduct the ceremony.

The Snyder Chamber of Commerce Gold Coats will also be on hand for the ribbon cutting.

The new business, which will employ some 95 individuals, was announced here Feb. 20. Construction of the 4,000 sq. ft. facility took four months with dirt work started March 3.

The site itself covers some 41,000 sq. ft. located adjacent to College Ave. in the 3400 Block.

Owner of the local franchise is Herbie Figueredo and supervisor for the local restaurant is Barry Bourgois.

Others involved in management roles are Rachel Bass, Lorie Clarady, Carlos Martinez, Catica Figueredo, Maria Boswell and Terry Vasquez.

One county fund operating on less

County commissioners learned Monday that estimated general fund expenditures for 1986 — monies which in general finance county courthouse activities — will most likely fall some 2½ percent below the amount budgeted.

In addition, commissioners have already cut some 11 percent out of the general fund's budget for 1987 during budget workshops completed last week.

"These figures may change somewhat once everything is finalized," County Auditor Bernhard Bartels noted. "And remember, this is general fund only."

General fund expenditures budgeted for 1986 total some $3.8 million. The 1987 expenses are estimated at $3.5 million.

Exact figures for each are $3,853,667 and $3,530,584 respectively.

In other business Monday, commissioners took no action on a request by Department of Public Safety officer Kirby McCravey for three hand-held radio units and two radar units for patrol cars.

The court said it would discuss the request with Sheriff Keith Collier. McCravey noted that each radar unit will cost $3,450 less $600 trade-in allowance. The radios will average some $800 each.

Since the county receives most of the monies collected by the DPS unit stationed here, radar equipment and office space is provided through the county's budget.

In other action, court members discussed sealcoating city streets with City Manager John Gayle.

Former local cited by Bar

A former Snyder attorney now practicing law in Lubbock has been accused of professional misconduct by the State Bar of Texas.

A suit filed Friday in 99th District Court in Lubbock asks that Alex LeFeuvre be either "reprimanded, suspended or disbarred" for allegedly violating four disciplinary rules of the State Bar.

The allegations against him include failing to obtain for more than a year a judgment in a divorce case after it was filed in August of 1984.

Other charges are that LeFeuvre wrote a $1,800 bad check from his trust account to be used to admit a client's brother to the White River Retreat alcoholism center.

The suit against LeFeuvre was filed by Adele M. Winn representing the State Bar.

State jobless fund is almost depleted

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas may have to borrow cash from Washington this week to keep its unemployment insurance trust fund afloat and unemployment checks flowing, officials say.

A giant jump in claims prompted by the state's sagging economy is taxing the fund, which is expected to give out in a matter of days, said Texas Employment Commission administrator Bill Grossenbacher.

With a balance of only $22.7 million, the fund is having to support daily payments of $6 million, and most of the employer taxes have already been collected for 1986, he said.

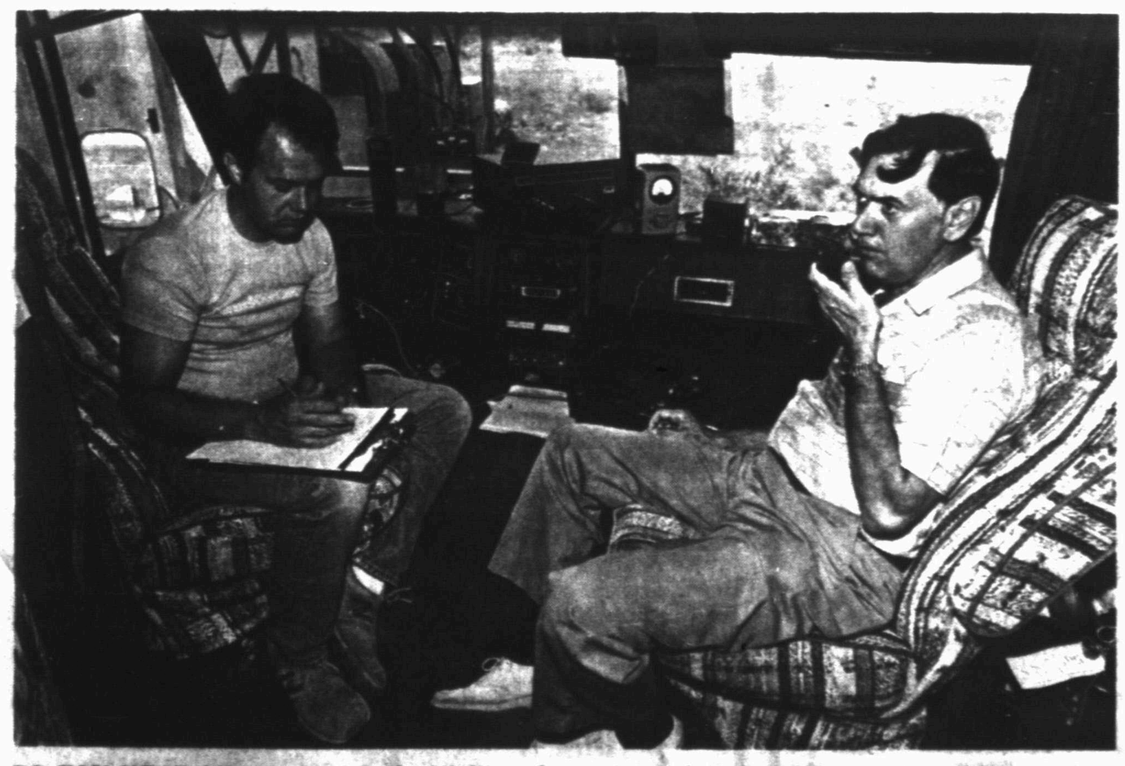

An 80 percent increase in claims was caused by a weakened Texas economy that pushed up unemployment to a record 9.6 percent in May, Grossenbacher said.

