Second Producer Drilled In Near Hobbs, N. Mexico

Midwest Strikes Pay Sand At 4,060 Feet; To Drill Test Deeper In Efforts To Increase Yield

The second producing oil well for Hobbs, New Mexico, was brought in Saturday morning at 8 o'clock by the Midwest Oil company on its location just one mile south of that city, according to C. B. Berry, 2422 Fourteenth Street, Lubbock, who is in business at Hobbs.

Texas Cattleman Places His Hope In Second Appeal

Defense Lawyers Turn Their Attention To Legal Loop-Holes In Effort To Give Leahy New Hearing

Claim Judge Erred

Selection Of Jury, Action Of Panel Are Claimed To Be In Error; Plea Made To Moore Over-ruled

(By Associated Press)

GEORGETOWN, Tex., July 27.—Harry J. Leahy, condemned to electrocution for the murder of Dr. J. A. Ramsey of Mathis, tonight lost his fight to escape the electric chair through insanity, when a jury declared him sane. His attorney immediately gave notice of an appeal to the Court of Criminal Appeals.

Actions Are Cited

Attorneys for Leahy, under death sentence for slaying Dr. J. A. Ramsey, of Mathis, based their action on two claims—one was that Judge J. D. Moore erred in not quashing the jury because it was drawn through a commission appointed by Judge Harry Dolan. Judge Dolan was disqualified from sitting in the sanity hearing because he prosecuted Leahy in the latter's second murder trial.

The other point was that state law requires a sanity verdict shall be signed by all jurors. The verdict in this case, it was said, was signed only by the foreman.

Pleas Are Lengthy

The jury received the case after listening to final arguments which occupied the court day. They went into every phase of the Ramsey slaying, and subsequent events in Leahy's life.

County Attorney Wood based his argument for the State on his contention that Leahy, by properly drawing a contract to find the body

Stimson's Goat Loses Patience And Goes Home!

WASHINGTON, July 27. (AP)—William Hamilton Bones is lost.

The pet goat, in which Secretary Stimson shares a paternal interest with Captain Eugene A. Reigner, his military aide while he was Governor-General of the Philippines, was last reported aboard a ship bound out of San Francisco, leaving behind the country which refused him admission as an undesirable alien goat.

Those close to the Secretary said today that William Hamilton Bones apparently lost patience with authorities at San Francisco in charge of goat immigration, who denied him admission because of a quarantine on his kind, and is returning to his native Hawaiian or Philippine haunts. Who is responsible for his trip or exactly where he is going was not known, however.

Texas Motor Fails

Houstonians Up 233 Hours When Engine Trouble Is Encountered; Minnesota Plane Still Aloft

(By Associated Press)

ST. LOUIS, July 27.—Still resolved to fly their monoplane "St. Louis Robin" until the motor quits, Dale Jackson and Forest O'Brien tonight neared the close of the fifteenth day in the air and the motor was showing no signs of "giving in". At 12:17 p. m. they had been up 353 hours.

The fliers were jubilant over having conquered the nearest rival, the Houston, Texas, endurance plane, "Billion Dollar City," which was forced down this morning, but this appeared to spur them on, rather than to tempt them to land.

Big Crowd There.

One of the largest crowds that has gathered at Lambert-St. Louis Field since the fliers broke the record of the "Angeleno" last Tuesday watched the plane circle gracefully above the airport tonight. Special traffic and policing arrangements were made for what is expected to be a record crowd tomorrow.

Wheat Crop Goes Over Prediction

Yield Estimated At 45,000,000 Bushels By Amarillo Man; 24,000 Cars Moved Friday By Railroads

(By Associated Press)

FORT WORTH, July 27. (AP) — The wheat crop of the Panhandle-Plains now is estimated at $45,000,000, according to T. E. Johnson, managing editor of the Amarillo Globe, who is in Fort Worth. Estimates of the yield last week were placed at $42,500,000. When the harvest started a month ago the output was placed at 35,000,000 bushels but each week has seen a higher figure set by railroads and millers.

Three railroads in the Panhandle moved 24,000 cars of grain Friday night, Johnson reported. They estimated 70 percent of the crop has been moved. Their estimates last week showed a 42,500,000 bushel crop, based on an average car of 1,350 bushels.

A study of shipments made last week showed the average car was 1,450 bushels. This led to a new figure of 45,000,000 bushels being fixed by the railroads as the Panhandle yield.

Aged Lubbock Man, 'Tired Of Life', Fails In Efforts To Commit Suicide And Presents Problem To Harassed Officials Of County

BROKEN in health, wanting to die, tired of a life that seems no longer to hold a ray of comfort, without money and few friends, walking the streets aimlessly, looking out with tired eyes upon a world rushing madly by, heedless of a soul longing for companionship, a 69-year-old man was picked up on the streets of Lubbock late Friday as he hobbled from place to place trying in vain to borrow a gun with which he would "end it all."

"I guess its time for me to move on," he said. "My money is all gone, my health is gone and life itself seems to hold nothing for me. No, son, I guess there's nothing you could do for me. When I get to feeling like this I might just as well move on and make room for the younger fellows coming up. That's just what I want to do. I'm tired and sick. I'm sick of it all and I want to die. I'm tired of living a life without a purpose."

The old man was taken in charge by Lubbock county authorities and medical attention given him. The story he told was one of sorrow, of an aimless wandering, day in and day out, nothing but live, live, live, when he wanted so to die.

He was taken to a room in the county jail but he didn't want to walk there with officers. Some one might see him and think he was being arrested. He did not care to live but if he had to his pride would not allow him to see himself as a prisoner.

Begging and pleading with officers he asked them to get him poison, or a "dose of chloroform so big that he would never wake up." Saturday morning in the darkness and seclusion of his room he tried to choke himself to death with a shoe string. Authorities are puzzled but declare every attention will be given him.

Dire Need For Library Building At Texas Tech Shown

Moody's Failure To Sign Measure Would Hurt School

Provision Is Inadequate For Research And Study In College Now; More Room Is Greatest Need

Although Texas Technological college, in point of attendance, now stands at third place among the colleges of the state because of lack of funds it is at present suffering with dire need of a library building and adequate library facilities.

The college possesses only about a third of the volumes of reference books and other volumes needed as supplementary reading by students. Even this small quantity of books recline in crowded quarters.

Awaiting Moody's Action

All friends, alumni, students and faculty members of Texas Tech are awaiting hopefully for Governor Moody to act upon the recommendation of the state legislature in appropriating $150,000 for a Tech library building. Moody's signature to this bill will provide funds sorely needed. His failure to sign it will cripple Tech's efficiency.

Considering its age, Texas Tech has made a good beginning in two essentials for a college of the first class, namely, adequate physical equipment and adequate personnel. In point of adequate library facilities, however, it is lagging far behind its needs and, unless greatly improved in the near future, the development of this institution will be seriously retarded.

Needs 100,000 Volumes

Scholars declare that a four year college can "get by" with a library of 100,000 volumes, but Texas Tech which is a four-year college attempting to do graduate work, has less than 42,000 volumes and pamphlets, and these crowdedly housed.

Compared to a fair minimum income per student, for reading matter, of $10, Texas Tech, on the basis of the long term enrollment of 1928-29, had only about $1.60 per student. The difference in total is Tech's $3,500 as compared to $21,880 minimum, to be fair to the students. This is not naming the funds necessary for trained library personnel supplies and incidental supplies, nor for building. For 1929-39 there will be available for the college only about $16,956, as compared with a needed income of $54,700 for supplies, etc., even if the enrollment does not increase over last term.

Housing Needed

Even with $25 per student appropriated for library funds, Tech would still be faced with housing problems for present volumes.

To summarize briefly the housing needs are: A separate building consisting of a general reading with a seating capacity of 400, and an expansion capacity of 1,000 by the use of adjoining rooms, provided in the building plan; four or five additional reading and conference rooms for special material and advanced classes; one office for the librarian; one office for the librarian's secretary; one cataloging room; one receiving and unpacking room; one general work room with provision for additional space as work grows; stack levels with a capacity of 100,000 volumes and indefinite expansion possibility; storage space capable of three or four fold expansion; furniture sufficient to care for 400 readers and twice the presen tstaff.

The library at present has quarters in the administration building consisting of one reading room whose seating capacity uncrowded is 132, its expansion limit 164; stack room space which may accommodate 60-72 more readers but which will in a year need to be filled with shelving; one office for librarian and secretary, inadequate for present needs; a stack room whose capacity is about 22,000 volumes, expansion limit about 40,000; reading room shelving capacity about 3,000 volumes, expansion limit about 3,500 volumes; sufficient for present needs and about eighteen months growth; two store rooms, sufficient for present needs; furniture insufficient for present needs. The expansion limit bids fair to be reached in eighteen months at the fartherest.

Hoover's Crime Commission Is Off The Front Pages But It's Working Hard, Just The Same, Dutcher Says

Washington Correspondent Says There's Plenty Of Work To Be Done In The Future, Too

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
NEA Service Writer

WASHINGTON, July 27 — Although the National Commission on Law Observance and Enforcement has left the front page since its appointment by President Hoover and its first meetings last month, it has actually been hard at work believing that it has a tremendous job to accomplish within a relatively brief period.

At this writing none of the eleven members is in Washington, but there is a staff of a dozen persons at its offices here, busily engaged and working late hours to organize this great study of crime and criminal justice.

And nearly all the members are keeping in almost daily communication with the offices here, for they are buzzing or being buzzed by all and sundry in their various sections who might be expected to have interesting ideas on the subject of crime. This information and suggestions are being drawn first hand from all over the map—the commissioners are from Seattle, Los Angeles, Iowa, Chicago, Cleveland, New Orleans, Atlanta, Virginia, New York and Massachusetts.

Set Up a Big Library

Already a working library of a thousand volumes has been installed at headquarters, including a couple of hundred books borrowed in a raid on the Library of Congress and as many reports on state and municipal crime investigations as the commission has been able to find.

The plan of the commission's study has not yet been announced but it is known that there are ten main divisions of inquiry to be pursued. One of these is prohibition. The rest are all concerned with crime and criminal justice.

The commission has held three sets of meetings, the last of which lasted four days, sessions frequently running into early evening. At the outset, the commissioners went through the process of getting acquainted with each other.

Then they considered three questions, your correspondent is informed. What are the facts? What do they show? What are we going to do with them?

The commission's first big job is to get the facts on crime and law enforcement. And this is no mean task. Study of criminals in the mass, over the country, will require a long time. Carried to a logical conclusion, a study of the causes of crime would require extensive psychiatric investigations and a thorough study of facts which may not be obtainable.

Many Facts Needed

The commission wants to know first, just how much crime there really is. It wants the low-down, which is a difficult thing to obtain. It may be plugging a long time trying to find out just what facts there are. Meanwhile, it will try to economize on time, money and publicity. Anything it has to announce will consist solely of bare facts.

Two experts already have been engaged to pursue specialized investigations. The first was Alfred Bettman, a Cincinnati lawyer with experience in the Cleveland and Boston crime surveys, and an expert in the field of criminal prosecution. The second is Professor Sam Bass Warner of the University of Syracuse, another criminologist of wide experience. The commission is trying to pick three first-rate men, slowly and carefully upon whose facts it can safely depend. Leonard V. Harrison, an expert on police, came down to help at the outset and has been one of the most important figures in the work to date.

In the absence of the commissioners from Washington, Max Lowenthal, secretary of the commission, is in active charge of coordinating the work and in carrying out the commission's plans.

Not a Political Group

One of the most significant facts about this commission is the freedom of nearly all its members from political entanglements. Chairman George W. Wickersham, former attorney general, who could have long since have been a Supreme Court justice had he been willing to accept, is in his seventies. The work of his commission represents the crowning achievement of his career. None of the members seem likely to hope to use it as a stepping stone.

Such men as Newton D. Baker, Judge William I. Grubb, Judge William S. Kenyon, Judge Paul J. McCormick—who wrote the decision throwing out the Doheny oil leases—Frank J. Loesch, 76-year-old head of the Chicago Crime Commission, whose only ambition is to clean up Chicago, and the world-famous Dean Roscoe Pound of Harvard are extremely unlikely to allow political considerations to influence them in any way. The same, of course, goes for President Ada L. Comstock of Radcliffe College, the only woman on the commission.

In fact, its non-political complexion is perhaps the commission's most notable aspect.

Preparation For Forced Landings Made By Airmen

HOUSTON, July 27. (AP)—Steady progress is being made by the United States government in the establishment of airports every 30 miles and beacons every ten miles between Houston and Brownsville.

The airports will be defined by 20-watt border lights and there will be a 2,000,000 candlepower beacon at each airport and beacon station. The government will spend about $7,000 for equipment of each airport and will pay the maintenance cost. A caretaker will be in charge of each airport and weekly inspections of the lighting facilities will be made by travelling mechanics in the government's employ.

May Convert Them

While all planes will be privileged to land at these airports, they are designed primarily for forced landings and to light the way for air mail pilots. The government is willing to enter into arrangements with nearby towns for conversion of the fields into municipal airports.

One hundred acres of the Mahon ranch near Victoria has been donated for an airport. From Victoria south locations have been made at or near Vidauri, Sinton, Robstown, Kingsville, Turcotte, Raymondville and Harlingen. One definite location above Victoria has been made at Wharton.

Pennsylvania Curator And Party In Panhandle-Plains Region To Search For Evidence of Prehistoric People

(Special To The Avalanche-Journal)

FLOYDADA, July 27. — Seeking evidence of prehistoric or aboriginal Indians in the Panhandle-Plains region, Dr. J. A. Mason, curator of the American Section Museum of the University of Pennsylvania, and a party of four associates are in Floydada this week seeking to get in touch with persons who can give them possible "leads" in their research work.

In the party with Dr. Mason are Frederick Oldach, geologist, University of Pennsylvania, Edgar B. Howard, associate in American Archaeology in museum, University of Pennsylvania, L. Satterwhite, graduate student of the University and Charles Bache.

Unexplored Section

"The whole southwest area, including the Panhandle-Plains area, which this party will give their particular attention on this trip, is an unexplored section almost totally unknown to science," Dr. Mason said. "We are hoping we may get in touch with people who may give us some information that will discover evidence of the residence of aboriginal or prehistoric Indians in this section."

The party is interested in such things as Indian burying grounds or ruins of Indian camps or residences, their chief interest being the discovery of human habitation in this section which antedates the more recent Indians. Possibility that the Indians, whose ruined abodes are in New Mexico, may have roamed as ar east as the Plains and the Panhandle of Texas, is one of the things that interest the archaeologist.

Edgar B. Howard, of the party, has his residence in Philadelphia. He is one of the Howard brothers, who own an immense tract of land in Floyd, Motley, Hall and Briscoe counties, northeast of Floydada, and it was the plan originally to make Floydada the base for their research during the course of a two months stay in the plains country. However, after a cursory survey of the situation, Dr. Mason said it is possible that they will move further east or north in search of evidence of early man in Texas. Their research might take them further down on the watershed of the Brazos, to the vicinity of the Red river, or even further north to the Canadian or the Cimmaron. They will explore, to some extent at least, in the broken terrain in the northeast part of Floyd county and the southeastern portion of Briscoe county.

He Told The Truth 'Yodeling Fool' Has Big Time In Jail

"I'm a yodeling and Yo-Yoing fool. Put me up on the third floor and I'll show you just how it's done."

This from a Lubbock youth when he was arrested Saturday afternoon by county officers and lodged in the county jail, charged with drunkenness and disturbing the peace.

He was given a cell all his own on the second floor of the building from which place he soon tired of the quiet and peace of his surroundings. He set up a shout, with a voice that proved to be wonderful for ballyhoo work as evidenced by the crowd of curious spectators he attracted for blocks around.

Stripping off his shoes and socks he hung his bare feet out the window and called to one and all to witness his performance. Men, women and children, numbering into the hundreds, came at his call until officers transferred him to the bull pen away from any window. His shouting and attempts to yodel were heard for several minutes after his removal.

As Editors Faced Jail Term In Contempt Case

Found guilty of contempt of court by Judge Frederick P. Walther, inset, right, for criticizing the action of the judge for issuing an injunction restraining a sheriff from interfering with racing at a Cleveland track. Louis B. Seltzer, editor of the Cleveland Press, and Carlton K. Matson, chief editorial writer, have been fined $500 each and sentenced to 30 days in jail at Cleveland. Photo above, snapped as the men were en route to jail shows, left to right, William J. Monahan, deputy sheriff; Matson, Newton D. Baker, former secretary of war, who defended the editors, and Seltzer. Inset, left, shows Matson and Seltzer, as they were being booked at the jail. They were later released on bond, pending appeal. Seltzer and Matson, issuing a statement following the sentence, declared that "30 days in jail and a $500 fine is a small price to pay, if such a price must be paid in the contest involving such a principle." Their defense was made on the issue of freedom of the press.

Street Signs To Be Ordered This Week, Is Belief

C-C Committee Ends Labors To Aid Strangers; Thirty Days Will See Markers On All Corners, Belief

Two hundred street signs will be ordered for the city of Lubbock the first of this week, according to a decision reached by the Street Sign committee of the Lubbock Chamber of Commerce in meeting Saturday.

The committee, composed of Rev. L. G. H. Williams, chairman; C. E. Hunt, Harry N. Roberts, W. E. Humphries and Dr. Sam Dunn, was concerned most of Saturday morning with the discussion of plans for the placing of the signs and it is expected that they will be fully set up and complete within 30 days.

Anchored In Concrete.

The signs will be placed on two-inch pipes, these to be anchored two feet in concrete and rise to a height of eight feet above the ground. Virtually all unpaved corners from Avenue A to College Avenue and from 4th street as far south as 34th street will be marked. After a careful survey of the city the committee, cooperating with members of the city commission, believe that this number of markers will adequately serve the purpose.

In addition to the street markers every corner on streets and avenues that are paved will be stenciled with bright paint showing the number of the block and the name of the thoroughfare. This will include approximately 200 intersections.

Two New Members Join High School Faculty In Fall

H. A. Anderson Succeeds J. W. Crowley As Band Man; Farrow Is From Clarendon College

Only two new members will be added to the present staff of teachers in Lubbock schools next season, according to present plans, M. H. Duncan, superintendent of schools, announced Saturday.

H. A. Anderson, formerly assistant leader of the famous Cowboy Band at Simmons University, will succeed J. W. Crowley, who resigned to accept a position as director of the Snyder high school band. Mr. Anderson will receive an M. A. degree at Simmons August 15.

Farrow Comes Here

H. L. Farrow, former head of the department of science at Clarendon college, will teach biology next year in Lubbock high school.

Method to Be Amplified

The group and study method, inaugurated last year, will be amplified in system of teaching next year, Mr. Duncan said. "It is our aim," he said, "to increase the efficiency of the Lubbock public schools by awakening the dormant resources of the child, and this can be done only by bringing the work of the school into touch with his vital interests. We can enlist the unused powers of children by dealing with them as we would with brick and mortar. The child is a live, active, moving, sentient being and we can not tap his resources by dealing with him as a machine."

"The group and study method now used by a large majority of the teachers in the Lubbock public schools is an effort to apply in the work of the schools the well-known educational law that people are educated by what they do for themselves and not by what others do for them," explained Mr. Duncan. "It is an effort to create a situation where the pupil learns to and for doing and not merely to cram into his head some information the teacher believes he should know."

Remedy Is Given For Plant Lice

A remedy for getting rid of Aphids, or plant lice, which always damage garden truck and other vegetation, at this time of year, has been suggested by County Agent David F. Eaton. Because of a great demand for this, he has given it to the press.

One remedy is this:

One teaspoonful of Black Leaf 40, to one gallon of water. Use as a spray and thoroughly wet the insect. Destroy all vines that are badly infested, to begin with. Do this either by burning, or burying.

Nicotine Dust, the other remedy, consists of one ounce of Black Leaf 40, to one pound of lime. Mix well in a sealed-top bucket, one or two pounds at a time. To apply this dust, place some sort of cover over the plant, to keep the dust from flying in other directions, and cover the plants with the dust through the use of a dust gun.

The best time to apply these remedies is during the hottest part of the day, Eaton states.

Mexicans On Way To Cotton Fields

LAREDO, July 27. (AP)—Hundreds of Mexican families are moving to the cotton fields in the coastal and lower Rio Grande Valley where heavy yields of the fleecy staple are ready for harvesting.

These families have taken every precaution against being molested and detained by immigration authorities. They are armed with birth certificates, baptismal records, marriage records, etc., while those who have been residents of the border section many years have letters or cards of identification that will convince the immigration authorities they are not violators of the immigration regulations.

The exodus of the Mexican families to the cotton field has caused a dearth of domestic help in many Laredo households. Good prices are offered for cotton pickers, and Laredo housewives are doing their part to retain their help.

Hubbers Bow To Lamesa, 2-0, And Start Trek Homeward

IN THE REALM OF SPORT

WITH ALLAN CARNEY
Avalanche Sports Editor

THEY DESERVE A HAND

Though trailed by a dogged jinx, the Lubbock Hubbers went down fighting yesterday at the Amarillo Globe-News tournament with their old rivals, the Lamesa Loboes walking off with the laurels. It was a bitter dose for the Hubbers to swallow, but the determined performance of the locals throughout the meets was one of the high lights of the past week's events.

* * *

Entering their first game with seven regulars on the field, the Hubbers lost a bitter struggle to the powerful Wellington crew, but came back in the next with their war clubs swinging to down Quitaque. A vicious batting assault was continued at the expense of the Canyon collegians and things had begun to look a little rosy. Came Saturday and the Hubbers made plans to shoot their best bet, Alex McColl, against the slugging Lamesa Loboes, but a stalled motor, somewhere between Lubbock and Amarillo, held him back until six innings had been played and the Loboes had sewed up the ball game.

* * *

Raymond Ater, the Hubber shortstop, made a valient effort to check the Loboes until McColl arrived, but started off a bit wobbly and allowed the enemy to cross the platter twice. From the side of the Lubbock offensive, there was too much Rose. The same righthander that has been the nemesis for the locals all season, bobbed up in the tournament and knocked the Hubbers for a row. The result was a trip home for the Lubbockites.

* * *

A few weeks ago when the Great Art Shires was batting around .250 he offered to take any and all bets that it wouldn't take him long to get up over the .300 mark. At that time, the supreme confidence of this "Texas Cactus Plant" scared off the gamblers, regardless of their personal belief. At any rate, he did as he said and now is hitting around .320. He has also been building a long string of hits in consecutive games. This was merely one of the details in the job of Shires to attract attention for himself and the Chicago White Sox.

* * *

From the standpoint of the newspaper man, Shires is always good for a story. If there's nothing new to print, this cocky individual will manufacture something for the scribe and it's usually about himself. Art is the type of ball player that make the turnstiles click and his type are usually able to demand nice fat salaries.

* * *

Barney Dreyfuss, holder of the largest share of stock in the Pittsburgh Pirates, believes that the Chicago Cubs will be through by August 15. The Buccaneer owner, who naturally has a leaning toward his own club, bases his prediction on the fact that the Bruins were playing in mid-season form at the beginning of the season and have been going at a fast clip ever since. Dreyfuss is convinced that the McCarthymen will not be able to stand up under the strain and that the Pirates will use their reserve strength to pass up the Cubs.

* * *

If the Chicago pitching staff continues to hold up its share of the burden, Mr. Dreyfuss' aggregation is likely to find the Windy City entry a little hard to stop. There's no doubting the fact that the Cubs have more punch than Pittsburgh and with some good strong pitching the Bruins will bring William Wrigley the pennant that he has been seeking so vigorously.

* * *

Here's another rumor—Sunny Jim Bottomley, the slugging first baseman of the St. Louis Cardinals, will be on the trading block after the current campaign has been finished. The team is to be turned inside and outside over the winter, so the rumor goes, and the genial first sacker is to be the nucleus of one of the year's most sensational trades. Bottomley is considered the bait necessary to extract from other major league clubs the pitching that the Redbirds will need next season. The Card owners have finally admitted that the present hurling corps won't do and since there seems to be no help forthcoming from the St. Louis "farms" the management is looking to some other major league club to come to the rescue.

Babe Ruth Is Nearing Coveted Desire Of 500 Homers Before Father Time Forces Permanent Retirement

The Charge of the Busting Babe

BY WERNER LAUFER

Half a mile, half a mile,
Half a mile onward,
For o'er the garden wall
Sailed his fifth hundred.
Jogging around the bags,
Waving of hats and flags,
Out of the park, the Babe
Crashed his fifth hundred.

