THE SDN COLUMN

By Roy McQueen

The feller on Deep Creek says, "A rash of good luck is finding a four-leaf clover in a patch of poison ivy."

Think Rain!

People have known it for years. If you want to ensure a good crowd — offer free food.

In West Texas, a free barbecue will draw as many people as watermelon will flies.

There's something else that will get folks off the couch — cheap gasoline. Travis Bunch, owner of the new Tiger Mart at 37th and College, proved that last Saturday during his 8 to 5 grand opening.

Bunch rated his grand opening event a "big success," traffic jams and all. Starting at 8 a.m., the grand opening draw was 99.9-cent unleaded gasoline.

Bunch said the "below-cost" fuel offer had cars backed up more than a block on more than one occasion. The number of customers who paid inside totaled 1,228.

Shortly after noon, Bunch had to refill underground tanks. By day's end, some 12,000 gallons had been pumped.

The below-cost offer was a savings of about 22 cents in Snyder. We noticed in Big Spring and Midland, however, that the posted price of unleaded fuel Saturday was 1.31.

Think Rain!

Passing through Snyder, but no time for a visit.

I.E. Martin, Snyder city councilman and car air conditioner repairman, got a call one morning last week from his nephew who lives in Atlanta.

"Where are you?" Martin inquired.

"Snyder," said the caller.

"Come by," Martin said.

"Be kinda hard," explained the caller. "I'm at 29,000 feet and traveling just over 600 miles an hour. Better talk fast, 'cause I'll be out of range soon."

Martin's nephew is a corporate pilot with NAPA Auto Parts.

Centennial Park reopens

Thousands flock to memorial services this morning

ATLANTA (AP) — Thousands flocked to Centennial Olympic Park today, celebrating a "triumph of human spirit" and reclaiming the festive heart of the Summer Games — even as the FBI pressed ahead with its hunt for the terrorist who bombed it.

With a burst of water from a five-ringed Olympic fountain, the crowd cheered as dignitaries rededicated the 21-acre park that was closed after the pipe bomb early Saturday killed one person and injured more than 100.

"We're here not to wallow in tragedy, but to celebrate a triumph — a triumph of human spirit," said Andrew Young, an Olympic official and former mayor of Atlanta.

"So we say to those who suffered here, we assure you that your suffering is not in vain," he said. "We're sure that the 21st century will remember the joy, the wonderful, the celebration, the vitality of the people of the earth gathered in this park, and that we will define the future. Not with bitterness, not alienation, but with joy, happiness."

Alice Hawthorne, 44, of Albany, was killed by the explosion, and Turkish cameraman Melih Uzunyol, 40, died of a heart attack while running to the scene. Ten of the injured remained hospitalized today, one in critical condition.

There was no visible electronic screening, but a large red-and-white sign spelled out some new rules: By entering the park, visitors agreed to random searches of their packages. It also warned against leaving packages unattended and asked visitors to report any suspicious behavior.

"We're down here because we believe there's no need for fear, because we trust in God," said Sylvia Berends of Auckland, New Zealand. She was part of a group that sang hymns and placed yellow, red and white carnations on a hill near the lighting tower that took the full force of the blast.

Hellie Mathes, 64, of Little Rock, Ark., said she came with her two daughters "to make a statement. ... I feel like we cannot allow one person to destroy something wonderful."

Blood had been washed from the engraved bricks, debris had been cleared, and fresh sheets of corrugated aluminum gleamed at the base of the lighting tower.

The FBI said Monday that it was making progress toward solving the crime.

"History leads me to believe we will make an arrest. We will continue working the case, and we will make an arrest," bureau spokesman David Tubbs said.

The Washington Post reported today that the bomb was made using a simple clock or kitchen timer and low-grade explosive powder that is easily obtained. The shrapnel that sprayed from the bomb included masonry nails packed in a plastic food container, the newspaper said.

In attacking the park, the bomber struck a place that had quickly come to symbolize the Atlanta Olympics in all their joy and commercial excess. Centennial Park is essentially a vast grass and brick plaza, large portions of which are given over to the corporate sponsors of the Olympics for exhibits and sales.

It was between two of these commercial structures, the Swatch Pavilion and the stage of the AT&T Global Olympic Village, that the bomb went off.

The decision to reopen the park was met with nearly unanimous approval here. The bombing has elicited feelings of outrage and defiance — an almost protective sense of passion for the Olympics.

"It's got to go on," said Susan Hayman, a Canadian who arrived from Toronto last Friday and went straight to Centennial Park. She had left the park less than two hours before the bombing.

A federal law enforcement official in Washington, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Monday that investigators were zeroing in on several Americans as potential suspects.

Council to resume budget talks today

The city's proposed budget for 1996-97 will get another look by city council members as they meet for a workshop this evening at 6 o'clock.

Earlier in the month, the council got its first public look at the budget which includes a proposed 3.23-cent tax increase. The budget is $7,979,190 — which is $686,390 more than last year's total of $7,292,800. Costs associated with operating the city's landfill and capital expenditures in that department of some $150,000 account for a big portion of the increase.

Citizens are facing a tax increase from 39.72 cents per $100 valuation to 42.95 cents. Figures form the city indicate that a person paying city taxes on a $30,000 home will have to ante up $6.69 more per year.

