Congress questions Ortega's actions

From Wire Reports

Members of Congress are condemning Nicaraguan President Daniel Ortega as they become convinced that he ordered a military incursion into neighboring Honduras, and the action is renewing calls for U.S. aid to the anti-Sandinista rebels.

"There's a feeling that Mr. Ortega is pretty damn stupid, indeed," said Rep. Dan Glickman, D-Kan., a member of the House Intelligence Committee who was briefed Thursday on the border incursion against the Contra rebels.

"This so-called final offensive against the Contras may have made sense militarily, but it was bad politics," said Sen. Claiborne Pell, chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee.

However, some Americans disagree.

Hundreds of demonstrators chanting "get them out" slowed traffic in Chicago's Loop today following a day of protests around the nation against the Reagan administration's movement of troops to Honduras.

■ Related stories — 4A, 5A

On Thursday, demonstrators toppled police barricades in San Francisco, burned a U.S. flag in Minneapolis and erected a mock "Central America War Memorial" in Philadelphia in protest of the troop deployment.

Briefings for members of Congress by top Reagan administration officials portrayed the Sandinista military action as a long-planned and skillfully executed attack that was threatening a Contra command center about 10 miles northwest of Bocay, Nicaragua, just inside the Honduran border.

Several moderate Democratic House members, who were behind a failed March 3 attempt to provide strictly "humanitarian" aid to the rebels, said the move gave new impetus to the effort to pass an aid package.

FDIC action 'interim step;' Investors sought

DALLAS (AP) — Federal officials say a $1 billion cash infusion to First RepublicBank was an interim step to steady the bank, shaken by a run on deposits, and outside investors are being sought to help put the company on surer financial footing.

The Federal Deposit Insurance Corp.'s advance Thursday helped calm jittery depositors and slow a run on deposits that has drained reserves from the ailing company, bank spokesman Joseph C. Bowles said.

"As soon as the FDIC action was made available to the public, the deposit outflow stopped," he said. But there was little good news for Texas' largest bank-holding company's investors, he said.

"This action by the FDIC guarantees creditors and depositors and not the holding company. The shareholders certainly are at risk in this situation."

FDIC Chairman William Seidman said in Washington that the assistance was only a short-term step.

Seidman said the FDIC was seeking a long-term solution to the holding company's problems and was talking to private investors who may want to participate in a restructuring of the company.

Seidman pledged his agency to fully protect all depositors of the banks as well as general creditors. That goes beyond the minimum the agency would normally be expected to insure, which is deposits of $100,000 and less.

Without the cash infusion, "basically the bank would have failed," said independent banking consultant Frank Anderson. But it still remains to be seen if the bank can overcome its financial problems, he said.

In the short term, however, "this effective action by the FDIC will provide a stable environment for our customers," Gerald Fronterhouse, First RepublicBank's chairman and chief executive officer, said in a statement.

Pipeline closure could hike prices

By JOHN PAUL PITTS
Business/Oil Editor

The closure of the 75-mile long pipeline that carries Alaskan North Slope crude oil across the Republic of Panama could cause oil prices to move upward and speed up efforts to complete a proposed Los Angeles-to-Midland pipeline.

The Panama pipeline, which begins at Puerto Armuelles on the Pacific side of Panama and terminates at Chiriqui Grande on the Atlantic side, has been closed for two days as the result of a general strike and electrical blackouts across much of the nation.

Prolonged closure, say sources, will have an effect on West Coast posted prices and could result in an increase in posted prices in the Permian Basin if inventory changes stimulate trading on the New York Mercantile Exchange.

Oil prices at NYMEX increased slightly Thursday on news of the pipeline closing and continued upward this morning. Some analysts, however, doubt if delays in shipments of North Slope crude will have a dramatic effect on prices, in light of current over production.

One place a price swing is expected immediately is the West Coast. "An imbalance of oil production on the West Coast generally creates a situation in which North Slope production is 'dumped' on the California market, driving prices down," said Ed Maimgreen, assistant vice president of the California Independent Producers Association. Maimgreen said continued closure of the pipeline would create a serious imbalance on the West Coast.

Of the 1.91 million barrels produced on the North Slope and transported through the Trans-Alaskan Pipeline to the Port of Valdez about 800,000 barrels is surplus which must be moved to refineries on the Gulf Coast or East Coast.

Midland County employee Roy Brewer blades a East. Road maintenance work soon will reach its peak stretch of County Road 1160 near County Road 130 as it normally does in the spring.

Only routine road maintenance anticipated after mild winter

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

County roads that normally crumble under the onslaught of ice and snow should demand less than the average amount of attention to repairs this spring, according to Road and Bridge Superintendent Albert Stewart.

"We really haven't had much moisture this winter. So, I don't expect we'll have to do much more than attend to our regular maintenance schedule," Stewart said, pointing out that the less money spent now will only help his department budget for emergencies as the year passes.

Stewart's maintenance timetable — though it ticks year round — often peaks after winter subsides and road crews are able to focus their attention on newly-formed potholes that were born from a mixture of sub-freezing temperatures and moisture.

Routine repairs have been ordered on most county roads and will center on grading, seal-coating and re-construction — or a combination of the three — regardless of the degree of wear and tear, Stewart said.

"This winter has been a little unusual because it's been dry. But, we'll do maintenance regardless," he said.

Stewart doesn't worry that he won't have enough work to keep his crews busy or that the county's road and bridge fund won't be spent by the end of the fiscal year because "we pretty much deplete the budget every year," he noted.

Still, the road and bridge superintendent has been no stranger to the fiscal roller-coaster ride, due in part to the instability of the weather in recent years and budgetary cutbacks.

County Auditor Floyd Jarnagin resolves Stewart's dilemma by ordering most of the road supplies in bulk to last the entire year.

County Commissioners budgeted $900,000 in 1987 for road maintenance and materials — down $18,500 from 1986's figure of $918,500. In 1985, the county spent $167,628.

The total road and bridge fund of $1,794,471 in 1985 increased to $2,121,614 in 1986, but fell to $1,959,902 in 1988.

The funding decrease was part of the commissioner's attempts to cut costs in the wake of declining revenues.

Population grew almost 40 percent in six years

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The population of Midland grew by an estimated 37.5 percent between the 1980 census and July 1, 1986, making it the largest city in Texas with population under 100,000, the state Department of Commerce reported Thursday.

With the addition of 26,476 residents, Midland surpassed Grand Prairie, Richardson and San Angelo in moving from the 25th to the 22nd largest city in the state. The study estimates Midland's July 1, 1986, population at 97,001, compared to the 1980 census figure of 70,525.

The report shows that Midland closed the gap but did not catch up to Odessa, now the 20th largest Texas city at 102,855 residents. Odessa gained 12,826 in growing by 14.3 percent from 1980's 90,027 and barely passing Wichita Falls.

After the 1990 census, Texas is expected to gain two or three more congressional seats whose distribution across the state will depend on the population swings in the previous 10 years. At the same time the Legislature will redraw district lines for the 31 state Senate and 150 state House districts, also based on 1990 population figures.

The Agriculture Experiment Station at Texas A&M University developed the 1986 estimates under contract with the Commerce Department's State Data Center.

Susan Suaniuio with the Data Center said the project used the Census Bureau's annual preliminary statewide estimates as a baseline and determined local figures through school enrollments, birth and death rates, automobile registrations and voter registrations.

Ms. Suaniuio said state agencies and "people out in the area who should be aware of what's going on the area" reviewed the results. If the reviewers could provide documentation challenging the figures, she said, they were recomputed.

The Dallas suburb of Plano led the state's larger cities in percentage growth over the six-year period, picking up nearly 35,000 residents with a 48.4-percent growth rate. Austin followed with a 45.9-percent increase to 504,000, passing up El Paso and Fort Worth in the statewide rankings.

Despite difficulties, pageant will be held as scheduled

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — The 1988 Permian Basin Area Baby Pageant, approved as a fundraiser by the non-profit Ronald McDonald House, will be held as originally scheduled Sunday at the Permian High School Auditorium.

That wasn't always the case.

As late as Thursday morning, Ector County District Attorney Eric Augesen had said, "At this moment" he could see no way the pageant could be held because he had been unable to figure out how to select overall winners from about 200 first place winners and nearly that many second place winners.

However, by late afternoon, following an earlier conference with Odessa attorney John Green, who is representing indicted pageant organizers, Augesen announced he would allow the pageant to be held as scheduled.

Green said this morning he understood Augesen made the decision to allow the pageant to be held about 4 p.m. Thursday.

Green received word he could pick up baby pictures, trophies, health certificates and other records that have been held as evidence by the Odessa Police Department, he said.

Augesen was unavailable for comment this morning on his reasons for changing his mind and allowing the pageant to be held.

The dispute began Monday after Augesen presented evidence gathered by Odessa police to the Ector County grand jury.

The evidence concerning the baby pageant, Augesen said, showed that the promotion violated provisions of the state law on gambling that prohibits lotteries and raffles.

The grand jury handed down indictments against 28-year-old Steven Davis of Lubbock, owner of the company that organized the pageant, and two employees, Donna Burris, 36, and William Clyde Burris, 27, charging them with promotion of gambling.

Acting on search warrants issued Monday by Midland and Ector County peace justices, officers in both cities raided pageant headquarters and seized financial records, ribbons, trophies, medical certificates and money that had been collected by mothers, relatives and friends of children entered in the pageant.

Davis was arrested in Lubbock; Ms. Burris was arrested at the Odessa pageant headquarters, 1821 E. 6th St.; and Burris was arrested at the Midland headquarters, 3001 W. Loop 250. All three were arraigned on charges of promotion of gambling. They were released after posting bonds of $5,000 each.

The actions of Augesen and the Odessa Police Department have generated a storm of protest.

Ronald McDonald House officials claim the non-profit organization has been "victimized" by the district attorney and police.

Eldest son prepared to take on care of younger siblings

AZLE, Texas (AP) — In her final months, Alice Marie Luntz lived in a white-frame house on a knoll north of town, working two jobs to support eight children, yet finding time to take her younger kids to ball practice and church.

When she died March 11 in the collision of a pickup and tractor-trailer rig, Mrs. Luntz left behind 44 years' worth of bruised dreams, seven sons and a daughter — children now on their own.

David Luntz, at 24 the oldest son, is an Army sergeant stationed at Fort Campbell, Ky. He and his wife, Joan, also in the Army, have two sons. They are seeking guardianship of the children, the youngest of whom is 6.

"We plan to bring everybody up to Fort Campbell, where we'll get post housing," David Luntz said. "It's gonna work out. Joan is all behind me."

Mrs. Luntz, a Tarrant County criminal courts clerk for the last 1¼ years, died with two other people in the crash at 2 a.m. at the intersection of Silver Creek Azle Road and Farm Road 1886.

The Tarrant County Sheriff's Department said the pickup in which Mrs. Luntz was riding failed to yield to the truck, skidding into its back wheels and exploding on impact.

Mrs. Luntz; Vicki Butler, 26, of Azle; and Terrence Lee Davies, 21, of Chico, were burned beyond recognition and identified by dental records. A fourth passenger, Kenny Ejem, 22, of Fort Worth, was thrown from the pickup. He is in the burn unit at Parkland Memorial Hospital in Dallas, where he was in fair condition Thursday.

One police source told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram that the pickup's occupants had attended "Ladies' Night" at a Jacksboro Highway club. The investigation of the wreck — including blood-alcohol tests on the charred remains of Davies, who owned the pickup and is assumed to have been the driver — is continuing.

David Luntz said he "talked with Mom about an hour before the wreck and she was sleepy, I don't worry about that part.

North, Perot aide linked to failed hostage payment plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former White House aide Oliver L. North gave an employee of Texas billionaire H. Ross Perot a letter granting him presidential authority to take $100,000 into Canada as part of a failed plan to free a U.S. hostage, a published report says.

The money, provided by Perot, wound up being squandered on high living by a Canadian who was supposed to help win the release of Peter C. Kilburn, the librarian at the American University in Beirut who was kidnapped Dec. 3, 1984, The Washington Post reported today.

Kilburn was killed by a Libyan terrorist group in April 1986 in apparent retaliation for the U.S. bombing of Libya.

North sent Perot employee Jay Coburn to Canada in January 1986 with a letter on National Security Council stationery that said Coburn "is acting on official U.S. Government business on behalf of the President of the United States," according to a copy of the letter obtained by the Post.

"In support of this mission he has the authority to transport and disburse as necessary, U.S. $100,000," the letter said. "In the event of emergency or clarification, please contact: Oliver L. North."

Perot had provided the money at North's request, and Coburn needed the North letter in case U.S. Customs Service agents stopped him at the border, the Post said.

Perot said Thursday night that he never questioned his employee concerning details of the cash delivery and didn't learn until much later the name of the hostage for whom authorities were negotiating.

He told the Dallas Times Herald the request for the money came from the NSC, but that he didn't seek to know details.

"This is a small event in a very active life," he said. "They asked me for it. I delivered it to them and I didn't ask for any details. They've been calling me on things like this since 1969. It doesn't matter to me who's president. I did it for a simple reason — there was an American over there who needed help."

Travelers must file a disclosure statement if they take more than $10,000 out of the country. Failure to file is punishable by up to $250,000 in fines and five years in prison.

Coburn got into Canada without difficulty and in Montreal, he gave the money to a Canadian citizen who had provided proof of contact with Kilburn's captors.

The Canadian said the $100,000 was a down payment and that with it, he could arrange Kilburn's release for $1 million more, said the Post, which did not identify the man.

The Canadian contact took the money, but never came through with his end of the deal and was later observed by the CIA in Damascus, spending the money on high living, the Post said, citing unidentified sources for the information.

The Post said that a senior FBI official has told Congress that then-FBI Director William H. Webster — who is now CIA director — approved the FBI's participation in the plan. The newspaper said the plan also was discussed with Attorney General Edwin Meese III.

North has said repeatedly that he had express authority from his superiors for his actions. But the White House has said Reagan had no knowledge of any efforts to ransom U.S. hostages in Lebanon.

North, who was fired from his job as an NSC aide in late 1986 following revelations of the secret sales of arms to Iran and the diversion of profits from those sales to the Nicaraguan Contra rebels, was indicted Wednesday.

He was charged with conspiracy to defraud the government and commit criminal offenses against it, theft of government property and wire fraud arising from the diversion of arms-sales proceeds.

He was named in nine counts charging him with obstruction of Congress, making false statements, obstructing Meese's Nov. 21-25, 1986, inquiry by making false statements and concealing, falsifying and destroying classified government documents in NSC files.

Also indicted Wednesday were former national security adviser John M. Poindexter and arms dealers Richard V. Secord and Albert Hakim.

WEATHER SUMMARY

Local conditions should become more seasonable

From Staff Reports

Local temperatures will make their way back toward the seasonable range under sunny skies this weekend, say forecasters with the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport.

The warming trend will erase the threat of record-breaking low temperatures such as this morning's low of 20 degrees which wiped out the previous record of 22, set on this date in 1934.

Forecasters say tonight will be fair with a low in the mid 20s. Winds will be light and southerly.

On Saturday, skies will be sunny and a high in the upper 60s is expected. Winds will be from the south to southwest at 5 to 15 mph.

Thursday's high of 54 was 37 degrees cooler than the record of 91, set on that date in 1977.

STATE

Spring may be just around the corner, but Texans are going to experience plenty of cold weather between now and then.

Spring arrives officially early Sunday morning, but forecasters are saying that sub-freezing temperatures are expected across much of the state both tonight and Saturday night.

Unseasonably cold air continued to move into Texas today with temperatures dipping into the teens in the Panhandle.

Forecasts called for mostly cloudy skies over the coastal plains with a slight chance of light rain over the coastal plains.

Clouds will be decreasing and should be clear over most of the state by late tonight or Saturday morning.

Lows tonight will be mostly in the 20s and 30s, ranging from the teens in the Panhandle to the 40s in extreme South Texas.

Highs Saturday will be in the 60s and 70s over West Texas except in the Big Bend where readings will climb into the lower 80s, in the 60s across North Texas and South Texas.

Scattered showers and thunderstorms were reported early today over middle and lower sections of the Texas coastal plains and the middle Rio Grande plains. Some drizzle was reported in East Texas and Southeast Texas.

Early morning temperatures were mostly in the 30s and 40s, ranging from the teens in the Panhandle and in the 20s across the rest of West Texas to the 50s in South Texas and Southeast Texas. Extremes ranged from 16 at Amarillo to 52 at Beaumont.

Other early morning temperatures around the state included 27 at Wichita Falls, 34 at Fort Worth, 37 at Waco, 39 at Austin, 45 at Corpus Christi, 28 at San Angelo, 22 at Lubbock and 30 at El Paso.

NATION

A storm dusted the Midwest and parts of the South today with snow after snapping power lines and closing schools in Arkansas.

"There were people who planned to lay out in bikinis, and they're packing up their snow suits," said Donna Dickey, a University of Arkansas student whose spring break began today.

The storm knocked out power to about 3,000 homes and businesses Thursday, Arkansas Power & Light Co. spokesman Charles Kelly said.

Harrison, Ark., reported 22 inches of snow on the ground, while most northern parts of the state had 4 to 8 inches.

Forecasters posted winter storm warnings for nothern Arkansas and western Kentucky. Snow advisories also were posted for southern Illinois, western Tennessee, southern Indiana, Ohio, northern West Virginia and southwest Pennsylvania.

Early today, snow fell across lower Michigan, southwest Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, southern and eastern Missouri and northwest Kentucky. Rain and snow fell across southeast Missouri and southwest Kentucky. Rain fell in western Tennessee, Arkansas, Mississippi, Louisiana and eastern Texas.

Israelis seek immunity, access to bank records

WASHINGTON (AP) — Israeli representatives are trying to strike a deal with Iran-Contra prosecutors over immunity for four Israelis and U.S. access to Israel's Swiss bank account records.

The meetings with Independent Counsel Lawrence Walsh's staff began Thursday, a day after a federal grand jury indicted Lt. Col. Oliver North, former national security adviser John Poindexter and two arms dealers. All four were involved in the diversion of profits from Iran arms sales to the Nicaraguan Contra rebels.

Israel is seeking immunity from prosecution for four Israelis involved in the sale of U.S. anti-tank missiles to Iran in 1985 and 1986, said an Israeli official who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Walsh, in turn, wants records of Israeli transactions with North and the two indicted arms dealers, Richard Secord and Albert Hakim, the official said.

Yossi Gal, a spokesman for the Israeli Embassy, said a meeting today was aimed at "finding an acceptable solution for cooperation between the two governments."

Israel is seeking immunity for Amiram Nir, a Israeli anti-terrorism official; David Kimche, the former foreign ministry director; and businessmen Yaacov Nimrodi and Al Schwimmer. All worked with North on the Iran arms sales.

Gal also said that Rafael Vardi, a retired Israeli general who compiled a chronology of Israel's role in the arms sales to Iran, met with Walsh on Thursday. Several Israeli lawyers accompanied him, according to the Israeli official who spoke anonymously.

Elyakim Rubinstein, a top aide to Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir, is expected to join Vardi today for talks with Walsh's staff, Gal said.

Rubinstein, who has been in the United States with Shamir for discussions on a Middle East peace plan, also will meet with Reagan administration officials about the case, Gal said. He refused to discuss the meetings further.

James Wieghart, Walsh's spokesman, said he knew nothing of the meetings but confirmed that Walsh has been negotiating with the Israelis for a long time about access to the records on the Swiss accounts.

The Israeli official who spoke on condition he remain anonymous said Walsh is seeking bank account records to corroborate other evidence about Israel's transactions with North, Secord and Hakim.

Walsh angered Israel last year by issuing subpoenas against Nir, Kimche, Nimrodi and Schwimmer, meaning they could be arrested if they visited the United States and refused to testify.

Under pressure from the United States, Rubinstein and Vardi compiled classified historical and financial chronologies that were provided to the congressional Iran-Contra committees last year. The documents detailed the role Israel played in shipping U.S. missiles to Iran as part of a plan to secure freedom for American hostages in Lebanon.

During the congressional hearings, Israel refused to allow the four Israelis involved in the arms sales to testify, but agreed to let Vardi answer questions. The congressional panels did not call Vardi, saying they were satisfied with the written chronologies.

TROOPS

But while there was unanimity that the Managua government had made a grave political miscalculation, opinions were mixed on the wisdom of President Reagan's decision to deploy a 3,200-man task force to Palmerola Air Base in Honduras.

Pell, D-R.I., said the move tended to reduce Honduras to the status of a U.S. client state and "may well be a greater threat to Honduran sovereignty" than the border incursion.

And Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., said Reagan's response had distracted attention from the Sandinista military thrust and cost the president some political leverage.

A senior Republican on Pell's committee, Sen. Richard Lugar, disagreed. He said the troop deployment "indicates we are still alert" to the situation in Central America.

Lugar predicted that the request for military support "will not be the last from Central American democracies."

Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., chairman of the Armed Services Committee, said the deployment was "obviously designed to impress the Sandinistas. I hope they get the message."

There was conflict, too, on how the developments would affect cease-fire talks scheduled to resume Monday in the Nicaraguan town of Sapoa near the Costa Rican border.

House Speaker Jim Wright said he had high hopes, after talking to both sides, that the discussions would lead to a cease-fire. Lugar, however, said the talks "have become more and more an academic exercise."

In a series of briefings on Capitol Hill, senior administration officials and intelligence officers said the United States first detected preparations for the Sandinista incursion late last month, primarily by observing troop and supply buildups at a base in northern Nicaragua.

Roughly a week ago, movements were observed toward Bocay, a Nicaraguan town in a remote and mountainous area on the Honduran border. It is unclear exactly when the troops first crossed the Coco River into Honduras, but Contra forces defending a rebel command center northwest of Bocay began to encounter government troops early this week, according to interviews with more than a dozen participants in the briefings.

With greater-than-usual precision, some 2,000 Sandinista troops had by Thursday taken positions to the north, east and south of the Contras' jungle command and supply post, which was being defended by about 1,300 rebel troops, the administration said.

Lawmakers were promised that the U.S. troops, sent from the 82nd Airborne at Fort Bragg, N.C., and the 7th Infantry at Fort Ord, Calif., would remain far from the fighting and would not be involved in combat.

The administration said sending the forces was a symbolic gesture of support for Honduran President Jose Azcona, in response to a direct request from him Wednesday night after several days of consultations.

"Had we said no, you can imagine what it would have done for our credibility in Central America," said Assistant Secretary of State Elliott Abrams.

Some in Congress questioned the administration's credibility anyway, noting that Azcona's written request for help was dated Tuesday, and the administration had been telling lawmakers that no such request had been made as recently as Wednesday afternoon.

Abrams said the administration is considering a request for new aid for the rebels. On Feb. 3, Reagan narrowly lost a House vote on his last such request, and a Democratic alternative was defeated, 216 to 208, a month later. A handful of votes tilted one way or the other typically determines the outcome on the long-standing and polarized issue.

Rep. Jim Slattery, D-Kan., part of a group of House moderates who have been "swing" votes on the issue, said he believes the latest developments heighten the need for a new aid package.

"It confirms our thinking since the first of the year," Slattery said in a telephone interview from Atchison, Kan. "We should not abandon the Contras, nor should we pursue a policy that is a blatant violation of the peace process. We are right back where we were several weeks ago."

He said he and other House moderates were looking first to the White House for a proposal, and said "hopefully within the next week" administration and congressional officials can begin working out an acceptable aid bill.

Longest strike 444 days

On March 9, 1974, one of the longest strikes in American history ended after 440 days when the United Auto Workers came to terms with Case Manufacturing Co. in Racine, Wis.

PAGEANT

Marian White, president of the house's board of directors, contends Davis has fully honored the terms of the agreement approved and signed by directors, which called for the Ronald McDonald House to be guaranteed at least $5,000.

Saying that he was acting only in the interest of Ronald McDonald House, Augesen said records seized indicate nearly 75,000 tickets had been sold at $1 each. He claimed that after expenses were paid and Davis withdrew $16,000 from the funds only $11,000 remained in the pageant's bank account.

The district attorney stated Davis and his employees had "deposited only checks" in the bank account. About $35,000 in cash remained unaccounted for, he said.

Green disputed this contention, saying Thursday no funds were missing or unaccounted for. The Odessa attorney observed that Davis, as owner of the company producing the pageant, has every right "to do whatever he wants" with the money raised as long as he honors terms of the agreement with the Ronald McDonald House.

According to Green, the agreement called for the Ronald McDonald House to be paid no less than $5,000, plus a percentage of the total number of tickets sold. He stated this could have meant an additional "$10,000 to $15,000."

During a news conference Tuesday evening, Becky Cagle, house manager, said Davis had told them earlier that the promotion was going far better than anticipated and, once the pageant was over, he planned to give the Ronald McDonald House more than initially had been agreed upon.

Thursday, Ms. Cagle said the Ronald McDonald House could wind up getting nothing from the pageant.

PIPE

About 70,000 barrels of the surplus moves through the All American pipeline which terminates at McCamey and connects with the Rancho pipeline and other pipelines to the Gulf Coast and less than 50,000 moves through the Four Corners pipeline which goes from Los Angeles to the Four Corners area of New Mexico.

The rest of the surplus oil, about 600,000-700,000 barrels per day must move by tanker through the Panama Canal or through the pipeline, which was built in 1982 and is jointly owned by the Republic of Panama, Chicago Bridge & Iron of Chicago and Northfield Industries of New York.

"We are troubled by the events in Panama," said Jay Bernstein, executive vice president of the Panama Pipeline, "But we would hope that the pipeline is of such a national importance to the Republic of Panama that it will be above its internal difficulties."

The closure of the pipeline has meant new attention to the proposed 1,000-mile PacTex pipeline from Los Angeles Harbor to Midland's tank farm.

"We have been conferring with officials at the Department of Energy since the events in Panama developed," said Cecil Owens, president of Pacific Texas Pipeline which is proposing to build the $1.6 billion pipeline. "They are very concerned about the construction timetable for our pipeline."

Owens said the 42-inch PacTex pipeline which would be able to deliver 900,000 barrels per day to the Midland tank farm for distribution into 14 other pipelines, would be able to handle more than 100 percent of the excess North Slope production on the West Coast.

According to news sources today, the Panama pipeline was shut because of a power blackout at a pumping station near the center of the route. The pipeline has its own generating plants at either end, but requires outside electricity at the center to keep the oil flowing. Troops were reported to be bringing utility workers to work at gunpoint.

If the pipeline is shut down for a prolonged period, it has been speculated that Congress might provide a temporary waiver to allow the Alaskan crude oil to be sold in Japan.

BANK

"The action today confirms that all depositors and other general creditors of First RepublicBank's banks will be fully protected."

Bowles and other bank officials refused Thursday to say how much money has been withdrawn since Tuesday when First RepublicBank announced its decision to seek federal help.

Last month, the bank lost $600 million in deposits over a five-day period amid rumors that it was in danger because of billions of dollars in bad loans, particularly in real estate.

Customers at the company's lead bank in downtown Dallas indicated that they were not worried about losing their deposits.

"I have confidence in the people running the bank. It'll survive," said Alex Cochrane.

Gail Scott addedd, "It's pretty scary. I hope they can work it out."

A woman who declined to identify herself said she wasn't worried because the FDIC insures accounts up to $100,000, and "before they go under I will have spent my money."

An Associated Press reporter was escorted out of the bank under guard Thursday as he tried to interview customers and bank officials.

Meanwhile, George Reagan, investment manager of the Texas Teachers Retirement System, a major institutional First Republic investor with 498,000 shares, said the FDIC money will provide a cushion for the bank until the economy recovers.