Grandstand to right of him,
Grandstand to left of him,
Bleachers in front of him
Volleyed and thundered.
Batters have lived before
Who made a baseball soar
How ill their feats compare
To Ruth's tremendous score,
Homers, five hundred!

Others may briefly pace
Babe Ruth's gigantic mace in valldom's homerun race
But they're pretenders all,
Weak laurels plundered.
Ne'er will Babe's glory fade
Wherever ball is played,
Only the king of all
Could sock five hundred.

Injury May Delay Babe's March To Goal

By WM. M. BRAUCHER
NEA Service Sports Writer

BABE RUTH is big. His heart and the frame that houses it are built in a large way. So perhaps it is only natural that he should go in for ambitions in a big way.

Last spring Babe confided some of his dearest desires. One of these was to sign a contract calling for $100,000 a year (attention Colonel Ruppert.) Another one was to play first base, and at present writing this looks to be an impossibility. A third was to play in ten world series, and he has played in nine.

Yet another, and a cherished ambition of the big fellow, is to ride 500 homers over the wall in his big league career. The other day at Detroit, with 22 homers for the season, or six short of his grand total of 500 four-basers, Babe had to be taken out of the game because of a torn leg muscle, and he may not play regularly for the rest of the present season.

Babe already had slammed out 500 homers, if you count the 13 that he scored in world series games. At the close of the official 1928 season he had cracked out a total of 470 in his 14 years in the big leagues, an average of more than 33 a season. This year, despite his illness and the accident in Detroit, he had rapped 22. That left him six to go to achieve a world record unapproached by any other player in baseball history.

The Babe may get his 500th home run in the role of pinch hitter. After the Detroit injury, Babe stayed with the team, and was sent in to pinch hit. For some players it would be hard to get six home runs a season as pinch hitter, but when you see Babe cut into one, it's easy to get the idea that for this fellow it wouldn't be a very hard thing to do.

Here is a list of Babe's homers, chronologically, from 1915, when he joined the Boston Red Sox as a pitcher, until today:

1915, 4; 1916, 3; 1917, 2; 1918, 11; 1919, 29; 1920, 54; 1921, 59; 1922, 35; 1923, 41; 1924, 46; 1925, 25; 1926, 47; 1927, 60; 1928, 54, 1929, 22.

French Net Stars Are Mastered By American Youths

Allison And Van Ryn Stop Cochet And Borota Cold In Three Straight Matches On Saturday

By J. E. ANGLY
Associated Press Staff Writer

PARIS, July 27. (AP)—France will have to wait another day to pour champagne into the Davis Cup, the gleaming silver bowl that symbolizes world supremacy in tennis.

Hopeful of winning three straight matches, the French sent their best doubles team of Henri Cochet and Jean Borotra against the United States but the singles conquerors of Big Bill Tilden and George Lott were soundly and smartly beaten by two American collegians, John Van Ryn and Wilmer Allison, the one from Princeton and the other from Texas.

Need One To Win

France needs but one more victory in two matches tomorrow, however, to keep the Davis Cup another year. America must win both to win back the trophy.

Allison and Van Ryn triumphed in double-quick time by scores of 6-1, 8-6, 6-4.

Until today many a garrulous Gaul would have argued through a full hour and several drinks on the proposition that Cochet and Borotra together constituted the best doubles team that can be put on a tennis court, but not now.

Cochet and Borotra, the one capable of sterling shots from anywhere on the court, the other a nimble and audacious artist at volleying, beat Bill Tilden and Francis T. Hunter last year in the Davis Cup finals but they were scarcely a match this afternoon for the dazzling Americans.

Youngsters Take Command

From the first ball, Allison and Van Ryn gained command at the net, a precious advantage in doubles play, and nothing that either Borotra or Cochet attempting could drive them away. Before the Frenchmen could do anything at all to stop the fast rush of the American team, Allison and Van Ryn raced through the first set at 6-1 and were leading five to one in the second set when Allison let down a little. At the same time Borotra and Cochet made a desperate flight. Then the Frenchmen went ahead, leading 6-5. In the twelfth game, the Americans braced and took the next two games to win, the second set 8-6.

The third set was played with amazing speed. Games followed service until the ninth when a series of fine shots by Allison and Van Ryn upset Borotra's delivery and furnishing the break that lead to victory.

The three sets, comprising 31 games, were ripped off in just 61 minutes.

Cuyler Still At Base Pilfering

CHICAGO, July 27. (AP) — Base stealing is not a lost art to Kiki Cuyler, the Cubs' fleet outfielder. He stole 26 bases during the first half of the campaign.

Kiki appears a safe bet to lead both leagues. In his own circuit, he has a pretty safe margin over Frankie Frisch, his closest competitor.

Cuyler, who used to team up with Max Carey to give the Pirates the fastest outfield combination in baseball, stole 68 bases for Nashville of the Southern League in 1923, his last in the minors.

In five years of big league ball, he has amassed 165 bases through his base stealing activities.

Rose Limits Lubbock Aggregation To Three Hits To Eliminate Locals From Lists In Amarillo News-Globe Meet

Alex McColl Arrives On Scene After Loboes Had Scored Twice Off Ater; Lax Fielding Allows Lamesa To Score First Marker In First Inning

(Special To The Avalanche-Journal)

AMARILLO, July 27.—The big bats of the Lubbock Hubbers were silenced here today by the sweeping curves of Rose, ace of the Lamesa mound corps, and as a result the Plains aggregation started its long trek homeward with the Loboes still in the running after their 2-0 triumph.

For the first time this week the Hubbers failed to swing their bats with gusto, being held to three scattered hits by the Lamesa righthander.

Loboes Score Early

Lamesa sewed up the contest in the first inning when a bit of lax fielding on the part of the Hubbers gave L. White two bases on what should have been a single. He went to third on a passed ball and crossed the plate on T. White's sacrifice fly.

In the sixth inning the winners scored what proved to be an unnecessary counter when B. White walked and scored on two successive hits.

Lubbock threatened in the fifth but was not able to squeeze a run across. Volney Hill reached first on a miscue, went to second on Robinson's single but was thrown out at the plate by B. White after T. White had thrown the ball away at first in trying for a double killing on Taylor's line drive to short.

After an unsteady start, Raymond Ater pitched fine ball for the losers, but he could not match the splendid performance of Rose.

Failure of McColl, Lubbock hurling ace, to arrive in time for the start of the game was a bitter dose for the Hubbers. The big righthander made his appearance in the sixth inning, having been delayed on the road with a stalled automobile. He finished the game after arriving and did not allow a run.

Bob Peck Leads Qualifiers For City Open Tournament

Race For Texas League Batting Honors In Three-Cornered Fight

Wally Becomes Wise Cracker

Wally Schang, the veteran catcher of the St. Louis Browns, is one of the best receivers in the game. He always has been known as a plugger and a hard worker, but he never has been celebrated as a wise cracker. He did break out with a wise crack recently, however, that stopped the jockey cold.

The Browns were playing the Red Sox in Boston. Schang was at the bat and the jockeys on the Boston bench were working on him.

He missed a first strike and nearly tore himself in two. He missed the second strike just as far and the effort caused him to emit a grunt that was heard way up in the stands.

"Ugh, Ugh, Ugh. What you grunting about Schang," the jockeys hurled at him.

• • •

Two Great Hitters

Schange turned around to the Boston bench and let them have this:

"Gehrig grunts, too."

• • •

Look Out, You Blonds

Max Bishop started out to be the best second baseman in the American League this year. He was making astounding catches, stops and throws and he was the life of the Philadelphia infield.

Suddenly he fell into a terrible slump and started to fight the easiest chances all over the lot. He said that something had happened to his eyes and that he was looking into a haze.

Connie Mack took him to a specialist and the doctor said that his eyes were going and that it wasn't from the sinus affection that almost ruined George Sisler.

• • •

Put Specs On Him

"We can't do anything but put glasses on him," the doctor told Connie.

And then he added something that was new on us.

"You know," he said, "that every one with blond hair and blue eyes has weak eyes."

Rube Walberg is a blond with blue eyes and the Philadelphia players say his eyes are getting so poor he can hardly see the plate.

Jimmy Braddock, capable fighter that he is, couldn't get past the left hand of Tommy Loughran when they were fighting recently for the world's light-heavyweight championship.

If any one in the class had a chance to beat the champion, Braddock had it because he is one of the hardest right hand hitters in the game. And also Loughran made no effort to deny that he had to suffer to make the weight.

Braddock, however, is a slow-witted boy, compared to Loughran, and the brains and the left hand of the champion left him without a chance.

• • •

Sammy Has A Swell One

It is our hunch that the same factors will decie the fight between Sammy Mandell and Tony Canzoneri for the lightweight championship.

Mandell has a better left hand than Loughran has. He is just as smart as the handsome Tommy (an just as good looking) and he uses more speed than Loughran.

Local Golfers In Thick Of Prelims For Championship

Peck With 75, Daniels With 77, Higginbotham With 79 Show Way At End Of First Two Days

The second day of qualifying play for the City Open golf championship closed late yesterday with Bob Peck, boind-haired wizard of Lubbock golfing circles, leading the field of entries with a score of 75 over the rugged 18-hole country club course.

Twenty-six golfers had turned in qualifying scores last night and today's activities promise to swell the number seeking recognition in the tournament to 75. Those in charge of the meet expect the largest turnout of the year on the club course north of the city today.

Close behind the consistent Peck was E. T. Daniels, known in these parts as "The Old Lion of Idalou." The veteran Daniels completed the rounds and turned in a 77 to show for his efforts.

Peck recently turned in a record 69 for a new course record at the country club, three below par, and is expected to make a stronger bid for the city championship. Clinton Bussey, West Texas champion and member of the local club, was originally entered in the tournament but has withdrawn, it was learned last night.

J. K. Bradshaw, 15-year-old caddy, attracted considerable attention Saturday when he scored an 81 ranking fourth so far in qualifying play. Grady Higginbotham was third with a 79.

Although there is still a large number who are yet to qualify, tournament officials hope to have all scores turned in by nightfall today. The low medalist will be determined at the end of today's activities. Actual match play is to begin Monday.

Following are the remaining scores that had been turned in last night:

A's Pilot Won't Compare Macks With 1910 Team

PHILADELPHIA, July 27. (AP)—Manager Connie Mack of the league leading Philadelphia Athletics believes both his 1929 contenders and his championship team of 1910 should be considered as "great teams," and he is unwilling to draw a line of comparison between them.

To rate one team as better than the other would be unfair, said the veteran manager, because conditions in baseball have changed.

"It may be," the A's leader conjectured, "that the 1910 team would not be successful in this day and baseball age; and it might be that the 1929 club would not have been a world-beater in those days of 19 years ago.

"I can say this: Both teams hustled every minute. But, consider: In the days of 1910, one run was much more important than it is today. The sacrifice and the 'squeeze' were constantly employed at all stages of the contest to put just one runner over the plate. Big innings were few and far between.

"Nowadays—well, the box scores every day show of how little comparative importance a single run is and you won't see the sacrifice or 'squeeze' employed except in the very late stages of the game when the one run is as large as five or six in the earlier innings.

"Sometimes, in the old days, we would be able to go through an entire game with one ball, and, at the end of seven or eight innings, that ball was far from being white and easy to see. Nowadays, two dozen, maybe seven dozen, new balls are used in every game.

"It is a moot question whether Plank, Coombs and Bender, as great as they were in 1910, would be as effective today if compelled to pitch a new ball once or twice every inning. And perhaps if Walberg, Grove, Rommel, Earnshaw and Quinn could pitch the same ball all through a game today, they would be as effective as were the great trio of 1910."

Connie Mack also pointed out that the great hitters of the 1910 team would have relished that white ball of today, but, he added, "No one can say that hitters of the type of Cochrane, Simmons, Haas, Foxx and Miller wouldn't have hit as well against the 'dark ones' of olden times."

Is Retired Light Heavy Champ New Gene Or Another Delaney?

BY WILLIAM RITT
Central Press Sports Editor

NEW YORK, July 27. — The entrance of Thomas Loughran into the ranks of the heavies has gummed up considerably the business of selecting a worthy successor to James Joseph Tunney, the agile academician now sunning himself in his Italian villa.

Before Tommy shook off the regal light heavyweight robes the heavyweight race was to be run something like this: Jack Sharkey and Max Schmeling to meet and the winner to mix with the aging Jack Dempsey for the title.

There would have been few squawks at such a schedule, but with the Philadelphia Phantom now in the arena things will have to be revised.

Since Max Schmeling has gone under suspension of the New York state boxing commission it might be a wise move on the part of the Madison Square Garden corporation to forget temporarily its Sharkey-Schmeling plans and stage a Sharkey-Loughran battle, the winner to meet Schmeling.

Sharkey Needs Test.

By a victory over Loughran the Boston gob would have earned the right to meet Schmeling. Jack has not done anything since his waltz with Willie Stribling in Miami, a bout which caused many yawns at the ringside because of its feeble nature.

Next to Schmeling, Loughran seems to be in the best position of any of the heavyweights. He has silenced all his critics by his fine exhibition of boxing against the ambitious James J. Braddock. He has proven he is the master boxer in the ring today and has raised the question of whether superb attack of which both Schmeling and Sharkey are capable.

This makes either a Schmeling-Loughran or a Sharkey-Loughran battle a natural.

There is no way of gauging what Loughran's chances are by comparing them with other light heavyweight luminaries who left the junior division to try their luck among the beefy boys.

Consider Tunney, Delaney.

Prospects weren't so bright for Tunney when he left the 175-pounders for a try at the big time, yet he pounded his way to a match with Dempsey and went on to win the heavyweight crown and an enormous fortune.

On the other hand, Jack Dempsey was hailed with glad cries when he made the switch. Delaney, then known as the "Rapier of the North" was expected to slash his way straight to the throne, but he could not get by even the second-raters, and now, beaten and disappointed, is listed once more among the light heavies.

Loughran is still young in years but has been fighting for 10 years and against many crackerjack battlers, and that takes a lot out of a man. However, you never know.

Agreement For Games Between S.M.U. and Naval Academy Is Reached; Date, Place Undecided

DALLAS, July 27. (AP)—An agreement for football games between Southern Methodist University and the United States Naval Academy to be held in the east in 1930 and 1931 has been reached, J. N. Blackwell, business manager of Athletics at S. M. U. announced tonight.

Blackwell said the contracts were not signed yet but that the first contest would take place November 15, at Baltimore, Washington or Annapolis. The contracts probably will be signed next month when Commander Jonas Ingram, director of athletics at the Naval Academy, comes here to attend the Rockne-Warner coaching school.

The date and place for the 1931 meeting, Blackwell said, probably will be set after the 1930 game.

Blackwell made his announcement on the strength of a telegram from H. H. Adams, formerly of Dallas, but now of Washington, D. C., announcing that authorities at the Naval Academy had accepted terms for the games.

Chuck Klein Far Ahead In Home Run Department; Guy Bush Holds Lead In Pitching In League

NEW YORK, July 27. (AP)—Frank O'Doul, of Philadelphia has moved up to head of the National League batters, displacing the former leader, Babe Herman, of Brooklyn, by the margin of a single percentage point. O'Doul has a batting mark of .367 in the average issued today and including games of last Wednesday, while Herman is hitting a clip of .396.

Melvin Ott, the young Giant, wears the only double crown, heading the scorers with 88 runs and leading in runs batted in with 96.

Bill Terry, his teammate, has collected 143 hits to lead the league in that department. Johnny Frederick of Brooklyn is on top in hitting doubles with 30 while Lloyd Waner of Pittsburgh has the most triples, 14.

Klein Leads In Homers

Chuck Klein, the Philadelphia slugger, is far ahead in the home run race with 29 four base clouts. His nearest rival is Ott, who has hit the circuit 26 times.

Following the two leaders in batting averages are these regulars: Terry, New York, .370; Klein, Philadelphia, .369; Hornsby, Chicago, .362; Traynor, Pittsburgh, .360; Hafey, St. Louis, .356; L. Waner, Pittsburgh, .354; Hendrick, Brooklyn, .348; and Dressler, Brooklyn, .344.

Hack Wilson compiled the longest hitting streak of the year before he was stopped by Dazzy Vance in the Brooklyn-Chicago game last Monday. The Cub slugger hit safely in 27 games.

Bush On Top

Guy Bush of Chicago held his lead in the National League pitching staffs by aiding one more victory to his last week. He has won 13 games with but one defeat for an average of .929. Burleigh Grimes of Pittsburgh held second place with a mark of .889, gained from 16 victories and two defeats. Henry Meine of Pittsburgh lost his nominal lead when he took his second defeat with five victories.

The Phillies increased their margin in team batting by two points last week merely by holding their aggregate average at the .309 mark. Their rivals, the Pirates and the Giants slipped to .305 and .300. The slip cost the Giants third place on the list as the Cubs lost less ground and remained at .302. The Giants are on top in team fielding with .974 with the Cubs one point below them and the Reds another point back.

Blackerby Clings To Lead In Loop With Slight Edge

Langford And Bennett On Heels Of Slugging Waco Outfielder; Eddie Moore Having Great Year

DALLAS, July 27. (AP)—The race for batting honors in the Texas League has evolved into a hot three-cornered fight between Blackerby, Waco, Langford, Shreveport, and Bennett, Wichita Falls, with the Cub outfielder stubbornly clinging to a slight margin.

Through Thursday's contests Blackerby, last year's swat king, had compiled a great average of .370. Langford was second at .368 and Bennett third with .367. The terrific slugging of Langford and Bennett the last two weeks was noteworthy, as both were playing on the road.

Other leading hitters were Cooper, Shreveport, .359; J. Moore, Dallas, .357; Rosenthal, Dallas, .355; R. Moore, Dallas, .354; Sullivan, Wichita, .347; Kelly, Beaumont, .347; Starr, Shreveport, .347.

Moore Out Standing

Eddie Moore, veteran Fort Worth center fielder, continues to enjoy one of the best seasons of his career. The speedy little Cat was tied with Whelan, Shreveport, in total runs scored at 99, and was far ahead of the field in triples with 21. He seems certain to shatter the league record of 26 made by Ike Boone at San Antonio in 1923.

Handy Moore, Dallas gardener, had banged a total of 159 hits to hold his lead in that department, with the irrepressible Eddie second with 150. The Steer star also led in doubles, 36, having displaced Larry Cox, Fort Worth, with 35.

Although he was in the throes of a batting slump during the past week and failed to enhance his record, Bob Sanguinet of the Cubs remained far ahead of the field in the homer race. He has hit 25 for the circuit, compared to 19 for Blackerby and 18 for Mellano, his teammates.

Martin Still At It

Pepper Martin, Houston swift, seems destined to make good his promise to lead the circuit in base thefts. He had 27 steals to his credit through Thursday. Stewart, Sport rookie, had 25 and his teammate, Whelan, 21.

Despite a loss to Houston Thursday, Charlie Barnabe, Dallas southpaw, still ranked as the league's leading pitcher with 15 victories and four defeats. Payne, Wichita, and Caldwell, Waco, also had won 15 games apiece. Messenger, San Antonio, still was the leading strikeout artist with 90.

Shreveport took the lead in club batting at .306, followed by Wichita's .305 and Dallas' .304.

The lively ball has added to the interest of baseball, say the magnates. Some of the prize fight promoters ought to find a way to liven up those gloves.

The experts discount many of Chuck Klein's homers because they were made in the little park at Philadelphia. However, Mr. Klein gets credit for a four base hit on each of them.

Mel Ott denies he is a bashful young man, as several writers describe him. That rumor certainly wasn't started by any National League pitchers.

We now have to report that O'Gooty has just discovered that several of the National League teams have been white-washed by Grimes.

A writer says the younger ball players have never hit a spitball and that's why Quinn, Faber and Grimes are so effective. It begins to appear that the younger ball players are not going to learn to hit a spitter from either of those three gents very soon, either.

Jim Foxx Again Tops Sluggers In American League

Philadelphia Handy Man Regains Peak After Brief Slump; Macks Hog Pitching Supremacy

CHICAGO, July 27. (AP) — Jimmy Foxx, the Philadelphia Athletic's youthful first baseman, has regained the peak in the American league batting race, after yielding the top position to Heinie Manush of the St. Louis Browns, last week. Connie Mack's all-round hand dropped two points from his mark of a week ago, unofficial figures including Wednesday's games reveal, but his average of .328 left him five points in front of the Brown slugger.

The pitching last week again was a little better than the batting in the junior major circuit, only two players in the first 10 improving their marks. Bing Miller, Philadelphia outfielder added 12 points to his average and Harry Heilmann of Detroit picked up three points. Following Foxx and Manush were Simmons, Philadelphia, .362; Fothergill, Detroit, .360; Lazzeri, New York, .357; Miller, Philadelphia, .355; Fonseca, Cleveland, .353; Heilmann, Detroit, .353; Cochrane, Philadelphia, .348; K. Williams, Boston, .347.

Home run leaders of the league failed to improve notably during the week. Lou Gehrig of the Yankees, added one to remain in the lead with 23 circuit smashes, but was dogged by Babe Ruth, who in spite of injuries had collected 22, and Al Simmons who also had 22. Foxx boosted his total to 20.

The collective batting efforts of the Detroit Tigers slipped by three points, and the Athletics climbed into a tie for first position at .393. The Yankees picked up one point and were second with .303. The Athletics displaced Detroit as the league's leading scoring organization, with a total of 582 runs and had held all opposition to 359 successful assaults on its slate.

Philadelphia also maintained its fielding pace, handling the ball for a mark of .976 since the beginning of the season. St. Louis was second with .973 and the Yankees third with one point behind the Browns. Cleveland, fielding in sixth position, was the first team to cross the 100 mark in double plays, having completed 107 double killings.

Pitching supremacy was largely a matter of Philadelphia affair. Bob Grove won one game during the week to lead the pitchers working in turn with a record of 16 victories and two defeats. George Earnshaw, another Mack hirling, turned in the best mark of the week, three victories bringing his record to 15 triumphs and four defeats. Rube Walberg won a pair and had a mark of 14 victories and five losses. Old Tom Zachary of New York, remained as the only undefeated hurler his record being five straight triumphs.

West Texas Pioneers Meet Near Crosbyton In August

Third Reunion Of Old Timers Will Be Gala Affair

Barry Miller, Pink Parrish, C. C. Small and Others To Speak; Old Time Program Is Arranged

(Special To The Avalanche-Journal)

CROSBYTON, July 27.—The West Texas Old Settlers Reunion will be held on Thursday and Friday, August 15 and 16 at the Hank Smith Memorial Park, ten miles north of Crosbyton in the Blanco canyon. This will be the third annual meeting of the old settlers at this memorable spot since the organization was prefected four years ago, following a three days Crosbyton county fair. John McDermett, Bob Smith, Pink L. Parrish and a few of the other old timers conceived the idea of an Old Settlers Reunion to be held at the famous old rock house, the first house built in Crosby county, which was erected in 1877 by Uncle Hank Smith, the first settler. Officers were elected and time set for the reunion. The interest that has been taken in the two previous reunions has been tremendous and now the West Texas Old Settlers reunion draws visitors from all over the states of Oklahoma and New Mexico.

20,000 Expected

The outstanding feature of this occasion will be the coming together of the pioneer settlers of the Plains of 50 years ago. It was estimated that 20,000 people were in attendance at the reunion on the two days last year and it is expected that as many will be present again this year. The site of this reunion is the original place of the first settlers of this country. Besides the reunion of the old settlers there will be entertainment for all who wish to attend, such as the old fiddlers contest each day and other attractions that the committee has not yet worked out.

Lieut. Governor Barry Miller will speak at the reunion on the second day, Friday, Aug. 16 and the Hon. Clint C. Small, senator from the 18th district, will speak on the first day, Thursday, Aug. 15. The Hon. Pink L. Parrish, senator from this district will be another speaker on the program, as well as the Hon. Marvin Jones, United States congressman from this district. Other prominent speakers will be announced later which will include some of the orators of the early pioneers.

The "Old Timers" will have the privilege of enjoying the square dance which will take place from the platform arranged for this purpose each night of the reunion. Free water and fuel will be furnished the old timers if they want to camp on the ground and spin yarns of "ye olden times."

The famous old rock house in the shadow of old Mount Blanco, still stands as a monument to the foresight of the hardy pioneer who 50 years ago divided the possibilities of the Plains of Texas. Visit this reunion on August 15-16, and meet the early pioneers and hear them relate the stories of the frontier life.

