A tall tale

Supervising a tall construction project in the Tall City is a "tall" construction manager, Dean Ingram. Ingram is construction boss for The Summit, a 12-story office building nearing completion in downtown Midland. Working a floor below Ingram is Charles Lind.

New pairings draw 'prickly' response

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The chairman of the House redistricting committee Saturday proposed new state representative district boundaries that quickly drew accusations of political motivation.

The districts could cause nine reelection races between House members in 1982, while creating seven districts without incumbents.

A 10th pairing would put Speaker Bill Clayton and Rep. Pete Laney, D-Hale Center, in a single district, but Clayton does not plan to seek re-election to the House.

"I think by the time we are through, we will have a bill that is fair and minimizes pairings and conforms to the law," said Rep. Tim Von Dohlen, D-Goliad, committee chairman.

Rep. Dan Kubiak, D-Rockdale, one of those paired, compared the plan with the one Speaker Gus Mutscher and his redistricting chairman, Delwin Jones of Lubbock, used to punish their political enemies in 1971.

"As the plan now stands...it is equal to the gerrymandering Delwin Jones plan of 1971," Kubiak told reporters.

The redistricting committee planned an afternoon meeting today to vote a bill to the floor for House consideration on Monday — a week before the legislative session adjourns.

Related story, Page 12A

Von Dohlen said as the panel began hearings Saturday that he had made every effort to draw districts that comply with the U.S. Voting Rights Act "without looking to pair members."

But several legislators said a high proportion of the representatives who were paired had supported Rep. John Bryant, D-Dallas, in his unsuccessful speaker's race against Clayton.

Kubiak, who at one time supported both Clayton and Bryant, is paired by the plan with Rep. Bill Keese, D-Somerville. Kubiak pointed out there are open districts to both the east and the west of the one assigned to him and Keese. He said both districts probably would go Republican. Kubiak insisted a plan could be drawn with only two pairings.

Bryant said the Von Dohlen plan, issued after consultations with Clayton, Rep. Bob Davis, R-Irving, and various rank-and-file House members, has a Republican flavor.

"In Bexar County, it looks Republican. In Harris County, it looks Republican. In Dallas County, the plan is one voted on by nine of us, mostly Democrats, while seven opposed it, mostly Republicans," Bryant said.

Barcelona bank patrons held hostage by gunmen

BARCELONA, Spain (AP) — Some 20 to 25 gunmen seized more than 200 hostages in a crowded bank Saturday and threatened to kill them one-by-one unless the government released four military men jailed after February's coup attempt.

One bank employee was shot and wounded in the takeover.

Barcelona Police Chief Enrique Mosquera talked by telephone early today with the gunmen inside Barcelona's Central Bank, but Mayor Narcis Serra said no substantial negotiations had begun.

The Interior Ministry issued a statement in Madrid saying the government would be "absolutely firm in the face of this criminal act."

The news agency Europa Press reported three men — Mosquera, a high Civil Guard officer and a civilian — had entered the bank to talk with the gunmen and then walked out at 6:50 p.m., nearly 10 hours after the bank was seized.

The Interior Ministry identified the gunmen as right-wing extremists. There were other reports that at least some of the gunmen were members of the paramilitary Civil Guards.

Civil Guard rebels led by Col. Antonio Tejero occupied Parliament three months ago in the unsuccessful bid to overthrow the government.

Dr. Antonio Borras said a freed hostages he spoke with in a hospital told him one of the gunmen identified himself as a Civil Guard.

Maj. Gen Luis Saez, military governor of Barcelona, told reporters at the police command center near the bank that he was there because of reports military men could be involved.

Civil Guard Gen. Camilio Pajuelo was among those on the scene.

Authorities said the heavily armed men released 63 hostages during the day. They continued to hold 150 to 200 bank employees and customers.

David Nall, a U.S. State Department spokesman in Washington, said no Americans were believed held in the bank. He also said the United States strongly condemned "this act of terrorism."

One of the freed hostages was the man shot in the leg when the invaders stormed the bank shortly after it opened at 9 a.m. (3 a.m. EDT). Several other released hostages — mostly women — were reportedly suffering from shock.

Building project announced

Jack D. Hightower has announced plans to construct a 10-story office building in downtown Midland. Construction is expected to start in June this year and the cost is estimated at $6 million. Completion and occupancy is expected by June 1982.

The Hightower Building will be located north of Midland National Bank at the corner of West Illinois Avenue and Pecos Street. In addition to surface parking on the site, convenient parking is to be constructed at the corner of Tennessee and Carrizo streets within one block of the new building.

The Hightower Building will provide the Tall City with more than 125,000 square feet of efficient and attractive office space, according to a release by the company.

Special emphasis has been placed on the design of climate control and lighting as well as the attractiveness of the interior and exterior. The Hightower Building was designed to utilize today's latest technology, materials and methods for high-rise construction, providing for some of the finest office space available in the area, according to the release.

Related drawing, Page 2A

The "central core-total vision" concept of the design assures that tenants who want either an entire floor or a portion will find that their individual needs may be met conveniently and efficiently in the column-free areas.

Hightower said that 50 percent of the space already has been leased, and he expects the building to be fully occupied by the time it is completed.

DWI: In Midland, plea bargain 'built in'

By RICHARD ORR
Staff Writer

Although it's not advisable to jump in your car and drive off when you've had too much to drink, one of the lesser-known advantages of living in Midland is that you probably won't get busted for driving while intoxicated if you do risk the dangers of drunk driving.

Instead — barring an accident or other extenuating circumstances — the charge will be, "drunk in a vehicle."

The difference between that charge and DWI is not simply one of semantics. While the fine is about the same, you avoid probation and the potential loss of your driver's license. More importantly, though, your driving record will not reflect a DWI arrest.

For the past several years, Midland police have been reluctant to file DWIs because, according to a veteran member of the force, the county court routinely allows defendants to plea-bargain for a lesser offense, and the effort it takes to prepare a DWI complaint is then all for naught.

"IT TAKES 45 minutes to an hour to do the test and paperwork on a DWI," said the officer, who requested anonymity. "It removes us from the streets and the guy usually winds up pleading out on a reduced charge of reckless driving."

Persons charged with "drunk in a vehicle" are not allowed to take a breath test because that offense is a form of public intoxication and there's no provision for such tests under the law. Thus, the arrest is relatively easy to make and it's the officer's word against the defendant's.

In effect, police say, they're merely eliminating the middleman and keeping the fine ($205 — the maximum amount allowed in municipal court) in city hands, while simultaneously accomplishing the purpose of the law by taking drunk drivers off the road.

"In severe cases, like death or injury, we always file a DWI," said the officer. "It's the system. I don't necessarily agree with it — it's just the expedient thing to do."

NOT MANY people are prone to take issue with the system because:

—It uses police manpower more efficiently.

—Defendants are usually quite willing to plead guilty to something that will keep their driving record free of a DWI conviction.

—It helps relieve already clogged court dockets.

—And attorneys aren't likely to take up arms because the situation is definitely to the advantage of their clients.

An exception occurred recently, however, when a lawyer argued that if his client was intoxicated enough to be arrested for being drunk in a car, he was drunk enough to be charged with DWI. The jury agreed and acquitted the man.

ANOTHER POLICE officer says one reason prosecutors allow people to trade a DWI — which can sometimes be a hassle to prove — for a reduced charge is that it improves the prosecutor's win-loss ratio and keeps his workload down.

"It looks good on his record at election time," said the officer. "They (prosecutors) won't mess with something they're not certain they can win. It'd be nice if cops had the same discretionary power — not make a bust unless we knew we could make it stick."

County Attorney Robert Rendall disputes the contention that his office is lenient with drunk drivers.

"There may have been a problem a few years ago when there was only one county judge," said Rendall, who's worked in the County Attorney's office two years. "But we've had two county judges for almost three years now. Sure, we'll sometimes reduce something if it's a weak case. It's not done as a matter of practice, however. And the DPS and Sheriff's Department don't seem to have trouble with us."

SHERIFF'S CAPT. Richard Stratton and DPS Lt. K.D. Woolsey agree with Rendall. "We have no problem whatsoever with the courts," said Stratton.

Woolsey: "We file DWIs in all cases where there's sufficeint evidence. We have no particular problem with the county court reducing them."

Asked if he thought perhaps critics are correct when the say the city's procedure on drunk drivers might in reality be an attempt to enhance its financial picture, Woolsey said:

"I know this is probably done, but

NEW YORK — Our major European allies have recently taken some steps that from far away seem like historic shifts but on closer examination are positive and practial measures of accommodation with the U.S., main defender of NATO against Soviet aggression. Two alterations occurred in elections, one in France and the other in West Berlin, the surrounded and exposed outpost deep in Communist-held territory. The third surfaced in Britain, rocked by economic problems and riotf in Northern Ireland, which could take longer to achieve.

It would be useful to take these "happenings" one at a time because they are based on national changes of views and subtle maneuvers. Let's start with France. For the first time in 23 years, a Socialist and veteran politician, Francois Mitterrand, was elected president for a seven-year term. He defeated the incumbent, conservative Valery Giscard d'Estaing.

This surprising outcome sent shares tumbling on the Paris stock exchange and investors began to either hoard gold or try and slip over to Switzerland with suitcases crammed with banknotes. Mitterrand had won grudging Communist support for the elections which was a run-off between him and d'Estaing. The Communists tried a deal with the Socialists as they had in 1974

Servicemen to be honored

The American Legion will conduct Memorial Day services in honor of the nation's servicemen who died in wartime service at 6:30 p.m. Monday at Resthaven Memorial Park, according to Thomas Godfrey of Woods W. Lynch Post No. 19 announced today.

A.J. McCright, chairman of this year's Memorial Day observance, outlined some of the details of the Memorial Day ceremonies for Midland.

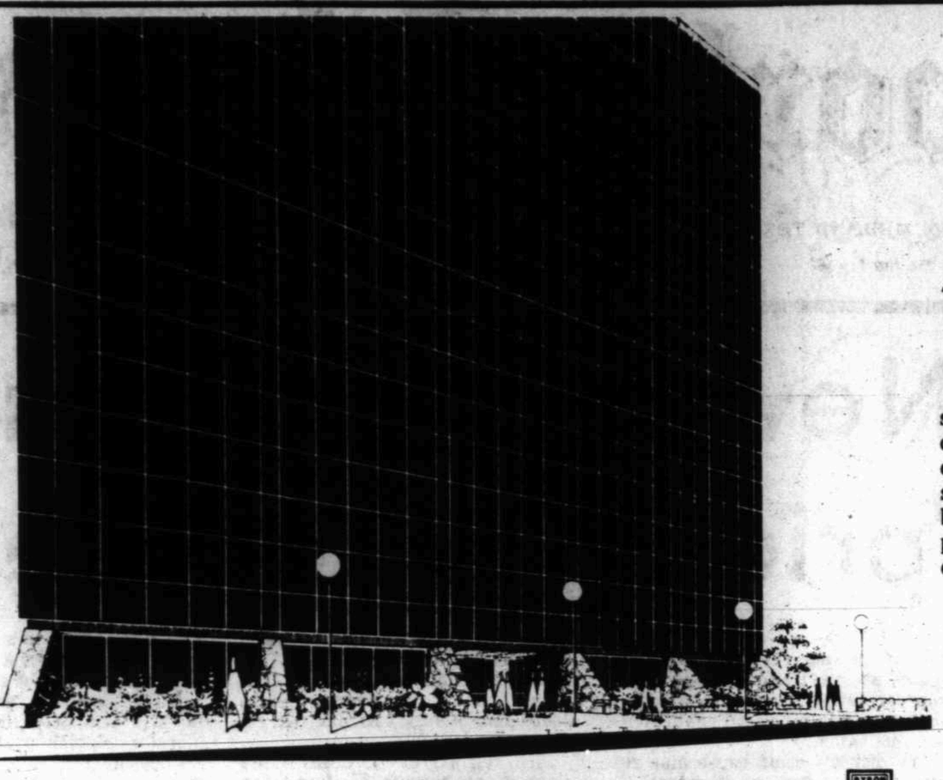

Service, fraternal and patriotic organizations will participate in the services at Resthaven Memorial Park. Persons interested in placing flags on veterans' graves should meet at the American Legion at 501 Air Park Road Monday at 7 a.m., McCright said.

Post 19 will be one of thousands of American Legion and Auxiliary organizations throughout the land which will be leading local Memorial Day observances. Similar services to be conducted in American overseas military cemeteries are being planned in many instances by Legionnaries living in foreign lands.

Memorial Day has grown from its Civil War origin to an occasion when families decorate the graves of deceased friends and relatives. In many instances, it is a day of personal family commemoration.

From obscure beginnings in 1866 in Columbus, Miss., the custom of decoration of the graves of the war veterans received nationwide impetus in 1868 when Gen. John A. Logan, commander-in-chief of the Grand Army of the Republic, issued his historic order for appropriate ceremonies, including the decoration of graves of dead comrades.

"It is this tradition which The American Legion proudly serves here in Midland," Post Commander Godfrey stated.

City Council to consider construction

Midland City Council could be taking the first step down the long road toward approving a new bundle of city building projects when the panel meets at 10 a.m. Tuesday in City Hall Council Chambers.

On the agenda are items dealing with plans for expansions at Midland Regional Airport and the city's sewer systems.

Two engineering firms — Black and Veatch and Ed Reed and Associates — will report on possible future expansion to the Regional Airport and city sewer facilities.

Several months ago, the city authorized Black and Veatch to study the airport's sewer system. They also were instructed to recommend if a new sewer plant should be constructed at the airport or if lines should be installed to pump the sewage from the airport to the treatment plant southeast of Midland.

Ed Reed and Associates, a local hydrology firm, also is involved in the study.

The council will consider authorizing a contract with Parkhill, Smith and Cooper, Inc., for preliminary engineering services for expanding the terminal building and air carrier parking ramp.

Last Thursday at the joint meeting of Midland and Odessa city councils, Col. Wilson Banks related problems with a parking shortage and a cramped terminal building. Banks is director of aviation for Midland.

With two new air carriers — American Airlines and Sun-Air — expected to start service by September, Banks predicted the overcrowding at Midland Regional Airport will worsen.

The council will be briefed on the Regional Airport Master Plan and approve it or issue instructions for changes.

In another item dealing with the airport, the council will consider a lease agreement with John Warren for construction of hangars at the Regional Airport.

At 11 a.m., the council will recess and go to the School Administration Building for a joint meeting with the school trustees. To be considered are possible closing of streets and street improvements in connection with expansion of Midland High and DeZavala schools, and a possible extension of L Street through school property.

The subject of heliports is back on the agenda after it was first proposed in April. The item deals with Carlton Beal Jr.'s request for a heliport on the BTA building at 104 S. Pecos St.

In other action, the council will consider an ordinance governing activities at Wadley-Barron Park lake development, proclaim June as Parks and Recreation Month, study possible amendments to the city's Housing Assistance Plan, and consider accepting a grant from the Department of Transportation for 10 new buses and equipment for MidTran.

Unity debate focuses on faith vs. legalism

HOUSTON (AP) — An influential churchman with ties to both the southern and northern branches of American Presbyterianism says the northern church is harming itself and jeopardizing chances of reuniting the branches by seeming to replace faith with legalism.

"Part of the problem of the church today is the perception that it is exchanging the gospel for law," the Rev. James I. McCord, president of Princeton Theological Seminary, said Friday. "It has given up holy doctrine for holy structures. What needs to be emphasized is holy life."

McCord, long a leading figure in world ecumenical affairs, was referring to a recently adopted United Presbyterian Church rule requiring local congregations to include women among church elders.

It has caused stress in many congregations, spurring some of them to quit the denomination, and has arisen as an obstacle to reunion with the 900,000-member southern Presbyterian Church U.S., which has no such rule.

"The Christian way is persuasion, through education and example," McCord told reporters. "The churches will follow suit."

The church leaders are working toward reunion, and some said exceptions may be allowed to the northern church's rule about women.

The Texas-born McCord originally was a southern Presbyterian and spent 15 years as a minister, professor and seminary dean in that church before going to Princeton in 1959.

Latest IRA hunger striker buried

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — The flag-draped coffin of Irish Republican Army gunman Raymond McCreesh, carried by four brothers and flanked by six hooded IRA men, was carried to a hometown grave in Camlough near the Irish Republic border Saturday. In Belfast and Londonderry, youths avenging the hunger striker's death attacked British troops and police.

An estimated 10,000 people were drawn by McCreesh's funeral to the tiny village of Camlough, deep in the heart of what the British army calls "bandit country."

Black flags hung from every building in the Republican stronghold as McCreesh's coffin, drapped in the orange, white and green Irish tricolor, was carried from his home to St. Malachy's Roman Catholic church on a hill overlooking the village.

The cortege was led by a kilted bagpiper playing a lament. Six hooded IRA men in combat gear flanked the coffin and 12 women in black IRA uniforms marched behind.

Father Thomas Wolsey said funeral Mass, and observed sadly, "Raymond would never have been involved in this type of situation, but for the historical circumstances in this land."

IRA gunmen emerged from the throng at the church gates to fire three volleys before quickly melting back into the crowd.

Several thousand troops and police moved into the Camlough area overnight to prevent trouble. But they kept a discreet distance, and the only visible military presence was a helicopter circling overhead.

The burial of McCreesh, 24, took place after two nights of violence in Catholic areas of Belfast and Londonderry in reaction to his death early Thursday and that 21 hours later of 24-year-old Patrick O'Hara Thursday night. O'Hara is to be buried in his native Londonderry Monday.

Youths in Londonderry pitched gasoline bombs and homemade grenades packed with nails at authorities, police said. In Belfast, police reported the rioters used two new — and lethal — weapons: crossbows and catapults, but reported no one was hit.

Hospital officials in Belfast reported treating dozens of victims.

Police sources said that although the embattled province was quiet during the day Saturday, they expected renewed violence after nightfall in what has become a daily event since the death of hunger striker Bobby Sands May 5th in the Maze Prison near Belfast. Fellow faster and IRA-man Francis Hughes died May 12.

Sands and the others were fasting to back demands that they be allowed to wear their own clothing, associate among themselves and refrain from prison work — treatment that would amount to special political prisoner status.

McCreesh, 24, died on the 61st day of his fast. He was a member of the IRA's militant "Provisional" wing. The army said he was involved in a number of ambushes before he was captured in a shootout with paratroopers in 1976.

Concern mounted, meanwhile for Brendan McLaughlin, 29, who joined the fast 10 days ago and has refused treatment for a bleeding ulcer. British sources reported Saturday that McLaughlin, who has been moved to the military wing of Belfast's Musgrave Park Hospital, had lost 16 pounds in the last week.

Few DWI charges filed in Midland

I'm not sure to what extent because it's none of our business. DWIs are what we file. Our concern is to follow the law, not revenue."

THE CITY averages about 18 "drunk in a vehicle" charges a week, and the practice of not filing DWI complaints — according to the handful of officers who object to it — is similar to the one occasionally employed several years ago on misdemeanor possession of marijuana arrests.

Instead of filing that charge, police charged the person with attempting to possess marijuana. The effect was to reduce the offense from Class-B misdemeanor status to that of Class-C, which is the only kind that can be handled in municipal court. Again, the money stayed in city hands.

That practice ended three or four years ago, according to a ranking member of the police department, with a state attorney general's opinion that it was illegal.

Despite the advantages of not charging a person with DWI, everyone — including the police — agrees that the procedure does have one serious flaw: it subverts the state's felony DWI law, which calls for a prison term of up to 10 years on a subsequent conviction of driving while intoxicated.

Said the county attorney: "It does circumvent the felony DWI law."

Midlander shot

Gary Greenley, 28, of 503 W. Estes Ave., Apt. J, was in serious condition in the critical care area of Midland Memorial Hospital late Saturday after apparently shooting himself Friday when Midland County Sheriff's deputies tried to serve an arrest warrant.

"He's beginning to respond appropriately," said a hospital spokesperson.

A .22-caliber long slug entered under his chin, passed through the nasal cavity and lodged in the front portion of his brain in the 10 a.m. Friday incident. A rifle and spent shell were recovered from the bedroom of his apartment, according to investigating officer Lt. Pat Fuller.

She's got a lot of heart

AP Laserphoto

Cindy Spicer, 9, of St. Paul, Minn., sits outside Friday for the first time after receiving a new heart May 5, at the University of Minnesota Hospital. Doctors expect Cindy to return home in about a week and to start the fourth grade this fall. She is the youngest person living with a transplanted heart.

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — While other schoolchildren spend the summer in frantic activity, the world's youngest heart transplant recipient will be saving her strength so she can start classes "as a normal child next fall," her doctors say.

Nine-year-old Cindy Spicer of St. Paul, who received her new heart May 5, may be able to return home from the University of Minnesota Hospitals in about a week, said Dr. John Najarian, chief of surgery.

"She's doing superb, she couldn't be doing better," Najarian said Friday as Cindy soaked up sun on the hospital patio, her first trip outdoors since the operation.

Five years ago, Cindy developed myocardiopathy, a disease that turned her heart muscle into fibrous tissue similar to scar tissue. She was given only a month or two to live.

Before the transplant, even walking up a few steps was a painful ordeal for Cindy. Now she is walking briskly down the hospital corridors.

The blond youngster's abdomen is swollen because of a fluid buildup, but the swelling is going down since her new heart pumps more efficiently than her old one.

Cindy will use the summer to regain her strength before starting fourth grade, Najarian said.

"She's real excited about getting home and running around with the other kids now," said Betty Spicer, who has four other daughters aged 1 to 13.

According to her parents, Cindy, who didn't eat well before the operation, is eating spaghetti and peanut butter as her appetite improves.

"She even eats the bread crusts now — and she never did that before," said Robert Spicer.

Pleasant weather in store for Memorial Day weekend

Warm temperatures prevailed in the Permian Basin today, as Midland recorded an official high of 91 degrees while portions of the city sweltered under upper-90 readings.

The record high of 103 degrees set back in 1953 was not challenged however, and the overnight low of 64 was well above the all-time mark for the date of 48 degrees in 1940.

Midlanders can look forward to pleasant weather during the remainder of the Memorial Day weekend, according to the National Weather Service. Highs should be only in the mid-80s with easterly winds 10-15 miles per hour.

The extended forecast calls for partly cloudy conditions with minor day-to-day temperature changes through Thursday. The lows should be in the low 50s in the northern portion of the state to the 60s in the south, while the highs will range from 80 to the upper 90s in the Big Bend.

San Angelo man killed

MIDKIFF — Larry D. Murry, 23, of San Angelo was killed in a drilling rig accident 3¼ miles northeast of here Saturday afternoon.

Midland County Sheriff's Office investigators said Murry died about 2:30 p.m. when he fell 85 feet to the rig floor after apparently slipping from a platform on the derrick.

The accident occurred approximately 1½ miles north of the Midland-Upton county line.

Murry was pronounced dead at the scene by Peace Justice Robert Pine, who returned a ruling of accidental death.

Autopsy ordered in drowning death

ODESSA — An autopsy has been ordered in death of a 16-year-old Odessa boy who drowned in a private pool at 910 W. 62nd St. late Saturday night.

Identification was being withheld by the Ector County Sheriff's Department pending notification of a San Angelo relative.

A youth, in the company of four persons, reportedly had been in the pool deep pool only a short time when he went under, said investigators. He was pulled from the water by 14-year-old Natalie Holdridge, who resides at the address.