The situation is even worse in Louisiana, where dropping oil prices sent the jobless rate above 13 percent, the highest in the nation. Last week, its unemployment insurance fund reached a deficit of $585 million, said Dudley J. Patin Jr., Louisiana secretary of labor.

"We keep going into deficit to the tune of $100 million a year," Patin said. "It will take four to five years with a tremendous turnaround in the economy."

Oklahoma's unemployment insurance fund appears to be the healthiest of the three Southwestern states hardest hit by oil industry and related layoffs.

For Texas, the unemployment fund's impending deficit is serious.

200 'ham' linkups counted by group

Members of the Snyder Amateur Radio Club managed to make contact with over 200 other ham radio stations throughout the United States, Canada and Mexico this past weekend.

These contacts were part of the club's participation in the nationwide American Radio Relay League Field Day exercise held Saturday and Sunday.

Among the other "hams" contacted by the locals were operators stationed in a tent in the Mojave dessert; an airborne group flying somewhere over the U.S.; and a linkup with radio enthusiasts headquartered on the Queen Mary, the ocean liner now permanently docked in San Diego.

The 24-hour "day" — which ran from 1 p.m. Saturday until 1 p.m. Sunday — was designed to test the amateur radio operators under simulated emergency conditions. As part of this, they were required to set up makeshift antennas and to use auxiliary sources such as generators for their radio power.

The Snyder club used generators and stretched two 400 ft. wires from an abandoned microwave tower near Fluvanna as their antenna.

Smaller antenna were constructed also for use on other frequencies.

During the exercise, participants took turns working the radio and logging the call signs of other ham stations that were contacted. Although the Snyder club used only one radio at a time, some clubs contacted had as many as 15.

Individuals assisting in the club's field day included Terry Sowell, Ronnie Hartman, Bill Davies, Charles Shaw, Joann

Q. — I have a pecan tree limb growing over a telephone line in my alley. What's my legal responsibility if the limb breaks?

A. — Under the law, any utility company has the right to trim tree limbs growing across its lines. Regarding this specific case, phone company representatives note if the limb was broken by natural causes — high winds, for example — no legal action would likely be taken. If the tree owner somehow caused the limb to break, then compensation for the damaged line might be sought. The most efficient remedy, they note, is to keep such limbs trimmed.

Ordeal recalled 1 year later

HOUSTON (AP) — Allyn Conwell, whose name briefly became a household word when he served as spokesman for the hostages on the hijacked TWA airliner last year, says every time he sees an airplane take off, he says a little prayer.

Conwell, who worked as a salesman for a Houston-based oil field services company, was among those taken hostage by Shiite terrorists on TWA Flight 847 from Athens to Rome.

Today, he says he cannot forget the 17-day ordeal. He also is out of work, a casualty of the oil industry recession.

The Houston Chronicle interviewed Conwell, 40, by telephone while he was on vacation with with his wife, Olga, in Greece.

"I think about it every time I get on an airplane," Conwell said of the hijacking. "And every time I see a plane take off, I say a little prayer."

In an article published Sunday, he said he is more aware than before of the vulnerability to terrorists after a group of Lebanese Shiites took over the TWA plane last June. The terrorists were seeking the freedom of other Shiites being detained in Israel.

Conwell was living in Oman a year ago as a salesman for Enterra, a Houston-based oil field services company.

Although he is unemployed, he said the time off has allowed him the first real time to relax with his family since the hijacking.

He said he is looking for a job that will allow him to live in Greece, his wife's native country, but his job search will bring him to Houston this week.

The Chronicle quoted six of the 39 American hostages in its Sunday article.

The former hostages said they remain scarred and changed by their experience. Many said they no longer travel abroad. Others said they are haunted by the memory of how close to death they came and by the slaying of Robert Dean Stethem, a young Navy diver who was killed early in the ordeal.

Robert Gordon Brown, 43, of Stow, Mass., who once traveled around the world in his job as a medical equipment salesman, said he now travels only within New England.

"I'm afraid this is the lull of the storm," he said. "I think Libya will get back at the U.S. for that (April air attack). I think they're designing and planning now."

Robert Trautmann Jr., a 38-year-old developer from Laredo, Texas, who was vacationing in Europe with his wife, children and his wife's parents when the plane was hijacked, said his family canceled another overseas vacation in the wake of other terrorist incidents.

"We went to Disneyland instead," he said.

Trautmann's father-in-law, Vicente Garza, said he keeps in touch with a number of former hostages. One former hostage sent him a tie clip engraved with "The Crazy 8s," the name their small group called itself, Garza said.

