Texas Succeeds In Attaching $1,021,500 Of Humble Oil Stock In Ouster Suit

SHARES FOUND IN HOUSTON AFTER FAILURE

State Tries New Move To Annex Property Of Other Companies

LIENS ARE OBTAINED

Filling Stations Involved In Fight to Throw Out Majors

HOUSTON, Nov. 19. (UP)—The task of deputy sheriffs to find elusive shares of stock to attach in a move of Attorney General James V. Allred to oust 15 oil companies from the state of Texas, met with success this afternoon.

A total of 40,860 shares of stock of Humble Oil and Refining company with a par value of $25 and an aggregate value of $1,021,500 was attached here by Sheriff T. A. Binford's department under the ouster suit filed by Allred, who claims the 15 companies and two oil organizations have violated state antitrust laws.

Miss Other Stock

The Humble company is a subsidiary of the Standard Oil company of New Jersey, and is one of four foreign companies named by writs of attachments issued by the Travis county district court at Austin, where the ouster suits were filed.

Success in attaching the shares here came after deputy sheriffs in Dallas met with failure in trying to find shares of stock there of the Magnolia Petroleum company, subsidiary of the Standard Oil company of New York and the Shell Petroleum corporation. The deputies had orders to attach $1,021,500 stock of each company.

McKee Sentenced To Die in Chair

LAMESA, Texas, Nov. 19. (UP)—Ira McKee, young man who killed and thereby made a Carnegie hero of W. R. Billingsley, West Texan, today was sentenced to die in the state's electric chair Jan. 8, 1932.

Judge Gordon B. McQuire read the sentence, which had been delayed in imposition until the court of criminal appeals at Austin affirmed McKee's conviction of murder. He was found guilty of killing Billingsley during a robbery at Sparenburg, Dawson county, May 1, 1930.

Billingsley's widow recently was awarded a bronze Carnegie hero medal for her husband's bravery in attempting to avert the robbery.

McKee's only signs of emotion when he heard his sentence were slight tremblings of the lips and chin. He was taken later to Huntsville penitentiary to await electrocution.

LAREDO, Texas, Nov. 19. (AP)—All Chinese in the northwestern states of Mexico will have been expelled by the early part of 1932, according to an official statement issued today by Deputy Miguel Slazan and received by the Mexican consulate in Laredo.

The official statement said that the deportation of Chinese in Mexico or the northwestern states, where there are many of them, was due to an energetic anti-Chinese campaign by Mexican officials and people generally.

Bandits Try Calling On Bank's Head

RINGLING, Okla., Nov. 19. (AP)—Five masked men with a hospitality complex stopped at the home of W. W. Woodworth, president of the First National bank of Ringling, last night with plans to spend the night, then rob the bank.

The quintet, all armed, changed their plans, however, politely took the banker's automobile and vanished. Officers tonight had not apprehended any of the men.

Apparently the robbers' scheme to have Woodworth accompany them to the bank this morning went awry because two of their number, sent out to "get" the town watchman, drew his gunfire instead and scurried back. Before they left, however, the men ordered and ate a meal cooked by the banker's wife.

Robbers took $2,300 from the bank in September.

JURY TROUBLE DELAYS TRIAL

Venire Exhausted in Ardmore Murder Case

ARDMORE, Okla., Nov. 19. (UP)—Taking of testimony in the murder trial of two former deputy sheriffs, charged with killing two Mexican college students, was postponed late today until tomorrow because of difficulty in selection of a jury.

Court was recessed, with Special Sheriff W. F. Warren instructed by District Judge Asa Walden to appear tomorrow morning with a special panel of 100 men. From this number, the jury will be selected to try Cecil Crosby and William E. Guess, former deputies, on a murder charge in the slaying of Manuel Garcia Gomez, son of a prominent Mexico City family, who was attending school in this country.

Panel Exhausted

Gomez and Emilio Cotes Rubio, cousin of the president of Mexico, were killed here the night of June 7 as they sat in the automobile in which they were driving to their homes in Mexico City. Crosby admitted firing the shots, contending the youths attempted to resist his questions. Crosby was acquitted last June of killing Rubio.

The regular jury panel of 38 men was exhausted this morning. Twenty-nine were excused for having fixed opinions in the case, or on the plea they would be embarrassed by conviction.

Attorneys Confer

State and defense attorneys, the judge and the defendants spent the afternoon in private conference. All said they were pledged to secrecy, but it was rumored prosecuting attorneys had split over the right to conduct the case. J. M. Springer, special attorney appointed by Gov. W. H. Murray to aid the prosecution, demanded the head role, but County Attorney Schilling refused to accede, it was said.

The courtroom was crowded, as interest in the case has been high.

Whether or not Salvador Rubio, who was with the two boys the night they were killed, will come here to testify for the state was undetermined tonight. Governor Murray asked him to leave his studies at St. Benedict's college, Atchison, Kan., for the trial.

Effective date of the new rate is Dec. 1. The present rate is two cents.

WINTER'S FIRST BREATH HITS WICHITA AREA

Season's Initial Snow And Sleet Covers Panhandle Territory

COLD MOVES SOUTH

Chill Wave Carried From Northern Oklahoma Toward Texas

Winter, several weeks behind time, blew her first chill breath upon Wichita Falls and her neighbors Thursday night. While the season's initial snow and sleet hit the Texas Panhandle and sent the mercury to 30 degrees at the northern limit of the Oklahoma Panhandle, mercury here slipped from a maximum of 69 degrees to 46 at 11 o'clock. The drop from 52 at 5 o'clock was swift and steady.

Denver dispatchers reported a reading of 44 degrees at Quanah at 11 o'clock, with probably colder weather above.

Dispatchers for the Katy road said the Oklahoma Panhandle registered 30 degrees at the most northern points and 40 degrees at Woodward, with the cold wave moving steadily south.

PANHANDLE GETS SEASON'S FIRST SNOW

AMARILLO, Texas, No. 19. (AP)—The first snow of the season fell here today. Most of the flakes melted as they touched the ground in this section, but in the Oklahoma Panhandle and eastern New Mexico blankets two to three inches deep were reported.

Temperatures tonight hovered slightly above the freezing point here and over most of the North Panhandle. Snow was still falling at a late hour.

Boise City, Okla., Stratford, Borger and Vega, Texas, and Tucumcari and Clayton, N. M., reported snow and sleet, with the wintry wave approaching proportions of a small blizzard at some points. A norther was reported at Memphis, Texas.

The weather man predicted the flurry would be of short duration, with tomorrow fair and warmer here.

WINTER REACHES SOUTH PLAINS

LUBBOCK, Texas, Nov. 19. (AP)—Winter reached the South Plains late today and swept on southward with a brisk wind and under a cloudless sky tonight.

Temperatures fell sharply, from high of 59 degrees to 39 early in the evening. Freezing temperatures were in sight for tonight. The chilling winds did not cool the ardor of several hundred Texas Technological college students and former students who set fire to a huge pile of timber tonight, opening the annual home-coming celebration.

WESTERN OKLAHOMA PANHANDLE CHILLED

BOISE CITY, Okla., Nov. 19. (AP)—Three inches of wet snow blanketed the western Oklahoma Panhandle tonight, bringing the first touch of winter to the state.

Blowing out of the northwest, the snowstorm started shortly after noon and increased in intensity. There was no indication of an abatement as night fell. Temperatures remained slightly above freezing.

Boise City was the central point of the snowfall, the first moisture of any consequence in the Oklahoma Panhandle in more than a month.

SLEET FELTS BORGER AREA

BORGER, Texas, Nov. 19. (AP)—Winter came to Borger and the Texas Panhandle tonight.

Fine sleet was pattering down here. The temperature was dropping toward the freezing point.

49 Indicted on Liquor Charges By U.S. Grand Jury; 43 Bills Voted

Forty-three indictments, naming more than 60 persons as defendants, were returned before Judge William H. Atwell Thursday afternoon by the federal grand jury in a partial report representing their work since Monday morning. Investigations by the grand jury were resumed immediately.

Defendants named in 39 of the bills returned Thursday are either in jail or under bond. Those against whom the four remaining indictments were found are not yet in custody. The 39 indictments were brought against a total of 56 persons, all but seven of whom are charged with violation of federal prohibition laws.

Counterfeiting Charges

Operation of a radio broadcasting station without a federal license, the first case of its kind in this area, is charged against Clive Lankford in one of Thursday's indictments. The station was shut down at Seymour by federal officers in April of this year. Frank Shirley and Lawrence Kilroy were indicted for alleged passing of counterfeit federal reserve notes. Three violations of the narcotic laws, and one of the Dyer act, were charged in the report.

Show Stock Brings New High Price

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Nov. 19. (UP)—Definite proof that the cattle industry, a mainstay of the Southwest, is in for good times again was offered today at the American Royal Livestock show auction sales.

Several of the sales were made at new highs for the season, and livestock men were united in agreeing that prices were on the incline. Purebred feeders pointed to today's market quotations, showing they are receiving three and one-half cents a pound more for their products than they did six months ago.

After spirited bidding, a carlot of Hereford fat cattle, champions of the show, owned by Dan Casement of Manhattan, Kan., sold for 15¼ cents a pound, three and one-half cents above the highest price paid here this season for choice fat stock.

Other prices paid at the auction were in keeping.

"There's a better feeling in the cattle business, said O. Harris, of O. Harris & Sons Hereford farm, Harris, Mo. "What's to keep cattle down? Statistics show an 18 per cent increase in population and a 36 per cent decrease in the livestock supply. Prices must go up."

INDIAN'S STORY IS DISPROVED

Condemned Man's Claim Sifted by Rangers

AUSTIN, Nov. 19. (AP)—A story of Chief Red Wing, convicted killer of a 2-year-old girl, that another had committed the crime for which he has been sentenced to death, had been virtually disproved today to the satisfaction of Texas rangers who investigated.

The Indian's claim had won for him a reprieve until Nov. 30, his accusation made on the eve of his scheduled electrocution early today having moved Gov. R. S. Sterling to stay the execution until the allegations could be checked.

William W. Sterling, state adjutant general, who directed the investigation, said the man Red Wing accused of slaying Angelina Cavazos, daughter of a couple that traveled in the same show troupe with the Indian, had proved a "perfect alibi."

The one blamed by Red Wing was questioned by state rangers after he had been detained in San Antonio and brought here. The man's wife also was interrogated with reference to the brutal slaying.

RED WING STILL REFUSES FOOD

HUNTSVILLE, Texas, Nov. 19. (AP)—Chief Red Wing, condemned to electrocution for the murder of a child, did not eat again today, he told a newspaper man who visited him in his cell at state prison here. It was the fourth day he had refused food, and he likewise said he had not slept during that period.

Red Wing was granted a 12-day reprieve yesterday by Gov. Ross Sterling, pending investigations by Texas rangers of certain of the Indian's statements—statements which it appeared, in advices from Austin, had led the investigators nowhere.

Red Wing, who was scheduled originally to die early this morning, spent yesterday standing immobile.

"I cannot eat and I can't sleep," he told the newspaper man. "Maybe tomorrow or the next day I will eat, maybe not."

Prison officials had not commented on his actions.

LAWTON, Okla., Nov. 19. (AP)—A murder charge was filed today against Hays Farr, Mountain View farmer, in connection with the death of Sergt. Emory F. Woodbury, Fort Sill, killed when struck by Farr's automobile.

Farr pleaded not guilty and was ordered held without bond. At the time of the accident, Farr and his family were driving to Byers, Texas, to visit relatives.

Farr said a car in front of him forced him to pull to the side of the road and his car hit Woodbury, who was walking.

U. S.-ITALIAN ACCORD SEALED IN LAST TALK

Grandi-Hoover Join in Appeal to Powers For Cooperation

NAVAL PACT HOPED

Two Nations Agree On Wish for Completion Of Understanding

WASHINGTON, Nov. 19. (AP)—Sealing a new bond of transatlantic friendship, Italy and the United States today called on the other great powers to do their bit for naval disarmament and reestablishment of stability.

The two governments announced their common purpose in a joint statement terminating two days of conferences between President Hoover and Mussolini's foreign minister and inseparable friend, Dino Grandi.

Cast in indefinite diplomatic language, the statement nevertheless carried a clear implication of close Italo-American accord for definite results at next spring's disarmament conference. Its declaration for "completion" of existing understandings mentioned no names, but it meant both Italy and America are anxious to see the pending naval agreement of Italy with France signed and sealed.

Naval Pact Hoped

It now is apparent that little can be expected at the spring conference in the way of land disarmament. France insists she must have a large army, and her neighbors do not want to reduce unless she goes along. The French-Italian naval dispute, however, is one place where results may be attainable. An extention of the armaments holiday already in effects presents another possibility of accomplishment.

Besides agreeing to do what they could in these directions, Mr. Hoover and Signor Grandi talked also of war debts and reparations but with no tangible result. Italy would like to see a radical readjustment all around, but for the present she is willing that France shall have her way, with the Young plan committee entrusted with the task of re-examining the troublesome reparations problem as agreed upon today in Paris.

Envoy Leaves

The foreign minister, accompanied by Signora Grandi and Secretary Stimson, said farewell late in the day to President and Mrs. Hoover. Upon request of Premier Mussolini he conveyed to the chief executive the Italian chief of government's personal word of appreciation for the cordiality of his minister's reception in America. The premier made the request by transatlantic telephone from Rome.

A few minutes later, the minister and Secretary Stimson issued the joint statement at a press conference at the state department.

Specifically mentioned as points discussed during the talks were

Federal officials said the indictment charged the woman and her companions schemed to defraud prospective subscribers to an alleged diamond mine reported to have been located in Texas.

United States Marshal Paul Creswell said Miss Nash had married a Cincinnati school teacher since her indictment.

Baptist Group Promises Not to Support Wets

ATLANTA, Nov. 19. (AP)—The social service commission of the Georgia Baptist convention today presented a report which would bind members "never at any time, in any election to cast a vote that would give any encouragement to the foes of prohibition."

The report called the 18th amendment the "greatest piece of social legislation in the history of the country." It admitted imperfect enforcement but asserted it had reduced the consumption of intoxicants by 70 per cent.

Japan Lays In Great Store Of Cotton From U.S. Southern Markets

HOUSTON, Nov. 19. (US)—Japanese cotton firms are staging a spectacular buying movement, taking as high as 90 of each 100 bales sold in Texas and Oklahoma spot markets in the past three weeks, it was revealed here today.

Jap purchases so far this season are estimated at 1,500,000 to 2,000,000 bales in Texas and Oklahoma alone and 3,000,000 to 4,000,000 bales in the entire South. These estimates were made by leading Houston cotton men today, among them the head of one of the largest export firms in the nation.

Premiums Paid

Buyers for three Jap firms, the Southern Cotton company, the Japan Cotton Trading company and the Gosho company, are paying premiums of around $1 a bale to outbid competitors.

Cotton men see two possible explanations for the huge Jap purchases, the first is a huge speculative pool, perhaps heralding the abandonment by Japan of the gold standard early in 1932.

The other explanation, and that generally held here, is that Nippon is laying up cotton, a basic ingredient of gun cotton and other munitions in preparation for war. Cotton being bought now is of low grade, a factor which is of no importance in manufacture of explosives, exports to Japan total 532,000 bales, more than 200,000 bales in excess of the figure at this date last season and this in spite of a general shutdown of Jap looms in the past few months of the Chinese boycott on Jap products.

TEXAS SALES ARE DOUBLED

DALLAS, Nov. 19. (AP)—Robert Mayer, acting president of the Dallas cotton exchange, revealed today that the total of cotton exports to the orient thus far this year is approximately 100 per cent greater than at the same period last year.

Japan, up to Nov. 14, had imported from the United States 528,600 bales, compared to 305,000 bales during the same period last year; and China had imported from this country 370,900 bales, compared to 141,800 bales in the same period last year. Cotton men estimated that 70 or 75 per cent of the shipments this year have been Texas cotton.

"The possibility of war in the far East has nothing to do with it," Mayer insisted. "The price is the thing that counts. Last year, 3,448,000 bales of cotton were exported to Japan. Of that amount, 1,197,000 bales were American cotton, 1,704,000 Indian and 485,000, Chinese cotton.

"At present, American cotton is much cheaper than the Indian and heavy floods damaged the Chinese crop to such an extent that both Japanese and Chinese buyers are turning to this country for their supply."

CHILD TELLS DEATH STORY

Two Held for Killing Former Electra Man

LONGVIEW, Texas, Nov. 19. (UP)—Charges of murder were filed here this afternoon against Jack Chambers, 35, and his brother-in-law, Arthur Morris, 19, in connection with the fatal shooting Monday of J. J. (Blackie) Garner between Gladewater and Kilgore, Garner formerly lived in Electra.

Assistant District Attorney G. K. Gilbert filed the charges, based on a dramatic story of the shooting told by Chambers' 4-year-old son. Both the accused men maintained a stoical silence today, under a determined, withering series of questions from prosecutors. They refused to discuss the case at all.

Child Talks

"Yes, daddy killed Garner," Chambers' son had said. "He waited in a ditch. When Garner came, daddy chased him down the road. Daddy shot once. Garner was running fast. Daddy shot. Garner slowed down, then fell.

"Daddy threw the shotgun in the creek. He jumped in, got the gun, and wiped it off with towels. Me and my little brother ran in the house and hid from the law. Daddy had sold Garner a pint of whisky before he shot him."

Close Range Shot

Morris is said to have been in the Chambers house, which is near the place where Garner's body was found with a gaping wound over the heart.

He had been shot at such close range that wadding of the shell was on his clothing. In the clothing was found $4 and an uncashed veterans' compensation warrant. Garner was an oil field worker.

ENTIRELY NEW TREATY WITH CHINA WANTED

Tokyo Sticks to Original Plea for Recognition Of Old Pacts

COUNCIL BOGS DOWN

Committee to Visit Trouble Zone for Study of All Issues Urged

LONDON, Nov. 20, (Friday)—A Tokyo dispatch to the London Daily Mail today said there were indications the Japanese army in Manchuria was preparing to attack Chinchow, last strategic point in Manchuria held by the Chinese.

(Copyright, 1931, by The Associated Press)

PARIS, Nov. 19.—Japan has informed the League of Nations she will not evacuate Manchuria until a new treaty has been negotiated between her and China, it was learned tonight.

Moreover, the Tokyo government will stick to its demand that before the Japanese troops are withdrawn China must confirm the validity of existing Sino-Japanese treaties.

These points were made clear by unofficial publication of a memorandum to the league council from Kenkichi Yoshizawa, Japanese delegate. The memorandum gave precisely the details of his statement at yesterday's secret council meeting.

COUNCIL UNABLE TO FIND REMEDY

By WYTHE WILLIAMS
(Copyright, 1931, Universial Service, Inc.)

PARIS, Nov. 19.—The question of whether Japan, having already won the Manchurian war, will "win the peace," was tonight the problem before the council of the League of Nations. The council will convene in public session Saturday, to make its last desperate stand before world opinion.

The Japanese position, according to authoritative sources, is so firm and unbending that Japan will decline to evacuate Tsitsihar and other Manchurian points, considering the war won and Manchuria within her grasp.

Foreign Minister Briand of France, president of the council, after a conversation with Ambassador Charles G. Dawes who spoke by telephone with Secretary of State Stimson, informed the Chines delegation that after further pourparlers tomorrow, the league will come out in the open.

Investigation Planned

Nevertheless, the only plan being considered now by the elder brethren of the "big twelve," is the sending of a commission to Manchuria to look into all matters under dispute. The doubtful honor of chairmanship of the commission is to be "bestowed" on the United States as an argument to cease China's demands for Japan's evacuation.

Although Ambassador Dawes would not admit his telephone talk with Washington, high sources assured Universal Service that the talk lasted for hours. Nor would the ambassador disclose Washington's course in the face of Japan's snubbing the Kellogg pact and the nine-power treaty by taking Tsitsihar despite a promise to America that treaties would be observed and Tsitsihar would not be occupied.

