Hypertension study

WASHINGTON — It's a question that has frustrated doctors for decades: Why do black Americans suffer more high blood pressure, with worse consequences, than whites? Sociologists said poverty, geneticists suggested genes, but all the theories had major flaws. Now doctors have a new theory: That a chief culprit is chronic, physically debilitating stress not just from poverty but from black Americans' entire social-economic status./7A

PACs move right

In the final weeks of the congressional election, corporate America and its money-rich political action committees took a decisive turn to the right. For the last decade, PACs showered the lion's share of their money on entrenched Democrats. But when Republicans positioned themselves this fall to take control of Congress for the first time in four decades, the PACs made a big shift, an Associated Press computer-assisted analysis found./5A

Legislation introduced by state senator would allow man to receive castration

By Gary Shanks
Staff Writer

Legislation introduced Monday by Texas Sen. Teel Bivins (R-Amarillo) may eventually allow a Midland man to have his wish — surgical castration.

Paul Gonzales, 36, of Midland was recently sentenced to 20 years in prison for two counts of indecency with a child. He is in the Midland County Jail awaiting transfer.

Gonzales has committed repeat sexual offenses with children and is asking for permission to have himself castrated as a means of ensuring he does not repeat his crimes when he is eventually released from prison, according to Midland attorney John Cook who is representing Gonzales.

"He wants treatment this time," Cook said. The surgical treatment, if given, will be in conjunction with extensive psychological counseling that Gonzales did not receive on his first trip to prison, Cook said.

Gonzales is not asking for a reduced sentence in exchange for his castration, Cook said. He wants the operation "so that eventually he can get out and not re-offend," he said.

Cook described Gonzales as an intelligent man who is sincere in his wishes to change his life.

The Bivins bill, co-sponsored by Sen. Bill Sims (D-Paint Rock), is designed to provide just what Gonzales is requesting. The bill, if passed, will allow repeat child molesters to choose surgical castration as a form of treatment for this condition. Historically, child molesters have not been helped with conventional forms of treatment.

"In European countries that have used voluntary castration, recidivism rates have dropped below 11 percent. Some studies show recidivism rates as low as 2 percent," Bivins said. "The

Bush makes first appointment

Governor-elect names Hispanic leader as secretary of state

■ Garza, 35, to also serve as senior advisor to Bush.

Associated Press

AUSTIN — Gov.-elect George W. Bush named a Hispanic leader from South Texas as his first major appointment Monday: Cameron County Judge Tony Garza, picked to be Bush's secretary of state.

Bush said his choice of Garza, 35, as Texas' chief elections officer shows his administration is open to Texans "from all walks of life," as long as they generally share his conservative orientation.

Garza, an unsuccessful candidate for attorney general in this year's GOP primary election, also will serve as a top senior adviser to Bush when he takes office in January, the Republican governor-elect said.

But Texans active in the gay rights movement shouldn't expect to get in the door of the Bush administration, he indicated.

While he won't pry into a potential nominee's private life, Bush said in response to a reporter's question, "if there is a political agenda that I am uncomfortable with and do not agree with, they're not going to get appointed ... that would include an agenda pushed by the gay and lesbian lobby.

"It tends to be a left-wing agenda. I am a conservative."

State Rep. Glen Maxey, the state's only openly gay lawmaker, said he doesn't see Bush's comments as negative.

Economists expect Federal Reserve to increase interest rates again today

WASHINGTON (AP) — For many economists, the question has become not whether the Federal Reserve will raise interest rates again today but whether the economy can withstand more increases without risking a fresh recession.

The central bank's interest-rate-setting arm, the Federal Open Market Committee, meets behind closed doors today and the betting among economists is that the committee will raise interest rates for the sixth time this year.

"The Fed is playing a forward-looking prevent defense and that suggests another dose of higher interest rates will be forthcoming," said Allen Sinai, chief international economist at Lehman Brothers in New York.

Sinai and many other analysts are looking for a half-point increase in the Fed's target for the federal funds rate, the interest that banks charge each other on overnight loans. They also expect a half-point boost in the discount rate, which the Fed charges on direct loans to banks.

Those increases would trigger a corresponding jump in business and consumer borrowing costs, with most economists

Court approves 12 holidays in 1995 for county employees

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

The Midland County Commissioners' Court Monday, in a 4-1 vote, opted to award the county's 500 employees 12 holidays in the 1995 calendar year. It also deferred action on absorbing costs of senior-citizens' flu vaccines and approved spending more than $152,000 for 11 new police-package cars for Sheriff Gary Painter's operations.

The 12-holiday schedule, which is four more holidays than is allowed for city of Midland workers, got approvals from County Judge Charles W. "Bro" Seltzer and Commissioners Henry Goulet, Guy McCrary and Win Brown.

Casting the "nay" vote was Commissioner Louisa Valencia, who wanted an 11-day holiday schedule to include the observance of Martin Luther King Jr.'s birthday in January but then cut a proposed four-day Independence Day weekend holiday to only one day — the Fourth of July.

King's birthday observance on Jan. 16, the third Monday of the month, would result in a three-day weekend. The observance of the civil-rights leader's birthday is a state and federal holiday.

"I represent the majority of the black community (in Midland)," Mrs. Valencia, a Democrat, said of her precinct. "I'm trying to avoid confrontation."

Confederate Heroes Day, a state holiday that honors the memories of Robert E. Lee and Jefferson Davis, is celebrated on Jan. 19.

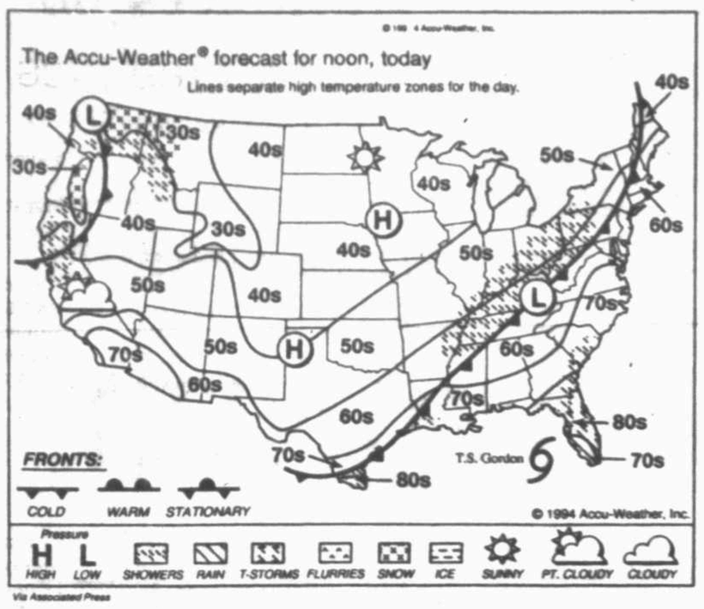

Mrs. Valencia's motion for an 11-day holiday schedule by including King's birthday and nixing the four-day Independence Day holiday was seconded by Seltzer but was opposed by Goulet, McCrary, and Brown.

"Maybe we should just list the days that we should work," said an apparently bemused McCrary.

Area skies to be partly cloudy

Staff Report

Today's forecast calls for partly cloudy skies with a high in the mid-50s and northeast winds at 5-15 mph. Tonight should be partly cloudy with a low in the mid-30s, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Wednesday should be mostly cloudy with a high near 60.

After an overnight low of 51, Monday's high reached 71, compared to the record high for that date of 85 set in 1933. The record low was 13 set in 1976.

STATE

Thunderstorms pounded North Texas Monday, prompting flash floods and resulting in the drowning of a woman in Sherman.

The nasty weather was caused in part by cold fronts moving through West and North Texas, according to the National Weather Service.

A flash flood watch was in effect in the northeastern portion of the region Monday night. In Sherman, a 65-year-old woman drowned when she became trapped in her car in high waters near Lake Texoma.

Temperatures were mostly in the 60s, with highs of 75 at Killeen and Temple. There should be more cloudy skies on Tuesday, with a chance of showers and temperatures again in the 60s.

Skies were cloudy over the northwest corner of the panhandle and parts of the Concho Valley, but most of West Texas was sunny and clear. Temperatures were generally in the 50s and 60s, with a high of 72 reported at Sanderson, and a low of 45 at Dalhart. West Texas should see highs in the 70s Tuesday, and lows near 30 .

In South Texas, skies were cloudy and temperatures were mostly in the 70s and 80s. The region should see scattered showers and thunderstorms on Tuesday.

NATION

More than a foot of snow fell on parts of Colorado on Monday, and rain drenched parts of Texas and Oklahoma. In the Southeast, winds of 60 mph or more whipped Florida's east coast, signaling the approach of Tropical Storm Gordon.

The storm system that dropped up to a foot of snow in Utah on Sunday dumped another foot in Denver and more elsewhere in Colorado as it moved across the state. Snow tapered off later in the day as the storm weakened over the Plains.

Heavy showers developed along the southern end of a cold front extending from Michigan to central Texas, causing flash flooding near Denison, Texas, where nearly 3 inches of rain fell. Heavy rain also fell on parts of southeastern Oklahoma.

Scattered showers and some thunderstorms were possible along the front, with stronger thunderstorms likely over Texas and Louisiana.

In Florida, Tropical Storm Gordon continued to drift slowly north toward Miami, after wreaking havoc in Haiti and Jamaica, where more than 100 people died, mudslides knocked down houses and hundreds of thousands lost power.

In Florida, tropical storm warnings, flash-flood watches and wind advisories were posted for much of the state.

Storm-caused gusts of 63 mph were recorded on the coast between Miami and Fort Lauderdale during the day.

Another storm was heading into the Pacific Northwest, where rain, mountain snows and winds were expected to increase.

The Northeast had record high temperatures Monday, with the reading of 69 in Buffalo, N.Y., breaking the city's 1909 record for the date by a degree. The high of 72 in Rochester, N.Y., broke that city's 1909 record by 2 degrees.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

Pick 3

AUSTIN (AP) — The Pick 3 winning numbers drawn Monday by the Texas Lottery, in order:

8-9-4

(eight, nine, four)

FIRST: Governor-elect names his secretary of state

(From 1A)

"If he says sexual orientation doesn't come into his decision-making process, that's exactly where we want to be . . . If you are hiring somebody to make public policy, I certainly understand that George Bush is going to appoint people who agree with his philosophy," said Maxey, D-Austin.

Democratic Gov. Ann Richards has nominated several homosexuals to state boards. Her staff has said those appointments were based on qualifications and not on sexual orientation.

Garza's nomination, which requires the approval of a Democrat-dominated Senate, was greeted warmly by state Sen. Eddie Lucio, D-Brownsville. Garza lives in Brownsville, and Lucio could have blocked his appointment as his hometown senator.

"Tony is a very capable young man who I am sure will articulate and represent the broad interests of the (Rio Grande) Valley well," Lucio said. "The responsibilities of the job are non-partisan."

Garza will replace Secretary of State Ron Kirk, a Richards appointee who is expected to run for mayor of Dallas next year.

Bush said Garza is a personal friend, and that he attended Garza's 1988 swearing-in as the first Republican in modern history elected as Cameron County judge.

South Texas is traditionally Democratic; Richards got 60.8 percent of the Cameron County vote in last week's election.

"Had I been trying to pick someone from a region of the state to say thank you very much for your huge vote, obviously it wouldn't have been in the Valley," Bush quipped. "I didn't think in terms of politics when I picked Tony Garza. I picked the best I could find."

When he ran for attorney general — with Bush's encouragement — Garza emphasized the need to toughen laws on juvenile crime, one of Bush's main issues. Garza said then that he could support the death penalty for a 13-year-old in some circumstances, a position with which Bush has disagreed.

Garza said he will be committed to ensuring that elections are fair and accessible and to working with Bush on issues including juvenile justice changes, putting limits on civil lawsuits, reforming welfare and education, and creating jobs.

"As Hispanics, we are concerned about the same types of issues that all Texans are concerned about," Garza said. "As important as access (in elections) is that Texans feel involved.

Bush supports bill that allows carrying of concealed handguns

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov.-elect George W. Bush vowed Monday to sign new legislation that would allow Texans to carry concealed handguns.

The gun measure was one of dozens unveiled by lawmakers on the first day to file bills for the Jan. 10 start of the regular legislative session.

State Rep. Ron Wilson, D-Houston, who sponsored concealed handgun legislation in 1993, said he was glad to have Bush's support.

"It's nice to have the chief executive who believes in the people's ability to protect themselves," Wilson said.

At a news conference, Bush, a Republican, said, "I support Mr. Wilson's bill . . . I will sign that bill."

In 1993, a similar handgun bill was stripped down to a nonbinding referendum before it was approved by the Legislature and sent to Gov. Richards.

But Richards, backed by several law enforcement and victims rights groups, vetoed the measure, saying it was a taxpayer-funded opinion poll for gun interests.

EXPECT: Central bank's interest-rate-setting arm to meet forecasting that banks will announce an immediate rise in their 7.75 percent benchmark prime lending rate.

A half-point increase would match the Fed's last change on Aug. 16, which pushed the funds rate to its current level of 4.75 percent and lifted the discount rate to 4 percent.

If the Fed does boost rates by a half-point today, many economists believe at least one more half-point increase will occur, either at the Fed's December meeting or early next year.

However, after that time, analysts predict, there will be enough signs of a slowdown that financial market worries of inflation will recede, and the central bank will be sit back and see if it has succeeded in slowing economic growth to an annual rate of around 2.5 percent.

If this forecast holds true, these analysts believe, 30-year bonds, which broke through the 8 percent level earlier this month, will peak at 8.25 percent. And 30-year, fixed-rate mortgages, currently at a three-year high of 9.11 percent, will peak at around 9.5 percent early next year, they say.

On the other hand, some analysts said the central bank may gamble on pushing rates up by a full percentage point today, believing such a move might actually cause long-term rates, which are set by financial markets, to come down slightly.

"A half-point move is just going to leave people wondering when the next move will come," said Bruce Steinberg, an economist at Merrill Lynch in New York. "It would be better if the Fed did more rather than less."

But one factor keeping the Fed from boosting rates a full point could be a rising chorus of complaints that the central bank's aggressive credit tightening this year has been an overreaction, given that inflation rates have remained low.

A coalition of labor, farm and civic organizations is planning a protest demonstration outside Fed headquarters today. Fed critics charge that the central bank is being held hostage to the demands of Wall Street bond traders rather than the needs of working Americans.

"Bond market traders are paranoid and out of touch with what is going on in the real world. The threat of inflation is negligible," complained Jerry Jasinowski, president of the National Association of Manufacturers.

Since Feb. 4 the Fed has boosted the funds rate by 1.75 percentage points. Analysts said that past increases of between 2 percentage points and 3 percentage points have been enough to slow the U.S. economy and anything above that level has pushed the country into a recession.

Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan and other Fed officials insist that their intention is not to trigger a recession, only to slow economic growth to a more sustainable pace as a way of keeping price pressures under control.

This scenario for a so-called soft-landing can work, but it hasn't worked often in the past. There have been nine recessions since World War II and only two times when Fed credit tightening did not trigger downturns, in 1966 and 1986, said David Wyss, an economist at DRI-McGraw Hill Inc.

"The Fed is trying to engineer a soft landing, slow things down without causing a recession, but they have been successful exactly twice," Wyss said.

ALLOW: Midland man wants to have surgical castration

(From 1A)

results speak for themselves," he said.

"In America, where incarceration, therapy and counseling are used, about half of all sex offenders are re-arrested, but the actual rates are probably higher due to under-reporting by victims," Bivins said.

Under Senate Bill 40, surgical castration would be available only to child molesters who: volunteer for the procedure; have been convicted of at least one prior sex offense against children; admit their guilt to the crime or crimes; are screened by a psychiatrist and psychologist; receive consent from their spouse; and are at least 21 years of age.

Those who undergo castration are deprived of the male hormone testosterone. This serves to inhibit their sexual impulses, Bivin said.

"I've received letters from convicted child molesters requesting surgical castration because they know they can't control their sexual urges once they're released from prison," Bivins said.

"We should give people the opportunity to receive the help they want," he added.

"We're not talking about forced castration," Cook said.

Gonzales has been unable to find a surgeon to perform the operation and is unable to pay for the operation, Cook explained.

The Bivins bill would fund the surgeries through the state, since it is much cheaper to fund the operation than to keep convicting the same people — not to mention the emotional toll on their victims, said James Hoard of Sen. Bivins Austin office.

The bill also will protect physicians from liability, thus eliminating physicians' concerns about performing the operation.

COURT: Commissioners OK holiday schedule for 1995

(From 1A)

The 12-day holiday schedule, including King's three-day weekend holiday and the four-day Independence Day holiday, was opposed only by Mrs. Valencia in a "protest" vote.

Mrs. Valencia's original motion nixed July 3, a Monday, as a county holiday. The Fourth of July falls on a Tuesday in 1995. She reasoned that "everybody has to work" on July 3, 1995, except for county employees.

"Everybody is going to be open" for business on the eve of Independence Day, she said.

Mrs. Valencia's dissenting ballot "was a protest vote because I felt our taxpayers out there are having to work on July the 3rd. And there's no reason for this courthouse to be closed on (Monday) July the 3rd." July 3, she said, "is not a holiday."

Mrs. Valencia said that she cast her dissenting vote after the four other members of the court voted for the 12-day schedule to ensure adoption of King's holiday.

"That is a federal holiday," Mrs. Valencia said at recess. "And those (black) people fought for that right, OK. We shouldn't even have thought about abolishing that (King) holiday in the county . . . and take up July the 3rd" as a holiday along with the Fourth of July. "You know, that's not right. I wanted to keep it to 11 holidays. Not only that, everybody is going to be open (for business) on July the 3rd."

The county's 12-holiday schedule for 1995 will include three four-day weekend holidays covering Independence Day, Thanksgiving and Christmas and seven three-day weekend holidays covering New Year's Day, King's birthday, Presidents Day in February, Good Friday, Memorial Day, Labor Day and 1996's New Day.

In other business, the Commissioners' Court considered paying more than $1,400 on flu vaccines for about 1,000 senior citizens for 1993's winter and paying a lesser amount for the flu shots in 1994.

"So, it's important that they get a flu shot, which will prevent their getting sick," Monette Burke, administrator for Midland Health Department, said following her and Kathleen Gilluly's meeting with the Commissioners' Court. Mrs. Gilluly is director of the Midland Senior Center operated by Community and Senior Services (CSS).

"It is mandated (by the Texas Department of Health) that the (flu) vaccine be offered to those who are at least 65 and over," Mrs. Burke said. "With age, they, perhaps, have other illnesses that might compromise their immune system and put them in a greater susceptibility to the flu."

The flu vaccine is also available to adults and children who have chronic-type illnesses, such as heart disease or asthma. "It is something that the whole population needs to consider."

The court allocated $152,647.10 to Jack Sherman Chevrolet Co. of Midland for 11 police-package cars for the Sheriff's Department. The sheriff, saying "I don't have the funds available," withdraw a request for a 12-passenger van costing about $20,000.

Navy recovers woman pilot's body

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The Navy has recovered the body of Kara Hultgreen, the first woman assigned to fly the Tomcat jet in combat who died last month during a failed landing at sea.

Hultgreen's body was found about 50 miles off the coast of San Diego in 3,700 feet of water, Senior Chief Petty Officer Pat Neal said on Monday.

The Navy discovered the sunken plane Nov. 5 and decided to return to salvage parts of the craft in an effort to determine the cause of the crash.

On Saturday, work resumed and Hultgreen's body was retrieved.

Hultgreen, 29, whose lifelong dream was to fly fighter jets, was the first woman to be assigned to fly the F-14 jet in a combat squadron since the Pentagon lifted its restrictions on female combat pilots in April 1993.

Her death, as she was attempting a landing on the USS Abraham Lincoln on Oct. 25, came three months after she received her assignment.

At the time of her death, Hultgreen was among nine female combat pilots in the Navy.

Croats issue warning amid new clashes

By Robert H. Reid
Associated Press Writer

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina — Bosnian Serbs rolling back government army gains moved closer to the Croatian border on Monday, provoking a warning from Croatia that it might come to Bosnia's aid.

Any offensive by Croatia against either Bosnian Serbs or its own rebel Serbs could spin fighting in the region out of control, and possibly tempt Yugoslavia to enter the war.

Over the past few days, Bosnian Serbs have retaken 80 percent of the land in northwestern Bosnia's Bihac pocket that they had lost in recent weeks to the Muslim-led government army, U.N. officials said.

