A. Wayne Maddox, 88

MIAMI, Texas — A. Wayne Maddox, 88, of Miami, died Tuesday, May 31, 2005, at Amarillo, Texas.

Services will be at 1 p.m. Monday, June 6, 2005, at the First Baptist Church of Miami with the Rev. Lance Wood, pastor, and Dr. Larry Heard, director of missions with the Top O' Texas Baptist Association, officiating.

Burial will be in Miami Cemetery under the direction of Carmichael-Whitley Funeral Directors of Pampa.

Mr. Maddox was born Sept. 30, 1916, to Lawrence Allen and Hazel King Maddox on a ranch west of Miami. He graduated from Miami High School in 1936 and from Texas A&M University in 1941. Wayne loved and supported A&M the rest of his life, seeing 21 family members attend the school.

After graduation from A&M, he became the Assistant County Agent for Gray County and later the County Agriculture Agent for Moore County.

It was while he was working in Moore County that he met and married Benonia Jeff Oxford on June 8, 1943, in Dumas. They were married for 62 years. Soon after their marriage, they moved to Miami and established a home on a ranch west of town, which later became known as the Maddox

Hereford Ranch.

Wayne raised and showed registered Hereford cattle throughout the United States. He was president of the Texas Hereford Breeders Association and for many years was active in the cattle division of the Amarillo Tri-State Fair and the Amarillo Live Stock Show.

Wayne's early religious training began with his parents and brothers in a small country church called Salem. In 1937, he and his family joined the First Baptist Church in Miami where he was active in Sunday School, worship service, and where he served as a deacon for many years.

Wayne was a godly man and a wonderful husband and father who will be sorely missed. He was actively involved in the Texas Baptist Men, leading many lay renewal meetings and serving as a director for many years. He was also active in the Gideon's International, speaking in many churches and distributing Bibles in schools, hospitals and nursing homes.

Wayne was affiliated with the Panhandle-Plains Federal Land Bank for many years, beginning in the mid-1950s. He served as a director of the official board for 30 years. He and Mrs. Maddox moved to Amarillo in 2003 to make their home in the Continental Retirement Center at 1300 S.

Jackson Street. At this stage in life, he did not expect to make many new friends, but was happy and blessed to gain an entire new family and friends in the residents and staff at the Continental.

He was preceded in death by his parents; three brothers, Bruce, L.A., and Raymond; and a son-in-law, James Quast.

Survivors include his wife, Benonia Maddox, of the home; one son, Russell Maddox and wife Dana of North Richland Hills; three daughters, Kay Quast of Comanche, Cheryl Evans and husband Steve of Lakewood, Colo., and Laurel Fort and husband David of Abidjan, Ivory Coast in West Africa; 10 grandchildren; two great-grandchildren; two sisters-in-law, Bernice Maddox of Pampa and Deene Maddox of Amarillo; three nieces; and five nephews.

The family requests memorials be to The Gideon's International, Pampa Camp, P.O. Box 2222, Pampa, TX 79066-2222; or The International Mission Board, P.O. Box 6767, Richmond, VA 23230-0767.

The family will be at The Continental, 1300 S. Jackson St., Amarillo, TX 79101. The family will receive friends at Carmichael-Whitley Funeral Home in Pampa from 5-7 p.m. today, Sunday, June 5, 2005.

Lillie Mae Pruitt

May 2, 1912 - May 14, 2005

Lillie Mae Pruitt, age 93, passed away on May 14, 2005, in Pittsburg, Pa., after visiting Washington, D.C., and traveling in Pennsylvania with her sister Viola Bennett, Jo Stribling, and daughter Janie Hathoot. The group was exploring the genealogy of Lillie's grandparents. At her side was Janie Hathoot, her daughter, and grandsons Michael Matthews and Patrick Matthews.

Lillie was born in Laredo, Texas. She later moved with her parents John and Louisa Lawrence to San Antonio, Texas, where she met Gordon B. Pruitt who became her husband. She and Gordon later moved to Texarkana, Texas, and then to Millwood Lake, Ark., after Gordon retired. Lillie lived on Millwood Lake until Gordon's death and then move to Canadian, Texas.

She loved Canadian, enjoying friends and her many art projects. Making gifts for her friends was very important to her, sharing came first in her life. She was so excited to have won first place at Christmas for decorating her house. She moved to Canadian to be close to her daughter Janie where she became part of the community right away.

Lillie was a devoted mother and grandmother who was a friend to many. She always opened her door to share her many arts and crafts projects with others. Lillie always woke in the mornings with a smile and greeted each day with life and vigor. Lillie has three sisters: Jo Stribling, Viola Bennett, and Alice Mann all of San Antonio, Texas, and one brother John Lawrence also of San Antonio who is deceased.

She is survived by her daughter Janie Hathoot and her grandsons Patrick Matthews and Michael Matthews. Memorial services were held at 11 a.m. Saturday June 4, 2005, at St. Matthews Episcopal Church in Pampa, Texas, with the Rev. Jake Clemmons officiating.

Instead of flowers, the family asks for a donation to be sent to St. Matthews Church of Pampa, Texas.

Bricks

Durango SLT 4x4.

One feature repeated from last year is that all the events on Saturday and Sunday are free to spectators.

A "Burnin' the Bricks" burn-out contest will begin at 10 a.m., Saturday, at 100 West Randy Matson. The event is sponsored by the Pampa Peace Officers Association. A $10 entry fee will be charged.

Free gun locks from Operation ChildSafe will be given out during the burn-out contest, said Pampa Police Officer Casey Ingersoll. Last year's burn-out had 55 entrants.

A cruise night followed by a sock hop and street dance will begin at 6 p.m., Saturday. "Cruisin' the Bricks" entrants will drive the Cuyler Street Drag from 6 to 9 p.m. in a controlled cruise.

All entries in the cruise must be street legal, with closed headers and liability insurance. Entry fee is $10. Registration is from 1 to 4 p.m. at 106 S. Cuyler.

The High Plains Cruisers, a local group of car enthusiasts, and 99.3 KEFH radio station are sponsors of the cruise. KEFH will broadcast live from the drag during the cruise.

Food vendors are expected to be at the cruise, said Diana Bruner, a member of the High Plains Cruisers and an organizer of the events. Last year's cruise drew 135 entrants.

"We hope people will come out to the drag and watch the cars," she said.

Proceeds from the cruise will fund a local auto technician scholarship.

A trip for two to Florida, including airfare and lodging, will be awarded to the two best cruisers at the end of the cruise event.

"It's not for the flashiest or most expensive car. It's for who is having the most fun at the cruise," said Bruner.

