cubs, the cutest animals I have ever seen. They looked like something right out of a Walt Disney movie. The mother, however, wasn't friendly-looking and when we left she gave us a moment's scare by chasing us. My hatch and window were open but before I could close them, she had retreated.

NGORONGORO CRATER

The next park we visited was Ngorongoro Crater. This park is in the bottom of a huge crater, approximately 100 square miles in area, with sides rising to 2,250 feet above the crater floor. We camped near the lodge on the crater rim and, at 8,000 feet altitude, it seemed colder than on the summit of Kilimanjaro.

In the crater we saw at least the 'nine thousand wildebeests, three thousand zebra, and two thousand gazelle' which the conservator guaranteed us we would see. In addition we saw a black maned lion, a rhino, lions sleeping in trees, buffalo, ostriches, water buck and various other animals. We also visited in the home of a Masai tribesman in the crater. It was an interesting visit.

SERENGETI PARK

On the way to Serengeti, best-known of Tanzanian parks, we stopped at Olduvai Gorge where Dr. L. S. B. Leakey found the skull of early man, Zinanthropus, believed to have lived 1,750,000 years ago. The National Geographic Society finances his work and has printed many articles about his discoveries.

Each park was different and Serengeti exceeded the other parks mainly in size (5,000 square miles) and the vast numbers of game. Here among the world's greatest remaining herds of plains game we were never out of sight of some animal. The large plain ostriches, zebras, gazelles and wildebeests were always in sight. Here can still be seen the vast migrations of animals. Last January 300,000 plains game including wildebeests, zebra, Thomson's gazelle, topi and eland were observed in the huge migration. Serengeti boasts 151,000 zebras alone!

By this time, the large herds of zebra and other animals were becoming commonplace. We were extremely lucky, however, in finding two leopards sleeping out on the branches of a tree. They were as playful as housecats but what beautiful skins they have. The Serengeti lions are known for their great size and they too were most photogenic. It is hard to imagine that such quiet, beautiful animals could be dangerous. On the way from the park to Mwanza the next day we found a pride of ten lions under one tree.

Now that I've climbed Kilimanjaro and visited the game parks I guess it is time to get back to work. This vacation was the vacation of a lifetime though. I hope many of you will get the opportunity to see my color slides sometime. I really shot the game—with my camera.

In England cotton was first used for candle wicks.

The flack and flap over the public disclosure of the subsidization of a number of organizations by the Central Intelligence Agency has been thick and fast these past two weeks. The Director of the CIA was scheduled in advance of this recent publicity to make a periodic report to my Committee. His appearance had nothing to do with the revelation that the CIA, acting through a number of foundations, was contributing funds to certain student, labor and church groups and other organizations with international activities. The Director was to brief the Committee on political conditions around the world as related to our own self interest. Inevitably, however, Committee members' first questions were about the immediate news of the Central Intelligence Agency's operations.

My concern as expressed to the Director was not a criticism of the CIA's purposes and intent but rather whether we had received our money's worth.

In this situation, "Money's Worth" cannot be measured in yards, inches, pounds or gallons. It must be measured by the intangible accomplishments of the CIA in combating the ideological advances of communism.

The "Cold War" is as real today as it ever was. In fact by reason of the great scientific advances; by reason of great strides in transportation and communication, our world gets smaller and smaller. As a result, people are closer and closer together. To relax our guard and not be knowledgeable of the communist conspiracy at home and abroad is to fail in our duty as a Nation to meet the threat.

We live in a world in which ugly mobism is only "democratic protest" in the opinion of some. We see today public officials barely saved from physical violence when facing the beatnik and peacenik; a world in which every agency of Government entrusted with this Country's physical security is physically attacked and smeared; in which night is day and truth is falsehood and patriotism has become a sour note.

On March 12, 1964, this column referred to the great influence of students in foreign countries. The university student in Latin America for instance has always carried prestige from that in our own Country. Presently, however, "campus demonstrations" and whose leaders openly wear the symbol of communism are coddled and publicized here at home. Now that there is publicity about the attempt of the CIA to have the true spirit of America reported by patriotic students meeting with other students in foreign countries, a few of our "great thinkers" worry about the "integrity of American education."

1700 students at Stanford University listened in civilized fashion to the Vice President of the United States speak on the Vietnam situation. A mob of 300 outside his car called him a war criminal and shouted that well known slogan "Burn Baby Burn." The decent conduct of the 1700 was not news.