Japs Dismayed

The calling of the public council undoubtedly dismayed the Japanese delegation, which immediately dispatched a long cable to Tokyo. It is said in some quarters that the public session was convoked solely to show the world that Japan has not changed her position and will make no compromise.

Briand's talk with Dawes was by telephone. They arranged to meet at 11 o'clock tomorrow, and the secret session of the council set for that hour was postponed until the afternoon. Briand during the day conferred with Dr. Alfred Sze, the Chinese delegate, and Kenkichi Yoshisawa, Japanese ambassador here.

LEAGUE CAN'T FIND WAY OUT

Conversations at Paris Net Nothing

It is understood that difficulties have arisen between the two Japanese ambassadors, Yoshisawa of the Paris post and Tsuneo Matsudaira, who was called here from London. Yoshisawa is reported maintaining his firm stand for control in Manchuria, while Matsudaira, backed by other members of the delegation, urges moderation.

No Accord Shown

Although the definite war news from Manchuria is unpopular with the league, the argument for sending a league commission to the front is still going on without the slightest indication of accord. Definite developments were expected as the outcome of the Dawes-Stimson and Dawes-Briand conversations.

The moderates in the council advocate the dispatching of observers and the radicals insist on invoking article 15 of the covenant, which means that the council if the dispute can not be settled peacefully must submit it to the assembly, which may invoke article 16.

The radicals hold that if observers are sent, this will mean that the league has definitely abandoned the idea of fixing a new date by which Japan must leave Manchuria, or in other words, conceding that Japanese troops may remain there and that Tokyo is more powerful than Geneva.

"Get Dawes into the council" was the cry in Paris after the secret session today, but Ambassador Dawes did not move from his position of observer in the hall until called to his hotel by the telephone call from Secretary Stimson. The league is anxious to know just how far the United States will go in supporting it, and this may be determined at the 11 o'clock meeting tomorrow.

CHINESE LEADER GATHERS TROOPS

MUKDEN, Nov. 19.—A desultory Chinese counter attack on Japanese forces reconnoitering northeast of Tsitsihar was repulsed after a sharp skirmish tonight in which the Japanese troops captured Lungkiang.

The Japanese force had been sent northward as the vanguard of a further movement against Gen. Ma Chan-Shan, who has established temporary field headquarters between Taianchen and Taerhha on the partially finished Tsitsihar-Koshan railway.

General Ma is reported to be gathering his scattered troops for another attack on the Japanese garrison of 3,000 at Tsitsihar, despite his swift defeat in the Anganchi and Tsitsihar engagements.

Heavy Casualties

Casualties in the two-day fight for Anganchi and Tsitsihar, according to a statement by Gen. Shigeru Honjo, Japanese commandant here were "much greater than any casualties on either side since the fighting started two months ago."

Four thousand Japanese replacement troops, the famous eighth Hirosaki division, will land from Japan in Korea tomororw, while other reinforcements have been sent from Mukden and Changchun toward Tsitsihar.

The new troops will be equipped with 30 sets of heavy skits for field guns, and four field-gun sleighs, a new Japanese invention which will receive its first test. The arctic weather was corisidered when Japan first laid plans for the Manchurian campaign, it is asserted.

Russian Rumor Dispelled

Rumors that Russians are aiding the Chinese in their defense against the Japanese advance on the Tsitsihar front were dispelled today by Capt. Parker Tenney, of the American military staff at the Peiping legation. Tenney said that in his visits to Manchuli and the Siberian frontier, he and Lieut. Robert Soule saw no evidence of Russian participation.

Japanese troops effectually occupied Tsitsihar at 10 a. m. today, after fighting throughout the night in a heavy blizzard with the temperature 25 degrees below zero, according to reports from the front. The walls of the ancient Heilungkiang capital were surrounded by Japanese troops last night, but the fighting kept up until General Ma's remnants fled toward Koshan.

Accident Suit on Trial

Other indictments announced Thursday were as follows: L. C. Dixon, alias J. C. Donal, interstate transportation of a stolen vehicle; Fred Keyes, sale and purchase of morphine; Frank Shirley and Lawrence W. Kilroy, passing counterfeit federal reserve notes; Clive Lankford, alias I. C. Lankford Jr., operating radio station without a license; May Howard, alias Mrs. J. S. Warren, sale and purchase of morphine; V. E. Ranson, forgery narcotic prescriptions.

Four other indictments were returned, but defendants are still at large.

Two women were sentenced by Judge Atwell Thursday afternoon following their pleas of guilty to liquor charges on which informations have been prepared by federal officers. Lillian Looper was fined $300 on a charge of possession and Ethel Davenport was fined $150 and given 35 days in jail when arraigned on nine counts.

Trial of the suit of Clark Wilcoxen of Electra against the Mutual Health & Benefit association for accident insurance was completed before Judge Atwell late Thursday afternoon, and was given to the jury. The plaintiff set out in his pleading that an accident policy had been in effect for more than one year when he was injured on June 14, 1929. Testimony showed that the plaintiff was engaged on that date in moving a Star drilling rig in rough oil field land. Near the top of a steep incline, it was shown, after a line had pulled loose the machine was "scotched" while preparations were made for anchoring a heavy line by which the machine could be drawn to the summit. While making the required excavation, the plaintiff claimed, he was a victim of sunstroke, and has been totally disabled for 29 months since that time.

A prolonged argument was waged before the court Thursday morning by Attorneys Bert King and E. F. Freuchte on the issue of accident in the case. The court's charge specified the question of accident as the first issue to be adjudicated.

U. S.-ITALIAN ACCORD SEALED

Grandi Ends Conference With Hoover

"the present financial crisis, intergovernmental debts, the problems surrounding the limitation and the reduction of armaments and stabilization of international exchanges."

Statement Quoted

The statement said:

"Full advantage has been taken of the opportunity afforded by this visit for a frank and cordial exchange of views respecting the many problems of world importance in which the governments of Italy and the United States are equally interested.

"Realizing that restoration of economic stability and confidence within our respective national boundaries can only find ultimate achievement through the further establishment of international financial stability and through a confidence that can extend itself to include all nations, we have attempted to continue the efforts already initiated toward this end by a candid discussion of the many significant and related international problems, the solution of which have become a recognized necessity.

Want "Completion"

The discussions have embraced subjects of such importance as the present financial crisis, inter-governmental debts, the problems surrounding the limitation and the reduction of armaments, the stabilization of international exchanges, and other vital economic questions.

"We believe that the existing understandings between the principal naval powers can and should be completed and that the general acceptance of the proposal, initiated by Signor Grandi for a one year's armaments truce is indicative of the great opportunity for the achievement of concrete and constructive results presented by the forthcoming conference for limitation of armaments.

"It has not been the purpose of this meeting to reach any particular arrangements, but the informal discussions and exchanges of views have served to clarify many points of mutual interest and have established a sympathetic understanding of our problems. We feel confident that the relationships fostered during this visit will prove valuable in laying the foundations for beneficial action by our respective governments."

Stimson Speaks

After the statement was issued, Secretary Stimson read a brief personal statement in which he described the talks as "both enlightening and helpful."

Speaking extemporaneously in English, slowly weighing each word, the minister also made a personal statement.

"I came to America to learn," he said. "I go back to Italy with something very precious in my spirit. I have learned very much." Speaking of President Hoover he said, "He is a man who impresses everybody and above all, Europeans. He goes forward, straight away to questions."

Later the minister made a radio address.

In this address he urged all nations approach international problems "in a spirit of reciprocal comprehension, of fairness and common sense."

Oklahoma Can Handle Its Relief Problem, Official Says

OKLAHOMA CITY, Nov. 19. (AP)—Oklahoma will care for its own unemployed and destitute this winter without assistance from other states, W. A. Murphy, state labor commissioner, today advised Walter S. Gifford, chairman of President Hoover's national relief committee.

"The situation is much better in Oklahoma than it was a year ago from the standpoint of suffering and privation in small towns and rural districts," Murphy said. "Much unemployment prevails throughout the state. I do not believe outside assistance will be needed."

TEXAS TAKES HUMBLE STOCK

Attachment Move Succeeds In Houston

the Dallas officers found the company headquarters devoid of any stocks that might be attached. The deputy sheriffs learned that the Standard Oil company of New York held all the 1,850,000 shares—with a par value of $100—of the Magnolia Petroleum company except 13 shares which were held by Magnolia directors.

So very regretfully but pleasantly, the officers of Magnolia explained that the stock was not held locally but was held by the Standard Oil of New York. At the Shell offices the officers learned the Shell Union Oil corporation held the stock.

When deputy sheriffs at Houston first went to the Humble offices they were told the officers weren't sure whether they had any shares of stock there. But the persistence of the deputies finally unearthed the stock to be attached.

A fourth writ of attachment was issued against Pasotex Petroleum company, a subsidiary of the Standard Oil company of California. This writ was sent to El Paso to be served.

STATE MAKES NEW MOVE

AUSTIN, Nov. 19. (UP)—The attorney general's office moved this afternoon to reach property of the Standard Oil company of New Jersey, and other defendants in the recent suit claiming $17,850,000 for alleged violation of the state anti-trust law.

Writs of garnishment were applied for against the Magnolia Petroleum company, the Pasotex Petroleum company, the Shell Petroleum corporation and Humble Oil and Refining company commanding them to reveal what money or accounts they have due alleged parent companies.

The department was notified this afternoon that stock of the Humble Oil and Refining company sufficient to cover the maximum judgment possible against Standard Oil of New Jersey in the pending suit, had been attached by Sheriff T. A. Binford at Houston.

Assistant Attorney General Everett Looney said the state has also secured liens against filling station property in various parts of the state that is owned by the organizations sued.

Have you what is commonly called that Tired Feeling?

"Mother, I do wish you were well and strong"

"I just can't go on"—how often you hear this.

So often the reason is simple—that good body of ours has "run-down" under the strain of our way of living . . . pressure of work and worry.

Those important precious red-blood-cells that mean so much to vitality become lowered in count . . . the hemoglobin percentage begins to fall and we wonder "what is the matter."

If this is your trouble, why not take steps to overcome it—remembering that a "tired feeling" may be a warning . . . so are pimples, boils and paleness. A general run-down condition means a lack of normal resistance to infection and disease.

Sometimes it is a lagging appetite that leads to underweight and ill health.

You cannot be low in strength and be happy—let's be happy.

For generations S.S.S. as a tonic has been helping people gain New Strength, better health and happiness. Its successful record of over 100 years in restoring strength and vitality to the blood surely warrants your giving it a good trial.

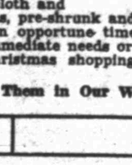

You should know that S.S.S. has the distinct advantage of being composed of fresh vegetable medicinal ingredients in concentrated form . . . it is Mother Nature's formula.

Why not start taking S.S.S. today?—the larger size represents a price saving.

Why you should be interested in your Blood Count

(Left) Microscopic view of healthy red-blood-cells. They carry nourishment and oxygen to every part of the body—they also remove impurities from the tissues.

(Right) Weak red-blood-cells—only 60 per cent of normal strength. Such a condition is often responsible for body weakness, paleness, sallow complexion, pimples and boils.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE— WITHOUT CALOMEL
And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

If you feel sour and sunk and the world looks punk, don't swallow a lot of salts, mineral water, oil, laxative candy or chewing gum and expect them to make you suddenly sweet and buoyant and full of sunshine.

For they can't do it. They only move the bowels and a mere movement doesn't get at the cause. The reason for your down-and-out feeling is your liver. It should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily.

If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You have a thick, bad taste and your breath is foul, skin often breaks out in blemishes. Your head aches and you feel down and out. Your whole system is poisoned.

It takes those good, old CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." They contain wonderful, harmless, gentle vegetable extracts, amazing when it comes to making the bile flow freely.

But don't ask for liver pills. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. Look for the name Carter's Little Liver Pills on the red label. Resent a substitute. 25c at all stores. © 1931 C. M. Co.

SHIP'S CREW HUNTS DOG

Mascot Leaves A. W. O. L. But Is Found

BOSTON, Nov. 19. (AP)—The navy has landed but hasn't the situation very well in hand although Greater Boston will vouch for the fact that they tried hard enough.

It all started when King, a Belgian police dog, got lost. The dog was the mascot of the destroyer U. S. S. Jacob Jones and the personal pet of Commander Robert W. Cary.

King was missed Friday and a quiet search started. Then with the anticipation of sailing orders last night the greatest dog hunt in the history of New England was on.

The entire crew of the destroyer took to shore, three radio stations broadcast descriptions, hundreds of police in nearby towns were enlisted in the search.

Gobs and children swarmed the highways and byways, lured by love of the chase and hope of reward. Dog hospitals were besieged and false clues run down by the dozen.

But with the coming of dawn, King still was a. w. o. l. and the navy had vague fears he had taken one automobile ride too many, for King just doted on motors.

King was lost once before in San Diego and found his way back unaided.

FOOTBALL FAN FINDS MASCOT

WORCESTER, Mass., Nov. 19. (AP)—King, the missing Belgian police dog mascot of the U. S. S. destroyer Jacob Jones at Charlestown navy yard, was located here today safe and sound. King is in the keeping of Edward A. Coyle, who went to the Harvard-Holy Cross football game last Saturday. After the game he found King near his automobile. Mr. Coyle and his party started for a lunch room and King joined them.

The men, noting that his tag was from Los Angeles, believed the dog was lost. They brought him back home with them and Mr. Coyle took personal charge of him. When he read in the papers today about the search the navy was making for King, he called up the navy yard at Charlestown.

17,000 Families Buy Jackson Turkeys in Thanksgiving Pool

Special to The Record News.

ALTUS, Okla., Nov. 19.—Eleven carloads of dressed turkeys from Altus are now on their way to the New York market and will grace the tables in approximately 17,000 homes Thanksgiving day, a survey of shipments made from local railway depots revealed.

Christmas market of turkeys for eastern cities will cause shipments to be made from here during the week of Dec. 7 to 12.

Approximately 35 per cent of the turkeys to be sold in Jackson county this year were put on the Thanksgiving market, a survey revealed. Farmers were paid from 15 to 17 cents per pound for the fowls this month, but due to the larger number expected during the Christmas purchase and because of the shipments in northern states which are always larger for the Christmas holidays, the price may be a little lower in December. The price this year is about equal to that paid one year ago.

Approximately 1,700 turkeys were trucked from Duke in the pool which was organized in the western part of the county this season. The pool paid the farmers 17½ cents per pound.

Turkeys were brought to the local market from a distance of 60 miles in some instances, with several Texas farmers marketing their fowls here. For the most part, however, the turkeys were furnished by Jackson county farmers.

At an average of 1,500 turkeys per car and the average weight per car being 20,000 pounds, a sum of approximately $35,000 was paid for the turkeys which were brought to this city.

Robot Pilot in Bombing Plane Hailed as Key to Next War

NEW YORK, Nov. 19. (AP)—"Big guns!" scoffed Elmer A. Speery Jr. "They'll play a minor role in military tactics of the future. The flying bomb is the thing."

Speery, who at 38 has the enthusiasm of a Stripling, explained today how the robot pilot, developed by his famous father with the admiring son helping, will revolutionize warfare if the world is ever afflicted with another war.

Peacetime Uses

Meanwhile, it is being devoted to peacetime uses. The Eastern Air transport today officially sets it to work flying air liners between New York and the South.

"A flying bomb or aerial torpedo," Speery declared, "is the cheapest way to deliver a ton of explosives to an objective. A gun is the most expensive.

"Say you want to destroy an ammunition depot 500 miles away. A big gun couldn't do it, but an aerial torpedo could. You'd simply fit a cheap plane with a robot pilot and some other gadgets and load it with explosive. Then one dark night, it would take off by itself, with another plane following, controlling it by radio.

Pilot Safe

"When the flying bomb reached the depot, down it would plunge, blowing everything off the map. Then the human pilot could fly back and sit down to breakfast."

The robot pilot, an essential feature of such a bomb, was developed through the years by the elder Sperry who died in 1930. Perfected with the aid of the son, it is in principle very much like another Sperry automatic pilot, called by mariners "Iron Mike," which keeps heavy steamships ploughing a true course for days through the sea.

Artistic Program Features Art Department Meeting

More than 150 members and guests attended the opening meeting of the drama department at the Forum clubhouse Thursday afternoon when one of the most artistic programs of the year was featured in "An Afternoon With Shakespeare." The setting arranged was beautiful with masses of yellow and bronze chrysanthemums in handsome vases against the silver curtain. The music was particularly effective given as in Shakespeare's time back of the curtains.

Mrs. J. T. Harrell made announcements of a three-act play to be given in December which will be open to the public and of two one-act plays that will be presented in January. "The Mollusc" by Hubert Henry Davise, will be the December feature.

Mrs. Harrell gave a beautiful talk introducing Mrs. Charles William Wallace who presided during the program, and after her talk on "Shakespeare, the Man and His Works," gave a brief exposition of each play from which scenes were presented.

Mrs. Wallace said that to some Shakespeare was a man, to some a myth, to some a god and to some a human being. Her talk was so beautifully and vividly given that she took her audience with her on a visit to Shakespeare in his own land, a human being in his beloved England.

The systematic research done by Dr. Wallace was the foundation for a brief history of the Shakespearean theater. Mrs. Wallace spoke of the admiration felt for Shakespeare in his own lifetime, quoting sentences from other poets and writers; she said the psychology of that day was the same as now and the plain people wished to know what was shown in Shakespeare's plays; so it was they who went from the court into the theater. The manner in which the bard, with his historical knowledge and his human insight, made historical people into human beings for posterity was stressed, the marvelous vocabulary of the poet being given credit for the plays and poems of the man through whom we look into souls. Mrs. Wallace's beautiful talk closed with Shakespeare, the poet, to whom she paid a matchless tribute.

A large bouquet of crimson roses presented to the speaker marked the appreciation felt by her audience.

The music given behind the scenes was exquisite. Mrs. J. E. Hall, accompanied by Mrs. W. L. Olmstead, played a violin solo, the garden scene from "Midsummer Nights Dream" (Korngold).

In the "Taming of the Shrew," Miss Eloise Wofford and Henry Barton did some excellent acting in costume. The battle of words ended when Katherine ran from the stage.

Mrs. John Rhea gave the sleep-walking scene from Macbeth, act 5, scene 1, and was magnificent in the presentation. The emotional feeling shown in seemingly exhausted nerves and a heart-broken voice was marvelous.

In "As You Like It," act 4, Mrs. John W. Thomas was very convincing in her transitions and gave a lovely presentation of the scene.

Mrs. E. L. Fulton presented the closing number, the barroom scene from the "Merchant of Venice," act 3, scene 1, and with her splendid voice, her grace and feeling, did marvelous acting.

Mrs. Stanley Raub, accompanied by Mrs. J. W. Akin Jr., sang "Hark, Hark, the Lark," between the "Macbeth" and "As You Like It" scenes, and probably her voice has never been more mellow and sweet than when it came softly from back of the silver curtain.

The program was arranged by Mrs. E. L. Fulton, drama department chairman, assisted by Mrs. J. T. Harrell, chairman of arrangements, and a committee including Mesdames John Thomas, Harry Fuller, J. A. Heyman, Misses Jeannette Moore and Edna Prechel.

Hostesses were Mesdames N. H. Martin, W. W. Cook, James Oakley, J. E. Heyman, Harry Fuller, Porter Oakes, Ed Bristol, and Misses Mary Hamilton, Edna Prechel and Jeannette Moore.

PEEPS AT PEOPLE

By MRS. L. N. CASON

The conversation turned on painting. "This amateur art," said the woman to whom I was talking, "is the greatest crime there is." "What about amateur poetry?" I asked. "Oh, you can shut up a book and put it away, but it is terribly hard to get rid of a picture. If your friend paints one and gives it to you, you have to put it where it shows."