Slayers Satisfied With 'Witchcraft Death'

Kalamazoo Murder Is Latest 'Hex' Death On U. S. Records

By BLANCHE DRAPER
Central Press Staff Correspondent

KALAMAZOO, Mich., July 27.—Because of a strange hallucination which led them to believe that an aged woman, an inmate of a widow's home, had the power to cast an evil spell over them which could cause their death, Eugene Burgess, a laborer, and his wife, Pearl, are imprisoned in the Kalamazoo county jail. They are awaiting trial in connection with the brutal slaying on the night of July 18 of Mrs. Etta Fairchilds, 75 years old, while the aged woman, an invited guest in their home, was seated at their supper table.

Officers are puzzled by the mystifying angles of the crime. Alienists are confronted by the strange mental aspects of the case. The city of Kalamazoo is appalled by the horrors of the slaying, the first witchcraft murder within its boundary in the entire 100 years of its history.

Satisfied With Deed

And in the meantime Burgess and his wife express themselves as perfectly satisfied with their deed, and happy that they have made the city safe for their family, and relieved humanity of the danger of the "evil spell." A son, Burnett, 27, is also held, though a daughter, Eugenia, has been released.

Less than two decades ago the Burgess and Fairchilds families were next door neighbors. They were even close friends. Both families upheld the tenets of the Christian Science faith. The women of the two families visited back and forth almost daily. Then Mrs. Burgess, it is said, became interested in a "higher thought" cult. And frequently their discussions were along religious lines.

One day they quarreled. Then, for years they were estranged. In the meantime Mrs. Fairchilds' husband died, and she went to the Merrill Home for Widows to reside. One day she met her old-time neighbor, Mrs. Burgess, on the street. They spoke. A friendly conversation ensued. Mrs. Fairchilds was invited to the Burgess home. And the kindly old woman, lonely for the friends of yester year, was happy. She told the other widows at the home of her joy.

Burgess' Confession

The other day she went to the Burgess home to call. Mrs. Burgess invited her to stay for supper. Burgess came home. Mrs. Burgess and her guest were seated at the table waiting for him. And then, according to his confession, he came up behind the little round-shouldered old woman, who was just a trifle deaf, struck her over the head with a lead pipe, dragged her from the dining room to the parlor of the home where he wrapped her up in the parlor rug, tied her tight with heavy cord, fastened concrete block to her body, and, when all was dark outside, threw her into the cistern at the rear of the little home.

Then they turned out the lights and closed the house. Presently Eugenia, the daughter, came home, slipped into the house, and to her room quite unaware, she says, of the terrible crime which had been committed within the four walls.

Then came a telephone call at the Merrill Home for Widows. It was a woman's voice, asking if Mrs. Fairchilds was home. Within five minutes the telephone in the home of Prosecutor Paul Tedrow rang. Again it was a woman's voice that spoke. And it told him that Mrs. Fairchilds had been murdered at the Burgess home.

Woman Retracts Confession

Then began the work of the officers. The arrest of Burgess, his wife and daughter and the subsequent arrest of the son, who lived across the street. Scores of times Burgess had reiterated his confession that he killed the woman. Mrs. Burgess, too, confessed that it was she who did the killing, but then entirely retracted her confession. The son has refused to talk.

Not once has Burgess or his wife shown a particle of rembrse. Not once have they shown a bit of sympathy for the slain woman. Not once have they broken down. Their only emotion is one of continued satisfaction and an apparent sense of freedom from what they call "the spell."

"If you only knew what that spell could do to you," they say over and over again, "you would be glad we did it. That woman could make you have any kind of disease. She has killed hundreds of persons with her spell."

"Kindly, Serious-Minded Woman"

And yet, among all the acquaintances of the slain woman there has not been found one who has recognized that she had any unusual occult power or claimed to have. As a unit they declare her to have been a kindly, serious-minded woman whose chief apparent interest was in cats.

As the last rites were performed over the mutilated form of Mrs. Etta Fairchilds and her battered and beaten old body was laid to rest beside that of her husband in Riverside cemetery, the Burgesses calmly remarked:

"The rest of the people of Kalamazoo are safe now because Mrs. Fairchilds can't bewitch them."

Formation Of A New Cabinet Facing France With The Illness Of Premier Poincare, Brought On By Much Work

Official Is Suffering With Necessity Of Operation, Which Would Incapacitate Him For 3 Months

PARIS, July 27.—Premier Raymond Poincare, suffering serious ill health and faced with the necessity of an operation, has informed the cabinet of his desire to be relieved.

They decided to ask him to remain and sent Foreign Minister Aristide Briand and Minister of Justice Louis Barthou to his bedside to make this request. Some circles believed the Premier would accede. If he persists it was thought M. Briand would would be entrusted with the formation of a new government.

Completes Legislative Approval

Before the rumors of the Premier's intended resignation were confirmed by the official announcement the French Senate completed legislative approval of the Mellon-Berenger and Churchill-Caillaux Foreign debt accords by passing the government ratification will with a majority of 205 votes. The chamber of deputies approved the accords Sunday by the scant margin of eight votes.

The two measures, one for the American and one for the British debt settlement, will be promulgated in a formal decree by President Gaston Doumerque probably tomorrow.

Long Struggle Brings Victory

Premier Poincare thus witnessed the victory of his long struggle for unconditional ratification of the settlements, but he was not present in person during the debate.

Inasmuch as the resignation has not yet gone to President Doumergue, cabinet members hoped their leader might want to remain. Under the constitution of France the minister of justice can act as Premier during an incapacity of the first minister. In view of the overwhelming interest of Foreign Minister Briand in the Reparation Settlement question, which is soon to come before the governments at a conference in the Hague, it was thought that he jointly with M. Barthou might carry on the duties of M. Poincare.

Malady Is Ulcer of Bladder

In circles close to the premier it was said tonight that his malady is ulcer of the bladder.

In his letter to the cabinet Poincare said he was faced with the necessity of an operation which would incapacitate him for at least three months.

The strength of the Premier was greatly depleted by the long strain of defending the settlements of war debts made with Great Britain and the United States in seeking authorization for ratification in the chamber of deputies. He had spoken a total of more than 30 hours when he was finally forced to his bed and left his associates to carry on the battle to a successful conclusion in both houses of parliament.

Even should M. Poincare remain at the head of the government in name there appeared to be little likelihood he could resume active political work for months. His final resignation was therefore looked upon as only a matter of time.

Life Of "Hello" Girl Is Different From "Inside"; Local Office Makes 28,000 Calls Daily, Report Reveals

BY MRS. W. A. McGEE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

IF THE average subscriber, patron, or what have you,—could only spend 60 minutes in the "operating room" of a telephone exchange, he in all probability, would experience "a change of heart" without an operation! He would view the service in a different light.

For, he would feel kindly ever after towards the little girl who so faithfully and efficiently "rings his number" without using profanity, or "calling him names!"

Average 28,000 Daily

The wonder of it all would be, how the operators ever complete one call a day, let alone an average of 28,000 local calls and 655 long distance calls daily in this, the admittedly dullest season of the year.

But we're not talking about heart lessons, yet for the benefit of the audience we'd like to say that we never saw so many "switches" in one room. You've heard of "jillions?" well, I guess there were that many or more. A Dutch puzzle, or a crossword puzzle could never compare with the deep systematized mystery of it all.

69 on Payroll

There are 69 operators on the "payroll"—and, from 8 to 9 local operators and a like number of long distance operators working the "switch-boards" at all times. These of course work in some ten or twelve shifts daily, according to Miss Lois Stuart, chief operator, who so courteously and painstakingly piloted us through the well lighted and ventilated exchange office of the Lubbock Southwestern Bell Telepone office, recently.

"There is no talking back privilege granted the girls by the company, and furthermore they're instructed not to repeat anything they hear in the course of the day's work," explained Miss Stuart. If any of the girls have a friend who wishes to talk with them, they are politely asked to leave their number and when the particular girl is off duty she is permitted to call them, from the home-like private rest-room in which the girls find a veritable haven, when they wish to rest or relax by reading books or magazines, or by listening to the latest popular music played on the company's new electric victrola.

Few Smart Alex's Here

"We have comparatively few 'smart alex's' in Lubbock," declared the chief operator, "if one is to judge the number by the fellows who for reasons of intoxication perhaps, try to get smart with the operators."

Said Miss Clellie Barton, who is one of the three girls who are better known as "Miss Information" "We have all kinds of funny questions asked us every day. Recently a man called to inquire, in all seriousness, if a certain man friend of his was in the local jail? Another rather common inquiry is, will you please tell me where I can find Mr. So-and-So? (I don't know his initials, but he lives on Nineteenth street, and in an old yellow house facing the Battery station across the street? He's a big fat man with gray eyes and red hair! Do you think you can locate him by that?)

Naturally the little "Miss Information" has no more way of knowing the color or size of a man on Nineteenth street, than does The Plainsman's girl who resides on Broadway. The local offices have failed thus far to install the modern "television" machine, so all the operator can say, is "Beg pardon, mister, but I have no way of locating your corpulent, red-headed friend on Nineteenth!"

Bobbitt To Seek Governor's Office In Next Campaign And McCraw Will Enter In Attorney General's Race

(By Associated Press)

DALLAS, July 27. — The Dallas News today said that "The candidacy of Robert Lee Bobbitt of Laredo for governor next year is regarded as practically certain by his Dallas friends, it was learned today when Bobbitt visited Dallas on business."

"By declining to deny or affirm," the paper added, and smiling broadly the while, Bobbitt, former speaker of the Texas house of representatives and now district attorney at Laredo, strengthened the rumor he would announce his candidacy for governor."

Confers With McCraw.

Bobbitt, the News learned, conferred with District Attorney William McCraw of Dallas concerning a forthcoming convention and "incidentally talked politics also."

"Friends of McCraw," continues the News article "no longer surmise about whether he will be candidate for attorney general in 1930—they have made up their minds he will. And McCraw seems not to mind."

Among the large number of probable candidates for the job McCraw likely will seek has been added James V. Allred of Wichita Falls, former district attorney there and unsuccessful candidate for attorney general when Claude Pollard was elected.

The engineer was very kind. The Tinies saw he didn't mind their being in his cab with him. How very thrilled they felt. The train went whizzing o'er the ground, with now and then a tooting sound. All of a sudden each one stared, 'cause burning cloth was smelt.

Then Mister Engineer cried out, "Hey, Clowny, you'd best swing about. You've leaned against the firebox and you've singed your little suit." 'Course Clowny promptly jumped away. Said he, "This is my foolish day.' It seemed the engine thought so too, for it went "Toot, toot, who-o-o!"

All of a sudden all the bunch felt all the train wheels sort of crunch. "We're stopping," shouted Coppy. "Tell us, is there something wrong?" "Oh, no,' replied the engineer. "There's not a thing that you need fear. We're going to pitch our circus here, so it's where we belong."

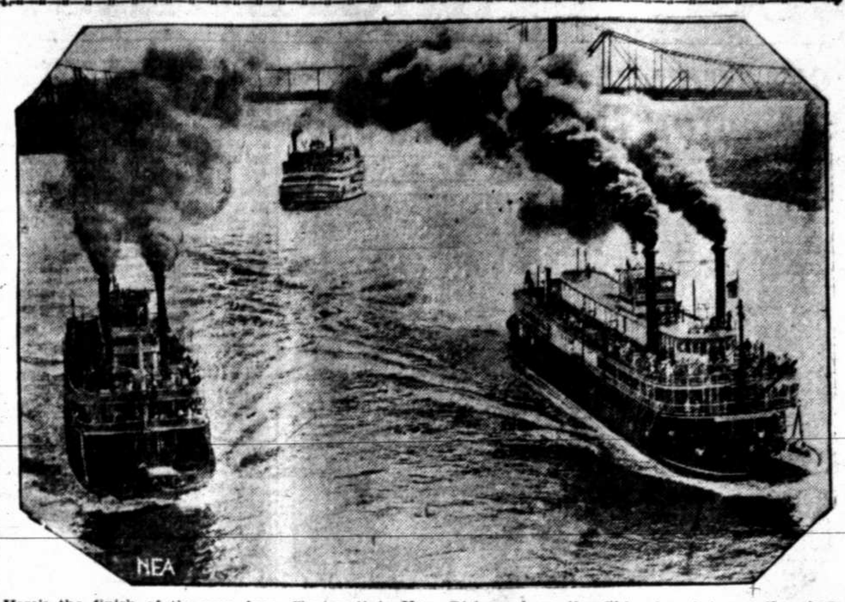

"Oh, goody, goody," Gerry cried. And all the bunch hopped right outside. The circus train was standing still. The grounds were right nearby. The engineer said, "You'll soon know the kindly owner of this show. I'm sure he'll give you all a job. At least he'll let you try."

The owner then came up and met the bunch. He was real nice, you bet. He told them they could help unload the train that very day. Of course the Tinies were surprised, but when they fully realized that they were very welcome, they all shouted, "Hurrah!"

Soon here and there some people ran as daily circus work began. It didn't take the Tinies long to find out what to do. They helped to set the big show stage and then ran over to a cage, where Clowny very proudly led a great big kangaroo.

(The Tinies help pitch the tent in the next story.)

When The Tom Greene Beat The Betsy Ann

Here's the finish of the race from Cincinnati to New Richmond on the Ohio river between the stern-wheelers Betsy Ann, left, and the Tom Greene. The Tom Greene edged across the finish line winner by ten feet over its rival and thereby retained the elk's antlers, symbolic of speed, won last year from the Betsy Ann. Twenty thousand people along the banks were thrilled as the packets, with smoke curling from twin smoke stacks and the waters churning heavily, approached the finish line almost in a dead heat.

Aristide Briand Chosen Prime Minister Of France

Internationally Famous Statesman Will Head Country's Cabinet Tenth Time In History; Poincare Resigns

Briand Expected To Retain Foreign Minister's Post In New Cabinet; To Make Selection Soon

(By Associated Press)

PARIS, July 27.—Aristide Briand, long French foreign minister and internationally known for his efforts in the cause of peace, for the tenth time in his long career will be French premier.

The veteran statesman, who has been in Cabinets since 1906, tonight accepted a mandate from President Doumergue to form a ministry in succession to the Cabinet which resigned this morning after Premier Poincare definitely decided he must retire because of the condition of his health. Briand was foreign minister in this cabinet.

The foreign affairs experts thus will again head the French ministry at the time when France is facing, at the coming Hague conference, the question of final liquidation of the war.

Has Hard Task

Briand took up an admittedly delicate task in consolidating the various opposing groups in parliament into a ministry "as a patriotic duty" after the leaders of most of the parties told President Doumergue that he was "the man of the moment."

His official conversations with the leaders will begin tomorrow but the more intimate work of sounding out the opinions of the different groups already was under way tonight.

Advice Differs

In some circles he was urged to retain the entire present cabinet of "Republican concentration" as did Premier Poincare on the good will of groups normally in opposition. Other advisers, however, in view of the attitude of the radical socialists, have urged that he included members of that party.

Briand hopes to be able to hand the list of his new cabinet to President Doumergue tomorrow in order that he may begin work immediately.

Selection Will Help Naval Slash, Washington Thinks

WASHINGTON, July 27 (AP)—Acceptance by Aristide Briand of the commission to form a new French Cabinet was hailed in official circles tonight as likely to furnish an impetus toward negotiations for an international naval reduction parley.

Credit was given former Premier Poincare by Washington officials and diplomats for the part he played in international and domestic French affairs. Some noted Poincare successfully concluded virtually all of his efforts to put the internal problems of France on a sound basis and said the way was open for Briand to devote greater attention to foreign affairs.

Will Hold Present Post

Briand, if he succeeds in forming a cabinet, was expected here to retain the portfolio of foreign minister in addition to that of premier.

He has been dealing with international affairs for a long period and is considered by American officials to be the best equipped statesman in France to deal with the naval question after the problem reaches a definite stage.

As premier, it was pointed out, he would not be obligated to seek the approval of a superior upon shaping a foreign policy, as was the case while he was foreign minister under Poincare.

Germany's Feelings Are Mixed Over Change

BERLIN, July 27 (AP) — Withdrawal of Raymond Poincare as Premier of France was greeted today with mixed feelings in German political circles but all parties agreed Aristide Briand was his inevitable successor.

Politicians regarded the resignation as a political move and called the change "apparent" since they did not expect that French foreign policy would be altered under Briand.

The centrists however welcomed Briand's "amenability and adaptability" in the place of the "intransigeance" of Poincare. Other government parties endorsed the statement of Briand that "a lasting European peace must be organized" as the basis for the Hague conference on the young plan for reparations payments.

Federal Farm Board Aids Gigantic Organization Of Grain Marketing Board; Hold Meeting Next Month

Sixteen Men Named to Posts In $20,000,000 Combine In Chicago; To Aid Farm Relief For Grain

(By Associated Press)

CHICAGO, July 27.—Under the guiding hand of the Federal Farm board, the nucleus of what is anticipated to become a $20,000,000 grain marketing corporation was formed here today.

The nucleus is a committee of sixteen representative grain men selected from among more than 50 who attended the sessions of the farm board here the last two days at the board's invitation.

This committee will hold its first meeting in Chicago August 26 and organize the Farmers National Grain corporation with an authorized capital stock of $10,000,000, which will be increased ultimately to $20,000,000 through stock dividends.

Stock To Be Issued

Stockholders in the new corporation will be cooperative marketing associations, elevator companies or farmer-owned sales agencies at central markets, on the basis of one share of stock for each member. Individual farmers also will be permitted to purchase one share of stock each. Par value will be $20.

Organization by the grain interests of the Farmers National Grain corporation will mark the first actual step taken by the newly created farm board to solve the Farmers' marketing problems.

Other similar corporations are expected to be organized later to deal with other commodities.

Most Feasible Plan

The plan was submitted by the board as the most feasible means of stabilizing prices.

William Settle of Indianapolis, president of the Indiana Farm Bureau Federation, is chairman of the committee, representing the Central States wheat pools.

Chairman Settle of the committee said: "This is the greatest day for agriculture that I can remember."

Facilities Provided

The operation of the new corporation is contemplated to provide central marketing facilities and sales services at all markets for the efficient distribution of grain; to conduct stabilization operations on the open market, when approved by the federal farm board; to buy grain from member stockholders and sell such grain for its own account; to lease, purchase or build necessary storage facilities; to lend money to existing farmer-owned cooperative elevator associations and pools for the purpose of extension of their physical facilities; to make loans to farmer-owned companies and pools for financing the commodities of their farmer members.

The plan contemplates setting up two marketing divisions, one to handle wheat on national and international markets, and the other to handle coarse grains.

NEW CARS LICENSED

Following a season when Lubbock automobile dealers had practically exhausted their stock of new cars, the issuance of licenses at the county tax collector's office experienced quite a slump. Saturday, however, licenses for new cars spurted ahead and totalled nine. Those included: D. A. Atkins, Ford sedan; C. C. Cox, Chevrolet sedan; E. J. Parson, Buick; C. E. Hunt, Buick; E. J. Parson, Ford coupe; J. B. Patterson, Slaton, Ford coupe; L. B. Wooton, Slaton, Ford sedan; Henry Mahoney, Shallowater, Ford coupe; J. P. Waller, Nash.

In 1927, according to the government of British India, 24,000 persons were killed by wild animals. Snakebite was responsible for the deaths of 19,000.

Probe Death

Oklahoma state officials are probing conditions at Pauls Valley training school following the death of Stanley Kelley, 15, below, of Oklahoma City, from alleged beatings. R. E. Davis, guard at the institution, above, is being held in connection with the boy's death. School officials have admitted that the guards are furnished with leather straps for disciplining. Companions of the Kelley boy reported that he was forced to fight with other boys on the day of his arrival at the institution.

Amarillo Editor, Famous For Fun, Is Helpful In Finding Dogs, Kids, Jobs

Gene Howe, Known As 'Tactless Texan,' Is Everyone's Friend

By GILBERT SWAN
NEA Service Writer

AMARILLO, Tex., July 27.—The unpretentious office of "Kernel Erasmus Tack" is more accustomed to the presence of suspenders than of silk hats.

And by reaching the man who comes driving into town in his galluses, Gene Howe, otherwise "Old Tack," editor of the Amarillo Globe-News, has succeeded in reaching the world.

He has dressed his words and ideas in the homespun of the people and thus, here in an embryonic metropolis of the prairie, has made himself an outstanding and picturesque figure in American journalism. His procedure is a combination of Abe Lincoln, Will Rogers, comic strip and human interest. His growth as a sort of plains idol is based on a shrewd knowledge of the individual and his reactions. He has made himself the sympathetic aide in any situation "where a feller needs a friend."

He Likes To Help

Perhaps even a shorter cut to an explanation of the national position he as achieved in this remote spot can be found in his own definition of a "perfect day."

"Not long ago, on a certain Thursday, I had a perfect day," he announced. "On that day I helped find six lost dogs, participated in the repair of four or five broken dolls, found a couple of fellows a job and patched up a couple of broken hearts so that all concerned left the office in charge of a minister."

Which may help to explain why, just a few months ago, a delegation of 100 school children was taken on a pilgrimage to his editorial shrine—after a journey of many miles from the hinterlands. It may also help to explain why upon the approach of a birthday, when he published in his daily column an item mentioning his fondness for chocolate cake, some 60 cakes came walking into his office.

A Statue of Ben Turpin

And when you learn that he then took the cakes to an orphanage he is particularly interested in, you will understand still better.

This newspaper shrine, by the way, is the usual fragile 10 by 12 coop on the outskirts of an editorial room. On his desk is a particularly cross-eyed statuette of Ben Turpin. A drawing of this comic also heads his column. On a more personal desk is a framed copy of "The Cowboy's Prayer." One wall is covered with paintings of a duck country which, to all appearances, must be a "happy hunting ground," since birds are thicker than the famous plague of locusts.

If you don't believe the painting, he'll take you out a photo album showing camera shots of a duck country where ducks look like mosquitoes in a Jersey swamp. On an opposite wall are a few cartoons and, over his chair, a photo of his father, Ed Howe, the famous Kansas editor, who has said of "Old Tack," "You're a better man than I am."

"Old Tack," by the way, grew out of an original signature which announced him a "the tactless Texan." His column had a habit of talking out of turn. It was humorously, but avidly, against bunk. He was well aware that two factors, above all others, are close to the individual man — his economic soundness and the things he and his family love. The individual man wants a job to support his family. He loves his children and his pets—his dogs and cats and birds. So do his children. A lost child is a city-wide tragedy, anywhere on this way. A lost dog is a family tragedy in any home. And so the whole countryside reports its lost dogs and children—and has come to report its lost loves and lost jobs.

I am told that the column has cost up to $12,000 a year—helping men get jobs, helping take care of orphaned children, helping the poor and helping on one thing or another. Whenever a dog is lost Tack stands willing to add $2 to any reward that may be put up. Whenever a man loses his job, Tack helps him get another. His office is a floating stream of men in overalls and women in gingham aprons.

Defended Scoffing Child

Not so long ago a school took a class of its pupils to visit him — for he is visited by thousands of adoring followers. The story goes that "Old Tack" happened to be sitting with his feet on the desk. Some urchin began to chuckle and to comment on his "big feet." The teacher reprimanded the child and suspended him from school for a few days. When "Old Tack" heard about this, he took the side of the child and not the teacher. He came out flatly on the program that there's too much bunk in this country that the child was right—he did have big feet.

His argument with Mary Garden became nationally famous. So did his commentaries that Lindbergh had "the swelled head." So did his satiric "Boob Oil Company." The latter made its appearance when boobs the country over were tossing their money into speculative oil operations at a time when the Big Boom hit this section. Tack had intended to make these insecure ventures humorous. Announcing his own "boob" company, he stipulated that every investor would become a vice president. The stock was actually sold over night. A bit of oil land was purchased and worked. It began coming in. There was some dispute over the boundary lines — but, anyhow, the oil had run out. However the "Boob" holdings are still worth some $13,000.

Admits His Defects

His humorous attacks on individuals and civic movements have often threatened animosities. But whatever the reply, he has faithfully printed it—adding that whatever comments may have been made about him they were probably right. He has admitted variously being "all wet" and a "sap" and a great many other things he doubtlessly isn't. He has kidded himself in the same column that he has poked fun at others and thus has softened the blow. He refers to his wife as "O. W." (old woman) and his child as "lollapalooza"—to say nothing of his mother-in-law.

His theory is that most readers pick up newspaper columns to be entertained and that fun is all too rare in this realm. That—and the appeal to the individual with a problem on his mind!

Yet he is not an "Old Tack" sort of person in appearance — to the contrary, he is quite urban, strapping and well groomed.

