R. D. Baum

R. D. Baum, age 58, died at his home here Sunday, Dec. 21st, and was buried the following Monday in the local cemetery, Rev. Lambert, of Rising Star conducted the services.

Deceased is survived by his son, Archie Baum, also two brothers, Joe and M. A. Baum and one sister, Mrs. Wiley Jones, all of whom were present when the end came. He leaves many friends and relatives whose hearts are bowed in sorrow because of his passing. He was member of Masonic and Modern Woodman orders, and was a loyal and devout member of the Christian Church.

Deceased was born in Mississippi and moved to Texas with his parents in 1883, locating in Williamson county, and moving to this community in 1888, where he resided most of the time until his death. He married Annie Henderson, who departed this life about 12 years ago.

Mr. Baum had not been well for some time, but his death came as a surprise and a shock to his many friends and loved ones.

At the time of his death deceased was associated with the Cross Plains Mercantile Co.

R. B. Garrett

R. B. (Uncle Bob) Garrett, age 76, a native Texan, died here Dec. 24 and was buried in the local cemetery, Rev. T. H. Davis conducting the funeral services.

Deceased was born and reared in east Texas, later moving to Aspermont, and finally locating here in 1910.

He married Miss Hattie Baird of Bell county 53 years ago, and to this union nine children were born and all living, and were here during his last illness. They are: Mrs. E. H. Mosely and Mrs. Ruby Baum, of Lamesa; R. B. and W. J. Garrett, of Jayton; A. M. Garrett of Spur; D. L. Garrett, Acr[illegible] Lane of Cleburne, and [illegible] Ruth [illegible] of this place, a niece, Mrs. W. B. Bingham of Aspermont, was also here. A sister, Mrs. S. H. Barton of Holland, Texas, also survives him but was not present.

Deceased united with the Presbyterian church last fall, and before he died he stated that he was "ready to go"

The entire community was saddened by the death of Uncle Bob and all will join in extending condolence to the grief stricken wife, children and other loved ones.

Roy Marshall

Roy Marshall, age 22, died Dec. 29, at his home in the Liberty community. He is survived by father and several brothers and sisters. He was buried at Rising Star. Deceased had many friends, not only in his community, but everywhere he was known.

The New Year

The new year 1925, is here. Let us make history worth while, as individuals and as a community, during 1925. In doing so, we will help to make our County, State and Nation a better place in which to live.

Let us look and think in terms of the future. The past is history. We must put selfishness aside and consider our neighbor. The person who lives only for himself is a failure. Live for others. Some day we must lay down and die; Then will the world be better or worse because of the life we lived here? We will do well to think of these things.

Let us individually and collectively strive earnestly to make our town and community better, cleaner and bigger. Unity of thought and effort will win. Will you help to go forward this year?

CITY COUNCIL ORDERS 40,000 WATER BOND ELECTION

The City Council has ordered a $40,000 water bond election, for Jan. 27th. At this writing exact figures as to the amount of additional tax such a bond will require has not been submitted, together with other information relative to the proposed bond issue, but next week the Review expects to publish general and detailed information on this subject for the benefit of its readers. So if you are interested in the water question, we will try to give the necessary information next week, which will enable you to understand the subject thoroughly.

In the disasterous fire at Babb's Switch school house near Hobart, Okla. Christmas eve night, 38 lives were snuffed out, when the Christmas tree caught fire, which soon enveloped the building. It was a most lamentable tragedy. The family of T. C. Coffey consisting of wife and four children were among those who lost their lives in the fire. Mr. Coffey was a brother of Mrs. L. P. Cunningham, step-mother of the Cunningham brothers here. Mrs. Cunningham left immediately for the scene of the disaster, upon receipt of the news.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. S. A. Wilson of Pioneer, Dec. 28, a girl.

THE NEW MAGNOLIA STATION OPENS UP FOR BUSINESS

Ralph Buckingham and Porter Henderson have leased the new Little & Bachus Magnolia filling station on corner of Main and 7th streets, and are taking charge this week—Jan. 1st.

This is one of the most unique building designs to be found anywhere. It was designed and constructed by Arch Gensley. The building is very attractive and appeals to the eye.

Otis Lilly was severely burned about the neck and face, on Christmas Eve. He was dressed as Santa Claus, with red suit and cotton, and some boy set the cotton on fire with a "sparkler", evidently not realizing what the consequences might be. As soon as Otis discovered his predicament, he began working frantically to extinguish his burning clothing. He finally ran into Higginbotham's store, where men quickly removed the blazing costume. While the burns were serious, they are healing rapidly, the Review is informed.

B. F. Wright has traded for A. Bertrand's farm, located east of Coleman about 7 miles. In the exchange Mr. Bertrand gets Mr. Wright's residence here, and expects to move here this week.

MR. AND MRS. J. H. PIERCE CELEBRATE ANNIVERSARY

Dec. 16th, the venerable couple Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Pierce celebrated their fiftieth year of married life.