Memory of paintings I did in college kept me from arguing. They went their way from parlor to basement or attic and what their fate finally became, I do not know. I have a spinster aunt who fell heir to a robust view of mountains in Switzerland, a little sail far out on a blue lake and a romantic castle melting into impossible clouds, and never can I visit that aunt without some one reminding me of my artistic career.

The discussion came up when I announced that I had been invited to have my portrait painted—from a photograph. The only photograph I have is one made some 12 years ago and it is so handsome that no one recognizes it as me.

"What would you do with a portrait of yourself?" some one asked. "Do you remember—," speaking of a portrait of this and of that lady which we had seen in company. And we wondered together what had become of these paintings. My friend gave me one last word of caution. "Whatever you do," she warned, "if you have your portrait painted, do not wear a hat and be sure to hide your hands."

I gasped as I glanced at my hands, and she giggled, dignified as she is. "Hands are the hardest of all things to paint," she explained; "even Sargent could not do them well." So, not thinking much of my hands anyway, I decided definitely never to have them painted. As to a hat, I haven't a new hat. Of course, I would not have a last year's hat painted. They pass out of style too soon when you can talk fast enough to take a person's mind off them. Too many out of date hats are immortalized in art.

I wish I were one of those for- tunate persons who takes a nice picture. That means I wish I were one of the persons whom photography flatters. I do not want a picture exactly like myself.

But, while on the subject, I would raise my voice in protest against the so-called "lessons" in art in which the pupil is taught to do portraits. Flowers are such beautiful things. Landscapes furnish hazy atmosphere, distant beauty; even this morning, driving out Harrison, I saw something that would make the fortune of the artist who could catch it—a building entirely covered with blue morning glories. They come in the autumn in such celestial coloring.

Of the forms lately, there were little fields of bluebonnets; there were beautiful still life studies with bowls and blossoms and shawls and jewels making dreams of beauty.

I have a private conviction that anything to be worth while, must be beautiful. Not always physically, but always possessing some beautiful quality—spiritual, mental or moral. If I lived up to my convictions, I would never utter anything but beautiful things.

These artists who are lovers of beauty but not quite up to doing portraits—might catch the color of a blossom or make you almost feel the sweet atmosphere that pervades the earth in the haze of an Indian summer day.

Alamo Mothers Study 'Child and Parent'

Mrs. C. C. Jones was hostess to members of the Alamo P.-T. A. Study club at their first meeting Thursday morning when Mrs. Val Land and Mrs. Jones gave papers prepared after study of the parental education letters by Dr. Garry Cleveland Myers.

"If parents are wise," Mrs. Land said, "they discuss and plan the habits and attitudes they wish to form in the child as he grows mentally and physically."

"Helping Our Children to Succeed in School by Constructive Parenthood," was the subject of an instructive paper given by Mrs. Jones, leader of the Study club.

Definite cases of the different types of children were brought out in a round table discussion.

Members present were Mesdames Herbert Gray, C. W. Clark, C. R. Lenphere, Val Land, Ralph Pond W. J. Burt, P. L. Fischer and C. C. Jones.

The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. C. C. Jones, 707 Baylor on Thursday morning, Dec. 10, from 10 to 11 o'clock. Any one interested in this child study will be welcome.

Pieria Members Enjoy Program And Luncheon

Members of the Pieria club celebrated one of their three yearly guest days Wednesday with a lovely luncheon at the home of Mrs. P. R. Freeman on Tilden with the program on Rome following. A yellow and green color scheme was noted in flowers and other decorations. The dining table was colorful with candles and holders in the green and yellow and a large green crystal bowl filled with yellow chrysanthemums. Small vases filled with the yellow flowers centered each of the smaller tables where the delicious buffet luncheon was served.

The program opened with roll call answered by the names of Roman statesmen and Mrs. Thomas D. Moore conducted a clever parliamentary drill and also read a paper on "The Transition From the Republic to the Empire." Mrs. W. F. Newberry discussed the always dramatic "Revolution Under the Gracchi," and Miss Clara Schuls directed the program and led the discussion on the character of Julius Caesar.

"Safety-Sealed" FOR FLAVOR-PROTECTION

Still roaster-fresh after 110-day trip Round the World!

M·J·B—America's only "Safety-Sealed" coffee . . . subjected to ever-changing temperatures at 22 world ports, remains as fresh as the day it was packed!

Impartial experts comparing taste of freshly roasted coffee with coffee that has been Round the World. Left to right: Prof. W. W. Ogier, Jr., Calif. Institute of Technology; Genevieve Callahan, Editor, Sunset Magazine; Chef La Faille, St. Francis Hotel, San Francisco.

When the "President Fillmore" of the Dollar Line recently left San Francisco six tins of M·J·B Coffee were placed on board.

Japan, China, the Philippines, Egypt, Italy, France, Panama Canal, were a few of the places visited on this 110-day globe-circling voyage.

What would be the condition of this coffee after such a rigorous test? A committee of three impartial experts was asked to make the decision.

The verdict—"Fresh as the moment it was packed; all the original rich flavor still there."

Such flavor protection is found only in M·J·B, which is the only coffee with its own can factory and its own vacuum process.

This exclusive process—the "Safety-Seal"—automatically prevents closing unless all air is removed. And because "Safety-Sealing" takes so much more air out, M·J·B alone, of all coffees, must have a strengthening band around the center of the tin. No other coffee offers you all these advantages.

Ask for M·J·B. Look at the tin. See the difference in packing methods. Then taste the difference in freshness and flavor.

M·J·B COFFEE

BABY FRETFUL, RESTLESS?

Look to this cause—

Does your baby have nights when he fusses, tosses and seems unable to go quickly, quietly to sleep? Look for one common cause, doctors say. A constipated condition.

To get rid quickly of accumulated wastes which cause restlessness and discomfort, nothing is better than genuine time-proven Castoria.

Castoria, you know, is made specially for children's delicate needs. It is a pure vegetable preparation; contains no harsh drugs, no narcotics of any kind.

It is mild and gentle enough to relieve a young infant's colic pains, yet is an effective regulator for children of school age.

When your baby is upset and unable to sleep, or has a little cold or fever, it is a wise precaution to give him the gentle but sure regulative help of Castoria. With regulation come relaxed comfort and restful sleep.

Keep a bottle always on hand. Children like the taste of real Castoria—which always has the name, Chas. H. Fletcher, on the package.

Submit your queries to the staff of experts whose services are put at your free disposal. There is no charge except two cents in coin or stamps for return postage. Address the Record News information bureau, Frederic J. Haskin, director, Washington, D. C.

Q.—Why isn't Al Capone deported?—E. A. C.

A.—He is not an alien. He was born in the United States.

Q.—Has there ever been a running race in which horses tied for first place?—D. R. S.

A.—There have been several. One of the most famous dead heats on record was in a race at Newmarket, England, Oct. 22, 1885. Four horses in a field of five tied for first place. During the week ending Oct. 17, of this year, Sir Jonathan and Oil Queen ran a dead heat at Jamaica.

Q.—How many bottles of soft drinks were sold in the United States last year?—C. M.

A.—It is estimated as the equivalent of 12,480,000,000 half pints. This is slightly less than the amount sold in 1929, but about the same as the consumption in 1928.

Q.—What is the name of the part of the cigar cut or bitten off before smoking?—W. L. S.

A.—It is called the tip. That part is put on as a protection to the filler tobacco, but has to be removed in order for the cigar to draw.

Q.—When is Book Week? What value does its sponsors claim for it?—H. B.

A.—It begins Nov. 15. Its object is to stimulate the reading of books.

Q.—What was the total number of flyers belonging to the Lafayette Escadrille during the world war and how many were killed?—G. A.

A.—The total number was 210. Of these 65 died and 19 were wounded.

Q.—How many elevators has the Empire State building?—F. H.

A.—It has 68 elevators with automatic starting and stopping devices and nine additional elevators for use in the top seven stories and the tower for freight. Two local cars provide service between the 86th and 86th floors.

Q.—Was George Washington a highly educated man?—L. L.

A.—He was not. Writing of Washington, Corbin says: "His interest in popular education was no less ardent than was Jefferson's and took on a peculiar quality from the fact that he thought of himself always as one of the uneducated. His solicitude for the schools of Virginia and for a national university is expressed in many eloquent and noble passages and in liberal bequests."

Q.—Do the United States and France use the same flags on ships which they use on shore?—C. A.

A.—The stars and stripes of the United States are used on men-of-war and ships of the merchant marine. France also uses but one flag, the tricolor.

Q.—Are "fairy stones" actually found, or are they manufactured in the cross form?—J. W. R.

A.—They are found in cross form in their natural state. The stones are a mineral hydrated iron-aluminum silicate in the orthorhombic system. They have a subvitreous to resinous lustre and are brown or black in color. The crystalline varieties are frequently cruciform, owing to twinning. The proper name for such stone is saurolite, which is a combination of two Greek words meaning cross and stone.

Q.—Where is the Levant?—A. P.

A.—The term refers to the countries washed by the eastern part of the Mediterranean and its contiguous waters. It formerly referred to the orient or the East, but this meaning is now obsolete.

The Record News Offers A Booklet on Fish And Seafoods

Twenty billion pounds of fish are taken from the sea every year and many more millions of pounds from rivers, creeks, lakes and ponds. The annual take for the United States and Alaska is estimated at three billion pounds, so it is seen that this country has proportionately its full share of this delicious and healthful food supply. However, more Americans would eat more fish if they knew more about the food, and to this end the Record News is offering its readers an illustrated booklet that contains a wealth of information.

A copy of this booklet will be sent to any address. Fill out the coupon below and enclose 10 cents in coin or stamps to cover cost and postage.

An Indian agent says Indians on reservations run to the superintendent every time they have a squabble with the wife. Of course, that's too often.

Trend of Literature

A LIST was compiled the other day of the best sellers of the last 30 years. It reveals much about the trend of American life. Back in 1902 "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch" was a well known literary figure. She lived in a simple, homely story. There was something refreshing about her. And when "The Little Shepherd of Kingdom Come" left home in 1904 with only his dog to trail him across the mountains he had a wet-eyed audience. That same tearful influence went along the trail of the Lonesome Pine when June went back to remember her lost romance. It predominated when Garth went blind in "The Rosary."

Books were simple. They dealt with emotions that hadn't acquired a veneer of sophistication. Life wasn't complex in those tales. For the most part books were erected on love and sacrifice and honor. If an author could make his readers weep he had done much.

But another influence crept in just before 1915. Industry was growing larger. It was fast becoming a predominating force in American social life. And since literature follows life, it became the skeleton for fiction plots as well.

Booth Tarkington used it in "The Turmoil." Smoky skies of American cities were as interesting as the drama of love over which two young people fought on a more or less industrial basis.

But "Seventeen" was a return to pure, unalloyed enjoyment of the wistfulness that goes with youth. It was life itself, unhampered by outside restriction. Life at 17. And it was lovely.

And then suddenly literature wasn't afraid to look at the hidden side of life. It decided not only to talk about the things that people do, and their consequences, but to give the reasons for the actions. It grew introspective. It criticized when it felt like it. It caricatured.

Instead of telling a story about a certain group of people it chose cross-sections of life itself. It had a lesson to teach. The fact that John married Mary was interesting but not important. Quite probably John didn't. And if he did he and Mary were just as likely to have wished that they hadn't.

"Main Street," "Elmer Gantry," "If Winter Comes," "So Big" . . . The list began to look as though the authors were living intensively as well as extensively. Best sellers had outgrown their growing pains. They weren't afraid to talk about the symptoms of life.

And literature, while it may not be as quietly enjoyable, is considerably more instructive. That is—if you want to be instructed.

Abolishing Mexico's Navy

A RECENT dispatch from Mexico City indicates that the Mexican government is considering abandoning its navy entirely. The present fleet, composed of an assortment of cruisers and old gunboats, is expensive to maintain, and its officers, in the past, have not been free from a tendency to mix in the revolutions which have disturbed the country so greatly.

But it would hardly be correct to say that abandonment of the navy would represent a step toward disarmament. After all, Mexico has very little need for a navy, and the Mexican government is simply recognizing the fact. The great grey fleets of Uncle Sam, odious as a patriotic Mexican occasionally finds them, are, in a very real sense, Mexico's ocean defense. No major power will ever be permitted to attack Mexico as long as those fleets exist. Why should Mexico bother to maintain a small and inefficient navy of her own?

Paying Your Taxes

MR. AVERAGE CITIZEN, who groans deeply whenever he has to pay his taxes, might be interested in this little story about a Japanese truck gardener living near San Diego, Calif.

This Japanese had four children, all of whom went to school. That seemed to him an inestimable privilege; so, one day recently, he called at the office of the local school board and amazed the members by handing them $100 as a free-will offering—an expression of his appreciation of the blessings of government. To be sure, he was already a taxpayer, doing his full share toward supporting the school system. But he felt impelled to show his gratitude more amply.

This little story points its own moral. How many of us, who pay our taxes with reluctance, ever stop to think of all that our tax money buys us?

EXPLANATION OF YESTERDAY'S CARTOON

A MACHINE THAT CAN TASTE FOOD—Whatis believed to be the world's first electrical taster is used by the Birdseye development laboratories of the General Foods corporation to test the freshness of liquid foods. The device resembles a small portable radio set. It consists of a few dials and a gauge, which registers the resistance of the liquid to electricity, and eliminates the human equation in tasting. So far the taster has been applied only to liquid foods, but its inventor hopes to make it applicable to solid foods as well.

THE SIX LONG WORDS—The six longest words mean: Honorificabilitudinitatibus, a man of honorableness (Shakespearean creation); velocipedestrianistical, pertaining to fast walking; transubstantiationableness, the possibility of bread and wine changing into the body and blood of Christ (Roman Catholic doctrine); transubstantiationalists, advocates of the above doctrine, proantisubstantiationalists, one who favors the antagonists of this doctrine, inanthropomorphisability, the theory dealing with the divine inability of assuming human form.

Gloria Swanson's Love Story

Beery And Somborn Win And Lose Her

Here is the second chapter in the fascinating love story of Gloria Swanson, famous film star, who recently "defied the world" by becoming a bride for the fourth time.

In her first installment Miss Louella Parsons, who has known Gloria since the days the famous actress was an extra on the movie lots, told of her girlhood and how so often she has been referred to as in love with love.

The loves of Gloria are revealed individually.

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
(Copyright 1931 by Universal Service, Inc.)

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 19.—Gloria Swanson's adoration of Wallace Beery didn't last long. Many reasons have been advanced. Those who are unkind to Gloria say her chief interest in him had been in his power and his ability to give her a chance on the screen. Once in Hollywood she learned she could progress without the aid of her husband. Wallace didn't go far at the Sennett studio but Gloria did.

The tables were turned. Where once she had been dependent upon Mr. Beery she now learned she didn't need him. Mack Sennett on the outlook for beauty for his bathing girls, met Wallace Beery's wife. She was comely, she had a good figure and she had potential possibilities as an actress.

"Come and see me," Mack said to young Mrs. Beery. "I may be able to put you in a picture."

Gloria, you may be sure, lost no time in going to see the man who at that moment was the greatest comedy producer in the world. Mack's experienced eyes saw that he had a find in the bride of his new comedian. He forgot Mr. Beery and, instead, concentrated on his wife.

In less than three months Gloria Swanson was a recognized bathing beauty. What of the husband? Wallace was out in the cold. Dismissed from the studio he was looking for a job. It was the old story. They parted.

Her version of the story is that Wallace collected her salary. His that she grew tired of him. "Gloria is a great girl," he once told me, "but I guess I wasn't enough of a gentleman for her."

Having known Wallace Beery for 20 years I resent that implication. He may be a diamond in the rough but he is enough of a gentleman for any woman, even a great movie star like La Belle Swanson.

However, I am not taking sides. Usually it takes two to bring about a divorce.

Free of Wallace Beery, Gloria began to have social ambitions. In Pasadena at that time there lived a young millionaire named Craney Gartz. He became intensely interested in the grey-eyed young woman whose haughty demeanor never left her. He showered her with attention. A serious rival, none other than Marshall Neilan, successful director of Mary Pickford pictures, loomed on the horizon.

Rivals Kept Guessing

Gloria kept both of them guessing. Mr. Gartz because of his social position, Mickey Neilan because of his unfailing sense of humor and Mickey was a director, too, and Gloria had previously found a director valuable. Just as the situation was becoming a trifle difficult, she was introduced to Herbert Somborn.

The meeting took place at a preview. Sid Grauman, Hollywood's most famous impresario, introduced Miss Swanson to Mr. Somborn who had often admired her from afar. Herb, who now owns the chain of Brown Derby restaurants, eating places for filmland, fell at once for the movie beauty.

Never Ignored Love

Gloria didn't, at first, encourage the young man who was at that time head of Equity pictures. I don't want to say that in this young film producer Gloria saw a chance for further screen advancement, ambitious though she has always been, Gloria has not ignored love. She married Herbert Somborn Dec. 20, 1919.

The Christmas day spent with his bride is probably the happiest yuletide Herbert Somborn remembers. He adored his beautiful young wife and did everything to advance her. She was kind and considerate and everything a wife should be. When, a few months later, she told him that she was about to become a mother, life was perfect.

During the months of her approaching motherhood Miss Swanson was docile and sweet. A little later Gloria, the second, made her appearance and no man in all the band and father and no woman world was happier than the husmore delighted than the young mother.

As soon as Miss Swanson was able to be up and about she began to think about her career again. Mr. Somborn who had Clara Kimball Young and other screen favorites under contract, told his wife that he had great plans for her. At that time she was making $350 a week. Her husband kept his word and as her manager acted in an advisory capacity when she finally signed a contract with Paramount.

Gloria's salary jumped from $350 a week to $3,500 and her tastes soared correspondingly.

Luxuries Come

Maids, jewels, expensive clothes, all entered the picture. Cecil de Mille created on the screen a woman who wore bizarre costumes and whose headdresses were the talk of the world.

Gloria Swanson in real life imitated the exotic celluloid figure of the movies. With all this new wealth and position Gloria now pointed out by shop girls, began to feel restless and to look for new worlds to conquer.

Mr. Somborn who has never spoken of his former wife unkindly and who has paid her the tribute of being the best mother in the world, refuses to say what brought about the trouble. His only comment is that Gloria sought her freedom because she felt a husband would be a handicap.

"I must have my freedom," she told her husband. "I am an actress and if I choose to dine with some one else I must not be hindered. If I am to go on and on I must live my own life."

Somborn Stays Single

He has never married again and Gloria Swanson, to this day, stands on a pedestal in his eyes. He is free to see his little daughter whenever he chooses and he told me that his former wife has gone out of her way to let him see little Gloria who is now a tall, beautiful girl of 11.

With all the talk of Gloria's many loves and her consuming ambition, one thing must be said for her. She has never neglected her children. The welfare of Gloria, her own daughter, and Joseph, her adopted son, has always come first. She has never permitted her children to figure in the publicity sent out about her. Little Gloria's picture has never appeared in any newspaper.

The little girl is a charming child, cultured, gentle and refined. Gloria Swanson has done a beautiful job in rearing her. Equally well brought up is Joseph who has shared his foster sister's love from the day he was taken into the Swanson home a mere babe. Gloria adopted him because she wanted her daughter to have a companion.

More Luxuries

With money to spend on clothes, Gloria went social. There were liveried butlers, chauffeurs and maids until the Swanson home was managed like that of a royal personage. There was no thought of a possible rainy day. Money was meant to be kept in circulation.

No multimillionaire ever had finer jewels, or more dazzling clothes or a more pretentious menage. Much has been said about the dozens of servants who answered telephones and doorbells before the lady herself could be reached.

This splendor was doubled after Miss Swanson became the Marquise de la Falise de Coudray—but I am getting ahead of my story.

After her divorce Gloria made up her mind to enjoy her freedom. Her house was filled with gay company. Marshall Neilan again entered into the picture. Other young men paid court to the lovely lady whose fame was now international.

