Manure-hauling to fasts: Candidates vie for attention

By Lisa Weintraub
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — One hauled manure around Texas. Another is on a hunger strike in Ohio. A third is raffling off an assault-style rifle in Maryland.

In their quests to go to Congress or become governors, challengers across the country are doing anything they can to grab attention, raise money and, they hope, win votes.

Take Pete Sessions in Texas. A Republican who is trying to unseat Democratic Rep. John Bryant, Sessions recently took a swipe at President Clinton's health care plan in a way that couldn't really be called mudslinging.

Sessions hitched up his horse trailer, piled in about 150 pounds of horse droppings — using a mini-bulldozer and the help of some obviously devoted campaign aides — and embarked on a two-day, 12-city "Manure Tour." The trailer sported a sign summing up his position: "The Clinton health care plan stinks worse than this trailer."

In Ohio, the governor's race is not quite as messy. Independent candidate Billy Inmon, a former state fair employee who was hired and fired by Gov. George Voinovich, began a hunger strike to try to convince the Republican incumbent to agree to a debate.

Inmon has fasted and slept on a bench outside the statehouse in Columbus since Aug. 1 and says he has no intention of budging — except for an occasional shower at a nearby YMCA — until he meets Voinovich in a public forum. Voinovich says he will only debate state Sen. Robert Burch, the Democratic candidate. "I'd like to be home in my own bed," Inmon said in an interview from a pay phone outside the statehouse. He said announcers from a local morning radio show have dropped by each day to weigh him and tempt him with omelettes.

NATO-Serb showdown near Sarajevo

NATO warplanes struck near Sarajevo Friday after Bosnian Serbs violated the rules of the exclusion zone surrounding the capital.

The Bosnian Serbs seized the weapons after the Yugoslav government severed all political and economic ties with them Thursday. The weapons have been impounded by the U.N. since the establishment of a 12.5-mile exclusion zone last February.

NATO blasts Serb target

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — NATO warplanes blasted apart an armored anti-tank vehicle near Sarajevo on Friday, answering a challenge from Bosnian Serbs who had boldly tested a tenuous U.N. truce around the city.

Two of four U.S. A-10s destroyed the M-18 mobile "tank buster" with at least 600 rounds of 30mm cannon fire, Adm. Leighton W. Smith, NATO's commander in southern Europe, said from Naples, Italy.

Other NATO planes were involved in the raid, ordered after Serbs seized weapons from a U.N. depot and fired on a U.N. helicopter.

Four French Mirages, four British Jaguars and four Dutch F-16s were looking for other targets in the area when the Serbs contacted U.N. officials and promised to return the weapons, Smith said.

Bosnian Serbs showed signs of growing desperation upon losing the longtime patronage of Serbia on Thursday. But they backed down when NATO responded with force.

Four hours after the NATO raid, Serbs returned two armored personnel carriers, said U.N. spokesman Maj. Dacre Holloway. But Serbs were still holding a tank and a mobile anti-aircraft gun as well as a mortar seized in a separate violation of the truce Friday.

U.N. and NATO officials threatened more strikes if all weapons were not returned swiftly.

Panel replaces Fiske in probe of Whitewater

■ Judges deal blow to Clinton administration, choose Kenneth Starr to head investigation.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A federal appeals panel Friday replaced the independent counsel for the Whitewater inquiry, Robert Fiske Jr., with Kenneth Starr, a former Bush administration solicitor general and federal appeals court judge.

The panel, a special court appointed by Chief Justice William Rehnquist, rejected a request by Attorney General Janet Reno that it reappoint Fiske, whom she originally chose in January.

In a brief opinion, the panel said it would be inconsistent with the independent counsel's law for the Clinton administration to play any part in the selection of the person to head the investigation.

The change came as a complete surprise, and it was a sharp disappointment for the administration, promising as it did yet another extension of the Whitewater investigation and its potential for political trouble.

Starr, 48, a conservative Republican, untested as a prosecutor, has a background that contrasts sharply with that of Fiske, a Wall Street lawyer, a former U.S. attorney and a political moderate.

The White House had been pleased with the initial results of Fiske's investigation, in which he found no basis for criminal prosecution in the discussions between the White House and Treasury that were the subject of the Whitewater hearings in Congress, which came to a close Friday afternoon.

But under a broadly worded charter granted by the appeals court Friday, Starr has the authority, if he so chooses, to go back over the ground already covered by Fiske and decide whether the White House-Treasury contacts, or the testimony over the last few weeks, could provide the basis for criminal charges against any administration officials. Having been cleared by Fiske, the 29 current and former administration officials who testified did so without the grants of immunity generally demanded when Congress and a prosecutor are examining the same events.

In the only other portion of the investigation completed by Fiske, he concluded that the death last summer of Vincent Foster Jr., White House deputy counsel, was a suicide and unrelated to Whitewater.

Starr, who was in New Orleans Friday at the annual meeting of the American Bar Association, did not return telephone calls seeking comment on his plans.

The appointment raises a host of other practical questions: Will Starr choose to recruit a new staff, which would take weeks? Will he ask Congress, as Fiske did, to refrain from holding hearings on areas of the investigations he has not completed? Will he conduct a broader inquiry or a narrow-

Jury hands down guilty verdict in murder trial

By Gary Shanks

Jurors in the murder trial of Sherry Henderson deliberated for about two hours Friday before finding the defendant guilty as charged in the Nov. 27, 1993, shooting death of Midlander Angela Perkins-Belcher.

Father of the deceased, Tony Belcher, was visibly relieved when the seven-woman, five-man jury's verdict was read by Judge John Hyde in the 238th District Court at the Midland County Courthouse.

Other family members and friends of the family were also pleased with the verdict.

Attorneys for the defense were clearly surprised by the harshest verdict that could be handed the 21-year-old mother of three.

"I'm flabbergasted . . . truly," said Abner Burnett, lead counsel for the defense.

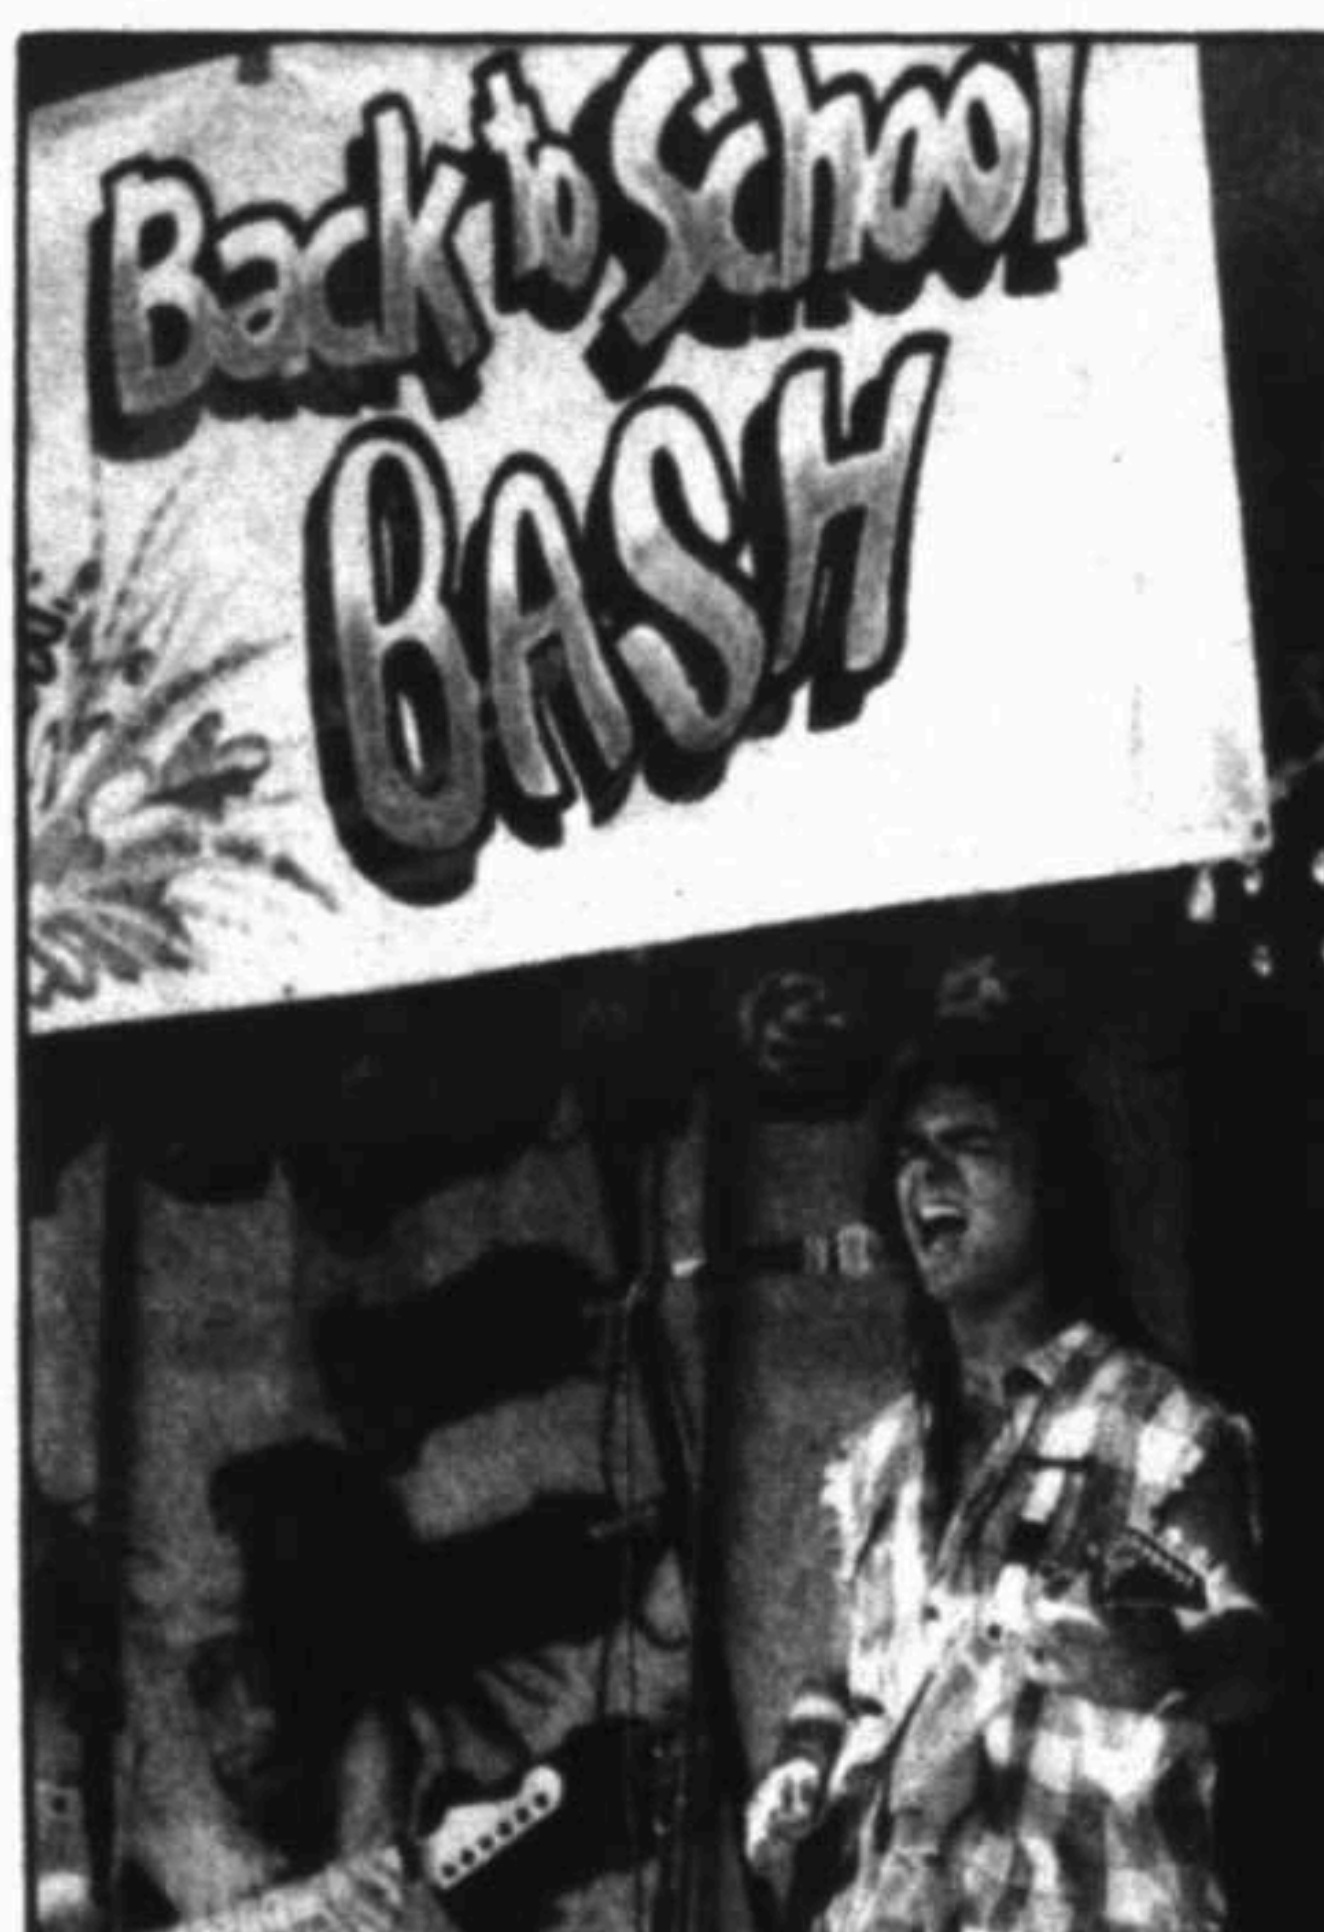

The verdict came after 2½ days of testimony in Summer sting operation leads to 72 arrest warrants for clerks

By Tonie Miller-Uzzell
Staff Writer

A summerlong sting operation identifying stores that sell liquor to minors came to a conclusion Friday with area law-enforcement officers serving 72 arrest warrants to the clerks who sold the alcohol, according to a Texas Alcoholic Beverage Commission (TABC) spokesman.

TABC Major David A. Jackson announced the results of the operation at a press conference Friday. Jackson said the operation — which was conducted in Midland and Odessa — was prompted by increasing incidents of minors using alcoholic beverages.

"These incidents, which do require police action, include assaults, disturbances, minors driving under the influence of alcoholic beverages and minors in possession of alcoholic beverages," Jackson said.

Negotiators approve collider settlement

WASHINGTON (AP) — One of the final hurdles remaining before the book can be closed on the long, tortured saga of the super collider has been crossed.

House and Senate negotiators have signed off on a termination plan worked out by Texas and federal officials, giving the state $720 million in assets and cash as a pay-off for Texas' involvement in the aborted project.

The language approving the settlement is included in an energy and water development appropriations conference report that the House will vote on Tuesday, with Senate action to follow shortly thereafter.

"Texas gets out alive," one of the collider's biggest defenders, Rep. Jim Chapman, said Friday. "It's very much like one feels, I think, the morning after a funeral: That something that's been a part of your life for a long time is now gone and it's over. The service is completed, I guess, and the flowers are withering on the grave."

The Sulphur Springs Democrat, who has long defended the collider's interests from his position on the Appropriations Committee, and Rep. Joe Barton have met with collider opponents to ensure they won't fight the settlement on the floor.

"We think we're in pretty good shape," said Barton, R-Ennis, whose district includes part of the collider campus. "We do not expect at this time a massive fight over this."

Barton, who continues to hold out hope that the collider project will be revived in the next century, said it's time to end the process without further acrimony.

"The super collider deserves a decent requiem," he said.

An aide to one of the giant atom smasher's chief opponents, New York Republican Sherwood Boehlert, said his boss reluctantly will sign off on the settlement language included Thursday in the conference report.

"There is an interest everyone has in actually moving this along," the aide said.

Inmate wins $2 in retaliation lawsuit

TYLER (AP) — Inmate David Ruiz won a $2 damage award from a federal jury that found two prison officers abused their duties.

The jury however, did not back Ruiz's allegations that the officers were retaliating against the prisoner for his role in the 1972 Ruiz vs. Estelle lawsuit, litigation that dragged on for 20 years, resulting in numerous prison reforms and a restructuring of the state prison system.

The nine-day trial ended Thursday after jurors returned a verdict before U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice.

The jury ruled officer Robert Bennett searched Ruiz's cell and confiscated items

Ruiz had a right to keep, including a handball used for physical rehabilitation and a crucial part to his typewriter.

The jury also said William Miers unlawfully searched Ruiz's cell and left it "in a state of disarray."

The jury was allowed to award $1 in damages for each infraction.

Ruiz alleged that after he was returned to state custody in the late 1980s, officials at the Michael and Coffield prison units in Anderson County denied him medical care, interfered with his mail, incorrectly classified him as a gang member and denied him equal protection in disciplinary proceedings.

He also alleged he was singled out for retaliation because of his in-prison legal activity.

He sought unspecified damages and a court order forbidding future retaliation by the defendants, all of whom denied wrongdoing.

Prison Sgt. Kenneth Dunnam was also found to have interfered with Ruiz's mail in violation of his First Amendment rights, but the jury said he did so with a "good faith belief" he was obeying the Constitution. Under law, a public employee is shielded from liability for actions taken in good faith.

Study shows higher leukemia rates around weapons plant

FORT WORTH (AP) — An anti-nuclear activist says she feels vindicated by a state study showing elevated leukemia rates in the vicinity of the Pantex weapons plant near Amarillo.

But health officials question the study's statistical significance.

"Nobody was looking at it until I started poking around," said Susan Lee, whose tracking of cancer trends spurred the Texas Department of Health study. "Now they've done it, instead of an anti-nuke activist. So we can use it to make our point about there being dangers in the area."

Health officials will follow up on their findings, the Fort Worth Star-Telegram reported Friday.

The study was the second in as many years stemming from public concerns about possible health risks from Pantex, a 16,000-acre facility 17 miles northeast of Amarillo. Pantex workers disassemble nuclear weapons there and store plutonium on site in rural Carson County.

The report, which surveys the years 1981 to 1992, also notes a prostate-cancer death rate higher than anticipated in Potter and Randall counties, which encompass Amarillo.

Neither cancer is linked to radiation exposure, the report says.

"We found some cancers that were elevated, but a lot that weren't and overall we just don't see a problem," said Barry Wilson, a public health technician with the Cancer Registry Division.

He noted that cancer includes many diseases and that "33 percent of the people in the country alive today are going to get cancer. A lot of people have these cancers and there just aren't any good answers as to why."

A 1992 Health Department study of Carson County areas downwind from the plant found overall cancer rates lower than the statewide rate.

The study confirmed that brain cancer deaths in all three counties were slightly above the state rate, except among men in Carson County.

BLOW: Panel passes over Fiske for Whitewater investigation

er one?

Acting White House counsel Lloyd Cutler issued a terse statement about the change, saying only that the White House would cooperate fully with Starr's investigation.

In the ruling, the three judges said the decision did not reflect any dissatisfaction with Fiske. Rather, they said, the Independent Counsel Act was written precisely to avoid the conflict of having the administration investigate itself.

"It is not our intent to impugn the integrity of the attorney general's appointee, but rather to reflect the intent of the act that the actor be protected against perceptions of conflict," the court said.

"As Fiske was appointed by the incumbent administration, the Court therefore deems it in the best interest of the appearance of independence contemplated by the act that a person not affiliated with the incumbent administration be appointed."

The dismissal of Fiske caps a tangled sequence of events in which politics and legal procedures limited Ms. Reno's range of actions.

When Ms. Reno appointed Fiske in January, she did so under her own authority. The Watergate-era law providing for judicially appointed independent counsels had lapsed in 1992 in the face of Republican opposition to its renewal.

Ms. Reno had resisted appointing a Whitewater prosecutor for months, arguing that no one she chose could be seen as independent. She selected Fiske, allowing him to write his own mandate, after President Clinton bowed to rising political pressure and asked her in early January to name a prosecutor.

At the time, she promised that if Congress passed a new independent counsel measure she would seek to have Fiske reappointed under the appeals panel's more autonomous aegis. Congress did so last month, and Ms. Reno asked the judges to re-appoint Fiske shortly after.

A few conservative lawmakers, led by Sen. Lauch Faircloth, R-N.C., asserted that Fiske had not been tough enough and asked the court in a letter to dismiss him.

The Republicans had also been critical of Fiske because he had asked the Democratic leadership to narrow the scope of the Whitewater hearings substantially. Republicans said the Democrats found this request to be a convenient excuse for holding proceedings that did not examine many of the larger issues raised by Whitewater.

Fiske also declined to publish any facts surrounding his decision not to bring criminal charges related to the White House-Treasury contacts.

He said that virtually all of the material he had gathered came from grand jury proceedings that, under federal criminal rules, had to remain secret. But in so doing, he opened himself to complaints by conservative Republicans that his investigation was incomplete.

Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, reflected the view of many of his conservative colleagues Friday when he said that Fiske had done an incomplete job.

"It is clear from the evidence that there were areas of the investigation the independent counsel and his staff never bothered to pursue," Hatch said. "I welcome the appointment of Ken Starr, and it is my expectation that he will strive to uncover the full story."

But associates of Fiske said that he had done a thorough job, given the time he was in the post. Ms. Reno, for instance, praised Fiske for giving "selfless and distinguished service to the task."

And Rep. Jim Leach, R-Iowa, who has been aggressively pushing for more extensive Whitewater hearings, also said Friday that Fiske had done a fine job.

In a brief statement that he issued through the Justice Department, Fiske said that he had been privileged to hold the position and that he would cooperate with Starr.

"I wish Ken Starr the very best," he said.

The assignment was seen as the capstone to the career of Fiske, 63. His reputation for even-handedness dates from 1976, when, even though he had been appointed U.S. attorney in Manhattan by President Gerald Ford, he was kept on by President Jimmy Carter at the suggestion of Democratic supporters, including Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan of New York.

Starr, by contrast, is a darling of conservative law groups. He began his legal career as a clerk for Chief Justice Warren Burger. President Ronald Reagan made him one of the youngest federal appeals judges in the nation, when Starr was 37. Five years later, Starr was selected by President George Bush to be solicitor general, the government's top lawyer for Supreme Court cases.

During the Reagan and Bush administration, Starr's name frequently appeared on the short lists when Supreme Court vacancies arose.

Back in private practice, he has continued to be a leading voice of conservative legal thought, and only a few weeks ago, he was appearing on television news programs to argue that the Constitution does not give President Clinton any immunity from the sexual harassment lawsuit filed by Paula Jones.

The three-judge panel was headed by Judge David Sentelle, a Reagan appointee who was one of Starr's friends and colleagues when they served together on the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia.

The other two members of the panel are Senior Judge John Butzner Jr., who was appointed by President Lyndon B. Johnson to the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Richmond, and Senior Judge Joseph Sneed, who was appointed by President Richard Nixon to the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in San Francisco.

There was considerable confusion and sadness Friday afternoon in the Little Rock, Ark., office of the independent counsel, where Fiske's staff members were left wondering whether they, too, would be replaced.

Some lawyers had moved their families to Arkansas and prepared to remain there for the duration of the investigation, which is likely to spill into next year.

"Those who question the independence of Bob Fiske are flat out wrong," said one lawyer on his staff, Rusty Hardin.

Starr becomes the fifth federal prosecutor to look at Madison Guaranty Savings and Loan Association and its relationship to the Clintons.

In the fall of 1992, regulators referred the matter to the U.S. attorney in Little Rock, Charles Banks, who forwarded the case to the Justice Department in Washington,

WEATHER WATCH

Today to be mostly sunny, 90s

Today should be mostly sunny with a high in the mid 90s and south winds 5-15 mph, according to a National Weather Service spokesman in Midland.