The youth was taken by ambulance to Medical Center Hospital, where he was pronounced dead on arrival at 9:54 p.m. by peace justice Manuel Valles.

The boy reportedly lived with an older brother in Odessa, while his parents resided in Port LaVaca.

Editor's Report

but failed miserably, winning fewer votes than at any time since 1936. It was a notable triumph for Mitterrand, a hard-nosed pol, who built up the Socialist Party from a splinter group. As a junior minister in a Socialist cabinet many years ago, Mitterrand expelled all Communists from government, and abetted a Gaullist coalition. The Commies have been out in the cold ever since.

For many years Americans loosely equated Socialists with Communists. In Europe, it's totally the opposite. Many West European governments are socialist. In Britain, there was a socialist administration for five years after World War II and until Conservative Prime Minister Mrs. Margaret Thatcher was elected in 1979, there was 15 years of socialist government. Over there, it's called "Labor" but the socialist outlook is essentially the same.

BACK IN 1955, after our first visit to Moscow where we interviewed Nikita Khrushchev and many other prominent figures too numerous to mention, we stopped off on the way home in Vienna at the request of the Austrian government. While chatting with Austria's Chancellor Julius Raab on the subject of communism in Russia and socialism on the continent, he told me there was more socialism in the U.S. than in Europe.

When I asked him to explain he pointed out, while puffing on a long stogie, that the average American could buy shares in big corporations and make demands that are listened to. Thus Americans as a whole own the big corporations such as General Motors, General Electric and the public utilities. On the continent, banks and big companies pay no attention to minority complaints. In effect he said our system was the goal of socialism — a blend of public ownership of the large industries and utilities with privately owned businesses.

Now Mitterrand, elected on a platform that promised more employment (in France joblessness is at 10 percent) and nationalization of most banks — quite a few are already nationalized — faces two more elections next month. These will be for the National Assembly, sort of our House of Representatives, where the Conservatives, including old-line Gaullists, have a majority. The chances are Mitterrand won't come near getting a majority and his best bet will be to work a deal with anti-d'Estaing conservatives which will limit nationalization methods. Mitterrand is lukewarm about those schemes anyway. More employment and more investment in the economy are his domestic hopes.

ON FOREIGN POLICY and defense, don't look for any changes. Mitterrand wants continuity. He'll continue Gen De Gaulle's half-in, half-out role in NATO: France staying with the political arm of the alliance and pretending non-participation in the military.

By that standard, France will join NATO military exercises when it so chooses. Mitterrand certainly intends to be less difficult with the Atlantic Alliance than was Giscard, although he made noises during the election campaign that he'd have some new ideas about cooperation. His outright hostility to the Soviet Union and its leaders compares with that of the Reagan Administration. He constantly rapped Giscard for being too cozy with the Kremlin. Mitterrand also intends to be openly more pro-Israel than was Giscard. but France's need for oil may mute that approach.

The cordial relationship between West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt and Giscard — begun by De Gaulle and Adenauer to shed old hatreds — will certainly be lost. Schmidt, presently visiting Washington, is on shaky domestic ground himself. As an old-line Social Democrat, though, many of his people are close friends of Mitterrand. Losing Giscard may in the short run benefit Prime Minister Thatcher. She disliked the ex-French President intensely but found nimble-minded, English-speaking Schmidt most compatible as an ally and a partner in the Common Market.

SCHMIDT'S TROUBLES at home have mounted since he began preparing for his trip to see President Reagan. The day that Mitterrand won handily in France because the French electorate wanted a new face and seemed to dislike the autocratic demeanor of Giscard, Schmidt suffered a serious setback in West Berlin. It could have national West German repercussions. Schmidt's Socialist Party lost city hall for the first time in 30 years, a post once held by former Chancellor Willy Brandt. If the West Berlin Conservatives (CDU) as the majority party get a coalition with the Free Democrats, then Schmidt's own government coalition can lose out. It governs with the Free Democrats in Bonn.

Upset by the West Berlin election results and its nationwide potential, Schmidt got a one-two blow from the left wing, pro-Soviet faction of his party. A staunch NATO supporter and government-head of the most powerful ally the U.S. has in the alliance, Schmidt blew up when the leftists demanded that he repudiate stationing American missiles in Western Europe to maintain a military balance of power against Soviet encroachment. He has even threatened to resign.

While "The House of Helmut" — as most West Germans affectionately call his administration — seems shaky for the moment, the U.S. wouldn't want him to walk away in a huff. The administration is hardly ebullient about the condition of the alliance and we need friends like Schmidt, who is capable of positive things with new French President Mitterrand and fairly recent acquaintance, Prime Minister Thatcher.

The Thatcher factor in the Western alliance equation merits a little more attention than the emotional pro-and-anti Northern Ireland fury and the vexing domestic economic issues have induced. After nearly two years of decline, the British economy seems to be bottoming out and on the verge of a modest recovery. I have been hearing optimistic reports from private and government economists in London who until recently were very downbeat about Mrs. Thatcher's conservative policies.

As important is the quiet understanding reached in Dublin by Mrs. Thatcher and Charles Haughey, prime minister of the Republic of Ireland. It remains shrouded in the uproar of violence but Bernard D. Kaplan, Hearst European Correspondent, reports that the talks made progress. Quoting a senior member of her party, Kaplan wrote: "Don't listen to what Mrs. Thatcher says, but rather watch how she acts."

Her initiatives and those of President Mitterrand and Chancellor Schmidt will be welcome in Washington. It adds up to the old story of The Three Musketeers, "All for one, one for all, that is our device."

We call our device NATO.

Bess still in serious condition

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Bess Truman, hospitalized since she fell and broke her hip May 6, remained in serious condition Saturday and still was being fed nutrients through a tube inserted into her chest, a hospital spokeswoman said.

The 96-year-old former first lady spent a restful night at Research Medical Center, a nursing supervisor said.

The tube was inserted into Mrs. Truman's chest Friday, when her body began having trouble absorbing nutrients from the food she was eating. The tube feeds nutrients directly into the bloodstream, bypassing the body's normal food-absorbing mechanism in the digestive tract.

Mrs. Truman, the widow of former President Harry S. Truman, was hospitalized after she fractured a hip in a fall at her Independence, Mo., home.

After undergoing surgery May 7, she has been plagued by heart, kidney and lung problems.

Mystery growing over unexplained deaths

RIVERSIDE, Calif. (AP) — Bodies have been dug up, a hospital shut down, and a doctor and nurse are under investigation in a medical mystery that started with the deaths of 25 patients at a small hospital and has spread to three Southern California counties.

The state Registered Nursing Board said Friday it is investigating nurse Robert Diaz, while the Board of Medical Quality Assurance confirmed Thursday that it is investigating Dr. Norbert Babiera.

The California Department of Health Services has temporarily closed the 36-bed Community Hospital of the Valleys in Perris, where the 25 deaths occurred in March and April. And the agency is preparing for a hearing that could permanently revoke the hospital's license.

Coroners in Riverside, Los Angeles and San Bernardino counties are examining a total of 32 deaths in studies that so far have included autopsies on at least 19 bodies, 12 of them exhumed from their graves. District attorneys in two counties are investigating.

A lawyer for Diaz has filed a $100 million defamation lawsuit against several doctors, hospitals and Riverside County officials.

Most of the Perris patients who died were elderly and all were treated in the intenstive care ward. Authorities said the cause of death in some cases did not match that listed on the death certificate.

Babiera was medical chief of staff at the hospital and Diaz worked there.

At least one investigation apparently grew primarily from news reports. "There is no specific evidence," said Margaret Saito of the nursing board. "Our source mainly was the media reports. We are investigating (Diaz) to see if there is any basis for substantiation."

Most investigators seem to agree with Riverside Coroner William Dykes, who said in an interview, "We haven't ruled it out ... but coincidence in all these cases seems very unlikely."

Dykes, like most of those involved in the case, refuses to discuss specifics. But, he said, "Anytime the coroner becomes involved, it can range from criminal negligence or even a premeditated crime down to a therapeutic misadventure or, in some cases, some of these may still be natural deaths."

The University of Utah's Center for Human Toxicology is testing tissue samples from many of the victims. No one at the center will say much, except that the tests will probably take another month.

The only drug mentioned so far is lidocaine, which is often used to control dangerously erratic heartbeats. Overdoses can be fatal, and Riverside County officials said lethal doses were found in two bodies and traces were found in four patients for whom it had not been ordered.

Samples of lidocaine and morphine were found in a search of Diaz' home, but he said he brought the drugs there inadvertently and "I know of no reason why they are focusing on me."

The state says the 25 deaths at Community Hospital of the Valleys occurred from Feb. 27 to April 23. In his lawsuit, Diaz said he worked there from April 3 through April 21.

Diaz, who has been questioned by Riverside officials, also worked at San Gorgonio Pass Memorial Hospital in Banning, at Chino Community Hospital in San Bernardino County and at several Los Angeles County hospitals.

Primarily for that reason, the body of a woman who died at Chino was exhumed and autopsied, although coroner Bill Hill said, "I'm not sure this death has anything to do with the Riverside County cases."

Autopsies were performed in Riverside on two bodies from the Banning hospital.

And in Los Angeles County, Assistant Coroner Richard Wilson said his office is studying the medical records of "five, maybe six" deaths at local hospitals, and the district attorney expects more will be referred to the coroner.

"In each instance there is a possiblity of maybe something a little out of the ordinary," Wilson said. "And, of course, they're associated with the employment of a person or persons."

Winter: White Mountain's peak season

Golden greenery gives way to wicked white

By PATRICK DEAREN
Staff Writer

RUIDOSO, N.M. — A hike alongside the series of small waterfalls into one of the forested canyons of White Mountain Wilderness in late May is like a trip back in time — early spring, late winter, dead of winter.

At the lower elevations, 7,500 feet to 8,500 feet, the colors of spring are most evident: flowers bloom yellow and purple in grassy meadows, mountain oaks and shrubs bud green, the tips of fir and pine limbs are tinged with new growth like tiny emeralds.

As the elevation increases, the flora reflects the changing weather patterns. The greenery of deciduous trees vanishes — the newly budded leaves of white-barked aspens, fluttering in the slightest breeze, give way subtly to the harshness of dormancy until at 9,000 feet the upper terrace of limbs is barren, the bark golden, for here winter still reigns.

THE TREELINE gives way to tundra at 9,750 feet, where patches of snow are white streaks against volcanic talus slopes and an occasional pine is sentineled on ridges savaged by 90 mph blasts. A thousand feet higher, where the crest of the range touches the sky, the chill factor plummets. Hikers don their warmest parkas, seek refuge from the awesome force of the winds that sometimes hurl them to the grass-clumped ground, chap their faces, redden their eyes.

Ice still plunges downward in late May, carried in swirls by the wind in the form of sleet. It sweeps against nylon tents with a raspy sound, forms drifts of white against orange, and it is this quality that gives the range its name — Sierra Blanca, White Mountain.

A mile south of the upper reaches of the wilderness, Sierra Blanca Peak rears its massive pinnacle 12,003 feet into the fog and clouds, 7,800 feet above the Tularosa Valley, making it the highest mountain in New Mexico from its base up.

The mountains were sacred to the ancient Indians who hunted the alpine-forested slopes, sought shelter in the lower canyons, found life in the springs and streams. Sierra Blanca Peak, shrouded in snow nine months of the year, was the mountain of their gods, and is still revered by the Mescalero Apaches who own it and discourage mountaineers from seeking its heights. For to climb it, they believe, is to profane it.

ONE OF 60 wilderness areas in the nation established and managed under the Wilderness Act of 1964, White Mountain preserves an area of the Sierra Blanca range — the highest south of the Rockies — for future generations in a location that has been subjected in recent years to development, commercialization and exploitation. Few mountain areas in the Southwest have attracted such a variety of visitors — horse race enthusiasts, skiers, campers, retirees — as has Ruidoso.

The 31,283 acres of designated wilderness crest the 12-mile tundra-like backbone of the range and descend into gaping canyons 4,000 feet deep, displaying one of the most abrupt life-zone transitions in the nation, ranging from Upper Sonoran, Transition, Canadian, Hudsonian and the fringes of the Arctic Alpine — all within a day hike's distance. The zones encompass a wealth of varied terrain, foliage, weather conditions, but visitors must be willing to explore the wilderness either on foot or horseback, as all motorized transportation is forbidden.

Those who do burden their shoulders or saddle stock with the supplies and equipment necessary for survival in the high country are rewarded. A few nautical miles away lies a bustling boom town, while here is truly a wilderness, where wildlife and hikers share a common bondage in finding sanctuary against the encroachment of civilization.

COYOTES AND DEER are seen frequently along the trails, and occasionally black bear and elk. Streams and abundant seeps from the mountainsides above the treeline provide water. Small trout dart through pools of icy rivulets in the lower canyons. Aspen leaves flutter in the slightest breeze, lending the impression the very mountains are quaking.

But a harsh quality co-exists with the serene. Swirling, killer winds along the crest leave small pines twisted grotesquely, the limbs wrenched, curled toward the lee side. The brutality of winter blizzards buries the higher elevations in six feet of snow, fills the air with frost as temperatures drop far below zero. Vicious electrical storms char trees, splitting bark, slashing dark scars from ground to bough.

While the wilderness trails can be steep and rigorous, some rising more than 3,000 feet into elevations that leave muscles aching from lack of oxygen and hearts pounding like the thud of a deer's hooves, visitors generally may take trails to suit their physical abilities. They may, for example, reach the 11,400-foot level — the apex of the wilderness — by gondola, leaving only moderate changes in elevation along the crest trail.

Or, should lack of physical conditioning prove prohibitive to any high altitude hiking, persons may take advantage of the horseback riding concession situated along Forest Road 107 in upper Bonito Canyon. Rentals are expensive, however — $25 a day.

WHILE NO ENTRY permit is required, visitors to the wilderness are advised to check with rangers at Smoky Bear Ranger Station on New Mexico 37 north of Ruidoso so adequate preparations can be made for weather, as well as to determine the probability of fire. Although small campfires of dead wood generally are permitted, overly dry or windy conditions occasionally mean hikers must rely solely on containerized stoves for cooking purposes.

Water is plentiful during much of the year and hikers usually can rely on natural water sources to replenish canteens, as springs such as Bonito Seep are located above the treeline along the crest trail. The Seep, five brutal miles entailing a vertical climb of 2,000 feet from the nearest drive-in campground, flows from a tundra-blanketed mountainside 10,269 feet above sea level, and the breakers made incandescent in the canyon sunlight eventually create the blue, pine-fringed waters of Bonito Lake several miles downstream.

NORMAL ACCESS points to the wilderness for visitors approaching from West Texas are:

—South Fork Campground, 7,600 feet, 10 miles north of Ruidoso on NM 37 to Angus, then 7 miles west to the end of Forest Road 107 C, just off FR 107. The six-mile trail follows the tumbling south fork of Rio Bonito and joins with the crest trail at 10,400 feet.

—End of FR 107, 7,850 feet, 10 miles west of Angus. Trails lead out of a primitive campground into Argentina Canyon and Bonito Canyon, reaching the crest at 9,000 and 9,700 feet, respectively.

—Monjeau Lookout, 10,000 feet, 5 miles north of Ruidoso on NM 37 to Alto, then 12 miles northwest on FR 117, off NM 532. The 21-mile crest trail which enters the wilderness at the five-mile mark offers startling vistas of White Sands and Malpais Lava Beds, which unfurl in stark, black-and-white contrast in the distance.

—Sierra Blanca Ski Area, 9,700 feet, 12 miles west of Alto on NM 532. Visitors may hike 1,000 feet to the crest or ride the gondola to a trailhead at the summit of 11,400-ft. Lookout Mountain.

Formed by a cataclysmic eruption of an ancient volcano, shaped by glaciers, nurtured by tons of snow, the Sierra Blanca range once was the unchallenged domain of the Apache, who reigned supreme hundreds of years. The canyons were his home, the towering pinnacles his shrine.

The Sacramento Mountains encompassed by the Mescalero Indian Reservation between Ruidoso and Cloudcroft remain his domicile, Sierra Blanca's white-capped peak the object of his worship. But the ridgebacks and forested canyons to the north he now must share — with all those willing to challenge the heights in search of a true wilderness experience.

They still remember Irving

By DOUGLASS DANIEL
Associated Press Writer

BLUE RAPIDS, Kan. (AP) — The tiny town of Irving — born 1859, died 1961 — doesn't go unmourned.

Each Memorial Day, the people who made Irving a town gather to remember old times with old friends and former neighbors.

"You miss all the people. I guess that's why we keep coming back," said Lester Sparks, who drove from Cheyenne, Wyo., to attend the Monday reunion in Blue Rapids, five miles from where Irving used to be.

Not much is left today of the town, which never had more than 400 residents. Long chunks of sidewalks and bits of curbing wind around trees and grass. The foundations of homes and buildings pocket what is now a popular hunting area.

The cornerstone of Irving's post office rests on a paved street corner like a tombstone.

The small northeast Kansas community was established by settlers from Iowa attracted by the rich soil of the Blue Valley. Because it was founded the day Washington Irving died, the town was named in honor of the American author.

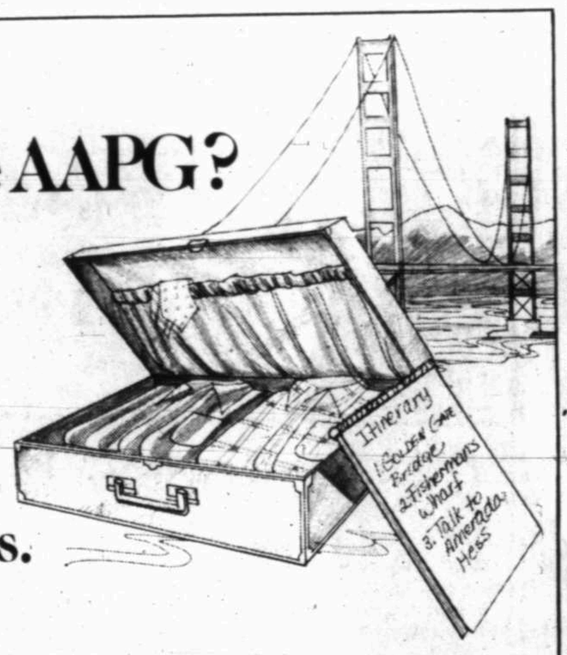

Little more than a century later, the citizens of Irving and other small towns had to leave their homes when the construction of Tuttle Creek Dam required Blue Valley land for a lake.

The water wasn't going to reach Irving, but the town's merchants believed they couldn't survive without their rural customers. The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers compensated the residents for their economic losses, and the people moved away.

Some houses were moved to Blue Rapids, where the Irving cemetery was relocated. The last residents departed in 1961 and bulldozers razed the structures left behind.

Most of those who gather here for the yearly reunion come from Kansas, but many travel hundreds of miles to attend.

Mauro begins campaign for land commissioner

By RICHARD ORR
Staff Writer

Admitting to being "first out of the chute," Garry Mauro was in Midland Saturday, campaigning for the state land commissioner's post in a primary election that won't be held until next May.

Land Commissioner Bob Armstrong has announced he will not seek the seat he's held since 1968. The land commission administers 22.5 million acres of state-owned land, with the total acreage in Texas coming to about 270 million acres.

"On a budget of $2.8 million," said Mauro during a press conference at Midland Regional Airport, "the land agency generates more than $600 million in revenue for the state — that's almost 200 to one."

Much of that revenue comes from grazing rights and oil leases granted by the land commission. "Mr. Armstrong's done an excellent job," said Mauro, a Democrat who says he and Gov. Bill Clements don't hit it off too well because of their different political persuasions. "It's hard to run against Mr. Armstrong.

"But he's more of a theorist, and I'm a nuts-and-bolts man. My basic philosophy is that it's an administrative job, not a political one. It needs to be run like a business.

"Texas is the only state in the Union not to have had a new tax bill in 13 years. One reason for that is the money generated by the land commission. My concern is that what we do in the next 10 years will affect the tax base 20 years from now."

The money generated by the agency is divided about equally among the state education board, the permanent University Fund and the state's general revenue fund, according to Mauro, who spent two years as deputy comptroller immediately under Bob Bullock.

"I wouldn't change much in the land commissioner's program," Mauro added. "But any agency can be improved, and I would change some things in its day-to-day operations."

Asked about the proposed land deal calling for an exchange of 200,000 acres of state-held land for an equivalent number of acres on the Anderson Ranch near Big Bend National Park, Mauro said he would like to see the deal go through "if the arrangements are suitable and only if it makes sense from a business standpoint.

"I'd like to see it as a state park. But I'm not sure of the details yet. We may be giving more value for less value."

In the philosophical sense, Mauro said he isn't necessarily opposed to oil drilling in state and federal parks — including Big Bend. "I would first have to determine what damage would be done," he added.

Noting that more than a third of the public land in Texas is located within 200 miles of Midland, Mauro said he'd be campaigning in the area at least once this summer.

"I need viewpoints other than those I'm getting in Austin," he added.

"I wouldn't change much in the land commissioner's program. But any agency can be improved, and I would change some things in its day-to-day operations."

Another victim may be added to child slaying list in Atlanta

ATLANTA (AP) — Volunteers searching for a 22-year-old retarded black man knocked on doors in two Atlanta neighborhoods Saturday, seeking clues to the whereabouts of Ronald Crawford, who disappeared six days ago.

Crawford is said to match the profile of some of the 27 slain blacks whose cases are being probed by a special Atlanta police task force. However, his disappearance was not turned over to the task force and was being handled by the department's missing persons unit.

Crawford, last seen at his southeast Atlanta apartment on Monday, was reported missing by his mother Wednesday night.

The 65 searchers organized by the United Youth Adult Conference spent three hours in lower-income housing projects, houses and apartments in Crawford's neighborhood and another locale on the southwest fringes of the city.

Meanwhile, a lawyer for an unidentified New York man questioned in the slaying of 21-year-old Eddie Duncan said Douglas County authorities checked his client's work record in Rochester, N.Y., to confirm that he was not in Atlanta since before Duncan disappeared.

Douglas County Sheriff Earl Lee says he questioned a "person" Thursday in the slaying of Duncan, whose body was found in the Chattahoochee River in Douglas County March 31.

Lee said the man was not a suspect and finding him was not a breakthrough, but other county officials said the man was traced with a composite drawing of a black man seen with Duncan March 21, the night he disappeared.

Lawyer Stanley Nylen said an Atlanta-area kennel employee who saw the drawing recognized the New York man, formerly of Atlanta. Dog hairs reportedly have been found on some of the young victims.

Nylen said his client told Lee that he has worked at a Rochester firm since March 10 and had not visited Atlanta since late 1980. The sheriff told the man he would check out the alibi, Nylen added.

Lee could not be reached for comment Saturday. The Atlanta Journal and The Atlanta Constitution quoted an unidentified Douglas County official in their Sunday editions, however, saying the New Yorker had been ruled out as a suspect.

Saturday's search was the 31st weekend hunt for clues in the cases. The volunteers' ranks were boosted by nine uniformed guards from a Gainesville, Fla., prison and a counselor from another Gainesville prison who joined in the hunt on the city's southwest side.

A group of youths told the guards they had played ball with Crawford in his neighborhood the afternoon he disappeared.

Another possible witness told the UYAC that Crawford was sighted Saturday morning at a hospital in downtown Atlanta, but missing persons investigators said they had not been able to confirm this.