The day was doubly enjoyed on account of the presence of children and friends.

COOLIDGE CONFIDENT ON COLOGNE STATUS

THINKS SATISFACTORY ARRANGEMENT ON EVACUATION WILL BE REACHED.

HAS NO OFFICIAL INTEREST

America, However, Concerned Over Matter as One Affecting Welfare of Europe.

Washington.—President Coolidge is confident that a satisfactory arrangement will be reached by the allied nations and Germany with respect to evacuation of the Cologne bridgehead.

This confidence on the part of the President is based on the ability shown by the European Governments within recent months to reach agreements affecting their own welfare, beginning with the arrangement to submit the reparations problem to a committee of experts, the general adoption of the report of that committee and the willingness to begin payments under the Dawes plan.

The American Government has no official interest in the question of the Cologne evacuation and consequently no action by the United States is required or contemplated on the matter. The United States, however, has a general interest in anything affecting the welfare of Europe and, accordingly, officials in Washington will give attention in an unofficial way to the action to be taken by the council of Ambassadors at its meeting in Paris and to the forthcoming final reports of the military control commission concerning the status of German disarmaments.

GEORGE E. CHRISTIAN AND L. C. SUTTON APPOINTED

George E. Christian and L. C. Sutton to Be on Attorney General's Staff.

Austin, Texas.—Appointment of George B. Christian of Burnet as an Assistant Attorney General and authorization of the statement that L. C. Sutton at present a member of Attorney General W. A. Keeling's staff of assistants, would be retained, have been made by Attorney General Dan Moody. Several days ago Mr. Moody announced the appointment of Wright Morrow of Austin as a member of his official family.

Mr. Christian was for five years District Attorney of the Thirty-Third Judicial District. He is a grandson of the late A. R. Johnson of Burnet and was an officer in the 354th Machine Gun Battalion, Ninetieth Division, which served overseas during the World War. Mr. Christian graduated from the law department of the University of Texas, class of 1910.

Friends of Mr. Sutton are congratulating him upon his retention as an Assistant Attorney General and Attorney General Keeling as well as other members of the department are outspoken in laudits to Mr. Sutton for the service he has rendered the State during his long connection with the State's legal department. Mr. Sutton is a recognized authority on election problems, they point out, and has satisfactorily handled many intricate questions on that subject presented to the department. In addition to writing opinions on the numerous inquiries for construction of election laws, Mr. Sutton has advised on many other equally important matters, and took a leading part in representing the State in the Mayfield election controversy and the attack made on the eligibility of Mrs. Miriam A. Ferguson to hold the office of Governor of Texas.

The KITCHEN CABINET

(©, 1925, Western Newspaper Union.)

Our country's prosperity was built up by industry and thrift. Our forbears had a lust for work and accomplishment. Instead of this, our youth of today are seeking easy ways of subsistence, when there is no such thing as an easy way except at the expense of their own and our country's future.—Theodore N. Vail.

SEASONABLE MEATS

Chicken prepared and served in various ways is always a most delightful dish. Stuffed and roasted it can hardly be equalled, while smothered, fricasseed and baked in milk are all most appetizing.

Smothered chicken is split down the back, and roasted whole with much basting, then served with a cream gravy.

Chicken fricassee with a mushroom or cream gravy with dumplings is one way to extend the chicken flavor and serve two or three more than can be served with roasted fowl.

Capon is heavier than ordinary chicken and a much more delicate flavor; this when stuffed with an oyster dressing is chicken par excellence.

A well-made rabbit stew or a rabbit pie is a tasty dish; when the season for game is open, they are usually plentiful.

A whole baked ham or a crown roast of pork are both popular meats at this season. A saddle of venison, or a few venison steaks are considered by those who are fortunate enough to have them, as rare tidbits.

The following are a few stuffings which are a little out of the ordinary:

Sweet Potato Stuffing.—Take two cupfuls of mashed sweet potato, two cupfuls of chopped apple, one cupful of soft bread crumbs, one-fourth of a cupful of melted butter, one teaspoonful of salt, one-fourth teaspoonful of pepper, and a teaspoonful of poultry dressing.

Celery Stuffing.—Take one-half of a bunch of celery, two tablespoonfuls of butter, two eggs, one pint of bread crumbs, salt and pepper to taste. Chop the celery, add the crumbs squeezed dry from cold water, mix all the ingredients, add celery salt and the egg lightly beaten.

Keeping at worth-while hard work tends to prosperity ... at the same time protects the ... He ... busy to be fooling. ... material ... South.

FOR THE FAMILY TABLE

When salad materials are low, scrape and grind enough uncooked carrots to make a cupful or two, adding a bit of onion juice and a stalk or two of minced celery. Mix with a good mayonnaise and serve on a tender leaf of lettuce. A sprinkle of nuts, even coarsely rolled peanuts adds to this salad.