Cadet booted out of West Point enlists in U.S. Navy

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — A Navy recruiting officer is trying to turn an Army nightmare into happy reality for an unwanted ex-West Point cadet.

Former cadet Francis "Biff" Shea made headlines across the country after the Army booted him out of West Point a few days before graduation over allegations he misappropriated property.

But on Sunday, he was the guest of Navy Lt. Len Le Blanc, a recruiting officer who lives at nearby Fort Bliss and who believes Shea deserves a second chance at a military career.

Shea said Le Blanc's faith in him "has been good for me and my family ... to have somebody give a damn."

At Le Blanc's request, he came here to fill out Navy enlistment papers, and the former cadet's story is the subject of a TV movie being made by the producer of "The Love Boat" and "Fame."

Le Blanc says if the Navy takes Shea, he'd attend officers candidate school for 16 weeks, then be commissioned an ensign.

"I don't know his chances, but I don't think the incident at West Point will hurt him," Le Blanc said. "All Washington has said is send him up and we'll look at him. If I had Mister T and Rambo here, they'd say the same thing."

After he was kicked out of West Point, a humiliated Shea went home to Massachusetts after being ordered to sit in the reviewing stand to watch his former classmates graduate.

He maintains his innocence of any intentional wrongdoing. And two months after the incident he was given his diploma and a general discharge under honorable conditions.

He hit bottom along the way, he said, but with the support of people like Le Blanc, he said he wants to show he has what it takes to make a good officer.

Discovery sheds light on ancient Jerusalem

JERUSALEM (AP) — The discovery of a treasure trove including the oldest biblical inscriptions ever found has shed new light on life in Jerusalem during the first Jewish kingdom, 2,600 years ago.

The inscriptions were scratched onto two silver charms found in a burial cave among a wealth of jewelry and pottery, said Michal Dayagi-Mendels, a curator at the Israel Museum, where the treasure goes on display Tuesday.

The trove of about 1,000 items was the largest collection found in Jerusalem since archeologists began probing the city's ancient past 120 years ago. It was hidden from looters and grave robbers by a cave-in, said Mrs. Dayagi-Mendels.

Nine caves were hewn into a hillside across the Hinnom Valley from the walls of Jerusalem's Old City, half a mile from where Solomon's temple stood. Most of the burial chambers had been stripped completely, and a few contained shards that looters left as valueless, said Gabriel Barkay, the Tel Aviv archeologist who led the excavation.

The charms, thin pieces of pure silver rolled up like scrolls and worn around the neck, were found in 1979 but the inscriptions were deciphered only this year, said Barkay.

Parts of the text were missing, but enough was found to identify it as the blessing of the high priests from the Book of Numbers, Barkay said Sunday.

The inscriptions date to the 7th century B.C., predating by 400 years the Dead Sea Scrolls.

Dear Abby

Vacationing Parents Are No Picnic for Children

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1986 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I never thought I would be writing to you, but I just had to after reading the letter from the mother who wanted to know how long was too long for a visit with her children. She kept saying how she was no trouble — she didn't need her own room, and liked to spend the day watching game shows, having morning coffee, reading, and going to movies and playing cards. Abby, she may think that is no trouble, but please read on:

My husband and I live in a small two-bedroom apartment, 3,000 miles from my in-laws. They stayed with us for two weeks, and it was the worst two weeks of my life. They acted like they were on vacation and I was the hotel maid. I'm sure they felt that they were perfect houseguests, but that was not the case.

They stayed in the second bedroom and had the TV on constantly (and loudly), which almost drove me crazy, especially when I was trying to work or sleep. When they were not watching TV, they wanted us to go with them to places I had no interest in going to. If I said I did not want to go, they tried to make me feel guilty about it. Cooking for four is much more work than cooking for two. They offered to help after all the work was done. Let's not forget the digs about my working instead of staying home to clean, cook and raise a family.

Please, Abby, tell parents that if they want a vacation, the best place for them to stay is in a hotel. Sign me ...

THE REST OF THE STORY

* * *

DEAR ABBY: This is for "Perplexed Mother" who heard through the grapevine that some of her children think she overstays her welcome in their homes: She should ask herself these questions, and be completely honest when answering them:

1. Does Mother invite herself? (It's natural to resent houseguests who come to visit when it's convenient for them without considering their hosts.)

2. Is Mother critical of her married children and their spouses? (Some mothers assume they have a right to criticize their children's cooking, housekeeping, child-rearing, clothing, friends, habits, etc. They refuse to accept their children as the adults they are.)

3. Is Mother inflexible in her habits? (If she cannot tolerate changes in her daily routine, she should stay home. It's unreasonable and rude to expect a whole family to alter its routines to accommodate her. By the way, this applies equally to children visiting their parents.)

4. Does Mother disappear once in a while to allow her children some private time together?

Please print this, Abby. I want to send it to my mother-in-law. She also insists that she's "real no trouble at all." If that were true, it wouldn't take us weeks to get over one of her "short" visits. So, "Perplexed Mother" — clean up your act, and your children will welcome you with open arms.