The sock hop and street dance will begin after the cruise ends at 9 p.m., Saturday. Veterans of Foreign Wars Post 1657 is sponsoring the dance, which will be held at 106 S. Cuyler.

The sock hop/street dance is free. Prizes will be awarded for best costume and best dancing. Music will be provided by KEFH radio station.

A craft show will be open Saturday and Sunday at Recreation Park, along with the swap meet. A car show, sponsored by High Plains Cruisers, will be held Sunday at the park.

Registration for the car show will be from 9 to 10 a.m. The show and judging will be from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. Awards and trophies will be announced at 2 p.m. First and second place in each class will be recognized.

An entry fee of $15 will be charged for vehicles to be included in the show. Last year's show had 127 entries.

A 350 Chevy motor will be given away between 1:30 and 2 p.m. at the car show. Anyone entering any car event during the weekend's activities is eligible to win the motor.

Goodie bags will be given to the first 100 entrants in the car show and cruise.

A mud bog will begin at 10 a.m. Sunday at Recreation Park. Registration and tech checks will begin at 7 a.m., and a $20 entry fee will be charged.

Trophies for first and second place in each of nine classes of vehicles entered in the mud bog will be awarded.

The mud bog is sponsored by High Plains Off Road. Pre-registration for the event ended May 29, with 89 vehicles and 101 contestants pre-registered, said Shane "Catfish" Kennedy of High Plains Off Road.

The number of contestants is more than the number of vehicles because more

Pampa parks could be a hunter's paradise

My dog Daisy and I had quite an adventure this week.

Daisy is our 3-year-old black Labrador retriever. She adopted us three years ago this month. At about six weeks old, she had been abandoned in the back yard of a rent house near us. We heard a puppy crying for about a week, but thought it was just having a hard time adjusting to life away from its mother.

Then one day, Vic heard some animal rooting around in the cat food sack stored in our garage. He thought it might be a feral cat, a rat or maybe a skunk. When he investigated, he found a skinny black puppy gobbling the kitty kibbles.

After she finished eating, I scooped her up and went around the neighborhood to see if I could find out who she belonged to. Eventually, some neighbor kids told me the puppy had been left in the back yard of a house near us when the renters left.

I brought her back home and told Vic what had happened.

When our dog Caesar died, Vic said no more pets. He wanted to travel more and he didn't want to have to worry about animals left at home. We still had Tiffany, our 20-year-old cat. We knew she wouldn't live much longer. So when she died, we were going to be pet-less.

Now, here was this little homeless puppy.

"We're not going to keep her," Vic said sternly as he placed her in the backyard, made sure she had food and water and that she understood she could go in the "cat house," for shelter. He petted her and talked to her and started teaching her commands.

"We're not going to keep her," he repeated.

I'll put an ad in the paper, I said.

I still haven't put an ad in the paper. He still says we're not going to keep her as he pounds on her sides and she wriggles around trying to lick his hands.

Anyway, this dog we weren't going to keep and I were busy cleaning the seats of a 1962 Thunderbird Monday. We're trying to get the car ready to drive in the "Burnin' the Bricks" Cruise in a couple of weeks. I was getting tired of scrubbing, so it seemed like a good time to give Daisy a break from sleeping on the concrete beside me.

We wandered over to the park behind Vic's shop. I walked around, admiring the grass and the trees. Daisy stopped in her tracks, staring at the base of a large pine tree surrounded by bushes.

She's found a squirrel, I thought.

She wouldn't move. She looked like a drug dog "alerting" on a hidden package of marijuana. I moved around to the other side of the tree, but I couldn't see anything.

Then she darted to another ring of bushes and froze again.

Fascinated, I watched her every sense concentrate on this invisible source of attraction.

Without warning, she struck like a black cobra right into the bushes. She jumped out with a gray curled-up creature in her mouth. It had a long hairless tail like a rat.

"Drop, Daisy!" I commanded. Instantly, she let go of the animal and obediently laid down beside my feet, still watching.

The poor rodent was curled up, mouth open, tongue hanging out, eyes staring. It was a possum — a dead possum. No, not dead. I saw it's nose twitch and an eye barely move.

Right here in the middle of town! A Pampa possum playing possum.

Daisy's still prancing

Today in History

By The Associated Press

Today is Sunday, June 5, the 156th day of 2005. There are 209 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

One year ago, on June 5, 2004, Ronald Wilson Reagan, the 40th president of the United States, died in Los Angeles at age 93 after a long twilight struggle with Alzheimer's disease.

On this date:

In 1783, Joseph and Jacques Montgolfier publicly demonstrated their hot-air balloon in a ten-minute flight over Annonay, France.

In 1794, Congress passed the Neutrality Act, which prohibited Americans from enlisting in the service of a foreign power.

In 1917, about 10 million American men began registering for the draft in World War One.

In 1933, the United States went off the gold standard.

In 1940, the Battle of France began during World War II.

In 1947, Secretary of State George C. Marshall gave a speech at Harvard University in which he outlined an aid program for Europe that came to be known as The Marshall Plan.

In 1967, war erupted in the Mideast as Israel raided Egyptian military targets. Syria, Jordan and Iraq entered the conflict.

In 1968, Sen. Robert F. Kennedy was assassinated after claiming victory in California's Democratic presidential primary. Gunman Sirhan Bishara Sirhan was immediately arrested.

In 1975, Egypt reopened the Suez Canal to international shipping, eight years after it was closed because of the 1967 war with Israel.

In 1981, the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention reported that five homosexuals in Los Angeles had come down with a rare kind of pneumonia; they were the first recognized cases of what later became known as AIDS.

Ten years ago: Allison, a minimal hurricane, buffeted the Gulf Coast with 75 mph winds, swamping streets and spinning off tornadoes but causing no major damage.