Stewed Pig's Knuckles.—Wash three pounds of fresh pig's knuckles and score the skin. Rub them with a tablespoonful of salt and dust with pepper. Place in a kettle with enough water to cover them, cover closely and simmer two and one-half hours. Add six sweet potatoes, pared and cut into strips and cook three-quarters of an hour longer. Take out the meat, remove the skin and bones, lay the meat on a platter with a border of potatoes. To every cupful of the liquid in which the meat was cooked add two tablespoonfuls of flour mixed to a paste with one tablespoonful of water, one tablespoonful of horseradish and one-half teaspoonful of worcestershire sauce. Cook until thickened. Serve with fried apples or jellied cranberries.

Boned Fish.—Fish would be so much better enjoyed if the bones were removed. This is not a difficult task and baking a fish that is stuffed increases its attractiveness. After cutting the fish down the center, remove the bone by cutting with a sharp knife, beginning at the tail. Most of the bones will be removed with the back bone. Lay in the well-seasoned stuffing, sew up and bake as usual.

Vegetarian Gravy.—Chop one small onion and carrot and brown in two tablespoonfuls of butter. Dissolve a bouillon cube in one cupful of hot water, add to vegetables and simmer for 20 minutes. Strain, thicken with flour and butter, adding a dash of worcestershire sauce and kitchen bouquet.

Ginger Sandwiches.—Mince very fine preserved ginger, ... sten with enough ... and easily ...

Mrs. Ashcroft's Remarkable Recovery After Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Covington, Ky.—"I was so weak and nervous I could hardly do my housework as I could not stand because of the bearing-down pains in my back and abdomen. I sat down most of the time and did what I could do in that way—as washing dishes, etc. One day a book describing Lydia E. Pinkham's medicines was put in my mail-box. I saw how the Vegetable Compound had helped others so I gave it a trial. I had to take about a dozen bottles before I gained my strength but I certainly praise this medicine. Then I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Blood medicine for poor blood. I was cold all the time. I would be so cold I could hardly sit still and in the palms of my hands there would be drops of sweat. I also used the Sanative Wash and I recommend it also. You may publish this letter and I will gladly answer letters from women and advise my neighbors about these medicines."—Mrs. HARRY ASHCROFT, 632 Beech Avenue, Covington, Kentucky.

Corsica, the scented isle just south of the Riviera, is, like every other country, a land of contrasts. But more than most, it is the land of paradox. Behind the striking beauty of the island, concealed beneath the commonplace exteriors of the people, there is a mystery, a contrary quality which first escapes observation and later intrudes everywhere. Probably nowhere is a generalization more likely to be true and false at the same time.

One goes to Corsica, as did Boswell's friend, expecting to find every bandit a menace. He remains to find the man with the gun the most unromantic of mortals. Melodrama heroes have accomplished more with the glitter of a silver spoon held revolver-wise than the most Tartarinesque of Corsicans attempt when loaded to the belt. Yet personal encounter between natives is still a commonplace.

Paradoxical Corsica

Repairing Nets on the Ajaccio Key.

(Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.)

Corsica, the scented isle just south of the Riviera, is, like every other country, a land of contrasts. But more than most, it is the land of paradox. Behind the striking beauty of the island, concealed beneath the commonplace exteriors of the people, there is a mystery, a contrary quality which first escapes observation and later intrudes everywhere. Probably nowhere is a generalization more likely to be true and false at the same time.

One goes to Corsica, as did Boswell's friend, expecting to find every bandit a menace. He remains to find the man with the gun the most unromantic of mortals. Melodrama heroes have accomplished more with the glitter of a silver spoon held revolver-wise than the most Tartarinesque of Corsicans attempt when loaded to the belt. Yet personal encounter between natives is still a commonplace.

Corsica, where women go safely alone by night and gendarmes travel in pairs by day, where there are [illegible] where every one expects the visitor to pay verbal tribute to "Kalliste" (Most Beautiful) and few can name the mountains in whose shadow they were born!

Banditry is still a byword and thievery is abhorred. The innkeepers boast of what grand things they would do if there were more tourists, and neglect the few they have. The sun lives the land its charm; and the low, its beauty and health. The roads are blocked by horses, mules and donkeys, few of them laden, and the automobile, even for the single traveler, offers the cheapest means of transportation. The perfume of the maquis and the smells of the streets alike indescribable.

Animals, made roommates, are treated cruelly, and children, seldom at home, are generally allowed to do as they please.

Life is somber and death is still the supreme event to those whose monotonous days are as tenaciously clung to as in happier and less lovely lands.

The mountain sides are terraced with infinite labor and the most fertile plains are left untilled. The sea is all around and mariners are few. Bad sailors that they are, the Corsicans claim kinship with Columbus, and, indomitable fighters, they ignore Napoleon. Sacred personages, pictured on many walls, are profaned on most male lips.