Water and sewer rates are slated to go up 8 percent. The current base rate of $8.45 will increase to $9.13 while an additional thousand gallons will increase from $2.35 to $2.54.

Sewer rates are expected to increase from a base rate of $7.60 to $8.21, with additional charges being increased from $2.05 per thousand gallons to $2.21.

The increase in these rates are to fund the city's new water treatment plant.

Sanitation rates are scheduled to go up five percent as the base rate for residential customers will increase from $14.50 to $15.23. Commercial rates will go up $1.05 per month — from $28.05 to $29.45.

A three-percent increase in salaries for city employees is also included in the proposed budget.

Douglas moves away from coast

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Hurricane Douglas churned through the Pacific Ocean off southern Mexico today after killing 35 people in a sweep across northern Colombia and Central America.

Watches and warnings for southern Mexico, including the beach resort of Acapulco, were discontinued before dawn as Douglas rumbled westward, paralelling the coastline.

At 5 a.m. EDT, Douglas was 335 miles southeast of Acapulco. The U.S. National Weather Service said it was moving west at 20 mph, with sustained winds of 80 mph and gusts of 97 mph.

Up to six inches of rain fell over parts of southern Mexico, creating the risk of flash floods and mudslides in mountainous regions. In some places, tides were expected to be four feet higher than normal.

Tropical storm had been issued Monday from Salina Cruz on the

WTC sets orientation dates

Two identical Success Seminars are planned Aug. 20 and 22 to help new students ease the transition to college life.

Students will be given the chance to meet the faculty, interact with other incoming students, tour the campus, gain helpful information, and register for fall classes.

Academic advisors will be available to help with class selection. Lunch and entertainment are also a part of each seminar, and parents are welcome to attend.

Students who have not completed their admission paperwork or paid registration or housing fees will need to do so at the seminar.

Students who do not have ACT or SAT scores on file will need to take a placement test. The cost is $10, and the test takes about 90 minutes. Anyone needing to take the test should plan to report to the admissions office at 8 a.m.

Students who plan to receive financial aid for the 1996-97 school year should have their financial aid file complete before the seminar. Anyone having questions about their financial aid status should call the Financial Aid Office before Aug. 20.

Registration for either Success Seminar is necessary. Call the Student Services office to reserve a spot. The cost is $20 for one to three persons, $25 for four persons, or $30 for five persons.

Students who do not attend a seminar will register Sept. 3. Classes begin Sept. 5.

Congressional district remapping may possibly impact Scurry County

From local, wire stories

HOUSTON (AP) — More than a dozen maps redesigning Texas congressional districts were submitted Monday to a three-judge federal court panel working to ensure the legality of new boundaries for three districts that were found to be racially gerrymandered.

At least one of the plans submitted would take Scurry County out of District 17 and place it in District 19.

During a flurry of activity leading up to a 4 p.m. deadline set by the judges, Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock and House Speaker Pete Laney submitted a pair of plans to the federal district court clerk's office in Houston.

Two others came from the plaintiffs in the case and more plans arrived from parties that included the Galveston County Republican Party, an Hispanic civil rights organization, some Houston city officials and U.S. Rep. Eddie Bernice Johnson, whose 30th District in Dallas was among the three ruled unconstitutional by the U.S. Supreme Court.

The three-judge panel also had asked the parties to submit redrawn boundaries for Houston's 18th and 29th districts. Any redesign, however, also could affect a number of other adjacent Texas congressional districts.

The judges could accept any of the plans or draw their own boundaries.

districts may have to be redesigned if they do the reconfiguration.

One plan submitted by the plaintiffs has major changes to the 17th District, held by U.S. Rep. Charles Stenholm. The longtime representative, a Democrat, would lose most of the rural counties to the north and east of his hometown of Stamford and would take in areas around Odessa, Midland and San Angelo.

Under the plan, several counties which are currently in the 17th District — including Scurry, Fisher and Stonewall — would be placed in the 19th, held by Larry Combest, a Republican from Lubbock. Combest's district, which currently extends into the Panhandle, would run largely east-west instead of north-south. That would mean that District 13, held by Mac Thornberry (R-Clarendon) would cover most of the Panhandle.

A ruling is expected by Aug. 8.

Alcohol therapy may end yeast

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I've had a yeast infection in my ears on and off for the past 19 years. I've learned to live with it, as my general practitioner doesn't know how to get rid of it. Lately, though, it's driving me nuts. Is there a medicine to cure me?

DEAR READER: Yeasts readily grow in dark, warm, moist environments. Ears can be affected (with resulting pain and loss of hearing), especially during the warm months when people swim in fresh water — and may not get the water out of their ears at day's end.

An ear-nose-and-throat doctor would be able to give you specific advice, such as medicated ear drops, but here's a simple technique that may work.

Each night before retiring, pour a half capful of rubbing alcohol into the ear, wait a few seconds, then shake it out. The alcohol — aside from killing bacteria and yeasts — absorbs water. As the alcohol evaporates, so does the moisture, leaving a clean, dry ear canal, an area very inhospitable to microbes.