NOT PERPLEXED AT ALL

DEAR NOT PERPLEXED: Read on for the flip side of that problem:

DEAR ABBY: I know that not everyone is what he or she appears to be, but the woman who signed herself "Perplexed Mother" sounds like she's very easy to get along with. My parents visit us once a year — twice if we're lucky. And when they do, we give them our bedroom and bath (if we can convince them to take it). We arrange to take our vacations while they're here, so we can spend as much time with them as possible. We even plan a few outings during their stay, but we never seem to have enough time together, and when they leave, we are all teary-eyed.

God gave most of us very loving, unselfish parents with no guarantee of how long we'll be blessed with them. I hope children everywhere, grown and not-so-grown, will take stock of how much love and respect they give their parents. Children get only one chance to return some of the love, patience, sacrifice and concern their parents have dished out while raising us, so don't wait until it's too late.

THEIR "GROWN-UP" CHILD IN MARRERO, LA.

DEAR CHILD: Amen!

The right play on the wrong day

By James Jacoby

Calculating the right percentage play at the bridge table can be a baffling and perplexing exercise. Bart Bramley held today's South cards when the deal was played last March in the finals of the Vanderbilt Cup, that national team championship named after the inventor of contract bridge.

After West had led ace and a diamond, the outlook for game looked good — all South had to do was play the A-K of clubs and ruff a club. Even if the opponents take a heart trick, declarer will still have 10 tricks. On the third club, however, a slight problem arises. Should declarer ruff with the heart 10? If he does and the defenders' hearts are divided 4-0, he will lose two heart tricks. On the other hand, if he ruffs low, he might be overruffed with a small heart, and later the defenders might still come to the heart king. Bramley ruffed low and was overruffed by the seven, and then East held up once with the spade ace to deny declarer entry to dummy to take a heart finesse.

Bramley's play was right. Hearts will split 4-0 a little less than 10 percent of the time. Although clubs will divide 6-2 about 17 percent of the time, declarer was concerned only with half of that 17 percent — namely, the chance that the six were in West's hand. Furthermore, even when the small heart is overruffed, quite often that overruff is from a holding of K-x of hearts, and the bared king will then drop under the ace.

Nice play, Bart! Or, as your teammates told you, the operation was successful but the patient died.

Penguins were called "strange geese" when they were first described in 1520 by the ship historian on Ferdinand Magellan's voyage around the world. During the following centuries, visitors from the Western world, including whalers and explorers, clubbed, boiled and ate the birds, turned their hides into clothing, and used their blubber for fuel. Now, the Magellanic penguins of Patagonia are protected by the Argentine government.

ARTHRITIS IN THE WORKPLACE

ATLANTA (AP) — Remaining employed is difficult for many people with advanced rheumatoid arthritis, says the Arthritis Foundation.

But, surprisingly, studies show the ability to continue working is more dependent on job and social factors than on the severity of the disease. One study showed that people who had the freedom to control the hours, pace and conditions of their jobs were much more likely to remain working than were assembly-line workers.

Another study analyzed the characteristics of people with advanced arthritis who had continued to work successfully. It identified such circumstances as having a non-physically demanding job, a stable marriage, and a history of steady employment in the same job. — —

An oil company division has reached a safety milestone that would be the equivalent of one person working 4,260 years straight for eight hours a day without a lost-time accident. The 9 million hours is attributed by Phillips Petroleum to an extensive safety awareness program.

"IF I CATCH A WHALE, WILL YOU HELP ME CLEAN IT?"

Tartabull highlights victory over struggling Texas, 9-3

SEATTLE (AP) - Danny Tartabull belted one of the longest home runs ever hit in the Seattle Kingdome and then said he was just getting warmed up.

"I got most of it," said Tartabull, who then laughed and added, "No, I got all of it."

Tartabull's 464-foot home run, his 11th, capped a 9-3 victory by the Seattle Mariners over the Texas Rangers on Sunday.

The long homer landed 40 rows deep in the center field bleachers.

Tartabull was impressed, but he has seen better.

"I've blasted some in my time that I believe went 500 feet," he said.

Rookie Tartabull, a right fielder, earned a promotion to the big leagues after he hit 43 home runs for the Calgary Cannons last year. He got off to a good start for Seattle this season, but was slowed down when he lost 20 pounds because of anemia. Now he is healthy again and ready to start hitting more tape-measure home runs.

"I'm a stronger second-half player. Now that I'm coming into my own I think you will see more more home runs like today," Tartabull said.

Seattle held a 6-3 lead when Jim Presley led off the seventh inning with his 16th homer of the year. Mitch Williams then hit Ken Phelps with a pitch, and Tartabull finished the Seattle scoring with his home run.

Mike Moore pitched his sixth complete game as he scattered eight hits and did not walk a batter while striking out seven to raise his record to 4-7. He allowed five hits and two runs in the first three innings, but finished the game by allowing just three hits in the final five innings.

Texas took a 1-0 lead in the first when Tom Paciorek singled to drive in Oddibe McDowell.

Presley came back in the bottom of the first with a two-run double to give Seattle a 2-1 lead. The Seattle third baseman drove in four runs to give him 24 RBI in 22 games.

In the second inning, Presley drove in Harold Reynolds with an infield groundout, and Dave Valle scored on a wild pitch by Texas starter Ed Correa for a 4-2 lead.

