Summer Sweethearts

BEGIN HERE TODAY KATHARINE STRYKHURST, 20 and beautiful, allows her emotions to rule when she marries MICHAEL HEATHEROE, young riding instructor who comes into a title and fortune. Katharine's father is rich and her stepmother is snobbish.

The night following his marriage Michael is injured in a traffic accident and when he regains consciousness his memory is impaired. He forgets the marriage. Katharine, heart-broken, believes he has deserted her. She goes to New Mexico with a friend, starting secret annulment proceedings meantime.

SALLY MOON, who has snared Michael into a sort of engagement, unaware of the marriage to Katharine, makes plans for a wedding. During a rehearsal of the ceremony Michael's memory returns. He sets off immediately for New Mexico, finally arriving at the inn where Katharine is staying. He finds Katharine is away on a two-day motor trip with new friends, the MILLARDS.

CHAPTER XII

Miss Daisy didn't know much about the route the Millards had taken but, undoubtedly, Mrs. Houghton would. "I Mr. what was it, Heatheroe?" "Mr. Heatheroe would wait until luncheon Mrs. Houghton would be back from Santa Fe and could give him the direction.

"As least I think she may be able to," added Miss Daisy conscientiously.

Michael had to be content with that.

Margarita showed him to a narrow room and he washed his hands and brushed his hair and tried to control the raging impatience that tore at him. When he came down, the cool salon was empty and he went left to amuse himself with the books and the parrot, hopping from his swinging glass perch and peering openly at Michael. He strolled out into the patio. In the shade of a pepper tree Miss Daisy worked at her crocheting and gave him a welcoming smile.

"The Millards have been so interested in Miss Katharine," she said cheerfully. "She has real talent, they say. And young Mr. Frank has been so charmed with her. She's lovely, we all think."

Michael scowled at the thought of young Mr. Frank, whoever he might be, and Miss Daisy looked frightened. This handsome young man could be quite fierce. Perhaps she shouldn't have said that, but it was true and she meant no harm. And Miss Vincent had told her explicitly that Miss Strykhurst was not engaged to anyone.

Michael had to wait and make polite conversation until fat Mrs. Houghton, in dotted linen with a big, old-fashioned straw hat on her head, arrived.

"Can't tell you a thing about it, my dear boy," Mrs. Houghton wheezed, looking benignly at him. "Why not wait here until they return? We'll make you comfortable."

Michael said that she was kind; he appreciated it a great deal but his business was urgent.

"Well, then, after lunch I'll run you over to the Millard's place," sedan which would go. Michael knew the make of car. He had driven it before. He started out in the full blaze of mid-afternoon with his stout mentor waving to him from the courtyard.

"Wild goose chase, Margarita,"

Michael pressed, told her about the ranch and what he remembered of his father.

"Heatheroe?" "There was a Francis Heatheroe at San Diego about 1860. Charmin' fella, knew him well. Good family."

"That was my father," Michael told her.

"Not really?" Mrs. Houghton beamed. "How very interesting!"

The man fairly ached to be on his way, but there was no hurrying this capable woman with the assured air and the twinkling eyes. Besides, he was more or less at her mercy. If she chose to drive him to the Millard ranch to interrogate their Chinese boy, he might feel himself very lucky. But he must not be discourteous enough to urge her to forego luncheon.

So they lunched in the long cool room open on two sides. Michael secretly knew what he ate. While Miss Daisy and Mrs. Rox were cracked deeply at their salads Mrs. Houghton took two helpings of everything drank great cups of tea, and leaned back in her chair for a cigar. Michael would have cheerfully killed her.

No one went out in the heat of the mid-day here if he could possibly help it. He knew that. But the intruder Mrs. Houghton put on the monstrous old straw hat and, while Miss Daisy and Mrs. Rox were eating, she and Michael Heatheroe climbed into the roadster and took the road that led to the Millard place.

"This is really very kind of you," Michael said with some conviction.

"Not at all," wheezed Mrs. Houghton. "Was young m'elf once."

The Chinese boy had been asleep and came drowsily to the door at their summons.

"Yes, he knew the way. But he could not leave the place. He was in charge."

"We know that, Li," said Mrs. Houghton patiently. "The gentleman only wants you to tell him how to go."

Michael had a map in his pocket and the boy, with many nods and profound head-shaking, finally screeed on a route.

