Telephone Workers To Return Tomorrow

Well ... I Dunno, But ...

We're sure a game never had more hashing and re-hashing than the Hillsboro-Ranger game and most fans claim that Kings should have won it. Like we always say, we don't know, but it sure looked to us like Ranger missed some right good chances to score.

The Ranger passing machine was a little out of click, even though a number of beauties were completed, but the boys that were catching those passes needed a little more protection. The line held much better this week than last and generally speaking the boys showed considerable improvement over the DeLeon game.

Somebody called to our attention today the quick action taken by the Hillsboro coach when King and Williams was away off to the side uncovered. The coach spotted the possibility of a Ranger score and quick sent in a player to halt the play and call time out for Hillsboro.

Best yet on the game, is the man who chided us for sending a story to the Star-Telegram to the effect that Hillsboro won. So sure was he that Ranger was the one who made that touchdown that he had to call on someone else to be convinced that Hillsboro won. He wouldn't take our word for it and called us "Wrong Way Horri-gan."

Nope we wouldn't embarrass him by telling his name. Yep, he was at the game.

According to C. B. Pruet there's a kind of "gentleman's" agreement among automobile dealers that 20 to 30 per cent of the new cars they get to veterans and at the end of each year a report has to be made to the company showing a breakdown of the car sales.

Of the 13 cars that Anderson Pruet, Chevrolet dealer, got in the year ending August 31st, five of them went to veterans. Two went to doctors, one to a car fleet operator, three to city officials and only three of the sales that were what is listed as "non-essential." All of the 13 cars were passenger cars and of the five veteran sales only one was a leader in the other straight sales. There were only four trade-ins in the whole year.

We still didn't see any use made of the big score board at the football game Friday night and so long as we've got it, we might as well use it. Someone said that that were weren't any numbers for it. Does anyone know where the numbers are? Or would someone volunteer to supply the figures.

Somehow, that bare board gives one a kind of "deserted village" feeling, as if we had seen better days. A feeling that we used to be able to use the thing, but can't anymore. "Just not quite as big as we used to be," it seems to say.

Ranger High School's cheer leaders are a pretty peppy five and definitely on the good looking side. Headed by red-headed Jimmy Martin there's a nice assortment of blondes and brunettes including Anne Imholz, Patsy Wheat, Patay Wallace and Sara Frances Whitley.

Miss Jo Oyster was this week elected sponsor for the pep leaders and having been a pep leader in Ranger High School at one time, we're sure her heart will be in it and the job will be well done.

We took particular notice Friday night to check up on the comment last week that the cheering section doesn't give out lustily enough for the Bulldogs. We agree with last week's commentator. The boys and girls in the grandstands could do a better job of letting forth with their cheers. The leaders are persuasive enough but the response is a little on the weak side. Cheering for a football team gets about the same results as patting a fellow on the back and telling him he's done a good job. Yes, sir, the cheering section could help put the spirit into those Bulldogs.

Crashed Belgian Airliner Found

This photo of the Belgian airliner, which crashed and burned in a dense forest near Gander, Newfoundland, was taken by First Officer Walter H. Mullikin of Pan American Airlines as it circled over the wreckage in a C-47 at 12,000 feet. The wreckage, including the plane's wings and part of the charred fuselage, shows at the end of the path which the plane cut through the trees. (NEA photo).

FAMED U.S. BLUE DEVILS ON JOB IN TRIESTE AREA

By Milton F. Dolinger, United Press Staff Correspondent. CLEVELAND, (UP) — The 88th Infantry Division, only American fighting unit in the troubled Balkans, and stationed in the explosive Venezia-Giulia area near Trieste, is no stranger to ticklish situations.

Recently the 88th put on a full division review in Trieste ostensibly for more battle honors, but interpreted by some observers as a "show of strength."

The 88th's battle record in nearly one and one-half years of combat on the tough Italian boot is virtually a "show of strength" in itself.

The division is now one of the oldest overseas, having embarked from Camp Patrick Henry, Va., in December, 1943. After a short training period in North Africa, the 88th sailed for Italy—and the Anzio beachhead. Events in the Fifth Army, however, necessitated the 88th entering the line of the Gargano River, east of Cassino, late in February, 1944.

Under the leadership of Maj. Gen. John E. Scanlon of Greenville, S. C., the 88th was among the divisions kicking off the May 11, 1944 offensive for Rome.