The donkeys and pigs feed on cheatnuts of such quality that few in richer lands could afford, and every third child seems underfed.

Life Is Lived There.

But as one looks back on Corsica from the confetti-strewn Corso in Nice he longs for the simple, unspoiled, paradoxical paradise to the [illegible] so comfortless, yet so compelling in its charms. With however little success life in Corsica [illegible] ected, it is real.

Scenery, Not Costumes.

Nowhere has nature so queened it over her subjects. The people add nothing to the scene. Certainly they do not give it its interest. From the attractive widow's weeds of the Cours Napoleon or the Place St. Nicolas to the somber costume with green-black headshawl which frames the sallow, wrinkled faces of the old woman of the interior, costume never flares forth with insolent color as it does in Sardinia, in India, or on the Dalmatian coast. The men wear brown corduroy enough and bright enough to add pageant to the picture.

But the Corsicans are humble folk. They gladly subordinate themselves to the scenery, saying that the land is so beautiful that it needs no polychrome costumes to make it attractive. And when one sees with what indifferent success the townfolk do wear colors, he quickly reconciles himself to the somber garb which stands out so modestly against the beauty of the land itself.

Countless tiny terraces, where crops grow at such cost of labor as one finds among the Ifugaos of the Philippines or among the Chinese, testify to the fact that the Corsican is not truly slovenly. A certain thrift and foresight are habitual with him.

When the Greeks, no amateurs in beauty, called Corsica "Kalliste"—Most Beautiful—they referred to rugged coasts where blood-red rocks plunge deep into the sea, where a soft haze carries the succession of loveliness across wide plains, between tall mountains, to some distant snow-clad peak, all opalescent under the soft glow of departing day, where cascades pour their shower of pearls against rock cliffs as black as ebony.

Corsica is interesting because it is Corsica. With all its discomforts, the laggard land is worth a visit because it is laggard. Such unspoiled spots are so few in the modern world that one can tolerate petty inconveniences for the sake of knowing a people who have been little affected by modernism.

Napoleon's Town.

Ajaccio is Napoleon's home town. One is never allowed to forget that. But he did forsake the great disbonor of quitting her shores, and few Corsicans seem to care much about him. Today Napoleon is to Ajaccio [illegible] Fujiyama to Japan.

HOW TO SOLVE A CROSS-WORD PUZZLE

When the correct letters are placed in the white spaces this puzzle will spell words both vertically and horizontally. The first letter in each word is indicated by a number, which refers to the definition listed below the puzzle. Thus No. 1 under the column headed "horizontal" defines a word which will fill the white spaces up to the first black square to the right, and a number under "vertical" defines a word which will fill the white squares to the next black one below. No letters go in the black spaces. All words used are dictionary words, except proper names. Abbreviations, slang, initials, technical terms and obsolete forms are indicated in the definitions.

WOMAN SO ILL WASHED DISHES SITTING DOWN

Mrs. Ashcroft's Remarkable Recovery After Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Covington, Ky.—"I was so weak and nervous I could hardly do my housework as I could not stand because of the bearing-down pains in my back and abdomen. I sat down most of the time and did what I could do in that way—as a washing dishes, etc. One day a book describing Lydia E. Pinkham's medicines was put in my mail-box. I saw how the Vegetable Compound had helped others so I gave it a trial. I had to take about a dozen bottles before I gained my strength but I certainly praise this medicine. Then I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Blood medicine for poor blood. I was cold all the time. I would be so cold I could hardly sit still and in the palms of my hands there would be drops of sweat. I also used the Sanative Wash and I recommend it also. You may publish this letter and I will gladly answer letters from women and advise my neighbors about these medicines."—Mrs. HARRY ASHCROFT, 632 Beech Avenue, Covington, Kentucky.

When Farris had to go and claim a dance, Lee watched him with eyes soft with affection. Then he, too, left the room and went back to the outer door, to his old spot, looking for Judith.

"The only thing I want is right here," he repeated softly.

He watched Farris join Marcia and Judith. He noted the eager excitement in Marcia's eyes, saw her turn impulsively to Farris. The artist shook his head and left them, ostensibly going in search of his partner. Marcia was speaking excitedly to Judith. Lee frowned.

Once more that night he held Judith in his arms. He meant to make amends for his brusque way with her before. But again the magic of her presence was like a glorious mist, shutting them in together, shutting all of the world out. They spoke little and the music had its will with them. Judith did not know that she sighed as the dance ended. She seemed moving in a dream as Lee led her through the door. They were out in the courtyard, the stars shining lustily down on them. In the subdued light here he stood still, looking down into her pleasure-flushed face. Again the insistent tremor shot down his blood.

* * * * * * *

Here in this tender light she looked to him the masterpiece of God striving for the perfect in a woman's form. Her gown, gently stirred by the warm breeze, seemed a part of her, elusive, alive, feminine. The milk-white of bare throat and shoulder and rounded arm, the rise and fall of her breast, the soft lure of her eyes, the tender smile upon her lips, drew him slowly closer, closer to her. She lifted her face a little, raising her eyes until they shone straight into his.