Tonight should be fair with a low in the upper 60s.

Sunday's temperatures should be in the upper 90s and the skies should be mostly sunny.

After a low of 66, compared to the record low of 61 set in 1975, the temperatures rose to 94. The record high for the day was 103 set in 1964.

STATE

Scattered showers and thunderstorms erupted around mid-day Friday along the Texas coast and moved inland, spawning weak tornadoes in the Corpus Christi area. Other funnel clouds were spotted in the Rio Grande Valley throughout the afternoon.

No damage was reported at either place.

"These types of tropical funnels develop and dissipate quickly, usually never touching the ground," a spokesman for the National Weather Service said Friday.

The turbulence was blamed on a combination of tropical moisture, heating and a sea breeze.

The weather service described South Texas weather over the past few days as "very tropical... and very moist." The thunderstorms produced very heavy rainfall amounts in a short period of time.

Street flooding was reported in Los Fresnos, about 10 miles north of Brownsville, as a result of a thunderstorm that occurred during the afternoon.

NATION

Temperatures went to extremes across the nation Friday, with record lows in the Midwest and record highs west of the Rockies.

Thunderstorms and showers billowed out in front of a cold front coming down from Canada, and severe thunderstorm watches were posted along the East Coast from Georgia through Maryland, the National Weather Service said.

The cold front helped produce the record lows as it pushed the usual muggy air out of the Midwest.

Morning temperatures dropped from the normal range of 60s and 70s into the 40s and 50s. Friday's low for the Lower 48 states was a nippy 37 at Ironwood and Roseau in Minnesota.

Record lows were registered in eight states, including 39 at International Falls, Minn., 2 degrees lower than the 1946 record. A 100-year record in Kansas City, Mo., got knocked out of the books with a low of 55, 1 degree below the 1894 record. Record lows also were posted in South Dakota, Kansas, Nebraska, Wisconsin, Iowa, and Illinois.

But a high pressure system baked the West. Temperatures hit record highs Thursday and stayed at record levels through the night. Across the desert Southwest, morning temperatures were in the 70s and 80s.

Phoenix, Ariz., woke up to 90 degrees Friday morning, 1 degree higher than its 1980 overnight record.

Correction

A typographical error in Friday's edition of the Reporter-Telegram indicated that "Investigators testified that a weapon was found on Ms. Perkins-Belcher."

This, however, should have read, "Investigators testified that no weapon was found on Ms. Perkins-Belcher."

The Reporter-Telegram regrets the error.

Clarification

In the July 28 back-to-school section it was reported that the University of Texas of the Permian Basin graduated its first freshman class. The university graduated its first pioneer freshman who graduated one year early.

Information was incorrectly supplied by the university.

DESTROY: NATO warplanes blast Serb target termination, to show... that we have the possibility of calling NATO," said Delapresle, who requested the air strikes.

NATO imposed a weapons exclusion zone around Sarajevo on Feb. 21, requiring Serbs to remove weapons to 12.5 miles from the city center or hand them over to U.N. monitors. NATO backed its ultimatum with threats of air strikes.

The Serb weapons seizure early Friday was "a blatant, flagrant breach," said Lt. Gen. Sir Michael Rose, commander of U.N. forces in Bosnia.

An undetermined number of Serb soldiers raided the weapons depot shortly before 4 a.m. from a U.N. collection point in Serb-held Ilidza, just west of Sarajevo.

Ukrainian peacekeepers guarding the depot didn't notice the incursion until the Serbs were seen leaving the site, said Maj. Rob Annink, a U.N. spokesman.

U.N. commanders sent a French Puma helicopter to track the tank, but the helicopter returned to its base after several rounds of small-arms fire hit it, Annink said. No one on board was injured, he said.

Shortly afterward, peacekeepers traveling by road were blocked at a Serb police checkpoint when they tried to move into the area where the tank had been sighted, northwest of Sarajevo.

Initially, NATO intended to go after the seized weapons but had weather and difficulty tracking them forced them to look for alternative targets, Rose said.

The M-18, a U.S.-made vehicle that hasn't been used by U.S. forces since the 1940s, was in an isolated area about nine miles south of the Sarajevo airport, Rose told a Sarajevo news conference.

He said the Serbs were given one hour to withdraw from around heavy weapons in the exclusion zone.

The Serbs had argued they needed the weapons to fend off attacks from Muslim-led government forces north of Sarajevo. But the air strike followed increasing Bosnian Serb defiance of the United Nations.

VERDICT: Jury finds defendant guilty of murder

the case. The prosecution rested Thursday; defense attorneys had their final witnesses take the stand before the lunch break.

Ms. Henderson testified in her own defense. She said she had only purchased the revolver four days earlier and had never before fired it.

"I have never shot that gun or any gun before," she said. "That weekend they were going to show me exactly how to use it to defend myself," she said.

When she left the Zodiac II club — where her sister had been involved in a fight — Ms. Henderson was under the impression that a man had attacked her sister, since she had not seen the fight and had only been told her sister had been beaten, she said.

Ms. Henderson testified that she got her gun from the car and then proceeded to find her sister.

Prosecutors earlier presented witnesses testifying that Ms. Henderson had found her sister, Monique Henderson, in a group of people and had asked who had beaten her sister. When her sister pointed to Ms. Perkins-Belcher, Ms. Henderson turned the gun on the accused attacker, who had earlier struck Monique Henderson with a beer bottle leaving a large, bleeding head wound.

One witness, however, Demetrius Stewart testified that he was one of the first to go to the aid of the injured woman and heard no such exchange before the gun fired.

Burnett also produced character witnesses.

Irene Kelleher testified that Ms. Henderson had been highly motivated over the last two years, had gained her Graduation Equivalency Diploma had gotten a job and got her three children off welfare.

"She's one of our success stories," said Ms. Kelleher, who works for a service associated with the Department of Human Services in Odessa.

Lead counsel for the prosecution, Brian Carney, objected at this point. Hyde sustained these objections and limited character witnesses to stating only their opinion as to whether they consider Ms. Henderson trustworthy.

Others testifying to Ms. Henderson's trustworthiness were Patsy Dubose, whose handicapped daughter was cared for by Ms. Henderson; social worker Sherry Ann Wishert and close friend Beula Dangerfield.

After lunch, jurors heard closing arguments from attorneys.

Co-counsel for the prosecution, Eric Kalenac, said Ms. Henderson's actions constituted murder because she did not retreat when a prudent person would have. "Both (of the Hendersons) had an opportunity to leave the scene, and both chose to remain," he said.

Ms. Henderson testified that when she found her sister bleeding and surrounded by what she considered to be a hostile crowd, she drew the weapon from under her shirt.

Carney told the jury that Ms. Henderson's actions were not justified by the circumstances. "You can't bring a gun to a fist fight — that is not self-defense," he said.

Burnett explained to jurors what constitutes self-defense, and explained how the circumstances of Ms. Perkins-Belcher's death match those in which the laws of the land hold the actor to be exonerated.

"That's where we are today," he said.

A polling of the jury indicated that all 12 had found Ms. Henderson guilty of murder, forsaking the lesser charges of voluntary manslaughter, involuntary manslaughter and criminally negligent homicide.

Early in the trial, Hyde granted a prosecutor's motion to suppress testimony showing that for many days earlier, Ms. Henderson had been stalked and beaten by a vengeful ex-husband. This man also had broken Monique Henderson's arm about six months before the shooting.

Because it was suppressed, the jury could learn nothing about these attacks or that the Hendersons had been approached earlier that night by the ex-husband at another club. They also were not told that days before, Sherry Henderson had been fired upon by her ex-husband's sister, precipitating the desire to purchase a handgun.

Defense attorneys said this would be used as evidence at a later appeal. This evidence was also presented in the punishment phase of the trial. Jurors elected to hear testimony in this phase until almost midnight Friday.

Further deliberations kept the jury at the courthouse until early today.

Jurors can determine a term of five to 99 years in prison with additional fines.

STING: Operation results in 72 arrest warrants

(From 1A)

He said representatives from the TABC, Midland Police Department, Midland County Attorney's Office, Midland County Sheriff's Office, Midland County Constable's Office, Odessa Police Department, Ector County Attorney's Office and Ector County Sheriff's Office all participated in the operation.

"To make our communities a safer place to live, it was decided to conduct a reverse sting to identify retail stores where the minors were obtaining their alcoholic beverages."

"For the reverse sting we utilized minors that were 19 and younger. The minors would enter the stores and attempt to purchase alcoholic beverages. The minors had no identification with them and if asked would state their true and correct age," Jackson said.

Jackson said officers watched the transactions and used surveillance equipment to record the sales on audio and video tapes.

The investigation, which began in June, uncovered that 72 out of 263 stores sold alcohol to the underage customers, Jackson said.

Jackson said officers and minors went to each convenience and liquor store throughout Midland and Ector counties. He said in some stores it was relatively easy for the minor to buy and in others it was impossible.

He said 73 percent of the stores approached did not sell to the minors. But, he declined to call the operation a success.

"Success is measured if this type of operation prevented someone from buying alcohol or getting hurt as a result and that is something that we will never know," Jackson said.

The clerks who sold the alcohol to the minors at each of the 72 stores will be charged with sale of alcoholic beverages to minors and can face a penalty of not less than $100 or more than a $500 fine, and county jail time of less than a year, or both.

The TABC will file administrative actions against the stores where the alcohol was sold, Jackson said. He declined to release the names of the businesses. He said they would not be available while the cases are pending.

"This is an ongoing problem that we will continue to monitor and correct," Jackson said. "We will continue similar operations or different ones and we'll adjust to try and keep this alcohol off the streets."

"As long as any store still sells alcohol to minors, we'll attempt to stop them," Jackson said.

He added that the TABC, as well as the Midland and Odessa police departments, offer educational programs to retail store employees to deal with the problem of selling alcohol to minors.

The TABC conducted a similar operation in 1990 and 93 sales were made then.

COMPETE: Challengers do anything for attention

(From 1A)

Mike Florida, a U.S. Senate candidate in Florida's Democratic primary, has a similar ploy. He says he is "so starving for media attention" he will fast until he gets "equal coverage" in the media.

He faces Hillary Rodham Clinton's brother, Hugh Rodham, and other candidates in the Sept. 6 primary.

A U.S. Senate hopeful in Maryland's Republican primary who voted against a ban on assault-style weapons in the state legislature is converting his opposition to gun control into campaign cash. C. Ronald Franks is selling $5 raffle tickets for a chance to win a semi-automatic AR-15, an assault-style rifle named in the weapons ban in the pending federal crime bill.

Franks said the winner will be subject to Maryland gun laws and, if the person does not qualify to own a firearm, will be given the cash equivalent of the rifle's price — $950.

Byron Bush, a U.S. Senate candidate in Tennessee's GOP primary, took to the highways to try to attract attention: The Nashville dentist pedaled 1,000 miles across Tennessee on a bicycle, promoting his vow to "Break the Cycle of Bad Government." Bush finished fifth in Thursday's primary, but at least he got some exercise.

In New Mexico, Gary Johnson is also campaigning on two wheels. The Republican gubernatorial candidate began a four-day tour of the state Thursday and said he would cycle 475 miles and pick up trash bags along the way.

Hiroshima slowly comes to terms with Japan's responsibility in war

By P.H. Ferguson

HIROSHIMA, Japan — Hiroshima has long been a shrine to victims of the world's first atomic attack, 49 years ago today. But now, the city is painfully coming to grips with its role in Japan's war effort.

For the first time, the city's Peace Memorial Museum has moved to address the issue of Japan's wartime aggression. This year, it added a new wing with exhibits that challenge — if cautiously — the city's traditional view of itself as a blameless victim.

On display since June are photographs of Korean and Chinese laborers enslaved by Japan during the war, and the shipyards and factories of Hiroshima that helped drive the Imperial Army's war machine.

"The city decided on the new wing because it helps us understand the events which led up to the bombing," said Shinji Asakawa of the mayor's office.

Conflicting feelings about Hiroshima commemorations are part of a larger argument over Japan's war role. The country has long averted its eyes from its wartime past.

Rather than fading with time, the controversy has only sharpened in recent months.

In May, Justice Minister Shigeto Nagano was forced to resign after labeling the Rape of Nanking "a Chinese hoax." Historians say an estimated 100,000 Chinese civilians were massacred by Japanese troops after the capture of the then-capital of China in December 1937.

Across Asia, former forced laborers and women conscripted as sex slaves to the Imperial Army are still fighting for reparations from Japan. And Japanese activists have fought for years to try to win use of school textbooks including full and accurate descriptions of Japanese atrocities.

Hiroshima's original museum dedicated to the atomic bombing opened in 1955, ten years after the Aug. 6, 1945, attack. The exhibits are graphic and wrenching: melted coins, stone steps bearing the shadow of a vaporized human being, schoolchildren's torn uniforms.

But one element was always missing: context on the years and months preceding the attack, which killed about 140,000 people in the blast, firestorm and by radiation.

In the late 1930s, in a climate colored by right-wing nationalism, Japan embarked on a ruthless conquest of Asia, still bitterly remembered by its neighbors. It brought the United States into the conflict with its surprise attack on Pearl Harbor.

Japan and the United States fought bloody island-by-island battles for the Pacific. Many Americans believed the bombing was the only way to avoid a U.S. invasion of the Japanese mainland that would have cost hundreds of thousands of soldiers' and civilians' lives.

Over the years, there were periodic calls to bring more balance to the Hiroshima museum's presentation.

But there was reluctance to offend the sensibilities of bomb victims, and fear of Japan's often-violent ultrarightist groups, who are fanatically loyal to the imperial family and furiously object to any criticism of it.

Although the museum's depictions of Japan's war role represent a new level of frankness, they hardly amount to a denunciation of wartime militarism.

In the new museum wing, one exhibit refers to the war on China as an "advance." And the emperor, in whose name the war was fought, is not mentioned.

Perhaps because of that, the right wing has raised no serious objections to the new displays.

Survivors groups also appeared ready to accept change in the depiction of the bombing, despite their deeply felt contention that nothing could justify the horror that was inflicted on the city.

"We thought some history of Hiroshima was necessary," said Yasuo Miyasaka of the Welfare Center for Victims of the Atomic Bomb, a survivors group.

Debate over Hiroshima's commemorations is far from over. About 20,000 Koreans, mostly slave laborers, died in the atomic attack.

Casualties mount from Israeli raid on Lebanese town of Shiite Muslims

DEIR ZAHRANI, Lebanon (AP) — Rescue teams dragged four wounded survivors Friday from the rubble of a house destroyed in an Israeli air strike that killed seven civilians, including two children.

The rescue raised the number of wounded in Thursday's air raid to 17. Those killed in the raid in Deir Zahrani, a Shiite Muslim town of 9,000, were buried Friday in a huge funeral staged after noon prayers.

Shiite Muslim guerrillas fired a total of 13 rockets into the Israeli-occupied border strip in southern Lebanon on Friday. Israeli gunners and their surrogate South Lebanese Army militiamen retaliated by shelling guerrilla positions. Security sources reported no casualties on either side.

Israel issued a highly unusual apology for Thursday's raid. The casualties were from three families who lived in the two-story house. Rescue squads with flashlights clawed through the rubble all night long to dig out survivors.

Prime Minister Rafik Hariri and several Cabinet ministers joined the thousands of mourners, who wailed "God is great" as the caskets were carried past the wreckage.

"This was a premeditated crime committed by the Israeli leadership. It was clearly a terrorist act designed to terrorize civilians," Hariri told reporters after the funeral.

He demanded that Israel withdraw from southern Lebanon unconditionally.

The rubble was festooned with placards reading "Who will deter such barbarism against children and civilians?" and "Yesterday's aggression was a gift from the New World Order to our children."

The raid was one of three strikes by Israeli fighter-bombers in south Lebanon on Thursday. The others were against guerrilla redoubts in the nearby Iqlim al-Tuffah, or Apple Province.

As crashes mount, Russian aviation comes under foreign criticism

By Greg Myre

MOSCOW — Bad Aeroflot stories are legion: There's the man who found himself seated next to a dog, the jam-packed flights where the extra passengers simply stand in the aisle, and the plane that flew to the wrong city.

But increasingly, the tales focus on white-knuckle adventures in the sky. Ailing Aeroflot is considered one of the most dangerous airlines in the world, with a safety record that has come under increasing attack from abroad.

Friday's crash of a Russian military transport plane, which killed 47 people in Siberia, did not involve Aeroflot. But it was seen as further proof that Russia's entire aviation industry is in turmoil.

The crash came only two weeks after the U.S. State Department instructed government employees to avoid using all Russian airlines unless absolutely necessary. Britain, Canada and others have issued similar warnings.

In addition, the International Airline Passengers Association, based in Washington, issued an unprecedented warning to say that flying anywhere in the former Soviet Union was unsafe.

"We get a lot of complaints about Aeroflot," said Olga Bondina, a travel agent with Time Travel in Moscow, which caters to businessmen. "People are worried about the safety, and they say the flights are always delayed, overcrowded, or else they get canceled altogether."

In the past 18 months, there have been more than a dozen air crashes in the former Soviet Union, involving both commercial and military aircraft, claiming more than 500 lives.

Worldwide, the fatality rate for commercial passengers is less than one in a million. In Russia, the figure is 5.5 per million.

Never a comfortable ride, Aeroflot has often been compared to a bus service with wings. The seats are so flimsy you can feel the knees of the person behind you. The carpet slides on the floor and the toilets are fetid. Many flights are hopelessly overbooked and the extra passengers aren't always asked to get off — sometimes they just stand in the aisle for the entire flight.

Before the Soviet breakup in 1991, Aeroflot was the largest airline in the world with some 4,000 planes, more than 100 million passengers annually and a safety record in line with the international average.

Now the former Soviet Union has more than 300 separate carriers, though most have little money and few planes, and Aeroflot still dominates the Russian domestic market.

The national system of maintenance and safety inspections has collapsed, affecting all airlines as well as military flights.

In one recent horror story, a Russian flight crew had to fix a faulty hydraulic landing system by reportedly lubricating it with lemonade, allowing the plane to make an emergency landing in the northern city of Arkhangelsk, the ITAR-Tass news agency reported.

"The American flying public is entitled to know that we have concerns with the safety of the Russian air transportation system," David Hinson, head of the U.S. Federal Aviation Administration, said last month when the State Department issued its warning.

Russian officials bristle at such criticism.

"I can't understand why the State Department made such a statement," said Yevgeny Lobachev, head of Russia's Air Transport Department.

U.S., N. Korea resume talks on nuclear issue

GENEVA (AP) — In a first test of North Korean nuclear intentions since the death of long-time ruler Kim Il Sung, the United States and North Korea held eight hours of talks Friday but reported no breakthroughs.

The negotiations are meant to persuade North Korea to open up nuclear facilities to full international inspections in return for some form of diplomatic recognition and technical aid.

"The meeting was intensive and covered a full range of the issues we have outstanding between us," said a weary Robert Gallucci, leader of the U.S. delegation, at the end of the day's session.

Gallucci said there was common ground on improving bilateral relations, increasing security in northeast Asia, easing tensions on the Korean peninsula and preserving the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty.

"These are the areas of agreement," he said, "but there are areas of disagreement. To say the devil is in the details is something of an understatement."

North Korean delegation head Kang Sok Ju said no agreements were reached.

North Korea threatened in March 1993 to quit the non-proliferation treaty because of demands that it allow outside inspections of its nuclear facilities. It says its nuclear program is for peaceful purposes, but its refusal to allow inspections has fueled suspicions it is trying to build atomic bombs.

The two delegations agreed to adjourn until Monday to allow both sides to consult at home. A second day of talks had been planned for today.

The talks opened July 8, but were halted a day later by the death of Kim Il Sung. The current session is expected to last about one week.

North Korea has said there will be no change of direction under Kim's son and successor, Kim Jong Il. The late Kim promised to freeze nuclear programs pending the talks, staying off U.S. pressure for U.N. economic sanctions.

In Pyongyang, the North Korean Foreign Ministry reiterated that demands for special inspections of military sites were "unreasonable."

A ministry statement said North Korea's main aim is to get a commitment on aid to replace its old-fashioned graphite-moderated reactor with a modern light-water model. The newer model is safer and produces less plutonium, which can be used to make atomic weapons.

Replacing the North Korean reactors could take up to 10 years and cost $2 billion. The United States expects Japan, Russia and Germany to contribute funds, equipment and expertise.

Zairean soldiers clash with refugees; U.N. suspends aid convoys

GOMA, Zaire (AP) — Deadly clashes between Rwandan refugees and pilfering Zairean soldiers forced the United Nations on Friday to suspend food convoys to hungry people in one of the largest camps near Goma.

A gang of soldiers looting from refugees opened fire Friday morning, killing one elderly Rwandan man and injuring a six-year-old boy and two other refugees, U.N. spokesman Panos Moutzis told reporters.

The killing follows the deaths of two Zairean soldiers in the past two days during clashes with refugees.

Fear of more violence led U.N. officials to suspend food convoys to the camp Katala, many of whose 150,000 refugees depend on aid for survival. They also held an emergency meeting with Zairean military authorities Friday.

"They need to have a lot more discipline among the soldiers, otherwise the situation is going to get out of hand," Moutzis said. "The people being attacked are refugees that have almost nothing."

There was no word when the United Nations would resume the convoys, which were to deliver 220 tons of food to Katala on Friday.

"We're very concerned," said Gillian Hazel, spokesman for the U.N. World Food Program. "They need food going in there everyday."

On Thursday, a Zairean soldier who had demanded money from refugees was hacked to death by a machete-wielding mob at Katala, 40 miles north of here. The day before a Zairean soldier dressed in civilian clothes, but carrying a gun was stoned to death by Rwandans in Kibumba, Moutzis said.

Almost 1 million refugees fled into the Goma area in mid-July from the civil war across the border in Rwanda. Almost all are from the majority Hutu ethnic group who ran from advancing Tutsi troops.

The United Nations estimates more than 20,000 of the refugees have died in the squalid camps, most from cholera or dysentery.

Although the international community has launched a massive aid effort, the United Nations says a long-term solution to the refugee disaster will only come if they return home. But supporters of the defeated Hutu government are telling people not to return, saying they will be killed by Tutsis in revenge for the massacres of minority Tutsis by Hutu extremists.

To counter that propaganda and the rumors sweeping the camps, U.N. authorities helped set up a radio station that began broadcasting to the Goma region Friday.

The station's first hour-long broadcast was packed with public health information and a warning for the refugees to avoid clashes with the Zairean authorities.

But officials said that within a week they would start sending news on the situation in Rwanda, hopefully to encourage people to return.

Moutzis said relief workers here would be receiving 46 buses from Kenya in the next week. They probably will be used to transport refugees. Most returnees have been tramping back home on foot.

Polls indicate ruling party victory in Mexico's elections

MEXICO CITY (AP) — A surprisingly consistent series of national polls points toward a most unsurprising result in Mexico's Aug. 21 presidential race — yet another victory for the Institutional Revolutionary Party.

Many have called this the most competitive Mexican election of the century, the best chance yet for opposition parties to break the 65-year grip of the ruling party known as the PRI and revolutionize Mexican politics.

Yet eight nationwide polls by five prominent polling companies since May have all shown PRI candidate Ernesto Zedillo with a lead over all of its rivals, recently by 20 percentage points or more.

"Perhaps the interest in the polls is that for the first time we have a competitive election from the start," said Jorge Alcocer, a political analyst who publishes the magazine Voice and Vote.

Some, such as a recent Indermec-Louis Harris poll, indicate that the PRI could surpass the 50 percent it won in 1988, a figure most observers believe was inflated by fraud.

Diego Fernandez de Cevallos of the conservative National Action Party made a stunning rally in the polls after winning a May 12 debate with the two other top presidential contenders, almost tripling his ratings to nearly 30 percent in some polls.

"Diego was winning, period," said Vicente Licona of Indermec-Louis Harris. There was "a cascade effect" building from the debate.