Paramount, delighted with the popularity of their star, planned much for her. Madame Sans Gene, the famous French washerwoman who later became a favorite at the French court, was the subject chosen. Forrest Halsey wrote the story. Nothing would do but that the picture be made in Paris.

One happy day, Gloria surrounded by scores of New York society folk sailed away, literally in a blaze of glory. But when she came home, oh me, oh my—triumph was hers. The wooing of the American cinema star by a title was her next achievement.

(The third chapter of the story of Gloria Swanson's loves will be published tomorrow).

GOP WET PUTS CARDS DOWN

Maryland Senator Says Evasion Is Craven

WASHINGTON, Nov. 19. (AP)—The only avowed opponent of President Hoover for the 1932 Republican presidential nomination said today an attempt to win the election "fraudulently" by an evasion of the prohibition question is "craven and dishonorable."

Joseph Irwin France, former Republican senator from Maryland, made that assertion in a letter to Chairman Fess of the Republican national committee, an outspoken dry.

"If we are for the 18th amendment," France wrote, "let us be pledged to defend and enforce it. If we are opposed to it let us stand openly for repeal.

"I shall have no part in countenancing an attempt, by our party, to sneak and steal into office with an unlabeled keg on each shoulder, with a sly wink to the wets that it is all wind and a nod to the drys that it is all water, while in reality it is a keg of rum on one shoulder for those who drink wet and on the other a nominal dry law, not to be enforced, to placate those who drink dry."

Sunset News

Special to The Record News.

SUNSET, Texas, Nov. 19.—C. A Brian, a farmer west of here, is slowly recovering from a serious illness with which he has been afflicted for more than two weeks. By mistake, Mr. Brian took a dose of the wrong sort of medicine and for a few days it threatened to prove fatal.

Rev. Calvin Dennis of Marysville, Okla., occupied the pulpit at the Sunset Baptist church Sunday morning and evening.

A violent rain and windstorm struck here between 12 and 1 o'clock Monday night, but the damage done by it was light. A few sheds and outbuildings were damaged, many shocks of feed in fields were blown over and cotton was damaged some. The rain was heavy enough to put a good season into the ground but was not sufficient to overflow the creeks.

An afternoon song service was attended by a large number of visitors here Sunday. Several Montague, Wise and Tarrant county classes were represented by leading singers. Mr. Byrd, president of Tarrant county singing convention, was present and was accompanied by other leading singers. A quartet from Bowie entertained the audience with several songs. Many other good leaders and singers took an active part in the service.

The pecan crop is very light here this year. Some trees made a very good yield while many others in the same orchard made almost nine. There are many small pecan orchards in Sandy and Brushy creek valleys in this section.

A fifth Sunday singing convention will be held here at the Sunset Baptist church, Sunday, Nov 29. A large number of special singers and class leaders are expected to be in attendance.

Lowell Paid by Harvard, College Head Declares

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 19. (AP)—Published reports that President A. Lawrence Lowell of Harvard university had never collected his salary since assuming office in 1909 were officially denied today.

Richard K. Lamb, secretary for information at Harvard, said President Lowell had received his salary checks regularly and had cashed them.

"I hope it will be borne in mind, however, that President Lowell has given Harvard much more than he has taken in salary," Lamb said in furnishing the denial.

Colorado Prohibition Work to Get Probe

DENVER, Nov. 19. Smith, 20-year-old Englewood, Colo., youth.

Smith died from injuries received in an altercation with Henry Dierks, federal prohibition agent when they scuffled over three ounces of wine in an Englewood hamburger stand.

COLDS THAT DEVELOP INTO PNEUMONIA

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action: It soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory for the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold, no matter of how long standing, is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (adv.)

Misdirected Pioneer Energies Blamed by Hyde for Oversupply

CHICAGO, Nov. 19. (UP)—Misdirected energies of pioneers brought the present problem of overproduction that can be solved only by an all-inclusive farmer's organization, Arthur M. Hyde, secretary of agriculture, declared today.

Hyde spoke at the opening session of the three-day land utilization conference of the association of land grant colleges. The conference of farmers, bankers, economists, business men and public officials was called to consider a national policy of land utilization.

"The old peaceful days when farming was a way of living rather than a means of making a living are over," Hyde said. "Agriculture has become an industry.

"The cure for overproduction is production balanced to market demand. It can be achieved through farmer-owned, farmer-controlled cooperative associations."

Hyde pointed to "the certain tragedy" that results when men attempt to farm land which refuses to yield a reasonable standard of living.

"We ask the farmer to adjust his acreage," Hyde said. "His is a difficult job, if forces beyond his control are constantly enlarging the total acreage to which he must adjust his own."

Woman Juror Admits She Had Worked for Defendant in Suit

MINNEAPOLIS, Nov. 19. (AP)—Mrs. Genevieve A. Clark, only woman juror in the W. B. Foshay mail fraud trial which ended in a jury disagreement, admitted today she was a former employe of the Foshay company during testimony in her own defense in contempt of court proceedings against her.

She said her employment lasted only 10 days and that she had not recalled it when examined for jury sercie in the trial which resulted in discharge of the jurors after more than a week of deliberation with Mrs. Clark insisting on acquittal of Foshay and six co-defendants. Other jurors, all men, favored conviction.

She denied flatly statement of government witnesses when its case was presented more than a week ago that the day she was selected she had expressed herself as "praying to get on a jury for special reasons."

Mrs. Clark said she began jury service with an open mind on the subject of the guilt or innocence of the defendants who will be retried starting Jan. 11.

Mrs. Clark said she had been anxious to serve on the jury only because it would be "a new experience."

Twice-a-day gargle with LISTERINE reduces severity of colds, also their number

KILLS GERMS YET HEALS TISSUE

Wouldn't you like to feel that you've got a chance of heading off colds entirely or cutting down their number?

Wouldn't you like to feel that even if you do catch cold it may prove slight instead of serious?

If so, we say to you: Make a habit of gargling twice a day with full-strength Listerine, the safe antiseptic. Its preventive action, while not infallible, produces amazing results.

Tests on 204 people show that those who used Listerine twice a day contracted only one-half as many colds—and often one-third as many—as those who did not gargle with it at all.

And that even when colds were contracted they lasted only one-third as long and were one-fourth as severe as colds contracted by non-garglers.

Such results are due to Listerine's ability to immediately kill germs without harming the delicate tissues of the mouth. The fact that Listerine's action is healing to tissue instead of irritating recommends its use over harsh mouth washes so dangerous they must be diluted before they dare be used.

Make a habit of gargling with full-strength Listerine twice a day. It helps to fight infection and at the same time puts your breath beyond reproach. Lambert Pharmacal Co., St. Louis, Mo., U. S. A.

Choose Mouth Washes Carefully

Some watered—Others dangerous

Of 203 mouth washes submitted to laboratory examination, 94 were non-antiseptic, 107 could not kill germs in 3 minutes, 143 could not kill in one minute, others were so harsh they were dangerous to tissue, dozens had no deodorant effect whatever.

CHAPTER I

They were the last of the Ashes, Stephen Ashe and his daughter, Jan.

And the Ashes, as everybody in San Francisco knows, were extraordinary people; blue blood it was, but hot blood, too. Bad blood, some people said, for all the brain and charm it produced. So that it was not altogether necessary to account for Jan Ashe entirely by her extraordinary bringing-up. She had heritage of many sorts; from that old pirate of a sea captain, who had sailed bellowing around the Horn and found the family; and from her grandfather, the silver-tongued senator, with his fast horses and famous cellar; and from her father, who was the greatest criminal lawyer the West had ever known.

Upon the history of every city are written certain names which have to do not only with that city's early struggles and later glory, but with adventures, with sensations, with scandals, with daring and dangerous deeds of all kinds.

In San Francisco the name of Ashe was writ large not only in the social register, but upon every page of fight, deviltry, and achievement its scribes had recorded.

One branch of the family had remained with the sea and founded a great oriental shopping company. The Ashe name had died out there, and the interests had recently passed into the hands of a daughter's son, whose name was Martin.

The other branch had settled upon San Francisco's seven sandy hills and in time produced the great senator, Stephen's father, whose judgment in statesmanship was almost as good as in the matter of Bourbon and the value of two pair before the draw.

They had made no great fortune, fame luring them always more than wealth, and what they did make they spent in no mean fashion, so that the family fortune had dwindled until it meant nothing by modern standards; but that in no way affected the traditions that clung to them and which so splendidly backgrounded Stephen Ashe's fame.

The two branches belonged to the same clan socially, but they were not friendly. Martin refused to worship at the shrine of Stephen Ashe, and old Deborah, Stephen's mother, who was head of the family, treated him coldly in consequence.

Within the family mansion, which stood on Van Ness avenue not far from the cathedral, lived Mrs. Deborah Beecher Ashe, widow of Senator Ashe. The house was one of the few stately structures in that region left standing by the fire. Shops and automobile agencies crowded it close on every side, in the years just before and after the great exposition of 1915, but it looked out upon the world with undisturbed and self satisfied grandeur. For though the fashionable of San Francisco had forsaken Van Ness avenue as old Mrs. Ashe herself had once forsaken Nob Hill, the chariots of the elect still stopped before her door. Her rigid exclusiveness and a cool, unvarying majesty of demeanor never allowed anyone to forget that, before becoming an Ashe, she had been a Beecher of Boston.

"Maybe it would have been better if I'd had a little more Beecher," Jan once said to her father, rather pensively. But he only laughed at her.

Old Mrs. Ashe lived alone now, for her two daughters were married, Dorothea to a Joliffe of Burlingame, and Grace to a high-church Episcopal rector, thus striking a happy balance of worldly and spiritual success, and Stephen Ashe persisted in living with Jan at the St. Francis. But the house was there, with its austere old mistress, representative of that prestige and power belonging by divine right to the Ashe name, which had reached its zenith in Stephen.

For those were the days when Stephen Ashe served all San Francisco as an idol—the world of fashion and the underworld of crime, the little circle of those who read only the newspapers. The days when there hung about him the superstition that he was the one lawyer who could not lose a case, when every one from the waterfront to the Presidio knew that he could make a jury believe that black was white, and often did.

On a certain Sunday at the ball park, when Casey started after the umpire with a bat, the bleachers rose behind him as a man and roared encouragingly, "Go ahead and kill him, Casey. We'll get Steve Ashe to defend you." Steve Ashe in a box with the kid beside him—seldom separated were Steve Ashe and his daughter Jan—had smiled almost shyly in acknowledgment. Things like that pleased him.

Nothing, it seems, will ever dim the name of Stephen Ashe for Californians. Even now, if you mention to them his failings, they will merely agree absent-mindedly, prior to telling you some startling tale of him, such as the one about the long war.

They will tell you that there are no lawyers like Stephen Ashe any more, and that criminal lawyers today are mostly a lot of cheap shysters who get their cases by cutting fees with the deputy sheriffs in the county jail, and so do not care very much whether they win or lose them, if they but be paid. They will point to the latest conviction and tell you that Steve Ashe would have got that darn thing dismissed at the preliminary. They will, in addition, bemoan the fact that lawyers are no longer scrappers and they will describe how Steve Ashe fought for the life of his client as though it had been his own.

"Eighty-six murder cases," they will say, "and not a conviction. That's some record."

The man had, indeed, an irresistible personality, he had a glittering brain, and he had a spectacular sense of drama—he dramatized everything he touched—and of such stuff idols are made. He was always a remarkable man. Not the least remarkable thing about him was his daughter.

To people who saw her later on, the picture of Jan Ashe between the two men persist—between her father and Ace Wilfong. Slim, arrogant, with a head like a candle-flame, between the two dark and lean and dangerous men who were so strangely alike. These two men who loved her—but men have strange ways of loving.

As a matter of fact, the first time Jan Ashe ever saw Ace Wilfong—and that is where this story properly commences—she was only 7, a skinny little kid in a fuzzy tam; and Ace was only 12; and Stephen Ashe was upon the topmost pinnacle of his fame. The odd thing is how they never forgot each other, those two, meeting namelessly like that, as kids.

Who knows when the spark of love is struck and waits its time for bursting into flame? Or who knows how early or upon what different soils the seed of love may fall, and there grow secretly until its blooming? Certainly little Jan Ashe knew naught of these things.

It seemed to her only that the little boy she saw standing in the doorway of their private dining room at Tait's, with his rags, and his shaggy, short curls, and his bare brown legs, and his basket of those fragrant violets that are so much a part of San Francisco, was exactly like the ragged little shepherd boy in her fairy-tale books, who came to woo the princess. She carried that picture as one of the vivid memories of her vivid childhood. And for years afterwards, Jan Ashe never saw the heaps of violets under their bright umbrellas, nor caught the wave of perfume they dashed into her face, without thinking of him, which was just as silly as for the princess to think of the shepherd boy.

CHAPTER II

That first meeting, which was very important though nobody had the slightest idea of it at the time, came about like this.

Little Jacky Wilfong of Telegraph Hill was selling papers in front of the College Inn. He was not Ace Wilfong as yet. The ace was conferred in time as a reward of merit, since it is not every man who can always get an ace when he needs one.

There were four of the Wilfong boys, and they were all as thoroughgoing young devils as the town could boast. Only Jacky had acquired a reputation for being square that was never to leave him. His 12-year-old word was good with any number of people, which was more than could be said for any one else in the family.

Not that old Smoke Wilfong had been so bad. The whole thing was that a man who has been prize hunter on one of the best ships in the Pacific whaling fleet for many years is not apt to fit easily into life on land.

Of course Wilfong was not his name. He had sailed from Sweden in his youth with one quite different. But under stress of circumstances in a Chinese port he had been obliged to abandon it and grab the first one handy. And under that one he met and married Bridget O'Neil in San Francisco, and attempted to settle down. But he was unhappy, and in consequence his temper was uneven. Since Bridget was by no means a woman to be put upon, the Wilfong household was often tumultuous. The seas called Smoke continually and there was something inevitable about his ultimate disappearance.

So the Wilfong kids sold papers.

"And a more mixed-up litter there never was," said Bridget with her big laugh. "They looked like a basket of stray kittens."

And they did, rather. For Pat, the oldest, was freckled and red-headed. His ambition was to be a prize-fighter, and in time he got as far as an occasional semi-wind-up.

After Pat, came Jacky himself. Jacky of the thick, rough black curls, which were never combed, of the twinkling, wide-apart black eyes, of the engaging smile. When he sold papers in front of the College Inn he had never owned a hat, and ladies who bought from him looked into that brown, eager face and forgot to ask for change, although it cannot be truthfully chronicled that Jacky was either very clean or very polite.

He wore, habitually, a dark blue jersey, which should have been honorably retired from service but was not, because after all it is better that a man should be partially clothed than not clothed at all; a pair of nether garments for which the word pants was coined; some ancient sneakers, and nothing else whatever.

As for his vocabulary, it made up in pungency and brevity what it lacked in grammar and delicacy. He had invneted a game with the men that was almost as profitable as his smile was with the women. He would hold out the latest baseball extra and say, "Quarter or nothing—I'll call it." And the man with a grin would slap a quarter against his hand, and Jacky would say solemnly "Heads" or "Tails" as the spirit moved him, and his luck was with him even then.

Jacky had been followed in rapid succession by Eric, blond as a Viking, by Bill who was squat and nondescript and Jack's shadow, and by Gwennie, the only girl in the family.

Red-headed, too, was Gwennie, and her skin was thin and white, and her eyes were light blue and quick as darting swallows. An inquisitive nose, that thin nose of Gwennie's, and a sensitive, envious mouth, her thin, red mouth. The neighbors on Telegraph Hill used to tell Mrs. Wilfong Gwennie was refined looking.

Being the only girl had won her nothing, for every one was too busy to spoil her, and Mrs. Wilfong, personally, was not greatly interested in her. It had surprised her when she happened to have a girl, and being used to boys she felt awkward with a puny girl-child, she said. Besides, said Bridget, boys grew up and looked after themselves, but girls had to be looked after. Her efforts to look after Gwennie usually ended in flood or battle.

Jacky was sorry for his sister. Instinctively he felt the roots of deep longings and strange discontents gnawing at her. What he did not realize then, or ever, was how clever she was.

Thus the Wilfong family existed, nay, throve.

And upon certain evenings it was Jack's custom, when the trade in afternoon papers slacked as darkness crept over the city, to take a large brown basket of violets and make the rounds of certain exclusive cafes, such as Solari's and Tait's and Blanco's and the Bismarck and the Poodle Dog.

In one of these he stopped outside a little curtained booth and waited until the laughter within had died down. His face caught some of the gaiety, for they seemed to be having a very good time. When there was a little pause, he said "Violets?" and went in.

At the table sat two men and a very pretty lady of the sort that Jacky often saw in the cafes where he sold violets, and a little girl, 7 or 8 maybe, about the age of his sister Gwennie.

When he realized that one of the men was Stephen Ashe, his heart turned over. For Stephen Ashe was his idol. Why, he always read every word of Stephen Ashe's cases, whether he could understand them or not! And when he actually got Farrell off—Farrell was that bandit who held the entire sheriff's force at bay for three days with what turned out later to be an empty shotgun—Jacky Wilfong had sworn deathless allegiance. But then, Stephen Ashe was ever a pied piper where children were concerned.

Jacky said, "Hello, Mr. Ashe. Want some violets?"

But it was the little girl who answered, funny little kid, in a fuzzy tam and a little plaid coat with a fur collar. She was staring at him like anything, with enormous, clear gray eyes. She said, "Daddy, buy me some violets from that boy."

Stephen Ashe turned to look at him, and then Jacky Wilfong saw how much alike he and the kid were, and his heart swelled toward her. Besides, he remembered with sudden intense admiration that when Stephen Ashe rode through the mission during the street car strike—a street car strike in San Francisco was no nice thing, and Stephen Ashe was defending old Mike Delaney, who owned the railroads—this kid had actually gone with him, sitting beside him, her arched little nose in the air.

And when somebody flung a brick at them—lucky it wasn't a bullet—she stuck out her tongue, coldly and contemptuously.

That made everybody laugh. Kids were kids, it seemed, whether they lived south of Market street or at the St. Francis. The Irish on both sides of the fight were pleased with Stephen Ashe's kid. Having a joke in common they got together and settled the strike. And, since people were very tired of riding in cars piloted by scabs and riddled with shotgun holes, they hailed Stephen Ashe's daughter as a deliverer.

No wonder Jacky Wilfong's black eyes grew warm as he stared back at her.

"All right, son," said Stephen Ashe. "Give us the basket."

That was Steve Ashe's way.

Jack noticed that Steve Ashe gave the kid her share first, before he presented any to the lady, and he was glad of that.

He nodded good-by to her, and she nodded back. They did not see each other again for a long time.

Upon a morning six years later, a touring car drew up before the small door of the St. Francis and stopped abruptly. It was a piratical-looking car, large and dark and topless—the sort of a car you see standing outside road houses in the dawn. Moreover, it was obviously a car without any social standing whatever, and therefore not at all the sort of car in which the daughter of a very old, very distinguished, and very proud family should be returning to her hotel at the hour in the morning when most respectable people are just leaving it to go about the day's business.

Nevertheless, as it stopped, or it may be a few seconds sooner, at least long before the pompous door man could reach it, the door flew open, and a girl leaped out—a thin little girl, in a boyish hat, and flat brogues, and a sweater.

So swiftly did she cross the sidewalk that she did not even see the door man, though as it happened he had been a friend of hers for years. When she was very small, she used to spend whole afternoons on the stiff chair just inside the revolving doors, watching him perform his duties in behalf of the ladies of San Francisco who drove up to the St. Francis.

Her Aunt Dorothea, who was of course a lady of fashion, had once discovered her there and made a dreadful scene about it, contending that a daughter of the Ashes should be better employed. But her father had only laughed and said anything a daughter of the Ashes did must be quite all right, since a daughter of the Ashes did it.

Her father had a way of saying those things that was very amusing, and yet she always felt that he himself rather admired the glory of the Ashe family tree, only he would not take it seriously. There were very few things that her father would take seriously.

