'THIS IS MY HOME'

Bush dazzles hometown crowd in packed-out downtown Midland

Future president's arrival creates party atmosphere

By Gary Ott
City Editor

It was billed as a giant coming home party for Midland's favorite son.

And more than 20,000 guests were expected.

The decorations — mostly in the form of anything red, white and blue — were in place hours before the guest of honor was to arrive.

There was tight security in place, although the officers were not always easy to detect ... which was the way they wanted it. Many simply mingled through the crowd trying not to be noticed. Others, using metal detectors, checked guests as they entered the party. A handful of others could be seen perched on top of adjacent buildings or peering through windows of offices on top floors of those same buildings.

In other words, everyone was invited, they just had to be checked out very carefully before being allowed to enter.

Of course, that's how it works when you invite the next president of the United States to your party.

And that was the scene in downtown Midland Wednesday morning.

President-elect George W. Bush was coming home.

Everyone, it seemed, wanted to be there.

THEY STOOD OUTSIDE AND THEY WAITED.

Some showed up as early as 6:30 a.m. to stand outside and wait. They waited to see the flash of pearly white. They waited to see that familiar wave. All of Midland seemed to be waiting to see the tip of the white cowboy hat of their hometown boy.

They waited more than six hours for ten minutes of President-elect George Bush and his wife, Laura. And for those who were able to see him, they were not disappointed.

"I enjoyed it," said Midlander Mary Miller. "I'm glad that I went and I thought that it was good that he made it short."

'This place has shaped the values that will shape our service to the nation.'
— President-elect Bush

He said "the spirit of possibility in Midland was as big as the West Texas sky," and despite the cold weather that dipped down as low as 31 degrees, spirits were high as Bush wowed the Midland crowd. People from all over the West Texas region showed up by the bus load to hear Bush's words of good will and West Texas pride.

Organizers said more than 20,000 were expected to attend.

"I immediately knew the city where I grew up was where I wanted to go, where I wanted to live," Bush said. He spent his childhood here before returning to enter the oil business in the 1970s.

Bush, who appeared on stage alongside his wife, Laura, a Midland native, was greeted by thousands of waving American flags and cheering West Texans. While addressing the crowd full of young

Children add unique perspective to historic event

Bubbling with excitement, some lucky area schoolchildren took field trips Wednesday morning that allowed them to experience a slice of history ... the visit of President-elect George W. Bush to his hometown of Midland.

Among those students getting the opportunity were members of MISD's Gifted Education of Midland (GEM) program, which took six bus loads of fourth-, fifth- and sixth- graders from Carver Center to the event.

Patricia Maurer, director of the GEM program, said the "weather was a concern, but this is a once-in-a-lifetime affair. We didn't know if we were going to do this or not. If it had kept on raining, we would have made a different decision (about going) ... but the kids kept their hats on and their jackets zipped, so it's no worse than a football game in December."

Vicky Rice, a fourth-grade teacher, called it an exciting

Bunton, West Texas legend with quick wit, dies at 76

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

Lucius D. Bunton, a legendary West Texas federal judge acclaimed for his wit and humor and the "rocket-docket" pace of his moving cases, died Wednesday in Austin after battling illnesses that did not sway him from the bench.

He was 76.

Bunton was "a very skilled trial lawyer and a jurist of legendary repute," said Texas 238th District Court Judge John Hyde of Midland.

"During his time on the bench, he was known as a dedicated, hard-working judge," Hyde said. "The memory of Judge Bunton will endure."

Memorial services for Bunton are to be held at 2 p.m. Friday in the First Baptist Church of Odessa with Dr. Ernest Easley and Jack Tidwell officiating.

Bunton, who was born in Del Rio on Dec. 1, 1924, grew up in Marfa ranching country as the son of pioneer ranchers Lucius D. Bunton and Avis Fisher Bunton.

He served on the battlefields of Europe during World War II.

After earning a law degree from the University of Texas in 1950, he was a West Texas district attorney, Odessa lawyer for

Bush visit draws travelers from all corners of West Texas

By Stewart Doreen
Staff Writer

President-elect George W. Bush came back to Midland, but Midlanders were not the only ones who packed Centennial Plaza on Wednesday to catch a glimpse of their favorite son.

As far as West Texans from San Angelo to Seminole and Colorado City to Fort Stockton go, Bush's appearance in Midland meant much more than seeing a man who is "one of us." It was a chance to see the 43rd president of the United States.

"This is the ultimate," said Seminole's Sue Elliott, one of the many thousands who braved the chilling temperatures for a peek at Bush. "I drove last night and was up at 4:45 a.m. with rollers in my hair as if it mattered.

"There is no chance the weather would have stopped me."

It also didn't stop four Midlanders from being the first through the east gate's doors. Kim Graham of Midland was the first in line along with her 9-year-old daughter Kirsten and friend Shannon Brittain, and her 7-year-old daughter, Shelbie. The four arrived at 6:30 a.m.

"I thought she (Kim) was crazy (to arrive so early)," said Ms. Brittain. "I went along for her (Shelbie). This is a once-in-a-lifetime thing."

The reality for some was the chance to see, greet and in a few cases, meet Bush, who will be inaugurated on Saturday. It had much to do with politics and regional pride. Glasscock County had the highest percentage of voters for Bush of any county in the nation (92.5 percent) in November's general election.

"God has given America another chance," said Garden City's Brenda Schwartz. "It feels good to be an American."

For Fort Stockton's Carol Adams, Bush's appearance was a chance to share a most significant moment in West Texas' political arena with her granddaughter, Lynne Brooks, of San Angelo. They were standing in line at 6:45 a.m.

"It is not every day you get to see a president," said Ms. Brooks, a student at San Angelo Central High School. "I just wanted to see him and hear what he had to say. He impressed me."

Learning a lesson seemed to be a popular theme of the day as noted by the impressive turnout from the local and area schools. Colorado City, which is noteworthy in this case for its Democratic ties, brought its entire middle school (300 students).

"We had been involved in a mock election on the Internet," said Joan Tolle, a representative of Colorado City middle school. "Our kids were interested in the election itself, so whenever we found they were going to do this, we said, 'Ya'll voted for him and he won. Now, let's go meet him."

It was a social studies lesson that transcended the classroom.

"I told them they had to know what the other party believed in order to make the right choices and to respect what the other party had to say," said Karen Trent, a social studies teacher and one of the few Democrats who could be found among the sea of Republicans. "I am curious to hear what the state of the nation will be and the ideas of where we are going."

There was little talk of politics in Bush's 10-minute speech, which probably left some unfulfilled. Still many came just for the chance to see a man who will become the most powerful of the world's leaders.

"I never imagined I would see a president of the United States, so this is a great privilege," said Elder Lee, a native of Canada who is in Midland fulfilling his duties as a missionary for The Church of Latter Day Saints. "I don't know too much about the politics in Canada, but I do know that President (-elect) Bush is a good man, and I am anxious to hear what he has to say."

Carol Lester, of Eunice, N.M., had a hunch going in that she would like what Bush's speech said. Ms. Lester worked for a George Herbert Walker Bush campaign in the 1960s.

"I think he will be an excellent president," Ms. Lester said. "People say he doesn't have any international experience, but he grew up with the master, big George."

Airport maintains security as Bush comes and goes

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

The priority was the safety of President-elect George W. Bush during his Wednesday visit to his hometown.

Security was so effective, it seemed, that many folks who took virtual heroic efforts to witness his coming and going at Midland International Airport were frustrated but not totally disheartened.

Bush's undisclosed route was not at their vantage point.

In the freezing wind, Beth Edgeman brought her 3 1/2-month-old daughter, Lindsay, to see the president-elect as he and his entourage headed to downtown Midland.

"She's got to love him," the mother said of her child. "This is Bush country. We are so glad to have someone dignified back in the White House."

Bush's jet aircraft touched down at the airport at 11:10 a.m. and took off three hours later en route to Washington, D.C.

"Everything went smoothly — no problems at all," noted Justine Ruff, deputy director of Midland's airports.

Instead of heading to Midland via the airport's main south entrance at LaForce Boulevard, Bush and his entourage took the southeast route at Deer Horn Aviation and onto Midland via the old U.S. Highway 80.

A Texas Department of Public Safety helicopter, piloted by John Brannon, patrolled the airport area. Mounted horseback Midland County sheriff's deputies patrolled at ground level as did Midland Police Department (MPD) patrolmen and sheriff's patrol units.

Black-and-white DPS patrol cars en mass secured the president-elect's route by the droves.

Law-enforcement agents, donned in black, were stationed on the roof atop Avion Flight Centre's Avion South facility.

MPD Detective Ben Chavez kept watch at LaForce Boulevard and Earhart Drive near Avion South, which was barred to the public.

"It's an honor to be out here, ... to serve on this day — just making sure the president-elect is going to be safe especially in our town," Chavez, 31, said. "It happens once in a lifetime. There's a lot of planning that has gone on ... just to make sure he is safe."

Evangelist Bill Murphy, 52, Vicky, 46, were passing through Midland after a stopover in Artesia, N.M., when they heard about Bush's impending visit, which coincided with their 32nd wedding anniversary.

"We voted for him," Murphy said, " I think he's our hope for our nation's future that we haven't had for a long time"

The Bush entourage bypassed their route.

Volunteers help make dream become reality

By Lynde Hedgpeth
MRT Correspondent

The men in black coats with earpieces had an army of more than 200 civilians in red hats with lanyards to help keep the peace at Wednesday's downtown rally for President-elect George W. Bush.

The Secret Service worked hand-in-hand with local volunteers, sporting red baseball caps labeled "Bush-Cheney Transition Event Staff," to organize the President-elect's last stop before taking up residence in Washington.

"This is my last stop on my way to Washington," Bush said in his 10-minute speech at the rally. "I'm going to take a lot of Midland and a lot of Texas up there."

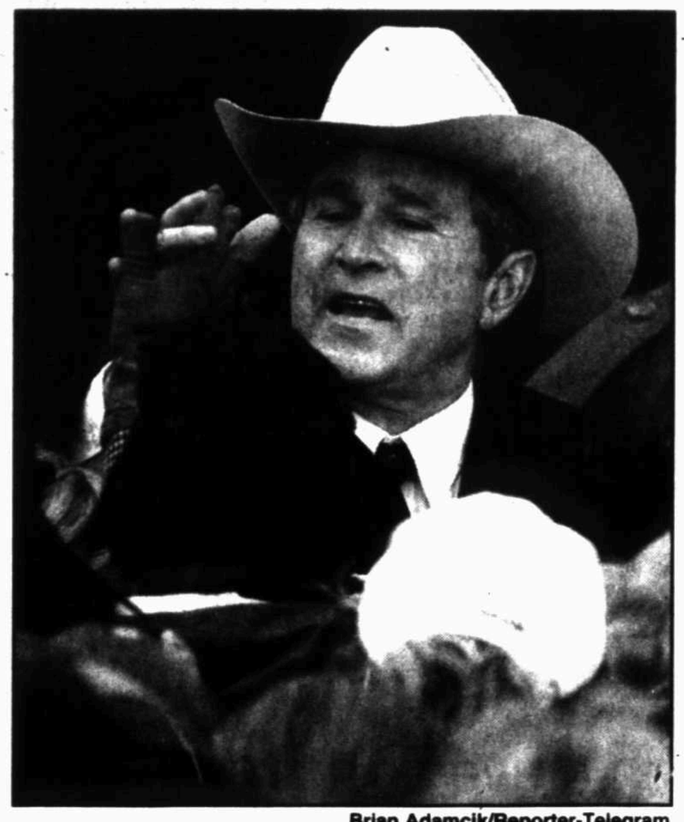

Although Bush stayed in Midland for less than two hours, volunteers for the event arrived as early as 7 a.m. to help check in and control the crowd, which was expected to have 20,000 to 30,000 attendees, according to Bruce Partain, communications manager of the Midland Chamber of Commerce.

"The event could not have happened without the volunteers we had," said Robert Rendall, the volunteer coordinator for the event. Midlanders have been working all week to put the event together from procuring the large flags that hung on downtown buildings to helping the rally's entertainment find their places.

"There was so much energy here," Bush said. "Not only in the ground, but in the lives of the people of West Texas."

Volunteers have put their energy into making the event happen since they received word the President-elect was coming to Midland a week ago. Members of Midland's "The Sky's the Limit" committee spent the week organizing entertainment, working with the Bush transition team and making arrangements for the crowd and national media.

"I've always been a proponent of any community I've lived in," said Cathy Burgess, a local organizer for the rally. Ms. Burgess spent the week talking to local media about the event. She and the other members of the committee also had the task of mobilizing the more than 200 volunteers who turned out to help supervise the crowd. Twenty-five volunteer captains led the army of helpers.

"I'm supposed to do crowd control," said 13-year-old Matthew Beall, one of the younger volunteers. Beall was part of the 24-member volunteer team from Midland High School's Young Republicans. Midland Independent School District excused the absences of students attending the rally.

Lupe Daniels, a member of Midland's Republican Women, took the better part of two days off from her job at Midland College to help with the event. She helped herd school children into place at the rally.

"We also decorated yesterday in the sleet," Ms. Daniels said. Volunteers helped assemble and decorate the two stages and risers at the corner of Texas Avenue and Loraine Street just north of Centennial Plaza.

Not all the volunteers saw Bush's speech. Sande Updegraph, who is also a volunteer for Saturday's downtown Inaugural celebration, went back to work after she helped the rally's vendors set up.

"That's all right; these people are wonderful," she said.

In expressing his appreciation toward Midland, Bush said he'd learned the value of being a good neighbor and the spirit of community purpose while growing up and later working in the oil business in West Texas.

"This place has shaped the values that will shape my service to this nation," Bush said.

Mayor Bobby Burns acknowledged the rally's volunteers as he introduced George W. Bush.

"Thank you for making this happen," Burns said.

BUSH: President-elect praises Midland for values, support and old, Bush praised Midland for the support it has given the Bush family.

(From 1A)

"Our deepest values in life often came from our earliest years," Bush said. "It is here in Midland, Texas where I learned to respect people of different backgrounds."

Bush walked onto the stage at Centennial Plaza shortly before noon. His speech was wrapped up by 12:11 p.m.

It hit a wide range of highlights. Bush mentioned everything from what made him return to Midland after college to his desire to bring the politicians in Washington, as well as the American electorate, together.

"I leave here really upbeat about getting things done for the people," Bush said.

Bush told the crowd he would be carrying the spirit of Midland to Washington, D.C. He spent much of the speech focusing on how Midland helped create "two presidents and the governor of Florida."

Bush told the crowd how many of the most important things that happened in his life occurred in Midland. Bush pointed out he met his wife here and his children spent the early years of their childhood in the Permian Basin. He also talked about how Midland was a place of values and principle.

"This place has shaped the values that will shape our service to the nation," Bush said.

Other than weather that wouldn't cooperate, the event went without too many hitches. Those who couldn't sit directly up front could see and hear Bush on the Jumbotron and the various speakers set up around the plaza. Lines to get in the event were long, some stretching as far as three to four blocks. Many people who came to attend could not get in. Lines were still long well after Bush began speaking.

Midland also was briefly under siege by the flock of regional, statewide and national media that descended upon Centennial Plaza. Wall Street was lined with satellite trucks from all over Texas. Journalists clamored their way through the crowd also searching for the perfect spot to get a shot of the president-elect.

The day was also a good day for area businesses. The downtown Hilton was booked solid and the Ground Floor coffee shop on Wall Street was packed with customers. On Texas Avenue area vendors lined up to sell everything from hot tamales to T-shirts. At Caubble's Sportswear's booth, people lined up to reserve an "Official Inaugural Celebration T-shirt." Although they ordered 1,600 shirts for the event, they had already sold out before the event was over.

"It was a fantastic idea," said Caubble's employee Karen Pridgen of the shirts. "We're the only ones that have it. They're a limited edition."

Even Danny's Deli gave into the Bush fever, serving "Bush Brisket" before, after and during the big event at their booth. The deli renamed their regular brisket sandwich in honor of Bush.

"He (Bush) really got strong as the campaign went along," said Wyatt Chandler as he dished out the "Bush Brisket" for the event. "He got real strong just like his father."

Midland Mayor Bobby Burns was also enthusiastic about Midland's big show for Bush. He felt Midland presented themselves favorably at this historic event. Burns said he was more than pleased with how things went and Bush's speech.

"He loves Midland and he loves Texas," Burns said. "I'm glad Midland had the opportunity. The sky's the limit here and that proves it."

Burns said the city has been preparing for this event for the past 10 days. Although Burns said he would have preferred warmer weather, he found it to be a good day for Midland.

"All of Midland feels really good right now," Burns said. "He (Bush) was connecting to the Midland people and he wanted to show that he was there for them."

Bush ended his speech with a promise to never truly leave Texas. He mentioned how when he's not residing in Washington he will be at his ranch in Crawford. He also reiterated that Texas is his home and he has no intention of abandoning it once he becomes president.

"I know that the White House does not belong to the occupant," Bush said. "While the honor (of being president) is great, the work is temporary. I'm leaving Texas, but not forever. This is my home."

Bush's stop in Midland was his last stop before heading to Washington to be sworn in as the 43rd president of the United States.

JUDGE: 'Bunton loved to try cases more than anything else'

(From 1A)

20 years, and a federal judge since his 1979 appointment by President Jimmy Carter.

Survivors include his wife of 54 years, Mary Jane; a son, Lucius D. Bunton of Austin, and a daughter, Cay Warner of Pampa, and four grandchildren.

Bunton and his wife only recently moved to Austin due in part to his declining health. But Bunton, as a senior federal judge, maintained a less demanding docket than was his custom for more than 20 years.

James Nowlin, the Austin-based chief judge of the Western District of Texas that spans from the Austin-Waco-San Antonio area to El Paso, said it was "difficult to separate Judge Bunton the man from Judge Bunton the judge because he was the same person.

"You have these judges sometimes, especially federal judges, who tend to change demeanor when they put that black robe on and get on the bench," Nowlin said. But Bunton was "pretty much even-tempered — the same person in the office that was out there on the bench.

"He had a great sense of humor, kind of a mischievous sense of humor," Nowlin recalled.

Bunton, who did not endure lawyers' redundancies or tendencies to drag out trials, had been known to "cut those people off by squirting them with a water gun.

"I just thought it was great," Nowlin said. "He (Bunton) thought those lawyers were talking too long."

Bunton "loved to try cases more than anything else," Nowlin said. "He loved to sit out on the bench, listening to witnesses and lawyers."