Rebel Croatian Serbs — only a few miles away — have provided artillery cover to the Bosnian Serbs, with government troops defending Bihac sandwiched between them.

Croatian Serbs captured one-third of Croatia in 1991 after the republic seceded from Yugoslavia. Their involvement in the Bihac fighting could give the Croatian government an opportunity to attack the rebels and regain the land, despite a nearly 3-year-old cease-fire there.

However, State Department officials in Washington said the United States has been trying to discourage Croatia from getting involved militarily to avoid an escalation in the war.

The officials, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Croatia seriously considered joining the fighting, but now was leaning against it.

Serbia, which dominates what is left of Yugoslavia, stopped providing fuel and supplies to the Bosnian Serbs in August as it seeks to end crippling U.N. sanctions against it for fomenting the war. But Bosnian Serbs have suggested ties with Serbia are on the mend because of the U.S. decision to stop enforcing the arms embargo against the Muslim-led Bosnian government.

Russia, a traditional Serb ally, is highly critical of the U.S. move. Russian special envoy Alexander Zotov met in Belgrade, Yugoslavia, Monday with Serbian President Slobodan Milosevic.

Bosnia voted to secede from Yugoslavia in April 1992, prompting its Serb minority to rebel. Fighting flared anew since a Muslim-Bosnian Croat alliance captured the central city of Kupres this month.

A U.N. spokesman, Maj. Koos Sol, reported Bosnian Serb soldiers in the northwest had pushed the government army to about six miles east of downtown Bihac, which is about eight miles from the Croatian border.

That was near the frontline which existed before government forces launched their offensive last month.

Another U.N. spokesman, Maj. Herve Gourmelon, reported firefights two miles east of central Bihac.

Bosnian radio said four rockets fired from Bosnian Serb territory hit the Cazin region north of Bihac, causing casualties and heavy damage. The United Nations said several ground-to-air missiles were fired by Bosnian Serbs at Cazin and Bihac.

But Bosnian army sources and confidential U.N. reports obtained by The Associated Press indicated government forces still maintained key defensive positions, and there was no indication Bihac was in imminent danger of falling.

Rugged terrain stands between the Bosnian Serbs and Bihac, which the U.N. Security Council declared a safe area in 1993.

The clearest warning of possible Croatian military involvement came from Darko Bekic, a Croatian diplomat.

"If Bihac falls ... we will be forced to assist neighboring Bosnia-Herzegovina," Croatia's HINA news agency quoted Bekic as saying.

Strong quake jolts Philippines

Temblor measuring 6.7 on island's north end claims three lives

By Thomas Wagner
Associated Press Writer

MANILA, Philippines — A strong earthquake rocked the Philippine island of Mindoro early Tuesday, killing at least three people and destroying some homes.

The quake, which struck at 3:15 a.m. local time, had a preliminary magnitude of 6.7 and was centered in a strait six miles north of Calapan, a town on the northern end of the island, said the Philippine Institute of Vulcanology and Seismology.

The U.S. Geological Survey in Menlo Park, Calif., put the quake's preliminary magnitude at 7.1.

The quake was felt throughout the central and south Philippines, including Manila, 75 miles north of the epicenter, said Ted Sandoval, a specialist at the institute.

People in tall hotels in Manila were awakened by the swaying, but no damage was immediately reported in the city.

Before phone lines were cut off on Mindoro Island, Gov. Rodolfo Valencia of Oriental Mindoro province told DZMM radio in Manila that at least three people died when their homes collapsed or were washed away by large waves.

Three bridges were damaged and closed, he said.

Sandoval said no tidal waves were reported from the quake, which was one of the strongest ever to occur on the Lubang fault, one of the area's most active.

A magnitude 6 quake can cause severe damage if centered under a populated area, while a magnitude 7 quake indicates a major quake capable of widespread, heavy damage.

Pope says church must acknowledge past sins

Associated Press

VATICAN CITY — Pope John Paul II says his church must mark the year 2000 by owning up to the sins of Roman Catholics over the centuries, including religious intolerance and acquiescence in human rights abuses.

John Paul's views, set down in a letter released Monday, appeared to be a major step toward meeting critics' demands for a self-examination of Church errors as it approaches its third millennium, which it considers as beginning in 2000.

John Paul said the Church must express "profound regret for the weakness of so many of her sons and daughters who sullied her face."

The pope stopped short of citing particular abuses or of blaming the Church as such. But he appeared to be calling for Catholics to reflect on periods such as the Spanish Inquisition and the Nazi Holocaust that have led critics to question the Church's conduct.

The 74-year-old John Paul also expressed a wish to lead a pilgrimage to the holy places in the Middle East in 2000, a sign he doesn't view his papacy as slowing down as some have suggested because of recent illness.

"The church should become more fully conscious of the sinfulness of her children, recalling all those times in history when they departed from the spirit of Christ and his Gospel," John Paul said in the letter to Roman Catholics.

Some critics have said the Vatican should fully acknowledge abuses in the name of religion such as the Inquisition. Critics have also accused the Church of failing to use its full moral authority to prevent the extermination of European Jewry by the Nazis, a charge the Vatican has always denied.

Cardinal Roger Etchegaray, presenting the 71-page letter at a Vatican news conference, would not go beyond the pope's wording but said he expected clarifications before celebrations marking the new millennium.

Referring to a "painful chapter of history," the pope mentioned the "acquiescence given, especially in certain centuries, to intolerance and even the use of violence in the service of truth."

Later, referring to modern times, John Paul asked, "how can we not lament the lack of discernment, which at times became even acquiescence, shown by many Christians concerning the violation of fundamental rights by totalitarian regimes?"

John Paul also called for a major push for closer relations with other Christian denominations and for meetings with non-Christians.

Iraqi tells high court of plot to kill Bush

Associated Press

KUWAIT — An Iraqi nurse told Kuwait's high court Monday that he came to Kuwait last year to murder former President Bush but not to kill Kuwaitis.

Wali al-Gazali is one of seven Iraqis and two Kuwaitis who have appealed convictions for plotting to kill Bush during his April 1993 visit to the emirate. Gazali was sentenced to death.

"It is true that I came to murder Bush. Bush has killed 16 of my people," Gazali, 37, told the court without elaborating. "Do not put me on trial for intending to kill any Kuwaitis. I came for Bush."

Gazali is from southern Iraq, which was bombed by the allies when Bush led the 1991 Gulf War to liberate Kuwait.

Last year, al-Gazali told a State Security Court that Iraqi intelligence agents gave him a belt loaded with explosives to blow himself up near Bush in case the car bomb failed to do the job.

Baghdad has denied any involvement in the plot, foiled a day before Bush's arrival when security forces found explosives hidden in the desert.

But last year President Clinton ordered a retaliatory missile attack on an intelligence headquarters in the Iraqi capital. Eight people died in the strike.

The World in brief

■ Storm, floods kill at least 100 in Haiti

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti — Heavy rains and flooding from Tropical Storm Gordon swept across Haiti on Monday, killing at least 100 people, triggering landslides and washing away makeshift homes in the slums of the capital.

Terrified people fled their homes in the early morning darkness as floodwaters poured in. Some spent the night huddled on their rooftops in the downpour.

By the time the skies cleared, thousands of people were left homeless.

"I didn't save anything, only myself," said Lekeas Dorvilier, 35, who jumped out the window of his two-room home minutes before it crumbled into a ravine.

Bodies lay in the sun in some neighborhoods. Many of the victims lived in flimsy tin shacks on hillsides. Rescue workers said they expected the death toll to climb.

President Jean-Bertrand Aristide flew over his battered nation in a U.S. military helicopter to survey damage from the 1994 Atlantic hurricane season's deadliest storm.

"Obviously we will do what we can to help the Haitian government," said Col. Barry Willey, a U.S. military spokesman.

Thousands of U.S. soldiers arrived in the Caribbean nation in September to help restore Aristide's elected government. Aristide, who was ousted in a 1991 coup, returned Oct. 15.

Two deaths also were reported in Jamaica, where the storm caused widespread flooding and mudslides. At least two people were killed in Cuba and 65,000 were evacuated, Cuba's official Prensa Latina news agency reported.

The storm killed at least 40 people in Port-au-Prince, the Haitian Press Agency said. Radio Metropole said 40 people were killed in the southeastern port Jacmel, and dozens more were missing. And radio station Signal FM said 20 people were killed in Leogane, about 40 miles west of Port-au-Prince.

The main highway from Port-au-Prince to Jacmel was cut and trucks from the charity CARE, which feeds about 300,000 people, couldn't cross shaky bridges to reach its warehouse in Gonaives, north of the capital, aid officials said.

■ Mandela memoirs report plot to kill him

LONDON (AP) — President Nelson Mandela says that when he was a political prisoner South African security agents tried to lure him into a phony escape plot so he could be assassinated.

In the first extract from Mandela's memoirs, published in the Observer on Sunday, Mandela told of his 18 years in prison on Robben Island off Cape Town — "the harshest, most iron-fisted outpost in the South African penal system."

The memoirs, titled "Long Walk to Freedom," describe the struggle for black freedom from his youth in Transkei to 10,000 days in prison and eventual victory for blacks at the ballot box. The book will go on sale in the United States on Nov. 28.

Mandela said that in 1969, five years after being exiled to the island, a prison guard pretending to be sympathetic said he was ready to help him escape.

"I had heard rumors that our people on the outside were organizing an escape for me, and had infiltrated a warder on to the island who would assist me," Mandela wrote.

The prison guard explained the plan: He would provide Mandela with a key so he could escape from his cell. He would drug the guards on duty at the lighthouse so a boat could land undetected. Mandela would escape aboard the boat, then be equipped with diving equipment to swim into Cape Town harbor.

He would then be taken to an airport and flown out of South Africa.

"I listened to the plan in its entirety and did not reveal to him how far-fetched it sounded," Mandela wrote. He did not go along with it.

■ U.S., Japan begin giant war games

MISAWA, Japan (AP) — The United States and Japan on Monday launched their largest war games ever, sending 26,500 troops into mock battle in what officers called a show of readiness to repel post-Cold War threats.

"In the military these days, if you're not ready to operate anywhere in the world, you're probably not doing a good job," said Capt. Mark Rutter of Huntsville, Ala.

He spoke on the runway of the U.S. Misawa Air Base, 350 miles north of Tokyo on the Pacific coast, as F-16 and A-10 warplanes took off in an intermittent snowstorm for mock attacks on planes and ships.

The wargames, called "Keen Edge," bring together members of all four U.S. military branches and Japan's three services. They involve more than 400 aircraft and 27 ships, as well as the 25th Light Infantry Division from Hawaii. The 13,500 Japanese and 13,000 American troops involved are believed to be a record number for U.S.-Japanese exercises, said U.S. spokesman Maj. Kevin K. Krejcarek.

The end of the Cold War means not only budget cuts, but also a broader range of potential crises that U.S. forces in Asia, including the 45,000 American troops stationed in Japan, believe they need to be ready for.

■ Police block rally, Arafat cracks down

GAZA CITY, Gaza Strip (AP) — Yasser Arafat ordered his security forces Monday to block Islamic militants from holding a rally for a suicide bomber and hunt down leaders of the most violent faction opposed to peace with Israel.

Palestinian police set up roadblocks, searched cars and turned away activists of the Islamic Jihad movement trying to reach the memorial for Hisham Hamad. Three Israeli soldiers were killed Friday when he rode a bicycle into an Israeli army checkpost and set off explosives strapped to his body.

Monday was the first time Palestinian police enforced a new ban on street protests as part of a widening crackdown on Muslim militants that also included the arrests of about 180 activists since the weekend.

Nevertheless, more than 500 militants managed to bypass police and rally outside Hamad's house, calling on Arafat to halt the crackdown and threatening attacks against Israeli targets.

"Arafat, we are not afraid of your arrests!" the demonstrators chanted as a man in the crowd burned an Israeli flag to cheers. "We are ready to kill and be killed!"

"Rabin, ... be ready for the next explosion. Be prepared for body bags," one orator warned over a loudspeaker.

Despite the rhetoric, the police barriers prevented most militants from arriving and forced Islamic Jihad to postpone a symbolic funeral procession from Hamad's home. Hamad's body already had been buried in secret Friday by Palestinian police.

■ First Lady gets look at Indonesia art

JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP) — Hillary Rodham Clinton glimpsed the art and artistry of this nation of islands Monday, touring a cultural park with displays of delicately carved jade and wood and watching dancers garbed in a blaze of bright colors.

She gave an enthusiastic review to a fashion show by Indonesia's premier batik designer, Iwan Tirta, who like Mrs. Clinton is a graduate of Yale Law School.

The first lady jokingly told him: "It's nice to know lawyers can make good things."

"The batik I've seen before doesn't have the color, variety and the design of the batik I've seen here. I love it," said Mrs. Clinton.

Clinton keeps pressure on North Korea

By Terence Hunt
Associated Press

JAKARTA, Indonesia — In an orchestrated show of unity, President Clinton won pledges Monday from China, Japan and South Korea to keep the pressure on North Korea to freeze its suspected nuclear weapons program.

Clinton, after one-on-one talks with presidents and prime ministers, said North Korea's neighbors offered "their strong support" for the accord to freeze and ultimately dismantle Pyongyang's nuclear program.

China, South Korea and Japan already had endorsed the North Korean agreement, but Clinton showcased the issue because many details of how to implement the pact over 10 years remain to be worked out.

Clinton said the plan — providing North Korea with alternate fuels and new light-water reactors for giving up its nuclear program — would "require a lot of efforts on several fronts."

Perhaps the thorniest question is how to divide the estimated $4 billion cost of the deal. Japan and South Korea are expected to shoulder most of the burden.

After one-on-one talks and a ceremonial dinner opening the 18-nation Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation (APEC) forum, Clinton met again Monday night with Japanese Prime Minister Tomiichi Murayama and South Korean President Kim Young-Sam at their request to further discuss the nuclear accord.

Administration officials said the session was intended to help underscore the importance of the agreement to the United States in order to help Murayama and Kim sell the deal at home.

The Asian and Pacific leaders were expected to endorse Tuesday a blueprint for a free-trade pact that would tear down trade barriers across the Pacific Rim over the next quarter-century.

Clinton, on his second trip abroad in recent weeks, was closely questioned by his foreign counterparts on last week's GOP election sweep. Pledging cooperation with Republicans, Clinton said, "My strategy will be to have an open door and to have a lot of contact."

Still jet-lagged after back-to-back trips to the Middle East and Asia with nonstop campaigning in between, Clinton joked, "I think I'm still somewhere between Jordan and Jerusalem."

Clinton held a news conference in a lush garden at the U.S. ambassador's residence where his remarks mixed with the whistles of song birds.

He brushed aside objections from allies about halting American enforcement of the Bosnian arms embargo. Clinton portrayed his move as preferable to an outright revocation of the arms ban, insisting, "We are not violating the arms embargo."

Asia is the world's fastest growing economic region, and U.S. trade across the Pacific is three times as large as that with European nations.

U.S. officials predicted endorsement Tuesday of a statement calling for "open and free trade" throughout the region by the year 2020. Industrial companies would try to achieve the goal by 2010 while less-developed countries and newly developed nations would aim at the 2020 target.

The North Korean accord and trade took precedence over U.S. concerns about human rights problems in China. Human rights issues have receded since Clinton granted China most-favored-nation trade status last May without regard to its human rights conduct.

Defending his approach, Clinton said the United States, perhaps more than any other country, "consistently and regularly raises human rights issues."

He said he discussed the subject with Chinese President Jiang Zemin and raised specific issues.

"We made it absolutely clear," Clinton said, "that in order for the United States' relationship with China to fully flower, there had to be progress on all fronts."

He said he also would press for human rights reforms in Indonesia.

Clinton expressed sympathy for students who scaled the fence of the U.S. Embassy here and were occupying embassy grounds to protest Indonesian policy in East Timor, annexed by Indonesia in 1976.

In talks with Murayama, Clinton discussed remaining areas of friction over trade, pressing Japan to further open up its auto markets to U.S. imports.

High court revives college's attempted ouster of professor

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court has revived a New York college's effort to oust a professor accused of making an anti-Semitic speech as the chairman of its black-studies department.

The court set aside on Monday rulings that said City College of New York violated Leonard Jeffries' free-speech rights by removing him as chairman.

The justices ordered the 2nd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals to restudy Jeffries' case in light of their decision last May that gave public employers greater freedom to fire employees for the things they say.

In other matters Monday, the high court:

■Agreed to decide in a Texas case whether people must pay income taxes on back pay and damages they receive by suing their employers over alleged age bias.

■ Ruled, by a 5-4 vote, that injured workers, and by extension passengers, can sue a subsidiary railroad of the Port Authority of New York and New Jersey in federal court.

The court said the authority is vulnerable to such lawsuits because the two states that created it are not required to pay its debts.

■ Turned away the appeal of a German woman who says she's the rightful owner of a Claude Monet oil painting that apparently was stolen from a castle during World War II.

Jeffries' dispute with City College of New York dates back to a 1991 speech he gave at a black cultural festival in Albany, N.Y. In it, he accused Jews of financing the slave trade and said Jews and the Mafia conspired to belittle blacks in the movies.

Jeffries also made unflattering remarks about some Jewish colleagues.

GOP vows 7-day workweeks to pass agenda

Speaker-to-be Gingrich appears at crowded news conference with Rep. Armey, next majority leader, leaders of Republican transition team.

WASHINGTON (AP) — With their leader pledging a "very profound change in government" Republicans said Monday they would hold the House in session seven days a week if necessary next year to vote on a 100-day agenda ranging from tax cuts to welfare reform.

"This is time to be open to dramatic, bold changes," Speaker-to-be Newt Gingrich told a crowded news conference at which he was flanked by Rep. Richard Armey of Texas, introduced as the next majority leader, and the leaders of a GOP transition team.

Gingrich later walked to the other side of the Capitol to meet Senate GOP Leader Bob Dole. On an unseasonably warm day, the two men sat on an outside terrace discussing their plans for the 104th Congress. "It's a great opportunity," Dole said later of the Republican majorities in both houses.

He said he expected close cooperation between the houses. "If he has a bill and we have a bill, hopefully they will be the same," Dole said. "We need to coordinate whenever we can. That doesn't mean we are never going to disagree."

Earlier, Armey said Republicans would be hard-pressed to gain the two-thirds majority needed for a Constitutional amendment setting term limits for lawmakers and to balance the budget. But he predicted most of the "Contract with America" would pass.

House officials stressed that almost nothing would be immune from review as they take control after a 40-year Democratic majority.

■ Gingrich, R-Ga., said he didn't "automatically reject" a cut in the lawmakers' $133,600 annual salary, with a reduction in the amount of time Congress remains in session. He also announced creation of a bipartisan group to study changes in the House schedule that would make it easier on the personal lives of junior lawmakers with school-age children.

■ One GOP lawmaker suggested the Republicans might cut off federal funds for numerous organizations such as the Black Caucus; the Arts caucus and the Hunger caucus. These are groups formed by lawmakers to push a variety of interests within the House. Lawmakers donate funds from their office account to pay for them at a cost of a few million dollars annually.

■ GOP aides said it was possible the size of congressional committees would be cut as Republicans achieve their goal of reducing committee staffs by one-third.

■ Republican officials said hundreds of Democratic aides would be out of work, some relatively quickly when the new Congress convenes. Some Republicans reported being inundated with resumes from job seekers.

There was no clearer signal of the House's new order than the news conference at which Gingrich, Armey and others spoke. It was carried live on CNN and attended by an overflow crowd of reporters.

Gingrich and Armey said the "Contract with America" signed by more than 300 House candidates would be pushed to a vote within 100 days, as promised. The proposals include welfare reform; a crime bill; a series of tax cuts, including a reduction on capital gains and relief for families and certain senior citizens; a balanced budget amendment, term limits and other measures.

"We will complete the contract within 100 days," Armey said. "If that means working seven days (a week), we'll work seven days. If that means working 20 hours a day, we'll work 20 hours a day."

PACs break historical trend , favor GOP down stretch

By Richard Keil
Associated Press

In the final weeks of the congressional election, corporate America and its money-rich political action committees took a decisive turn to the right.

For the last decade, PACs showered the lion's share of their money on entrenched Democrats, even though many of the PACs were more ideologically aligned with the GOP's pro-business, low-tax philosophy.

It was a practical decision — the cost of doing business on Capitol Hill.

But when Republicans positioned themselves this fall to take control of Congress for the first time in four decades, the PACs made a big shift, an Associated Press computer-assisted analysis found.