But Fernandez waged a sluggish campaign in June and a frightened PRI turned up a massive advertising barrage. Two July polls showed Fernandez at 17 percent to 22 percent.

"Diego lost the opportunity of his life," Licona said.

Many pollsters say they expect a close race, and caution that voter preferences could yet change dramatically in what has been a year of turmoil for Mexico.

"So many things have happened that we can't say now that ... opinions are not going to change," said Rafael Gimenez, whose polls for the daily Reforma have been widely praised by other polling experts.

There is also what Alcocer called "a little war" being fought over the accuracy of the polls.

Miguel Basanez, whose surveys for MORI of Mexico recently showed Fernandez leading, has argued that most other polls exaggerate the ruling party strength because they are taken at houses, where people fear they can be identified and might lose government services or favors if they speak out against the ruling party.

Russian police detain investment firm's president

MOSCOW (AP) — The president of Russia's largest investment company spent Friday behind bars on suspicion of tax evasion while thousands of enraged shareholders rallied, some demanding his release to stop the firm's collapse.

Sergei Mavrodi was taken to police headquarters Thursday night after a dramatic raid in which masked commandos rappelled down the walls of his building and stormed into his eighth-floor apartment through the balcony.

The raid gave Russians a glimpse of one of the richest and most mysterious men in the country — one who has warned that his shareholders could start a revolution if his company, MMM, fails.

Mavrodi was living in one room of the spacious but shabby apartment, having given over the rest to his bodyguards. The walls were covered with insects and a bat, all mounted in frames behind glass.

The only pricey items in the apartment of the sixth-richest man in Russia were an expensive set of encyclopedias and a $60,000 satellite dish, the Segodnya newspaper said in a front-page article.

Mavrodi, 38, watched the apartment search dressed in sweatpants and sandals. Segodnya described him as "a short, heavyish man who speaks as if he had a chronic case of adenoids."

MMM rocketed to fame over the past year, blitting the television airwaves with ads. Although Mavrodi's bespectacled face was featured on MMM shares, he was far overshadowed in the public mind by Lyonya Golubkov, the fictional pitchman who makes enough money investing with MMM to buy his wife boots, then chocolates, then an apartment in Paris.

Mavrodi has not been officially arrested or charged. Tax police accuse him of failing to pay 49 billion rubles ($25 million) in taxes and penalties for Invest-Konsulting, one of 44 companies they say make up the MMM empire. He can be held without charge for two days.

MMM, which claims 10 million shareholders, is widely considered a pyramid scheme without any real investments. Share prices collapsed 99 percent last week after the government announced it could not back money put into MMM.

"Any special help for MMM investors from the budget may only mean that other taxpayers would have to pay for it, which is unfair," said Yeltsin spokesman Dmitry Ardamatsky.

The panic cast harsh light on Russia's largely unregulated securities market, where companies promise huge returns to an inexperienced population desperate enough to risk a lot on high-stakes gambles.

Thousands of shareholders rallied outside company headquarters, many shouting pro-Mavrodi slogans.

New jobs increased while unemployment rose slightly, report says

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. economy kept producing jobs at a brisk pace last month — more than a quarter-million in all — even as unemployment edged upward to 6.1 percent.

The Clinton administration hailed the creation of 259,000 new jobs as good news for American workers. But financial markets, worried that higher interest rates were on the way, turned downward after Friday's Labor Department report.

Analysts said the hiring figures made it more likely the Federal Reserve would move quickly to boost short-term interest rates again. Bond prices dropped sharply after the report, and stock prices quickly followed.

The Dow Jones industrial average fell 19 points. The yield on the 30-year bond, which rises when prices fall, stood at 7.53 percent, up from 7.40 percent on Thursday.

In June, 365,000 jobs were created and since the start of the year the economy has added nearly 2 million jobs to bring the total to 113.6 million.

"Today's figures are further proof that job growth is continuing its solid, steady course," said Labor Secretary Robert Reich. "We're right on track."

At a White House ceremony marking the first anniversary of the administration's economic program, President Clinton said, "The future looks good."

The job-growth figures seemed at odds with other recent data showing slower economic expansion, particularly in consumer spending. The higher payrolls also appeared to contradict the rise in the unemployment rate, which had held steady at 6 percent in May and June.

"We are getting a response to the more aggressive hiring attitude that businesses embarked on this spring," said economist Robert Dederick of Northern Trust Co. in Chicago. "It hasn't finished yet, but with demand growth slowing we may see a fading of employment gains."

The unemployment rate, derived from a survey of households, showed more Americans looking for work last month. The job-growth numbers come from a separate survey of employers' payrolls.

Eugene Sherman, of the Wall Street firm M.A. Schapiro & Co., said the unemployment rate increase may be misleading.

"Clearly the economy is doing very well. It's broad-based with momentum," he said.

"We are probably close to full employment," added Professor Norman Robertson of Carnegie Mellon University in Pittsburgh.

Analysts predicted the Federal Reserve would raise short-term interest rates by at least a quarter percentage point when the central bank's policy-setting Federal Open Market Committee meets Aug. 16. Since February, the Fed has pushed one rate it controls from 3 percent to 4.25 percent, but it has been nearly three months since the last increase.

Recent strong employment growth has created fears that wages will be forced upward as worker shortages develop, leading to higher inflation.

"At this stage there's no reason to be concerned about inflation," said Reich. "We still have room for growth. We're not in any way bumping up against the wall."

Indeed, some analysts said the Federal Reserve may be overly concerned that the economy is reaching capacity and could needlessly push borrowing costs higher.

O.J. trial to get state-of-the-art courtroom technology

LOS ANGELES (AP) — It is a tedious exercise that eats up valuable time: the reading back of testimony after an objection or a question during a trial.

But viewers of the O.J. Simpson trial won't be hearing much from the court reporter, thanks to a computer system being installed in Superior Court Judge Lance Ito's courtroom that will provide instant transcripts, video and graphics.

The $50,000 system includes a digitally enhanced 5-foot TV screen for jurors and smaller screens for lawyers, the judge, the court reporter, the clerk and the bailiff.

"It's wonderful, but then I helped design it," said Superior Court Judge George Trammell, who had computer terminals installed three years ago in his courtroom and upgraded the system this year with a laser disc player and CD-ROM.

Trammell said he suggested that Ito use computers for the Simpson case — with its expected volumes of motions and evidence — after overhearing defense attorney Robert Shapiro talking about getting his own.

"I said the last thing you want is for the lawyers to come in with their own systems," Trammell said.

For at least the last four years, many Los Angeles County civil courtrooms have used computers. Trammell's system is the first and only one permanently installed in a criminal courtroom in the county.

Besides offering instantaneous transcripts, the system videotapes witnesses and catalogs documents and evidence.

But saving time is not the system's biggest asset, Trammell said. The setup helps jurors perform their fundamental duty, discerning the truth, he said.

Currently, if a deliberating jury wants to review testimony, the court reporter must be summoned to read it aloud. Usually, the reporter has gone on to another trial, and a time must be scheduled for him or her to return.

Such read-backs are costly and time-consuming, and they don't reflect the witness' tone of voice or body language.

"If you have someone who's lying, and their body language is giving them away, a juror can see that on the videotape," Trammell said. "You can't get that from a transcript."

If a juror or attorney wants to review evidence or testimony, a simple keystroke brings it up. Normally, a bailiff or a court reporter must physically retrieve such documents.

The system in Ito's courtroom is expected to be up and running by the start of jury selection Sept. 19 in the Simpson murder trial.

Lawmakers scrap liquid-metal reactor

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressional negotiators have decided to scrap a nuclear research reactor program, although the Senate earlier had agreed to continue it.

Lawmakers from the House and Senate decided to provide $83.8 million to terminate the advanced liquid-metal-reactor research program. The Clinton administration had asked the program be ended, fearing it could lead to nuclear proliferation.

The action reflects the views of the House, which also had voted to discontinue the program in fiscal 1995. The project is being conducted at Argonne National Laboratory facilities in Chicago and Idaho. The Senate had provided nearly $100 million to continue the program.

Know thine enemy: Analysts study Western fires from inside

■ Fire behavior analysts assigned to wildfires search for clues to where the blazes will turn next.

By David Foster
Associated Press

ENTIAT, Wash. — It crawls. It walks. It lies down at night, then awakens by day to run through the woods. When Bob Walker describes the biggest wildfire in the West, there's a reason it sounds like a living thing.

"It is a living thing," said Walker, a fire behavior analyst who takes the pulse of the beast each day, seeking clues to a question on the mind of everyone here: Where will the fire go next?

The answer is critical. Across the West, heat and drought have produced some of the most volatile fire behavior ever observed — from a wind-whipped blaze in Colorado that killed 14 firefighters to a cluster of fast-spreading fires in

■ More national news/8B

Washington that have charred more than 190,000 acres in two weeks.

What determines whether a wildfire will creep along the forest floor or explode into the treetops? Why does it spare one canyon, only to fill the next with a firestorm of 200-foot flames?

It is Walker's job to know. As one of the 50 fire behavior analysts assigned to the West's wildfires, he rises each day before dawn and falls back into his tent around midnight, tracking the weather and the fire to make the dangerous work of firefighting a little safer.

He uses sophisticated computer models and detailed weather forecasts. But this week, as Walker drove up the smoke-filled Entiat River valley on a scouting mission, no high-tech gadgetry was needed to see the severity of the Tyee fire, which has burned more than 116,000 acres across the eastern slopes of the Cascade Range. It is the biggest of dozens of fires burning in the West.

Along one half-mile stretch, 200-foot flames had roared down from the ridge, turning trees into charred poles, leveling houses.

One witness saw a whole tree sucked up into the clouds, twirling in a tornado of flame. Others saw a flame tornado turned on its side by the wind, performing barrel rolls across the treetops. Walker calls that a horizontal-roll vortex. Those who saw it called it terrifying.

"It was pandemonium here," Walker said. "This is some incredible fire behavior we're seeing."

Farther up the road, on a ridge the fire had not yet reached, Walker stared at a line of flame creeping across the canyon wall. The wind was relatively calm, the temperature was 92, and smoke billowed high in a brown column.

This kind of fire, known as a plume-dominated fire, worries wildfire experts even more than high winds. Wind, at least, fans flames in a predictable direction. A plume-dominated fire follows the fuel, pulsing out anywhere it finds dry vegetation, creating its own erratic winds.

Experts have just begun to understand the phenomenon, learning since 1989 that plume development often can be predicted by low humidity, high temperature and atmospheric instability, which can have an effect similar to opening the flue of a chimney.

Walker, 45, has been a fire behavior analyst since 1987. In the winter, he works for the Deschutes National Forest in Oregon, assessing the efficiency of fire preparedness. During a parched summer like this, he goes wherever the fires are burning hottest.

Haggard and droopy-eyed this week after a string of 20-hour work days, Walker relied on a powerful motivation to stay alert — firefighters depend on his advice to keep one step away from the flames.

No one here can forget the July 6 tragedy on Storm King Mountain in Colorado, where 14 members of a "hot-shot" fire crew died, overtaken by wind-whipped flames.

"My job is to predict fire behavior so people can make decisions that won't allow that to happen," Walker said.

New York police ponder possible return of Zodiac killer years later

NEW YORK (AP) — "This is the Zodiac."

Those words, in a childlike scrawl, became the trademark greeting of a killer who filled the New York summer of 1990 with dread.

Now, after years of silence, the Zodiac killer may be back.

In 1990, the Zodiac vowed to kill one person for each of the 12 astrological signs. Stalking a neighborhood that straddles Queens and Brooklyn, he shot to death four men of four different signs, then abruptly quit.

This week, the New York Post got a similar note from someone claiming to be the Zodiac, and detectives are trying to determine if the letter writer is the killer or a copycat.

The letter writer claims responsibility for five shootings that police said left at least two people dead between Aug. 10, 1992 and June 11 of this year. All of the attacks took place in the general area of the 1990 shootings.

Police confirmed four of the attacks, including the two slayings, but said some details of the attacks in the letter do not match up.

Handwriting experts were comparing the note to the taunting letters that were sent to the Post and left at crime scenes by the Zodiac in 1990.

The chief of detectives, Joseph Borrelli, said Friday there was no solid evidence linking the two sprees. A retired lieutenant who helped investigate Zodiac in 1990, Michael Ciravolo, said he believes the real Zodiac has not resurfaced.

"I just think this guy is not as clever as the last guy," he said.

The new letter, written in red ink, begins, "This is the Zodiac speaking here it is," then lists five attacks. The writer also taunts police.

A scoreboard shows the "NYPD" with a score of "0" and a sketched sad face; below it is the Zodiac sign — a circle with cross hairs — with a happy face and a score of "9," the number of claimed shootings dating to 1990.

"Sleep my little dead how we loathe them," the writer added.

In the neighborhood where most of the shootings occurred, residents seemed prepared.

"We're waitin' for him," said 74-year-old Patricia Gerges, demonstrating with a firm kick what would happen if the Zodiac darkened her door.

"I've got a bat," said her son, Michael, 37. "I'll break his kneecaps, then his fingers. He steps in this fence, we've got a dead man."

The latest attacks deviate from Zodiac's precise routine in 1990: He always struck on a Thursday, and always at intervals of 21 days or a multiple of 21. His notes also contained the astrological signs of his victims; police never figured out how the shooter discovered their birth dates.

The new letter does not mention the victims' signs, although of the three known, one was a Leo, one a Libra and one an Aries — all different from the previous victims.

The 1990 letters claimed that the author was the same Zodiac who killed six people in San Francisco during the late 1960s and the early '70s. But police said the New York killer probably got his ideas from the San Francisco attacks, which remain unsolved.

The New York Zodiac led to the city's biggest manhunt since the search for the Son of Sam, David Berkowitz, in 1977. A 50-detective task force was created and a hot line set up. Nearly 2,000 people were interviewed; 50 suspects were questioned.

KGEE retains hold on top spot Country still most-preferred format

By Jimmy Patterson
Special Projects Editor

For the second straight ratings period, KGEE (99.9 FM) has claimed the top spot in the local radio wars.

Results of the Spring 1994 rating period, conducted between March 31-June 22, were released this week by The Arbitron Co., New York.

KGEE increased its market share 2/10ths of a percentage point, rising from a 15.3 in the Fall 1993 ratings period to a 15.5 in the most recent survey.

Remaining at No. 2 was KNFM, which pulled in 11.9 percent of metro survey area listeners, down from a 14.6 in the fall period.

KGEE and KNFM remain in a heated battle to pull in the lion's share of country radio listeners.

KCRS-FM, the third full-time country music station in the Midland-Odessa market, finished with a 4.0 share and in 10th place.

Country music accounts for 31.4 percent of the total audience in the local market, according to Arbitron's figures.

Several stations took large leaps or falls in the most recent survey, including:

■ KCHX-FM, which fell from No. 4 to No. 8 and lost 3.9 percent of its audience, dropping from a 9.5 to 5.6.

■ KMND-AM, which boomed during the Fall of 1993, fell from a No. 3 rating and 10.2 share to a 6.9 share. The home of conservative talk show host Rush Limbaugh, KMND finished the spring book in a fifth-place tie with KODM-FM.

■ Album oriented rock station KBAT-FM, rose from a 6.5 to an 8.9, and from No. 5 to No. 3 in the metro area.

■ KMRK-FM, the local Tejano station, rose from a 5.1 to a 7.9, and lifted its rating from No. 6 to No. 4.

CLEAR AND PRESENT DANGER

Latest Ford film 'must-see thriller'

By Dolores Barclay
AP Arts Editor

Let's see now. When last we saw Jack Ryan, his daughter was recovering from an almost fatal car crash, his wife was pregnant and he was tangling with some pretty harsh Irish terrorists.

Well, his daughter is alive and well and has a baby brother, and Jack's back in the saddle again, riding roughshod over those nasty drug cartels in Colombia.

Paramount Pictures' "Clear and Present Danger," based on the Tom Clancy best seller, brings back Harrison Ford as Ryan. This time around, he's promoted from analyst to deputy director when Adm. James Greer (James Earl Jones) is diagnosed with pancreatic cancer.

While investigating the death of a friend of the president, Ryan discovers the dead man was a money launderer for drug lord Ernesto Escobedo (Miguel Sandoval), and soon is thrust into the "war on drugs."

Only problem: Who are the enemies?

In true Clancy style, enemies are both within and without. In this case, the bad guys go all the way up to the White House and back, and pepper the Colombian jungles. Straddling the middle is a former intelligence officer for Fidel Castro, Felix Cortez (Joaquim de Almeida), who has his own agenda regarding the balance of drug power.

As Ryan delves into his own investigation, the CIA's deputy director of operations, Robert Ritter (Henry Czerny), and National Security Adviser James Cutter (Harris Yulin) launch the president's

'Little Rascals' hits the big screen

■ A '90s version of 'Our Gang,' with Spanky, Alfalfa, Buckwheat and (yuck!) Darla opens at movie theaters — and surprisingly, the remake is not that bad.

By Bob Strauss
Los Angeles Daily News

LOS ANGELES — Memory relapse is about to strike fans of "The Little Rascals," and for Penelope Spheeris — as Yogi Berra immortalized it — it's deja vu all over again.

"I'm not gonna do another one of these remakes, mind you," said Spheeris, the straight-shooting director who followed her blockbuster hit "Wayne's World" with the big-screen "Beverly Hillsbillies" and now, less than a year later, this feature-length version of the "Our Gang" comedies. "But I love doing them, just because it's such a challenge to find the right

LET 'EM STRIKE

■ Who needs the real thing when we're promised a non-union masterpiece like Ken Burns' "Baseball."

By Niki Kapsambelis

MANCHESTER, N.H. — When filmmaker Ken Burns announced he would follow up his acclaimed PBS documentary, "The Civil War," with an 18-hour miniseries tracing the history of baseball, critics chastised him for picking such a frivolous topic.

Instead, one New York critic said, Burns should be tackling more

ON SCREEN

(Condensed movie reviews by Los Angeles Daily News film critics. The rating system for the film list is: 4 stars — Don't miss it; 3 stars — worth your while; 2 stars — Nice moments; 1 star — If you must)

N.Y. Times News Service

ANGELS IN THE OUTFIELD: Schmaltzy, dysfunctional family film remake of the zesty '50s comedy about major league losers and heavenly help. Danny Glover is the short-fused manager of the cellar-dwelling California Angels. Joseph Gordon-Levitt is the foster home kid who has pennant-winning visions. Christopher Lloyd leads the celestial, computer-assisted cleanup crew. PG Rating: ****

BABY'S DAY OUT: Writer-producer John Hughes' latest step on the road to infantilism is a "Ransom of Red Chief" rip-off, in which bumbling kidnappers chase a gleefully oblivious 9-month-old around Chicago. A sick idea — baby is constantly crawling into life-threatening situations — is played out with comic gusto, if not exactly sophistication. PG-13 Rating: ****

BLACK BEAUTY: The best and most faithful adaptation yet of Anna Sewall's warhorse novel. A magnificent stallion recounts his sweet, sad life in Victorian England. First-time director Caroline Thompson has wrought a lovely, intelligent animal film, albeit one that falls slightly short of "The Black Stallion's" mythic grandeur. R Rating: *****

CITY SLICKERS II: Billy Crystal is back in the saddle, but the herd of laughs has disappointingly thinned out in this urbanites-on-the-range sequel. This time, our favorite New York cowboys are searching for hidden gold instead of male-bonded smiles, and it's neither as sweet nor as fun. Jack Palance rustles the show from everyone else, again, as the late Curly's even nastier twin brother, Duke. PG-13 Rating: ****

THE CLIENT: Susan Sarandon and Tommy Lee Jones star as dueling attorneys in the case of a young boy (Brad Renfro), who knows a mob secret but fears reprisals if he reveals it to government prosecutors. First-rate performances, Joel Schumacher's direction and a screenplay that focuses on relationships rather than a fairly thin story line make this third screen adaptation of a John Grisham thriller the best yet. PG Rating: *****

THE COWBOY WAY: "Coogan's Bluff," "McCloud," "Crocodile Dundee," "Midnight Cowboy" — throw them all in a blender, scrape up whatever flies out, and you've got this senseless, cowboy-in-the-city comedy. Woody Harrelson and Kiefer Sutherland are the rustics who bust up an illegal alien enslavement ring. Harrelson supplies the film's only charm, and that's dependent on your tolerance of male narcissism. PG-13 Rating: ****

THE FLINTSTONES: The live-action version of the Hanna-Barbera cartoon looks super, delivers dozens of Stone Age sight gags and paleolithic puns, and boasts the incomparable John Goodman as bumbling Fred Flintstone. But with only the flimsiest of stories to tie it all together, the film gradually becomes a yabber-cabba-yawner. PG Rating: ****

FORREST GUMP: A superb blend of satire and sentimentality powers this look at 30 years of tumultuous history through the eyes of a lovable fool. Low IQ'd Forrest (Tom Hanks) becomes a football star, a Vietnam War hero, a business success and a pop culture guru, all through pretty much dumb luck. Director Robert Zemeckis ("Back to the Future") goes for some impressive computer effects and some badly feigned manipulations. Yet the film's underpinnings remain as dark and complex as those events of the past four decades that have made us all feel kind of like idiots. PG-13 Rating: *****

THE LION KING: Disney's latest animated spectacular isn't quite as seamlessly perfect as the last three features. But it's nevertheless a gorgeous, enjoyable lesson in the eternal cycles of nature and the development of (some very humanlike) behavior. Set in Africa, it's about future King of the Beasts Simba's coming of age. Elton John and Tim Rice wrote the songs, voices include Oscar-winners Jeremy Irons and Whoopi Goldberg's, and the artwork, though often dazzling, is built upon a becoming naturalism. G Rating: *****

LITTLE BIG LEAGUE: A 12-year-old boy (Luke Edwards) inherits the Minnesota Twins from his grandfather (Jason Robards) and decides to become major league baseball's first owner-manager since Connie Mack. An amiable fantasy; it helps to know baseball but the scenario should appeal to anybody who thinks they could handle a glamour job better than the big shots. PG Rating: *****

NORTH: "North" is Rob Reiner's first Carl Reiner movie. Scattershot and leaden, the film more or less rehearses the Dr. Seuss classic "Are You My Mother?" with star Elijah Wood looking to trade in both parents for something in a nice, attentive, loving couple. Wood should have been thrown in screenwriters Alan Zweibel and Andrew Scheinman for lagniappe. Readers not wanting to have the ending spoiled for them should avoid watching "The Wizard of Oz." PG Rating: ****

SCHINDLER'S LIST: Steven Spielberg's epic tale of the German industrialist who saved more than 1,100 Jews from Hitler's ovens is an impressive and moving achievement on every level except the key one: as with all Spielberg movies, there are no fully fleshed-out characters. Liam Neeson does his best with the two-dimensionally written title hero, a money-hungry sensualist who sacrificed much in the name of humanity. Ralph Fiennes eclipses Neeson — weirdly — as a psycho concentration camp commandant. Filmed on location in Krakow and outside the gates of the Auschwitz death camp, in brilliant black and white. R Rating: *****

TRUE LIES: The "Terminator" team of Arnold Schwarzenegger and writer-director James Cameron go for a $100 million, James Bond-style action comedy, with a screwball marriage awkwardly tossed in. Schwarzenegger is such a top-secret, anti-nuclear terrorism agent, even his wife of 17 years (Jamie Lee Curtis) thinks he's just a boring computer salesman. Spectacular stunts and big explosions contribute to the perception that the movie is an overpumped mess. Tom Arnold, as Big Arnold's spy partner, is the best thing in it. Can you believe that? R Rating: *****

WOLF: Jack Nicholson is in top form as a New York book editor who finds that his gradual transformation into a werewolf has unexpected benefits, including a romance with the rebellious daughter (Michelle Pfeiffer) of his crass new corporate boss (Christopher Plummer). Mike Nichols' ambitious attempt to meld supernatural thriller with contemporary urban drama/love story isn't entirely successful, especially in the stretch, and it gets a bit gruesome here and there. But for the most part, it's literate, escapist fun. R Rating: *****

— Ratings for children are by the Motion Picture Association of America: (G) general audiences; (PG) parental guidance suggested as some material may not be suitable for children; (PG-13) special guidance for children under age 13 as some material may be inappropriate for youngsters; (R) restricted, under 17 requires accompanying parent.