Military history now holds the record of how the 88th—which, incidentally, earned the nickname "Blue Devils" from the Germans as a terrified tribute to the way the draftees fought and from their blue cloverleaf (crossed Ss) shoulder patch—helped clear the path to Rome.

The division's drive up central Italy was in a large measure responsible for pushing back Field Marshal Albert Kesselring's Nazi forces so the embattled allies on the Anzio beachhead could break out. Official Fifth Army history credits a reconnaissance patrol of the 88th with being the first into the Eternal City—the night of June 4.

The Blue Devils' proudest boast was that the unit was the first all-selective service infantry division to enter combat on any front in this war.

Activated at Camp Gruber, Okla., in 1942, with cadre from the 9th division, its personnel was drawn entirely from draftee ranks. It was a War Department experiment which worked out well—proving that "civilians" can make good fighters.

VETERANS GET MORE TAXES ON STREETS

CHICAGO, (UP) — New veteran taxicabs are "hitting city streets" as a result of an ex-GI campaign for more franchises.

More and more cities are authorizing the operation of additional cabs and existing ordinances to improve cab service.

A survey by the American Municipal Association showed the number of cabs per population varied from one cab to every 98 residents in Washington, D. C., to only one for every 4,638 persons in Youngstown, Ohio.

Veterans in both Los Angeles and San Francisco have induced these cities to relax restrictions on the number of cabs.

In Baltimore, where there is one cab for every 859 persons, cab permits have been authorized for 158 veterans, and in Miami, Fla., where each cab serves 1,102 residents, 32 permits have been issued to independents not affiliated with either of the city's two large companies.

Milwaukee council men voted to grant licenses to a score of veterans, giving the city one tax for each 1,453 residents.

Some municipalities have acted to keep local politics out of cab control. The Kentucky industrial relations commissioner recommended to the Louisville board of aldermen that cab control be transferred from the police department to an independent agency.

Cabs in Rhode Island and Connecticut are under state control.

Dallas County Having Postwar Industry Boom

DALLAS, Tex., (UP) — Dallas industry is enjoying the postwar production boom with 1,250 factories turning out goods which in some cases are distributed around the world.

So far this year 84 new factories have located here. There were 716 manufacturing establishments in 1940 and 543 have been added since then. Of these industries, nineteen employ 500 or more workers, according to figures released by the Chamber of Commerce.

To Celebrate Texas Centennial

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., (UP) — Society is planning to celebrate the San Antonio Conservation century of Texas statehood, October 12 by holding an exhibit of native crafts and a selection of "Senorita Centennial" at the 225 year old San Jose Mission here.

HILLSBORO TAKES GAME, 7 TO 0 SCORE

Ranger's second football game of the season was lost to Hillsboro Friday night when the Eagles defeated the Bulldogs by a score of 7 to 0.

Hillsboro took the lead early in the game when their back, Wilkinson went over the line for the single marker of the game and then made the extra point with a placement kick.

The Bulldogs, a little slow in the start, buckled down after the Hillsboro score and held the Eagles scoreless from the first quarter through the fourth. Ranger's passing machine was brought into action in the last half of the first quarter and several times threatened to cross the goal line but were held by Hillsboro.

Hillsboro fumbled the kick-off from Ranger with the latter recovering. Then on a fumbled play Ranger lost the ball to the Eagles. Repeated efforts of Hillsboro to buck the line, failed with the ball going to Ranger on fourth down failures.

The Eagles' passing attack fizzled out with never a single pass completed, though Dohoney was doing a good job of the tossing. In the third quarter McCauley intercepted a Ranger pass for a long gain but the team failed to score and lost the ball to Ranger on the fourth passing attempt. McFarland also posed a threat to Ranger when he intercepted a Ranger pass in the fourth quarter.

Junior Arterburn, Ranger's passer, was in fine form, tossing some of the most spectacular passes seen in many a day but each time Frasier received the ball the Eagles had him covered. The Bulldogs completed eight of the attempted passes for a total of 72 yards.

Only penalties of the game were on Ranger who drew two for 20 yards.

Starting line-ups for the two teams were: Hillsboro, Skinner, center; guards, Lee; tackles, Giles and Conaway; ends, Foster and McFarland; backs, Gibson, McFarland, Wells and Wilkinson. Ranger; center, Griffin; guards, Hardy and Ford; ends, Frasier and MacDonald; tackles, Carlin and Balch and backs, Elders, Arterburn, Williams and Gray.