U.S. District Court Judge Royal Furgeson, who in the 1990s succeeded Bunton as resident judge for the Midland-Odessa division, has termed Bunton as "one of the great trial judges of America."

U.S. District Court Judge Sam Sparks of Austin said Bunton was "a joy to be around, a good person and a good friend."

As a "foot soldier in World War II, (Bunton) saw terrible, terrible things on the battlefield as a private," Sparks said, then returned to the states, married his sweetheart, studied law, and became "established (in West Texas) as a very quick-witted lawyer. He was a very quick-witted person."

Before his federal judgeship, he practiced law in the Shafer-Gilliland-Perry law firm in Odessa.

Bunton maintained the federal court in Pecos where the new courthouse is named in his honor, and he "kept nurturing" the Midland-Odessa federal court.

Bunton was a "gentleman and a scholar," said Midland County Judge Bill Morrow. "He treated people with courtesy and had a very fine sense of humor — a good-natured humor. He was always happy to see folks."

Midland lawyer Steve Hershberger, who was Bunton's law clerk in the early 1980s, said the judge "was like a second dad to me.

"He is kind of like a father figure to a young lawyer," Hershberger said. "He taught me a lot about law and the ropes about how to do things and how do them with integrity and honor."

KIDS: Children brave cold, freezing toes to see Bush

opportunity. "The cold weather might dampen the kids' spirits, but they'll be OK."

One of her students quickly agreed.

"This is a part of history," the little boy said while staring out of the bus window.

The children, bundled up and equipped with an apple and a Rice Crispy treat from the cafeteria, weathered a three-hour wait for Bush.

"My toes are freezing!" was a common complaint, as temperatures hovered slightly above freezing for most of the event. Of course, some were less content with simply waiting in line and standing around. They would burst into patriotic song, or sometimes dance to keep warm, with the occasional spontaneous chant of "We want Bush!, We want Bush!" to hurry the event along.

Other students were more prepared. "We brought a tarp and some blankets, because it's cold," commented a group of Midland Christian students.

U. Frank Williams Jr./Reporter-Telegram

In general, the kids were excited about Bush's visit, and enjoyed the departure from routine. For practically all of them, as well as many adults in the crowd, it marked the first time they had seen Bush in person. Many of the kids were dazzled by the fanfare, the beefed-up security and gathering of people for the unique event, or as one sixth-grader said, "I like the way people were cheering out loud and waving their flags."

Occasionally, one would shout, "I saw a Secret Service agent!" directing his finger in the general direction of the subject, and drawing the attention of the other children around him, usually extracting giggles and disbelief from his audience.

Other schools from the surrounding areas also sent students, some of the more remote ones departing as early as 7:30 a.m. just to arrive on time.

Kimberlee Bolla's sixth-grade journalism and photography class at Carver Center had the chance to stand near the podium. When the President-elect moved out into the crowd many of them were standing in front, and some even had the chance to shake Bush's hand.

One student, sounding like many adults in the crowd, said, "What I liked most is that someone from Midland made it big like that."

Some went — and didn't get in

Having a ticket to the see President-elect George W. Bush didn't guarantee a thing. Neither did driving two hours or getting to Centennial Plaza hours ahead of the noon hour when Bush took the stage.

In the end, the process of taking tickets and maintaining required security checks kept many people on the outside looking in.

It was no secret that the homecoming of George W. and Laura Bush was going to attract a crowd. Event organizers believed 20,000 to 30,000 people would make their way to Centenhial Plaza. And they were right.

As a result, when Bush took the podium at noon, there were many people still trying to get to the plaza's grounds.

"It is disappointing, but with all the people who were expected to be here, I might have expected as much," said Aaron Oliver of San Angelo. Oliver left San Angelo at 7:45 a.m. and stood in line for more than one hour only to hear Bush's speech standing on Wall Street. "I can't imagine how (it could have been done better) without compromising security."

Security is a big issue when the guest of honor is days away from being the 43rd president of the United States. Many of the people realized that and took what they could from the event.

Glenn and Joanne Headrick, also of San Angelo, were two of the people who also had to settle for a passing glimpse from a distance and hearing a few words.

"I appreciate the opportunity to be around where he is," Headrick said.

"I am thrilled to death to hear his words," Ms. Headrick added. "I have heard a lot of presidents, and I have never felt the compassion I have with him. Some say he stole the election. I say God intervened."

The 60 students and 10 teachers from Scharbauer Elementary put a positive spin on standing out in the cold for hours.

"The children were a bit disappointed, because they knew who he is and wanted a glimpse of him," said Adrianne Clifton, an assistant principal at Scharbauer Elementary, "but they got to come and see what the hoopla is all about. It is a memory they will always treasure. He is going to be the president for the next four years and we are real excited about that."

Not everybody who was left out could find a silver lining on this dreary day. Annette Eggerman and her son, John, drove 100 miles from Hobbs, N.M. to see President-elect Bush.

"We couldn't hear him, and we couldn't see him" Eggerman said. "I got a boy who is interested in politics and the election, and he didn't get in, so we are a little disappointed."

PARTY: Midlanders hug, mug for cameras, enjoy themselves

(From 1A)

It started early. Guests, with tickets in hand, began arriving at 6:30 a.m., even though it had been announced no one would be allowed on the grounds of Centennial Plaza until 9 a.m. By 7:30 a.m., lines had already formed, in some cases stretching around city blocks.

A genuine sense of anticipation filled the air as thousands of Permian Basin residents, bundled in heavy clothing to brave the near-freezing temperatures, kept sneaking glances at the giant clock on the courthouse grounds, silently counting down the minutes before Bush would arrive and take center stage.

But until that time came, those in attendance seemed determined to turn the lengthy — and chilly — wait into a festive celebration.

Laughter could be heard everywhere. There were plenty of hugs, too, as people repeatedly said, "Can you believe this?" and "Isn't this exciting?"

Then they glanced at the giant clock again.

People of all ages mugged for cameras, both little ones being used by friends and family members as well as big ones being handled by members of the news media. It was as though everyone wanted to be sure their participation in this piece of Midland history was properly recorded.

The favorite form of mugging, however, might have been when the Jumbotron kicked in and hundreds of small children suddenly spotted themselves on the giant screen. Their squeals pierced the air.

But it was when the clock passed 11 a.m. and Mike Conaway, serving as master of ceremonies, announced Bush would be arriving in less than an hour, that the excitement reached its peak. As those inside the fences anxiously awaited the big moment, thousands more still were standing in lines outside hoping to get in before the future president's motorcade arrived. A few gave up and headed back to their cars, which were parked several blocks away, but most hung in until the bitter end.

Some managed to get in; others didn't.

Even those who did get in had to be content with positions far from Bush.

Still, they didn't seem to care. Just seeing a future president was enough.

"I managed to see just a little of him," said Midlander David McMahon, who found a spot near the plaza's fountain area. "I got just a peek."

Nancy Mullinix, another Midlander who got on the grounds just moments before Bush started speaking, also was glad she made the effort to attend.

"I moved around some and got a glimpse of him as he was shaking hands with the people on the grandstand," she said, adding she has a "special pride in being from the same town as two presidents.

"It puts Midland on the map."

Some got in, but couldn't see

By Richard Acosta
Staff Writer

Despite the 31-degree temperature Wednesday morning, high school bands played, media swarmed and the crowds cheered at Midland's send-off for President-elect George W. Bush.

But once through security, some people soon realized not everyone would have a great seat to see Bush. In fact, while the president-elect, cowboy hat in hand, spoke to his hometown crowd, some people found themselves staring at the back of the big tent — or even bleachers holding journalists — rather than the next president of the United States.

"I got in line at 7:15 a.m." said Suzy Prucka, a Midlander who is currently a college student. "It was worth seeing our president. But it would have been nice if I could have seen more of him than just through the reporters' legs."

Thousands of people, dressed for Friday night football, waited in line for hours to get into Centennial Plaza, so there was some mild disappointment from those who didn't have a great view of the show.

"I'm a little upset that we'll not be able to see what we came here to see," said Midlander Linda Hieb. "I got my kids out of school and waited in the cold for a few hours just to get in."

Chasiti Hamilton, 15, said she was upset because she really wanted to get a picture of Bush for her dad, who had to stay home because he was sick.

For the most part, however, most everyone agreed that in the end it was worth going to the event if only to say, "I was there."

Goddard Junior High students Cynthia Salvan, Johnny Marmolejo, JoAnne Flores, Daniela Hernandez, Marcus Ascbedo and Caress Hernandez were all selected by their social studies teacher to attend the event.

They said they were picked because of the way they pay attention and the work they do in class. Although they weren't even able to catch a glimpse of the president-elect, they said it was well worth dealing with the cold and the long lines.

"This is like a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity," said Miss Salvan, as her fellow students nodded in agreement. "Just getting to be here for this was great."

Midlander Kathy Hunter said she didn't care if she got to see Bush or not. She said she would have come even if she knew she wouldn't get to see him.

"This doesn't happen every day," Ms. Hunter said. "How often does a president come to Midland, much less one who is from here. I'm just glad to be here. I think it was well worth the wait."

Midlander Emelia Guzman echoed Ms. Hunter's sentiments, saying she was just glad she got in before the event was over.

"I wasn't at all disappointed," Ms. Guzman said. "I mean, I would have liked to have seen him, but I think everyone feels that way. But it doesn't make being here any less worth it."

Celebration for Bush Inaugural isn't over yet

Now that we have celebrated a thrilling "welcome home" event for President-elect George W. Bush and his wife Laura, we want to remind Midlanders the party isn't over yet.

This Saturday, we can all come together again and watch Bush's swearing-in ceremony. Festivities in honor of the Bush inauguration will be celebrated from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Saturday at Centennial Plaza downtown.

The event will be appropriately called, "Midland's Rising Son: A Salute to George W. Bush."

A lot of dedicated hard work and planning has gone into making this a fun, festive, community-oriented event for Midlanders who aren't lucky enough to attend the real thing in Washington, D.C. this weekend.

The event will kick off at 10 a.m. with the Children's Inaugural Parade. Gayle Dodson, who does such a fine job each year of organizing the Fourth of July Children's Parade, has been kind enough to lend her experience, creativity and organizational talents to this event.

At 10:30 a.m., mistress of ceremonies Melissa Hendrix, NewsWest 9 anchor, will get things rolling with a special video presentation of "George W. Bush ... Then and Now." The formal presentation of colors, Pledge of Allegiance and the national anthem performed by Lee High Chorale will follow.

The inaugural ceremonies (which take place at noon Eastern Standard Time) will be broadcast at Centennial Plaza on large screens beginning at 11 a.m. There also will be a Confederate Air Force flyover. There will be the usual welcome of area officials and at 11:40 a.m. The Lee High Origin will perform the George W. Bush Commemorative Song. More musical performances will follow with the talents of the Hispanic Cultural Center of Midland, True Lite Christian Fellowship Church Choir, Tall City Line Dancers, Sam Houston Elementary School students and singer Casey Lee Green taking the stage.

Of course, Midlanders will want to gather around the large-screen television when we have a chance to see the Midland High School and Lee High School bands marching in the Inaugural Parade in Washington, D.C.

This is a proud moment for our community. Volunteers have done a fabulous job of coordinating this community event.

We hope everyone will join together at Centennial Plaza on Saturday to take part in this historic celebration.

Today in History

Today is Thursday, Jan. 18, the 18th day of 2001. There are 347 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Jan. 18, 1912, English explorer Robert F. Scott and his expedition reached the South Pole, only to discover that Roald Amundsen had beaten them to it. (Scott and his party perished during the return trip.)

On this date:

In 1788, the first English settlers arrived in Australia's Botany Bay to establish a penal colony.

In 1862, the 10th president of the United States, John Tyler, died in Richmond, Va., at age 71.

In 1919, the World War I Peace Congress opened in Versailles, France.

In 1936, author Rudyard Kipling died in Burwash, England.

In 1943, during World War II, the Soviets announced they'd broken the long Nazi siege of Leningrad.

In 1943, a wartime ban on the sale of pre-sliced bread in the United States — aimed at reducing bakeries' demand for metal replacement parts — went into effect.

In 1967, Albert DeSalvo, who claimed to be the "Boston Strangler," was convicted in Cambridge, Mass., of armed robbery, assault and sex offenses. (Sentenced to life, DeSalvo was killed by a fellow inmate in 1973.)

In 1970, Mormon president David McKay died at the age of 96.

In 1990, a jury in Los Angeles acquitted former preschool operators Raymond Buckey and his mother, Peggy McMartin Buckey, of 52 child molestation charges.

In 1990, Washington, D.C., Mayor Marion Barry was arrested in an FBI sting on drug-possession charges. (He was later convicted of a misdemeanor.)

Ten years ago: Round-the-clock bombing of Iraqi targets continued in Operation Desert Storm. Financially strapped Eastern Airlines shut down after 62 years in business. Former New York Congressman Hamilton Fish Sr. died in Cold Spring, N.Y., at age 102. Three young people were crushed to death at an AC-DC concert in Salt Lake City.

Five years ago: Russian President Boris Yeltsin announced that 82 hostages were freed when his forces wiped out Chechen fighters in Pervomayskaya, ending a weeklong standoff; however, he said 18 other hostages were missing.

Battle against narcotics: Can it be won?

WASHINGTON — With the delicacy of someone seasoned by much experience near the summit of government, Donald Rumsfeld has indicated strong skepticism about a policy from which this country may reap a bumper crop of regrets.

Will

Asked about the $1.6 billion — so far — undertaking to help fight the drug war in Colombia, Rumsfeld said he had not formulated an opinion. However, he embroidered his agnosticism with thoughts antithetical to the program for which George W. Bush, during the campaign, indicated support.

In his confirmation hearing, Rumsfeld, the next secretary of defense, said combating illicit drugs is "overwhelmingly a demand problem," and added: "If demand persists, it's going to get what it wants. And if it isn't from Colombia, it's going to be from someplace else."

Indeed. In authorizing the aid for Colombia, Congress demanded, delusionally, the elimination of all of Colombia's coca and opium poppy cultivation by 2005. That would almost certainly mean a commensurate increase in cultivation in Colombia's neighbors. One reason Colombia is the source of nearly 90 percent of the world's cocaine and a growing portion of heroin is that U.S. pressure on coca and poppy production in countries contiguous to Colombia, especially Peru and Bolivia, drove production into Colombia, where coca production has increased 140 percent — to 300,000 acres — in five years.

Now pressure on Colombia is pushing production into Colombia's neighbors. The New York Times reports that cocaine processing labs have recently been found in Ecuador's Amazon region. This is evidence that local peasants, who have crossed the border in recent years to work in the cocaine business, are "returning with the drug expertise they have acquired in Colombia."

Regarding the use of the U.S. military in policing this region, it is depressing to have to say something that should be obvious, but here goes: The military's task is to deter war and, should deterrence fail, to swiftly and successfully inflict lethal violence on enemies. It is difficult enough filling an all-volunteer military with motivated warriors without blurring the distinction between military service and police work.

The $1.6 billion for Colombia will mostly pay for helicopters that Colombia's military will use to attack drug factories and 17,000 Marxist guerrillas, who are the world's most affluent insurgents. They use drug trafficking, taxes on coca production, extortion and ransoms — grossing perhaps as much as $900 million a year — to wage a war now in its fourth decade. The guerrillas also are opposed by right-wing paramilitary forces — 8,000 strong and growing — that are increasingly involved in drug trafficking.

Speaking of narcotics, Colombia has a "peace process" with a familiar asymmetry: Colombia's government wants to tame the guerrillas with a peace agreement; the guerrillas want to topple the government. Colombia's government is creating a second demilitarized zone in the country, this one for the second-largest guerrilla group to use as a haven during peace talks. But The Washington Post reports that since the first such haven was created two years ago for the largest guerrilla group, that group has used it "to increase drug cultivation, stage military offensives, train new recruits and hold more than 450 soldiers and police officers captive in open-air pens."

Kidnapping has become industrialized in Colombia, and assassins can be hired for "a few pesos" according to Brian Michael Jenkins. Writing in The National Interest quarterly, Jenkins, an analyst of political violence and international crime, says Colombia's 30,000 murders unrelated to war translate into 100 deaths per 100,000 Colombians, a rate which in the United States would mean 250,000 murders a year.

Colombia, Jenkins says, is a combination success story and tragedy. The unemployment rate is 20 percent, and will go higher if defoliants and other anti-drug efforts put small growers and processors out of business. But Colombia has Latin America's fourth-largest economy and one of its highest literacy rates. It has 40 flourishing universities and has never defaulted on its debts. Yet a Gallup poll reveals that 40 percent of Colombians have considered emigrating and 60 percent know someone who has emigrated in the last two years.

Colombia's drug-related agonies are largely traceable to U.S. cities. Although one-third of Colombia's cocaine goes to Europe, America's annual $50 billion demand is a powerful suction pulling in several hundred tons of cheaply made, easily transportable and staggeringly profitable substances. Here is the arithmetic of futility: About one-third of cocaine destined for the United States is interdicted, yet the street price has been halved in the last decade of fighting the drug war on the supply side.

The important appointments are still to come

Most of the appointments of the Bush administration have finally been made, but the really important ones are yet to be named. They are those invited to be part of the Republican Roundtable. My son, Joel, received a personal letter from Senator Bill Frist, chairman of the Roundtable.

This is what he wrote: "As Americans confront the challenges of the 21st Century, my colleagues and I agree that we must have more people of your caliber in the decision-making process."

Buchwald

There was only one catch to the honor. It cost $5,000. Joel, who is a Democrat, thought the Roundtable had made a mistake — or at least a scam. But I disagreed with him. "Bush said we are all Americans, and therefore Democrats as well as Republicans should be part of the Roundtable. He doesn't want our money, he wants our input."

Joel wanted to know "To become a member do I have to be confirmed by the Senate?"

"I don't think so, although I'm sure you have to be investigated by the FBI. After all, as a member of the Roundtable you are going to associate with high elected officials and their peers.

You will also be in on making decisions. Listen to this: 'Though surrounding himself with a strong leadership in his cabinet, White House staff, and in Congress, our new president's success will be tied to the support he receives from friends like you. This means the Roundtable will be working in face-to-face discussions that will help Republican ideals of free enterprise, limited government, and common sense for our American values.'"

I could tell Joel was impressed. "How do you think they got my name?" he asked.