RASCALS: Dead ringers obtained in recasting people to fill these (well-known) roles."

Although the "Our Gang" series of 221 shorts and one feature (the bizarre, Civil War-set "General Spanky") began in the silent era and ran 22 years to 1944, it was the cast of kids from the early to mid-1930s who were immortalized by the 100-odd episodes that hit TV, under the "Little Rascals" title, in the '50s.

These included chubby gang leader George "Spanky" McFarland, cowl-necked geek Carl "Alfalfa" Switzer, African-American scamps Matthew "Stymie" Beard and Billie "Buckwheat" Thomas, and the one girl their own age charming enough to disrupt the male-bonding agenda of the He-Man Woman-Haters Club, Darla Hood.

Recasting these well-known, mischief-prone cherubs and their numerous associates required, of course, a nationwide talent hunt. Speeris came up with an astonishing raft of dead ringers; she said, however, that looks were not the main casting criterion.

"I like to cast by what feels right," she said. "I should make up a tape of the hundreds of kids across the country who put the cowl-neck and the freckles and the bow tie on and tried to be Alfalfa. Lots and lots of them looked right, but Bug really felt right. It's hard to explain, but it's an instinctive feeling of being with the original character when you look at this person."

Bug (real name Brandon) Hall is the 9-year-old Texan who makes his movie debut as the caterwauling ladies' boy. Fellow Lone Star stater Travis Tedford, 5, does his first professional acting as Spanky.

The significant role of the irresistible woman who comes between the lifelong friends was filled by Baby Guess? fashion model Brittany Ashton Holmes, 5. Yet another Texan, 7-year-old Kevin Jamal Woods, came off of Clint Eastwood's "A Perfect World" to don Stymie's trademark derby.

And so on down the line. For the kids, go-carting, girl-kissing and all the other Rascally mischief wasn't exactly like recess all the time.

"It was funnier than I thought it was gonna be," Tedford acknowledged. But the pressure of his first acting job was always on his mind. "I was just sweating every time I went on the set. I was going, 'Oh please, please, please, gimme a break.'"

"The thing I thought was most fun was meeting Raven-Simone," Woods said of the former "Cosby Show" kid star, one of many well-known celebrities who make cameos in "The Little Rascals." "She is a beautiful woman, and I got to kiss her."

The movie's real love god had a tough time achieving Alfalfa's most alluring quality. Hall, you see, really can sing.

"It was very hard," he said of duplicating Alfalfa's signature, fingernails-on-a-blackboard warble. "Hitting the high notes was easy, but it hurt my throat to sing that bad."

Speeris had slightly bigger problems.

"Most of these kids were nonactors," she said. "We had to teach them everything. They don't know not to look at the camera. They don't know what a rehearsal is. You want to say something like, 'Move to your left'; they don't know what left is."

Kids would wander off in the middle of takes. They proved fairly adept at memorizing their lines, but woe unto anyone who would try to make a dialogue change. Occasionally, "cut" would have to be called because nature just had, and a young actor answered in his pants.

On the other hand, "In general, kids are very easy to work with," Speeris said. "It was great; I'd do it again in a second. They're very loving. Every day, I'd come on the set and give 'em all a hug. Now I know why teachers do what they do. I say kids still have one foot in heaven. It just makes you feel good to work around them."

Speeris herself is more accustomed to working with youths of a different disposition.

secret, covert action in Colombia to eradicate drug labs, warehouses and the drug lords themselves.

Heading the attack is a dedicated CIA operative named Mr. Clark (Willem Dafoe), who commands the high-tech raids from his hotel room equipped with computer, transmitters and cellular phones.

Ryan is set up as the fall guy for the smarmy Ritter and the self-righteous president (Donald Moffat), who's given to intone such twaddle as: "These drug cartels represent a clear and present danger to the government of the United States." Does anyone remember Iran-Contra?

Meanwhile, Escobedo's empire is crumbling around him from the CIA assault, and Cortez is working with the other drug barons to help dispose of Escobedo.

On the action scale, "Clear and Present Danger" rates an eight. There's no high-tech silliness, but some nicely choreographed destruction. A sniper attack in Bogota on a car caravan carrying Ryan and other government officials is superb and will have you on the edge of your seat.

There's also plenty of computer technology set loose, including the obligatory computer hack who salvages over busting personal codes, and a technician who can match voice prints of just about anyone.

Ford keeps a pained grimace embedded on his face throughout. And when he's not projecting agony, the grimace turns to anger. A little levity might be good.

Anne Archer reprises her role as Cathy Ryan, but has little to do this time around. Thora Birch, who as daughter Sally was an intricate part of the "Patriot Games" script, has even less to do — perhaps two lines.

And Dafoe is wonderful as Mr. Clark, an agent who cares more about his men in the field than the mission itself.

Jones, unfortunately, is given the role of dying mentor. I guess this means no more work for the formidable actor in future Clancy adaptations. His Adm. Greer will be missed.

There's other good support from Joaquim de Almeida, Czerny, Yulin, Moffat and Sandoval. Ann Magnuson puts in a good turn as the FBI secretary Cortez woos for information.

"Clear and Present Danger" is a must-see thriller for adults and high-tech groupies who prefer good acting to pretty faces and grown-up action to multimillion-dollar silliness.

Phillip Noyce, who also did "Patriot Games," directs from a screenplay by Donald Stewart, Steven Zaillian and John Milius. The second unit direction was handled extremely well by David R. Ellis.

"Clear and Present Danger" was produced by Mace Neufeld and Robert Rehme and is rated PG-13.

BURNS: Documentary shows baseball as important history meaningful topics, such as the Spanish-American War.

(From 1B)

Burns ignored the advice, and more than four years later, he appears to have no regrets.

"I actually think the Spanish-American War is not as important, in the grand sum," he said.

About 90 minutes of the nine-part, 18½-hour documentary, "Baseball," were screened for the first time recently at a fund-raising dinner in Manchester. More than the "glorified highlights film" Burns hoped to avoid, "Baseball" is a literary work, the national pastime from a historian's vantage point.

The titles of each episode — or "inning," as Burns calls them — reflect the message he's trying to get across: Baseball is a national heirloom, something to be preserved and celebrated, and mourned if ever we lose it.

"Baseball" cost $7.5 million to make, largely through public and private grants. Burns said he will finish mixing the film's soundtrack next week, and the entire film will be completed in June.

Just as "The Civil War" shows history through the eyes of two soldiers, "Baseball" focuses on two teams: the Boston Red Sox and the Brooklyn Dodgers.

It is due to air in September, although Burns joked that he's willing to scrub the ending and film a new one if the Red Sox win this year's World Series, a feat they haven't accomplished since Prohibition, despite famous near-misses.

A former Pony League lead-off hitter, Burns has twice been nominated for Academy Awards — for "The Brooklyn Bridge" in 1981 and "The Statue of Liberty" in 1985. "Statue" also got an Emmy nomination, and "The Civil War" won that prize in 1990.

But in many ways, "Baseball" is Burns' most ambitious effort, a film that attempts to draw analogies to daily life and free history from the myths that have grown thick around the sport.

The first inning is titled, "Our Game," in reference to a quote by Walt Whitman. The third inning, covering the years 1910 through 1920 and pondering the 1919 Black Sox scandal, is called, "The Faith of 50 Million People." It's an allusion to a character in "The Great Gatsby," a shadowy figure reputed to have fixed the World Series, who could "play with the faith of 50 million people — with the single-mindedness of a burglar blowing a safe."

Burns, who lives in Walpole, sees baseball as a natural topic for his goals in filmmaking, to re-create history and demonstrate its continuity and ties to the present. For him, baseball isn't just a game. It's the key to understanding society.

"It mirrors precisely the country, and those strange and remarkable people who call themselves Americans," he said.

There are tales of drug abuse, gambling, meddlesome owners and complaints that the game "just wasn't what it used to be" — all from the early part of the century, long before such names as Ted Williams and Joe DiMaggio were appearing in box scores.

In a clip from the chronicle of the Black Sox scandal, future baseball commissioner Kenesaw Mountain Landis remarks that the Cincinnati team looks just like a machine, foreshadowing the "Big Red Machine" Reds that defeated the Red Sox in the 1975 World

Ken Burns' documentary "Baseball" is scheduled to debut September 18 on PBS stations across the country.

Series.

Among those who narrate the film, which interviewed more than 65 people, are celebrities such as Gregory Peck and Danny Glover, Tip O'Neill and Ossie Davis. There are common threads throughout the narrative, sentences coming from different eras that begin with the words, "I remember ..." or "My father and I ..." or, "When I was a boy ..."

"There is no other sport in which there is no clock," Burns said. "There is no other sport that begins in the spring, and ends in the fall, like life."

As Burns points out, baseball is so American that for the immigrants of the early 20th century, learning to play the game was a badge of citizenship more authentic than any paperwork with a government seal.

"Baseball" also shows the unsavory side of the game, particularly the segregation that denied some of the sport's greatest players the chance to realize the glory showered on their white counterparts.

Burns personally believes Jackie Robinson breaking the major league color barrier is one of the most important moments in the history of the game — and, by his theory, U.S. history. He says when Robinson first took the field for the Brooklyn Dodgers in 1947, Martin Luther King Jr. was a college undergraduate.

"When we think of civil rights, the jump from the assassin's bullet in Ford's Theater to Jackie Robinson is an instantaneous jump," he said.

If there are any real threats to baseball, Burns believes they are television and its accompanying money and greed. But he urges people not to lament the game as it was in their childhoods, when summers seemed endless and players larger than life.

Talent show planned

ODESSA — Des rt Rose Ministries, Quad K Radio and Heavenly Treasures will present the "Jesus West Texas '94 Vocal Talent Show" today at Life Unlimited Church, Highway 191 and Loop 336.

More than $1,500 in prizes will be awarded with winners in each category performing songs on stage at "Jesus West Texas '94" Aug. 20 at Centennial Plaza here.

Age categories are 0-5, 6-11, 12-16, male 17 plus, female 17 plus and vocal ensembles with up to five singers.

RELIGION IN BRIEF

■ Mission planned

Evan Ezra Woolley, son of Vance and Marie Woolley of Midland, will be leaving Wednesday to serve a two-year mission for The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints in Salt Lake City, Utah.

Woolley

Woolley is a 1994 graduate of Lee High School where he was a member of the National Honor Society and a Texas Scholar. He is an Eagle Scout and a Christmas in April volunteer.

In addition, Woolley achieved four years of perfect attendance in the church's four-year, early morning seminary program.

Upon his return, Woolley plans to continue his education pursuing an engineering degree.

■ Youth rally set

ODESSA — Odessa Christian Faith Center is hosting a youth rally with Eastman Curtis Aug. 13 at the Odessa YMCA.

The rally is set for 5 p.m. until 9 p.m. Activities will include basketball, volleyball, racquetball and swimming. Cost is $5.

In addition, Eastman will speak at the Odessa Christian Faith Center, 8860 N. Andrews Highway, at 11 a.m. and 7 p.m. Aug. 14. For more information call 1-368-7714.

Curtis hosted the "Fire by Nite" television program and hosts the "This Generation" program airing on the Inspirational Network.

■ Writings discussed

Those interested in reading and discussing the writings of British philosopher and theologian C.S. Lewis are invited to Midland's Pages & Prints Bookstore, Plaza Oaks Shopping Center, Wadley at Garfield, Aug. 13.

The free meeting, which will begin at 8:30 a.m., will concentrate on Lewis' "The Four Loves," which include parent/child love, agape love, love for spouse and love of and for God.

The format is informal and no reservations are required. For more information call the store, 570-5173.

■ Parade sponsored

The Faith Temple Church of God in Christ is sponsoring a parade Aug. 13 to celebrate the 20th year of the Spiritual Explosion conference.

The parade begins at 10 a.m. at the intersection of Texas Avenue and Tyler Street, moves down Lamesa Road and concludes at the church, 1605 N. Terrell St.

The 1994 annual Spiritual Explosion is set for Aug. 15-21. For more information call 684-5253 or 682-2663.

■ Session scheduled

Macedonia Baptist Church, 201 S. Carver St., will be hosting the 50th annual session of The Lovely Sunset District Baptist Association Tuesday through Friday.

Theme for the session is "Family: God's Plan for Mankind."

The event begins with a pre-opening musical at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday.

The public is invited to attend.

■ Youth rally held

LEVELLAND — Southwest Ministers Fellowship and South Plains Church of Levelland will be hosting an Area Wide Youth Rally at the church, 1421 E. Cactus Drive, at 6 p.m. Aug. 27.

The South Plains Church SOAR Youth band will be performing and Debra Alderman will be the featured speaker. She is the author of "13 Things Every Teenager Should Know" and "10 Lies About Suicide."

A former public school teacher, Ms. Alderman is the founder of PULSE, a public high school assembly program designed to teach today's youth.

Ms. Alderman will be speaking at the church during the 10:45 a.m. service Aug. 28. For more information call the church, 1-806-894-9674.

■ Minister resigns

Rusty Frazier has resigned after two years as minister of youth and music at First Baptist Church, Westside, Odessa.

He has accepted the position of minister of youth at Midland's Cottonflat Baptist Church.

A 1989 graduate of Midland High School, Frazier attended Howard Payne University and the University of Texas at the Permian Basin, graduating with a bachelor's of arts degree in history and a bachelor's of science degree in mathematics.

Cottonflat Baptist Church will host a luncheon Sunday to welcome Frazier and his wife, Mysti.

■ Missionaries hosted

Hope Lutheran Church, 2003 N. A St., will host missionaries John Chynoweth and Lynn Steinberg Sunday beginning at the 9:30 a.m. Sunday School hour and during the 10:30 a.m. morning worship service.

The two have served in Africa since the mid-1970s. They are trained in missionary work by Campus Crusade for Christ.

Chynoweth will be the guest speaker during the morning worship service. He will show color video from Africa. In addition, the children of the church will sing some of their songs from Vacation Bible School.

All are invited to attend. For more information call 683-1936.

■ Concert scheduled

ODESSA — Cornplanter will present a concert at Unity Church of West Texas, 210 E. 12th St., Sunday.

The concert will be at 10 a.m. All are invited to attend.

■ Mass to be held

SAN ANTONIO — the annual Multi-Ethnic Folklife Mass will be held at 9 a.m. Sunday at Arneson River Theater, San Antonio River Walk.

The Rt. Rev. Lawrence J. Stueben will be the celebrant. The Mass is sponsored by Texas Catholic Conference on Community Ethnic Affairs.

For more information call Carol F. White, 1-210-655-4830.

■ Fall Bazaar set

The annual Fall Bazaar of the Women's Guild of Holy Cross Lutheran Church is set for Sept. 10 at the Midland County exhibit Building.

Booths will be 10 feet by 10 feet and rent for $20 per space. For more information call Karen Riff, 570-1110, or Thelma Leek, 520-8716.

Couple takes leap of faith in casino work

GULFPORT, Miss. (AP) — In 1992, John Landrum was preaching fiery sermons on the evils of gambling from a Baptist church pulpit in Biloxi. Today he's a regular at Gulf Coast casinos.

Landrum decided, after Harrison County voters approved gambling that year, that his place was no longer behind a pulpit but on the neon front lines of the vices he'd once only warned about.

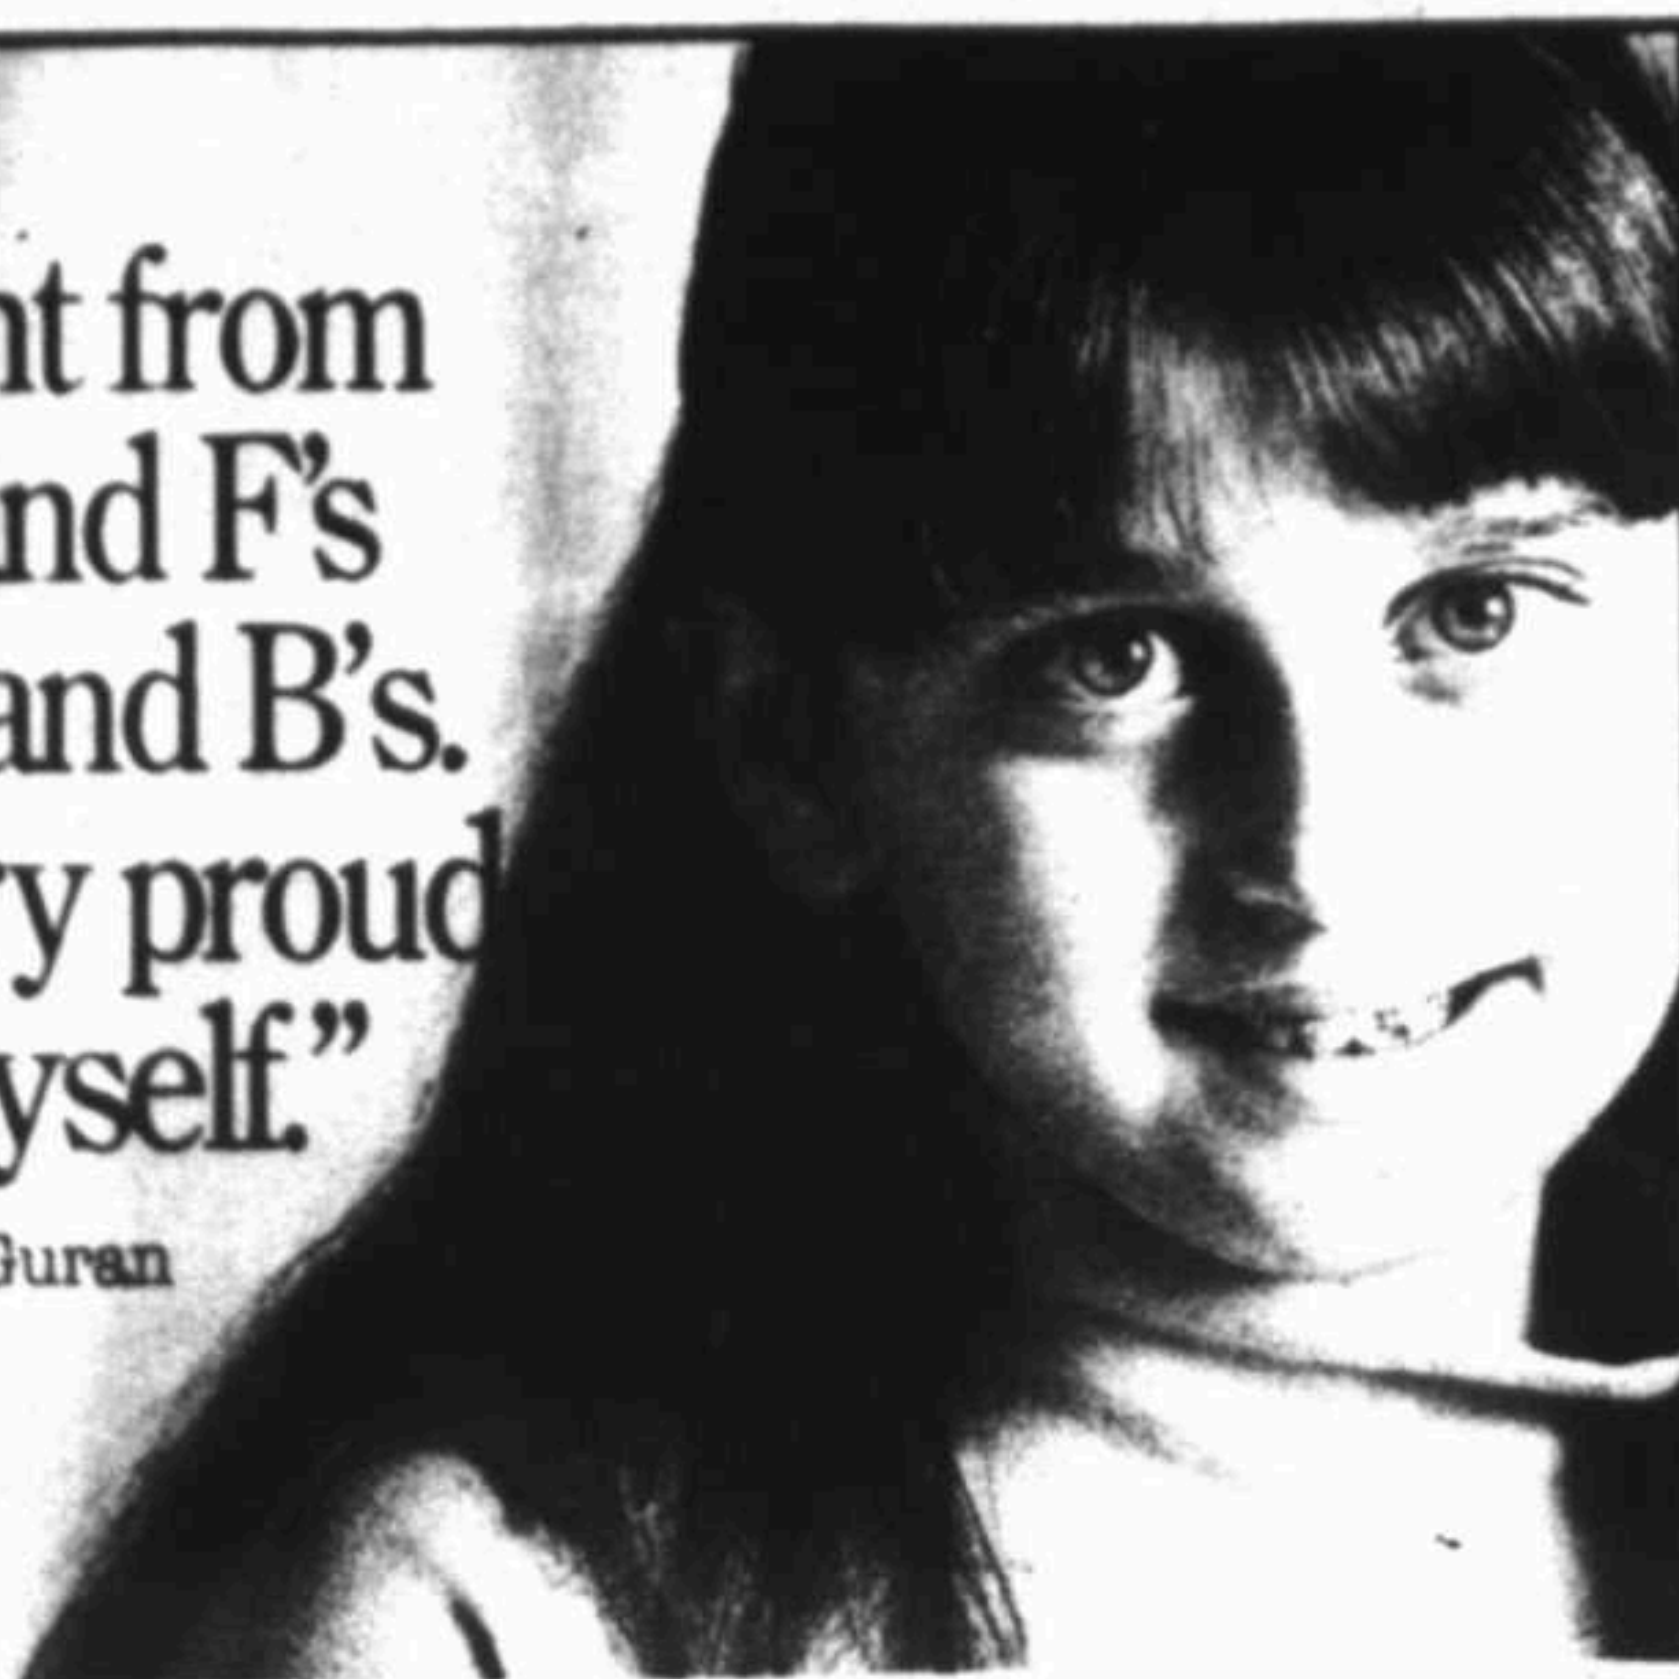

He and his wife, Linda, minister to troubled casino workers and addicted gamblers, people Landrum worried would be considered outcasts by some in the conservative South.