Since 1984, Democratic congressional candidates have outraised their Republican counterparts 2-1 in PAC contributions.

But in the first 19 days of October, PACs doled out $9.1 million to Republican candidates for the Senate and House, nearly matching the $10 million they gave to Democrats over the same period, the AP review found.

Take away the money from labor union PACs, which give almost exclusively to Democrats, and the Republicans enjoyed a healthy edge from business PACs. In past elections, Republicans were lucky to attract the same amount of money that Democrats were getting from corporate PACs, Federal Elections Commission records show.

In the clearest sign of the reversal of fortunes, Republican challengers and candidates for open seats received more in PAC donations in 1994 than their Democratic counterparts — $16.1 million to $15.6 million, the AP analysis found.

That reflected a huge change from 1992, when Democratic challengers and open-seat contestants outraised their GOP counterparts among PACs by a firm 2-to-1 margin.

Democrats felt the pinch.

"Guys that I didn't think were raising much money were reporting two or three times as much money (in October). That's when I realized the magnitude of the problem," said Gary Nordlinger, a consultant who ran seven Democratic congressional campaigns.

Though Republican leaders made a hard-knuckled pitch for late PAC dollars, many givers cited costly new regulations or tax increases in the Clinton administration's 1993 tax bill as reasons for snubbing Democrats.

Illinois senator announces plans to retire in 1996

CHICAGO (AP) — Sen. Paul Simon, the bow-tie wearing New Deal disciple who battled Robert Bork's Supreme Court nomination and briefly ran for president, said Monday he will not run for re-election in 1996.

Simon, Illinois' top elected Democrat, said he wants to retire before he loses his enthusiasm and doesn't want to mount the massive fund-raising campaign necessary for another race.

"I have an obligation to the people of Illinois, to the Senate and to myself to leave the Senate while I am still eager to serve, not after I tire of serving," he said.

Simon said the Republican landslide in last week's elections wasn't a factor in his decision, adding that he believes the Senate needs "people who believe we have problems the government can help."

Simon said he has no plans beyond 1996, when his six-year term expires, but made it clear he is not considering another presidential race.

The son of Lutheran missionaries, the 65-year-old Simon was known in Congress for his straight-laced demeanor and honesty, as well as his signature bow tie. After 10 years in the House, he was elected to the Senate in 1984, defeating Republican Sen. Charles Percy. In 1988, he briefly sought the Democratic presidential nomination.

Simon said he would have to raise between $6 million and $10 million to run for re-election and spend at least one-third of his time fund-raising.

"I enjoy politics, I enjoy campaigning, I enjoy policymaking, I do not enjoy fund-raising," Simon said.

A product of the Depression — which taught him "you have to be careful with money" — Simon has blended fiscal conservatism and social liberalism.

He fought for a balanced budget amendment alongside conservative Republican Sen. Strom Thurmond, establishing his reputation as a "pay-as-you-go" Democrat who would rather raise taxes than rely on deficit financing.

Gramm's entry spotlights Texas

U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm's notification Sunday that he will file as a Republican candidate for the presidency in 1996 should not have surprised anyone. It has been obvious for years that the senior senator from Texas had his eye on the Oval Office.

Gramm's timing of the confirmation that he will seek the nomination, coming less than a week after voters took control of the U.S. House and Senate away from Democrats and gave it to Republicans, was also predictable. Republicans want to capitalize as much as possible on the voter mandate for change in the government — not only in the Congress but in the White House as well. That necessarily means people like Gramm, who has been an outspoken advocate for conservative government, will be in the forefront of politics for the remainder of President Clinton's term, criticizing his leadership and pointing up ways in which they perceive the Democrats are avoiding the mandate given them by the electorate.

While Gramm is one of the earliest and most visible Republicans to throw his hat in the ring for '96, he most likely will not be the last. Although he has been effective as an advocate of fiscal responsibility and a number of other conservative causes and deserves credit in that regard, Gramm's personality has been perhaps his own worst enemy. He is perceived as arrogant and self-centered by other members of Congress and such a reputation will no doubt hurt him on the campaign trail ahead.

Few Texans will argue that Gramm has failed to serve the interests of the Lone Star State and he will also bring to the coming presidential race a level of expertise and talent few now apparent on the political horizon can muster. His entry into the '96 presidential race is just another indication of the role Texans are playing in the political life of the nation.

Congressional perks are way out of hand

While you are struggling to make ends meet, pity your poor congresspersons.

What you pay them in salary and perks has gone up only $7,544 since August 1992, Money magazine reports. It's hard to see how they can possibly get along on such static recompense.

Money estimates the cost of running Congress this year at $2.8 billion.

The congressional salary, now $133,600, is up from $129,500 in 1992. Out of deference to the voters, the lawmakers have decided for the second year in a row to forgo an automatic 2.1 percent cost-of-living adjustment. They're even talking seriously about skipping a 2.6 percent COLA for 1995, Money says.

But there's no inclination (except in the taxpayers' minds) to cut the annual value of perks, which the magazine estimates now at $42,146 a year per member and boosts our annual support for each lawmaker to $175,746.

The estimate includes $27,121 for the lawmaker's pension plan, $6,680 in matching contributions to his or her tax-deferred savings plan, $3,648 for health insurance (75 percent of the premium) and some less-costly perks.

Congresspersons are being furnished — mostly at your expense — a Cadillac pension system few Americans can even dream of.

This retirement system not only pays monthly benefits far exceeding most private-sector pension plans, but includes cost-of-living adjustments.

Of course, congresspersons also get thousands of dollars a year free postage to tell you how valuable they are.

Maybe someday inflation would erode their pensions enough to bring them in line with their constituents'.

Their perks are way out of hand.

Aging champion Foreman truly 'one for the ages'

The last time we offered an opinion about George Foreman, it was to express our sincere desire that he not get hurt during this past Saturday's world heavyweight championship fight.

Well, he got punched hard and an eye swelled up, but it was world champ Michael Moorer who hit the canvas at the MGM Grand in Las Vegas as the boxing world went wild over its new, almost 46-year-old champion.

We're proud and happy for Foreman, the Marshall native who trains at his ranch in southern Harrison County. We share in the pride of his victory, but it's his victory.

In a world of sports heroes gone bad, Foreman represents a wonderful change. He is a man who has a sense of humor about himself. Even with all the jokes about his eating habits, there can be no doubt that he's among the most fit 45-year-old men alive. He's full of the bluster common to athletes, but as any one of them would tell you, it's not bragging if you can back it up.

More than anything else, George Foreman is simply a nice guy and it's great when a nice guy finishes first. He is a sportsman in the true sense of the word — a man who knows his craft and his abilities, but also a man who is a pleasure to be around. Stories about his concern for children, and his own religious faith, only add to his legend, making George Foreman truly one for the ages.

WILLIAM MURCHISON

Clinton is victim of political revolution

The president, though sorely out of practice, could not have been calmer or more reasonable in his post-election press conference. Yes, the Republicans had won a great victory; yes, he himself bore a share of the blame; yes, he hoped to work with the new congressional leadership; no, he wouldn't compromise his principles for the sake of temporary gain.

Mur Murchison

But when all's said, Bill Clinton may have relatively little to do with the political process. Not that the powers of his great office have been lessened by electoral defeat, but the wielder of those powers has became an irrelevancy.

Clinton will cooperate? Clinton will work with the Republicans? Big deal. The president of the United States has suddenly, unaccountably become a fifth wheel in terms of formulating the national agenda. The national agenda for the next two years will not reflect the yearnings of the Democratic left, as it has for two years. The agenda will reflect the vision of the Republican right and center — a coalition with its eye on the 1996 presidential election. Help Bill Clinton? Why should the Republicans, apart from residual gratitude for all the help he's been to them in turning the country against the big-governmentism he represents?

We haven't had a measly change of power in Washington. We've had a revolution. That is, it will be a revolution, assuming the Republicans grasp and act quickly on their historic opportunity.

It seems highly likely they will do so. First, they have coherent leadership — in the House, Newt Gingrich and Dick Armey; in the Senate, Phil Gramm and Bob Dole, both of whom want to be president and don't want to muff their chance.

Second, they have a vision — the "Contract for America," which pledges overhaul of the traditional way of doing business in Washington, D.C. A contract is a contract. Any discovery of escape clauses in this one would bring into the streets of Washington tumbrels and pikes and cries for bloody revenge against the apostates. In short, there are more than theoretical reasons for the Republicans to live up to the contract; there are practical, everyday reasons, like self-preservation.

But somehow, one doesn't fancy that dutch-uncle talk to the Republicans will be needful. The chance that fate and circumstance have accorded the congressional GOP is staggering. To evade it, to slough it off, would be to slough off the party's modern reason for existence.

"The voters chose a new direction," on Nov. 8, said GOP national chairman Haley Barbour, "because they recognize government is already too big for its britches, and we're not getting our money's worth for our tax dollars.

The sense most voters share, that prosperity isn't increasing or broadening, is correct. The government appropriates and spends nearly half our national wealth, out of the snobbish, misbegotten conviction that government programs are better than any other kind. Those who govern us fancy they have all the answers; if you have any doubts, just ask.

So the governing caste has believed for 60 years. We're getting past that now. The omnicompetence of government — in which Bill Clinton seems to believe, or why was his health care plan so bureaucratic and awful? — is a proposition soundly rejected by the voters this year.

Israel, not Hamas, is obstacle to peace

One threat to the peace process in Israel comes not from Hamas, the Islamic outfit, but from some American Jews.

Robert Friedman wrote in the New York Review of Books (6/23/94), "Israeli government officials say that a far greater threat to peace comes from charitable, tax-exempt foundations in the U.S. that funnel money to organizations representing Israel's 144 settlements."

Reese

Tsadok Yecheskeli, New York-based correspondent for the Israeli daily newspaper Yediot Ahronot, has reported that some of the settler groups plan to use the U.S. money to buy military equipment and that the Israeli government fears these weapons will be used for indiscriminate attacks against Arabs and possibly even Israeli soldiers.

Clearly, the Clinton administration should act as diligently to cut off funds from the United States to Jewish terrorist groups as it should to cut off funds directed to Arab terrorists. No American should wish to see innocent people killed by men driven mad by ideology or religion, whether they are Jewish or Muslim.

But it may not be as simple as Secretary of State Warren Christopher makes it sound. Hamas, like the Jewish settler groups, also runs humanitarian operations such as clinics and schools. It is not always easy to know when a dollar leaves the United States whether it will buy a bandage or a bullet. And just as not all Jewish settlers advocate murdering Palestinians, not all Hamas people advocate violence against Israeli civilians.

As for Americans calling for Yasser Arafat to do something about Hamas, that's nonsense. In the first place, recent attacks against Israelis have not taken place in areas under Arafat's control but in areas under Israeli control. In the second place, if the Israelis with 120,000 soldiers and a massive secret police organization cannot eliminate Hamas, how does anyone expect Arafat with 7,000 to 9,000 police to do it?

As an interesting historical aside, the Israeli government is credited with encouraging Hamas a few years ago because, at the time, it was waging all-out propaganda war against the PLO and wanted to divide Palestinian loyalties. Now, of course, the situation is reversed, and Israel wants to work with the PLO, which is committed to the peace process.

Actually, Arafat has the solution to the problem of Hamas: Israeli withdrawal. Withdraw from the rest of Gaza and the West Bank, Arafat says, and he will be able to reason with the Palestinians. Hamas feeds on Israeli occupation. It feeds on the human misery and grief caused by Israeli reprisals, on the brutalization of Palestinians by Jewish settlers.

MIKE ROYKO

Campaign ads should be banned from TV

There used to be liquor commercials on TV. Not only for beer or wine but genuine 86-proof, skull-popper hootch. Now, you don't see them.

There used to be cigarette commercials on TV with macho guys and sexy women filling the air with smoke. They're gone, too.

Commercials for booze and smokes were banned from TV by Congress because we don't want children and young people getting the idea that being sloshed or sucking in smoke is acceptable behavior.

Royko

At the time the decisions to outlaw such commercials were made, there was a lot of wailing about how they infringed on free speech, private enterprise and freedom of choice.

They didn't. Any American adult who chooses to can still drink or smoke himself into an early grave.

But it can be argued that the bans probably prevented many impressionable kids from thinking there is something glamorous about hitting the sauce or lighting up.

So maybe it is time to seriously consider banning a product that is clearly dangerous to our mental health.

I'm talking about political advertising on TV.

By now, everyone agrees that we just finished watching some of the lowest, dirtiest, most deceitful political campaigns in memory.

From local offices up to races for the U.S. Senate and governor, we were swamped with smears, trick photography, flat-out lies and con games.

That's one of the reasons why the turnout was so low. People turned away in disgust.

And there is no reason to believe that TV campaigning will get any better because the professional liars who hire out to run these campaigns know that lies and deceit are easier to sell than truth. They aren't going to walk away from a good thing.

It's TV advertising that allows a rich mope such as Michael Huffington, a man with few credentials or ideas, to be pushed by a scheming and ambitious wife into spending $27 million of his family fortune to try to buy a seat in the U.S. Senate.

With the reach of TV and that much of daddy's money to play with, a Michael Huffington might have crushed an Abe Lincoln or a Thomas Jefferson.

That's all it takes to be a serious candidate today: a big wad and the phone number of a professional political hired gun.

Those who aren't born with the money that Huffington was can take another approach: selling their souls and future votes to special interests. They become something like junkies. But instead of thinking day and night about where their next dope hits will come from, they're obsessed with raising money for their next TV campaigns.

But try to imagine political campaigns without unlimited TV advertising, campaigns in which each candidate is allowed only a limited and an equal amount of air time.

Most of the roving campaign liars would be out of work. It's one thing to create a 15-second commercial in which the opponent's face melts and reappears as Satan. But it's another to write a lengthy speech for the candidate to deliver before an audience of voters who just yell: "Hey, cut the bull, pal, and tell us what you are going to do."

There's a political cliche that tells us: "Television is the precinct captain."

While there's truth in that, it's also an insult to the dying breed of flesh-and-blood campaign workers who rang doorbells, handed out literature and talked to voters. They might have tried to sway you, promising small favors or calling upon your friendship or shared background. But if they pushed too hard or told whoppers, you could challenge them, talk back or slam the door in their faces. But what can you say to the liar who enters your living room by way of your TV set?

Without TV commercials, a candidate would have to find ways to generate loyalty among grass-roots people, the volunteers who used to be the heart of a campaign. That means having ideas that are more than some spin doctor's slick sound-bite creation.

Instead of relying on morphine, media buys and malevolence, a candidate would have to actually hoof into Elks Clubs, old people's homes and community centers to make real speeches, hold real debates and prove that he or she has something to offer. Instead of hiding behind his pollster and marketing whiz, a candidate would have to get back to the factory gates, the subway platforms and anywhere else a pamphlet could be handed out, a hand squeezed or a question answered.

It would rejuvenate political organizations at the grass roots, and that would carry over into stronger national parties. It would no longer be every rich man for himself and to heck with paying dues and party values. A person might have to prove that he could run for highway commissioner before he aims at the U.S. Senate.

Most politicians say they favor campaign reform. Some of them even mean it.

Good, then there is no reason they should want to preserve the means to tell lies that would make a used-car dealer blush.

Biology, sociology causes hypertension in blacks, doctors say

WASHINGTON (AP) — It's a question that has frustrated doctors for decades: Why do black Americans suffer more high blood pressure, with worse consequences, than whites?

Sociologists said poverty, geneticists suggested genes, but all the theories had major flaws. Now doctors have a new theory: That a chief culprit is chronic, physically debilitating stress not just from poverty but from black Americans' entire social-economic status.

"It's very important research and it's long overdue," said Dr. Elijah Saunders of the University of Maryland, co-founder of the International Society on Hypertension in Blacks.

High blood pressure, a major cause of heart disease, strokes and kidney failure, afflicts about 62 million Americans. It is a huge health risk for everyone, but black Americans get hypertension one-third more often than whites, they get it earlier in life and they suffer more-severe health consequences.

The tough part, said Dr. Norman Anderson of Duke University, is proving "how is it that ... (social-economic status) gets under the skin?"

Anderson, whose research prompted the National Institutes of Health to invest in the theory, thinks this chronic stress incites the nervous system to release strong amounts of a vital brain hormone called norepinephrine. That hormone causes the kidneys to slow their elimination of salt from the body — and the more sodium in the bloodstream, the more risk for high blood pressure.

Animal studies proved the hormone reaction, so Anderson then studied 26 black women on strict low-salt diets, giving them extra infusions of sodium to measure their reactions. The higher their social-economic status, the more salt they excreted over 24 hours.

"If this holds up, it could partially account for some of the differences in hypertension," Anderson told a recent meeting of behavioral scientists.

He'll have to prove blacks' social stress is chronically higher, but already cites dozens of sociological studies that show low-income blacks live in more violent, impoverished, hopeless and even polluted conditions than their white counterparts.

Still, his theory excited experts already intrigued by last summer's discovery that blacks' veins are less flexible and more difficult to dilate. University of Georgia researcher Dr. Randall Tackett speculated then that the rigidity could stem from the reaction of the veins' lining to certain hormones.

"It's a plausible theory," said Dr. Jerome Fleg, a hypertension expert at NIH. "Nobody else has any better ideas at this point. But ... you have to ask the question, though, whether in whites the same degree of stress would cause the same symptom."

The NIH's National Institute of Aging thinks the meshing of biology and sociology so promising that it's investing, as part of an $8.4 million research program into older minorities' health. Of six new NIA health centers, Duke and Rutgers University are studying the physical effects of blacks' psychosocial traits, with Rutgers focusing on the immune system.

It's very preliminary work — and difficult to prove, Saunders cautioned.

"What's stress in you may not be stress to me," he said. "And whatever those stress factors are, we've got to see that it ultimately causes the blood vessel to be more constricted. ... But it's promising."

Gunman shoots six people, kills one in spree at group homes

WAUSAU, Wis. (AP) — A junk dealer who thought people were stealing from him shot six people at two group homes where he volunteered as a driver, killing a 7-year-old girl, police said Monday.

Four of the wounded, including the girl who died Monday, were related and a fifth person was a family friend.

Carl Steppert Jr., 64, described by a neighbor as a "strange sort of fellow," was arrested hours after the Sunday night shootings, sleeping at his own home, police said.

"I just can't imagine someone performing a criminal act like this and being able to go to sleep," Deputy Police Chief Paul Luoma said.

Steppert was scheduled to appear in court today after charges are filed, court records show.

Steppert told police he had recently discovered thousands of dollars missing from his home and blamed the caretakers of the group homes, Luoma said.

The gunman forced his way in to the Washington House on the city's East Side around 11 p.m., and shot caregiver Janette Wallace, 52, her 17-year-old son, James, and resident Stefan Schooler, 24, Luoma said.

The gunman then went to the Homestead House on the city's West Side, where he shot Wallace's daughter, Cathy, 25, also a caregiver; her granddaughter, Allison, 7; and Cathy's boyfriend, Thomas Dalbec, 51.

All six victims were shot in the head with a small-caliber handgun, Luoma said.

The Wallaces and Dalbec were in critical condition Monday. Schooler was in fair condition, Luoma said.

Bruce Buchkoski, president of the corporation that owns the two homes, said Cathy Wallace told him Steppert was missing $50,000 that he had inherited. He said Steppert was friends with Janette Wallace and had been at Homestead House last week for coffee.

The group homes involved in the shootings had a total of 11 residents, some with emotional disorders and other with physical handicaps, said Peter DeSantis, administrator of North Central Health Care Facilities. The homes are privately owned and licensed by the state.

Hundreds of volunteers, including Steppert, drive home residents to church, social events or programs and services at North Central's main campus, DeSantis said.

Steppert volunteered in 1989 after his wife died. He worked one afternoon each week, receiving 26 cents per mile reimbursement. "He was very dependable," DeSantis said.

Police surrounded Steppert's house in suburban Weston soon after the shootings, evacuated the neighborhood and obtained a search warrant before entering and arresting him at 5 a.m.

Bi-plane gives woman pilot unique perspective of world

BY Rochelle Kaplan
N.Y. Times News Service

They're called "spam cans" and "tail draggers" by those in the know. And they're often compared to Harley-Davidson motorcycles because they cruise slowly and ride low to the ground.

Although the requisite helmet is not crash-proof, it is open-faced so that the rider may experience the full effect of wind in the face. Goggles are attached to the top of the helmet for easy access, but a red scarf is optional. The final effect has a hint of Snoopy in it.

Just don't forget to bring your leather jacket. It can get cold up there.