Former War Fliers Set Up a Model Plane Business

COLUMBUS, O., (UP) — It's a far cry from the roar of the planes of Uncle Sam's air corps to the pleasant hum of model planes, but two Columbus veterans like to change very much.

Ex-Navy Flying Cadet Dick Wick, 22, and former Ensign Palmer Fultz, 22, have turned from wartime aviation to set up a profitable commercial enterprise.

One of the models they produce, "The Standard Hell Hammer," won first prize at an air show held at the Lockbourne army air base here. Their greatest achievement to date is a workable jet-propelled model that flew an estimated 100 miles per hour in an experiment at Dayton, O.

Lion Tamer Finds Stick Protection

HUDSON, N.H., (UP) — Joe Welch, a lion tamer at the Benson Wild Animal Farm here, boasts he's one of the bravest in the business.

HELICOPTERS ENROUTE TO MOVE VICTIMS

GANDER, Nfld. (UP) — Coast Guard helicopters were enroute today to lift the most critically injured of 18 survivors of the crash of a Belgian Transatlantic airliner from the rugged hillsides where they have lain since Wednesday.

It was believed that at least the two most seriously injured persons in the crash which killed 20 could be brought to the hospital here by nightfall.

Others, 12 of whom were seriously injured as to be described as stretcher cases, probably can not be evacuated until tomorrow, it was said.

Dr. Joseph Martin, a physician who was with the ground rescue party at the scene, said in a radio report that all the survivors were cheerful and in good spirits. They were sheltered through the chilly night in Army bedrolls and sleeping bags dropped by plane yesterday.

Dr. Martin reported that only two of the 18 were presently in critical condition, although he emphasized that another 12 had suffered serious injuries as the plane plowed through 35-foot trees to smash in flames against the hillsides near Dead Wolf Creek, about 22 miles southwest of here.

Federal Rubber Project Ends

BAKERSFIELD, Cal. (UP) — The federal emergency rubber project in Kern County, Cal., moved a step closer to its ultimate end when the $450,000 guayule mill, monument to one of the government's greatest wartime industrial experiments, was turned over to the War Assets Administration for disposal.

Only the building and memories of an almost continuous squabble over how the project was handled remain as reminders of this part of the government's $300,000,000 struggle to produce raw rubber during a critical wartime shortage.

The 9,000 acres of guayule plants have been plowed under and the land converted to raising potatoes and other crops grown so profitably and profitably in the area.

Whether the building will be sold, too, or will remain as another of the government's postwar white elephants depends upon whether it can be converted to other uses.

Operation of the mill began in June, 1945, and ended about two months later. At its peak it produced two tons of raw rubber.

NO FATALITIES REPORTED IN MARIANAS

GUAM, (UP) — The Marianas worst typhoon in six years—blowing up devastating gusts of 100 miles an hour—caused millions of dollars in damage on Guam, Tinian and Saipan today, but found servicemen and civilians forewarned and huddled in safe shelters.

By nightfall, after reading fragmentary reports from this debris-strewn war-time military nerve center, Islands Commander Rear Adm. Charles A. Pownall announced no fatalities yet had been disclosed. The most serious injury on Guam was a broken back suffered by an army air force man.

Residents of the islands group had ample warning to take refuge from the hammering winds and torrential rains which ripped up buildings, destroyed radio facilities, overturned buses, toppled palm trees and littered installations with personal belongings.

Officers estimated that similar conditions prevailed on the twin islands of Saipan and Tinian, 100-odd miles to the north. Both bases, because of shattered communications, were unreported.

Man Survives Five Days In Locked Boxcar

AMARILLO, Tex., (UP) — Robert Bragg, 30, has an astounding story to tell—a story of being imprisoned in a railroad car for five days and then coming out alive.

According to his doctors, who say he will recover, Bragg entered the car at Baird, Texas, recently, thinking it was headed for El Paso.

But instead of going to El Paso, the train was destined for Muleshoe. Shortly after Bragg entered the car, someone slammed the door, locked and sealed it. It is a federal offense to open a car that has been sealed unless it is opened by authority.

The train made several stops but the car in which Bragg was riding was not opened.

Five days later the car pulled into Muleshoe. At this point, the tile which was loaded in the car was to be taken off. As workmen opened the heavy door, they found Bragg lying on the floor completely exhausted.

They rushed him to a hospital where he was soon on the way to recovery.