"This will allow First Republic to get through the hard times. No one, especially First Republic, realized that we would go through such a hard time with the Texas real estate market for so long," he said.

Reagan said the bank's problems would not affect the teacher pensions since the investment represents a fraction of 1 percent of the system's holdings.

H.R. "Bum" Bright, owner of the Dallas Cowboys and Bright Banc Savings Association, is the largest individual investor with more than 1 million shares.

Nine months ago, those shares were worth $24 million; today, they're worth approximately $1.5 million. Bright did not return repeated calls from The AP Thursday.

State Treasurer Ann Richards said the federal action "assures that all depositors, including the state treasury, are safe."

First RepublicBank is one of four state treasury clearing banks, and as of Wednesday held $152 million in state deposits. Ms. Richards said the deposits are fully collateralized and therefore protected.

First RepublicBank-Dallas is the company's largest holding. In descending order, the next-largest First RepublicBank subsidiaries are in Houston, San Antonio and Austin.

PEOPLE

Houston remains the state's largest city with 1.89 million residents, followed by Dallas, San Antonio, Austin and El Paso. Fort Worth, Corpus Christi, Arlington, Lubbock and Garland round out the top 10.

Beaumont lost the most residents — 1,954 — as it fell from 12th to 15th in the state rankings.

The tiny town of Corinth northeast of Dallas more than doubled its 1980 population of 3,011, as its 138.2 percent growth rate topped all Texas municipalities.

Denton County north of Dallas posted the largest percentage (58 percent) and numerical (83,844 residents) gain among the state's 254 counties. Rockwall County east of Dallas also grew by 58 percent, while Hays County south of Austin boosted its population by 56.1 percent.

With 2.8 million people, Harris County leads its closest competitor, Dallas County, by nearly 1 million residents. Bexar County holds down the No. 3 spot, followed by Tarrant, El Paso, Travis, Hidalgo, Nueces, Jefferson and Lubbock.

Arab killed as Israeli officers fire on rock-throwing demonstrators

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israeli troops fired on rock-throwing demonstrators after Moslem prayers today in the occupied Gaza Strip and killed one Arab, the army said. Hospital officials said another 15 were wounded.

In the occupied West Bank city of Ramallah, two young protesters suffered bullet wounds in a clash with troops following noon prayer services, a doctor at Ramallah Hospital said.

One was shot in the abdomen and was in serious condition, while the other was shot in the leg.

In all, protests broke out today in a dozen towns and refugee camps following Moslem noon prayers, repeating a pattern established during the demonstrations which began Dec. 8.

A prominent Arab attorney was detained in Gaza, prompting protests from Israeli liberals, and two senior Cabinet ministers urged Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin to impose tougher measures against Palestinian protesters.

Security forces detained two Israelis found with an arsenal of weapons and suspected of planning anti-Arab attacks, police said. The two were identified as Moshe Visoker of Rishon Lezion and Gershon Luxemburg of Jerusalem, both 44.

In the Gaza Strip, army spokesmen confirmed one Palestinian was killed in a clash at the Shati refugee camp. Officials at Shifa Hospital identified the victim as 26-year-old Hani Abu Hamam.

The fatality brought to 101 the number of Palestinians killed in more than 14 weeks of unrest in the Israeli-occupied territories, according to U.N. figures.

Shifa officials said they treated 14 other Palestinians wounded by gunfire at Shati. Officials at nearby Ahli Arab Hospital said they treated three other gunshot cases from Shati and one from Gaza City.

The army spokesmen said initial reports showed three Palestinians were wounded in Shati, but they were checking hospital reports of additional woundings.

An Arab reporter said he saw troops in Shati fire tear gas, rubber bullets and live ammunition at hundreds of Palestinians who threw rocks at soldiers after coming out of the noon prayers at main Al-Gharbi mosque.

He said an army helicopter also dropped tear gas on the crowd, which had been aroused by morning clashes between troops and young Arabs in the narrow streets of the camp.

The daily Haaretz quoted Transport Minister Chaim Corfu as saying troops should shoot rock-throwers through the knee.

Minister Without Portfolio Yitzhak Modai told the daily Hatzofe the disturbances never would have gained strength if soldiers had fired directly on protesters from the start.

Mohammed Abu Shalom, the vice president of the Gaza Bar Association, was picked up late Thursday after a Tel Aviv protest gathering.

Opposition to Noriega continues

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — Opposition leaders expressed dismay that widespread protests have been unable to remove strongman Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega, and many now openly say only a U.S. military intervention can do so.

"It is something we, as Panamanians, do not want to see, but the legal conditions for military intervention exist," said a leader of an opposition party who, like others interviewed for this article, spoke on condition he not be identified.

This plaintive request is heard often among those opposed to Noriega, who survived what appeared to be a poorly organized military coup headed by his chief of police.

The coup attempt Wednesday was led by Panama's police chief, Col. Leonidas Macias, and was quickly crushed.

The Civic Crusade, a broad anti-government coalition, had planned demonstrations Thursday but the sight of hundreds of soldiers carrying automatic rifles and tear gas canisters through the streets of the capital apparently discouraged them.

In the face of widespread walkouts by public employees, Noriega's 15,000-member Defense Forces took control Thursday of all major utilities, most government ministries, railroads, ports, airports and the post office.

Workers were on strike because the cash-starved government, under economic pressure by theUnited States, was unable to pay them.

Some shops opened in downtown Panama City Thursday but banks, which shut their doors March 4, remained closed.

Talk of possible U.S. intervention stems from politicians' frustration in a country used to strong military governments that give opposition parties little room to maneuver.

It is also a manifestation of the special relationship the United States has with Panama, one that was closest when then-strongman Omar Torrijos and President Jimmy Carter signed the Panama Canal treaties in 1979.

The treaties turn ownership of the canal over to Panama by the year 2000, giving Panama absolute control over the waterway. But they also give the United States the right to intervene to defend the canal.

"Tell the gringos to come in," many people shouted at American reporters during recent street protests against Noriega.

"I guess right now a large majority of Panamanians would welcome a U.S. military intervention," said the leader of another large opposition party. "But three months later everybody would be saying, 'Yankee, go home.'

"We are just desperate for a change in the situation," he added.

A third political leader said, "There is no tradition here for popular uprisings as you have in other countries of the region."

WORLD in brief

No survivors found in Colombian crash

CUCUTA, Colombia (AP) — An Avianca jetliner smashed into a mountain minutes after takeoff, triggered a landslide and burst into flames, killing all 137 people aboard, officials and witnesses said.

Among the 131 passengers were a Roman Catholic auxiliary bishop and more than 30 soccer players, officials said. There were no Americans aboard, they said.

The Boeing 727 clipped trees before hitting the snow-covered mountain 30 miles away near Zulia, witnesses said.

The craft took off in heavy fog at 1:16 p.m. Thursday from Cucuta, 350 miles northeast of Bogota, on a domestic flight to the Caribbean port of Barranquilla.

Rescue workers who reached the wreckage Thursday night said there were no survivors, Col. Miguel Benedetti, civil defense director for the state of North Santander, said in a interview by radio-telephone from Zulia.

Iran fires 24 missiles

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Iran said its forces today fired 24 missiles into Iraq, downed three Iraqi jets and captured two Iraqi towns. Shipping executives said Iranian gunboats attacked three ships in the Persian Gulf.

Iraq said it fired seven long-range Al Hussein missiles into Tehran, raising to 30 the number the Iraqis say they have lobbed into the Iranian capital since the so-called "war of the cities" exploded again Sunday after a two-day lull.

Iran's official media claimed "several" missiles hit residential areas of Tehran, killing at least one child and wounding other civilians.

The gulf shipping sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, said a Japanese seaman was killed in today's attack on the Panamanian liquified gas carrier Maria 2.

The rest of the 20-man crew abandoned the ship when it was set on fire. Several were wounded, but all were rescued.

Thousands watch eclipse

GENERAL SANTOS CITY, Philippines (AP) — Thousands of people prayed, cheered, danced, beat drums and observed other traditions today as a total eclipse of the sun darkened a wide area of Indonesia and the southern Philippines.

The sun was blacked out by the shadow of the moon for up to four minutes along a 108-mile swath that moved from the Indian Ocean across Indonesia and the southern Philippine island of Mindanao.

A partial eclipse was visible across a wide area of Asia as far west as India — including Southeast Asia, China, Japan and New Guinea as well as parts of Australia and the Pacific islands.

Gorbachev ends visit

DUBROVNIK, Yugoslavia (AP) — Mikhail S. Gorbachev winds up a five-day visit to Yugoslavia after meeting today with Communist leaders who have given him some pointers on initiating reform and clues as to its pitfalls.

The Soviet leader and his wife, Raisa, arrived in this charming, ancient Adriatic port city Thursday in the midst of a rare March storm that lashed rain in their faces at the airport.

The two sides adopted a new declaration on Soviet-Yugoslav relations this week in Belgrade, and officials have said the document will be published after Gorbachev leaves today.

Nicaraguan foreign ministry blames U.S. for bombing raid

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — The Foreign Ministry delivered a formal protest to the United States, blaming it for a bombing raid near a Sandinista army encampment just inside Nicaragua by warplanes that screamed in from Honduras.

Also Thursday, President Daniel Ortega said his army was ready to "combat and liquidate" U.S. troops if America engage the Sandinista forces.

The United States has said American troops would not go near the area of hostilities.

The noon raid at the confluence of the Coco and Bocay rivers, from which the Sandinistas had driven U.S.-backed Contra rebels, came a day after Honduras accused Nicaragua of sending troops across the border in pursuit of the guerrillas.

About 3,000 U.S. soldiers began arriving in Honduras Thursday in what the United States called a "measured response" to the alleged Nicaraguan incursion.

In the air attack, two bombs fell in Nicaragua and a third landed across the narrow Coco River in Honduran territory, Sandinista officers said. Reporters on the scene said there was no damage or injuries.

A Reagan administration source in Washington said the Honduran air force had carried out the attack. In Tegucigalpa, a Honduran armed forces spokesman said rockets were fired at Sandinista forces in Honduran territory, not in Nicaragua.

Ortega said Thursday that Sandinista troops would not withdraw from Nicaragua's border and were maintaining an offensive begun March 8 in which an estimated 6,000 soldiers have pushed 2,000 Contras out of Nicaraguan territory.

However, the officer who had been leading the offensive, deputy army chief of staff Lt. Col. Javier Carrion, told reporters at the Bocay-Coco confluence Thursday that Ortega had ordered the offensive halted on Wednesday.

Ortega said in Managua that the Nicaraguan "invasion only exists in the warped imagination of the North American leaders."

He has refused to confirm or deny whether Nicaraguan troops have penetrated Honduran territory, skirting reporters' questions by saying Honduras is violating a regional peace plan by allowing the Contras to operate out of its territory.

Honduran military officials said their troops were surrounding about 2,000 Nicaraguan soldiers in Honduras Thursday.

Carrion denied that Sandinista troops had crossed the border, saying they had used artillery to destroy Contra camps along a six-mile route on both sides of the Coco River during the offensive.

He said Sandinista soldiers destroyed 120 shacks made of plastic and wood that the rebels had been using to store supplies, for sleeping and as clinics.

Carrion took 25 Nicaraguan and foreign journalists Thursday to view the Bocay border area.

Visiting journalists dive for cover as Honduran planes bomb base

SAN ANDRES DE BOCAY, Nicaragua (AP) — Nicaraguan officials apparently wanted to show reporters how quiet this jungle-covered border region was when they flew them here Thursday, following a major offensive against Contra rebels.

But as officials were briefing about 25 journalists at a military base, two unidentified jet planes from Honduras roared into Nicaraguan territory and dropped bombs along the border.

The reporters dived into the dirt for cover. No one was hurt.

Some military officials in Nicaragua described the planes as French-made Mysteres, while others said they were U.S.-made F-5s. The Honduran air force has both.

The bombs landed on the Honduran side of the Coco River, which marks the border between the two countries. Puffs of black smoke curled over the banana trees.

The journalists' briefing came after Reagan administration officials had claimed that Nicaraguan troops had penetrated Honduran territory in pursuit of the U.S.-backed rebels. Nicaragua and Honduras share a long, ill defined border.

As the jets roared in Thursday, drowning out the lapping of the slow-moving river and the chirping of crickets, journalists and soldiers threw themselves against the earth.

Some of the bombs exploded about 70 yards away from where they lay.

Maj. Rosa Pasos, the Defense Ministry spokeswoman, lost her eyeglasses in the weeds but quickly found them. She wore an American-made uniform that had apparently been taken from a Contra rebel.

The Sandinistas opened fire at the planes with anti-aircraft guns. They apparently didn't hit either of them.

None of the five Soviet-made helicopters used in this area 175 miles from Managua was hit. In Washington, sources who spoke on condition of anonymity claimed that one Soviet-made helicopter on the ground had been damaged. The Soviet Union supplies the Sandinistas with military hardware and training.

Lt. Col. Javier Carrion, the deputy chief of the Sandinista army's general staff, who had been conducting the offensive against the Contras, said that jets had buzzed the Coco River earlier in the day.

Asked whether Sandinista troops had crossed the border in their offensive, Carrion replied, "Well, no."

Honduran officials say attack inside border

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (AP) — Honduran warplanes rocketed and destroyed a Nicaraguan army helicopter inside Honduran territory and not in Nicaragua as U.S. and Sandinista government officials claimed, a Honduran official said.

The attack Thursday came as the first of about 3,000 U.S. troops began arriving in Honduras in a show of support for the government against reported incursions by Nicaraguan soldiers up to three miles inside Honduras.

Officials of the leftist Sandinista government in Nicaragua said hundreds of U.S.-backed Contra rebels were driven from Nicaragua into Honduras by thousands of Nicaraguan troops backed by bombers and helicopter gunships.

The Contras keep secret bases in Honduras from which they launch attacks across the border into Nicaragua in their 6-year-old war against the Sandinistas.

Honduran military spokesman Manuel Suarez said the Honduran air force launched the rockets inside Honduras along the border region near San Andres de Bocay, the site of the Sandinista military headquarters in northern Nicaragua.

In a telephone interview, Suarez said the rockets destroyed a Nicaraguan helicopter on a dirt landing strip inside Honduras.

Suarez did not identify the type of helicopter destroyed. He said there were no helicopters in the air when the jets arrived in the area at about 1 p.m. Thursday.

He said Nicaraguan forces launched a SAM-7 rocket at the Honduran jets but the missile missed its target and the Hondurans fired retaliatory rockets.

Both the U.S. government and Nicaragua reported Thursday that the attack occurred inside Nicaragua at a military headquarters.

In Washington, sources who insisted on anonymity claimed that one Soviet-made helicopter was damaged on the ground. The Soviet Union has been supplying the Sandinistas with military hardware.

In Managua, the Defense Ministry denied that any of its fleet of more than 40 military helicopters had been destroyed.

Reagan administration officials claim Nicaraguan troops penetrated Honduran territory in pursuit of the Contras. Parts of the Nicaragua-Honduras border are ill-defined, rugged and sparsely populated.

Honduran military officials, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said about 4,000 Honduran soldiers were surrounding about 2,000 Nicaraguan soldiers Thursday. The sources said the entire Honduran military was on alert.

Suarez said the Nicaraguan troops remained inside Honduras, but declined comment on whether they were surrounded by Hondurans.

A high-ranking Nicaraguan military official said Thursday the government offensive began March 8 but was halted Wednesday "at the instructions of the president of the republic," Daniel Ortega. However, Ortega said later Thursday that Nicaragua would continue its Contra offensive.

Lt. Col. Javier Carrion, deputy chief of the Sandinista army's general staff, said the Sandinistas pushed 1,800 rebels back into Honduras. The Sandinista forces totaled 4,500 troops, he said.

The Nicaraguan government had said 6,000 Contras have been operating within its borders nationwide. Carrion said the offensive caught the rebels "totally by surprise."

Charles Barclay, press officer for the U.S. Embassy in Tegucigalpa, said the deployment of American troops to Palmerola air force base, about 50 miles northwest of Tegucigalpa, was scheduled to continue today.

There was no official comment from U.S. authorities in Honduras on the raid.

Two battalions from the renowned 82nd Airborne Division of Fort Bragg, N.C., and two battalions from the 7th Light Infantry Division of Fort Ord, Calif., were combined into a task force of roughly 3,000 troops.

It was the the most dramatic show of U.S. force since the Contras began fighting in Nicaragua and it came in response to a request for help from President Jose Azcona Hoyo of Honduras.

U.N. Security Council will meet today on border crisis

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The Security Council will meet in urgent session today on the Nicaraguan-Honduran border crisis and on the dispatch of U.S. troops to Honduras.

Nicaragua sought the meeting at President Daniel Ortega's request, diplomats said. Envoys of the United States, Nicaragua and Honduras were to speak. There were no immediate plans for a resolution or a vote in the 15-member council, the highest U.N. body.

Washington has said the 3,000 U.S. troops it was sending to Honduras were to engage in joint military exercises with the Hondurans.

Honduras complained that Sandinista troops from neighboring Nicaragua entered Honduras in pursuit of Contra rebels. President Reagan has called it an invasion by Nicaraguan forces.

Nicaragua and Panama used a council debate on British military maneuvers in the Falkland Islands Thursday to condemn U.S. military activities in Central America.

"Nicaragua, having suffered pillage and spoilage by English buccaneers who pillaged our coast, is victim today of the threats and aggression of another American state," Nicaragua's acting ambassador, Julio Icaza Gallardo, told the council.

"Nicaragua denounces once again this gunboat policy which reflects disdain for our dignity and rights."

Britain and Argentina fought a 74-day war over the Falklands in 1982, lost by Argentina.

Panama's ambassador, George Eduardo Ritter, drew a parallel between the British claim on the Falklands and U.S. control over the Panama Canal Zone.

Report: Illegal aliens depress American wages

WASHINGTON (AP) — Illegal aliens are depressing wages and worsening working conditions for legal immigrants and native Americans in low-skilled and low-wage jobs, the General Accounting Office says in a new report.

Citing empirical data and several case studies, the congressional watchdog agency said both U.S.-born and legally documented immigrants are being hurt, especially those working as janitors and farm and food processing workers.

The report identified restaurants and companies producing auto parts, shoes and clothing as others that often employ illegal aliens.

The willingness of illegal aliens to work in low-skill jobs for less than the minimum wage in those industries has depressed wages and benefits for comparable native and legal immigrant workers, the GAO said.

But it also concluded that the low wages paid to illegal aliens allow some of the businesses to grow or survive foreign competition, indirectly expanding job opportunities and wages for higher-skilled workers in the same trades.

Without a pool of flexible illegal immigrants willing to work at sewing machines in high-fashion garment plants or as shoemakers, the GAO said, many companies would shut down or move out of the country.

It also said a growing practice by restaurants of using illegal immigrants as dishwashers and busboys allowed the businesses to keep their prices low and thus expand, providing more jobs for more highly skilled waiters and chefs.

The Labor Department disagrees with those conclusions, saying none of the studies surveyed by GAO offered any concrete evidence of a positive effect from using illegal workers. It said the only evidence came in comments from employers.

In a formal reply to the report, the department also disputed GAO's premise that legal workers won't take many of the low-wage jobs, particularly in the shoe and garment industries.

"The fact is that large numbers of native and legal U.S. workers are in the same labor market as illegal workers," the Labor Department said. "Furthermore, if wages were not depressed by illegal workers, even greater numbers of native and legal workers would be in that labor market."

The GAO said the 1986 immigration reform law and its fines for hiring illegal aliens, if successful, will force wages up for legal immigrants and natives and cause "considerable stress" financially for growers and shoe and garment manufacturers.

Congress asked the GAO to survey all available studies and data on illegal immigrants' impact on native and legal immigrant workers in 1985, when it was weighing the employer sanctions that were adopted a year later.

The GAO has now finally submitted the study to Congress, saying that after examining 230 academic and other treatises on the issue, it found scarce useful information. The biggest problem, the GAO said, is that illegal aliens are a hidden population, making it hard to identify them for use in any empirical study.

About two dozen case studies, however, suggested that employers' use of illegal aliens has displaced native workers and legal immigrants from their jobs and driven down wages of those who remain.

The most dramatic examples were among janitors and farm and food processing workers in California.

For example, janitors in downtown Los Angeles office buildings — most of them black or legal Hispanic immigrants — had won wage and benefits reaching a peak of $12 an hour by 1983 under labor contracts negotiated by the Service Employees International Union.

However, in the 1980s a group of aggressive non-union janitorial services hiring predominantly illegal immigrants began wresting the best building contracts away from the unionized firms, driving the union scale back down to $4 an hour and below.

Of 2,500 black janitors working under high-wage contracts in 1977, only 100 still enjoyed comparative wages by 1985. The union still had 600 working members but 500 of them had suffered large pay cuts.

Similar events occurred in the southern California citrus and tomato fields, where farm labor contractors using illegal immigrants drove down wage and benefits of legal migrant crop pickers from Mexico by 18 percent between 1975 and 1985.

Is Contra effort worth U.S. price?

An Analysis

By George Geddo

WASHINGTON (AP) — There are two ways, perhaps more, of looking at the results of President Reagan's six-year effort in support of the Contra rebels.

In the administration's view, the Contras have kept the focus of Nicaragua's leftist government on surviving, preventing it from promoting the spread of revolution elsewhere.

As a result, the administration says, each of Nicaragua's neighbors has been able to consolidate or at least make a beginning on building democratic institutions.

Reagan's worst-case scenario for the region — a belt of pro-Soviet states extending from the Panama Canal to Guatemala with the possibility that Mexico itself ultimately will be threatened — has not been borne out. He believes the Contras deserve much of the credit.

But the other view is that the costs of the policy have been exorbitant, far outweighing the benefits.

Administration critics maintain that American backing for the Contras has led to tens of thousands of dead and wounded and set back the Nicaraguan economy by a generation.

And Nicaragua has been, in some ways, a wrecker of reputations, playing the same role that Vietnam did two decades ago.

On Wednesday, the same day that Reagan decided to send U.S. troops to Honduras, a federal grand jury indicted former national security adviser John M. Poindexter, Lt. Col. Oliver L. North and two of their associates, Richard V. Secord and Albert Hakim.

As independent counsel Lawrence E. Walsh described it, "the heart of the case" against the four was their role in diverting funds from Iran arms sales to the Contras.

Poindexter and North, two of the most influential figures in government less than a year and a half ago, face the prospect of extended jail terms because they are alleged to have disregarded the law in their zeal to support the Contras.

The Contra cause has divided American public opinion more than any other issue during Reagan's presidency. No other dispute has generated more distrust and acrimony between the administration and the Congress.

While Reagan has compared the Contras with America's founding fathers, Sen. Claiborne Pell, D-R.I., calls them "our terrorists." Both sides believe the other's policies will lead inevitably to an American troop commitment in the region.

The U.S. policy has fluctuated over the years. The Contras took up arms with American encouragement but now live month to month without knowing whether they can count on continued U.S. backing.

Their latest setback had its origins in the Feb. 29 cutoff of U.S. aid. Within days, the Sandinistas began preparations for an offensive against a rebel concentration in the Bocay Valley near the Honduran border.

As described by Bosco Matamoros, a Contra spokesman, the rebels were left virtually without food and other supplies and the means to evacuate their wounded. The Sandinistas, whose offensive got under way in earnest on Tuesday, claim the Contra death toll is in the hundreds.

Reagan administration officials say that if the Sandinistas succeed in destroying a key supply depot in the area, the impact on the remaining 10,000 or so Contras deployed elsewhere in Nicaragua could be decisive, both materially and psychologically.

Administration critics say none of this would have happened if Reagan had not been so foolish as to believe the Contras could have prevailed against the Sandinistas in the first place or to think that such a small, poor country could represent any threat at all to U.S. security.

The administration counters that Congress is to blame, and that reliable U.S. support for the Contras would have eventually produced a Sandinista surrender, ushering in peace and democracy in Central America.

The administration's problem all along has been that it can't prove its worst-case scenario, unless it happens.

If indeed the collapse of the Contras leads to the communization of Central America and a new security situation for the United States, Reagan will have been proven correct.

But if that day ever comes, Reagan will be long gone and a successor administration will have to deal with the consequences.

South Korean cartoonists break taboo, inject political humor

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — What Shim Mihcop is doing now conceivably could have landed him in jail not so long ago. He's drawing cartoons that poke gentle fun at South Korean political leaders.

And people are getting a laugh out of them, without worrying that something could happen to them as well.

Shim's cartoons seem tame by most standards. Politicians and political parties are parodied as rival baseball teams and the jibes are never too strong. Nevertheless, Shim says, it is a remarkable change.

"In the past it was a taboo to caricature the big political names in this country," he said.

Ridiculing the president or making jokes about him, for example, were seen as anti-state acts.

Shim and other cartoonists have been able to take advantage of recent political liberalization in South Korea to start injecting a little laughter and ridicule into politics.

The cartoonists contend that political caricature is healthy and Korean politics can benefit from it.

"Cartoons and caricatures will bring the political leaders closer to the people," Shim maintained.

Political cartoons have proliferated in newspapers and magazines and command large, enthusiastic audiences eager for a regular flow of material ranging from traditional editorial cartoons to long stories. Literacy is very high in South Korea but people prize cartoons for their humor.

Newspaper cartoons so far are low-key and ironic. Some recent ones showed caricatures of the main political parties chasing each other in an unending circle, to symbolize ineffectiveness. Another showed top leaders as squabbling babies.

A favorite of cartoonists is to have bemused Koreans staring at politicians battling for power and asking what is happening to the country.

"It is refreshing to see the taboos broken about the myths surrounding the politics' bigwigs," said Han Kyo-su, a political analyst who has followed the growth of political cartooning.

Many cartoonists say they have always seen their work as a way of calling for reform and liberalization.

"Korean cartoonists have been struggling for political change for a long time," Shim said.

Cartoons are a valuable teaching tool that can vividly explain the meaning of an issue as well as amuse readers, Shim added.

"The political cartoonist can present the issues in a more amusing, but understandable manner to the public."

The newly installed President Roh Tae-woo, who pledged freedom of speech and expression after years of authoritarian rule, personally encouraged cartoonists to take up political subjects by saying he did not mind being caricatured.

Shim and other cartoonists say their work is still very gentle and restrained for fear of angering authorities and losing what freedom they have. But they say they expect to make their humor more biting as time goes on and liberalization expands.

Cartoonists are also restrained by fear of offending a politician's supporters, Shim said. Korea's factional politics stress loyalty and supporters tend to resent any joke at their leader's expense, he said.

"The reaction can be terrible from the supporters," Shim said. "People should learn to accept both positive and negative."

Anti-government students and dissident groups, which have long used cartoons in their political literature, also are making greater use of caricatures, but usually not in a humorous way.

The cartoons distributed at anti-government rallies and meetings are biting and bitter. Government and mainline opposition politicians usually depicted as vicious tyrants suppressing the people with tear gas and riot clubs. Some are more subtle, depicting the divided opposition leaders as crying infants quarreling over a toy.

"They are not jokes," said one dissident. "They show the people the reality of the government and why there is no democracy in South Korea."

The United States, represented by a fiendish-looking Uncle Sam or a swaggering and bullying American soldier, is a fixture in the underground cartoons. Dissidents claim the country's successive authoritarian governments have survived because of U.S. backing.

Retiring judge wants to see more of world

SWEETWATER, Texas (AP) — Carl W. Anderson is retiring as Nolan County attorney. He wants to get out and see a little more of the world.

At the age of 85, he's already seen a lot of it, and done things few other people have done:

Anderson never got a high school diploma, but was a magna cum laude graduate of the University of Texas law school.