CHAPTER III

It must be admitted, too, that the St. Francis hotel had a good deal more to do with the bringing up of Jan Ashe than did any of her family—always excepting her father.

But when the piratical-looking car dropped her upon the pavement, she had been awake nearly all night and was extremely angry, so it was perhaps not strange that she failed to see her old friend, the door man, when he beamed upon her. Spoiled—everybody spoiled her. Everybody in the whole hotel had united to spoil her for years.

Which was very nice of them no doubt, but not, as her Aunt Dorothea said, exactly the best diet for a little girl. Perhaps Aunt Dorothea, being a beauty herself, and therefore always conscious of rivalry in embryo, was the first to see the flame for moths that burned in little Jan Ashe.

"If you don't teach her a little discipline and self-control now," said Aunt Dorothea acidly, "life will teach them to her in less pleasant ways later on."

But when she said things like that, Stephen Ashe merely stared at his sister under his black eyebrows, his gray eyes entirely expressionless. It infuriated her, that stare of Stephen's—as though she were not even worth getting angry about, not even worth answering.

The driver of the night hawk watched Jan disappear through the revolving doors. She had not paid him. She had not so much as mentioned her name, in case he might like to collect his pay some time. Perhaps she took it for granted that every taxi driver in San Francisco knew Stephen Ashe's daughter. Probably she was right.

This one, at any rate, had recognized her the moment he drove up to the old Half-Way house and found her standing there in the early light. At first he thought the kid was scared to death, she was so white and still. She hadn't spoken once, as they drove around the bay, sitting there on the back seat with her thin legs stuck straight out in front of her.

Stealing furtive glances at her in his mirror—for who would not be amazed by such a passenger at such an hour?—he saw soon enough that it was sheer rage that kept her silent, and not fear. Hers was not a face built at any time for fear, little thing though she was.

He was nearly right, but not quite. Jan knew one fear—one only. And it was to walk with her for many a year.

As he drove away from the St. Francis, the night hawk, suspicious after his kind though he was, had no fear for his money. Stephen Ashe had a reputation for prodigal generosity—golden generosity. He spent money like water, whether he had it or not. And anyway, the night hawk felt a little thrill at having rescued this kid, who was so different from other kids, from a dilemma. Not that she had been in danger, even though the old Half-Way house had a bad name. Stephen Ashe's daughter was safe anywhere.

But whether anybody was safe from Stephen Ashe's daughter was another matter. Certainly as she strode through the lobby at the St. Francis, ignoring the stares of the lounging guests, the tightness of her little fists in her sweater pockets and the set of her small jaw boded ill for somebody.

Now in the big drawing-room of that hotel suite which Stephen Ashe and his daughter had called home ever since Jan herself could remember, three men waited. Fortunately it was a comfortable room in which to wait, for they had been waiting rather a long time. At least men always found that room comfortable, though no doubt a woman could have picked flaws enough in it.

Certainly it was untidy. Jan never allowed the chambermaids to do more than dust and sweep, since, she said, it was hard enough to find things as it was, without somebody putting them away all the time. And though there were many fine things in it, they were not displayed to any advantage, but mixed here and there with the hotel furnishings.

There were books everywhere. No room could make a proper showing for itself, overrun with books in such fashion. Stacks of books overflowed from the bookcase into every corner, onto the green-carpeted floor, even climbing into the brown leather chairs. Disgraceful they were, those books.

Of the men who waited, one was very young and decidedly attractive, in a thin and rather domineering blond fashion. His name was Dwight Sutro, and his father was a millionaire newspaper owner and publisher, in whose footsteps Dwight was supposed to follow. But instead of beginning his training for that important mission he had considerably upset his family by going to work in Steve Ashe's office. He said that criminal law appealed to him, and to be in Ashe's office was, of course, to be made as a lawyer.

He was the sort of young man upon whom Aunt Dorothea looked with favor, knowing that you cannot begin too early to establish contacts with matrimonial possibilities. Girls in the Ashe family could not be allowed to grow up and just marry anybody. Her own marriage to Herbert Joliffe had not been achieved without foresight and campaigning. What the family needed now was money, and that Dwight Sutro would have.

Aunt Dorothea was a better judge of bank balances than she was of character, or she might have seen the danger signals in Dwight's handsome face and realized that his flamboyant adoration of Stephen Ashe was called forth by all that was least admirable in both.

Jan considered him merely as a slave of her father's lamp.

The second man was heavily middle-aged, with a shock of red hair turning gray, a bull neck, a jowl. Jam called him Mac, for no good reason, and so everybody else called him that, too, it being largely the habit of her father's gang to do what Jan did.

Mac had once been a star detective of the police department. He had shot it out with two burglars on parole from Folsom, killing them both; and since there were some unfortunate circumstances connected with the gun battle the reformers raised a great hue and cry, saying that the police were little better than the criminals they hunted. Wherefore Mac was broken on the wheel, that the department might be left in peace, and tried for the murder of these two gangsters, whose right to parole at all was at least questionable.

Stephen Ashe tried the case upon that point and Mac's past record, fought the entire police department with stinging ridicule and sarcasm for allowing one of their comrades to be made the sacrificial goat, and acquitted him in a blaze of glory. Since which time Mac had worked for Steve Ashe, and his loyalty was to the death Ashe had postponed for him.

These two men were important in Jan's scheme of things. They acted as combination bodyguard, valet, messenger-boy and diplomatic service for her father, and they were obedient to the smallest flicker of her eyelash. Everybody adored Mac, and if Dwight Sutro antagonized most people by that faint superiority of his, they admitted nevertheless that he was extremely clever.

The two waited now quietly, smoking.

CHAPTER IV

The third man moved restlessly back and forth across the room. Once he picked up a book that lay open upon the chair-arm, for Jan had been reading it aloud to her father the day before; but he put it down again, never having studied Greek. Which would have surprised Jan, who saw nothing unusual in her own familiarity with that ancient language, for her dad had taught it to her as soon as she could read, and she supposed that all well-educated men read Euripides and Plato.

Plainly this third man was used to wait for no one, and would not have waited now, but that he knew he must. They all knew that. When a man was in a tight corner, it was Steve Ashe or nobody, and Steve Ashe was a most irregular man.

Upon them, so, entered Jan.

The instant she saw them, her face emptied itself of all expression. Her method of meeting the unknown was her father's method. You never knew what might be up. Always let the other fellow make the first move. Strolled, that's what she did, strolled in, for all the world as though she had been out for a pre-breakfast walk instead of racing disreputably through the dawn.

The nervous man stood still to look at her. He did not know her. Yet he was conscious of the advent into that room of a force, of something slim, straight, strong, like one of those reeds that look so frail, but that you can neither break nor tear apart; conscious too of a casual and expressionless flaze fixed upon him, childlike, quite unreadable, yet without dissimulation.

Funny how the colors of her little face were laid glamorously over the capacious brow, the arched, dominant nose, the Ashe jaw. This man saw first, as did most men, the gray eyes, set in black and full of light; the candle flame of her hair, where one lock rebelled against the boyish hat; the mouth, etched in that color which is sometimes seen in the turned-back petal of a fuchsia. But he did not see, written in bone behind the colors, the intrinsic facts of high thoughts and violent desires, of power and determination, of a dangerous temper and a reckless courage.

"My aunt!" said Jan absently, quite as though nothing in life could really surprise her. "What is all this? I go out for a little walk and return to find you making yourselves at home in no mean fashion."

She grinned at them, but her brows questioned Dwight Sutro. They had the most expressive eyebrows, the Ashes, father and daughter.

"This is Mr. Channing," said Dwight. "He wants to see your father."

"We don't want any more murder cases," said Jan, severely. "We've got two on the calendar now, and one of them, if I may be allowed to say so, is a humdinger. Gent popped his wife off with a beer bottle, so they claim. Personally, I regard that as a grave social error. If it had been a champagne bottle, it would at least have been in good taste. But nothing can keep a beer bottle from being a low thing with which to hit your wife."

While she talked, she rolled herself a cigaret from the jar of tobacco and brown papers on the table, her eyes pensively upon Mr. Channing, who stared back at her in deeper and deeper amazement. Literally, he did not know what to make of her.

"It's not murder," said Dwight Sutro.

That surprised her. Up went the eyebrows.

He was the sort of young man upon whom Aunt Dorothea looked with favor.

"It's contributing," said Dwight.

Jan's eyes widened upon the well-dressed, slightly rotund, eminently respectable figure of Mr. Channing and then she dissolved into most indecent laughter. "Oh, Mr. Channing," she said, "how could you?"

Mac came heavily to the rescue. "Mr. Channing was president of the biggest real estate company in Los Angeles," he said. "He is the Republican candidate for governor."

"They can't do anything to him for that," said Jan.

"Where's your father?" Mac asked.

Not that he was trying to hurry Jan. Well he knew that you could not hurry the Ashes. But this man was one of the state's biggest citizens. In California, the Republican nomination clinched the election under ordinary circumstances. This indictment, when it became known, would rock the political structures of the state as they had never been rocked before. Upon its outcome would depend not only Channing's future, but the fate of his party for four years. When he knew that he was to be indicted, he had taken the first train out of Los Angeles to consult Stephen Ashe. Mac felt he ought to have a little consideration. Besides, there would be real money in this case. Stephen Ashe had an extremely bad habit of taking cases for nothing, widows' cases, orphans' cases, tough ones to win. Somebody must pay for them.

But Jan turned away from his urgent look, tossing her hat on the piano.

"I may be wrong," she said, "but it's my idea that it's a mistake to do business on an empty stomach. Things make you sick that you'd never notice any other time. So grab yourselves some hot cakes and coffee, and maybe when you get back dad'll be ready to talk to you."

When they had gone, Jan turned and stood staring, eyebrows down, Ashe jaw out, at a certain closed door, concerning which there was an unwritten law that no one could open it save Jan herself. She opened it.

And maybe she was not altogether sure what she might find on the other side of it, for you could see her heart beat through the woolly blue sweater, with that terrible, facile emotion of the child.

Jan looked as much like her father as it is possible for a little girl of 13 with hair the color of brass with the sun on it to look like a black-haired man of 38. Same jaw, same nose, same mouth. But it was the eyes that startled with their alikeness. If you had blocked out the faces and left the eyes, man's eyes, girl's eyes, you could hardly have told them apart. Reckless, mesmeric eyes, with a strange power to draw you and convince you against your will. Eyes expressionless as fate within the thick black circle of lashes, to be suddenly cleft open by this or that emotion. A gray curtain that might go up at any moment upon comedy, upon tragedy.

Now they stared at each other, those two pairs of eyes so absurdly alike. And as relief grew in the girl's, anger grew, too, as if, finding him safe and sane, she could give free rein to her fury.

"You!" said Jan. "What a pal you turned out to be. Just a good guy to stay away from in a pinch, that's what you are. Why, if you had an old blind grandmother, you'd give her a toadstool and tell her it was a mushroom." Her voice creaked and broke as she stood tapping the carpet with her heel, sure sign that she was too angry to speak.

If only he would give her something to fight against. For 50 miles around the bay she had been rehearsing the things she was going to say to him. But how be angry with this man who looked at her so beseechingly?

If only he would treat her as he treated every one else, riding roughshod over them and making them like it, beating them with that amused, plausible, arrogant charm of his. But to her, now, he showed only remorse, and there was never any lack of remorse in Stephen Ashe.

It is not every man to whom bed is becoming. Nowadays, bed can be very hard on a man, and it is perhaps just as well that convention decrees a lady may not so see her lover until it is too late to do anything about it. Otherwise, romance might falter.

Not so Stephen Ashe. There was about him the picturesqueness of the dark Celt. And besides, as Jan often said bitterly, he had a pretty taste in pajamas and dressing gowns.

"You'd think he had, if you could see the bills," Jan would say.

On this morning, he wore a robe of that rich, masculine brocade which only the Chinese know how to make and which they do not often waste upon American ignorance. This had been brought from China as a gift. His hair was a miracle of grooming, well-cut and brushed about his fine head, with streaks of silver at the temples. One would have guessed that he had been shaved not more than five minutes ago. And in his left hand he held a richly bound book, and in his right a jeweled paper knife.

It was difficult to imagine that not so many hours ago he had been put to bed by a couple of bell boys in a condition very far removed from his present immaculate well-being.

"Who," said he, with the faintest chuckle, "was the gent out there wearing out my carpets? He seemed a bit nervous."

"Don't think you can scramble the issue with me," said his daughter. "I'm no jury. Aren't you ashamed of yourself?"

Stephen Ashe put down his book and looked at her.

"Yes, I am," he said, and it is impossible to describe that something pathetic about him, except to say that he dramatized everything. He was an actor who used all the world for his stage. He missed nothing. Whatever he was, he was always more of it than ordinary folk could be. Whatever he did, he always found exactly the right gesture with which to do it. He was articulate not only with his array and choice of words, not only with his spell-binding voice that had in it the note of sweetness peculiar to Irish tenors, but with every feature of his dark face, and every ounce of his personality.

That much a god of mountebanks might have been. But to Stephen Ashe had been given one more gift —sincerity. He had to believe a thing before he could make you believe it. So that while he said or did a thing he always meant it, and, although he had every mark of a violent man, a bad-tempered man, a selfish and arrogant man, he could also look infinitely pathetic.

CHAPTER V

"I say, Jan, how'd you get home?"

"I didn't get home," said Jan coldly, "I stayed where you jolly well left me."

He looked astounded. She had that much satisfaction.

"You mean—but see here, girl, I looked all over for you. I thought you'd gone home."

"You're a liar," said Jan. "You just got drunk and forgot all about me." As he started to protest, her words boiled over. "Yes, you did. I was right there, if you'd looked. I stood around that old road-house for three hours p-putting quarters in an old slot machine. I p-put in all the quarters I had and never won once. Crooked, probably. I knew you were trying to find out from old Tom where Dutch Mike was, so I didn't butt in, where you were talking to him over the bar. Almost everybody had gone but that fat Jew woman that was p-playing the p-piano, and she got worse and worse, and I couldn't stand it any longer, so I went out in the p-patio and went to sleep. And when I woke up, there wasn't a soul there except Tom."

She choked with emotion.

"Nice I must have looked, walking in there. Tom's old pay-station telephone is on an exchange that closes at midnight, so I couldn't get a car. Tom shut up and would not let any one in, though some men came and made a terrible racket. He said I could sleep with the cook. She was a woman.

"Did you know the cook was his wife? She said she was a fine looking girl when Tom married her. She looks like hell now. She said cooking in that roadhouse did it. When she went to sleep, she whistled like a peanut stand. My gosh, I'd hate to live with a woman. First thing this morning, I phoned for a car.

"Now, there's a man out there that's candidate for governor, and he's charged with contributing to the delinquency of a minor, and he is sick."

She had drifted over to her usual seat at the foot of the bed, feet curled under her. There was a little stand by the bed, just there. She rolled a cigaret absently, and handed it to her father. Then she rolled another for herself. Blinking above the drifting smoke of the cigaret, she said, "That was a mean trick."

"It was worse than that," said Stephen Ashe. "It was the lowest thing I ever heard of a white man doing. I'm so ashamed I could go out and shoot myself. I never did anything like that before, did I, honey?"

She crawled up beside him. "The worst of it was," she said, in a very small voice, "you—forgot me." And she hid her face against his shoulder. Not crying—never cried, that once, a woman's trick—just trembling, white puckered face hidden.

"I did not. I never thought of that damn patio. I looked all over the house and then I came home to find you.

Into the silence, so that he could scarcely hear her, she said, "Daddy—this drink. I don't like it."

Horribly embarrassed, as though that tiny whisper had ruthlessly crashed the door into some bluebeard chamber, he said, "Don't be silly, my love."

"But that's what made you leave me. Just lately—I'm scared, daddy—"

"Ah, that was Jan's one fear.

"Don't be an idiot."

"I'm not." Her voice was tenacious, clung to the thing like a small bulldog that would not be shaken loose even by the beating of her heart. "I wish—you wouldn't."

Over the little bowed head with its boy-girl hair, Stephen Ashe stared into the silence—stared at nothing, stared at something.

So they left it, had to leave it. For Stephen Ashe was a man who did not like to look upon the dark face of his soul's danger. And Jan was, after all, only a child.

"Where's this governor of yours?" asked her father gaily, and never so infectious a gaiety as that of Stephen Ashe. "Bring him on."

"You'd better see him," said Jan, reaching for a match. She relighted his cigaret—they do go out so, these homemade cigarets, and Steve Ashe never had a match, had never been known to have a match; nothing could be done to keep him in matches. "That is, if you're going to take the case. If he does anything on his own, he might as well buy himself a one-way ticket to San Quentin. Forehead about as high as a well-cut lawn. He ought to make a great governor D on't be too proud to ask him for money. We can't eat glory."

She ushered the client, now faintly perspiring, into the presence of the great criminal lawyer, propped among his pillows; she heard Stephen Ashe's drawling, amused, "Good morning." Then she went into her own room and went to bed. Nor did it seem strange to Jan Ashe to go to bed in the morning, for that was the way she had been brought up. Those who commit crime do not keep regular office hours, and the like of a criminal lawyer must follow suit.

Curled under the bedclothes, she lay thinking. The episode of last night was not important of itself. But "this drink thing"—she didn't like it.

Of course it was true that they had just finished a big murder case, a long one, and that dad had worked at the terrific pitch he always hit during a big murder trial. The day of his argument he seemed to her at white heat. And he hadn't slept for days. She could not remember seeing him asleep all during that trial. Sometimes she fell asleep on the foot of his bed, while he read transcripts or searched calf-bound law books. And no matter what time she woke up he was sitting alert, vital, his reading lamp burning more dimly against the unnoticed daylight, the burden of a man's life still resting upon his shoulders.

Sometimes she slipped away to her own room, hoping that fatigue would drive him to sleep, but always she heard him long before the bell-boy brought the papers at five, fussing with the percolator. She would paddle in, slippered, to make his coffee and they would drink it together, while he read carefully the account of yesterday's session in the papers. He could tell a lot, he always said, about the effect of things on the jury by their effect on the reporters.

And then the jury had been out 72 hours, and Steve Ashe had been like a crazy man. He might fool everybody else with that casual, amused manner. But his best acting couldn't hide from Jan that pulse beating in each lean cheek, that little knot of muscle at the hinges of his jaw. At each appearance of Dwight or Mac with the latest news that had seeped from the jury room, he would turn with a "Well?" that sounded like a gunshot.

INDIAN GIFT CASE DELAYED

Jackson Barnett's Lavish Present Protested

SAPULPA, Okla., Nov. 19. (AP)—The county court hearing on the apparent attempt of Jackson Barnett, aged Indian incompetent, to give a friend $1,000,000 was postponed for the second time today by inability of one of the attorneys to appear.

Judge Carl J. Hughes continued the hearing "until such time as the attorneys agree" to hear his ruling on a motion to quash the petition of J. B. Walker, Joplin, Mo., former Tulsan, that he be given the money. His claim is based on a letter purported to have been signed by Barnett with his thumb print. Barnett's guardian has protested the petition.

FEE RECOVERY MOTION OVERRULED

FORT SCOTT, Kan., Nov. 19. (AP)—A motion by Harold O. McGugin and other defendants asking revision of the government's complaint in its suit to recover $150,000 legal fees paid McGugin for services in behalf of Jackson Barnett, wealthy Creek Indian, was overruled yesterday by Federal Judge Richard J. Hopkins.

McGugin, Walter S. Keith, Nell Bird McGugin and William McGugin Investment company asked the striking out of allegations pertaining to the purported guardianship of Jackson Barnett, the part relative to the mental capacity of the Indian and that portion relative to failure of notice to the purported guardian of payments and deliveries of bonds.

Judge Hopkins also overruled a motion to dismiss, by the defendants, who alleged the government's amended bill of complaint failed to state any legal cause of action, that the cause of action alleged is already contained in the original bill and that cause of action has already been adjudicated.