ARBITRATION OF SENIORITY CASE PROMISED BY COMPANY

HOUSTON, Tex., (UP) — Members of the Southwestern Telephone Workers Union voted today to return to their telephone jobs at 6 a. m. tomorrow, a move which will restore normal service to the Gulf Coast area.

The vote was cast after G. C. Gephart, vice president of the Southwestern Bell Telephone Company, wired the local from St. Louis that arbitration of the seniority labor-management dispute would be carried out promptly.

Telephone communication was partially restored at 8 a. m. today in several coastal towns but others delayed action until the Houston workers indicated whether their four day "continuous meeting" would continue.

Nuernberg Trials Wordy Affairs

NUERNBERG, (UP) — The war crimes trial lasted nine months and eleven days, entailing 403 open sessions and 1,209 hours up to the end of the hearings.

The transcript, exclusive of the verdict, totals 16,793 pages. At an average of 300 words to a page, that adds up to 5,027,900 words. It took a courthouse lawyer seven weeks, working five days a week from nine to five, to read the transcript through.

Three hundred thousand documents record Nazi crimes and the records of the library weigh close to 1,000,000 pounds.

Hundreds of witnesses have testified to the horrors of Hitler's regime. They ranged from victims of concentration camps to German field marshals flown from remote Soviet prison camps.

The press of nearly the entire world has sent out 16,500,000 words since the trial opened last November 20 until it ended. The British led with more than 5,000,000 words. The Russians were second and the United States third.

Two Tons Of Furniture Make Long Air Journey

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (UP) — Furniture is the latest industry to take to the air.

Seven companies set a precedent by sending 4,000 pounds of bedroom, living room and library furniture by air to a retail dealer in Yakima, Wash.

The dealer was so anxious for delivery on his order that he chartered a cargo plane to carry it 2,300 miles in 13 hours, saving approximately two weeks' shipping time.

WANTED: A POLICY

After a year of wrestling with the problems of reconversion, the combined efforts of Congress, the White House and various bureaus have left the country with no consistent, workable stabilization policy.

First came the long, unsettled period in which price controls were more or less maintained while the bid was taken off waxes. Things became more chaotic when the Price Control Act expired and Congress finally patched up a new one which was neither fish, flesh nor good red herring.

Then with the maritime strike, the county found the wind blowing from another quarter. Now prices were being allowed to rise while an effort was made to hold down wages—just the opposite policy of a year ago.

OPA ceilings today are generally higher. But the AFL seamen's unions found that they were not to be permitted to get more money than CIO maritime unions received.

It seemed somehow appropriate that the Wage Stabilization Board had worked itself into a spot where it had the choice of a prolonged strike if the AFL company-union contracts were not approved, or a new strike by CIO maritime unions if they were.

We may safely predict that neither private management labor nor government would relish the idea of government's having a hand in all labor-management negotiations. Yet it is evident that the maritime strike was called for the purpose of getting government to make a settlement.

Yet perhaps what we need is more regulation, not less, until this abiding and growing emergency is past. It should be regulation based on a firm policy which would somehow permit the government to spot trouble in the offing and deal with it before the trouble becomes a strike.

We shall probably have to wait for a new Congress to tackle the job when the political air has cleared. Then let us hope that the various factions in Washington will unite on an intelligent and workable plan of stabilization, or else take the only sensible alternative of casting off all restrictions and hoping that things will work themselves out through our traditional, time-tested peacetime methods.

WASHINGTON COLUMN

BY DOUGLAS LARSE, NEA Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(NEA)—Donald M. Nelson, the man who directed American industry during the war as chairman of the War Production Board, has gotten a couple of old peaves off his chest. He has written a book entitled "Arsenal of Democracy" which will be released in a few days.

In it he takes a couple of healthy haymakers at the War Department which should stir up some hot discussions. His specific target is the Army's Supply Service and its wartime boss, Gen. Brehon Somervell, since retired from the Army and now a business executive. He charges the Army with underhanded methods in trying to wrest control of American industry during the war. He writes:

"But if they got complete authority over the disposition of the nation's resources they would inevitably produce disorder and eventually balk their own efforts by undercutting the economy in such a way that it could not meet their demands. Nor is this the whole story. In their drive to give military requirements the precedence over all others they would be bound to take actions which would have serious effects on our democratic institutions."

THE thing that really bothered him, he says, is the way the Army "needed" him by planting phony stories about the damaging effects of WPB decisions when the Army itself had been an unwilling party to these decisions.