The missing man is described as 5-feet-9 to 5-feet-11, weighing 140 pounds. When last seen he was wearing blue jeans, a white T-shirt with a design on it and a blue jacket.

Police have handled disappearances of young blacks on an urgent basis following the slayings. A general alarm involving all police precincts in the search for Crawford was issued this week.

Several people in Crawford's neighborhood, a historic district where many of Atlanta's old black churches and businesses are located, told searchers they were familiar with the youth.

"They say he's real quiet. He doesn't mess with anybody," said Darren Smith, a 13-year-old.

The guards from the Gainesville Road Prison, a close security institution housing 105 inmates, said they used their own funds to travel to Atlanta on their weekend off.

"If he or she, whoever the killer is, came to Gainesville, we'd want Atlanta to help us," said correctional officer James Perryman.

"We were sitting around talking last week. We realized that we could have the same kind of animal killing people in Gainesville that they have here," said Sgt. Ernest Ellis. "We want to give Atlanta any help we can."

The corrections officer said guards often hunt for escapees in wooded areas. "We thought we could be useful in finding clothes and other things some people might not normally notice," Ellis said.

Most of the UYAC's weekend searches have focused on woods where the bodies of slain blacks were found.

The group had announced last weekend that Saturday's hunt would be their last because the UYAC wished to channel its energies into neighborhood crime patrols. But organizers decided to continue the searches after receiving calls from local residents eager for the searches to continue.

The CAF wants you

Uncle Sam he's not; Col. Tom Fryar he is. And this colonel's "I Want You" stance, mimicking the 1917 U.S. Army recruiting poster, is for the glory of the maverick Confederate Air Force. Col. Fryar is looking for a "corps" of men and women who have a flair for aviation and a desire to help preserve and keep flying those rare warbirds — combat aircraft — of the 1939-45 World War II era.

The CAF — Rebels to the corps

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

The Confederate Air Force may be embedded in nostalgia, patriotism, flying machines and idiosyncrasy.

And the CAF on occasion may get somewhat vainglory, but it's not puff.

It's not your rah-rah civic club, good-time country club or a spit-and-polish fraternity for warriors who had rather be marching, sailing, or flying than reminiscing in a squeaky old rocking chair.

The CAF is a rebel corps of men and women whose compulsion and passion is aircraft — particularly those rare and aging warbirds of the Allies and the Axis Powers in the 1939-45 World War II era.

And it's not exclusively for rich folks.

"You don't have to be wealthy to be in the CAF, but it sure helps," said Col. Paul Erdmann, leader of the CAF Desert Squadron.

True.

But the CAF is for poor boys, too.

THE CAF'S WEST TEXAS Wing and its Desert Squadron are into a recruiting binge to build up their colonel-ship. All members are bona fide CAF colonels. And no one outranks anyone, though when it comes to the flightlines, cockpits and meetings, some CAF colonels have more clout and expertise than others.

"The Confederate Air Force wants you," touts Col. Erdmann, who ramrods the Midland-Odessa Desert Squadron.

Fliers are essential, but they aren't everything.

"You don't need the big bucks," said the colonel, to join up with the "maverick corps" of spirited rebels, such as Col. Joe Mabee, deputy commander of the West Texas Wing and owner-pilot of a squadron of warbirds.

"You don't need to fly," also observed Erdmann who happens to fly and, along with Col. Kale Webster, owns a DeHavilland Chipmunk trainer bearing Royal Air Force colors.

Airplane enthusiasts who enjoy the fruits of wealth are welcome to join. Just as welcome into the CAF are those "hangar fliers" who shudder at the cost of aviation fuel even if they don't have to buy it. Annual CAF dues are most reasonable, the colonel said.

CAMARADERIE RUNS rampant within the corps. The common bond is the aircraft and thoughts of flying.

The thrill of flying — doing it or dreaming of it — and the endearment to airplanes are the binding forces within the CAF.

"Interest in the preservation of World War II airplanes" is the primary requisite to colonel-ship, which now is open to both men and women, Col. Erdmann said.

Femalesmay join the Colonels' Ladies auxiliary. Their forte is ground work.

Those who don't fly may get rides in the old birds — from trainers to fighters to bombers.

And likely they'll get ground assignments, such as those that currently are being meted out for the CAF West Texas Wing's Oct. 31-Nov. 1 Airshow at Midland Regional Airport.

"We've got a lot of gravel scratchers, too," Col. Tom Fryar noted.

Fryar's specialty is pyrotechnics. He's the fellow who sets off the big bang — the explosions and the fiery blasts — when CAF warbirds pull off the "Tora! Tora! Tora!" version of the Pearl Harbor attack of Dec. 7, 1941.

"THIS PARTICULAR organization is dedicated to the preservation of World War II aircraft and to our proud heritage," said Fryar.

Col. Webster, who is leader of the nine-squadron West Wing, or Col. Erdmann will freely talk about CAF colonel-ship. Erdmann may be reached at his Midland office at 683-5488; Webster may be contacted at 682-4321. The Desert Squadron, which serves colonels and their spouses in the Midland-Odessa area, meets at 7 p.m. on the third Thursday of each month at the CAF-Civil Air Patrol Hangar at Odessa's Schlemeyer Field.

The original CAF Ghost Squadron, which is headquartered at Rebel Field in Harlingen in South Texas, is made up of 21 wings and 20 squadrons in the United States and in New Zealand.

Joan gets degree

BOSTON (AP) — Joan Kennedy received a master's degree Saturday as her estranged husband, Sen Edward M. Kennedy, looked on. Like thousands of other graduates, Mrs. Kennedy said she was looking for a job.

The senator, joined by their three children, watched as Mrs. Kennedy, 45, received her diploma at Lesley College.

"I don't have a job," said Mrs. Kennedy as she left the other graduates to join her family. "I'm looking for a job in the medium of television." She said she had had no offers yet.

Lesley, a Cambridge, Mass., school which prepares women for careers in education, awarded Mrs. Kennedy, a master's degree in education. She is an accomplished pianist who specializes in music.

The award concluded a three-year program of study she has described as "the beginning of a whole new life for me."

Dr. Terrel H. Bell, U.S. Secretary of Education, addressed the graduates.

It was one of the few times Mrs. Kennedy and the senator have been seen together in public since they announced last January plans to end their 22-year marriage in divorce.

A year ago Mrs. Kennedy briefly ended their separation and joined her husband in his campaign for the Democratic presidential nomination.

"Thank God for my going to graduate school and my coming to terms with life here in Boston," she had said in 1980.

Doctors say pope out of danger, may go home soon

ROME (AP) — Pope John Paul II, out of danger and in "very satisfactory" condition recovering from gunshot wounds, should be out of the hospital and back at the Vatican within 60 days, his doctors said Saturday. One surgeon said the 61-year-old pontiff might even be discharged within two weeks.

"The pope could sit at home in the Vatican and heal just as well as he could heal here," Dr. Emilio Tresalti, the chief medical officer of Rome's Gemelli Policlinico Hospital, said in an interview.

Barring complications, doctors said, he will be out of the hospital within 60 days, although they said it might take longer for him to recover completely.

Doctors have said the pope needs another operation to reverse his colostomy — an intestinal bypass procedure performed in emergency surgery after he was shot in the intestines 11 days ago. The surgery could take place either at the Vatican infirmary or at Gemelli Policlinico, doctors said.

One of the pope's surgeons, Dr. Francesco Crucitti, said the pope might be able to return to the Vatican within 10 days. Tresalti declined to speculate on a date, however.

John Paul was well enough Saturday to be planning to deliver his weekly Sunday blessing to pilgrims and tourists in St. Peter's Square by special radio hookup. A Vatican spokesman, the Rev. Romeo Panciroli, said it was possible the message would be broadcast live from the pope's hospital bed, but more likely it would be taped, as it was last Sunday.

Investigators questioning Mehemet Ali Agca, the Turkish suspect charged with shooting the pope and two American women May 13, said they were still unsure whether someone paid Agca to kill John Paul.

"We assume there was complicity," said Nicola Simone, official spokesman for the Rome police department. He said someone might have given Agca the money he used to travel around Europe in the months before the shooting, might have given him a gun or might have directly paid him to kill the pope. He did not elaborate.

Italian police said the suspect, Agca, admitted to them he had made a telephone call from Italy to West Germany shortly before the attack to a man identified as Hassan Taskin.

Top police officials, who asked not to be identified because of regulations requiring Interior Ministry clearance before talking to reporters, told The Associated Press there was no evidence Taskin had anything to do with the shooting. No warrant was issued for his arrest, but the sources said police in West Germany were asked to question him.

Taskin is believed to be a leader of the Gray Wolves, a right-wing group of Turkish nationals living in West Germany.

Italian and Turkish police suspect right-wing sympathizers helped Agca escape from jail in November 1979, where he was awaiting trial for the murder of a liberal Turkish newspaper editor.

Proposed plan calls for new legislative district

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Midland County would be placed with Martin, Glasscock and Upton counties under a proposed legislative redistricting plan unveiled Saturday by the House Committee on Regions, Compacts and Districts.

Midland County now is placed with Glasscock, Upton and Reagan counties in the 68th Legislative District. The new district would be the 77th Legislative District.

Reagan County would be combined with Irion, Tom Green and Schleicher counties in the new 69th Legislative District. Part of Ector County — Odessa — would be in the 78th, while the balance of Ector County, a part of El Paso County and the counties of Hudspeth, Culberson, Loving, Reeves, Pecos, Winkler, Ward and Crane would make up the 71st.

Cochran, Hockley, Yoakum, Terry, Gaines, Dawson and Andrews would make up the 81st.

Howard, Borden, Lynn, Crosby, Garza, Dickens, Kent, Cottle, Foard, King, Knox, Kent and Stonewall counties comprise the 150th.

Sterling, Mitchell, Scurry, Fisher, Nolan, Haskell and Jones counties and a portion of Taylor County make up the 79th.

The redistricting in West Texas would place Rep. Larry Shaw, D-Big Spring, in the same district (150th) with Rep. Bill Heatly, D-Paducah.

Shaw, who defeated Rep. Mike Ezzell, D-Snyder, in 1979, is a freshman member, while Heatly is the most senior member of the House.

Rep. Jerry Cockerham, D-Monahans, is the incumbent in the proposed 71st, with Jay Gibson, D-Odessa, for the 78th.

Rep. Jim Rudd, D-Brownfield, would serve in the 81st, with Rep. Richard Burnett, D-San Angelo, in the 69th.

Gibson is the current member for the proposed 78th, while Rep. Tom Craddick represents Midland.

House gives bill final OK

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The House has given final approval to a bill by Midland Sen. W.E. "Pete" Snelson that would allow the Eighth Court of Civil Appeals to transact its business at the county seat of any county within its district.

The court, headquartered in El Paso, serves several West Texas counties including Midland County.

Under the bill, Senate Bill 642, the court would be required to hear in El Paso County any case originating in that county.

The bill, which already has passed the Senate, was approved on the House local and consent calendar.

Snelson's bill gets House OK

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The House has given final approval to a bill by Midland Sen. W.E. "Pete" Snelson that would provide uniform students fees at the component institutions of the Texas State University System.

Senate Bill 937 sets up uniform studepts fees for the support of students centers at the four universities in the system — Angelo State University, Southwest Texas State University, Sul Ross State University and Sam Houston State University.

The bill, which already has passed the Senate, was approved on the House local and consent calendar.

Also approved on the local and consent calendar was House Bill 1564 by Rep. Larry Don Shaw of Big Spring, which relates to residences of students for voting purposes.

HB 1564 now goes to the Senate for consideration.

Diary of a convention: Exploring Indy

EDITOR'S NOTE: George Foulsham, city editor of The Midland Reporter-Telegram and adviser of Explorer Post 130 in Midland, recently accompanied a group of Explorers from Midland to the National Explorer President's Congress in Indianapolis, Ind. The following is an account of their experiences.

By GEORGE FOULSHAM
City Editor

INDIANAPOLIS — What is this thing called the National Explorer President's Congress, anyway?

Is it: (A) a lesson in democracy; (B) a quasi-political rally; (C) a convention of Explorers from throughout the country; (D) a whole lot of fun; or (E) all of the above?

Try E. It's all of that and much, much more.

Since 1972, Explorers have gathered every year for a national convention — they call it a Congress. The purpose is to elect a president and national officers, develop a platform for the coming year, provide citizenship and leadership training, exchange activity ideas and generally have a good time.

By the time the five-day convention is gaveled to a close, each Explorer has learned valuable lessons about democracy and most could no doubt step into a Democratic or Republican national convention and know exactly what's going on, which is more than could be said for many of their parents...or advisers.

The emphasis of Explorers, the young-adult portion of the Boy Scouts of America, is on the participants. The young men and women, ages 15 to 21, run their own show and the adults are there only to act as chaperones. The advisers butt out when it comes to the Explorer business.

It was an enlightening experience for all and made an interesting diary:

DAY ONE

The Midland contingent, representing the Buffalo Trails Council, consists of six Explorers and two advisers-chaperones. Explorer "delegates" to the convention are Penny Holleman, Kristy Standley, Hugh Blair, Willie Ross and Larry Whiteside. The sixth Midland Explorer is Charlie Corbin, first a candidate and later a delegate. The other adviser is Karis Lewis.

Six of this group of eight are rookies at the Congress. Only Kristy and Charlie know what to expect.

Descent into Indiana reveals one big difference from the Permian Basin. "Look how green it is," said one of our group, "and would you look at all the trees."

Red carpet treatment, immediately. Stepping off the plane, we are met by a cordon of saluting Explorer sailors in full dress uniform.

Tourists all the way, we notice on the bus ride to the motel that Indy is a typical Eastern town — old, some red brick streets and a lot of industry. A coal processing plant is just a couple blocks from downtown.

The Congress is based at the Indianapolis Convention Center, an impressive, new facility with three huge convention halls and two floors of offices and smaller meeting rooms. The natives tell us that Indianapolis made a bid for the 1984 Republican National Convention. The GOP went elsewhere for '84, but don't be surprised to see one of the national conventions here sometime in the future.

Registration and dinner provide the first shock. There must be at least 2,000 Explorers here. The dining area is in one of the large convention halls. It's filled for dinner.

Dinner companions aren't from Odessa or Stanton. They're from Santa Monica, Calif., or Oshkosh, Wisc., or Minneapolis-St. Paul, Minn., or anywhere in the U.S. There's a definite "family" bond when you meet somebody else from Texas...anywhere in Texas.

Campaigning for the presidency has already begun. Before making a bid for president, candidates must run for regional chairmen.

Corbin is running for South Central region chairman, but his candidacy is off to a slow start. Charlie arrived a couple days before we did to set up his campaign, but his campaign manager changed her mind and went to work for another candidate. Kristy took over upon our arrival, but Charlie is now far behind the other candidates.

Politics. That's really what the Congress is all about. Political machines. Campaign posters. Campaign buttons and gimmicks. Rallies. Pressing the flesh. Pamphlets selling your candidate. Somebody dressed as a moose walks by, a poster tied to his antlers. The dining hall is covered wall-to-wall, floor-to-ceiling in posters.

DAY TWO

Miss anything that happened yesterday? Want to know what's happening today? Pick up a copy of the Explorer Congressional Record, a six-page daily paper published by the Explorers. The Indianapolis News and Star, the town's two dailies, are staffing the convention, as are television and radio stations.

Delegates and candidates are in regional elections all day, allowing the advisers a chance to sightsee — the Indiana state capitol, Market Square Arena and a memorial tower on the downtown "circle" are the favorite spots.

The elections are over, and Charlie lost. The South Central regional chairman and "our" candidate for president is Chip Schneider of Baton Rouge, La. Charlie and the other Midland delegates now begin campaigning for Chip.

For the second straight night, there's a dance. But our kids aren't too thrilled with the disco and rock and roll themes. In Midland, they "kicker dance." "To us up here, kicker dancing is slow rock and roll,"

At the center of all the attention is Midland's Jim Hall, the designer and builder of the bright yellow ground effects Chaparral car to be driven in today's Indianapolis 500 by Johnny Rutherford. Hall and Rutherford, the defending champs at Indy, welcomed a group of Explorers from Midland and Lubbock into their garage in Gasoline Alley.

Exploring offers career head start

Some people still think of Exploring as a graduate school for Boy Scouts.

While that may have been true in the early 1960s, it just isn't so anymore. Exploring has grown up and no longer is just something to do after Boy Scouts...or Girl Scouts.

"Contemporary Exploring actually began in 1969," explained Tom McSwain, scout executive with the Comanche Trails District. "That's when Exploring went coed and we adopted the six experience areas — vocational, social, outdoor, service, personal fitness and citizenship."

Explorers are organized into posts; they are sponsored by companies, churches or other organizations; and they are led by adult volunteers who serve as advisers.

"Each post is relatively independent," McSwain said. "They have a choice of specializing or trying to incorporate as a high adventure post."

High adventure posts, which concentrate on outdoor activities, are the basic Explorer organizations, while specialty posts are usually based on career interests. Career Explorers get a head start on their possible professions by learning and practicing vocations with advisers of each post. And many Explorers belong to more than one post.

Midland's Explorers are part of the Boy Scouts of America's Buffalo Trail Council, which covers 18 counties — from Van Horn on the west, to Andrews on the north, to the Big Bend area on the south, to Colorado City on the east.

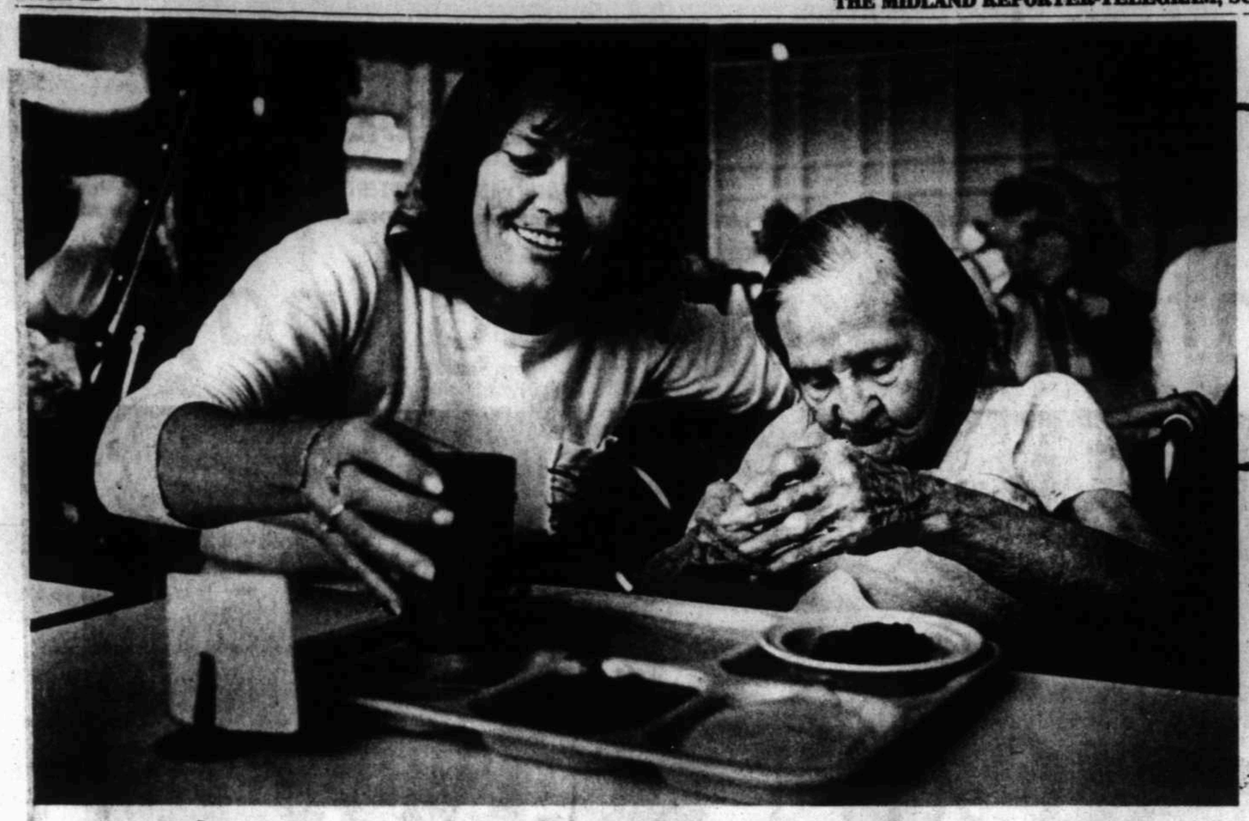

Currently, Midland has 10 active posts, including three high adventure posts — Post 138 (sponsored by St. Mark's Methodist Church), Post 159 (First Baptist Church) and Post 160 (St. Luke's Methodist Church).

Specialty posts in Midland are Post 130, journalism (Midland Reporter-Telegram); Post 19, western heritage (Trans-Pecos Materials); Post 6, automotive (Midland College); Post 1510, broadcasting (radio station KMND); Post 68, medical (Midland Memorial Hospital); Post 232, sailing (Memorial Christian Church); and Post 25, law (Junior Bar).

Odessa's active posts include law enforcement, Indian lore, medical, law and two high adventure posts. Area groups include law enforcement posts in Big Spring and Pecos, a high adventure post in Fort Davis and an archeology post in Andrews.

"It (Exploring) has kind of been in peaks and valleys," McSwain said.

Midland woman helps fill nursing home need

By DORIAN MARTIN
Staff Writer

Wanda Schwalbach has been adopted by 63 different people since March. That's when she started spending most of her days volunteering at Terrace Gardens Nursing Home.

She started coming to the nursing home at the request of one of the nurse's aides who rents a house from the Schwalbachs.

Now she can't and won't miss a day. "I missed one day and they (the residents) were all crying," Mrs. Schwalbach remembered. On the day she returned "everybody was waiting for me out here (in front of Terrace Gardens)."

She spends every afternoon and early evening except Sunday with the residents. "I work puzzles, play games, write letters, hold hands, walk people, push them in their wheelchairs," Mrs. Schwalbach said.

When she reaches the nursing home every day, she goes to every room to say hello. And when she leaves she stops by each resident's room to talk with them for awhile.

"They're so grateful," she says of her 63 new friends. She added that she is always being thanked by the residents, as well as by the nurses and aides. "It takes a lot of work off them (the attendants)," Mrs Schwalbach said, "When I feed, it means somebody else can feed somebody else."

What does she get out of it? "Not money, but I get a lot of love," Mrs. Schwalbach explained.

The nursing home, she noted, tends to pay more attention to the residents whose relatives come in more often, but rationalized "that's just human nature."

So Mrs. Schwalbach has adopted what she calls her "pets" — those residents whom no one visits. Currently she has five favorites, but the list keeps growing.

Her worst times at the nursing home come when someone dies, especially one of her "pets." And death does come to the nursing home. "For the last four months, it's been about two residents a month," she commented.

Most of the residents in Terrace Gardens are very ill; few can get out of bed themselves.

"I would never do it (put someone in a nursing home)," the volunteer said, "but I can't knock the people who do because I don't know their situation." However, she advocates an alternative program — keeping the people in the family's home, except in extreme cases of illness or senility.

Although she realizes that most women work, she explained, "There's no reason for people (the family) not to visit these people." She noted that two professional women whose mothers are residents visit everyday; therefore, everyone else should be able to make the time to visit their relatives.