There is comfort in steps taken, as small as they may be, to prevent total capture of the international student movement by the communists.

State Capital Highlights

Legislative Redistricting Again Major Task For State Legislature

By—Vern Sanford
Texas Press Association

Legislative redistricting reared its ugly head suddenly and formidably for Texas' House of Representatives. A U. S. Supreme Court decision invalidates the carefully-stuck-together reapportionment act of 1965 for representative districts. This unexpected court action has changed redistricting from a routine cleanup chore into a major task. It could very well mean the end of the political line for some representatives and possible shaking of House unity.

Court found population variances among representative districts (up to 26 per cent) too great to meet its one-man-one-vote standard and sent the 1965 districting plan back to Houston federal judges for recheck.

Representatives had figured all that was necessary this year was elimination of the 11 floutful districts criticized by the Houston federal district court. Now, they are faced with wholesale redrawing of lines to equalize population discrepancies statewide.

Speaker Ben Barnes acknowledged "It is a difficult situation."

Big city lawmakers said they soon would introduce a bill to give Bexar, Dallas and Harris Counties one more representative each (high court held they were entitled to that) and adjust other variances.

Sensing that congressional reapportionment also might be struck down, redistricting acts in this area were introduced by Reps. R. L. Vale and Jake Johnson of San Antonio and Rep. Frank Cahoon of Midland.

LIQUOR-BY-JIGGER

A bill to legalize sale of liquor by the drink in Texas was introduced this week.

Reps. John Field and Dick McKissack, both of Dallas, are House authors. Sen. Joe Christie of El Paso is the Senate sponsor.

Highlights of the bill are: Open saloons (banned by constitution) are defined as places devoted exclusively to sale of liquor for on-premise consumption. Bill would legalize mixed-drink permits for qualified hotels, private clubs, restaurants and lodges—businesses or organizations NOT engaged exclusively in the business of selling liquor.

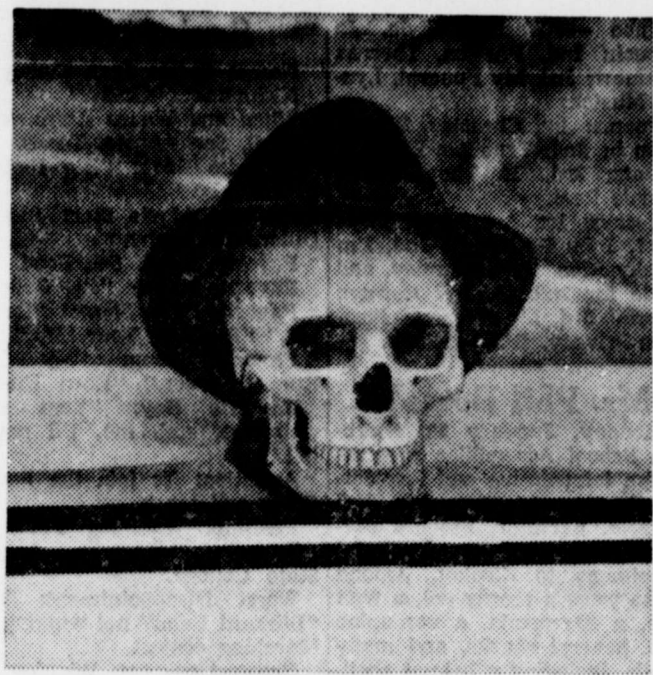

Measure would authorize mixed drink sales in some 122 counties where on-premise consumption of beer and wine and package store sales already are permitted. Provision is made for local elections in these areas on specific issue of mixed drinks. Failure of election would not affect status of other alcoholic beverages. In other areas, affirmative vote would be required for mixed drinks.

Drinks would be subject to five-cents - an-ounce tax, plus two per cent sales tax. Retail drink permits would cost $1,000 at state level. Cities and counties could assess fees of $500 each. Beverage servers would pay an annual fee of $12. Private clubs in wet areas must operate under the same regulations as retail drink establishments and pay the permit fee. Those in dry areas will pay a special registration fee and a 10 per cent gross receipts tax. Texas Liquor Control Board would administer permits and enforce the law.

SHEEP DIP BILL

A bill to relax state standards for importation of sheep from other states has passed both houses of the Legislature. But each house passed its own bill—though they say the same—so one must do it again.

Senate passed its SB 183. House passed its HB 396. Now, either the Senate must pass the SPEEDERS SLOW DOWN when they follow this car too closely at night and a light goes on inside the skull perched in the rear window.