"What we're trying to do is keep people from falling through the cracks," he said.

The Landrums are among many in the religious community working to cope with major changes brought by gambling in the past two years. What began with one casino in early August 1992, has expanded to 14 Mississippi casinos.

"I went from D's and F's to A's and B's. I'm very proud of myself."

Religious groups form coalition to oppose gambling

By David Briggs
Associated Press

Anti-gambling activist Tom Grey calls it a David and Goliath story.

The $330 billion gambling industry, which promotes casinos as the promised land of wealth, is being taken on by small bands of religiously motivated individuals who believe their neighbors are getting ripped off.

If Goliath, in the form of gaming corporations enticing communities with promises of new tax revenues and jobs, is getting stronger, so is David, according to Grey.

This spring, activists from 24 states and 10 faith groups met in Chicago to revive the National Coalition Against Organized Gambling. The national organization arose from burgeoning grass-roots movements opposing the spread of legalized gambling, said Grey, coalition spokesman from Galena, Ill.

"I think we have them right where we want them," says Grey, an antigambling advocate for the United Methodist Church.

There is nothing directly in the Bible about gambling, and some churches have sponsored various forms of chance such as bingo and raffles to bolster their budgets.

But there is a great leap from church bingo halls to casinos and riverboat gambling, say gaming opponents who have been able to build coalitions from the Mormon to the Roman Catholic churches to oppose the spread of large-scale gambling operations.

"We drew a line. Tactically, you cannot eliminate all gambling," said Grey. "Americans love to have their right to freedom to sin."

There is nothing directly in the Bible about gambling, and some churches have sponsored various forms of chance such as bingo and raffles to bolster their budgets. But there is a great leap from church bingo halls to casinos and riverboat gambling, say gaming opponents.

If prohibition is not feasible, that does not mean most Americans want their communities to turn into the next Atlantic City or Las Vegas, advocates say.

In just the past year, the proliferation of casino gambling has stirred people in local churches from Wyoming to Ohio to organize opposition efforts, said William Evans, an adviser on government relations in the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

"It's been inspiring to watch this thing develop," Evans said.

In Missouri, Citizens for Life and Liberty, an antigambling group, works closely with religious groups in opposing casinos. They offer speakers to churches and even sent out proposed inserts for church bulletins where Bible verses against covetousness and idolatry are quoted under the headline "God's Word on Gambling."

"Churches all across the state have become activated," said Mark Andrews, chairman of the state group.

And in his home state of Illinois, religious leaders have helped stop the spread of casino gambling into Chicago, Grey said.

"We believe the tide has turned on gambling," he said.

But the growth of legalized gambling in states such as Mississippi, where since 1992 the number of casinos along the Gulf Coast has risen from one to 14, has left other church leaders less hopeful.

The Rev. Weston Ware, associate director of the Christian Life Commission of the Southern Baptist Convention, says gambling is not the major issue in any denomination.

Ware said it may take 15 to 20 years before Americans treat the issues of how gambling robs poor families of needed income and contributes to child abuse the same way they have the problems associated with drunken driving and cigarettes.

White House lauds Bosnia strike, says Serbs must seek peace

WASHINGTON (AP) — The strikes by NATO warplanes around Sarajevo should prove allied resolve to the Bosnian Serbs and increase pressure on them to accept an international peace plan, U.S. officials said Friday.

"It was a good step forward," said Secretary of State Warren Christopher after the NATO planes, including four U.S. A-10 jet fighters, hit targets around the Bosnian capital.

There were also new calls in Congress for unilaterally lifting the arms embargo on Bosnia so that Bosnian Muslims can protect themselves against attacks from Serbs. Friday's strikes were in retaliation for the seizure of a tank and other heavy weapons from a U.N. depot. Tensions in the former Yugoslavia have risen after Bosnian Serbs earlier this week rejected an international peace plan.

At the Pentagon, Marine Corps. Lt. Gen. John Sheehan, director of operations for the Joint Chiefs of Staff, said NATO dispatched 16 warplanes from bases in Italy: four U.S. Air Force A-10s; four Dutch F-16s; four French Mirages; and four British Jaguars.

Two of the A-10s spotted a Bosnian-Serb self-propelled antitank gun about nine miles south of Sarajevo and destroyed it with 600 rounds from the planes' 30mm cannon. The antitank gun was not one of those that had been seized earlier in the day.

Christopher and other administration officials said the United States will seek tighter enforcement of the U.N. ban on heavy weapons in Bosnian "exclusion zones."

White House press secretary Dee Dee Myers warned that continued violations would lead to more repercussions and could make the lifting of the international arms ban "unavoidable." "We expect the Bosnian Serbs to live up to their obligations," she said.

But Senate Republican Leader Robert Dole said, "I am skeptical this action alone will pressure the Bosnian Serbs into a settlement." He is pressing for Senate action on a measure to end the U.S. arms embargo no later than Nov. 15 whether other nations go along or not.

President Clinton has spoken in favor of lifting the embargo, but so far the administration has resisted calls for it to abandon the ban unilaterally.

At the Pentagon, Marine Corps. Lt. Gen. John Sheehan, director of operations for the Joint Chiefs of Staff, said NATO dispatched 16 warplanes from bases in Italy: four U.S. Air Force A-10s; four Dutch F-16s; four French Mirages; and four British Jaguars.

Two of the A-10s spotted a Bosnian-Serb self-propelled antitank gun about nine miles south of Sarajevo and destroyed it with 600 rounds from the planes' 30mm cannon. The antitank gun was not one of those that had been seized earlier in the day.

Young mother dies in drive-through shooting

DETROIT (AP) — Tenika Rachel Hiter's life was filled with struggles: a series of foster homes, a pregnancy at age 15. But she was looking forward to college and working extra hours at McDonald's to earn money for tuition.

Hiter was behind the drive-through window, working her second shift of the day, when someone fired a shot through the window last week. It hit her in the head, killing her.

"I know that everybody has their turn to die, but Tenika didn't deserve to get killed like that," said Dale Dillard, Hiter's most recent foster mother, bursting into tears. "She had so much going for her. She was just starting to live."

Police have no suspects. McDonald's is offering a $5,000 reward for information that leads to an arrest.

Police initially said they believed the shooting the night of July 30 resulted from a robbery attempt. But they are investigating the possibility that the bullet had been intended for another employee, homicide detective Lt. William Rice said. Nothing was taken from the restaurant.

As they prepared for her funeral today, friends and family members remembered 19-year-old Hiter as soft-spoken, generous and impeccably dressed.

"She never argued with anybody," said Angel Matthews, 17, who stayed in a foster home with Hiter. "You can say something smart to her, but she'd laugh about it and keep on going."

She graduated second in her class last year from Catherine Ferguson Academy, a Detroit school for pregnant teen-agers and teen-age parents. She had been accepted at Henry Ford Community College and wanted to become a physical therapist.

She had found a new boyfriend her daughter, 3-year-old Tashyra, called Daddy.

Hiter didn't smoke or drink, friends recalled. She enjoyed bowling on Friday nights and watching movies with friends, and was picky about her clothes and hairdo.

The neighborhood where she lived and worked is lined with modest homes and flower gardens. It looks peaceful, but residents say crack dealing is widespread just blocks away.

Hiter's sister, Tene Morgan, 17, said Hiter acted as her mother during those hard, lonely years of growing up. Their parents were divorced, and Morgan said their mother moved from city to city to find a job.

Rostenkowski seeks dismissal of all charges against him

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Dan Rostenkowski asked a federal judge Friday to dismiss all 17 criminal charges against him on grounds they violate the U.S. Constitution's separation of powers provision.

"This indictment has been constitutionally defective from its inception," said Dan K. Webb, the Illinois Democrat's chief lawyer. "The motions we have filed ... will give the court the opportunity to ... remedy this breach of the fundamental principles of constitutional law."

Rostenkowski's lawyers filed a series of motions and arguments relying heavily on the constitutional provision allowing the two houses of Congress to police violations of their own rules.

Such constitutional arguments have had little recent success in criminal cases against members of Congress, but Webb said, "No previous charges ever brought against any member of the United States Congress have ever gone so far in violating the separation of powers doctrine."

The government's responses are due Sept. 2. Kevin Ohlson, spokesman for the U.S. attorney's office in Washington, said they would have no comment until then. U.S. District Judge Norma Holloway Johnson has said she will hear oral arguments on the motions later in September.

Rostenkowski was chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee when indicted on 17 counts in May. He is charged with converting $636,600 in federal funds and $56,267 in campaign funds to his personal use.

The indictment accused the lawmaker of hiring ghost employees, using his official account to buy personal gifts from the House Stationery Store, trading stamps for personal cash at the House Post Office and converting official vehicles to personal use.

"The interpretation of House rules and the decision whether to discipline a member for a violation of them is a matter constitutionally committed exclusively to the House," the defense said.

"These rules, which have changed dramatically and repeatedly over the past 20 years vest members with broad discretion in determining whether a particular transaction is properly chargeable to congressional expense allowances."

The court must decide "whether the government can prove a violation of the criminal laws without proving that the congressman violated the internal rules of the House," the motion said.

Teen-ager admitted killing 4-year-old, then cried, mother testifies during trial

BATH, N.Y. (AP) — The mother of a 14-year-old boy on trial for killing a preschooler recounted Friday how her son confessed to the crime after she peppered him with questions for several hours.

Tammy Smith testified that she had a gut feeling her son Eric knew more than he was saying, and during her questioning the baby-faced teen-ager "turned to me and said he did it."

"I lost control," she said. "I asked him why he did it. He just kept saying, 'I don't know, I don't know,' and he cried."

Mrs. Smith, looking dazed and drained, was on the witness stand in Steuben County Court for a second day. Her son is charged with killing 4-year-old Derrick Robie last summer in Savona, a village near here in rural western New York.

The prosecutor has portrayed Eric as a methodical killer who lured Derrick into a trap, then tried to cover his tracks.

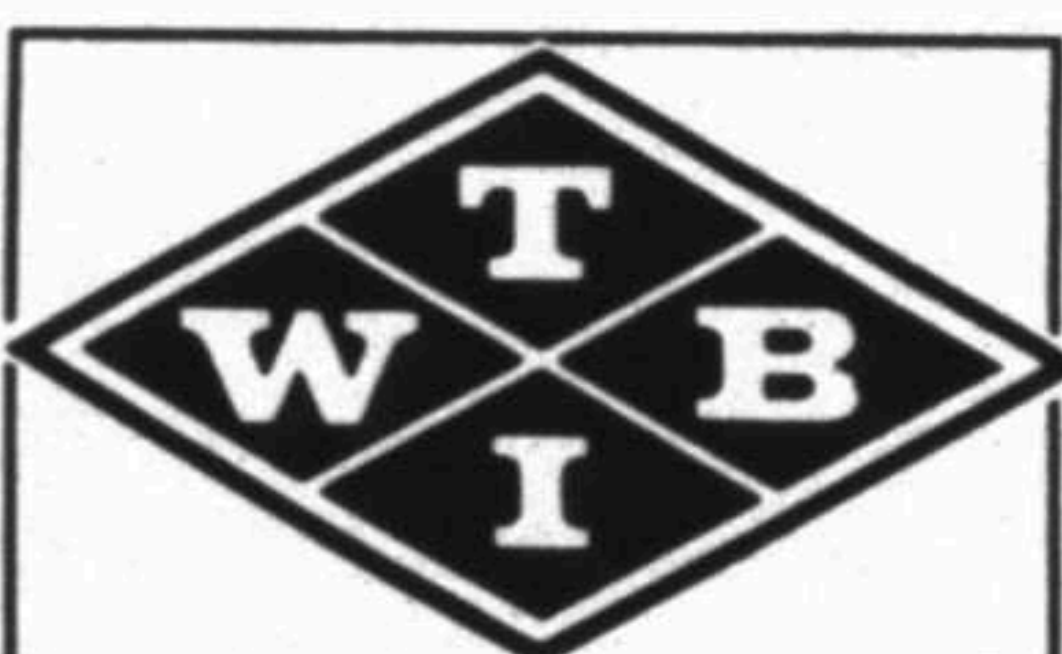

The defense says Eric suffers from uncontrollable fits of sadistic rage brought on by developmental abnormalities possibly caused by drugs his mother took during pregnancy.

Both sides have lined up teams of nationally renowned psychiatrists to argue over whether Eric should be convicted of second-degree murder or committed to a mental home.

If convicted, he faces up to life in prison.

Mrs. Smith said her family suspected Eric had seen something connected to Derrick's death or had been threatened by someone.

Bush hears water problems of Texans living along border

SOCORRO (AP) — The state has not acted forcefully enough to alleviate the plight of Texans living in border communities lacking adequate water and sewerage services, GOP gubernatorial candidate George W. Bush says.

While campaigning in West Texas Friday, Bush got an earful about water problems existing in colonias, the substandard subdivisions scattered all along the border where many residents endure Third World living conditions.

Bush said he believes there is a commitment in the current administration to solve the colonia problem. But he added: "There's a big difference between rhetoric and delivering (solutions) and the fact that there is still a problem speaks volumes."

A spokesman for Gov. Ann Richards' reelection campaign reacted angrily to Bush's remarks.

"I think given Ann Richards' track record of fighting for funding for the colonias, that's an unconscionable comment for him to make," said the spokesman, Chuck McDonald. "Mr. Bush doesn't have a clue as to what he's talking about."

Under Richards, the state has spent about $110 million for grants and loans for water projects which have benefited more than 64,000 colonia residents, added Leticia Vasquez, a spokeswoman for the governor's office.

Yet the problem has persisted, as Bush was told at a meeting with area officials in Socorro, a town just outside El Paso's southern city limits that serves to illustrate the colonia predicament.

Mayor Rogelio Lozoya estimated 60 percent of Socorro's roughly 28,000 people live in sub-par subdivisions. The town itself has no sewerage system and the lack of water is one of Socorro's most urgent problems, he said.

Manny Macias, general manager of the Lower Valley Water Authority, said in a presentation to Bush that local officials have spent several million dollars in water projects in the area.

"However, that is not enough," he said. "We don't feel the people of this area should live in conditions associated with Third World countries."

Macias acknowledged the state has earmarked funds to improve colonias, but he said red tape often complicates attempts to get the funding to where it needs to go.

The growth projected for the area as a result of the North American Free Trade Agreement lends an extra emphasis to the need for infrastructure projects, he added.

Morales denies discrimination claims

AUSTIN (AP) — Attorney General Dan Morales on Friday denied Texas NAACP president Gary Bledsoe's assertion that he was forced to resign his job as assistant attorney general because of racial bias.

"In my judgment, the allegations are groundless and will be found so by the EEOC (Equal Employment Opportunity Commission)," Morales said.

Bledsoe filed a complaint with the EEOC on July 20, and it was made public Friday in a report by The Dallas Morning News.

Morales' staff handed out employment figures for his agency to bolster his argument that "this is the most diverse administration in the history of the attorney general's office."

For example, Morales said only about 5 percent of all Texas lawyers are Hispanic or African American, while "we have close to one-quarter." The figures showed that 50 lawyers in the attorney general's office, or 9.43 percent, are black, and 68, or 12.83 percent, are Hispanic.

Bledsoe said he wanted to meet with Morales to "discuss some very important matters for the people of this state, not just matters that relate to African Americans, but very much some labor and personnel issues that go well beyond my personal situation."

"In my judgment, the allegations are groundless and will be found so by the EEOC (Equal Employment Opportunity Commission)."

"The ball is now in the office of the attorney general," Bledsoe said. "Indeed, I was a victim of discrimination, and I was obligated to do something about it."

Bledsoe had been an assistant attorney general for 15 years before resigning effective Feb. 1, after spending months on paid leave during an investigation into whether he did outside work on state time.

Bledsoe is head of the state chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, Bledsoe was Travis County Democratic Party chairman. He relinquished that post this year.

Republicans made an issue of his position after U.S. Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison, R-Texas, was indicted on charges that she used her previous office as state treasurer for personal and political gain.

Bledsoe said when he resigned that he was given the choice of quitting or being fired, a contention Morales has denied. A Travis County grand jury in March declined to indict Bledsoe.

Michael Tigar, the lawyer who helped in Mrs. Hutchison's successful defense, is representing Bledsoe. Bledsoe said he's prepared to go to federal court if his complaint isn't resolved before the EEOC.

Morales said he didn't expect his re-election campaign to be hurt by the complaint. He said he believed Texans would realize the efforts made by his office to bolster minority representation.

Republican attorney general candidate Don Wittig blasted Morales over Bledsoe's complaint.

MIDLAND COLLEGE

AUGUST 6, 1994

Financial crisis looms from risky investments

ODESSA (AP) — Odessa College is strapped for cash after tying all its available money into high-risk securities.

School officials have borrowed $5.2 million, raised tuition and sliced the budget. The mess leads some financial experts to question whether the junior college's large investment in derivatives was appropriate.

And a national credit rating service has undertaken a review that could result in downgraded ratings on 1985 and 1992 bond series, The Odessa American reported.

"It's hard to tell exactly how far the rating will go down, or if it will go down. We don't have all the information," said Anita Russell, account representative for Moody's Investors Services.

Trouble surfaced publicly when college officials announced in May that a $22 million investment portfolio lost about half its market value in the wake of rising interest rates. The portfolio consisted mostly of high-risk securities called mortgage-backed derivatives.

The problematic securities are now considered so risky and volatile that they are known in some Wall Street circles as "toxic waste."

"The reason: If you touch 'em and they blow up on you, you're killed. You're dead. That's why they're very hard to sell," said Thomas M. Poor, managing director at Scudder, Stevens & Clark, a mutual-fund manager in Boston.

Odessa College bought the securities with all of the school's available money, including the rest of its 1993-94 operating budget. Consequently, the collapse of the portfolio's value forced officials to borrow millions of dollars to meet June debt payments and other immediate expenses. More operating money will come from a $6.24 million bond issue.

Ms. Russell said the college's consolidated revenue bonds presently carry an 'A' rating, considered "above average." If the bond rating is lowered, it will not affect payments the college is making on outstanding debts.

Ray Hutchison, the college's bond attorney, said a financial plan under consideration includes steps to rectify any difficulty with the bond reserve funds.

"The plan should work. The projections for the college are very solid," Hutchison said.

Citing the troubled investments, the college has raised tuition 20 percent, cut its budget $2 million and proposed raising property taxes by 7.2 percent.

President Phil Speegle gave up his $122,458 salary for a token annual payment of $1.

"To be real honest with you, I feel the college would be more hurt if I left than if I stay," he told The Dallas Morning News.

But concerns are not limited entirely to the cash crunch.

Moody's said last week it was unclear whether the college had the authority to invest all its funds in such a manner.

Over half of Texas House members to oppose rule

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Texas congressional delegation isn't a bright spot for the Clinton administration and the House Democratic leadership as they scramble for enough votes to bring the massive crime bill up for debate on the House floor.

A minimum of 218 votes are required to pass the "rule," a key procedural measure that sets the debate limits and whether amendments can be offered. Without approval of the rule, the bill can't be brought up for debate.

At least 19 of Texas' 30 House members, including all nine Republicans, will oppose the rule. It's their way of voicing complaints over a $33.2 billion crime bill stuffed with provisions many of them find objectionable.

To the Texans, the hardest measure to swallow is the one banning assault-style weapons. Gun-control opponents assume that if 218 votes can't be found, Democratic leaders will be forced to strip the assault-weapons ban out of the bill.

The National Rifle Association, which swallowed a bitter pill earlier this year when the House approved a stand-alone assault-weapons ban, has launched a frenzied lobbying campaign against the rule.

President Clinton, top administration officials and gun-control supporters, meanwhile, are weighing in on the other side.

The conflict has left the crime package in limbo, with House leaders delaying consideration until they have enough votes.

Clinton on Friday blamed the NRA, saying the crime bill was "stuck in a web spun by a powerful special interest."

He wasn't alone.

Rep. Ron Coleman, D-El Paso, blasted the NRA and Gun Owners of America for "attempting to sabotage one of the toughest anti-crime measures in history only because it prohibits the sale of the weapon of choice of drug traffickers and gangbangers."

Coleman noted that the crime bill contains money to hire 100,000 more police, increase prison construction and beef up crime prevention. It also would create more than 50 new federal death penalties and send some third-time felons to prison for life.

For Texas alone, the six-year bill could mean 6,000 more police officers, $215 million in prison grants and hundreds of millions of dollars more in grants the state must apply for, White House figures show.

"Opponents of the assault weapons ban should clearly have to answer why they are willing to defeat or delay these important crime programs in order to kowtow to the NRA," Coleman said.

But Rep. Jim Chapman, D-Sulphur Springs, is laying the blame at the feet of congressional gun-control advocates who refuse to compromise.

An opponent of the weapons ban, Chapman will oppose the rule for a bill he favors — a bill that contains $3.5 billion in funding he sought to help states build prisons if they keep inmates behind bars longer.

Asked if the entire crime package could be lost, Chapman said: "I think that's a very realistic possibility if there is an unwillingness to compromise."

But, said Rep. Gene Green, D-Houston, who also opposes the weapons ban: "I think we still have a good chance at it."

Rep. Greg Laughlin, D-West Columbia, said he'd like to support the bill, but can't go along with the weapons ban. "It's bad if you come from my area of the country," he said. "I might feel differently if I represented downtown New York City."

Only two Texans who voted in May against the assault-weapons ban are planning on voting in favor of the rule: House Judiciary Committee Chairman Jack Brooks of Beaumont and Rep. Martin Frost of Dallas.

"We have got to pass a crime bill," Frost said. "We have got to do something about providing more prisons, about providing three-strikes-and-you're-out, about putting more police officers on the street."

"It would be very unfortunate if Congress failed to act on crime. That's the number one priority people are concerned about," he added.

Beyond the weapons ban, Texas Republicans have a long laundry list of other reasons why they dislike the crime bill — in particular some $9 billion in social programs. A favorite target is the Midnight Basketball Program for inner cities.

Collision kills one, injures four

FLORENCE (AP) — Two cars collided along a rural highway Friday, killing one person and critically injuring four others — including three children, authorities said.

Kathy Sprague, a spokeswoman for the Texas Department of Public Safety, said the accident occurred just before noon on the two-lane Highway 195 south of Killeen.

"We have one confirmed fatality," Ms. Sprague said. "We have three ... children being flown to Brackenridge Hospital in Austin with critical injuries, and we have one adult who is very critical."

There were a total of 10 people in the two cars, said DPS trooper Rudy Aleman.

Investigators said it appeared that a southbound vehicle made a U-turn in front of a northbound vehicle. Aleman said speed did not appear to be a factor.

New Minnesota owner Glen Taylor announces sale.

T-wolves sold

MINNEAPOLIS — After 10 months on the market, after a deal to move the team to New Orleans was rejected by the NBA, after a local deal fell through, the Minnesota Timberwolves finally have new owners.

Almost. Glen Taylor, a former state senator from Mankato, announced Friday that he and several unnamed Minnesota businessmen have completed a deal to buy the troubled NBA franchise from Marv Wolfenson and Harvey Ratner. However, all parties say that only a handshake agreement is in place and that all the terms haven't been finalized. The NBA must vote on the transaction, but commissioner David Stern and chief of staff Adam Silver have worked closely with the parties and have given the deal the early thumbs up.