"He just didn't get it together, he didn't have time to get it together," said Texas manager Bobby Valentine about Correa's performance.

After the second inning, Correa, 5-6, struck out six of the next ten batters. "I would be concerned if he hadn't had that good stretch," said Valentine about his 20-year-old rookie pitcher.

Seattle added two runs in the sixth off Correa when Valle doubled to score Spike Owen and then scored on a single by John Moses.

Texas' final run came in the seventh when Steve Buechele extended his hitting streak to 13 games with a double and later scored on a fielder's choice by Scott Fletcher.

Christiansen was a standout defensive back and punt returner for the Lions for eight seasons, heading a secondary that was dubbed "Chris' Crew." He was selected All-Pro six times, played in five Pro Bowl games, and was elected to the Pro Football Hall of Fame in 1970.

Astros claim 2-1 win in 'pitchers matchup'

HOUSTON (AP) - On paper, the game figured to be a classic pitching matchup.

And it translated perfectly to the field Sunday as the Houston Astros scored two unearned runs in the seventh, edging Fernando Valenzuela and the Los Angeles Dodgers by a score of 2-1 and sweeping their weekend series.

The victory propelled the Astros back into first place in the National League Western Division with a half-game lead over the San Francisco. It was a lead the Astros had relinquished after dropping four straight to the Giants last weekend.

The Astros' Nolan Ryan pitched six strong innings, striking out eight, walking three and allowing only three hits and a run-scoring double by Dodgers rookie shortstop Craig Shipley.

"I am throwing the ball real well and my arm is not hurting," said Ryan, who made his second start since returning from the disabled list.

"Ryan is so important to our club," said Astros second baseman Bill Doran. "It was encouraging to see him throw so well today."

Dodgers first baseman Len Matuszek, a Ryan strikeout victim twice, called it "typical Nolan. You have to lay off his high fastball and make him throw down low. Some of us did and some of us didn't."

Valenzuela, 10-5, pitched a complete game, his 10th of the year. He had a one-hitter going until the seventh inning, when the game fell apart.

Phil Garner led off for the Astros with a groundball to shortstop and reached second base when Shipley threw the ball into the dugout.

Glenn Davis then struck out but reached first base on a wild pitch by Valenzuela with Garner taking third. Consecutive singles by Kevin Bass and Jose Cruz drove in the two Astro runs.

"Valenzuela pitched a super game," said Dodgers manager Tom Lasorda, "I feel bad for him, but you can't give a team five outs in an inning and expect to win."

The winning pitcher for the Astros was Manny Hernandez, 2-3, who pitched one scoreless inning.

Frank DiPino relieved Hernandez to earn his third save and found the sweep very sweet, especially because of Lasorda's recent comment that the Astros were only "renting" first place.

"I felt a little extra confidence," DiPino said. "Especially with the things they've been saying. All you hear is Dodgers this and Dodgers that. I'm sick of it."

Defending champion strong despite problem with serve

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) - Defending Wimbledon men's tennis champion Boris Becker has dropped only one set in three matches in defense of his title.

Yet, according to weekend reports, he faced a crisis going into the second week of the tourney because of problems with his serve.

In today's fourth-round action, Becker, seeded fourth, faced Sweden's Mike Pernfors, the No. 13 seed.

Ivan Lendl, the top seed and the world's top-ranked player, met American Matt Anger, while Sweden's Mats Wilander, the No. 2 seed, clashed with rejuvenated Australian Pat Cash.

Much of Becker's success depends on his destructive serving power. After the 18-year-old West German served 12 double-faults in his four-set victory over Australian Paul McNamee on Saturday, his critics brought out the knives.

Under the headline "King Becker faces double trouble," the Sunday Express said that a string of double-faults against McNamee "left a question mark over Becker's ability to cope with the hard and powerful men he still has to face."

Becker acknowledged the pressure on him.

"Because I am the champion, people are trying 110 percent to beat me. So I have got to try 120 percent."

Midland talks oil business with Chinese sister city

MIDLAND, Texas (AP) — A business delegation from this West Texas oil town, where the slump in oil prices has ground the economy to a crawl, has returned from a trip to Midland's Chinese sister city hopeful that an outlet has been found for Midland's under-used petroleum expertise.

Dongying, with a population of 1.6 million, is about 15 times the size of Midland and lies near the Shengli oil field, the second largest in the People's Republic of China.

The Shengli field accounts for nearly a fourth of that country's oil production, said Richard Dunbar, who markets oil and heads the Midland Chamber of Commerce's International Affairs Committee.

The business leaders are hoping an agreement signed by Midland Mayor Carroll Thomas and his Dongying counterpart, Tang Shenghai, will be the boost Midland's petroleum industry needs. The pact calls for an exchange of technological data in oil and gas production, distribution and equipment.

"We have invited them to the oil show in October and we hope they come to see the cutting edge of oil technology," said Joan Baskin, president of the Midland Chamber of Commerce.

Thirty Midland representatives, including Thomas and Ms. Baskin, went to China June 13. Dunbar was on hand to greet Thomas, who arrived in Midland late Sunday night with part of the group. Othes are due to return Tuesday.

Although the travelers did not strike any firm business deals with their Chinese hosts, friendships were established and "the stage is set for future trade," said Roger Dameron of Dameron Petroleum Corp.