RECIPES

Honeycomb Tripe, Poulette Style

Saute an onion, chopped fine, in one-fourth a cup of butter. When well colored add one pound of tripe, cut in small squares, season with half a teaspoonful each of salt and paprika, and saute until the mixture has evaporated, add one-fourth cup of flour and, when this is absorbed by the butter, gradually add a scant pint of stock, with a sprig of parsley, or a grating of nutmeg. Boil three or four minutes, then simmer until the tripe is tender. Beat one tablespoonful of butter to a cream, add the yolks of two eggs and one tablespoonful of lemon juice and stir into the mixture without allowing it to come to a boil. Serve at once garnished with toast points.

Lemon Ice Fruit Cocktail

Two large grapefruit.
One pint lemon ice.
One No. 2 can pineapple tidbits.

Chill the grapefruit and pineapple before using. Then peel the grapefruit as you would an apple, being sure to cut down under the white membrane. Next insert the blade between the membrane and each grapefruit section and remove the grapefruit slices. Cut each slice in half crosswise. Arrange a spoonful of the grapefruit and pineapple tidbits in the bottom of eight sherbet glasses. Then place a small scoop of lemon ice in the center of each. Surround with the rest of the grapefruit and tidbits and pour over each a little of the canned pineapple juice and grapefruit juice, if there is any. Canned grapefruit, well chilled, may be substituted for the fresh. Also raspberry or orange ice may be used in place of lemon ice. If orange ice is used, substitute cranberry jelly for the relish in the above menu.

Roast Turkey, Southern Style

Clean, stuff, and truss a turkey; cover the breast with large, thin slices of salt pork, cutting gashes through the center and fastening in place with toothpicks; pour melted butter over exposed parts; insert small branches of celery between the drumstick and breast; set on a rack in a roasting pan, and dredge with flour. Place in an oven at 450 degrees F. turning the turkey frequently to brown uniformly—it will take about 20 minutes; reduce the heat to 350 degrees F.; add one-half a cupful of water and one-half a cupful of drippings to the pan. Baste every 10 minutes. When the joints separate easily the cooking is completed (it will require about three hours for a 10-pound young bird). Before serving, removes the salt pork, celery, and skewers. Serve with cooked sauerkraut.

Cooked Sauerkraut

Place three pounds of sauerkraut in a deep kettle, and one pound of lean bacon, and just enough water to keep it from burning. Simmer slowly in a tightly covered kettle two hours. Serve on platter with roast turkey.

Olive Stuffing

Measure a generous pint of stale bread and pour over it enough hot stock to saturate it through and through. How much will depend on the staleness of the bread. Squeeze nearly dry after soaking, and add one beaten egg and one-fourth a cup of butter or a substitute and stir well. There should be sufficient heat retained from the hot stock to melt the butter and slightly coagulate the egg. Now add one-half a cupful of grated Spanish onion, one-fourth a cup of minced parsley, a teaspoonful of salt, one-half a teaspoonful of pepper, a pinch (one-fourth a teaspoonful) of mixed dried herbs, and one cupful of olive meats, freed from stones and chopped not too fine. This stuffing is good with turkey or any other poultry, or with stuffed boned shoulder of lamb.

Cranberry Relish

Cut into quarters and remove the seeds from two oranges; add one quart of cranberries; chop fine. Add the juice of one orange and two cupfuls of sugar; mix thoroughly. Let stand 24 hours. Note that this relish is not cooked, and the oranges are not pared.

Sweet Cider Punch

The punch may be a lightly spiced, iced beverage of clear, sparkling cider. Or it may be a dinner sherbet, very slightly sweetened and served with a sherbet spoon. Or it may be a granite, made of thick, sifted apple sauce and rougly frozen so that icy edges scrape the tongue, stimulating taste-buds and whetting the appetite for the next course.

Sweet Pickled Pears

Two quarts small firm pears.
One-half cupful vinegar.
One-half cupful water.
Three cupfuls sugar.
One-half ounce stick cinnamon.
Cloves.

Pare the pears, leaving on the stem, and stick each with four cloves. Put vinegar, water, sugar and cinnamon in a saucepan, boil 10 minutes, add pears, cook until tender and seal in jars.

Sweet Pickles Pear Salad

Serve pickled pears in individual nests of lettuce leaves with mayonaise dressing to which sweet pickle syrup and cream have been added in the proportion of one-fourth cupful mayonnaise, one-fourth cupful sweet pickle syrup and one-fourth cupful cream beaten until stiff.

Savory Cheese

One-fourth cupful butter.
One ounce Roquefort cheese.
One Neufchatel cheese or one-third cup cottage cheese.
One-half tablespoonful pimiento, chopped.
One-half tablespoonful table sauce.
Few grains cayenne.

Mix igredients with a fork, shape in a small loaf; chill, slice and serve with salad. Small balls may be made of the cheese if preferred and used to garnish the salads.

Cranberry Salad

One pint cranberries
One cupful bolling water
One cupful sugar
One and one-fourth tablespoonfuls gelatin
One-fourth cupful cold water
One-half head lettuce
One-half cupful diced apple
One-fourth cupful chopped walnuts
Mayonnaise.

Cook the cranberries and water together for 20 minutes. Rub through a sieve, stir in the sugar and cook five minutes. Add the gelatin which has been dissolved in the cold water for five minutes, and just before this begins to set pour half of the mixture into a shallow glass or enamelware dish which has been rinsed in cold water. Allow it to set, keeping the remainder warm to prevent it from becoming stiff. Over the first half sprinkle the diced apples and nut meats. Pour the remaining half over this and allow it to set. Cut into slices and serve on leaves of lettuce with a garnish of salad dressing and a few extra nut meats. Serves six. This salad may be molded in small molds in the same manner, if preferred.

Pies for Thanksgiving

A great many people consider turkey the piece de resistance of the Thanksgiving dinner but others look forward to the delicious, spicy pies—fragrant pumpkin and squash or mince full of raisins and numerous other good things. Some people are acknowledged pie and pastry makers, and their Thanksgiving pies cannot be surpassed. But a great many people have not mastered this art, and they approach the Thanksgiving pie making with admitted qualms.

Good pies are not difficult to make if a reliable recipe and a few simple directions are followed and if the best of ingredients are used. Any good shortening may be used. Butter is expensive but has a pleasant flavor. However many people prefer lard, while others use nothing but vegetable shortening. Oil is also a favorite shortening. The texture of pastry varies with the shortening and only personal preference selects one over another. Cold water and cold ingredients make pastry that is flaky and light while hot water makes a compact but very short pie crust. Having this knowledge each individual may make her choice.

The general rules for making pastry are:

1—The flour used should be a fine, soft, starchy flour.

2—Any good shortening may be used.

3—Ingredients and utensils must be cold.

4—Handle as little and as lightly as possible.

5—Chill pastry when possible before shaping.

RECIPES

Plain Pastry With Cold Water

Measure one and one-half cupfuls of sifted pastry flour and sift together with one-half teaspoonful of salt and one-half teaspoonful of tartrate or phosphate baking powder in a mixing bowl. (With an aluminum baking powder use one-half the amount specified.) Then measure one-half cupful of fat, and work the fat into the flour, using two knives in a cutting motion until the particles of fat are the size of small peas and the whole resembles a coarse meal. Add cold water, very gradually, until enough has been added to make a stiff dough—about three or four tablespoonfuls will be needed. Use a knife or spatula for working in the water. If there is time, it is well to chill the pastry for an hour or longer at this stage. Turn the pastry on a slightly-floured molding surface. Flour the rolling pin and pat the pastry into a long, narrow sheet one-quarter inch thick. Roll up like a jelly-roll, and cut off as needed from the end. If more pastry is made than is needed, roll in oil paper and place in the refrigerator.

Hot Water Pastry

Mix it just the opposite way, using hot water instead of cold. Measure six tablespoonfuls of fat. Add to the fat four tablespoonfuls of boiling water. Beat this mixture with a spoon until it is the consistency of honey, about 15 to 20 minutes. Sift together one and one-half cupfuls of pastry flour, one-half teaspoonful of tartrate or phosphate baking powder and three-fourths teaspoonful of salt. Add to the water and fat mixture. Mix well and set in the ice box to harden for an hour or longer. This pastry cannot be handled until it is chilled.

Oil Pastry

This pastry is similar in texture to the hot water pastry. Sift together one and one-half cupfuls pastry flour, one-half teaspoonful baking powder, and one-half teaspoonful salt. Add four tablespoonfuls of oil and mix well. Add just enough cold water to make a stiff dough, about two tablespoonfuls. This pastry can be handled better after it is chilled for an hour or more.

It is necessary to maintain a constant temperature throughout the baking of pies. It is easy to do this with a heat controlled oven or portable oven thermometer. For single-crust pies with a custard-like filling bake at 450 degrees F. for 10 minutes to set the pastry rim, then complete the baking at 325 degrees F. for 30 minutes. Double-crust pies with uncooked fillings should be baked at 450 degrees F. for 40 minutes. Use the same temperature for double-crust pies with

HOUSTON GIRL SHOT TO DEATH

Victim Tells Love Story to Mother

HOUSTON, Nov. 19. (AP)—The body of Cecil Elizabeth Yates, 17-year-old North Side girl, was found lying in the driveway at her home this afternoon. She had been shot.

While Justice Campbell Overstreet had not returned a formal verdict, he stated after a brief investigation the girl apparently shot herself because of grief over her separation from her sweetheart, who had moved to California.

A note left by the girl, addressed to her mother, read:

"Moms: George has gone to California. I don't care to live without him. I love him with all my heart, mother, no matter what he has done. Don't think hard of me, moms, I have to do it. Just—Cecil Yates."

'Politics' Not Involved In Pastor's Suspension

SAVANNAH, Ga., Nov. 19. (AP)—Bishop John M. Moore of the Methodist Episcopal church, South, disclosed for the first time today that the suspension of Rev. Rembert G. Smith of Sparta, Ga., was not based on charges involving "politics."

The suspension was ordered for one year by the North Georgia conference of the church which met in Atlanta last week. The nature of the charges was held in secrecy.

Aside from saying politics was not involved, Bishop Moore refused to throw more light on the suspension.

Rev. Mr. Smith has publicly criticized Methodist bishops on several occasions because of what he claimed was their participation in political issues.

Wentz Threatens To Enter Court

OKLAHOMA CITY, Nov. 19.(UP)—Lew Wentz, Republican highway commissioner, today threatened to carry into court a fight with the two Democratic commissioners to have his motions submitted on commission records.

The fight broke when Sam R. Hawks, chairman, and J. F. McKeel, Democratic member, moved to strike Wentz's "dissenting" motions from the records because they "encumbered the minutes." Hawks and McKeel both said there was no use carrying Wentz's motions as they were lost for want of a second.

Wentz said he had been advised informally by W. C. Lewis, assistant attorney general, that his motions could not be excluded in any such manner. Wentz said he would demand a record of his motions.

"He may be right about what the attorney general says," Hawks stated, "but if he can put them in, he could put in all of Shakespeare's works. He wanted to put a lot in the minutes that was published in newspapers."

Immediate Tax Relief Demanded by Grange

MADISON, Wis., Nov. 19. (AP)—Immediate relief from oppressive real estate taxes was demanded for the farmer by the National Grange here today, when it approved a report submitted to the convention by the committee on taxation.

The committee headed by David H. Agans, master of the New Jersey state Grange, recommended three needs in effecting tax readjustments, namely, to formulate plans for reducing total expenditures without injury to essential services; to develop plans for improvement in the administration of existing tax laws; to propose tax revision which will more justly distribute tax burdens.

Income, inheritance, and gift taxes should bear a greater burden of the cost of government and the real estate tax should be lowered, the committee said.

Victim Walks and Talks After Wound in Head

CHICAGO, Nov. 19. (AP)—Phillip Hoffberg, 35, wealthy retired professional bondsman, was shot through the head today by two robbers who then took $100 from his pockets and escaped.

At a hospital, authorities expressed surprise Hoffberg was able to walk and talk although the bullet had entered his forehead, pierced the skull and emerged at the back of the head. Hoffberg told the police he did not know the robbers.

Division of Loew Profit Revealed by Officials

NEW YORK, ov. 19. (AP)—Nicholas Schenk, president of Loew's, Inc., received a bonus of $274,404 last year, or 2½ per cent of the net profit, while David Bernstein, treasurer, got a bonus of $164,642, or 1½ per cent of profits, stockholders were informed at the annual meeting of the corporation today.

The information was divulged in response to queries by shareholders. In addition, Mr. Schenk's salary was $2,500 a week and Mr. Bernstein's $2,000 weekly.

HEARING ENDS ON PETITIONS

Sneed's Ruling Halts Move Against Program

OKLAHOMA CITY, Nov. 19.(UP)—Hearing on sufficiency of petitions calling a special election on Gov. William H. Murray's initiated program ended abruptly today.

After Secretary of State R. A. Sneed ruled that unless the protestants could show conclusive evidence of "forgeries, complete lack of addresses, duplication or other fatal incorrectnesses the hearing might as well end," S. P. Freeling former attorney general, announced the hearing would end.

"In view of this ruling, it is useless for us to proceed further in presenting evidence," Freeling, who filed the protests, said.

"We will permit the secretary of state to announce sufficiency of the petitions and carry the appeal to the supreme court. Sneed said the formal announcement probably would be made tomorrow and the appeal could be filed immediately.

Only four witnesses had testified and only one petition, that of initiative measure No. 112, had been heard.

Louisville & Nashville Declares Dividend

NEW YORK, Nov. 19. (AP)—The Louisville and Nashville railroad today declared a dividend of $2. In May of this year the road paid a semi-annual dividend of $2.50, before which dividends at the rate of $7 had been paid.

Earnings for the year are estimated at approximately $1.50 a share on the outstanding $117,000,000 stock, compared with $5.65 in 1930, and an average of $14.17 a share in the preceding five years.

Stubborn Coughs Ended by Recipe, Mixed at Home

Here is the famous old recipe which millions of housewives have found to be the most dependable means of breaking up stubborn coughs due to colds. It takes but a moment to prepare, costs little, and saves money, but it gives real relief even for those dreaded coughs that follow severe cold epidemics.

From any druggist, get 2½ ounces of Pinex, pour it into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup or strained honey. Thus you make a full pint of better remedy than you could buy ready-made for three times the cost. It never spoils and tastes so good that even children like it.

Not only does this simple mixture soothe the inflamed throat membranes with surprising ease, but also it is absorbed into the blood, and acts directly upon the bronchial tubes, thus aiding the whole system in throwing off the cough. It loosens the germ-laden phlegm and eases chest soreness in a way that is really astonishing.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of Norway Pine, containing the active agent of creosote, in a refined, palatable form. Nothing known in medicine is more helpful in cases of severe coughs and bronchial irritations.

Do not accept a substitute for Pinex. It is guaranteed to give prompt relief or money refunded.

Doctors Know Best How to Treat Colds

Medical writers agree that the important point in the treatment of a cold, or cough due to a cold, is to relieve the congestion in the nose and throat, thereby preventing serious complications which may follow a neglected cold. To stop this congestion calomel was the accepted and standard remedy until Calotabs, the improved calomel compound tablet was introduced.

Now that science has robbed calomel of its nausea and danger, making it pleasant to take and perfectly safe for general use, over forty million Calotabs are consumed in the U. S. yearly with only the most pleasant and satisfactory results. In millions of homes Calotabs have proven their superiority in the prompt relief of colds and coughs due to colds.

One or two Calotabs at bed-time with a glass of sweet milk or water. No salts necessary. No nausea nor the slightest interference with your eating, work or pleasure. Next morning the congestion has subsided, your cold or cough is relieved, your system is thoroughly purified and you are feeling fine with a hearty appetite for breakfast. Eat what you wish—no danger.

Get a family package of Calotabs, containing full directions, only thirty-five cents. Trial size, ten cents. At any drug store.—Adv.

All drug stores are supplied with the wonderful elixir, so all you have to do is to step into the nearest drug store, hand the clerk sixty cents for a bottle of Aspironal and tell him to serve you two teaspoonfuls. With your watch in your hand, take the drink at one swallow and call for your money back in two minutes if you cannot feel the distressing symptoms of your cold or cough fading away like a dream, within the time limit. Don't be bashful, for all druggists invite you and expect you to try it. Everybody's doing it.

Take the remainder of the bottle home to your wife and children for Aspironal is by far the safest and most effective, the easiest to take and the most agreeable cold and cough remedy for children as well as adults. Quickest relief for catarrhal croup and children's choking up at night.—Adv.

REAL Doctor's Remedy
safest aid to bowels

A DOCTOR knows the best and safest way to stimulate the bowels when bad breath, coated tongue, sluggishness, or a bilious, headachy, gassy condition shows they are lagging. There could be no better proof of this assertion than the overwhelming sales and popularity of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin.

Syrup Pepsin is a doctor's prescription for the bowels—made by the same formula Dr. Caldwell wrote and prescribed over and over during his forty-seven years of practice. He tested its gentle action with women, older people, babies and children; saw that it does not gripe, sicken or cause any discomfort. He proved its action thorough, complete, with the most robust men. Then as its pleasant taste and perfect action caused it to grow in popularity, he permitted it to be bottled and kept by drugstores everywhere, ready for use.

Get a bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin from your drugstore today. Then, next time you or any of your family feel the need of a bowel cleansing, you will have a doctor's choice of what is best.

CATARRHAL DEAFNESS MAY BE OVERCOME

If you have catarrhal deafness or head noises go to Allison's Drug Store or your druggist and get 1 oz. of Parmint (double strength) and add to it ½ pint of hot water and a little sugar. Take 1 tablespoonful four times a day.

This will often bring quick relief from the distressing head noises. Clogged nostrils should open, breathing become easy and the mucous stop dropping into the throat. It is easy to prepare, cost little and is pleasant to take. Any one who has catarrhal deafness or head noises should give this prescription a trial.—Adv.

BAUME BENGUÉ (pronounced Ben-Gay) is a safe and sure remedy for that throbbing, splitting pain in the head. Applied freely to the forehead and back of the neck, rubbing in thoroughly, it brings prompt and blessed relief without the depressing effect of most internal remedies. It is more effective than other external agents and will not burn or blister.

EXPERT GIVES PIE RECIPES

Roast Turkey, Southern Style, on Sunday Menu

cooked filling, baking for 30 minutes. Bake pastry shells at 500 degrees F. for 12 minutes.

Mince Meat and Mince Pie

Two cupfuls finely chopped lean beef
Four cupfuls finely chopped tart apples
Two cupfuls chopped seeded raisins
Two cupfuls currants
One cupful finely chopped citron
One cupful suet chopped or other fat
One cupful meat stock
Two cupfuls sugar
One cupful strong coffee infusion or cider
One tablespoon cloves
One tablespoonful cloves.
One tablespoonful nutmeg
Two teaspoonfuls salt.

Purchase lean meat and boil until tender, cool in the liquor, then put through a food chopper. Mix materials together. Simmer slowly for about one hour, bottle hot, and seal. This makes about five pints. When making pie, line a deep plate with crust, fill with mince meat, using one quart and then put over top one tablespoonful cream, one tablespoonful sugar, a few whole seeded raisins, and two teaspoonfuls butter in bits. Put on top crust and bake. Makes one nine-inch pie.

Many people associate mince pie with Christmas. This one, which is quite different, will be nice for Thanksgiving and can be made while green tomatoes are plentiful. It will keep indefinitely if canned boiling hot in sterilized jars.

Green Tomato Mince Meat

Slice one and one-half quarts of green tomatoes very thin. Sprinkle with salt and let stand overnight; then drain and chop very fine. Add two cupfuls chopped tart apples and one chopped orange; simmer two hours. Add three cupfuls medium brown sugar, one pound raisins or mixed chopped fruit, and two tablespoonfuls mixed ground spices, and simmer one hour. This amount is sufficient for two good-sized pies. Cool the filling before putting into the pie crust.