In addition to his Amarillo papers, he publishes The Globe, his father's former newspaper in Atchison, Kas., The Falls City (Neb.) Journal on which his father once worked as a printer, and is interested in other Texas papers.

Hoover Studying Reduction Plans For Army Expense

President Conferring With Leaders While On Fishing Trip In Mountains of Old Virginia

BY RICHARD L. TURNER
Associated Press Staff Writer

MADISON, Va., July 27. (AP)—The mountain fastness of President Hoover's fishing preserve was the scene today of conferences which may have a far-reaching effect upon America's expenditures for national defense.

Determined to reduce the mounting cost of army maintenance, with a resulting saving in Federal disbursements that can be applied to tax reductions, the chief executive went into a detailed study of the situation with Secretary Good and other high war department officials who were his week-end guests.

Officials Present.

The group included Assistant Secretaries F. Trubee Davison, and Patrick J. Hurley, General Charles P. Summerall, chief of staff, and Col. Campbell Hodges, the president's military aide.

The occasion offered Mr. Hoover his first opportunity for a concentrated attack upon the problem.

The first step was consideration of the personnel of the commission of leading general staff officers, which the president early in the week said would inquire into the possibility of cutting down military expenses.

Names discussed were not disclosed.

Brigadier General Frank R. McCoy has been mentioned for chairmanship and it was indicated that he may be given, if not this assignment, at least a place on the board.

At present McCoy is serving as chairman of the commission arbitrating the Bolivia-Paraguay dispute. He is not a member of the general staff but is eligible for appointment to it.

The military survey will be made with a view to determining what services have been made obsolete by scientific advancement and can be abandoned, and whether some army programs can be extended over a longer period than originally intended, with the entire inquiry pointed toward maintaining a completely adequate national defense.

Chicago Reports Corn Prices Are Hoisted Skyward

Ears Steal Wheat's Thunder As Lack Of Rainfall Is Seen Over Belt; Selling Features Firm Wheat

By JOHN P. BOUGHAN
Associated Press Market Editor

CHICAGO, July 27. (AP)—Fears for safety of the country's corn crop took a quick grip on the speculative trade in grain today, and prices flashed upward all around.

Corn quotations closed buoyant, 1 3-4c to 2 1-8c a bushel higher than yesterday's finish. Wheat closed firm, 1 1-2c to 2 1-8c up, oats 3-4c to 1 1-4c advanced and provisions unchanged to 5c down.

Lack Of Rain Seen

Soaring prices in corn became manifest after one of the foremost unofficial crop experts in the United States issued a summary showing two weeks or more of deficient rainfall and excessive heat is having widespread ill effects on the growth of corn.

Leadership of the grain markets switched almost at once to corn instead of wheat. Primary receipts of corn for the last week were half as much as a year ago, 4,447,000 bushels against 7,635,000 bushels.

Wheat Is Selling

Except for burrowed strength from the action of corn, the wheat market today was dominated chiefly by selling. A good soaking general rain now with favorable weather following would still greatly benefit 10,000,000 acres of summer fallow wheat land in Canada.

Scattered selling and lightness of demand eased down the provision market.

Credit Situation Gloomy; Week-End Trips Halt Work

Short Session Turnover Is Lowest Since June; Call Money Declines; Cash Is Still Tight

BY CLAUDE A. JAGGER
Associated Press Financial Writer.

NEW YORK, July 27. (AP) — The stock market drifted lower today. With the rather gloomy credit outlook and the hot weather, traders were largely inclined to leave Wall Street to take care of itself for the week-end. The day's turnover totaled 1,370,610 shares, the lowest since June.

There was practically nothing in the meagre business news of the day to influence the market. Several more excellent June railway earnings statements appeared but seemed to have been discounted.

Money Rates Up.

In contrast to the brilliant industrial situation, the state of credit was rather depressing. Although a few weeks ago Wall Street generally predicted easy money at this time, yesterday's increase in time money rates indicated fairly snug conditions. The decline in call money to 9 per cent, from the 10 per cent peak of the week, was due rather to lessened demand than an influx of funds.

The motors were generally steady. Coppers held their ground. What selling came into the steels was well absorbed. Some of the chemicals were under pressure. In the rails, Atlantic Coast line lost 3 points.

Foreign exchanges were also irregular, Francs sagging in profit taking, and Sterling cables holding at $4.85 3-8.

of Ramsey, and later by refusing to answer questions for experts, gave evidence of an ability to reason and an awareness of his own plight.

A. S. West, of San Antonio, discussed technical phases of emotion and morbid insanity and argued that Leahy's symptoms showed him to suffer this type of mental abnormality. He declared X-ray pictures of Leahy's brain showed foreign substances which might cause insanity.

Simmons Raps State

E. P. Simmons, of San Antonio, censored the State for not introducing the X-ray pictures and forcing Leahy's lawyers to call for them. He charged that the State failed to introduce them because the pictures showed not only two bullets, but seven other fragments in Leahy's brain.

A. C. aHrtman, of Guero, for the State, answered these arguments by saying that the marks in the pictures, described by Leahy's attorneys as shot, were round. "Sensible men know," he said, "that if they went through the head they would be flat." Hartman said that the objection made by Leahy Friday, when he halted the examination of a witness concerning the pictures by suggesting the pictures were the best evidence, was the best point of law made during the trial. He said it showed Leahy was sane.

W. C. Wolford speaking for the defense, argued that the evidence, even much of that presented by the State, proved Leahy insane.

Score San Antonioans

H. N. Graves in closing for the State referred to three Leahy attorneys from San Antonio as "the three wise men from San Antonio."

Wick Blanto, of San Antonio, closed for Leahy. He answered Graves' gibe at the three San Antonio attorneys by declaring he was proud to come from the cradle of Texas liberty. Referring to Graves' cross examination of Miss Amanda Davidson, on whose affidavit that she believed Leahy insane the hearing was held Blanton said:

"It is strange that men will seek to cast shame on a woman to cook a living man." He said Leahy was suffering from paranoia and that if he did kill Dr. Ramsey it was because of that. The sanity trial was Leahy's last legal defense against the electric chair as he had exhaused every other recourse.

Details Recalled

Dr. Ramsey, who owned a ranch the Leahy family lost through foreclosure, disappeared May 20, 1926. Roberto Martinez, a Mexican, testified at Leahy's first trial in Geroge West, Texas, that he abducted Ramsey at Leahy's order, and that Leahy killed Ramsey after forcing the doctor to sign over the ranch to him.

The jury which heard his trial returned a verdict of 50 years in prison, but Leahy was not satisfied and obtained a new trial. The case came to Georgetown on a change of venue and in February of 1927 Leahy again was convicted and assessed the death penalty.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, July 27. (AP)—The legal paths which led George Remus, former Cincinnati bootleg king, to freedom, after slaying his wife may be followed by Dr. James H. Snook, dismissed Ohio State University professor, in an effort to escape the electric chair for the killing of Theora Hix, 24, his co-ed mistress.

Gobs Of Whiskers

He's just a gob with just gobs of whiskers. The cameraman bearded Gunner Albert Nelson, above, in his den aboard the U. S. destroyer Noa. Nelson, a barberless Bostoner, does not beat around the bush when he says he has the best set of whiskers in the whole U. S. Asiatic fleet. And it takes a lot of cheek to make a claim like that!

Lindbergh Aerial Beacon To be Like Fragment Of The Sun; Light Has Estimated Range Of 200 Miles

Elmer A. Sperry (inset) is developing the huge Lindbergh aerial beacon which will be placed atop a skyscraper in Chicago.

By HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE
(Associated Press Science Editor)

NEW YORK, July 27 (AP)—A spot of light the size of a dime but about as hot and bright as if chipped off the surface of the noonday sun, is under development at the Sperry Gyroscope company in Brooklyn.

The light is designed for the Lindbergh beacon in Chicago, which will be set to cast a beam farther than human light ever shone before.

Gift To Aviation

A gift to aviation by Elmer A. Sperry, president of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers, the light will be erected 615 feet above Michigan boulevard, on top of the Palm Olive building.

The secret of the light—the element in which it goes one step in advance of other beacons—is a slight modification of the materials composing an ordinary carbon arc.

Crater Gives Light

The arc light comes from the intense heat created by an electric current in the "crater" in the end of a positive carbon about the size of a thick stick of candy.

By using in the carbon some special salts, known as rare earths, Mr. Sperry obtains an intensely hot vapor in the "crater."

Like Sun.

Each square millimeter of this vapor—that is, a piece the size of a pin head—can be made to show 1,000 candlepower. The sun at noon, as seen on earth, shows 920 candlepower for an equal pinhead. The slightly lower solar brilliance is due to the filtering action of atmosphere, and 92,000,000 miles distance.

Maximum heat of the crater of the beacon will be 5,000 degrees centigrade ;while that of the surface of the sun is 6,000.

An aviator a mile high will be able to see the beacon 125 miles; and at two miles elevation, 200 miles; but curvature of the globe outruns elevations so rapidly thereafter that less than 300 miles is the limit of direct vision for a plane at the world's record altitude.

By reflection on clouds two miles high the beacon has an estimated range of 400 miles.

"Third Time Is Charm" Is Hope Of Houston Aviators

Stunt Flier Will Perform Today In Parachute Jumps

Percy Miller, War Veteran With Only One Leg, Will Make 1300th Leap Today At Plains Field

Piling up a total of 1,299 leaps into space, Percy Miller, of California, will make his 1300th parachute jump this afternoon at Plains Field, three miles north of Lubbock, between 3:30 and 5 o'clock.

Although he has lost more than half a leg in his air stunts, Miller is still jumping and declares that he intends to keep it up. Flying with his pilot Carl Jones, who is traveling with him, Miller will jump from an altitude of 2,000 feet or more. The two are piloting a Velie monocoupe.

Miller's air experiences date back to the World War. He spent 14 months in the aviation service in France, and has been on the West Coast most of the time since. The crack-up, which necessitated amputation of his left leg above the knee, occurred nine years ago at Kelly's airport in California.

The stunter arrived in Lubbock Friday evening by automobile after being forced down, out of gasoline, in a field near Ralls.

Chinese Eastern Railroad Has Been A Trouble Maker Ever Since Beginning

For Thirty Years It Has Brought Woe To Yellow Men

BY BRUCE CATTON
NEA Service Writer.

WASHINGTON, July 27 — A straight line is the shortest distance between two points; and the famous trans-Siberian railroad, which begins at Moscow and ends in the 1,000-mile trackage of the Chinese Eastern railroad, has for more than 30 years proved the shortest distance between China—and trouble.

It was built when China was going down to defeat in a disastrous war. It opened the great inert eastern nation to the machinations of greedy western powers, and it has brought disquiet, lawlessness and bloodshed to China ever since. And now it may bring China into another war.

The trans-Siberian railroad is like a straight line in more ways than one. With remarkably few deviations it follows a straight course from Moscow to Vladivostock — a tribute to the absolute power once held by the czar.

Finding a Direct Route.

In the nineties when the road was being planned Czar Nicholas sat in his palace in Leningrad—then St. Petersburg—and listened to his engineers as they displayed maps and blueprints and explained the winding curves that the road must follow in order to get the best grades. When they were all finished he got up, spread out a map and laid a ruler from Moscow to Vladivostock. With a pencil he shot a straight line from one city to the other. Then he turned to the engineers.

"There," he said, "is the route of the trans-Siberian railroad."

That, at any rate, is the story they tell. The railroad bears it out. It is almost as straight as a ruled line all the way across Siberia.

It was in attaining this straightness that the railroad first brought trouble to China.

Czar Nicholas ordered the road built chiefly for political purposes, to extend Russian influence in the far east. The line went straight as far as Chita; then it had to curve to the north to avoid Chinese territory.

China was fighting a losing war with Japan, and was in no shape to resist any demands Russia made; so, when the Russians proposed that the line run from Chita straight to Vladivostock, across Chinese territory, China had to agree. The road was pushed through, its stock held by a new company in which Russians and Chinese were supposed to share equally; but the Chinese were frozen out, and the new road remained in the hands of Russians.

Under Russian Control.

Russia pushed her advantage. Russian courts and police were introduced all along the line, and the Chinese authorities found themselves utterly powerless in the railroad zone. The situation was as troubling as if some foreign power —say Japan, for instance — owned the Union Pacific railroad in America and set up its own governmental machinery all along the right-of-way. Chinese bandits and smugglers found a free haven along the Chinese Eastern railway.

Then came the Boxer uprising. Russia took advantage of this development to establish a strong army along the railroad, and began extensive colonization schemes. These were carried out with great brutality. At the Chinese settlement of Blagovieschensk, for instance, Russian troops drove 5,000 men, women and children into the Amur river at the point of the bayonet. The Chinese have never forgotten this.

These exclusive pictures show scenes in ...n, the Russian-Chinese city along the Chinese Eastern railway, ...ore much of the present trouble between China and Russia is centering. Above is a view of the Harbin waterfront, showing steamers in the Sugari river. The middle picture shows a street scene in Fuchiatien, the Chinese section of Harbin; below are two Russian women street merchants.

A slight check to Russia's schemes came in 1903 when Japan, alarmed at the growing strength of Russia in the neighborhood of Korea—which the Japanese even then were preparing to annex—declared war on the Czar's government. Japan defeated the Russians decisively much of the fighting taking place on Chinese soil, and took over the southern branch of the Chinese Eastern railway up to Chang-Chun.

Saddle With Debts.

Throughout the next decade Russia continued with her plans for absorbing Manchuria by settlement. Every effort was made to establish Russian settlements along the line. Huge club houses, churches, barracks and residences were built along the railroad. The enormous cost of these improvements was charged to the railroad—and for this reason.

Under the original agreement, China had the right to buy the stock of the Chinese Eastern railroad at any time. But the Czar was determined to prevent this, and since he did not care whether the road ever showed a profit, its price to China was made unapproachable by the simple process of saddling it with an immense deficit. Between 1908 and 1917 the road incurred a net loss of more than 450,000,000 roubles, and at the end of the Czarist regime there was a total liability of 850,000,000 roubles against the property.

Then, in 1918, came the Russian revolution. It brought China new troubles. During the preceding decade paper roubles had become the standard currency for all of Manchuria due to the influence of the Russians along the railroad. The revolution broke the value of these roubles to nothing. Millions of Chinese, in consequence, found themselves with money that was worthless. Stores, banks, business houses went broke by the score.

Several years of utter turmoil allowed. Strikes and riots along the railroad were of almost daily occurrence. The Allied powers began their expedition into Siberia, and for a time a group of American engineers ran the road.

Since that time there has been at least outward calm and order. The road has been run on a 50-50 basis —half Russian and half Chinese. The thorny question of its ultimate ownership has been allowed to lie ignored.

In recent years, however, Russia has again turned her attention to the far east. The Soviets seem to have had the same eagerness to extend their influence in the orient that the czar had. It has been an open secret for some time that the Russians were getting ready for trouble and large detachments of Red troops have guarded the Chinese Eastern railway line at strategic points for several years.

A Rich Territory.

The Chinese, despite all of their internal troubles, have kept an uneasy eye on the situation. The province of Manchuria is potentially one of the richest sections of land in the world. It is as large as Germany, has more than 30,000 square miles of virgin forests, enormously rich gold, silver and iron and zinc deposits, and a fertile soil that, it is estimated, could easily furnish more than one-fifth of all the world's food supply.

Looks Like Fur Collar But It Isn't

Plans Laid Here For Entertaining Dole Race Winner

Aviation Committee Of C-C Will Play Host To Col. Art Goebel and Mammoth Plane Thursday

The aviation committee of the Lubbock Chamber of Commerce will be in charge of entertaining visitors who will arrive here Thursday afternoon with the "Woolaroc" plane. The famous plane that won the Dole prize, beating a large group of other planes in a race from Oakland, Cal., to Honolulu, is making a last flight visiting a number of the larger cities of the Southwest before being placed in a permanent hangar outside the city of Bartlesville, Okla., that is being constructed by Frank Phillips, president of the Phillips Petroleum company, backer of Col. Arthur Goebel in the flight.

Col. Goebel, Mr. Phillips and a number of officials of the Phillips Petroleum company will accompany the plane here. Two other airplanes will accompany the Woolaroc. Frank Phillip's plane will arrive thirty minute's ahead of the "Woolaroc." There will be nine people in the party.

The "Woolaroc" will arrive at 2 o'clock next Thursday afternoon.

Has Original Equipment

The original radio equipment and instruments used in flying the Woolaroc from Oakland to Honolulu are reinstalled and will be in place when the plane arrives. It will have the same appearance that it had when it took off for Hawaii, August 17, 1927. The same engine, a Wright Whirlwind, is still in use on the plane.

Only about fifty towns in the Middle West will be visited on this farewell trip, officials of the Phillips company have announced, although telegrams and letters of invitations from over 200 cities were received by the company. The "Woolaroc" being a large ship, built for long distance over-ocean flying, can only be accommodated by large landing fields which are in excellent condition.

The aviation committee of the Chamber of Commerce will have transportation for the party to come into town and the visitors will be honor guests of the Lubbock Chamber of Commerce at a banquet in the evening at Hotel Lubbock.

Members of the aviation committee are, George E. Benson, chairman; Joe Dick Slaughter, Roscoe Wilson, John Dalrymple, Charles A. Guy, T. B. Duggan and Dr. E. F. George.

Sheer Fabrics And Sleeveless Frocks Keep You Cool 'The Gay White Way'

Crisp, cool and summery is a little orchid linen frock with white leaves appliqued in sprays. The natural bakou hat is one of the new "halo mushrooms."

BY HENRI BENDEL
For NEA Service

NEW YORK, July 27 — Keeping cool in August is usually the crucial test of chic.

August days and August nights are the hardest of all the year to gown. One must not only manage to feel cool. There is the responsibility of looking cool at the same time.

Sheerness of fabrics is an essential. Yet certain sheer fabrics are unsatisfactory in humid weather. It is necessary to pick materials with the idea in mind that the less easily withered, the better.

Next to sheerness come color. In fact, I think I would hold a brief for color first. Crimson and scarlet are not ideal hot weather shades. Greens, on the other hand, have a cooling effect on the spirits. White, however, is ideal.

White Is Best Choice

I a woman is the meticulous type, white is the best August choice there is. But soiled white or rumpled white or white that is just naturally dingy is the most unpleasant spectacle in the world. To wear white to its best advantage, accessories must be given extreme consideration and if they, too, are white the task of keeping everything spotless is mainifold.

Orchid is a good, cool summer color. So are some of the new cool blues. Certain yellows, while very warm in tone, give a summery-ness because of their sunlightness.

The cut of hot-weather clothes is important. Sleeveless frocks are ideal. The tightly fitted princess lines are hardly suitable for tubable clothes.

For Morning—Linens

I suggest linen for mornings, since it is quite correct for style this year and very crisp and cool looking when freshly laundered. Pique and many of the loosely woven cottons are equally good.

A charming linen frock for the meticulous woman is of orchid linen, simply cut, with a spray or two of fine white organdie leaves appliqued by hand. The design runs diagonally across the blouse and skirt and also forms the cuffs.

Fine hand-tucks define the shoulders and waistline and a belt of linen ties gracefuly on one side. A good hat for so exquisitely simple a frock is a natural bakou in the new "halo mushroom" shape which means that a mushroom is lifted in front by a few tucks to give one a flew of the face beneath.

For the sleeveless devotee, a three-piece sports suit is done in white flat crepe with brown and beige modernistic design for trimming. The step-down yoke work on this outfit deserves attention. It is new and extremely contemporary in its modernistic line. The fingertip length coat's shoulders use this same set-back line, an effective decorative touch.

A Cool Shade of Red

A simple, natural bakou hat tops this, banded with brown, beige and a touch of rust, the only red that bespeaks coolness. The grosgrain ribbons form a chain effect around the crown, a touch that is just a little different from the ordinary banding.

For evening, crisp organdies hold a place in woman's heart.

Nile green organdie makes one think of all cool things such as evening zephyrs and ocean waves. Its tiers of flounces dip well to the back of the skirt until they actually sweep the ground. Women must face the fact that new evening gowns are very, very long. Even the crisp ones, like this organdie, skirt the floor. The rear of this gown's blouse is one of the very low decolletages to show the beauty of Milady's sunburned back. From the center of the decolletage a soft bow of ribbon hangs in soft streamers. A tiny belt of the same girdles the frock.

Superlative chic comes in a little white flat crepe jacket frock with brown and beige modernistic trim. The sleeveless white frock and the jacket too features step-down yokes, emphasized by pipings. The hat is banded with braided ribbon in brown, beige and white.

Reminiscent of summer zephrys and summer seas, too, is a cool green organdie dance frock with smart tiers, a low decolletage and a big bow and streamers posed at its rear center.

New Volumes Are Received Here By County Librarian

Interesting Fiction and Variety of Non-Fiction Added to Library Stacks Recently

Copies of fiction and non-fiction have been received at the county library within the past two weeks according to the librarian, Miss Frances Ford, and have been catalogued and added to the shelves.

She has prepared a list of new books and short reviews. In addition to the books there are many reprints, replacements, and childrens' books.

New books are: "The Black Camel," by Biggers; "Jim the Conqueror," Kyne; "Wagon and the Starr," Larrimore; "The Romantic Prince," Sabatini; "Lord Peter Views the Body," Sayers; "Dark Hester, Sedgwick; Young Mrs. Greeley," Booth Tarkington; "They Still Fall In Love," Williams; "Pathway," Williamson; "The Trail Eater," Willoughby; and "Fish Preferred," by Wodehouse.

Non-fiction and brief reviews are as follows:

"Meaning No Offense," by John Riddell. A hilarious parody of some of the lore books written in his own inimitable manner.

"Turkey Production," by L. E. Cline. Complete text on breeding, feeding, handling, marketing, and disease control, prepared for the use of turkey producers and agricultural students.

"Rain-makers," Mary R. Coolidge. The strange and fascinating civilization of the Pueblo Indians is the subject of this absorbing book. It is scientific and accurate, but written so vividly that it will give pleasure to the general reader.

"Your House," by Lois Palmer. A workable book for the home decorator.

"I Like Diving," written by Tom Eadie. Tom Eadie got the Congressional Medal of Honor for his work on the S-4. His experience as a diver covers a period of twenty years and the book is like a narrative of under the sea adventures.

"Art of Thinking," by Ernest Dimnet. Mr. Dimnet sets forth definite helps to though which in his long career as scholar, writer, and preacher he has found thoughtful. When the last page has been turned the wings of ambition have been attached to the reader's mind.

"Head Hunters of the Amazon," by F. W. Undegraf. The writer was the unwilling participant in a raiding expedition of the Head Hunters; probably the first man ever to have witnessed the whole process. Seldom have more exciting adventures been recorded within the pages of one book.

Miss Margaret Kirkland, owner of a shoe store in Swansea, Wales has, been elected president of the Wales and Monmouthshire Boot Trades Federation, the first woman to hold that office.

The Woman's Day

By Allene Sumner

The divorce petition filed by prima donna Edith Mason against her husband, Giorgio Polacco, a director of the Chicago Civic Opera company, is one more of those revelations of discord between marital members of the same profession which is always a little surprising.

Told by social and psychological experts since time memorial that marital happiness depends on common interests, these divorces seem at odds with that supposed fact.

And yet perhaps there aren't so many divorces between people in the same professions; it's just that people outstanding in the professions are big news, and we hear of their bickerings.

GODIVA AGAIN

The old Godiva story, really rather beautifully told in its original version, continues to be sure fire grist for the press agent. The latest version was the riding through the streets of the scene of the old story, Coventry, England, of a beautiful golden haired girl upon a white charger.

The modern Lady Godiva did her stuff for a hospital benefit. Nearly half a million people watched her.

• • •

HARD FOR OLD ONE

Both the old and the new Godiva rode for sweet charity's sake. If you recall the old story you remember that the old earl's wife rode to relieve her husband's people from taxation.

Here's wagering though, that the Godiva of long ago made a greater sacrifice than the one the other day. Showing a limb in limb in ye ancient dayes was a really something.

BIRTH CONTROL

A study of birth control and its recognition as "a method of coping with social problems" was advocated at the recent central conference of American rabbis in their fortieth convention. The resolution read in part—

"Realizing the many serious evils caused by uncontrolled parenthood among those who lack the prerequisites of health and a reasonable measure of economic resources and intelligence to give their children the heritage to which they are entitled, We therefore recommend that the conference urge the recognition of the importance of birth control in parenthood as one of the methods of coping with social problems."

HONEYMOON STYLE

The Isle of Man is to Europe what Niagara Falls is to America. It is the honeymooners' haven. All hotels on the litle island are booked until fall, proprietors admit.