Mrs. Schwalbach believes that families should become more involved than coming to see their relatives for ten minutes and then leaving. "You owe them (the residents) more than that," she said. "People need somebody to come and hold their hands. Then that person belongs to them."

She continued, "When they go to their rooms at night, they cry." Yet, the residents are "always talking about their kids." But they never say anything bad.

"These people need somebody to come and hold their hands," she explained. For those residents whose relatives do not come, Mrs. Schwalbach provides the warm, loving hand. So does her husband, Frank.

"I just think she's fabulous," exclaimed bank vice president Georgia Reeves, whose mother is a resident at Terrace Gardens. Mrs. Reeves described Mrs. Schwalbach's devotion as "untiring love."

Since Mrs. Schwalbach does not have any children to depend on as she grows older, she predicts that someday she will have to live in a nursing home. If she did have children, would she accept being put into one? Mrs. Schwalbach contemplated for a moment, then said, "I would accept it, but probably resent it."

Five arrested in Customs 'sting'

MIAMI (AP) — An undercover "sting" by the U.S. Customs Service led to the arrests Saturday of five men who allegedly tried to bribe an agent to release boats seized in connection with marijuana smuggling, the agency said.

Customs spokesman Jim Dingfelder said the five were taken into custody when they arrived at Customshouse on the Miami River Saturday morning to meet with the agent who supposedly would release two boats in exchange for $70,000 cash.

But the agent had actually been working undercover since December in the first investigation of its kind in South Florida, Dingfelder said.

"The whole thing was a sting," he said. "There was no real reaction on their part, no struggle and no incident. We took them into custody in one of the offices here at Customshouse.

"It had worked for them the first time. I guess they never suspected anything."

The sting operation began five months ago, when authorities were tipped that a group of individuals were looking for a Customs agent who could arrange the release of the seized boats.

The federal agency's Office of Investigation and Office of Management Integrity arranged for an agent to go undercover and be introduced to the men as a person willing to be bribed, Dingfelder said.

On Jan. 16, the agent was paid $50,000 to release the vessels Sweet Mima and El Centinela. Both boats had been seized by Customs agents after they found marijuana aboard, Dingfelder said. The meeting took place at Customshouse and the boats were released to the men as part of the sting.

On Friday, the agent again met with the men, in the parking lot of a Dade County shopping mall, and received $70,000 for the release of the boats Rescue and La Minda Milagrosa, according to Dingfelder.

"This morning, at a prearranged meeting at Customshouse allegedly to release the vessels, the arrests were made," Dingfelder said.

CONSUMER TIPS

Know your advertising facts

By LINDA TRUITT
Better Business Bureau of the Permian Basin

You may have walked into a retail store or business office recently and noticed a sticker resembling a sheriff's badge or other law enforcement emblem stuck to a window or door. Upon closer examination, you may have read an official sounding name similar to "Peace Officer Quarterly" or "Law Enforcement News."

While the emblem may give you (and the business) the impression the business is supporting law enforcement, in most cases the emblem's only value is to identify advertisers in the magazine.

Independent magazines which trade on the police name are continually soliciting advertising from local businesses. At one time the independent operators rarely attempted to publish or distribute any semblance of a magazine.

Today the magazines often are adorned with first-run articles on drug abuse, women in law enforcement, rights of police officers, and the like. Circulation may be miniscule, perhaps only to the sponsors and advertisers, but at least the publications exist.

Many inquiries and complaints have been received recently by the Better Business Bureau concerning independent law enforcement magazines. Those businesses who are solicited on the telephone often complain that they are led to believe the magazine is associated with a law enforcement agency and the donation will be supporting law enforcement. It is not until they receive an invoice that they discover they are only placing an ad in a magazine published by a profit-making organization and the money does not help support any law enforcement agency.

Other businesses have complained that they received unauthorized invoices for advertising. The invoice often will imply that the business previously bought advertising in the magazine and someone authorized future advertising. Those sending the unauthorized invoices hope the bookkeeper will not question the bill and pay the amount asked for.

For those businesses contacted by a salesperson soliciting for a law enforcement magazine the BBB suggests:

—That these solicitations be evaluated as purchases of advertising and not donations.

—You demand written proof of how and to whom the publication has been distributed before you pay for the ad.

—Before you advertise in a publication of this nature, make sure you have been shown a copy of your ad in the publication, before you pay for the ad.

For a report on the specific law enforcement publication or any other company, call the Better Business Bureau at 563-1880.

Diary of a convention: Exploring Indianapolis

DAY THREE

Specialty post seminars and meetings. More campaigning. No smoke-filled rooms, but lots of "We want Chip! We want Chip!" There's an impressive exposition by Explorer specialty and outdoor posts in the afternoon. It's similar to the Boy Scout Exposition held in Midland every year.

Finally, it's convention time. Starting at 7 p.m. the Explorers are sealed into the convention hall. Parliamentary procedure is the rule. Advisers and other adults are kept in a roped-off corner of the hall. There is no contact between the delegates and adults. Delegates can be disqualified for saying one word to an adviser. They take this thing seriously.

Delegates are seated by regions under poles designating the regions (just as they're seated by states at the Demo or GOP conventions).

After adopting a 15-point platform, the six regional chairmen are nominated for president with elaborate presentations featuring signs, songs, confetti, slide shows and parades through the arena.

Nominations completed, balloting begins. Area chairmen step up to microphones throughout the hall to announce their votes. David Neil of Lubbock announces our votes. "Mr. Chairman, Area 4 of the South Central region, home of the armadillo, casts its votes as follows: Delson zero, Kneiser zero, Schneider 12..." etc.

The pattern continues, with the home ofs getting a bit ridiculous until one region's "home of nothing in particular" draws an ovation.

After the first ballot, three candidates, including South Central's Schneider, are eliminated. After about 30 minutes of caucusing and political wheeling and dealing on the floor, the second ballot narrows the field to two. More caucusing. Some of the delegates are asleep. Finally, about 1:50 a.m., Chuck Wolfe of Lake Park, Fla., is elected president.

DAY FOUR

With the campaign out of the way, it's time for some fun. It's Indy 500 Day and our prayers have been answered — it stopped raining. Although it's not race day, not even a day for time trials, it's still a day at the Speedway.

Jim Hall of Midland, driver and designer of the Chaparral race car, the defending champ at Indy, is nice enough to take our group and a few Explorers from Lubbock into his garage in Gasoline Alley. Hall explains the ground effects design of the car they call the "Yellow Submarine." Just as we prepare to leave, Johnny Rutherford, Hall's driver, walks in. Hall and Rutherford sign autographs for the lot, giving up 10 more very valuable minutes on this important practice day.

Our seats are right behind pit row — a perfect spot for watching a couple hours of practice laps. A stopwatch makes it more interesting. Danny Ongais turns a lap at 196-plus mph in his sleek, black car.

There's Bobby Unser, driving a car built by another Midlander, Bobby Hillin. Unser, the pole-sitter, later turns a lap of 201-plus.

"Where's our car?" Hugh asks, craning his neck as watches for the bright yellow No. 1 Chaparral. It is not a good day for Hall. Rutherford takes the car out for a lap, but mechanical problems force him back into the pits. After an hour of work, another lap, but again it's back into the pits. "We still have a lot of work to do," Hall had said earlier in the garage.

After a quick stop at the Indy Museum, it's back to the convention and the banquet. After the installation of officers, the Congress is adjourned, with plans to reconvene in March 1982 in Philadelphia.

DAY FIVE

The long flight home, sleeping all the way.

"It was a great experience," Penny Holleman says between naps. "It was a lot of fun, but we all learned so much from it. We learned a lot about what you have to do in a campaign. I'm already making plans for Philadelphia."

Courtney honored by Parkview

Albert K. Courtney, M.D., has been named Physician of the Year by the staff at Parkview Hospital.

The award was presented at Dr. Courtney at the hospital's recent annual appreciation night.

Dr. Courtney, a longtime member of the Midland community, was cited for his "dedication and loyalty to Parkview Hospital, and his sincere and deep interest in all of the patients he treats."

Other awards presented during the annual banquet were Department Head of the Year, Cam Wiseman, director of buildings and grounds; Employee of the Year, Mark Reynolds, radiology department; and Employee for the Month of May 1981, Mary Vasquez, L.V.N.

Those employees who have given 5, 10 and 15 years of consecutive service to Parkview also were honored with service awards.

Exploring offers head start

"It seems to be on the way up right now. Hopefully, by the end of the year we'll be going real strong."

Besides the annual trip to the President's Congress (next year's will be in Philadelphia in March), annual activities for Midland and area Explorers include a road rally in September, Explorer Olympics each spring, a high adventure seminar at the Buffalo Trails Scout Ranch in the Davis Mountains, Explorer Camp in July, a planning conference at the Scout Ranch in October, annual banquet and participation in the annual Exposition.

Young men and women from 15 to 21 years old may join Explorers. Fourteen-year-olds who are in the ninth grade also are eligible. And any adult over 21 may serve as an adviser or assistant adviser.

Persons interested in joining Exploring as a member or adviser may contact Gene Lantrip or Doug Palmer in Midland at 684-7171 or McSwain in Odessa at 367-0555.

Midlander lives own 'be-attitude'

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

Mary Rae Boswell has a tendency to meet life head-on: whatever stands in her way she knocks down and keeps going.

But those hurdles she's cleared have served as building blocks for teaching her favorite people — children — how to become mature, responsible adults.

Even as a child, Mary Rae never let anything stand in her way, she recalls. She attended Catholic school in Roswell, N.M., where her mother was a nurse. Her father died when she was 10 years old, and from that point on it was "just the two of us."

At the age of 16, she discovered a knot on the left side of her neck. It became bothersome and a doctor sent samples of the knot off for a diagnosis. The results were startling: terminal cancer.

"When I found this out, I was protective of my mother. Hours later, when the diagnosis set in, I cried. And then I got mad. I thought 'I'm 16 years old; you can't do this to me,' " she says.

SHE WAS SENT immediately to the Mayo Clinic in Minnesota where the doctors further unraveled the problem. It was a chain of tumors with the largest one housed in the parotid gland. The cancer was complicated by the facial nerve which had grown through the center of the tumor. To get rid of the tumor, Mary Rae was told, would mean cutting through the facial nerve.

In most operations involving removal of the parotid gland, the facial nerve is cut and that side of the face droops. When shown photos of former patients, Mary Rae didn't like what she saw. But it was either that or death. "There really was no decision," she says matter-of-factly.

Midlander in Profile

When she awoke from surgery, the doctor informed Mary Rae he had removed the tumors, but in an unusual departure from the procedure he had not cut the facial nerve. Instead, the surgeon sliced around the nerve.

"He said he had a daughter my age," Mary Rae says, recalling the doctor's explanation. But the physician feared that his procedure would have spread the cancer throughout her lymph system instead of removing it.

Today, Mary Rae is in her 40s and has had no recurrence of the cancer.

"Basically, I'm a deeply religious person," she says. "That surgery was done on the Feast of the Immaculate Conception" and she believes that may have had something to do with the unusual procedure and her remarkable recovery.

BUT THERE'S SOMETHING besides her religion which has helped Mary Rae conquer life's obstacles: "Mental attitude has more to do with it than people realize. The best way is to hit it head-on.

"Once you go through something like that (cancer), you figure anything is possible."

Life hasn't been a four-lane paved superhighway for Mary Rae, though. After recovering from cancer, she went to college and became a licensed practical nurse, married Ellsworth Boswell and moved to Midland where he worked with Shell Oil Co. She subsequently had five children and moved to Houston where she and her husband were active with softball and children's teams.

The Boswells decided Houston was no place to raise children. Trouble was brewing in the schools, and the Boswells moved back to Midland where he went to work for American Quasar Petroleum Co. Then she became pregnant with her sixth, and final, child.

Her last two pregnancies were difficult. After the birth of John, the fifth child, Mary Rae developed arthritis which spread throughout her body. After discovering it, Mary Rae brought it under control with cortisone and some "Hail Marys," she laughs.

She was taking arthritis medicine when she became pregnant for the sixth time, and this concerned the doctors. Another factor complicating the pregnancy was her age — 39 — she says.

SUSIE WAS BORN premature and under extenuating circumstances, but she survived and is now in kindergarten.

Meanwhile, Mary Rae has had four operations on one knee to correct the problem with arthritis. "My leg has been the thing I fear the most; I've had so much trouble with it," she explains.

Just before Christmas, the pain in that knee grew worse. But until she could find an operation that would definitely help her, Mary Rae decided she needed to exercise.

"I could have gone home and sat around, waiting for my leg to crater. The bone in there is deteriorating. But I thought exercise might be good. I used to be a real athlete. I enjoyed softball in Houston."

With that decision made, Mary Rae went in search of a job, but not the typical sit-behind-the-desk-all-day clerical work. Nor did she want to go back into nursing. "I've become a cynic about medicine over the years," she explains.

She saw an advertisement for Wild River Canyon and answered it, without family or friends knowing her intentions. She was looking for a minor position, but later was persuaded to take the job as manager of the amusement park.

"I HIRE, FIRE and inspire," she says of her job.

Although Mary Rae admits she knows nothing of running an amusement park, "this job is just typically me," she says.

After staying at home for years to raise the children, she's finding the new job takes "a tremendous amount of time."

Exercise she is getting, and Mary Rae already has noticed a change in her knees. "Six months ago, I might go up a flight of stairs for $10. Now I go up and down stairs here all the time."

But the best fringe benefit of the job — and also the biggest challenge — is the young people who have been hired at the park. In fact, her contact with the teen-agers is a continuation of her work as a mother and as a former softball team coach.

"I want kids to know there's a joy in doing this (work). You can see people enjoying the fruits of your labor. It's important that they learn they can be an adult, mature, have fun and still be a bit crazy," she laughingly explains.

Mary Rae's attitude that she has used in overcoming past obstacles is being passed on to the young workers. "It's a psychological attitude. It has so much to do with anything you do."

And in spite of her past medical problems, Mary Rae focuses her thoughts on children, not herself.

Mary Rae Boswell looks out over a new phase in her life — Wild River Canyon. The mother of six children, she now is taking on the management of the amusement park and, while teaching the teen-aged employees, is passing on her philosophy to meet life head-on.

Four persons killed in two separate airplane crashes

By The Associated Press

Four people have died in two separate small airplane crashes, with one craft bursting into flames as it slammed into a flower garden near an airport in Barnstable, Mass., and the other crash killing a former Osage County District Attorney in Carbondale, Kan.

In Massachusetts, a pilot and a freight handler died early Saturday when their twin-engine plane crashed on takeoff about 75 feet from a home in a wooded area near Barnstable Airport on Cape Cod, authorities said.

Trooper Gerard Britt of the State Police South Yarmouth station identified the victims as pilot Bryan C. Rooney, 27, Waltham, and Christopher Currie of Chelmsford. Both men were badly burned.

The aircraft, carrying freight to Martha's Vineyard, crashed after taking off from Barnstable, according to airport manager Nicholas J. DeRosa. "It appears it lost altitude and crashed," he said.

"I'm used to hearing the planes flying overhead but I'm not used to having them crash in my back yard," said Christine Brito, 22, a Hyannis bank teller, who said she was awakened by the sounds of the aircraft just before it plunged into the flower beds on her lawn.

In Kansas, highway patrol officers identified the crash victims as Michael J. Hines, 37, of Osage City, and Linda Roberson, 34, of Lyndon.

AREA REPORT

Andrews board to canvass school bond balloting

ANDREWS — Trustees of the Andrews Independent School District will meet in special session at 11:30 a.m. Tuesday to canvass election returns of a $7.2 million bond issue to finance a new elementary school and to expand the school system's vocational programs.

The proposal passed in a 4-to-1 vote: 544 to 118.

The bonds will finance a "super" elementary school on Northeast Avenue K, a three-classroom shop building at Middle School, and a two-classroom shop addition to the existing vocational building at the high school.

The building projects are to be completed by the opening of the 1983 school year.

●

LAMESA — A $750 bonus will be meted out once a year to each teacher in the Lamesa Independent School District as a result of action by the Lamesa ISD trustees.

The payraise will be handed out to the teachers each December and at completion of their contract term each year.

Pay for teachers here ranges from $1,850 above the state base pay for a first-year teacher to $2,150 above base state pay for a teacher who has logged 10 or more years' teaching experience in the Lamesa system.

●

STANTON — The death May 1 of 36-year-old Abdon Joe Cruz of Stanton has been ruled accidental by Peace Justice F.E. Kennedy.

Cruz was found dead on U.S. Highway 80 about 300 feet west of the Stanton city limits.

The judge said that lack of evidence and witnesses prompted his ruling.

●

McCAMEY — Graduation for eighth-graders at McCamey High School will be held at 8 p.m. Tuesday in the McCamey High School Auditorium.

Special awards will be presented by James Witcher, and Garland Smith will present the American Legion Awards.

Principal Joe Neill will presented the graduating class.

Eighth-grade sponsors are Iris Folger, Jerry McDonald, and Witcher.

BRECKENRIDGE — The Confederate Air Force's Big Iron Squadron at Breckenridge will host an airshow replete with aerobatics and screaming fly-by by warbirds of the 1939-45 era at 2 p.m. today at the Stephen County Airport.

Among the aerial heroes to attend the show are David "Tex" Hill, an ace who flew the Curtiss P-40 Warhawk in the Flying Tigers, a volunteer group of American pilots in World War II; Joe Foss, a U.S. Marine Corps F4U Corsair aviator who holds the Congressional Medal of Honor, and Col. Amin George, a retired U.S. Air Force fighter pilot.

Pilot briefing for the show will be at noon.

Meeting of the CAF's West Texas Wing will follow the airshow.

Senate debates wiretapping power

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Senators quickly decided Saturday that if Texas has a wiretap law, they want it administered by the Department of Public Safety, not the state attorney general.

The decision was one of many made as the Senate considered a House-passed bill to allow electronic interception of suspected drug dealers' conversations if authorized by the DPS and selected Texas judges. Only DPS agents could do the "bugging."

Prospects of a marathon delay by a strong group of opponents faded as senators listened to a long list of amendments offered.

"We'll continue offering amendments and I would guess we would be out of here by 5 p.m.," said Sen. Oscar Mauzy, D- Dallas, one of the expected filibusterers.

Sponsoring Sen. Ed Howard, D-Texarkana, explained the bill would allow local prosecutors to ask DPS Director James Adams for a wiretap, then if he agreed, make application to one of nine district judges scattered over the state. If aproved, the covert or secret planting of microphones and the monitoring could be done only by DPS. A permit would be good only for 30 days.

An amendment attached by a Senate committee would give the 1985 Legislature a chance to renew the law or let it die.

"This allows breaking into a person's home or business, installing an eavesdropping device," said Sen. Lloyd Doggett, D-Austin. "It's basically a breaking and entering bill."

Howard argued it was no worse than search warrants which have been legal for many years.

"I think this is a despicable act," said Sen. Peyton McKnight, D-Tyler, who offered an amendment to let Attorney General Mark White approve wiretaps, instead of the DPS director.

Howard argued that the Texas attorney general does not have responsibility for enforcement of criminal laws.

McKnight said that Adams (formerly deputy FBI director) "comes out of that atmosphere in Washington that has been strongly criticized just for their wiretapping methods."

The amendment was tabled 20-8.

Sen. Kent Caperton, D-Bryan, proposed elimination of a provision allowing "covert entry" to plant eavesdropping devices.

Prison terms recommended

AUSTIN Texas (AP) — Jurors have recommended 25 years in prison for two Austin teenagers convicted of aggravated kidnapping in the abduction and slaying of a high school girl.

Institution for retarded shuts down

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A home for severely retarded children has voluntarily closed after state health officials reported 46 violations, including improper use of restraints, its owners say.

Owners of the Cartwheel Development Center in Wharton decided to close the 106-bed home after the Texas Department of Health blocked Medicaid payments.

"I didn't think I had any choice but to decertify," said Jerry Bryant, chief of nursing home quality standards at the health department.

A March 24 inspection alleged 46 violations of health department standards, including 19 "possible hazards to the health or safety of the children."

The report also said food as hot as 190 degrees served to children, while the temperature in the home was as low as 60 degrees.

Demeris Smith, president of National Living Centers, owners of the home, said the decision to close last Tuesday was made because "we couldn't keep our staff any longer."

She said she thought the home had been improved when inspectors came through in May for a second survey, but department officials did not agree.

"I don't want to close down a facility," she said Friday, "but I don't think we have a chance.

"The IQ of these children is below 27. They are mentally and physically disabled and also get normal childhood diseases. We were further handicapped by the fact that the Wharton Independent School District hadn't provided special education for these children as the law requires," she said.

A home in Denton owned by National Living Centers was decertified by the health department in February, but it remained opened after improvements were made.

"On this home (Wharton), we feel we've done all we could," she said.

There was a time in this country when the things we made, we made by hand. Skilled craftsmen who cared about the work they did took the time to do the job right. And every object they made was stamped with pride.
That spirit of endeavor is not lost today. You'll find it in Americans from coast to coast — men and women who still care enough to do their best. From artist to accountant, farmer to factory worker, Americans can be proud of the work they're doing. Just as they can be proud of the country that work has built.
We're proud of America — proud of the old-fashioned values this country stands for — and still has.

FARM-RANCH ROUNDUP

Alternate power for pumps sought

BUSHLAND — Rising energy costs are causing farmers to look at alternatives to fossil fuels for pumping irrigation water.

In that light, a U.S. Department of Agriculture engineer is pushing for wind energy as an energy source.

States which have a favorable potential for effectively using wind energy are Texas, Oklahoma, Kansas, Nebraska, Colorado and New Mexico, says Nolan Clark, who is attached to USDA's Science and Education Administration's Wind Energy Laboratory.

"Those six states use 63 percent of the total energy consumed to pump water in the United States," says Clark. "We've been doing studies to match wind power with irrigation pumps and the best correlation is found in those good wind energy states."

To be economically feasible, wind energy must be used throughout the year. When wind is not used for pumping irrigation water, it must be used other ways, such as generating electricity for home use, for drying grains or for sale to power companies.

Cotton growers oppose move

LUBBOCK — Cotton industry's advocates of greater loan program discounts on lower grade, staple and micronaire cotton are contending that such decisions should be made on the basis of average market quotations.

"Which sounds all right," say officials of the Lubbock-based Plains Cotton Growers Inc., "until you find out that these people also appear to believe that if one cow sells for $100 and 30 cows sell for $300 each, the average market price of cows is $200.

In cotton terms, those proponents of loan program discounts hold that if one bale of cotton sells for 30 cents a pound discount in Montgomery, Ala., and 30 bales of the same quality cotton sell in Lubbock at a 10-cent discount, then the average U.S market discount for cotton of that quality is 20 cents per pound.

Howver, the Plains Cotton Growers people figure that the average discount in that instance should be 10.6 cents per pound. PCG's computations gives Lubbock's 10-cent discount 30 times as much weight as Montgomery's 30-cent discount.

More applicants sought

AUSTIN — Texas' Family Land Heritage Program is heading for the 1,500-mark this year, according to Texas Agriculture Commissioner Reagan V. Brown.

"...We certainly hope individuals interested in history or agriculture in Texas will help us by bringing as many qualified applicants into the program as possible."

Since 1974, the program has honored 1,392 Texas families.

The Texas Department of Agriculture is entering its eighth year in sponsoring the program which honors "those families that have persevered for a century or more in the cultivation and production of food and fiber," Brown said.

"Undoubtedly, these families, with their unfaltering determination, have been the backbone of Texas agriculture," he said.