"You did that very well," said the woman admiringly to Michael as they left. "I can never get a sensible word out of him. Not that I'm at all certain the road is right. They'll admit anything just to be agreeable. I do think you're being rather foolish. They'll be back day after tomorrow in any case."

Michael shook his head stubbornly. Wait here for Katharine? He couldn't live through another day, not knowing how he stood with her.

They found a car for him. Margarita's brother had an ancient murmured Mrs. Houghton, sinking into a basket chair and fanning herself vigorously. "But that's what it is to be young, my dear. Bring me some limeade—there's a good girl."

Many times during that afternoon did Michael stop in order to let the burning engine cool off slightly. He raged at the delay, but there was no helping matters. When night fell he kept on. His Montana days stood him in good stead at this juncture. He was used to empty roads and coyote howling and the arched loneliness of the far-away sky. The desert held no terrors for this man.

Toward morning he rested a little so as to be fresh for the new day. As yet he had not passed a single car. The Millards did not travel at night. Mrs. Houghton had assured him, so he was certain not to lose them thus. By day he would have to be abnormally alert to scrutinize every vehicle which passed him. A touring car it was that Katharine was traveling in: a large gray touring car with green wheels.

Michael drank some of the coffee and ate a few of the sandwiches Margarite had prepared. He might have to go all the way to the mountains, in the event the Millards had delayed their start. He must be ready for that. His eyes were blurred from something the heron. Once some woman passed him in a rickety car. And there was a shabby car with a California license, with some bedraggled children in the back seat and a shiftless looking couple in front. Typical drifters.

Long past noon he came in sight of three or four dots on the desert floor straight ahead and his heart leaped. But he reminded himself that it was idle to suppose that every sign of life he saw meant Katharine's party.

Besides, as he drew nearer, he could see that the dots were stationary. There was a car, but it a tent. No seasoned travelers ing the day. But the car was a gray touring car with green wheels. Michael drew up with a screech of brakes. A middle-aged woman in camp clothes, with signs of agitation in her face, came around the corner of the car and stared at him.

"Is this Mr. Millard's camp?" "It is." Amazement in her voice.

"Is Miss Strykhurst here?" Michael's voice sounded cracked and harsh.

"Miss Strykhurst is—Hilda, come here!" called Evelyn Vincent. Michael called. What mystery was this?

pitched camp in the desert dur-

A blond woman of 40 with her hair in the wildest disorder, her smart riding breeches torn and stained, appeared from the shadow of the car.

"We're neatly distracted," she began volubly. "Katharine must have wandered off while we slept. My husband and his brother have looked and looked. It seems hopeless."

Michael said sharply. "Lost? Since when?" No one bothered to ask who he was or why he was there. They told him all they knew. Katharine had been gone since sun-up. Frank and Dirk had wandered about calling—

"My God," Michael struck his hands together. If he had only started sooner this dreadful thing would not have happened. He thought, in an agony, of his hour at luncheon on the day before of the enforced waits during the afternoon as the engine cooled.

"Good God!" he repeated. "We must do something. A plane!"

"That's what I said," Miss Vincent began, "but Frank wouldn't consent to going off with the car. He said she might come back and would think she'd been deserted."

"Poor child. I hate to say it, but I'm very much afraid we shan't see her again," said Hilda Millard. She began hopelessly to cry.

Michael shook her arm. "Where can I get a plane?" he asked harshly. "I must find one at once."

Clean Out Kidney Poisons

Wash Out Your 15 Miles of Kidney Tubes

If kidneys don't pass 2 pints a day and get rid of more than 2 pounds of waste matter, the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters may become clogged with poisonous waste and the danger of acid poisoning is greatly increased. Bladder passages are difficult, which often smart and burn like scalding water and cause discomfort.

This acid condition, brought about by poor kidney functions is a danger signal and may be the beginning of nagging backache, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swollen feet and ankles, rheumatic pains and dizziness.

Most people watch their bowels which contain only 27 feet of intestines but neglect the kidneys which contain 15 miles of tiny tubes and filters. If these tubes or filters become clogged with poisons, it may knock you out and lay you up for many months. Don't run any risk. Make sure your kidneys empty 1 pints a day.

Eight Teams Reach Semi-Finals of Scotch Pl

CLOSE BATTLES FEATURE 1ST MATCHES

Two Tilts Go Extra Holes; One Ends On 18th Green

Eight teams this morning had reached the semi-finals in both brackets of the Memphis Country Club's Scotch golf tournament—seven of them yesterday following the lead of the Foxhall brothers, Frank and Ed, the favored pair who advanced Monday.