It's funny how style effects even a honeymoon choice. One would think that if people ever wanted to be off the beaten track it would be on their honeymoon, but no, then as ever, they insist on going to the spot which all the rest choose.

• • •

PROGRESSIVE

This is supposed to be the first time that any religious body has taken this decisive stand on birth control.

It was about time. We need more conferences like this.

MUSICAL COMEDY

Kink Boris of Bulgaria expected to marry Princess Giovanna, daughter of the king of Italy, state rumor has it. But rumor also says that the marriage will not take place because Italy is too greedy about the marriage. Italy, says a Bulgarian paper, demands through this marriage special rights for Catholics in Bulgaria; insists that any children of the union be raised in the Catholic faith, and asks for a special military alliance.

Somehow that doesn't seem much like marriage dickering, as we crass American understand it, and somehow one loses sight of the prospective bride and groom in all this state shuffling.

The old theme for the musical comedy writer,

Sprightly Styles Ledn Color To Milady's Pleasures On Beach

BY MME. LISBETH

There's no lack of sprightliness on the beaches this season. From dad and mother—or grandad and grandmother, if you like—to the weegest of the kinder, beach apparel—what there is of it—is gay with color.

Of the real swimming suit little might be said—or much. Little, because there is little of them. Much because what there is is interesting. Shorts are short, and shirts are shorter, especially in the back, to allow for the popular sun tanning that no really smart person can afford to be without.

Babies and those a little older may wallow in the sand in their sun suits the greater part of the day. Their elders of the feminine gender change their costumes, it is true, but these same costumes, from early morn until morn again, are sleeveless and cut low and can hardly be distinguished from one another, except by the materials.

But to return to the beach. Jersey swimming suits are popular and they are seen in all the bright shades and in various stylings, with individual touches of trimming that are intriguing. Beach wraps and pajamas are legion and so diversified that the most fastidious can be pleased.

At the extreme left of our picture is an amusing bathing outfit from Jenny in red and green print. Green woolen trunks are worn with the printed top, which is banded in plain green. Coat and headband are also of the print, completing the ensemble.

Bathing coats, as well as trunks, grow shorter. In the Hermes ensemble, second from left, is a short coat, part of an ensemble in navy jersey brightened with red and white, one of the smartest and most practical of all the season's offerings.

The third model is from Jane Regny, one of her most successful bathing wraps. It is made of heavy crepe de chine with a practical white toweling lining. The swim suit is knitted in modernistic design.

The reversible sleeveless coat, right, is another Regny model, and covers a smart bathing suit in red and white jersey.

Three "R's" Are Most Important

"How To Become A Good Stenographer" Might Be A Good Book; Local Men's Ideas Are Varying

Some persons who has brains and a lot of common sense might write a book on "How to Become a Good Stenographer" just as people write about how to become a good salesman.

Probably no two business men have just the same idea about what a stenographer should be capable of doing. Some are very exacting, others are not. In some offices a stenographer is just as much a part of the office as the telephone and her services could be dispensed with just about as easily.

Requirements Vary

An interview with several business men of the city shows that, while some do not expect as much from a stenographer as others do, they all have about the same requirements.

A girl must know her three "R's" to be an A-1 stenographer. She must be able to spell correctly, to punctuate correctly and use correct grammar and to be able to work out her own problems without continually asking someone, "Is this correct?"

"No matter how fast she can take dictation or how fast she can transcribe her notes, if she can't spell or punctuate she isn't worth a cent" is the opinion of one man whose business requires the services of a stenographer.

Must Keep Mum

Dean J. M. Gordon of the Technological College says, "I don't care how much she knows just so she can spell and punctuate correctly. I don't even mind if she knows more than I do just so she doesn't tell me about it. And I like them good looking. But good looks doesn't mean everything. I want my office girl to be able to meet the public and answer questions in any way that makes for efficiency in the office and to serve the public." Dean Gordon says that he prefers a girl that has had experience. It is necessary that he have someone who knows the work because of the larger number of people who come to his office every day asking for information.

Experience Needed

S. J. McFarland, local realtor, says that when he has a real place it is absolutely necessary that a stenographer have experience to fill it. "The begmners mistake is lack of accuracy. When they take it down they understand it but when they go to transcribe they forget. A beginner will write it out and when she reads it over find she has several mistakes. Then she flies in to correct them, taking up a great deal of time and a practice which does not make for accuracy and efficiency. I believe that it is true in most offices in this city that the stenographers do not have enough to do. She may have had a great deal of experience but if she doesn't have enough to keep her busy she loses part of her speed and interest." Mr. McFarland also prefers a girl that is easy on the eyes if she is capable of doing the work, otherwise not.

One man interviewed said he couldn't say much for fear his wife would find it out. His first stenographer was sure a homely one, but she got married so there is hope for all of them."

Wants Ability

Guy McAfee, local insurance man, says that his stenographer is strictly a business proposition and he only wants ability. "She doesn't have to be so good looking if she has a good personality and can deliver the goods." He has a great deal of work to do and keeps his stenographer busy all of the time. "If I hire a lot of help around the office my wife will think she has to have some around the house and as I have to pay the bills for both I am rather careful about what I spend around the office. About all I require of my stenographer is that she be capable, accurate and have a pleasing personality to people who come to my office on business."

C. C. Triplett, of the law firm of Schenk and Triplett, declares that girls overlook the importance of being a good speller and a good grammarian. He believes that it is partly the fault of the business colleges. Mr. Triplett attended a business college before he began his law practice and he believes they fail to teach the real requirements of office work. "A stenographer needs all the qualities of a good business man. She must be a good worker, steady, loyal to her work and her employers." Mr. Triplett had rather train an inexperienced stenographer who has a good foundation and who can spell and punctuate correctly, than to try to get along with one who is fast in taking dictation and in transcribing but who cannot spell. His opinion is that it takes about a year for a stenographer to become really good.

Should Be Relief

Mr. J. E. Vickers, of Vickers and Campbell, likes them to be pretty. "A relief to tired eyes," he asserts. It takes a very few months for a girl to become a good law stenographer if she is experienced in other lines. For one who is inexperienced it takes about a year, according to Mr. Vickers.

"The average girl seeking a job is very good, although she needs training and experience. I do not believe there are many girls seeking jobs just for the fun of it but they want them for the purpose of making a living. A girl who knows just as much about your business as you do is a world of help. My stenographer does a great deal of my work without asking me about it and I don't see how I could get along without her," Mr. Vickers is also of the opinion that too many girls neglect the all important spelling and punctuation. "There are very few girls who are able to add. If it were not for the adding machine I don't believe they could get along," he continued.

Two banners have been placed in the Cathedral at Peterborough, England, to mark Mary Queen of Scots' first burial place.

How to Achieve Beauty

BY MME. HELENA RUBINSTEIN

BY MADAME RUBENSTEIN

There are many ways to choose a perfume—but only one satisfactory way. You can go into a perfume shop or salon and sniff at countless little bottles, all labelled with different names, and all furnished with long-stemmed, glass perfume testers. And you may be pleased at first—there will be so many and all delightful—but you are bound to be confused before you have chosen. For a number of scents the olfactory nerves become accustomed and deadened to the experience. The scents will all smell alike or they will be difficult to distinguish.

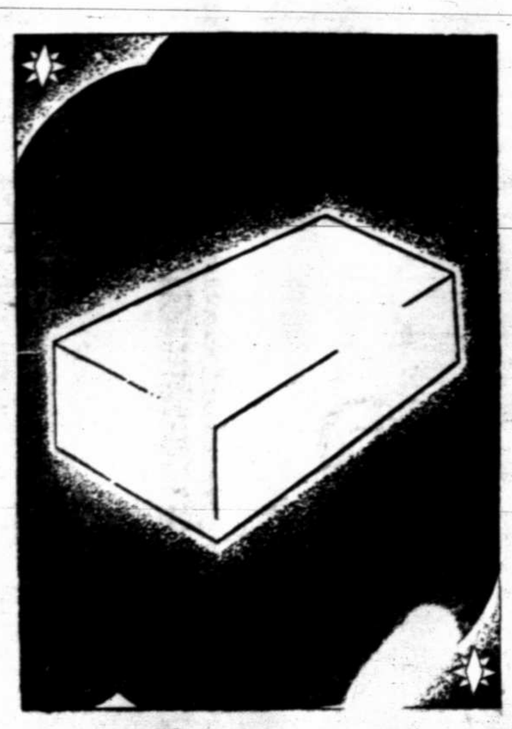

MME. RUBINSTEIN

Then, too, the whiff you get from a bottle or from the glass tester may be entirely different from the way that same perfume will smell when applied to your skin. When a perfume is used on the skin or clothing the alcohol mixed with it evaporates and leaves only the essential scent or fragrance of the perfume itelf. And often, when perfume is applied to the skin, its oils combine chemically with the natural skin oils so that the odor is changed completely.

The best way is to get tiny samples of all the perfumes you think might please your taste or suit your personality. Then use one for a day—the real test of a perfume is the way its fragrance endures after it has been applied for several hours. Try all in turn until you have found one or several that last pleasantly and that do not bore you with their fragrance after you have become familiar with them.

There is something to be said for the plan of choosing only one fragrance and using it on all occasions. For this perfume comes to mean yourself—it is as much a part of you as the color of your eyes or hair or the way you laugh. But there is also something to be approved in the fashion of choosing more than one scent, so that you will have a variety of changes, one for different costumes, different moods or hours of the day. This fad has the charm of novelty and richness.

"Dead-Head" Job Hunters Find No Place In Lubbock

Requirements For Help In City Of High Standard; Business Men Give Views On Employes Wanted

Behind the flood of "job hunters" that daily follow the sign of the classified ad column,"Help Wanted" throughout the length and breadth of the earth, there's a world of drama and human interest. In one locality there is a call for a certain type of help, while in another it may be for a different type. Yet, as a whole, there is much similarity in it all and much that is the same everywhere.

There must be a reason for all this!

There are jobs of every conceivable type—and, applicants of every conceivable type to fill them.

Incentives Vary

Perhaps, for some, it is the impelling struggle for self-preservation. With many perhaps, the unselfish planning for others. While for still another group, perhaps, it is that desire to follow the stepping-stones to further some life ambition!

All in all the parade is one continuous march of human beings—of every age, size, color and type—seeking employment, and knocking at the doors of stores, offices and banks, and on down to that of the housewife's kitchen, where some one applies as "cook." But whether it be for salespeople, bookkeepers, office girls or stenographers, the call is ever repeated, "Help Wanted!"

Must Be Well Known

In talking of the class of people he would like to have working out of his office, J. H. Ritchie, agency manager of the Alamo Life Insurance company, said, "It need not be necessary for persons applying for positions as sub agents, to have had experience, but it would be necessary that they have sales ability. I would like that they be people of a wide acquaintance. I would want a person who is tactful and refined, and one who would not wear a scowl all the while,—but who could meet and serve the public without causing a feeling of unpleasantness.

"In the life insurance business as in all other lines, the courteous salesperson with a pleasing personality, is one of the most important things. Another requirement I would like to emphasize, would be for a man or woman who would stick to the facts and not misrepresent matters. Also one willing to learn the business, but not to display that knowledge in an egotistic way. They should be neat in appearance—and not prone to talk too much,—one that would allow his prospect to express his wishes or desires on the subject at hand."

Waiting List Full

According to Manager S. Hoffman of the Grollman's store, "Our waiting list is always full, and we never need to advertise for 'help.' But our requirements in general for salespeople of every department, is honesty, capability and experience. Also they must be courteous, pleasant and neat in appearance. For department work, they must be adapted to the particular department in which they apply for work," declared Mr. Hoffman.

Sam Cole, with the Broadway Department store, explained, "Our store would want of course, first of all, salespeople with experience. We prefer people with local experience, neat in appearance, courteous and pleasant. Naturally the best and safest plan would be to require references as to experience and reliability. We would require that they be honest and dependable. It would depend on the department in which they would expect to work as to the specialized knowledge necessary for that work. They should 'know their merchandise' in other words—as the salespeople of today are specializing more and more in the various fields of merchandise. In order to put over a more profitable business, salespeople should be specialists in every department—as the buying public has grown more familiar with the many kinds and qualities of goods—through their now being so nationally advertised in the different magazines and papers, "said Mr. Cole.

Willingness Counts

"In choosing an office girl, for which I advertised recently, the first requirement I considered was that of general ability coupled with an apparent interest and willingness to serve the customer," declared Paul Barrier, local realtor, when asked how he made his selection from approximately 200 applicants who responded to his classified ad, "Office Girl Wanted."

"Other requirements," said Mr. Barrier, "were that she be of a likeable, careful, tactful and ambitious type of girl, and one who would try in every instance to please her customers. Also she should be a girl that could speak clear and distinctly over the telephone, and neither mumble or drawl out her conversation. One with the expression of cordiality and enthusiasm in her voice; one who would take a special interest in giving the public the best service possible.

"Still other requirements were that she should be neat in appearance and also in her work which should be accurate. Also she should be courteous at all times and meet and greet people with a smile. She should be loyal and a booster of the office; on the alert for new business all the time, and work for the interest of the firm. And last but not least, she should be a girl that would keep physically fit by not keeping late hours and looking tired out all the while. In other words, she should look the part, as well as act the port of a capable, wide-awake girl who could meet every class of people and make them feel welcome," declared Mr. Barrier.

So in Lubbock as in all other cities, towns and hamlets, throughout the country, there is small room for the "dead-head" the glum and the "grouch" who would go about his daily tasks—in a bored, irritated air or, who would pose as chief mourner, at his own funeral!

Solved At Last

Bathroom Singing Is Explained

GENEVA, Ill., July 27—Why a man sings in the bathroom while taking his morning ablutions has finally been solved by the Newcombe-Hawley laboratory of the United Reproducers Corporation here. The narrowness of the bathroom sets up waves which make the feeble tones of weak singers sound majestic and more sonorous. The proud male finds here the only place where his singing really suits himself, so he cuts loose with his vocal renditions.

Schools In Scurry Have Good Growth

(Special To The Avalanche-Journal)

SNYDER, July 27—Announcement has been received here from the State Board of Education that the Dunn community school had been granted ten units of affiliation and four year high school classification.

Supt. W. C. Hooks who came to Dunn last year has made this wonderful increase in just one year, as Dunn had never previously taken any steps toward affiliation until this past year and shows in a remarkable way the progress that is being made in Scurry county rural schools.

Supt. Earl E Kerr of the Hermleigh schools has likewise been advised by the state department that their school had been granted an additional unit, the only one applied for, which brings their total to 15 1-2. The Home Economics department are due th credit for this year's work.

County Supt. A. A. Bullock stressed the act greatly in the Rural School News, one of three rural school publications of the state, of the cooperation that is being given by school trustees, patrons and pupils which is bringing forth greater work in all communities in the county.

INFORMATION OF THE WORD PHARMACY

"Better Be Safe Than Sorry"

"An Ounce Of Prevention Is Worth A Pound Of Cure"

The New Pharmacy Law

The new pharmacy law requires that every drug store in which a registered pharmacist is in charge must have the word "Pharmacy" on or in the front of the store. This is a requirement of the law and one that must be complied with.

From the buyers' standpoint, this immediately identifies the "qualified pharmaceutical service." Gives absolute assurance of first class medical attention and safety in the purchase of any article.

Look For The Word "Pharmacy"
Before You Hand In Your Prescription

Lubbock stores who will be proud to say that "Our store is a Pharmacy" have contributed to informing the drug patrons of this section of this new law in this method. Their names appear on this page. They will be glad to give further information pertaining to the necessity of this new law and cordially invite your interogatives. Be sure you look for the sign before you "let loose" the prescription. You will be happily served with "Qualified Pharmaceutical Attention."

Lindbergh Still Greatest Flier

Local People Choose "Lone Eagle" As World's Most Popular Flier Despite Other Great Air Deeds

"Why Lindy of course! There will never be another just like him and to think, he is married."

Such was the expression of one pretty co-ed when asked who she thought was the greatest flier of all time. "I would go anywhere with Lindy. He was so strong looking and his wavy hair—why—oh, gee, I oughtn't to say it but I kinda' wish he wasn't married."

A survey among business and professional men and women and Lubbock, figures of social prominence and dashing co-eds, reveals the fact that even though years have somewhat dimmed the glory of his feat, in being the first to cross the Atlantic from New York to Paris, Col. Charles A. Lindbergh is still the idol and hero of the great majority.

Acclaimed Much

Since the time he first set the wheels of the "Spirit of St. Louis" on French soil, many men and even women have cast their lots in the ring for the acclaim of "lucky Lindy."

Richard Byrd, Clarence Chamberlain, Art Goebel, Martin Jensen, Bert Acosta, Beundt Balchen—all of these, and others, have faced the eyes of the admiring public, have had their names emblazoned across front pages of the world's newspapers, news of their deeds of daring grasped and retold the world over. Yet, in the midst of the hue and cry for their achievements, the name of the "Lone Eagle" stands head and shoulders above the rest. The story of that historic flight when a St. Louis mail pilot, then almost unknown, took the air and pointed the silver nose of his ship out over the wastes of the Atlantic, with a single motor, no radio equipment or means of a fighting chance for life should his engine fail, and then the landing in Paris, all reading almost as an unbelievable imagery of fiction—will live forever in the hearts of Americans.

Good Will Trips Aid

Following quickly in the wake of his successful hop over the ocean came Lindy's goodwill trips into Mexico and South America, cementing a feeling that at times had been strained almost to the breaking point. An ambassador of goodwill received royally and in the humblest homes with the same degree of hospitality.

Dr. Paul W. Horn, president of Texas Technological college, in speaking of the accomplishments of American aviators said: "Chas. Lindbergh, no doubt appeals more to the imagination of youth than any other and certainly deserves every honor that has been bestowed upon him. Other fliers have accomplished much, however, and American aviators as a whole I believe are far in advance of those of other nations. It is a case of American characteristics vs. other characteristics." When asked whether or not he would like to make an air trip over the ocean Dr. Horn answered, "I would politely decline any invitation."

Is Real One

"Why Lindbergh, of course," said Mrs. F. R. Friend, prominent social leader of Lubbock. "The others have done real well but after Lindy accomplished what he did why I think he is the real one. I certainly would fly across and would go with any of America's best."

"I really believe Lindbergh is the greatest, however, it might be Mrs. Lindbergh now," declared Rev. H. L. Munger, pastor of the First Methodist church. "No man with a dissipated life could have achieved what Lindy did and his character and conduct have been such as to make him worthy of fame. Other fliers, too, have aided materially in the advancement of aviation. The American character, I believe, places our men in the front rank. Oh no, I would not want to fly the ocean, though I would like to fly to New York and would willingly trust any commercial pilot."

Dunn Chooses Goebel

Dr. Sam Dunn, of the West Texas Hospital, places Art Goebel as the greatest flier. "I think Lindbergh did a great thing but Goebel, I believe, accomplished just as much on his hop to Honolulu. American fliers are not necessarily better than those of other nations. During the war, for instance, the French demonstrated a recklessness and dash that was unequalled. Guynemer of France, and Richthofen, of Germany, to my mind were wonderful men. Lindy, of course, proved himself to be the most spectacular of the lot. I think I would pick Goebel for my pilot should I plan a trip across the sea and I would make it from west to east by all means. Jensen also ranks among the best."

Miss Lynn Dougherty, popular young co-ed of Texas Tech, like the majority of American girls, was high in her praise of Lindy "And naturally I think he is the best," she said. "I hardly think I could stand to even think about flying the ocean. Why I have never been up in a plane but once in my life and I fainted then. Sure, I know lots of the girls used to imagine being in love with Lindy and one of my roommates had a picture of him on the wall. I never thought of him in that way but I do admire him."

Byrd Is Selected

Mrs. Hazel McClure, of the Kelvinator Electric company, declared that though Lindy has done some great things she believes Richard Byrd has done just as much. "Why he has braved the unknown and his flights have meant a great deal to the advancement of aviation in the U. S. Why I would almost rather fly the Atlantic than anything I know of but I would want either Byrd or Lindbergh for a pilot because I would not feel safe with any other."

"I place Lindy in the front rank", stated C. A. Gammill, jr., cashier of the Lubbock National bank, "though I believe Byrd runs him a close second. I would certainly like to make the trip across and Lindy would be my pilot."

Judge Robert H. Bean, while stating that there is no doubt but what Lindbergh is the most famous, there are others who have done just as much for aviation. "One of the greatest feats in the world goes day by day and night by night unnoticed. The commercial pilot, flying in all kinds of weather, braving many dangers never reported, over the same old monotonous route—these men are setting a pace that will be hard to surpass. Personally I would not care to take the risk o hopping the ocean for the fame involved."

A Mosul sheik who recently died, is said to have been 120 years old and to have left four wives and more than 100 sons, daughters, and grandchildren, his youngest son being only 10 years old.

An efficiency expert has figured out that to fit up some of the old English hotels with hot and cold running water would cost at least $125 a room.

ONE MINUTE PULPIT

Wisdom resteth in the heart of him that hath understanding: but that which is in the midst of fools is made known.—Proverbs, xiv, 33.

MORE stress is being laid upon traffic problems in Lubbock today than has been laid in many a moon—and perhaps in the history of the city. The situation is logical, because there are more traffic worries to contend with that there ever have been before. As the city grows the traffic problem wil grow with it and a solution must be uncovered.

The present traffic law enforcement drive has dealt, thus far, largely with violations of the municipal code. Doubtless that is the most important first step to be taken. But behind that angle of the proposition lies another angle—one which is daily becoming more serious. The Avalanche-Journal is referring to the down-town parking problem.

Local business men are divided upon the question. There are those who believe that half-hour parking zones should be defined in the busier portions of the retail section. Others prefer a hour parking limit and there are those—although their number is few—who believe that there should be no limit whatsoever upon the motorist fortunate enough to find 'a hole' in the center of the commercial district in which to leave his car.

Lubbock's problem in thi srogard is not an original one. Every city in the land is facing—or has faced and solved—the worrisome problem of the down-town parking. What Lubbock intends to do is still a matter of question—but the fact remains that something must be done.

"No limit" parking zones have no business in the retail area of any city. Thoroughfares on the outskirts of the down-town section section should be utilized by those who drive to town and spend any considerable portion of time there. Restrictions in the heavy street and side-walk traffic areas are the only logical answer to the question and Lubbock will come to it, sooner or later.

In line with the traffic law enforcement campaign of the Lubbock police department, The Avalanche-Journal would like to see a similar drive staged on downtown parking. Unless this newspaper is mistaken there is already a statute defining parking limits reposing upon the ordinance books. If it is unsuitable it should be rescinded and a more effective law set down in its place.

Put the right kind of a statute on the city's books and those who oppose parking restrictions will undergo an experience similar to thousands of people in other parts of the country. They'll find that systematic parking will help, rather than hinder business—as well as offer a cure to a most persistant public ill.

INGRATITUDE

Poets and poetasters, essayists and song writers have vied with one another in picturing the wickedness of ingratitude. Obscure old fellows in the crowd strike a tragic attitude when the hero of the day passes by, and remark that the hero would not be where he is if it were not for some little kindness or opportunity rendered him before he came to power and which he apparently has forgotten.

Ingratitude no doubt is an unpleasant quality, and yet the motives for its exhibition are nothing like so sordid as is commonly imagined. For ingratitude is not so much a lack of recognition as it is a realization of the importance of those favors. People like to feel that they have achieved success solely through their own efforts. It kills all satisfaction to admit that somebody else is really responsible. Quite naturally people like to put out of their mind those occasions in the past when they were in need of help. In fact, a superabundance of gratitude may even indicate a touch of the morbid, which impels a murderer to return to the scene of his crime.

Ingrtitude may sometimes be a courageous quality, for it is a sort of declaration of independence. The ungrateful person makes it as clear as can be that he expects no more favors from a particular quarter. He has burned his bridges behind him. He knows that his former benefactor is saying, "Well, he need never expect me to do anything else for him."

Nor are the people who charge ingratitude altogether free from ingratitude. For they reveal that they expect a return for what they are supposed to have done from the kindness of their hearts. They indicate that they take pleasure in seeing the beneficiary plodding along with the carcass of an obligation chained to his person.

There are no doubt many instances where gratitude is honest and admirable. But not infrequently it is suspected. When a person becomes exceedingly grateful it is well to consider what new favor he may be preparing to ask.

"HUMANIZING" THE GREAT

Why this surge of iconoclasm among the young historians and biographers?