Like the legendary motorcycle it is likened to, the open cockpit bi-plane invokes images of man against the elements, where the only thing protecting you is your fearlessness. Or your sense of adventure.

But if you think that only men can be daredevils, you better think again. Or visit Hangar F-5 at Whiteman Airport in Pacoima. That's where you'll find a woman who knows the meaning of confronting the elements.

Bertie Duffy has flown many types of planes since getting her pilot's license almost 20 years ago. But give her a choice between a Cessna and a Stearman, she'll tell you that she much prefers to feel the wind in her face and hear the roar of the engine.

"The Stearman bi-plane gives you a whole different sensation from any other plane," said Duffy. "There is a real thrill to flying one of these. You're slow and low. There's really nothing like it."

Duffy has owned the red and white plane, designed by Lloyd Stearman and manufactured by Boeing in 1941 as a training aircraft during World War II, for 12 years. After learning to fly in a Cherokee, she then moved on to a Comanche. But as much as she enjoyed those planes, she was determined to find one that would give her the excitement of the "barnstorming" days. It wasn't until she flew with a friend in a Stearman that she found her niche.

"This airplane is my love," said Duffy, who sells flights in her two-seater Stearman from Whiteman Airport. "It's very nice to fly."

Duffy started her business, called "The Bird's Nest" after "so many people wanted to go up" in her bi-plane. She seized upon the idea of turning others' desires into a business. Although she flies year round, she says the bulk of her business is during Christmas time, when people buy the flight as a gift. The ride is also a popular birthday gift.

The plane is equipped with two parallel wings, thus the term "bi-plane," and two cockpits. The forward one is for passengers. In order to climb into the cockpits, which are both equipped with controls, one must step onto the bottom wing and then drop down into the seat. Duffy will then assist you by making sure the seat belt is fastened properly and the canvas helmet is secured tightly on your head. The wind factor at 1,000-3,000 feet elevation wreaks havoc upon one's hair. Better to have "hat hair," says Duffy, than a mass of knots.

Duffy pilots the plane from the rear cockpit, because, she says, "Real pilots fly from the rear." And for those who wish to have the feel of flying, Duffy will allow you to maneuver the controls while up in the air. It's sort of like driving one of those "driver's training" cars where the instructor can brake for you in case of an emergency. Only the instructor is in the back seat instead of next to you.

Although the noise from the wind and the engine is very loud, conversation between pilot and passenger is possible. Microphones and earpieces attached to the helmets are connected to the intercom system. In this way, Duffy keeps her passenger informed of the scenery and terrain below.

Duffy offers half-hour rides for $90 and one-hour rides for $150. The shorter ride will usually take the passenger over Magic Mountain, while the longer one may include Simi Valley and Malibu.

"Most people will sign up for the half-hour ride," said Duffy, "but will enjoy it so much that they'll extend it to an hour."

Whichever ride you choose, the Stearman bi-plane will cruise between 70-80 nautical mph. By comparison, a Cessna's average speed is 120 nautical mph, according to Duffy.

"Most of the cars below us are probably going faster than we are," she said with a laugh as she flew over the Sepulveda Pass.

The fact that it's a cruiser and not a speeding bullet makes for a leisurely, enjoyable ride that is quite smooth. And as she cut diagonally across the Valley and over the Santa Monica Mountains toward the beach, the thought of not dealing with street traffic for half an hour was a thrill in itself.

Even if you don't feel like the "Red Baron" or a barnstormer, the ride may take you back in time to your grandparents' day when the best means, if not the only means of transportation was the Model-A Ford.

Duffy is the only pilot to offer bi-plane rides in the San Fernando Valley, but she says the high maintenance and insurance costs prohibit her from doing it full time.

"It's difficult to make a living out of aviation," said Duffy, who is also a travel agent as well as a ground school instructor at Kennedy Adult School. "I've been doing this for 12 years and have seen others come and go. Still, it would be nice if I could do this full time."

Prep schools uphold tradition — with change

N.Y. Times News Service

ANDOVER, Mass. — Samuel Phillips founded a boarding school for boys in Andover in 1778. Three years later, his uncle, Dr. John Phillips, founded one in Exeter, N.H., on the other side of the border. In the more than 200 years since, the two academies bearing the Phillips name have enjoyed a friendly rivalry that has endured, becoming a beloved tradition.

Tradition is a big deal. The schools, which are not officially affiliated, share a seal originally cut by Paul Revere; a motto, Finis Origine Pendet, which means "the end depends upon the beginning," and an annual football game, where they contest their rivalry with pigskin and shoulder pads. And at the game every year, in the name of good sportsmanship, the leaders of the two schools walk onto the field at halftime for a handshake.

But at this year's game, which was held in Andover on Saturday, in a small break with tradition, something was different about the handshake. For the first time, the head of school at Phillips Academy, Andover — the title was headmaster until last year — and the principal of Phillips Exeter Academy were both women.

Barbara Landis Chase became the head of school of Andover in July. Kendra Stearns O'Donnell has been the principal of Exeter since 1987. While their handshake may not have been quite as historic as the one between Palestine Liberation Organization Chairman Yasser Arafat and Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin last year on the White House lawn, it does say something about two venerable prep schools and the way they have evolved during the last quarter of a century.

Diversity has not always been a word associated with the boarding schools. Although Phillips Academy, Andover, was founded to educate "youth from every quarter," it did not accept girls until 1973, when it merged with its sister school, the Abbot Academy. Phillips Exeter Academy first admitted girls as day students three years before that.

Today, nearly half the students at both schools are young women. "Those who presided over the coeducation of the two schools thought it would be a long process," said Mrs. O'Donnell, of Exeter. "But all they needed to do was open the door."

Now both schools are trying to open the door to students from more walks of life. One obstacle is the cost of the education: tuition and boarding expenses at each school are nearly $20,000 a year.

But financial aid is making the schools somewhat more accessible. At Andover, 489 of 1,194 students receive some sort of scholarships or loans. And 305 of Exeter's 1,025 students receive financial aid.

"Our financial aid budget allows us to have, in addition to a diversity of races, religions, geographic areas and ethnicities, a diversity of economic backgrounds," said Andover's Ms. Chase.

The student population is not the only thing that has changed in 200 years. For example, in addition to Latin and Greek, Exeter now offers modern languages like Russian, Japanese and Chinese.

Panel reveals tests

WASHINGTON (AP) — Hundreds of cancer patients were given high doses of total-body radiation in the 1940s through 1974 in government experiments on how radiation might affect military personnel, a presidential panel was told Monday. Documents uncovered by the Advisory Committee on Human Radiation Experiments shows that the military sponsored at least eight experiments during the Cold War years in which civilian cancer patients were bombarded with high doses of total-body radiation. The existence of such experiments, especially one at the University of Cincinnati in the 1960s, has been generally known. But the staff report is the broadest documentation so far of the extent of the total-body experiments and the Defense Department's involvement.

Phones now smarter with Caller ID

■ A new service being introduced today identifies incoming calls before you pick up your telephone.

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

A service that identifies telephone callers — whether friend or foe — became available in the the Midland/Odessa area today.

"Basically, Caller ID provides you with the name and number of who's calling before you pick up the phone," said Southwestern Bell spokesman Chino Chapa.

Caller ID subscribers must purchase a display unit that will show an incoming caller's number, name, or both, and the time and date of the call. The information is also stored for future reference.

"It's a great way to regain control of your phone and it's convenient," Chapa said.

Southwestern Bell officials said the new service helps ward off harassing and obscene calls, and allows missed calls to be returned because of the display.

Caller ID options include call blocker, which rejects incoming calls from a customer's list of specified numbers or the number of the last incoming call, and call return, which automatically calls back the last incoming call.

Callers who do not wish to be identified when calling a residence or business with Caller ID can hit * 67 (or dial 1167 on a rotary phone) then the number. The Caller ID then displays "anonymous."

Customers with Caller ID can subscribe to anonymous caller rejection to block anonymous calls and let callers know so through a recording.

"Which is saying, if you're not going to give me your name, I'm not going to accept your call," said Odella Rickard, residential service center manager for Southwestern Bell Telephone.

Despite some criticism concerning privacy rights, Caller ID has been well-received in the area, Southwestern Bell officials said.

"It's a very popular service ... We have more than 4,000 signed up for it," Chapa said.

The local service area includes Midland, Odessa, Big Spring, Stanton, Midkiff, Seminole, Iraan, McCamey and Crane.

Caller ID has been available in several major Texas cities and most states.

Display units — manufactured by Southwestern Bell as well as other companies — are available from about $40 to $60.

The monthly service charge locally to display either name or number is $4.95 each or $6.50 for both. Charges for businesses are $7.50 and $9.

Options and installation costs are extra.

Currently, Caller ID only identifies the caller if it's coming from this service area. That will be expanded to long distance calls from across the country in April 1995 when an FCC ruling takes effect.

AIDS group hosts service

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

With December comes thoughts of giving, and locally attention will be brought to focus on concern for people living with AIDS.

Midland Area AIDS Support is organizing a candlelight church service for people with AIDS and their families and friends, at 7 p.m. Dec. 1 in the chapel of First Presbyterian Church. The public is invited to attend.

'We still have families who stay silent. We still have a long way to go toward acceptance.'
— Judy Warren

"This is also to remember people who have died (from complications) of AIDS," said Judy Warren, MAAS founder, who started the organization 3½ years after her brother, Larry Yates, died from complications of AIDS.

"I lost my brother to AIDS, and I took care of him the last years of his life," said Ms. Warren, noting she understands the stigma of having a family member with AIDS.

"We still have families who stay silent. We still have a long way to go toward acceptance," she said.

Ms. Warren said this is the first service MAAS has had on World AIDS Day, which was founded by the American Association for World Health to focus on the fight against AIDS.

Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome not only attacks the bodies of its victims, it often stigmatizes them in their own communities.

"I have been willing to tell my story all over the place. We are still battling battles for acceptance," Ms. Warren said. "Sometimes, all people need, is someone to talk to."

The candlelight service will last about an hour.

Ms. Warren said MAAS, which was recently received the 1994 National Caregiver Award of Merit, offers support groups, as well as individual counseling.

"Some people are grieving and they are not ready to come to a group," she said.

For more information on MAAS or the candlelight service, call 684-7821.

A Wolf in volunteer's clothing

Staff Writer

Like many people well into their senior years, George Wolf finds life most curious, enjoyable, and wondrous enough to savor today and in the years to come.

"When you get into your 70's and 80's, people my age lose a lot of friends," Wolf reflected. "I feel now that this (dying) is part of living. And thank God there is a hereafter. It is supposed to be better. That is what the Bible says. It will be wonderful."

Meanwhile, he reasoned, "I think there is a little hell on Earth for all of us."

Wolf, who is quite active and congenial in retirement at age 70, is one of life's earthly angels. He is a "Pink Gent" who volunteers his talents at Midland's Memorial Hospital and Medical Center as one of about 300 volunteers, including the "Pink Ladies," who hold the gender majority among the hospital's volunteers.

A Midland teen-ager arrested Friday in connection with the death of another resident was out on bond Monday.

According to officials, 17-year-old Robert Avent was out on $5,000 bond after being charged with driving while intoxicated/manslaughter.

Avent was arrested Friday after the vehicle he was driving hit a vehicle driven by 42-year-old Robert Carrasco as the second vehicle was pulling out of an apartment complex and into traffic at 3200 Wadley Ave. The incident happened at about 6:15 p.m.

Plane flips over on landing; no injuries

A high-wing, single-engine Champion aerobatic airplane piloted by Bruce Howard of Midland "gently" flipped over onto its back about 3:15 p.m. Sunday while landing at Skywest Airport south of Midland, according to the Texas Department of Public Safety.

Howard, the sole occupant of the two-seat tandem aircraft, was not injured in the mishap. The aircraft sustained minor damage, including a bowed strut.

The DPS spokesman said the aircraft was making a relatively high-speed landing from the south on Runway 34 when the pilot lost control of the tailwheeled airplane. The aircraft ran off the runway, the pilot hit the brakes, and the airplane, now at slow speed, "gently" nosed over and onto its back.

Howard, 36, was one of the partnership-owners of the aircraft, a 1969 Bellanca Decathlon Champion.

The incident was investigated by DPS Trooper Jim Swain.

WOLF: Volunteer makes patients 'feel pleasant'

(From 1B)

ity, "except I don't want to be president of this (auxiliary) organization. I am not a leader; I am a follower in this organization."

In his volunteer work on Tuesdays and Fridays, Wolf files records in the Abell-Hanger Medical Pavilion's Magnetic Resonance Imaging (MRI) Center and helps command the hospital's public information desk. He may answer telephone calls, direct visitor traffic, prepare popcorn, visit patients, deliver flowers and mail, and "do things" for the patients.

"It is all volunteer work," Wolf said of trying to make patients "feel pleasant," comfortable and welcome.

"Patients are patients. Nobody wants to be in the hospital. But if you have to, Midland Memorial is a good place to be."

In particular, Wolf said he seeks "to help patients who have no families. You meet some interesting people," including, he said, both patients and doctors.

Of physicians, "I don't have a (personal) general practitioner," Wolf said. "I have all specialists."

And of his own health, "I have a little bit of blood-pressure (problem). But who doesn't these days?"

It was "these days" about five years ago when Wolf joined the hospital's volunteers, headed up by Kimberly Modisett. Modisett calls the "adorable" Wolf a "friendly, out-going, valuable volunteer."

"I have never worked in the Gift Shop," Wolf said. "I am not hip about the Gift Shop. Handling money is 'nerve-racking.'"

Besides, he said, "I don't like to be tied down to anything. I like to move around."

His penchant to be active got Wolf into volunteer work.

About two months after he had retired from the city of Midland in 1989 as its zoning administrator, Wolf, an architect by academic training, already had become weary of watching television's soap operas. He had worked for the city since 1961.

"I was two months retired, and I was going to lose my mind," Wolf recalled. "And I missed the public something terrible."

Wolf's sister-in-law, Jackie Ingram, suggested that he do as she did, which is what he does to his very day: hospital volunteer work.

"I just enjoy people, meeting people, talking with people," Wolf said. "It gives you a good feeling."

Wolf and his family moved to Midland in the late 1950s from the St. Louis, Mo., area where Wolf was a cartographer (map-maker) for the federal government's Aeronautical Chart and Information Center. His wife Jane's sister, Jackie Fervoy who was to marry lawyer Tom Ingram, already was in Midland. And Wolf liked the sunny West Texas climate and the community, which, he reasoned, was ideal for raising a family.

Throughout his life, Wolf somehow has sought out his mission and to treasure the journey.

"That is the way of life," Wolf said. "You are born. You have got to die. In between, you have got to make the best of it."

OTT: Early morn best for serious thoughts anonymously.

— The best time to do your "serious thinking" is either early in the morning when you're awake but still in the bed, or while driving alone, preferably in the country.

— No matter how late I go to bed I can't sleep past about 9 o'clock.

— For some reason, it bothers me more to hear racists comments coming from young people than from adults.

— I wish I had the guts to tell people when something they say offends me instead of just sort of nodding and acting like I halfway agree with their idiotic opinions.

— There is a fine line between being charmingly offbeat and just plain nuts.

— And, today's final quote comes from Willa Sibert Cather, who once said, "I like trees because they seem more resigned to the way they have to live than other things do."

FBI is known for."

Reynolds joined MPD on Oct. 16, 1980, and has also worked in patrol, detective, intelligence and communications divisons.

Reynolds and 260 other law enforcment officers from 48 states, the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, the U.S. Virgin Islands, three military organizations, five Federal civilian organizations and 16 countries participated in the program at the FBI headquarters in Quantico, Va.

The program was designed to teach advanced investigative management and fitness training — with seminars in human behavior, technical management and Applied Criminal Pyschology.

"The criminal psychology was fascinating," Reynolds said. "That is their speciality — profiling serial killers and rapists."

Graduation from the program was Sept. 23, with FBI Director Louis J. Freeh as the guest speaker.

Reynolds said the program not only expanded his knowledge of investigative and management techniques, but provided a chance to meet with other law enforcement officials from around the world.

"It was excellent training and just meeting the people you do — people who work in Greece, Argentina, Australia, Japan — it's a good chance to learn about a variety of cultures and their attitudes to law enforcement," he said. "When you stay in one place for a long time, you tend to get tunnel vision. A program like this really opens your horizons again."

The FBI program has graduated 27,423 participants since it began in July 1935.

Group wants more diversified fuel sources

By Scott Rothschild
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN — Armed with a poll that shows most Texas are willing to pay more for clean energy, citizen groups Monday called for an end to subsidies for fossil fuels used to generate electricity.

Texans "are ready to shift to non-polluting sources of energy and want to see specific targets for bringing about a change to a cleaner future," said Tom "Smitty" Smith, director of Public Citizen's Texas office.

But a spokesman for TU Electric, the state's largest utility, said the poll was inconclusive, and that many of the groups' proposals would have an adverse affect on consumers.

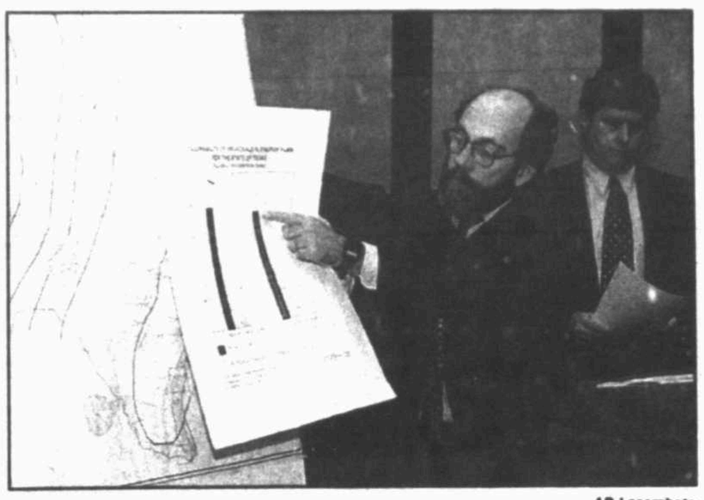

Seventy percent of Texans are willing to pay up to $5 extra monthly to change from coal and gas to solar and wind, according to the poll of 400 randomly selected adult Texans.

The survey was taken Sept. 29 and Oct. 2-3 and has a margin of error of 4.9 percent.

Representatives of Public Citizen, Texas Citizen Action, and the Sustainable Energy and Economic Development coalition said the poll shows that most Texans want cleaner energy.

Texas ranks second nationally in wind-use potential, yet 50th in use of renewable energy, they said.

The groups said that solar and wind power aren't attractive alternatives yet because state and federal governments grant subsidies to fossil fuels.

Tom Smith, left, of Public Citizen, explains the results of a survey That shows Texans are willing to pay for cleaner energy resources.

"These other technologies cannot compete when the field is tilted towards western coal, lignite and the other fossil fuels," said Tim Curtis, executive director of Texas Citizen Action.

The groups proposed eliminating the fuel adjustment cost, which allows utilities to pass through to the consumer changes in fuel costs.

"What you do is, you come in and project your fuel cost and if you're wrong, the consumers eat it," Smith said. "However, wind and solar have no fuel costs so the price you buy is the price they're locked into for the length of their contract."

But Mike Ozymy, a spokesman for TU Electric, said the fuel cost adjustment was fair to the consumer and utility company. "This is a straight pass-through cost," he said.

The citizen groups also proposed requiring the Public Utility Commission set targets for each utility's use of energy efficiency and renewable resources.

TU Electric would oppose the PUC setting those targets because that should be a management decision, Ozymy said.

The groups also said that the full economic impact of competing sources of power, such as the health and safety of affected populations, should be considered when utility's build new plants.

But Ozymy said it would be unfair to inflate the price of a plant by adding the effects of health problems from legal emissions.

"It would be akin to imputing to the cost of an automobile, all those costs that are associated with auto accidents," he said.

In addition, Ozymy questioned the survey, saying that respondents might say they would pay more for cleaner energy, but probably would balk when it came time to pay.

He also said solar and wind power would cost consumers about five times more than energy from fossil fuels.

Curtis, of Citizen Action, said he expected that kind of response from the utility industry. "Our experience is they fight change of any sort. They've got things just the way they want it right now," he said.

In wake of Prop. 187, new song laments problems of 'El Ilegal'

By Josh Lemieux
Associated Press Writer

HARLINGEN — Like many unhappy episodes in Mexican history, California's Proposition 187 already has a song about it.