To give you more information, I am sending you a copy of my Health Report "Ear Infections and Disorders." Other readers would like a copy should send $2 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 2017, Murray Hill Station, New York, NY 10156. Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR DR. GOTT: My husband wants to donate his organs when he dies, yet he doesn't want to be kept on life support. What happens if he should die at home or en route to the hospital? I say he has to be on a respirator, he says it doesn't make any difference. Who's right?

DEAR READER: You're both correct.

Some of his organs, such as his corneas, will remain viable for some time after death. Others, such as the heart and kidneys, must be removed and placed in a preservative within minutes after death.

A respirator wouldn't help if his heart had stopped beating. But, obviously, life-support machines would enable the transplant team to operate in less of an emergency situation.

If he is really serious about being an organ donor, your husband should contact your local hospital to determine if his organs could be used and, if so, how best to preserve them should he suffer an unexpected catastrophe.

For example, many hospitals recommend temporary life support, if your husband would agree in writing with such an option.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Whenever I drink alcohol, I bleed from my rectum. This lasts up to three days. Could it be hemorrhoids or something more serious? I'm a 36-year-old female who is afraid to share my concerns with my family physician.

DEAR READER: Rectal bleeding, although usually harmless, should always be investigated with an examination of the lower colon. Hemorrhoids can cause it — but so can tumors and infection. You should definitely bring your symptoms to your doctor's attention.

Alcohol may, in some people, affect clotting. This can produce bruising and easy bleeding.

Nonetheless, you should have your rectal problem checked out so that the cause can be discovered and you can receive appropriate treatment, if necessary.

Nearly 83 percent of the land in Nevada is owned by the federal government; about 25 percent of Connecticut is federally owned.

Lamm enters 'phase two' in battle with Perot, 'Reform'

DENVER (AP) — Opening up the voting process if not a large lead, Richard Lamm says he's entering "phase two of a great adventure" in battling Ross Perot for his own Reform Party's presidential nomination.

Monday morning, the Reform Party certified that Perot and Lamm both qualified as finalists. And by Monday night Lamm had won the battle to get access to results of the mail-in survey that kept him in contention.

According to the "partial results" released to the Lamm campaign, he got 27.8 percent support from Reform Party members who answered the preference survey and Perot got 64.6 percent.

No one besides Perot and Lamm actively sought the nomination, which required at least 10 percent support to become a finalist. But 7.6 percent of the survey ballots sent in listed "other" candidates, the Lamm campaign said, without revealing the names of the also-rans.

The Reform Party, which provided the preliminary results to Lamm at his insistence, planned to publicly release full results today.

For the survey, the Reform Party, which claims 1.3 million members, sent out 980,000 ballots. But only 43,058 were returned — or only 4.4 percent — according to the partial results released by the Lamm campaign.

Despite the low survey "turnout," Lamm declared himself happy to even be in the running. "I'm obviously pleased to make the ballot. It's phase two of a great adventure," he said.

Now, party members will decide between Perot and Lamm at a two-part convention next month. The candidates will deliver speeches Aug. 11 in Long Beach, Calif., and the winner will be announced Aug. 18 in Valley Forge, Pa., with party members voting during the interim.

Lamm's senior campaign advisor Tom D'Amore said Lamm wanted precise survey results so he could campaign where he has the strongest support.

Initially, Reform Party national coordinator Russ Verney said the original contract with the accounting firm, Ernst & Young, that was tallying the ballots did not include releasing detailed results.

"They are now breaking it out in the way that's been requested by the Lamm Campaign," Verney said before sharing the data with Lamm.

Lamm supporters are concerned the process has favored Perot so far.

Nancy Couperus, a party member from California who urged Lamm to run, complained that many Reform Party members in areas where Lamm had solid support did not receive the ballot surveys, so they couldn't vote.

In a letter that she and two other California party member sent to Perot last week, they complained, "You were the one who asked us to recruit a fresh face and we did. At the very least, it now has the appearance that this was merely a ploy so that you could have someone to run against."

Two students get scholarships

MUSKOGEE, Okla. (AP) — Three students whose high school diplomas were withheld because they wore ethnic symbols to graduation have been offered full scholarships to the University of Minnesota.

Two of the students accepted the offer. The third has decided to attend Northeastern State University in Tahlequah.

The Muskogee school district has refused to release the girls' diplomas until they serve 24 days in a school detention program for violating the graduation dress code. The students have refused to enter the program.

Multi-class reunion plans are being made

Snyder High School Class of 1956 has invited the classes of 1954, 1955, 1957 and 1958 to join them for a multi-class reunion on Aug. 10.

Twenty-five faculty members from the area have been contacted and are expected to attend.

The class of 1956 has set a rap session for 7 p.m. Friday at Rudy's where snacks and drinks will be served. However, anyone in any of these classes is welcome to attend.

A donation box will be available for those who have not prepaid.

On Saturday morning, the class of 1956 will have a coffee at Rudy's where coffee, juice and sweets will be served. At the same time at the country club, the class of 1957 will be having a brunch.

Beginning at 1 p.m. Saturday, there will be a special tour of the Ritz Theater, and at 6, the multi-class dinner and jukebox dance will be held at the Wagon Wheel Ranch near Dermott. Dinner of broiled steak and all the trimmings will be served at 7:30, followed by entertainment and at least one special guest. The jukebox dance of 1950s music, including a few country and western, furnished by Stokes Entertainment and Vending of Snyder will follow the dinner.