For a generation and longer literary men dedicated their genius and labors to making ideals of public men and women. Then it seemed a sacred duty rather than a sin to invent little "white lies" and other myths tending to exalt their subjects, often undeservedly. Suddenly, the pendulum swung back creating the present wave of iconoclasm and stark realism. The creed of this new school seems to be "tell the truth, and more if the truth isn't scandalous enough." For the sake of realism as much mythology is now being written as once was penned for the sake of idealism. But there is a reason for all things.

Just to venture a guess, based on human nature, one would say that there has been a revolution, a revolt of the masses, pandered to but not incited by the literati.

The common people, the general run of human beings, having tired of having the dead given a superhuman post-portem polish and then pointed out to them as demigods impossible of emulation by poor eering moderns. Idealism ,over done, defeats its own purpose. This materialistic age is suspicious of the super-natural even in history.

Too much moralizing makes the adolescent immoral, and in their interest in history American people are said to be adolescent. Popular heroes to remain so in the eyes of this generation must be re-humanized, and that is what the new historians are doing, whether beyond the realm of truth remains to be seen.

Oklahoma's legislature might do worse than impeach governors. It might pass laws.

SENATOR OBSERVES RAPID TRANSITION TOWARD SOCIALISTIC STATE IN U. S.

BY CHARLES P. STEWART
Central Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, July 27.—Our civilization is being made over before our eyes.

"It is not being done gradually.

"Our transition from the competitive system toward a socialistic state is progressing at unprecedented speed, for so great a change."

Senator William H. King, of Utah, the speaker was discussing recent developments in the field of financial, commercial and industrial consolidation—notably various new mergers of gigantic proportions, generally attributed to the house of Morgan.

• • •

"It seems to me," Senator King wrote lately to Attorney General William D. Mitchell, "that these contemplated mergers and combinations are violative of the anti-trust laws of the United States."

That much can be done to check them, however, the senator frankly doubts.

"Our anti-trust laws," he admits, "have been practically dead letters for a long time."

Due to non-enforcement?—or to defects in the laws?

"Both," says the senator.

"And in cases where prosecutions actually have bee nbegun, and backed up by really substantial evidence, juries have refused to convict."

• • •

"The truth is," confessed the Utah legislator, himself a last ditch champion of the seemingly dying competitive system, "that public sentiment is apathetic.

"We are in the grip of a craze for mass production—which necessarily means mass capital.

"Labor is 'sold' on the idea—believing it insures high wages. Agriculture cannot oppose it—for the farmers are trust-making on their own account. Big business favors it, for the sake of monopoly—and bids for popular support by peddling cut bits of its stock to great numbers of people of small means.

"Such a volume of opinion makes the tendency hard to fight."

• • •

"Trotsky!"—

Senator King investigated Soviet conditions in Russia at first hand, when the now exiled Bolshevik leader was at the height of his power—

"Trotsky predicted to me," said the senator, "that in 25 to 50 years, control of American wealth, resources and power would be concentrated in so few hands that governmentalization of them all would become imperative—and we would have communism.

"If Russian communism had not already proved such a miserable failure, I should consider his prophesy likelier of fulfillment."

• • •

"But there is an alternative," continued the Utah lawmaker.

"We hear many suggestions of the urgency of government regulation of our great private monopolies.

"It was first strongly advocated by President Roosevelt, who spoke much of "good trusts" and "bad trusts." President Hoover appears to be a believer in the same plan—federal incorporation of all enterprises of interstate scope, which all of them, of any importance, now are—under strict federal supervision."

"This," said the senator, "would subject every business transaction to the whim of some petty bureaucrat in Washington. Every business would require a government license—issued fro mWashington to the remotest parts of the country. Thousands of snoopers would swarm everywhere. Everything would be run from the national capital. State, local and individual rights would disappear.

"Naturally the same group which held economic control would hold political control.

"Of course it would amount to socialism."

Then that is the destination we are headed for?

"Probably not our final destination," replied the senator.

"When a government becomes so centralized it usually becomes topheavy, too—and collapses. The country either breaks up into several countries, or its people clear away the debris and start again—and so on.

"But as I remarked before, this particular transition promises to be an exceptionally rapid one."

NOT EVEN MINERAL OIL SHOULD CONTINUOUSLY BE USED FOR MEDICINE
MINERAL OIL

"DEAR DOCTOR: I am a pharmacist, and as such am often asked about the value of certain common remedies. Yesterday I conscientiously told a woman who asked if she could keep on taking mineral oil indefinitely that its long continued use is not advisable, and quoted your articles, which I read religiously. I was promptly laughed down by my husband and two doctors whom he told. They want to know your authority for the statement that mineral oil dissolves out a vitamin (A, isn't it?) Somewhere else I have read that it also irritates the colon. Is this correct? Yours, against the all-wise males.

MRS. B"

My authorities are published articles by Burrows and Farr (from the department of surgery, Washington University of Medicine) and Dutcher and Honeywell (from the Pennsylvania State college.

These scientists studied the effect of mineral oil on rats. They found that the rats developed deficiency diseases if it was given over a long enough period. Their conclusions were, that as vitamin A is soluble in oil, the mineral oil leeched it from the food and tissues, and as the oil is not absorbed, the vitamin was lost. (Vitamin D is also soluble in oil, so that may be lost, also) While their research work was conducted on rats, since the rat is an animal which is omnivorous, the same as man, they believe it is quite probable that the same effect might be seen in man, although there has been no experiment to prove this. If it does leech the vitamin A from the food and tissues, it certainly will irritate the colon as well as other organs. It does this indirectly, by producing the deficiency diseases. (In small amounts occasionally, it sothes the colon by its lubricating qualities.)

In justice to the mineral oil manufacturers, I must tell you that I took this matter up with Dr. Kellogg of Battle Creek, and Mr. McCollum of Johns Hopkins, and they believe no harm can come to man from the use of mineral oil. Nevertheless, I personally have known of several who have had to stop its continuous use, for even with a diet containing generous amounts of fruits and vegetables and whole grain breads, they never had a formed stool, and did not improve generally. After etaoinovern?.Hoetaoin much better. Perhaps these individuals took two much of the mineral oil. In one case I know this to be true. So my advice to those who find it helpful (and many do) is to take it in small doses before retiring or six to seven hours after a meal, when most of the meal will be absorbed.

There is no form of medication, anyway, that should be used continuously for constipation. It should be cured by correct diet and exercise, or remedying any abnormal condition causing it.

I have been advising a mayonnaise made of mineral oil (usual recipe) for my reducing followers. Until this vitamin-loss point is settled, I am going to advise them to use not more than one tablespoon on a salad and to take it but three times a week. The rest of the time, to use a dressing made with no oil or butter, unless, of course, they have allowed some of their calories for it. (One tablespoonful, 100 C.) For those who are interested, we have a pamphlet on losing and gaining, and an article on constipation, which may be obtained b yfollowing column rules.

What's Sleep

Man Snoozes Only Three Hours Daily

By NEA Service

LONDON, July 27.—At 51, when most men crave and need lots of sleep, B. Camplin-Smith, theatrical agent, works 21 hours a day and sleeps three.

He never feels tired, and any hour from 3 a. m. to 12 midnight might find this machine man working at his desk or engrossed in a novel. It is said that he has gone 60 and 72 hours without sleep.

"Most people sleep too much," he says. "The only time I had eight hours' sleep I felt ill for days! The great thing is the quality of the sleep rather than the quantity. In the few hours I sleep, every bone, muscle, and nerve is at rest, and the three hours of this is far more beneficial than eight or nine of so-called sleep. Few people have learned th eart of real sleep."

Two El Paso Radio Stations To Start

EL PASO, July 27 (AP).—Southwestern radio stations soon will be increased by two.

KTSM and WDAH, both under construction in El Paso, plan to go on the air about August 1. New equipment, designed to increase reception facilities along the Rio Grande, especially during the summer, has been incorporated into both outfits.

FIND LARGE METEOR

KIMBERLEY, S. A., July 27.—There has been found in the Grootfontein district in Southwest Africa what is said to be the largest meteor ever to fall on the earth. It is thought to weigh in excess of 50 tons and has only one rival that matches it in size. It is thought to have fallen on the earth hundreds of years ago. It is composed of metallic iron.

On the Fence with The Seer

Lack of energy and manhood in a person is a pestilence to the human race. The Seer in his rounds about the city has passed a certain street corner every day for several months and invariably he sees the same familiar figures—men of varying ages, some with faces hardened by many hardships, others immovable, expressionless, while occasionally a face young with life, radiating with an expression of eager expectancy is mingled with the throng.

• • •

A supply of cut plug and a quantity of idle conversation seem to be the requirements of this clinic of delinquent manpower. Waiting on their favorite corner for the world and its opportunities to come to their rescue that they might lead lives of usefulness to their families and to their country. The Seer sometimes wonders of such men ever read the life of Theodore Roosevelt—the American "Apostle of Energy"—a man who was handicapped through his earlier years with sickness and a weak body but despite all these obstacles, became a statesman, naturalist, explorer, and the 26th president of the United States, and was recognized as one of the greatest political figures of his time. Further reference of his dynamic life was furnished by John Moxley an English statesman who visited the United States while Roosevelt was president—on his return to England, said that he saw two great forces of nature while he was gone. "One the Niagara Falls, the other the president of the United States, and he wasn't sure which was the more powerful."

Today's Poem

CONSTANCY

I can not change as others do,
Though you unjustly scorn;
Since that poor swain that sighs for you
For you alone was born.
No, Phillis, no; your heart to move
A surer way I'll try;
And, to revenge my slighted love,
Will still love on and die.

When killed with grief Amyntas lies,
And you to mind shall call
The sighs that now unpitied rise,
The tears that vainly fall—
That welcome hour, that ends this smart,
Will then begin your pain;
For such a faithful tender heart
Can never break in vain.

—John Wilmot (1647-1680)

The SHINING TALENT

By ELEANOR EARLY © 1929 by NEA Service Inc.

THIS HAS HAPPENED

MOLLY BURNHAM and RED FLYNN have decided to collaborate on a crime play. The plot is to be taken from real life, and will revolve about the mysterious death of BERNICE BRADFORD. Bernice was poisoned, and Lionel Barrows, the lover who stood trial for her murder, subsequently acquitted.

Later Red Flynn, a police court reporter, meets a boy named PERRY INGERSOLL who gets intoxicated, and admits that he was also a sweetheart of the dead woman. He tells Red the story of their sordid romance, and Red immediately sees its possibilities as a mystery play—a play centering about the unsolved murder of the Bradford woman. Red visits Molly, who covered the trial, and tells her the amazing story unfolded by young Ingersoll.

They determine to get to work as playwrights immediately. But Molly is suddenly asigned to cover another murder trial—the trial of a gunman, charged with the killing of a night watchman.

Now, Molly is not at all in love with Red Flynn, but engaged, instead, to a young draftsman named Jack Wells, who has insisted upon postponing their marriage until such time as he can save a little money.

Mr. Wharton, the city editor, warns her that covering the Mandinello trial will be dangerous business, as the Chicago gunmen are watching developments with deadly interest.

NOW GO ON WITH THE TRIAL

CHAPTER XIII

Certain radical publications had their representatives at the Mandinello trial. Long-haired men, with dirty finger nails and soiled shirts.

At noon the reporters lunched together at an inn across from the court house. It was a funeral dining room. The waitresses were slovenly and slow. And the food was heavy and uninviting. But the discussions around the reporters' table redeemed its melancholy setting.

Only the radicals believed Mandinello innocent. And sometimes they grew very angry with the others.

"I don't believe in capital punishment," Molly remarked one day. "I think it is a blight on civilization. But I suppose there's something to be said for it, since it helps us get rid of men like this gunman."

"Do you mean," demanded one of the radicals "that you think men should be electrocuted, whether or not they may properly be found guilty of murder? Do you believe in trumping up charges against them, in ordr to find them falsely guilty, that they may be killed for a crime of which they are innocent?"

"I believe," she declared rashly, "that every gunman is a potential murderer, and as such should suffer the penalty of our mandates of justice."

The young radical sprang angrily to his feet.

"It's you and your sort," he cried, "with the injustice of your damn convictions that have made America the hotbed of Bolshevism it is today!"

He glared furiously, and flung from the dining room.

• • •

"No good doing that sort of thing, Molly," cautioned Slim Boynton. "You know how that fellow feels. What's the use of riding him?"

"Oh, I dont care," she announced petulantly. "I'm fed up on this wretched trial anyhow."

It was Friday, and court did not sit on Saturday. Impulsively Molly decided to go to New York for over Sunday. It had been a long time since she had seen Jack.

As they left the dining room, Slim drew her aside.

"Now don't tell me I'm crazy," he commanded, "and don't forget that I'm old enough to know what I'm talking about. You're going to get into trouble, if you don't lay off Mandinello. You're signing your stories, and laying things on pretty thick. Wharton says our circulation has jumped 25,000. Maybe it has. What's the blooming circulation worth, if it costs you your neck?"

Molly tried to laugh. "You don't think they'd shoot me, Slim?"

"That's just what I think," he told her shortly. "You notice I don't take any chances? Not on your life I don't. I've toned down my stuff, since they sent Tony Tommy from Chicago, to give us news hounds the once over."

"I'm not afraid!" she boasted.

"That's because you haven't sense enough," he informed her. "That's what they'll say when they write your obituary . . . 'I'm not afraid,' she said. And they'll call you the Brave Young Reporter, and the Beautiful Little Martyr, and send some swell floral pieces to the funeral. And what good will that do you? Now watch your step, Molly, and do as I tell you. Lay off before some of these Chicago gunmen take you for a nice little ride. It's been done to girls before, you know."

"You're a cheerful friend," she chided.

"It's for your own good," he insisted.

"Well, I'm going to New York for the week-end," she told him. "And I'll have to tear off Saturday's and Sunday's stories in a hurry. Suppose I write the old sob stuff about the poor little bride, and the love nest on 13th street?"

"Go ahead," he urged. "Probably Wharton won't use it, but it's better to get in wrong with the office than the racketeers."

Molly wired two discreet stories that night, and telegraphed the office that she was going to New York and would be back on the job Monday morning. Then she telephoned Jack to meet her at the Grand Central.

During the journey she wrote several pages of dialogue intended for the play on which she and Red were to collaborate. They had decided that a good name would be "The Death of Delphine Darrows."

The curtain was to rise on Delphine's beribboned boudoir, with Delphina, white and beautiful, dead, between sheets of orchid satin. A young man, in conventional mourning clothes, with a gardenia in his buttonhole, would rise from his knees by the side of the bed and dash from the room. Immediately the curtain would be lowered.

The second act would be in a courtroom. In the prisoner's cage would be another man—charged with the murder of Delphine Darrows. Near him, with eyes fastened maliciously upon the accused, would sit the young man who had rushed from the dead woman's bedroom.

Molly was working on the courtroom scene. Trying to inject humor, to relieve tragedy. Fearful lest she lose something of the dramatic possibilities. The cut-and-dried courtroom technique was simple, but she must keep it keyed at high tension. The prosecuting attorney's charge must be pregnant with thunderous words and dreadful imprecations. The dread shadow of the electric chair must hover over the pale dark man in the prisoner's cage. And the audience must feel the ghost of the dead woman, as the sinister prosecutor conjured her presence.

Molly worked until the train pulled into the station. Then she powdered her nose, and roughed her lips until they matched the scarlet tips of her tri-colored scarf.

Jack was waiting at the gate, and in a moment she was in his arms.

"Oh, Jack! Jack!"

"Molly!" he cried. "It's good to see you."

They kissed fervently while red-capped porters grinned.

"How did you happen to get away?" he demanded.

"Oh, I was fed up on the trial," she told him airily, "so I wired the Plaza and reserved a room. And here I am!"

She was clinging to the brief case she carried as though it held diamonds.

"I've got something in here to show you, Jack!" she boasted. "You'll be so surprised, you'll just about die. Let's go somewhere where we can talk and talk."

"You're not going to rave about that job of yours?" he demanded darkly.

Molly pouted. "Now see here," she retorted, "that just reminds me. Mister Wells, you never so much as wrote me a line about what a smart girl I was at the Barrows trial. What did you think of my stories? Weren't they all right?"

"Oh, they were all right," he assured her, "if that's the sort of literature you aspire to. What do you say, dear, to the Commodore Grill? They've lobster cocktails with the Russian dressing you like. And we can get a booth where I can kiss you when nobody's looking."

She shrugged indifferently.

"So you don't think much of my writing," she pursued icily, when they had found a table.

"Oh sure," he parried, "if you like that sort of stuff."

"Well, it's worth more money than you can earn," she told him cruelly.

Jack flushed painfully.

"Molly darling, you didn't come to quarrel with me?".

"I didn't come to be insulted either," she said, and bit her lips on an angry little sob. She patted the brief case in her lap. "I've copy here for a play, Jack. Don't you want to hear it?"

"Why of course I do. Are you honestly writing a play, Molly?"

"Well, I'm writing it," she confessed, "but the idea wasn't mine. You know Red Flynn—I mean I've written you about him. He gave me the idea, and we're collaborating on it."

"You're not falling in love with him, are you, Molly?"

She threw back her head and laughed.

"In love with Red!" she cried. "When I've a sweetheart like you? Why, honey, Red is homely and crude, and—oh my goodness, he's nobody a girl would look at twice. But he's awfully nice."

She was too excited to eat, but told instead of the night that Red and Slim found Perry Ingersoll. Then she took the papers from her brief case, and read aloud what she had written. Jack listened with ill-concealed annoyance.

"I don't like it, Molly," he said flatly, when she laid the sheets aside, and turned her little radiant face to him. "It's not like you, writing filth and muck. Good Lord, what's come over you!"

"I don't understand," she faltered.

"Oh, you understand all right," he interrupted brutally. "It's rotten! A sweet little kid like you, running round with police reporters, wanting to write a play about a courtesan and a murder . . ."

Molly's painted lips trembled. Silently she shuffled her papers together.

Lubbock Bill Collectors Have Time; Young Unmarried Men Most Difficult To Collect From; "Deadbeats" Few

A RAP AT the door. There is not a stir within.

Calictrantly, the intruder refuses to accept the stillness as an answer. His caloused knuckles rap with more force.

Persistence wins. The frightened housewife, opening the door, feigns a smile, and then says, "I told you to present that bill to my husband."

Must Identify Items

"Yes, Madam," explains the collector, "I did as you directed. Your husband said he positively knew nothing of this account and he told me that you would have to identify the items and pay the bill."

The foregoing, explained one Lubbock bill collector, is but one of many experiences encountered by the "leg" man so essential to credit organizations. "Often I have difficulty in determining who pays the bills," said the collector.

Few "Deadbeats" Here

There are comparatively few "deadbeats" in Lubbock, bill collectors of the city agree. An interview among several indicated that of every one hundred person in the city who charge merchandise three try deliberately to escape payment, fifteen offer filmsy excuses in delaying settlement, and the remaining number pay promptly.

"Payments are delayed often," said one, "because the husband has no knowledge of the wife's accounts. He wants to discuss the accounts with his helpmate before paying, and many times the husband will direct the collector to present the bill to his wife, who in turn gives vice versa instructions."

Youth Most Difficult

"Young, unmarried men," said another collector, "are the most difficult from whom to collect. Many of them own automobiles and are living beyond their salaries. Of course, they do not intend 'beating' the account, but they have not reached the age of business sense. They do not place the proper value upon credit rating, which is established by prompt payment of accounts.

"The young married man is normally a good debtor, for he has a higher conception of business standards than his unmarried friend. He has more pride, and he usually tries to keep his records in good shape."

"In most every case the woman will meet her obligations," said the collector of a local department store. "She seems to realize that honor forces her to pay bills. Girls who work for nominal salaries will pay weekly on accounts until obligations are met."

Feminists Flouted In "The Woman Of It," Novel Written By Texas Woman, Former Secretary To 'Ma' Ferguson

Women Not Fit For Politics?

Clare Ogden Davis, newspaper and magazine writer and former personal secretary to Governor Miriam Ferguson, challenges feminists in novel, "The Woman of It". She believes less than a dozen American women have proved themselves fitted for major political careers.

Clare Ogden Davis Writes First Book

(Special To The Avalanche-Journal)

NEW YORK CITY, July 27.—Texas, cradle of fighters, personal and political, has produced the first novelist brave enough to declare that a real woman is not equipped to hold a high political post and should not aspire to it.

"The Woman of It" is the story of a woman governor of a Southwestern state. Clare Ogden Davis, who wrote it, was personal secretary to the first woman governor of Texas, handling Mrs. Ferguson's contacts with the press during the more tranquil first year of her stormy term of office.

Many May Not Agree

Several million American women may not agree with the conclusions of Mrs. Davis. Others will. "The Woman of It," published by J. H. Sears & Co. on July 24, is considered by political experts as certain to start a nation-wide controversy, particularly among club women and feminists and between "advanced" women and conservative men. Mrs. Davis will thrive on the fighting: behind her is a line of pioneer ancestors who fought redcoats at Bunker Hill, Indians, the Mexican army, the Union army, carpetbaggers and cattle thieves in Texas.

Is Red-headed

Born on a ranch in Bosque county, she is redheaded, vivid, outspoken, fearless. After being graduated from Baylor College in 1913 and teaching history in high schools at Bonham, Arlington and Cleburne for four years, she realized her ambition to be a newspaper woman by joining the Dallas News staff in its Fort Worth Bureau in 1917. She was star reporter of the Fort Worth Record in 1920, when she was married to Burton Davis, a newspaper man. She became the first woman staff correspondent of the Dallas and Galveston News in 1922-24, working out of their Houston bureau, and was special writer for the Houston Chronicle in 1925-26, until she moved with her husband to New York City. Here she interviewed celebrities for a year for a national syndicate and contributed to magazines. Last summer she retired to a farm at Sugar Loaf, fifty miles upstate, to write her first novel.

Says Women Not Fit For Office

Women are not yet fit to cope with men in major political battle, nor to hold executive office. Until they have learned how to use political power, they should not aspire to it, for they can not hope to get or keep it.

These are conclusions of Clare Ogden Davis, author of "The Woman of It", the first novel on American women in politics, published this week by J. H. Sears. The central character is an idealistic clubwoman, elected governor through political accident, and thwarted and defeated by her own womanhood. Mrs. Davis has a certain right to an opinion on women in politics; she was for ten years a newspaper writer, doing a man's job, in that hotbed of politics, Texas, and for the first year of Miriam A. Ferguson's term as governor of Texas was her personal secretary.

Certain Exceptions

There are certain exceptions to her rule, Mrs. Davis admits. She can list only half a dozen, most of them the daughters or wives of practical politicians. She mentions Ruth Bryan Owen, Ruth Hanna McCormick, Mrs. Charles H. Sabin, Alice Roosevelt Longworth (although Mrs. Longworth has never run for offices and doubtless never will) Mrs. Bertha K. Landes, ex-mayor of Seattle, and Congresswoman Ruth Pratt, of New York. Mrs. Ferguson went into politics when James E. Ferguson was barred from the primaries. Mrs. Davis explains, seeking not a political career, but to vindicate her husband.

Women, she thinks, have failed to accomplish anything notable in politics so far for tow reasons. A wrong attitude toward it to begin with, and inexperience and inability to profit by experience in dealing with shrewd and seasoned men in political life.

Turns Of A Bookworm

Book News Notes For This Week

NOTES

The fifth volume in English translation of Marcel Proust's continuous novel "Remembrance of Things Past," published under the title "The Captive," describes the jealousy of a young man suspicious of his mistress.

A previous part of the novel won the Goncourt prize. Another Goncourt winner is M. Constantin-Weyer's story of a Frenchman in the American orthwest entitled "A Man Scans His Past."

MARK'S MERRY MISTRESS

A more highly-born character of unconventional love affairs, the ever-recurring Cleopatra, is the heroine of E. Barrington's latest novel, "The Laughing Queen." In this story of the familiar romance with Caesar and Anthony, amorous Cleo is pictured not as the standard "vamp" of languorous night, but rather as a merry girl.

Henry Green's new novel, "Living" has been highly praised in England. Mr. Green will be remembered as the author of "Blindness," published in 1926 a very fine novel. "Living" (Dutton, publication July 24th.

BACKSTAGE LIFE

Vera Caspary's novel of the circus, vaudeville and musical comedy stage, "Ladies and Gents," will be published by Century in August. Miss Caspary's first novel, "The White Girl," was one of the most praised novels of last season.

DEMI-MONDAINE DAME

The life of an ignorant girl from the Georgia backwoods who traveled a scarlet path until she achieved respectability is described in Ward Greene's novel, "Cora Potts." A "pilgrim's progress" it relates how she put a life of shame behind her even resorting to murder to secure a position in southern society.