"What fault does the illegal have that times are tough in California if he's saving the people a lot of money?" the Houston-based Los Soldados de Levita sing in Spanish over an accordion weaving in and out of a bouncy nortena beat.

"What fault does the illegal have for unemployment if he's doing the work that a citizen looks down on?"

Proposition 187, which California voters approved one week ago, cuts off state services such as education and non-emergency medical care to illegal immigrants and requires teachers and doctors to turn them in.

Courts will review claims that Proposition 187 is unconstitutional before it can be implemented.

"What inspired me was all the news from California," said Noe Trevino, a Houston welder who wrote the song as the California debate was heating up this year.

"It just seems to me that the government is blaming all the deficits on the immigrant, and that doesn't seem fair," Trevino said in a telephone interview.

Released only two weeks ago, his song "El Ilegal" is patterned after a "corrido" — a festive, storytelling musical style made popular during the Mexican Revolution. It tells one Mexican citizen's story of crossing the Rio Grande to look for work.

"I am not a burden to others, as is said in California by a 'gran senor,'" the lyrics go, referring to Republican California Gov. Pete Wilson, whose successful re-election campaign embraced Proposition 187.

"Instead, it's this country that comes out winning, because the illegal comes cheaply to bring products in from the fields ..."

Trevino, who was born in Camargo, a border town in the northeastern state of Tamaulipas, said he has immigrated legally and lived half of his 43 years in the United States.

"I had lots of friends who were illegal. I saw how they suffered when they didn't have a job. Nobody gave them food," he said.

Christmas trees, wreaths and lights decorated Midland Center for Junior League's 44th annual Chairty Ball Friday. However, it was the first year the ball was a part of the League's Festival of Trees, planned to be an annual affair.

Christmas warmth envelops Charity Ball

In keeping with the theme for the evening, it was a "Starry Night by Candlelight" Friday as over 700 guests made their way to Midland Center for the Junior League's Festival of Trees Charity Ball. While stars twinkled in the cool, crisp air outside, twinkle lights and candle light added a warm, Christmas glow to the atmosphere in the Center.

Midland Center was transformed into a small winter wonderland for the Festival of Trees three-day event.

In the foyer, miniature Christmas trees and gingerbread houses created a miniature winter town. Inside the center, guests were greeted with the sight of full-size Christmas trees and wreaths ornately decorated in themes and placed around the center. The trees and wreaths were donated by area sponsors to be purchased by silent auction.

Twinkle lights filled the room as they were used to decorate the trees, wreaths and painted scenes on the walls, and draped over the dance floor. A giant balloon Santa overlooked the festivities from one corner.

Although the $150 per couple black-tie benefit was the organization's 44th annual Charity Ball, it was the first year for it to be a part of Festival of Trees, which is planned to be an annual event. It also was the first year the ball and benefit was open to the public.

The trees and wreaths decorating the ball were available for bidders to make their best offers throughout the three-day event, with the item going to the highest bidder, or the person making the maximum bid.

Charity Ball began at 8 p.m. Friday, and soon thereafter, Midland Center seemed to be wall-to-wall people mingling, admiring the decorations and tasting the various food items for dinner.

Dinner was catered by Don Strange, served buffet-style from tables located around the center. A few of the items were even sauteed as guests watched. The menu included Baron of Beef, Carved Pork Loin served with homemade rolls, Chicken Picatta, Crab Cakes, Whole Poached Salmon, Mascarpone Torta, Soft Ripened Cheeses and Canapes. For dessert, there was an assortment of pick-up holiday sweets and fresh seasonal fruit with cinnamon yogurt dipping sauce.

Guests danced to the sounds of "The Big Time," which played a variety of music ranging from rock 'n roll ("Great Balls of Fire" and "Brick House") and country ("Amarillo by Morning") to old favorites ("Twist and Shout") and soul ("When a Man Loves a Women"). During the first hour, there was plenty of room of space on the dance floor, but after most had finished dinner, the dance floor was full and often spilled over to the carpeted area

Lisa Sell, chairman of ..arity Ball, said the League hopes to raise close to $90,000 from the three-day Festival of Trees festivities.

"We are so excited about how successful our first year to do Festival of Trees has been," said Mary Blake, Festival of Trees chairman. "Before this one is even over we are making plans for next year. It is really going to help the League with their community projects."

Proceeds from Charity Ball and the other weekend activities associated with Festival of Trees will benefit the Junior League's community projects and beneficiaries. Those include: Bedside Buddies, Casa de Amigos Dental Clinic, Community Training and Facilitation Committee, Funds for Community Assistance, Haley Library and History Center, Hearthstone, Junior League Singers, Kids on the Block, Next-to-New Shop, Opportunity Knocks, Rainbows and Spectrum, Senior Crafts Fair, Stand Tall, Teen Court, Texas Scholars and the Fredda Turner Durham Children's Museum.

The weekend's activities began with the preview party, themed "Ringing in the Holidays," Thursday evening at Midland Center. This evening was the first chance for the public to see and place bids on the trees, wreaths and gingerbread houses, as well as to view the raffle items.

The Lee High School Chorale and Alumni Chorale performed, featuring Edward Pleasant, followed by the Dow Jones Average. Those attending sampled desserts and cappuccino from Espresso U.S.A., Duo Delights, El Chico, Fiesta Foods, Foods Fantastic, Harrigan's, Italiano Catering, It's A Party, Murray and the Frenchman, and Tony's Old Fashioned Bakery. Holiday casual was the attire for the $10 per person affair.

The weekend concluded with "Holiday Wonderland" Saturday, when Midland Center was opened to the general public for a $3 adult admission charge. All Christmas trees, wreaths and gingerbread houses remained on display and the raffle drawings were selected. There was continuous entertainment — including magic, singing, story telling and dance — throughout the day, with Edward Pleasant serving as master of ceremonies. Holiday demonstrations were given by local merchants.

There were crafts, cookie decorating and games sponsored by Albertson's on Andrews Hwy., and Santa Land was open with a hotline to the North Pole for all the children.

Saturday morning featured "Breakfast with Santa's Elves," complete with a concert by Eddie Coker of Dallas. The children's breakfast was courtesy of Midland/Odessa Burger King.

Weekend event sponsors were Frances and Jack Brown, Lynn D. Durham and Lissa and Cy Wagner.

Charity Ball sponsors were Parker & Parsley Petroleum Company and Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Scharbauer Jr. Also sponsoring the event were Sarilyn and Bill Black, David Essex, Texas Commerce Bank, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph I. O'Neill III, Denna and Allen McGuire Jr., Stewart and Woodside, Mr. and Mrs. Clayton W. Williams Jr., and more than 35 additional sponsors.

Festival of Trees special events sponsors were Mark Low and special contributor. Over a dozen sponsors were listed under Festival of Trees Community Project Trees sponsors.

DEAR ABBY

Retiring couple struggles with Christmas funds

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My husband will be retired at Christmastime this year. We will then be on a fixed, limited budget, and our Christmas funds will be much smaller than in the past.

Van Buren

We have eight grown sons and daughters, and 15 grandchildren. The grandchildren are now getting married, so there will be wedding gifts to buy.

Our children protested the suggestion of putting everyone's name in a hat, then everybody buying a gift only for the person whose name he or she draws.

Some of our children ask for cash instead of gifts. We have even been asked, "How much will you and Dad be giving us for Christmas this year?" And, "May I have it now so I can buy what I want?"

A couple of our grandchildren have already come over to get their money and gifts, and we probably won't see them again until it's their birthdays.

We had some big medical bills this year, and my husband's retirement benefits nowhere compare to his former salary. I said, "Let's forget the Christmas gifts this year — Dad and I want to invite the entire family out for a nice Christmas dinner." That idea was voted down. Do you have any suggestions, Abby? We are already ... WORRIED SICK

DEAR WORRIED: Yes. I think you and your husband should treat yourselves to a nice trip somewhere; then telephone your children and wish them a Merry Christmas. And don't come home until you're good and ready.

DEAR ABBY: As an electrical engineer, I must take exception to your answer to "A Young Widow" concerning the tragic death of her husband who was killed when he touched a "live" electrical wire while standing in a swimming pool.

The electrical installation had absolutely nothing to do with it. The accident would have occurred in these circumstances even if the installation had been done by the very best of electricians.

Your answer should have been: "Never touch anything that carries electricity — be it a wire, connector, appliance or other equipment — while any part of your body is in water. It does not have to be a swimming pool or bathtub; standing on wet, or even damp, ground is enough because the current will always flow to the ground — even if it has to do so through your body." — G.P. SCHUCK-KOLBEN, WEST COLUMBIA, S.C.

DEAR G.P. SCHUCK-KOLBEN: Thank you for pointing out what I should have figured out — but failed to do so.

DEAR ABBY: In your response to "Humiliated," you said, "It is inappropriate for fathers to tell their daughters dirty jokes."

Abby, isn't it just as inappropriate for fathers to tell their sons dirty jokes?

What's the difference? — KRIS GRAVEN, FLAGSTAFF, ARIZ.

DEAR KRIS: Very little, actually. But assuming there are degrees of impropriety, it would seem more inappropriate for fathers to tell their daughters dirty jokes.

DEAR ABBY: Do you have room for one more "udder" story?

A bee flew into a cow's ear. The next day, it showed up in the milk can.

A simple case of "in one ear and out the udder." — MILLIE CLECKLER, HOUMA, LA.

AT WIT'S END

Education is a privilege, not a sentence

By Erma Bombeck

The idea of a ban on homework sounds like the campaign promise of every kid running for class president.

Bombeck

But it isn't. It's the brainstorm of a 65-year-old board member, Garrett Redmond, from Cabrillo Unified School in Half Moon Bay, Calif. He believes extra work is burning kids out so they have no time to spend with their families.

In a twist of irony, it's the students who have voiced the loudest concerns in support of homework.

As the wife of a retired educator and the mother of a son presently teaching, I can tell you that teachers have heard more excuses for not having homework than there are grains of rice in China. They range from "My mother wrapped her gum in it," "I put it in the family Bible to hold my place and forgot to take it out," "My little brother peed on it," to "I picked the same topic as everyone else in the class, 'The Evolution of the Storm Door in the Ming Dynasty,' and all the books at the library were out." This has always been true.

Not once have they heard, "I was bonding with Mom and Dad, and the next thing you know we were going to a Disney movie and having ice cream afterward, and I had to have my eight hours of sleep."

The question that rarely is addressed is why do we have homework in the first place.

That's easy. A teacher gets a child only five or six hours a day, five days a week for 12 years. There is so much to teach in so little time. Especially if you have to collect permission slips for field trips, look for lice and abuse, break for bathroom visits, administer medications and discipline, stop for those who don't understand something, keep the ones who do from being bored, pass out the cupcakes for birthdays, teach safety, and check lockers for weapons.

If a child becomes ill, a teacher has to track down someone to take him home. If he disrupts the class, a parent must be called to work it out. There are millions of interruptions, from the dog who follows his friend to school and must be put outside, to the kid who'd rather spend the day in the restroom than in the class.

Maybe the attitude of America's schoolchildren is changing and they realize education is not a sentence — but a privilege.

Redmond said he was a child who watched teachers "flog" students for not doing their homework perfectly. Not only is "flogging" out, Mr. Redmond, but when an entire class shows up with their homework, the teacher is euphoric.

Like you, I would like to think children would rush home from school into the arms of Mommy and Daddy and quality time, but the reality is, probably neither of them is home from work yet, and if it's a toss-up between doing homework and watching "Baywatch," guess which one wins?

Shell of rare, supposedly extinct mussel found

The dwarf wedge mussel, which once ranged from Canada to Virginia, is now found only in a scattering of spots, including a stretch of river that supplements the drinking water supply for Keene, N.H.

NORTHAMPTON, Mass. (AP) — The discovery of a shell from a rare mussel, believed to have disappeared from Massachusetts waters, may highlight the recovery of a tributary of the Connecticut River, biologists say.

The dwarf wedge mussel, considered an endangered species by the federal government, is extremely sensitive to chemical and other pollution. In effect, the mussel provides an early warning of threats to drinking water supplies.

Biologists, however, have been unable to find any live mussels.

"It was a tremendous letdown," Susi vonOettingen, an endangered species specialist with the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service's regional office in Hadley, said recently.

The little mollusks, which are only 1½ to 2 inches long as adults, are believed to live about 14 years, a comparatively short time for freshwater mussels, which can live up to 90 years, she said. Since they feed by siphoning nutrients from the water, they are particularly susceptible to sediment.

The dwarf wedge mussel, which once ranged from Canada to Virginia, is now found only in a scattering of spots, including a stretch of river that supplements the drinking water supply for Keene, N.H., she said. A battle has erupted over the past two years over attempts from the city of Wilson, N.C., to expand a drinking water reservoir to encompass a creek containing the mussels.

The shell from a recently dead adult was discovered in August by a volunteer searching the Mill River at the Massachusetts Audubon Society's Arcadia Wildlife Sanctuary. It was identified by Douglas Smith, a University of Massachusetts biologist, who uncovered the state's last-known colony of the mussels in the nearby Fort River in the 1970s.

Smith said since the last of the Fort River mussels disappeared in the 1980s, the discovery indicates that a reproducing population existed somewhere in the Connecticut River system in the past decade.

New York police crack down on imposters

By Lynette Holloway
N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — It was literally a rude awakening for Steven Greenberg early one fall morning when he stumbled out of bed to loud banging at the door of his Park Avenue penthouse. The two men on the other side told him they were the police with search warrants and ordered him to open up. He did.

But they weren't the police. Putting a gun to his head, the men announced, "This is a robbery," before taking Art Deco antiques valued at $250,000. They left the confused and angry man clad only in a white cotton robe lying face down on his living room floor with his hands tied behind his back.

"I thought: 'Oh, my God! This is a nightmare,'" recalled Greenberg, 51, a financier. "It was a heinous crime and will make me think twice about opening the door in the future for anyone who identifies himself as a police officer."

Greenberg was a victim of what the police say is an increasingly common crime throughout the city.

In the city alone, the problem has become so great that 11 months ago the Internal Affairs Bureau set up a unit of detectives to track down police impersonators. It is the only unit of its kind among the country's largest police departments.

So far, the unit has handled slightly more than 400 cases and made 81 arrests, said Lt. Robert DiVagno, commander of the squad.

The crimes have occurred from the wealthy apartments of Park Avenue to working-class neighborhoods of Brooklyn to the industrial arteries of Hunts Point in the Bronx.

In August, Phillip Walston, 23, was arrested in Sheepshead Bay, Brooklyn, after he spent months announcing himself as a police officer, throwing his victims against walls, frisking them and stealing their wallets, the lieutenant said. The police said Walston told them he used the money to support his crack habit.

"I thought: 'Oh, my God! This is a nightmare.' It was a heinous crime and will make me think twice about opening the door in the future for anyone who identifies himself as a police officer.'

Steven Greenberg, robbery victim

Once, Walston, a robust man who stands 6 feet 4 inches and weighs almost 300 pounds, became so desperate for money that he picked up a victim by the ankles and shook money from his pockets, said Sgt. Patrick Hughes, a 31-year police veteran who is a member of the squad.

"The poor guy who was an Asian immigrant really thought this was the police who had done this to him and had to be talked into coming forward by a resident who witnessed the whole thing," said Hughes.

"God forbid a police officer has to go to the home of someone who has been a victim of one of these characters and there's a standoff because the person doesn't believe it's the police."

The New York City Police Department receives an average of 1,300 police impersonation complaints each year, DiVagno said.

Spokesmen for the Police Departments in Chicago and Los Angeles said officials there do not track such cases, but said the incidents were not nearly the problem they seem to be in New York.

Because immigrants bear the brunt of most of the crimes, the police say some incidents may go unreported. The impostors also hit drug-dealing locations and gambling dens, because those victims usually do not report the crimes.

In one recent case, the police arrested a man that they say used a parking permit with police logos printed on it to lure prostitutes into his car, where he would rob and sometimes assault them. The suspect, Clarence Evans, 40, of the Bronx, told the police he found the permit in an abandoned car.

Officials say that police impostors are able to thrive because of the large immigrant population and the easy availability of look-alike police gear through mail-order catalogues and in Times Square.

In addition, officials say, some people have been able to buy real police equipment from stores intended for law-enforcement officers. As a result, police officials pressed the state Legislature to pass a law allowing them to prosecute store owners and workers for not asking for proper identification before making a sale.

The law went into effect Nov. 1, DiVagno said.

Joe Demonte, a law-enforcement officer who works at Paul's Police Equipment and Uniforms in Queens said people enter the store all the time trying to buy the gear without proper identification.

"A guy came in here once and showed me $800 cash and pleaded with me to sell him a bulletproof vest," Demonte said. "The vest actually costs $650. But I couldn't do it. What happens if a cop gets shot and the shooter's protected because I sold him a vest? I don't want that on my conscience."

Created last January, the squad is made up of 20 investigators, including four sergeants and 16 detectives.

The investigators were selected from detective bureaus throughout the city. Usually, Internal Affairs investigators are selected from the ranks and then become detectives.

"In the past, there was a lot of on-the-job training in the Internal Affairs Bureau," DiVagno said. "Now, we have people who know how to handle investigations."

In addition to responding to the large number of police impersonation cases, the new unit also addresses a criticism of the force by the Mollen Commission, which spent two years investigating police corruption, said Walter Mack, deputy commissioner of the Internal Affairs Bureau.

The commission accused the Internal Affairs Bureau of dismissing complaints of police corruption as impersonation cases and never investigating them.

"The commission's review of 1,500 police impersonation cases for one year revealed many serious corruption allegations that the internal affairs division should not have categorized at the outset as police impersonation cases," the report said.

In fact, the report noted that the case of Robert Cabeza, a former officer who was convicted of murder in the death of a liquor store owner last year, was initially labeled as a police impersonation case.

"The scandal at the 30th Precinct and the Michael Dowd corruption cases haunt people on the street," DiVagno said of two major corruption scandals that have surfaced in the New York City Police Department over the last two years. "They make the public perceive us in a negative fashion and we're trying to clear that up. But we can't clear our names if criminals are out there robbing and beating up on people."

Social security program gets politicians', voters' attention

Hearst News Service

WASHINGTON — This year, working Americans will pay $347 billion in Social Security taxes — enough to pay benefits to 42.7 million retired and disabled people and sock away almost $60 billion for the future.

That sounds like a pretty good nest egg for the vast army of baby boomers, who are still at least 17 years from retirement.

"Social Security has a 60-year track record of providing benefits," said Dave Certner of the American Association of Retired Persons. "It is a phenomenally successful program with widespread support across generation and across income groups. In short, it is a government program that works."

So why are so many people worried about the future of Social Security?

Why did a recent survey find that twice as many people in Generation X believe that UFOs exist than believe that Social Security will exist when they retire? Why are politicians able to get so much mileage out of talking about the threat to Social Security?

For starters, few people dispute that the system will have to be changed to assure there will be enough money to keep the checks flowing when the huge baby-boom generation — the people born between 1946 and 1964 — are ready to retire.

The key is acting early, said Carol Cox Wait, head of the Committee for a Responsible Federal Budget. "We can make some very modest changes now and make a huge difference in the future. If we make changes now, people have a lot more time to change their plans."

Change is already in store for the baby boomers.

Reforms made to Social Security in 1983 set in motion an increase in the retirement age. By 2015, people will have to wait until they are 67 years old — instead of 65 — to start drawing Social Security checks.

Also, the payroll tax was substantially increased. Someone who retired in 1980 got back his contributions in about three years, said Rep. Bill Archer, R-Texas.

Archer said someone his age — 66 years old — who retires today after a career earning average wages will have to live about 15 years to get back his or her contributions.

To keep the fund solvent, people will either have to pay even more into the system or expect less in benefits — or both.

"It's not rocket science," said Henry Aaron, an economist with the Brookings Institution. "In 1983, the solution was to do a little bit of both."

There are two problems that are likely to make further reform necessary. One is political, and the other is demographic.

The political problem is the federal deficit. The annual surplus in the Social Security trust fund is invested in U.S. treasury bonds. In other words, the money is loaned to the government, which uses it to finance other programs.

The intention was to use the money to reduce the government's reliance on treasury bonds sold to the public — to investors such as pension funds and the Japanese — to fund its operations. By reducing the debt today, the government would be in a better position to finance its operations and pay benefits in the future.

Instead, deficits have remained high.

When it comes to re-covering a floor -whether with carpet, tile, vinyl or hardwood -choosing the right product and having it installed correctly is vitally important.