The evening event will end when everyone is too tired to talk or dance any longer, said a reunion planner.

"The reunion has been such a success that the class of 1956 plans to host a similar one in 1999, and starting in 2001, we plan to do it every two years thereafter," said Ken Andrews, adopted member of the class. "As we move into the 21st century and the numbers begin to dwindle, we plan to have it more often. Eventually it will be each month, and then each week at a coffee table in some local restaurant. As long as anyone of us can still get around, we plan on continuing to reunite."

Video-taped interviews of classmates will be held throughout the event.

Penwomen hold July meeting

Scurry County Penwomen met July 18 in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Foy Westmoreland with Sherry Bryant presiding and Yvonne Nunn giving the invocation.

Marge Smith made a motion for members to pay their $5 club dues and rent a booth for a bake sale at the White Buffalo festival on Oct. 5. The motion, seconded by Vaudine Thomas, was approved. Members are also making bookmarks to sell at the festival.

Garnet Quiett gave a program on "The Definition of Poetry Terms" in which she pointed out that poets should memorize the terms of imagery, metaphor, meter iambic and free verse. She said that the writer should edit their work well prior to sending in for publication.

Writers reading their own work included a true story by Nunn, "Things are Not Always What They Seem To Be," and her poem, "The Nick-Nick Game." Jean Everett read her true article, "Her House was Filled With Laughter."

Additional poems read were Westmoreland, "Life Gets in the Way;" Smith, "Ego;" Helene Tutt read her poem, "Housebroke" and her true article, "Dyslexia." Thomas read her article, "Back Then;" Joy Glover read her poem, "Live Today."

Others readings included "That Makes Poetry" and "The Sunset Painter," by Quiett; Bryant's read an article, "Nature's Child" and her poem, "The Cowboy and the Sea Gull," by Phil Kennington, and "Talk About Being Tough," by Baxter Blacck.

Bryant, who won the hostess gift, also brought the word of encouragement on "Dreams Will Come True."

The Aug. 15 meeting will be hosted by Vaudene Thomas in Sweetwater. Visitors are welcome.

Genes, MS study underway

By the Associated Press

Scientists have come a step closer to finding the genes that predispose some people to multiple sclerosis.

Understanding the genetic roots of MS could eventually lead to ways to diagnose, treat and perhaps even cure the disease, which afflicts about 350,000 Americans.

Comparing the hunt for the genes to looking for spots on a map of the United States, gene hunters said they began looking at the whole country, and have now eliminated 90 percent of it.

Researchers from Europe, Canada and the United States say they have found a number of regions in the human genetic code where MS genes could reside.

By looking at those areas more closely, scientists predict they will eventually be able to identify genes that increase a person's chance of getting the disease.

The genetic researchers stressed that their studies did not show MS is an inherited disease. Having a family member with multiple sclerosis does increase a person's chances of getting the disease, but there are other unknown factors involved besides genetics. Environmental factors, for one thing, may play a role.

A U.S. study identified 19 genetic regions that may harbor genes related to multiple sclerosis. Canadian and British studies found slightly different but similar sets of candidate areas. The groups reported their findings in the August issue of Nature Genetics.

Multiple sclerosis can take several forms, ranging in severity from occasional mild attacks to a fatal disease that gradually robs its victims of control over their bodies.

Keep the key card

Chuang-tzu, the most significant of China's early interpreters of Taoism, said, "Banish wisdom, discard knowledge, and gangsters will stop!" What do you make of that?

At the bridge table, discarding accurately is difficult. East threw a critical card in this deal.

North's "correct" response is two hearts, not one spade, opposite a five-card major. But North wanted to try to silence the opponents — and he succeeded.

Against two hearts, West led the club 10, which, given South's bid, East thought was likely to be a singleton. So, when South continued with the heart queen, which West ducked, and the heart king, East discarded the diamond 10 to show his entry. Now, though, the contract couldn't be defeated.

West switched to the ace, queen and three of diamonds, East winning with the king. Back came a club, but West couldn't ruff. Declarer drew trumps and conceded a spade trick.

East should discard the spade queen, not the diamond 10. This will banish any thought West may have to underlead his ace. And, more importantly, after West takes two diamond tricks and the spade ace before leading his last diamond, the 13th diamond from East promotes the heart nine as the setting trick.

There are two final points. If West plays three rounds of diamonds without cashing the spade ace, declarer throws his spade loser on the 13th diamond and gets home. But if West ducks his heart ace until the third round of the suit, he doesn't need to cash the spade ace. If South discards his spade on the last diamond, West throws his second club and receives a club ruff.

What wisdom! What knowledge!

Gazpacho is way cool!

By Marialisa Calta

For a time within the last two decades, it was on every menu, threatening to become as trendy as pesto in the '80s or quiche in the '70s; but gazpacho — the cold soup which originated in the Andalusian region of Spain — never QUITE reached the full-gale force of a culinary megatrend.