The Family Lawyer

Through the Loophole

No doubt about it: the case was a shocker. A city alderman had been caught taking a bribe. But when he was brought to trial, it turned out that there was a loophole in the state's criminal code. By mistake, the code failed to make this particular action a crime.

So the alderman went free. As speedily as possible, the state legislature passed a new law closing the loophole. But as far as the alderman was concerned, it was too late. He had slipped safely through the law's clutches.

Does that make sense? Should the court let a man "get away with it" just because of a loophole in the law?

We have to start with one blunt fact: no law is perfect, with no loopholes at all. Human wisdom cannot foresee all the possible variations of conduct that may arise in the course of time.

Still, when a mistake in the law is so obvious, shouldn't the court stretch a point in the interest of justice? For example, in the alderman's case the court might have said: "Loophole or no loophole, this fellow has done a wrong thing and must be punished."

The trouble is, a court simply does not have that power under our constitutional system. Judges may interpret laws, but not make them. In the words of the United States Supreme Court:

"It is the legislature, not the court, which is to define a crime and ordain its punishment."

To be sure, there is harm in letting a wrongdoer escape the punishment he deserves. But in the process, he gives society vital information—just as the escaping fish shows the fisherman where his net needs patching.

And closing even a single loophole in the law may have far-reaching consequences. Thus:

A flour company in New York once used a society girl's picture in its ads without asking for her permission. When she sued, the court could find nothing in the law that forbade such unwanted publicity. The girl's suit was dismissed.

In short order, the state legislature closed the loophole with a new law. And, as it turned out, this law was the cornerstone of one of the most significant legal developments of our times.

It was, in fact, the first "right of privacy" law in history.

legislators propose a new institution to be built "from the ground up."

Board said all such proposals must await the statewide master plan for higher education, expected to be completed by the spring of 1968.

SHORT SNOOTS

Texas' travel exhibit, designed to attract tourists to the state, has won top honors in the first of six North American travel shows in which it entered.

Gov. John Connally named Harry Jersign, San Antonio brewing company head, to the State Parks and Wildlife Commission, succeeding A. W. Moursund of Johnson City who did not seek re-appointment.

Albert Allison of Dallas is new executive director of the Republican Party of Texas, succeeding Marvin Collins, formerly of Corpus Christi, who held the job since 1963.

Legislation to stiffen Sunday closing law (removing emergency purchase provision)—cleared Senate committee.

Ground has been broken for $10,000,000 Institute of Texan Cultures building at San Antonio's HemisFair '68.

Senate committee approved proposed constitutional amendments to extend veterans land program and authorize local revenue bonds to finance industrial plants to be operated by private interests.

House version, or the House the Senate version, in order for the measure to be ready for Governor Connally's signature.

Present law requires mandatory dipping of sheep brought into Texas, except those going to slaughter. New bill would allow the Animal Health Commission to accept certificates from other states that shipments are free from scabies.

TIME MARCHES ON

Legislators had time on their hands and their minds as House State Affairs Committee conducted the longest hearing of this legislative session on the bill to outlaw daylight saving time in Texas.

Committee heard witnesses for nearly seven hours, until after 2 a. m., arguing both sides of the proposed act by Reps. Will Smith of Beaumont and Ralph Wayne of Plainview.

Federal Uniform Time Act of 1966 will place all states on daylight saving time from May to October unless a state's special legislation exempts it.

Lining up in favor of the bill were restaurant and theater owners and the farm bureau. Opposing it were radio and television stations, investment bankers and some newspapers.

STATE KINDERGARTEN

Sen. Don Kennard of Fort Worth is sponsoring a bill to provide free public education for five-year-olds, with the state sharing the expense with local school districts on a 50-50 basis.

Kennard said the program would cost $34,500,000 for the first two years and that 50 per cent of the five-year-olds would attend classes next year, 60 per cent the second year and as many as 80 per cent by 1970-71.

"A kindergarten program established under rules set up by the Texas Education Agency, is the most vital step Texas should take in improving our school system," the senator said. "There is abundant evidence that six years is too late an age to start children in school."

A. G. OPINIONS

Proposed Medical Assistance Act of 1967 would authorize medical care benefits to inmates of state mental hospitals, under new state-federal "medicaid" program, says Atty. Gen. Crawford C. Martin. However, inmates will remain ineligible for old age assistance benefits.