Three Feminine Stars At Lindsey This Week

MAY McAVOY

MYRNA LOY

ALICE JOYCE

Alice Joyce Is Back On Screen In "The Squall"

Tempestous Loves Myrna Loy's Part At Lindsey

TODAY'S program at the Lindsey Theater finds a Vitaphone sensation from First National after two long engagements on Broadway as a stage play and later as more recently a "talkie." "The Squall," as the feature. The film will also be shown on Monday and Tuesday.

Alice Joyce, who has twice retired from the screen, returns in the picture to play a leading role. Myrna Loy furnishes a new role in "Nubi" the gypsy girl whose temptous loves create havoc in a peace-loving family. Other players in the cast are Loretta Young, Richard Tucker, Carroll Nye, Zasu Pitts, Nicholas Soussanin and others.

All-Talking Picture.

"The Squall" is an all-talking and singing production. It is an adaption of the stage play by Jean Bart and has been transplanted to the screen with very few minor changes.

However the screen offers a much wider scope for presenting the gypsy customs and manners of which little was seen in the stage version. Beautiful Hungarian countryside and colorful Hungarian people add greatly to the pictorial beauty of the screen narrative.

Concerns Hungarians

The story concerns a peaceful Hungarian family into whose home comes Nubi, the gypsy girl. She seeks sanctuary, claiming that she was stolen by a band of gypsies and that she is not a gypsy at all. After she is accepted as a servant, she proceeds to destroy the love she finds within the home. Her procedure is daring and sensational and gives the screen some of the most impassioned scenes in recent years.

"Tis said Merna Kennedy and James Hall are to be wed in the autumn.

Clive Brook's leading lady (he will star) has not been selected.

Who Said Blondes?

Sole Brunet Wins Beauty Contest

LONDON, July 27—The gents who prefer blondes should change their tastes. Out of a stage full of pretty girls participating in the Chorus Girls' Beauty Competition held at Hampton recently, only one was a brunet. When the first prize was awarded the brunet walked off with it. She was Miss Bobby Lloyd.

Talkies have just invaded Colombia.

Junior Coghlan Scores Big Hit In School Play

"Square Shoulders" Will Be On At Lindsey

WITH the air of martial music and the clatter of dashing cavalry in the background, Junior Coghlan will march into the Lindsey Theater on Friday with "Square Shoulders," a new Pathe dialogue production. As his aid-de-camp, contributing much of this high powered barrage of screen entertainment, is that sterling actor, Louis Wolheim.

Directed by E. Mason Hopper from a story written especially for Junior by George Dromgold and Houston Branch, "Square Shoulders" is said to offer the young star the biggest dramatic opportunities of his career and gives to Mr. Wolheim his first sympathetic role on the screen.

Father Is Derelict

The picture deals with a derelict father who sacrifices his life for the son from whom he is compelled to hide his identity. Instilled in the boy is the memory of a father whom he believed to have been a great hero and an ambition to emulate him as a soldier. How the father protects this boy and helps him toward his goal results in a picture that reaches the highest dramatic heights and at the same time offers ample opportunity for comedy touches that are said to bring many laughs.

Junior Coghlan as the snappy military cadet brings another phase of his personality to the screen. Although he is an urchin newsboy when the picture opens, he soon gets into a uniform and proves himself a soldier in embryo of the highest rating.

Philippe DeLacy, as the other boy seeking the favor of pretty Anita Louise in a humorous kid romance that runs through the picture, is said to add another excellent performance to this list of juvenile portrayals. Others in the cast are Montague Shaw, Clarence Geldert, Maurice Black and Kewpie Morgan.

Warner Brothers Start On List Of Thirty-Five New Films; Talkie Producers Plan To Outstrip Others

BY DAN THOMAS
NEA Service Writer

HOLLYWOOD, Calif., July 27—Pioneer in the talking movie field, Warner Brothers apparently have no intention of letting any other producers outstrip them now that filmland has established its voice.

A schedule of 35 new productions is to be launched in August with five pictures scheduled for prerelease in that month.

Prominent among these early releases are "Honky Tonk", Sophie Tucker's new film, and "The Hottentot," in which Edward Everett Horton and Patsy Ruth Miller are starred. Following them comes Tom Meighan's first Vitaphone picture "The Argyle Case," and on August 24 Al Jolson's new picture, "Say It With Songs," will get its first public showing. The final offering of the month will be "In the Headlines," a story of newspaper life with Marian Nixon and Grant Withers in the leading roles.

Incidentally, it is anounced that all of these pictures will later be released as silent films—it being the Warner policy to make two versions, silent and talking, of every film.

• • •

The fine work of Eugene Pallette in the two Van Dine mystery films "The Canary Murder Case" and "The Green Murder Case," has won that able character actor considerable recognition at the Paramount lot. Pallette has been assigned important roles in two new productions; "Kibitzer," from the Broadway stage play, and "The Lost God," Richard Arlen's first starring vehicle.

Paramount has another character actor who has come to the front rapidly lately—Fred Kohler. Kohler's work in George Bancroft's "Thunderbolt" won him wide praise and he has followed it with another good performance as a Mississippi river bad man gambler in "River of Romance."

• • •

Robert Armstrong and James Gleason, who made a tremendous success out of "Is Zat So?" a few years ago, are together again—working in "Oh Yeah," a new talkie now under production at the Pathe Studios.

This story taken from A. W. Somerville's "No Brakes," is the brakemen, and its dialogue is written by Gleason. Others in the cast are Zazu Pitts, Patricia Caron, Paul Hurst, Frank Hagney, Bud Fine and Harry Tyler.

WE AREN'T SO MODERN

NEW YORK, July 27—Hip flasks are not a necessary possession made part of one's ensemble by the prohibition amendment. They were known and used many years ago. Several of them, more than 100 years old, were recently exhibited as antiques at the International Antiques Exposition.

Several snow storms were reported on the East Coast of Scotland late in June.

Aviation in Greece is growing.

Patsy Ruth Miller, who stars with Edward Everett Hoton in "The Hottentot," one of the Warner Brothers' new productions.

"Stolen Kisses" Has May McAvoy In Comedy Role

Parisian Plot Is On For Lindsey Wednesday

A WHIRLWIND comedy of jazz newlyweds, disgruntled relatives and cavorting beauties is Warner Brothers latest Vitaphone talking picture, "Stolen Kisses" starring May McAvoy which shows at the Lindsey Wednesday and Thursday. The story is from the pen of Franz Suppe.

The production is an up-to-the-minute jazz jamboree in which a newlymarried couple, and the peppery father of the bride go to Paris. In the gilded city both husband and wife meet a professional homewrecker and interesting developments follow which make the play of unusual humorous trend.

Miss McAvoy's able support includes Claude Gillingwater, Hallam Cooley, Edna Murphy, Reed Howes, Arthur Hoyt and others.

Carol Lombard will play opposite Robert Armstrong in "the Racketeer".

Glenn Tryon will be seen in "Skinner's Dress Suit," the old Bryant Washburn success.

"The Return of Sherlock Holmes" will be filmed in Long Island City, N. Y.

Power Farming Is A Great Aid To Panhandle-Plains

Recent Advances In Manufacturing Machinery Cause

Prof. H. J. Bower, Texas Tech, Reviews Problems Of Wheat Growers In Area; Tells Attainments

By H. J. BOWER
Professor of Agronomy
School of Agriculture
Texas Technological College

Labor saving machinery has made Texas citizens, who reside in the Panhandle-Plains section, wheat-minded. The question might be asked:

"Does the business man diversify by growing wheat, or does the wheat grower diversify by running a business?"

Such is the trend of farming in the Panhandle-Plains area of Texas.

Owners Live Elsewhere

Not all of these business men live in the Panhandle. One man, who lives in Dallas, farms 800 acres of wheat, 400 acres of cotton and 250 acres of Hegari, about five miles west of Abernathy. Citizens of Lubbock also have acreages of wheat in the northern part of Lubbock county, and in other counties, while in Carson county business men from Topeka, Kansas, from California and Illinois, are managing wheat farms.

At Hereford, in Deaf Smith county, business men from different parts of Texas, as was from other states, are operating wheat farms. The largest of these is the 6,500 acres operated by Cartet and Houston, clothing merchants, of Plainview. This tract is sod land, of the richest kind of virgin soil, from which spectators estimate that a profit of $100,000 will be realized.

Machinery Gives Impetus

Labor-saving machinery and power farming are giving the impetus for scientific farming, which will lead to a better balanced agriculture and a more stable citizenship. They have increased the earnings of the present-day farmer, whereby, with one man on the tractor, one on the combine and a wheat hauler they are now operating an acreage, twice as large as the six-man header crew of 10 years ago. And the wheat is soon on its way to market, instead of simply in the shock.

The one-way plow often follows the combine. In many instances the tractor plows at night and pulls the combine during the day, so that as soon as the field is combined it is also plowed.

The Windrower Appears

Another new system has been added to this aggressive process by a new machine called the windrower.

Several of these windrow machines operated in different sections of the Panhandle this season. The became popular overnight, in Kansas, and will undoubtedly do so in Texas, due to the following advantages:

It is quite necessary for wheat to be dead ripe, to be combined satisfactorily. There are always green spots in the field, traces and patches of weeds, that are troublesome to combine. There is also the dreaded fear of hail, while the wheat grower is waiting for his wheat to ripen for the combine. The windrower assists in overcoming these troubles.

Costs Less Than Hail Insurance

It is estimated that the windrower will operate at one-half the cost of hail insurance. The farmer, or wheat grower, can windrow part of his acreage, while waiting for the remainder to become dead ripe. Then the windrowed wheat is picked up with a special attachment and combined without any waste, after the ripened wheat has been harvested.

The wheat grower utilizes every modern resource in the way of machinery to increase the acre profit of his crop. His problems to follow are to adopt a permanent system of farming with a more stable income, and with a better system of marketing, which will give him fuller returns for his product, with the premiums that are due him for the grades of protein content.

The wheat farmer who always has had to produce a crop cheaper than he can sell it, in order to stay in the game, has been mighty quick to adopt new ideas. The one-way plow was invented by a wheat farmer, of Plains, Kansas. This plow makes an 8, 10 or 12 foot cut, and leaves most of the stubble on the top of the ground with a rough surface, so as to catch all the rain and to protect from blowing. Thus the economical advantage of the one-way plow and the combine harvester has been an absolute necessity for the wheat farmer.

Necessity Is Responsible

"Necessity is the mother of invention," so are the better systems of farming and marketing for the coming wheat grower, whether he be farmer or business man.

Insect pests, wheat diseases and soil fertility problems will follow in dgive the wheat-minded farmers new problems, which will be mastered by rotation of other crops with the wheat program. At present the sorghums yield well, feed well and sell well, but are expensive crops to grow, because of the difficulty in harvesting. The Texas Agricultural Experiment stations are breeding varieties to fit the present machinery. Perhaps the windrow and the combine harvester will aid in fitting to these crops.

Thus, while the wheat acreage might decline, the advantage of a crop rotation with some system of a partial summer follow, will change to a better and more sure cropping system for the wheat grower. He will not hafe to diversify by rinning business. And, if the business man diversifies, by being a wheat grower, he will have to be an "honest to goodness" farmer and a resident of the community in which he operates.

Egypt has barred games of chance.

Hints For The Farm

(By U. S. Department of Agriculture)

Dairy breeding associations are overlooking a good bet when they do no admi high-producing unregistered cows of excellen ype to herd boks, according to O. E. Reed, chief of the U. S. Bureau of Dairy Industry. Tabulation of 100,000 cows, 70,000 of which were grades of commercial herds, showed that the grades averaged 7124 pounds of milk and 284 of butterfat a year, a difference of only 754 pounds of milk and 19 of butterfat over the registered cows.

During the year, ending March 1, 1929, farm real estate values showed a decline, but this downward trend was comparatively slight and some states showed the smallest decline in recent years. The U. S. Bureau of Agricultural Economics estimates that during this period the values per acre of all farm lands with improvements average for the United States as a whole showed a decline of less han 1 percent. This is the smallest loss since 1920.

Co-operative livestock marketing, says the U. S. Department of Agriculture, was in the operation more than 100 years ago. Some Welsh settlers near Granville, Ohio, organize such a venture, but the returns were too small to warrant its continuance.

From 1910 to 1925 the number of apple trees in the United States reduced nearly 40 percent, according to the U. S. Department of Agriculture. Despite this decrease, the production has steadily been maintained. Carload shipments have increased by 4600 a year since 1918.

* * *

The U. S. Bureau of Agricultural Economics finds that about 13,000 cars of live poultry valued at around $65,000,000 are shipped to New York annually. About 94 percent of this is shipped by freight.

If the soil erosion prevention system, successfully started in Texas and neighboring states, is carried out over the southwest, agricultural prosperity of a permanent and stable kind will come, says A. B. Conner, director of the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station. Erosion prevention is being precticed on 3,000,000 acres of Texas land at present, he reports.

Laying hens need mash during the summer months to keep up good egg production. Good results are obtained if they get about twice as much mash as scratch feed. It is a good plan to add five pounds of linseed meal to every 100 pounds of mash to help get the hens in good condition for molting. Milk is very desirable in the summer ration, and plenty of green feed should be available.

* * *

After the breeding season is over a boar's feed should be reduced so that he keeps in good, thrifty condition. Only a small quantity of corn need be given him, the main feed being middlings or shorts, oats or a little linseed meal, with the run of a good pasture.

* * *

To reduce danger of bloating, cattle and sheep should be given a good fill of dry feed, particularly roughage, before they are turned on green forage such as red clover or alfalfa for any length of time. Dew and rain increase the danger of bloating.

Buckwheat is an excellent crop to sow where corn or some other crop has failed to make a stand. The ground can be prepared for buckwheat by disking or harrowing. The best seeding time for any locality can be determined fairly accurately by allowing a period of 12 weeks for growth before the first killing frost is expected.

QUEER FISH TALE

EVANSVILLE, Ind., July 27.—The Ohio river recently yielded to two local anglers a fish that has never been seen around here before and which observers have failed to classify. It was about 20 inches long, with two feet and gills on the outside. Its gills are moss-like affairs, worn like chin whiskers. It uses its feet to swim.

Lubbock County Is Represented By 40 At A. & M. Course

Special Car Left Lubbock Saturday Night, Joining Panhandle Special; Largest Attendance Expected

Lubbock county will have 40 representatives at College Station, during the Twentieth Annual Farmers' Short Course, which is being held at Texas A. & M. college, from July 29 to August 3, inclusive.

Headed by David F. Eaton, county agent, and Miss Louise Baird, home demonstration agent, most of the Lubbock county delegation left this city Saturday night at 10 o'clock, on board a special car of the Panhandle special train. This train started at Amarillo and picked up special cars at various points down the line.

Shipped Livestock For Over 14 Years

Since its organization in 1915 the La Salle Livestock Shipping Association, La Salle, Minn., has sent 145,719 hogs, 23,729 head of cattle and calves, and 3,934 sheep to the terminal livestock markets. The returns have amounted to more than four and a third million dollars.

Shipments for 1928 to the South St. Paul market consisted of 272 cars containing 16,235 hogs, 1,797 cattle and calves, and 494 sheep, with an f. o. b. value at La Salle of $386,802. Ninety-nine percent of this amount was paid to member shippers who numbered 315.

The association had a surplus at the close of 1928 of approximately $4,000.

Dairy Industry Is Well Off In U. S.

That the dairy industry has enjoyed relatively favorable conditions since the World War is shown by hte fact that the farm price of butter has averaged slightly higher than the retail price of commodities farmers buy, says the United States Department of Agriculture.

This position is in decided contrast with that held by most other farm products. Although the output of butter and other dairy producs has increased in recent years, the consumption has increased also. In all dairy regions of the United States, except the northeast states, butter production increased from 1918 to 1927.

Southern States Show Gain

The greatest percentage of increase occurred in the southern states, although as yet the total production there is, relatively, not large. Butter production is greater in the central corn belt and the central dairy region.

Only a comparatively small increase took place in the decade 1918-1927 in the Pacific states. Output in the Mountain states has increased steadily since 1920.

The farm price of butter in New York and Minnesota, two important dairy regions, has been appreciably higher than the average price for the United States. Mississippi, a deficit state, and Nebraska, a surpus state, have had prices lower than the United States average. Quality of production and marketing efficiency are factors in these regional differences.

Group Formed For Poultry Marketing

Egg and poultry producers in Western Colorado formed the Montrose and Delta Cooperative Poultry Producers Association, Inc., Delta, Colo., in 1928. This association is organized to sell chickens, ducks, geese, and turkeys, as well as eggs, and is buying poultry feed and egg acses for its members. A membership of 448 and a total business of $252,000 for 1928 indicates a good start. The business office is located at Delta, Colo., with a branch shipping station maintained at Montrose.

The association is incorporated with a capital stock of $2,000 consisting of 2,000 shares with a par value of $1 each. A five-year-marketing contract (1928-1932) is used, which provides that the association must pay to its members the amount received from the sale of products, less marketing costs and charges, costs of handling, grading and processing, and less deductions for reserves for credit and general purposes. The annual surplus from such deductions will be prorated back to the producer members each year on the basis of products delivered. Should any member fail to deliver all of his poultry or poultry products to the association, he agrees to pay as liquidated damages a sum equal to 50 percent of the current market value of the products so withheld.

All Trucked Stock Should Be Marked

According to the United States Department of Agriculture, district supervisors engaged in administering the packers and stockyards act have obeserved that unbusiness-like methods in shipping livestock by truck have been resulting in frequent trouble, dissatisfaction, and errors.

One supervisor reports that in the handling of truck shipments at a large public stockyard it is not uncommon for trucks to arrive at the yard carrying animals of the same kind belonging to two or more owners, with none of the animals in the load marked in any way for identification and ownership. Identification of the different animals in the load is left wholly, in such cases, to the memory of the truckman, who probably never saw the animals before they were loaded into his truck.

Manner of Marking Given

Though the manner of marking is a matter of choice, experience shows that the use of clippers for making identifying marks such as an X, L, or T, in the coats of cattle and swine is becoming increasingly popular.

The marks are easily made, readily seen, and are not affected by weather or other conditions of marking. Another common method is the application of paint marks. Either method is suitable for marking small consignments such as are commonly shipped by truck.

Ordinary alcohol injected into the blood by a new method devised by a Mexican doctor has been tried successfully as an anasthetic in two operations in a London hospital recently.

Alabama Lambs Sold Collectively

Sheep growers from 11 Alabama counties recently held a cooperative sale of lambs at the Montgomery Stock Yards, under the auspices of the Alabama Farm Bureau and the Alabama Extension Service. They sold 2,524 lambs for the sum of $16,200. Top lambs brought the growers 15 1-2 cents per pound and a checkpu showed that approximately half of the lambs were tops. Thirty purebred Southdown and Hampshire rams brought into the State from Tennessee were distributed among the growers.

Policemen Are No Good, Shiftless?

DALLAS, July 27 (AP).—Police Commissioner W. C. Graves and Chief of Police C. W. Trammel late today patched up a heated disagreement, but in announcing the amicable settlement the commissioner made a caustic thrust at policemen in general.

Their dispute concerned Commissioner Graves recent suggestion that a certain man be given a place on the force.

Chief Trammell had made a report unfavorable to the applicant.

"He said the man was shiftless and no good," Graves said. "I can't see that that would be any reason why a man shouldn't be hired as a policeman."

Trains which carry exhibits and demonstrators to promote health and sanitation, and impart agricultural knowledge, are being run on practically all the railways of India this year.

All-Time Motor Production Figure Is Set In 1928; 5,203,138 Units Put Out

By NEA Service

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 27.—Last year was the biggest in the world's history of the automobile industry, according to A. W. Childs, acting chief, Automotive Division of the U. S. Department of Commerce.

In 1928 an all-time record in automobile manufacturing was set. World production increased by 1,044,173 vehicles over the preceding year and to this increase United States and Canada contributed 1,020,761 units. These two countries alone produced 4,601,141 units, or 88 per cent of the world's output, which was 5,203,139 vehicles. Only in 1925 did this percentage figure of the two manufacturing countries exceed this. At that time they produced 90.5 percent of the world total of 4,882,797.

More than 55 per cent of the total production, according to Childs was required for replacements, as compared with 50 per cent in 1927 and 37 per cent in 1926.

"This indicates that the industry is approaching what might be termed a stabilized condition, that is, each year an increasing percentage of production is being absorbed in the form of replacements." Childs says. "United States and Canadian exports alone, totaling 586,496, almost equal the combined production of the rest of the world, which numbered 601,998."

Three Countries Drop

England, Spain, and Denmark were the only three countries in Childs' survey which showed a decrease in production. England's production in 1927 was 231,920 units as compared with 211,877 in 1928; Spain's production in 1928 was 355 units as compared with 585 in 1927; Denmark's production of 190 vehicles in 1927 fell to 165 in 1928.

While the U. S.-Canadian production of 4,601,141 in 1928 was a gain of 1,020,761 over 1927, t tis an indication of a poor year in the industry during 1927, for the figure is only 95,380 over 1926 and 173,922 over 1925.

"Automobiles easily rank first in the value of all manufactured products exported from the United States," Childs says. "In the case of the United States, 9.6 per cent of the passenger cars manufactured there and 26.2 per cent of the trucks were exported. Canada, from its total production, exported 55,612 passenger cars and 23,776 trucks."

Foreign Production.

Total production of foreign countries during 1928 are: France, 210,000 units; Germany, 89,950; Hungary, 460; Italy, 55,010; Japan (all trucks), 470; Poland, 320; Russia, 700; Belgium, 7000; Sweden, 1362; and Switzerland, 1700.

It is interesting to note that in Japan there is not a single passenger vehicle manufactured; all units are trucks.

In Poland, previous to 1928, not a vehicle was turned out. One company manufactures the only all-Polish motor behicle in Italy. It is the "Diatto," and its production in 1928 was 320.

Denmark, like Poland, has only one automobile manufacturing concern. It is De Forenede Automobilfabriker, at Odense. In 1928 this firm is said to have produced 100 truck chasis, 50 passenger cars and taxicabs, and 15 heavy buses.

BRAVO, SENIOR

LONDON, July 27.—English and American feminine beauties owe a vote of thanks to Senor Federico Beltram-Masses, Spanish portrait painter, who championed them in an address here recently. "I am absolutely against the movement which would make English women refrain from exhibiting their legs," he says. "I think they should show their knees. The American girls can also show their knees with impunity, for they are descended from the English and inherit their beauty.

Two-Year-Old Boy Named Ruler

By NEA Service

PEKING, July 27.—A two-year-old Mongolian boy is the "Great Immortal White Lama," who is to rule the destination of millions of Asiatics.

At the death of the former Lama, his spirit was supposed to inhabit the body of a child born on the same day. Search revealed the present Lama with marks on his body said to have been placed there by Buddha.

The child ruler will be guarded from the world by 10,000 monks. No woman will attend him; he will be ministered to by the Grand Abbot in a monastery towering high into the sky.

His playthings will be ornamented with skulls and bones in order to scare away evil spirits and when he dies a hole will be cut in the top of his head to release the divine spirit.

Desoto Designed For Easy Riding

In these summer days of vacations with their extended motor trips and week-ends spent miles from town at the quiet lake, by the trout stream, in the woods or at the seaside, the holiday seeker demands a car with easy riding qualities.

Not so many years ago, the holiday to the driver of an automobile was a holiday in name only. If he was fortunate enough to get back home without serious mechanical trouble, after what in those days was considered a long trip, he returned in most cases physically and mentally exhausted. The idea of coming back refreshed after a hundred mile spin in the country was unknown to the driver of yesterday.

The "comfort-ized" modern car, however, was not an accidental discovery. The engineers who designed the De Soto Six, the popular Chrysler Motors product that has gained the reputation for unusually high standard of riding comfort, developed this particular feature of the De Soto only after an exhaustive study of the mechanical requirements needed to offset the innumerable jars and bumps the car is subjected to in a day's driving.

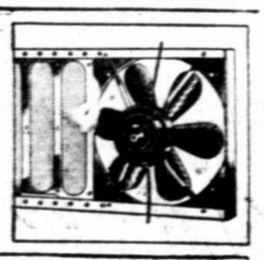

Whippet Roadster Liked By Youth

The ever increasing number of the new Superior Whippet Four Collegiate Roadster models that are now seen on the streets, th rural highways and at the country clubs throughout the nation is an indication of the popularity of this smart model.