Southwest Floors, owned by Robert and Jane Burton, has been providing Midlanders with great choice, value and experience for many years and offer a wide selection of quality floor coverings coupled with professional installation to help make that choice easier.

The sales team at Southwest Floors consists of: (from left) Jane Burton, co-owner, Travis Kendrick and Karen Lesley. They share a tremendous amount of combined experience across the whole spectrum of floor coverings, whether carpet, tile, vinyl or wood. For more information about their stock and their finance plans call 689-9312.

According to the owners, the company differs from others because, "We give people extra time, a special treatment and a personalized service," said Jane Burton.

The company stocks a wide variety of top quality products that include: Philadelphia, Evans-Black, Columbus, Patcraft and Berber carpets; Bruce and Harteo hardwood floors and Armstrong sheet vinyl as well as ceramic floor tiles.

The professional staff have years of experience in the business, in fact, owner Robert Burton has over 24-years experience selling and installing floor coverings in Midland.

The company is made up of the Burtons and the sales team which consists of Travis Kendrick and Karen Lesley. In addition, there is a team of 8 installers who have decades of combined experience, over several generations, in installing floor coverings.

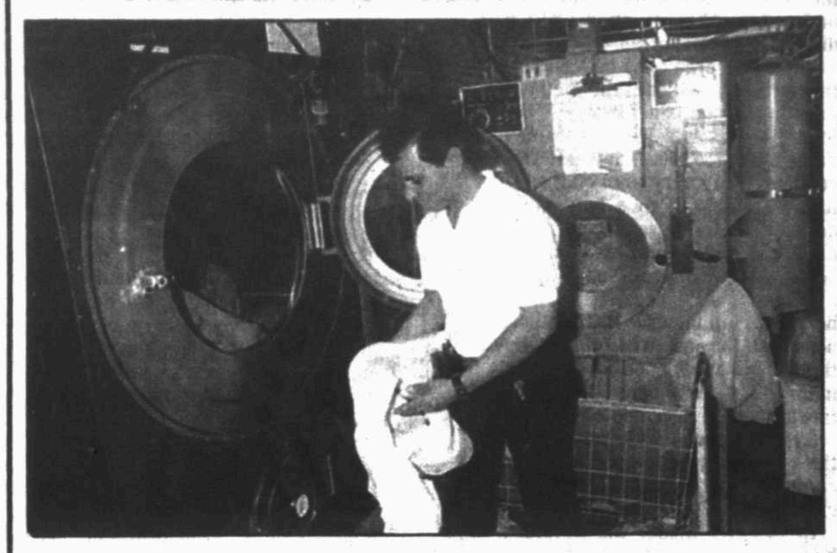

Centrally located at 1113 Andrews Highway in Midland, Southwest Floors is well known for offering honest, competitive prices throughout the year, and in addition, offers the customers a flexible financing plan.

'Flex-Financing', offered in association with Bank One, and with approved credit, is a flexible finance plan designed to suit customers' requirements and is based around a 6-month, no-interest, no payment period.

Because the scale of the Southwest Floors operation is so large, and they offer such a wide choice, the team works very closely with local builders decorators and architects on new constructions and renovations in the Midland area.

Southwest Floors is open 6-days a week, Monday through Friday, 9 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. and Saturday 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. , and can be visited at 1113 Andrews Highway, (915) 689-9312.

Coats for Kids, 11 years of helping Midland's children

Bernardo Galindo is the dry cleaning technician at Comet Cleaners who is responsible for cleaning the donated coats provided for the 'Coats for Kids' program. Organized by Billie Jo Corbell of Comet Cleaners, and now in its 11th year, the 1994 program joined forces with Big Daddy's Catfish, Mr Gatti's Pizza, and Town and Country Cleaners in Odessa. The restaurants are giving away a free meal for every coat donated at one of the above locations.

Comet Cleaners is well known in Midland for providing a whole host of professional cleaning and heir-looming services, but they are less well known for the annual 'Coats for Kids' program that owner Billie Jo Corbell has organized for the last 11 years.

Designed to provide coats to under-privileged children, the 'Coats for Kids' program collects donated coats, cleans them and then distributes them in collaboration with Susan McHughs of Children's Protective Services.

Over the years, thousands of coats have been collected and distributed, and this year the organizers are hoping for a bigger response because Comet Cleaners has teamed up with other local companies to expand the program.

Big Daddy's Catfish, Mr Gatti's Pizza and Town & Country Cleaners in Odessa have all joined Comet to help boost this years collection.

Bring a child's coat in good condition to any of the above companies, and for each coat you will receive a coupon good for a free buffet at Mr Gatti's or a lunch special at Big Daddy's.

Cricket Owen, the restaurants' supervisor said, "I think it's (the program) is great, so far the response has been wonderful, we have had probably 300 coats in just a week and a half."

The participants in the 'Coats for Kids' program will accept coats all through the month of November and the coats will be distributed during the first week of December.

Billie Jo Corbell, who started the program, hopes that 1994 will be the best year to date: and it certainly won't be the last year.

She has organized this long running program for one basic reason: "I love children and I feel terrible about the ones who are cold, which is why I have been doing it for so long," she said.

Coats can be donated at the following locations in Midland and Odessa.

Comet Cleaners, 2606 Midland Drive, 3108 Cuthbert, & 2106 N 'A' St.

Big Daddy's Catfish, 3323 W. Wadley.

Mr Gatti's Pizza, 3205 W. Cuthbert.

Common-sense Investing

"Making the Most of Your Money," by Jane Bryant Quinn is a common-sense investment book that merits reading.

"It suggests simple investment strategies for various periods throughout our lifetimes," said Van Pearcy, one of Midland's Edward D. Jones & Co.'s investment representatives. "More importantly, however, it reminds us of five basic investment principles that are invaluable at any stage of our lives."

Buy stock.

Statistics show that over periods of 10 years or more, stocks consistently outperform bonds, savings accounts and other fixed-income investments. In fact, common stocks of large corporations have yielded an average of 6 percent more than inflation since 1926.

When investing in stocks, Quinn advises doing so through mutual funds rather than trying to select and manage a portfolio of individual stocks. The full-time professionals who manage mutual funds offer the expertise needed to prosper in the stock market.

Diversify.

Although common stock has a history of outperforming other investments long term, putting all your eggs in one basket can be a costly mistake. Limit risk by selecting different types of assets, those whose values generally do not move together. Stocks and bonds are a good example. When the value of one of these assets falls, the value of the other typically increases. In fact, on Oct. 19, 1987, when the stock market dropped more than 500 points, the bond market enjoyed one of its strongest days in more than 10 years.

Call Van Pearcy, Investment Representative with Edward D. Jones & Co., to arrange a no-obligation appointment to find out how you can achieve your financial goals at 683-1516, or stop by his office at 2020 West Cuthbert in Midland.

"How do you choose where to place your investment dollars?," Pearcy asks. "A general rule of thumb is to place money you will need within the next four years in stable, relatively liquid investments like money-market funds, certificates of deposit, Treasury bills and so forth. Although you may sacrifice income, your principal is not at risk and is usually readily available when you need it."

"Money that you don't need immediate access to can be invested in longer-term investments, such as stocks, mutual funds and longer-term bonds, that have the potential to provide higher returns over the long term," stated Pearcy.

Be patient.

Time is a great ally when investing. Successful investors view occasional downturns as buying opportunities. If a stock or mutual fund is fundamentally strong, it will regain its momentum. The concept of market timing — buying low and selling high — is difficult to accomplish with any degree of success. Jane Bryant Quinn mentions that statistics show in-and-out traders don't fare as well as investors who adopt buy-and-hold policies.

Reinvest dividends.

If you don't need the income provided by your stock investments, put it to use by purchasing more shares. It can make a big difference in the long run. For example, had you invested $100 in the Standard & Poor's 500 Index at the end of 1925, your $100 would have grown to $3,270 by the end of 1991. However, had you reinvested the dividends earned over those 66 years, your $100 would have grown to $67,559!

Understand risk.

While undue investment risk should be avoided, refusing to take any investment risk can drastically reduce your investment potential.

After all, without risks there are no rewards. You need to carefully define your investment needs and goals to determine how much risk you can afford financially and mentally.

"Making the Most of Your Money reminds us of some basic principals that can increase your chances of investment success" Van Pearcy said. "By following these simple guidelines, you'll be more likely to achieve the long-term financial goals you've set for yourself."

Van Pearcy operates the Edward D. Jones &Co. office located at 2020 West Cuthbert, across the street from the high school football stadium. Van was raised in Andrews and received his undergraduate and MBA from the University of Notre Dame. He has been running his investment office for over 7-years and teaches investment classes at Midland College. For a no-obligation appointment, you may call Van's office at 683-1516.

Houston man tries to sell European washer-dryer combo

■ British immigrant's import-export firm introduces first all-in-one washer-dryer unit in United States since 1960s.

By Charles Bolsseau
Associated Press

HOUSTON — When they lived in a cramped flat in London, Atul Vir and his wife used a curious little machine in their kitchen that both washed and dried clothes in a single unit.

But when they moved to Houston four years ago, Vir discovered what was commonplace in Europe was not available in America. That started him on a mission to fill the home laundry gap.

After a frustrating effort to convince manufacturers to build the units, Vir's import-export trading firm, Equator Corp., introduced the EZ 1000 Clothes Processor late last year.

The combination washer-dryer is the first one like it on the U.S. market in 30 years. It is produced by a major Italian appliance manufacturer that agreed to specially make a 110-volt version of the 220-volt units that are designed for European electrical systems.

The front-loading machine uses less water and energy and takes up about 60 percent of the floor space of a single standard-sized washer or dryer. Vir is aiming at the growing market for singles, couples and elderly who live in condos, apartments and townhomes. The suggested price of $795 is less than stackable washer-dryers.

Showing off the product in a conference room at his southwest Houston office building, Vir gets excited about the sleek machine's features, including a built-in shock absorber designed to reduce vibrations.

The biggest advantage is that you don't have to hang around for the washer to finish before putting your load in the dryer. "You go about your business, and it will wash and dry — you don't have to be there," said Vir, a 35-year-old native of India who received business training in England.

Despite Vir's enthusiasm, market acceptance so far has been sluggish.

Since last fall, Equator has sold about 600 units through a limited number of retail stores and its own toll-free phone number (800-935-1565). That hardly makes a mark in a country that shipped 11.87 million conventional washers and dryers in 1993, according to the Association of Home Appliance Manufacturers.

U.S. appliance makers discontinued making similar combo machines in the early 1960s, industry experts said. The units proved to be more expensive, took longer to wash and dry clothes and were troublesome to repair, said Tracy Haak, manager of communications for the appliance association.

Another drawback: The Equator machine sports a capacity of only about eight pounds — about half of most U.S. washers and dryers.

"Capacity is very big issue with the American public," said Linda Eggerss (CQ), spokeswoman with Newton, Iowa Maytag Corp., which discontinued making a combo machine in 1963.

Nevertheless, times have changed and Vir believes people are willing to make such trade-offs for the added convenience. Vir says the machine appeals to singles and even handicapped people who prefer a front-loading machine.

"I think for today's on-the-go lifestyle, that's a fit," said Randall Davis, a Houston developer who is converting a downtown building into 81 loft-style apartments. Davis is considering installing the Equator machines in the project.

"The other reason I like it is it saves space and that helps me in the design of my lofts," Davis said.

Retailers report mixed results so far.

Miles Ramsey, manager of January's Appliances near Houston, said he has yet to sell a single machine after taking a model on consignment. The lone unit was even temporarily taken back by Equator, which sold it to another customer.

"We've had 10 to 12 people look at it but nobody has bought," Ramsey said. "It's a European product. A lot of people aren't familiar with it and they have apprehensions. . . . What I think needs to be done is a lot of promotion."

In contrast, Larry Campbell, appliance buyer for Incredible Universe, said sales have been better than expected.

Incredible Universe — mega stores stocked with all manner of appliances and electronics — carries the Equator among 83 different washers and dryers at all five of its stores, including locations in Arlington and Dallas. Sales have been particularly good at the new Phoenix location, where it has drawn interest from seasonal "snowbirds" who live in trailers, mobile homes and condos, Campbell said.

He added the store plans radio advertising and other promotions highlighting the machine this fall.

In the coming months, Equator plans to double its imports to 240 machines a month — enough to fill two 40-foot ship containers, Vir said. He is planning to cut his high distribution costs by contracting with a warehousing firm to store the units in various locations nationwide so all deliveries won't have to be from Houston.

"We hope to peak off around 5,000 machines a year, or 420 machines a month," says Vir, who has exclusive U.S. rights to the Italian-made product. He's hopeful he'll soon make money after having spent about $200,000 in development funds.

Despite the Equator product, U.S. appliance makers such as Maytag and Whirlpool Corp. have no plans for similar units. While Europeans have embraced these machines, Americans love big washers and driers and aren't willing to give them up anytime soon, they say. Whirlpool spokeswoman Carolyn Verweyst said: "Good luck, guy."

New video game service for children to come on-line this week

N.Y. Times News Service

Atlanta — Xband isn't a Generation X grunge group or an adults-only TV channel.

It's a new on-line network mainly aimed at kids who play video games.

Beginning Thursday, parents are likely to hear quite a bit about it on television and elsewhere.

That's when Xband Video Game Network plans to go on line with a multimillion-dollar media blitz in five cities, including Atlanta. The Xband modem will appear in Wal-Mart, Target, Toys "R" Us and other stores where Sega Genesis video games are sold.

Xband bills itself as a low-cost on-line network that automatically links up video game players in different households.

With a special modem for $69.95 and a $7.95-a-month connection fee, kids are allowed up to 32 plays a month against similarly skilled kids within the system, or they can select specific players. More plays cost 15 cents each. Calls are local unless long- distance playing is specified.

Adam Grosser, president of Catapult Entertainment of Cupertino, Calif., says the system is being launched only in Atlanta, New York, Los Angeles, San Francisco and Dallas because the company couldn't make enough of the special modems fast enough for a nationwide launch.

Another tier of cities is scheduled to go on line early next year, when Super Nintendo games will be added.

Grosser said Atlanta was chosen because of research showing low media costs, a large local phone access area and a metro area with one of the largest numbers of games per capita in the nation. "Atlanta is a fabulous market for us," he said.

For the past five weeks, 110 kids locally have been testing the device, including Marietta brothers Ryan and Aaron Michael, ages 15 and 12, who like it.

"I think it's great because I used to not play Mortal Kombat because I couldn't find anyone good locally, but now I do since I can play other people across the country," Ryan said.

Both like the on-screen list of the top 10 players. "It's like a goal you can have to be on the top 10," Ryan said.

The device consists of a modem attached to a phone jack that inserts in the game machine. You can put in certain top-selling Sega games, such as Mortal Kombat, its sequel and NBA Jam, and play.

Kids begin by picking one of 100 tough- looking characters, which they can customize with a name (or they can send a photo of themselves to be scanned into the system), a brief message about themselves and even a taunt against opponents. Up to four players per household can link with other players at one time. After the game, players can even have an on-line, typed chat.

Besides game playing, Xband also offers: — Special programming so the game can continue while the phone is answered.

■ Internet e-mail connections that allow kids or adults to send messages.

■ Xband News to find out games supported, upcoming tournaments, etc.

■ Account information that includes a way to allow parents to limit play to a certain amount of money. Grosser recommends $10.95 a month, which in initial months will allow unlimited play.

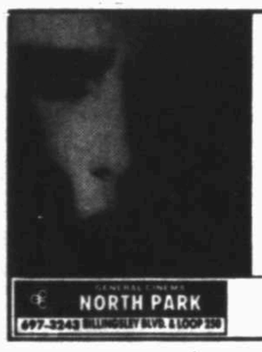

■ Some "secret" one-player games kids can discover if they have to wait for a connection.

Grosser, in Atlanta last week to promote the service, says there are "nine patents on chunks of the system." He says the software was developed beginning in April with a 30-person team assembled in Silicon Valley. His background includes stints at Apple, LucasArts Entertainment and, more recently, as senior vice president of New Media at Sony Pictures.

Raveling retires

LOS ANGELES — George Raveling, Southern Cal's basketball coach for eight seasons, ended his 22-year coaching career Monday when he retired because of injuries in a near-fatal car crash seven weeks ago, The Associated Press learned.

Raveling was released from the hospital Nov. 8 after spending more than six weeks there, including 10 days in intensive care.

Assistant coaches Charlie Parker and Jack Fertig have handled the coaching chores in Raveling's absence.

Parker was named the interim coach for the 1994-95 season in Raveling's absence.

NEW YORK — Baseball owners will not ask for a salary cap in their new collective bargaining proposal, and instead will propose a tax on their revenues or payrolls.

The shift, revealed Monday by Red Sox chief executive officer John Harrington, marks management's first change in strategy since June 14, when they gave the union their salary cap proposal.

The new proposal will be given to the union Thursday when baseball talks resume in Washington.

Rebels make run for border

■ Thanks to two ties, Midland Lee and El Paso Riverside tangle in the area round of the Class 5A playoffs Saturday.

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

Midland Lee can thank William Buffington and Mike Herrera for having to make another huge road trip for the second consecutive playoff week.

Buffington, the El Paso Riverside junior who has over 1,000 yards rushing this season, returned a kickoff 89 yards with eight minutes left in the game and quarterback Herrera ran for two points to tie El Paso Irvin last Thursday in a Class 5A Small School bi-district contest.

Irvin had scored five consecutive times to take a 32-24 lead over the Rangers in that bi-district outing only to see Buffington and Herrera keep the Rockets from advancing to the area round for the second year in a row. Last year, a favored Irvin team lost to El Paso Bowie, the team that Lee scored 79 points against.

However, make no mistake, Riverside isn't Bowie in any form or fashion. The Rangers can score and have playoff experience. The Rangers fell to Abilene Cooper in the area round last year, 61-22.

If Irvin, the favored team, had kept its end of the bargain, the Rockets and Rebels would be playing in Midland. Now, Lee has to travel back to El Paso for the second time in a row. Lee had won the coin flip with Irvin to decide the playing site, but lost to Riverside.

"It's kind of the way our season has gone," said Lee coach Earl Miller. "Nothing has come easy for this team."

The fact that Lee is still alive in the playoffs is a major miracle. Lee tied No. 10 state ranked Amarillo High 21-21 to advance on a 4-3 edge in penetrations. So, when Riverside and Lee meet, there will be two teams facing each other that don't own an outright playoff victory in 1994. It's an ideal pairing.

■ Class 5A Area Round Playoff Game — Midland Lee at El Paso Riverside, 2 p.m. (CST), Riverside Stadium.

But Lee will have to contain Buffington and Herrera to advance to the region round against the winner of The Colony and Arlington Lamar area contest. Those two have put up impressive numbers this season.

Buffington is only 150 pounds, but has explosive speed that has led him to a 1,000-yard season. Herrera, a senior, is the eighth leading passer in Class 5A this year, completing an amazing 168 of 259 passes for 2,085 yards this season. Herrera's favorite target is wide receiver Rueben Rodriguez, who had five catches for

Lady Dawgs outrun Stanton, 85-55

■ Amy Alcala scores 29 as Midland High comes out on top in a contest between two 1994 playoff teams.

By Amy Wolfenbarger
Staff Writer

There was a time warp in the Midland High gym on Monday night. With the size of the crowd and the intensity of the girls basketball game between Class 5A Midland High and 2A Stanton, it felt more like February than November.