The first bracket matches were featured by close play in every contest, two of them going extra holes and the third undecided until the 18th was completed.

Carl Harrison and R. S. Greene took the bracket position as second place favorites by eliminating the No. 2 qualifying team of Thomas Hampton and L. M. Hicks, 1 up.

Semi-Final Opponents
Reginald Greenhaw and G. D. Beard moved into a position opposite the "upset" victory by removing O. B. Smith and Lewis Foxhall, 1 up on 19 holes.

In the longest match of the round, J. D. Webster and Oren Jones defeated Winfred Swift and Carl Eudy, 1 up on 20 holes. They moved into a position opposite the Foxhall combination.

In the second bracket, the Semi-final matches will be:
M. J. Draper and Raymond Ballew vs. M. E. Allen and Leslie Foxhall.

T. H. Deaver and Charlie Davenport vs. Floyd Springer and H. D. Delaney.

Second Bracket Results
Deaver and Ballew moved through the first round with a 4 and 3 victory over Buster Helm and J. H. Vallance. Their next opponents advanced over Frank Garrott and L. M. Hicks Jr. by the same margin.

Deaver and Davenport erased Jack Walker and T. M. Harrison, 3 and 1, while their opponents, Springer and Delaney, were forced to the 19th green to defeat another Foxhall combination—F. N. Foxhall and Harold—1 up.

Semi-final matches are expected to be played this afternoon and tomorrow, with the title events in each bracket scheduled for Sunday.

Bill Terry says that if the most valuable player in the National League were named right now, the award would have to go to Mark Anthony Koenig.

The same Koenig, who four years ago was waived out of the majors because his sight was failing, has supplanted Hughie Critz as the regular second baseman of the league-leading New York Giants.

This is indeed the year of the Forgotten Man, as observe:

Koenig, who tried pitching in a desperate attempt to hang on with Detroit in 1931, a big league star again.

Jimmy Braddock, rocketing from relief to the heavyweight championship.

Tony Canzoneri, regaining the lightweight leadership.

Walter Hagen, practically swiping the show in the United States Open.

Charley Gelbert, replacing Leo Durocher at shortstop for the world champion St. Louis Cardinals on a leg torn to shreds by buckshot.

Lefty Grove, able to win again with a considerable share of his old-time speed.

A Forgotten Woman has returned to stir up trouble, too. Mrs. Helen Wills Moody already has one important tournament to her credit.

And how about Head Play, the Forgotten Horse, which bids fair to become the handicap champion of 1935?

Mark a Luck Piece
Few utility men ever were kept as busy as Koenig has been this season, with the Giants' infield torn apart by injuries to Critz, Stoney Jackson, and Dick Bartell. It has been Koenig's remarkable work at second base, third, and shortstop, and his batting, that has kept the club out in front.

No other one player has contributed nearly as much to the Giant cause.

The Giants feel that they are luckier, if nothing else, with Koenig in the lineup. Of course they are a lot more than lucky with the coast veteran on the job. He has been the thread weaving from second to third to shortstop that actually held the infield together during its sundry vicissitudes.

Koenig might have saved the Giants from falling apart in the closing days of 1934 had Terry been able to land him when he tried last summer to get him from the Cincinnati Reds. He should make the pennant possible this trip, together with the Giants' pitching and other improvements.

Penants follow Koenig around. He assisted the Yankees to three, in 1926, 1927, and 1928, and the Chicago Cubs to their gonfalon in 1932.

The Cubs yanked Koenig back from the Mission Coasters when they were shot in August, 1932, and Mark battled them into the world series in 33 games at shortstop.

Helps Break Card Jinx
Koenig played an important role in the Giants' three successive victories over the Cardinals recently.

Success against the Red Birds gave the Giant drive momentum that is going to be hard to stop. The Giants won only one game in their first half dozen with the

Braddock Takes Boxing Back to Boxing People

This is the last of six articles on the amazing comeback of James J. Braddock, new heavy weight champion.

By HARRY GRAYSON (Sports Editor, NEA Service)
NEW YORK, June 27.—James J. Braddock may not be a great champion. Perhaps the Irishman is only a mediocre heavyweight. But he has won everlasting regard by bringing boxing back to the boxing people.

Braddock has no illusions about being an actor. The Jersey Mick has no yen for radio. He would be frightfully miscast as a master of ceremonies in a night club.