"There is not a document but there is an agreement," said Silver, who has worked overtime for the NBA to facilitate a deal to Minnesota buyers.

Former player Tony Casillas could be back in the blue and silver.

Casillas could return

■ Dallas Cowboys officials deny tampering as former player Tony Casillas' contract with Kansas City is terminated.

Associated Press

DALLAS — Unrestricted free agent Tony Casillas said he hopes to return to the defending Super Bowl champion Dallas Cowboys, now led by his old college coach, Barry Switzer.

The defensive lineman, whose contract was terminated by the Kansas City Chiefs for failing to report to training camp, said he has overcome medical problems and plans to play football this season. He was being treated for hypertension and declined to report to Kansas City.

"I'm fine to play football," he was quoted as saying in Friday's editions of The Dallas Morning News. "I'm looking for somebody to play for. I'll definitely play this season, and you'd have to be stupid not to play for Dallas if you had the opportunity."

Casillas was diagnosed with borderline hypertension and has been on medication since he was treated by an internist and cardiologist, according to a statement from his agent, Tom Condon.

"We understand the reasons the Kansas City Chiefs could not wait for Tony to make a full recovery and why they gave him his release," Condon said. "As a result, he returned his signing bonus, and now is an unrestricted free agent."

"Tony is continuing with the medication he was prescribed, and his prognosis and prospects for resuming his career are excellent."

Switzer, who coached Casillas at Oklahoma, made it apparent the Cowboys should consider re-signing the former starter.

"Any coach would recognize the value of someone like that," Switzer said. "From a coaching standpoint, anybody would want a player like him."

But the salary cap is one challenge the Cowboys would have to overcome.

Cowboys vice president Stephen Jones said the team has $125,000 left under the $34.6 million limit.

So, Dallas would have to release players to make Casillas a contract offer.

Cowboys spokesman Rich Dalrymple said Friday there has been no contact between the team and Casillas or his representative.

Hogan players strive to end streak

Eddie Hatch tees off in the Men's City Golf Championship which started Friday and continues through Sunday at Hogan Park Golf Course.

■ Frank Tryon, Ron Jumper and Harry Bettis shoot 69s to tie for the lead in the first round of the Men's City Golf Championship.

By Mike Butts
Staff Writer

It was probably never meant to be this way. But some see the Midland Men's City Golf Tournament as a battle between the country club players and the municipal course players.

And if Friday's first round at Hogan Park is any indication, the "munies" have a good chance to break the country clubbers' streak this year.

Municipal Hogan Park regulars Frank Tryon and Ron Jumper are tied for the lead with Midland Country Club's Harry Bettis at 69.

As far as could be figured, the last Hogan Park player to win the tournament was Royce Woolard in 1982. Tryon, for one, hopes that changes this year.

"We play out here everyday and I think we know the course better, know the holes better," said Tryon, playing in the tournament for the sixth year. He finished second the first time he played in the men's city. "But I just hope somebody from Hogan wins it this year."

Eighteen-year-old Jeremiah Luttrell, a stroke back of the leaders at 70, had mixed feelings about whether being a Hogan regular could be an advantage.

"I think it's wide open. Since it's a municipal course, there's really not a home-course advantage because everybody gets to play it," said Luttrell, who played at Midland High last school year and will play for Odessa College this season.

But Luttrell added that he thought a Hogan player would win the tournament.

Steve Whiteside, a Midland Country Club member, doesn't think being a Hogan regular is much of an advantage.

Foyt fantastic in qualifying for Brickyard

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — It couldn't have been more fitting. The big drama of second-round qualifying for Saturday's inaugural Brickyard 400 revolved around none other than A.J. Foyt.

Sure, it was stock cars racing around the 2½-mile oval, but the 59-year-old Foyt, a four-time Indianapolis 500 winner and the man who started a record 35 consecutive Memorial Day classics, was the focus of a big crowd that turned out Friday for the second of three days of NASCAR fun at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway.

Foyt, who last raced in the 1992 Indy 500 and announced his retirement in a teary speech on the opening day of qualifying for the 1993 Indy race, said he came here this week "to be part of history."

He certainly accomplished that, turning a lap of 168.596 mph that was barely good enough to put him into the 43-car field. Foyt wound up 40th, the last actual qualifying position, just ahead of three provisional starters added to the rear of the lineup by virtue of season points.

"I was nervous as hell," he said. "I should have stood on it a little harder, I guess. I was just trying to get it close and not screw up."

Unheralded Rick Mast won the pole on Thursday with a speed of 172.414. He will share the front row for the first stock car race at Indy with six-time and defending Winston Cup champion Dale Earnhardt.

Jeff Gordon and Geoff Bodine will go from the second row, followed by Bobby Labonte and Bill Elliott.

Foyt, whose outrageous comments in the heat of battle have often entertained the Indy crowds and made racing officials nervous, said earlier in the week that his wife, Lucy, was not very happy about his decision to race again.

Reminded that she might not be thrilled he made the race, Foyt replied, "Yeah, but my girlfriend is. So what?"

That brought a roar from the fans as Foyt grinned and added, "Aw, I'm only kidding."

Azinger marks return from cancer at PGA Buick Open

GRAND BLANC, Mich. (AP) — In perhaps the most memorable round of his life, Paul Azinger shot a 76 on Friday to mark his return to golf after a nine-month bout with cancer.

That Azinger was 11 shots out of the lead mattered not at all to the gallery that cheered him as he started play and stood to applaud at the 18th hole as they made the turn to the front nine.

"Physically, I'm tired and emotionally I'm tapped out," Azinger said. "After that big ovation at the start, I just walked around in a bit of a haze for awhile. I think tomorrow will probably be a little bit easier for me."

Paul Azinger tees off after nine months off the tour battling cancer.

A large throng followed the threesome of Azinger, Corey Pavin and Ben Crenshaw around the course, and stood at least 10-deep around every green. Hundreds then would scramble along the ropes and through the trees up the next fairway.

"I think the best part of the whole thing was playing with Paul," said Pavin, whose 66 left him a stroke back of first-round leader Fred Funk. "The large ovation he got on the first tee just made me smile. It's wonderful to see how much the fans love Paul and people who come back."

"It's like the final hole on the last day of a major," associate

Despite winning ways, Houston cannot attract fans to Astrodome

By Laura Tolley

HOUSTON — What more could Houston Astros fans ask for?

The Astros have racked up three consecutive victories at home this week, including Doug Drabek's two-hitter, and Jeff Bagwell was again named the Na-

Eldredge shines; Kwan falls

ST. PETERSBURG, Russia (AP) — Charlie Chaplin on skates. Todd Eldredge parlayed the mannerisms of the comic genius — including an unintentional pratfall — to win the silver medal in men's figure skating Friday night at the Goodwill Games.

The former two-time U.S. champion finished behind 1994 Olympic champion Alexei Urmanov of Russia, breaking his three-year medal drought in major international championships.

Eldredge was the surprise of the skating competition, knocking 1994 Olympic bronze medalist Philippe Candeloro of France into third place.

The 23-year-old Eldredge had failed to produce in big events since winning the bronze medal at the 1991 World Championships. He was 10th at the 1992 Olympics, seventh at the 1992 worlds, and failed to qualify for the last two worlds "Maybe this will cause a new revival of interest in figure skating."

Russians dominated in other events Friday, beating the United States for the gold medal in women's volleyball, winning the men's 3-meter springboard diving event, and capturing two of the three men's gymnastics finals.

Eldredge has been working on bringing more life into his routines. It showed Thursday night in the technical program when he placed second, and especially Friday with the Chaplin routine.

He struck Chaplinesque poses — taking stutter steps, miming the twirling of the cane, hunching his shoulders, pretending to take a flower out of his pocket, adopting a shy, innocent look.

But about halfway through the program, as he was skating backward, Eldredge tripped up in best Chaplin fashion.

"As I was doing my back cross-overs, my foot just slipped right out from under me and I ended up on my rear end," he said.

Despite the fall, Eldredge scored 5.7s and 5.8s, and the 1994 Olympics.

"I'd been training really well for the last three weeks and my confidence was pretty high," Eldredge said. "Not being at the worlds this year, it's good to go out and compete against the guys who were there and to place ahead of some of them. For me, it was my 1994 worlds."

It was a banner night for the hometown skaters at the 7,500-seat Yubileiny Palace of Sports, filled nearly to capacity. Urmanov lives and trains in St. Petersburg, as do Artur Dmitriev and Natalia Mishkutienok, who put on a near-flawless program to win the pairs competition.

Five of the eight skaters, including all three Americans, botched the required jump combination and the overall quality of the skating was average.

Nicole Bobek, Michelle Kwan and Elaine Zayak stumbled through their routines and placed fifth, sixth and seventh, respectively. All three received several marks below 5.0.

In other events Friday:

— In women's volleyball, Russia swept the United States 3-0 (15-8, 15-10, 15-4) to win the gold medal. Japan beat China 3-1 for the bronze.

— In diving, Dmitri Sautin of Russia won the men's 3-meter springboard. China's Chen Shen took the silver and Germany's Jan Hempel the bronze. Scott Donie was the top U.S. finisher in fifth.

Dream Team II more impressive against China

HAMILTON, Ontario (AP) — There was no scare for Dream Team II this time.

One night after trailing unheralded Spain late in the first half before winning by 15 points, the U.S. national team bombed China 132-77 Friday night for its second victory in the World Championship of Basketball.

After being criticized for poor defense and sloppy play in its first game, Dream Team II invited one favorable comparison of the original Dream Team of two years ago. Friday night's 132 points surpassed the Dream Team I high of 127 against Brazil and Lithuania in the 1992 Olympics.

The American team of NBA all-stars led 19-6 5 minutes into the game, but the Chinese stayed close to that margin for the next 10 minutes, trailing 47-33 with four minutes left.

In the last 3:50 of the period,

Dream Team II put on an awe-inspiring display of offense and defense, outscoring China 26-5 for a 71-38 halftime lead. The Americans especially put on a show in the final 1:19, scoring 16 points — six by Joe Dumars and five each by Reggie Miller and Alonzo Mourning — and forcing four of China's 21 first-half turnovers.

Mourning, who fouled out in nine minutes against Spain, came back with 13 points Friday night, 11 in the first half.

Seven Americans scored in double figures and 10 had eight or more points. Shaquille O'Neal had 14 of his 20 points in the second half, including two free throws that gave the United States a 99-56 lead with 10 minutes left.

Dominique Wilkins and Miller had 15 points each, Dumars 13, Kevin Johnson 12 and Shawn Kemp 10 for Dream Team II, whose largest lead was 132-75 in the final minute.

New England defense trips Saints, 24-6

Associated Press

FOXBORO, Mass. — The New England Patriots scored all their points on short drives following New Orleans turnovers for a 24-6 exhibition win over the Saints on a rainy Friday night.

Kevin Turner had a 1-yard touchdown dive and Burnie Leggett caught a 7-yard scoring pass from Scott Zolak as the Patriots scored 14 points in the third quarter. Matt Bahr kicked a 33-yard field goal in the second quarter and Sam Gash had a 1-yard scoring run in the fourth quarter.

Bears 12, Eagles 6
CHICAGO — Erik Kramer and Merrill Hoge, free agents signed to bolster Chicago's sagging offense, hooked up on an early 13-yard touchdown pass as the Bears beat Philadelphia.

Chicago's backup defenders stopped a late Philadelphia drive with just under seven minutes left to preserve the victory at Soldier Field.

Lions 26, Jets 13
PONTIAC, Mich. — Scott Mitchell threw for 123 yards and a touchdown in his Detroit debut as the Lions beat turnover-plagued New York.

Mitchell, signed as a free agent by the Lions to a three-year, $11 million contract, completed 10 of 19 passes in the first half, helping the Lions to a 16-0 lead.

The loss spoiled the debut of Jets coach Pete Carroll, and turnovers played a major part.

Colts 13, Seattle 9
INDIANAPOLIS — Marshall Faulk set up two first-half field goals as the Indianapolis beat Seattle.

Faulk, the second player taken in the NFL draft last spring, rushed for 38 yards on 15 carries and sat out the second half as Indianapolis used reserves for the rest of the exhibition opener.

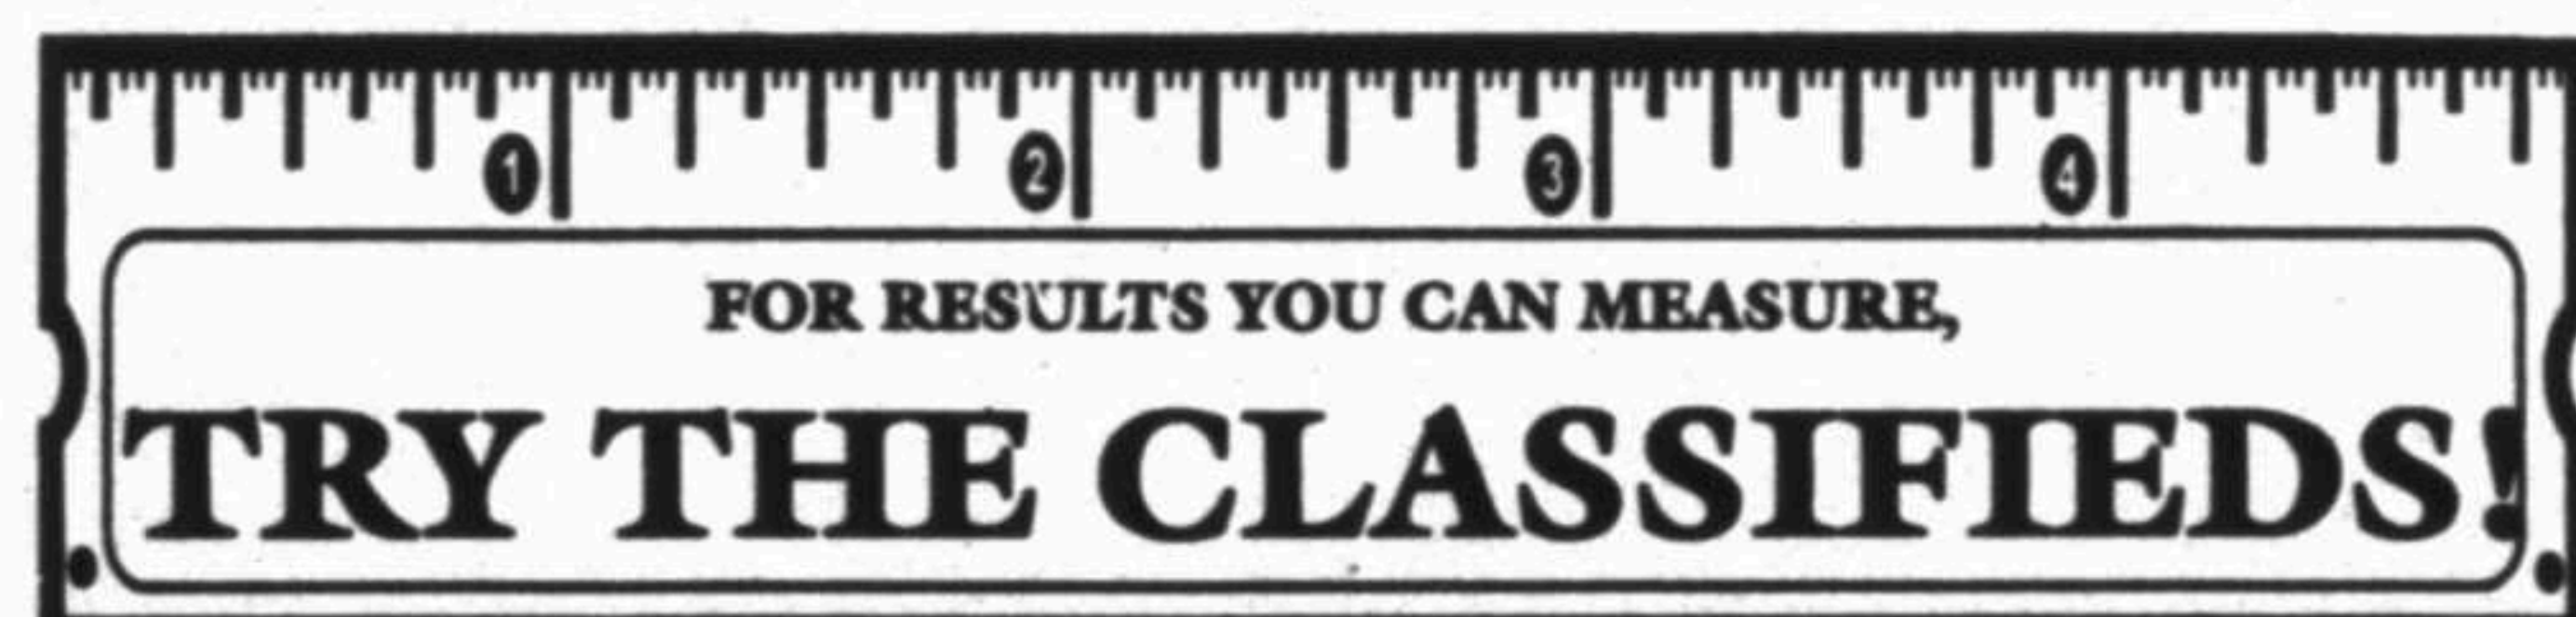

Leonard Humphries returned a pass interception 52 yards for a touchdown in the fourth quarter.

WARNING!

The U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission (CPSC) warns that in-line roller skating — a popular new sport — can be hazardous if skaters do not wear helmets and other protective equipment or do not learn to skate and stop safely. As use of in-line roller skates has increased, it appears that the number of injuries also has increased. CPSC recommends these safety tips to help prevent injuries with in-line roller skates.

Wear a helmet, intended for use with skateboards or roller skates, along with knee pads, elbow pads, and gloves.

Skate on smooth, paved surfaces without any traffic. Avoid skating on streets, driveways, or surfaces with water, sand, gravel or dirt.

Learn to stop safely using the brake pads at the heel of most in-line roller skates. With one foot somewhat in front of the other, raise the toes on the front foot and push down on the heel brake.

Do not skate at night because of your difficulty in being seen and your difficulty seeing obstacles or other skaters.

Your Horoscope

By Jeane Dixon

SATURDAY, AUGUST 6, 1994

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Once the larger risks associated with a business deal have been reduced, move forward with confidence. Financial support will be available when you need it most. A business boom is possible in late fall. Take advantage of an opportunity to travel or further your education. December will be an especially happy month for romance. You and your loved one start the new year in high spirits! Look for a vacation home next spring.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: basketball player David Robinson, artist Andy Warhol, comedian Lucille Ball, actress Stephanie Kramer.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Take care of "top priority" tasks early in the day. Although bold moves are favored, there is such a thing as overdoing it! Let well enough alone where a friend's love-life is concerned.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Getting together with someone who shares your favorite pastimes will boost your spirits. Square away a financial matter that could be subject to misinterpretation.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You will win some and lose some today. One large question mark remains in romance. Postpone making an investment or donation until an adviser can check things out.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): More and more people are coming around to your point of view. A final decision must be made regarding an unusual opportunity. You find that an old romance is alive and well. Go slow.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): An emotional scene will only postpone a decision, not change it. A young person could be a surprisingly wily negotiator. Do not count your chickens before they hatch.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A community campaign will benefit you even if you are not directly involved. Romance teaches you an important lesson. Keeping a diary proves cathartic.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Make certain that increased spending results in better service. Following a healthy diet and exercise regimen will eliminate many ailments. Do not let irritating people know how much their comments "bug" you. Change the subject.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Those who are living a double life had better straighten things out right away. The truth will set you free! Be prepared to change your lifestyle. A temporary sacrifice will be rewarded with great happiness.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A few good friends make up for the disappointment caused by those who criticize your plans. A love-struck teen needs understanding, not lectures. Cut back on physical chores that sap all of your energy.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Rely on those information systems that have served you reliably in the past. You do not have to swim with the sharks just because a friend does. Stick to well-charted waters in financial matters.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A very small thing could bring great delight today. Choose your words carefully when discussing a family problem. Spending a peaceful evening with your mate sets the stage for romance. Forget recent grievances.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): As time goes on, you will gain a better understanding of someone's reluctance to make a commitment. Play your cards carefully and romance could prove long-lasting. Do more listening than talking this evening.

Cliburn describes feeling about his mother day before her death

FORT WORTH — Van Cliburn had a "mystical experience" on stage the day before his mother died half a continent away. At a wake for Rildia Bee O'Bryan Cliburn, the pianist described having an overwhelming feeling about his mother as he walked on stage at the Metropolitan Opera House in New York on Tuesday. She had suffered a stroke days earlier.

"I knew she was in trouble," Cliburn said Thursday. "When I got through the last encore, I rushed to the dressing room to call and she had stabilized and I knew she was with me. It was a mystical experience. That was just so thrilling."

Mrs. Cliburn died Wednesday at age 97 at a Fort Worth hospital, her son at her bedside.

Visitors gathered at a Fort Worth funeral home around a bed where Mrs. Cliburn's body lay in a rose-colored embroidered gown.

"I don't like caskets," Cliburn explained. "I had a bed for my father when he died.... I think it's more peaceful and so much nicer."

The room was decorated with photographs of Cliburn with his mother. Recordings of Cliburn playing Tchaikovsky filled the funeral home.

Cliburn has postponed concerts in New York and Pittsburgh. He is expected to resume his long-awaited national tour Aug. 12 in Detroit.

LOS ANGELES — After swearing his weekly garbage would fill no more than a glove compartment, Ed Begley Jr. had to prove he wasn't just talking trash.

The environmentally vigilant actor crammed a bag including a cookie wrapper, an empty bag of brown rice, a milk carton and a package of spoiled cream cheese into the glove compartment of his battery-powered Volkswagen Rabbit.

The Los Angeles Times witnessed Begley's demonstration Wednesday, a day after Begley appeared before Los Angeles County supervisors to argue against a proposed landfill. Begley, who played a doctor on NBC's "St. Elsewhere," said landfills would be unnecessary if people would reduce their trash output.

An aide to the supervisors dismissed as "dramatic hyperbole" Begley's claim that he threw away only one glove compartment's worth of trash a week.

So, Begley pushed, he crammed, he squeezed, and finally shoved with his feet, to slam shut the glove compartment containing the bulging garbage bag. "This has got to be the smallest... glove box in the history of man," he said. "This is the one time I wish I owned a Buick Le Sabre."

HUNTINGTON BEACH, Calif. — Hangin' ten off a surfboard made them famous. Now tubular talents are honored in a new Walk of Fame in the city known as Surf City.

The Walk of Fame was inaugurated Thursday with six monuments, including one for local hero Robert August, the star of "The Endless Summer," a travelogue that rejuvenated interest in surfing. He owns a local board shop.

Getting a granite plaque was the late Duke Kahanamoku, a Waikiki wave rider regarded as the father of surfing; former world surf champion Mark Richards; and Joyce Hoffman, a two-time world champion.

Some surf heroes didn't even have to get wet to be honored. The walk of fame also honors Tom Blake, an inventor who died May 5. He created waterproof housing for surf photography in 1930, the surfboard fin in 1935 and lifeguard rescue boards. Also honored was filmmaker Bruce Brown, who made "Endless Summer" and other surf movies.

ROME — A movie director kills a man, and the victim's mother haunts him all his life. That's not a script, but real life for Franco Zeffirelli.

The director said he still thinks about the German soldier he killed 51 years ago during World War II.

"In those moments you just don't think — either you are the first one to shoot or you're dead. You become a murderer to save your own skin," Zeffirelli said in an interview in Friday's Corriere della Sera.

"Feelings of guilt? Of course I have them," he continued. "I imagine the face of his mother when she was told that her son was gone. It's a story that has anguished me all my life."

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Trisha Yearwood will help out the folks back home in Georgia with a concert to benefit flood victims.

The country singer from Monticello, Ga., will be the headliner at the Aug. 14 show, her agent said Friday.