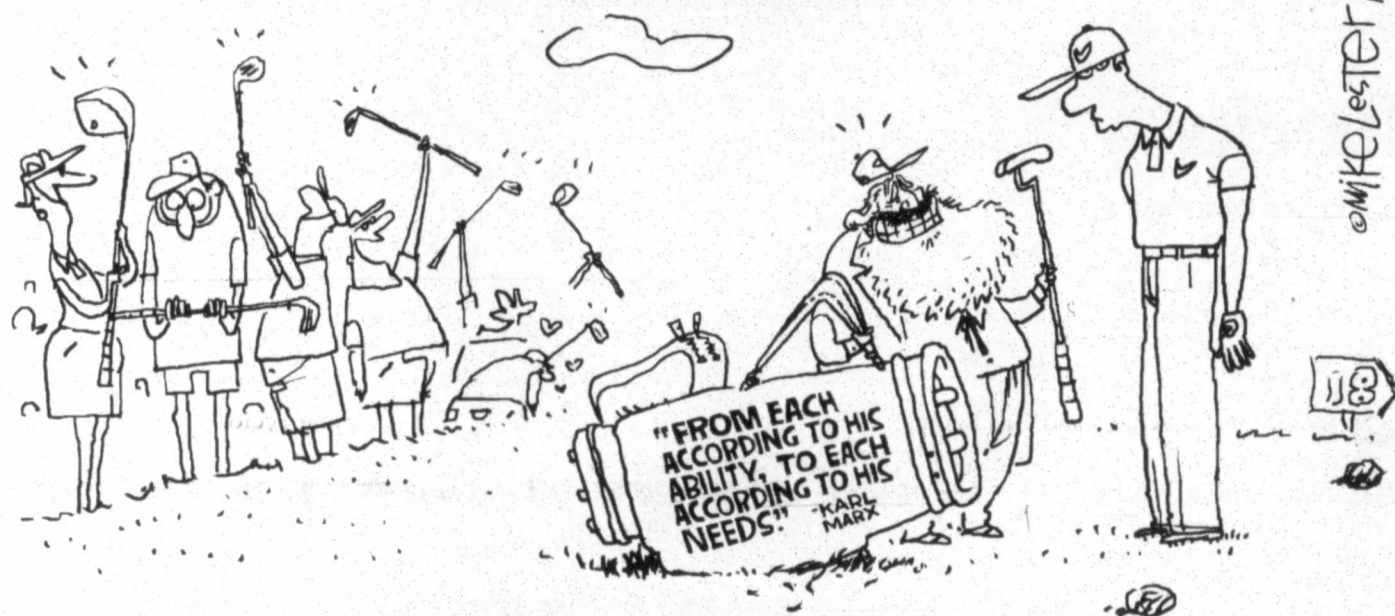

Five years ago: President Clinton visited the former Soviet republic of Ukraine, the last stop in his weeklong European tour, where he dispensed $80 million in American aid to help entomb the Chernobyl nuclear power plant, scene of the world's worst nuclear accident.

'Whatever else history may say about me when I'm gone, I hope it will record that I appealed to your best hopes, not your worst fears; to your confidence rather than your doubts.'

40th president of the United States

Would Ripley believe this or not?

I'm glad that Dr. Robert Leroy Ripley, colorful athlete/author/cartoonist/adventurer, dived right into whatever piqued his interest. Plus, he gave Americans wide berth on matters of credulity; quite simply, we could believe him — or not.*

This fascinating man, born 115 years ago in California, was destined for renown. He would have shaken his head in disbelief if the following account had come to him second or third-hand, hard-pressed to include it in the "believe it" column.

the cheerleaders. The year was 1938.

Let's back up. Backdrop for the most recent telling of this story was a s Abilene, Texas, where some 100 area superintendents and school board members gathered a few nights ago for a workshop and dinner. (Hallway conversations included "you ain't gonna believe this" stories about the school year.) Long before dinner, Jewell arrived. She rolled in via wheelchair, then "rolled on" with rollicking teacher stories. (She was a teacher/administrator for some 40 years and later was state president of both Texas classroom teachers and Texas retired teachers. Down in her back but up in "true grit," her vitality and spirit remain strong. Now, she's a member of the board of the Education Service Center Region XIV.)

Before speaking, I asked Jewell about her most memorable moment. There was a quick and detailed response. "It was during my first

Don't limit women's role in combat

Congress turns down statutory limits on women's role in combat zones. It was a fitting gesture before a holiday honoring all who died for their country.

The impulse to march into harm's way for one's country is complex, even mysterious. Sometimes there's no puzzle at all: When America imposed the draft, thousands of soldiers had no say about risking their lives, though many accepted that duty without complaint. Other servicemen and women have been propelled by economic winds: The odds of being injured or killed in action seem shorter than the chance of enduring poverty at home.

Still others see service as pure opportunity: The U.S. military is justly renowned for offering ambitious soldiers the chance for education, respect and advancement. Finally, in today's volunteer armed forces, another motive is also at work: the drive to defend one's country and its interests and ideals at whatever cost.

Many soldiers in Afghanistan and Iraq likely joined up with some mix of all these motives. But once there, U.S. troops with few exceptions have served with honor. Fighters in the Information Age, these soldiers knew full well the dissension at home before the invasion of Iraq; once on the ground, they have faced a nightmare of inadequate equipment, unforeseen insurgents and resentment from many of the people they believed would welcome them. In the face of all this, our soldiers' professionalism provides a powerful tribute to America's best side.

The more than 1,700 soldiers who have been killed in Afghanistan and Iraq are a grave loss to the country. Americans' observance of Memorial Day declined during the last century, but during wartime the holiday is an urgent reminder to acknowledge how much has been offered and lost by each soldier who has died on behalf of civilians at home.

month of teaching. I was at the football field with the cheerleaders after school," she recalled. "I looked up and saw Mr. Thomas running toward us."

"Miss Jewell, you've got to help me," he begged. "Ten couples confessed to playing hooky yesterday. I gave each of the boys 10 spats, and I want you to give the same number of spats to the girls. This is the fair and proper way to do it."

"Oh, I can't — I don't know how," Jewell responded. "I've never been paddled and never even touched one. In fact, I've never seen one up close, and they never spoke of such things in my education classes." She grew animated, re-living the moment.

The superintendent, expecting such a response, said, "You've got no problem, Jewell; I'll show you how." Then they went to his office.

"He handed me the paddle, flipped up his coattail and bent over the desk," she recalled, rubbing her hands together like she'd just won the lottery. One thing she had learned in college was to do whatever superintendents order.

With her mightiest home run swing, she applied the "board of education." She figures that his seersucker suit didn't offer much padding.

'I've never been paddled and never even touched one. In fact, I've never even seen one up close ...'

retired teacher

"Now swat me again, this time not quite as hard," Mr. Thomas ordered, so she took quite a bit off the next swing. "His secretary standing nearby said she didn't even feel the breeze of the paddle that time," Mrs. Harris smiled. "And there was no audible 'whoosh.'"

"You're a quick study, Miss Jewell," he stammered. "Now this time, try to find the happy medium between those first two swings." So she did.

On-the-job training accomplished, Jewell was ready for her assignment. Mr. Thomas left the office, and the girls were ushered in, one at a time. Each got 10 middle-of-the-road spats.