"It was a landmark trip in that we came to understand what the Chinese do in their oil fields," said Dameron. "They have a different approach to production b[illegible] it's all under one owner-s[illegible] technology needs improving. I'd say they're roughly 15 years behind."

The Permian Basin, of which Midland has been the financial center, currently produces about four to five times as much oil as the Shengli oilfield, said Dameron.

"I don't believe we're in competition with them," he said, adding that two large refineries are being planned in the Dongying area.

The people of Dongying also want to sell their wares to the West, including textiles and agricultural products, Dameron said.

"We were really impressed with the pragmatism of the government, who has decided to get joint ventures, foreign money, into China," said Ms. Baskin. "They're not doctrinaire communists."

The mayor talked with Chinese officials about sharing technology for shrimp farming and said a similar operation could be set up in Midland using brackish water.

"They work in five-year plans. Their goal by the 1990s is to increase oil production by 50 percent," said Thomas. "They now have 52 producing areas (in the Shengli field).

Friends say senator seemed cheerful before his suicide

GREENVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Sen. John East appeared cheerful despite lingering illness and was looking forward to resuming his academic career after his term expired, said stunned colleagues after learning that the staunchly conservative legislator's death apparently was a suicide.

"It's just a blow," Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., East's political mentor, said Sunday. "I don't think I'll ever get over it."

President Reagan, vacationing at his mountaintop ranch near Santa Barbara, Calif., hailed East as a "true patriot."

East, 55, was found by an aide in the garage of his Greenville home at 8 a.m. Sunday, police said.

Dr. Lawrence Harris, who conducted an autopsy, said the Republican senator died of asphyxiation by carbon monoxide between midnight and 2 a.m. Sunday.

"In my opinion, he took his own life. I have no question about it," Harris said.

East, who was confined to a wheelchair, was found lying on the floor beside the car, said Detective Clifton Weatherington.

"A note was found at the scene, the contents of which are considered a personal communication between Senator East and his family," said a police statement. The Washington Post today quoted a police officer as saying the note mentioned his health problems.

East was found by John Petree, who had arrived to bring mail to the senator.

East's wife, Priscilla, was in South Carolina visiting her mother at the time of his death. Survivors also include two daughters.

The senator, confined to a wheelchair because of polio when he was 24, was hospitalized in 1985 for hypothyroidism. He also was hospitalized for treatment of a low white blood cell count and a urinary blockage, and missed much of the Senate's work last year.

The hypothyroidism, a glandular condition that leads to imbalance in the body's hormones, may have led to his suicide because it has a strong connection with depression, said Dr. T.K. Gray, a professor of medicine at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

"He looked well, but one never knows what's inside of another person," said Helms, who had last spoken with East on Thursday. "I had no inkling whatsoever. He was in a good mood. He continued to be discouraged about his health, but not very much."

East's press secretary, Jerry Woodruff, said the senator had been planning to return to teaching and had been reviewing galley proofs of a book.

Helms said he had recommended East for a federal judgeship. But when East learned of the recommendation, he told Helms he preferred to return to his political science teaching post at East Carolina University in Greenville.

Helms picked East to run against incumbent Democrat Robert Morgan in 1980. Helms' political machine raised the money for television ads that boosted East to an upset victory in the bitter race.

East's announcement that he would not run again touched off a GOP primary fight in which Rep. Jim Broyhill, a moderate, defeated David Funderburk, backed by East and Helms. East endorsed Broyhill after the primary.

Contra aid battle endures through numerous rounds

WASHINGTON (AP) — After the House approved President Reagan's plan to provide $100 million worth of mostly military aid to Nicaraguan rebels, a jubilant Reagan declared, "It's only round one, but, oh, boy, what a round!"

Actually, though, it wasn't round one — it was round 15.

In the past four years, there had been 14 votes in the House or Senate dealing with U.S. support for the Contras fighting Nicaragua's leftist government.

And more votes are likely.

"The fight is over for now, but you can be sure we'll be back on it," Rep. Edward Markey, D-Mass., said Thursday, a day after the House approved, 221-209, Reagan's plan.

Although the issue won't go away, House members were tired of dealing with it, at least for now, said Rep. Tom Foley, D-Wash., the third-ranking Democrat in the House.

Why can't the fight be decided once and for all?

The answer is rooted partly in the nature of the U.S. government, particularly the constitutional division of authority between the White House and Capitol Hill.

While the executive branch makes foreign policy, it is the Congress, through the power of the purse, which pays for that policy.

Also, Congress, in the wake of the perceived executive branch foreign policy excesses of the Vietnam War, has tried to increase its influence over foreign policy.

That effort is reflected not only in Central America, but on issues like arms sales to Saudi Arabia and U.S. policy toward the Philippines.

Besides the constitutional split of authority, Congress is divided on how to deal with Nicaragua. Polls show voters don't like the Sandinistas, but also don't want the United States to get involved in a war there.

In the House, there are 252 Democrats and 182 Republicans, along with one vacancy. Of that total, about 150 members strongly support Reagan's policy and another 150 oppose it. It is the votes of the rest that must be captured.

In Reagan's first term, when the CIA directed the covert war against Nicaragua, the issue of U.S. policy toward the Sandinistas received less attention than some other issues.