GOLDEN GAZPACHO

- 4 large yellow or golden tomatoes, seeded and cut up
- 2 yellow or orange bell peppers, quartered and seeded
- 2 cucumbers, peeled and seeded
- 2 cloves garlic, peeled
- 1 small onion, peeled and quartered
- 1 yellow chili pepper, seeded
- ¼ cup balsamic vinegar
- 1 teaspoon sugar
- ¼ cup olive oil
- 1 to 1½ cup vegetable stock (see note) or water
- Dash hot pepper sauce
- Salt and pepper
- Plain yogurt, for garnish
- Fresh chopped cilantro leaves (also sold as fresh coriander or Chinese parsley), for garnish

In a blender or food processor fitted with a metal blade, puree together the tomatoes, bell peppers, cucumbers, garlic, onion, chili pepper, vinegar, sugar, oil, stock (or water) and hot sauce. You may have to work in batches. Put all pureed ingredients in a bowl, cover and chill. Season with salt and pepper if desired and garnish with a dollop of yogurt and cilantro leaves.

Note: Homemade vegetable stock is preferable, but it can be purchased canned in most grocery stores, or in powdered form in health-food stores.

Yield: 8 servings.

In Case You Were Wondering About:
Hyperbilirubinemia
Babies, at only a few days old, will sometime develop an elevated bilirubin count, or hyperbilirubinemia. Its cause is often attributed to an immature liver, but it may also be due to blood type incompatibilities, birth trauma, or biliary atresia. A baby with hyperbilirubinemia will develop yellow shin or yellow eyes - it is often referred to as jaundice. The most common method of treatment is phototherapy. Special blue flourescent lamps are placed near the baby which will "break down" the bilirubin so it can be transported out of the body.
Barbee Medical can help if a physician determines home phototherapy is appropriate. We have a Certified Neonatal Phototherapist on staff who will set up a Bili light in your home. Home phototherapy provides convenience for a family as it allows feeding, cuddling and bonding with baby plus, it is a cost-effective alternative to another hospital stay.
If your baby develops hyperbilirubinemia, discuss with your doctor the appropiateness of home phototherapy. And remember, at Barbee Medical we care!

Centennial 1996 Atlanta Olympic Games

Glorious night for U.S. athletes

ATLANTA (AP) — Lewis, Johnson and Miller. Americans with common names came up with uncommon performances on one of the most memorable nights in Olympic history.

Carl Lewis ended his glorious Olympic career with a fourth straight gold in the long jump, and Michael Johnson moved halfway to history with a dominating victory in the 400 meters Monday.

Another Johnson, Allen, won the 110-meter hurdles in an Olympic-record 12.95 seconds despite knocking down most of the 10 hurdles along the way. And gymnast Shannon Miller, who wept over her mistakes in the all-around and vault, bounced back to win the gold in the balance beam.

It seemed fitting that the United States took center stage the night before the heart of America's Olympics, Centennial Park, reopened to large and happy crowds after a pipe bomb explosion Saturday morning closed it down.

Lewis leaped 27 feet, 10¾ inches on his third attempt, and nobody could catch him in the final three rounds.

"I don't see how I can top this," said Lewis, who took home a souvenir bag of plastic sand from the long jump pit after hugging the Rev. Jesse Jackson during his victory lap.

The 35-year-old Lewis joined discus throw Al Oerter as the only track and field athletes to win the same event in four consecutive Olympics. By winning his ninth overall medal, he also tied the Olympic record shared by U.S. swimmer Mark Spitz, Finnish distance runner Paavo Nurmi and Soviet gymnast Larissa Latynina.

"There's a Mexican artist who painted a picture of him right after the LA Games, when he was having all the troubles with the press," Lewis' coach, Tom Tellez, said. "The painting was entitled the fighter. That's what Carl is, a fighter."

That would also be an apt description of Michael Johnson, who is trying to become the first man to win the 200 and 400 meters in the same Olympics.

Johnson, running in gold shoes, blew away the opposition in the 400, winning his 55th straight final in an Olympic-record 43.49 seconds. He had hoped to break Butch Reynolds' world record of 43.29, but fell short on a steamy, 85-degree night.

"I'm not disappointed," he said. "I'm extremely pleased with my win. I'll have other opportunities to set the world record."

Now it's on to the 200, where he should get a strong challenge from Frankie Fredericks of Namibia, who beat Johnson in the 200 during a meet in Norway on July 5. The 200 heats begin Wednesday, with the semifinals and final on Thursday night.

"I've got 48 hours to get ready, and I'll be ready in about two hours," Johnson said.

The "other Johnson" crossed the finish line 2 meters ahead of runner-up Mark Crear of the United States, then took a victory lap with his 3-year-old daughter, Tristine.

Miller overcame a major psychological hurdle to win her second gold of the games. After stumbling in her two previous individual events, she came through with a near-flawless routine on the balance beam.

"I don't know what else to say, but it feels great," said Miller, who got her first gold when the American women won the team title. "It was a great note to end on."

U.S. gymnasts won two other medals Monday night. Jair Lynch got the silver on the parallel bars. And Dominique Dawes, subbing for the injured Kerri Strug, took the bronze in floor exercise.

Defending champion Mark Lenzi finished the springboard final with a brilliant dive, but it wasn't enough to catch China's Xiong Ni and Yu Zhuocheng, who finished 1-2. Lenzi took the bronze.

Today is a rest day in track, but there will be action in many other sports.