Mr. Thomas stayed on for several more years in the same role at the same school until retirement. Jewell went on up the road pretty soon — ready for whatever came next — feeling a bit like Phoebe Ann Oakley Mozee. Okay, Annie Oakley.

The number of registered vehicles for this year's mud bog already exceeds last year's total of 78 entrants, Kennedy said.

Thirty-three vehicles are pre-registered in the car show and cruise, making up 56 entries, Bruner said. There are more entries than vehicles because some vehicles are entered in more than one event, she said.

Some entrants are coming from as far away as Shattuck, Okla., Fort Worth, and Mountain Home, Idaho, she said.

"One guy from Clarendon called and wanted to know about motels, because he wanted to spend the night here," Bruner said.

Food vendors will be set up at Recreation Park for the weekend's events, Bruner said. All food vendors at the park will be non-profit groups benefiting youth, including the Boy Scouts and Girl Scouts.

cessfully against a proposed law restricting the role of women in combat zones.

They did the right thing. The measure would have codified an existing policy banning women from ground combat units, even in supporting roles below brigade level. The law would have disrupted the war effort in Iraq and denied recognition of the dangerous duty performed by every female soldier in a war that has no rear sector.

Cementing the restrictions on women would set an evolving debate in precisely the wrong place. So does the military's ban on gays, which has now led to the discharge of 10,000 able soldiers including more than 300 badly needed language specialists.

It took more than a century after emancipation to give black Americans the right to defend this country in every capacity. Racial integration enriched the military immeasurably and paved the way for civil rights for all Americans.

Memorial Day offers Americans the chance to commemorate the soldiers we have lost. We can honor them by ensuring every brave, committed American the right to serve, too.

Researcher studies how bone density affects health

COLLEGE STATION — In April the crew of the International Space Station finished its six-month rotation. According to CBS

News, the returning space travelers will have about a month's worth of "intense physical therapy" in order to readjust to gravity.

(<http://www.cbsnews.com/stories/2005/04/25/tech/main690582.shtml>)

But that's not all they will have to face, said Dr. Susan A. Bloomfield, associate professor with the department of health and kinesiology at Texas A&M University.

The returning fliers will also face a surprising amount of bone loss brought about by long-term space flight.

Even for non-space travelers, loss of bone density — or osteoporosis — can cause severe problems, particularly as people age, she said. Older women especially are subject to this kind of loss, which can lead to fractures that are sometimes life threatening.

"Fracture risk roughly doubles with each decade of aging after 30, and small changes in bone density further increase this risk," Bloomfield said.

"Post-menopausal women can lose 2 percent of their bone density each year, and it's a problem," she said. "In astronauts, the loss occurs about tenfold faster."

This occurs in spite of the fact that astronauts tend to be younger and physically fit.

Bloomfield and her co-researchers have been working through the National Space Biomedical Research Institute to determine ways to prevent or reverse bone loss due to space flight. Currently she is co-leader of the institute's research team working with bone loss.

"We are not physicists; we are not engineers," she said.

"We are basically physiologists and (experts in) related fields studying various biological changes in the human body related to prolonged time in space."

Texas A&M was one of seven founding agencies of the NASA-funded National Space Biomedical Research Institute.

"It's an independent agency devoted to human biomedical problems related to space flight," she explained.

"My area of research is to look at how the body responds to exercise," Bloomfield said. "Lack of exercise is the other side of that coin. I did my dissertation on people with spinal cord injuries."

Researchers have known for years that tissue — both muscle and bone — is lost through lack of use, and that muscle and bone use is connected, she said. "If you gain muscle, you gain bone, and vice versa."

Regular exercise is an important part of a healthful lifestyle on Earth, and becomes more important as the pull of gravity lessens, she said.

"Thus far, NASA has tested vigorous exercise to slow down bone density loss," Bloomfield said. "They have also considered a trial with osteoporosis drugs, but that hasn't been tried yet."

But exercise alone doesn't seem to be enough, she said. Even though astronauts have a program of regular exercise while in space, those on the International Space Station, who can be in space as long as six months, still show a loss of bone density when they return.

"Exercise is usually effective for maintaining muscular fitness and aerobic fitness, but not for bone loss," Bloomfield said.

"Our whole focus is on countermeasures — some treatment that will counter or prevent changes that might increase their health risk or prevent successful completion of their mission," she said.

In order to study these possible countermeasures, researchers have two options, Bloomfield said: Study people on strict bed rest for several weeks or use animal models.

"Bone is slow tissue," she said. "It has a slow turnover rate; the replacement of old tissue takes a long time."

What researchers "have learned is gravity is very important for bone response to exercise," she said. "Exercise in space is different from exercise on Earth and that resistance (provided by gravity) is what bone needs to maintain its mass."

These efforts into slowing down bone loss in space will one day have an impact in slowing down osteoporosis on Earth, she said.

In the meantime, Bloomfield offered some suggestions for maintaining bone health even for non-space travelers.

First, be sure to get adequate dietary calcium and vitamin D each day, she said. For post-menopausal women, that's 1200 milligrams per day or about five cups of milk. If that much milk sounds daunting, Bloomfield recommended calcium tablets to supplement dietary calcium.

Then, stay active, she said. "Move — get some moderately rigorous exercise several times every week and walk or climb stairs every day."

And pass the message on to the younger generation. Make sure children and grandchildren have enough calcium and vitamin D in their daily diets and get plenty of physical activity.

"To prevent osteoporosis 50 or 60 years from now, exercise seems to be the most effective in kids around the age of puberty," Bloomfield said.

"And for anyone who is at risk for developing osteoporosis — for example, due to your family history or if you're lactose intolerant — insist on a bone marrow density scan" during a regular medical exam, she said. If the diagnosis is low bone density, "you need to ask your doctor about medication to prevent further (bone) loss."

Scientists demonstrate 'trust in a bottle'

(AP) — Trust in a bottle? It sounds like a marketer's fantasy, like the fabled fountain of youth or the wild claims of fad diets.

Yet that's what Swiss and American scientists demonstrate in new experiments with a nasal spray containing the hormone oxytocin. After a few squirts, human subjects were significantly more trusting and willing to invest money with no ironclad promise of a profit.

The researchers acknowledged their findings could be abused by con artists or even sleazy politicians who might sway an election, provided they could squirt enough voters on their way to the polls.

"Of course, this finding could be misused," said Ernst Fehr of the University of Zurich, the senior researcher in the study, which appears in Thursday's issue of the journal Nature. "I don't think we currently have such abuses. However, in the future it could happen."