He came to Sweetwater as the high school coach for one year, and returned three years later as an attorney.

In his long career, he twice represented unpopular murder defendants in court, and the Texas Rangers offering him personal protection each time.

He says he almost set up his law practice in Corpus Christi, but a tragedy at the beach changed his mind.

Anderson says he was "about in the middle," of the family of 12 born on the farm in Wharton County, the son of immigrants from Denmark.

He says he grew up bilingual — Danish was spoken at home, and his second language was Spanish. "There were a lot of Mexican-Americans around there, and I picked it up from them. I didn't learn English until the first grade. It was pretty tough there for a while," he recalls.

But not too tough, and not for very long. Anderson finished the 9th grade — "That's as far as we could go," he said, "because the country school didn't go any higher" — and enrolled in what was called subcollege at Sam Houston State University.

"My mother said that a Danish tradition is that each family give up one child for government work," he said. For whatever reason, young Carl was the chosen one of the 12 in the family.

Technically, Anderson's government work didn't begin until 1970, when he was appointed county attorney to fill the seat of Clyde Boose, who had resigned. He has held the office since.

Anderson almost didn't make it that far. After a year and a half at UT law school, he ran out of money. He dropped out to earn some more, taking a job as the — not a, the — coach at Sweetwater High School in 1925.

"I was coach of everything — football, basketball, track and even baseball — that year," he said. "I stayed busy."

But not too busy to meet and marry a young woman named Jo Lee Dickson.

Anderson saved enough money to finish law school and became a lawyer June 22, 1929, and the Andersons returned to Sweetwater to set up a private practice.

That decision did not come easy, however. "We had gone to Corpus Christi, decided to practice there," he said. "We had already ordered my law books and were waiting for them to arrive.

"One day, while we were waiting, we were at the beach. We saw a kid drown, and my wife decided that she could not stay in Corpus Christi after that."

The couple systematically checked almost the whole state of Texas, Corpus Christi to Amarillo, before finding what they considered the best place to make a home.

"I thought Sweetwater would become the hub of West Texas," said Anderson, "with the three railroads (the Orient, Santa Fe and Texas-Pacific) here, and the highways.

"Besides, we liked Sweetwater. We never regretted settling here."

Anderson said no particular case he handled in 41 years of private practice stands out from a legal or scholarly standpoint, but a couple are memorable for other reason.

"One time I was defending the police chief in Rule, who had shot a man in a gang fight. The gang was out of Houston, and we had Houston policemmen up here testifying."

Anderson won the case, getting his client off with a suspended sentnece. This did not sit well with the gang, he said.

The Texas Rangers were afraid there would be more killing after the trial was over, Anderson said, "and they took some of us into the clerk's office, someone yelled 'hit the floor.' The Rangers came to get us at 11 p.m., and escorted us home."

That was during the Snyder oil boom, he said, placing it in the 1950s or maybe the early 1960s. So was another of his memorable cases, this time in Snyder.

It was another trial involving another apparent member of the Houston-based gang, and Anderson was representing the murder defendant.

During one court day, he said, "we took a mid-morning coffee break, and three or four Texas Rangers followed me into the restroom. I asked them if they were in training or something. They said, 'no, we are trying to get you out of this case alive.' They did.

Study says 'greenhouse effect' may have killed dinosaurs

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — An asteroid collision with Earth may have released enough gas to heat the planet 65 million years ago, causing gradual extinction of dinosaurs and other species by destroying their food, researchers say.

The study drew guarded praise from a critic of the theory, because the findings attempt to explain why only certain creatures became extinct and why the extinctions were gradual, not sudden.

The asteroid impact theory differs from ones in which scientists said such a collision caused mass extinction by kicking up enough dust to block sunlight, plunging the planet into a freezing darkness that killed plants, a source of food.

California Institute of Technology planetary scientist John O'Keefe and geophysicist Thomas Ahrens reached their conclusion by analyzing experiments in which Ahrens and geophysicist Manfred Lange shot steel bullets into rocks at 4,500 mph.

Based on the amount of carbon dioxide released by the shattered rocks, the scientists calculated that a 6-mile-diameter asteroid hitting limestone or other carbon-rich rocks on Earth would have released enough carbon dioxide to increase the amount of the gas in the atmosphere two to five times.

Such an increase in the gas, which traps solar heat like glass in a greenhouse, could have caused a "greenhouse effect" that warmed the planet by 9 to 36 degrees Fahrenheit for 10,000 years after the asteroid struck, Ahrens said Tuesday.

"The leafy plants which dinosaurs ate were selectively destroyed" by the heat while other plants survived, Ahrens said.

"So there was probably (increased) competition for available food, and eventually food supplies declined to a point where different species, including the dinosaurs, became extinct in a less-than-sudden manner."

Fossils show dinosaurs and other creatures became extinct gradually, while many species survived.

Many biologists and paleontologists argue the mass extinction 65 million years ago was caused by gradual climate change, not an asteroid or other sudden catastrophe.

William Clemens, paleontology chairman at the University of California, Berkeley, and a leading critic of asteroid theories, said he was skeptical of the O'Keefe-Ahrens theory because the dinosaurs started to die earlier than 65 million years ago.

But he called their study "clearly a positive step" because it is consistent with gradual, selective extinction.

O'Keefe will present the study Thursday in Houston at the 19th Lunar and Planetary Science Conference.

Scientists debating the dinosaurs' extinction fall into two main camps: those who blame gradual climate change and those who blame catastrophe.

Catastrophe theorists disagree on whether an asteroid or gigantic volcanic eruption was to blame.

Geophysicist Charles Officer of Dartmouth College said he believes the O'Keefe-Ahrens theory does not have merit because geologic evidence supports the theory that volcanoes spewed enough ash skyward to block sunlight and cause mass extinction.

Geochemist Frank Kyte, of the University of California, Los Angeles, disagreed, saying the theory that the asteroid triggered greenhouse warming of the atmosphere is probably sound.

While other scientists previously suggested the greenhouse effect caused the extinctions, they said the carbon dioxide was generated by volcanoes, changes in ocean circulation, or acid rain that dissolved carbon-rich rocks.

It is important to learn what killed the dinosaurs because "it behooves us to find out if we're just sort of sitting here awaiting another (asteroid) impact to seal our doom, or if some of the things we're doing to the environment might...lead to the extinction of many species," Clemens said.

Scientists believe rising levels of carbon dioxide and other greenhouse gases will warm Earth 3 to 5 degrees by the year 2050, possibly causing crop-threatening droughts and partly melting polar ice caps to raise sea levels and threaten coastal cities.

Clemens, however, wondered how birds and other surviving species could have hidden from the corrosive downpour.

Man creates miniature of Lufkin

PEAVY SWITCH, Texas (AP) — At 5-foot-3, Sam Schultz towers over the hundreds of residents of the historic Lufkin he's recreated — a city in which the old train depot is four inches high and the average shopkeeper is slightly under an inch.

The city according to Schultz has 38 buildings, ranging from a realistic version of the Old No. 10 Brookshire Bros. Store on the courthouse square to a scaled-down version of Texas Foundries.

"I don't have the money that (they) have got," he said, explaining the small size of the mill. "I have to build with the money Sammy's got."

The city, which is in back of Schultz's house at the hairpin curve in Peavy Switch east of Lufkin, includes dozens of homes, stores and factories.

If the railroad were expanded to scale, the Southern Pacific tracks would be nine miles long.

Schultz, 68, got started building models in 1940. His early models, built when he was a youth in Milwaukee, Wis., were thrown out by members of his family during a house-cleaning while he was away in the Army.

After returning from World War II, where he saw duty as a combat medic, Schultz settled in Angelina County. He worked at Memorial Medical Center until he retired in 1986.

"I married a Texas girl, and you can't get them out of Texas with a bulldozer. They're not tied to their mothers' apron strings — they're welded. But I liked Texas and I stayed. The people in the north are like the weather: too cold."

While working at the hospital, Schultz rediscovered the pleasure of building models and started work on his miniature city.

"If you work among the dead and dying, you have to have something to take your mind off it. I like detail. The more detail the better."

Since retiring, Schultz has spent his time building the city and doing maintenance work on Friendship Baptist Church, which is virtually in his front yard.

"I can fall out of bed and get to church," he said, laughing. "I helped found this church 27 years ago. I helped build it. Oh, this church has got an advantage: it has a retired man living next door."

When Schultz is not tinkering with the heaters or painting the walls at the church, he returns to the little city in his storage shed.

Buildings from different periods are in the same neighborhood. The old Patton's Livestock barn is not far from the television station. The office of old Dr. J.C. Clements, a pioneer physician, stands next to the store in the mall where one of Schultz's daughters works.

There are even used car lots and a Federal Express office in Schultz's Lufkin.

Some of Schultz's buildings are imaginative. The school house in the city is a copy of the old school Schultz attended as a child in Milwaukee, and Memorial Medical Center "looks like it should, not the way it is."

genocide — (noun) During World War II, Adolph Hitler, the Nazi dictator from 1934-45, promoted "genocide." He attempted to wipe out the entire Jewish population in Europe. "Genocide" is a deliberate and organized destruction of a racial, political or cultural group. Following this terrible event, the United Nations outlawed "genocide," making it an international crime. "Genocide" is based on the Greek word "genos" meaning race, descent, kin, sex or kind.

Congress' response to invasion vital

Few, if any, Americans want to see U.S. troops involved in the fighting now taking place in Nicaragua and Honduras, but from the information now at hand President Reagan was justified in sending 3,200 troops to Central America Thursday as a show of support for Contra forces.

That's particularly true in this instance, even though Congress failed earlier this month to extend further aid to the Contras. Early reports indicated as many of 2,000 Sandinista troops had crossed the border into Honduras and that clearly expands the Nicaraguan rebel war. In fact, Assistant Secretary of State Elliott Abrams was quoted as saying the Sandinistas had about 1,000 Contra troops hemmed into a camp just inside Honduras and were pounding them in an obvious attempt to remove the rebel resistance.

If that report proves accurate, then little doubt remains that Nicaraguan President Daniel Ortega has abandoned his proclaimed attempt at establishing peace with the Contras and instead only wants to carve out the cancer of resistance to his government.

In light of the negative vote in the Congress on Contra aid, there was little else Reagan could do to help the rebels when the Sandinista offensive materialized. Without U.S. assistance, it's almost a foregone conclusion that the Contras would be eliminated as a resistance movement and a potential force for democratic reform in Nicaragua. And that, of course, would potentially leave the rest of Central America to the Sandinistas' "revolution without borders."

The major question now looming as a result of the Honduran invasion is how or if Congress will respond. If it recognizes the threat now obvious it will rush to piece together a vote on aid to the Contras and support for Reagan's decision to use American troops to back the Contras.

It has come down to a matter of courage and leadership on the part of the Congress. Ortega says his forces will not withdraw until U.S. forces leave Honduras. Congress should come back with a proposal of its own, such as "We'll leave when you begin to honestly pursue peace with the Contras and democratic reforms."

'Cafeteria' plans draining treasury

WASHINGTON — The surging popularity of legal, under-the-table income being paid to American workers is taking its toll on the tax man.

Jack Anderson

The income is in the form of non-taxable benefit packages called "cafeteria plans." In the glow of enthusiasm over these tax shelters, the impact on the mounting national debt has been overlooked.

In stark terms, the U.S. Treasury stands to lose $46.9 billion over the next five years because of the growing chunk of wages being diverted from the taxable pool. The estimate comes from a recent study by the Department of Health and Human Services inspector general's office.

The report is the most critical analysis of the flexible benefit plans that have become a fashionable trademark of "progressive" employers.

Known as cafeteria plans because of their broad menus of benefit options, the programs were born 10 years ago when Congress passed legislation allowing salary-reduction agreements between employers and their workers. The employee elects a reduced salary or foregoes a raise so the increase can be taken in the form of tax-free fringe benefits.

More than 600 major U.S. firms now offer broad cafeteria programs, including different levels of health, dental and life insurance, vacation or investment benefits. Even state and local governments are jumping on the bandwagon. Only about 200 major companies had the plans as recently as four years ago.

Despite the universal appeal of the plans, the companies appear to be the only clear winners in the benefits craze. By sheltering their true earnings, young and low-income workers run the risk of being left with reduced disability or Social Security reserves, according to the Health and Human Services investigation.

As employers reduce their taxable payroll, they also cut their required Social Security contributions. Employers pay slightly more than 7 percent of their taxable payroll toward the Social Security funds of their employees. They pay nothing into those funds for the part of the paycheck that is diverted into benefit plans.

So, there was little surprise when the business community lobbied Congress fiercely and successfully last year to kill legislation that would have begun taxing the cafeteria plans in January.

Five days after the House quietly passed a deficit-reduction act that included a $500 cap on non-taxable income, a full-page advertisement appeared in the Washington Post declaring, "Taxing Cafeteria Benefits Doesn't Make Sense."

It was paid for by Hewitt Associates, a Lincolnshire, Ill.-based firm that is a consultant in the design and administration of cafeteria programs. The ad listed the endorsements of 181 businesses.

In the ensuing weeks, senators and staff members of the joint tax conference committee were bombarded by a lobbying effort to kill the taxation plan. According to several staffers, the pressure was more intense than any lobbying onslaught they had seen in recent years.

The cafeteria taxation clause was quietly dropped from the bill before it reached the Senate floor in mid-December.

Cheerleaders for the cafeteria plans say that taxation would have singled them out as scapegoats when the taxes should be spread among all benefit programs. In addition, the Social Security Administration thinks that the estimate from Health and Human Services of $46.9 billion in lost taxes is inflated. The joint tax committee of Congress had put the loss at only $12.8 billion over five years, and the Reagan administration didn't even bother to include the loss in its fiscal year 1989 budget projections.

An auditor for Health and Human Services admitted that any attempt to tax the benefit programs will run up against the Reagan administration's vow to fight anything that looks like a tax increase.

But the investigators are serious about what they perceive as a mounting drain on the treasury and a threat to Social Security.

Continued proliferation of cafeteria plans could also hurt the federal Old Age, Survivors and Disability Insurance and Health Insurance trust funds, which are all administered by the Social Security Administration. Those funds stand to lose about $21.8 billion over the next five years, the investigators concluded.

Another problem with the cafeteria plans is that given the options, many workers forego health insurance benefits and pick a more attractive investment from the menu, risking bankruptcy in case of an accident or illness.

CHEAP HOUSING LOST — Builders who got low-interest loans from the federal government to build low-income housing have been paying off those loans early so they can raise the rents. The loan program was instituted in 1962 to provide cheap rural housing. The builders get loans, sometimes with interest as low as 1 percent. In turn, they promise to keep the rents in a range affordable to the poor for as long as the loan is being paid off. The General Accounting Office reports that more than 300,000 units have been built under the federal loan program. But since 1984, 5,500 of them have been lost to low-income renters because the builders paid off the loans early to get out from under the federal restrictions. In California alone, early repayment has meant the rents have gone up an average of 91 percent. At least 6,800 loans representing 125,000 units are eligible for early repayment.

MINI-EDITORIAL — It would be a fitting end to the greed of Ferdinand and Imelda Marcos if the elusive "Yamashita's Treasure" turned out to be a hoax. Gold, silver and jewels supposedly were buried in the Philippines by Japanese Lt. Gen. Tomoyuki Yamashita at the end of World War II. Ferdinand Marcos was in a frenzy to find it before he was ousted. Presumably Imelda was running short on bras and shoes. Now, American treasure hunters are after it and claim Marcos will do anything to stop them. If the loot exists, the people of the Philippines need it a lot more than American opportunists or an avaricious little despot living in luxurious exile in Hawaii.

'Spreading' the risk

Allen Howland's article in the March 10th edition of the Reporter-Telegram on the problem of medical insurance clearly shows the pervasive misunderstanding of insurance which the Insurance Information Institute seeks to remedy.

Insurance neither "eliminates" nor "equalizes" risk, but is a method of "spreading" risk. By definition, risk is "something that may happen, but is not bound to happen, — a fortuitous event." Through the use of statistics, it is possible for actuaries to closely calculate the individual premiums necessary to pay claims, so that "the premiums of the many pay the losses of the few." Thus a system of spreading risk, called insurance, can exist and function.

But there is clearly no health risk to insure if the person is already ill. Paying hospital expenses for people in this plight is an obvious problem, and if society insists that someone other than the sick person pay the bill, then probably there is no answer other than government tax-supported programs.

In criticizing the insurance industry for not offering health insurance to those exposed to AIDS, Howland asks if this isn't like saying "we'll insure your car as long as you promise not to take it out of the garage." This illustration is inaccurate. The risk of a garaged car being in a collision is zero, so there is no risk to transfer.

No, a more apt illustration would be the car owner whose car is on fire, trying to get fire insurance, or the one who has already had a wreck and wants collision insurance. This would not be a fortuitous event, but rather a foregone conclusion, and could not be insured. This kind of problem can't be underwritten by insurance.

Until more is known about AIDS, competent underwriters will be very cautious. This is a position endorsed by most purchasers of health insurance who are already concerned about continuing increases in premiums. It is, after all, our premiums that pay the claims and not some beneficent charity.

A jazzy alternative

In the wake of your recent article, "Satan's Kids," I noticed the influence of the lyrics of popular heavy-metal rock musicom the suicide notes and personal memos of these youngsters.

What an encouraging contrast to see the smiling faces and the toe-tapping of the young and old alike who listened to the Cherry Creek High School Jazz Band last Thursday and Friday in Midland and Odessa.

This was the first program of the West Texas Jazz Society founded with the hope of offering an alternative to rock music for the young people of our area.

Our thanks to the public schools of Midland and Ector counties for allowing us to bring these musicians from Denver to our school children.

Noriega's Panamanian not U.S. problem

I have some cautionary words about the flap over Panama's National Guard commander, Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega.

It's not that I wish to carry water for old Pineapple Face, as some Panamanians call him in mockery of the scars of his adolescent zits. It's interesting sometimes to remember adult tyrants as children. It's always a lesson that we can travel from innocence to evil by our decisions.

Charley Reese

No, I have nothing to say in defense of Noriega, but there are a few things we had better remember.

One is that before the plug is pulled on Noriega somebody better have an idea about his replacement. The Panamanian National Guard is the only organization which has kept order in Panama. The State Department and the American press have a bad habit of joining foreign lynch mobs only to discover later the leaders of them are Marxist-Leninist tyrants.

Another thing to remember is that Panama is not our country. It is not up to us to change their government or to throw out their dictators. For some strange reason, liberals, when they decide they dislike someone, set up a hue and cry that just because the U.S. has maintained diplomatic relations with a country and provided aid, we are responsible for the country's government.

Hogwash. We gave Joe Stalin $11 billion worth of aid. I never heard the liberals say that Stalin was America's responsibility and that we owed it to the Russian people to overthrow him. This, You Are Responsible, is an old song of leftist agitators which they sing selectively.

A third thing to remember is that even if Noriega is guilty of all charges, he's not the Lone Ranger. You need not think that only one man in Panama is corrupt and that if you get rid of him, everything becomes hunky-dory.

Finally, while I despise drugs and believe we should take firm action against countries involved in trafficking, I think it is absurd for U.S. grand juries to indict officials of foreign governments. There are some instances where our criminal justice system is not applicable, and foreign relations is one of them.

Noriega is Panamanian, he lives in Panama, he works in Panama (dictators have to go to work in the mornings, too), and whatever crimes he commits, he commits in Panama. Therefore, he should answer to Panamanian justice, not to a court in the U.S.

Furthermore, as crazy as it may seem to have to remind anyone, Noriega has only been accused, not convicted, of conspiring to import drugs into the U.S. If you're going to use the criminal justice system in this matter, then use it all — including the presumption of innocence. Grand juries do not decide guilt or innocence. An indictment is an accusation, not a conviction or judgment.

I'm curious, even suspicious, of the current flap over Noriega. Whatever he is, he has always been. I've heard tales of his escapades going back to 1964. Why the sudden interest in the purification of Panamanian politics?

I say keep our nose out of it and let the Panamanians do whatever they wish. It's their country, and he's their problem. If the canal is theirs, even more so is Noriega.

You can write this down in indelible ink: When Noriega goes, the situation will be worse from our point of view, not better.

I can't think of a single reason for the State Department and CIA to break their record of swapping order for chaos in their little foreign coups. They've overthrown more capitalists than communists.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Friday, March 18, the 78th day of 1988. There are 288 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On March 18, 1965, the first spacewalk took place as Soviet cosmonaut Alexei Leonov left his Voskhod II capsule and remained outside the spacecraft for 20 minutes, secured by a tether.

On this date:

In 1766, Britain repealed the Stamp Act.

In 1837, the 22nd and 24th President of the United States, Grover Cleveland, was born in Caldwell, N.J.

In 1909, Einar Dessau of Denmark used a shortwave transmitter to converse with a government radio post about six miles away. It's believed to have been the first broadcast by a "ham" operator.

In 1922, Mohandas K. Gandhi was sentenced in India to six years' imprisonment for civil disobedience. He would be released after serving two years.

In 1931, Schick Incorporated marketed the first electric razor.

In 1937, more than 400 people, mostly children, were killed in a gas explosion at a school in New London, Texas.

In 1938, Mexico took control of foreign-owned oil properties on Mexican soil.

In 1959, President Dwight D. Eisenhower signed the Hawaii statehood bill.

In 1962, France and Algerian rebels agreed to a truce.

Spuds McKenzie's dark secret is he's a she

Word has leaked out that Spuds McKenzie, the controversial party animal dog of the beer commercials, is actually a female.

I was astounded by this information. I also wonder if this revelation will make more heated the charge that Spuds commercials are encouraging young people to drink.

Grizzard

Likely, it will make those opposed to the commercials even more anxious to have them removed from television.

People who are in this movement support Pat Robertson for president, wear knee-length black socks with their Bermuda shorts, eat a lot of prunes and are against most everything.

The fact that we have a female dog here portraying a male will no doubt further flare the nostrils of the pious.

So intrigued was I by the situation, I phoned Hollywood and talked to Spuds' agent to obtain background information on the controversial star.

I was told Spuds' parents, Bowser and Fifi, also had been in show business, having played opposite Ed McMahon in several Alpo commercials.

"And Spuds' real name?" I asked.

"Elaine," the agent answered. "After a great aunt who once appeared with Bullet (the wonder dog) in a Roy Rogers movie."

"How did Spuds (Elaine) break into show business?" I continued.

"She was a very precocious pup," the agent explained. "At a very early age, she was fetching sticks, rolling over, and playing dead for humans who rewarded her with stomach scratches and morsels of food.

"Soon, however, she tired of this and headed for Hollywood. She got lucky and met Rin Tin Tin at an alley cat-chasing and Rinty introduced her around.

"She broke in as one of the dogs Clint Eastwood spit on in 'The Outlaw Josie Wales.'"

"And after that?"

"She had a part in the off-Broadway version of 'Lady and the Tramp,' and was hired to howl at the moon in various horror flicks."

"How did the beer thing come about?"

"She got that part because she knew how to cha-cha with those bimbos on the beach."

"And a crucial question here," I went on, "does Elaine (Spuds) think she is promoting alcohol consumption?"

"Of course not," said the agent. "She is simply an actress doing a job. She rarely drinks herself except for an occasional bowl of white wine or perhaps a rum-soaked dog biscuit."

"And this thing with Rin Tin Tin. Was it serious?"

"It could have been, but Lassie kept sticking her nose into the relationship."

"Lassie was after Rinty?" I asked.

"No," said the agent, "Elaine."

"You mean Lassie was ..."

"Gay. Everybody in Hollywood knew about it except for Timmy and Gramps. It would have broken their hearts."

So now even more ammunition for the righteous to use against the Spuds McKenzie campaign — a female dog portraying a male, mixed with alcohol, and canine homosexuality.

Look for the entire thing to wind up on the next "Geraldo."

Dole lays off workers; Democrats sharpen criticism

Associated Press

Bob Dole, battered by Vice President George Bush in a string of Republican contests, laid off more campaign workers and threw a Capitol Hill party to thank staff and supporters, but was tenaciously clinging to his long-shot presidential bid.

Meanwhile, the Democratic presidential contenders intensified their criticism of the Reagan administration for deploying U.S. forces in Central America.

And Democrat Richard Gephardt dispatched some troops of his own today — sending dozens of congressional colleagues to stump for him in Michigan in a bid to shore up his faltering campaign.

Michigan holds Democratic caucuses on March 26, and Gephardt badly needs a win. However, a new poll suggested Gephardt trailed rivals Jesse Jackson and Michael Dukakis in the state.

The survey of 328 likely Democratic voters, conducted for the Detroit Free Press and WXYZ-TV, indicated Jackson and Dukakis each had 32 percent, 15 percent were undecided and Gephardt had 9 percent. Tennessee Sen. Albert Gore Jr. had 6 percent and Paul Simon 5 percent, according to the telephone survey, which had a margin of error of 5.4 percentage points.

In Washington, Dole campaign spokeswoman Dale Tate said about a dozen national staff members were told Thursday their jobs would end at the week's end, and top aides were working without pay. However, she said Dole was still in the race.

"Absolutely, positively nothing has changed," said Tate. "The senator is on the record about that."

After losing the Illinois primary to Bush on Tuesday, Dole indicated he would stay in at least until Wisconsin's primary on April 5.

On the Senate floor Thursday, Dole defended the dispatching of troops to Honduras, saying Nicaragua's Contra rebels were being "slaughtered by the hundreds."

The U.S. troops were sent to conduct exercises as a show of strength after Nicaraguan forces chased Contras into Honduras.

"Does it make sense, even as thousands of communist troops cross the border of a free country in this hemisphere, for members of Congress to make excuses for (Nicaragua's) aggression, while accusing the president of the United States of fueling the fires of war in Central America?" the Republican leader asked.

Dole said Reagan should immediately resubmit a request for military aid to the rebels. The Democratic contenders sharply disagreed.

"Our policy in Central America has been one of the worst fiascos of this administration," Dukakis said as he campaigned in Stratford, Conn., in advance of the state's March 29 primary. "There is no reason to have troops down there."

Sending in the troops was "excessive and unnecessary," Jackson said at a news conference in Detroit.

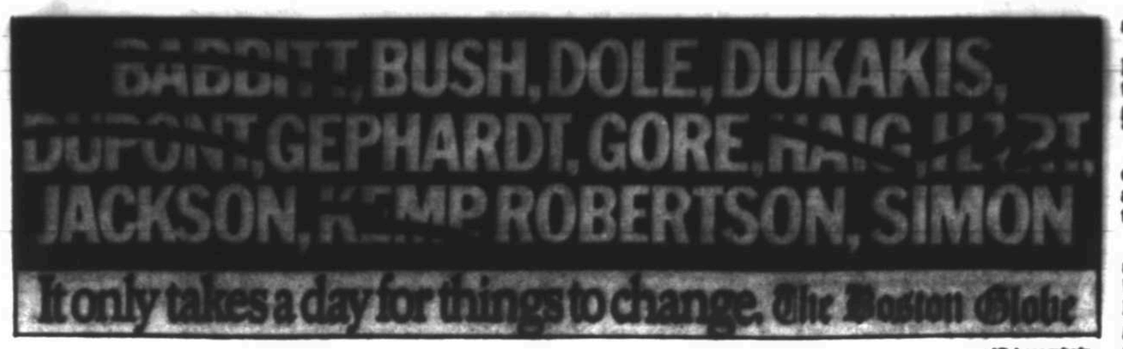

"We are being told we have to be saved from the Sandinistas," Jackson said, adding sardonically: "There are no Sandinistas in Detroit."