"I'm sure they have headhunters who go through all the eligible candidates. Probably your background in nuclear testing, foreign policy, environmental issues, space, and your grasp of the natural gas problem was called to their attention. Do you know if any of your friends have been talking about you?"

"I don't know of anyone. It seems to me this appointment came out of the blue. I never even met with the president-elect or Cheney."

"By the way, it says in the letter that for an extra $1,890 per couple you get to attend an Inauguration activity, including a seat in the stands for the swearing in."

Joel said, "I might as well do it. I've always been interested in government and this is an opportunity to be up there with the stars. Can you loan me $5,000 so I can get my feet wet? Even if it's not high profile it's more than I expected from this administration."

New president and old challenges

George W. Bush becomes the 43rd President of the United States on Saturday, looking at the same possibilities and pitfalls that face every new president. In his Inaugural Address, written primarily by his chief speechwriter, Michael Gerson, Bush will call for healing and reconciliation from the wounds caused by the close and controversial election. But the opposition shown him by liberal special interest groups, which will continue to question the legitimacy of his victory, shows that they are not interested in what Bush is offering. They only want power.

Former Secretary of Education William Bennett made a good point last week in an interview with Brian Williams on MSNBC: "One good thing that's happened to the Republican Party in the last couple of years is, I think, we got rid of the haters ... If you want to see the haters, you will see them in these press conferences, behind the attempt to kill John Ashcroft's nomination, to destroy a very good man and his reputation..."

Thomas

Can Bush be an effective president by turning the other cheek each time it is slapped by the likes of Jesse Jackson, People for the American Way and Democrat congressional leaders? Will he make the mistake of Israeli Prime Minister Ehud Barak, who thinks it is only what he does, and not the opposition, that determines whether comity will reign? If Bush starts tossing his principles overboard just to have Democrats and The New York Times editorial page praise him, he will fail.

That "reconciliation" strategy did not work for his father, who extended the hand of cooperation and conciliation to then-House Speaker Jim Wright and other Democrats and politically found it hacked off. So what's plan B if reconciliation and conciliation don't work? The elder Bush didn't have one. Bush the younger had better have one. Bush spokesman Ari Fleisher seemed to understand this last week when he said that liberal special interest groups are "engaging in lots of levels of partisanship. They are not toning it down." Nor are they likely to. Will the Bush White House go beyond pointing out the obvious and risk being called "mean-spirited" and "devisive"?

The media helped marginalize right-wingers they regarded as haters, but they amplify those on the left who eat grievance and spitefulness for breakfast. In part this is because they make good television and provide incendiary quotes that get readers' juices going when they appear in print. Fund-raisers of both left and right stoke the coals with ever more outrageous language because only an outraged letter recipient who feels insulted and disenfranchised will send money. Success and kind words are the enemy of a good fund-raising campaign.

Columnist Richard Reeves last week recalled Alexis de Toqueville observing in 1830 that one of the odd things about American politics was that so many candidates won control of the government by attacking it. Bush has an opportunity to play on the love-hate relationship many Americans have with government by emphasizing the things they love about it and demonizing the things they hate. Perhaps his most difficult task will be to marginalize the self-appointed and self-anointed screamers who enjoy so much media attention. The torch has again been passed to a new generation and Bush can say the same holds true for the voices of the past. While we may honor, or dishonor, some of those voices, they are the past. New leaders and new approaches are needed for a new generation.

Republicans have read the Democrats' script and repeatedly seen it played out on the political stage. So far, they have been ineffective in producing an effective counter-play of their own. President George W. Bush is a new director. We'll soon see if he has the vision to energize Republican and conservative ideas in ways that haven't been seen since Ronald Reagan's first term.

Police question motive behind fiery truck crash

By Steve Lawrence
Associated Press

SACRAMENTO, Calif. — A tractor-trailer slammed into the state Capitol, killing the driver and igniting a fiery explosion that forced the evacuation of lawmakers working on California's power crisis. Police were investigating whether the driver deliberately rammed the truck into the building and had a grudge against the governor.

No other injuries were reported in Tuesday night's crash.

Witnesses said the single-trailer rig careened through downtown streets at up to 70 mph, its horn blaring, before it roared onto Capitol grounds and smashed into the south portico below the Senate's second-floor chambers. The vehicle stopped just short of the Capitol's doors.

The Sacramento Bee reported Wednesday that the driver was believed to be Mike Bowers, a 37-year-old prison parolee who had a grudge against Gov. Gray Davis. The governor was not in the building at the time of the crash.

"There's a suspicion that it was deliberate but right now that's under investigation," said California Highway Patrol spokeswoman Nanci Kramer.

Davis spokesman Steve Maviglio said the governor was being briefed by investigators and had no immediate comment.

The patrol said earlier it was investigating whether a mechanical problem caused the crash. Investigators looking for a bomb on board, found none and determined that the explosions were caused by diesel gas tanks bursting into flames, fire Capt. Don Braziel said.

Bowers was the truck's registered driver, the Bee said. The driver's body, which was burned beyond recognition, remained inside the truck Wednesday morning. His name will not be released until the identity was confirmed, said FBI spokesman Nick Rossi.

The Department of Corrections said Bowers had served time twice in state prison and was first sentenced to two years for battery on a police officer in 1986. Bowers was paroled four times and returned to prison four times during that sentence.

While on parole, he was convicted of corporal punishment of a child and was sentenced to six years, Department spokesman Russ Heimerich said Wednesday. Bowers left prison in July 1995 and remained on parole until 1998.

Part of his sentence was served at Atascadero State Hospital, a mental health facility in the prison system, Heimerich said.

The truck, which was carrying a shipment of evaporated milk, belonged to Dick Simon Trucking Inc., based in West Valley City, Utah.

President Kelle Simon told The Associated Press that background checks are conducted on potential hires. Company officials didn't know about Bowers' criminal past, he said.

"That's news to us," Simon said. "Law enforcement has access to information we don't have. As far as we know, nothing showed up on any problem with the driver."

Mike Houskeeper, a claims examiner with the trucking company, told the Bee that the driver who normally has the truck made a scheduled delivery earlier Tuesday outside of California and was not scheduled to make another stop Tuesday night.

The truck struck the building at about 9:15 p.m. just as the Assembly adjourned an evening session. Stunned lawmakers were evacuated and watched as firefighters fought the blaze.

"It's almost unbelievable, absolutely unbelievable," Assemblyman Carl Washington said.

Two ornate columns on Capitol facade were blackened by smoke to the third floor level, with the truck jammed between them.

Authorities said they did not want to remove vehicle until they determine whether there was structural damage to the building.

Most of the Capitol was reopened by Wednesday morning.

Flight for two prison escapees comes to a halt two days later

McALESTER, Okla. (AP) — Two fugitive inmates, one convicted of raping and murdering an 81-year-old woman, were caught Wednesday just two days after they escaped from the maximum security Oklahoma State Penitentiary.

The men broke out of the prison by gaining access to an air duct and then scaling two fences topped with razor wire.

Convicted murderer James Robert Thomas and kidnapper Willie Lee Hoffman were arrested without incident Wednesday afternoon at a house in Lehigh, said Jerry Massie, spokesman for Department of Corrections.

A car believed stolen by the two inmates had been found earlier Wednesday in Coalgate, seven miles north of Lehigh.

Thomas, 25, was serving a life-without-parole sentence for murdering 81-year-old Jessie Roberts in 1993, plus 400 years for raping her. Hoffman, 21, was serving 20 years for kidnapping and other crimes.

They were discovered missing from the prison's high-security H Unit early Monday. It was the first escape from that unit, which was built in 1991, officials said. The heavily guarded prison hold the state's most dangerous criminals and its death chamber. The men made their break by pulling toilets from their cell walls to gain access to a maintenance crawl space. They crawled through an air duct, made their way to the roof, then reached the ground and climbed over the fences, officials said.

Amid chaos, Congo places president's son in charge of country

By Arnaud Zajtman
Associated Press

KINSHASA, Congo — Cabinet officials thrust President Laurent Kabila's son into power Wednesday, making him head of this vast, deeply troubled African nation's government a day after Kabila was reportedly killed in a palace attack.

Reports Kabila had died continued to roll in Wednesday. Congolese officials, however, insisted he was wounded but alive when they announced the temporary measures to fill the power vacuum that has threatened to throw Congo into even more turmoil.

"Until President Kabila has recovered, and to ensure stability, the government has decided to give command of the government and military to Maj. Gen. Joseph Kabila," Communications Minister Dominique Sakombi Inongo said after an emergency Cabinet meeting.

The younger Kabila, who already heads the armed forces, was reported to have been injured in the 30 minutes of intense gunfire Tuesday at the presidential residence in Kinshasa. He made no public appearance Wednesday. State-run television broadcast footage of the uniformed major general sitting silently, twisting his beret, but it was not immediately clear when the images were recorded.

Tuesday's shooting and the questions about Kabila's fate have added to the disorder in Congo, a resource-rich nation where a 2 1/2-year civil war has turned into a regional conflict involving troops from a host of African nations.

As dawn broke over the capital Wednesday, tanks and trucks filled with soldiers patrolled quiet and empty streets and helicopters clattered overhead. State television broadcast an appeal for calm, and a nighttime curfew remained in place.

Presidential spokesman Lambert Kaboye said in a telephone interview that Kabila had been evacuated overnight to an undisclosed country, where he was receiving intensive treatment. He declined to elaborate.

A lobbyist and public relations consultant who acts as Kabila's spokesman in the United States, however, said the president had been fatally shot. "He's died," John Aycoth said Tuesday by telephone from Durham, N.C., citing top-level Congolese officials.

Officials in Angola, a close ally, agreed that Kabila — who took power in 1997 following a rebellion against dictator Mobutu Sese Seko — had been killed.

In Zimbabwe, another ally, top-ranking government officials said Wednesday that Kabila died en route to Zimbabwe's capital, Harare. The government was waiting for instructions on what to do with the body, the unidentified officials told Zimbabwe's state-run news agency.

At the White House, a national security spokesman said U.S. officials had seen "a number of what we believe are credible reports" that Kabila was dead.

"Although we don't have independent confirmation of that, we do believe, at this stage, that he was killed," said the spokesman, Daniel Cruise.

Details of Tuesday's attack at the palace were murky.

A member of Kabila's security entourage said late Tuesday on condition of anonymity that a bodyguard shot the president in the back and right leg during the gunfire. French and Belgian foreign ministry officials quoted local sources as saying they believed Kabila died of his injuries.

A number of Kabila's bodyguards were arrested and the homes of others were being searched Wednesday in the wake of the shooting, the wife of one of the bodyguards said on condition of anonymity.

Belgian Foreign Affairs Minister Louis Michel said in a radio interview Wednesday morning that he had received reports that Kabila was killed after a disagreement with some of his army generals.

"The latest information we have seems to suggest there were differences between the president and a certain number of generals that went badly," Michel said. He said it was unclear whether it was a general or a bodyguard who fired at Kabila.

Belgium is Congo's former colonial ruler and retains close ties with the nation, which Mobutu called Zaire. Belgian Prime Minister Guy Verhofstadt said the country was preparing to evacuate its nationals from Congo if necessary. He said Belgium would send two C-130 military cargo planes to nearby Libreville, Gabon.

Kabila has been fighting a civil war since August 1998, when rebel forces backed by his former allies, Rwanda and Uganda, turned against him. In the war's early stages, the rebels reached the outskirts of Kinshasa before being turned back by Kabila's army, which is now supported by Angola, Namibia and Zimbabwe.

But Kabila's hold over the army has grown increasingly tenuous in recent months, with some troops reportedly threatening to revolt over pay demands. Young recruits make as little as 1,450 Congolese francs — less than $10 — per month.

Speaking from Brussels, Kin-Kiey Mulumba, a spokesman for one of Congo's main rebel movements, said the shooting proved that the Congolese people wanted a change. He denied the rebels had anything to do with it.

Kabila came to power in May 1997 following the Uganda- and Rwanda-sponsored rebellion against Mobutu. The world community initially welcomed him, and many hoped he would be an improvement over Mobutu's decades-long rule, which left the mineral-rich nation in ruins.

But Kabila quickly alienated himself: He invited close friends and relatives into the government, angered investors and obstructed a U.N. investigation of reports that his rebel army had slaughtered thousands of Hutu refugees from neighboring Rwanda.

Store clerks keep eye out for escapees

By Richard Acosta
Staff Writer

As the Connally Seven go uncaptured for another day, store managers around Midland are asking their workers to stay on their toes.

The seven escapees broke out of the Connally Unit near Kenedy on Dec. 13, 2000. They are also suspects in the shooting death of a police officer during a Christmas Eve robbery of an Oshmans Super Sports USA.

It is believed the seven got in the Oshmans sporting goods store near Irving by impersonating security officers. Because of that, Walt Roberts, with Associated Security Services and Investigators of the State of Texas, issued a special alert to all shop owners and store keepers in Texas.

He said any individual who says he is a security officer or an investigator must have an identification card that has been issued by the Texas Commission on Private Security.

"A bona fide security officer will have an ID," Roberts said. "The police report on the Oshmans thing said they (the escapees) posed as security guards. All they would have had to do was ask for ID."

Jimmy Salinas, manager at The Athlete's Foot in Midland, said he has asked his workers to keep their eyes open.

"We leave by twos, we open the store in twos," Salinas said. "I've had some employees ask me if I think they are going to come here. I tell them to just keep their eyes open and be ready."

The Athlete's Foot only sells sports clothing and shoes.

Big 5 Sports, however, does sells guns and ammo and is taking extra care not to be a victim.

"We have locks on all our guns," said Marty Mondragon, manager of Big 5 Sports. "Before we lock up, we have one person ready to drive off in case something happens, but won't leave until we are ready to go."

Mondragon said even police are playing it safe. He said Monday night the was burglar alarm went off at his place. When he got to the store to open the door for police, officers let the K-9 go through the store before the officers went in.

After discounting the latest sighting of the seven, Federal Bureau of Investigations profilers say there is little chance the group would even leave Texas.

Clint Van Zandt, FBI profiler, told the Associated Press he doesn't see this type of group being the kind that would be hiding in a place where they would stand out. He was quoted as saying, "They don't want to be the only Hispanics in Portland, Ore."

Police believe the seven are most likely in some kind of safe house and won't come out unless they have to.

Authorities have upped the reward for information leading to the arrests and conviction of the seven to $440,000.

Van Zandt added, "There's probably someone saying, 'Hey I love this guy. He's my brother or my boyfriend, but I don't want to die for him.' I've seen mothers sell their sons for a lot less than a quarter of a million dollars."

The Associated Press contributed to this story.

MC honors instructors with awards

Kasey Kelly
MRT Correspondent

Midland College recently recognized two faculty members — psychology instructor Donna Thompson and informational technology instructor Sylvia Brown — with the school's annual Teaching Excellence Awards.

Thompson

Instructors are nominated by their peers and must meet certain criteria. The nominee must be a full-time faculty member who has taught at Midland College for at least three years. Each recipient will receive a cash honorarium, a plaque and a permanent listing on a plaque displayed in the Administration Building. The winners also will receive Midland College National Institute for Staff and Organizational Development awards and will receive funding to attend the NISOD convention in May.

Brown

Ms. Thompson joined the Midland College faculty in 1990. She received her bachelor's degree from the University of Michigan and her master's and doctorate degrees from the University of California at Los Angeles.

Colleagues have described Ms. Thompson as "One of the most capable and competent members of the Midland College faculty. Students enjoy her classes, appreciate her dedication and above all respond to her demands and requirements. Donna is always available

MISD works to keep science labs safe

It's been three months since the lives of three Lee High School teen-agers were changed forever due to an accident in one of Lee High's science labs.

In that time, Midland Independent School District officials have been working to ensure future accidents like the one that happened to Teran Nicks, David Dutchover and Brooke Bagley will be prevented.

"We've asked our people to stop, look and listen," said MISD Executive Director of Secondary Education Ricardo Torres. "We've asked them to refocus and review what we've been doing and how we've been doing it."

Torres said MISD has many plans to enforce science lab safety. According to Torres, MISD and Region 18 will be working together to make sure all district science labs are within state regulations. Torres said MISD and Region 18 are planning "safety walkabouts" in the spring. Torres said Region 18 will be going through a safety checklist of every lab.

"They will give us an outsider's perspective to make sure everything is in order," Torres said.

Area campuses also are taking their own safety precautions. At Midland High, the science department has been re-examining its safety policies and procedures.

"It's made us go back and take a look at all our safety procedures," Adams said.

Hale named artist advisor for Midland-Odessa Symphony & Chorale, Inc.

By Georgia Temple
Staff Writer

Trombonist Ted Hale has been named artist advisor for the Midland-Odessa Symphony & Chorale, Inc.

"I'm delighted, and I just thank God for the opportunity," said Hale, who is principal trombonist with the orchestra and a member of the Lone Star Brass Quintet. "I'm humbled."

For the past 13 years, the MOSC has been under the leadership of conductor Rob Hunt. With his departure, the MOSC has embarked on an aggressive search to fill the vacated position.

MOSC's Music Director/Conductor Search Committee projects that the hiring process will take more than a year from initial call for applicants to official hiring of a qualified candidate. Hale will help provide support for strategic planning and special projects during this transitional period.

"I've done this type of thing on a lot of levels for years," Hale said. "For instance, I was the student house manager of the largest opera and house facility on a college campus in the United States."

Hale

As a graduate assistant at Indiana University, Hale was the student house manager of the Musical Arts Center.

"It was everything from assisting the general manager, who was my boss, to running concerts, including even operating stop lights to finding the ushers and folding programs," Hale said. "I mean, it was everything.

"And, actually, the beauty of this new job is that there are really no problems to solve. There's no crises. No problems with the organization. It's run very well. All I'm trying to do is just help with recruiting and putting together the pops concerts, such as the pops on ice concert for next year.

"And, also, I'll be doing community outreach. In a couple of weeks I'll be talking to the leadership of Odessa folks, and I'll also be talking to the leadership in Midland people. So, there is that type of community outreach going on."

His duties also include collaborating with local arts organizations on cultural events and scheduling guest artists.

His performing credentials include playing with such key performers as Bob Hope, Milton Berle, Jim Nabors, Florence Henderson, Patti Page, Dionne Warwick and the Spinners. In those performances, he was also involved in coordinating the events.

"Because my expertise is in the organizational and business side of the symphony, we recognized the need to have someone on staff who can make those artistic decisions in order to maintain the quality of the concerts that we present," said Jeannine Donnelly, executive director of the MOSC. "And we know that Ted, with his background and his musicianship, will be the ideal person for that situation."