Nelson's book also tells of other attempts to grab WPB's authority during the war. Nelson tells how M. Leland Olds, chairman of the Federal Power Commission, wrote a note to President Roosevelt claiming WPB was bungling its handling of electrical power and favoring the private power companies against government power projects. Olds wanted to expand the electrical power supply more than Nelson thought wise or necessary. The President called both Olds and Nelson to the White House one Sunday morning.

NELSON writes: "Mr. President, I said, 'if this statement by Mr. Olds is correct, then we have lost the war—because it is not possible, with the big need we have for munitions, to expand the power industry to anything like the extent that Mr. Olds indicates is necessary. I am absolutely certain, however, that his figures are incorrect.'"

"The President smiled and said: 'I will accept your figures on that, but how about the charges made by Mr. Olds that you are favoring the private power industry?' Mr. Olds' charges have been repeated to me in a memorandum from Secretary Lyles."

"Mr. President, those charges are absolutely untrue," I replied, "and I can prove them before any unbiased group that you care to appoint. How about asking Dave Lillenthal to look into these charges and make a report to you?"

"Okay," said the President. "Dave to do it."

The report of Lillenthal, according to Nelson, proved that Olds' charges were:

Greater Love Hath No Man

MALDEN, Mass. (UP)—Al McLean of Malden is being hailed by baseball players as the fan of the year. Learning that outfielder Johnny Hopp of the Boston Braves was desperately seeking a home, McLean gave his own house to the Hopp and moved in with friends.

"Run For Your Life!"

You Figure This One Out NANTUCKET, Mass. (UP)—The striking mechanism of the Nantucket town clock broke down decades ago, and it is to sound any number of times regardless of the time of day. But at 7 a.

m., noon and 9 p. m. it strikes exactly 52 times to comply with an ancient ordinance. The striking is laboriously done by hand.

Campaign Costs 6 cents SUFFERSON CITY, Mo. (UP)—Rep. Clarence Cannon of Missouri's ninth district believes in sound economy. He informed the secretary of state he spent six cents in the recent primary campaign in which he was unopposed for democratic renomination. The "expiditure" was for two postage stamps.

No. 1 'S. S.' Man

With the forthcoming retirement of Frank J. Wilson, chief of the Secret Service, James J. Maloney, above, of Binghamton, N. Y., will move up from acting chief to head of the famed Treasury Department unit.

Hume Wrong, Canadian Undersecretary of State for External Affairs, has been named the dominion's ambassador to the United States. He is no stranger to Washington, having served as first secretary and counselor at the Canadian Legation before it was raised to an embassy, and as a member of the Pacific War Council during World War II.

SPORTS

BY HARRY GRAYSON, NEA Sports Editor

ATHLETES who sought appointments to one of the service schools when it was either that or Fort Dix, Great Lakes, or some other training center and who run out on them with the end of the war, certainly should rate I-A in the draft.

A hitch in the Army might cure the football runaways who professed to be all wrapped up in obtaining a flying start on a military career. They deprived other and worthwhile youngsters of the opportunity.

Such widely-known football players as Smackover Scott, Bob Kelly, Tony Minski, Hunchy Hoernschmeyer, Ralph Ellsworth, and others suddenly lost interest in the United States Naval Academy and life on the bounding main.

To the great credit of the remarkable Army squad, Shanty McWilliams is the first to tender his resignation.

Prepping for the Military Academy at Mississippi State, McWilliams was little short of an All-America back two years ago.

Tremendous pressure was put upon McWilliams to return south. The particular lucrative offer referred to by Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor is reported to be $15,000. This was not made by a school, of course, but by rabid alumni and fans.

Proselyting is dangerous enough, but when there is the slightest evidence that the government schools, admittance to which is supposed to be a privilege, are being used as an escape, the young men concerned are doing something vastly more heinous than striking at the very foundations of the sport.

GERRY MOORE has resigned as a Boston sports writer to assist Fred Corcoran as tournament manager of the Professional Golfers' Association.

Moore will travel with the shot-makers while Corcoran, equipped with a new contract, conducts an office in New York and supervises the pros' own publication.

Corcoran has developed into one of the country's top promoters, what with Ted Williams signed, along with Ben Hogan, Byron Nelson, and Samuel Jackson Snead.

Among other things, Corcoran has revived the antiquated dodge of ghost-writing. Ted Williams and Byron Nelson taking pen in hand.