The U.S. softball team plays for the sport's first gold medal tonight against Australia or China, which meet earlier in the day. The Americans advanced to the final with a 10-inning, 1-0 victory over China on Monday.

"For a while there, I got a little worried," said U.S. coach Ralph Raymond. "I didn't think we were going to be able to do it."

The Dream Team meets scoring machine Oscar Schmidt and his Brazilian squad in a basketball quarterfinal, the U.S. baseball team completes round-robin play against the Netherlands and the American women play Cuba in a volleyball quarterfinal.

Americans Andre Agassi and MaliVai Washington play in separate tennis semifinals, and gymnastics fans get a special treat with the sport's first Olympic exhibition, a show featuring this year's medalists and past greats such as Mary Lou Retton, Olga Korbut, Nadia Comaneci and Bart Conner.

Seles, the top women's seed, was beaten by Jana Novotna of the Czech Republic in a three-set marathon. Although she lost 7-5, 3-6, 8-6, Seles said she enjoyed her time in Atlanta.

"For me this has been a great experience," said Seles, who lived in the athletes village and mingled with celebrities such as Muhammad Ali. "It just would have been nice to do well."

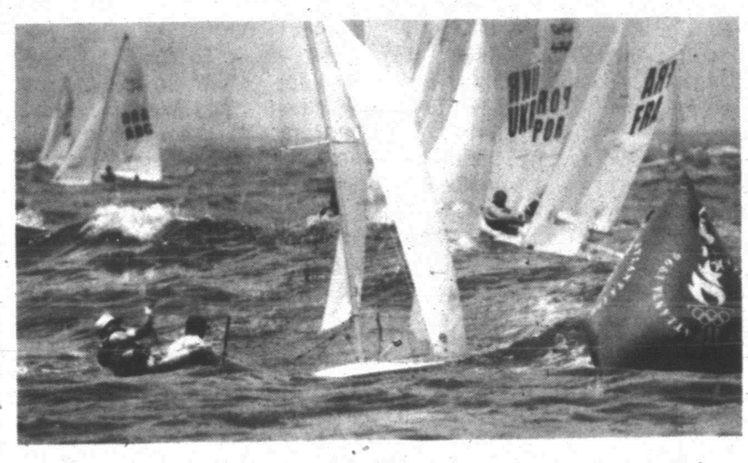

After losing a five-set match to Bulgaria, the men's volleyball team watched its medal chances disappear when defending champion Brazil defeated Cuba. The men won't win a medal for the first time since the boycotted 1980 Games in Moscow.

"This is about as painful a thing as you can have," captain Bob Ctvrtlik said. "I can't find a bright side. I hope the sun comes up tomorrow."

The U.S. women's basketball team continued to roll with a 105-64 rout of South Korea. The Americans, who haven't been challenged in their first five games, are the solid gold favorites heading into the medals round.

Lewis not ready to pass the torch

ATLANTA (AP) — Over a span of four Olympics, Carl Lewis leaped or ran away from everyone except himself.

Even as he put the finishing touch on a peerless career with his ninth gold and fourth consecutive long jump triumph Monday night, he couldn't and wouldn't shake the shadow of controversy,

This should have been the moment for him to luxuriate in his most satisfying and surprising victory, to soak up graciously the accolades and applause he surely deserves. He won the long jump by more than eight inches with a leap of 27 feet, 10¾ inches.

But he wanted more.

He wanted a place on the 400 relay team to go for a record 10th gold medal in his final Olympics, though he knew he won't get that spot and hadn't earned it with his performances this year.

He wanted to let Michael Johnson and every other would-be usurper know he was still King Carl.

He wanted, more than anything, to be respected, if not loved.

"I don't want to whine and bicker because I don't want to spoil the moment," Lewis said, unable to stop himself as he spoke of his desire to run the relay.

"The only experience left would be to become the all-time gold medal winner. It's kind of sad it's not up to me. If it was up to me, I'd be running in that relay, I'd be anchoring that relay, and I'd be doing a great job."

For all his triumphs and records, Lewis has been distinctly unloved in his own country by fans and some fellow competitors throughout his career. Perversely, perhaps, he is idolized in much of the rest of the world, from Europe to Japan.

Lewis' image problem began at the Los Angeles Olympics in 1984, when he distanced himself from the rest of the team, limited media access to him, and took only the one leap in the long jump that he needed to win. In his disdain for the fans who hoped he would go for a world record, Lewis came to be regarded as too cool for his own good.

He never escaped that image, never gave fans a reason to embrace him the way they did other athletes. No one doubted he was the best, but success does not always translate into affection.

By Seoul, Lewis had become an outspoken critic of athletes who use performance-enhancing drugs. He all but accused Ben Johnson of being one of those athletes before the games, and in doing so Lewis came across as a whiner looking for excuses.

Johnson halfway home in bid for historic double gold medals

ATLANTA (AP) — The celebration was emotional but subdued. There is still work to be done.

Now, Michael Johnson moves on to the 200.

"I've got 48 hours to get ready for the 200, and I feel like give me two hours and I'll be ready to go," he said.

In a classic performance of methodical domination, Johnson won the Olympic 400-meter gold medal Monday night, reaching the halfway point in a quest for an unprecedented 200-400 double.

When it was over, Johnson almost seemed not to know how to celebrate. He tentatively grabbed an American flag and held it awkwardly above him.