Hale has been the principal trombone and bass trombone in a number of regional orchestras, led his own bands and ensembles, for which he wrote original tunes and arrangements, and participated in the management of many of these organizations.

"Actually, when I got my doctorate from Indiana University, one of my minors was administration," Hale said. "That minor included things like grant writing for a non-profit organization which is exactly what this symphony is.

"And even though we have a grant writer, Melissa (Burnett), I know what she's doing, and I realize what her job is about. So it just makes it easier to work with her because I know what's going on. I can't say enough about the quality of the staff. Jeannine Donnelly, the executive director, is just wonderful to work with. She's down to earth and has good common sense, which you don't run into

ED TODD

Former Marine Band director recalls past inaugurations

CRANE — John Bourgeois, like the legendary bandmaster, John Philip Sousa, held "the greatest job in the world" as director of "The President's Own" — the United States Marine Band.

Todd

In essence, he and his Marine bandsmen were the White House court musicians, especially the Marine Chamber Orchestra.

As a French-horn player, assistant director and director, Bourgeois has marched in Inaugural parades for John Kennedy, Lyndon Johnson, Richard Nixon, Jimmy Carter, Ronald Reagan, George H.W. Bush, and Bill Clinton.

This week, instead of preparing for President-elect George W. Bush's Inaugural Parade, Bourgeois, now 66 and retired from the military, is a consultant helping Crane public-school musicians hone their skills.

"The main purpose of the band is to provide music for the president of the United States, then the (Marine Corps) commandant as directed," Bourgeois said as Crane bandsmen blew their horns in the background.

"In essence, it's like being the court musicians of today just like when (Franz Joseph) Haydn had his orchestra" in the 1700s. "The president has the Marine Band."

Bourgeois, a Marine since 1956 after he graduated from New Orleans' Loyola University, joined "The President's Own" in 1958 as a French hornist and arranger during President Eisenhower's term of office. He became director of the 144-member band of professional musicians in 1979 and retired in 1996.

Bourgeois was the band's 25th director.

Sousa was hailed as the "March King" and composed 132 marches including "The Star and Stripes Forever," "The Washington Post," and "Semper Fidelis," which is based on the Marine Corps' motto, "always faithful."

Bourgeois was particularly close to the George H.W. Bush family.

"Especially when you are working for the family, you become part of the family, the musical family," said Bourgeois, who casually wore faded blue jeans instead of the scarlet associated with the Marine Band.

"Oh, he (President Bush) is wonderful and so is the former first lady (Barbara Bush)," he said. "She's a lovely person."

Of course, as Bush's chief court musician and friend, he became acquainted with his son George W. Bush, the president-elect and former Texas governor who apparently has taken on the nickname "Quincy."

"A friend of mine referred to him as 'George Quincy,'" Bourgeois said in reference to John Quincy Adams, the sixth U.S. president (1825 to 1829) and son of John Adams, the nation's second president (1797 to 1801).

George H.W. Bush was the nation's 41st president. His son, at age 54, will become the country's 43rd president on Saturday in Washington, D.C.

"So, I told Mrs. Bush (about the George Quincy

Science Night

The Petroleum Museum is holding Family Science Night today from 6:30 to 8 p.m. at 1500 Interstate 20 West.

Families will learn about the fun qualities of physics. During "Phun with Physics," families will learn how sound travels, make a wave generator and build a bridge.

Admission is free, and refreshments will be served. For more information, call Kathy Shannon at 683-4403.

Banquet slated

McCAMEY — The McCamey Chamber of Commerce banquet is set for Jan. 22 at 6:30 p.m., at the McCamey Park Building. This year the theme is "Aloha from McCamey, where friendship begins.'' Johnny King of Southern Union Gas will be taking the reins as President as Roylene Chandler is retiring as president after a two-year term. Speaker is Aaron Cranford. Cranford is a teacher in the Round Rock School System.

Tickets for the banquet are $10. They will also be presenting an outstanding citizen award as well as a outstanding organization, teacher and outstanding girl and boy student.

Assuming new role

J. Tillapaugh, Ph.D. and associate professor of history at The University of Texas of the Permian Basin, has assumed the office of assistant vice president for graduate studies and sponsored research. Specializing in American history, Tillapaugh earned his doctorate at Northwestern University. He is a founding faculty member at UTPB where he also chairs the University's Awards and Recognition Committee.

He has published and taught on diverse topics, including the Texas and Pacific Railroad, the Vietnam War, United Nations, Tom Lea, Fort Chadborne, and Fort D.A. Russell in Marfa.

He has been active in local historical associations and historical preservation. He restored and founded White-Pool House Museum and the Parker Ranching Museum, both in Odessa. His other preservation projects include the Henderson Building and the Windmill Complex in Odessa.

Tillapaugh will be recognized as "Community Stateman-Education, 2000" by the Heritage of Odessa Foundation at the annual awards banquet in February.

Graduate studies and sponsored research will be Tillapaugh's new fields of responsibility at UTPB.

He was born October 20, 1917, in Big Spring, Texas.

He married Lutitia (Tish) Wood, July 13, 1940, in Big Spring, Texas. She preceded him in death April 12, 1995.

He graduated from Big Spring High School in 1936. He worked for Texas Electric Service Company and Transmission Department, prior to working for Southwestern Bell Telephone Company in 1941.

He served in the Signal Corps in World War II from September of 1942 to January of 1946. He returned to Southwestern Bell Telephone Company after World War II and worked his way to cable splicer foreman in 1948. He relocated to Abilene in 1951, until he transferred to Fort Worth in 1968. In 1975, he transferred to Lubbock, where he remained until he retired in 1982 as a network supervisor.

He was a member of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, American Legion, Telephone Pioneers, and the Lubbock Bowling Association.

Survivors include two sons, George W. Malone of Fort Worth and John P. Malone of Lubbock; three grandchildren; 1 great-grandchild; and a brother, L. E. Malone of Midland.

The family suggests memorials be made to Cal Farleys' Boys' Ranch, P. O. Box 1890, Amarillo, Texas 79105-9985.

Obituary & Death Notice policy

There is no charge for death notices of residents or former residents of Midland or for those who have Midland relatives. We also publish death notices for residents of the surrounding West Texas area.

Free death notices include date and place of death, service and burial information, funeral home handling arrangements, date and place of birth, brief biography, survivors and memorials. A longer, more detailed obituary is available for a charge. It may include tributes, expanded biography, organizational associations, notes of appreciation, pallbearers, honorary pallbearers and a photo.

Deadline for both free death notices and paid obituaries is 3:30 p.m. and information must be either received from or verified by a funeral home.

LABS: District requires all students to take safety test

(From 1B)

"We're making sure every kid has every piece of safety equipment owned and in use."

Adams said the district requires all students to take a lab safety test before conducting any exercises or experiments in the lab. Although Adams admitted there is no way to prevent accidents from occurring at all, the school can work on making sure all the proper equipment is there and working.

"After this accident we went back and the principals went to their science people and made sure everything was in place," Adams said. "An accident can happen tomorrow, but if we have everything, we can make sure an accident can't happen."

Midland High also received donations from Chevron to help assist them in their lab safety. Midland High science department chairman and physics teacher Chuck Bell said although the school already had safety equipment, Chevron donated products considered to be of higher quality. Chevron donated 90 heavy-duty chemistry aprons, 90 goggles and 90 chemical resistant gloves.

Bell said accidents like the one in October are a rarity. According to Bell, when and if accidents do occur they typically involve small burns and cuts. The burns typically occur when students mishandle a Bunsen Burner or a hot test tube. The small cuts are usually the result of broken glasses used in experimentation.

Torres credited MISD Director of Science and Health Janice Baulch with helping the district make sure every school has the proper science safety equipment. According to Torres, Ms. Baulch visited every high school and junior high science lab in the district to look for possible safety problems.

As a result of Ms. Baulch's campus examination after the accident, in a Oct. 19 letter to Torres she highlights some concerns about a lack of safety equipment at the junior high schools. She said there was a need for more fire blankets, acid cabinets, flammable cabinets and corrosive cabinets.

Shortly after receiving this notice, Torres said he sent out a letter to the school principals informing them that all safety equipment the schools need should be accounted for and purchased. Although Torres said he has currently not followed up with this order, he said MISD has been working closely with the schools to make sure they have all the safety equipment they need.

"My understanding was that whatever shortages that existed were to be taken care of," Torres said.

Torres said supplying the necessary equipment is not a problem. Every school is allotted a budget for the equipment and if a school is lacking any sort of safety materials, receiving them is just a matter of purchasing the articles.

"We're not going to take any second chances on student safety," Torres said. "Whatever minimal safety supplies you do not have, you will have."

BAND: Marine Band more than 200 years old

(From 1B)

reference) last year," Bourgeois said. "So, evidently President Bush has been kidding him, calling him 'Quincy.'"

For a bit of levity, Bourgeois and the senior Bush belonged to the Alfalfa Club, which is "sort of a satirical political party that has only one purpose and that is to elect a candidate for president. Of course, they don't ever win."

And Bourgeois said that he had "the privilege of escorting" then-first lady Barbara Bush at a Congressional wives' club function.

Throughout the years, "The presidents have had a great relationship with the band," noted Bourgeois, who said Harry S Truman would "join the orchestra and play the piano." He was a "decent piano player" who played Chopin.

"I even played while I was in the band for former Presidents Truman and Hoover when they were in the (White) House" as guests.

Each inauguration is "an incredible moment," Bourgeois recalled, "and each of them has a very special memory."

The inaugurations are "great and glorious times" and are the counterpart of the British people's Coronation.

While Bourgeois was conducting the band at Reagan's first inaugural in 1981, the vocalist sang "America the Beautiful." And at that very moment, the 52 hostages in Teheran were released in a U.S.-Iran agreement.

"That was an incredible moment," Bourgeois said.

Bourgeois, who has seen or played for every U.S. president in his lifetime save for Franklin Delano Roosevelt, said that the "top-caliber" musicians in the band "generally have their bachelor's degrees, master's degrees, and doctorates the same as you would find in a symphony orchestra.

"The Marine Band is the oldest musical organization in the country — 200 years old in 1998 — and, as a touring band, is known as "America's Band."

And it is strictly "non-combatant." But in times of war, it plays to keep the troops' morale soaring.

At the pomp of the inauguration, "not a shot is fired ... except in the 21-gun salute ... right after (the president) says 'So help me, God.'"

The band then plays the grand and stirring "Hail to the Chief."

During the American Revolution, the Marine Corps had its "drummers and fifers.

"You are not supposed to shoot a musician," Bourgeois quipped, "unless he plays a wrong note. It's unsportsmanlike and ungentlemanly to harm musicians."

AWARD: Thompson, Brown honored for excellence in teaching

to assist students, listen to faculty and offer support, encouragement or positive reinforcement, and help solve problems as they arise. She is genuinely concerned about Midland College, its students, successes, reputation and future."

When presenting the award, Stan Jacobs, associate vice president of instruction, said of Thompson, "Dr. Donna Thompson exemplifies teaching excellence. She is not only a dedicated, demanding instructor of psychology, but also a proven academic leader. Over the past three years, she effectively directed the Midland College SACS self study, which resulted in a rating in the top 5 percent of colleges and universities nationwide."

Ms. Thompson said, "This is a unique award. It is a different kind of honor because it comes from your peers. That's why it is so valuable. This award comes from people who do what you do so it really means a lot."

Ms. Brown has been an instructor in some capacity at Midland College since 1991. She graduated from Midland College with an associate of applied science degree in May 1993.

Ms. Brown has been described as "very dedicated, very concerned about and helpful to her students" and "helpful to other faculty members."

When presenting the award to Brown, Deana Savage, associate vice president of instruction, said, "Excellent teachers don't fit the mold. There are those who are suspicious of formal education even as they dedicate themselves to planning classes, coaching students and developing curriculum. And so we have those accidental teachers who have melded the passion they have for their own skills and their first careers with the powerful attraction of helping others.

"Brown was always reaching out to others to explain, show, help, learn and share. She was recruited from a Midland College classroom to teach in a technical lab. Anyone who knows her knows that she will do what she decides to do and she will, as a colleague said, teach anytime, anywhere."

Hale moved to the Permian Basin and won the principal trombone spot with the MOSC in the spring of 1997. The following summer, he joined the Lone Star Brass and began teaching for Ector County Independent School District, Odessa College and Midland College.

DEAR ABBY

Canceled wedding raises some questions

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: A friend of mine just canceled her wedding that was to take place a month from now. We already had an engagement party and a bridal shower for her.

I assumed since the wedding was canceled, the gifts would be returned. Instead, my friend asked me how much I spent so she could reimburse me, because she likes my gift too much to return it. She further stated that members of her family had refused to take back their gifts when asked. I was too shocked to respond to her question.

Van Buren

How should I have answered her question about how much I spent for her gift? (By the way, she was engaged once before but canceled the wedding before the shower.)

The gifts from the engagement party were never returned — so now I have given two engagement gifts and a shower gift to someone who never got married.

Which leads to another question — should she ever become engaged again, must I give her a third gift? — CONFUSED IN WEST CALDWELL, N.J.

DEAR CONFUSED: Since you have already given two engagement gifts and a shower gift, I see no reason why you should feel obligated to give again should your friend get in the way of cupid's arrow. Tell her exactly how much you spent for the wedding gift she's keeping so she can reimburse you for the expense. She's trying to do the right thing and shouldn't be criticized for it.

DEAR ABBY: I would like to respond to "Not Very Graceful in Provo, Utah," who asked how women in high heels could walk so gracefully.

When I went through modeling school in the 1950s, we were taught to walk in high heels by:

(1) Placing the toe area down first, followed very quickly by the heel, so the whole foot was down at the same time.

(2) Walking with knees slightly flexed.

(3) Pulling our ribs "out of the abdomen" (figuratively speaking) without doing anything special with the shoulders, not to lean back, and most important, standing up straight.

If she follows these instructions, she will walk smoothly. Balancing a book on top of the head can be added later. I'm sure models are still taught these techniques. — DEIRDRE MADDEN, MEDINA, OHIO

DEAR DEIRDRE: May I be frank? Thank you for the input, but it seems like a lot to remember just to make it from point A to point B. I also heard from a foot specialist who asked me to remind women that more important than walking gracefully in high heels is to wear shoes that fit properly. An entire industry (bunion removal) was spawned by the popularity of ill-fitting, spike-heeled shoes.

DEAR ABBY: My mother recently passed away. I have been receiving fruit baskets, flowers, Mass cards and sympathy cards from my friends, co-workers and family.

I realize that I must send thank-you notes for baskets, flowers and Mass cards. Is it also necessary to send a note back if someone sent me a printed card with their signature or a printed card with a written note to me? — MOURNING IN WORCESTER, MASS.

DEAR MOURNING: I would. Everyone who has made the effort to reach out to you in your time of sorrow should be acknowledged.

A&M looking to hire firm to design bonfire

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — The search is under way for a professional engineering firm to design Texas A&M University's bonfire for its projected return in 2002.

A&M officials are placing notices in The Texas Register and key national engineering publications inviting firms to submit qualifications in The Texas Register and key national engineering publications, said Bryan Cole, the university's assistant vice president for quality leadership. Cole is leading the Bonfire 2002 Steering Committee and task forces appointed by school President Ray Bowen.

The 90-year-tradition is on hold until at least 2002 after the 59-foot stack of logs on a campus field collapsed Nov. 18, 1999, killing 12 Aggies and injuring 27 others.

Cole said the top firms expressing interest in the project will be interviewed by the students, faculty and staff serving on the steering committees' design and construction task force.

No timeline has been set for interviews or hiring a firm.

A five-member commission appointed and paid for by the university blamed the collapse on flawed construction techniques and the lack of adequate supervision of students assembling the stack.

In June, Bowen announced the bonfire likely would continue, but not until at least 2002 and not without major changes, including greater school supervision and a professionally engineered design.

Cole said the design and construction plan will use the lessons learned from the special commission's report and will satisfy the defining elements in Bowen's decision statement.

DEATH NOTICES

Baylor regent named dean of seminary

WACO (AP) — The Rev. Paul W. Powell of Tyler was named Wednesday to head Baylor University's George W. Truett Theological Seminary.

He is a Baylor regent and former regent chairman. He also is president of the board of advisers for Texas Baptist Leadership and has served as pastor at Texas Baptist churches in Belfalls, Troy, Taylor, San Marcos and Tyler. He has been pastor for 17 years at Green Acres Baptist Church in Tyler.

"He has spent a lifetime doing the very things that Truett Seminary wants to prepare ministers to do — to preach the word of God, to evangelize and to lead Baptists forward into the 21st century," said university President Robert B. Sloan Jr.

"Paul Powell will bring those experiences not only to the classroom but to his leadership of Truett."

Powell earned his bachelor of arts degree from Baylor in 1956, as well as a degree from Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary.

He is the third dean of the seminary, which opened in 1994 with 51 students. Enrollment was 247 students in the fall semester last year.

Sajak doesn't want to be 'on the set whittling and drooling'

WASHINGTON — You'll be able to buy a vowel from Pat Sajak for a long time to come.

The "Wheel of Fortune" host said he doesn't want to do the syndicated TV game show when he's so old, he's "on the set whittling and drooling." After all, he's been the host for 18 seasons.

But Sajak realizes he has one of the cushiest jobs in show business, working about five hours a day, three days a week. And a little thing like Regis Philbin's juggernaut game show "Who Wants to Be a Millionaire" is no threat.

"I like sort of slow but steady. I like that people watch us and know us. There's not all this buzz, because the problem with buzz is that it can die out," Sajak, 54, told AP Radio recently.

"'Millionaire' is going to do well, and it may be on for a long time. But it can't sustain the level — I mean, it's already down significantly — but it's still a successful show."

PASADENA, Calif. — He used to rock all night and party every day. Now, Gene Simmons is going on television to talk about the ugly side of the music industry.

The former KISS bassist will host a one-hour documentary, "The Secret History of Rock 'n' Roll," on Court TV. The program is scheduled to air on June 11.

Simmons, 51, said most programs about rock are fluff, and the things he's seen behind the scenes would horrify people.

"There are unscrupulous types who affect the music business and affect how and where you hear music and it's important to shed light on that because, just like at home, you shine a flashlight, the cockroaches go scurrying," he said recently.

"It's a very, very shady business and you have to have a strong backbone to survive and to come out clean. Along the way, this special will talk a little more about that."