The practice is catching on again, too. Traveling secretary Harold Parrott of the Dodgers, a reformed sports columnist, is writing pieces for a Brooklyn paper under Leo Durocher's byline.

WITH Slugger Williams' ghost referring to the late Gertrude Stein, Boston columnist Dave Egan wonders how well acquainted the kid is with that authoress' work.

"It could be, of course," writes Egan, "that Williams was referring to a girl softball pitcher named Gertrude Stein, who was supposed to pitch one night and didn't show up until the seventh inning."

"Thereafter, she was known as 'the late Gertrude Stein.'" Nothing lends itself to gags quite as well as ghost-writing, nor makes less sense.

"Okay," said the President. "I will accept your figures on that, but how about the charges made by Mr. Glavin that you are favoring the private power industry?" Mr. Glavin's charges have been repeated to me in a memorandum from Secretary Ickes.

"Mr. President, those charges are absolutely untrue," I replied, "and I can prove they are. I am asking Dave Lillenthal to look into these charges and make a report to you."

You Figure This One Out NANTUCKET, Mass. (UP)—The striking mechanism of the Nantucket town clock broke down decades ago, and it is apt to sound any number of times regardless of the time of day. But at 7 a.

m., noon and 9 p. m. it strikes exactly 52 times to comply with an ancient ordinance. The striking is laboriously done by hand.

Campaign Costs 6 cents WEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (UP)—Rep. Clarence Cannon of Missouri's ninth district believes in sound economy. He informed the secretary of state he spent six cent in the recent primary campaign in which he was unopposed for democratic renomination. The "expenditure" was for two postage stamps.

ATHLETES who sought appointments to one of the service schools when it was either that or Fort Dix, Great Lakes, or some other training center and who run out on them with the end of the war, certainly should rate I-A in the draft. A hitch in the Army might cure the football runaways who professed to be all wrapped up in obtaining a flying start on a military career. They deprived other and worthwhile youngsters of the opportunity.

Such widely-known football players as Smackover Scott, Bob Kelly, Tony Minisi, Hunchy Hoernschmeyer, Ralph Ellsworth, and others suddenly lost interest in the United States Naval Academy and life on the bounding main.

To the great credit of the remarkable Army squad, Bob Kelly, Tony Minisi, Hunchy Hoernschmeyer, Ralph Ellsworth, and others suddenly lost interest in the United States Naval Academy and life on the bounding main.

Prepping for the Military Academy at Mississippi State, McWilliams was little short of an All-America back two years ago.

Tremendous pressure was put upon McWilliams to return south. The particular lucrative offer referred to by Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor is reported to be $15,000. This was not made by a school, of course, but by rabid alumni and fans.

Proselytizing is dangerous enough, but when there is the slightest evidence that the government schools, admittance to which is supposed to be a privilege, are being used as an escape, the young men concerned are doing something vastly more heinous than striking at the very foundations of the sport.

GERRY MOORE has resigned as a Boston sports writer to assist Fred Corcoran as tournament manager of the Professional Golfers' Association.

Moore will travel with the shot-makers while Corcoran, equipped with a new contract, conducts an office in New York and supervises the pros' own publication.

Corcoran had developed into one of the country's top promoters, what with Ted Williams signed, along with Ben Hogan, Byron Nelson, and Samuel Jackson Snead.

Among other things, Corcoran has revived the antiquated dodge of ghost-writing. Ted Williams and Byron Nelson taking pen in hand.

The practice is catching on again, too. Traveling secretary Harold Parrott of the Dodgers, a reformed sports columnist, is writing pieces for a Brooklyn paper under Leo Durocher's byline.

WITH Slugger Williams' ghost referring to the late Gertrude Stein, Boston columnist Dave Egan wonders how well acquainted the kid is with that authoress' work.

"It could be, of course," writes Egan, "that Williams was referring to a girl softball pitcher named Gertrude Stein, who was supposed to pitch one night and didn't show up until the seventh inning."

"Thereafter, she was known as 'the late Gertrude Stein.'"

Nothing lends itself to gags quite as well as ghost-writing, nor makes less sense.

HOUSTON, Tex., Sept. 21—Russell B. Russell B. Brown
Mr. Brown will address the opening convention session Thursday morning, Oct. 17, on "A National Oil Policy" discussing the important place of the petroleum industry in re-establishment of national peacetime activities.

The 1946 meeting of the Texas Mid-Continent, to be held at the Rice Hotel, will be the first general gathering of the state's oil and gas operators since 1943.