Pennsylvania Pumpkin Pie

Peel and remove the seeds from a pumpkin of fine grain. Cut into pieces and steam until tender, drain and mash through a sieve. Canned pumpkin may be used, if desired. To two cupfuls of pumpkin add three egg yolks, one cupful brown sugar, one-fourth teaspoonful salt, one-half teaspoonful grated nutmeg, one-half teaspoonful ginger, one-eighth teaspoonful each ground cloves and allspice, and one-fourth teaspoonful cinnamon. Mix well together, then add three cupfuls of scalded milk. Last of all, fold in the stiffly-beaten egg-whites. Line a pie plate with pastry, coat with white of egg, and pour in the pumpkin mixture. Bake 10 minutes at 450 degrees F., reduce the heat to 325 degrees F. and continue baking for 30 minutes. Squash may be used instead of pumpkin in this recipe. Makes two medium or one large and one small pie. To serve, cool the pie slightly and arrange small mounds of unsweetened whipped cream, one in the center of each individual piece of pie. Drop one teaspoonful honey in the center of each mound of cream and serve at once. If desired this filling may be placed in tart shell and baked and served with frozen orange roses.

Frozen Orange Roses

One orange
One tablespoonful corn syrup
One-half cupful cream
One tablespoonful sugar
Yellow or orange color.

Grate yellow rind from one-half orange, add three tablespoonfuls orange juice and corn syrup and let stand one-half hour. Beat cream until it begins to thicken, add sugar and orange juice slowly, add a little color and beat until stiff. Put through a pastry bag and tube into electric refrigerator pan and leave three hours or until frozen, or pack in individual aluminum molds, cover with wax paper held in place with an elastic band and pack in ice and salt until frozen.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Persimmons

Question: Mrs. Calvin E. E. writes—"Have never seen anything in your articles about persimmons. Am sure they must be good for one as they are a fruit. Would you write an article about persimmons, their merits and demerits, and recipes, if possible. I think them delicious, but many of my friends dislike them only because they ate them before they were fully ripened."

Answer—Persimmons may be divided into two chief kinds—one that is non-astringent and has sweet, crisp flesh, and the other that is hard and astringent until fully ripe, then becomes sweet, soft and juicy. The non-astringent type may improve by softening, but it is pleasingly edible in the crisp condition of initial ripeness, and can be eaten before ripening. The astringent type is generally about right when the skin commences to wrinkle and the flesh to soften to a slippery, almost custardy consistency. Persimmons are excellent when eaten raw and are particularly good for preserves. They may also be fresh-cooked in many ways—in cakes, puddings, and muffins. Those who are not sufficiently familiar with the fruit to be sure that it has lost its astringency, will do well to add half a teaspoonful of bicarbonate of soda (baking soda) to each cupful of persimmon pulp, as heat accentuates the astringency.

Blue Mark on Baby's Nose

Question—Father writes: "Our baby three months old, was born with a blue mark on the lower part of the nose bridge. It is sometimes swollen and grows bigger. Is this a birthmark? If not, what can be done?"

Answer—The blue mark on your baby's nose may be a dilated and swollen blood vessel, but it would be impossible for me to determine this without being able to make an examination. If you will find out from a doctor just what the trouble is and send me his report, I will be glad to advise you.

CLASS B ELEVENS STEP TO FORE IN TODAY'S GRID GAMES

GRAHAM, OLNEY IN BIG GAMES

Altus at Lawton Tops Card In Oklahoma

While the class A teams in this sector suspend activities for the annual lull before Thanksgiving, the class B football schedule for today bristles with important games.

Games of more than usual significance are scheduled in each of the two class B districts in the Wichita Falls area. In district No. 4, the Steers of Graham will meet the Bowie eleven at Bowie in a game that will decide whether or not the Graham outfit will go into a tie with Weatherford for second place in the district standings. Graham is the overwhelming favorite to win as Bowie has made only a fair showing this season, but the Bowie aggregation is reported in mean enough a humor to get a good laugh out of knocking the Young county entry out of the running. In this district the two teams with the highest percentage on Thanksgiving day play for the title. Masonic Home tops the list with no defeats. Weatherford is second with one defeat. A Graham victory over Bowie will put Graham in a tie with Weatherford for second place and necessitate a play-off, the winner to meet Masonic Home for the title. If Bowie beats Graham today, the Steers will be out of the chase.

Archer City at Olney

Sharing interest with the Graham-Bowie game is the Olney-Archer City conflict in district No. 3. The game will be played at Olney, and undoubtedly will be the headliner of the day. An Archer City victory would throw the district standings into a turmoil, as Chillicothe and Crowell have lost but a game each. Olney, aiming for its fourth straight district title, must vault the Wildcats today and the Chillicothe Eagles on Thanksgiving day before reaching the title goal.

The Olney game bids fair to be a colorful classic. Bill Cooper's Archer City Wildcats have a great following down in Archer county, and a vast throng of fans was expected to accompany the team to Olney in cars. The Archer fans even secured a Wichita Falls band to accompany them, and assist their pep squad in general noise making. On the other hand, the Olney Chamber of Commerce band will be on the Cubs' field, and Olney's red and white bedecked girls' pep squad will be present to give their usual colorful performance.

Both Games Important

Followers of class B football will divide interest between the Graham-Bowie and Olney-Archer City games, for the winners in each district meet in the bi-district game after Thanksgiving. The outcome of the two games today will go a long way toward deciding who the bi-district competitors will be.

Other games of equal importance are booked for today. Here at Wichita Falls the Reagan and Zundelowitz Junior High school teams will play for the championship of the Northwest Texas Junior High school conference and the city junior championship. And for the fans who enjoy watching the powerful negro eleven at the Booker T. Washington High school, a good game is promised when the team meets Chickasha, Okla., on the Washington school field at 3:30.

District No. 3 offers two other conference games besides the Olney-Archer City struggle. Munday will play at Seymour, and the contest should be a lively one. Chillicothe will play at Burkburnett, where the Bulldogs have shown steady improvement. Although Chillicothe is a surefire favorite to win, their victory will not be easily gained. Crowell originally was scheduled to play Megargel, but the latter team entered a forfeit. Crowell immediately booked a game with the powerful class A Quanah Indians. The game will be played Saturday at Quanah.

More in District 4

District No. 4 offers three other conference games besides the Graham-Bowie tussle. Bridgeport will journey to Nocona and give the Indians of the latter city a final chance to bolster their drooping percentage. Jacksboro will tackle the mighty Masons of Fort Worth and Newcastle is scheduled to play Graford.

Way up in the Panhandle, where the wind's a-blowing all day long, the Clarendon and Miami teams will clang battle ax and wield swords for the right to enter the finals in district No. 1. Each has won the championship of its respective section. The game will be played at Miami.

Slaton will play at Amarillo in a district No. 1 class A conference game.

Altus at Lawton

The scene changes to Oklahoma, where one of the biggest football games of that state will be played today at Lawton. The Altus Bulldogs, winners of the Southwestern Oklahoma High school conference, will be Lawton's guests. Lawton has made a strong bid for the mythical state championship with an undefeated record to date. Altus is undefeated in her conference and boasts one of the most aggressive elevens in the state, so the game today will have state-wide significance.

Another Oklahoma game that also will attract state-wide interest will be between Grandfield and Duncan, at Duncan. Duncan is out of it, but Grandfield is rated with Lawton as one of the strongest in the state.

Other games scheduled today include:

Matador at Paducah.
Bellevue at Saint Jo.
Haskell at Stamford.
Healdton, Okla. at Walters, Okla.
Waurika, Okla. at Ringling, Okla.
Frederick, Okla. at Mangum, Okla.
Hollis, Okla. at Elk City, Okla.
Clinton, Okla. at Sayre, Okla.

TEAMS PROMISE TOUGH SCRAP

Annual Setto to Begin at 3 O'Clock

The Reagan and Zundelowitz Junior High school teams yesterday called it a day after a brief warming up, and stood in readiness to square off in their annual football game at Athletic park this afternoon.

The game will start at 3 o'clock.

When the youngsters emerged from their jerseys after yesterday's brief workout, an end came to a vigorous training campaign lasting the biggest part of two weeks, the object of which will become evident today as the school boys engage in their usual bitter struggle for football supremacy not only in their own city, but in the Northwest Texas Junior High school conference. The other member of the conference, Bowie, has been definitely eliminated from the race.

With both teams in top shape both mentally and physically, and with their noodles crammed with football knowledge assimilated from a full season of coaching by two capable mentors who have never failed to put scrapping teams on the field, Wichitia Falls fans are promised one of the best scraps in a decade today between the junior high elevens. Coach Roy Golden of Zundelowitz announced that his team was in the best of shape, and determined to man the gridiron battlements with all the cunning and vigor they possess in order to retain the laurels they achieved last year in defeating the Reagan Redbirds, 7 to 0. Coach A. D. Beck of the Reagan Redbirds announced the mental stigma of overconfidence which had crept into his camp as the result of an impressive undefeated record this season has been definitely chased out, and that his boys, while not nervous and totally lacking in confidence, were at least apprehensive and were expecting a rough and woolly afternoon.

The teams, despite all rumors to the contrary, are about evenly matched in weight. Earlier reports that Reagan far outweighed the Zundy men, were denied by Coach Beck, who pointed out that while he has one or two hefties, the majority of his men are light, bringing the average weight down to a par with Zundy's.

The probable starting lineups:

No. Zundelowitz	Position	Reagan No.
13 Hund (c)	L.E.	Stengel 2
11 Tollett	L.T.	Ashcraft 13
9 Baird	L.G.	Rambo 8

6 Malcom	R.T.	Clark 15
10 Weidman	R.E.	Creecy 14
4 Maag	Q.	Smith (c) 1
5 Marshall	L.H.	Yeakley 4
7 James	R.H.	West 10
14 Rusk	F.B.	Robinson 12

Time—3 o'clock Friday.

Ticket Prices—Adults, 50 cents; students, 25 cents.
Officials—Barry Holton, referee; Charlie Lindsey, umpire; Butler Westerfield, head linesman.

Dutch Mantell, Panhandle Bad Man, Grapples With Jack Gorman Tonight

The original Panhandle bad man will be back in Wichita Falls tonight in the person of Dutch Mantell of Amarillo. Mantell will be back tonight after a long absence from Wichita Falls to take on one of his old rivals in Bob Conner's grapple show to be staged at 607 Scott street tonight at 8:30. He meets Jack Gorman, the popular San Angelo cyclone, in the main event tonight in a match for which local fandom long has waited. With the more modern methods of wrestling, Mantell should be an even more colorful performer than he was in the old days.

The semifinal match brings together Whitey Grovo and Joe Kopecky. Lee Meyers was originally booked for the match but was unable to appear.

There will also be one or two promising preliminaries on the card but Promotor Conner was undecided as to who the contestants will be. Advance sale of the tickets has started at the Marshall and Johns Amusement parlor at 810 Scott street.

Henrietta B Team Wins Over Burk Juniors, 25-6

Special to The Record News.

HENRIETTA, Texas, Nov. 19.—The Henrietta B team defeated the Burkburnett Junior High school eleven here today, 25 to 6, in the last game of the year scheduled for the local second stringers. The home boys scored in every quarter, Schwend making two touchdowns and Sims and Saulkner making the other two. Saulkner provided the biggest thrill of the day when he returned a punt 60 yards for a touchdown in the last quarter. Burkburnett scored its lone counter in the second period when Norval received a pass from one of his mates and galloped 40 yards for a touchdown. The Sims to Powers passing combination of Henrietta worked splendidly. Powers also was a star on the defense, as were Boyd and T. Neville.

Burk All-Stars to Play Seymour Team Sunday

Taking on a more confident attitude after their victory last Sunday over the Army, the Burkburnett all-stars are ready to square off Sunday against the Seymour Wildcats. The game will start at 3 o'clock Sunday afternoon at Shamburger stadium in Burkburnett. The admission will be 10 and 25 cents.

The Burkburnett eleven has greatly improved over their early season showing and with their victory last week over the powerful Army eleven and the recent additions of several new men they believe they ar ready for the Seymour club. The Wildcats are coached by Roy Langford, who is reputed to have a great team of stars. Among the most important of the recent men to join the Burkburnett lineup is Floyd "Pat" Patterson, star center of the high school Bulldogs back in the gala days of Herbie Ludgate.

San Jacinto Beats Olney Ward Team, 14-13

The San Jacinto ward school football team defeated the North ward school eleven of Olney on Culbertson field here yesterday afternoon by the score of 14 to 13. Failure of a pass for extra point to click cost the Olneyites an opportunity to deadlock the count.

The Olney team, coached by Herschel McCartey, started out tamely but gradually picked up strength and battled the locals in merry fashion. The San Jacinto eleven was forced to rally in the last quarter to put over the touchdown and extra point that won the game, as the visitors scored twice in the opening half. San Jacinto scored their first touchdown in the first period. Both teams used power plays for their touchdowns, Donald Tucker making both of the San Jacinto touchdowns and the extra points, the first on a line plunge and the other on an end run.

SPUDDER LEADERS MEET TODAY

OLNEY READY FOR WILDCATS

Archer Fans Invade Young County Today

Special to The Record News.

OLNEY, Texas, Nov. 19.—After a week of intensive drill on blocking, passing and charging, Coaches Acker and Hayes announced that their team was ready to meet Bill Cooper's Archer City Cats here Friday at 3 o'clock.

Fans are assured one of the greatest offensive battles of the year when the fleet visitors throw their spinners, reverses, runs and plunges at the Cubs. If Cooper's outfit had not shown any football ability before the Olney game, they would rise to the occasion as all Cat teams have done. Now that the Archer entry boasts its best team in several seasons, the Cubs will have a tough assignment that will take all of 60 minutes to settle.

A confident team that is willing to mix things is always dangerous, and that is the kind of team Cooper will bring to Olney. The town of Archer City is coming en masse and has asked for permission to parade behind a 40-piece band from Wichita Falls, hired especially for the purpose. Olney citizens are glad to have the parade, but are hoping that the Archer boys won't want to parade after the game.

The Olney Junior Chamber of Commerce band and high school pep squad will supply all the yells and music for the home cause. The suggestion that outside band assistance be secured met with a storm of disapproval from local citizens. The entire business district will close at 2:30 for the game.

The return of Vaughn to his guard post after a 10 day lay-off and the showing of Martens and Perkins, reserve guards in the Seymour game, encouraged the home cause. Crawford has shown plenty in games so far and is considered a regular, though he seldom starts a game. He plays anywhere on the line. Improved blocking on the part of Wright, lanky end, has aided the Cubs considerably. Several flaws in the defense have been corrected to meet the fast charging Cats from Archer City.

McEvoy Here To Attend Meeting Of Stockholders

Stockholders of the Wichita Falls Baseball club, some 60 in number, will hold their annual meeting this morning at 9:30 o'clock in the club's offices in the Harvey-Snider building, it was announced yesterday by President William E. Huff.

Among other business to come before the meeting will be the election by the stockholders of a new board of directors, and the election by the board of officers for the coming year. Officers at present in addition to Mr. Huff are P. S. Richardson, vice president, and Guy Airey, secretary. The present board of directors includes Mr. Huff, Mr. Richardson and the following: C. E. McCutcheon, John Nossett, H. E. McConnell, Anderson Kemp, Claud Woods, Britt Cranfill and W. N. Bonner.

L. C. McEvoy, business manager of the St. Louis Browns, Spudder parent club, arrived in Wichita Falls Thursday to be on hand for the stockholders' meeting today. Mr. McEvoy expected to return to St. Louis Friday soon after the meeting. He will be a guest at the Junior chamber of commerce meeting at noon today and probably will make an address, it was said.

The Browns' executive yesterday expressed his appreciation for the work of the chamber of commerce and other organizations and individuals here in the successful campaign to retain the Spudder franchise, and expressed confidence that 1932 would be a good baseball year for this city.

Mr. McEvoy last evening was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Huff. Mr. and Mrs. Airey and J. Alvin Gardner, Texas league president, at dinner.

Armistice day, Duncan lost to Lawton, 39 to 0. Tuesday the Demons surprised home fans by holding Yukon, Southern conference champions, 13 to 12. The fighting conference leaders were given a scare when Duncan showed surprising strength and outplayed the visitors. Duncan made 349 yards in scrimmage to 269 for Yukon. NEW YORK COTTON

NEW YORK, Nov. 19. (AP)—Cotton was rather irregular today within a narrow range. An early decline was followed by partial recoveries, but bulges were not fully maintained.

January contracts, after selling off to 6.25 during the earlier trading, rallied to 6.29 and closed at 6.28 with the general market closing steady at net declines of 2@5 points.

There was some southern selling but it was in no great volume, and there were reported during the afternoon of a firm spot basis in the South. Brokers thought to be acting for the cooperative interests, were again sellers of March and May during the day, and there was further December liquidation partly in the way of exchanges from December to later months without much change in the differences. Some buying on the early afternoon bulge was attributed to covering or local buying for a rally on an idea that the markets technical position had been improved by recent liquidation and trade buying.

Liverpool cables reported hedging and general liquidation influenced by the weakness in Alexandria, but said there were fair sales of cotton cloths to South America and Africa. Egyptian futures in the Alexandria market were 41 to 100 points lower. Exports today 348,401, making 2,444,038 so far this season. Port receipts 40,177. U. S. port stocks 4,654,282.

NEW ORLEANS COTTON

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 19. (AP)—Cotton fluctuated narrowly with comparatively light trading today and prices while steady developed no special trend.

There was further December liquidation in the early trading and cables were easier, but later the market was supported by trade buying and by a slightly firmer tone in stocks and grain. The market eased off 8@9 points in the early trading owing to lower cables than due coupled with liquidation. Later prices rallied, recovering 4@6 points on some trade buying and price fixing and in sympathy with stocks and wheat. There was apparently an absence of new features calculated to stimulate trading.

In the afternoon the market was steadier in sympathy with other markets and higher silver in New York making new highs 8-11 points above the lows. After reacting 3-5 points at the end on realizing the market closed steady at net declines for the day of 3-4 points.

Liverpool was due tomorrow unchanged to 1 penny point up.

Liverpool came in as due to 2 penny points worse than due. Bar silver in London was quoted at 18 1.16d or a small fraction lower. Private cables stated that there was hedging and general liquidation and that Alexandria was weak. Manchester cabled that there were fair cloth sales to South America and Africa.

December closed at 6.15, January at 6.27 and March at 6.44, 3-4 points net lower for the day.

Highly Nervous and Irregular Market Makes Little Progress

By BROADAN WALL

NEW YORK, Nov. 19. (US)—The stock market today was a highly nervous and irregular affair which at the close registered little progress either way compared with the preceding day. Several times rallies were under way only to fade under comparatively light offerings. The most satisfactory portion of the day's trading perhaps existed in the maintenance of a small turnover. A stronger tone developed among the railroad shares although the buying was none too aggressive, but a few rails managed to retain modest fractional gains to the close. New lows were reached in all parts of the list excepting utilities. Wheat helped sentiment somewhat by advancing and silver, too, was firmer. Nevertheless, there seem overhanging the market the same degree of nervousness that has been apparent for a long time.

It was very apparent from the market's action that short-covering has been contributing the major portion of recent support. Some speculative buying also developed in expectation or hope that the conferences between railroad executives and labor union heads may result in some sort of a compromise with respect to wage cuts. A story which persisted in circulating was to the effect that the administration would throw its weight behind an appeal to railroad labor to accept a voluntary wage-cut as a patriotic act. The speculative element in the market still emphasizes the the great benefits to accrue, per-share, proportionately to bond interest requirements, etc., from a wage reduction. Fundamentally, of course, only improved business can improve the status of the railroad securities. In the meantime, while the labor conferences get under way, railroad bonds continued weak and many rail issues sunk to new lows, the latter including Atlantic Coast line (which cut its dividend from $7 to $4 annually), Baltimore & Ohio preferred, Chicago & Northwestern common and preferred, Rock Island common and 7 per cent preferred, Illinois Central, Nickel Plate preferred, New Haven preferred and Union Pacific. There are rumors of new pools being formed in railroad bonds and shares but the market to date reflects only speculative demand. The rail shares on the average bond down to within half a point of the Oct. 5 lows.