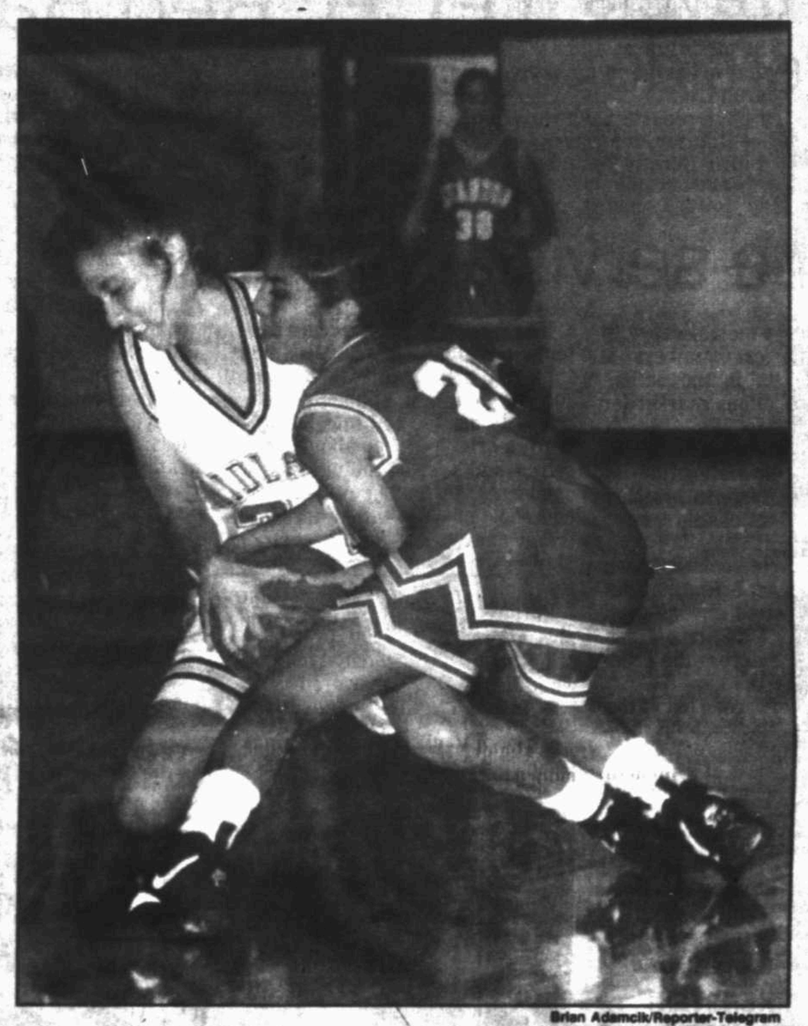

But that's what happens when two teams with a recent taste of the postseason get together. And instead of feeling like the season-opener, it felt like a playoff game.

Approximately 700 fans witnessed the Lady Dawgs come out on the top side of a virtual track meet over the Lady Buffs, 85-55. But while the final score indicated a 30-point blowout for the defending District 4-5A champs, defending 6-2A champ Stanton was not embarassed by its much-larger neighbor.

"This is a good place for us to start," MHS coach Jim Raughton said. "Stanton has a good team. And I tell you what, just like I told them before the game, Stanton has a legitimate shot at the state tournament. I really believe that."

Nobody has to convince Stanton fans. The Lady Buffs played the role of the giant killer last year, knocking off traditional 6-2A champ Wall to win the district title. But they had the unfortunate luck of meeting eventual state champion Jim Ned in the area round, just two games into the playoffs.

MC meets Bahamians

■ Midland College goes international with the Bahamian National Team in town tonight.

By Bill Petitt
Staff Writer

This is probably one time Midland College coaches and players are wishing they were on the road.

The Chaps will meet the Bahamian National Team at 8 p.m. today in the Chap Center.

For Midland College coach Pat Rafferty it will give him another chance to see if his team can piece together a 40 minute game.

Last weekend, Midland defeated Angelina College 105-91 and Lee Junior College 65-63 at the Howard College Classic. The two teams showed different styles of play for the Chaps to handle and Rafferty was encouraged by his team's performance.

"(Against Lee) we showed that we could lock up and play some defense at times," said Rafferty, who is now 4-0 as the Chap coach. "We were able to sustain our defense for a pull possession. There were three or four times that

Midlanders win division at Baja 1000

Staff Report

MEXICALI, Mexico — Months of preparation and planning paid off for Kelly, Spencer and Carty Beal of Midland as they won the Class 3 championship of the famous Baja 1000 Off Road Race over the weekend.

It was the first class victory for the Beal Brothers in this event that tests drivers and vehicles over a hostile environment of the inhospitable Mexican desert.

Drivers and pit crews were forced to endure bone jarring terrain, driving rain, freezing temperatures and mechanical failures on their way to finish the 26-hour event. Of the 273 entries, only 110 (40.3 percent) finished. The Beal brothers placed 53rd overall.

Accompanying the Beals for the entire race was Bryant Hibbs, BbarH Unlimited of Dulzura, Calif. Hibbs was responsible for preparing the Nissa Pathfinder.

Kelly Beal drew the starting turn at the wheel at 10:30 a.m. Friday in the Class 3 Pro Utility 108 Modified Nissan Pathfinder in Mexicali. He endured heavy rains on portions of Laguna, Salada, a normally dry inland sea bed that stretches nearly 80 miles south toward the sea of Cortez.

Kelly, in the Baja 1000 for the third time, had a relatively smooth run, except for a fire extinguishing system which activated due to the unusually severe terrain and a 60 mile-an-hour side slide that nearly rolled the truck.

Carty Beal, in his third Baja event, took over from Kelly at Borago Junction, half-way down the Baja Peninsula, at 5:45 p.m. Carty raced down the Diablo Lake bed with hard rain and poor visibility. In Matomi wash, a narrow rough canyon, he feared flash flooding, but ended up with a smooth run despite a broken torsion bar adjuster rod. Quick work by Bryant Hibbs and Carty replaced the rod with the only spare, providing for minimal down time in the shadow of threatening flash floods common in Matomi.

Spencer Beal, in his fourth Baja race, took over at San Felipe at 11:38 p.m. with the temperature dropping to near freezing as the sky started to clear. With just 118 miles left to the finish line at 4:15 p.m., Spencer shattered a front suspension component, a completely severed transmission support cross-member and a punctured radiator after hitting a rock

Tech crosses cotton pickin' fingers for win

By Charles Richards
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS — Texas Tech has the inside track for the Cotton Bowl, and Red Raiders coach Spike Dykes relishes the role.

When Baylor upended Rice 19-14 on Saturday, it left Texas Tech in control of its own destiny. By winning their final two games, against Houston on Saturday and TCU on Nov. 25, the Raiders can assure themselves the Jan. 2 spot as host of the Cotton Bowl.

"I was happy, I really was," Dykes said of the Baylor victory, which came shortly after his own team beat Southwestern Louisiana 39-7 in a nonconference game.

"When you control your own destiny, you've got no one to blame but yourself. We've never been in that position before, in my 10 years at Tech," Dykes said in a weekend telephone news conference with other SWC coaches.

Oilers ax Pardee; Cowboys shrug off 49er loss

By Michael A. Lutz

HOUSTON — The Houston Oilers went from the playoffs to the pits and Monday they went for a new coach, firing Jack Pardee and hiring defensive coordinator Jeff Fisher.

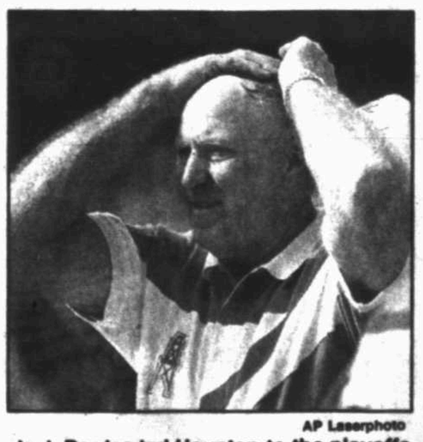

Fisher

The Oilers, 1-9 after a 34-31 loss to the Cincinnati Bengals, also fired assistant coach Kevin Gilbride, who was in charge of the Oilers' feeble offense that averages 14.7 points per game.

"We've got a clean slate starting this week," said Oilers owner Bud Adams, adding that Fisher would retain control of the defense. "It will give him an opportunity to have command of the troops for the remaining six games."

Under Fisher, the Oilers' defense ranks eighth in the league and third in the AFC.

IRVING — The Dallas Cowboys were more defiant than down after their unpleasant trip to San Francisco.

"I guarantee you we'll beat them in January," safety James Washington said of the 49ers. "They won the battle but we'll win the war like we always do."

The 49ers beat the Cowboys 21-14 Sunday, breaking a three-game losing streak against Dallas, which included two straight NFC championship games.

"I just wish we had given it our best shot," Dallas coach Barry Switzer said. "We didn't play like we normally do."

It was the first road loss for the Cowboys under Switzer.

The 49ers controlled the Dallas running game, limiting Emmitt Smith to only 78 yards. Troy Aikman suffered three interceptions, two of them when he tried to force the ball into tight coverage.

OILERS: GM names Fisher head coach

(From 1C)

The 36-year-old Fisher is in his first year at Houston. He was given what Adams termed a 3½-year deal to take charge of the team.

"I would never have thought we would have fallen so fast and so far," Fisher said. "It goes to show you how volatile the NFL is. It also shows you the head coach is obviously responsible for that. The weight falls on his shoulders and now the weight is on my shoulders."

Fisher said the Oilers are strting over.

"The season starts over. We are 0-0," he said.

Adams said he and general manager Floyd Reese made the decision Sunday night after the Oilers loss to the Bengals, who came out of the game with a 2-8 record.

Said Pardee: "I'm sorry we didn't have better results in the first part of the year. When you lose your livelihood, it's pretty traumatic."

Fisher came to Houston to replace Buddy Ryan, who took over as coach of the Arizona Cardinals. Ryan was so upset with Pardee and Gilbride's run-and-shoot offense last season — an offense he labeled the "chuck and duck" — that he took a punch at Gilbride on the sidelines during a nationally televised game.

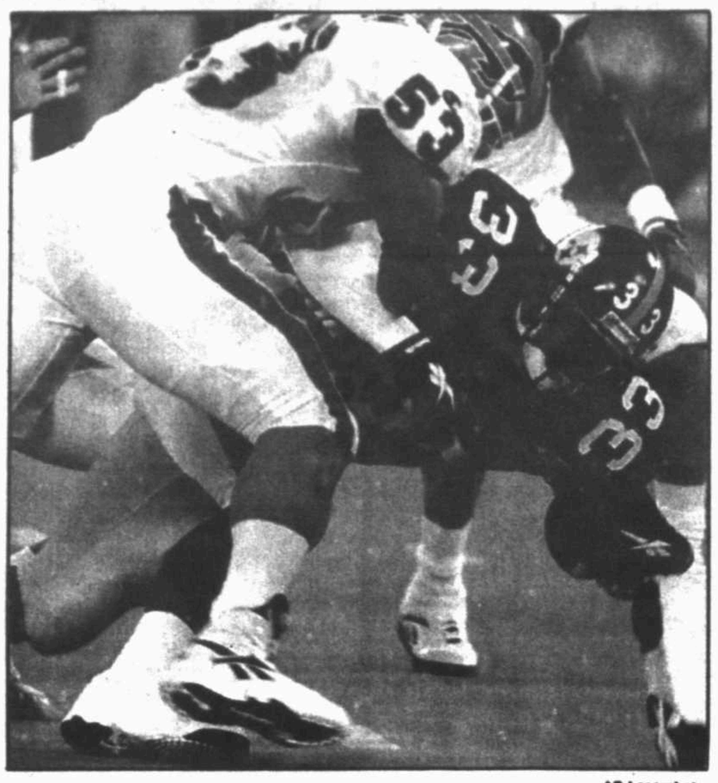

Pardee and Gilbride this year became the focus of criticism for the team's woeful performance, which will snap a seven-year string of making the NFL playoffs.

Ironically, the changes came after the Oilers' best offensive and worst defensive games. Despite scoring 31 points, Houston's 147 total points is the worst in the AFC and ranks 26th overall.

The 58-year-old Pardee was in the last of a five-year contract.

Last year, the team started 1-4, prompting calls for Pardee's dismissal. But the Oilers rebounded with 11 straight victories to finish 12-4 and win the AFC Central. The Oilers lost to Kansas City in the playoffs.

Steel curtain comes down on Bills

AP Laserphoto

Pittsburgh running back 'Bam' Morris (33) is stopped by Buffalo's Marcus Patton during the Steelers' Monday win.

PITTSBURGH (AP) — If Rod Woodson hadn't been voted to the NFL's all-time team, the league might be demanding a recount.

Woodson, single-handedly accounting for more scoring the last two weeks than Pittsburgh's offense, returned an interception for a touchdown and forced a fumble for another to lead the Steelers past the Buffalo Bills 23-10 Monday night.

Gary Anderson, again the only productive member of the Steelers' no-go offense, kicked three field goals to move into sixth place on the NFL's all-time list with 302 as Pittsburgh won for the second straight week without an offensive touchdown.

Woodson stepped in front of intended receiver Bill Brooks for a 37-yard interception return touchdown — the third of his career — to put Pittsburgh up 10-0 in the final minute of the first quarter.

Later, with Buffalo down only a touchdown after Jim Kelly's 19-yard scoring pass to Andre Reed, a blitzing Woodson dislodged the ball from Kelly near the goal line and defensive end Gerald Williams fell on it for his first touchdown in nine NFL seasons.

Rookie defensive tackle Brentson Buckner added to the Bills' growing frustration, blocking a 32-yard field goal attempt by Steve Christie later in the fourth quarter — Christie's first miss in 18 attempts this season.

Anderson, who last week kicked a field goal in overtime after Woodson forced a critical fumble in the Steelers' 12-9 victory over Houston, is 7-for-7 the last two weeks, 17-for-18 this season and 45-for-48 the last two seasons.

While the Steelers (7-3) again proved it's possible to win in the NFL without much offense — they've won three of their last four despite scoring only two offensive touchdowns — the Bills (5-5) are in desperate straits well before the Super Bowl.

With Kelly under constant pressure from a Steel Curtain-like Pittsburgh pass rush that leads the NFL in sacks, the Bills are .500 in November for the first time since finishing 7-8 in 1987. They trail Miami (7-3) by two games in the AFC East and must play twice more in the next 10 days, against Green Bay and Detroit.

Kelly, sacked six times for 54 yards in losses, was lifted for Frank Reich late in the fourth quarter after going 22-for-43 for 212 yards and two interceptions.

REBELS: Lee travels to El Paso Riverside

(From 1C)

86 yards and a touchdown against Irvin.

Herrera completed 12 of 27 passes for 151 yards against Irvin and had two picked off. Buffington had 91 yards rushing on 17 carries.

Against Irvin, Buffington and Herrera led the Rangers to a quick 24-7 lead in the first half, only to see the Rockets climb from the dead to take the lead. It took the long distance miracle by Buffington to turn the game back around.

"It was a typical El Paso game," said Miller, who travelled to El Paso Thursday to watch the two teams play. "It looked like Riverside was going to walk away with the win and then Irvin got hot. It was crazy."

Riverside averages 217 pounds per man in its offensive line, much the same as Lee. Center Richard Luna is the only other junior playing on the offensive side of the ball. However, on defense, the Rangers have five juniors in the starting lineup. Lee has three sophomores starting on defense.

Miller, the winningest coach in Lee history, has said that this ninth season will be his last. He now has 76-24-2 record at Lee with a 10-6-2 mark in the state playoffs. Every step on the field now could bring down the closing chapter of a golden Lee era. He would like to make this final playoff voyage into deep water. The Amarillo High tie was a big step toward deeper water.

TECH: Red Raiders eye Cotton Bowl

tion of having the Cotton Bowl berth wrapped up before they take the field against TCU.

If Tech gets by Houston and Texas A&M beats TCU on Saturday — both of which are expected to happen — a Texas victory over Baylor on Thanksgiving Day would clinch the Cotton Bowl for Tech regardless of how the Raiders fare the following day against TCU.

Such a scenario would give all the other teams at least three conference losses, and Tech would advance in a multiteam tie because it has never represented the SWC in the Cotton Bowl.

Rice beat Texas Tech and Texas to become the favorite to go to Dallas over New Year's, but then lost three of its next four games to open the door for Tech. The Owls would have virtually wrapped up the Cotton Bowl by holding off Baylor in the fourth quarter Saturday, but Baylor recovered two Rice fumbles and rallied for the victory.

"I'm hurting for my kids," Rice coach Ken Hatfield said. "I knew what an opportunity we had, and to not be able to fulfill that goal is disappointing."

Texas A&M, ranked ninth nationally, has compiled a 5-0-1 SWC record and 9-0-1 mark overall, but is ineligible to win the championship, putting coach R.C. Slocum in an observer's role.

"I'm impressed with the way Texas Tech has shown improvement throughout the year. The way they've rebuilt that offense has been tremendous," Slocum said.

"I don't guess I'm ever surprised by anything in football anymore, but I have been impressed with the way Tech has played these last few weeks."

Since Rice scored 10 points late in the fourth quarter to beat Tech, the Raiders have beaten Baylor 38-7, Texas 33-9 and Southwestern Louisiana 39-7.

"We've really had some surprising success stories. And we've been awfully lucky. No one's been hurt. There's no question that's been a true, true, viable factor in our success," Dykes said.

DALLAS: 49ers claim bragging right for time being derstand it being a big deal for them. We did that when we beat them two years ago. Next time it will be different."

Offensive guard Nate Newton said the 49ers earned the right "for a little trash talk. They got us this time. But this is not our Super Bowl. This was just another game on our schedule."

Aikman refused to blame a sore thumb on his passing problems.

"The thumb didn't bother me on the throws," he said. "It's not a good feeling to lose a game like this. But we know the payoff comes in the playoffs."

Defensive end Charles Haley said the 49ers hoodwinked the Cowboys.

"They ran every trick play they had," Haley said. "We'll be ready next time for anything they do."

Haley was victimized by bootlegs run by 49ers quarterback Steve Young.

"I should have looked for that play," Haley said. "They used to run that play against me in practice all the time when I was with the 49ers."

Smith said the 49ers were effective with an eight-man front in the second half.

"We didn't play our best," Smith said. "It was like we didn't show up in the second half. We lost. But it's still a long road to January."

"This wasn't the Super Bowl, thank God," wide receiver Michael Irvin said. "We have six games to go and we're still in first place."

"We did things we don't normally do," defensive lineman Chad Hennings said. "We don't usually have so many penalties and turnovers. It was strange."

Dallas is off and running

■ Dallas is off to its best start since 1990 at 3-1.

AP Laserphoto

Dallas forward Jamal Mashburn (left) set a team record with 50 points against Chicago Saturday.

DALLAS (AP) — The Dallas Mavericks, doormats of the NBA the past two seasons, are not only having fun under coach Dick Motta, they're winning.

The Mavericks got 50 points from forward Jamal Mashburn and 38 from guard Jim Jackson — career highs for both — in a 124-120 overtime victory over the Bulls at Chicago Saturday, giving Dallas a 3-1 record, including two road victories in two nights.

That put the Mavs more than two months ahead of schedule for either of the past two seasons, when they had embarrassing records of 11-71 in 1992-93 and 13-69 in 1993-94.

It's the Mavericks' best start since 1990.

"Last year was pretty much jail," Mashburn said. "We're just excited to have new blood and a new coach."

Motta's not exactly a "new" coach, since at 63 he's the oldest in the NBA and he was the Mavericks' first coach, from 1980-87. But he's new to this team, having been rehired by owner Don Carter to take over the shambles left from last season, when Quinn Buckner had a near-mutiny on his hands.

"We're supposed to be in a rebuilding year, so why not have fun?" Mashburn said, after Saturday night's victory before 22,195 stunned fans in Chicago's new United Center.

It was Jan. 29 last season before the Mavericks got their third victory; that also was their first home victory. The previous season, they didn't get their third win until Jan. 19.

Mashburn's 50 points broke the Mavericks record of 49 set by Mark Aguirre on Jan. 28, 1985, against the Philadelphia 76ers. He did it against perennial NBA all-defensive forward Scottie Pippen.

"I had no idea how many points I had," said Mashburn, who never had scored 50 points in a game at any level.

"But it wasn't one-on-one out there. It's a collective thing, and if we had lost the game, it (the record) wouldn't have mattered.

"Coach Motta has put me in a position in the fourth quarter where I'm not tired. I'm posting up and not running around the perimeter a lot. The coach got me in the right spots and I wasn't as tired and that was important. I had my legs going towards overtime."

Mashburn had 44 points after three periods, also a club record, and when the Bulls resorted to triple-teaming him, Jackson took over, scoring 16 points during the fourth quarter and seven in overtime.

"Every game around here, feels more like a championship," said forward Popeye Jones, whose 14 points and 15 rebounds Friday night in Dallas' 107-100 victory over the 76ers at Philadelphia exemplified the Mavericks' new team effort.

"Everyone's so excited when we win a game because of the scars from last year," Jones said. "I think we're starting to erase those scars."

The significance of the early victories this season hasn't been lost on Motta.

"I like them," Motta said. "They're hustling. They're executing beyond their experience, and it's a tribute to their good work. All these kids we're talking about are in their first or second year."

Motta paused and looked around the locker room.

"Is it hot in here, or am I excited?" he said.

Against the 76ers, one play had Motta so excited he almost ran onto the court. With 20 seconds left and the Mavericks leading 102-96, rookie point guard Jason Kidd dived and knocked the ball loose from Philadelphia's Dana Barros.