Braddock's first challenger may decisively defeat him. That would be no new experience for the honest stevedore. He has dropped no less than 17 decisions, been cut up and stopped once, and chucked from the premises on two occasions.

But there is some satisfaction in knowing that while Braddock reigns the title will be in the hands of a fighter—a union fighter with a manager. Fighting being Braddock's business, he will talk fighting and not gags and gals, as did his predecessor.

The public—boxing men, in particular—had grown very tired of Max Baer's buffoonery. The Californian didn't appreciate the crown that rescued him from his father's pig farm.

Braddock Romantic Champion With Good Wishes of People

I disagree with those who say that the boxing game will suffer as the result of Braddock's smashing victory over Baer. These gloom-spreaders contend that the outcome revealed the mediocrity of the entire heavyweight division.

That may be true, but, in my opinion, the dodge is much better off for having a wholesome chap like Braddock at the head of the procession than a wisecracking clown like Baer.

Braddock's amazing comeback has more people talking boxing today than at any other time since the Tunney-Dempsey series. Braddock has recaptured for his profession the interest of the more substantial citizen, who found that he could take his boxing or leave it alone after Jack Sharkey fouled Max Schmeling into the title. Schmeling, Sharkey, Carnera and Baer were unable to resell these people.

If nothing else, Braddock is a romantic champion with the good wishes of the people.

And I don't know just who is going to whip Braddock. Rating them off the fust of the other night, Braddock ought to be able to Cardinals in 1934. They bagged five of the first seven this season. It will be recalled that Koenig's reward for giving the Cubs the required punch in 1932 was only a fraction of a world series share.

That was the fall fashion show in which Babe Ruth and the other Yankees taunted the Cubs about voting their old teammate but a fractional share.

It was the Cubs' treatment of Koenig that spurred the Yanks to four straight victories.

Koenig, the comeback, appears headed for a full world series player's cut this season.

beat Baer every night in the world for filling out in recent months. I doubt that the one-handed Schmeling would finish the Cinderella Man. Joe Louis, you say? Well, let's withhold judgment until the young negro proves up against a first-rate opposition. Braddock may tag Primo Carnera, who doesn't take it any too well about the head.

When Tunney Arrived They Said Irish Matured Slowly

Offhand, I would say that Braddock is vastly under-rated.

Had some new star, without such a spotty pugilistic past, related the formless job itney Lewis and Art Lasky and made the job of taming Baer appear so simple, I suspect that he would be hailed as another Gene Tunney, or something like that.

Considerable credit is denied Braddock simply because the experts cannot imagine anyone coming from such a depth of defeat and disappointment in a year.

I recall the boys referring to Gene Tunney as the Greenwich Village Folly and offering to wager that he wouldn't even show up for his initial engagement with the mighty Jack Dempsey in Philadelphia. Yet Tunney suddenly became a wonder when he duplicated his victory over the Man Mauler one year later.

It was then explained that the Irish athlete is slow to mature.

Then how about Braddock? Certainly he is Irish and at 29 he is only one year older than Tunney was when the Manly Marine scaled the heights. And the longshoreman set some kind of a re-

DUKE ELLINGTON TO RETURN TO AMARILLO FOR CONCERT, DANCE ON MONDAY, JULY 8

Special to The Democrat
AMARILLO, June 27.—Duke Ellington's spectacular negro orchestra is returning to Amarillo, Monday, July 8, for a concert at the Municipal Auditorium and a dance at The Nat.

Ellington's orchestra, the top negro musical body of the nation, occupies a unique place in modern music. The players go from the fastest, maddest jazz number into sweet melodious selections of semi-classical rank.

The band is at its best playing ballads written by the director himself. The latest of Ellington's successes is the deep, sensitive "Solitude" and raves with his "Sonhistrated Lady" and "Mood Indigo" in popularity.

With the orchestra is Ivie Anderson, the little colored torch singer that has startled the entertainment world with her performances.

It was announced by Wilbur C. Hawk, president of the Tri-State Fair Association, that bargain prices have been established for an advance ticket sale for the concert. Prepaid reservations, made with Miss Lois Black at the Globe News, will be only 55 cents for parquet seats. All places in the parquet will be the same price and the early reservations will have the choice seats.

THE VOICE OF THE UPPER RED RIVER VALLEY

NATIONAL YOUTH ADMINISTRATION PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT, in setting aside $50,000,000 to establish a "National Youth Administration," at one time made a great move and opened himself to a lot of adverse criticism.