But as the covert war became more overt, it attracted more attention. The first major fight was two years ago when Reagan openly sought $21 million in Contra aid. The Republican-controlled Senate approved, but the House, on May 24, 1984, voted 241-177 against the plan.

Later that year, the House voted 294-118 against a different aid program, while the Senate approved $28 million. In a conference committee called to resolve differences on a spending bill, the two sides split the difference, approving $14 million.

In spring 1985, the Senate approved $14 million more, but the House voted against. 248-184. Months later, Reagan sent up a $38 million aid package. That, too, ran into trouble even though Congress approved $27 million in non-lethal aid.

Thus, in each of the past three years, Reagan has lost a round in the House but, after increasing the pressure on Congress through private appeals and speeches, he has ended up with at least some of the money he wanted.

Crimes per homes hits lowest level

WASHINGTON (AP) — The number of American households touched by a crime of violence or theft in 1985 fell by 600,000 to one in every four, the lowest level in a decade, the Justice Department reports.

In 1985, nearly 22.2 million households were touched by crime, compared with 22.8 million the previous year, the department's Bureau of Justice Statistics said Sunday. The total has been declining since 1982, when nearly 25 million households were affected.

In 1985, households with high incomes and households in urban areas were more vulnerable to crime than others, with black households somewhat more vulnerable than white households. Crime touched 26 percent of black households, 29 percent of households with incomes of more than $25,000 and 30 percent of urban households.

One in 13 households was burglarized in 1985 or had a member who was the victim of a rape, robbery or an assault committed by a stranger, a category the agency labeled "high-concern crimes." The rate of such crimes stood at 10.5 percent of all households in 1981, but declined steadily until 1984. It was unchanged last year.

When the survey was first taken in 1975, nearly one-third of U.S. households were being affected by crime each year. Twenty-five percent were affected in 1985, 26 percent in 1984, 27.4 percent in 1983, 29.3 percent in 1982 and 30 percent in 1981 and 1980.

Most of last year's decrease compared to 1984 was due to a 6 percent drop in the percentage of households touched by personal theft — an overall decline of more than 500,000.

One big factor is a drop of nearly 2 million during the past five years in the size of the 15- to 19-year-old age group, which is most responsible for property crimes, said Alfred Blumstein, a professor in the school of urban and public affairs at Carnegie-Mellon University in Pittsburgh.

More than a million fewer households were touched by crime last year than in 1975, despite the addition of 16 million new households in that period.

The survey is not a measure of the amount of crime occurring in the nation. A household is counted only once, no matter how many times it may be victimized.

Earlier this year, the FBI reported that major crime reported to police rose 4 percent last year compared to 1984. Total crime in America, which includes crimes that aren't reported to authorities, fell slightly in 1985 compared to the previous year, but the decline was not statistically significant, the Bureau of Justice Statistics said.

The proportion of suburban households touched by crime declined by 25 percent from 1975 to 1985, and the drop for rural households was 24 percent in that period. The proportion for urban households, on the other hand, was only 17 percent.

TECAT apology 'important step'

HOUSTON (AP) — Teachers here are happy with Gov. Mark White's apology for stress caused by the competency test, but they say they aren't ready to endorse him for re-election.

"The big question is whether teachers are going to accept his apology," said Gayle Fallon, president of the Houston Federation of Teachers. "He finally understands it is a very difficult thing to tell people their entire career hinges on a test."

In an address to Texas Democrats meeting in Austin Saturday, White paused after a series of rebukes of his Republican opponent, former Gov. Bill Clements, and said: "Let me say a few words to our teachers.

"We asked you to take a test, and, honestly, I didn't realize the intensity of the stress that it would cause," White said. "For that, I am genuinely sorry."

Lump not caused by appendicitis

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I am a 13-year-old girl. Lately, when I press just under my left breast I feel a hard, round object. I know this seems funny for a girl my age, but could it be appendicitis?

DEAR READER — No, this is not appendicitis. The lump may be in the breast, the subcutaneous tissue or on the ribcage. Because I cannot define your problem from the information you supply, I suggest you make an appointment with your doctor. He or she will examine you and clear up the mystery.

Appendicitis causes pain and tenderness, usually in the lower right abdomen. It is not associated with a lump.

DEAR DR. GOTT — In the past five years I have had three sebaceous cysts, one tumor and part of my cervix removed (cone biopsy). Three blood relatives died of lung cancer. Are these factors related?

DEAR READER — I do not believe that your relatives' lung cancers are related to your problem.

Sebaceous cysts are common and play no role whatsoever in causing your problems. I assume from your question that no further gynecological surgery was performed, so the cone biopsy probably removed all the dysplasia (abnormal tissue) and was done because your Pap smear showed some abnormalities. Routine follow-up by your gynecologist probably will be all that is necessary.

I am less certain about the "one tumor" you had removed. Depending on its location and whether it was malignant, it may be related to future difficulties. On the basis of the tumor and the cervical biopsy, you would be wise, I think, to ask your doctor to review the whole situation with you. I believe this is the kind of individual care to which every patient is entitled.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I am a 32-year-old woman. I go to my gynecologist every six months but haven't had a physical in 10 years. I am in good health, except for minor complaints, and have had no reason to go for a checkup. Is it necessary for a person my age to have a physical?