Copper shares were in supply again, but the suspicion expressed here today that not all of the story about the curtailment conference has been told, gained wider recognition. As a matter of fact, it now is learned that the Belgian producers were in agreement with the American copper people, but that the English bolted the conference just when complete success seemed assured. The English represent the Rhodesian mines, which have a large potential production, but they demanded special concessions which the other producers were unwilling to grant. The situation in the industry will become desperate for various companies in the rule of might, or of disastrously low prices, is permitted to work out the salvation by merciless competition.

Declaration of regular dividend by United Corporation, whereas some reduction had been expected, resulted in a small fraction gain for the issue, but it failed to show any impressive demand other than short-covering. New York Central likewise was favored by short-covering retaining almost a point net gain for the day. Serious illness of one of Wall streets most noted statistician operators caused some nervousness and confusion in stocks in which the street believes he has an extensive interest. For example, there was some covering in American Can, on which he had been bearish.

Stocks, other than rails, which reached new lows, were: Affiliated Products, American Brake Shoe, Anaconda Wire and Cable, Ingersoll Rand, Johns-Manville, Lane Bryant, Marlin Rockwell, Peoples Drug, Underwood Elliott, U. S. Freight and Warner Pictures.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, Nov. 19. (AP)—Uneasiness over Manchuria hostilities and in particular as to greater chances that Russia might become involved tended to put backbone into grain markets today. There also was buying on assertions for influential trade sources that it had been seldom the wheat market offered greater investment possibilities than at present, and that current values were the sum and substances of a liquidated world. Independent strength shown by the corn market was an additional stimulating factor, with the singular development that Iowa industries were purchasing corn in Chicago to be shipped into Iowa, one of the heaviest corn producing areas in the world.

Wheat closed unsettled 1¼@1⅜ cents above yesterday's finish, corn ¾@1⅛c up, oats ⅜@¾c advanced and provisions varying from 10 cents decline to a rise of 2 cents.

Wheat scored its maximum advances late in the day, recent speculative sellers making haste then to reverse their market position. The late upturns in prices accompanied reports that Japan had invaded territory in Manchuria heretofore regarded as under Russian control. There were unconfirmed rumors, too, that Russia demanded Japan evacuate the Soviet railroad zone in Manchuria. Earlier, bullish sentiment as to wheat had been stirred by Liverpool unofficial reports that 1,200,000 acres of wheat in southern Argentina were affected by frost.

Rains and snows today in western Kansas and western Nebraska were generally looked upon by traders as being too late now to alter an unfavorable wheat crop situation. Contributing to handicaps of wheat bears was meagerness of domestic primary receipts, 660,000 bushels today against 1,183,000 a year ago. On the other hand, North American new export business in wheat amounted to only 400,000 bushels.

The corn market was carried upward by reports of high cash prices at western, southwestern and northwestern markets, as well as by the fact that Iowa industries were bidding for corn at Chicago. Receipts at all points except Chicago were scanty. It was reported that adequate supplies of corn could not readily be bought in Iowa owing partly to organized moves to hold corn back on farms and partly as a result of unusual demand for corn in drouth districts North and West.

Oats reflected corn strength.

Provisions were steadied by firmness of hogs values and cereals.

PIT NOTES

CHICAGO, Nov. 19. (US)—Trade in wheat was considerably lighter today, but the market showed persistent strength. The ease with which rallies are accomplished on any sign of foreign strength suggests that there is plenty of latent buying power willing to take the constructive side on reactions so long as foreign markets are firm.

More interest is attaching to the cash corn situation as each day brings new reports of unusually high prices being paid in western sections of the belt. Today there were reports that the ordinary movement has been reversed this year with high prices drawing corn to the west from territory usually tributary to this market.

Estimates now place the German rye crop at 40,000,000 bushels below that of a year ago, which is about 20,000,000 bushels less than the preliminary estimates.

For the third day in succession, primary receipts of corn have run approximately half of the figures of a year ago.

The Oklahoma refined market continued strong with all refiners quoting 4¾ cents a gallon for the U. S. motor specification gasoline. Intensive buying both in group three and the Chicago wholesale area thoroughly cleaned up what slight bit of distress material might have been on the market. Some of the major refiners who have put into effect a stringent plan of curtailment also found it necessary to buy stocks to meet their needs.

A check of the refiners of Oklahoma fails to reveal any who are overburdened with stocks and all continued to quote 4¾ cents a gallon for U. S. motor specification gasoline, f. o. b. group three in tank car lots.

A consignment of non-specification material, of low octane number might be found.

Natural gasolines continue soft.

Texan Swaps Tales With Ohio Governor

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Nov. 19. (AP)—Gold rush days in the Yukon were recalled at the Ohio executive mansion today when Gov. George White was visited by one of his old-time Alaskan friends, E. E. Andrews, now an oil producer of Abilene, Texas.

During the visit, Andrews produced a picture of White he made when they met in the Klondike region back in 1898. The picture revealed Ohio's present governor as a young man who followed the fashion dictate of the day—for White had an imposing set of sideburns.

Andrews recalled a deal he had with White in the old days. It seems that Andrews purchased an ox and two horses for $800, and then "wished" the ox on White to drive through. White took the animal 700 miles inland. The settlers were tired of wild meat, and a woman paid $1,400 for the ox.

CHURCH TRIAL DRAWS CROWD

Atticus Webb Denounces Liquor in Feature Talk

The trial-drama, "Who Killed Earl Wright?" drew a large audience Thursday night at the First Baptist church.

Guy Rogers presided as judge, and Mrs. E. F. Fruechte acted the part of the prosecuting attorney, with Dr. Atticus Webb of Dallas acting as counsel for the defense.

The drama is based upon an actual incident which occurred in Iowa. Testimony showed that the defendant, Frank Lloyd, really killed his friend, Earl Wright, but that he did so under influence of liquor purchased by an older man from a local bootlegger. J. W. Marshall appeared in the part of the defendant.

Public Also Guilty

High point in the trial was reached in the argument for the defense by Dr. Webb. Since the evidence was against his client, Dr. Webb gave his attention to the part played by the bootlegger in furnishing the liquor that inspired the tragedy.

Dr. Webb charged the bootlegger with being equally guilty with the defendant, that the patrons of the bootlegger in financing the traffic were the chief partners in the bootlegger's crime, that the officers who neglect to enforce the law are guilty along with the bootlegger, that the propagandists in encouraging the opposition to the law are aiding and abetting the crime, and that the citizens, who by indifference, tolerate the bootlegging are not guiltless in crime. He then picked up the bottle containing a part of the evidence, charging it and its contents, liquor, as an equal accomplice in the crime, closing with an eloquent denunciation of liquor.

Liquor Traffic Scored

"Liquor has drained more blood, twisted more bones, blinded more eyes, armed more villians, defiled more innocents, dug more graves, blighted more manhood, despoiled more womanhood, crushed more hearts, snapped more wedding rings, hung more crepe upon the doors and mortgages upon the home—liquor in the hands of the bootleggers today and the bartenders of yesterday has left in its trail more crimson tragedies than has any other poison scourage that ever swept its death-dealing waves across our fair land," he said.

Tramp Party

Miss Elizabeth Davis entertained a number of her friends at her home on the Iowa Park road Wednesday evening with a tramp party.

After a musical entertainment, each one was invited to the back door, and was given a lunch in a paper sack, which contained everything for a weiner roast. The girls then hiked to the woods and gathered around a large camp fire to eat their lunch in real tramp fashion. Then they returned to the barn and climbed into the hay loft and enjoyed stories and jokes told by each until a late hour.

Those present were Misses Mattie and Della Beeler, Willie D. Conner, Ruth Hodges, Mae Mauldin, Florence and Myrtle Simpson, Mrs. Eva Davis and the hostess, Miss Elizabeth Davis.

Here's Protest to Go With Gas Bill

The citizens committee appointed by Mayor Walter Nelson Jr., to advise with the city council in its efforts to obtain lower gas rates suggests that gas users fill out and sign the coupon herewith and mail or hand it in when paying gas bills:

Wichita Falls, Texas,
Nov. ...., 1931.

My bill for gas due Nov. ....1931, is paid under protest because rates charged are in excess of those authorized by ordinance No. 1067 of the city of Wichita Falls, Texas, passed by the board of aldermen and approved by the mayor Aug. 24, 1931, and effective on Oct. 1, 1931. All amounts in excess of rates fixed by that ordinance are paid to prevent interruption of service and for no other reason.

Police Chief Morris to Open School For Cops; First Session Tonight

A police school for city officers will be conducted one night weekly, beginning Friday, it was announced Thursday by Dick Morris, chief of police.

In addition to serving as a means whereby officers can be instructed in proper police methods, the school is expected to result in increased efficiency of men on the force through the discussion and exchange of ideas.

A principal purpose of the school, Chief Morris explained, is to instill habits of proper conduct in officers in the execution of their duties and to impress upon them the necessity of courtesy toward the public.

Three speakers have been obtained for the first session of the school. Edgar Scurry, city judge, and Thelbert Martin, city attorney, will address the officers on law, as it applies to arrests and the securing of evidence. Their lectures are designed to give the officer the ability to determine whether or not he can present a "case" against a defendant. James A. McDonald, county probation officer, will talk on juvenile work, and will offer suggestions as to how city police can best handle juveniles and juvenile cases.

The school will open at 6:15 p. m. and probably will last about 30 minutes, Chief Morris said. Efforts will be made to hold school every Friday evening.

It is hoped to secure speakers from the group of county and district judges and attorneys here for the next session, it was said.

Modern Reformatory for Women Dedicated by Illinois Governor

DWIGHT, Ill., Nov. 19. (AP)—Oakdale, the new $900,000 cottage plan state reformatory for women, was dedicated by Gov. Louis L. Emmerson today.

The reformatory and its administration is in direct contrast to the conventional idea of a prison. Located on a 160-acre tract just outside of Dwight are the 11 buildings already in occupancy. All buildings save the farm house are built of stone and yellow brick, along the lines of English architecture and the seven prison cottages would be more aptly described as English manor houses.

There are no high stone walls, no armed guards. Instead there are potted plants in the women's rooms; gay colored napkins on dining room tables and pianos with popular and classical music on the racks in cottage living rooms, which are bright and cheerful with wicker furniture.

Hard faced, sharp voiced wardens are not to be found. Instead there are smiles, politeness and greetings cheerfully given between staff and inmates. However, underneath is a stern but understanding spirit of discipline that moves the routine of the reformatory like clockwork.

There are at present 110 prisoners, ranging from 18 to 65 years in age and confined for offense from petty larceny to manslaughter. Under a law passed in 1927, all women in Illinois more than 18 years of age who are sentenced for terms of six months or longer are to be sent to Dwight.

Mayor Nelson Urges Wichitans To "See a Good Show and Help Needy"

Funds From Benefit Performances at Midnight Matinees to Go Into Local Relief Work During Winter

An appeal to Wichita Falls residents to "see a good show and help the needy" was issued here Thursday by Mayor Walter Nelson Jr., in urging support of the local theaters' donation of funds to relief work here.

All theaters Saturday night will present a midnight matinee, and each has booked one of the feature pictures of the fall. Funds derived from the shows will be turned over to local agencies for relief work this fall. Theater workers have donated their services to the cause, pictures are furnished without charge and all other expenses are being met by the theaters. Mayor Nelson's statement follows:

"Unemployment relief has been a matter uppermost in our minds and hearts for quite some time. Though times are taking a turn for the better, in the opinion of those best in the position to know, the rigors and hardships of the approaching winter are close at hand. Millions of people throughout America, and hundreds of our own Wichita Falls' citizens, will not be able to fend for themselves this winter. They cannot provide themselves with the necessities of life and the safeguards of health to carry through to better times when they may again take their place as producing and self-supporting citizens of our country. These are things you have heard over and over but they are fundamental truths and create a situation which calls for the best that is in all of us who are more fortunate.

All Funds to Needy

"Long-faced Puritanism has had its day; it is possible to do good without being doleful about it. In fact, you are being offered that opportunity on Saturday evening of this week. All motion picture theater owners of Wichita Falls are joining in National Motion Picture week and have scheduled benefit performances to assist in raising funds for unemployment relief. All such funds will be turned over to local unemployment relief agencies for local use—and when we say all of the funds, we mean that the theaters are making no overhead charges for these performances.

"The thousands of people engaged in the motion picture industry throughout America seem to have inherited some of the finer traditions of the old-time theater. It has been traditional from time immemorial for actors to help one another, and now they and the industry which they have so firmly established in the world of amusement have expanded and are doing their full part in endeavoring to help mankind at large.

Good Combination

"If you are a theater-goer—and most of us are that lucky—you should make sure to be present at one of the local theaters at the midnight matinee on Saturday night, Nov. 21. Each of them will feature programs bristling with good entertainment. You can have a good time and do good. What better combination can you imagine in helping along the aid of unemployment relief?"

F. Vivian Dunn, 23-year-old violinist, has just been appointed director of music to the Royal Marines at Portsmouth, making him the youngest conductor in the British navy.

Wichita Shriners To Attend Okla. City Fete

OKLAHOMA CITY, Nov. 19. (AP)—Charles F. Stewart, potentate, said tonight that more than 1,500 Shriners, including a delegation from Wichita Falls, Texas, would attend the annual autumn ceremonial opening here tomorrow.

Members of the divan and the patrol of Maskat Shrine temple left Wichita Falls by bus Thursday afternoon for Oklahoma City, where they will attend the annual fall ceremonial of the Oklahoma temple. The Wichitans expect to spend Friday in Oklahoma City.

It is reported that more than 79,000,000 trees were planted in the United States during 1930 for reforestation.

Kell Approves Plan to Hold Texas Centennial With Dallas Fair

Frank Kell, Wichita Falls banker, capitalist and railroad owner, has given his endorsement to the suggestion that the Texas centennial celebration be held in Dallas in conjunction with the Texas state fair in 1936.

Mr. Kell said he believes that duplication of the buildings and plant of Fair park at Dallas—a step generally regarded as necessary to make a successful centennial event—would be a needless expenditure.

Wilbur C. Hawk, business manager of the Amarillo News-Globe, advanced the suggestion recently that the centennial and the fair's golden jubilee be celebrated in one grand event. Many Texas leaders have approved his suggestion.

Mr. Kell said that Dallas is the logical place to hold the centennial celebration "since satisfactory buildings and grounds are already in existence and probably better than could be built in so short a time."

CIVIC THEATER PLAY TONIGHT

Proceeds of Comedy to Aid P.-T. A. Lunch Fund

Twenty members of the Wichita Falls council P.-T. A. canvassed the business section of the city Thursday in the ticket sale for the Civic Theater players' performance of "A Successful Calamity" at the Memorial auditorium Friday night, and predicted a record-breaking attendance at the benefit entertainment.

Proceeds of the play will be devoted to the purchase of lunches and other absolute necessities for underprivileged children of this city as discovered in the public schools by the P.-T. A. organization.

Clare Kummer's comedy has been under intensive rehearsal for more than three weeks under the direction of J. C. Straus Jr., and has been provided with an aptly chosen cast. Headed by H. H. Ferrell in the role of an harassed millionaire, the group which presents "A Successful Calamity" Friday night is capable of producing one of the most entertaining plays ever given by local artists.

Popular prices have been announced for the benefit performance with adult tickets selling at 50 cents, and those for children at 25 cents. Tickets have been on sale in all the public schools for several days, and will be on sale at the Renfro Drug store Friday. The play will begin at 8 o'clock.

O'Beirne Talks On Thanksgiving Spirit

The spirit of Thanksgiving was extolled by Rev. Father Patrick J. F. O'Beirne of the Sacred Heart church before members of the Rotary club at the Kemp hotel Thursday noon.

Love of God is impossible without love for one's neighbors, the speaker asserted.

"In every human soul there should be two tides of feeling," Father O'Beirne said. "In one, the divine gifts of God should be inhaled, and in the other we should exhale thanksgiving to God for His blessings.

"We are indebted to God not only for our gift of life, but also for its preservation and continuance. We should also thank God for the gifts of our fellow men, for it is He that inspires such gifts."

The annual Zundelowitz-Reagan Junior High school football battle at Spudder park Friday was announced by William E. Huff. Albert E. Kelly announced that proceeds of two midnight matinee performances at local theaters Saturday night will be given to charity. The Civic Theater Players performance of "A Successful Calamity" at the Memorial auditorium Friday night for the P.-T. A. lunch fund was announced by Dr. O. T. Kimbrough.

Parish Dinner Friday at 6:30

Members of the Church of the Good Shepherd, Episcopal, will attend a parish dinner Friday evening at 6:30 o'clock instead of Thursday evening as announced Thursday afternoon. The report was incorrect in setting the time of the dinner as Thursday.

Affairs concerning the parish will be discussed at the meeting at the parish house tonight. A turkey dinner for 200 persons is being prepared under the direction of Mrs. W. S. Maxson, president of the women's auxiliary. Entertainment for younger members of family has been arranged in the basement during the meeting. The program is in charge of Merril Blair and Mrs. Kenneth Bebb has arranged several musical numbers.

TWO ASSESSED PRISON TERMS

Corbin Convicted in Robbery of Drug Store

Two more convictions of felony charges were obtained by the state before Judge P. A. Martin in the 89th district court Thursday, and a third trial for the day was under way when court recessed late in the afternoon until 9 a. m. Friday.

James Corbin, accused of having burglarized the Estep drug store at the corner of North Fifth street and Broadway on Oct. 30, was given a two-year penitentiary term by a jury which deliberated only a short time. Corbin was defended by Eli Williams and Temple Shell.

Earlier in the day, Fred Turman was convicted of receiving and concealing stolen property and assessed four years in the penitentiary. The defendant was indicted in July in connection with the theft of a coupe belonging to R. V. Roden last March 18.

Ernest Jones, negro, was placed on trial late Thursday afternoon on charges of theft and receiving and concealing stolen property. The charges resulted from the alleged theft of dry goods from a mercantile company's automobile several months ago. The car, also appropriated, was found parked on a residence street here the following day. Jones was tried several weeks ago, and was sentenced to three years, but obtained a new trial on the charges.

Ticket Sale for Billie Burke to Start Saturday

A wild jamboree of midsummer madness is perhaps the best phrase to describe Paul Osborn's sparkling and sophisticated play in which Billie Burke comes to Memorial auditorium for one performance only Wednesday night, Nov. 25, under the banner of the energetic and highly successful producing firm of Belasco and Curran.

As Laura Merrick, Miss Burke is decidedly at her best, according to all who have seen her in this daffy tale of Long Island society folk. She plays a flighty matron who is in love with love and who being neglected by a liverish husband starts on a fevered search for romance. Miss Burke plays Laura with the irresistible charm which distinguishes all of her roles.

Her supporting cast is of uniform excellence, including William Morris, Julie Dillon and Harry G. Bradley. Edgar MacGregor, who staged Miss Burke's first play, has had charge of the direction.

Reservations are now being accepted by addressing H. C. Cheshire care Renfro Drug or telephoning 9047. The downtown ticket sale will be at Renfro Drug Saturday morning at 0 o'clock.

Woman Has Narrow Escape From Blaze

Fire early Thursday morning destroyed the home of E. E. Barbe, 301 Bluff street, and forced Mrs. Barbe, who was alone at the place, to escape in her night clothing.

Mrs. Barbe was awakened by fumes and smoke of the fire as they penetrated to her bedroom. The blaze then was spreading rapidly over the home.

Origin of the blaze was undetermined, although it was learned that the fire started in a clothes closet. Damage was estimated at $2,000 by fire officials.

A second fire early in the day caused damage of $10 to an automobile belonging to T. R. Manning at Tenth and Bluff streets.