Designed to carry four passengers—two in the front seat and two in the roomy rumble seat in the rear—it has won a wide acceptance not alone with the younger set, but with adults as well who seek a dash of youth and spirit in their motor cars.

The size of taxis has been reduced in New York. And pedestrians had just learned how to dodge the old ones, too!

Air as fresh as the food you eat

There's no reason why the air in your kitchen should be heavy with cooking odors or blue with smoke. A Westinghouse Kitchen Exhaust Fan will whisk the fumes out the window as fast as they are produced—before they can creep into the living room or dining room, or steal up the stairs.

This fan keeps kitchens cooler in summer and cleaner and fresher all year around. It can be installed with a screwdriver in kitchen windows of widths up to 50 inches.

The Kitchen Exhaust Fan runs either way—drawing fresh air into the room or expelling stale air. Silent, powerful, efficient. There are also Westinghouse Fans for every home and office use.

No matter where heat oppresses you—in your home or office—you can secure quick relief by simply turning on a Westinghouse Fan.

WHEN BETTER AUTOMOBILES ARE BUILT . . . BUICK WILL BUILD THEM

Modified Body Is Feature Of 1930 Improved Buick

Many Changes In Car Made; Bulge Will Be Removed

Power, Comfort, Economy And Beauty Added To New Machine and More Room To Be Available

By ISRAEL KLEIN
Science Editor, NEA Service

FLINT, Mich., July 27.—The new 1930 Buick presents itself today not only modified in appearance but improved mechanically over its predecessor. It is a bigger, more powerful, more comfortable automobile than the Buick of 1929. Yet the prices are to remain about the same.

Although the change in the body is perhaps the feature of most interest to present and prospective Buick owners, the mechanical features have so been improved as to rival the body in interest.

The car has been made longer, broader and lower. The engine's size has been nlarged and its power therefore increased. Semielliptic rear springs replace the former cantilever type and, working with double acting shock absorbers, improve the riding qualities of the automobile.

Braking as undergone a decided improvement with the use of internal expansion Servo brakes that are made proof against squeaking or grabbing. The frame, thanks to the rear semi-elliptic springs and new type of shock absorbers, has been lowered and broadened, thus enabling the builders to lower the entir body two inchs. Rubber engine mountings have been improved to provide greater cushioning effect, and the, transmission and clutch have been designed for the better.

Bulge Is Taken Out

Most marked in the appearance of the new Buick is the replacement of a belt molding for the sudden bulge in the former car. Yet this change has been so designed as to retain a hint of the rounding shape of the 1929 models in a much more graceful effect.

From the front, the radiator shell still has that doubly-rounded effect at the corners but this is flattened and sobered down to some extent, while the entire radiator itself has ben widened and deepened to give the car a more substantial and yet graceful appearance.

In addition to its appearance the body has been made more comfortable by means of larger doors, lowered door sills and wider seats. The lowered sills allow deeper and more comfortable seats.

Fourteen Models Shown

The new Buick is being produced in 14 models divided into three series—40, 50 and 60, replacing the 20, 40 and 50 respectively. In each of the models, the engine bore has been increased an eighth of an inch with a resultant increase of eight per cent in power, the Buick engineers say.

Despite the increased size and power of the engine, however, fuel conomy has been improved in the 40 series and has at least been retained in the other models. This, the designers say, is due to a better balance between engine power and car weight and to improve carburetion.

Another help has been the incorporation of double breaker arm distributors in the 50 and 60 types to insure proper firing of the engine at all speeds and under all conditions.

Fifth Shock Absorbed

Among the innovations in the Buick and in fact an innovation in automobile costruction, is what may be termed a fifth shock absorber. The device is a double-springed shackle replacing the regular shackle in front of the frame on the steering gear side.

Without this device, a road shock is carried up through the steering gear to the back of the car and so causes discomfort for driver and passengers. With the fifth shock absorber this is taken up and there is no ill effect on the steering or roadability.

Another innovation in Buick is the seven degree slanting windshield, to eliminate glare from headlights on cars behind. This was first introduced on the Marquette, Buick's new companion car.

The stronger frame construction of the Buick is expected to eliminate further any possiblity of shaking in front fenders, lamps and radiator and rattles or squeaks in the body.

Thermostatically controlled shutters have been placed on the radiators of all models, with the thermostat set into the radiator to eliminate noise and sticking. The shutters are so fitted as not to interfere with the crankcase.

What Cars Will Do

On a test drive in the new Buick over the General Motors Proving Grounds the car responded to every demand of the driver and every condition of the roads. Its engineers have been running this car for thousands of miles to determine its efficiency and practicability.

As a result, they say rather conservatively that:

1. The two larger models will accelerate from 5 to 25 miles an hour in 8.4 seconds, while the smaller one will make the jump in 8.7 seconds.

2. The 40 and 50 cars climbed an 11.6 per cent grade 1400 feet long and reached the peak at a minimum of 26 miles an hour from a five-mile-an-hour start, while the smaller model, with the same start, went 25 miles an hour or better at the top.

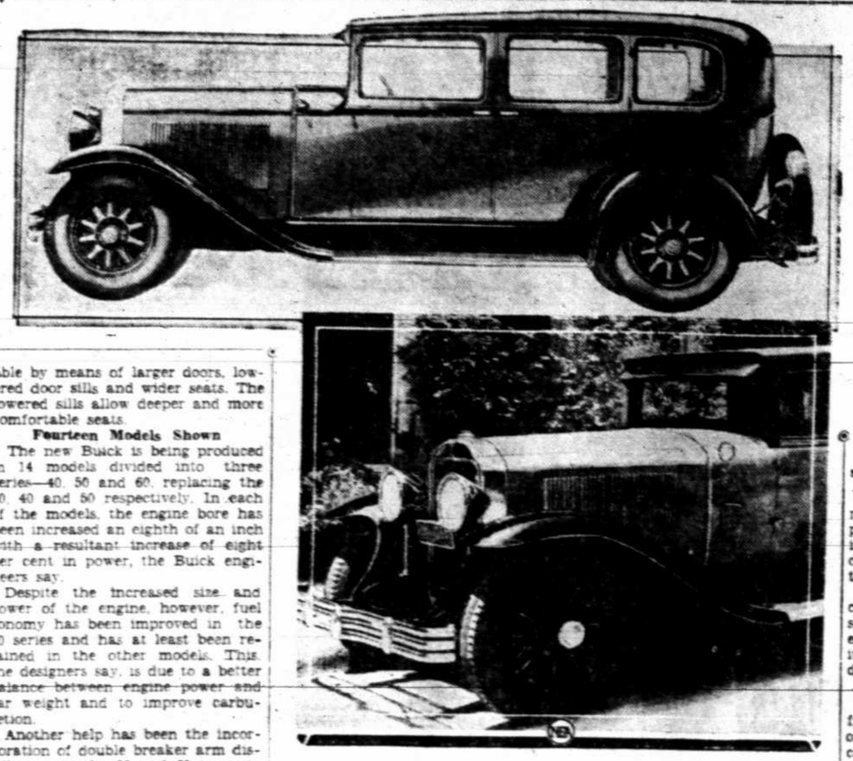

3. The top road speed of all models is over 70 miles an hour, accurately calibrated, yet the speed of the engine is much slower than in the older models, due to increased piston displacement.

4. Average fuel consumption in the 40 series is lower than that of its corresponding 1929 series, ranging from 16.5 miles per gallon at 20 miles an hour to 12.25 miles a gallon at 60 miles an hour. Fuel consumption on the two larger series is the same, but there's a gain in economy when the increased size and power of the motor is considered.

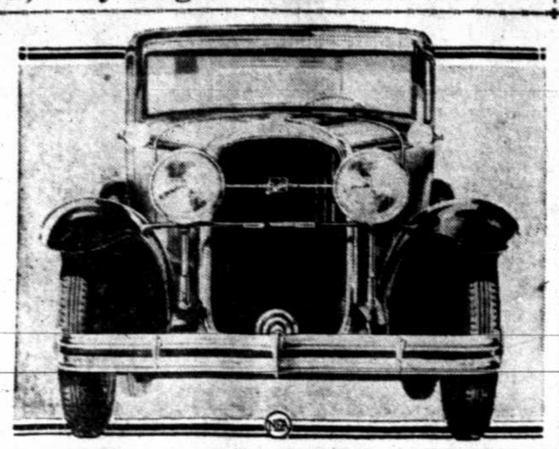

All these figures are based on the use of a four-door sedan carrying a load of 460 pounds.

Here's How The New 1930 Improved Buick Will Look; Body Bulge Will Be Removed

The 1930 Buick, shown in the upper photo, as compared with the 1929 model below it, gives an idea of the change made in the appearance of the car. Note the molding replacing the sudden bulge, and the more sedate effect of the hood.

Looking at the 1930 Buick from the front we see still some kinship, though not as pronounced, to the preceding models.

Pertinent Facts About Automobiles By Israel Klein, Science Editor For NEA Service

By ISRAEL KLEIN
Science Editor, NEA Service

The higher temperature of modern engines, the heat of summer and the higher speeds attained on the highways tend to conspire toward thinning of the oil in the crankcase. This thinned oil flows more easily through the system, less force is exerted by the pump to get it through and the oil pressure drops in the guage on the dashboard.

But the oil may be as good a lubricant as the more viscous oil that prevails in winter. All that has happened to the lubricant is merely the reduction of its viscosity. But its quality remains.

• • •

Nevertheless manufacturers and oil engineers recommend that a heavier oil be put into the crankcase in summer than in winter.

The oil pressure will go down quickly, even with the use of thicker oil, but such oil will prevent undue wear on the bearing surfaces. The thicker oil will be consumed just as fast as the thihner under the strain of higher speed and heat of today. More oil is thrown from the bearings to the cylinders, the piston rings are less effective at high speed probably due to jumping or bouncing, and there is increased oil evaporation and consequent loss through the breather or ventilator.

The heavier oil may cause increased carbon formation, valve sticking and slightly decreased power output. The only advantage from its use is the freedom from the danger of dry bearings.

• • •

The trouble that might result from reduced oil pressure depends on the lubrication system. In the case o fthe splash system used on the cheaper cars, the lower pressure shown on the gauge is no sign of its failing. The bearing supply is fixed by the dipper action in the crankcase and the pump feeds the same amount to the trough at all temperatures, merely working harder when the oil is thick.

In the case of forced feed lubrication, however, low pressure shown on the dial may point to clogging of the system or any one of several other difficulties. The connecting rod bearing supply comes through short grooves in the main bearings, and these are supplied fro mthe crankshaft drillings during only a fractional part of a second in each revolution of the shaft. High pressure therefore is required to get the necessary quantity of oil to the connecting rod bearings in the short time that the holes and drillings come together.

A pressure drop in this system therefore may mean starved main or connecting rod bearings.

In some systems the pressure supply to the drillings is continuous, and in these a lowering of pressure may not be a danger sign, because there is merely a greater flow of thinner oil through the bearings.

• • •

The fact that the oil gets thin is no reason for changing it, neither is the fact that the oil is black. The thinner oil, even diluted with gasoline coming down the cylinder walls, can still be an effective lubricant. The efficiency, however, cannot last as long as a non-diluted thicker oil.

But the blackness of the oil ordinarily is no danger sign. The oil turns black almost immediately after being used, because of oxidation—the result of oxygen from the air mixing with the oil to form a soft black material, some of which settles out n the crankcase, the balance remaining in the oil. An oil filter will collect some of this material and become clogged with it.

The hotter the engine the more quickly does this material collect. There is one serious danger from it—in some engine designs the crankshaft drilings may be clogged by this material in the oil and so prevent lubrication of the bearings.

Chevrolet With Chassis Built In 1913 Is Still Used By Goliad Man

SAN ANTONIO, July 27.—A Chevrolet with a chassis built in 1913, a full year before the World War began, and a motor that was assembled when our doughboys were encamping back in 1917, is still in daily use at Goliad, Texas.

It is called "Spark Plug" by its proud owner, Hugo Wilks, and of the millions of Chevrolets in use today on both hemispheres it is perhaps the oldest.

True, the 1929 Chevrolet with its smooth six cylinder motor can outclimb, out-speed, and out-haul it. True, too, that "Spark Plug" appears a bit antediluvian when contrasted with the handsome new Fisher bodies of the 1929 Chevrolet. But "Spark Plug" can do plenty of climbing, speeding and hauling on its own account and is beyond question an outstanding example of a long-lived and dependable automobile.

On several occasions Wilks has hitched a trailer to "Spark Plug" and pulled a load of 2,000 pounds, plus the 815 pounds which the trailer weighs, all the way to San Antonio, 125 miles distant.

Not long ago he piled it high with a 1315 pound load of cotton bales and drove it through a dry creek bed—a road which no other driver in the section would dare traverse in a modern car. Many times he has driven it with water up to the floor boards.

No hill in the section is too tough for "Spark Plug," and Wilks says that it is sufficiently economical, continuing to give as good as 20 miles to the gallon.

One objection, however, is lodged against it by Wilks and this is a friendly one. It is his complaint against the crowds which his car invariably attracts when he drives it into San Antonio.

"Spark Plug" had many owners—eight, to be exact—before Wilks purchased it from the Voght Chevrolet company of Schulenberg, Texas, 9 years ago. For four years he got splendid service from the 1913 motor which might yet be encased beneath the 1913 hood but for an accident which occured five years ago.

At that time a 1917 Chevrolet, owned by one of Wilks' brothers, caught fire and its chassis was destroyed. The motor was unharmed so it was decided to give "Spark Plug's" original motor a well deserved rest and substitute the newer one.

Ex-Sheriff Charlie A. Holcomb Comes Out With Facts

Prominent Lubbock Man Says Money Couldn't Buy Good Orgatone Has Done Him

"Money could not buy the good Orgatone has done me, and I gladly recommend it for what it has done in my case," said Hon. Charlie A. Holcomb, ex-sheriff of Lubbock County, Texas.

"Mr. Holcomb is unquestionably not only one of the best known, but one of the most popular men that ever held office in Texas. Mr. Holcombs friends persuaded him to make the race for sheriff, to which he was twice elected. He served the people of Lubbock county in this important office four consecutive years. At the expiration of his term Mr. Holcomb returned to private life. He cast his lot among the people of Lubbock, and is now owner of the Ideal Tailors located at 804 Main street and one of the foremost citizens of that place.

"I was in a run-down condition," continued Mr. Holcomb, "and had no appetite at all. I could hardly sleep at night and never felt like getting up in the mornings. I was so tired I had the worst form of indigestion, suffering all the time with gas on my stomach and was continually belching up indigested food. I would sometimes bloat and swell up like I was poisoned, and suffered with nervousness and pain in my stomach of the worst sort, and nothing seemed to help me except in a temporary way. I just can't tell you how I did suffer for the past ten years, and up to the time I began taking Orgatone.

"When I read the testimonials of some who have been relieved of troubles like mine I just felt like I couldn't make a mistake by taking Orgatone and it has done even more for me than I expected. I began to feel better after taking the first few doses, and am just finishing my first bottle and I'm a different man already. I sleep like a log now, and eat just any and everything I want without the slightest discomfort afterward. I am glad to endorse Orgatone, because it does the work, and I'm telling you, I never felt better in my life than I do since taking Orgatone. I am willing for you to publish my statement and if any one wants to talk to me personally about this wonderful medicine they can see me either at my place of business 'Ideal Tailors' 804 Main Street or my residence 504 Avenue M where I will be glad to tell them my experience with this great medicine."

Genuine Orgatone is not a so-called patent or secret remedy but a new scientific bile treatment containing no alcohol or other false stimulating drugs and is sold in Lubbock exclusively by the Bowen's Drug Store who are direct laboratory agents. Adv.

Only Master Artistry Creates Such Beauty

IN THE opinion of leading engineers and hundreds of thousands of enthusiastic owners, the patented Knight double sleeve-valve engine is the simplest and most efficient automobile power plant ever designed.

In each cylinder, two sliding sleeves combine with the dome-shaped cylinder head to form a tightly sealed combustion chamber. This cylinder head directs the full force of the explosion straight downward against the piston, making the most efficient use of the highly compressed gas. The great turbulence of the gases in the spherical chamber causes a faster burning of the fuel and therefore a more effective explosion and extra power. The Willys-Knight engine gives uniform compression at all times, at all speeds and with any gas.

Attorney General's Race In 1930 Promises Hot Field

Nine Candidates Already In Talk For State Office

Cecil Storey, Vernon Man, Only One Announced For Office Thus Far; Many Being Mentioned

By R. W. BARRY
Associated Press Staff Writer

AUSTIN, July 27. (AP)—The governor's office is not the only political preferment to attract Texans, notwithstanding there are already six aspirants for the place and the primaries are a year off.

Cecil Storey of Vernon, member of the legislature for the past eight years, has made public his hope of being elected attorney general to succeed Claude Pollard. This brings into speculation the political plans of Mr. Pollard. It is said he has an ambition to be governor. It is claimed also that he has no desire to seek public office after he lays down the mantle he now wears.

Allred Expected

James V. Allred of Wichita Falls, candidate for the nomination for attorney general in 1926, is almost certain to be in the field in the 1930 primaries. In 1926 he lost to Pollard by a narrow margin. Pollard was renominated in 1928 without opposition.

Galloway Calhoun and Rice M. Tilley, assistant attorneys general, have been petitioned by friends to make the race. They are not "putting out," but it seems certain that one would give way to the other and that they would not oppose each other.

Wirtz May Enter

Senator A. J. Wirtz of Seguin, was reported at one time to be considering the race, but late dope has it he will probably seek to be lieutenant governor. Former Senator J. D. Parnell of Wichita Falls, who was a candidate for lieutenant governor in 1928, is running again. Seator Tom Pollard of Tyler has confided to friends that he is considering putting his hat into the ring. Senator Joe M. Moore of Greenville, in a public statement, put his friends on notice that they should go slow in pledging support to prospective candidates for lieutenant governor, since he is turning the matter over in his own mind and might reach a decision at any time to run.

W. S. Barron of Bryan, Speaker of the House of Representatives, has intimated to friends that he has concluded to spurn political activities after his term expires and devote his time to the practice of law. Mr. Barron has many friends and could probably make a creditable race for almost any office Texas has to offer.

Bobbitt Reported

All of which brings back to the picture young Robert L. Bobbitt of Laredo, former Speaker of the House, and ambitious to serve his state as governor. He is of the Dan Moody type. It is reported that if he does not come into the governor's race he will try for attorney general, with a view to stepping up to the executive office four years later—or two years hence, in event Governor Moody gives in to petitions of friends and offers himself as a third-term candidate.

Another interesting and new piece of gossip: Miss Oveta Culp, parliamentarian for speakers of the House of Representatives during the past two legislatures, will seek a place in the legislature from Houston in 1930. She is practicing law now. She is young with a winning personality. She likes politics. She knows politics. If she gets to the legislature she is certain to make a name for herself; she would be on the road to wider political activities.

Bob Barker of Fort Worth, secretary of the Senate, is being groomed to become a canidate for congressman-at-large as soon as Texas gets its new allotment of two congressmen. The two new members will serve at large until redistricting is effected. Barker knows as many people as any one one in Texas. He has been connected with the politics of the State for many years.

Strange, But Local Automobile Men Advise New Cars For Vacation Trips

Vacation days are here.

For some the summer vacation means a trip to the mountains of Colorado, others chose the seashore with its cool breezes and gathering of visitors from all climes while another class seeks its respite from the daily office routine at the favorite fishing resort.

Vacation seekers of today are motorists and since the motor car plays such an important role in the summer vacation, the performance of "Old Lizzie" or the bright new machine, such as the case may be, has an unmeasurable effect upon the pleasantness of the journey.

The old story of the road-weary traveler, waiting along the dusty road for the wrecking crew from the nearest hamlet, or laboring over a flat tire in mid-summer, has been used time after time by the cartoonist, drawing in caricature the average American vacationist during the period of his so-called rest.

Foreign critics have pointed out that the American motorist, who drives overland to the scene of his vacation, usually returns from the trip more exhausted than when he started. He is constantly harassed by insects, deprived of luxuries in his primitive camp and worried beyond recovery over continual ailings of his motor car.

Strong Talking Point.

The disadvantage of such a strenuous vacation have been used as strong talking points for the railroads and the bus lines which run to the well-known resorts, and the result has been decided increase in professional transportation during the summer months. To combat this inroad upon the once-popular practice of auto-vacationing, automobile manufacturers and dealers have waged campaigns to show the advantages of the vacation by motor car, providing the machine is fit for the trip.

Lubbock automobile dealers have reaped results from this recent campaign. Within the last few weeks, numerous new cars have been delivered on the eve of trips to the mountains, seashore, national parks, etc. Motorists hav learned that a vacation cannot be enjoyed with a car that is constantly giving trouble.

New Machines FAVORITE

When a family starts on its trip to their favorite resort in a shining new machine, they are assured of sure and comfortable transportation wth none of the worries that come to the owner of an ancient hack, who is deprived of the scenic effects along the road by an ill-acting automobile. Such a condition causes the motorist to forget that he is on his vacation and wonder why he ever attempted to make a trip in the old bus.

Pride of ownership likewise is a factor which influences the tripper to invest in a new car before starting his vacation. The majority of human beings, regardless of their wealth, are chucked full of personal pride for their possessions. To drive a new machine into a strange city causes the owner to sit up in his seat a little higher and drive a little slower through the main section of town. He wants the natives to know that an important personage has favored this particular town with a visit. Back home he may be just Bill Jones, the filling station flunky.

Yes, strange as it may seem, and believe it or not, automobile distributors in Lubbock speak in convincing terms concerning the advisability of traveling by motor car, and especially new motor cars. And we must agree, that the new machine will take you there and bring you back, as the old saying goes. The solution to your vacation problems is a simple matter, according to local automobile agents. Just start out with a new car and the success of your trip is assured.

Sunday Presents Problem For City

Survey Shows Varied Tastes As To Amusement And Rest Preferences For Sunday Night In Lubbock

By LUCILLE BARR SMITH
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Well folks here it is Sunday again and we are all wondering what in the world we are going to do to pass the evening. All through the week we count the days until Sunday and when that day finally rolls around we hunt in vain for something to do.

"If folks that have lived here for some time and know all the nooks and corners wonder what to do, what about the poor traveling man or tourist who is forced to spend a Sunday here.

Spent Three Weeks

A traveling man made this remark one day after spending Sunday here, "I spent three weeks in Lubbock last Sunday."

He didn't suffer so much at that, some of us have spent a lifetime here in the last year or two.

Counting Ne wHouses

After working hard all week it is nice to ride around over the city and count the number of houses that have been built during the week. But most of the streets are dark and we can't see whether a house is new or old so we just ride up and down the main drag, which consists of Main and Broadway, College Avenue, Nineteenth Street and Sixteenth Street, and from the number of Sunday nights that we have spent doing this it is a wonder the pavement isn't worn out by now.

Once in awhile we fix some sandwiches and pick up the scraps of chicken left from Sunday dinner and hunt for a shady spot to eat our supper. After driving for an hour or so hunting a spot we think may be just a little better than the last one we take, all the time we can in eating our lunch because we just haven't anything else to do. Just as soon as we have eaten we leave because who wants to sit on a pile of rocks ad grassburrs.

Need "Some Place To Go"

The young folks make the drag a few times and then park the flivver on a country road and relate all the gossip they have heard during the week. But even they long for "some place to go." After dancing and playing bridge all week they don't want to do that so the problem is "What in the world to do on Sunday night in Lubbock without going stark staring mad?"

An Englishman who once visited America once said, "After careful observation I have come to the conclusion that all of the automobiles parked along the highways have not run out of gasoline."

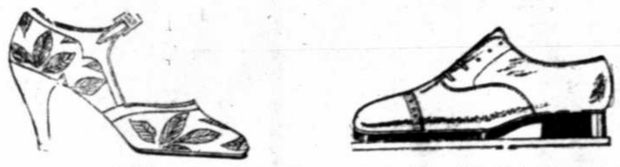

How in the world did he ever come to that conclusion? We have known for a long time that they carried people who were trying to decide how to spend an enjoyable Sunday evening.

An out-of-town visitor said that more Lubbock people went to church on Sunday than in any town he knew of. Wonder if nobody told him the reason for that? Perhaps one of these out-of-town visitors can tell us how people in other places spend their Sunday evening and maybe he wouldn't think us such a church-going place.

Now please don't misunderstand. A regular church attendance is about the best thing that anyone can get in the habit of doing but being by nature highly curious we would just like to know what other people do to pass their Sunday evenings.