In other opinions, Martin concluded that: A prisoner who received a suspended sentence under the old criminal code may not have his sentence reduced or terminated under provision of the new code.

A bill to provide benefits to survivors of firemen and law enforcement officers killed in line of duty cannot be made retroactive.

It is not within the discretion of a trial court to stay an order of the Department of Public Safety suspending a driver's license or motor vehicle registration.

ABORTION BILL

Sen. George Parkhouse of Dallas has introduced a bill to expand the circumstances under which women can get legal abortions in Texas.

Present law allows an abortion only if delivery of the child would endanger the life of the mother. Parkhouse's bill also would allow abortions in the case of rape or incest, if the health of the mother would be impaired by having the baby, or if there is substantial evidence that the child would be born with a serious physical or mental defect.

This bill would require that a hospital abortion committee approve any abortion by a majority of the five members.

COLLEGE BIDS REJECTED

After extensive hearings, the Higher Education Coordinating Board again declined to give its blessing to creation of four-year colleges at Midland, Odessa, Texarkana and San Antonio.

Midland, Odessa and Texarkana plans want to elevate existing junior colleges to senior college rank. San Antonio

Medicare Payments Must Have Proper Signatures

Missing signatures and addresses are two frequent problems that Blue Cross-Blue Shield has run into processing doctor bill request for payment forms from medicare beneficiaries, Ted F. Moellering, social security district manager in San Angelo said today.

Representatives of Blue Cross and Blue Shield, the carrier for medicare doctor bill payments in the San Angelo area, have reported that some beneficiaries have received repayment for doctor bills later than was necessary because they forgot to sign their forms or to include their address.

The signature on the request for payment form authorizes the carrier to pay the claim. Blue Cross-Blue Shield has to have the signature before the claim can be paid.

A missing address presents even a bigger problem according to Moellering. "Without the address Blue Cross-Blue Shield doesn't know where to send the check, and the only way to get it is to write back to the doctors, who are sometimes reluctant to give out their patients' addresses."

"Beneficiaries sending in their own request for payment forms should be especially careful to give all information called for, including their address, medicare identification number and their signature," Moellering said. "Also, the beneficiary should either have his doctor complete the second part of the request for payment form or enclose an itemized receipted bill before sending in his claim."

"Because Blue Cross-Blue Shield has reported some problems with claims from this area," Moellering said, "we are suggesting that beneficiaries making their first claim bring the forms and receipts to the social security office. By letting us check the request for payment forms before they are sent to the medicare carrier, the beneficiary can be sure that his claim won't be delayed because some item has been left off."

Moellering said that persons unable to come to the office at 3000 W. Harris in San Angelo can mail in their forms. People who mail in their forms should indicate their telephone number so that they can be contacted if additional information is needed.

We also remain open every Monday evening until 7:30 p. m. for the convenience of those who can't come in during regular office hours Moellering noted.

oger Babson Says

Biggest Business In America Is Education; $48.8 Billion Yearly

What's Happening To Our Schools

Babson Park, Mass. One of every largest businesses in this country today is education. Americans are now spending a total of $48.8 billion per year to run our schools and colleges—an increase of 124 percent in the last decade. Another whopping boost in costs lies just ahead.

ore Pupils—Fewer Teachers

We have always "made a lot" education in this country—and rightly so. We pride ourselves on our fine public school system and on the freedom of choice which has permitted, at the multiplication of private "parochial" schools. As we have grown in numbers, especially since the end of World War II, so too has enrollment in our schools increased. This year there are 43.2 million pupils registered in public elementary and secondary schools in the U.S. An additional 6.7 million youngsters attend private schools from kindergarten through high school.

At the same time, there is a chronic shortage of teachers, which has been aggravated by the rapidity of the rise in student numbers and by the fact that teachers' salaries, in many instances, have not kept pace with those of comparable professions. So the teachers have become more restless and more aggressive. And the labor unions have moved in. The net result is that we are now facing demands for much higher teachers' salaries all across the nation—demands which, even only partially fulfilled, will cost millions of dollars more in the coming year.

Is Our Investment Paying Off?

Hence it is very much in order for us to ask ourselves if the sacrifices we are making to support our schools are in fact paying off. Whether we like it or not, we are all going to pay more in taxes to run the public schools in our community. Salaries of teachers will rise. And we will be told that we should be doing much more for our children.

The big question is: How much more can self-supporting citizens—with their own financial problems—afford to pay, and precisely for what? Probably from one-third to one-half of what we pay each year in local taxes is used to run our schools. If we don't know exactly how this money is spent—and with what result—wouldn't it be common sense to find out?