DENHAM, England — Oscar-winning actor Sir John Mills, 92, and his playwright-wife Mary Hayley Bell celebrated 60 years of marriage by renewing their vows on Tuesday in a long-awaited church wedding.

Mills and his wife, who is 89, renewed their vows in a special service at St. Mary's Church, next to their home in Denham, in southern England.

The couple, who had a registry office wedding in 1941 during Mills' 48-hour leave from the army during World War II, had always regretted they had no time to arrange to marry in church, the actor said.

"We have been supposed to be having it for the last 50-odd years, but we never got around to it," he said. "But last week I said, 'St. Mary's is right next door — so let's do it!' And we suddenly decided."

The 30-minute service was attended by 100 friends and family, including their daughter Hayley Mills.

Mills won an Academy Award for best supporting actor for his role in the 1970 film "Ryan's Daughter."

NEW YORK — Greg Brady a scab?

Barry Williams, the 1970s television icon from "The Brady Bunch," has been fined $50,000 by Actors' Equity for appearing in a nonunion touring production of "The Sound of Music," which is still traveling around the country.

Equity took the action Monday at a special hearing where Williams testified in his own defense. Equity bars its members from working without a union contract in non-Equity shows. Williams resigned from the union last September before starting the tour. But Equity said he should be fined because he began negotiations for the role of Capt. Von Trapp while still a union member. Williams says he will appeal the ruling.

"I am not anti-union and I am certainly not trying to bust the union's goals," Williams told the New York Post. "Equity is involved in a complex dialogue with the producers of (nonunion) shows, and I am being leveraged for that purpose, in an unfair manner."

Union members have picketed the show in several cities on the tour, including Pittsburgh, Cleveland and Providence, R.I.

"The union will continue to inform the public that the tour is promoted as a 'Broadway' show, yet no one, except for the star, has ever appeared on Broadway," said Equity President Patrick Quinn. "The young actors in 'The Sound of Music' are being paid substandard wages, without pension or health benefits. We believe the theatergoing public is entitled to its money's worth and should see professional productions where actors earn a living wage."

JACQUELINE BIGAR'S STARS

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have: 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Thursday, Jan. 18, 2001:
You go through many changes in pursuit of a long-desired goal. You will get what you want as long as you don't let your determination falter. You make choices that bring you concrete results and are reflections of your creativity. Socialize. Broaden your horizons. If you are single, a love relationship stems from a friendship, or vice-versa. Mixing the two will add to the strength and flexibility of this bond. If you are attached, your relationship grows as long as you have the same goals. SAGITTARIUS reads you cold.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★ Don't get discouraged by a financial misunderstanding or problem. You are in strong shape right now and are an unbeatable force. Deal directly with others. Discussions need to be about finding answers, not closing doors. Take responsibility. Tonight: Listen to a trusted friend.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★★ No one can be as stubborn as you. Reverse directions, knowing what is ultimately important. Don't let negativity flow into your professional and personal lives. Dig up answers, with an eye to finding solutions. Know that anything is possible. Tonight: Allow another to coax you into a good mood!

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★ If you feel off kilter, honor your feelings. Schedule time off or take a personal day. Often, you are more driven than you realize. Listen to feedback from a co-worker or associate. You gain by pulling problems apart and not admitting defeat. Tonight: Anything is possible if you relax.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★★★ A friend might make something you need to do difficult. Understand what your limitations are here. Forget a problem, and honor new possibilities. Your creativity comes forth when you start discussing a problem openly. Don't hold back. Ask for support. Tonight: Start thinking "weekend."

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★★★ Hear someone loud and clear. This person seems to hold the trump card. You might want to be more creative and thoughtful about how you approach this particular person. Not everything is as it seems. Keep the basics in mind. Tonight: Get into the spirit of the moment.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★★★ Exchange ideas, even if someone seems to have difficulty seeing things from your perspective. You find answers and solutions. A new, budding relationship could grow into a lot more. If attached, do something special for a loved one. Tonight: Dinner out.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★★ Not everyone sees a money matter like you do. Keep communication flourishing. Talk about what you think is necessary. Someone who frequently rains on your parade does so one more time. Are you ready to change this pattern yet? Be open to possibilities. Tonight: Get down to basics.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★★ You might inadvertently challenge someone. Certainly when you get a sour reaction, you are forced to think twice about what is going on. Reach out for others and make an additional effort so that another can understand you better. Be understanding of others' foibles. Tonight: Your treat.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★ Don't commit to anything right now, as you are likely to have a radical change of perspective in the next 24 hours. Someone knows how to exhaust you, and he finally gets you to agree with him. Opt to do things a bit differently. Your energy surges late in the day. Tonight: Go with your second wind.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★★ Get a lot done in the daytime. Use your strong sense of direction and make waves where it counts. Someone might be unusually intense about getting what he wants. Understand that saying no might not feel good, but it is necessary. Lighten up. Tonight: Go for a good night's sleep.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★★ You are in the limelight. Others look to you. You might not always agree with everyone around you. Work toward a common goal or desire. You feel differently about a friendship. Consider the fact that you have changed and therefore what you want has changed. Tonight: Get a head start on the weekend.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★★★ Reach out for those at a distance. Don't stand on ceremony with an unreturned call. A problem will be worked through. Take charge of a situation. Others respect your sense of responsibility. Tonight: Make an important meeting.

When you have no clear line available, it often pays to run your long suit. The defenders might find it difficult to hold on to their key cards.

As the cards lie, five spades would have been defeated only two tricks. However, it is an old truism that the five-level belongs to the opponents, so we agree with West's decision to sell out, especially since there was a chance that five hearts could be defeated.

West led the queen of spades and East overtook with the king to return the 10 of clubs. Since there was a good possibility that was a singleton, declarer rose with the ace and, in effort to establish a club trick, continued with the queen. West took the king as East discarded a spade, and exited with a trump. Declarer correctly "finessed" dummy's seven and, had that held the trick, there would have been the additional entry to the table to establish a couple of club tricks. When East produced the nine, it seemed as if declarer would have to fall back on the diamond finesse.

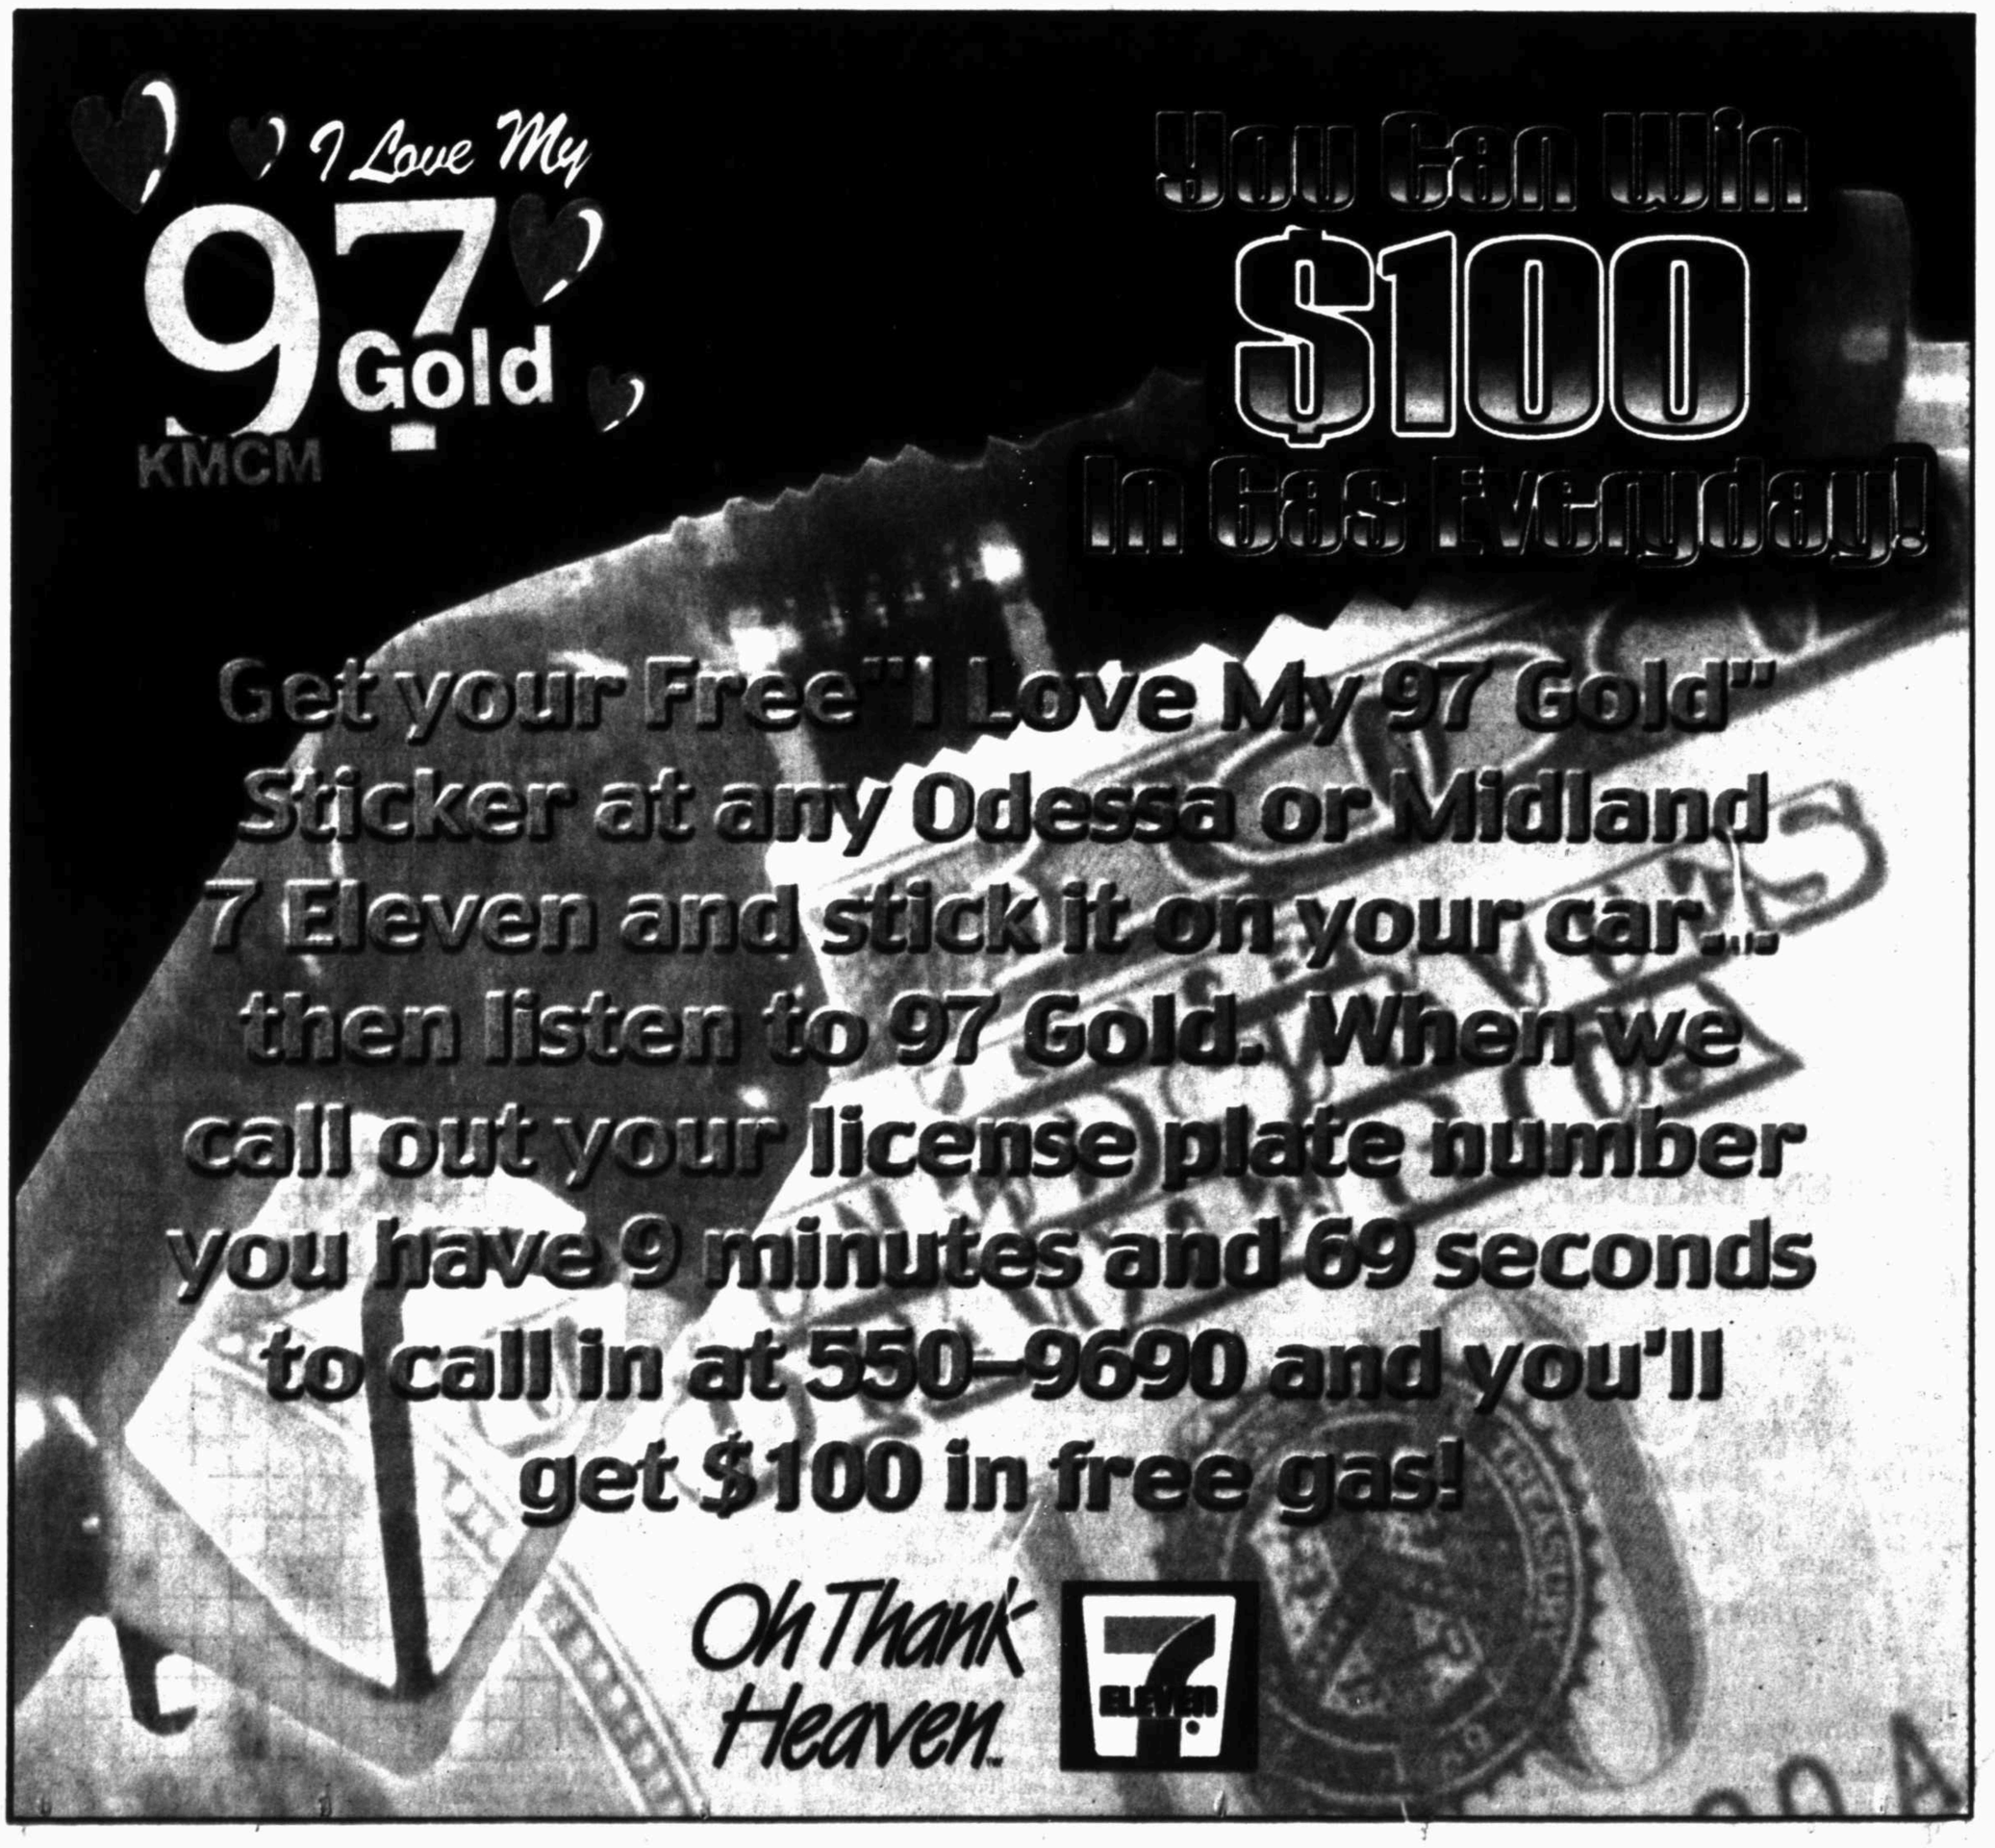

Declarer decided that could wait. After clearing the ace of hearts, South came to hand with a club ruff and ran all the trumps. West had to hold onto the jack of clubs, so had to discard three spades and two diamonds as dummy came down to three diamonds, the losing club being discarded on the last round of trumps. Declarer cashed the king of diamonds and then led a low diamond. When West followed to the second diamond with the 10, declarer knew that West's remaining card was the jack of clubs, so instead of the finesse-declarer shot up with the ace to fell the queen. Five hearts bid and made.

Rebels' Benson receives national award

By Stewart Doreen
Assistant Sports Editor

Midland Lee's star running back Cedric Benson was named as the National Player of the Year by FoxStudentSports.com.

Benson, who racked up just about every award imaginable during his junior and senior seasons, has now gone national for the first time.

It is another accolade for Benson, who could still make more news as more nationwide honor teams are announced.