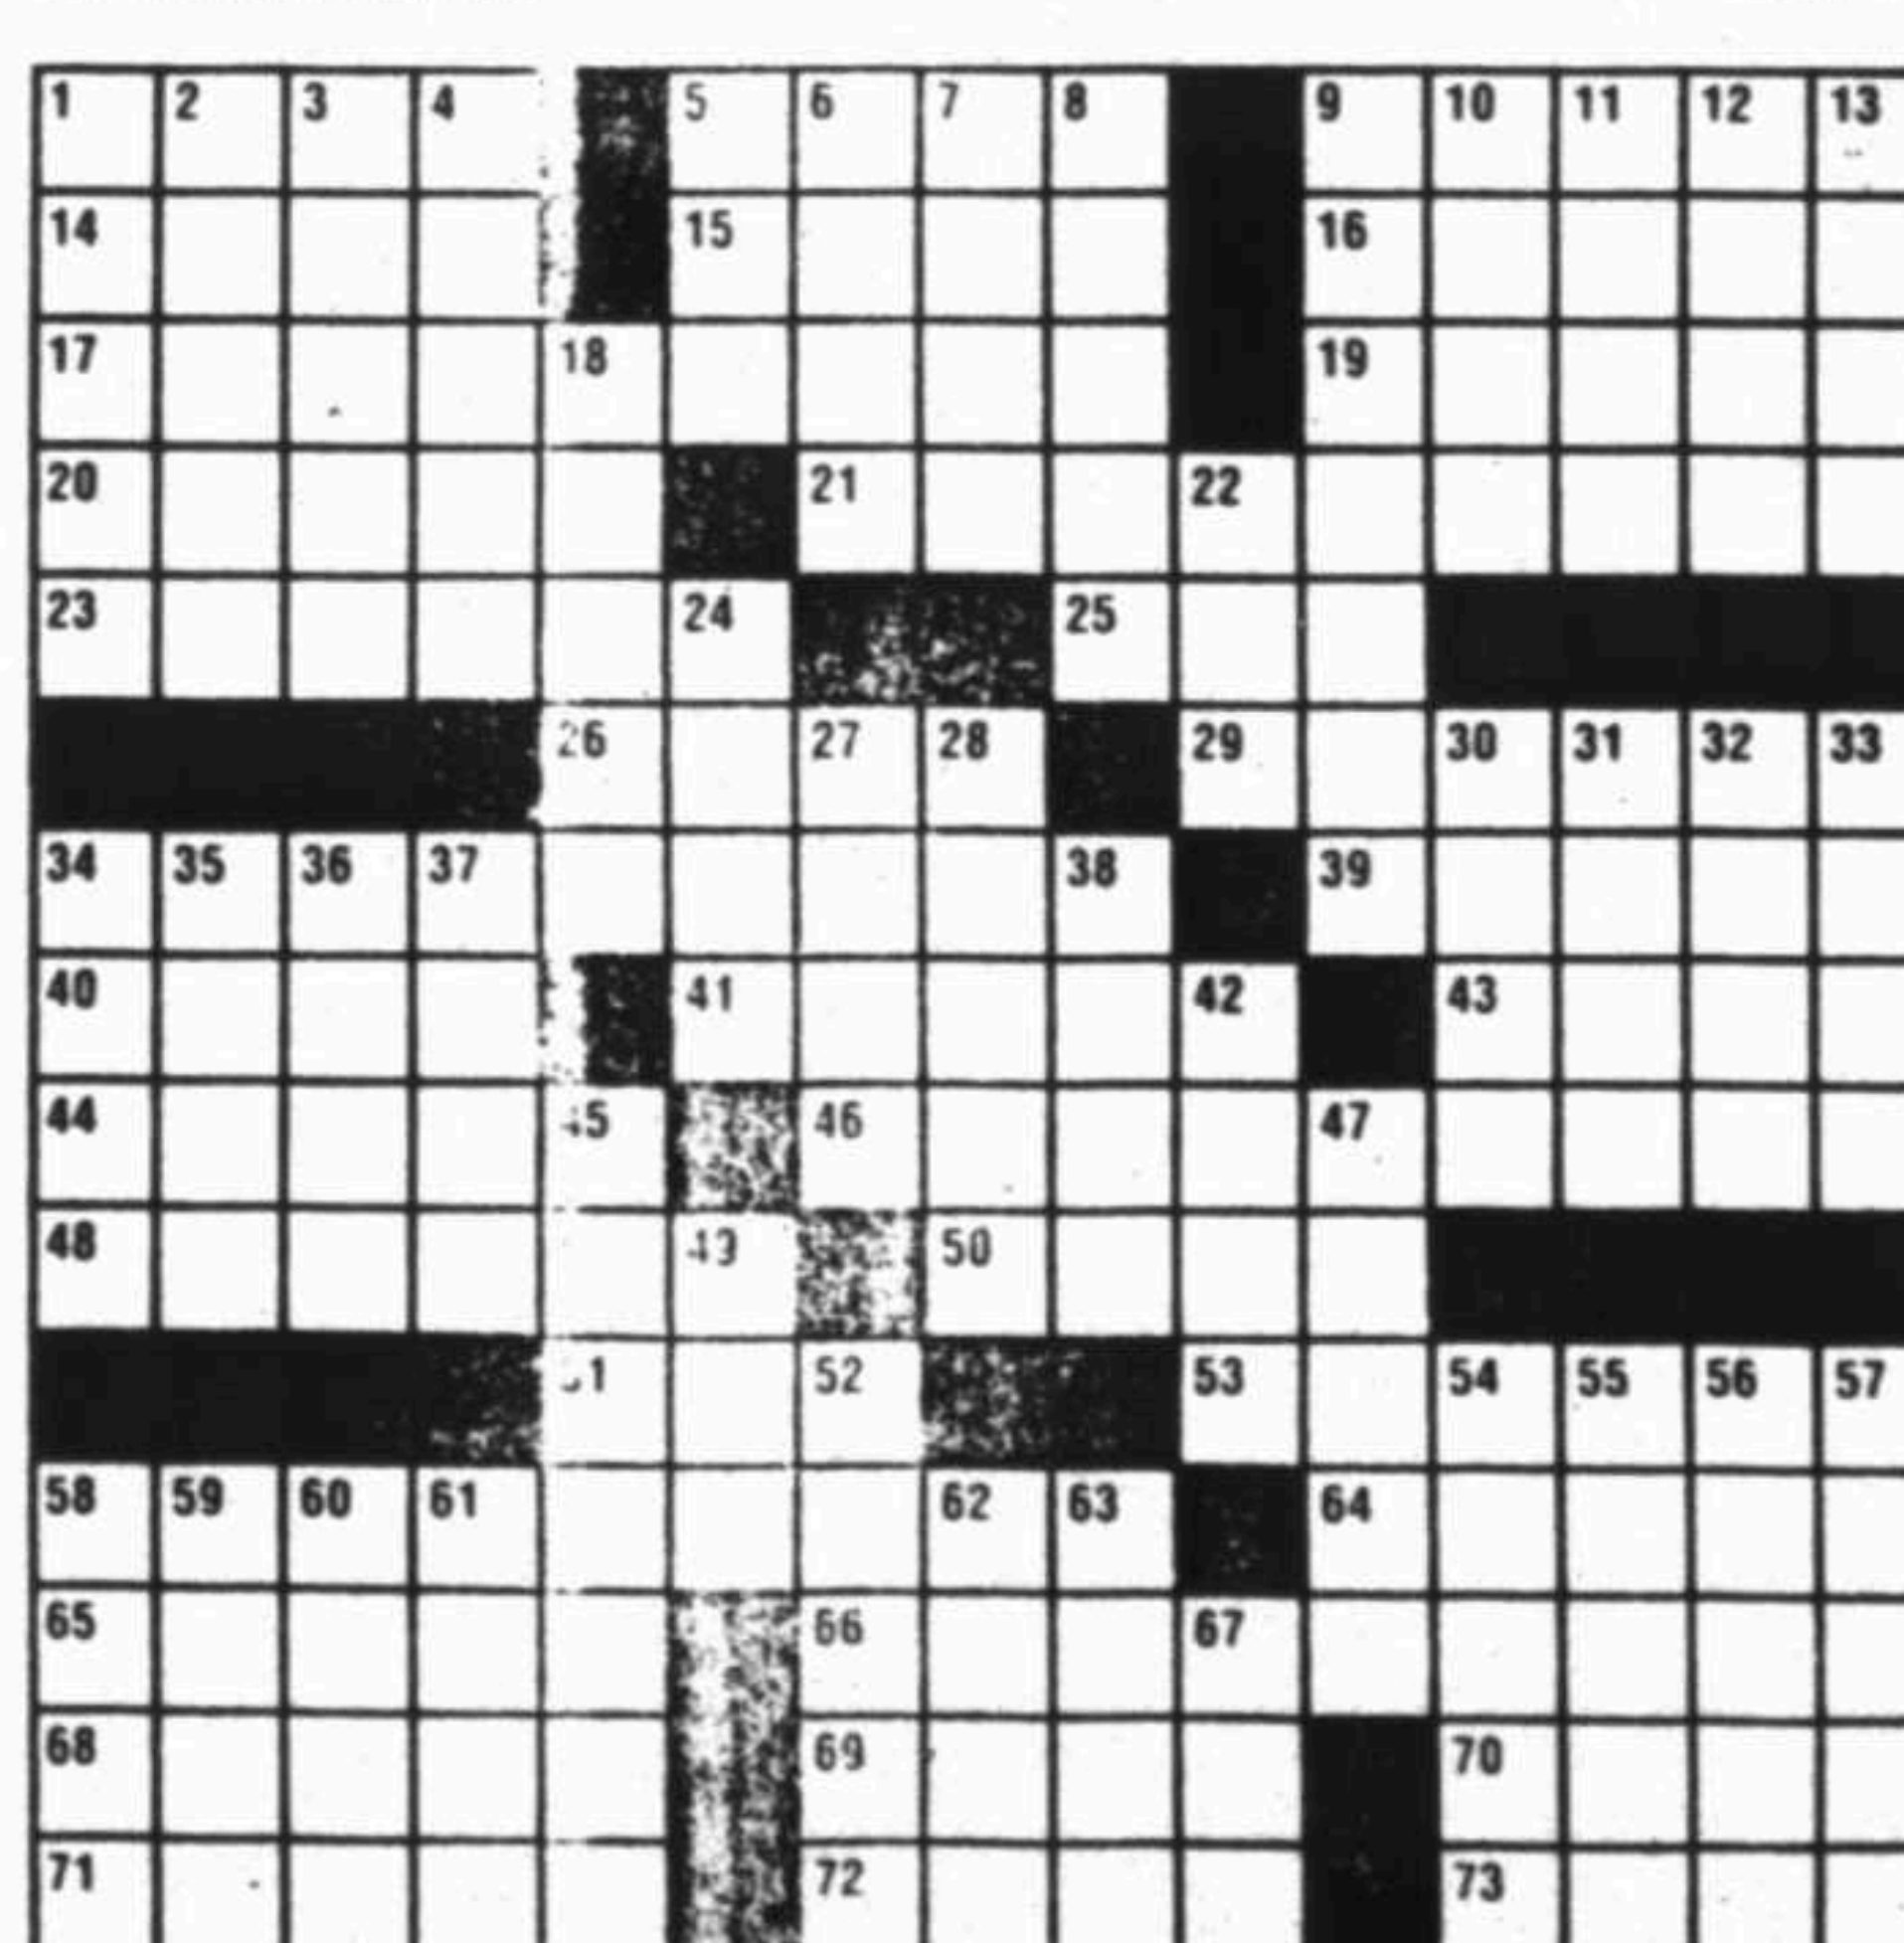

Proceeds will go to the Red Cross, which estimates it will spend $17 million helping flood victims in Georgia, Florida and Alabama.

CITY: Regular Hogan players in first-day lead

(From 1C)

"I think the only real advantage that they have is on the greens because they putt those greens everyday," said Whiteside, who shot 71. "All in all I don't think Hogan's a really tricky golf course. I don't think the advantage for people that play there all the time would be as much as (for example) Green Tree (Country Club players)."

No one typifies the "muny" versus country club sub plot of the tournament more than Will Gray, who is two-strokes off the pace after shooting 71 Friday. Gray is a Midland High graduate who played for Western Texas Junior College this year.

Gray is a bag boy at Midland Country Club.

"It's kind of cool cleaning their clubs and coming out here and trying them," Gray said.

In the tournament's first day, Jumper and Tryon found their way to the top via different routes. Jumper with good putting and Tryon with good drives and approaches.

The tournament played holes 10 through 27 of Hogan's 27 holes Friday. Tryon eagled No. 24 between bogies on 23 and 25.

Bagwell records break Giants

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Jeff Bagwell set Houston team season records for homers, RBIs and extra-base hits Friday night, powering the Astros to a 12-4 victory over the San Francisco Giants.

Bagwell homered, doubled and drove in five runs to raise his major-league leading total to 112. He broke the Astros' club record of 110 RBIs set by Bob Watson in 1977.

Bagwell, who went 3-for-4, hit his 38th homer in the fifth inning to surpass Jimmy Wynn's club mark set in 1967. He doubled in the third inning and now has 71 extra-base hits this season, moving him past Wynn (1967) and Cesar Cedeno (1972) on the club's list.

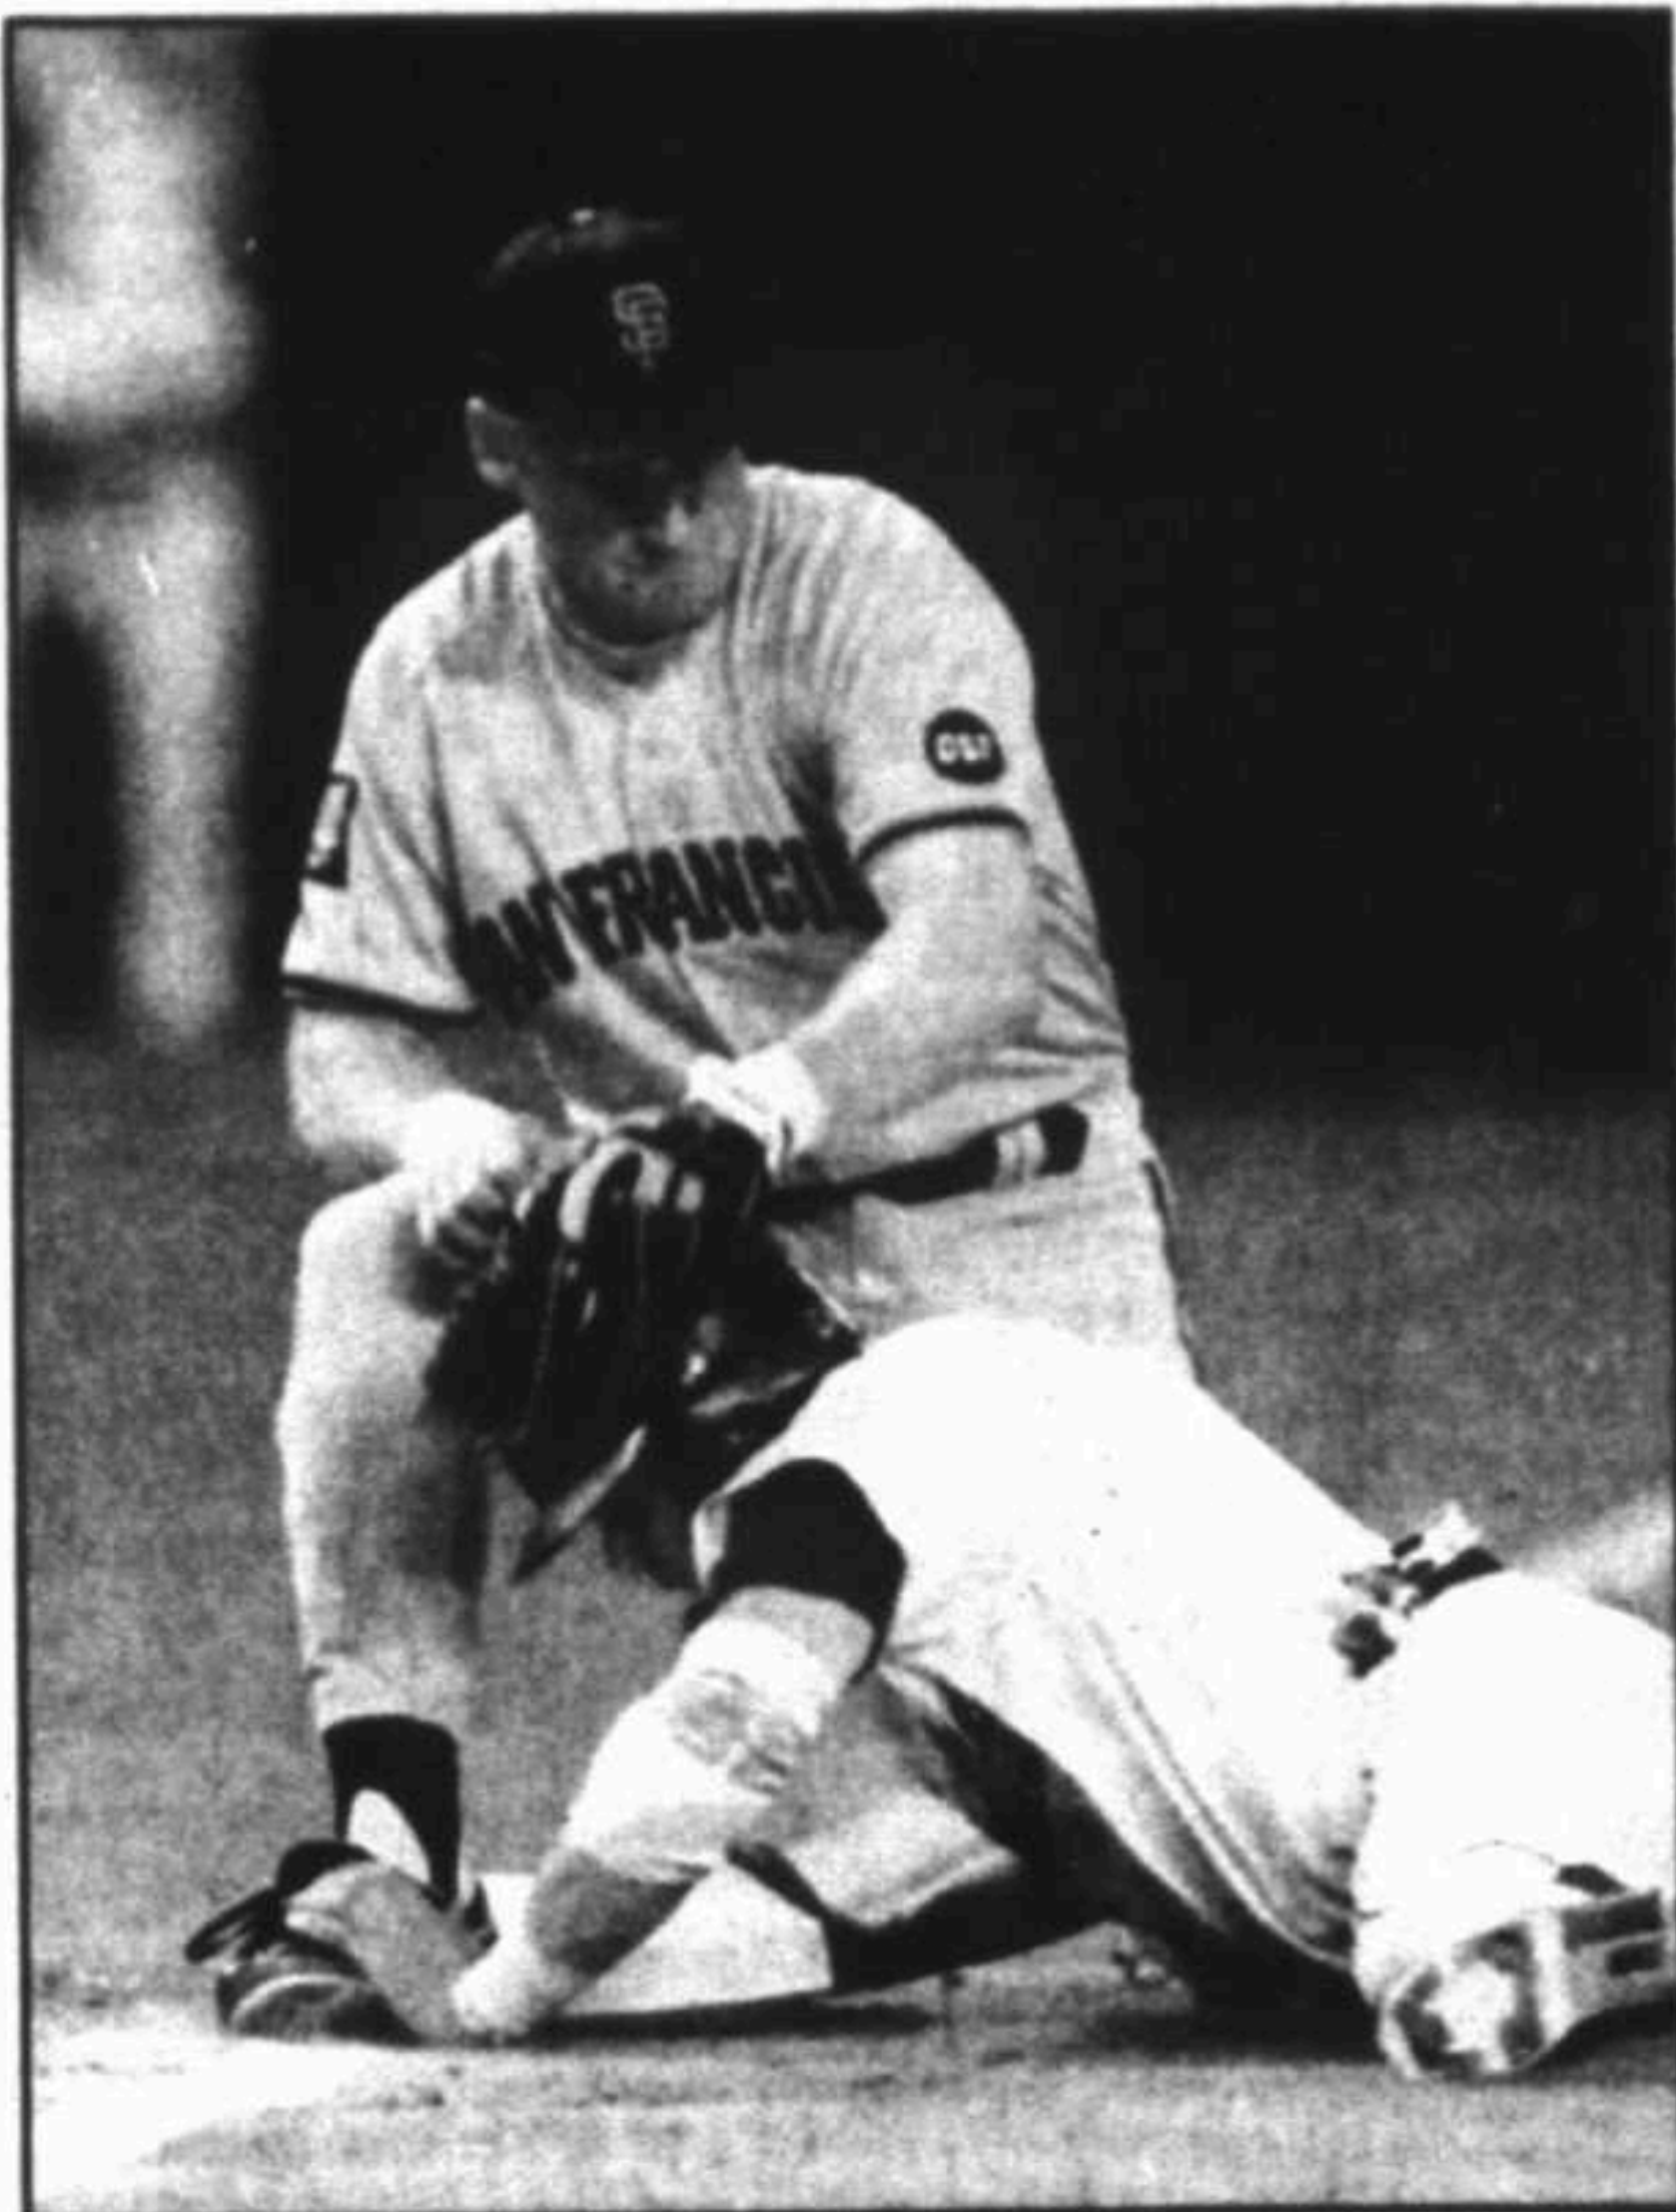

Braves 16, Reds 6
CINCINNATI — Fred McGriff reached a milestone with his 30th homer, one of four by Atlanta as the Braves pounded Cincinnati and snapped the Reds' six-game winning streak.