Brick And Mortar

We have currently over 2 million teachers in this country providing instruction in a bewildering variety of subjects. For the most part, they teach in school systems—whether public or private—which have made herculean efforts to modernize plant and equipment. The result is that in many American communities today there are schools that are better equipped in classroom space, in laboratory facilities, and in recreational advantages than were many of our colleges fifty years ago.

In a way, we have made a fetish of education. But, in our ambition and pride, we seem to

Charity Caroline Circle Meeting Held At Church

Members of the Charity Caroline Circle met at the First Methodist Church Tuesday morning for the regular session. The program chairman, Mrs. Dick Mayo introduced those on the program. "Living in the World of Nations," was the topic of the study. Mrs. Vada Babston gave the secretary's report and Mrs. Pearl Whigham, the treasurer's report. The scripture reading by Mrs. Lillie Marks was taken from 1st Kings 8:41-43.

Jean Gibbs was commentator and introduced 6 ladies who gave their reports. Those taking part were Mesdames Neely, Babston, Stricklin, Whigham, Leeman and Mitchell.

Coffee and cookies were served to Mesdames J. L. Wright, Dick Mayo, Vada Babston, Connie Mac Gibbs, Tammy and Kenny, Frank Mitchell, E. L. Marks, Gattis Neely, Pearl Whigham and Miss Frances Stricklin.

CARD OF THANKS

The kindnesses shown us during our recent distress were so appreciated. The food, flowers, visits, and many other remembrances helped strengthen our spirits and ease our grief. With gratitude, we thank everyone for their concern and thoughtfulness. The Clarence Sharp Family. Itc have placed more stock in college as the end goal of education than emphasis on knowledge and how to use it to enrich our own lives and help others. In our desire to provide the "best" for our children and grandchildren, we have concentrated more on brick and mortar than on the real essentials.

Building Character

Just because a school is new, or large, or has the best gym money can buy is no guarantee it will be a good school. What is taught—and how it is taught—are still mighty important. After all, quite a number of our greatest Americans have been the products of one-room schoolhouses or of modest educational backgrounds! Many years ago, the distinguished British philosopher, Herbert Spencer, wrote: "Education has for its object the formation of character." We seem to be losing sight of that concept in our highly competitive society. If this trend continues, we shall be not only financially—but spiritually—the poorer.

RCARC Meeting Held In Ballinger Monday Evening

Approximately 45 attended the regular meeting of Runnels County Association for Retarded Children held Monday evening at City Hall in Ballinger. Mrs. Walter Spill of Winters, president, was in charge of the business and heard reports from Mrs. Raymond Hash. The group voted to contribute funds for the transportation of children in Bronte to attend therapy treatment in Abilene.

For the program, special education classes of Winters and Ballinger, and Eternal Children's Sunday School Class of Ballinger presented very inspiring entertainment with songs and educational activities.

Mrs. Mozelle Wharton, special education teacher from Winters presented her group of young people; Mrs. E. H. Forney, Mr. W. J. Neighbors and Mrs. Anson Dewey presented the Ballinger special education class; and Mrs. J. B. Terry Jr. and her daughter, Gale Terry presented the members of the Eternal Children's Sunday School Class in a song program.

Mrs. Frankie Berryman is superintendent of the Sunday School group which will celebrate their second anniversary this coming Sunday. The class has enlarged and the Runnels Association will contribute more literature for the classes.

Following the program, displays of the exhibits which the children had made in both Winters and Ballinger special education classes were on display.

Special hour hostesses were Mrs. Spill, Mrs. Walter Adams and Mrs. Leathers, all of Winters.

Mrs. Spill announced the next regular meeting would be held in May. A nominating committee composed of Miss Mamie Ruth Boothe, Edwin Kirklen, and Mrs. Doyle Hubbard was named and a report will be given at the meeting in May.

Fabrics:

Some fabrics, because of a particular design or weave, require special thought and care when you select a pattern and place it on the fabric. Mrs. O'Connor says that such fabrics as plaids, stripes, prints with an up and down, widely open spaced prints, diagonal weaves, twills, corduroy, and velveteen fall into this category. You should select the pattern and fabric on the same shopping tour. It is difficult to say that one should be selected before the other. Usually the pattern is selected first, however. Consult the pattern envelope for suggestions of kinds of fabric to use, or for those not recommended for the pattern.