"Judith," he said very quietly, very gravely, making her wonder at the tone and the words to follow: "You have had your way with me tonight. Do you understand all that means? And now—I am going to have my way with you!"

He caught her in his arms, crushed her to him, kissed her. Then he let her go and stood, stern-faced, watching her.

For a moment he thought that the hand at her side was rising to strike him full in the face. But he did not move.

Had such been Judith's intention, suddenly it changed.

...e shook his head and stepped into the room. At the long bar were three or four men drinking. Quinnion was not among them. There were other men at the round tables, playing draw, solo, stud horse. One glance showed that Quinnion was not in the room. But there were other rooms at the rear for those desiring privacy. Lee, nodding this way and that to friends who accosted him, made his way straight to the bar.

"Hello, Sandy," he said quietly.

Sandy Weaver, the bartender, looked at him curiously. A short, heavy, blond man was Sandy Weaver, who ran a fair house and gave his attention strictly to his own business. Save when asked by a friend to do him a favor, such a favor as to keep an eye on another man.

"Hello, Bud," returned Sandy, putting out a red hand. All expression of interest had fled from his placid face. "Come in right away, eh? Hello Carson. Have somethin'; on me, you know."

Lee shook his head.

"Not tonight, Sandy," he said. "Thanks just the same."

"Me," grinned Carson. "I'll go you, Sandy. Same thing—you know."

Sandy shoved out whisky-bottle and glass. Then he turned grave eyes to Lee.

"One of these fellers can tend bar while we talk if you want, Bud," he offered.

"You say Quinnion has been talking?" asked Lee.

"Yes. Considerable. All afternoon an' evening, I guess. I didn't hear him until I called you up."

"Then," continued the man from Blue Lake ranch, "I don't see any call for you and me to whisper, Sandy. What did he say?"

"Said you was a liar, Bud. An' a skeerd-of-your-life d—n bluff."

A faint, shadowy smile touched Lee's eyes.

"Just joshing, Sandy. But that wasn't all, was it?"

"No," said Sandy, wiping his bar carefully. "There was the other word, Bud. An'—say, Billy, tell him what Quinnion had to say down to the Jailbird."

Lee turned his eyes to Billy Young, Young, a cattleman from the Up and Down range, shifted his belt and looked uncomfortable.

"D—n if I do!" he blurted out. "It ain't none of my funeral. An' if you ask me, I don't like the sound of that kind of talk in my mouth. Maybe I can' find my way to church of a Sunday for staggerin' with red-eye, but I ain't ever drug a nice girl's name into a barroom."

"So," said Lee very quietly, "that's it, is it?"

"Yes," said Sandy Weaver slowly, "that's it, Bud. Us boys knowed ol' Luke Sanford an' liked him. Some of us even knowed his girl. All of us know the sort she is. When Quinnion started his talk—oh, it's a song an' dance about you an' her all alone in some d—n cabin, trying to crawl out'n the looks of things by accusin' Quinnion of tryin' to shoot you up!—well, folks jus' laughed at him. More recent, somebody must have took him serious an' smashed him in the mouth. He looks like it. But," and Sandy shrugged his thick shoulders elaborately, "if it's up to anybody it's up to you."

For a moment Bud Lee, standing very straight, his hat far back, his eyes hard and cold, looked from one to another of the men about him. In every face he saw the same thing; their contempt for a man like Quinnion, their wordless agreement with Sandy that it "was up to Bud Lee." Lee's face told them nothing.

"Where is he?" he asked presently.

"Mos' likely down to the Jailbird," said Billy Young. "That's where he hangs out lately."

Lee turned and went out, Carson at his heels, all eyes following him. In his heart was a blazing, searing rage. And that rage was not for Quinnion alone. He thought of Judith as he had seen her that very night, a graceful, gray-eyed slip of a girl, the sweetest little maid in all of the world known to him—and of how he, brutal in the surge of love for her, had swept her into his arms, crushed her to him, forced upon her laughing lips the kiss of his own.

"My G—d," he said within himself, "I was mad. It would be a good thing if I got Quinnion tonight—and he got me. Two of a kind," he told himself sneeringly.

As he made his way down the ill-lighted street, his hat drawn over his eyes now, Bud Lee for a moment lost sight of the rows of rude shanties, the drowsing, saddle-ponies, the street-lamps, and saw only the vision of a girl. A girl clean and pure, a girl who, as he had seen her last, was a fairylike creature born of music and soft laughter and starlight, a maid indescribably sweet. In the harshness of the mood which gripped him, she seemed to him superlatively adorable; the softness of her eyes at the moment before he had kissed her haunted him. As he strode on seeking Quinnion, who had spoken evil of her, he carried her with him in his heart.