McGriff broke the game open with his two-run homer in the sixth and became the ninth player in major-league history to hit 30 homers in seven consecutive seasons.

Mets 10, Marlins 7
NEW YORK — Bobby Bonilla and Jeff Kent each had three RBIs and Bret Saberhagen benefitted from early support to win his sixth straight game as New York outlasted Florida.

CHICAGO — Scott Sanders allowed one hit in eight innings before Trevor Hoffman picked up the save as San Diego beat Chicago. Sanders (4-8) won for the first time since June 19, snapping a personal four-game losing streak. He walked two and struck out 11, tying his personal best set in his last win.

Dodgers 5, Rockies 4

DENVER — Rookie Raul Mondesi had a pair of triples and drove in two runs, helping Ramon Martinez beat Colorado.

The Dodgers, increasing their lead in the NL West to 3½ games over San Francisco and 5½ over Colorado, scored four runs in the sixth inning on four consecutive two-out hits.

Brett Butler opened the inning with a walk and Tim Wallach singled with two outs. Eric Karros and Henry Rodriguez followed with RBI singles, chasing starter Curtis Leskanic (1-1). Mondesi greeted reliever Steve Reed with a two-run triple into the right-field corner for a 5-2 lead.

Cardinals 11, Pirates 3

PITTSBURGH — Luis Aliecia's three-run double off the first-base bag capped a two-out, five-run fourth inning as St. Louis beat Pittsburgh.

The Cardinals had 17 hits and drew 12 walks off four Pirates pitchers, while stranding 17 runners — one short of the NL record for a nine-inning game.

Aliecia was 4-for-4 with three doubles and Todd Zelle, one of baseball's hottest hitters since the All-Star game, drove in two runs as the Cardinals won their second in a row after losing 10 of 11.

Owners, players delay talks

NEW YORK (AP) — With the union's strike deadline just a week away, baseball players and owners said Friday they wouldn't re-start formal talks about management's demand for a salary cap until next Wednesday.

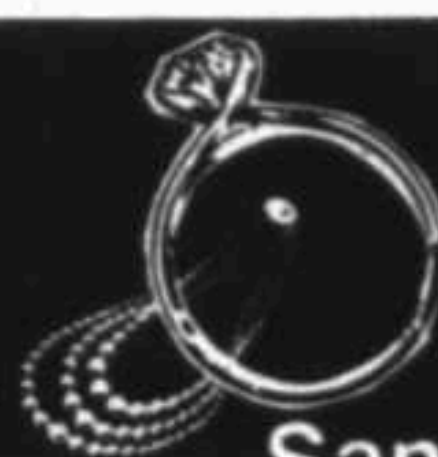

The decision will leave the sides just two days to avert what would become the sport's eighth work stoppage in 22 seasons. Eugene Orza, the union's associate general counsel, said he saw no sign that owners were prepared to drop their insistence on a salary cap.

"I think they want to pressure to the players into accepting one and they're prepared for a long strike," he said Friday. "When I say 'they' I mean a substantial number of owners."

The sides met informally Friday, with the union presenting its ideas on how clubs can share more revenue among themselves without a salary cap.

Negotiators agreed to have a formal bargaining session Monday, but it will be devoted to non-economic issues.

McDonald's one-hitter stops Brewers

Associated Press

MILWAUKEE — Ben McDonald pitched a one-hitter, allowing only a fourth-inning single by Dave Nilsson, and the Baltimore Orioles beat the Milwaukee Brewers 4-0 Friday night.

McDonald (13-7) matched his career high for victories, and also set a season high with nine strikeouts. He walked four in his first shutout of the year and fifth complete game.

McDonald pitched the second one-hitter of his career, having done it against Kansas City on July 20, 1993. Nilsson's single was a clean hit to left field with one out in the fourth.

Blue Jays 4, Tigers 2
TORONTO — Juan Guzman won for the sixth time in seven decisions as Toronto Blue beat Detroit Tigers.

Guzman (12-10) overcame a tough first two innings in which he threw 54 pitches, giving up three walks and two hits. He left after 7 1-3 innings, allowing five hits and five walks.

Royals 8, Mariners 0
KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Kansas City streaked to its 14th straight win when Tom Gordon shut down road-weary Seattle.

The winning streak is the longest in the majors since Minnesota's 15-game string in 1991. The Royals' record was a 16-game streak in 1977, the longest in the majors since 1953.

Yankees 12, Twins 3
MINNEAPOLIS — Jimmy Key took advantage of New York's eight-run fourth inning to become baseball's first 17-game winner and the Yankees beat Minnesota for their eighth straight victory.

Mike Stanley drove in four runs, including two with a fourth-inning double, in helping New York to its first 10-game road winning streak since 1962.

Three-run third tops Angels, evens series

Staff Report

EL PASO — El Paso scored three runs in the third inning here Friday to break a two-game home losing streak and beat the Midland Angels 5-3 in a Texas League game.

The Angels had men at first and third with two out in the ninth. But Marquis Riley was caught trying to steal third for the game's final out. It was only the fourth time this year Riley had been thrown out stealing in 30 attempts. Both teams have now won one game in the five-game series.

El Paso allowed only one earned run in the game and got four innings of scoreless relief from its bullpen.

The Angels tied the game at 1-1 in the third. Jose Monzon, who had three of Midland's seven hits batting in the number nine spot, singled and Riley and Tim Hardkridger walked to load the bases for a sacrifice fly by Ty Boykin.

But El Paso broke the tie in their next at bat. Doubles by Danny Perez, who went 4-for-4, and Tim Unroe scored runs. After a wild pitch, Rodney Lofton's sacrifice fly made it 4-1 Diablos.

The Angels cut into the Western Division leaders' lead in the fourth inning. Chris Smith and Bo Ortiz singled and moved to second and third on a hit-and-run. Monzon's single scored them and Midland was down by one, 4-3.

But El Paso came up with an insurance run in the fifth for the last of the game's scoring. Mike Basse got Perez, who led off with a bunt single, home with a two-out, 0-2 count triple.

The middle game of the series is today with Midland's Kyle Seback (5-2) going against the Diablos' Kevin Kloeck (2-0).

ASTROS: Houston home alone in NL Central people have passed through the dome's turnstiles last year, when the Astros were out of the NL West race in June. Houston has battled the Cincinnati Reds for first place in the new Central Division most of this season.

Attendance for the year stands at about 1.37 million, or a per-game average of 25,799 at the 53,821-seat stadium. The team needs an average of about 33,000 per home game to reach its goal of 2.7 million. That's assuming there is no strike, an unlikely prospect.

"Yeah, the public's not supporting the Astros like they should," said Frank Bachmeyer, who was among 18,320 spectators at the Astros' 2-1 victory over the Colorado Rockies Wednesday night.

"I couldn't even give a ticket away today," avid Astros fan Roger Blair said as he sat alone in a sea of empty outfield seats.

The highest attendance during the three-game Rockies' series was 30,053 Thursday night. The Rockies, meanwhile, are likely to break the 3-million mark in 1994 home attendance on Sunday.

Some Astros players admit the numbers are disappointing.

"Obviously, everybody would like to have the stands full," said Drabek, whose two-hitter beat the Rockies 3-1 Tuesday. "But I don't spend lot of time focusing on it."

"If people want to come, they will come," he said. "But we've got to go out and try to win whether there's people in the stands or not."

First-year Astros manager Terry Collins can't explain the less-than-fantastic attendance figures.

"I don't know enough about the city, what gets them going," Collins said.

It's commonplace for Houston Oilers fans to keep wondering until the last minute if the team will sell out home games so the local TV blackout will be lifted.

The Astros' early attendance woes could be blamed on the Rockies' success. When the Astros started piling up the victories, all eyes were on the Rockies.

But the Astros don't know what's keeping the fans away now. The team is 62-47, three games behind the Reds.

"It's frustrating sometimes," said Astros outfielder Luis Gonzalez.

Marino to test waters after Achilles injury

■ Dolphin quarterback Dan Marino will start tonight versus Pittsburgh in his first action in 10 months.

Associated Press

MIAMI — Dan Marino expects to find out how well his torn Achilles tendon has mended when he faces a hostile pass rush for the first time in 10 months.

The Miami Dolphins' quarterback, still recovering from the injury last year, will start Saturday night's preseason game against the Pittsburgh Steelers.

"The whole ankle is not as strong as it needs to be to go 100 percent," Marino said. "It's going to be sore for a while."

But Marino plans to play for the first time since sustaining the most serious injury of his career last Oct. 10 at Cleveland. He'll likely play one quarter.

The game may also mark the return of former AFC rushing champion Barry Foster, who missed the final seven games for Pittsburgh last season with an ankle injury.

"I think he's ready, but we'll just have to take it step by step," Steelers coach Bill Cowher said.

"Everything is going along according to schedule."

The game is Pittsburgh's preseason opener. The Dolphins, with Marino on the sidelines, won their opener last week 20-19 against the New York Giants.

Targeting Marino will be the Steelers' fierce pass rush. Led by Kevin Greene and Greg Lloyd, they had 42 sacks last season. And Marino admits it will be even more difficult for him to elude tacklers than in the past.

"The quickness and burst you have when a guy is coming at you is there, but it's not the same quality as it was before I got hurt," Marino said. "The doctors say that's the last thing to come."

Still, Marino said, he's taking no more risk than usual by playing. Coach Don Shula said his quarterback is operating at close to full speed.

"The decision-making and the quick release and moving quickly — when he gets out there and he's warmed up, when you look at the tapes of the practice, you see him getting back into that form," Shula said.

Marino is eager to play partly because he struggled last season adjusting to new wideouts Mark Ingram and Irving Fryar.

"To him, these receivers are still new because he missed so many games last year," tight end Keith Jackson said. "But I think the timing will come naturally with his great ability."

"He makes some throws other quarterbacks don't make. Everybody will be really happy to see him back at the helm."

Neil O'Donnell, who played the entire 1993 season with elbow tendinitis, will start at quarterback for Pittsburgh. Rookie free agent Andy Kelly will follow O'Donnell, and Mike Tomczak will likely play most of the second half.

Jim Miller, a rookie from Michigan State, was to have played at least a quarter, but broke a thumb in practice this week.

Cowher likes the idea of playing the Dolphins in the first preseason game.

"They're such a well-coached team," he said. "They're a team that's been a consistent winner. They're very sound and have a very good coaching staff, so it's not a game where you can hope to get an edge in coaching."

Oilers release study supporting new dome

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Oilers aren't giving up their quest for a new downtown domed stadium.

The club has released a study saying such a facility would attract 3.7 million visitors and $165 million in revenue to Houston every year.

The report, commissioned by the Oilers and prepared by Coopers & Lybrand Consulting, also says a new dome would bring such events as a Super Bowl to Houston without substantially hurting the county-owned Astrodome.

"The development of a new downtown, multipurpose facility would allow Houston to compete for large prestigious events that the city of Houston is currently precluded from hosting," the report says.

The 80-page report was delivered Thursday to City Council members, whose reception of the stadium idea has been lukewarm at best.

Team owner Bud Adams has been touting his idea of a $245 million, 75,000-seat stadium with a retractable roof for months in hopes that the city will subsidize the project.

The Astrodome seats about 62,000 for football. Adams has pledged at least $85 million in private money, but has offered no plan for coming up with the remaining funding.

Mayor Bob Lanier was on vacation and unavailable for comment on the study.

According to Coopers & Lybrand, a new stadium could host between 200 and 220 events each year, including Oilers games.

The Houston Rockets, who now play at the city-owned Summit, could also play in the new stadium, in addition to a National Hockey League team if Houston were to get one, concerts and other events.

By drawing 3.7 million people downtown for events at a new dome, 6,000 new jobs would be created in service businesses such as restaurants, hotels, shops and related industries, according to the study.

The Astrodome, Coopers & Lybrand concluded, would lose only 10 of the 180 events it holds each year — the 10 games played by the Oilers.

Houston Astros owner Drayton McLane Jr., whose team plays in the Astrodome and who manages the Astrodome for Harris County, opposes construction of a new domed stadium.

Oilers officials claim that McLane's management company, AstroDome USA, earns about $3 million annually from the football team.

Houston to play extra preseason game

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The Houston Oilers and San Diego Chargers are working overtime this preseason — and liking it.

Instead of bemoaning an extra preseason game, Houston coach Jack Pardee and San Diego's Bob Ross like the idea of playing five games instead of the usual four.

The Chargers left home Friday for a 14-day, two-game road trip that starts at the Alamodome on Saturday night against the Oilers and continues with an Aug. 13 game against the New York Giants in Germany.

The Oilers will play the Dallas Cowboys before 103,000 fans in Mexico City on Aug. 15.

Ross is scrutinizing his wide receivers and likes the pressure of a real game to judge his talent.

"We're going to get some more evaluation time on the young players," he said.

Shawn Jefferson, who started his career with the Oilers, and Mark Seay are the Chargers' starting receivers. Ross also wants to look at Vance Johnson, who played in Denver the past nine seasons.

Ross is even taking the travel inconvenience in stride.

"I look at it as a positive because you have to deal with things like that," he said. "You have to travel. You have to be a good road team to be successful in this league."

The Chargers will leave San Antonio on Sunday morning for a 15-hour journey to Germany and won't arrive back in San Diego until Aug. 14.

The Oilers' trip to Mexico City won't be as time-consuming. Their flight from San Antonio to Mexico City is two hours and they'll return immediately after the game.

CASILLAS: Former 'Boy could return

(From 1C)

When asked about the potential for future talks, Dalrymple said, "That's something that we wouldn't even speculate on."

"Anything that would go on there in terms of contact or potential movement between us and Tony is something that would remain confidential," he said. "It's all very speculative at this stage."

The Cowboys have emphatically denied they have tampered with Casillas.

Kansas City president Carl Peterson has said he is asking for an investigation into possible tampering violations by an unnamed NFL team, which might have caused Casillas to walk out on his four-year, $6 million contract. Casillas also will return the $1.2 million signing bonus.

Casillas, who played the past three seasons in Dallas and still resides here, attempted to solicit a last-minute offer from the Cowboys before signing with Kansas City.

Switzer said Casillas told him when he attended the Cowboys' Super Bowl ring ceremony this summer at Texas Stadium that he regretted his decision to sign with the Chiefs.

King escapes disaster for McCall's lead

STRATTON MOUNTAIN, Vt. (AP) — Betsy King survived a disastrous 12th hole and raw weather Friday to retain a one-stroke lead after two rounds of the McCall's LPGA Classic.

Despite a triple bogey on 12, King managed a 1-over-par 73 for a 137 in windy, rainy conditions with the temperature dropping to 51 degrees in the afternoon.

Nancy Ramsbottom, who started the day five shots behind King, birdied her final hole for a second 69 and 138.

Kris Tschetter shot 69 and Page Dunlap and Donna Andrews each had 71s to stand two shots behind at 139.

Chris Johnson mounted the biggest challenge to King, starting the day at 3-under and scoring five birdies in her first 12 holes to reach 8-under. But she bogeyed the next two holes and three-putted from five feet on No. 17 for a double bogey to slip to 140 with five others.

One of them was Gail Graham, who finished before the weather worsened with the day's low round, a 65.

Kathy Guadagnino, who started the day two shots behind King, soared to a 79 as one of the last finishers and was at 145. Ellie Gibson, another late finisher, shot a 74 for 141.

"The key was that I didn't drive it that well," said King, who shot a 64 in perfect conditions Thursday as she once again seeks the 30th career victory that would put her into the LPGA Hall of Fame.

"I hit only eight fairways, and hitting out of the (wet) rough wasn't the place to be."

That's what happened on 12, a par-4, 270-yard hole. She drove into the rough, had a bad lie, and a 9-iron she usually hits 100 yards only went 80 into the front bunker.

Her sand shot went over the green, and a pitch back didn't make the green. Her second pitch ran over the green onto the fringe, and she two-putted.

"That's the fine line between playing well and playing really well," she said.

She recovered to sink birdie putts of 13, 20 and 15 feet on the next three holes. But she bogeyed the par-3 17th when her 6-iron went over the green and she missed 6-foot putt.

Ramsbottom, having the best of her 10 years on the tour, started earlier in better weather and birdied three holes on her front nine to go 6-under. She sank putts of 10, 18 and 35 feet.

After missing par putts of 3 and 7 feet, she got the strokes back by rolling in birdie putts of 6 and 18.

"The rain wasn't much of a factor, more the temperature," she said.

Tschetter and Andrews also commented on the cold.

"My hands got so cold. It's hard to get a good feel on the greens," said Andrews, a three-time winner this season.

Albus, Brue battle to Senior Bank of Boston tie

CONCORD, Mass. (AP) — Jim Albus and Bob Brue sloshed through the rain-soaked Nashawtuc Country Club to post opening-round 67s to share the first-round lead of the Bank of Boston Classic.

They led by a stroke over the trio of Dick Hendrickson, Dave Eichelberger and Tom Wargo. The round was interrupted 75 minutes by a thunderstorm and was threatened by rain throughout the day.

"I got off to a nice start and thought the round was going to get wiped out," said Albus, the winner of three Senior PGA Tour events, including this year's Kroger Senior Classic. "I'm sure other guys were doing a rain dance, but I was doing well and hoped we'd finish."

Albus wielded a hot putter throughout a bogey-free round. "I was going to change putters before the round," he said, "but my son, Mark, who caddies for me, persuaded me to keep this putter in the bag for one more round. After today, it's earned another month in the bag."

Brue, yet to win as a senior, simplified his approach, he said.

"You can get paralysis by analysis," Brue said. "You don't take a watch apart to tell what time it is. Like no two fingerprints are alike, no two golf swings are alike. You don't worry about it, and just go out and play."

The tournament was dealt a sobering blow when 72-year old veteran Charlie Sifford was taken from the course in an ambulance and transported to Concord's Emerson Hospital. According to hospital supervisor Kate Gribbin, Sifford was in stable condition and was being examined to determine the cause and severity of the problem.

Gribbin wouldn't comment on the nature of Sifford's ailment, it is known that he has had a blood pressure problem for some time.

The group at 69 was made up of Dick Goetz, Homero Blancas, Bob Charles, Isao Aoki, Dewitt Weaver, Ray Floyd and Bob Dickson.

Lee Trevino and George Archer were among nine players who shot 70.

Jim Colbert, the tour's money leader, shot 72.

AZINGER: Fans applaud cancer victim's return first round."

Azinger's return to golf comes a week before he begins defense of his PGA Championship at Tulsa, Okla.

Funk, winless since 1992, shot a 65 over waterlogged Warwick Hills Golf and Country Club for a one-stroke lead over Pavin and three over Russ Cochran. Tom Kite, Davis Love III and Duffy Waldorf were among 10 golfers at 69.

Almost a week of rain left the 7,105-yard course soft and muddy. There was so much rain Thursday that the first round was washed out. As a result, the second round will be played Saturday and those who qualify will complete the tournament with 36 holes on Sunday.

Because the course was so soft and wet, groundskeepers were unable to mow the fairways Friday. That, coupled with a stiff and chilly north wind, made the golfers earn every shot. There was virtually no roll.

On the seventh, a 584-yard, par-

5, Kite needed a driver, 3-wood and full 8-iron just to reach the green. At the 15th, a 457-yard par-4, he used driver and 3-wood.

"You don't normally see that at Warwick Hills," Kite said. "The golf course is playing very long right now. You hit a driver, and the ball plugs. If they can get the mowers out, the ball will roll a little bit."

Funk's bogey-free round was no surprise. He has played well before at Warwick Hills. In five previous Buick Opens, Funk has earned $98,500. He finished fifth in 1990, tied for 10th in 1992 and tied for sixth last year.

"I'm always real comfortable here," Funk said. "I stay with a family, right across the street from the range."

Pavin, winner of 11 PGA events, won the Los Angeles Open in February. He had two testy shots during the first round, getting birdie at No. 13 by slicing a ball around a fairway tree and onto the green, and holing a curling 50-foot putt from off the green for birdie at 18.

"That's what I call a bonus putt," Pavin said.

Cochran, a left-hander with only one victory in 12 years on the tour, let a good round slip away. A birdie at 14 got him to 5-under, but he bogeyed the next two holes.

Cochran stopped the bleeding with a 4-iron approach to within 12 feet of the pin on the 17th and made the putt.

Local Homeowners Are Savings Hundreds of Dollars Heat Wave Spins Electric Meters

Warmer Times

Summer WANTED: TU ELECTRIC CUSTOMERS 1994

Who Else Wants Their Electric Company To Buy Them A New Central Air Conditioning System? Let me explain...

If you're presently cooling your home with a window unit or central air conditioner over 8 years old, you are paying over twice as much on your electric bill as you should be. There have been technological breakthroughs in central air conditioning designs, which when installed properly in your home, will reduce the amount you pay the electric company $40-$50 or more per month!

Here is the surprising part!

Your payments on one of these super efficient systems will usually be $45-$95 per month, with no down payment required! This means the money you're not paying the electric company is paying for your new central air system! All you have to do to get in on this amazing deal is call one of our Energy Savings Estimators and set up a time to survey your home. If you qualify, he can make all the arrangements right here in your home.

DO NOT WAIT! CALL US ANY TIME 24 HOURS A DAY - 7 DAYS A WEEK
See if you qualify for one of those systems that pay for itself.

Permian Basin Homeowners Are Assisted By Electric Company In Buying A New Central Air Conditioning System

You Probably Paid Too Much For Electricity Last Month!

The useful "life" of an air conditioner can vary greatly. Such factors as climate, maintenance, hours of operation, and quality of the original equipment and its installation can increase or decrease the life of a system by months and even years.

On the average, a residential air conditioning system in the Permian Basin will last from 10 to 15 years. When a unit begins to show its age, major components like compressors, motors, and coils will fail.

In the short run, replacing failed components will usually cost the least amount of money. But in doing so, the homeowner may be missing an opportunity to greatly improve the overall efficiency and capacity of the system, thereby, save significant amounts of money in operating costs.

You May Be Paying For A New Unit, Problem Is, You Do Not Have It!

In recent years, manufacturers of air conditioners have made dramatic progress in increasing the efficiency of the units they produce. Therefore, it may make more economic sense to put the cost of repair into a new, more efficient unit and dramatically lower your electric bills. Eventually, the more efficient unit will "pay for itself" through lower electric bills. In addition, the new system will provide the added advantage of greater reliability and warranty protection.

Select The Right Size And Company

A competent air conditioning contractor, after a thorough inspection of your home, can perform a cooling calculation to determine the exact size of the equipment needed. A great many homes are either oversized or undersized today. Do not accept that the current size is necessarily the correct size. Oversizing is just as bad as undersizing in the control of humidity and operating costs.

This is also the reason to choose the right company, someone that will take the time to properly evaluate your needs, give you a firm estimate, and then guarantee the system is sized properly.

Up To $500 In Rebates

Now is also the time to take advantage of the company's rebates to change out that old system to a more high efficiency air conditioning system.