Benson's state accolades are just about done, although it is expected that he will add a second straight Class 5A Offensive Player of the Year Award to the numerous other honors he has collected. He is the back-to-back winner of the Associated Press' Class 5A Player of the Year and Fox Sports Southwest/Dave Campbell's state player of the year.

Benson

In late December, Benson was one of the nation's few recipients of the High School Heisman. Benson took home the trophy from the southwest region.

"As big of an honor as the nationwide awards are, the all-state stuff is more credible," said Midland Lee coach John Parchman, the coach on the 1999 All USA Today high school football team. "The all-state awards are based on the votes of the people who know what kind of players are out there."

Parchman went on to say that, "You don't ever know how national teams are selected."

At the same time, Parchman would have been disappointed if a back who rushed for 8,423 yards and 115 touchdowns in three state championship seasons didn't receive some national recognition.

"He is worthy of every bit of that," Parchman said.

Parchman said that football is still partially on the mind of Benson, only because he will make an official trip to the University of Texas this week. Benson has already orally committed to Mack Brown's Longhorn program. Oral commitments are non-binding. The first day a high school senior can sign a binding letter-of-intent is Feb. 7 (National Signing Day).

"He is excited about the upcoming weekend," Parchman said. "Everything is falling into place for him, and we are happy for him."

Benson will play high school baseball in the spring for Lee.

COLLEGE BASKETBALL

'Horns vanquish Aggies

By Johnny Paul
Fort Worth Star-Telegram

COLLEGE STATION — Will another college basketball program in this state ever beat coach Rick Barnes' Texas Longhorns?

Yes.

When? Who knows.

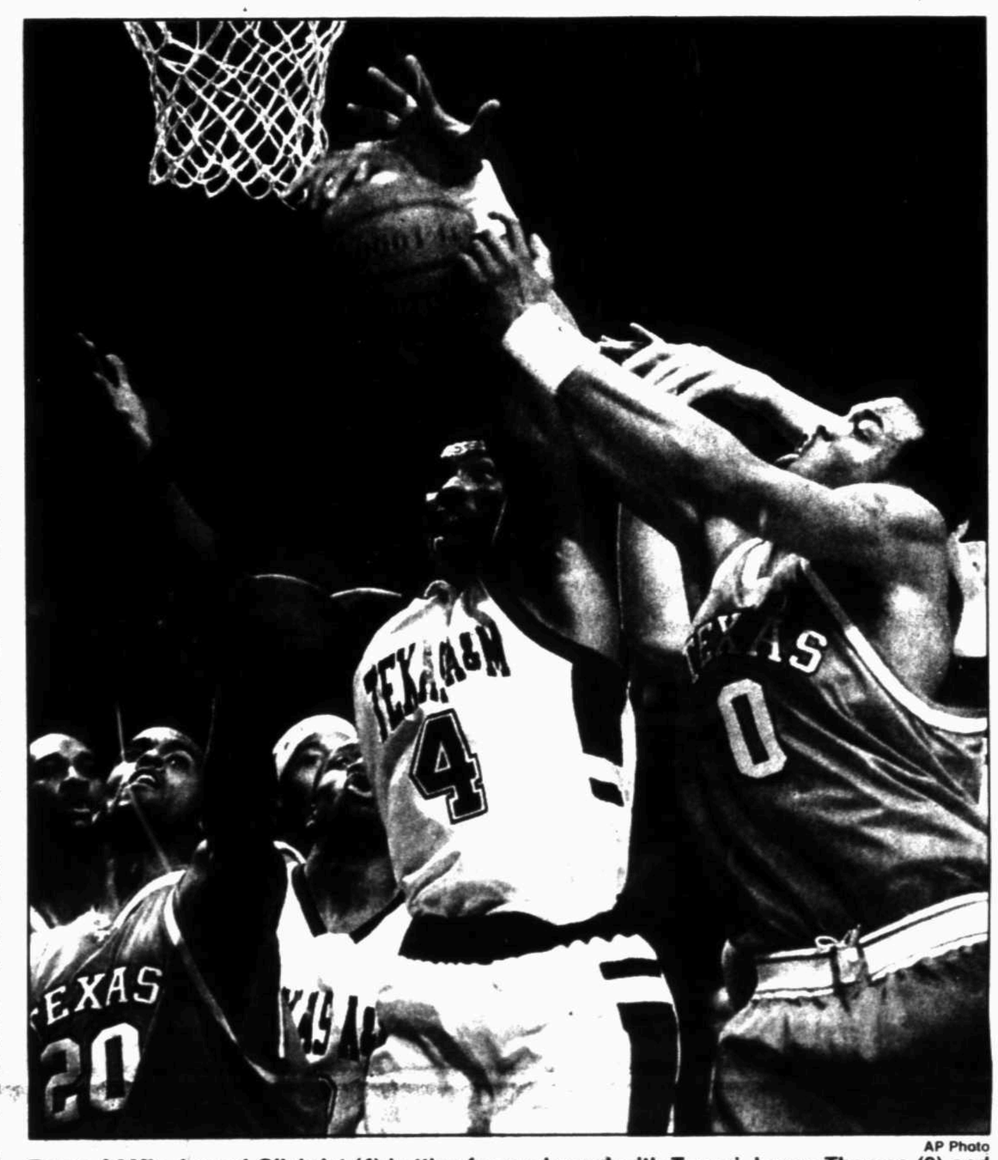

The Longhorns withstood a spirited first half from Texas A&M to register their 18th consecutive victory against an intrastate opponent with Wednesday night's 76-58 victory at Reed Arena. Guard Maurice Evans and forward Chris Owens led the second-half blitz by the Longhorns, who connected on 16 of their 27 shots from the field in the game's final 20 minutes.

Evans scored 13 of his team-high 21 points in the second half, and all of Owens' 15 points were in the final half as Texas (14-3, 3-1 in the Big 12) beat the Aggies again in this lopsided series. The loss marked Texas A&M's 15th consecutive to Texas and its 24th in the past 26 meetings between the two programs.

Texas broke free from the Aggies (6-10, 0-4) with a 10-0 run during the middle stages of the second half. Texas A&M guard Bernard King committed three of his game-high nine turnovers in a span of 83 seconds during the decisive run, and Texas extended its 49-48 lead to 11.

"Our halftime was directed toward Chris Owens," Barnes said. "We talked about him being a factor and being more assertive. Maurice Evans had his best game since he's been here. He had a great all-around game."

The Aggies trailed by as many as nine during the first half, but their relentlessness on the glass proved to be an effective equalizer. Forwards Keith Bean and Jesse King utilized their muscle inside to pull down 11 first-half rebounds, which included seven on the offensive end.

Texas A&M's Jamaal Gilchrist (4) battles for a rebound with Texas' James Thomas (0) and Chris Owens (20) Wednesday night in College Station. The Longhorns won, 76-58.

Point guard Andy Leatherman, a former walk-on, worked himself into the act, too, with five first-half rebounds, as the Aggies built a 25-15 advantage on the glass.

With 5:52 remaining, the Aggies' predilection toward the dirty work resulted in their first lead since the opening basket. Bernard King, who scored 12 of his game-high 23 points in the first half, connected on two free throws that gave the Aggies a 25-24 lead.

"The first half was the most intense we've played all year," Aggies coach Melvin Watkins said. "We would have more wins if we played like that more."

OSU ends Baylor's home winning streak

Associated Press

WACO — Maurice Baker scored a career high 29 points and Oklahoma State shot 54 percent from the field Wednesday as the Cowboys defeated Baylor 76-65.

Baker hit 10-of-15 shots from the field, including six of his 10 3-point attempts as the Cowboys (11-3, 3-1 Big 12) won their third straight game and their first on the road since Nov. 28.

Baylor (13-2, 2-2) lost its first home game of the year, breaking a 10-game winning streak at home.

Victor Williams scored 12 points and had seven assists for Oklahoma State.

Baylor had not allowed a team to shoot more than 43 percent from the field against it this year and was ranked second nationally in field goal percentage defense (36.4 percent).

DeMarcus Minor led Baylor with 27 points, which tied a career high. Terry Black added 18 points and had nine rebounds.

Baylor led early, opening a 10-4 lead in the first three minutes of play. But Oklahoma State outscored the Bears 21-7 over the next seven minutes to take a 25-17 lead and never trailed.

Hull lands on 1st team — this time

Staff and Wire Report

BRYAN — The 51st Annual Texas Sports Writers Association/Collin Street Bakery Class 2A All-State Football Team, which was released Wednesday, was something of a reversal from the Associated Press Sports Editors team, at least for the Stanton Buffaloes.

Running back Jeremy Hull, a second team selection by the APSE, was a first team pick by the TSWA, the only Stanton player to earn such honors.

Hull, a senior, capped his career by rushing for 2,540 yards and 28 touchdowns in leading the Buffs to the Class 2A Division II semifinals. He was also named to the second team defense in the secondary.

While Hull was the only first team selection from Stanton, three other Buffs earned second or third team honors. Ironically, they all were first team APSE picks.

Linebacker Clay White, who was the APSE Defensive Player of the Year, was a second team pick by the TSWA. White made 197 tackles this season.

Also on the second team was offensive lineman Ace Keele. He graded out at 94 percent this season.

Jon Cotton made the third team in the defensive line. Cotton had 161 tackles this season.

Jones meets with Aikman: No decision

By Stephen Hawkins
AP Sports Writer

IRVING — Dallas Cowboys owner Jerry Jones has met with Troy Aikman about the quarterback's future, but says he still doesn't know when a decision will be made.

"Nothing has been resolved, but we have met," Jones said Wednesday. "We have a good grasp ... and an open line of communication."

Aikman missed the final two games last season. He suffered his second concussion of the season, and the 10th of his 12-year NFL career, when he was tackled by Washington linebacker Lavar Arrington on Dec. 10.

Giants learn to win after they quit bickering

By Tom Canavan
AP Sports Writer

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Being around the New York Giants wasn't fun late last season.

The team was en route to a sub .500 record, Jim Fassel was at odds with Pro Bowl player Jessie Armstead and Michael Strahan and the finger-pointing between a frustrated defense and a somewhat nonproductive offense was constant.

There's very little of that now with the Giants less than two weeks away from a Super Bowl showdown with the Baltimore Ravens, but winning wasn't what made this a fun team to be around.

It's what Fassel and the players did in the offseason that unified the team.

A roster facelift got things going, bringing in veteran offensive linemen Lomas Brown, Glenn Parker and Dusty Zeigler and middle linebacker Mike Barrow.

The real change came in the months that followed the season.

Fassel has said getting all his players to commit to attending an offense training program was a big step forward.

"You could feel the bonding coming on a regular basis," Fassel said Wednesday. "They were enjoying each other. Right from that point, I felt like we had a chance to have a heck of a year if we stayed healthy."

Not only did the players bond, they also learned to do crazy things

Jets set to make Bucs' assistant their head coach

By Barry Wilner
AP Football Writer

Herman Edwards will be introduced Thursday as the New York Jets' coach, a league source told The Associated Press, making Edwards the NFL's third black currently serving as a head coach.

Edwards, the assistant head coach of the Tampa Bay Buccaneers, was en route to New York on Wednesday night to finalize a contract with the team, according to several NFL sources.

Although no contract has been agreed upon, Newsday reported on its Web site that the job was Edwards' and that a news conference was set for Thursday.

"Herman Edwards has successfully overcome every challenge he has ever faced, and I don't think this one will be any different," Bucs general manager Rich McKay said. "The Jets are very fortunate to be getting such a quality guy."

The hiring, which was first reported on Newsday's Web site, ended a quick four-candidate search.

The other candidates to replace Al Groh, who resigned after one season to become coach at the University of Virginia, were former Carolina Panthers coach Dom Capers; Buffalo Bills defensive coordinator Ted Cottrell; and Jets assistant head coach Maurice Carthon.

Carthon, who like Edwards was at the Senior Bowl in Mobile, Ala., told the Journal News, a New York suburban newspaper, "I talked to Terry and he said that was the way he was going to go."

Neither Edwards nor his agent, Ray Anderson, could be reached for comment. The Jets said Wednesday night they had nothing to announce.

Edwards will join Minnesota's Dennis Green and Tampa Bay's Tony Dungy as black head coaches. He was the Buccaneers' defensive coordinator and assistant head coach this season, his fifth with the team.

He will be only the second black head coach in the NFL's past 42 hirings.

WJCAC Basketball Today

Women

Midland College at Howard College

Where: Dorothy Garrett Coliseum in Big Spring.

When: 6 p.m.

Records: Midland College is 17-1 overall and 1-0 in Western Junior College Athletic Conference play; Howard College is 8-9 and 0-0.

Notes & Quotes: Midland College is ranked No. 3 in the latest national poll (see Page 3C)... Howard College, which finished second to MC last year in the WJCAC, is coming into this game with a losing record, and that's unusual for the Lady Hawks. Howard has gone through some upheaval after coach Ron Mayberry resigned early in the season for personal reasons, and Joey Wells took over on an interim basis. Wells has seven years of coaching experience, but this is first job coaching women, and his only head coaching job was as boys' coach at a California high school. "We're adjusting," said Wells. "We've made some changes in regards to our offensive philosophy, and it's always tough when you make changes in the middle of the season." Wells said he is "a little more open on the fast break," and he runs more set plays on offense than Mayberry did.... Lady Hawks fans are accustomed to success. "The last time the Lady Hawks have not won 20 games was back in '89, and here we are at 8-9 going into conference," Wells said. He admitted that makes him nervous: "Based on the fact that my official title is 'interim coach.' It's easier to keep your job when you're winning." ... Howard didn't play a WJCAC game on Monday. Western Texas dropped its basketball program, so there are only seven teams playing women's basketball. That means open dates in every team's schedule... MC is coming off an 80-56 win over Frank Phillips College in Midland.

Statistical leaders: MC has three players averaging just over 10 points per game: Amisha Carter, 10.9; Sylvia Butler, 10.1; and Veronique Alesse, 10.1. The Lady Chaps are balanced in scoring; eight other players average five or more points per game... Howard is led by Grace Gantt (17 points per game), Vanessa Lehrman (14 ppg) and Tashean Thomas (10 points and five assists per game). Howard's statistics are approximate averages.

Next: Midland College will host Odessa College at 6 p.m. Monday at Chaparral Center.

Men

Midland College at Howard College

Where: Dorothy Garrett Coliseum in Big Spring.

When: 8 p.m.

Records: Midland College is 12-5 overall and 1-0 in Western Junior College Athletic Conference play; Howard is 6-11 and 0-1.

Notes & Quotes: Howard, which shared the WJCAC crown with Midland College last year, is struggling this year. The Hawks started WJCAC play with a 90-76 loss to New Mexico Military Institute on Monday... "We haven't played very good," Howard coach Tommy Collins said. "We're not doing the things we have to do to win. Defensively, we haven't played very well, and we've rebounded very poorly all year. And we can't have 26 turnovers and expect to win." Howard had 26 miscues against NMMI... MC coach Junsie Cotten apparently doesn't believe Howard will be that bad when his Chaps visit. "It's going to be a great basketball game," Cotten said. "Howard is coming off a 14-point loss, but I know what kind of coach coach Collins is, and he'll have his troops ready to roll. We'll have to match their intensity... Howard is a tough place to play, and they've got a bad taste in their mouth. We're getting this team at a tough time." ... Collins has mostly freshmen on his roster, but he does have some bright spots. Derrick Tarver is averaging about 18 points a game, and two 6-foot-5 freshmen posts, Zack Moss and Darius Mattear, are coming around, Collins said.

Statistical leaders: Quannas White is leading the Chaps by scoring 15.8 points per game, and he's hitting nearly 60 percent of his 3-point shots (35-of-59 for 59.3 percent). He also leads the Chaps in assists, with 4.7 per game. Two other Chaps are averaging more than nine points: Jerome Beasley (9.4) and Danny Anderson (9.1)... Tarver is Howard's leading scorer.

Next: Midland College will host Odessa College at 8 p.m. Monday at Chaparral Center.

Conradt loses milestone game

Associated Press

MANHATTAN, Kan. —Jody Conradt became the first women's basketball coach to coach 1,000 games Wednesday night, but any satisfaction at reaching the milestone wasn't noticeable.

Conradt was far more concerned with her players after No. 17 Texas' 72-63 loss to Kansas State.

"I guess it's a lot of games," Conradt said. "We were talking about that earlier and our players pointed out that I was sick for one game last year. So it's actually only 999. I guess they're counting more than we are."

Kristin Rethman hit five 3-pointers and scored 24 points to lead the Wildcats (11-5, 1-4 Big 12 Conference), who snapped a four-game losing streak after their worst conference start since 1993.

"It feels great," guard Kim Woodlee said. "I was telling Kristin I think I'm going to sleep. I've been going through this phase of not sleeping since we've been losing."

Kansas State coach Deb Patterson now has 10 straight victories over teams in the Top 20.

Andrea Armstrong added 18 points for Kansas State, which kept Texas (14-5, 2-3) winless in Manhattan since the creation of the Big 12.

"For us the thing that means the most is we took the floor and played the game at the intensity and with the single-minded purpose to handle our responsibilities with focus," she said. "That means more than who you beat. It is a great feeling for us to know we can compete against a Top-25 caliber team."

Conradt is the first women's coach to reach the 1,000-game mark, the 21st college coach overall. She still leads all women's coaches with 760 wins, 643 at Texas.

Conradt's 1,000th game came with one of her former players on the opposing bench. Kansas State assistant Kamie Etheridge played for Conradt from 1982 to 1986, earning National Player of the Year and All-American honors in her senior season.

"I don't know if there is anyone else in the game that our staff holds as high as Coach Conradt," Patterson said. "She is one of the best to ever coach in the great game. It's very special to be able to play against her."

Mavs nip Hornets; Spurs fall to Raptors

Associated Press

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — All the Dallas Mavericks wanted was overtime. Winning in regulation was never an option.

It didn't go as planned, though, as Howard Eisley hit a 3-pointer as time expired Wednesday night to lift Dallas to a 91-90 victory over the Charlotte Hornets.

"I felt good about the momentum and thought we could have won in overtime," said Dallas interim coach Donn Nelson. "I wanted the two to send it into overtime. I never called for the 3, but I'll take it."

Charlotte led 90-88 with seven seconds to play after Jamal Mashburn made one of two free throws.

Dallas then called a timeout and Nelson drew up a play for either Dirk Nowitzki or Michael Finley to try to get a good look at the basket for a jumper that could tie the game and force an extra period.