Other scientists say the new research raises important questions about oxytocin's potential as a therapy for conditions like autism or social phobias, in which trust is diminished. Or, perhaps the hormone's activity could be reduced to treat more rare diseases, like Williams' Syndrome, in which children have no inhibitions and approach strangers fearlessly.

"Might their high level of trust be due to excessive oxytocin release?" asks University of Iowa neurologist Antonio Damasio, who reviewed the experiments for Nature. "Little is known about the neurobiology of trust, although the phenomenon is beginning to attract attention."

Oxytocin is secreted in brain tissues and synthesized by the hypothalamus. This small, but crucial feature located deep in the brain controls biological reactions like hunger, thirst and body temperature, as well as visceral fight-or-flight reactions associated with powerful, basic emotions like fear and anger.

For years oxytocin was considered to be a straightforward reproductive hormone found in both sexes. In both humans and animals, this chemical messenger stimulates uterine contractions in labor and induces milk production. In both women and men, oxytocin is released during sex, too.

FOOT FACTS BY BROWNS SHOE FIT CO.

MORE TO SHOE FITTING?... Along with correct shoe length, width, and heel fit, a professional shoe fitter must also check the fit under the arch. The upper leather should fit snugly under the arch. If the shoe wrinkles here, a shoe with a different "last" is needed or a different size shoe. If there is gaping on the outer side of the instep, this also requires a different last. A gap at this point usually indicates flat feet or a degree of pronation - some type of foot correction may be needed. Still another check is to observe for proper vamp crease. When the customer walks in the shoe, the forepart of the shoe should show two parallel creases across this part of the foot. If the vamp crease is too far forward to the toe region, the person may suffer from vamp bite, with resulting blisters. If the crease is not parallel, the shoe is either too long or too wide. It is obvious that proper shoe fit requires the conscientious help of an experienced shoe fitter.

Now what do I do coach?

◀ 5-year-old Tyler McCarn takes a mighty swing during a Thursday afternoon T-ball game at the Pampa Optimist Park. After a couple of stalwart swings, the young boy-of-summer sent a shot to the infield that was relayed to first base. However, McCarn beat the throw.

▶ After reaching first base, McCarn appears to turn to his coach for instruction as to what to do next.

Royals continue winning ways

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — As the victories pile up, it's getting tougher and tougher for Buddy Bell to deflect the credit away from himself and toward his team.

Matt Stairs homered, Ruelvys Hernandez pitched six solid innings and the lowly Kansas City Royals beat Texas 2-1 Friday night for their first four-game winning streak in 21 months.

All four have come under Bell, who was named manager on Tuesday just a few hours before the Royals launched this surge with the first win in a stunning three-game sweep of the New York Yankees.

"To be honest with you, I really haven't done a whole lot," said Bell, who was bench coach at Cleveland before taking over the team with the worst record in the majors.

"I enjoy being here. Maybe they like the smile on my face every once in a while."

Bell joined Whitey Herzog as the only Royals skippers to win their first four games. Herzog did it after taking over midway through 1975, the year before the team began a prosperous 10-season run that included six division titles and the 1985 World Series championship.

"I felt like this team was due for something like this to happen," said catcher John Buck, whose soft flare to left drove in the go-ahead run in the seventh.

"Buddy coming in here just completed that. Whether he gave us a final little nudge, someone coming from outside, seeing what's going on in the clubhouse and saying, 'You know what — you guys aren't that bad off. You ain't that far off.'

"Maybe that was what we needed to get us over the hump."

Rookie left-hander Andrew Sisco (1-1) got his first major league win with 1 1-3 innings of relief. Mike MacDougal, whom Bell selected as his closer, pitched the ninth for his fifth save in seven opportunities.

Pedro Astacio (2-6) was almost as sharp, going seven innings and allowing only two runs on seven hits.

But against the high-scoring Yankees and Rangers, the Royals have given up only seven runs during the streak.

"Good pitching got good hitting tonight," Texas DH David Dellucci said. "Pedro threw great. Their pitcher pitched his game plan and stuck with what he's been doing of late."

With the potential tying run at second, Emil Brown made a great shoestring catch for the last out in the ninth. A week ago when the Royals were losing 37 of their first 50 games, that ball would probably have rolled all the way to the wall.

"They made some good plays," said Buck Showalter, whose team swept the Royals last week but became the last club in the majors to lose three straight.

"Astacio was outstanding again," Showalter said. "We just didn't do much offensively. They pitched real well out of their bullpen, especially Sisco. He's having a heck of a year for them."

'I enjoy being here. Maybe they like the smile on my face every once in a while.'

Senior Olympics focuses on healthy aging, competition

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Samuel B. Pate is proof that it's never too late to get active.

The 103-year-old Bryan, Texas, resident had never visited a bowling alley before his 80th birthday, but once he did, he was hooked. Even though he's had to switch to a lighter ball over the years, there's not much that will keep Pate (whose best game is a 230) from the lanes.

Pate's love of bowling has not only kept him fit but has encouraged his four living children, 10 grandchildren, 11 great-grandchildren and three great-great-grandchildren to stay in shape, said his daughter, Martha Ray Jones, who accompanied her father to Pittsburgh so he could participate in The 2005 Summer National Senior Games — The Senior Olympics.

Pate's contagious energy was great news for the organizers of the two-week event that is expected to bring to the Pittsburgh area more than 10,000 athletes ranging in age from 50 to more than 100 years old. The Senior Olympics not only gives athletes a chance to compete in 18 different sports, but it also promotes healthy lifestyles for older adults.

Bill Bankhead, the head of the National Senior Games Association, says he believes younger adults, teenagers and children will be more likely to participate in athletics if they see their parents or grandparents taking home the gold in tennis or improving their time in the 200-yard breaststroke.

"We hope that the younger people are looking at the senior Olympians as role models," Bankhead said. "We certainly look at that as a goal. We would like for younger generations to understand that they don't have to sit at home on the couch and be a couch potato."

Forget about any stereotypes the words "Senior Olympics" might conjure up. Many of the summer games' participants have been serious athletes all their lives and others became dedicated competitors despite a late start in life, said Kent Biggerstaff, the director of competition and venues for the games' Pittsburgh Local Organizing Committee.

"A lot of people think, 'Ah, that's grandma and grandpa doing it.' But grandma and grandpa can kick a lot of their butts in certain sports," Biggerstaff said.

Seniors

Some of the athletes have overcome serious health problems such as cancer, heart attacks and orthopedic surgeries and began to participate in their current sport as part of their rehabilitation.

Russell Hall, a 62-year-old athlete from New Castle, was a competitive runner for 30 years, completing nine marathons, breaking a 24-hour relay record and participating in races around the world.