Sunday School Lesson

Lesson for January 4

CHRIST'S TRIUMPHAL ENTRY

LESSON TEXT—Luke 19:29-44.

GOLDEN TEXT—"Blessed be the King that cometh in the name of the Lord."—Luke 19:38.

PRIMARY TOPIC—A Great Crowd Praising Jesus.

JUNIOR TOPIC — The Triumphal Entry.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Making Christ Our King.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC —The Kingship of Christ.

The title given this lesson is somewhat misleading. Strictly speaking, this was far from a triumphal entry. It was rather the official presentation of the King of the Jewish nation. Back of the cry, "hosanna," the awful word, "crucify" was uttered by the same persons who cried "hosanna." Though they were utterly blind to the fact, God was about to carry out His plan of hosanna, which means "save now," through the crucifixion of the Son of God.

I. The Presentation (vv. 29-34).

1. Sending the Disciples for the Ass (vv. 29-31). He told them just where to go to find it and told them how to answer the inquiry of the one who owned it. This shows how perfectly the Lord knows all our ways. He knows our whereabouts by day and night. He even knows our thoughts. He uses unlikely means and insignificant things in the accomplishment of His purpose.

2. The Fulfillment of Prophecy (Matt. 21:4, 5). Some five hundred years before Zechariah had predicted this event. Christ's entry into Jerusalem was an exact fulfillment of this prediction. This is highly instructive to those who would understand the prophecies as yet unfulfilled. Since the prediction of his first coming was literally fulfilled, we can be assured that the prophecy of His second coming will be likewise fulfilled. The first is established beyond a doubt. The second we should as heartily believe. The prediction of Zechariah 14:3-11 will be just as literally fulfilled as that of Zechariah 9:9.

3. Obedience of the Disciples (vv. 32-34). Though the request may have seemed strange, and even unreasonable, they fully obeyed. The true disciple will render glad obedience to the Lord no matter how strange His commands may seem. Obedience to that only which seems reasonable is not obedience at all. May we prove that we are real disciples!

II. The Entry of the King (vv. 35-38).

1. The Disciples Set Jesus Upon the Ass (v. 35). This act of putting their garments upon the ass and setting Jesus upon it showed that they recognized Him as their King (II Kings 9:13).

2. Acclaimed as King by the Disciples (vv. 36-38). Some spread their garments in the way. Others, perhaps having no garments to spare, cut down branches of trees and strewed them in His way, which was no doubt just as acceptable to Him. They praised God for all the mighty works which they had seen and cried out, "Blessed is the King that cometh in the name of the Lord."

III. The Critical Pharisees (vv. 39, 40).

Although swept along by the demonstration of the multitude they deemed it prudent to ask the Lord to rebuke the disciples, as such behavior might be interpreted by the Roman government as an insurrection. To their demand Jesus replied that such homage was not only fitting but necessary. He declared that if the multitude were silent, the very stones would cry out in adoration of him.

IV. The King Rejected (vv. 41-44).

Christ knew what awaited Him in Jerusalem. Though surrounded by loyal hearts, He knew that the rulers of the nations had no heart for Him. His coming trial and death loomed before Him so that He wept over Jerusalem. He knew that awful days awaited it and that loyal hearts would gladly welcome Him if they only knew. He showed that their inability to see Him as their King and Savior would result in bringing upon them the awful horrors of the destruction of their city. He entered the city and rebuked the rulers for allowing the house of God to become degraded by carrying on traffic for gain. The cleansing of the temple only increased their hatred and opposition to Him.

...e shook his head and stepped into the room. At the long bar were three or four men drinking. Quinnion was not among them. There were other men at the round tables, playing draw, solo, stud horse. One glance showed that Quinnion was not in the room. But there were other rooms at the rear for those desiring privacy. Lee, nodding this way and that to friends who accosted him, made his way straight to the bar.

"Hello, Sandy," he said quietly.

Sandy Weaver, the bartender, looked at him curiously. A short, heavy, blond man was Sandy Weaver, who ran a fair house and gave his attention strictly to his own business. Save when asked by a friend to do him a favor, such a favor as to keep an eye on another man.

"Hello, Bud," returned Sandy, putting out a red hand. All expression of interest had fled from his placid face. "Come in right away, eh? Hello Carson. Have somethin'; on me, you know."

Lee shook his head.

"Not tonight, Sandy," he said. "Thanks just the same."

"Me," grinned Carson. "I'll go you, Sandy. Same thing—you know."

Sandy shoved out whisky-bottle and glass. Then he turned grave eyes to Lee.

"One of these fellers can tend bar while we talk if you want, Bud," he offered.

"You say Quinnion has been talking?" asked Lee.

"Yes. Considerable. All afternoon an' evening, I guess. I didn't hear him until I called you up."

"Then," continued the man from Blue Lake ranch, "I don't see any call for you and me to whisper, Sandy. What did he say?"