Finley inbounded the ball to Nowitzki, who nearly lost it while looking to pass it. As the Hornets moved in on the ball, Nowitzki spotted Eisley alone in the left corner and whipped the ball over to him.

Eisley barely looked before he tossed it up and the ball swished through as the clock hit zero.

"I have no idea how I got that open," said Eisley, who scored 11 of his 23 points in the fourth quarter. "I was just there and I yelled for Dirk and hit the shot."

The Hornets stood on the court in disbelief after the shot while the Mavericks, led by flamboyant owner Mark Cuban, sprinted across the court screaming in delight.

"Oh, man," a breathless Nelson said. "I've said it about a gazillion times, but oh, man."

The victory snapped a three-game losing streak for the Mavericks, who proved they can win without point guard Steve Nash. Nash missed his fourth straight game with a sore left hamstring.

The Hornets dropped their third straight game, and ninth in their last 12, despite a balanced effort from all five starters.

Mashburn led Charlotte with 22 points, nine rebounds and nine assists. David Wesley scored 19 points and P.J. Brown had 14, Elden Campbell 13 and Baron Davis 11.

Charlotte led most of the game, by as many as 16, and was up by 11 at the start of the fourth quarter.

"I don't mind so much them making the shot as I do that we were in that position," Mashburn said. "We were beating them the whole game, we had a big lead, we outrebounded them, and then we fell apart at the end."

Raptors 98, Spurs 91

SAN ANTONIO — Vince Carter scored 27 points and all five Toronto starters scored in double figures Wednesday night as the Raptors handed the San Antonio Spurs their third straight loss, 98-91.

Mark Jackson added 23 points and Morris Peterson had 15 for the visiting Raptors.

San Antonio, which came into the game with the NBA's best home record, fell to 15-3 at the Alamodome as Tim Duncan scored 22 points and Derek Anderson had 20.

The Raptors, who lost a 19-point first-half lead, began the fourth quarter with a 16-5 run to take a 90-79 lead on Peterson's jump shot with 5:36 to play.

San Antonio answered with a 9-0 streak of its own to close to 90-88 with 3:17 remaining on a running jump hook by Antonio Daniels.

Jackson's 3-point field goal stretched the Raptors' lead to 93-88 and the Spurs missed five free throws over the final 1:58 and could get no closer than four points the rest of the way. San Antonio went 21-of-31 at the free throw line on the night.

Tulsa pounds Frogs

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Kevin Johnson found his confidence in the second half Wednesday, just in time to score a career-high 30 points and lead Tulsa to a 82-66 win over Texas Christian.

Johnson also grabbed 10 rebounds and led his team with eight blocks as Tulsa (11-6, 2-2) beat TCU (13-5, 3-2), their Western Athletic Conference rival, for the sixth straight time.

Derrick Davenport led the Horned Frogs with 21 points and 13 rebounds. Greedy Daniels had 16 points for the Horned Frogs but only one steal and that in the closing seconds. Daniels came into the game leading the nation with 4.8 steals an outing.

David Shelton scored 14 for Tulsa and Marcus Hill had 12.

For Tulsa coach Buzz Peterson, it was all about having fun.

Peterson said he thought his players had been putting too much pressure on themselves. Before the game he told them to not compare themselves to last year but "go out there and play basketball and have fun playing it."

"And for one of the first times this season ... I felt like I saw a sign that these kids were having a good time," Peterson said.

TCU coach Billy Tubbs, a former Oklahoma coach, was introduced to a chorus of boos. He replied by blowing the crowd kisses.

"We just got outplayed," Tubbs said afterward. "That's about all you can say. In the second half, they just cleaned us on the boards."

TEXAS: Aggies blow halftime lead

(From 1C)

34-28 lead, but the Aggies never warmed up offensively and finished shooting 36.8 percent (21-of-57) from the field.

Foul trouble also contributed to the Aggies' woes. Bean fouled out, and four others — forward Nick Anderson, Bernard and Jesse King and guard Jamaal Gilchrist — finished the game with four fouls apiece. That also translated into a 10-point advantage at the free-throw line for the Longhorns, who attempted 15 more than the Aggies.

"This loss to Texas is by far the worst since I've been here because we were up six at the half," Leatherman said. "There's no reason for us to have a drought like we did in the second half. It's not X's and O's. It's mental toughness. Too bad we don't play 20-minute games."

Oil Falls

NEW YORK — Crude futures fell sharply at the New York Mercantile Exchange Wednesday in the market's initial reaction to a decision by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries to cut output by 1.5 million barrels a day from Feb. 1.

Nearby crude futures plunged more than $1 in intraday trading, however, traders hedging their bets at the close amid thin volume trimmed about half the losses of crude and heating oil futures.

February's crude contract finished the day at $29.60 per barrel, down 69 cents. Heating oil for February delivery declined 2.59 cents to 81.52 cents a gallon.

After markets closed, the American Petroleum Institute reported that U.S. inventories of crude grew by 2 million barrels in the past week, while reserves of distillate fuel, which includes heating oil and diesel fuel, contracted by more than 3 million barrels.

OPEC Secretary-general Ali Rodriguez said the group could cut another 1 million barrels a day at its next meeting March 16 if the market remains weak.

Although prices popped briefly on the news, since many anticipated the next cut at 500,000 barrels a day, prices fell steadily through the session.

A slowing global economy are expected to continue pressuring crude and refined products futures.

Crude oil inventories in the United States grew to 290.4 million barrels for the week that ended Jan. 12, compared with 288.5 million barrels a week ago and 294.6 million barrels a year ago.

Motor gasoline inventories, API said, declined by roughly 500,000 barrels to 197.9 million barrels, compared with year-ago levels of 196.6 million barrels.

February unleaded gasoline prices declined 2 cents Wednesday to 85.79 cents a gallon. Natural gas futures were down $1.19 to $6.91 per 1,000 cubic feet.

Dollar mixed

LONDON —The dollar was mixed against other major currencies in European trading Wednesday.

The euro dropped against the dollar Wednesday following the release of a larger-than-anticipated jump for U.S. consumer prices in 2000, while most currency traders seemed to shrug off another U.S. report showing a big plunge in manufacturing output for December.

The euro was quoted at 92.90 cents in late European trading, down from 94.11 cents Tuesday. Later, in midday trading in New York, the euro traded at 93.09 cents.

Currency traders said the euro was also hurt by heavy dollar and yen buyouts as investors were liquidating long euro positions and growing more confident in the U.S. economy.

Other dollar rates in Europe, compared with late Tuesday, included 117.48 Japanese yen, down from 117.83; 1.6523 Swiss francs, up from 1.6321; 1.5110 Canadian dollars, up from 1.4994.

The British pound was quoted at $1.4721, up from $1.4710.

In midday trading in New York, the dollar bought 118.04 yen, and the pound was worth $1.4720.

Based on euro rates, the dollar is worth 2.1044 German marks, up from 2.0769; 7.0579 French francs, up from 6.9657; 2.3711 Dutch guilders, up from 2.3401; 2,083.35 Italian lire, up from 2,056.14.

Gold Down

Gold dealers in London fixed a recommended price of $263.35 bid per troy ounce at closing, down from $264.10 on Tuesday. In Zurich the bid price was $263.25, down from $263.85. Gold fell 90 cents in Hong Kong to $263.35.

Silver closed in London at $4.72 bid per troy ounce, up from $4.66.

OPEC announces 5 percent cut

By BRUCE STANLEY
Associated Press

VIENNA, Austria — OPEC announced Wednesday that it will trim its official crude oil production by 5 percent next month — a move likely to anger the cartel's biggest customers but one that won't necessarily hurt consumers at the gasoline pump.

The cuts, to take effect Feb. 1, are aimed at keeping crude prices firm ahead of an expected slowdown in U.S. economic growth and diminishing seasonal demand for refined products such as heating oil. Delegates of the Organization of the Petroleum Exporting Countries approved details of the cuts during a formal meeting at the cartel's headquarters in Vienna, Austria.

The 1.5 million-barrel-a-day decrease in production is sure to disappoint the governments of many oil-importing nations. The United States and European Union had lobbied hard for OPEC to keep crude flowing at current levels, given their fears of U.S. economic fragility and a possible global recession.

OPEC ministers justified their action as an effort to stabilize volatile crude prices, and they argued that their economies would suffer if prices plunged. They played down the potential pain their decision might inflict on importing countries.

"This is a very prudent decision. We don't want to hurt consumers, and we want to protect the interests of producers," OPEC Secretary-General Ali Rodriguez told a news conference. Qatari Oil Minister Abdullah bin Hamad Al Attiyah said: "The United States' economy is very important for us, as our economy also should be important to them."

Some OPEC members suggested that the group might reduce output again in March, when they are to meet again to assess market conditions. Iranian Oil Minister Bijan Namdar Zangeneh expressed support for an additional cut of 500,000 barrels at that time.

OPEC supplies almost two-fifths of the world's crude. The group is eager to avoid repeating its mistake of December 1997, when it decided to boost output shortly before the Asian financial crisis throttled demand. Prices bottomed out a year later at around $10 a barrel.

Ministers of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries gather at the start of the meeting at OPEC headquarters in Vienna, Austria Wednesday. OPEC announced Wednesday that it will trim its official crude oil production by 5 percent beginning next month.

Now OPEC members fear that prices could collapse again if demand softens, and analysts had said a decision to reduce output was a foregone conclusion.

Typically, a cut in oil output would raise crude oil prices and probably gasoline prices at the pump. But some analysts said Wednesday that this curtailment might not make much of a difference for individual consumers.

"The cut is not going to have a negative impact on consumers," predicted Leo Drollas, chief economist of the London-based Center for Global Energy Studies. "It's not too bad. It could have been worse."

Peter Gignoux, head of the petroleum desk at Salomon Smith Barney in London, said OPEC's widely anticipated decision would not unsettle oil markets.

"The markets have already had so much time to prepare for this decrease that it's absolutely priced in," he said.

The biggest wild card for consumers and OPEC alike is Iraq, an important cartel member, which continues to withhold the bulk of its crude from the market: It has slashed its crude exports by approximately 1.7 million barrels a day, shipping just 671,000 barrels a day last week, according to the United Nations.

Iraq is embroiled in a pricing dispute with the United Nations, which regulates all Iraqi exports. Iraq has not participated in OPEC's production agreements since the 1991 Gulf War, and OPEC members said they aimed to trim output regardless of what Iraq does.

However, OPEC officials suggested that group members would make up for any shortfall created by an Iraqi withdrawal from the market, thereby helping to contain any jump in prices.

Oil prices have surged in recent weeks, rising above $30 a barrel last week in the United States, a four-week high.

News of OPEC's decision sent prices sharply lower Wednesday. February contracts of U.S. benchmark light, sweet crude fell 94 cents to $29.35 a barrel on the New York Mercantile Exchange. North Sea Brent, the European benchmark crude, was trading 75 cents lower at $24.77 on the International Petroleum Exchange in London.

Drollas predicted that light, sweet crude would stay around $28 a barrel in the first quarter as a result of OPEC's production cut. Brent would stabilize at around $25.50 a barrel, he said.

Consumer prices surge in 2000; factory output plunges

By Martin Crutsinger
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Consumer prices jumped 3.4 percent last year, the biggest increase in a decade, although a fall in gasoline prices helped to hold back inflation in December.

Meanwhile, in a dramatic sign of the slowdown affecting the U.S. economy, the government said that output at U.S. factories plunged by 1.1 percent in December, the biggest setback since the end of the last recession in 1991.

A third economic report showed that the weakness in manufacturing was extending to other parts of the economy as well in December. The Federal Reserve said its latest survey of business conditions found retailers reporting disappointing holiday sales and rising layoffs "in a wide variety of industries."

The Fed survey, known as the beige book, said those losing their jobs should have no trouble finding new employment, given generally tight labor markets.

The Fed report, which will be used at the Jan. 30-31 meeting of the central bank, said the economic slowdown was also helping to limit price pressures for products and services.

On Wall Street, stocks were mixed. The Dow Jones industrial average was down 29 points in afternoon trading while the technology-heavy Nasdaq composite index was up 116.40, or 4.5 percent.

Total industrial production, which covers manufacturing, utilities and mining, was off 0.6 percent last month, the biggest drop since a 0.7 percent fall in June 1998.

The big plunge in manufacturing output reflected widespread plant shutdowns by auto companies as they tried to deal with a growing backlog of unsold cars. Mining, which includes oil drilling, posted a 0.3 percent rise while utility output jumped by 6.5 percent as utility firms responded to the record cold.

Analysts said the 1.1 percent output plunge at manufacturing plants, the largest since a similar decline in March 1991 as the last recession was ending, was more evidence the economy was slowing dramatically at the end of the year. The Labor Department said Wednesday that its Consumer Price Index, the most closely watched inflation gauge, posted a 0.2 percent increase last month, the third straight month of price moderation.

However, for the entire year, the 3.4 percent rise in consumer prices marked the biggest advance since a 6.1 percent surge in 1990. Consumer prices were up 2.7 percent in 1999, which had been the worst showing since 1996.

The last two years have been heavily influenced by a big run-up in energy costs, which had fallen sharply the previous year as global demand slumped in the wake of the Asian currency crisis.

Economists are forecasting that inflation will moderate this year in response to the Federal Reserve's string of interest rate increases from July 1999 to May 2000, aimed at slowing the surging economy to a more sustainable pace.

On Jan. 3, the Fed, alarmed by how sharp the slowdown has been over the past few months, suddenly switched course and began cutting rates in an effort to avert a recession.

Many economists are predicting further rate cuts at the Fed's regularly scheduled meetings on Jan. 30-31, and in March and May if various economic indicators continue to flash recession warnings.

The 0.2 percent rise in consumer prices last month reflected a small 0.2 percent rise in energy costs and a tiny 0.1 percent increase in food costs. Gasoline pump prices actually fell by 1.7 percent last month.

Outside food and energy, inflation was also contained with the "core rate" of inflation up by just 0.1 percent, the smallest gain in a year.

For all of 2000, the core rate of inflation rose by 2.6 percent, compared to an increase of 1.9 percent rise in 1999.

Economists believe both core inflation pressures and the overall inflation gauge will moderate in 2001 as the economy slows. Overall economic growth, which soared at an estimated annual rate of around 5 percent in 2000, is expected to slow to just 2.5 percent this year.

For all of 2000, energy prices rose by 14.2 percent, the biggest advance since an 18.1 percent rise in 1990 during the Persian Gulf conflict. Gasoline prices were up 13.9 percent following an even bigger 30.1 percent jump in 1999.

Natural gas prices, which have produced eye-popping bills for many homeowners, were up 4.4 percent in December and a record 36.7 percent for all of 2000.

Another area of rising price pressures last year was in medical costs, which rose by 4.2 percent, the worst showing since a 4.9 percent jump in 1994.

Food prices were up 2.8 percent last year, the biggest increase since a 4.3 percent rise in 1996.

BUSINESS IN BRIEF

The Permian Basin chapter, Institute Management Accountants, will meet today at the Petroleum Club beginning with lunch at 11:45 a.m. Laura Buckner, tax manager with KPMG will be the luncheon speaker. The two-hour continuing education technical session will be titled "The Annual Tax Update" and will be held from noon to 2 p.m. Cost is $15 for member, $20 for non-members and includes one hour CPE.

Lance Ingram, Midland investment representative for Edward Jones, will host an investment class, "Understanding the Basics to Investing" beginning January 30. The six-week class will be held on consecutive Tuesdays and end March 6. The course will be held at Midland Christian from 6:30 to 8 p.m. Cost is $20 and reservations for the course can be made by calling 522-1920.

THE ECONOMIST

An economic slowdown is not a recession, not even close

By M. Ray Perryman

Several years ago, the expression "Here comes the judge" was popularized across America by its frequent repetition on the television show "Laugh-In."

Perryman

If you ask someone if he or she is familiar with the phrase, the answer is often "yes." When asked to define the phrase, however, that person may not be as forthcoming. You might even get an answer like, "I know what it means, but I just can't put it into words."

Here's another word quiz. Ask your friends if they have recently heard the expression, "slowing economy." Most will probably reply affirmatively. Then ask one of them to explain what it means. Unless that individual is very well versed on economic history and terminology or is an avid reader or listener of leading business analysts, you might get some blank stares, some stammering, or perhaps that standard retort, "I know, but I just can't put it into words."

So you won't have to rely on that kind of inadequate reply if you are asked to explain what's happening to our economy right now, here's one insight.

It's true, our economy is slowing, but that doesn't mean Chicken Little was right. The sky is not falling. Keep in mind that a slowdown is not a recession. Not even close! We're still in the air and the destination hasn't changed. It's just that the jet stream isn't pushing us as fast as it did in the past.

When traveling by modern trains or luxury liners, getting there can be half the fun. Until recently, the economy's love of acceleration fueled by dot-com phenomena made getting there half the fun. For a while, the rocket bursts of energy emanating from anything ending in dotcom were sufficient to raise stock prices and, with them, consumer confidence to the stratosphere. Then on the return trip to earth, careful examination of these ingenious economic marvels revealed that earnings and continued growth were necessary to keep dotcoms in the sky.

Those companies that couldn't make a profit or sustain continued growth ran out of fuel. As they attempted to coast, economic gravity pulled them into default and destruction. In essence, it was a slight twist on the law of supply and demand. Some of the companies that eventually folded couldn't supply their shareholders with profit prospects in a sufficiently timely manner; as a result, there was no more demand for their stock.

Had the demise of these entities not been so spectacular, so frequent, and so ubiquitous, perhaps the bursting of the tech bubble might have produced fewer rumblings and repercussions. But the daily news brought each event to our attention, and with each, skepticism about the reliability of the future began to mount. It was as if brakes had been applied to the soaring economy, causing it to slow down suddenly. As a result, some of the packages we had placed in the overhead compartments on our travel to economic heights tended to shift.

Just as in any activity, however, we knew that the market could not continue at full blast and retain its effectiveness. A slowdown seemed inevitable and perhaps even necessary in order to have the time to reconsider approaches and develop plans for recuperation.

Thus, if someone asks you what "a slowing economy" means, tell the person it's simply the creation of a new opportunity — one that gives priority to readjustment and reevaluation. It just might be that this kind of opportunity will enable us to rearrange the overhead compartments and take another trip where we will see fast-paced expansion emerging once again. In the meantime, we will continue to move in the right direction.

Dr. M. Ray Perryman is President and Chief Executive Officer of The Perryman Group.