Registration for the program ends Aug. 15.

Those wishing to apply for induction may obtain application forms by writing the Texas Department of Agriculture, P.O. Box 12847, Austin, Texas 78711.

Applications also may be obtained from the county judge or historical commission chairman in each county. In Midland County, William B. "Bill" Ahders is the county judge. Nancy McKinley is chairman of the Midland County Historical Commission.

Farm better than 'a bird's eye view'

By DANIEL BEEGAN
Associated Press

FRAMINGHAM, Mass. (AP) — The lively group of second graders struggled up a spring-loaded ramp designed to make them walk the way goats walk.

Then they interpreted some horse "language" and patted a 500-pound sow as she nursed a bunch of hungry piglets.

"A big monster is coming at me," exclaimed one youngster as he looked at a friend through a mask that simulates the way a horse sees.

"Everything is sideways," shouted another, peering into a mask simulating a cow's vision. The lesson: cows cannot see straight ahead.

The youngsters were undergoing a novel brand of learning at Macomber Farm, 24 miles west of Boston, where visitors not only get to see prize horses, sheep, goats, pigs, cows and chickens, but are taught to think, walk and "talk" like the animals.

The $7 million project, designed by the Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, also uses computer games and videotapes to teach animal behavior and communication.

The computer games and ramps were big hits among the students of Taylor School in Foxboro during their recent visit.

"Hey, you can see yourself," shouted one 7-year-old as he compared an instant TV picture of his walk with that of a walking horse.

Some lessons are the real thing.

Keystone, a 4-year-old Holstein bull, made a lasting impression on the youngsters as he pawed and snorted in his pen. A bale of hay calmed him down.

Robert A. Johnson, director of the farm, said that even without the computer games and special exhibits, Macomber would be a unique experience for most city children.

"The opportunities to see these animals just don't exist any more, except from a car window while driving down a country lane," he said, adding that only 3 percent of Americans are farmers and few farms are located near major cities.

Coal strike talks concentrate on hiring of subcontractors

WASHINGTON (AP) — Industry and union negotiating teams labored Saturday in search of agreement on the hiring of outside subcontractors, the major issue blocking settlement on a new contract that could end the 58-day-old coal strike.

In a roller-coaster environment that has seen expectations for an accord rise and fall with each bargaining session, there was renewed optimism that resolution of the troublesome union security issue was within the grasp of the two sides.

Union president Sam Church preceded Saturday's resumption of negotiations at the Capital Hilton hotel here with a briefing on the status of talks for the UMW's 39-member bargaining council, which must approve any settlement that the union leader wants to send to the coalfields for ratification by the rank and file.

There was no indication of whether talks would continue through the holiday weekend, although Church kept the bargaining policy on standby.

Church, who was devastated by the miners' overwhelming rejection of a tentative three-year contract that he negotiated with the Bituminous Coal Operators Association on March 23, was making sure the bargaining council was heavily involved in the current series of talks.

The council, the UMW's top policy-making body on national wage agreements with the soft coal industry, approved the March contract, but by only a 21-14 margin.

Eight days later, the UMW's 160,000 members in the Appalachian and eastern coalfields voted by a better than 2-1 margin to reject the contract.

OPEC oil cutbacks called for

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — Kuwait's oil minister called Saturday for a cutback in oil production by the OPEC cartel to counter a worldwide oil glut that is pushing prices down.

Sheikh Ali Khalifa al Sabah spoke with reporters as ministers of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries began arriving for a meeting Monday. He said Saudi Arabia would be under pressure from higher-priced oil exporters to raise its price per barrel of $32 that it charges for most of its crude.

Spot prices for oil have fallen as low as $33.50 a barrel because of oversupply. Libya, the highest-priced OPEC member, quotes $41 for a 42-gallon barrel. The "official" OPEC price is $36 per barrel.

The oversupply is estimated at 2 million to 3 million barrels a day, which is about 10 percent of the OPEC output.

Air controllers threaten walkout

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Air traffic controllers threatened Saturday to walk off the job June 22 unless the Federal Aviation Administration comes up with an acceptable offer on salary and fringe benefits.

"If it does not come, if they do not come to their senses...I vow to you that the skies will be silent," Robert Poli, president of the 15,000-member Professional Air Traffic Controllers' Organization, told delegates to a PATCO convention here.

As Poli started to announce the deadline, which was endorsed by the union's executive board, he was interrupted by shouts of "Strike!" and "Go, go, go!"

"I had a feeling I'd never get past the first words," Poli said, and then repeated, "By midnight of June 21, if we have not received something to present to the members ... I will order the countdown to begin immediately."

He said the walkout, which would bring commercial aviation to a standstill, would begin with the day shift on June 22.

PATCO's membership has not taken a formal strike vote and controllers are forbidden by law to strike, but Poli said he felt his members are angry enough to walk out anyway.

"The only illegal strike is an unsuccessful strike," he said.

Air traffic controllers are responsible for directing planes over the nation's airports, keeping them from colliding.

PATCO's contract with the FAA expired March 15. Federally mediated talks broke off between PATCO and the FAA on April 28, after 37 negotiating sessions

PATCO is calling for FAA endorsement of legislative measures pertaining to wages, work hours and retirement.

The union also wants FAA action on contract proposals covering such issues as watch schedule assignments, overtime, safety procedures and equipment.

IMPORTANCE OF TITLE SEARCH

Why is a title search so important? The title to property represents your right, as owner, to the free use of it (within the limitations of laws and zoning and perhaps the deed itself) - and, therefore, also your right to sell or mortgage it later. The chief purpose of a title search is to make sure that the title is not "clouded" - that no one other than the present owner has claim against the property.

A title search is a history of the title, showing former transactions affecting the ownership, such as existence of liens and encumbrances. Generally, an attorney or title insurance company searches the title. The reason the search should be commenced immediately is not that it takes such a long time but, rather, if there are unacceptable encumbrances, they will have to be cleared up before the title can be transferred. This could take quite a bit of time.

But don't worry unduly. Ordinarily, titles are good and marketable and so-called "clouds" upon them are uncommon.

If you have any questions on this subject or any other aspect of real estate, feel free to phone or drop in at DON HARVEY Realtors 702 Andrews Hwy. Phone 683-5333. We're here to help! Come in for your free copy of "Home or Living" magazine.

Playboy Alan Baker (Doug McClure) tries to decide what to do next when his mother (Helen Ackerman) shows up at his front door with her suitcase in the current Country Squire Dinner Theatre production of "Come Blow Your Horn." The theater is located east of Odessa on Highway 80. Reservations may be made by calling 563-4111.

'Horn' of plenty

(Laughter, that is)

Laughter filled Country Squire Dinner Theatre Friday night as Neil Simon's "Come Blow Your Horn" unfolded onstage. At times, it wasn't all from the audience.

During Act I, actors Doug McClure and Michael Cornelison had difficulty maintaining their composure. It seemed to start with Cornelison's line to McClure, "It's just the difference in the way you and I operate. I figure if I get a handshake from a girl, its been a good night."

After that point, each had difficulty delivering his lines with a straight face. And laughter is contagious. The audience loved it.

The play focuses on the hanky-panky hijinks and growing-up-and-outgrowing pains of two brothers — Alan (McClure), a plus 30-year-old playboy referred to as "the bum" by his dad, and Buddy (Cornelison), Alan's recently acquired just-turned-21-always-lived-at-home-perfect-child roommate. A team destined for trouble and destiny doesn't pass them by.

McClure carries his part well with a few exceptions. At times, his voice was not clear and his affected hand motions were distracting and unnecessary. Otherwise, he convincingly carried off the swinger-turning-straight older brother role.

Besides acting in movies and on the stage, McClure has starred in six television series. His first was as Flip Flippin in "Overland Trail," to Jed Sills in "Checkmate," Trampas in "The Virginian" (later revised to "The Men From Shiloh"), C.R. Grover in "Search," and finally Cash Conover in "The Barbary Coast."

Cornelison effectively carried the role of the learning-to-live-loose younger brother. His delivery was appropriate for Buddy's role, which is one of the fast learner acquiring the playboy lifestyle with the ease of a prodigy.

Television credits for Cornelison include "Inspector Perez," "Hart to Hart," "Nightside" and "My Father's House." A 1972 graduate of the American Academy of Dramatic Arts, he has appeared on Broadway and the National Tour productions of "Finishing Touches," and in "Midsummer Night's Dream" with the New York Shakespeare Festival.

However the stellar portrayal of the evening was turned in by Helen Ackerman as Mrs. Baker. Her performance was top drawer throughout the play.

Following very closely behind her was Nathan Adler as Mr. Baker. Both were excellent in their portrayals of the overly-protective-over-parenting parents.

Ms. Ackerman has appeared in a number of productions at the Dean Goss Dinner Theatre and the Windmill in Houston, along with other dinner theaters across the country.

Adler, who was awarded the Dramalogue Drama Critics Award in 1977 for his performance as Nat Goldberg in "Birthday Party," has stage, movie and television credits to his name. He has made guest appearances in "Little House on the Prairie" and "Police Woman."

Two area residents, Delores Lewallen Blackwell and Sidney Wallace Armentrout, rounded out the cast. Ms. Blackwell appeared recently as Alais in the Odessa Permian Playhouse production of "The Lion in Winter."

Ms. Armentrout has appeared in, among others, "Angel Street," "The Bald Soprano" and "Hay Fever" at Odessa's Globe Theatre in conjunction with The University of Texas of the Permian Basin.

Ms. Blackwell's performance varied from good to could be better. She carried the role of Connie, the almost-too-too-nice-nice girl, not always with conviction, stumbling over several of her lines. On occasion her nervousness showed in her voice and mannerisms. Her performance, as was true at times with McClure, left this reviewer with the feeling that she was striving to act the part rather than make the character a part of herself and simply be the person onstage.

On the other hand, Ms. Armentrout's affected portrayal was appropriate because Peggy, the character she played, is a person of affectation. Her accent, cutsy smile and mannerisms are all stereotype characteristics of the rich-Daddy's-little-baby who just knows if she bats her eyes, pouts her mouth and wiggles her 'ahem' enough, she will get her way.

The food, as well as the performance, was good Friday night. For reservations call the Country Squire at 563-4111. Buffet dinner is served beginning at 6:30 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday and at 6 p.m. Sundays.

One audience member was overheard saying as he left the theater, "I would have stayed to see it again, but they only have one show a night."

For an evening of mishap situations and funny one liners, catch "Come Blow Your Horn."

'It Had To Be You'

Not even a miracle can save it

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Drama Critic

NEW YORK (AP) — A constantly rejected, slightly frowsy blond actress who seems in her early 40s arrives to audition for a TV commercial. She's asked to talk about herself.

She does, at great, neurotic length, about her failures. She tells the audience she's writing a play, needs both a man and success, and is at the point in her life "where only a miracle can save me."

But not even a miracle can save "It Had To Be You," a two-character comedy written by and starring Renee Taylor and her husband, Joseph Bologna, two fine talents. They're not in top writing form here.

Their Broadway show — it bowed recently, on the last night of eligibility for Tony awards this season — has its share of funny lines. But its plot is so contrived it gives unbelievable a bad name.

Miss Taylor essays the loser of an actress. Bologna plays a single, handsome, successful advertising man who runs the audition and who for some odd reason takes an interest, purely professional, in her.

He even escorts her home — all this and thereafter is during a Christmas Eve blizzard in Manhattan. She warns she can't see him again unless he's serious about her. And she wants to have kids.

He's properly fuddled. You'd expect that any man in his right mind would flee, pronto, particularly when he can have his pick of younger, saner and much more attractive ladies.

But no, he lingers in this kook's cluttered, pink-colored apartment and promptly gets seduced. Afterward, he says it was grand but he beds many ladies and this is not love.

He tries then to flee, but lingers again when she reads him a six-act saga about a Russian lady who writes funny. Finally, he gets impatient, then hostile, calls her "a loonytune."

Retrieving his clothes (she's hidden them in places that include the freezer), he exits. And slips on the stairs. His back goes out. He limps back to her apartment, tries vainly to call a cab or a limo.

You can tell he feels trapped, and not just because they're snowed in. He says he can't think of any man who'd put up with her "except maybe somebody who's gay and wanted to keep reminding himself why."

That has no effect. She's decided he'll be her life's mate. She also wants him to help with her play and, when that fails, to collaborate with him on a brand new play.

Back and forth they go all night harsh moments, tender moments, he veering from insults to apologies and back again, with assorted revelations that further clutter a cluttered comedy.

Among other things, he once dreamed of writing, has a thing about "giving it all (his love) to one person" and has an 18-year-old son, born out of wedlock during his college days. And he secretly longs to be with the son but hasn't seen him in two years.

All this gets sorted out, laboriously, and Bologna decides to chuck his career, wed the actress, write plays with her and live happily ever after. To call most of the plot improbable understates the case.

At least it's briskly directed by Robert Drivas, and has a superbly awful-taste apartment by Lawrence Kind and Michael Yeargan that magically rises, lowers and rolls into place early in the show.

The show does have some wonderfully zany, off-center lines, mostly emitted by Miss Taylor, OK in her stock role as a wistful, good-hearted flake. And Bologna is very good as the man-about-town who gets trapped with this flake on a snowy night.

But overall, "It Had To Be You" is like his charaqter's back — badly strained. It tries hard to be a screwball comedy about love, but even those who believe in love just won't believe its situations.

The authors have done far better things. Methinks the wise course would be for them to forget this one and finish the new play our heroine starts when she picks up a pencil and says:

"Act One, Scene One: A man crawls in on all fours. The woman says, 'Honey, you're home...'"

Douglas Watt of the New York Daily News said the play "is so friendly and unassuming that you'd like to pat it; but that would just be encouraging its authors...It is as flimsy, far-fetched and rag-ridden as a TV comedy, just slightly racier."

Frank Rich of The New York Times, noting that "It Had To Be You" was the final show of the Broadway season, said, "I'm afraid the season didn't end with a bang or even a whimper — just an attenuated yawn. Perhaps other romantic comedies can get away with stories as absurdly contrived as this, but not one that has been written with such sledgehammer bathos and humor."

FAMOUS ROUNDS.

Jules Vernes' famous novel "Around the World in Eighty Days" pitted the ingenuity of Phileas Fogg against the rigors of "rounding" the globe. This spirited tale describes how Phileas employed every imaginable form of transportation on his colorful trek . . . which might explain why "Around the World in Eighty Days" has been "a round" so long.

The Calgary Stampede & Roundup is a longstanding Canadian tradition once described as a "rangeland Mardi Gras". This famous Round-up is attended by over one million avid rodeo fans each year. So next July if you're in the mood for a wild and wooly rodeo . . . "round-up" the family and come on up to the Calgary Stampede and Round-up in Alberta, Canada. "See ya Round"

1981 sees a new "round" enter the ranks of the famous right here in Midland, Texas. It's the Hilton's Sunday Buffet in the Round. Feast on such delicacies as Marinated London Broil and our Chef's Sumptious Chicken with side dishes of fresh fruits, vegetables, and thirty varieties of salad. Finally "round" out your Sunday repast with a selection from our many homemade Hilton pies and cakes. Delicious.

The Midland Hilton's Buffet in the Round and your family . . . We'll get along famously.

CBS still at top of the heap

By PETER J. BOYER
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The networks have issued their annual springtime warnings, otherwise known as the fall schedule announcements, and it appears that CBS has once again taken a long-term lease at the top of the heap.

Half-hour comedies are as abundant as ever — there will be 29 of them among the three networks in the 1981-82 season — but their themes are tending away from the adolescent hijinks so popular in the recent past.

Network series leaving the air are CBS' "Flo," "Enos," "White Shadow," "The Incredible Hulk" and "The Waltons"; ABC's "Those Amazing Animals," "Charlie's Angels," "Aloha Paradise," "Soap," "Vegas" and "I'm a Big Girl Now"; and NBC's "Lobo," "Disney," "Nero Wolfe," "Buck Rogers," "The Gangster Chronicles," "The Brad Brides" and "Walking Tall."

The turnover rate is indicative of each network's performance this season, with leader CBS adding only six new series, runner-up ABC adding eight and NBC 10 new series.

Here's how the fall season competition looks from here, bearing in mind the mossy network proviso, "Nothing's etched in granite."

Sunday — CBS is unrelenting here again, with daytime football leading into "60 Minutes," "Archie Bunker," "One Day at a Time," "Alice," "The Jeffersons" and "Trapper John." Archie and the three sitcoms following it are getting a little bit old, but they're still potent, and the competition is of the limp-wristed variety.

ABC is trying its millionth Sunday night starter, "Code Red," which sounds like "Emergency" with flames; "Today's FBI," a reworking of yesterday's "FBI"; and a movie. NBC is trying a boy-with-superpowers number called "Star Prince" where Disney used to be, followed by "CHiPS" and a movie.

Monday — CBS has a slight edge here, going against "Monday Night Football" with the inexplicably popular "Pvt. Benjamin," followed by the promising "Two of Us," "M-A-S-H," "House Calls" and "Lou Grant." Flip-flopping with football, depending upon your time zone, will be "That's Incredible" on ABC.

NBC is sticking with "Little House" and a movie on Mondays, meaning that NBC will be an off-and-on challenge, depending upon the flick.

Tuesday — ABC may well be able to milk its old Tuesday sitcom tandem, "Happy Days" and "Laverne and Shirley," for one more season. The shows have been given new life by changes in character and situation, and they're on the schedule with "Three's Company," "To Close for Comfort" and "Hart to Hart," shows that are strong as a crowd.

CBS tries to edge in with a movie and a new detective show, "Simon and Simon," but NBC has the best chance of moving up on this night. Merlin Olsen tries a "Little House"-type family program with "Father Murphy," about a gold prospector who opens a frontier schoolhouse. Olsen's new show is followed by two strong entries, "Quincy" and "Flamingo Road."

Wednesday — NBC has fooled around with this night, its only winning night on the schedule, but it still looks pretty strong for NBC with "Real People," "Facts of Life," the new Tony Randall show, "Love, Sidney" and Rock Hudson's new show. ABC hopes its promising "Greatest American Hero" will fly, because if it doesn't, the new "Fal Guy" and the returning "Dynasty" won't be able to hold off NBC.

CBS is going the already-tiring sorcerer route with something called "Mr. Merlin," which figures to hurt "WKRP" (in yet another time slot), "Nurse" and "Shannon," another detective series.

Thursday — CBS will win Thursdays if the lineups stay as presented here. That network came up with a big winner this past season in "Magnum P.I.," which, with "Knots Landing" more than allows for the loss of "The Waltons." A newspaperwoman yarn, "Jessica Novak," takes the closing spot. ABC's lineup of "Mork," the new Western comedy "Best of the West," "Barney Miller," "Taxi" and "20-20" is strong, but not strong enough to win Thursday.

NBC will flail away with "Harper Valley PTA," a new Gabe Kaplan sitcom called "Gabe and Guich," the transplanted "Diff'rent Strokes," another new sitcom, "Gimme a Break" and the luckless "Hill Street Blues," which should have been allowed to tail-end Wednesday.

Friday — This is the night when ABC and NBC offer sacrifice to CBS. "Dukes of Hazzard" has been moved to 8 o'clock, which is where the noisy kids' show should have been from the beginning, and "Dallas" sweeps up at 9. CBS' new entry, "Vintage Years," won't have to bother with being good — it'll be a hit on residue alone.

The sacrificial lambs from ABC are "Benson," a new show called "Open All Night" (which is about how long it will last), "Maggie," another new show, "Living it Up" (the renamed "It's a Living") and "Strike Force," a cop show. NBC's "Dallas" bait consists of a new "Mickey Rooney Show," an innovative 90-minute cops and doctors urban drama called "Chicago Story" and James Arness's new series.

Saturday — This night has belonged to ABC for some time now, and "Love Boat" and "Fantasy Island," being made of thin air anyway, show no signs of age. They'll be preceded by a new family soap, "King's Crossing."

NBC seems likely to make the strongest bid here, with "Barbara Mandrell" starting the night followed by James Garner's new "Maverick" and David Brinkley's much abused "NBC Magazine," which should have stayed on Thursdays.

CBS gives its new acquisition, "Disney," a Saturday try, followed by movies.

If there is a TV season next fall, which is far from a certainty anymore, CBS figures to plow on to another relatively easy victory. ABC seems likely to continue its fall from grace, while NBC will gain from ABC's decline, if nothing else.

Best programming move: CBS' elimination of "Hulk," the moving forward of "Dukes" and "Dallas," which keeps the night theirs and provides instant hit status for the new "Vintage Years."

Worst programming move: NBC's breakup of Wednesday night, trying to get more mileage from "Diff'rent Strokes" and "Facts of Life" separately than they're good for.

Lone Ranger deserves better than hiding behind mask

HOLLYWOOD (AP) - "Here — I thought I would hand these out," said Klinton Spilsbury, passing a silver bullet with a shy grin.

Unmasked, he is a 31-year-old with the startling good looks of a fashion model and an air of faint embarrassment over the events that have happened to him. On screen he is the 1981 Masked Marvel of "The Legend of the Lone Ranger," the Lord Grade-Jack Wrather production being released this month by Universal Pictures.

Spilsbury may well find himself in a no-win situation. "Lone Ranger" purists consider him an upstart who has deposed the aging Clayton Moore. The new movie is not the kind that will win the hearts of the nation's critics, and Spilsbury is likely to get wounded in the crossfire.

Yet he probably deserves better than the fate of dispensing silver bullets on publicity tours. He appears to be a thoughtful, dedicated, ambitious actor who can offer more than a pretty face. Enough of a defense — let him speak for himself. He does that quite well.

"Before the movie, I had two minor parts in television, and I mean minor," he admitted before embarking on the publicity tour. "I studied acting for six years, both here and in New York. There were some lean times, but I never starved. Jobs at burger stands helped get me through. At other times I ate rice a lot — two weeks at a time. It's a family recipe: rice and tomato sauce.

"My parents had always accused me of never following through on things. This was one time when I was determined to show them I could follow through."

The Spilsburys are a remarkable clan. There are six children, with uniquely spelled middle names by which they are known: Kellie, Klinton, Kris, Karlie, Kennie, Kourtney. The father was a football star, then head coach at the University of Northern Arizona. Klinton was born in Tucscon but spent much of his childhood on a family ranch a Chihuahua, Mexico. That refutes the Clayton Moore partisans who claim the newcomer couldn't even ride a horse.

With only a TV movie and a bit on "Lou Grant" as experience, Spilsbury was being considered during a brief period of time for Flash Gordon, Tarzan and the Lone Ranger. The first two fizzled out, the Lone Ranger was on "hold" for six months.

"I tested the first time, then they brought me back four months later and did some more tests," he recalled. "They never gave me too much encouragement; I was given the impression that I was the last of 99 being considered. I suppose they bullets," Fraker said.

While no "Heaven's Gate," "The didn't want me to get my hopes up.

"I guess one of the things holding up the deal was that I wouldn't sign for a television series as well. I guess I was naive, but I figured that I didn't want to enter something that wasn't going to work on its own."

Spilsbury told his agent no chance remained. Eleven days before shooting was to start, he received a call from the director, William Fraker, who asked him how much money he had. "Twenty dollars," said the actor. "Go buy yourself some silver Legend of the Lone Ranger" had its problems. Five script writers received credit, and Spilsbury said the final script contained only four white pages — the rest were revisions of various hues. Last summer's strike of film actors caused a shooting hiatus. After many test previews, the producers decided to dub many of Spilsbury's lines with the voice of James Keach.