"Said you was a liar, Bud. An' a skeerd-of-your-life d—n bluff."

A faint, shadowy smile touched Lee's eyes.

"Just joshing, Sandy. But that wasn't all, was it?"

"No," said Sandy, wiping his bar carefully. "There was the other word, Bud. An'—say, Billy, tell him what Quinnion had to say down to the Jailbird."

Lee turned his eyes to Billy Young, Young, a cattleman from the Up and Down range, shifted his belt and looked uncomfortable.

"D—n if I do!" he blurted out. "It ain't none of my funeral. An' if you ask me, I don't like the sound of that kind of talk in my mouth. Maybe I can find my way to church of a Sunday for staggerin' with red-eye, but I ain't ever drug a nice girl's name into a barroom."

"So," said Lee very quietly, "that's it, is it?"

"Yes," said Sandy Weaver slowly, "that's it, Bud. Us boys knowed of Luke Sanford an' liked him. Some of us even knowed his girl. All of us know the sort she is. When Quinnion started his talk—oh, it's a sing an' dance about you an' her all alone in some d—n cabin, trying to crawl out'n the looks of things by accusin' Quinnion of tryin' to shoot you up!—well, folks just laughed at him. More recent, somebody must have took him serious an' smashed him in the mouth. He looks like it. But," and Sandy shrugged his thick shoulders elaborately, "if it's up to anybody it's up to you."

For a moment Bud Lee, standing very straight, his hat far back, his eyes hard and cold, looked from one to another of the men about him. In every face he saw the same thing; their contempt for a man like Quinnion, their wordless agreement with Sandy that it "was up to Bud Lee." Lee's face told them nothing.

"Where is he?" he asked presently.

"Mos' likely down to the Jailbird," said Billy Young. "That's where he hangs out lately."

Lee turned and went out. Carson at his heels, all eyes following him. In his heart was a blazing, searing rage. And that rage was not for Quinnion alone. He thought of Judith as he had seen her that very night, a graceful, gray-eyed slip of a girl, the sweetest little maid in all of the world known to him—and of how he, brutal in the surge of love for her, had swept her into his arms, crushed her to him, forced upon her laughing lips the kiss of his own.

"My G—d," he said within himself, "I was mad. It would be a good thing if I got Quinnion tonight—and he got me. Two of a kind," he told himself sneeringly.

As he made his way down the ill-lighted street, his hat drawn over his eyes now, Bud Lee for a moment lost sight of the rows of rude shanties, the drowsing, saddle-ponies, the street-lamps, and saw only the vision of a girl. A girl clean and pure, a girl who, as he had seen her last, was a fairylike creature born of music and soft laughter and starlight, a maid indescribably sweet. In the harshness of the mood which gripped him, she seemed to him superlatively adorable; the softness of her eyes at the moment before he had kissed her haunted him. As he strode on seeking Quinnion, who had spoken evil of her, he carried her with him in his heart.

Lesson for January 4

CHRIST'S TRIUMPHAL ENTRY

LESSON TEXT—Luke 19:29-44.
GOLDEN TEXT—"Blessed be the King that cometh in the name of the Lord."—Luke 19:38.
PRIMARY TOPIC—A Great Crowd Praising Jesus.
JUNIOR TOPIC — The Triumphal Entry.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Making Christ Our King.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Kingship of Christ.

The title given this lesson is somewhat misleading. Strictly speaking, this was far from a triumphal entry. It was rather the official presentation of the King of the Jewish nation. Back of the cry, "hosanna," the awful word, "crucify" was uttered by the same persons who cried "hosanna." Though they were utterly blind to the fact, God was about to carry out His plan of hosanna, which means "save now," through the crucifixion of the Son of God.

I. The Presentation (vv. 29-34).

1. Sending the Disciples for the Ass (vv. 29-31). He told them just where to go to find it and told them how to answer the inquiry of the one who owned it. This shows how perfectly the Lord knows all our ways. He knows our whereabouts by day and night. He even knows our thoughts. He uses unlikely means and insignificant things in the accomplishment of His purpose.

2. The Fulfillment of Prophecy (Matt. 21:4, 5). Some five hundred years before Zechariah had predicted this event. Christ's entry into Jerusalem was an exact fulfillment of this prediction. This is highly instructive to those who would understand the prophecies as yet unfulfilled. Since the prediction of his first coming was literally fulfilled, we can be assured that the prophecy of His second coming will be likewise fulfilled. The first is established beyond a doubt. The second we should as heartily believe. The prediction of Zechariah 14:3-11 will be just as literally fulfilled as that of Zechariah 9:9.

3. Obedience of the Disciples (vv. 32-34). Though the request may have seemed strange, and even unreasonable, they fully obeyed. The true disciple will render glad obedience to the Lord no matter how strange His commands may seem. Obedience to that only which seems reasonable is not obedience at all. May we prove that we are real disciples!