Fabrics that require matching are usually more attractive and easier to cut and sew if you select a pattern with a few pieces, she says. Remember, that the design or weave of the fabric should be the main interest of the garment, rather than seams or decorative lines. Designs or plaids, stripes, diagonal and geometric prints should be matched to give a professional look. After the pattern is cut, changes in seam lines after cutting may make the design difficult.

Be careful to cut on the correct grain of the fabrics that have a design which must be matched. Check the fabric before you buy it to see that it is not woven or printed off grain. It is impossible to straighten some off-grain fabrics.

The concept of the total look has become firmly entrenched in women's fashions. Proportion and the complete silhouette have been emphasized by designers in their collections and repeated by fashion magazines and stores. The consumer has been exposed to the idea often.

There is a total look appropriate for every occasion. In some ways, clothing selection has been simplified—the components for a total look are designed to be compatible in line, design, and color. The individual challenge then becomes one of selecting the total look to emphasize personal assets, and to be appropriate for each situation.

For example, for a rainy day, the total look might include a smart raincoat with fashion flair, a scarf hat, umbrella and boots. Synthetic fibers contribute a definite look to fashion. A relaxed silhouette with little wrinkling is ideal for Spring 1967.

The casual look is carefully planned in every detail. The ensemble is important in fashion right now, with the total look including gloves, hat, jewelry, and appropriate shoes.

OUTDOORS IN TEXAS BY VERN SANFORD

When Price Daniel was governor, he started the ball rolling to create Big Thicket park in southeast Texas.

That ball is still rolling. Not too much has been done, but it's apparent that the demand for such a park has grown so that it cannot fail.

Mayor Dempsey Henley of Liberty, testifying in behalf of Big Thicket, warned that the 350,000 acre wilderness rapidly is being ground under by bulldozers and poisoned by the chemicals of civilization.

"Unless we move soon," the mayor said, "the Big Thicket will be no more. It is vanishing at the rate of 50 acres a day."

A 1963 study by Texas Technological College recommended purchase of 50,000 acres for the park.

Unfortunately there are hundreds of thousands of Texans who never have had the privilege of seeing this Big Thicket. It includes parts of Polk, Tyler, Hardin and Liberty counties.

In the Big Thicket are some of Texas' largest trees. More than 300 species of birds nest in the branches. Wild orchids and azaleas abound. Also to be found are perhaps the only black bear and panther in the state.

With the parks branch of the federal government advocating more recreational areas, up comes the Department of Agriculture and includes the entire 350,000 acre development project. This would open much of the area to rice farming. One segment, the Pine Island Bayou small watershed, is for the purpose of stream channelization, drainage and provision of irrigation water.

At the present time Texas, despite it being the largest dry-land area in the United States, ranks 13th in acreage dedicated to state parks. It has more than five times the land area of New York, but it only has one fourth as much acreage in state parks. However, the state ranks a little better with city and county parks, standing sixth among all the states.

Within the last few years Texas has, in effect, added some 80,000 acres to its national park program. This is on Padre Island, the national seashore project. However, this project still is lacking development because of delays in land purchase. Condemnation suits have been filed and hearings will get underway soon.

Right now efforts are being made to have a national park established in McKittrick Canyon, in the Guadalupe Mountain area of far west Texas.

And of course, there is the present Big Bend National Park which attracts thousands of visitors each year.

Texas is operating a park system which is far from adequate. However, improvements are being made as fast as possible. This year facilities in every Texas park were over-loaded.

Thanks to the U.S. Corps of Engineers and the Bureau of Reclamation there are additional park facilities available in Texas around all the major impoundments of the state.

Then there are facilities provided by the U.S. Forest Service throughout East Texas. Hundreds of thousands of persons visited these areas during the past year, enjoying all the recreational advantages they afford.

Perhaps this impact of recreation seekers may have something to do with the future development of the Big Thicket project. Meanwhile, if you've never been to the Big Thicket, now is the time to go. When you see it you will agree that something more should be done to preserve this beautiful and natural area of Texas.

THE BEST FARM PLAN

Every business must plan ahead — and must deal with economic factors such as production, supply, demand, costs, prices, trends and profits.

Farming is now a highly organized business in which profit depends much on the soundness of the program for the future. Others can offer helpful suggestions, but the best farm plan is the personal plan which each individual makes for himself to fit his own situation.

If you are now planning for the future, we shall welcome any opportunity to be helpful. The reputation of this bank for dependable operation often helps our customers away from home.