Williams tones down her outfit, keeps winning

Associated Press

MELBOURNE, Australia — Venus Williams says she's looking good at the Australian Open.

Dressed for success once more, Williams overpowered fellow American Meghann Shaughnessy 6-3, 7-6 (3) on Thursday to reach the third round.

Williams again wore the provocative black and blue outfit that drew international attention when unveiled in the opening round. But this time she appeared more comfortable in the ensemble, which was modified to nearly eliminate the low-cut gap in her two-piece top that caused such a stir.

"I love the outfit," a beaming Williams said. "(I feel) very relaxed, very confident, comfortable — just beautiful."

Shaughnessy, for the record, wore a white shirt and skirt.

Another American, Amy Frazier, became the third seeded woman to exit when she was beaten by Rita Grande 6-4, 6-1. Frazier was seeded 16th.

Top-seeded Martina Hingis beat Els Callens 6-1, 6-0 in 40 minutes. Hingis' first match lasted 39 minutes.

No. 13 Amelie Mauresmo, the 1999 runner-up, beat Nicole Pratt 6-0, 7-5. Mauresmo and Williams could meet in the fourth round.

No. 7 Mary Pierce remained on course for a quarterfinal clash with Williams, beating Mariana Diaz Oliva 6-2 6-2. No. 9 Elena Dementieva, the silver medalist in the Sydney Olympics, overcame a match point in the second set to edge qualifier Andrea Glass 2-6, 7-6 (8-6), 6-3.

In men's play, No. 5 Yevgeny Kafelnikov took three hours to beat Nicolas Kiefer 6-2, 3-6, 3-6, 6-3, 6-0. Kiefer won only eight points in the last set, and Kafelnikov aced him on the final three points.

"Anytime you win a five-set match, it's a huge relief," Kafelnikov said. "It's quite satisfying."

Kafelnikov, the 1999 champion and runner-up last year, improved his career record in five-setters to 14-7.

No. 11 Francisco Squillari was the second seeded man to be eliminated. He lost to Daniel Nestor 3-6, 6-2, 6-4, 7-5.

The third-seeded Williams, who repeatedly fidgeted with her top in the first round, this time was able to focus on tennis. She was in a particularly aggressive mode, charging the net early and often, and although she blew two easy volleys to lose a service game, she also won 19 points at the net, many with smash volleys.

And twice when Shaughnessy dared to attack, Williams belted passing shots that sent her opponent sprawling.

"In my first match I didn't come in very much," Williams said. "Last year what really got me all my titles was just being aggressive and moving forward, so I'm definitely implementing that in my game more and more as the rounds go on."

Williams failed to convert a match point at 5-4, lost the next game as well and then held to force the tiebreak. She stayed back the rest of the way and closed out the win with two forehand winners and a service winner on the final three points.

As the crowd applauded the victory, Williams responded with a smile, wave and single hop. She moved one step closer to her third consecutive Grand Slam title.

Williams' outfit was front-page news in Australian newspapers following the opening round, but she said she didn't see any of the photos.

"I really don't read the papers," she said. "I find a lot of these stories are exaggerated, and there's a lot of uproar. I've been advised by my mom and dad not to read too much of anything, especially abut me."

NFL owners OK revenue sharing

Associated Press

IRVING — NFL owners eliminated a major hurdle to realignment Wednesday by adopting a new revenue-sharing plan.

Under the plan that will begin in 2002, the 40 percent gate receipts earned by each visiting team in all regular season and preseason games will be combined, with the money then distributed equally among all 32 teams.

"There are economic considerations of realigning with a major upheaval of traditional rivalries," Kansas City owner Lamar Hunt said. "This is an important step."

During their one-day meeting in this Dallas suburb, owners again discussed but took no formal action on realignment that will be needed when the expansion Houston Texans join in 2002.

They spent more than an hour discussing various divisional alignments during the first meeting on the topic involving all 32 teams. There had been two separate meetings in previous months involving 16 teams each.

With realignment, the six existing divisions will be redone into eight four-team divisions in two 16-team conferences.

That will mean the end to some divisional rivalries that started with the last major realignment after the NFL-AFL merger in 1970. It would also mean that some teams may not routinely play road games against big-market teams that provide larger gate receipts under the current plan.

"I think that will take care of itself," said Tennessee owner Bud Adams. "With the sharing of revenues, there won't be as much of a problem getting a move on realignment."

Buffalo owner Ralph Wilson said realignment still won't be easy, but that pooling visitors' revenues will be helpful.

Jerry Jones, who wants his Dallas Cowboys to stay in the NFC East with the New York Giants, Philadelphia and Washington, said the overwhelming sentiment among the owners is to protect the rivalries.

"We want to maintain the competition between teams that have played 30, 40, 50 years or more," Jones said. "There are other issues, but that's No. 1."

NFL owners meet again in March in Palm Desert, Calif. If no realignment plan is approved then, the owners meet again in May in Chicago. They have until June 1 to settle the issue.

"Our traditional revenue-sharing policies have served the league and its clubs well over the decades," NFL commissioner Paul Tagliabue said. "The additional step we approved today enhances those policies, and enables us to base future realignment on its merits, not on resulting economics."

The leading realignment proposal, put together by Pittsburgh owner Dan Rooney, calls for the expansion Texans to be an AFC member when they join the league. Seattle would then move to the NFC.

Arizona would leave the NFC East, Indianapolis would leave the AFC East and Tampa Bay would be in a division with three unusual rivals from the old NFC West.

"That will be the basis of what we do," Rooney said, adding that wasn't set in stone. "It's the fairest thing, it shouldn't be too hard now to get it done."

After the NFL-AFL merger, there were several realignment proposals. Five different plans were put into a hat, and the one pulled out by the secretary of then-commissioner Pete Rozelle was adopted.

AIKMAN: Quarterback hasn't decided to quit

(From 1C)

Aikman, 34, has given no indication publicly if he plans to continue his career or retire.

When questions about his future were raised throughout last season, Aikman maintained that he would like to play as long as he enjoys the game and isn't risking horrible injury. His desire remains high, leaving his health as the main concern.

Jones has to decide whether he wants to keep the quarterback who brought him three Super Bowl titles — and at what price. Aikman, the first player Jones ever drafted, is due $7 million if he's on the roster March 8.

"As far as I am concerned, we can make a decision 30 minutes before then or we can extend that. That's not a significant date," Jones said.

Leigh Steinberg, Aikman's agent, hasn't returned repeated phone calls the past few weeks.

Jones said there would be more meetings with Aikman and Steinberg, but didn't indicate when or where such meetings would take place. The first meeting happened earlier this month in California.

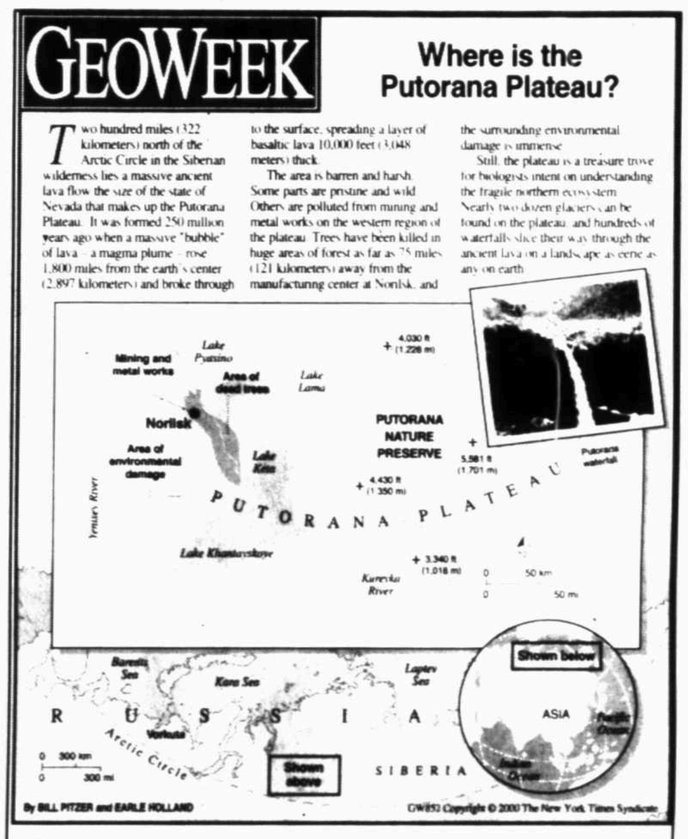

Steinberg has said that he doesn't think Aikman will take as long to decide as did Steve Young, another concussion-prone future Hall of Fame quarterback he represents. Young didn't announce his retirement last offseason until June, just weeks before San Francisco went to training camp.

Stephen Jones, a Cowboys vice president and director of player personnel, said Dallas is preparing for life with or without Aikman. But he doesn't expect to see Aikman becoming a free agent and finishing his career with another team.

"I don't, it's hard for me to ever imagine it," he said.

GEOWEEK

Where is the Putorana Plateau?

Two hundred miles (322 kilometers) north of the Arctic Circle in the Siberian wilderness lies a massive ancient lava flow the size of the state of Nevada that makes up the Putorana Plateau. It was formed 250 million years ago when a massive "bubble" of lava — a magma plume — rose 1,800 miles from the earth's center (2,897 kilometers) and broke through to the surface, spreading a layer of basaltic lava 10,000 feet (3,048 meters) thick.

The area is barren and harsh. Some parts are pristine and wild. Others are polluted from mining and metal works on the western region of the plateau. Trees have been killed in huge areas of forest as far as 75 miles (121 kilometers) away from the manufacturing center at Norilsk, and the surrounding environmental damage is immense.

Still, the plateau is a treasure trove for biologists intent on understanding the fragile northern ecosystem. Nearly two dozen glaciers can be found on the plateau, and hundreds of waterfalls slice their way through the ancient lava on a landscape as eerie as any on earth.

GIANTS: Players get along now, and they win

(From 1C)

that make them more than teammates.

There was a team boat trip around Manhattan in the spring, a wild golf outing at Forsgate Country Club in Central New Jersey in May, a trip to the movies (Gladiator) during training camp and a day of bowling during the season.

"Playing with these guys has been a lot of fun, probably the most fun I've had in my career," Armstead said.

The golf tournament might have been resulted in the most laughs. Eighteen foursomes went out, but the one that included Armstead, defensive tackle Keith Hamilton, defensive line coach Denny Marcin and coordinator John Fox was the one to watch.

Hamilton, who had never golfed, spent hundreds of dollars on clothing, shoes and clubs. He even looked like a golfer, until he started swinging.

It got comical after that.

Another novice, Armstead was just as funny according to teammates. He drove his golf cart down the middle of the fairway, through a sand trap and on the green, all moves that would have left golf purists aghast.

"He lost two of my clubheads, too," said Fassel, who loaned his clubs to Armstead.

It was like that in many of the foursomes, and the bonds on the Giants grew.

"I don't know if it's maturity or what you would call it," guard Ron Stone said. "Everybody came to understand that things work more when there is no animosity. We've been working hard and caring about each other instead of fighting each other. There's been no problems."

The offense-defense issue disappeared in training camp.

Brown and Parker were the type of veterans who did not take anything from the defense.

"They see that and they have a lot of respect for that," backup center Derek Engler said. "We were also making plays on them from day one. That earns you respect. We hadn't done that until this camp. Finally the offense was bringing it to the table and saying 'Let's see what you have.'"

While all the off-the-field activities and the training camp helped tighten the bond between the offense and the defense, the Giants 7-2 start made this a very close team.

"Winning cures a multitude of ills," Parker sid. "It's the truth. You win games and a lot of bad things that happen in the past are forgotten."

Parker also noted that the players from last year helped make the transformation complete by accepting the new players.

"They accepted a changed and wanted a change," Parker said. "When those things happen, anything can happen quickly."

2 shops offer furniture, art from Mexico

Mexican furniture and art have become popular in the last few years but they were sometimes hard to acquire unless one traveled to Mexico. Settling for a piece of furniture somewhat comparable to what was sought or buying from catalogs were the ways to go. No longer is that true. These wares have become lucrative business. Two local establishments offer a variety of Mexican imports — from figurines to custom-made furniture.

Mexican Art 'n' Furniture is owned by Patrick and Melanie Cordero. Cordero said he had been thinking and planning such a business for about four years before it finally became a reality in December. Their shop offers pine and weathered wood furniture, upholstered couches, loveseats and chairs. The pieces can be custom-made in different colors and fabrics; leather will also be available. Wrought-iron decorative pieces will also be offered in the future.

C dero, who also owns Strategic Abstract & Title Corp., went into partnership with Samuel Rivas, a factory wholesaler from Guadalajara, Mexico, whom he met here a few years ago.

"He (Sam) needed a place to show his wares and I had this building, so this was really going to be a warehouse," said Cordero. "But I had been thinking about it for about four years and decided to do it. We can sell to wholesalers and retail, also." The pieces come directly from the factory, which keeps prices reasonable, Cordero said.

A unique element of the shop will be the exhibition and sale of art by Mexican artists. Hector Najera, Mexican master from Monterrey, Nuevo Leon, Mexico, is currently exhibiting his modern primitive works in paintings and sculpture at the shop. "We were lucky to be able to show his work," said Cordero.

An exclusive line of furniture by Najera will be created especially for Mexican Art n' Furniture in the near future. The owners also plan to rotate a different Mexican artist every three to four months. Najera's work will be on display through March or April.

He studied drawing, painting and sculpture with the master Antonio Decanini in Monterrey and studies sculpture with the master Adolfo Labner. He taught literature at the University of Nuevo Leon and at age 20 emigrated to the United States and opened a studio in Los Angeles. His work is found in private and public collections in more than 90 countries and more than 100 universities and 23 museums worldwide.

During his early years he acquired an international reputation as a portrait painter. "Najera would be merely a clever virtuoso, like many we have seen among the modern primitives, if he did not infuse into his works the breath of tenderness and fragile humor..." wrote Pablo Humberto Posada V., S. J., art historian and principal of the ITESCO, Jesuit University in Guadalajara. "He even inspired M. Paul Guth to write a series of brilliant prose-poems, dedicated to his paintings..."

El Mercado, owned by Aurora Duran, sells wares as a real mercado might offer in Mexico. "We carry a little bit of everything," said Ms. Duran, "like a mercado," which means market.

The shop offers Mexican and Southwest decor items. Pottery, wrought iron lamps and mirrors, hammered tin and copper mirrors, crucifixes made of pottery or metal , figurines, silver jewelry and rustic and iron furniture pieces are a few of the items she carries.

She likes to carry "lots of stuff for the patio. Customers are already asking for planters." Custom-made furniture is ordered and delivered from Chihuahua or Guadalajara within approximately 30 days. Some furniture is displayed in the shop but since it is so small, many pieces are in storage or can be special-ordered from two catalogs available in her store.

Ms. Duran began her business last February. El Mercado is next to Jorge's restaurant. She said her shop benefits from that clientele coming in to browse. The owner of Jorge's, George Veloz, also is Ms. Duran's partner.

"I started this because I love to shop and decorate for the home," said Ms. Duran. "I basically started with family — my mom, dad and sister; and George who is considered family."

Mexican Art 'n' Furniture, 1605 N. Big Spring St., is open 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Saturday. El Mercado, Wadley Avenue and Midland Drive, is open 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday.

While away sleepless hours by shopping, watching old movies

By Richard Acosta

I really don't sleep very well.

I toss and turn as I watch the minutes roll off the clock like sands through the hour glass.

Acosta

I've tried lots of different ways to get to sleep, but before long I had to come to terms with the fact that I just don't sleep.

For the longest time I would just pout about it, but now I try to use that time the best way I can.

Shopping, for instance.

I find the best time to shop is around 2 a.m.

No crowds, no screaming kids, just wide-open isles.

The only setback to shopping at night is you have to get a lot of stuff or nothing at all.

See, if you get $70 worth of groceries, then the person behind the counter will kind of look at you with a, "Oh, you must work at night," type of stare.

But if you only get a frozen pizza and a six-pack of socks, they look at you with a, "Why do you all of a sudden need with a pizza and socks at 2:30 a.m.?" Stare ... not good.

But the thing I like best about not sleeping at night is watching "B" movies and old classics.

They are so funny.

There's the whole lone-cop movie.

A hard-drinking, unlucky-in-love, unshaven cop, has to clean up his act to save the wife and kid — who moved out on him.

You know the one. The cop gets a new partner who is a stright-laced goodie-goodie.

And there is always that scene in the car in which the goodie-goodie is trying to get to know the hard-drinking cop.

"So tell me about your family."

"Look, I don't like you. You don't like me."

"I just want to get to know you."

"Grrrrr."

Then we find out later that the hard-drinking cop had a partner who was killed and doesn't want to get too close to the new partner.

Soon after that scene is the one in which the hard-drinking cop's kid, who loves him, is stood up by the dad to go to the zoo or something.

The drinking cop comes home late, the kid's in bed and the ex-wife has the emotional talk with the him on the porch.

"It's one thing when you do this to me. I know you are a jerk. But it's another thing when you do this to your son."

It's always a son.

You know this movie. Hollywood's made it a million times.

The best part, however, is the bad guy scene. The bad guy and the cops have that tense moment when the cops almost arrest the bad guys, but the bad guys get away. Then the bad guys do something to the drinking cop's family and the drinking cop and his partner go out and kill all the bad guys and the movie ends.

Everyone lives happily ever after, the cop stops drinking and has made up with his wife — everything is peaches and cream.

I've often wondered, though. If they can kill all the bad guys at the end of the movie and get away with it ... why not kill the bad guys at the beginning of the movie?

I mean, the bad guys in these movies are always the bad guys the drinking cop was after for years. It's always the case that tore the family apart.

If the cop would have just killed them a long time ago everything would have been fine.

That's nothing compared to the old movies.

You know, they talk about the old days being less stressful and carefree. I think I know why. Everyone was drinking and smoking.

OK, maybe not in every old movie. But you would be hard pressed not to think of an actor or actress of yesteryear without a drink or a cigarette in their hands.

What did these people do to unwind?

I especially love the old Superman show.

I saw one the other night and I laughed so hard. Superman flies in and messes up the robbery or something. The bad guys turn and unload their guns at Superman. Superman just stands there as the bullets bounce off his chest.

BUT.

When the bad guys' guns are empty, they throw the gun at Superman and he ducks. The man took six speeding bullets to the chest, but is afraid to get hit by a hand thrown pistol?

Is he scared he'll have his eye put out?