Spilsbury is understandably resentful: "They wouldn't have hired me if they hadn't liked my voice."

He said he considers that he gave his best possible effort, as is the family tradition. Only one thing perplexed him: the Ranger's mask.

"I couldn't look in the mirror when I had the mask on," he admitted. "I finally asked them to lower the mirror. As to the justification for the mask, I'm still not certain what it is."

Baez barred from singing

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) — U.S. folk singer and human-rights activist Joan Baez was barred by federal police from performing at an anti-nuclear rally Saturday night, concert organizers said.

It was the second night in a row she was stopped by police acting under Brazil's military government. They refused to let her sing from the stage at a concert in the industrial city of Sao Paulo Friday.

Marcia de Almeida, one of the organizers of the Rio rally at Flamengo Beach Park, told The Associated Press that two men went to Ms. Baez' hotel, identified themselves as police agents and said the singer could not perform.

The federal police office was closed Saturday and there was no answer to repeated telephone calls.

Ms. Almeida reported the two agents said Ms. Baez "is a 'gringo' and Brazil had specific laws against foreigners making political statements here."

In a press conference at the hotel, Ms. Baez said police had not personally informed her of the ban, "but they've told the organizers I can't sing, even though everything is in order."

In Sao Paulo, police claimed she had not received permission from local authorities. The concert there went on with Brazilian singers while Ms. Baez remained in the wings.

Midland seniors to graduate

Approximately 1,000 high school seniors will receive long-awaited diplomas in graduation ceremonies scheduled Friday at Chaparral Center on the Midland College campus.

Lee High School ceremonies are scheduled at 6 p.m. with Midland High to follow at 9 p.m.

Valedictory addresses by Lee High School's Jon Franke and Midland High School's Susan Louise Green will be presented, as well as remarks by LHS salutatorian John Kimberley and MHS salutatorian Melanie Beth McMurry.

Announcements of scholarships and honors will be given and both bands plan to perform with appropriate music.

Board members Parker Humes and Gary Hopper will be on hand to bestow diplomas to Lee seniors, while Midland High graduates will receive theirs from trustees Ed Runyan, Bill Jackson, and Ann Page.

Superintendent James Mailey will certify the class at Lee high while Assistant Superintendent Joe Baressi will certify the class at Midland High School.

The public is cordially invited to attend ceremonies free of charge.

Kindergarten roundup scheduled

All prospective kindergarteners and their parents or guardians are asked to attend a kindergarten roundup Wednesday from 9 to 10 a.m. at the Fannin Elementary School cafeteria, according to Bob Watkins, principal at Fannin.

The event will give parents and their children a preview of what to expect when school starts Aug. 31. Students also may pre-register at the meeting.

Parents are asked to bring birth certificates and immunization records of their children. Parents who are unable to attend the roundup may pick up pre-registration forms at the school office any weekday between 8 a.m. and 4 p.m. through Friday.

Farewell service set

Farewell services for Cadet Jerry Friday, the first Midlander to attend The Salvation Army's school for officers training, will be held today at 7 p.m. at the Salvation Army's Chapel, 3500 Park Lane.

A reception will follow the service and the public is invited to attend.

Friday, a native Midlander, has been active in the Salvation Army youth program for the last three years.

Shooting victim 'satisfactory'

RANKIN — An Odessa man remained in satisfactory condition in Odessa Medical Center late Saturday after sustaining a gunshot wound in his leg at 11:49 a.m. Friday on Highway 329 east of Crane.

Ronald McComas, a field representative for an Odessa oilfield products firm, told authorities he was shot in the right leg by an unknown assailant when he stepped from his vehicle alongside the highway.

Upton County Sheriff's Department is continuing the investigation.

Man in hospital

Manuel Cervantes Jr., 29, of Big Spring remained in stable condition in Midland Memorial Hospital late Saturday after sustaining injuries in a one-truck rollover five miles east of Coahoma at 7:13 p.m. Friday.

Cervantes suffered a fractured jaw and facial lacerations in the mishap, which occurred when he apparently failed to negotiate a curve on East Howard Field Road, according to the Big Spring Police Department.

Gentlemen, Start your engines

By MIKE HARRIS
AP Motorsports Writer

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Two-time winner Bobby Unser on the pole, 10 rookies scattered through the field and a handful of hard-charging veterans deep in the pack provide the most volatile elements for the 65th Indianapolis 500 today at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway.

The race shapes up as perhaps the most dangerous Indy classic since the three days of fire and rain in 1973, when one driver was fatally injured, one racing mechanic was killed, another driver was severely injured and several spectators were splashed by burning gasoline in a series of crashes and accidents during the rain-drenched period that it took to get the race completed.

"It's always dangerous, particularly at the start of the race when you have so many young drivers and a lot of guys toward the back who want to get up front in a hurry," said Unser, who took the pole with a four-lap qualifying average of 200.546 mph.

"But a lot of us have talked to the rookies about the pitfalls and we'll talk to 'em again before the race," Unser added. "And those other guys back there, like (Tom) Sneva, (Danny) Ongais and Mario (Andretti), know you don't win a 500-mile race in the first few laps."

MIKE MOSLEY, who qualified at 197.141 mph, and A.J. Foyt, the only four-time Indy winner, at 196.078, join Unser on the front row of the 33-car field.

In the second of 11 rows of color-splashed racers are 1976 winner Gordon Johncock at 195.429, defending champion and three-time winner Johnny Rutherford at 195.387, driving the car prepared by Midland's Jim Hall Chaparral team, and the fastest rookie, 22-year-old Josele Garza of Mexico at 195.101.

Other former winners in the field include three-time champion Al Unser — Bobby's younger brother and driver for the Midland Longhorn team — in row three, 1979 winner Rick Mears in row eight and Andretti in the middle of the last row.

Bobby Unser, struggling all month to get his new Longhorn racer going fast enough to compete with the other hotshots, wound up qualifying at 192.719. Mears had to abort a very fast qualifying attempt after two laps because of a bad coil and wound up putting the Penske team's backup car into the lineup at 194.018.

And Andretti had a driving committment for last Sunday's Belgian Grand Prix, so he had to let old friend Wally Dallenbach qualify his car here. So even though Dallenbach sailed through the time trials at 193.040, Andretti wound up in the last row because the rules require any qualified car which has a driver change to go to the back.

TWO OF the fastest qualifiers in the field wound up side-by-side in the seventh row. Sneva, who wasn't eligible to run for the pole because the car he put in the field was not in the original qualifying line, was the fastest at 200.691. Ongais, who lost his chance at the front because of a broken starter rod on the first weekend of trials, was third fastest of the 33 starters at 197.694.

"Last year, I started 33rd and finished second," said Sneva. "This time, I'm starting farther up and they can get me from both ends in this one."

Sneva, who holds the qualifying record here but never has won, added, "Some of us with more experience are going to have to work together and thread our way through the field. But I expect we can get back up with the other (fast) cars."

Asked about danger at the start of the race when the cars are bunched and all aiming for the narrow first turn at high speed, Sneva replied, "Yeah, it's the time when something sure can happen. It's happened before. But everyone is going to have to stay cool and try to remember it's a long race."

Foyt, who came to Indy this year with an untested new ground effects Coyote, isn't worried about the dangers. The 46-year-old Texan is far more concerned with fuel consumption.

"It will be a very tough problem getting fuel mileage," Foyt explained. "Any time I go over 190, I get 1.65 miles to the gallon. You've got to maintain 1.8 so you have enough fuel to finish the 200 laps.

"A lot depends on the number of yellows (caution flags that slow the pace). It's a very touchy situation. A lot of cars will break in the race and the guy who cools it all day will have the best chance to win."

THE AMOUNT of methanol fuel allowed each car in the race, as well as the on-board load, was cut after the 1973 fatalities. Since then, the powerful machines have been limited to 280 gallons in the race and a 40-gallon tank in the car.

"I've heard about how dangerous this place can be," said the youthful Garza. "Everybody — the other drivers and the officials — tells me about the start. I've never even seen it, but I think that the rookies will be able to handle it.

Boudreaux, Snyder hold RHCC lead

Al Boudreaux and Larry Snyder forged into a one-stroke lead in the Ranchland Hills Country Club member-guest Stampede partnership golf tournament. Going into Sunday's final 18 holes, the tandem had a 68-67—135, one stroke in front of defending champions Jerry Wilenburg and James Wright, who had posted a pair of 68's, and Bill Lupardus and Wayne Youngs, who shot 67-69—136.

Jamie Winkel and Chip Walling, the first round leaders with a 67, slipped to a 70 to fall two strokes off the pace while Bill McWilliams and C.E. Boyd were third with a 138 after a 67 Saturday.

Gene McDaniel and John Carey continued to lead the first flight, following a 70 with a 71 for a 141, one stroke ahead of Jerry Blair and Jerry McNeil.

The day's most dramatic turnabout came in the fifth flight, where Ray Jenkins reeled off five birdies in shooting an even par 71 to combine with John Epley for a 68, rebounding from an opening day 78. The 146 vaulted the duo two strokes ahead of Bernard Lankford and Bill Rigney, who slipped to a 76 after a first round 72.

The tournament concludes today with the top three finishers in each flight sharing in the spoils.

Baseball gird$ for the Strike

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

If you're wondering about the prospects for a baseball strike this week, you might want to consider what Phil Garner has done about his transportation situation.

Garner is player representative of the Pittsburgh Pirates so he should be able to offer some insight into the situation. Asked about strike preparations, he gave a very simple and direct answer.

"I kept the Volkswagen," he said, "and sold the Mercedes."

Talk about biting the bullet.

"The Volkswagen is paid for. That's why I kept it," Garner explained.

Negotiators for the Major League Players Association and the 26 big league clubs were expected to be at the bargaining table much of the week as the countdown to the May 29 strike deadline began. Unless a settlement of the compensation issue is reached, the players have said they would not play after games of Thursday May 28.

COMPENSATION for clubs losing premium free agents to other teams was the only issue left unsettled last spring when the two sides battled down to the wire in contract negotiations. Now, 12 months later, the issue remains unsettled and threatens to cause the first mid-season strike in baseball history.

Management, whose chief spokesman is Ray Grebey, insists that it must have compensation for premium players lost through free agency. The union, headed by Marvin Miller, says that agreeing to the proposal which the owners have put into the contract, would severely damage the bargaining power of the players. The stalemate remains unresolved as the negotiating teams continue to meet with Kenneth Moffett of the Federal Mediation Service.

It was Moffett who helped the two sides hammer out an agreement just hours before the strike deadline a year ago. But a number of players are convinced he won't be able to pull it off again and that a strike is inevitable this time.

"My gut feeling," said Garner, "is a sick feeling, really." Garner, pitcher John Candelaria and third baseman Bill Madlock are all approaching free agency next November and would be directly affected by a compensation clause.

JOHN CURTIS of the San Diego Padres said he is preparing for a strike. "I would like to believe to the last minute that it will be resolved, but I'm not at all optimisitic."

Curtis received a rich free agent contract from the Padres two years ago, one the club might have been more hesitant to award if compensation had been attached to it.

"As grateful as I am to the Padres, I would like the players coming up behind me to have the same opportunity that I had," Curtis said. "I don't see the need for compensation. I regard it as a request on the part of the owners for the players to give up some of their freedom so the owners can be protected from themselves. I don't agree that free agency is a beast that threatens baseball."

The Padres, of course, have been on both sides of the compensation question. They would have received a player payoff for losing Dave Winfield, who signed a $23 million contract with the New York Yankees last December. You will be happy to know the slugging outfielder has not resorted to selling off automobiles yet.

"I really don't know if there will be a strike," he said. "Financially, I can handle it."

Winfield said he thought fans do not understand the issues.

"The fans only want to see good baseball," he said. "They only remember Babe Ruth waddling up to home plate, not complaining about anything. But the game has changed."

TED SIMMONS of the Milwaukee Brewers has an interesting view of the situation.

"I feel we will probably settle at the last minute like the last few times," he said. "Compensation is the only issue and the fans should be aware of it. I think we would have this thing settled if we were negotiating with the fans rather than the owners."

Gary Lavelle of the San Francisco Giants said the union is solid on the compensation issue.

"I don't know how many times we have to prove we're 100 percent united," he said. "Some of the older, more established players are the most militant, and that kind of surprises me because they're the ones who are set.

"It seems like the owners get a lot of sympathy from the public and I'm sure high salaries are a factor, but people are not aware of what's happening. The high salaries have nothing to do with compensation. The players can't force an owner to pay $1 million salary. That's something the owners created."

Allen Ripley of the Giants, who has less than two years of major league experience, agreed with Lavelle about the older players.

"I think it's great that the established players are taking the lead," he said. "They're fighting for us younger players. And they might be the ones with the most to lose. Most of them are making good money and their lifestyles probably would be affected more than mine."

Reggie Jackson of the Yankees, playing out the final year of a five-year free agent deal and looking forward to signing another one, said the owners want to cut down salaries.

"Fans don't know the Yankees made $30 million last year and the payroll is just over $3 million," he said. "Fans only get a slice of the pie. They're not able to relate to Reggie Jackson as a millionaire. But they can understand George Steinbrenner being one. Fans look at baseball as an amusement park."

If the ferris wheel does shut down, Ken Singleton of the Baltimore Orioles has a contingency plan.

"My kids got to go to Disneyland without me," he said. "I'll take them back, I like Mickey Mouse."

Williams runs wild in Dogbone skirmish

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Sports Writer

It was hard to keep track of the Whites and Purples Saturday night at Memorial Stadium in the annual Bill Mims scrimmage game as Midland High coach Pat Culpepper did a bit of shuffling with his backfield troops, but no one on hand will soon forget the name of Wesley Williams.

The senior to be broke runs of 69 and 75 yards for touchdowns to lead the Whites to a 33-15 victory. He carried 10 times on the night for 191 yards with 156 of the steps coming for the Whites in the second half on only four carries. He played for the Purple in the first half.

The 69-yarder came in the third period to give the White a 13-7 lead and the 75-yarder came as an answer to a Purple touchdown, which had given the Purples a 15-13 margin in the fourth period. Williams could have been had on both plays, but balance and pure speed turned defenders into weak-winged flies. If he gets into the open, there is no catching him and a try at the shoulders is never good enough with his balance.

Williams is the same runner that rushed for over 300 yards in one game last fall on the unbeaten junior varsity team. Grades kept him from a varsity berth last year, and MHS coaches are biting fingernails while hoping that won't be the case this fall.

Culpepper used essentially two sets of backfields in the game with one set running behind the No. 1 offensive line and the other with the No. 2 offensive line. The backs switched colors at half in order to see both work under the same conditions. That meant that the No. 1 defense faced both sets of backs as well. The No. 1 defense of the White held Williams to 35 yards rushing in the first half.

Fullback Byron Campbell also had a big night for the Dogs as they unveiled Culpepper's Dogbone offense for the first time this year. Campbell had 102 yards rushing on 17 carries. Campbell and Williams seem to like the Wishbone attack and they may be the meat on the Dogbone that Culpepper has been looking for.

The Purple started the scoring in the second period when fullback Bruce Sears, who had 54 yards on the night, broke into the clear on a 16-yard scamper to close a 85-yard march. Quarterback Scott Sears directed the drive with a run of 12 and two passes netting 19 yards to Wally Kleine and Bobby Gotovac.

The Whites came right back to tie it at 7-7 with a 75-yard march with Campbell getting the final seven. That drive was kept alive by Al Ochoa with a gain of five on a fourth down and three situation.

Williams did his thing for 69 yards in the third quarter for a 13-7 lead, but the Purple opened the fourth period with a 46-yard march and Campbell cashed in for the second time with a three-yard TD.

The Purples led 15-13 at that point, but Williams went for 75 yards on the next play. Then Jody Williamson recovered a Purple fumble at the 31 and Alex Mata got another White score from three yards out. With 15 seconds left in the game, freshman Terry McGowan ripped 34 yards for another White score and the final margin.

The scrimmage ended three weeks of spring training for the Bulldogs and they won't see the pads again until late August.

Winfield home run beats Cleveland, 3-2

NEW YORK (AP) — Dave Winfield's first Yankee Stadium home run was just your run-of-the-mill line drive. What was important to the big slugger was that it proved to be the margin of victory in the New York Yankees' 3-2 victory over the Cleveland Indians Saturday night.

"It was the game-winning RBI, that was the important thing," Winfield said after helping rookie Dave Righetti to his first major league victory.

"I've hit ball as well and I've hit ball farther. This one was a homer and the others were just at-bats. People know I can hit home runs, that's typical of the way I hit the ball (line drives)."

Winfield's two-run shot broke a 1-1 tie in the third inning and Righetti, making his first start since being recalled from the minors on Wednesday, protected the lead until the eighth, allowing just four hits.

Then Ron Davis came on to pick up a save, striking out the last four batters he faced, giving him 46 in 28 innings.

Cleveland turned in a sixth-inning triple play when second base umpire John Shulock made an interference call on a sliding Graig Nettles. The play started when Bucky Dent forced Barry Foote at third and Nettles tried to upset second baseman Alan Bannister after he took Toby Harrah's throw for the second out.

"That was definitely a rolling block slide and I've been instructed by the American League office that's an automatic interference and both players are out," said Shulock, who called Dent out because of Nettles' interference to complete the triple play.

Nettles pleaded innocent.

"Why doesn't that umpire go back to the minors where he belongs. I slid straight into the base, that's the way I was taught," Nettles said.

Royals win in 15

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Willie Wilson lined a two-out single to left field in the bottom of the 15th inning to score Dan Garcia from third base and lift the Kansas City Royals to a 1-0 victory over the Minnesota Twins Saturday night.

The victory snapped a four-game losing streak for Kansas City, which had gone a club-record 30 innings without scoring before Wilson's game-winning hit.

Bamberger rumored set to take Mets' pilot job

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Milwaukee Brewers' Manager Buck Rodgers says he wouldn't be surprised if his predecessor, George Bamberger, were named to manage the New York Mets.

"I wouldn't be surprised at all if George took over the Mets," Rodgers said. "I remember talking to him in spring training, and he didn't come right out and say it, but I got the impression that he might come back and manage.

"Plus the fact that George likes money, and I would imagine he could make a bundle in New York," Rodgers said.

Rodgers commented in an interview with The Milwaukee Journal.

The Mets, managed by Joe Torre, are in fifth place in the National League East. Torre is in the first year of a two-year contract.

Drillers nudge Cubs in 10, 5-4

TULSA—Midland left fielder Randy LaVigne was wondering what you had to do to be a hero around this place after the Cubs lost a 5-4 decision in 10 innings to the Tulsa Drillers here Saturday afternoon.

LaVigne singled with the bases loaded in the first inning to give Midland its first run. Then, in the eight, he poled a three-run homer over the left field fence to stake the Cubs to a 4-2 lead. In the ninth, after Tulsa had scored twice, LaVigne took Pete O'Brien's fly ball in left and gunned a strike to the plate to cut down a runner for a tie-preserving double play.

It all went for naught when Phil Klimas singled, took second on pitcher Tim Milner's wild pitch, moved to third on Mel Barrow's base hit and scored on Don Scott's sacrifice fly to left in the 10th.

The win squared the Texas League series at 1-1 going into today's game.

The game was marred by another "incident", similar to the fracas at Midland earlier in the season. In the second inning, Tulsa outfielder George Wright strode into a Joe McClain pitch and was hit in the shoulder. Wright started toward the mound with his bat raised, but catcher Mike Diaz caught him from behind and by that time both dugouts were in the middle of the diamond.

Plate umpire Mike Willman ejected Wright, commenting later, "He had the bat in his hand and had it high and was going for the pitcher."

"I had to feel pretty good," said Roy Hartsfield, referring to LaVigne's homer that gave Midland a 4-2 lead, "I felt comfortable going into the ninth."

But Rob Blyth was racked for six hits in 1 2/3 innings as Tulsa stormed back into a tie.

Mike Wright, who took over for McClain, pitched brilliantly in keeping the Cubs in the game.

It was Midland's fifth loss in the last 12 games. Four have been by one run, another by two and three have come in extra innings.

In today's third game, Randy Clark, 0-5, goes for the Cubs while Tony Fossas, 1-4, will hurl for Tulsa.

Rutherford says there's no way to prep for 1st 500

By SHAV GLICK
(c) 1981, The Los Angeles Times

INDIANAPOLIS — The first time a driver starts the Indianapolis 500, says three-time winner Johnny Rutherford, "It's like starting World War III."

"There's no way you can prepare for the feeling you get when the cars head into that first turn for the first time," Rutherford said while awaiting Sunday's 65th running of the race. "No matter how many races you've been in before, or how many laps you take in practice, you're just not ready for it."

"You feel like you're threading a needle. The track is only 50 feet wide and you can't see. You can't even see the turn. It's damn unnerving even for the 15th time, much less the first. The best thing I can say to a rookie is to be ready to hold his breath until he gets into the backstretch."

The worst part is the waiting. After the track closes at 6 p.m. on thelast Sunday of qualifying, the drivers don't get in their cars except for a two-hour period Thursday. All the rest of the week is waiting, waiting and waiting — and thinking about that first turn.

"From the moment you qualify for your first Indy race you think about the start," said Mario Andretti, the 1969 winner who since has won the World Formula One championship. "Nothing is like your first turn at Indianapolis. Absolutely nothing."

Ten rookie drivers will face that sensation Sunday, the same number as last year. Having so many first-year drivers in the field caused much anxiety among drivers last year, and this year the feeling is much the same.

"I'm concerned," said Andretti, who will start in the last row although his STP-Patrick Wildcat is one of the fastest cars in the race. Andretti was in Belgium for a Formula One race during qualifications and old friend Wally Dallenbach qualified for him. Because a different driver qualified the car, Andretti must start at the rear.

In the same fix is Tim Richmond, last year's Rookie of the Year. Richmond, after being bumped from the race in his own car, rented a 2-year-old Parnelli from A.J. Foyt that was qualified by George Snider. He and Andretti share the 11th and last row with Jerry Karl, who was reinstated into the race after his protest that Jerry Sneva qualified illegally was upheld.

Karl survived a final appeal by Sneva's car owner, Rolla Vollstedt, when the stewards ruled Friday morning that Karl, and not Sneva, would start.

"There are some rookies I don't even know," Andretti said. "I don't even know their numbers. I don't have any idea how they drive or what their characteristics are in a race. It's hard enough to drive up through a bunch of drivers you know. To tell the truth, there's only a handful of veterans I trust."

But this year's crop of rookies, in Rutherford's view, is a cut above the average.

The rookies, in order of qualifying speed, are Mexico's Josele Garza, Bill Alsup, Kevin Cogan, Bob Lazier, Australia's Geoff Brabham, Scott Brayton, Peter Halsmer, Michael Chandler, Tony Bettenhausen and Tom Klausler.

"I'm impressed with the questions they ask," Rutherford, a veteran of 17 Indy races, said. "They seem to be receptive to information from the veterans. We had a meeting the other day with Al Unser, Pancho Carter and myself and after talking with them I felt better about Sunday. Every one of them seems to have a heads up attitude."

Rutherford, who starts fifth, is alongside Garza, the year's fastest rookie and the first Mexican to qualify for the 500.

OC captures Juco track title

SAN ANGELO, Texas (AP) — Odessa College of Texas won both relays and three individual events, piled up 100 points and romped to a one-sided victory at the 40th annual National Junior College Athletic Association track and field championships Saturday night.