II. The Entry of the King (vv. 35-38).

1. The Disciples Set Jesus Upon the Ass (v. 35). This act of putting their garments upon the ass and setting Jesus upon it showed that they recognized Him as their King (II Kings 9:13).

2. Acclaimed as King by the Disciples (vv. 36-38). Some spread their garments in the way. Others, perhaps having no garments to spare, cut down branches of trees and strewed them in His way, which was no doubt just as acceptable to Him. They praised God for all the mighty works which they had seen and cried out, "Blessed is the King that cometh in the name of the Lord."

III. The Critical Pharisees (vv. 39, 40).

Although swept along by the demonstration of the multitude they deemed it prudent to ask the Lord to rebuke the disciples, as such behavior might be interpreted by the Roman government as an insurrection. To their demand Jesus replied that such homage was not only fitting but necessary. He declared that if the multitude were silent, the very stones would cry out in adoration of him.

IV. The King Rejected (vv. 41-44).

Christ knew what awaited Him in Jerusalem. Though surrounded by loyal hearts, He knew that the rulers of the nations had no heart for Him. His coming trial and death loomed before Him so that He wept over Jerusalem. He knew that awful days awaited it and that loyal hearts would gladly welcome Him if they only knew. He showed that their inability to see Him as their King and Savior would result in bringing upon them the awful horrors of the destruction of their city. He entered the city and rebuked the rulers for allowing the house of God to become degraded by carrying on traffic for gain. The cleansing of the temple only increased their hatred and opposition to Him.

Obey

Obey the voice of God in the Book,
Obey the voice of God in your heart,
Obey the voice of God as He speaks to you in circumstances, and His voice will be the Echoes.

A Family Gathering

Friday, Dec. 26, was clear and cold, but the interior of the home of Mr and Mrs. H. L. Vestal in Eastland county, was quite a contrast.

Though clear were the minds and spirits of all present, it was made warm by the warm greetings and handclaspa together with the cheerful fires burning in the large fire places.

By the noon hour about forty guests had gathered and after much exchanging of greetings in keeping with the holiday season, dinner was announced and upon entering the spacious dining room, a table groaning under the burden of eats of every description, was the first object to meet the eye, from which every one feasted, for such it was, real feast.

The purpose of this gathering was to pay honor to the happy union of Miss Eva Hargrove, only daughter of Mrs. Emma Hargrove, and Mr. Euell Vestal only son of Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Vestal, on the 25th day of December, 1924, at Cisco, Texas, being accompanied by Miss Loma Irvin and Mr. Ben Atwood, Elder Holmes performing the sacred rites which bound them as one.

Both parties are of prominent families and have the congratulations of all who know them.

WATCH YOUR STEP!

THE CAR TO BUY

--is the car that DOES NOT change models, designs or styles every few months. WHY? Because the purchaser is the loser. You then want a new one and yours is an old model. Therefore you get disgusted and take a loss, in order to keep up with your neighbor. The car to buy is the one that is already a success, the one you could find a buyer for in case of sickness or misfortune and not lose all you have paid on it.

Most cars are bought on a credit basis, so buy the car that will be worth something when it is paid out. The Ford is a success already and is a big majority of the peoples' car. More Fords made and sold in one day than most cars cars in thirty days.

OF C. TO HAVE AN EXTENSIVE 1925 PROGRAM

y night of last week the direc- the Chamber of Commerce met purpose of closing out the 1924 n, and to start the new year's with force and energy, which we ssured will include a number of of paramount importance. We predict this ongoing to be pre- ently the dominant year's record the history of this organization. There are the natural conclusions of the writer who was permitted to have a seat with this august body of men—broad thinkers, with active community spirit and interest, who are recognized as a dynamic force, in this town and community.

Mr. Townsend, president of the organization, first called on F. M. Gwin, secretary, for a Review or report of the accomplishments and activities of the Chamber of Commerce for 1924. And it was well worth hearing. Those who are doubtful or skeptical about what this organization actually accomplished the past year, should have heard that report. It will be published soon and don't fail to read it. F. M. Gwin as secretary during 1924 made a wonderful record in "putting over" everything that was possible with the limited finances upon which he had to operate. In fact his record of achievements became known over the state with results that a number of larger cities are after him with attractive propos —but Friday night the board of tors employed him for 1925, and v indeed fortunate in retaining h secretary for this year.

At this meeting it was also d to put on a big membership drive The membership fee is $10 p quarterly. Plans were also la to formulate and organize a Auxiliary of the C. of C.

The water question was discuss the secretary was instructed to all possible data on the subject port findings for the informatio membership.

The hospital possibilities we cussed and met with much fa comment. This may be incl this year's program.

It is also planned so have banquet real soon, as were put last year as a monthly occasion Plains is going forward this never before if the citizenship up with the Chamber of Co The officials and directors are can afford to follow. Join no