All that came to a halt when he underwent knee surgery more than a year ago. But Hall, who said he has never known a time when he hasn't been active, immediately took up race walking. He'll compete in the 1,500-meter race walk during the summer games and hopes to improve the 8-minute, 50-second time he clocked during state competitions last year.

Senior Olympians have faced stiffer competition since the senior games started 18 years ago with an event in St. Louis, Mo. About 2,500 athletes participated back then, but organizers predict that 12,000 will take part in the 2007 games to be held in Louisville, Ky.

It's no wonder that the games have become more popular, considering that there are about 77 million adults over the age of 50 in the United States, Bankhead said.

Old Mobeetie to be site of upcoming 'Old Town Hoedown'

MOBEETIE — Hitch your wagons and head to the Old Mobeetie Jail Museum June 25 for a traditional "Old Town Hoedown."

The hoedown, set under the shade trees on the museum grounds, will kick-off at 4 p.m. and last throughout the evening. A book signing and tours of the museum will set the evening in motion. Festivities will include country music, cowboy poetry, tales of the "old days," and a chuckwagon dinner.

Delbert Trew will serve as emcee, take part in the book signing and share tales of early days in the Texas Panhandle. Sarah Gill-Northcutt will present self-penned verses of Cowboy Poetry and Jimmy Northcutt, in full Calvary attire, will reenact episodes from the late 1800s.

The chuckwagon dinner will be served by Keven Romines. The meal will consist of chicken fried steak, hand-peeled mashed potatoes, homemade biscuits, gravy and fruit cobbler for dessert.

Prairie Heirs will entertain after dinner with sounds from the days of Gene Autry and Roy Rogers. A dance floor will be provided for couples who like to swing.

According to a press release from Old Mobeetie Texas Association, Old Mobeetie, once the judicial district for 26 counties in the Texas Panhandle, was the destination of many who traveled from far and wide to purchase supplies, attend dances at Fort Elliott, visit the horse races, and/or witness the events of court week.

The hoedown will celebrate the rich history of this early Panhandle community.

The chuckwagon meal will cost $12.50 for adults and $6 for children between the ages of 5 and 11. Children 4 and under will eat free. No alcohol or drugs will be allowed and all pets will be required to be kept on a leash.

For more information, call (806) 845-2028, log onto www.mobeetie.com or e-mail omjm@pan-tex.net.

I wish I would have really tried hard my freshman and sophomore years. That way I might have moved up higher within the top 10 percent of my class.

I regret that I wasn't as social as I should have been.

Dear Abby...

By Pauline & Jeanne Phillips

DEAR ABBY: My wife of eight years, "Pearl," died four months ago. She had complications with her diabetes and was retaining fluid. She died of a heart attack.

Pearl made me promise that if I survived her and found someone special I would go on with my life. Well, I have found that special person. I have been dating a wonderful woman, "Iris." We're now engaged to be married. We're both ready and willing to do this. My problem is, I'm being judged by my friends, and it has nothing to do with Iris. They don't know her, and I'm afraid they'll never accept her or the fact that I'm in love again. My pastors are also angry with me. I tried telling them how I feel; they don't listen.

I am a Christian man and Iris is a Christian woman. A year is too long to wait. If I'm wrong or selfish, I'll accept it, but I want to be happy. If you see a problem with this, let me know. -- IN LOVE AGAIN

DEAR IN LOVE: You may be misjudging your friends and your pastors. Rather than being angry and judgmental, they may be worried that you're making a mistake. Many legal and mental health experts advise widows and widowers to wait a full year before making any important decisions. Because you aren't sobbing at Pearl's grave doesn't mean that you haven't suffered a loss, and the shock that goes with it.

Enjoy your engagement to Iris. If what you have together is as good as you think, it will only get better during the months to come. Let your friends and clergy get to know her. They're not the enemy; they are concerned about your welfare. My advice to you is to slow down.

DEAR ABBY: About 10 years ago, my neighbor, "John," asked if his contractor could come onto my side of the property to install a fence. I agreed, as long as I would not be held accountable should someone be hurt on my property and he would repair any damage that was caused.

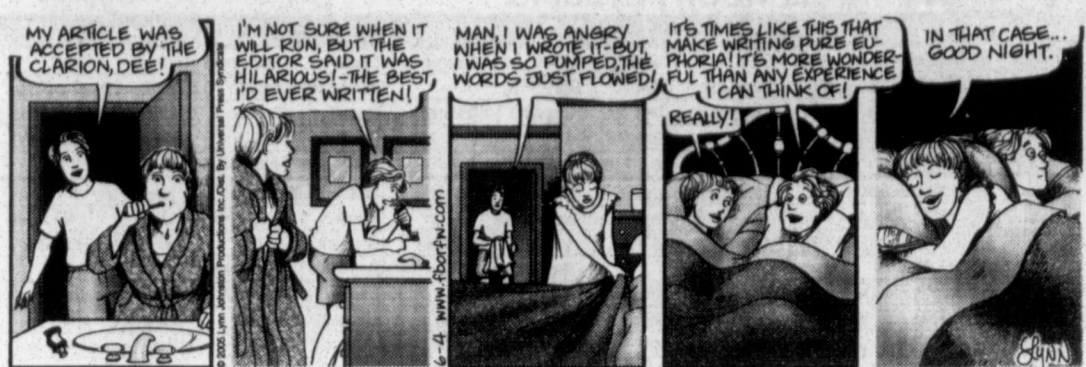

When they put in the fence, the construction material was delivered to my driveway, damaging it. The wood from the old fence was piled on my lawn and some of it was never removed. They also poured gravel all over the place. None of the damage was ever repaired. Now the fence needs to be replaced again, and John is asking me to help him out. I told him he can have permission when I'm paid for the damage that happened the last time -- plus interest. He must also put up a bond that will ensure any damage done this time will be fixed at once.

John is now going around telling everyone that I am not a good neighbor because I want to "charge him" for the right to go on my side of the fence. Any suggestions? -- FENCED-IN IN NEW CITY, N.Y.