Odessa took the 400 meter relay in a time of 40.30 and the 1,600 meter relay with 3:06.81. Ruffell Mitchell, named the outstanding men's division performer, won the 400-meter dash in 46.20 and the long jump with a wind-aided 25-8¾.

Mitchell was one of three double winners. Wilon Kigen of South Plains won the 5,000 and 10,000 meter runs, and Brian Muir of Scottsdale, Ariz., who won the shot put and discus.

Maryland leads in IC4A track

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Favored Maryland led a field of some 100 teams with 36 points Saturday after the first of the two-day IC4A Track and Field Championships at Villanova Stadium. Boston University was second with 19, followed by Southern Connecticut with 16, Princeton and Penn each at 14, Northeastern 11, Seton Hall with 10 and Fairleigh-Dickinson 6.

Champions crowned Saturday were Dan Hegarty of Boston University with a 208-foot, 2-inch hammer throw; Jim Dawson of Northeastern, the shot at 193-11¼; Anthony Philip of Seton Hall, the long jump at 25-11; and Ray Treacy of Providence, the 10,000-meter run in 29:30.9.

Bradshaw's PhD protested by alumni

RUSTON, La. (AP) — A small plane bombarded Louisiana Tech's commencement exercises Saturday with about 1,000 leaflets protesting the award of an honorary Ph.D. to alumnus Terry Bradshaw, quarterback of the Pittsburgh Steelers. The leaflets, which purportedly came from irate Tech alumni, fell from a gray, twin engine plane that flew over the outdoor ceremonies.

"This is a protest against the practice and policy of conferring honorary degrees," the leaflets stated. "Perhaps a successful career in pro football is the most expeditious route to a degree awarded by Louisiana Tech and the board of trustees.

Texas beats Lamar to gain NCAA finals

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Texas scored two ninth-innings runs, including the game-winner on a two-out throwing error, to take a 3-2 win over Lamar in the NCAA baseball central regionals Saturday night.

Lamar, 54-25, will play Stanford, a 2-1 Saturday winner over Brigham Young, in an elimination game Sunday. No.5 Texas, 57-8-1, will play the BYU-Lamar winner Sunday night.

Lamar pitcher Tony Mack baffled the Longhorn hitters until the bottom of the ninth. The Cardinals scored two first-inning runs and Mack, who lost a one-hitter to Texas this year, looked strong enough to make them stand.

Texas pulled to within a run in the seventh when designated hitter Mark Reynolds homered to right.

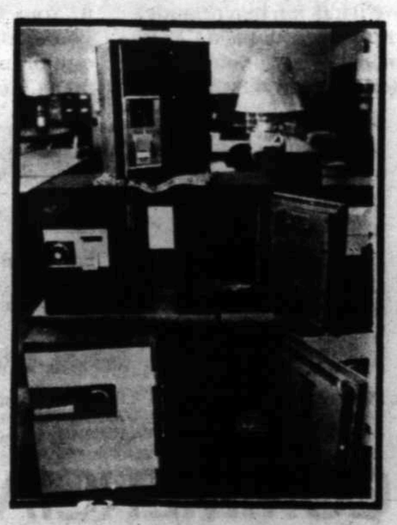

Reynolds also started the ninth-inning rally with a one-out single to left. Catcher Burk Goldthorn followed with a twisting drive to left that dribbled out of Jeff Kennedy's glove as he dived for the ball. Jim Tompkins, running for Reynolds, wound up on third and Goldthorn made it to second.

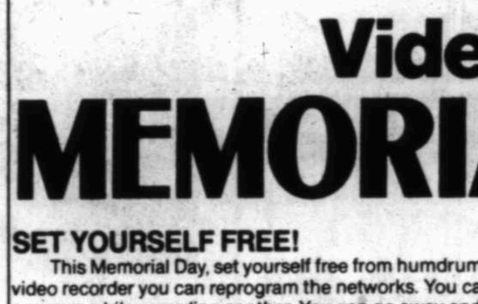

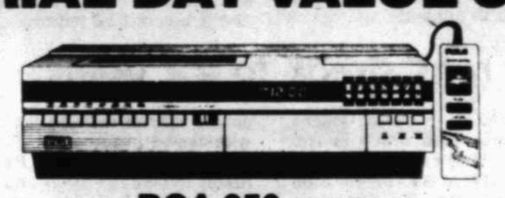

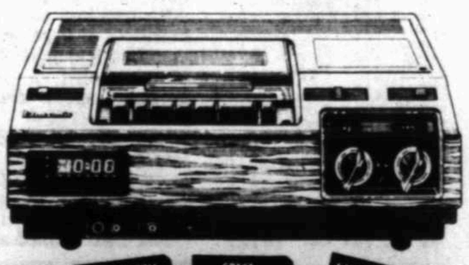

Mack intentionally walked Randy Richards, and pinch-hitter Kirk Killingworth knocked in the tying run with a sacrifice fly to right.

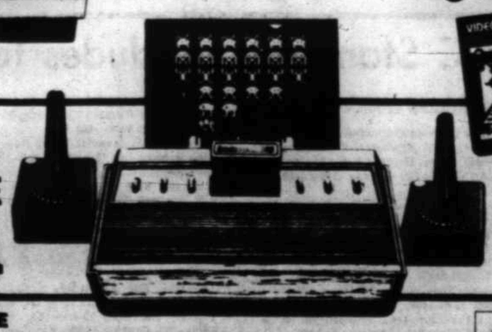

Centerfielder Randy Day, a last-inning substitute, hit a slow bouncer to third baseman Kim Christenson. But Christen's throw to first skipped by Lew Surratt and Goldthorn scored the winning run.

Mike Withrow, who relieved Texas starter Robert Culley in the sixth, pitched 31-3 scoreless innings to get the win.

SHSU wins

CONROE, Texas (AP) — Renee Southers' seventh-inning single scored the only run of the game as Sam Houston beat Emporia State of Kansas 1-0 to win the NAIA women's fastpitch softball championship.

Trillo triple keys Phils win

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Manny Trillo tripled home two runs, then scored the winning run on Garry Maddox's sacrifice fly as the Philadelphia Phillies rallied for three runs in the eighth inning and defeated the Pittsburgh Pirates 6-4 Saturday night.

Mike Schmidt, who hit his 14th homer in the ninth for an insurance run, led off the eighth with a single off reliever Enrique Romo and went to third on a single by Pete Rose. Romo was replaced by Kent Tekulve, 0-3, who gave up the triple by Trillo and the sacrifice fly by Maddox. It was Tekulve's 10th consecutive loss over two seasons.

Mike Proly, 1-0, picked up the victory while Ron Reed got his second save by pitching the eighth and ninth.

The Pirates took a 3-2 lead with two out in the sixth. Omar Moreno tripled and scored when Steve Nicosia followed with a hit that fell in front of Phillies center fielder Maddox and skipped by him for another triple.

Pittsburgh had tied the score against Phillies starter Nino Espinosa earlier in the inning when Mike Easler singled, continued to second on an error by Maddox and scored on Phil Garner's broken-bat single. Garner was thrown out attempting to steal before Moreno's triple.

Dillard, DeJesus spark Cubs

CHICAGO (AP) — Pinch hitter Steve Dillard and Ivan DeJesus delivered the tying and lead runs with run-scoring singles in the seventh inning off reliever Woodie Fryman Saturday, leading the Chiacgo Cubs to a 6-4 victory over the Montreal Expos.

The Expos had taken a 3-2 lead in the top of the seventh when rookie Tim Raines stole home for the first time in his career. It was his third steal of the game and 38th of the season. Raines beat out a bunt, stole second and went to third on a bunt single by Rodney Scott before they pulled a double steal.

But with one out in the bottom of the seventh, Jerry Morales singled and Ken Reitz was hit by a pitch from loser Ray Burris, 2-4. Fryman relieved and got pinch hitter Hector Cruz to pop out before giving up the RBI singles to Cruz and DeJesus.

Cards steal one from Mets

ST.LOUIS (AP) — The St. Louis Cardinals stole four bases and took advantage of six walks to score six times in the first three innings, including a two-run single by Ken Oberkfell, and went on to an 8-2 victory over the New York Mets Saturday night.

Winner Bob Forsch, 4-2, was lifted after two straight New York hits in the seventh. Jim Kaat recorded his third save. Pete Falcone, 1-2, who walked four and lasted just 1 2-3 innings in his first start of the season, was the loser.

The Cardinals scored three runs in the first inning. Oberkfell delivered a two-run single that followed three walks by Falcone and Gene Tenace added an RBI double.

St. Louis added another tally in the second on a walk, Tony Scott's forceout, a stolen base and Keith Hernandez' single.

The Cardinals added two more in the third. Oberkfell drew a leadoff walk from Tom Hausman and later scored on a single by Mike Ramsey. After Forsch sacrificed, Ramsey went to third on a wild pitch by Ed Lynch, the Mets' third pitcher.

Braves snap losing streak

ATLANTA (AP) — Rufino Linares belted a three-run homer and delivered a game-winning, 11th-inning single Saturday night as the Atlanta Braves snapped a five-game losing streak with a 7-6 victory over the San Diego Padres.

Linares' 11th-inning single to right scored Rafael Ramirez, who had doubled with one out off Gary Lucas, 3-5, the Padres' fifth pitcher.

The victory went to Rick Camp, 4-1, who hurled three scoreless innings in relief.

The Braves tied the score 6-6 with a run in eighth. Dale Murphy led off with a single, was sacrificed to second by Chris Chambliss, took third on Glenn Hubbard's fly ball and scored on a wild pitch by John Littlefield.

The Padres jumped on Atlanta starter Gaylord Perry for the six runs and 10 hits in 2 1-3 innings.

Howe runs streak to 22 games

HOUSTON (AP) — Cesar Cedeno and Alan Ashby both drove in two runs and Art Howe extended his hitting streak to 22 games as the Houston Astros defeated the San Francisco Giants 5-3 Saturday night.

Cedeno staked the Astros to an early 2-0 lead with a sacrifice fly in the first inning and RBI single in the third, scoring Terry Puhl each time.

Puhl walked, stole second and was sacrificed to third prior to scoring in the first inning. Puhl doubled and went to third on Craig Reynolds' grounder before scoring the second time.

Houston chased San Francisco starter Ed Whitson, 1-5, with two more runs in the fifth inning on a double by Ashby and a single by relief pitcher Bobby Sprowl.

Jose Cruz singled and went to second on Howe's walk in the fifth, and with two out, scored on Ashby's double. Whitson then walked Rafael Landestoy to load the bases and bring up Sprowl, who singled to score Howe.

The Giants scored a run in the fifth when Enos Cabell doubled and came home on Darrell Evans' single.

San Francisco pinch-hitter Jim Wohlford walked to open the sixth, went to second and third on singles by Johnne LeMaster and Rennie Stennett and scored on Cabell's sacrifice fly.

Ashby got his second RBI with a single in the seventh after Howe had singled and took second on a passed ball. LeMaster singled in the eighth, went to second on a walk and scored the Giants' third run on Cabell's single.

Reliever Frank LaCorte, 2-1, was the winner.

Oakland wins over Jays in 15

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Mitchell Page raced home from third base on Rickey Henderson's shallow bases-loaded sacrifice fly in the 15th inning Saturday, giving the Oakland A's a 3-2 victory over the Toronto Blue Jays.

The A's loaded the bases with none out. Page drew a leadoff walk from Luis Leal, 2-5, Rob Picciolo singled and Shooty Babitt beat out a perfect bunt down the third base line.

With the outfield pulled in, Henderson hit a fly ball to center fielder Barry Bonnell and Page slid across the plate as the throw was up the third base line.

Jeff Jones, 3-1, who came in to get the last out as Toronto tied the score with two runs in the ninth, went the final 6 1-3 innings, the longest stint of his major league career.

Oakland starter Matt Keough took a three-hit shutout into the ninth when Toronto rallied to tie the game. Al Woods led off the inning with an infield hit and Otto Velez ripped a line drive to left on which Henderson appeared to make a diving catch. However, it was ruled a trap by second base umpire Larry McCoy and A's Manager Billy Martin argued to no avail.

Bob Owchinko replaced Keough and was greeted with a single by John Mayberry, scoring Woods and sending Velez to third. Velez scored the tying run on the inning's second controversial play.

Rick Bosetti ran for Mayberry and when Lloyd Moseby hit a grounder to second, Bosetti went out of the baseline, knocking over shortstop Fred Stanley on the force at second. Moseby was called out at first on the interference, completing a double play, as Velez scored.

Rockay noses out Downs win

RUIDOSO DOWNS, N.M. (AP) — A filly named Rockay squeezed out a nose win past A Smooth Bug to take Saturday's $32,082 Consolation of the Kansas Quarter Horse Derby.

The winning share amounted to $6,783, which pushed Rockay's career money line up to $68,865. In 1979, Rockay was purchased in the All-American Yearling Sale at Ruidoso for $18,500.

The Derby Consolation was a tooth-and-nail struggle. Rockay, running as a 6-5 favorite, broke alertly but had to move for all she was worth in order to retain a slim advantage.

A Smooth Bug earned $4,748 for second with mutuel payoffs of $3,80, $3.20. Croupier finished third and banked $3,617. The show price was $3.80.

Fin & Feather

EDITOR'S NOTE — This is the first of a two-part series involving sharks.

Since moving to San Antonio, only 2 1/2 hours from the Texas Gulf Coast, the big talk around here centers on shark fishing. And after talking with people who were on a boat last August and captured what was then a new state record tiger shark, it prompted me to research sharks. We have already taken one shark trip to Galveston, and boated a 482-pound hammerhead and several smaller hammers and have future trips planned for huge sharks off Port Aransas.It should be interesting, just as the facts about sharks themselves.

GIANT SHARK—Both these pretty ladies had a hand in landing this 832-record tiger shark off the coast of Port Aransas lst August. Ginny Kollman, left, senior editor of the Texas Sportsman Magazine of San Antonio lent all the support to petite Susan Kret Bare who actually caught the fish. In today's Fin and Feather, we'll take a look at the mystifying shark.

OF ALL the creatures that roam the seas, the most hated and feared is the shark. A prehistoric predator that has fired man's fantasies for thousands of years, the shark was studied by scholars as early as Aristotle who made precise notes on its anatomy and behavior.

The best available evidence suggest that the shark evolved roughly into its present form 100 million years ago. Watching a modern shark—perferably through the protective glass walls of an aquarium—is like looking down the corridor of evolution into the far-distant past.

Designed for the fray of may millions of years ago, the shark is superbly suited to the purpose of attacking and eating. In most species the mouth is positioned well back in the head, beneath the snout, an arrangement that has led to the belief that sharks must turn their on backs or sides to bite. This is not true. Sharks frequently attack from below, angling the snout upward and over the target, which then can be ravaged by the animal's fearsome teeth. It is this unusual dental equipment that sets the shark apart from most other carnivors of land apd sea. Shark dentures are imbedded in the gums to form four to six rows—as many as 20 in some species—of razor-sharp teeth. The teeth move steadily forward as they increase in size, falling out when they are used and being replaced by those moving up from behind. It has been estimated that a single tiger shark may produce, use and shed as many as 24,000 teeth in a 10-year period. A shark thus might be described as one massive conglomerate of teeth.

THAT BITE has a telltale crescent shape; it is jagged and, depending on the size and ferocity of the shark, often very deep. Besides people, the shark may attack and devour just about anything that comes within range; dolphins, turtles, sea lions, birds, fish, land enimals that have fallen into or taken to the water. The shark itself has few natural enemies as it has few natural friends. The killer whale and the swordfish will sometimes give pursuit to a shark, but under normal circumstances it is preyed upon by its own kind, and the ususal fate of an aging or infirm shark is to be eaten by other sharks.

With its insatiable appetite, the killer shark has no hesitation about swallowig dead or inanimate objects. One shark killed off an Australian dock had in its stomach half a ham, several legs of mutton, the head and forelegs of a bulldogs with a rope around its neck, a quantity of horseflesh and a ship's scraper. Another, taken in the Adriatic Sea, contaned three overcoats (but not the wearers), a raincoat and an automobile license plate. To accommodate such weird meals, the shark is equipped with a distensible stomach that can expand to several times its normal size. What is more remarkable is that a shark can apparently store food or foreign objects for weeks at a time without digesting them. Some ichthyologists have suggested that the Biblical Jonah was swallowed and later regurgitated not by a whale but by a large shark.

SHARKS have a very finely tuned sensory system for finding food. Vibrations from an animal in the water as far as 600 feet way are picked up by nerve endings that extend along the animal's body from snout to tail. This is known as the "lateral line", and the vibrations may register on the shark's brain as sound. Once the sensation registers, the shark can bring into play one of the keenest senses of smell in the animal kingdom. It can sniff out an ounce of fish blood in a million ounces of water. Notoriously nearsighted, sharks are believed to rely on their eyes only when they come quite close to their prey. They begin circling at about 10 feet and, depending on the speciesand momentary inclinations, may or not may close in for an attack.

In our next column, we'll look at different species, talk about shark attacks on humans and what danger is in store for swimmers, etc.

Benitez knocks out Hope with one punch

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Wilfred Benitez became the first fighter to win a title in three divisions in more than 40 years Saturday with a stunning one-punch, 12th-round knockout over Maurice Hope for the World Boxing Council super welterweight championship.

Benitez hit Hope square in the face with a jarring right hand to win at 1:56 of the 12th round in a nationally televised fight from the Sports Pavillion at Caesars Palace. The referee didn't even bother to count.

Benitez, 22, of Puerto Rico, virtually finished the fight in the sixth round, then toyed with Hope, of England, for the next six rounds before the final telling blow.

Yellows bite big at Oak Creek

BY ROD N. REELE

A heavy band of thundershowers had the tributary creek banks brimming over and the guage register at Oak Creek Lake registered 2.3 inches, but, outside of catfish, it did not make any appreciable difference on the fishing productivity.

However, the run on yellow cat was one of the best seen this spring with local resident M.E. Jeffcoat topping the list with a 59-pounder. Anthony York, Odessa, took a 23 pounder on trotline and Midland's Terry Korthauer took a 26-pounder while innumerable "throw backs" under 20 pounds were reported.

Bream action also is heavier than it has been in some years while big crappie and black bass apparently have gone into hibernation.

The Florida Bass in the hatchery have not yet as spawned, probably, say those in the know, because water temperature has not reached land maintained the right temperature...

MINI REPORTS from elsewhere:

Texoma—Sand bass hottest thing going, surfacing in early morning and going for lures such as Pico Pops, Hell Raiser and Podfans.. Stripers biting the dam on cut baits and Catfish are grabbing stink baits while crappie and black bass are going for the traditional minnow and worms.

Lake Whiteney—Stripers busy...the rest????

Toledo Bend—Crappie hitting in 12 feet on jigs and minnows. Bass taking worms and jigs off moss beds. Stripers go for jigs and deep running crank balls.

Millions spent on 500, but consumers benefit

By HANK LOWENKRON
AP Sports Writer

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Millions of dollars are spent each year in the effort to produce a winner in the Indianapolis 500. And there are those who would say that that is a big extravagance.

But veterans at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway say that consumers who buy passenger automobiles also benefit from the race for victory.

"The biggest passenger car advantage in auto racing has been through research in general efficency," said Bill Dredge, who came to Indianapolis in 1957 as a racing writer and now is active in public relations for Pennzoil and defending champion Johnny Rutherford's team.

"The tires we're currently marketing for passenger tires have come from tests and experimenting we've done in the past," said Leo Mehl, director of racing for Goodyear, which produces the tires used in all types of auto racing.

"Traction and stress pressure information learned through the racing program reduces the cost to consumers and leads to production of more effective tires," he said.

Future cars may not look like the sleek Penskes, Chaparrals or Wildcats that will be in Sunday's race, and they won't use the alcohol type fuel that racers use. Methanol is more expensive than gasoline and harder to produce.

But Dredge said that racing developments can lead to savings at the gasoline pump where prices keep climbing.

"Fuel consumption is important to today's auto consumer with gasoline prices climbing," said Dredge. "The older, bigger engines that ate up fuel quickly are unwanted and smaller engines that conserve fuel are desirable. Auto developers are looking to auto racing's work on developing lighter, more efficent engines."

One of the major innovations for Indy takes credit is the use of the rear-view mirror, which was used in the first race at the Speedway by Ray Harroun when he won in 1911 with an average speed of approximately 74.6 mph.

Disc brakes also moved from auto racing to the passenger car.

"There was no push for the automotive industry to use disc brakes because drum brakes did the job," Dredge said. "But, at Indy and other race tracks it was proven that disc brakes did the job much better."

"Improved suspension systems, independent wheel suspensions, more efficient shock absorbers and torsion bar springing are only a few of the developments produced through Indy racing," said Bob Laycock, the veteran historian for the race.

In 1953, Bill Vukovich began a string of Indy 500 victories on Monroe shocks that have been interrupted only three times since then. Dick Arend, director of racing for Monroe Shock Absorbers, said that within 10 years, a street version of the same shocks used by Vukovich on his car were appearing on passenger cars.

Baseball talks move to neutral site this week

(Compiled from R-T wire services)

Kenneth Moffett, federal mediator trying to bring the two sides together in the continuing baseball labor dispute, got one thing settled Saturday. "Next week, we'll meet at a neutral site," said Moffett, following a 90-minute session between the negotiating teams in the Manhattan offices of the Major League Players Association. That was about the only progress reported as both Marvin Miller, executive director of the union, and Ray Grebey, chief negotiator for management, declined comment on the talks....

Former Arizona State punter Kevin Rutledge has been ordered to pay the state Board of Regents $20,000 in legal fees following his unsuccessful $2.2 million damage suit against his former college football coach, Frank Kush, although a judge denied requests from three defense lawyers that Rutledge pay a total of $149,000 in legal fees...

Michael Whiting, starting fullback at Florida State, was sentenced to one year's probation on two counts of battery for his part in a bar fight in which he was charged with striking two Tallahassee men...

Morgan Shepherd, reigning Late Model Sportsman champion, raced to an easy victory Saturday in the Mello Yello 300 at Charlotte Motor Speedway. Trailing Shepherd to the finish line were Dale Earnhardt, Ricky Rudd, Geoff Bodine and Mark Martin... under the yellow as the result of a spin by Harry Lee Hill.

Regina Marsikova defeated Sandy Collins 6-2, 6-2 and Ivanna Madruga beat Dianne Fromholtz 6-3, 6-2 to gain the Berlin tennis finals today... At Munich, France's Christophe Roger-Vasselin battled 92 minutes Saturday to defeat West Germany's Rolf Gehring 6-4, 7-6 and gain the Bavarian International finals against Chris Lewis... At Rome, Victor Pecci of Paraguay upset top-seeded Guillermo Vilas of Argentina 7-6, 6-4, 7-6 Saturday and advances to today's finals against Jose-Luis Clerc, a 7-5, 6-0, 6-2 winner over Ivan Lendl...

John Robertson's penalty goal gave Scotland a 1-0 victory over England Saturday in a British Championship soccer match, extending England's worst-ever run in international soccer. England has now failed to win its last five international games and has not scored a goal for 422 minutes. Scotland finished the championship with four points from its three games, but the series was incomplete because both England and Wales refused to travel to play Northern Ireland in troubled Belfast...

Mike Koranicki, hampered by a closed left eye most of the fight, scored a unanimous 10-round decision over Argentina's Domingo D'Elia in a 10-round bout at Welkom, South Africa...