Gore accused the administration of failing to share sufficient information with Congress about the military move.

"We need to know more...about what our forces will be doing there," the Tennessee senator said as he campaigned Thursday in wintry Kansas, which holds Democratic caucuses on Saturday.

Gephardt also blasted the administration's actions in Central America.

"In pursuit of its failed policy of support for the Contras, the administration has lost its sense of direction, abandoned the rule of law, and failed to protect American national interests in a troubled region," he said.

Buffalo Bill collection set for auction

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Buffalo Bill's buffalo-hide coat, eight guns and a tomahawk go on the auction block today in the largest sale yet of Wild West memorabilia collected by the legendary William F. Cody.

The 300 items offered for sale belong to San Franciscan Greg Martin, who acquired the collection after he had been unable to buy the single item he wanted.

It was a double-barrel shotgun that brought Martin to a warehouse in Billings, Mont., last year.

"I saw it up in storage...and my pulse skipped a beat," said Martin, who offered to buy the Westley-Richards English shotgun inscribed to Cody.

When the elderly owner refused to sell just one item, Martin wrote a check for $300,000 for the entire collection and took it out of storage for the first time in 20 years.

"He is the living symbol of the West and one of the most famous Americans who ever lived," said Martin, 49, a gun collector and aficionado of American history. "The way we look at the West is because of how Buffalo Bill showed it to us."

The collection, to be auctioned by Butterfield & Butterfield, includes the buffalo-hide coat worn by Cody and the gun he carried as a 14-year-old Pony Express rider. Cody's single-action Colt revolver, the type he used as a U.S. Army scout, is one of eight guns in the collection.

Study links smoking, women's stroke risk

SANTA FE, N.M. (AP) — Women who smoke half a pack of cigarettes a day are twice as likely to have a stroke as women who have never smoked and those who smoke two packs a day have six times the risk of a stroke, researchers say.

Their study, presented Thursday at a meeting of the American Heart Association, is the first to show a conclusive link between smoking and strokes in women, said the study's principal author, Dr. Graham Colditz of the Harvard University School of Medicine in Boston.

"Taken in conjunction with the results for men, this clearly implicates cigarette smoking as a risk factor for strokes in women," Colditz said.

Before 1984 smoking was not considered a risk factor for strokes in men or women. In 1984, however, the American Heart Association listed cigarette smoking as a possible risk factor for strokes.

Little has been known about the effect of smoking on strokes in women, however. Earlier less definitive studies had suggested it increased the risk, some had found no effect and one had found that smoking decreased the risk, Colditz said.

Heart disease and stroke have been studied less extensively in women than in men, possibly because those diseases are less common in women than men. But heart disease and stroke, taken together, are the leading cause of death in women — as they are in men.

The heart association estimates that 500,000 Americans have strokes each year. In 1985, the latest year for which figures are available, 152,700 Americans died from strokes.

Colditz said his results are more convincing than those of previous studies largely because of the number of subjects in his study — almost 120,000. They are nurses who were recruited in 1976 for a huge study attempting to correlate various aspects of diet, health, family history and such things as height and weight with the occurrence of disease.

In a separate finding reported Thursday, analysis of the nurses' drinking habits showed that even modest amounts of alcohol can lower the risk of coronary heart disease, marked by clogging of the coronary arteries that supply blood to the heart.

This effect has been observed in men, but it has not been as thoroughly studied in women.

"A couple of drinks a week is enough to lower the risk," Colditz said.

Meir Stampfer of Harvard, the principal author of the alcohol study, said analysis of the alcohol intake of 87,566 of the nurses showed that as little as two drinks a week could lower the risk of coronary heart disease by 40 percent.

There is a catch, however. Alcohol has been shown to raise the incidence of cancer — and that effect begins to occur with the consumption of three drinks a week, Colditz said.

Most authorities believe that the question of alcohol's effect on health has not been answered well enough yet for them to recommend that people drink moderately.

Alcohol's hazards are well known, and public health officials worry that some people might conclude, for example, that if two drinks are good, four drinks are better.

$1.1 trillion federal budget approved

WASHINGTON (AP) — The world's business and financial communities should be encouraged by the ease with which the House Budget Committee has approved a $1.1 trillion federal budget for the 1989 fiscal year, the panel's chairman says.

Chairman William H. Gray III, D-Pa., made the remarks Thursday after his committee approved the budget resolution with support from lawmakers of both parties.

"I think it's good in terms of helping the volatility out there in the equity markets...and sending a signal to our trading partners that we're willing to work cooperatively in terms of addressing the deficit," Gray said.

The budget plan meets the spending and tax strictures established by last year's budget summit pact between Congress and President Reagan. That accord was sparked by October's stock market crash and the resulting calls to slash the government's deficits, which have surpassed $200 billion in recent years.

The spending document would leave a deficit of $134.1 billion, according to the budget panel, enough to avoid automatic spending cuts under the Gramm-Rudman budget-balancing law.

But to get to that figure, lawmakers adopted the White House's economic forecasts and abandoned gloomier estimates produced by their own Congressional Budget Office that would have added $35 billion in red ink to the deficit projection.

Under Gramm-Rudman, the deficit target for fiscal 1989, which begins Oct. 1, is $136 billion. Spending would be cut to that level automatically if the deficit exceeds the target by $10 billion.

The document, expected to be considered by the full House next week, reduces Reagan's request for science and space and allocates the money to urban and social programs.

The budget resolution was pieced together over the last several days during closed-door meetings between committee Republicans and Democrats. The panel approved the document, on a voice vote with no objections, during a five-minute public session.

Rep. Willis D. Gradison Jr. of Ohio, senior committee Republican at the meeting, said the resolution had been written in an "excellent spirit of bipartisanship" and had "very strong support" from GOP lawmakers.

The bipartisan camaraderie was in stark contrast to last year, when Republicans walked away from the budget resolution process and the bickering lasted for months.

The budget pact reached last November between Reagan and lawmakers locked in new taxes and spending levels for fiscal 1988 and 1989 for defense, foreign affairs and overall domestic spending.

Lawmakers are proving eager to avoid reopening those questions and sparking potentially bitter fights in an election year. Thus, the main fight has been over distributing the $169.2 billion the summit allows for the domestic programs that Congress directly oversees and are not financed under automatic formulas.

"I think the summit agreement basically set the tone for the year," said Rep. Leon Panetta, D-Calif.

In the 1989 budget he presented to Congress on Feb. 18, Reagan proposed a 20 percent increase in spending on space and science programs to $13.1 billion. The budget panel, looking to restore proposed cuts to several other domestic programs, pared that increase to $12.2 billion.

NATION IN BRIEF

Federal worker fired for not wearing tie

BOSTON (AP) — A U.S. Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms inspector will be dismissed from his $36,000-a-year job for refusing to wear a coat and tie for an identification photograph.

Roger Arnold, a 17-year employee with the federal agency, said his dismissal Friday ends a 15-month battle over the clothing requirement.

Arnold, 50, said his objections were based on his dislike for business attire and the fact no clothing requirement was placed on female ATF employees posing for identification photographs.

"Personally, it was a matter of principles," said Arnold. "But when I looked at the regulations, it was apparent they were discriminatory. It placed all the clothing burden on men."

Arnold said the controversy was solely over the photograph, not his garb during work. He said he has not worn a coat and tie at work since the late 1970s and last put on a tie at his son's wedding in 1982.

"Ties just don't serve any purpose in my life," said Arnold, who checked wineries, distilleries and firearm manufacturers for federal license compliance.

Shamir encourages unity

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir urged American Jews to close ranks behind Israel as it tries to quell riots by Palestinians in the occupied territories of the West Bank and the Gaza Strip.

"When unity breaks down, then our enemies exploit every critical statement to their own end," Shamir said to enthusiastic applause from 1,600 American Jews at a fund-raising banquet on Thursday.

He apparently referred to criticism by some Jews of the Israeli Army's use of beatings and live ammunition to quell riots in the occupied territories. At least 100 Palestinians have been killed in more than three months of violence.

Shamir also warned Israel's supporters not to compare the Palestinian protests to a civil rights struggle.

"These are not passive civil rights marches. These are another expression of the Arab refusal to accept Israel, to coexist with us, and to recognize that Israel is a permanent feature in the region," Shamir said.

Faults' hazards examined

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The deadly earthquake that shook the Los Angeles area in October led scientists to accept a theory that says the region is more prone to damaging jolts than once believed.

A study of the quake, published today in the journal Science, concludes buried faults hidden by folds in Earth's crust present "additional potential earthquake hazards to the Los Angeles metropolitan area."

The theory by consulting geologist Thom Davis was publicized in November when scientists met to discuss the Oct. 1 Whittier Narrows quake, which measured 5.9 on the Richter scale. With its aftershocks, it caused eight deaths, more than 200 injuries and $358 million in damage.

Impeachment talks begin

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chairman of the House Judiciary Committee and two other lawmakers Thursday introduced a resolution to impeach convicted federal Judge Walter L. Nixon Jr. of Mississippi.

Judiciary Chairman Peter W. Rodino Jr., D-N.J., acted just two days after receiving a recommendation from the Judicial Conference, the governing body for federal judges.

The conference certified to the House that Nixon had engaged in conduct which might constitute grounds for impeachment. Judges are appointed for life, and can only be removed by Congress in an impeachment proceeding.

Violence in old country mutes St. Patty's spirit

Associated Press

America's Irish paraded on St. Patrick's Day, but enthusiasm was muted by the awareness of fresh bloodshed in Northern Ireland.

"The violence, it's got to stop," declared William Burke, grand marshal of the parade up New York's Fifth Avenue. "You shoot me. I shoot you...This can't go on any more."

Across from St. Patrick's Cathedral, sign-waving protesters demanded "Great Britain Keep Out of Irish Affairs," a day after three people were killed and 68 wounded by a Protestant gunman who attacked a graveside service for three Irish Republican Army members in Belfast.

Mayor Raymond L. Flynn of Boston said the root of the violence was "the utter inhumane tactics British rule has perpetrated throughout the occupied six counties."

"What can we expect but senseless and renewed violence from both communities, when the British government itself has abandoned a code of law enforcement for a shoot-to-kill policy aimed at unarmed citizens," said Flynn.

In an emotional homily before his city's parade, New York's Cardinal John J. O'Connor proposed a pilgrimage to Ireland to pray for "peace with justice."

"I would like to feel exuberant. I would like to feel joyful," O'Connor told a congregation of about 2,000. "I don't feel that way today. I don't feel like reviewing a parade. I suspect many of you don't feel like marching in a parade."

The parade went on, however, with O'Connor adding heavy black gloves to his vestments to protest against a bloody week. Organizers estimated that 1.25 million people crowded Fifth Avenue to watch the parade, but police reported little of the drunken rowdiness which has marked past holidays.

Christine Bittinger, 78, was walking up Fifth Avenue for two reasons: "I'm walking for justice in Northern Ireland. And because old age has played a dirty trick on me. I've gotten smaller, and I can't see from behind the crowd anymore."

When the parade was over, patrons of more than 100 bars and restaurants helped the city's homeless when they lifted a glass to toast the Irish patron saint.

Patricia McGuire Rock, who works in a homeless shelter, persuaded the owners of the establishments to contribute a portion of their St. Patrick's Day proceeds to organizations that help the homeless.

The nation's highest elected son of Ireland, President Reagan, paid a visit to an Irish pub in Alexandria, Va., sipping beer and singing along as revelers joined in "When Irish Eyes are Smiling."

In New Haven, Conn., protests by the National Organization for Women, the NAACP and other groups were planned outside the all-male Knights of St. Patric dinner, traditionally a must gathering for politicians.

More than 200,000 people crowded the sidewalk in downtown Chicago to watch the 40,000 marchers, 50 floats and 45 bands that made up the annual parade. Portions of the Chicago River were dyed green for the annual day of revelry. "They make much more of it here than in Ireland," said Bridgid Donnelly, 19, an Irish citizen living in Chicago.

Winds, dry weather still pose fire danger

George Wolf/Reporter-Telegram

Midland Fire Department paramedic Trey Orozco directs traffic away from a grass fire near a residential area along Midland Drive a week ago. Fire officials are warning that northwest Midland is especially vulnerable to grass fires which, because of dry and windy conditions, have been frequent.

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

Midland firefighters were called out only twice Thursday to fight grass fires — an unexpectedly slow day given the high winds and dry conditions which continue to make the area's grasses vulnerable to blazes.

"It is just as bad now, if not worse, than it's been recently," Assistant Fire Marshal Lon Dominguez said late Thursday of the danger. "Due to the winds; a small fire can become big fire pretty quickly."

Earlier this week, the National Weather Service included a chance of rain in the forecast, but today brought clear skies and low humidity — again.

"It will definitely help if we can get some rain, as it will green things up a little bit," Dominguez said. "Just a little rain won't help us, though. We need to have a lot."

Since March 1, the city's firefighters have been called to 25 grass fires within the city limits, and 12 more in Midland County, according to records. Volunteer departments in Greenwood and Northeast Midland County also have been busy with grass and pasture fires, according to dispatchers.

But since word spread of the range fire near Albany which burned more than 300,000 acres, reports of grass fires in the Midland area have slowed somewhat, the dispatchers said.

"It has slowed down some, but it is still dangerous out there," Richard Kolas, communications supervisor for the Midland Fire Department, said today.

"It appears that folks have been much more careful. It has been cold and windy, and they haven't been burning as much."

Most of the grass and pasture fires in the county have been caused by trash burning — while most of the fires within the city limits have a familiar cause, according to Dominguez.

"Most of them are from thrown cigarette butts," he said.

Luckily, all of the fires appear to have started accidentally, he said.

Despite the fire danger, fire inspectors are still receiving requests for permits to burn trash and grass in the city. Except in rare exceptions, issuance of those permits will be suspended until the conditions improve, Fire Marshal Jerry Petree said.

Last week, a grass fire burned two acres in northwest Midland, just north of the Clusters Apartments and just west of a residential area east of Midland Drive.

Since that fire, two others have been reported in the area of Bluebird Lane, one near Oriole Lane, and one near Tanforan Street. All of those streets are in northwest Midland — an uncluttered area especially vulnerable to grass fires, Dominguez said.

"As long as it remains as dry as it has been, and especially with these winds, we're just hoping for the best," he said.

Kenneth Parker's attorney claims indictment flawed

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

The attorney for accused kidnapper Kenneth Wayne Parker claims the indictment against his client is flawed because it is incomplete, and in a motion filed Thursday asks U.S. District Judge Lucius Bunton to throw out the indictment.

Parker, 41, is accused of conspiring with another man to kidnap 24-year-old June Gilkerson, who has been missing since Nov. 8, 1986. According to the two-count federal grand jury indictment handed down Jan. 28, Parker and David Russell Alderink, 21, planned to kidnap Ms. Gilkerson and sell her into prostitution.

Alderink pleaded guilty Feb. 1 to aggravated kidnapping in state district court and is serving a 20-year prison sentence.

The indictment alleges Alderink called Ms. Gilkerson the morning of her disappearance, and that Parker drove Alderink to the Fairmont Lanes bowling alley in northwest Midland. The indictment goes on to say that "Defendant Kenneth Wayne Parker bound June Gilkerson and placed her in a pickup truck and drove away."

In his motion, attorney Tom Morgan argues that the indictment fails to adequately describe the purported conspiracy.

"There is nothing that indicates anyone was transported into foreign commerce...that June Gilkerson was to be sold into prostitution," the motion states. "(The indictment) does not state where the agreement was reached between the co-conspirators...the indictment does not give the nature of the other 'unknown' co-conspirators."

The motion also complains that "there is nothing to show the telephone call has anything to do with being driven away, nor does anything indicate that the defendant drove June Gilkerson away in a pickup truck."

The indictment also "does not state where the defendant bound June Gilkerson and by what means; it does not even say that June Gilkerson being bound was against her will," according to the motion.

Because of the alleged flaws in the indictment, it "does not give the defendant fair notice of what he is charged with," and should be dismissed, the motion says.

Parker — who is undergoing a psychiatric evaluation at a federal facility in Springfield, Mo. — was also indicted for conspiring with Alderink to kidnap another woman, 25-year-old Susan Lindsay. According to the indictment, the night before Ms. Gilkerson disappeared, the pair drove to Ms. Lindsay's apartment complex in Rockdale, northeast of Austin. There, Parker called the woman, the indictment alleges.

But Ms. Lindsay was not harmed, and investigators have not alleged an attempt was actually made to kidnap her.

In his motion, Morgan also requests the count in the indictment alleging that Parker plotted to kidnap Ms. Lindsay be thrown out.

"Not only is no effort at force being used alleged nor any attempted kidnapping or abduction, but the manner and means...is wholly lacking," the motion states.

"Additionally...the indictment fails to state an offense."

Morgan — who has also filed a motion questioning a magistrate's decision to hold Parker without bond — had no additional comment on the motion.

Odessa banker indicted for fraud

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Jimmy Reagan Brown, the 41-year-old president and chief executive officer of First State Bank of Odessa, Thursday became the 10th Midland-Odessa banker and/or ex-banker to be indicted for bank fraud since the FBI in 1985 heightened its probe into West Texas banking practices.

Three former Midland-Odessa bank presidents have been convicted of fraud, but Brown is the first executive to be indicted while still managing a bank in Midland or Odessa.

Brown, who was indicted by a grand jury in Midland on six counts of bank fraud, could receive up to 24 years in prison and be fined up to $1.5 million if he is convicted on the six counts, which include embezzlement, according to Richard D. Schwein, special agent in charge of the FBI's El Paso Division.

Brown was charged with:

— Making false statements and representations to National Bank Examiners in December 1985 about a $15,000 loan.

— Presenting a "materially false financial statement" to Texas National Bank of Odessa to influence the bank's action on Brown's existing loan in September 1985.

— Making a false statement to Texas National Bank of Odessa to influence the bank to grant him a $10,000 loan in September 1985. The grand jury alleged that Brown represented that the loan was for the down payment on a new home when the loan was "to pay off a delinquent loan at another bank."

— Making a false and misleading financial statement to "deceive the directors and officers" of First State Bank and examiners of the United States Comptroller of the Currency in August 1985.

— Embezzling and misapplying $15,000 in monies, funds and credits "entrusted to the custody and care" of the bank and Brown in June 1985.

— Making a false entry in applying for a $15,000 loan in June 1985. The grand jury charged that Brown represented that the loan was to be used for "debt consolidation" when the loan proceeds were intended to be used "personally" by Brown.

Brown, who is to voluntarily surrender to the United States deputy marshal in Midland, is to appear before U.S. Magistrate Darrell F. Smith Monday for his initial court appearance and to be informed of his rights.

Midland-Odessa ex-bankers who have been convicted of bank fraud since 1985 include three former bank presidents, an ex-director, three former vice presidents, and a chief executive officer. Sentences have ranged from 24 years imprisonment to one year. Court-ordered restitution has been as high as $550,000.

One indictment, against a former Midland bank vice president, was dismissed.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Jim Blankinship, who prosecuted most of the previous bank-fraud defendants here, presided over the grand-jury session this week.

Blankinship, who will prosecute Brown should he go to trial, works out of Austin. The case would be tried in the court of U.S. District Court Chief Judge Lucius D. Bunton of the Midland-Odessa Division of federal court system's Western District of Texas.

'Sex, drugs, rock'n'roll' just myth, star says

By GEORGIA TODD TEMPLE
Staff Writer

Canadian rock star Tim Bachman, who reached the pinnacle of success in 1973 only to face bankruptcy and owe $150,000 more than his assets less than five years later, calls "sex, drugs and rock'n'roll" a myth created by marketing people to sell a product.

"I was involved in that myth in my early career in BTO (Bachman Turner Overdrive) to a small extent," Bachman said in a telephone interview prior to Saturday's 8 p.m. BTO and The Guess Who concert at Chaparral Center. Tickets, priced at $10.50, may be purchased at Endless Horizons until 6 p.m. today and at Chaparral Center today and Saturday.

"It was a myth, and it was created by marketing people, and it sold the product, and entertainers were the product. The package was sex, drugs and rock'n'roll. That created a lot of paranoia."

One of the idols of the day for whom paranoia became a way of life was Elvis Presley, whom Bachman met in the early 1970s.

"He took our song 'Takin' Care of Business' as his motto, and had TCB on everything; it's on his tombstone.

"But the guy locked himself away, he missed life, he missed people. He was out there doing it for his fans, and he missed them.'

"You miss a lot of the experiences, if you don't allow yourself your public," Bachman says. "I don't want to do that."

Since discovering The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints about 10 years ago, Bachman has lived a family-oriented, drug-free life.

BTO, a popular rock group, will join The Guess Who for a Saturday concert at Midland College's Chaparral Center. The show begins at 8 p.m.

"Yet I go out on the stage and boogie with the best of them. And, the crowd has a wonderful time, and we have a wonderful time, and I don't have to be under any influence other than the influence of my music and that crowd to do that. It's an important thing for me to be able to tell young people today — 'We were straight long before it was fashionable.' "

Bachman began working professionally when he was three years old.

"My younger brother (Rob) and I were like, in the '50s, miniature Everly brothers. We used to do Elvis and Buddy Holly — all the happening things at the time — and the two older brothers (who were eight to 10 years older) backed us up."

Later, Randy and Gary branched off into their own rock'n'roll bands as did Rob and Tim when they entered their teens. Oldest brother Randy formed The Guess Who in the '60s.

In 1966, The Guess Who made its first tour of the United States on the strength of a record called "Shakin' All Over." The group went on to put such classics as "These Eyes," "American Woman" and "No Time" on the charts, becoming the first Canadian rock band to achieve major success in this country.

Randy quit The Guess Who in late '69 or early '70, Bachman says. A couple of years later, Randy, Rob, Tim and Fred Turner formed Bachman Turner Overdrive, which has evolved into BTO. Acting as manager then was Gary, who is now in the real estate business in Canada.

Bachman Turner Overdrive became No. 1 in the world, selling over 30 million records from 1973 to 1977 and topping the charts with such singles as "Rock is My Life" and "You Ain't Seen Nothing Yet."

When they were growing up, the Bachman boys had understanding parents, who lived in a "pretty noisy house," with lots of kids practicing rock'n'roll.

"I guess like a lot of people in both our countries, my mom felt like it was a way up out of circumstances," Bachman says. "They enjoyed what we were doing and never really pushed us. They were really great parents; they still are."

On weekends, in the late 1950s, their father, Charles Bachman, would have whatever band was working that weekend load equipment into the back of his station wagon. The kids playing in the bands ranged in age from 12 to 19.

"He would drive them to the gig and wait outside and see how they did on their own. If they had a problem, he'd go in and straighten it out."

At 70 years old, Charles Bachman fulfilled a dream.

"Last year, I took him on the road with me for a little over a month, and he had the greatest time. In fact, he probably had more girls lined up for his autograph than the rest of the band." That autograph read — "Charlie Bachman (Pops) the oldest roadie on the road."

TAEX profit seminar slated for next week

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

A bottom-line seminar to advise farmers and ranchers on how to turn a profit on their crops and livestock will be held at 6 p.m. Wednesday in the Midland County Texas Agricultural Extension Service Office east of Midland.

The seminar, "Agricultural Profitability and Competitiveness," will focus on improved management to effect better yields and more profits.

"Our main goal is to make producers aware of our unique growing conditions in West Texas," said Shane Lowrie, TAEX agent for Midland County. "We will concentrate our efforts on looking at the different varieties of cotton that do well and possible planting dates that seem to be more effective in producing that crop."

The seminar will feature an agronomist, entomologists, a county agent, and an irrigation engineer.

The session will delve into the rates of applying fertilizers and herbicides to "end up with the best crop in relation to those inputs" and the choice of cotton varieties and optimum planting dates, Lowrie said.

"Our main concern is to help the producer to come out at the end of the year with the maximum profits," he said. In addition to farmers, the seminar may attract ranchers who grow hay to augment their livestock-feeding program.

To be featured in the seminar and their discussion areas are:

— Charles Stichler, TAEX agronomist, will discuss plant population, varieties, planting dates, fertilization and herbicides at 6:30 p.m.

— Dr. Charles Allen, TAEX entomologist, will talk on bollworm and budworm management at 6:45 p.m.

— Richard Minsenmayer, Midland County entomologist, will discuss early-season pest management at 7 p.m.

— Earnest Kiker, Midland County agricultural agent, will talk on hay quality and management at 7:15 p.m.

— Dr. Joe Henggeler, TAEX irrigation engineer, will focus on irrigation scheduling at 7:30 p.m.

The program, which is to begin at 6:30 p.m., will be preceded by a 6 p.m. barbecue supper sponsored by the Midland Farmers Cooperative, Lowrie said.

Local United Way gets national grant

From Staff Reports

United Way of Midland is one of 19 community organizations that will receive funding through United Way of America's Project Blueprint.

Project Blueprint was designed by United Way of America with major funding provided by the W.K. Kellogg Foundation, Battle Creek, Mich. The objective is to intensify past efforts to increase minority volunteers in United Way and its agencies.

Ninety-two organizations, including United Way of Midland, submitted proposals to United Way of America to receive funding.

Midland formed a steering committee chaired by Sam Flores and composed of various representatives of the community.

The proposal was developed to recruit members of the black and Hispanic community to help United Way address community issues and to promote volunteer involvement.

Grant awards totaling $800,000 will be divided among 17 grants. All cities applying for grant funds raised one dollar for every two provided by United Way of America.

Midland will receive $48,000 over a two-year period for its proposal and United Way of Midland will match with $24,000 funding.

Flores and other steering committee members will be meeting to determine the actual structure of Project Blueprint.

"It was the special efforts of the committee members in formulating the proposal that can only be attributed to our being awarded grant funding," Flores said.

"Project Blueprint will continue to intensify our efforts to attract minority volunteers for leadership positions within United Way and its agencies and increase allocations to agencies operated by minority groups," said United Way of America President William Aramony, who announced the grantees this week at the organization's Volunteer Leaders Conference in San Francisco.

GOP partisan calls Democratic primary 'disaster'

By JOHN KANELIS
Hearst News Service

AUSTIN — The Super Tuesday primary was an "unmitigated disaster" for Democrats who failed to anoint a conservative southerner as their party's frontrunner in the race for the White House, a leading Republican pollster said Thursday.

Lance Tarrance of Houston, who conducted public opinion research for the recently ended GOP presidential campaign of New York Rep. Jack Kemp, said the Super Tuesday election of March 8 left the Democratic Party "fragmented and divided."

Moreover, said Tarrance, the Republican Party emerged stronger and more unified behind the candidacy of Vice President George Bush, who scored a 16-state Super Tuesday sweep and virtually locked up his party's presidential nomination.

Tarrance made his remarks at a meeting sponsored by the University of Texas College of Communications and the National Conference of Editorial Writers.

The regional primary, he said, "will go down in history as the election that gave Jesse Jackson his credibility. I think you'll find, though, that we're going to see some white-faced southern governors became very red-faced at the results of Super Tuesday."

Texas was one of 15 southern states that conducted its presidential primaries on March 8. Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis captured the Democratic primary; the Rev. Jesse Jackson finished second, with Sen. Albert Gore of Tennessee third.

Evidence of the Democrats' fragmentation, Tarrace said, shows up by lumping the totals of four candidates into two categories. Tarrance combined the vote totals of Dukakis and Jackson into what he called the "center left" and the totals of Gore and U.S. Rep. Richard Gephardt of Missouri in the "center right."

He said the Jackson-Dukakis tandem totaled 5 million votes throughout the South, compared with 3.8 million votes for Gephardt-Gore. Those totals, he said, suggest the Democratic Party is leaning more toward the left than conservative Democrats backing Super Tuesday had envisioned.