BAJA: Beals capture division title buried by a sand dune at a high rate of speed. Fortunately, he was able to limp to a pit area some five miles away where there was the necessary welding equipment to make a temporary fix. An immediate radio transmission by Hibbs, describing the failures, went out to one of the mobile support chase crews, including Midland's Craig Duke, a previous Baja 1000 competitor.

Kelly Beal takes his turn on the Baja 100 course.

The chase crew was abel to locate and marshal the necessary tools and welding equipment to attempt repairs to the seriously damaged Pathfinder. Replacement parts were not available, however, which forced the crew to weld the broken parts together.

The weld lasted until seven miles from the finish line, but the Beals were able to crawl to the line, not realizing that they had taken first in their class, covering the 1000 kilometer course in 22 hours, 28 minutes and 27 seconds, arriving at 8:55 a.m.

The city of Mexicali provided a red light and siren police escort through the spectator lined streets of Mexicali to the finish line in the Center City where Spencer and Hibbs were met by Kelly, Carty and a very tired, but jubilant, race team.

"We were elated to have taken first place in our class after not finishing the race in three previous attempts," Spencer Beal said.

"We dedicated the race in the memory of our father (Carlton Beal) for his love of racing and competition."

MHS: Woodfin's 19 leads Stanton

(From 1C)

But Stanton coach Frank Riney admitted he underestimated the Lady Dawgs, who finished perfect in league play before advancing to the Region 1-5A tournament with a 31-4 record.

"I think the biggest factor was probably that we didn't have a very good assessment of how good they were," Riney said. "We kind of got caught off guard. We played them when we were freshmen and it was pretty close but they've been playing in a different league and that makes a difference. We didn't have a very good idea of what was fixing to happen."

Riney's words were the understatement of this young season. The MHS defense jumped on Stanton and cruised to a 16-0 lead in the game's first three minutes. The Lady Buffs did not get on the board until 4:28 when post Kendra Woodfin, who led Stanton with 19 points, finally hit her fifth attempt under the basket.

By the end of the first quarter, the Lady Dawgs had caused 10 Stanton turnovers — close to a third of their total 31 — and outscored the Lady Buffs 31-14.

Stanton managed to pull within 10 points, 39-29, with a nice run in the second by outscoring MHS 15-4 in a 4:28 span of the second quarter. But the Lady Dawgs pulled away by outpointing Stanton 16-8 in the third and 24-14 in the fourth.

Amy Alcala led the MHS attack with 29 points, 16 coming in the first half. She also played havoc on the front attack of the MHS defense, stealing the ball six times against the quick Stanton guards Laura Herm, Lupe Chapa and Tracy Moore. And Alcala led MHS in rebounding with 10.

Supporting Alcala, MHS' only returning starter from last year, were Veronica Poage with 15 and Jamie Rand and Ogonna Merritt with eight each. And their play pleased Raughton.

"We had some girls come to the front," Raughton said. "But it really didn't surprise me. The past few years we've had quality girls and it's their turn. And hopefully throughout the season, they're going to continue to produce."

Riney, whose girls just competed last weekend in the state cross country meet, said he's not second-guessing himself for scheduling the strong Lady Dawg team this early in the season.

"We wanted to seek this level of competition to get better," Riney said. "The last couple of years we've had some real week spots in our schedule but you don't get better playing like that."

In the junior varsity contest, Midland High got 15 points from Kristy Cornelius and 13 from Jimeca Sims to take a 48-33 victory. Stanton was led by Amy Allgood with 12. The Midland sophomores also scored a 39-27 win over Stanton behind 17 points from Deborah Landreth. Randi Simer had 10 for the Lady Buffs.

Midland High returns to action Friday at the Tall City Classic. MHS opens the tournament with a noon game against El Paso Bowie.

they would have to throw up a shot because the shot clock was down on them or we would deflect a ball and they would have to run a play from out of bounds to try and score."

Sophomore Kevin Rice had a big weekend with 21 points each night and led the MC defensive effort on Saturday.

"A lot of our players look towards Kevin and when he turns it up another notch, he takes some players along with him," said Rafferty.

Today's game will be the fourth game for the Bahamian team on its tour of the United States. They split two games with Clarendon College over the weekend and faced New Mexico Junior College on Monday night.

"They will be older and have some experience," said Rafferty. "They may not have played with each other much, but what they lack in structure they will make up with cleverness and experience."

Prices sink

NEW YORK — Crude oil and home heating oil prices fell Monday as Iraq tried again to get permission to resume exporting oil and the industry's trade group raised concerns about new shipping insurance regulations.

Some expect imports to rise just before the new insurance rules take effect at the end of the year.

West Texas Intermediate for delivery in December finished 57 cents per barrel lower at $17.47 on the New York Mercantile Exchange.

Local crude purchasers lowered their posted price 50 cents to $15.75 a barrel.

The insurance rules, which require coverage to pay for oil spills, take effect Dec. 28. The American Petroleum Institute says the regulations could disrupt oil supplies and wants the Clinton administration to extend the deadline.

Meanwhile, Iraq was at the United Nations again seeking to have the embargo against its oil lifted. The Security Council rejected claims that Iraq has met conditions to lift the embargo and other sanctions.

Natural gas prices fell 3.8 cents per 1,000 cubic feet to $1.703 for December delivery.

Dollar strengthens

NEW YORK — The Mexican peso fell to an all-time low Monday, while the dollar strengthened broadly ahead of an anticipated increase in short-term U.S. interest rates after Federal Reserve policymakers meet today.

Gold prices were mixed. On New York's Commodity Exchange, gold for current delivery fell 40 cents to settle at $384.50 per troy ounce.

In late New York trading, the dollar was quoted at 1.5444 German marks, up from 1.5298 late Friday and the highest level since Oct. 14.

The dollar also was changing hands in New York at 98.31 Japanese yen, up from 97.68.

Elsewhere, the Mexican currency fell to a second-consecutive record low. The dollar was quoted in New York at 3.4505 pesos, compared with 3.4425 late Friday.

Other late dollar rates in New York, compared with late Friday: 1.2975 Swiss francs, up from 1.2830; 5.3050 French francs, up from 5.2600; 1,584 Italian lire, up from 1,569; and 1.3590 Canadian dollars, up from 1.3583.

The British pound was quoted at $1.5868, down from $1.5965.

Stocks rally

NEW YORK — Stocks rallied Monday as the dollar's strength on foreign currency markets helped investors temporarily shelve worries about inflation and interest rates.

The Dow Jones industrial average rose 28.26 points to 3,829.73.

Advancing issues outnumbered declines by about 11 to 9 on the New York Stock Exchange.

Alternate fuel subsidies cost $1 billion

Institute releases study that reveals federal government grants

■ Major oil producers, refiners lay groundwork to take on ethanol producers, electric car proponents.

Associated Press

DALLAS — An association representing the nation's largest oil companies has released a study that says federal government subsidies for the alternative fuels and vehicle industry total $1.1 billion a year.

The study was released by the American Petroleum Institute Sunday, as major oil producers and refiners lay the groundwork to take on ethanol producers and proponents of electric cars and natural gas-powered vehicles.

The big oil companies are counting on a new Republican Congress for support of next year's offensive against the growing alternative fuels and vehicle industry.

The government subsidies include about $130 million for research to develop an electric car battery, $573 million in tax breaks for ethanol fuel users and about $34 million to local governments and private companies for the purchase of vehicles that run on alternative fuels.

"We believe that these types of subsidy programs do not bring benefits commensurate with their cost," Leonard Bower, API director of policy analysis and strategic planning, told The Dallas Morning News in an interview at the oil association's annual conference in Los Angeles.

Dallas oil and natural gas producer Boone Pickens is a leading national proponent of natural gas as an alternative to gasoline. Big oil companies and alternative fuels advocates like Pickens are preparing to do battle in the Texas Legislature over how the state can best comply with new federal air quality standards.

But major oil companies and refiners are hoping that the new Republican Congress will eliminate the subsidies for their competitors.

"The only way these various alternatives are getting into the marketplace is through subsidies," said Kenneth Derr, chairman of the board and chief executive officer of Chevron Corp., as well as API chairman. "I think they ought to stand on their own in the marketplace."

Derr and Bower say Congress will lend a sympathetic ear to their arguments.

Aviation group issues warning on commuter aircraft safety

■ FAA disagrees, cites 'high level of safety.'

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — An airline passenger group says small commuter airplanes should be avoided for safety reasons, but the airline industry, defending the small aircraft, said the warning issued Monday "needlessly frightens the public."

And Federal Aviation Administrator David R. Hinson said commuter airlines "have achieved and have sustained a high level of safety."

The International Airline Passengers Association urged its members not to fly in planes with fewer than 31 seats, which it said have an accident rate "significantly higher" than larger craft.

But the Air Transport Association, which represents airlines, responded that its members "continue to have confidence in the safety and operations procedures of their regional airlines partners."

The association said the warning "needlessly frightens the public."

Chrysler stockholder demands to buy more

DETROIT (AP) — Kirk Kerkorian, Chrysler Corp.'s biggest shareholder, is demanding the automaker boost its stock price and let him buy millions more shares, or else he may attempt a takeover.

Kerkorian's Tracinda Corp. asked federal regulators Monday for permission to increase his stake in Chrysler from 9 percent to 15 percent. He owns 32 million shares worth about $1.4 billion.

In a letter to Chrysler's board, Kerkorian asked the company to lift the anti-takeover provisions it put in place four years ago when he started buying large quantities of stock.

He also proposed that Chrysler increase its dividend, split its stock and buy back shares from stockholders. Any of those measures might boost the price.

"Despite the company's excellent operating performance in recent years, the company's stock price performance has been very disappointing," he wrote. "Like any other shareholder, my aim is to enhance the value of my investment in the company."

If the company doesn't react positively by Dec. 15, Kerkorian will consider a range of options, including a takeover attempt, Tracinda executive Alex Yemenidjian said.

Chrysler spokeswoman Rita McKay said the company had received Kerkorian's letter. "Chrysler will consider these requests as it considers the requests of all shareholders," she said, declining further comment.

Lehman Brothers analyst Joseph Phillippi said he doubted a takeover was what Kerkorian had in mind.

"I don't think he's got the firepower, nor does he have the background to run an auto company," Phillippi said. "First of all, the guys who are running the store are doing a tremendous job."

Chrysler's profits for the first nine months of 1994 topped $2.5 billion, and it has increased its dividends twice since December.

But investors are leery of the auto industry's cyclical nature, and Chrysler's stock hasn't risen to match that performance.

Kerkorian bought millions of shares in 1990 when the company was flirting with bankruptcy and its stock was trading at $12. The price hit $62.50 in February before dropping.

It rose $2.37½ cents, to $48.25, Monday on the New York Stock Exchange after news of Kerkorian's proposal spread.

Southwest offers Thanksgiving fare

DALLAS — Southwest Airlines is offering a $25 nonstop one-way fare to celebrate Thanksgiving.

To qualify for this are, roundtrip travel must take place between 4 p.m. Thanksgiving Day and Friday midnight, November 25.

The special fare is nonrefundable and cannot be combined with or applied to other fares. Because of the limited travel time, the special fare may not be available in all city pairs. Reservations must be made at least one day in advance of travel and tickets must be issued within one day of booking reservations or one day prior to date of travel, whichever comes first.

"This special fare should allow families who might have been apart to spend the Thanksgiving holiday together," said Dave Ridley, vice president marketing and sales. "The cost of the trip home on Southwest will rival the price of turkey and all the trimmings for the family."

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Tax liability can go to separated bond co-owner

By Bill Doyle

Q: My husband and I co-own Series EE U.S. savings bonds, with interest being deferred until they're redeemed. We are separating — it will be a legal separation — and we will be filing income taxes separately. The bonds will be mine to provide income.

My question: I wish to be totally responsible for taxes due on accrued interest as I redeem the bonds. Can I do this? I don't want him to be liable for taxes due.

Doyle

A: If your bonds are registered in co-ownership form, the person who cashes them has to supply his or her Social Security number at redemption, for tax purposes. The bank will issue Internal Revenue Service Form 1099 and report the interest earned.

If you keep the bonds and eventually die before your husband, he would become the owner. If you want to change the names on the bonds, and your husband's name is listed there first, it would create a taxable event for him. If his name is listed second, the change could be made without a problem.

Q: I frequently invest in Series EE savings bonds. I know I won't be able to cash these bonds until they have matured in 30 years. I'll be in my 60s then. Isn't there some other kind of savings bond I can buy where I don't have to wait so long to get at the money?

A: The final maturity for currently issued Series EE savings bonds is 30 years. That's when they stop paying interest. But you are erroneously assuming that you have to hold onto them for the full 30 years before you can redeem them.

Actually, you have to hold them for a minimum of six months to get the guaranteed 4 percent interest rate.

If you hold the bonds for six months to 18 years, the least you can get is 4 percent. Once you have held the bonds for five years, you are eligible for the variable rate, which is generally a bit higher than the guaranteed rate.

Q: When I submit a non-competitive bid for a U.S. Treasury note through my "Treasury Direct" account, how can I anticipate whether the note will be issued at a discount, at par or at a premium? I understand that my bid tender is accepted at the average of the accepted competitive bids.

A: When you submit a noncompetitive tender bid — as small investors should — you accept the average yield. Recently, a two-year Treasury note had an awarded yield of 6.88 percent. That created a price of $99.99 per $100.

In general, when Treasury bonds and notes are auctioned, the interest rate is set after the yield is determined. The rate is set so it does not create a premium or go below the original issue discount.

Treasury officials say you really should not be worrying about notes being issued at discount, par or premium. They often sell at a small discount but rarely sell at a premium and rarely sell at par.

Q: Six years ago my parents sold their summer cottage to their four children for the sum of $1 — 25 cents each. We are now thinking of selling the cottage. Being that this was more of a gift than an investment, will I still have to pay taxes on everything over the 25 cents?

A: The sale of your parents' cottage for $1 is known in tax circles as a "sham transaction." It was a gift, pure and simple. The children own the cottage at the parents' "basis" — cost for tax purposes.

Let's say your parents bought the cottage for $20,000. Each child has a quarter share of the basis — $5,000. And each child is responsible for paying capital-gains tax on the difference between one-fourth of $20,000 and the child's share of the net proceeds from the sale.

There might be other tax issues involved, so before you sell the cottage, the four of you would be wise to get counseling from a lawyer experienced in tax matters.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 15, 1994

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Focus on making your relationships mutually rewarding. Curb a tendency to give too much or too little. If single, you will have many more chances for romance; take your time! The year 1995 will bring positive developments where your finances and career are concerned. A change of lifestyle or image will boost your ego. Avoid getting too involved in the lives of your married friends.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: artist Georgia O'Keeffe, actor Ed Asner, conductor Daniel Barenboim, poet Marianne Moore.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Influential people are impressed with your abilities. Strike while the iron is hot! Set up a job interview. Home life is a source of great happiness. You can learn a lot from your favorite people.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Tact and perseverance will help you achieve your goals. Be independent without being arrogant. Your cash flow could be temporarily impeded. Someone prominent can help by pulling strings on your behalf. Show your gratitude.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Working hard in your usual environment will prove more productive than taking a business trip now. Use evening hours to improve your home surroundings and tend to personal chores.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Be considerate of other people's feelings but, if your regular contacts are unrewarding, look for new relationships. In romance, singles are only trapped if they want to be!

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A new course of study or research gives great satisfaction. Devote any spare time to solving small personal problems. A money situation eases, thanks to a stroke of good luck. All's fair in love!

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A show of initiative and independence will put you in the driver's seat. Higher-ups see you in a new light. A promotion or raise may come sooner than you think. Romance requires greater discretion.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Important documents occupy your attention. Take care of pending bills and unanswered correspondence. Your personal life is entering a period of transition. Ask your mate or partner for greater cooperation.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Although you tend to resist change, bold moves are favored now. Take a good look at what you must do to reach your goals. Overseas contacts could prove very valuable. Choose your confidants with care.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Heed an urge to develop greater financial independence. Your life is changing at a deep level; let go of the past. An old flame could try to rekindle romance. Take things nice and easy.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Tackle unpleasant tasks with zeal for a quick finish. A legal matter will soon be battled in your favor. Expressing radical beliefs openly could cause trouble. Hold on to your money. Avoid financial speculation.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Socializing will pay off handsomely now. You meet people who can boost your financial fortunes. A long-standing argument will be brought to an end if you offer the hand of friendship. Welcome advice.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Keep your financial affairs as free from risk as possible. Joint ventures must be handled with kid gloves. A stroke of good luck helps you get an outstanding agreement signed. Romance looks somewhat iffy.

The bidding:

SOUTH	WEST	NORTH	EAST
1NT	Pass	2♣	Pass
2◇	Pass	2NT	Pass
3NT	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Four of ◇

When the opponents are trying to help you without realizing it, you should do everything in your power to encourage them. Failure to 'seize the day' cost declarer dearly on this hand.

North-South were employing a 16-18 range for one-no-trump opening bids. North probed for a 4-4 major fit and, when none was located, invited game with two no trump. Holding 17 points and a five-card suit, South's acceptance was automatic.

West led the four of diamonds, and East applied the Rule of Eleven to work out that declarer held three cards higher than the one led. When South followed with the deuce under East's king, the defender decided that diamonds offered no future and shifted to a club.

That finished off declarer's chances. South could not come to nine tricks without the diamond suit, and as soon as the defenders were given the chance to win the ace of diamonds they cashed out the clubs for a two-trick set.

Given the auction, we would not have selected a diamond as our opening lead; there was too good a chance that might be declarer's suit. Our choice would have been a high spade. Having received a reprieve, declarer failed to make the most of it.

Declarer should have encouraged the defenders to continue diamonds. The way to accomplish that was to falsecard with the eight of diamonds, suggesting that the lead might have been from a six-card suit, perhaps even headed by the ace-queen. East would surely then have returned a diamond.

The rule of thumb is simple enough. As declarer, play your cards exactly as a defender would — a high card to encourage continuation, a low card to suggest a shift.

Rob Morrow, of TV's "Northern Exposure," pauses along the shore of Lake Washington in the 1993 photo. Morrow knows some of his colleagues are delighted to see him leave the show.

Morrow knows some think he's pain, but can live with it

SEATTLE — Rob Morrow knows some of his "Northern Exposure" colleagues consider him as much a pain as his arrogant, compulsive character, Dr. Joel Fleischman.

He's sorry about that, but he can live with it.

"Ultimately, the people I care about respect me," Morrow said in a recent interview with the Seattle Post-Intelligencer. "You can't be liked by everybody, unfortunately."

Morrow, who had a role in the film "Quiz Show," is leaving the series — set in fictional Cicely, Alaska, and filmed in Washington state — to pursue more movie roles. His character's last appearance will probably be in February.

Morrow allows "there's probably a grain of truth" in complaints about his personality. "But I'm not . . . megalomaniacal. I don't see it as MY show. . . . I'm completely sensitive to other people and their needs," he said.

CHICAGO — When Judith Barnard and Michael Fain exchanged wedding vows, they agreed to share a career and a name — first and last.

Behold Judith Michael, author of eight best sellers after 15 years of marriage.

They were once down to their last $2,000 before selling anything. Then "Deceptions" came along about 10 years ago, and away they went.

"About the only things that are different are that as we got older we got more adventurous, and we want to do more for the world," Fain said.

ROME — Alessandra Mussolini, granddaughter of Benito Mussolini, is expecting a child in July.

Mussolini's granddaughter expects first child in July.

"I just found out and I'm very, very happy about it," she said Monday.

The 32-year-old politician has been married to Mauro Floriani, a tax police officer, since 1989. It will be their first child.

Mussolini, who ran unsuccessfully for mayor of Naples in December, is serving her second term as a Parliament deputy in the rightist National Alliance party, a member of the governing coalition.

HIGH SKY AREA
LOOKING FOR EXTRA INCOME
OR A STEADY PART TIME JOB.....
Does a Weekly and Monthly Income Sound Appealing????

The Midland Reporter-Telegram has an opening on one of its "Special Allowance" routes. This route receives a regular income from rack sales, $250 per month gas allowance in addition to the regular monthly route profits.

As with all newspaper distributorships, this opportunity requires a P/T, a 7 day a week commitment (when you go out of town, you must arrange a substitute for yourself) and it is early morning work which allows for time to go to your "regular job".

Newspaper distributorships can provide great supplemental income for housewives and/or mothers, senior citizens, college students or any other adult wanting to "moonlight".