Halfway around his victory lap, he stopped to lend a hand to injured U.S. teammate Mike Powell as he tried to lift himself from the sand of the long-jump pit.

"I was watching him jump and it looked like he was really in pain so I just went over to see if he was OK," Johnson said, "He's a great competitor and I would have liked to see him win."

This is no wild egotist. This is a man with an economics degree from Baylor who approaches his sport with the organization of an accountant and deadly seriousness of a soldier, with just a little flair tossed in.

He had thrown his first pair of gold shoes away to the crowd after Sunday night's semifinals. But he had a new pair on Monday and they sparkled under the bright Olympic Stadium lights.

As he stood on the awards stand, the gold medal hanging from his neck and the national anthem playing, the reality of what he had done seemed to hit this young man from Dallas. Tears streamed down his face. His lips quivered.

The emotion that lies beneath his cold stare on the track was finally there for all to see.

Throughout the preliminaries, Johnson treated his body as if it were a fast race car. He'd test it on high speeds on the curves, then coast to the finish. He'd make sure he was behind down the final stretch, turn it on for 50 meters, then shut it down again.

Finally, on Monday night, he had his foot to the floor.

Roger Black of Britain was a distant second.

"To beat Michael I have to run a perfect race and he has to make a mistake," Black said. "And Michael doesn't make mistakes. At least I've never seen him do it."

Tens of thousands of flash bulbs went off in the stands as Johnson stretched the lead to at least 10 meters at the finish. His time was 43.49 seconds, an Olympic record, but short of Butch Reynolds' world record of 43.29.

"I just gave it all I had coming home and it worked out as far as winning the race, but as far as breaking the world record, it just wasn't there today," Johnson said.

It was his 55th victory in a row in the 400. He hasn't been beaten since Feb. 24, 1989.

Heisman Trophy winner leaves camp

George, the 1995 Heisman Trophy winner, left Sunday night and was not at practice Monday. He is expected to return to Trinity University either Tuesday or Wednesday.

"Eddie has been excused," Fisher said. "We talked about the situation last week and again on Saturday, and I thought it would be OK for him to leave camp."

Fisher would not reveal the nature of George's family matter.

"It's not an emergency family-wise, but it was something that was important to him and important to me," the coach said. "I will be in touch with him and we hope to get him back in the next couple of days."

Fisher said he wants to play George in the Oilers' preseason opener against the New York Jets on Saturday in Jackson, Miss.

George's contract with the Oilers calls for him to receive $6.08 million over the next five years.

Fisher also said second-year quarterback Steve McNair, the third overall pick in the 1995 draft, will play at least a half against the Jets. McNair is currently backing up veteran Chris Chandler.

"I will play Steve a half, maybe more depending on how he does," Fisher said. "I've said all along that Steve is going to get a lot of playing time this preseason. That's part of our plan for him. I expect him to play at least a half in the first three games."

McNair, 23, who played college football at Alcorn State, said Monday he has no problem with Fisher's gradual approach toward playing him.

"Coach has a plan for me and I just have to be patient," he said.

The preseason game against the Jets in Jackson will be just about an hour from McNair's hometown of Mount Olive, Miss.

"I'm looking forward to playing in front of my home crowd," said McNair. "I bought about 100 tickets. ... I'm looking forward to it. I need the support."

Sanders misses practice with sore hamstring

AUSTIN (AP) — Fresh from a 35-34 preseason victory over Oakland Saturday night, the Dallas Cowboys have opened three days of practice against the Raiders.

An intense two-hour practice Monday afternoon, which included at least two scuffles and a lot of trash talk, marked the first time cornerback Larry Brown and defensive tackle Russell Maryland returned to Dallas' training camp as Raiders.

Maryland said it was strange returning to Austin.

"I walked out on the field and everything just clicked back into place, and then I looked down at my uniform and saw the silver and black and realized I'm a Raider now. I'm a foreigner now," Maryland said, adding that he didn't have any hard feelings toward Dallas.

"It's a business. I understand that. If I couldn't play in the Cowboys uniform, Oakland is the next best choice. The Raiders have the mystique and a commitment to winning," he said.

Maryland said he hopes the next time he sees the Cowboys is in the Super Bowl.

"You're lucky you're not facing me," Brown told Sanders.

"Come on," Sanders replied and then the two pretended to scuffle.

Two scuffles broke out after Oakland offensive guard Steve Wisniewski and Dallas defensive lineman Leon Lett traded a few blows. Then Cowboys linebacker Broderick Thomas mixed it up with several Raiders.

"It's part of training camp," Wisniewski said. "Not the most enjoyable part."

Dallas coach Barry Switzer said he was happy to see Maryland and Brown.

"It's always nice to see players who have helped you win," he said.

Dallas offensive lineman Nate Newton lashed out at reporters Monday after being asked about Michael Irvin's off-field troubles.

"What do you want?" Newton said. "The man has gone through all the public scrutiny and the court proceedings. He's lost his endorsements. We let you onto our practice field and Jerry Jones tells us to be nice to the media and they will be nice to you. But I am waiting."

The 320-pound guard then turned and walked away from a group of reporters.

Defensive coordinator Dave Campo said a defensive unit without several starters due to injuries is making slow but steady progress.