"Those results will fragment the Democratic Party," said Tarrance, noting conversely that Bush's strong showing throughout the South "cleaned out many of the so-called pretenders to the throne."

Tarrance's belief that Super Tuesday hurt the Democrats' chances in the 1988 presidential campaign drew a sharp response from state Sen. Chet Edwards, D-Duncanville, a key sponsor of a bill that set up the Texas primary.

Edwards said the aim of legislators who supported Super Tuesday was to give "Texas a stronger voice in the presidential selection process."

He said he takes "exception to the assertion that Jackson's performance is harmful" to the Democratic Party's chance for the White House.

Edwards contended that the legislation creating a Texas primary on Super Tuesday received support from current and former Senate Democrats such as Carl Parker of Port Arthur, Craig Washington of Houston and Oscar Mauzy of Dallas, adding that "I don't think you would call these folks conservative Democrats."

Edwards also countered that "Texas' Democratic chairman (Bob Slagle) wants to keep Super Tuesday and Texas' Republican chairman (George Strake) wants to go back to the old way" of choosing presidential delegates in May. "That hardly suggests Democrats are unhappy with Super Tuesday."

Changes could lighten tax burden of 'Joe Six-Pack'

AUSTIN (AP) — Tax changes contemplated by the Select Committee on Tax Equity probably would lighten the average Texan's tax load, says a state legislator.

"There is real likelihood that Joe Six-Pack will find his overall tax burden reduced after the structural reforms that the committee may very well be recommending are implemented — as we, for example, broaden the base of the general sales tax...to include the personal service sector of the economy," said Rep. Dan Morales, D-San Antonio, Thursday.

"What that would mean is that we would be in a position, all other things remaining equal, to consider lowering the rate of the sales tax," he said.

Morales, a committee member, sponsored the state sales tax increase that was the centerpiece of the $5.7 billion tax bill approved by the 1987 Texas Legislature.

With the increase to a 6 percent state sales tax and the addition of a local sales tax in some cities, some Texas consumers pay up to 8 percent tax on many purchases.

Elimination of the general sales-tax deduction for individuals will cost Texans $236 million when they pay their 1987 federal taxes, a researcher told the committee.

That amounts to $173 per income tax return, said Daphne Kenyon, senior research associate for the Washington-based Urban Institute.

"Overall, I'd say you will have above-average increase in federal tax liability because of disallowance of general sales-tax deductibility, but it's not as high as you might think," she said.

The blow is not as great as it could be because fewer Texans itemize deductions than do taxpayers nationwide, Ms. Kenyon said.

Nationally, 33 percent of returns itemize tax deductions, but only 26 percent are that way in Texas, she said. Whether individuals itemize deductions depends on such factors as income and home ownership.

"Sales taxes alone generally don't push a taxpayer into itemizing. Income taxes are likely to," she said.

Ms. Kenyon also stressed that removal of the general sales tax deduction was part of the overall effort to reform federal taxes.

"If we didn't disallow the general sales-tax deduction, would we have had higher tax rates because of that? Remember that the entire exercise of federal tax reform was to broaden the base to lower rates, and they were part of the same thing," she said.

BTO

The son remembers the group's meteoritic rise in 1973, when he was in his early 20s.

"June 6, 1973, was our first show as Bachman Tuner Overdrive, and in two months we were headlining, our first album was gold, and we were just climbing the charts, and by the end of the year we were all millionaires."

The feel of success surprised Bachman.

"I guess you have your dream of accomplishing something and what you're going to do when you get there and when that's over, you kind of look around and, like, there's nothing else to do. And you are working at staying there and maintaining that."

Bachman got married before the group "made it big." After the band reached the top, Bachman left, he says, because he had a son he rarely saw. He then became involved in promoting acts and shows in Canada, and lost everything he had.

"The bank called my line of credit, and I had to cash in all my assets. I ended up losing everything plus owing $150,000.

"It was devastating for my wife and I in different respects. She really missed that life, the money and the shopping and all that kind of stuff. Myself, I really didn't care about that, but I had a thing in my mind that without the dough, I really didn't mean much to my family, and I was afraid of losing them.

"It was a part of our lives and left a gigantic hole when it was gone. I had a period when I thought to myself I was worth more to my family dead than alive.

"My dad saved me from suicide a couple of times. It was a very unrealistic point of view, but when you're going through tense situations like that, things enter your mind that seem so real to you."

His father, an optician for many years, had taught him the optical business when he was 13.

"He said I might not always be able to make a living singing and dancing and playing, jumping around on a stage. I was really happy he did because when I went broke, I wasn't in the frame of mind to stand up in front of people and smile.

"I went into an office, got back in touch with reality, dealt with the public which was really, really a wonderful experience being with regular people again. It gave me a really great outlook for this time in the (music) business."

The last 10 years have been happy ones. Bachman is still married to Jacqueline, and they have two children, 15-year-old Paxton and 8-year-old Miranda and they live a "very family oriented life.

"My wife's my partner. We realize now that if anything happens or doesn't happen, that we have each other and our children, and that's what counts, whatever happens to the world around us."

In 1986, BTO toured with Van Halen, "the big supergroup of our time now," led by Edward Van Halen, "probably the greatest guitarist."

"What you hear on records and what you hear on stage is small compared to what's really in his fingertips and his brain."

Van Halen and his group are some of his son's heroes, which is what makes the following story so special to Bachman.

"I took my son on the road with me for two weeks that summer. One day Eddie and Michael (Anthony) took my son aside, and said to him, 'Do you know who your dad is? We want you to know that you dad's one of our heroes, and if it wasn't for him and his music, if we didn't have him to look up to to try and strive to be like, we wouldn't be where we are today.'

"For a teen-ager, who thinks of his dad as just my old man, to hear his heroes saying something about his father like that, put me in a whole different light with him."

Bachman, who started BTO up again in 1983, is the last original member playing in the group. Nonetheless, Saturday's concert will contain "99 percent of what people want to hear, the old hits, 1 percent new songs."

He feels fortunate to be working with the current lineup — bass player and vocalist Dave Reimer, lead guitarist and vocalist Randy Murray and drummer Vince Ditrich.

"I've hung on because this is what I love to do. I do it for a living. I'm not independently wealthy. I do it to pay the rent, to put food on the table. I'm very, very lucky and my band mates realize that they're very, very lucky that we can do something that we love.

"And, these guys want to be here, they're fabulous musicians, they're nice people which is really important because we're living together — on the road, we're a family."

Bishop College faces final, critical deadline

DALLAS (AP) — Bishop College officials have until Tuesday to raise operating funds for the rest of the semester and retain court protection from its creditors.

A decision is expected Tuesday on whether the financially troubled school's Chapter 11 bankruptcy case will be dismissed.

The hearing originally had been scheduled for April 8. But U.S. District Judge Robert McGuire moved up the date at the request of George McElreath, the federal trustee overseeing the case.

McElreath requested the early hearing after college officials refused to file voluntarily for Chapter 7 bankruptcy. Under Chapter 7, the school would be closed and its assets sold to pay its $13 million debt.

The trustee's request followed disclosures last week that Bishop would not meet its March payroll and that one church had withdrawn its $100,000 donation.

A weekly cash disbursement report filed with the Office of the U.S. Trustee indicated the school also has violated federal law by accumulating more than $371,000 in debts since it filed for Chapter 11 protection last April.

"The protection of the bankruptcy laws was not intended to extend to debtors who abuse the privilege of that protection by accepting goods and services on credit when there is no reasonable prospect that the debtor will be able to pay for them," McElreath said in his motion to dismiss.

Judith Swift, an attorney representing faculty in the bankruptcy case, objected to the dismissal motion, saying it would "do a great disservice" to students.

"If Bishop were forced to close its doors in mid-semester, the students would lose not only their tuition, but the full value of their academic work in classes," she said. "It would be impossible for them to receive grades if the semester were to end prematurely."

Bishop lawyer Michael Goldstein of Washington, D.C., said if the school is to remain under federal bankruptcy protection, it will have to raise enough funds by Tuesday to continue operating at least through the spring semester.

Debate over super collider heats up in House

DALLAS (AP) — A debate is shaping in the house over a $363 million funding request for the lucrative "super collider" project Texas is trying to snare.

President Reagan's request for the atom-smasher is "out of the question," said Sen. J. Bennett Johnston, D-Louisiana, who chairs both the Senate appropriations subcommittee on energy and the Senate Energy Committee.

Congressional aides say the fight in the House probably will focus on $100 million of Reagan's request that is earmarked for research and development.

Texas along with six other states is bidding for the $4.4 billion project. Officials of the U.S. Energy Department say they will announce the preferred site later this year.

Johnston has recommended $60 million for the "super collider" project. The collider is designed to be the world's largest atomic particle accelerator and would require a 52-mile underground tunnel for research in high-energy physics research.

Even some project supporters say that this year's full funding level is a remote possibility.

"The $363 million is just not going to happen this year," said Rep. Joe Barton, R-Ennis, whose district includes the proposed Texas site in Waxahachie.

Congress will probably approve about $200 million, he said.

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, said he is still optimistic that the full $363 million could be reached.

But others disagreed.

"To imagine full funding is just not realistic," said Robert Parks, director of the American Physical Society, a national association of physicists in Washington.

The debate was further clouded by statements from the Energy Department, according U.S. Rep. Ralph Hall, D-Rockwall.

Hall chastised Energy Secretary John Herrington for releasing what he said were misleading statements about foreign contributions to the project.

The department, earlier this year said other nations would contribute $1.8 billion, and Herrington last week said as much as 50 percent of the final $4.4 billion pricetag may be paid by other countries.

But other energy officials have testified before Hall's subcommittee, that neither figure was accurate.

Hall called the issuance of the prior statements, "the best way in the world to kill a project this country desperately needs."

Bishop comes to Midland for church's regional conference

From Staff Reports

A senior official of the Churches of God in Christ came to Midland Thursday to preside over the group's northwest Texas region annual workshop and conference.

Bishop J.O. Patterson, international bishop of the church, flew into Midland from Memphis, Tenn., which is his and the 81-year-old church's home.

"I'm really here to motivate people for the church's programs," Patterson said of his Pentecostal group.

There are nine Church of God in Christ and about 500 members in Midland, said the Rev. W.C. Keenan, pastor of Faith Temple Church in Midland.

In the U.S., there are about 3.5 million members, said Bishop William H. Watson, of Lubbock.

Watson said the church, like many others, is currently waging a battle against apathy, lack of adequate funding and a lack of confidence in religious leaders.

With the televangelist scandals of late, many people have learned they place too much faith in the person instead of God, Watson explained.

"I believe in born-again Christians and excellence in my people," Patterson said.

Lion owner's trial moved out of county

HOUSTON (AP) — A judge ruled the trial of a man whose lion mauled an 8-year-old girl last October will be moved out of Harris County after 49 of 50 prospective jurors indicated they were familiar with the case.

State District Judge Ted Poe on Thursday granted defense attorney Robert Scardino's request for a change of venue in the trial of Gary Durkovitz. Durkovitz, 35, will go on trial next month on a charge of injury to a child.

The location of the trial will be announced Monday.

The charge stems from an Oct. 10, 1987, attack at a north Houston flea market involving Durkovitz's 300-pound lion.

The lion mauled Roxanne Hernandez as the lion was being lead out of the building.

The little girl suffered serious head injuries and was hospitalized for more than a month, undergoing five operations.

Surplus OK'd in 1980

Congress approved a budget resolution for 1981 on June 12, 1980, that called for $613.6 billion in spending and a surplus of $200 million.

U.S. crop yields grow

Compared to 1930, crop yields are significantly better — with one acre of corn yielding 91 bushels in 1980, compared to just 21 bushels in 1930. One acre of farmland in 1980 can produce 26,200 pounds of potatoes, up from 8,600 pounds in 1930.

USDA rule will allow less fat for hot dogs, bologna

WASHINGTON (AP) — Fat-conscious consumers soon may be able to buy leaner hot dogs, bologna and other cooked sausages.

The Agriculture Department has approved a rule change that will let processors make make leaner products by substituting water for fat, so long as there is no loss of nutritional value.

The leaner products can be labeled as "lite," "light," or "lower fat" if they contain at least a fourth less fat than similar cooked sausage products on the market, officials said. The labels must include a comparison that explains the term.

For example, the label for lower-fat hotdogs might say: "This product contains 20 percent fat, while USDA allows 30 percent fat in meat hot dogs."

Lester M. Crawford, administrator of the department's Food Safety and Inspection Service, said Tuesday the change in regulations will be effective on April 14 and "reflects our desire to facilitate the marketing of lower-fat products."

Current federal rules for cooked sausages limit fat to 30 percent and "added" water to 10 percent. The new rule will limit the combination of fat and added water to 40 percent of the product.

The maximum fat content in the finished product will continue to be limited to 30 percent, but the water restriction will be removed so that processors can substitute some of the water for fat — and wind up with a lower-fat product, Crawford said.

Protein content, which is indirectly controlled by the limits on fat and added water, will remain unchanged and will be comparable to other cooked sausages, he said.

The rule change is being made at the request of the American Meat Institute, a private trade association, which asked USDA to develop a standard for light frankfurthers and similar cooked sausages. The proposed change was announced by the agency on Nov. 25, 1986.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Turkey production is rising faster than Agriculture Department economists had previously forecast.

The number of turkey eggs in incubators on March 1 was estimated at 32.1 million, up almost 4 percent from a year ago, the Agriculture Department reported Monday.

Moreover, 23.1 million new turkey poults were placed in flocks last month, a 2 percent increase from placements a year earlier, said the Agricultural Statistics Board.

In an earlier report, the department's Economic Research Service said turkey output climbed 18 percent in 1987 to a record level. By the third quarter market prices had dropped below break-even prices. However, prices climbed dramatically in November and December, putting fourth-quarter returns close to the break-even level.

"Because no two consecutive quarters had strong negative net returns, producers probably did not get an intense signal to slow growth," the agency said in the March issue of Agricultural Outlook magazine. "Production is now forecast to rise 10 percent in 1988, up from the earlier forecast of 6 percent."

Wholesale prices of hen turkeys weighing 8 pounds to 16 pounds averaged about 61 cents per pound in the East, the report said. Prices in the first and second quarters of 1988 are expected to be in the range of 48 cents to 52 cents and then rise seasonally in the third and fourth.

For all of 1988, the wholesale price may average 50 cents to 56 cents per pound, compared with 57.8 cents in 1987, the report said.

WASHINGTON (AP) — A larger 1987 harvest and a bigger inventory have put pressure on potato prices this season, says the Agriculture Department.

Total output last year rebounded almost 7 percent to an estimated 385.7 million hundredweight, although still 3 percent shy of the 1985 record, the department's Economic Research Service said. Stocks of fresh potatoes on Jan. 1 were up 8 percent from a year earlier.

Idaho russets sold for $13.50 to $14 per hundredweight at the end of January, compared with $17.50 to $19 the year before. Maine round whites, at $5.80 to $6 per hundredweight, were down from $18.10 to $8.50 a year earlier, the agency reported.

Overall, the U.S. average grower price of potatoes in January was $3.60 per hundredweight, down 25 percent from a year earlier.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Government trade figures show U.S. agricultural exports in the first three months of the 1988 fiscal year were on target with Agriculture Department projections.

The value of shipments in the first quarter of the year that began Oct. 1 was estimated at $8.46 billion, up 10 percent from the pace of a year earlier, according to the department's Foreign Agricultural Service.

Department officials have forecast 1987-88 exports at $32.5 billion, up from $27.9 billion in 1986-87.

The actual volume of shipments in the first quarter was reported at 36.2 million tons, up 11 percent from a year earlier. For the year, those are expected to total about 142.5 million metric tons, up from 129.2 million tons in 1986-87.

"Strong wheat sales to the Soviet Union and China, strong corn sales to the Soviet Union, South Korea and Japan, as well as improved soybean sales to Brazil, strengthened export volume," the agency said in a recent trade report.

Luggage to be checked for illegal food, plants

WASHINGTON (AP) — International travelers arriving at some major U.S. airports this summer will be greeted by Agriculture Department inspectors operating X-ray machines to see if their baggage harbors illegal food or plants.

The X-rays, in addition to sharp-nosed canine sniffers, will be used to check arrivals at 11 U.S. international airports for illegal sausages, mangoes and other contraband.

"Imported meats can carry exotic diseases that could devastate American livestock," James W. Glosser, head of the department's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service, said. "Fruits and vegetable coming into the country can carry pests that could seriously damage American crops."

Agency inspectors have used X-ray equipment in Puerto Rico and Hawaii for departures for several years, with interceptions of prohibited agricultural items doubling, he said.

The new systems for arrivals were recently installed at international airports in Miami; Honolulu; San Juan, Puerto Rico; Houston; and Chicago.

Additional equipment soon will be installed at international airports in Atlanta; New York; Washington; Boston; Los Angeles; and San Francisco.

The USDA agency also is installing large signs at the 11 airports telling travelers that X-rays are being used to check their baggage.

"Although most people willingly declare their agricultural products, we do come across some intentional violators," Glosser said. "That's only natural, considering that we encountered an estimated 43 million air travelers in 1987. Some ignore the regulations and others are not even aware of them, despite all our information efforts."

Glosser said the agency uses several methods to find smuggled agricultural items, including trained beagles to sniff out the errant braunschweiger here.

"Finally, we rely on the deterrent effect of penalties," he said. "We fine violators $25 to $50, payable on the spot. We currently collect about $30,000 per month, and we have collected nearly $1.8 million since 1984. Fines are deposited in the U.S. Treasury."

Glosser said the travel industry plays an important role in helping educate the traveling public, including the distribution of booklets about agricultural items that may be brought into the United States.

A brochure also can be obtained by writing: Travelers Tips, USDA-APHIS, G-187 Federal Building, Hyattsville, Md. 20782.

The members reappointed by Agriculture Secretary Richard E. Lyng include five from industry and one representing the public at large.

EARNEST KIKER

Sunday begins Agricultural Week

Kiker

National Agriculture Day will be observed Sunday, which ushers in the beginning of the 1988 spring season. Agriculture Week is March 20-26 and this year's theme is "Honoring America's Providers."

These observances provide a good time to recognize the people, organizations and business people responsible for producing the abundant, high quality food and fiber supply.

A healthy agriculture keeps the wheels of the economy turning. The food and fiber system not only provides reasonably priced nutritious diets and beautiful clothes, but it also means jobs stemming from the production, storage, processing, transportation and sale of food and fiber from farm or ranch to consumer.

Agricultural producers and consumers depend on each other for products and services that are vital to modern businesses and lifestyles. Even though only one out of every 40 Texans is a farmer or rancher, about 25 percent of the state's retail trade business is directly associated with the selling of food and fiber products. In Texas during 1987, cash recpeipts to producers from farm products amounted to an estimated $10 billion. Another $750 million was generated from the agriculturally related industries of timber, fish and fishing, hunting leases, horses and outdoor recreation.

Agriculturally, Texas ranks third nationally behind California and Iowa. Traditionally, Texas is number one in the sales of cattle and calves, cotton, grain sorghum, sheep and wool, goats and mohair and cabbage and spinach.

In addition, farm real estate values in Texas are estimated at $64 billion. With 160,000 farms and ranches in the state, assets average $401,000 per farm, although many commercial family farms have far more than $1 million invested in their farm or ranch.

Many of today's farmers are professional, college-educated, business people with high dollar value assets and capital needs. Farming requires a broad range of skills to operate complicated machinery, use a variety of chemicals and manage animal nutrition, crop production, genetics and marketing with sophisticated computer technology.

Food is still a bargain. Because of the U.S. farmer's productivity, Americans can buy their food for less of their disposable income than a few years ago. Presently, the average American spends about 15 percent of his income on food. Just over a century ago, 61 percent of income was spent on food — the average annual income was $791 and $479 was spent on food. Today's spending on food amounts to 52 percent in China, 36 percent in South Korea and 32 percent in Mexico.

One U.S. farm worker today supplies enough food and fiber for 80 people, 21 of whom live abroad. Producing an abundance of high quality food and fiber is inherent to American agriculture.

As the world's largest exporter, the U.S. has the greatest stake in the changing world market. Developments in any major importing country ultimately affect U.S. agricultural exports and the economic health of related industries.

Pesticides classified by point of entry

Minzenmayer

Farmers consider the eating habits of insect pests as important a tool as the pesticides themselves because most of the pesticides are stomach poisons. These pesticides must be absorbed by, or in contact with, the insect's food source. When Japanese beetles descend upon a vineyard, for instance, they are killed when they consume the stomach poisons with the grape leaves.

Stomach poisons are one of three types of insecticides as classified by their point of entry. The chemicals of the second type are referred to as contact poisons because they enter through the insect's external membrane or cuticle. The third classification includes the fumigants, which enter the insect's respiratory system as a gas through vents known as spiracles.

All insecticides reach and disrupt some vital system or function within the insect. The toxicity of an insecticide is often measured by the strength of its action once it has passed through the physiological barriers within the insect and reaches the vital system it is supposed to shut down.

The biggest obstacle the insecticide must hurdle is the insect's cuticle. This obstacle is bypassed by stomach poisons because the insect ecorts them inside via its mouth. Fumigants also have easy access to the insect's interior organs because an insect in the presence of gaseous insecticides will "inhale" the poison with the air. However, it is important the fumigant penetrate all interior recesses because many insects, such as cockroaches, can close their spiracles after sending a poisonous gas and scurry away.

Of the three, contact poisons have the most difficulty penetrating the insect's cuticle.

Contact poisons must penetrate the four strata of the cuticle-epicuticle, exocuticle, endocuticle, and epidermis. Fatty proteins are a major component of these cuticle layers and chemical manufacturers have exploited this fact by including chemicals in their insecticides capable of breaking down protein molecules. Once inside, the effectiveness of the insecticide will be determined by how it interacts with the insect's bodily enzymes.

In most cases, after having interacted with various enzymes, the insecticide will finally reach its target — the nervous system. This is usually the case because most insecticides developed since World War II act on the nervous system.

The same nervous system possessed by insects can be found in humans on a more grand and complex scale. The central nervous system of an insect is not nearly as complex as a human's, but at the neuron/synapse/effector level, the differences between the two are very slight. Since this is the level at which nerve poisons take effect, there is also very little difference in the symptoms and results of nerve poisoning in insects and humans.

Of course, it usually takes a greater dosage of insecticide to elicit the same lethal effects in a human, but you should never underestimate the nature of chemicals you deal with.

Opening lead: King of ♠

The late S.J. Simon once wrote about a hand where West, on lead against seven no trump doubled and holding two aces, elected to lead fourth-best from his longest suit. The declarer proceeded to run 12 tricks, West discarded the wrong ace and the grand slam rolled home. The writer's comment: "If West did not intend leading one of his aces, he had no sound reason to double 7 NT!"

This story is brought to mind by the above hand from a recent Italian tournament. After a competitive auction North decided, rightly in our opinion, to save in six hearts rather than choose to defend against five spades. North's bid of four diamonds was not an attempt to buy the hand—it was a lead-directing bid should East become declarer. Unfortunately, when partner freely supported diamonds at the five-level, North did not fancy his defensive prospects, and took a "phantom" save.

Obviously, West had never seen the Simon column. He led the king of clubs and East, by following with the five, tried valiantly to tell his partner that a club continuation was not a good idea. However, West did not even consider that East might have a five-card club suit, and so he blithely continued with the ace of clubs.

That ended matters. Declarer ruffed, drew trumps and then ran five diamonds, discarding his lone spade. With nothing left but trumps, he claimed his contract.

Simply counting the hand should have suggested to West that trying to cash the ace of spades was a sound maneuver. He could count 12 tricks for declarer in the red suits, so he had to get two fast tricks. There was no reason, in light of partner's attempt to give count in clubs, to suppose that East had a seven-card spade suit.

Get a taste of a hot Jamaican jam.

Prince Charles attends funeral service for friend who died in avalanche

Charles

SANDHURST, England (AP) - Prince Charles and eight other members of Britain's royal family attended a funeral service for Charles' friend, Maj. Hugh Lindsay, who died in an avalanche that narrowly missed the prince.

The 39-year-old heir to the throne read a eulogy in a steady voice during the service Thursday at the Royal Memorial Chapel on the grounds of the Royal Military Academy in Sandhurst, west of London.

Among the mourners were Lindsay's widow, Sarah, who is six months pregnant with their first child.

The 34-year-old career army officer and former aide to Queen Elizabeth II was skiing with Charles off the main trail at Klosters in the Swiss Alps on March 10 when an avalanche struck.

Charles and other members of the party skied clear and escaped injury, but Lindsay and another friend, Patti Palmer-Tomkinson, were swept away. Mrs. Palmer-Tomkinson survived with broken legs and lung injuries.

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Patrick Taylor decided money would speak louder than words when he was asked to speak to 300 students.

The millionaire oilman stunned his audience at Livingston Middle School by offering to pay all college expenses for any who finish high school with a B average or better.

"This is the deal: Maintain a B average. To do this you can't do drugs. You can't run and play every time you want to, and you can't be involved in crime," said Taylor.

Marie Carter, who heads Livingston's classes designed to help students who have failed grades, said she gaped in amazement at the offer.

"I thought, knowing him, that he'd give us books or treat the kids to a field trip," Ms. Carter said. "But a college education?"

Most of the students are eighth-graders who have failed at least twice.

Taylor limited his offer to colleges in Louisiana and said he hoped to keep educated people in the state.

"That's the future," Taylor said. "The greatest lack Louisiana has is an educated work force. If you challenge these kids' intellect, it will work."

Biden

WASHINGTON (AP) — Doctors inserted a tiny filter into one of Sen. Joseph R. Biden Jr.'s major veins to prevent additional blood clots similar to one that lodged in a lung last week, according to published reports.

Biden, D-Del., was in satisfactory condition at Walter Reed Army Medical Center Thursday night after the device was inserted, according to The Washington Post.

Hospital spokesman Peter Esker told The Morning News in Wilmington, Del., that Biden, 45, was "cheerful and doing well," was eating well and could be expected to remain at the center several days.

A catheter was used to insert the device into the vena cava, a large vein in the abdomen that carries blood to the heart, the News reported.

Esker was off duty and could not be immediately reached by The Associated Press through the Walter Reed switchboard.

Biden, chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee, plans to return to his home near Wilmington to continue recuperating from surgery Feb. 12 to correct an aneurysm on a weak wall of an artery to the brain. A second, smaller aneurysm was found on the opposite side of his brain, but no date has been set for the second surgery.

NEW YORK (AP) — Jazz trumpeter Miles Davis had to cancel concert tour stops in Chicago, Detroit and overseas after being hospitalized for treatment of a leg infection, his publicist said.

Davis, 62, entered a New York City hospital, whose name was not disclosed, on March 3 and was expected to remain under treatment three more weeks, Terrie Williams said Thursday.

Davis injured the leg in France, second stop on a tour that began in Italy. Dates in Chicago and Detroit and in Hawaii, New Zealand and Australia have been canceled, Williams said.

AUGUSTA, Maine (AP) — Gov. John McKernan Jr. has become a hunted man.

Dozens of amateur photographers have flocked to the governor's mansion here hoping to get a shot of McKernan walking to his office at the Capitol as part of a scavenger hunt being sponsored by radio station WMME-FM.

The photograph of Maine's chief executive on the hoof is one of several items needed to win the $1,000 prize in "The Wild Moose Hunt." Others include a losing state lottery ticket, 92 signatures from 92 different people and an air-sickness bag from an airline.