The purpose of this fund is to offer unemployed youth "their chance in school, their turn as apprentices and their opportunity for jobs." This high ideal cannot be attacked; yet, an attack is likely to come.

It is through the youth of America that we must build toward a more stable future, surer of prosperity and with less likelihood of a recurrence of the past two decades—war, mad rush for riches, selfishness and then depression.

The youth are not responsible for the conditions of today; therefore, they are the most resentful.

It is our responsibility to give them a chance, to make a way. And in doing so, we may at the same time educate them against the things that brought the United States and the world into one of its greatest catastrophes.

There are possibilities here, then, for a great work. But will the administration's opponents recognize this motive?

If they live up to form—not because they are not Democrats, for the followers of the donkey are just as guilty as anyone else, but because it is politics—a cry probably will be raised. The President is spending 50 millions in the hope of building up the future strength of the Democratic party. Is that not the reason he has spent billions?

Of course we do not believe this. Probably those who claim it do not believe it. But whatever the motive, it still remains that the "National Youth Administration" can do more for the future of the United States than perhaps any other governmental agency.

ANOTHER TEAPOT DOME

If any appreciable percentage of all the charges against American merchant marine subsidy practices are true, the situation demands review and reform almost as badly as the Teapot Dome mess did.

It is not merely that we have the old familiar charges of dishonesty and inefficiency; not merely that our government's effort to protect the lives of American travelers at sea is reported to have been broken down; more than this, we seem to be defeating the very purposes for which the subsidy law was passed.

The whole idea of the subsidy, of course, was to build up our merchant marine.

Under the law, government loans are made for ship construction, government moneys are paid to ship operators in the guise of mail contract fees, and government-built ships are sold to private operators far below cost.

This was justified on the theory that it was the best way to build up a merchant marine service which would be of commercial value in peacetime and of great military value in time of war.

And yet one of the charges made by the special Senate investigating committee is that all of this has been useless. This committee asserts that, in spite of all these subsidies, the merchant marine is steadily declining.

A subsidy plan is, in the very nature of things, open to abuses.

When you have the government shelling out huge sums to private concerns, you open the way for all kinds of trouble. Under any administration and in any field of business, this will be true.

Some official is bound to weaken under pressure; some business man is bound to unsheath his chisel and start using it.

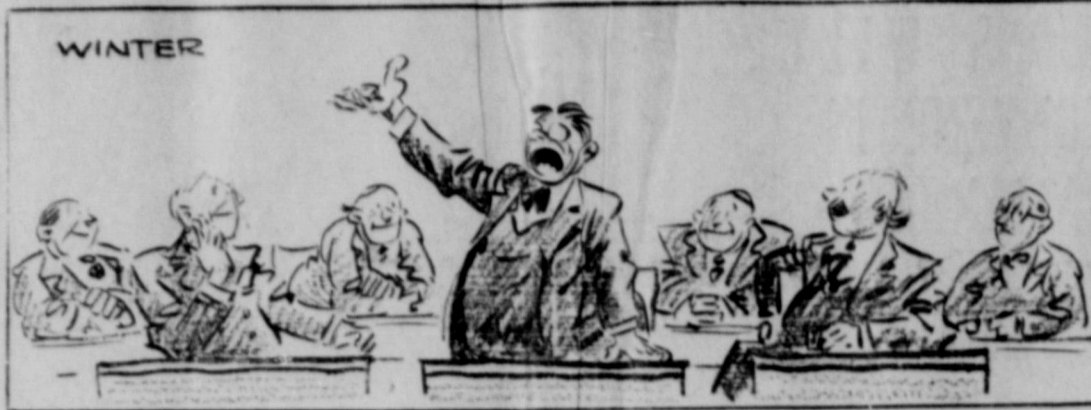

It takes the strictest kind of oversight to keep such evils at a minimum; where the overseeing is not strict, the evils will multiply like mushrooms.

That is what we let ourselves in for with the subsidy plan. Now if, on top of all that, the plan doesn't do what we hoped it would do, the agreement for some new method of conserving our merchant marine becomes overwhelming.

The Senate committee suggests two alternatives; outright governmental ownership and operation, or government ownership with private operation.

Whether a third scheme could be worked out, and which of these two would be preferable if that should be impossible, are things yet to be determined.