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

Ex-Husband's Address Is Classified Information

DEAR ABBY: I recently called my daughter-in-law and asked her to give me my ex-husband's new address. She refused to give it to me, so the next day I called my son "Jeff" at work and asked him for the address. He also refused, and said he doesn't give his dad information about me and he wouldn't give me information about his father. I don't care if Jeff gives such information to anyone — I am listed in the phone book.

Jeff said he would call his dad and ask if it was OK to give me the address. (His father and I are estranged and avoid all possible contact.) I merely want his address for my records, and I did not request a telephone number.

I know in which city he lives and have been thinking of moving to that city as well, but I certainly would not want to live in the same neighborhood. I may need the address in later years to claim Social Security benefits or something.

I am dismayed at my son's attitude. I can't understand why he is being so pigheaded about an address. Am I wrong for expecting him to give me this information?

A DISMAYED AND PERPLEXED MOM

DEAR DISMAYED AND PERPLEXED: Yes, you are wrong to expect your son to give you information about his father, especially since you are estranged from your former husband and you both avoid contact. Don't try to wheedle the information from Jeff or his wife. Putting your son and daughter-in-law in the middle will only alienate them from you. Jeff will tell his father you would like his address. But the decision whether or not to give it out rests with your ex.

DEAR ABBY: I just spoke with my younger sister whom I haven't seen in six years. I had planned on visiting her in September. She told me she had heard through the family grapevine that I was planning to bring "John," my live-in boyfriend. Abby, John is not just a boyfriend — we are getting married before the end of the year.

I am not a child. I have four grown children and a grandson, and I have been divorced for many years.

Well, to make a long story short, my sister informed me that when I visit her I will not be allowed to sleep with John. (It's not like she and her husband are saints. He did drugs and had plenty of women before they were married, and my sister was no angel either.)

I am so burned up over her holier-than-thou attitude that I'm considering canceling my trip. What are your thoughts on this, Abby? It's going to be a family reunion and I would hate to miss it.

ON THE FENCE

DEAR ON: Your sister and brother-in-law have the right to make the rules in their home. Stop fuming, get off the fence, take John and stay at a motel.

P.S. I hope you and John enjoy the family reunion!

Internet indecency law loses out again

NEW YORK (AP) — A second judicial panel has declared the Communications Decency Act unconstitutional, saying the law goes too far in restricting free speech among adults.

The unanimous ruling Monday by three federal judges adds weight to last month's decision in Philadelphia that blocked enforcement of the law.

The latest ruling found that the statute, which makes it illegal to provide "patently offensive" material to minors through the Internet, is "an overbroad prohibition on constitutionally protected indecent speech between adults."

The judges also said there was no practical way for Internet service providers such as America Online and CompuServe to comply with the law as written, making them potentially liable for anything their customers send.

The ruling stemmed from a lawsuit brought by Joe Shea, editor of "The American Reporter," an online newspaper that published an intentionally profane criticism of the Decency Act in order to challenge the law.

"It's a victory for the fundamental human rights of free expression and free speech on the Internet," Shea said from his home in Los Angeles. "It's a significant boost to the viability and credibility of online journalism."

But Judge Jose Cabranes of the 2nd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals also wrote that the law's goal of limiting children's exposure to sexually explicit online material is "undeniably worthy," and suggested that new legislation, "carefully tailored to technological realities," may pass constitutional muster.

U.S. District Judges Denise Cote and Leonard Sand joined in the opinion.

A spokesman for the U.S. Attorney's office in New York said his civil division had received the ruling too late Monday to comment.

Unlike the case in Philadelphia, which was brought by dozens of major corporations and media organizations as well as the American Civil Liberties Union and the American Library Association, Shea was the sole plaintiff in New York.

Recreation group lobbies lawmakers

ST. LOUIS (AP) — As executive director of the American Association for Nude Recreation, Roslyn Scheer often wears nothing but a smile.

The association's discreetly decorated booth at the conference is a big hit with state policymakers.

"That smile on their face is a good start," Scheer said. "When they get back to the hotel and spread out all their stuff from the exhibits, ours somehow always gets looked at first."

"Consider Taking a Very Natural Vacation This Year," urges a sign on the booth, which is decorated with tactful photographs of festive sunbathers.

Scheer shook hands with legislators and guests, handing them "The Lawmaker's Guide to Skinny Dipping Issues."

Scheer said legislative battlegrounds for the Kissimmee, Fla.-based association include keeping traditional nude gathering areas from being outlawed in some states.

But where do the members put the pins?

"On our hats, on our hats," Scheer said with a laugh.

FEC sues Christian Coalition

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government today sued the Christian Coalition, charging that the religious group founded by Pat Robertson violated federal election laws by promoting Republican candidates for president and Congress.

Among those that the Federal Election Commission charged got improper coalition help were former President Bush, Sen. Jesse Helms, Senate candidate Oliver North and House Speaker Newt Gingrich.

The commission charged that the Christian Coalition distributed printed voter guides, held conferences and identified Republican voters and used mail and telephone banks to get them to the polls in federal elections in 1990, 1992 and 1994.

Because the coalition is incorporated, the money spent to help Republicans also amounted to illegal corporate contributions, the FEC said.