Some shutterbugs have waited up to two hours for the governor to appear since the contest was announced Tuesday. About 150 people showed up Thursday.

The scavenger hunt ends Saturday, but the governor's office announced he would give contestants one more chance to snap his picture between 7:40 a.m. and 8 a.m. today.

NEW YORK (AP) — A book by former White House chief of staff Donald R. Regan promising "fresh insight" into the Reagan administration will be out nine months later than planned, its publisher announced.

Harcourt Brace Jovanovich said in a statement Thursday that Regan delivered the manuscript of "For the Record: From Wall Street to Washington," last week and it would be in stores by May 16.

The book had been scheduled to come out in September but was pushed ahead based "on the revelations and scope" of the manuscript, the publisher said. Harcourt Brace Jovanovich paid $1 million for the publishing rights.

FAMILY MATTERS

Separating siblings beneficial

By JIM MAY

May

DEAR FAMILY: I have two children who fight constantly. I never have a moment's peace. My mother is always saying things like she doesn't know what is wrong, that her kids never fought like this. My husband tries to help. It seems like all that he does his first hour home is discipline the kids. They are glad to see him but immediately start attacking each other.

I am at my wit's end. I can't face the thought of the rest of my life in the middle of a battlefield. Is it possible for two boys four and three to hate each other? They say they hate each other, but I don't know that they do. Do you have any ideas? My husband and I are both exhausted. As parents, are we we doing a bad job? — DEFEATED

DEAR DEFEATED: First of all let me say that it would be very difficult for anyone to raise two children that close in age. The developmental research findings are very clear about that. We know that during the first 36 months of life, there are several times that a child turns away from — and back to — his/her mother as a primary interest. If he or she has to share "mother" at that time, then real problems can erupt. The problem is compounded when, developmentally, the other sibling is naturally turning toward mother too.

The solution that seems to get the most positive immediate results is separation. That is, make a conscious effort to keep the boys separated most of the time. This effort requires a lot of organization initially, but then it normally works pretty smoothly. Some mothers have told me that they literally schedule each child's activities (school, mother's day-out, playmates, etc.) such that one child is away from the other as much as possible. What they have reported is that such efforts tend to result in the children having their own sets of friends and interests. Often children that are close in age are forced to "share" long before they are ready. So a little distance helps a lot.

The other step that I would suggest in the short term is to stop the "discipline ritual" when your husband comes home. Refuse to reward attention-getting behavior by dad being involved with the offending child in disciplining him. Discipline should take the form of the time-out chair.

Their reward (positive consequence) for playing with dad rather than fighting over dad is his time with them in some activity. Discuss with the boys the activity of the day. Make a list, each choosing an activity on alternate days, and then do it. When there is no fighting, both can play with dad. When there is fighting, the logical consequence of the fighting is the time-out chair (being deprived of time with dad).

Don't be discouraged. I know it's tough. Research says its tough. Hang in there and keep them apart, then one day they will start enjoying each other's company a little more.

DEAR FAMILY: How do you help your kid with a teacher? My son is in the seventh grade at a local school and he has problems with a certain teacher. I think that the teacher has something against him. Does it do any good to talk to the principal? What should I do? — CONFUSED

DEAR CONFUSED: I would call the school counselor and ask him or her to arrange with all of your son's teachers. Go to the meeting with an open mind. Try to find out what the exact problem or problems are. I suggest meeting with all of the teachers at once (if possible) in order for you to get a more complete view of your son's behavior. This approach also avoids a direct confrontation with the teacher. Direct confrontations only serve to create more problems for the child.

Treat the meeting as a "fact-finding" activity. Show that you are concerned in your son's welfare and that you are willing to help. Convey a positive "let's solve this thing" attitude and I think that you will see some positive results. Remember, in most cases both parties are at least a little guilty of doing something. Let all the teachers know that you are interested and available if they need you.

Moving furniture breaks boredom

By ERMA BOMBECK

Bombeck

There's nothing official about it, so don't look for it on your calendar, but spring is National Furniture Moving time. I know this because I'm a poster child for it.

The furniture moving urge comes when the white sales are over and there is nothing to live for. The dog looks fat.

I'm restless, irritable and bored with winter. There is only one cure for all this. MOVE THE FURNITURE!

I suspect rearranging things is a feminine trait. At least, I have never heard a man look around a room and say, "I wonder how the piano would look on the other side of the room? It may throw my back out, but it'll be worth it."

To many husbands, women who move furniture are an enigma. Men have never figured out how a little bit of a woman who can't zip up her own dress can balance a dresser mirror in one hand, climb an extension ladder and drive a nail in the wall with a mallet.

The only way I can explain it is we're like Olympic athletes who, in the face of agony and defeat, can dig down deep and bring to the surface strength and courage we never knew we had before. My gold medal is a queen-sized mattress I carried down a crooked stairway while wearing a chenille robe and thongs.

Last week I rearranged everything.

"What happened to the TV set?" asked my husband.

"It's in the den."

"But it had cable, and my favorite chair is gone, there is no light anywhere to read by, and I found my exercise bicycle in the pantry."

I'm fighting for my life and he complains of a few inconveniences.

Legislation needed to deal with AIDS crimes

By ROBERT P. STUDER
Copley News Service

Shortly before he died of acquired immune deficiency syndrome, Gaetan Dugas, the Canadian flight attendant believed to be one of the principal introducers of the AIDS virus into the United States, told Selma Dritz, a San Francisco public health official, that "It's my right to do what I want with my body..."

She had asked him to stop spreading the disease. Although he had been linked by the Centers for Disease Control to more than 200 AIDS cases, Dugas refused.

In another study of AIDS carriers conducted by the University of San Francisco Center for AIDS Prevention Studies, "a sizable minority of sexually active gay and bisexual men said that they do not intend to tell their partners if they are infected with the virus that causes AIDS."

The San Francisco study, headed by Dr. Susan Kegeles, a health psychologist at the University of California at San Francisco, surveyed 300 individuals who had come to the center there for AIDS antibody tests.

"Although the large majority of those surveyed intended to tell their partners if they were infected with the human immunodeficiency virus (HIV) which causes AIDS, 12 percent said they would not tell their primary sexual partners, and 27 percent said they would not tell their non-primary partners," Kegeles said. And, she added, the responses from heterosexuals were quite similar. About 25 percent of 64 sexually active, non-monogamous heterosexuals surveyed also said they would not tell their non-primary partners if they were infected with HIV.

LOST IN THE recent fervor about AIDS testing, points out Douglas J. Besharov, a resident scholar at the American Enterprise Institute and an adjunct professor of law at Georgetown and American universities, in a study distributed by the American Legislative Exchange Council, "is the question of the obligation of individuals who test positive to protect others from this life-taking disease.

"Until now, most experts have assured us that the education and counseling of victims will be enough to prevent dangerous behavior. Yet, there is troubling evidence that a small minority of AIDS victims either are intent on infecting others — or simply do not care enough to change their sexual practices."

While most studies, the Exchange Council paper points out, document a big reduction in risky sexual behavior by homosexual men, at the same time, most also show that knowledge of positive test results does not affect the sexual behavior of a small core of AIDS victims — they do not reduce the number of their sex partners or the number of times they engage in unprotected intercourse.

IN A JOHN HOPKINS study of 1,000 gay men, two years after being tested for AIDS more than 15 percent still did not want to know the result. (Initially, 30 percent hadn't wanted to know.) And in a Miami study, 16 of 28 AIDS patients continued to have unprotected sex for from one to three years; 13 of their steady partners later tested positive. Studies in London and Paris, meanwhile, showed similarly disturbing behavior.

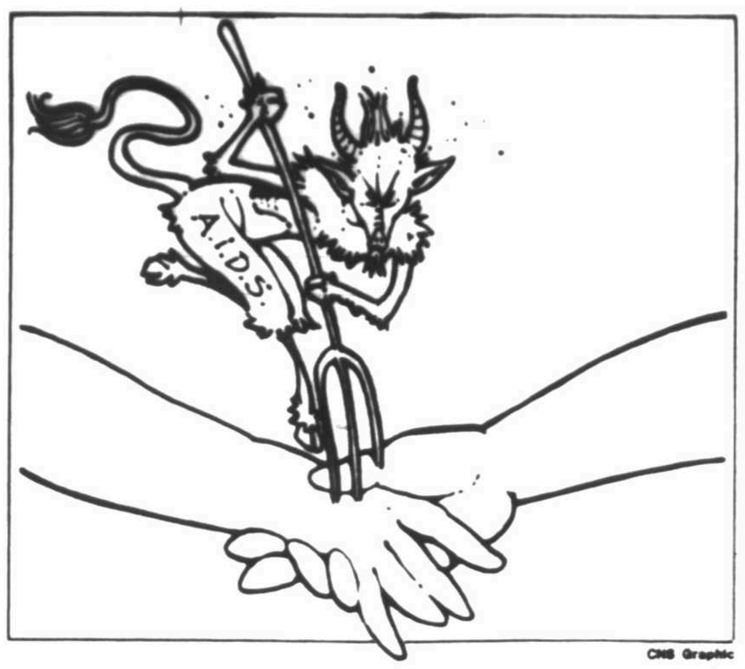

"The findings," Kegeles said in San Francisco, "underscore the need for sexually active individuals to protect their health by following 'safe sex' practices, since not all sexual partners can be depended upon to be forthright about their antibody status."

Because California law, she added, mandates anonymity for test-seekers at the center where the study was conducted, researchers do not know how many of those surveyed actually were HIV-positive or if they continued to engage in risky sex practices.

The message, though, warns Besharov, is clear: "Positive test results do not prevent recklessly exposing others to this dread disease."

AS A RESULT, some of these cases are beginning to show up in legal proceedings. Pfc. Adrian Morris, 27, of Fort Huachuca, Ariz., was the first person prosecuted for exposing others to AIDS through sexual contact. Last May, he was charged under the Uniform Code of Military Justice with aggravated assault based on allegations that he had sexual relations with three other soldiers (one man and two women, one of whom was his fiancee) without informing them that he carried the AIDS virus.

"Rock Hudson's estate has been sued by a man claiming that he is Hudson's former homosexual lover and that Hudson continued having sexual relations with him after knowing he had AIDS."

CNS Graphic

"Sometimes," the study adds, "there is a deliberate attempt to infect others." On June 24, a Minneapolis jury convicted prison inmate James Moore, 44, an AIDS carrier, on two counts of using his teeth and mouth as a deadly weapon by biting two guards during a scuffle. He now faces up to 20 years in prison.

In Flint, Mich., an AIDS victim was arrested after a traffic incident when he spat on four police officers, saying that "he was going to die and would take them with him."

MOST STATE LAWS, however, is unprepared for such crimes and usually is responding to the most recent news story. A California bill, for example, would make donating blood after testing positive a felony punishable by six years in prison. Nevada, which has long legalized prostitution, has passed a law providing 20-year jail sentences for prostitutes who continue to ply their trade after learning that they test positive.

More, however, is needed, the Legislative Exchange Council paper advises lawmakers in the nation. "States, for example, could make it a felony to expose others deliberately or recklessly to the AIDS virus, whether or not the disease is transmitted.

And one legislative approach to deal with the consent problem in non-marital situations, already passed in the New Jersey Assembly, makes it a felony for those who know that they have AIDS to "commit an act of sexual penetration."

On the other hand, Besharov points out, "possible transmission through voluntary sexual contact requires special legislation because of the twin problems of consent and assumption of risk.

However, Besharov advises, "rather than force litigants to press for such judge-made law, which is uncertain, time-consuming and expensive, states should adopt broad remedial legislation. Criminal penalties for deliberately exposing others to the AIDS virus will not eradicate this frightening disease, but they will certainly be a step toward containing its spread."

Scientists expect to learn method to thwart AIDS

EDITOR'S NOTE: Scientists who are just beginning to understand the AIDS virus are becoming optimistic that they can find a way to thwart it. Here is a report on some of the things they have learned.

By DANIEL Q. HANEY
Associated Press

BOSTON — Virologists have learned a lot about their enemy, the AIDS bug. It is devious and elusive, stunningly elaborate, yet self-controlled, even finicky.

It insinuates itself into the body's blueprints, its genes. It stays there forever. No one can imagine a way to get rid of it.

In its sly way, the virus does nothing outwardly bad at first. For five years, 10 years or longer, it may burrow deep, hiding, making a grudgingly slow stream of new copies of itself. The body's half-hearted attempt to kill it gets nowhere. And the virus's unsuspecting host feels fine.

But something evil is happening. The immune system is eroding. Then, as though responding to some signal, the virus springs furiously to life. It replicates at an astonishing rate. And it wipes out one brand of blood cell that is essential for health and life.

Everyone agrees: HIV is an impressive foe.

Genes with names like tat and art rev it up and dampen it down. With each new discovery of its florid system of checks and balances, with each new example of the virus's guile, the AIDS story seems only to get worse.

This is a virus like no other. It is designed through evolution to elude the body's own defenses, the blood-borne radar and missiles of its immune system. Worse, it is designed to attack that system and destroy it. In time, it does.

"It is what it is, and we are beginning to understand it," says Dr. William Haseltine of the Dana-Farber Cancer Institute in Boston.

"What we should understand is how bad it is. The news is very bad, and it's going to get a lot worse before it gets better."

Yet Haseltine and others who dissect the parts from which the misery may yield what they are seeking also give them reason to be optimistic.

Labs headed by Haseltine and Wong-Staal, a colleague of [illegible] co-discoverer Robert Gallo, made many of the key early discoveries of how HIV works, and they have been joined by several other groups in picking apart the virus. New details pile up quickly.

From this investigation, a profile of the enemy emerges.

AIDS stands for acquired immune deficiency syndrome, but in its short history, that name has already become outdated. AIDS is not just a collection of symptoms but a disease with a clear cause, a microbe called HIV, the human immunodeficiency virus.

The virus lives in the body's fluids — blood, semen and vaginal secretions, among others. Packed virus floats about freely in these liquids, but it's also carried about inside white blood cells. Among the most plentiful of these infected cells are monocytes and macrophages, scavengers that eat bacteria and other bits of useless and dangerous matter.

AIDS spreads when the free virus or infected cells pass from one person to another. Blood-contaminated hypodermic needles can carry them directly into the bloodstream. More often, however, the virus is passed during sexual intercourse, perhaps when virus-laden blood cells cross the mucous membranes of the genitals.

The immediate goal of their work is to figure out how the virus works. How it latches onto its target. How it gets inside. How it takes over and makes new copies of itself. How it kills.

INS to broadcast amnesty appeal to aliens

EL PASO (AP) — The U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service will take to the airwaves in an effort to get more aliens to tune in to immigration amnesty before the May 4 deadline.

The INS, through the Dallas-based Spanish Information Service, intends to blanket the state with a three-hour broadcast message starting at 9 a.m. CST March 26.

The program will originate at the INS Legalization Center in Dallas and will be carried on 14 Spanish-language radio stations statewide and another station in Albuquerque, N.M.

Most or all the stations will hold live remote broadcasts from their local legalizations centers and each will go statewide for a few minutes in a phone linkup, INS spokesman John Armistead said Thursday in Dallas.

"We're going to have a big shindig. It's going to be a giant promotion," said Zoltan Csanyi, news director for KAMA-AM, an El Paso Spanish-language station. "We're working with the INS to promote that fact that the amnesty deadline is near."

KAMA will broadcast live from the El Paso legalization center, Csanyi said.

The promotion is for people "who haven't been listening to the news or who have been putting it off," Csanyi said. "We're here to tell them time is running out and they have only a few days."

Under the Immigration Reform and Control Act of 1986, people who have lived in the United States illegally since before Jan. 1, 1982, can apply for amnesty and obtain temporary residency and the right to work legally. But they must apply by May 4.

Amnesty recipients later can apply for permanent residency and eventually apply for U.S. citizenship.

INS officials also are answering questions from potential amnesty applicants on live call-in radio shows during the last eight weeks of the application period.

About 20 radio stations belonging to the SIS network carry the weekly call-in show, which will move to a different location most weeks.

STATE IN BRIEF

Priest accused of molesting boys surrenders to officials

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A Catholic priest accused of sexually molesting two brothers surrendered to authorities Thursday and was released on personal recognizance bonds after pleading innocence to the charges.

The Rev. Federico Fernandez, 39, who had been at a treatment facility in New Mexico, surrendered to State District Judge Susan Reed Thursday morning and pleaded innocent to charges of sexually molesting the boys.

The judge set a $10,000 personal recognizance bond on each charge and a June 27 trial date.

The judge allowed Fernandez to return to the Foundation House in Jemez Springs, N.M., but said he must report weekly to the county bond program office.

Fernandez was indicted Tuesday on charges of fondling two brothers, then 10 and 16, in 1987, said Assistant District Attorney Juan Chavira.

The boys' family said they met Aug. 31 with Archbishop Patrick Flores about the incident.

The next month an attorney and a priest were sent to the family's house and asked them not to go the media or authorities because the matter was being taken care of internally, the family said.

The case was not reported to police until December.

Suspect convicted of assault

EL PASO (AP) — A suspect in the slayings of five women whose bodies were found buried in the desert last fall has been convicted of an unrelated sexual assault.

David Leonard Wood, 30, was convicted of sexually assaulting a 27-year-old woman last summer near where the five bodies were found in the desert of northeast El Paso.

Monday a sixth body was found buried nearby, but the remains have not been identified.

Wood betrayed little emotion when the verdict was read. His attorney refused comment.

The victim, a prostitute and heroin addict, testified that Wood assaulted her after she accepted a ride from him last summer.

Jury investigating sheriff

DENTON (AP) — A grand jury Thursday decided to continue its investigation after hearing testimony from a sheriff's candidate who said he was offered a job as chief deputy in exchange for quitting the race.

Republican candidate Kirby Robinson told the Denton County grand jury that he was offered the post by an adviser to Sheriff Randy Kaisner. Robinson faces Kaisner in an April 12 runoff election.

Former chief deputy David Klundt, who resigned three days after the alleged offer, also testified.

District Attorney Jerry Cobb said the grand jury will continue to look into the matter next week, but no further subpoenas will be issued. The grand jury will consider the matter again next Thursday.

Those who testified declined to comment as they left the jury room.

Neither Kaisner nor jeweler Jack Ehrhart, who has said he made the offer without Kaisner's knowledge, were asked to testify.

LA cabbie taken for a ride

AUSTIN (AP) — Authorities say an Austin man who operates a shelter for the homeless convinced a cab driver in Los Angeles to drive him 1,350 miles to Austin, then wrote a hot check for the fare.

Officials said the 25-year-old man is wanted for questioning in that episode, and has been charged with theft by check, a Class B misdemeanor, for writing other bad checks in Austin.

Loyola beats Wyoming in record-setter

Associated Press

Paul Westhead is a tough man to please. Not even a 119-point winning effort by his Loyola Marymount Lions in the opening round of the NCAA Tournament could satisfy the coach.

"I wasn't pleased," Westhead said after watching the 18th-ranked Lions outduel No. 13 Wyoming 119-115 Thursday in the highest-scoring game in tournament history. "We were a little slow today. We have to get the shot off quicker, we have to get it off within seven seconds."

NCAA

Why not? The nation's most potent offense is built on an unrelenting attack combined with an aggressive pressing defense that often gets the ball back into Loyola's hands for more shots.

"I played this system every one of my 18 years of college coaching and I haven't been here (in the tournament) 18 times," Westhead said. "So the variable is the players, I haven't changed."

Loyola's best players in the opening round of the West Regional at Salt Lake City were Bo Kimble with 29 points, Mike Yoest (23) and Hank Gathers (19). The Lions, 28-3, went over their 110.4-point season's average, helped greatly by eight points in the final 45 seconds of the first half.

"We always play like that," Gathers said. "Playing for Coach Westhead and his style is best compared to going to an amusement park. There are so many different rides and things to do. You're just overwhelmed with having fun."

Can the Lions overwhelm North Carolina, their next opponent?

"We were a little tired today and can play sharper than that," he said. "With one game under our belt, we'll play much better basketball. I just don't know if it will be good enough to beat North Carolina."

In the other West Regional games, it was No. 7 North Carolina 83, North Texas State 65; No. 10 Michigan 63, Boise State 58, and Florida 62, St. John's 59.

In the Midwest at South Bend, Ind., DePaul routed Wichita State 83-62; No. 20 Kansas State took La Salle 66-53; No. 3 Purdue beat Fairleigh Dickinson 94-79, and Memphis State downed Baylor 75-60.

The East at Chapel Hill, N.C., saw Southern Methodist beat Notre Dame 83-75; No. 5 Duke over Boston University 85-69; Rhode Island over Missouri 87-80, and No. 9 Syracuse beating North Carolina A&T 69-55.

At Atlanta in the Southeast Regional, it was Louisville 70, Oregon State 61; No. 19 Brigham Young 98, North Carolina Charlotte 92 in overtime; No. 4 Oklahoma 94, Tennessee-Chattanooga 66, and Auburn 90, Bradley 88.

The first round continued today. At Hartford, Conn., it was Georgia Tech vs. Iowa State, Indiana vs. Richmond, Temple vs. Lehigh and Georgetown vs. Louisiana State.

In the Southeast at Cincinnati, it was Villanova vs. Arkansas, Illinois vs. Texas-San Antonio, Maryland vs. California-Santa Barbara and Kentucky vs. Southern University.

In the Midwest at Lincoln, Neb., it was Pittsburgh vs. Eastern Michigan, Vanderbilt vs. Utah State, North Carolina State vs. Murray State and Kansas vs. Xavier, Ohio.

Out West at Los Angeles, it was Arizona vs. Cornell, Seton Hall vs. Texas-El Paso, Iowa vs. Florida State and Nevada-Las Vegas vs. Southwest Missouri State.

WEST

North Carolina rode 29 points by All-American J.R. Reid, two short of his career high. The Tar Heels took a 21-8 lead and never were threatened.

Ransino Smith added 15 points for the Tar Heels, who are playing in the NCAA tournament for the 14th consecutive year. North Texas State, regular-season and tournament champion in the Southland Conference, was making its first NCAA tournament appearance.

Michigan, 25-7, nearly blew a 19-point lead, but held on when Boise's Brian King missed an off-balance 3-point attempt to tie it in the final seconds. All-American Gary Grant, who had just nine points, and backcourt mate Glen Rice, with eight, struggled for the Wolverines. But Loy Vaught scored nine of his 13 points in the second half.

Florida led all the way against St. John's until Greg Harvey tied it with 16 seconds to go. So Vernon Maxwell came down court and hit the game-winning 3-pointer with eight seconds to play.

Maxwell had 18 points for the undermanned Gators, 24-11, who suited up just eight players.

MIDWEST

There were no surprises or close games at South Bend, Ind.

DePaul had the easiest time of all. Leading 10-6, Kevin Edwards scored 10 points during a 16-2 run that put away Wichita State. The Blue Demons, 22-7, led by at least 10 the rest of the way and even built up a 22-point edge.

Cold, windy weather and ties mark opening round

Three high school golfers — including two from Midland schools — are locked in a three-way tie for first after opening round action Thursday at the Midland Invitational Tournament.

Midland Lee's Randy Milby, Midland High's Mark Smith and Craig Adams of Lubbock High all shot an even 80 after the first 18 holes at the second annual MIT. First round action was held at Green Trees Country Club.

Last year's tournament winner, Amarillo High, is in a tie for first with Abilene Cooper after one round. The Sandies and the Cougars both shot 342 on the first day, one stroke better than Andrews, last year's second place finisher. Plainview is currently in fourth place with a 345.

BOTH MIDLAND and Lee fared well on the first day. Lee is in fifth with a 348, Midland High is four shots behind Lee, and in sixth, with a 352.

Aside from Lee's Milby, the Rebels have three other linksters with legitimate medal hopes. Sophomore Vince Henderson, on the Lee No. 2 team, is five shots behind the co-leaders with an 85. J.J. King and Brian Baker both shot an 86 after first round play.

AS ALWAYS this time of year, the weather was a factor in the quality of play, but coaches from the two Midland schools differ on what players suffered from most: the cold or the wind.

"(The wind) has added at least 10 to 12 shots on everybody's score," Lee Coach Ronnie Stephens said. "The cold's not affecting them the way the wind is."

"The cold is more of an affect than the wind is," Midland Coach John Ford said. "The wind's about the same as (Wednesday) and we shot a 307 as a team (Wednesday). The cold is a lot more effective to a good muscle swing."

Co-leader Milby brushed both the cold and wind aside to hit his score of 80. Although his score is seven over on the 72 par course, Milby said it was his short shots that landed him at the top of the leader board.

"I had a good short game," Milby said. "Chipped well. A couple of birdies helped a little bit. The down wind holes weren't that hard, but the par fours on the front nine, you couldn't get to 'em."

Milby, a senior and nine year golfer, finished in eighth in last year's tournament, shooting a 159 in the two day event.

THE HIGHEST placing returning golfer from the 1987 tournament, Amarillo's Grant Russell, who finished fifth, is currently in a three-way tie for fifth with a one-day total of 84.

Andrews, a 4A school, continued its success against larger schools, evidence of that coming from its first day total of 343, good enough for third place, only one stroke behind Amarillo and Cooper. Head coach George Boynton said his players were properly prepared for both the stiff wind and even stiffer competition.

"They were tough," Boynton said. "That's what I told them before they got off the bus."

On the wind and cold, Boynton said it was a combination of the two that made play especially rough: "If it's just the cold you can handle it. Or if it's just the wind. But when it's both, it's a factor. There are some quality teams here shooting some high numbers. On a calm day, there are teams here that'd be shooting under 300."

Andrews has three players who have a shot at medalist honors — Gym Bice (82), Guy Hester (83) and Brett Boynton (85).

With all players hoping for calmer winds and warmer temperatures, final round action got under way at 9 a.m. this morning at the Ranchland Hills Country Club. The 9 o'clock tee-off time was an hour later than originally scheduled. Lee's Coach Stephens said the delay came about due to the possibility of freezing conditions that threatened the Midland area Thursday night.

UNM tops Pepperdine in NIT

Associated Press

New Mexico, which soared to the heights at times this season with victories over ranked teams such as Arizona and Wyoming, got plenty of help from down under in its first-round victory over Pepperdine in the National Invitation Tournament.

Luc Longley, a 7-foot-1 freshman from Australia, keyed a second-half rally Thursday night that helped the Lobos to an 88-75 victory in a game played at Albuquerque.

"He was playing very well," Pepperdine Coach Jim Harrick said of Longley, who came off the bench after starting center Rob Loeffel picked up his third foul in the second half.

Longley, who will try out for the Australian Olympic team later this year, responded with 12 points and nine rebounds.

"He's big, very big, and I'm not sure we've played against guys that big all year," Harrick said.

Longley's contribution, along with that of senior Hunter Greene — who led the Lobos with 25 points — was a bonus as far as New Mexico Coach Gary Colson was concerned.

"If he ever gets tunnel vision on making it (in basketball), we've got us a bonafide player there," Colson said of Longley.

In other games, it was Connecticut 62, West Virginia 57 in overtime; Georgia 53, Georgia State 48; Louisiana Tech 68, Arkansas-Little Rock 56; Evansville 68, Utah 65; Boston College 73, Siena 65; Houston 69, Fordham 61, and Oregon 81, Santa Clara 65.

Tonight, it will be Illinois State at Cleveland State, Tennessee at Middle Tennessee State, Long Beach State at Stanford, Virginia Commonwealth at Marshall, Northeast Louisiana at Arkansas State, Clemson at Southern Mississippi and New Orleans at Colorado State.

How many strikes must he throw to win Cy Young award?

Murray

KISSIMMEE, Fla. — The best pitcher never to have won a Cy Young Award shifted in his seat and looked around the Houston Astros' locker room.