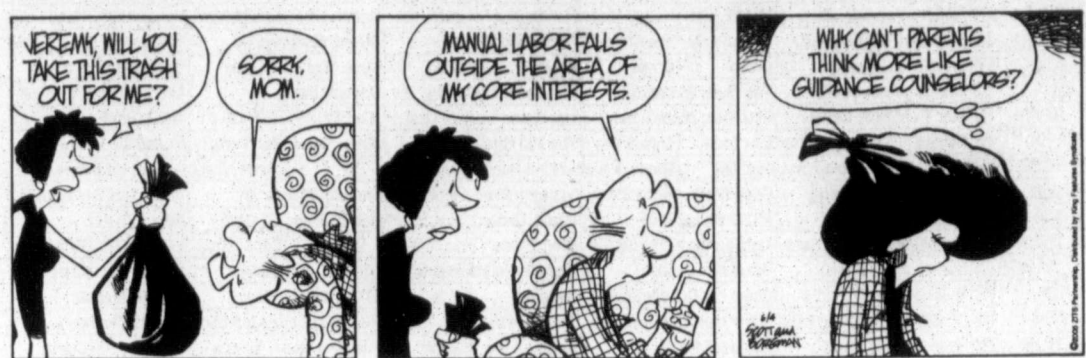

DEAR FENCED-IN: Stick to your guns and refuse to be blackmailed. If anyone mentions the rumors to you, explain the reason you're acting the way you are. It may be a little extreme to demand interest on the money your neighbor owes for the first fence repair, but the rest of your conditions seem fair to me.

Dear Abby is written by Abigail Van Buren, also known as Jeanne Phillips, and was founded by her mother, Pauline Phillips. Write Dear Abby at www.DearAbby.com or P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA 90069.

Students finish college despite unfulfilled promise of aid

By STEPHEN MANNING
Associated Press Writer

ST. MARY'S CITY, Md. (AP) — Layla Wynn and twins Adrianna and Andrea Cofield know all about broken promises, setbacks and sacrifices.

They also know about perseverance. This spring, the three young women from the same neighborhood in Washington, D.C., became the first in their families to hold a college degree. However, the trio's biggest accomplishment may be that they even got to college.

Ten years ago, the girls were among a group of 63 inner city six-graders promised full college scholarships if they stayed in school. But it wasn't until the students were high school seniors that they learned the money wasn't there and the foundation that promised it had folded.

The families scrambled to find new sources of aid, helped by donors who learned of their plight and generous financial aid packages from several schools. In the end, the girls went to St. Mary's College of Maryland for free. And even though the money came from a different place, the fact they graduated helps repair a trust that eroded years earlier.

"My main goal was to finish college," Layla said. "The money, unfortunately, didn't come from the source where it was originally promised, but we still got it."

The scholarship pledge was made by businessman George Abel at the Bruce-Monroe Elementary School sixth grade graduation in 1995. Abel said his foundation would pay the college costs of each student if they agreed to stay in school through high school. That was the last the Bruce-Monroe students heard from him.

By late 2000, the senior class at Cardozo High School was in a panic. Many students (the majority had come from Bruce-Monroe) had not applied for college or financial aid yet; many parents hadn't saved any money for college, believing their children had full scholarships waiting for them.

"We assumed it was there," said Andrea. "We knew we had it like it was in our back pocket. We didn't realize it wasn't going to be fulfilled."

Enter St. Mary's, whose admissions and financial staff canceled holiday plans to help the students and parents meet college application deadlines.

Abel later said his foundation ran out of money in the early 1990s, and that he had said his promise hinged on his ability to raise new funds.

Reached recently at Bethesda Unity church, where he is the spiritual leader, Abel told a reporter, "I don't want to talk to you," and hung up the phone.

Layla, Adrianna and Andrea entered St. Mary's in the fall of 2001. Scholarships covered all of their tuition and board during their time at the school, which now costs $24,560 per year for out-of-state students.

At first, the adjustment was difficult. St. Mary's is in a rural portion of the state, at the tip of southern Maryland, much different from the northwest Washington, D.C., neighborhood where the young women grew up. The three came from predominantly black high schools to a college that is 85 percent white.

Adrianna struggled somewhat to integrate into the college community. Andrea transferred to Nyack College because she wanted to take theology classes that St. Mary's did not offer.

For Layla, sophomore year was toughest. A lifelong basketball player, she quit the St. Mary's basketball team after a falling out with the coach and a dip in her grades, which were near perfect in high school. She often left campus on weekends, retreating to her home 75 miles away.

But slowly, she regained her footing. Without basketball, she had more time to study, and her grades gradually improved. By her senior year, she loaded her schedule with tough classes like physics, but still managed to post some of her best grades in college, including a 3.4 grade point average this spring. Pickup games replaced team play. And she didn't leave school as much.

"I guess I began to enjoy it more rather than feel like I had to run away every weekend," she said after finishing her last final exam.

As a senior, Layla helped create an educational program to combat childhood obesity — a program now used in an area school. Adrianna eventually became a theater major, writing and producing her own play for her senior project. Andrea excelled in Nyack's theology program.

'My main goal was to finish college.'

Universities see more alternative medicines

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Once largely dismissed as a leftover fad from the Age of Aquarius, acupuncture, herbal remedies and other forms of alternative medicine are finding their way into curricula at traditional medical schools — most recently the University of Pennsylvania.

Doctors at Penn are working with Tai Sophia Institute, an alternative medicine school in Maryland, on a program to teach medical students about herbal therapies, meditation and other approaches that are increasingly popular with the public but largely exist outside the realm of mainstream medicine. It will start in August.

"We're not going to turn great surgeons into acupuncturists or herbalists; that's not the idea," said Robert Duggan, co-founder of Tai Sophia. "The goal is that Penn medical school graduates will be highly able to speak with patients about how to guide these things into their overall care."

More than a third of American adults have tried alternative therapies — including yoga, meditation, herbs and the Atkins diet — according to a 2002 government survey of 31,000 people, the largest study of its kind in the United States.

Universities nationwide, in response to the burgeoning numbers, are increasingly focusing on complementary medicine (used along with conventional treatment) and alternative medicine (used instead of conventional treatment). Some are creating their own programs and others are working with alternative medicine practitioners, said A v i a d Haramati, a professor at Georgetown University's medical school. "More and more there's a willingness by conventional schools to recognize the CAM (complementary and alternative medicine) schools as having this expertise," Haramati said.

HOROSCOPES ... SUNDAY JUNE 5 - MONDAY JUNE 6

BY JACQUELINE BIGAR

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Sunday, June 5, 2005:

Your year will take on a spectacular and special dimension if you allow your creativity to flourish. You often have answers when others don't. Your naturally joyous nature points you in a new direction. If you are single, you are about to meet someone quite significant. Romance becomes natural for the romantic Twin. If you are attached, your relationship becomes even more worthwhile and enjoyable. If you are at the right age, you might have a new addition to your family or become a grandparent. Others feel as if they are on a second honeymoon. Enjoy! LIBRA adores you.