THE SEASONS IN CONGRESS

HEALTH BY DR. MORIS FISHBEIN

The eyes are among the most delicate organs of the human system and for that reason they demand much more consideration than do most other parts of head and body.

It has been said that there are three important conditions which aid in preservation of good vision. These are good light, good print, and good habit.

Nowadays schools and industries pay much more attention to the provision of good light and good print than they used to. School desks have been developed to hold children in suitable posture in relation to their work and to make certain that their bodies are held at a proper angle and at a proper distance in relation to their eyes. Most modern textbooks are printed in fairly large type on good paper without glare to avoid glare.

The best light is that which is sufficient to make the contrast between the back print and the space between the letters stand out clearly and sharply. Light must be free from shadows, free from glare, and free from flickers.

The proper amount of light is that obtained from a 60-watt frosted bulb placed 16 to 20 inches away from the printed page. When light is 2 1/2 to 3 feet away, a 100-watt bulb is required.

To prevent the effects of glare, all light should fall on the printed page and not directly on the eyes. This is brought about by sitting in such position that the light falls on the printed page from above and slightly behind, over the left shoulder.

Equally important with good light and good print is your general health. The eye is an organ of the body which receives its nutrition through the blood.

If the blood is diseased, the eye may also become diseased. Therefore, the blood must be kept in a good state or the eyes will reflect the weakened condition.

The eye is susceptible to poisons taken into the human body, and it is known that blindness may result from nicotine or from other poisons. The absence of vitamin A from the diet brings about inflammation of the eyes.

The eye responds to overuse and overstrain by affecting other parts of the body so that headaches, nervousness, and even disturbances of the stomach may be associated with unsatisfactory conditions of vision.

This is particularly important, because most of the ordinary disturbances of vision can be corrected by suitable examination of the eyes and by providing proper glasses.

BEHIND THE SCENES IN WASHINGTON

BY RODNEY DUTCHER

Safe and Sane is New NRA Directorate . . . One Notable Absentee From High Posts is Leon Henderson . . . He Wouldn't Be Shushed, So He Pays for His "Sins."

WASHINGTON, June 27.—The new NRA set-up may be considered safe, sane and unlikely to cause any trouble.

There isn't a primum donna in the lot, a fact which presents a marked contrast with the NRA you used to know and indicates Roosevelt's desire to bury the Blue Eagle's carcass as quietly as possible in case it seems wise later to forget all about it.

Representatives of industry, labor and consumer in the higher posts are all placid souls, if not shrinking violets, and none will be aggressive.

James L. O'Neill, the acting administrator, is a product of a big New York bank, popular in NRA, whose job will be to liquidate the large majority of personnel.

Dr. Leon Marshall, head of the Division of Review, is a retiring fact-finder who abhors limelight.

George L. Berry, assistant representing labor, and the labor men on the new advisory council—William Green and Philip Murray—are easy-going leaders who never make any fuss.

Mrs. Emily Newell Blair, the remaining consumer representative, has taken her job seriously, but was a Democratic politician long before she was made head of the Consumers' Advisory Board.

Henderson is "Punished"

The most conspicuous thing about the new list of NRA top jobs is the absence of Leon Henderson, who was expected to rate high because he was chief of the Research and Planning division and the main function of NRA now is a job of research into the effects of codes during the last two years and developments in the forthcoming codeless period.

But Henderson, if he stays on, will go so only in a subordinate position—he was a member of the National Industrial Recovery Board—because he must be punished for his sins.

Secretary of Commerce Roper, David Richberg, and others of conservative hue decided he was too dangerous to be in power. Henderson, you see, had built up a strong division of economists which undertook to tell just what was NRA.

Because he couldn't stand on to hide unpleasant name was removed of witnesses who were prepared for NRA before the committee.

Spank Big Industries One by one, Henderson division took on the traits of the country upon NRA as a background of special decided against:

1. The steel industry mandating a spread of ing basing points.

2. The lumber industry commending lower prices fixed under NRA.

3. The rubber tire industry seeing that prices were low that the industry didn't bother about renewal of the arrangement.

4. The coal mining industry setting up machinery for its prices.

5. The retail coal industry a review system for which led the code to resign.

6. The aluminum industry which dumped its code, Henderson's division insolvency for prices.

7. The automobile industry whose labor practices led of a special Henderson and Dr. K. which resulted in a widespread about.

Henderson also made showing an increase in prices on government changes in prices, which dividends also raised inside.