"I think I finished second in the voting once. I'm not sure," drawled Lynn Nolan Ryan.

Let's see. Could that have been the year he pitched two no-hitters, won 21 games, had an earned-run average of 2.27, struck out 383 batters — the most anybody ever has — and pitched 326 innings?

Naw. Jim Palmer won it that year. He won 23 games, struck out 158 and pitched 296 innings. Nolan might not have been close.

Maybe it was the next year, 1974. Nolan pitched another no-hitter, won 22 games, struck out 367, had an ERA of 2.89, pitched 333 innings and allowed 221 hits.

Not very likely. Catfish Hunter won it that year with 25 victories. He struck out 143, pitched 318 innings and only allowed 268 hits.

What about 1972, when Ryan first struck out 300 batters — 329 to be precise — fourth all-time behind Sandy Koufax, Rube Waddell and Bob Feller; won 19 games, had an ERA of 2.28 and pitched 284 innings?

Forget it. Gaylord Perry won that year. Perry had 24 wins, 343 innings and 234 strikeouts.

How about the strike-shortened year when Ryan pitched his fifth no-hitter, had an ERA of 1.69, struck out, like, his 3,900th batter and pitched one of his two-hitters in the playoffs?

No, Fernando Valenzuela won that year. He had an ERA of 2.48, struck out 180 and won 13.

WHY WOULD they ever give Nolan Ryan the Cy Young Award? He has only struck out 1,000 more batters than Walter Johnson did. He has struck out 400 more than anyone else ever did. He has struck out 10 or more batters a game 174 times. He averages 9.4 strikeouts a game. The only other pitcher who averaged more than nine was Koufax.

Besides his 5 no-hitters, Ryan has had 9 one-hitters, 18 two-hitters and 26 three-hitters.

Give him the Cy Young Award? Don't be absurd! Not when you have pitchers like Pete Vuckovich, Steve Stone, LaMarr Hoyt and Steve Bedrosian to give it to. You don't give the Cy Young Award to a guy just because he has set or broken 38 major league records. After all, did Chaplin ever win the Academy Award?

The best 41-year-old sore-armed pitcher in the big leagues last year shifted in his locker-room seat.

"Do I think about it? Oh, not really. What I do think about is, I'd really like to get in one more World Series. I'd like to start a World Series game."

Nolan Ryan is more than an athletic marvel. He's a medical marvel. His glove should go to Cooperstown, but his arm should go to the Smithsonian.

It is a fact of baseball life that the fastball is the most perishable commodity in the game. It's not only supposed to go late in life, it's supposed to go late in a game.

NOLAN RYAN'S never has. You had to get Nolan in the early innings or not at all. The velocity increased as the game wore on. Your only hope against Ryan was that the ball moved at such speed that it tended to want to orbit like something filled with liquified oxygen and a booster.

The first guy Nolan Ryan ever pitched to, he hit on top of the head. The second guy, he broke his arm. The third guy went down to his coach before going to bat and said, "Do I have to?"

Last year, at 40 and with a throbbing elbow, and a limit on the number of pitches he was allowed in a game, Nolan Ryan led the major leagues in strikeouts for the sixth time in his career. He led it in ERA for the second time in his career. He became the first player in history not to win the Cy Young Award after leading the league in strikeouts and ERA.

So, what else is new?

On Sept. 9 last year, against San Francisco, Nolan Ryan, for the 22nd time in his career, struck out more than 15 batters in a game when he struck out 16 Giants — including Mike Aldrete for the 4,000th strikeout of his career.

Nobody else, his age had ever struck out as many batters in a year, 270.

What made this more remarkable was that the Houston general manager, Dick Wagner, deferring to Nolan's sore elbow the year before, had decreed a 110-pitch limit on Ryan's turns on the mound.

For the first time in his career, Ryan had no complete games, but it didn't stop him from leading the world in strikeouts again. He was fifth in the Cy Young balloting.

FASTBALL PITCHERS are supposed to go to the artifices of pitching as they get into their late 30's and 40's. Nolan Ryan still smokes up a ball in the 90- to 95-m.p.h. area range. He averages over 95. It has been said his changeup is 88.

He is the only guy in history whose fastball, certifiably, on sophisticated measurement equipment, registered 100 m.p.h. — and it did it seven times.

NCAA tourney made for television

By RICK WARNER
AP Sports Writer

Temple, Arizona, Purdue and Oklahoma are the top seeds, but the only sure winner in the NCAA basketball tournament is CBS.

TV

Interest in the event has grown tremendously since 1982, when CBS first televised the tournament. This year, the network will broadcast 47 hours of tournament action, including a record 10 hours of primetime coverage.

"It's so perfect for television," commentator Billy Packer said. "It's almost as if you sat down and tried to make a made-for-TV event."

Packer said the addition of the 3-point shot and expansion of the field to 64 teams have contributed to the basketball boom.

"There's a uniqueness to the tournament in the sense that it encompasses every town in the United States," he said. "You have great grass-root support, which was created when it went to 64 teams. If we were still back at 16, no way it would work for television."

Another plus, Packer said, is that the tournament "doesn't drag on forever."

"It's three weeks and, boom, you're at the Final Four," he said. "The Super Bowl, in contrast, is a single game that drags on for three weeks. This hits quick, and then it's gone."

CBS' new three-year, $160 million contract with the NCAA reflects the growth of the tournament. The network's original three-year deal was worth only $48 million.

CBS will show a tripleheader of second-round games on Saturday and Sunday.

GOLF IS COMING to pay-per-view television.

The event is "The Desert Scramble," a one-day event pitting Americans Jack Nicklaus and Lee Trevino against Australian Greg Norman and Welshman Ian Woosnam.

The $300,000 best-ball competition will be held April 25 on the Cochise Golf Course at Scottsdale, Ariz. It will be shown live on pay-per-view outlets from 6-8:30 p.m.

Until now, the only sports or quasi-sports available on per-per-view have been boxing and professional wrestling. However, the success of the "Skins Game" on NBC and the rapid growth of pay-per-view have convinced "Desert Scramble" backers that the timing is right.

Viewers will be charged $12.95 to watch the event. Choice Entertainment, which will distribute the program to cable operators, is estimating an audience of 4 million.

Injuries continue to haunt Clark

Associated Press

Jack Clark's leg is hurt and so, apparently, are George Bell's feelings.

Clark, the oft-injured New York Yankees' slugger, had to leave Thursday's exhibition game against the Baltimore Orioles after suffering a torn tendon in his left leg. The Yankees said he will be out for three weeks.

Bell, the disgruntled Toronto star, failed to appear at the plate in the first inning of the Blue Jays' game against Boston. Bell is unhappy because the Blue Jays want to use him as a designated hitter and he wants to play the outfield.

Clark hurt himself while running to first base after hitting a home run in the second inning.

"I ran three or four steps real hard because I thought it might hit the wall, and I felt something," he said later. "It's still sore."

Clark, who signed a two-year, $3 million contract with the Yankees after playing out his option with St. Louis, has been plagued by injuries throughout his career. He is still recovering from a torn ligament in his right ankle, which he injured last September.

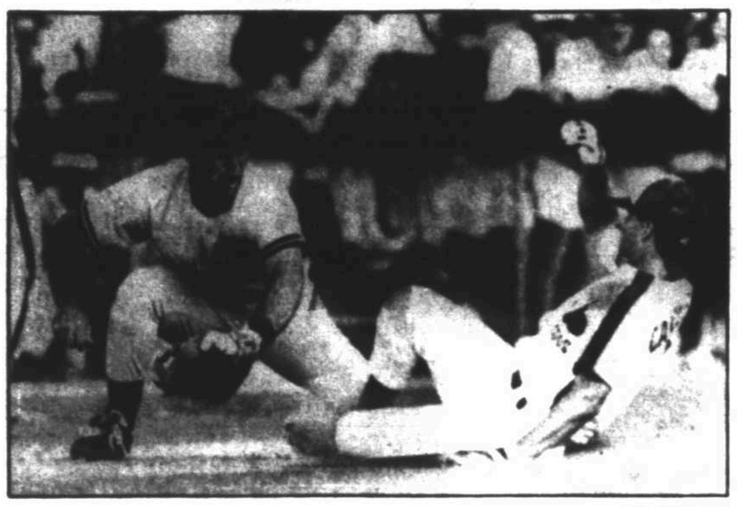

Bell was due to hit against Steve Curry with two on and one out in the first, but he never appeared in the on-deck circle. After a short delay, Willie Upshaw came up to hit for Bell.

Spotted in the clubhouse about 10 minutes later, Bell refused to comment.

Gord Ash, the team's director of player personnel, said there was some dispute over Bell's readiness to play. He would not elaborate.

Manager Jimy Williams, who stormed off the field in the first inning of the exhibition game in pursuit of Bell, fined him an unspecified amount and suspended him for the rest of the day.

"He kind of backed me into a corner and gave me no other alternative," Williams said. "He will have to make an adjustment ... I'm the manager. I'll get my way. All I'm interested in is what is best for our club. Period."

Expos' second baseman Casey Candaele puts tag on Yankees Jeff Moronko as he attempts to stretch a single into a double.

Mets 5, Braves 2

Kevin McReynolds' three-run homer capped a four-run fourth inning that carried New York over Atlanta.

Starter Ron Darling worked five scoreless innings for the Mets, lowering his spring earned run average to 0.75. Darling has not allowed a walk in 12 innings.

Graig Nettles' pinch-hit double in the seventh drove in Atlanta's only runs.

Rangers 3, Pirates 2

Bobby Witt pitched six scoreless innings and Jerry Browne scored a run with a suicide squeeze bunt as Texas downed Pittsburgh.

Witt allowed seven hits and two walks while striking out one.

Texas scored two runs in the fifth inning off Pirates' right-hander Mike Dunne. Browne's suicide squeeze scored Cecil Espy, who had doubled and gone to third on Witt's double. Witt later scored on a double by Scott Fletcher.

Blue Jays 8, Red Sox (ss) 2

Jesse Barfield drove in five runs to lead Toronto over Boston.

Barfield drove in three runs with a bases-loaded double in the first inning and had a two-run single in the third.

Boston outfielder Mike Greenwell was taken to the hospital for X-rays of a possible broken foot after he fouled a pitch off his right foot during the third inning.

Expos 6, White Sox 5

Jack Daugherty scored on shortstop Steve Bertolani's ninth-inning error, capping a four-run rally that gave Montreal the victory.

The Expos scored all four runs with two out. Mitch Webster tied the game with a two-run, bases-loaded single that sent Daugherty to third. Alonzo Powell followed with a grounder to Bertolani, whose throw pulled the first baseman off the bag and allowed Daugherty to score the winning run.

Reds 3, Red Sox 2

Joe Oliver scored the winning run on Dennis Lamp's balk in the seventh inning as Cincinnati rallied to beat Boston.

Cardinals 8, Astros 7

Mike Fitzgerald had three hits, including an RBI single in the 11th inning that gave St. Louis the victory. After the game, Fitzgerald and several other Cardinals were reassigned to the team's minor-league complex.

The Astros sent the game into extra innings by rallying from a 6-2 deficit against Cardinals reliever Todd Worrell, who gave up five hits and five earned runs in two innings. Pat Keady hit a two-out, two-run homer off Worrell in the ninth to tie the game 7-7.

Orioles 3, Yankees 2

Jim Dwyer drew a bases-loaded walk in the ninth inning, giving Baltimore the victory.

Three Orioles pitchers — Mark Thurmond, Jose Mesa and Tom Niedenfuer — held the Yankees to five hits. Thurmond allowed only one hit in five innings, the homer by Clark in the second.

Dodgers 6, Phillies 5

Rookie outfielder Mike Devereaux singled in the winning run with one out in the bottom of the ninth inning to give the Dodgers their 13th victory in 16 spring games.

John Shelby's two-run single sparked a five-run first inning against Philadelphia starter David Palmer.

George Vukovich hit a two-run home run for the Phillies, while Von Hayes and John Russell added solo shots in Philadelphia's 13-hit attack.

Cubs 5, Indians 3

Ryne Sandberg and Paul Noce hit homers and Rolando Roomes had three hits to lead the Chicago Cubs past Cleveland.

Sandberg's solo home run in the third inning off Cleveland starter Greg Swindell tied the game 1-1.

Ike Pate recalls Oak Creek years

By OTIS FRANCIS

OAK CREEK LAKE (AP) — After 27 years, Ike Pate is turning over the property lease and operation of his Sportsman's Lodge to his son. But Pate says he still will be a booster and protector of Oak Creek Lake.

Since Pate started running his convenience store-bait shop in 1960 he has argued against introduction of a fish called the grass carp into the lake, has promoted the lake in columns for several Texas newspapers, and he has survived storms, drought and water-blocked access.

Along with running the Lodge, he has rented space for up to 75 mobile homes and recreational vehicles, and until recent years rented cabins to fishermen and weekenders.

The lake, about 35 miles south of Sweetwater on either side of Texas Highway 70, is owned by the city of Sweetwater and is its primary source of water. It receives run-off from Oak, Eagle, Bossier, Antelope and Salt creeks, among others. It opened for fishing in 1954.

PATE SAYS he almost went under financially in 1962, but was saved by a chance remark from a Coca-Cola salesman. When the salesman called on Pate, he wondered why Pate wasn't buying more than the usual amount of Cokes. Why? Pate asked him.

"Oh, they're going to poison the lake next Tuesday," Pate said the Coca-Cola man told him, adding that a business competitor made a heavy purchase to tide him over.

"That was the first time I had heard they were going to poison the lake," Pate said. "They said they were going to try to get rid of the trash fish, the carp.

"I wasn't (financially) prepared for a poisoning. This was in January or February. I didn't usually collect the money for the leases until May, and I wouldn't be able to collect if the lake were poisoned first. So I got a good lawyer up in Sweetwater and he managed to get them to postpone it a couple of months until April."

Pate and his wife, Darlene, managed to turn an almost tragedy into something good, however. "After the poisoning, the lake started going down," Pate said. "We — my wife, our little tadpole kids — got out there and built a 17 foot by 84 foot ramp. We bought 90 bags of cement and a bunch of sand, and did it ourselves.

"We just kept building on and building on. Finally during the drought of 1980, I went out there and measured it. It was 205 feet long."

Another crisis came a year after the poisoning, when storms hit in May 1983. "It tore everything down. Twelve rent boats were tossed into the trees, roofs were torn off, a 15 foot by 20 foot fishing dock disappeared — and we still don't know where the roof of it went."

In 1972, Pate entered an argument concerning the introduction of the grass carp into the lake.

THE PROBLEM was vegetation that covered about a quarter of the lake's 2,375 surface acres. It was believed to have been a possible factor in the drowning deaths of two people, and and it may have been choking the ecological life out of the lake.

The water could not be chemically treated to get rid of the vegetation, the Environmental Protection Agency said, because the lake was Sweetwater's drinking water source.

So a proposal arose to import grass carp to clean up the lake. Pate was opposed, recalling recently that his thinking was the grass carp would grow too large, and create an imbalance the other way, leaving too little vegetation in the lake. The Texas Parks and Wildlife Department eventually agreed with him and banned grass carp from Texas lakes.

Meanwhile, it rained, Oak Creek Lake began to fill, and the unwanted vegetation was drowned. Pate says it is still becomes a problem sometimes, but now the accepted solution is mowing the grass.

"Yes, mowing the lake," he says with a smile. "I mowed about six acres of it last fall. You just get a boat with about a 40-horsepower motor, hook this cutting device to the other end, and it cuts the growth off three to four feet under water."

PATE SAID he does a lot of channeling when mowing Oak Creek Lake. He'll cut a swatch into a certain area of the lake, wide enough for a boat to get into, so that fishermen can go into an area in which fish are likely to be hiding. "I cut a couple of channels I haven't told anyone about, sort of my private fishing preserve," he joked.

Pate, his business always at the mercy of drought, had another little crisis or two in recent years — too much water. Twice in this decade Oak Creek Lake went over the spillway, and the spillway happens to be the only way in and out of Sportsman's Lodge. Thus, many potential customers — fishermen, boaters, water skiers — were discouraged by water running across the road a foot or more deep for more than a year.

In fact, the waters from the 13-month 1986-87 overflow just recently receded, he said, and traffic is flowing smoothly again.

Pate has made his living from the lake, but he also has given something back.

Over the years, he has promoted it with regular columns in a number of Texas newspapers, extolling the virtues of winter fishing in the warm-water discharge from the West Texas Utilities electricity generating plant. He told what was biting and who was catching the bigger fish. He even sent pictures.

"I had to give all that up," he said. "It got to be too much work."

Vern Fleming, Pacers, scored five of his 22 points in the final 46 seconds and contributed nine rebounds and five assists as Indiana rallied from a 15-point deficit and beat Washington 99-95.

MAD BOMBER

Michael Adams of Denver, who set the NBA mark for 3-point field goal attempts with 15 in his last game, set the record for consecutive games with at least one 3-pointer Thursday night against Portland. The 5-foot-10 guard hit a 3-pointer for the 24th straight game, breaking the record set by Danny Ainge of Boston this season.

Although Adams was only 2-for-10 from 3-point range in the game, his second 3-pointer, with 43 seconds left in overtime, provided the winning points in the Nuggets' 116-115 triumph.

During the streak, Adams has made 61 of 161 3-point attempts, or 37.9 percent.

DYNAMIC DUO

Reserve guards Allen Leavell and Purvis Short of Houston combined to outscore Seattle 29-27 in the fourth period Thursday, leading the Rockets to a 115-106 victory. Leavell, who led all scorers with 25 points, had 18 in the fourth quarter, while Short scored 11 of his 15 in the period.

STREAKS

Portland's 116-115 overtime loss at Denver Thursday night snapped the Trail Blazers' club record-tying nine-game winning streak and stretched to 11 the Blazers' losing string in McNichols Arena.

Baseball historians of the future are probably going to wonder what Nolan Ryan did in his off-hours that ruled him out of baseball's pitching record after hanging up those kinds of numbers. Did he rob banks, kill children, sell government secrets, set fires?

Nolan doesn't drink, smoke, chew or swear. He raises cattle, not hell, in the off-season. He's polite, approachable. He takes the position that God gave him that arm, he didn't have to work down a mine shaft for it. He's the most unimpressed guy in the world with the fact that he's Nolan Ryan.

Well, almost the most unimpressed. The Cy Young voters have managed to stay pretty blase about it, too. Maybe they're waiting for him to cure cancer.

Alysheba silences critics and moves up to No. 3 all-time

Battles

Not only has Alysheba proved to skeptics that last year was no fluke with big victories in its first two starts this year, but the Midland owned four-year-old has climbed to No. 3 in all-time earnings.

Alysheba has won $3,696,642 to trail John Henry, the all-time No. 1 winner and runnerup Spend a Buck.

John Henry (1970s) had 39 wins in 83 races for his $6,591,860 and Spend a Buck (1980s) compiled $4,220,689 on 10 wins in 15 starts. Alysheba has won six of 19 starts, indicating how purses are growing.

That means M.V.P., for whom the Scharbauers forked over $500,000, same as Dorothy and Pam paid for Alysheba, last fall, has its work cut out to equal Alysheba's earnings....

You think you've got troubles? Talk to Bob Knepper. The FBI may have its Public Enemey No. 1, but he's No. 1 on the list of women's rights groups and before they get through with him, the Houston Astros pitcher may wish he were on the FBI list....

Dallas Green admits he was wrong and now he thinks "they" are wrong.

When Green first took charge of the Chicago Cubs, he vigorously campaigned for night baseball at Wrigley Field.

"I fought for it when I first got there because I felt very strongly one of the reasons the Cubs had not been successful was because they didn't play baseball like everyone else. That was because I was raised on night baseball."

"I spent six years there with day baseball and I came to love it and understand it like the Cub fans do. I'm a convert."

Sounds like Dallas was around Ernie Banks too long....

When Hobbs, 24-6, beat No. 1 ranked Alamogordo 110-95 last weekend, it was Ralph Tasker's 11th New Mexico state high school basketball title....

Lehigh is a million-to-1 in the NCAA tournament. I'm not sure that's a million-to-1 to win the tournament or get by its opening round game with Temple....

For those who were paying attention, turnabout is fair play, or as Will Rogers once said, "Reports of my death....." Now, I suppose I'll catch it from Missourians, but, at least, there aren't as many around here as there are Oklahomans...

Bobby Hillin, Jr., the youngest NASCAR driver to qualify over 200-mph, win a Winston Cup race and to achieve the $1 million plateau in winnings, has signed an exclusive marketing agreement with Athletic Management Services (AMS). AMS also handles Dominique Wilkins and several other pro athletes...

Randy Velarde, the Midlander making a bid for a shortstop spot with the Yankees, made three errors in one inning the other day in an exhibition at West Palm Beach, but Manager Billy Martin took it with uncharacteristic calm, considering, perhaps, the infield. "Some city lots are better than this ball park," said Martin....

North Carolina has the longest consecutive NCAA tournament appearance record going into this year's tournament with 13 in a row. The Tar Heels have one national title to show for it.

Let's see, UCLA in one 12 year stretch took home 10 championships, and it was a lot tougher to make the field in those days....

Texas' is coach-hunting and I guess it shouldn't be surprising. After all those years in that rare relic called Gregory Gym, now the Longhorns have a handsome new facility with oodles of seats and need someone who can fill them up. They can't afford not to. College basketball is big, big business these days and getting bigger...

Owners wrestle with Pats woes

By DAVE GOLDBERG

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Commissioner Pete Rozelle said Thursday he saw no way the financially troubled Sullivan family could retain control of the New England Patriots, and added that he hopes the confused status of the team will be resolved within a month.

NFL

The Patriots' plight was discussed for about 20 minutes as the owners meeting ended with an agreement that a committee composed of Rozelle and three owners would continue to work with the Sullivans to resolve the problem.

THE VOTE to do that was 26-2 with Cincinnati and the Los Angeles Raiders opposing. Tampa Bay owner Hugh Culverhouse was added to a committee consisting of Rozelle and owners Norman Braman of Philadelphia and Ralph Wilson of Buffalo who were appointed in January to monitor the Patriots' situation.

And while both team founder Billy Sullivan and his son, Chuck, whose family is about $125 million in debt, said they were happy with the outcome, Rozelle said:

"We're going to make a sale, solve their credit problems and have new owners ... Billy Sullivan may have some future interest in the team but I see no way we can avoid the sale of the controlling interest in the franchise to resolve the problem."

THE OWNERS also discussed at their final session the continuing problem of drafting undergraduates who become ineligible for college play by signing with an agent or for some other malfeasance.

Rozelle said league officials would meet with representatives of the NCAA, but conceded that without cooperation from agents, there could be no final resolution.

The NFL is the only major league that doesn't draft underclassmen, drafting only players who have played for four years; graduated or spent five years in college.

But it has made exceptions in the past, as it did last year when it held a supplemental draft for Ohio State wide receiver Cris Carter after he was declared ineligible for signing with an agent. This year, it must decide on whether to admit Pitt running back Craig "Ironhead" Heyward, who applied for the regular draft though he is a junior.

Azinger not complaining after 66 ties for 1st place

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Paul Azinger let himself become convinced he was putting poorly. But he didn't let it bother him.

"Two years ago, I had to be hitting the ball great and putting perfect just to make the cut," Azinger said, then shrugged and added: "I guess I don't have anything to complain about."

He had even less to complain about Thursday after a 5-under-par 66 that put him into a tie with Andy Magee for the first-round lead in the $750,000 Bay Hill Classic golf tournament.

"I'm just a person trying to break through," said Magee, 25, who hasn't finished higher than sixth in four seasons on the PGA Tour.

That's the position Azinger occupied a couple of years ago. But he broke through last season with three victories and $822,481 in earnings.

Azinger hasn't been close to that pace this season, however.

"I've only been in the hunt once," he said. That was in the Bob Hope Classic, when he self-destructed in the final round.

"Actually, I was putting great," Azinger said. "Then the last round I had a four-putt and a five-putt. Since then, all my friends keep asking me, 'Are you putting any better?'

"After a while, you start thinking about it. You start thinking, 'Hey, maybe I am putting bad.'

"And for the last two weeks I've been putting just horrendous."

Yet he has finished in the top 20 in his last two starts, winning $24,720, and didn't have a round over par during that period.

"I didn't play any better than I did in any round in the last two weeks," he said. "The putting was a little better, that's all."

Magee, however, said he "couldn't have played any better than I did," after he's scored seven birdies in the mild, sunny weather and gentle breezes.

It was two strokes back of the co-leaders to Sandy Lyle of Scotland, a winner earlier in the season and runner-up last week, who led a large group at 68.

Also at three under par were defending champion Payne Stewart, Denis Watson of South Africa, Curtis Strange, Tom Purtzer, Bobby Wadkins, Don Pooley, Dan Forsman and Joey Sindelar, winner of last week's Honda Classic.

Tom Watson hit two balls into the water on the sixth hole, took a triple-bogey 8 and went on to a 74. Australian Greg Norman shot 73. The 58-year-old tournament host, Arnold Palmer, had a 72.

Nieuwendyk eyes record

Associated Press

Joe Nieuwendyk has both Mike Bossy's record and the NHL's Calder Trophy in his sights.

"As long as I can stay in this confident frame of mind, I'll get my scoring chances," Nieuwendyk said Thursday night after his tie-breaking goal led the Calgary Flames to a 7-5 victory over the Boston Bruins.

NHL

The goal gave Nieuwendyk 51 for the season and put him into good position for breaking the rookie goal-scoring record of 53 by Bossy, set in 1977-78 with the New York Islanders. The Flames have eight games left in the regular season.

Nieuwendyk's fine season has made him a prime candidate for the Calder Trophy as the NHL's rookie of the year.

Nordiques 4, Devils 3

Michel Goulet and Gaetan Duchesne scored 23 seconds apart to cap a four-goal second period that led Quebec over New Jersey. Peter Stastny ignited the rally with two goals.

The victory was the Nordiques' third straight and fifth in six games and put them three points ahead of Hartford in the battle for the final playoff berth in the NHL's Adams Division. Quebec, which has eight regular-season games left, has 68 points, but the Whalers have a game in hand.

The game was just as crucial for the Devils, who now have just eight games left to earn the final playoff berth in the Patrick Division.

Blackhawks 4, Flyers 3

Denis Savard scored 37 seconds into overtime and goalie Bob Mason turned away 45 shots as Chicago beat Philadelphia for the first time at the Spectrum in five years.

Chicago has won all three games against the Flyers this season. The last time the Blackhawks won at the Spectrum was March 8, 1983.

North Stars 2, Blues 2

Moe Mantha scored with 7:51 left in the third period, lifting Minnesota into a tie with St. Louis.

The result enabled the Detroit Red Wings to clinch the Norris Division championship.

The tie enabled Chicago to move two points behind St. Louis in their battle for second place in the Norris. Both Chicago and the Blues have eight regular season games remaining.

St. Louis captain Brian Sutter became the second Blues player to score 300 career goals, snapping a 1-1 tie with 6:51 remaining in the second period.

In their previous start, the Blues had played a 7-7 tie against Chicago during a game at The Arena that featured 10 third-period goals.

"The bottom line is we need a better effort and more intensity to win at home," St. Louis Coach Jacques Martin said. "Going into the playoffs, this is the style we have to play. But we have to finish off our opportunities."

PATE AND some of his rancher friends are largely responsible for the proliferation of Florida bass in the lake. Texas Parks & Wildlife started it with a few thousand seedlings in the early 1980s, but Pate has carried it on.