DEAR READER — Probably not. Most gynecologists perform satisfactorily complete examinations that should suffice for the average healthy woman. Of course, if you have a medical problem, your doctor would probably want you to be seen by a nonsurgical physician, too.

Occasionally, depending on your personal health profile and family history, your gynecologist might want you to have blood tests and additional studies. If you believe that your gynecologist is thorough, takes time to answer your questions and appears interested in the "whole you," further medical investigation would be unnecessary. Ask your gynecologist if he or she is comfortable in being your "primary-care physician." If not, get the name of a doctor who is comfortable in that role and who is willing to coordinate his or her services with those of your gynecologist.

To give you more information, I am sending you a free copy of my new Health Report, CHOOSING A PHYSICIAN: MAKE A DECISION FOR GOOD HEALTH. Other readers who would like a copy should send $1 and their name and address to P.O. Box 2597, Cincinnati, OH 45201. Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I am 15 years old, and a few days ago, while I was doing the dead lift (standing up and pulling weights off the floor), I got a terrible sharp pain around my ears and the back of my head. It lasted a couple of hours and keeps coming back. What should I do about this pain?

DEAR READER — It seems to me as though you pulled a muscle in your neck. Use heat, stop lifting for a week or two and — if the situation hasn't improved — see your doctor.

Schools cited for excellence

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of Education William Bennett, saying a good education must have a solid foundation, is for the first time honoring 270 public and private elementary schools for excellence in the 1985-86 school year, the Education Department announced today.

The 210 public schools and 60 private schools are scattered throughout the country and "are as diverse as America itself," Bennett said in a statement. "But they share a common attribute: they're good schools; they provide their young students with a solid foundation for later life."

The schools were picked based on how well they used resources available to them and how well they met their students' needs. The Education Department said special emphasis was placed on achievement in reading and mathematics, and "the school's record in overcoming obstacles and sustaining progress."

Representatives from the winning schools will be invited to Washington next fall for a recognition ceremony. They will receive a flag symbolizing educational achievement.

The public schools were selected from 509 nominations by state school chiefs in 49 states, the District of Columbia and the Defense Department's overseas dependents schools.

The private schools were chosen by the Council for American Private Education from 293 schools that participated in 24 states and the District of Columbia. CAPE is an umbrella organization for secular and religious schools.

The schools were recognized for outstanding performance in the following areas: school organization and goals; instructional programs, including character and ethical development; instruction, including teacher evaluation and staff development; efforts at improvement.

Offshore drilling said at new low

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Drilling off the coasts of Louisiana and Texas dropped to a record low last week even before Hurricane Bonnie temporarily forced a halt to work in the area.

Close to one in four rigs in the Gulf of Mexico were under contract last week, according to Offshore Data Services, a Houston newsletter that tracks the offshore drilling fleet worldwide.

Sixty-eight rigs were contracted last week from a Gulf fleet of 246 for a utilization rate of 27.6 percent. Last year, 190 rigs were working in the Gulf and 67 were idle.

Even as the mobile rig count in the Gulf tumbled, the rig count in Louisiana held steady.

A total of 109 rigs was active in Louisiana last week for the second consecutive week, according to Hughes Tool Co. records.

Tennessee prison riot scars don't heal very quickly

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — State prisons are less crowded than they were a year ago when riots killed one convict and injured five others, but officials say it will take years to cure all the ills of the long-neglected corrections system.

"I think we're headed in the right direction," said prison consultant Don Stoughton. "Maybe we could move a little faster." He likened prison reform to "flying a plane to Atlanta and building the plane as you fly."

There still are scars from fires that destroyed much of Turney Center at Only, southwest of Nashville last July 1. Riots spread the next day to the Tennessee State Prison in Nashville and to regional prisons near Wartburg and Pikeville in eastern Tennessee.

Damage was estimated at $11 million.

Convicts blamed the riots on a rule requiring prisoners to wear uniforms with horizontal stripes up the legs, which officials hoped would make escapees easier to find. But there was little doubt that overcrowding helped ignite the riots.

The overcrowding, and a judge's order to reduce it, led to a special session of the Legislature last fall, the first session on prison reform in 90 years.

It began shortly after U.S. District Judge Thomas Higgins closed prisons to new admissions Oct. 23. He ruled that the state had failed to live up to earlier anti-crowding orders, issued in connection with a lawsuit filed on behalf of inmates.

There are about 7,000 convicts in the state's 15 prisons today — 500 fewer than a year ago and 700 fewer than when Higgins issued his order.

Frank Wood, another corrections consultant, praised the state's efforts since the riots, saying they have been "far beyond my most optimistic expectations."

In the special session, the lawmakers called for sentencing of all felons serving less than six years to county jails, a move that has backed up some 1,000 state prisoners in the state's 95 county lockups.

The Legislature also authorized construction of two new 500-man maximum security prisons costing $110 million, community punishment for many felons now headed for prison, and earlier paroles.

McDonald's has Welding Machines and Supplies

McDonald Welding Supply has gained a reputation for service, and for good reason. The staff at McDonald Welding Supply comes early and stays late.