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have: 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult

ARIES (March 21-April 19)

★★★★ You finally find the right words to express your feelings. Others react strongly but positively. Someone you have had difficulty with could change his or her tune in the near future. Your popularity soars. Tonight: Follow a whim.

This Week: High activity surrounds Monday and Tuesday. The pace slows down afterward.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)

★★★ An obstacle will disappear in the next few weeks. You also might have more energy than before. Change your work or daily patterns so they suit you. Listen more often to an associate's advice. Tonight: Gather your bills.

This Week: On Tuesday night, you light up like a lamp. Use the period that follows to reach out to others.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)

★★★★ What you have been longing for could drop in your lap in the near future. Use your ingenuity and funlike nature to help others enjoy themselves. Live your life as if there is no tomorrow. A child or loved one plays into the scenario. Tonight: Forget that tomorrow is Monday.

This Week: Move on key projects on Monday and Tuesday, with the New Moon in your sign.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)

★★★ You don't always share what is on your mind. Be willing to open up and try a different way. What hasn't worked up till now could in the near future. Thinking about a change in your home? Act now. Tonight: Some time for yourself.

This Week: Check out details and use timing. On Wednesday, the Moon dances into your sign.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)

★★★★ Finally, the chips fall into your lap. You have waited a long time to achieve the results you want. In fact, at times you've felt like a Dutch kid plugging the dam with his finger. No longer do you need to compensate. Tonight: Share good news.

This Week: You star Monday and Tuesday. The remainder of the week deteriorates — sorry.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)

★★★ What has been difficult to convince someone of now becomes a snap if you try once more. Your finances will gain from an overall sense of direction. You regain confidence. Your assets go past finances, and also include your personality. Tonight: A must appearance.

This Week: You get tossed into the week without a second to breathe. Know that you can do it.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)

★★★★ Make that extra effort in a situation you might have put on the back burner. The planets just flipped the "on" switch. The only person who can hold you back is you. Tonight: Try this concept on for size: The world is your oyster.

This Week: Get all your facts together. Act on Wednesday or Thursday.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)

★★★★ Others present options you have only dreamt of, not really pondered seriously. The planets give you the green light. Who is stopping you now? Stop blaming others for what you don't have the gumption to do. Tonight: The only possible answer is yes.

This Week: Listen to advice but still do your research.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)

★★★★ Whatever you have wanted in your heart of hearts could happen now or in the near future if you decide to zoom in and make it so. What once were obstacles could now appear as being excuses. Everything can fall into place. Tonight: Go along with another's plans.

This Week: Others dominate. Let them, as you cannot change what is happening.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)

★★★ Take as much leisure time as you can get, because in the very near future, others will be prodding and pushing to get what they want from you. In fact, you could become the shining beacon in the dark while others grope for answers.

Tonight: Get some extra R and R.

This Week: Say yes to an associate.

Others need you to pitch in. Schedule meetings from Wednesday on.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)

★★★★ Whatever you decide to do works like a charm. If you don't realize this, try out your magic wand. You might be very pleased with what comes down your path. Imagination becomes your ally. Tonight: Let the fun continue.

This Week: Use your imagination, and you'll get answers. Plug this gift into a real-life situation.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)

★★★★ What appears as a flub might only be Lady Luck coming forward to point you in the right direction. You find that nearly everyone has an opinion about what to do. Listen to the person who is closest to you. Tonight: Two are more fun than one or many.

This Week: Move into action slowly but surely. The days get better and better.

BY JACQUELINE BIGAR

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Monday, June 6, 2005:

The New Moon in your sign pronounces this year to be a new beginning if you are willing to commit to change and to transforming your life. Sometimes you can be too me-oriented, making demands and requests of others. Learn to be a better listener and a more sensitive giver. You are the focus of your universe, but you need to recognize the role of others in your life. Sometimes you push way too hard for your own good. Creativity and magnetism add to your potential in many different avenues of your life. Sprinkle in some modesty. If you are single, pressure to meet others builds. Don't drift like a cloud in the wind. You don't need to be alone. Make solid choices for yourself. If you are attached, learn to think more in terms of your sweetie, if you want your bond to grow. GEMINI is a soul mate.

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have: 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult

ARIES (March 21-April 19)

★★★★ New beginnings will come from out of nowhere if you don't push and just allow situations to flow. You might be confused or at your limit as to what you can handle. Unexpected developments will open the willing Ram's eyes. Tonight: Remember that each moment is the first of the rest of your life.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)

★★★ Emphasizing materialism can sometimes get you into trouble. Learn to separate your sense of well-being from your financial status. Listen more carefully to what someone shares. Imagine what it is like to be someone else.

Tonight: Rethink your assets.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)

★★★★ A new beginning becomes possible if you flow with others and listen. Sometimes you are unusually strong-willed and demanding. Know when you need to say enough. Others push and pull to get your attention. Tonight: You can do it all ... or nearly all.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)

★★★ What is going on internally could have a great impact on how you present yourself. Loosen up and understand more of what is going on within you. Answers come from your willingness to reflect on yourself. Tonight: Take some time off.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)

★★★★ Friends and associates join you in a meeting. You know when to say enough. A group decision can and will happen. Work closely with a partner, even if he or she is unpredictable.

Tonight: Where the gang is.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)

★★★ Others demand your attention. What someone will go through to get a certain reaction might be startling. Others do the unexpected. New professional beginnings become possible in the near future. Tonight: In the limelight.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)

★★★★ New beginnings help you see life from a more positive point of view. Detach from the immediate story and express more understanding. Compassion will develop as a result. Tonight: Take a new perspective.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)

★★★★ Listen and share more of what is happening within a closely knit circle. You know when you have had enough. Let others participate more often. Team decisions bond all involved to a common goal. Tonight: Listen to the other side of the story.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)

★★★★ Listen to news that comes from others. You might need to review previous decisions more carefully if they involve those you relate to. With understanding, new beginnings become possible in difficult relationships. Tonight: Go along with others.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)

★★★ Pace yourself, and you will get a lot done. You might want to take a serious look at rearranging your schedule or doing something a bit differently. When you revise your daily schedule, you will revitalize your daily life. Tonight: Why not go for something different?

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)

★★★★ Realize that "adventure" is your middle name, and you will create adventure no matter what happens. Others might find you dull or touchy, but in truth, you are a barrel of energy, not sure where to turn. Tonight: Add spirit to your night.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)

★★★★ Basics count. You need to come from a centered spot. Decisions involving family, real estate and domestic issues are favored right now. You'll get a new beginning if you focus on your priorities. Listen well. Tonight: Stay home.