He built a small nursery-hatchery on the lake's south shore, with Parks & Wildlife furnishing the brood fish, and began distributing the fingerlings in stock tanks on the creeks up the watershed from the lake.

The idea was that as a stock tank filled after a rain, the overflow carried the fish along the creek into the next tank, and the next, until eventually they entered the lake.

The lake would be assured of a fairly steady supply of Florida bass, but not too many for the amount of water in the lake.

"I guess I put 400,000 fingerlings into those stock tanks and directly into the lake," Pate says.

NOW HE CAN sit back and catch a few of those fish.

"Oh, I'll help Randall and Ann (his daughter-in-law) out a little, but I'll spend a lot of time fishing. We're going to keep living at the lake."

That's OK with Darlene Pate, but in the beginning she did not feel that way. The couple had lived in Sweetwater, where Ike and his father operated a typewriter shop, coming from an electrician's job in Brownwood.

"When we first moved out there," she recalls, "I hated it. I hated the isolation, the not being in town.

"Now I like it. But I've taken a part-time job so I can get to town now and then."

Mrs. Pate says Sportsman's Lodge — and probably by extension, Oak Creek Lake — will be in good hands with her son. "He's lived out there since he was 11 years old, and he loves it. I don't think we could get him to move to town."

"We've been to the final 16 two years in a row. Our kids know what it takes," DePaul Coach Joey Meyer said.

Rod Strickland had 13 assists and 19 points, while Stanley Brundys scored 26 and Edwards added 21.

DePaul hit 64 percent to 39 for Wichita State.

"We're a better basketball team than we showed today," Wichita State Coach Eddie Fogler said. "We played 30 games this year and this is the first game we weren't in."

Purdue got a career-high 26 points from Melvin McCants in setting a school record for victories in a season with 28. Fairleigh Dickinson got into quick foul trouble and could not handle Purdue's height.

"We wanted to get the ball to me and get inside and get them in foul trouble," said McCants, who averages 13.7 points. They did and it worked.

Troy Lewis scored 19 points and Todd Mitchell had 16 for the Boilermakers, who play Memphis State on Saturday.

The Tigers, 20-11, also got a personal high game from Rodney Douglas with 22 points, including eight in a 20-2 burst that opened the second half. A full-court press turned the game in Memphis State's favor, increasing a three-point halftime lead to 53-32.

Kansas State snapped La Salle's 15-game winning string as Mitch Richmond set a Wildcats record for points in a season with 711. He scored 30 Thursday to pass Bob Boozer's 1959 mark of 691. The Wildcats, 23-8, have won nine straight first-round NCAA games.

DERBY, England (AP) — Liverpool has equalled an English soccer record by playing to a 1-1 tie with Derby County, extending its unbeaten streak to 29 games from the start of the season.

Despite matching the record, Liverpool failed to produce its best soccer against the struggling central English club.

Trade figures better than expected

By ROBERT D. HERSHEY Jr.
New York Times News Service

WASHINGTON — The nation's deficit in foreign trade widened slightly in January, to $12.4 billion, a $200 million increase over December's total. But the deficit showed significant improvement with major trading partners like Japan and the countries of Western Europe, the Commerce Department reported Thursday.

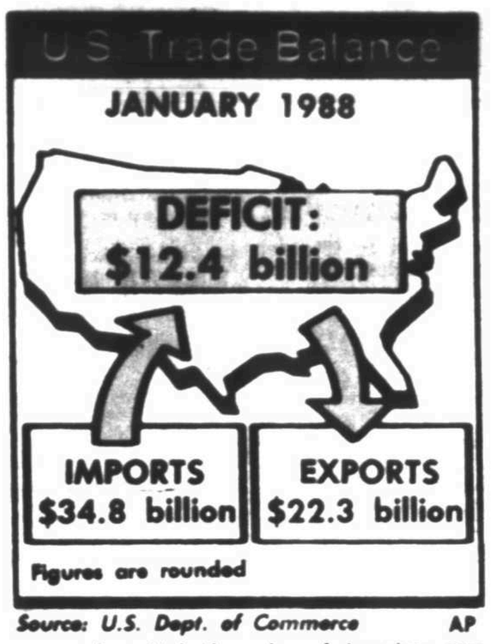

Imports, which have remained stubbornly high, fell $2.2 billion to the lowest level since April 1987 while exports fell $2.4 billion. Lower sales abroad in the volatile aircraft sector and in seasonally affected agricultural products were major factors in the export drop.

The $200 million increase in the trade deficit was generally received favorably by economists, since most of them had expected it to grow to $13 billion or more. The report was also well received in the financial markets, with stock and bond prices, as well as the dollar, rising in active trading.

"I think it's very positive," Harald B. Malmgren, a Washington trade consultant, said. "It consolidates the trend and suggests the next figure will be even lower." The November and December figures showed sharp improvements in the trade balance.

Malmgren and other analysts suggested that the latest report would help the administration and its congressional allies who want to remove provisions tending to discourage free trade from the trade bill being negotiated by House and Senate conferees.

Many economists said the latest trade figures confirmed that the stubborn trade deficit — the amount by which the value of American purchases from other countries exceeds sales to them — was in a solid decline.

When the deficit is measured by physical volume rather than in dollar terms, the decline is apparent, they said. The dollar has weakened as much as 50 percent against most other major currencies over the last three years.

Thursday's report was the latest in a series of recent economic indicators giving upbeat signals — strong automobile sales, a rebound in housing starts, surging employment and higher industrial output. Thursday the government also reported a continuing high level for the operating capacity last month of factories, mines and utilities.

One of the brightest spots in the January trade figures was an 18 percent decline — to $3.9 billion from $4.8 billion — in the nation's deficit in trade with Japan. That put the bilateral deficit at its lowest level since December 1986. Almost half this improvement reflected lower imports of cars from Japan, which eased to $1.6 billion from $2 billion in December.

And the trade deficit with Western Europe, at $1.3 billion in January, was more than cut in half. The United States achieved its first surplus in trade with Britain — $75 million — since March 1985. The deficit with West Germany shrank to less than $1.1 billion from $1.5 billion.

On the other hand, this nation's merchandise trade balance deteriorated badly against the newly industrialized producers of East Asia, where currencies have shown far less appreciation against the dollar than have Japan's and Europe's.

After modest aggregate improvement in December against the four newly industrialized "tigers" — Taiwan, South Korea, Hong Kong and Singapore — the American trade deficit with them surged nearly $450 million in January, to $2.9 billion. Nearly half the increased deficit was with Taiwan, which ran a $1.3 billion surplus with the United States. Thursday's figures show that imports of clothing jumped about $375 million in January, much of it undoubtedly coming from Asia.

MARKETS

Oil prices continue rebounding

From Staff and Wire Reports

Oil futures prices continue to move higher, opening at $16.42 this morning, a gain of 14 cents from Thursday's close.

Thursday, contracts for April delivery of West Texas Intermediate jumped 28 cents to $16.28 on reports that OPEC would take steps next week to bolster prices.

In a statement issued in Lagos, Nigeria, and reported in the United States late in the trading session, OPEC President Rilwanu Lukman said he would announce measures March 22 to stabilize the market.

Refined products also finished higher on the day. April contracts for wholesale gasoline gained .36 cent to settle at 45.60 cents per gallon, while April heating oil moved up .14 cent to 44.22 cents per gallon.

Before news of Lukman's statement was released, prices had fluctuated in reaction to a variety of rumors, some involving reports of price discounting, others focusing on the unrest in Panama.

Despite the upward move sparked by Lukman's statement, market observers remained skeptical of the mood among members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

U.S. trade report boosts dollar

LONDON (AP) — The dollar rose in Europe early today on the back of better-than-expected U.S. trade performance in January. Gold bullion fell.

The U.S. currency was holding steady at mostly higher levels at midmorning, and traders said a rally triggered by Thursday's trade report appeared to be running out of steam.

The pound fell to $1.8265 from $1.8385. Sterling, which has surged this month, was knocked back Thursday after major British banks cut interest rates.

Other dollar rates in Europe at midmorning, compared with late Thursday:

— 1.6940 West German marks, up from 1.6775
— 1.4020 Swiss francs, up from 1.3940
— 5.7490 French francs, up from 5.7175
— 1.8985 Dutch guilders, up from 1.8865
— 1,253.25 Italian lire, up from 1,244.37
— 1.2490 Canadian dollars, down from 1.2493

The dollar came under selling pressure in Tokyo, but closed up on the day at 128.35 Japanese yen, against 127.43 yen on Thursday. In later London trading today, the dollar was holding steady at 128.35 yen.

London's major bullion houses fixed a recommended gold price at midmorning of $442.80 a troy ounce, down from $443 late Thursday.

Silver bullion traded in London at a bid of $6.29 a troy ounce, down from $6.34.

Stocks surge on trade report

NEW YORK (AP) — Stocks surged higher Thursday in a rally driven by a better-than-expected trade deficit report and takeover speculation, giving the Dow Jones industrial average its second post-crash peak this month.

The closely watched average of 30 blue-chip stocks rose 21.72 points to 2,086.04 in a late buying spree, much of it from large institutional investors who had been reluctant to get into the market.

It was the average's best showing since the Oct. 19 collapse in stock prices, topping a post-crash high of 2,081.07 set March 8. Broader market indicators also improved.

The Wilshire 5,000 Equity Index, which measures the value of all U.S. stocks, rose by $22.84 billion.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index rose 1.48 to 298.99. The NASDAQ composite index for the over-the-counter market closed at 380.70, up 2.16.

BUSINESS IN BRIEF

Factories operate at 82.4 percent

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. factories, mines and utilities operated at 82.4 percent of capacity in February, the third consecutive month the operating rate has been at that level, the Federal Reserve reports.

Even though the February rate was the same as December and January, those two months were revised up slightly in the newest report published Thursday, a change that private economists said was encouraging.

Before the revision, the operating rate in December and January was reported as 82.2 percent.

American Standard accepts rival offer

NEW YORK (AP) — American Standard Inc. has accepted a nearly $2.5 billion cash tender offer from an investment banking firm specializing in employee-led leveraged buyouts, spurning Black & Decker Corp.'s hostile advances.

Industry analysts said Thursday that the $78-a-share tender offer from Kelso & Co. represented a market premium and that the bidding war was unlikely to continue.

The offer topped a cash bid of $73 a share, or $2.1 billion, from Black & Decker, a tool and appliance maker that had tried to gain control of American Standard for nearly two months.

IRS reports $85 billion income tax gap

WASHINGTON (AP) — Individuals and businesses voluntarily paid only 83.2 percent of the federal income taxes they owed last year, leaving the government with a tax gap of $84.9 billion, the Internal Revenue Service said.

More than half the shortage reported Thursday was attributed to individuals who file tax returns but fail to report income from moonlighting, a small business or other legal non-wage sources.

STATE OF THE INDUSTRY

Natural gas concerns dominate testimony

By ALLEN E. HOWLAND
Assistant Business/Oil Editor

The Texas Railroad Commission's "State of the Industry" hearing, held Thursday in Lubbock was "a lot more positive than last year's meeting in Dallas," according to Commissioner John Sharp.

The hearing is an annual exercise in understanding for the three-member panel which regulates the energy industry in the state from the permitting of new wells to the selling of natural gas at the burner tip.

"The interaction of the commission and the industry is materially beneficial in allowing us to see problems through their eyes and better understand current conditions," said Commission Chairman James Nugent at the end of Thursday's testimony.

Allen Howland/Reporter-Telegram

Texas Railroad Commissioners (from left) James Nugent, John Sharp and Kent Hance, listened intently to a wide range of concerns from throughout the energy industry, at Thusday's hearing.

Commissioner Sharp commented that he was impressed that the 25 industry witnesses seem to finally be beyond dwelling on the problems of the past. "That helps us, as regulators, in looking at ways to make conditions better in the future," he said.

One recent commission action which drew applause from several speakers was the appointment of a "Blue Ribbon panel" to evaluate possible changes in the natural gas proration system. Even the Texas Independent Producers & Royalty Owners Association, whose proposals were postponed by the decision to go to a panel, supported the action.

"We commend the move of the Railroad Commission to review once again its series of regulations applying to natural gas proration," testified TIPRO executive vice president Julian Martin. "We, of course, would have preferred the commission use our proposed rule changes as a basis for immediate rulemaking.

"Nevertheless, we hope the commission's initiation of a new study group will lead to revised regulations," Martin said.

While many other groups endorsed and pledged support and input for the gas panel, one intrastate gas firm took an opposing view.

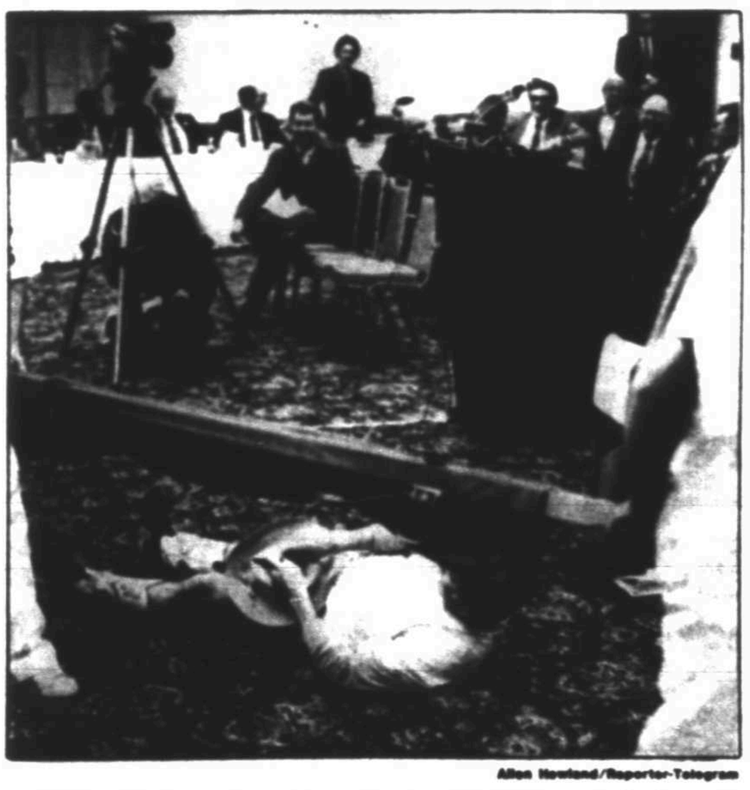

"I urge the commission to let the market work. Rules 30 and 34 came out of extensive dialogue last year," said Palmer Moe, president and chief operating officer of Valero Energy Co. "The rules which resulted — while not perfect in anyone's eyes, attempted to balance many diverse interests and should be given a chance to work."

Charles Crisp of the Association of Texas Intrastate Natural Gas Pipelines summed up the other major problem for gas producers: "There is not a supply bubble at all, but rather a demand shortage."

Through innovative regulation, the commission can play a role in expanding natural gas markets, witnesses said.

One specific proposal for broadening gas marketing efforts was supported by Thomas Cannon, vice president Southern Union Gas Co.

Oil producers' time-tested pleas renewed

By ALLEN E. HOWLAND
Assistant Business/Oil Editor

On the oil side of the industry, testimony at the Railroad Commission's annual hearing remained nearer the traditional themes of ominously growing reliance on imported oil, the needed repeal of the Windfall Profits Tax, a woeful lack of a comprehensive national energy policy and the need for price stability.

Charles Perry, president of the PBPA, characterized the crude oil commodities exchange as "little more than a large Las Vegas-style crap table."

Several of the speakers, particularly those with major oil companies, took a good news/bad news approach to their assessment of industry conditions.

"The good news is that now somebody will finally have to pay attention to the bad news," said Jack Montgomery, vice president of Amoco Corp. The bad news he pointed to is that crude oil imports — which account for one-fourth of the U.S. trade deficit — are predicted to keep growing.

Arnold Stancell, vice president of production for Mobil Oil Corp., said the good news is the continuing opportunity within the industry to steadily improve technology to sustain oil and gas production in the U.S.

Bob Walker, vice president of supply and transportation for Conoco Inc., crystallized the points repeated by many of the witnesses Thursday:

"Energy must be high on the list of issues as we determine who will lead us for the next four years. To date, no one at the federal level has had the political courage or wisdom to make energy the critical issue that it is.

"We all know what the first steps should be. The absurd Windfall Profits Tax must be abolished. Natural gas must be deregulated. Exploration for and development of stable reserves must be allowed under appropriate environmental guidelines. Incentives to explore and produce should be provided ... or at least, disincentives should be removed.

"These steps would help get things going. However, they require clear vision and a certain amount of guts," Walker said.

"I think both of those qualities are desirable in those who seek our votes and our support."

State after Yates royalties

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas Land Commissioner Garry Mauro is seeking up to $120 million in royalties he claims are owed the state since 1934 on the Yates Field in West Texas, one of the richest reserves in the world.

Under Texas law, state oil and gas rights are leased for drilling by the owner of the surface land, and the surface owner splits the royalties with the state. Those are deposited in the Permanent School Fund for public education.

A lawsuit filed this week by the state attorney general names 27 defendants — including heirs, corporations and executors of estates — who have interests in the 3,97 acres in Pecos County.

According to the lawsuit filed in state district court in Travis County, the original surface owner, Fred Turner, leased the land for drilling to a friend, who in turn assigned it to a corporation in which Turner was a major stockholder.

In that way, Turner and the other defendants escaped paying the state its share for 54 years, the suit alleges. To date, the state has received only $10 million, while Turner and the other defendants have reaped more than $120 million, the suit says.

Assistant Attorney General Jose Rangel said the state is owed at least half the $120 million, and could seek the entire amount because the defendants violated the agreement to pay the state its portion.

Turner and several of the other defendants are dead, and the lawsuit seeks payment from their estates.

Mauro's office has been examining old oil and gas leases for irregularities since 1983. The land office collects oil and gas revenues and administers the state's public education fund.

Firestone OKs $2.6 billion bid from Japanese firm

CHICAGO (AP) — Japan's Bridgestone Corp., spurred by a rival bid, will buy Firestone Tire & Rubber Co. in an all-cash deal worth nearly $2.6 billion, the companies announced.

Bridgestone said it would pay $80 a share for Firestone's 32 million outstanding shares, which closed at $62.50 Thursday on the New York Stock Exchange.

The deal was announced late Thursday by Firestone directors, who recommended that shareholders reject the rival, unsolicited $68 a share offer by Italian tiremaker Pirelli SpA.

In mid-February, Chicago-based Firestone announced an agreement to sell 75 percent of its worldwide tire manufacturing business to Tokyo-based Bridgestone for $1.5 billion.

But that agreement was jeopardized when Pirelli launched its tender offer for the entire company earlier this month.

"We never considered backing away from our agreement with Firestone to become its partner in operating its worldwide tire businesses," Bridgestone President Akira Yeiri said. "The merger agreement merely represents an expansion and extension of our original agreement."

Yeiri said his company would keep the headquarters of Firestone's worldwide tire operations in Akron, Ohio, under existing management. All of Firestone's North American plants would stay in operation, he said.

Firestone Chairman John J. Nevin said a Bridgestone subsidiary would begin a cash tender offer within the next few days for all of Firestone's outstanding common shares. The offer is subject to at least two-thirds of the shares being tendered.

EXPLORATION HIGHLIGHTS

Wolverine records 3,918 barrel find

From Staff Reports

WOLVERINE EXPLORATION CO., Fort Worth, has completed a significant oil discovery in Lea County, N.M.

The No. 1 State 24-35, Jim Prospect, flowed, on an eight hour test, at a rate of 3,918 barrels of oil per day from 22 feet of perforations in the Devonian formation. The well, on a 64/64inch choke, had a flowing tubing pressure of 1050 psi and a shut in tubing pressure of 1450 psi.

This well was drilled pursuant to the North American Exploration Agreement with Union Pacific Resources Company. Wolverine has a 22.5 percent working interest in this well and a 28.125 percent working interest in the remainder of the prospect. In addition, Wolverine acquired on March 15 an additional 600 gross acres at a lease sale resulting in Wolverine having an interest in 1,760 gross acres and owns 495.5 net acres in the prospect. The company and its partners plan development operations to commence immediately.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Hidden sales charge takes investor by surprise

By BILL DOYLE

Q. Last June, two brokers offered me the opportunity to purchase shares of a closed-end managed investment company at $10 per share. The company was being organized to invest municipal bonds. Each broker said no sales charge would be involved because it was a new issue. The "preliminary prospectus" each broker provided listed "Price to Public" as $10 per share, with no figures for "Underwriting Discounts and Commissions" and "Proceeds to the Fund."

I accepted this offer from one of the brokers and purchased 1,000 shares for $10,000.

Recently, I secured a later prospectus, which shows per share Underwriting Discounts and Commissions as "$0.65" and Proceeds to the Fund as "$9.35."

This indicates to me that my purchase was not free of all sales charges and that, in fact, I did pay $500 to someone. Can you provide any enlightenment regarding such a transaction?

Doyle

A- The light went on for you when you read that second prospectus, which spelled out a sales charge of 65 cents a share. If two brokers told you what you say they did, they flat-out lied.

In a new issue situation such as this, a group of brokerage firms acting as an "underwriting syndicate" buys the shares from the issuing company at one price — $9.35 in this case — and attempts to sell those shares to the investing public at a higher price — $10 in this case. If the underwriting is a success — all the shares are sold the brokerages make the profit on the difference per share multiple. The $10,000 you paid bought you shares worth $9,350. Your other $650 went to the broker through whom you made the purchase and his firm.

The preliminary prospectus, nicknamed a "red herring" because of the red type up and down the left margin, should have provided some caution. Among other things, it says, "Information contained herein is subject to completion or amendment."

Didn't it occur to you that the blank spaces below the "Underwriting Discounts and Commissions" and "Proceeds to the Fund" headings would be filled in?

You should have received an "effective prospectus" showing those numbers when you bought the shares. After you sent your check, the brokerage firm was required to send that prospectus to you, along with the statement confirming your purchase.

Q. My mutual fund has been a disappointment since the day of my purchase. Its per share price has been up and down, but mostly down. The salesman says this is normal and I must be patient. But now the monthly dividend has been reduced from 10 cents to nine cents per share.

I cashed out the major portion of this investment some time ago and put the money into certificates of deposit. Now, I am seriously considering doing the same thing with the rest. I am 76 and have nearly all my investments in CDs. What is your advice?

A. Since you obviously are very unhappy with that fund and in view of the fact that it has cut its dividend, the natural advice is to redeem your fund shares and seek the safety of CDs — a good place for people such as you to have your money.

Q. At the annual meeting of my mutual fund, shareholders approved a proposal to increase the annual "advisory fee" paid to the fund's manager from six-tenths of one percent of the fund's assets to 1.1 percent of those assets.

This is an income mutual fund. How will this change in the fee affect my dividends?

A. Usually the managers of that fund can pull rabbits out of the hat and higher yields out of thin air, your dividends will be lower. The advisory fee — usually the biggest part of a mutual fund's operating expense — is going up one-half of 1 percent. It follows that your dividends will be reduced by an equal amount. If the dividend yield has been, say, 8 percent, you can expect it to drop to 7.5 percent.

That 1.1 percent advisory fee is outlandishly high. It's amazing that shareholders voted to approve it. In your shoes, I'd "vote with my feet" and get out of that mutual fund.

Enron, utility sign sales agreement

EAU CLAIRE, Wisc. (SWN) — Northern States Power Co. (Wisconsin) and Enron Gas Marketing, Inc. of Houston have signed a gas sales agreement under which Enron will provide up to six million cubic feet of natural gas per day to the Eau Claire-based gas and electric utility.

The firm sales contract, calling for annual volumes up to 2.2 billion cubic feet, commences this month and is effective through September 1992. The deal is valued at approximately $15 million, based on expected volumes and current prices. Prices for the supply contract are variable based on competition in the market area.

The contract represents about 10 percent of Northern States annual natural gas purchases from suppliers. The contract volumes will be delivered by way of Northern Natural Gas Company's pipeline system, which also supplies Enron with gas under a firm contract. Both Enron Gas Marketing and Northern Natural Gas are units of Enron Corp. of Houston. Another Enron Corp. subsidiary, Enron Gas Supply Company, has responsibility for acquiring the supplies to fulfill the marketing contract.

Cannon urged the commission to grant a petition by the Texas Gas Association to raise the allowable advertising expense by gas utilities from 0.2 percent of gross receipts to 0.5 percent.

"An increase in allowable advertising expense will encourage the promotion of the beneficial use of Texas natural gas," Cannon said. "The result is we all win!"

Another necessary activity for the commission is becoming more active in consuming states' regulatory hearings and procedures, said Donald J. MacIver Jr., senior vice president and general counsel for El Paso Natural Gas Co.

He noted that the commission's New Mexico counterpart — the Oil Conservation Division — has been funded to the tune of $300,000 by the State Legislature to participate in other states' hearings.

MacIver discussed gas service curtailments by Southern California Gas Co. in December and January and their implications for producers and pipelines. During the peak demand period, Canadian imports were constrained only by pipeline capacity, but El Paso was unable to "step up to the line and meet the additional supply needs of California," MacIver said.

EPNG fell nearly 1 billion cubic feet short of what it thought it would be able to deliver for a variety of reasons including producers unwilling to sell because of repudiated contracts and the fact they might be compromising their litigation position by selling to the company and that flush production, based on G-10s and other tests, fell far short of predictions.

For the first time this decade, El Paso and others have been able to use this incident to graphically demonstrate the danger to gas distributors who have made multi-million dollar spot market savings while sacrificing higher cost, reliable gas supplies, MacIver said.

Chairman Nugent agreed with Sharp's assessment of the upbeat mood of this year's meeting. "There was much more cautious optimism today," he said, despite a flamboyant presentation by Midlander Clayton W. Williams Jr. which dramatized the plight of independent oil and gas producers.

Nugent noted that Williams is "always a colorful presence at the annual hearing" and gets his point across.

This year Williams point was the role of OPEC and gas utilities in hobbling operators. Toted by a pair of "medics" representing those two nemeses, Williams made his entrance flat on his back and was dumped on the floor in front of the trio of commissioners.

Coming to his rescue were a pair of "nurses," whose treatment regimen was "good management, efficient drilling, fine-tuned geology and old-fashioned hard work."

"Those may get me through one more year," Williams said.

President Charles Perry of Odessa presented comments on behalf of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association at the hearing. Included in his remarks was a five-point list of industry needs before any significant increase in drilling activity can be realized.

Those requirements are:

- more assured price stability for crude oil and other energy sources;
- a return of investors' confidence, and capital, for drilling and exploration;
- a reversal of the erosion of tax incentives to the industry;
- skilled personnel, who are currently discouraged from entering the industry; and,
- renewed investment in improving oil and gas technologies, which has been dormant since 1982.

Also addressing the panel from Midland was Alan McDaniel, division vice president of producing operations for Texaco USA Inc. McDaniel outlined Texaco's role in developing Texas oil industry, by "recovering proved reserves in the most economic way possible.

The future will belong to those producers "who have learned how to replace reserves at low cost and then bring that production to market efficiently and economically," McDaniel said. In Texas last year, Texaco replaced more than 100 percent of its liquids production of 188,000 barrels per day, he added.

OUR USED CARS HAVE A WARRANTY THAT WON'T WASH OFF.

Maybe you think the only used car warranty you can get is the one soaped on the windshield.

At Jack Sherman Chevrolet-Saab, we inspect every used car we sell. We test, we tune and then we attach a special 90 day, 3,000 mile warranty on the engine, drive train and transmission - for parts and labor - on every used car in our lot.*

So when we say we stand behind the cars we sell, that's a promise written in stone. Not just on a windshield.