Australia, led by Lindy Goggin and Jane Lock, came from behind and beat Japan by eight strokes Saturday in the Third Asian Ladies Amateur Golf Team Championship at Ashoh, Japan...

Ireland trounced South Africa, 54-3, at East London, Eng., for its second win in three matches on it current tour...

Former major leaguer Doug Ault's two-run double paced Hanshin Tigers over Hiroshima Toyo Carp 2-1 Saturday in Japanese baseball...

Midland, Lee athletes continue to reap rewards

Awards and rewards continue to flow for both Midland High and Midland Lee athletes as the school year winds to a close.

Midland High's Herbert Johnson, who has signed to play with NIT champion Tulsa in basketball next year, has been named as a first team All-America choice by the National High School Coaches Association. Seventy-five basketballers from across the nation earned the honor from the 765,000 high school students who participated in basketball, or about one out of every 10,000.

"To my knowledge, Herbert is the first Midlander to ever earn this honor," MHS basketball coach Jack Stephenson said. "Herbert was honorable mention last year and I think several kids from Midland have had that honor before, but no one that I know of was ever first team."

Johnson has also been selected to play in the North-South All-Star game this summer in Dallas during the Texas High School Coaches Association meeting in late July.

Midland Lee's Keith Brown, who was All-District on both offense and defense in football, has also been chosen by the THSCA for the North-South football game this summer in Dallas. Brown is headed for Oklahoma State on a football scholarship.

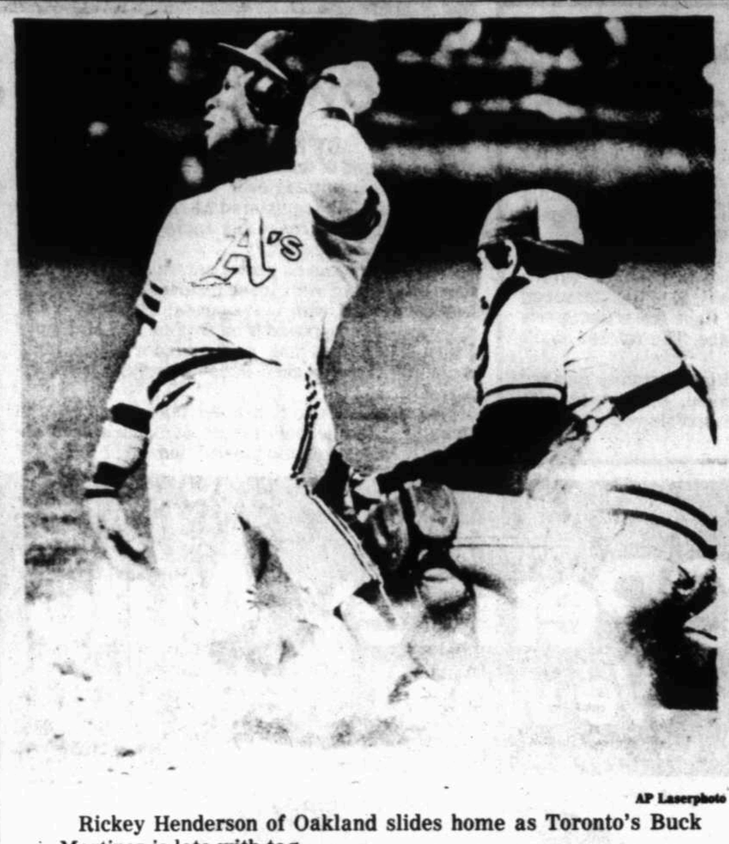

Midland High sophomore James Beverley has also earned membership in the National Federation of High School track and field honor roll after posting a 1:52.1 in the 800 meters at Austin during the state track meet.

Beverley's time was the fastest time ever recorded in that event by a 15-year-old. He placed third in the race, but no other 15-year-old has ever run that fast.

117 takes 1st in MCC

Jim Crowder, Vic Zoller, Wes Perry and Wayne Esslinger teamed up for a 117 to win the Fourman Team Two Lowball golf tournament Saturday at Midland Country Club.

In second at 119 was the team of Steve Merritt, Gene Wentworth, Will Hall, and Cliff Wilderspin while third went to Charles Koch, Charles Corbett, Courtney Clark, Hal Finney 120. In fourth Richard McMillan, Alan Meyers, Bob Henry, Darrell Faris tied at 121 and won card playoff over Andy Shapira, Johnny Warren, Martin Allday and Robert Caudle.

Craig Stadler tumbles into three-way deadlock

DUBLIN, Ohio (AP) - Craig Stadler was threatening to run away and hide from the field when consecutive double bogeys sent him reeling back into a three-way tie for the top and set up a multiple-man race in Sunday's final round of the Memorial golf tournament.

"I got what I deserved on those two holes," Stadler said Saturday after his trips into the water and the woods had stripped him of sole control of the top spot.

He shrugged his hefty shoulders and forced the hint of a smile through his moustache.

"It was just your basic disaster," he said after requiring 13 strokes to play the 14th and 15th holes.

And, instead of a Stadler rout, it set up a race involving some 20 men — that many are within four strokes of the lead — over the final 18 holes.

Stadler was only happy that he didn't have to play them immediately.

"If I'd stayed out there any longer, there's no telling what would have happened," he said.

"I've just got to get that out of my mind."

Stadler, still chunky but 40 pounds lighter than when he won two titles last season, finished with a one-under-par 71 and a 212 total, four strokes under par on Jack Nicklaus' grindingly difficult, 7,116-yard Muirfield Village Golf Club course.

He was tied for the lead with Tom Kite and 41-year-old former Masters champion George Archer. Kite, a winner in Florida earlier this season, and Archer each had a 69 in the warm, hazy weather.

Tom Watson, the British Open and Masters champion, pulled his game together for a string of three consecutive birdies that produced a 69 and left him one stroke back at 213.

"The key to tomorrow is getting off to a good start," he said. "If you get off to a bad start, this course is too difficult to make up much ground."

He was tied with second-round leader Keith Fergus, Ben Crenshaw and D.A. Weibring. Fergus slipped to a 74 while Weibring and Crenshaw had 70s.

Jack Renner, Mike Sullivan, Bob Murphy and Canadian Dan Halldorson were at 214, putting 11 golfers within two strokes of each other going into Sunday's final round of the chase for a $63,000 first prize. Renner had a 69, Sullivan a 70, Murphy a 71 and Halldorson a 74.

Kathy Hite opens lead

CORNING, N.Y. (AP) — Kathy Hite, changing her luck with an 80-foot birdie putt, fashioned her third straight under-par round Saturday to open a 3-stroke lead with a 6-under-par total of 210 in the $125,000 Corning Classic women's golf tournament.

Rookie Patty Sheehan, the first-day leader with a 66, fired an even-par 72 for second place with 213 in the Ladies Professional Golf Association event.

Cathy Morse, who shared the 36-hole lead with Sheehan and Hite, and Kyle O'Brien, another rookie, were third with 214 totals, while Jan Ferraris, Debbie Austin and Nancy Lopez-Melon were bunchd five shots off the pace at 215.

Sandra Spuzich, JoAnne Carner and Shelley Hamlin, whose 4-under 68 was the best round of the afternoon, were at even-par 216.

Hite, 32, a seventh-year tour veteran, never hws won over $14,100 in a single year and has just $3,488 in 12 tournaments this season. But she shot herself into the driver's seat for the $18,750 first prize with a hot 69 on the 6,286-yard Corning Country Club course.

She picked up two strokes on Morse and Sheehan, her co-leaders at the tournament's midway point, with her long putt on No.13, a 420-yard par-4 with a two-tiered green.

Sheehan and Morse both bogeyed the 13th to rise to 2-under-par while Hite was dropping to 7-under.

Red Sox beat Brewers again

Orioles clout Tigers, 9-2

DETROIT (AP) — Doug DeCinces belted a pair of two-run homers, his first of the season, and Eddie Murray had a solo shot Saturday to back the nine-hit pitching of Mike Flanagan and Sammy Stewart as the Baltimore Orioles romped to a 9-2 victory over the Detroit Tigers.

John Lowenstein hit a two-out single in the Baltimore second and scored on DeCinces' first homer, a shot into the left field seats on the first pitch from loser Dave Rozema, 2-4.

In the Baltimore fourth, Ken Singleton hit a leadoff triple and scored on Murray's grounder.

DeCinces singled to start the Baltimore fifth. He went to second on a wild pitch, took third on a grounder and came home on a single by Al Bumbry. Murray led off the Baltimore sixth with his fourth homer, chasing Rozema.

Rick Dempsey doubled in the Baltimore seventh and scored on a single by Rich Dauer, who went 4-for-5. Bumbry, who walked, went to third on the play and scored on a single by Singleton. DeCinces hit his second homer off Detroit reliever Aurelio Lopez in the eighth with Gary Roenicke aboard via a double.

Sox romp

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Dave Schmidt lined a solo homer, Dave Stapleton drove in three runs and Tony Perez hit a two-run single, leading Boston over the Milwaukee Brewers 8-1 Saturday for the Red Sox' sixth consecutive victory.

The Red Sox upped a 1-0 lead to 3-0 in the second. Schmidt led off with his second major league homer. A single by Reid Nichols, a bunt hit by Jerry Remy and a walk loaded the bases and Stapleton hit a sacrifice fly.

Remy's single extended his hitting streak to 16 consecutive games, tying Jerry Mumphrey of the New York Yankees for the American League high this season.

Boston's Mike Torrez, 4-2, carried a three-hitter into the bottom of the sixth when rain delayed play for 56 minutes. When the game resumed, singles by Jim Gantner, Yount and Cooper filled the bases with one out. Mark Clear relieved and a run scored on Gorman Thomas' grounder.

Stanford duo gains NCAA final

ATHENS, Ga. (AP) — Stanford teammates Jimmy Gurfein and Tim Mayotte battled their way Saturday into the finals of the singles competition in the 97th annual NCAA tennis championships.

Mayotte, the No.4 seed and the only ranked player remaining in the tournament, defeated Drew Gitlin of Southern Methodist 6-2, 6-4, to advance to the finals.

Gurfein had little trouble in disposing of Nduka Odizor of Houston, 6-1, 6-3.

When Gurfein and Mayotte meet Sunday for the title, it will be the first time since 1974 that two players from the same team have met in the finals. That year, John Whitlinger of Stanford defeated teammate Chico Hagley for the NCAA crown.

Riots rock prisons in two states

By The Associated Press

Scores of officers shielded by clouds of bullets and tear gas swept through two prisons Saturday to end uprisings by youthful offenders in Michigan and high-risk criminals in Nevada.

Meanwhile, inmates of the world's largest walled prison, the Southern Michigan Prison in Jackson, were back in their cells after a day of rioting that officials called the worst in almost three decades.

Three guards taken hostage at the Maximum Security Prison near Carson City, Nev., were released unharmed, while 42 inmates and four prison guards were hurt before Michigan authorities regained control of the prison and the state reformatory in Ionia.

Nevada authorities immediately launched an investigation to determine how the inmate accused of taking the hostages at Carson City got a gun into his cell block.

In Michigan, prison officials began the laborious process of assessing damages and making plans for repairs.

A meeting between authorities and inmates was scheduled in Jackson so prisoners could air complaints that led to rioting by more than 800 convicts.

The Nevada uprising, which involved 23 inmates, some of them on Death Row, ended before dawn when guards spraying bullets from automatic weapons pushed theprisonersback into their cells.

The captive guards were freed after 10 hours when prison officials agreed to give inmate David "Bang Bang" Wayne a sedative and let him talk to his girlfriend.

Wayne, who was serving a 20-year term for escape and attempted murder, had been accused twice before of taking hostages. He had been cleared Friday of charges in one incident after another inmate testified that he had forced Wayne to participate.

The guards were seized Friday evening after a brief rampage in which an inmate was beaten and stabbed, another convict beaten and windows and furniture broken.

The two injured inmates were accused on Easter Sunday of taking nine gospel singers and a prison chaplain hostage. The 10 were released unharmed, but prison spokesman Steve Robinson said the attacks may have been "reprisals because the other inmates didn't like the hostage-taking of religious people."

In all, 43 people have been taken hostage at the Nevada prison in the past year. None was injured.

In Ionia, Dale Foltz, warden of the Michigan Reformatory, said his youthful charges would be responsible for cleaning up the mess left by their eight-hour rampage.

That melee ended Saturday when guards and state troopers, firing choking tear gas, herded the inmates back into their cells.

Four guards received minor injuries during the incident. Eighteen prisoners were wounded, one critically, in fighting among the inmates, who range in age from 15 to 23.

Authorities said that uprising began when fights broke out during an exercise session in the prison yard. Guard who tried to stop the fights were robbed of their keys.

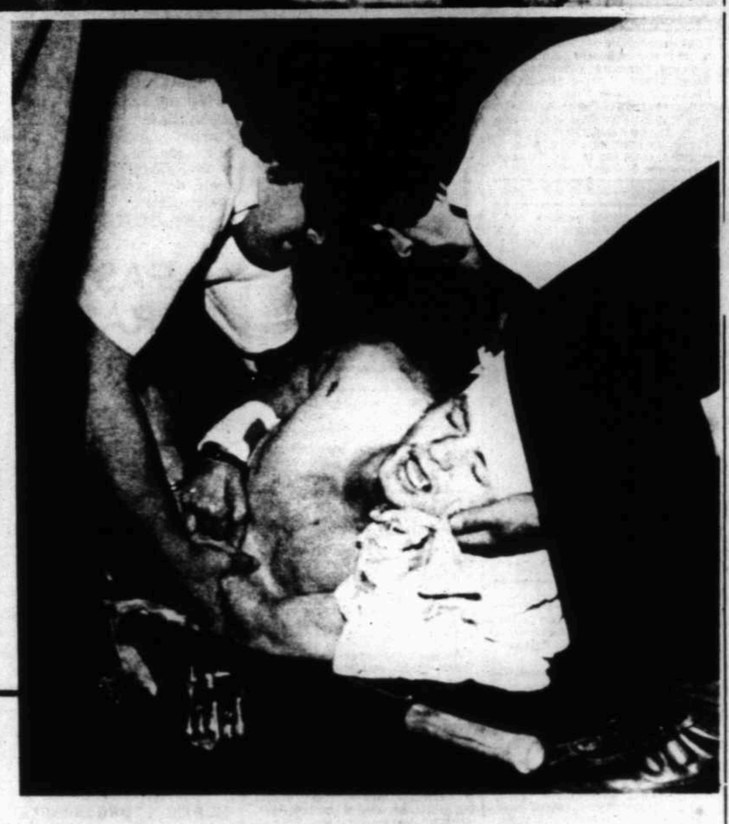

Foltz attributed the uprising to the disturbance in Jackson, 75 miles to the southeast, and to overcrowding and warm weather.

The reformatory, opened in 1877, houses 1,446 in a space for 1,125.

Some 24 inmates were hurt by other prisoners during Friday's outbreak in Jackson, which began when guards began an unauthorized lockdown which inmates feared would leave them in their cells for the Memorial Day weekend, said Corrections Director Perry Johnson.

Prison officials persuaded the inmates to return to their cells after about 13 hours.

A firetruck loaded with inmates, above, rushes toward the scene of another fire at Southern Michigan Prison, Jackson, as 800 of the 5,600 inmates at the world's largest walled prison rioted. At right, a handcuffed inmate is carried from the Michigan Reformatory in Ionia followed an eight-hour disturbance there. Eighteen inmates and four guards were injured.

Tax cut effort stalled

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Barber Conable, who is trying to play matchmaker on a tax bill, says President Reagan clearly is ready to compromise and can't understand why House Democratic leaders are reluctant to take the first step.

Despite a flurry of activity last week, says Conable, a New Yorker who is senior Republican on the House Ways and Means Committee, "nobody has been able to confirm significant movement" toward producing a tax cut.

In an interview Friday, Conable quoted Reagan as saying earlier in the week, "Barber, the Democrats ought to make the first offer."

But, from what is known publicly, the Democratic leadership has not made an offer. And time is running short, Conable added.

Unless House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill and Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., the Ways and Means chairman, offer the administration a proposal soon, Conable said, there will be no choice but try to reactivate the Republican-Southern Democratic coalition that gave Reagan a big victory in recent budget fights.

"The White House is somewhat perplexed to find the Democratic leadership unwilling to deal with them — especially after having seen that a coalition could be put together," Conable said.

"If I were a rank-and-file Democrat I would not want a handful of Southerners running off with the party — the government, even," he added.

Four conservative Southern Democrats, led by Rep. Kent Hance, D-Texas, took their own tax-cut plan to the White House last week and apparently won conditional agreement from Reagan advisers. It would provide a 25-percent reduction in tax rates over three years with the first installment coming on Oct. 1. Reagan wants a 30-percent cut over three years, starting July 1.

Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., chairman of the Senate Finance Committee and an activist in soliciting a Democratic counter-proposal, said in an interview Saturday he thought a compromise would emerge based on a 25-percent, three-year plan, effective Oct. 1 for individuals and Jan. 1 for business.

Hinckley seeking plea bargain

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lawyers for John W. Hinckley Jr., who is charged with attempting to assassinate President Reagan, have offered a guilty plea in the case if the government would recommend he be sentenced as a juvenile, it was learned Saturday.

One Justice Department source, who declined to be identified, said that no such proposal had reached Attorney General William French Smith for a decision, but it was learned that it was virtually inconceivable that the Justice Department would accept the plea bargain or any one like it.

It also was learned Saturday that so far the proposal has been rejected by the U.S. attorney's office for the District of Columbia, which is presenting evidence to a federal grand jury in the case.

Under the proposed arrangement, Hinckley would plead guilty to some charge or charges in the case. In return, Hinckley's lawyers wanted the government to agree to recommend to the judge that Hinckley be sentenced under the federal Youth Corrections Act, which is designed to substitute rehabilitation for simple imprisonment.

Next Friday, Hinckley reaches his 26th birthday, after which he would no longer qualify for the special sentencing provisions of the act.

The law, which governs sentencing of defendants younger than 21, gives federal judges broad discretion in sentencing convicted adults between the ages of 21 and 26. Judges may grant probation or they may impose an indeterminate sentence of six years while the defendant receives treatment.

If an offender is not rehabilitated within six years, he or she could be ordered confined up to the maximum of the adult sentence.

Mideast peace effort at standstill

JERUSALEM (AP) — U.S. mediator Philip Habib brought his diplomatic effort in the Syrian-Israeli missile crisis to Jerusalem from Beirut Saturday after Syrian President Hafez Assad asserted a return to Damascus was pointless. Israeli government officials also showed impatience with the mission.

But late Saturday, Israel Television reported Habib would travel to Damascus Sunday. A U.S. Embassy official said he could neither confirm nor deny the report.

The veteran U.S. diplomat met with Prime Minister Menachem Begin after nightfall, the end of the Jewish sabbath.

"The diplomatic efforts continue," Habib said as he left Begin's residence after the 90-minute meeting. Habib is attempting to mediate between Israel, which is demanding removal of Syrian anti-aircraft missiles on both sides of the Syrian-Lebanese border, and Syria, which is refusing.

Both Israeli radio and television reports said Begin's Cabinet would decide Sunday on a date to set as the time limit for diplomatic efforts to gain a peaceful solution. They did not elaborate or give attribution for the reports, but the Israeli Cabinet's regular meeting day is Sunday.

Assad was quoted by the Syrian government newspaper Tishrin as saying, "We have nothing to offer, and the whole issue is bound on the other party."

Both Israeli and Lebanese government officials had expected Habib to see Assad next in his 2½-week-old shuttle mission.

In Tunisia, the 21-nation Arab League foreign ministers' conference pledged its full support of Syria — including miltary backing should war break out.

The Israeli military command charged that Libya had sent troops and arms to Syria and Lebanon.

A background paper issued by the command said a convoy that rolled from Syria into Lebanon Thursday night "apparently originated in Libya."

It said Libya sent anti-aircraft missiles and anti-aircraft guns to Palestinian guerrillas in Lebanon in April, and also had armed Lebanese leftists with artillery, multiple rocket launchers and missiles. Several hundred Libyan military personnel are in Lebanon, the paper charged.

Habib flew out of Beirut Saturday morning as Lebanese President Elias Sarkis, forced into his palace's basement shelter because of shelling, was trying by telephone to arrange a new cease-fire between Syrian army and Christian militia units.

Starting at daybreak, fire from artillery, rockets and tanks roared across the Green Line, which divides the Lebanese capital into Christian and Moslem sectors. Lebanese police said at least two shells struck Sarkis' palace, one demolishing a second-floor bedroom, and at least one exploded in the gardens surrounding the nearby residence of U.S. Ambassador John Gunther Dean, where Habib had spent the night.

Police said eight Lebanese soldiers were wounded and sniper fire crackled throughout the day.

In Washington, Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. said there was hope as long as Habib remains in the Middle East. He rejected a Soviet call for an international conference on Lebanon.

Both sides in the missile standoff appeared to have hardened their positions in recent days.

Begin said Thursday that in addition to demanding withdawal of the missiles from eastern Lebanon's Bekaa Valley, Israel wanted Syria to pull back missile batteries from either side of the Syrian-Lebanese border and promise not to shoot at Israeli planes over Lebanon.

The next day, Syria claimed its missiles had shot down two unmanned Israeli reconnaissance planes over Lebanon and Israel conceded one drone had been downed.

The latest Mideast storm began building in late April when Israel, seeking to help besieged Christians in the eastern Lebanon town of Zahle, shot down two Syrian helicopter gunships. Syria moved the missiles into Lebanon the next day, and Israel has threatened to bomb the batteries if Syria doesn't withdraw them.

Israel contends the weapons inhibit the freedom its pilots have had since 1976 to conduct aerial surveillance and stage strikes against Palestinian guerrillas in Lebanon.

Haig said in Washington Friday that the objective of the U.S. mediation effort is to "permit the parties to return to the status quo ante."

As to the Soviet suggestion for an international conference on Lebanon, Haig said any international conferences involving the Soviets should first deal with their military intervention in Afghanistan.

The Soviets have a 20-year defense pact with Syria, and Moscow has been in contact with Damascus throughout the crisis. Haig said it was "too early to say whether they (the Soviets) have made a constructive or counterproductive contribution."

In Tunis, the Arab League's 21-member ministerial council called on the United States to cease supporting Israel or face "serious conflict with the entire Arab nation." The council adopted a 13-point declaration after an all-night emergency meeting on the Syrian-Israeli standoff.

The council turned down a Libyan call for other Arab nations to send troops to bolster the Syrian peacekeeping force in Lebanon.

If You Know What An Owner/Operator Is...
You Know It's Worth $2,500 To Become One.

1. 56% of the line haul ($560 out of every $1,000.)
2. If the fuel goes up, so does your fuel surcharge.
3. Training (if you need it) at our expense.
4. Your own business with a very successful company behind you.

We'd like to tell you more. Call 1-800-428-1220 (in INDIANA call 1-800-382-1212) between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. Eastern Standard Time.

The New EXP-Ford's First Two-Seater Sport Coupe Since the 1956 T-Bird

The 1982 front-wheel-drvie EXP - the first two-passenger Ford in a quarter century is a fuel-efficient sportcoupe with handling characteristics and styling designed to please driving enthusiasts. Although the EXP's size and sporty appearance are reminiscent of the classic two-passenger Thunderbird, Ford's newest model has a combination of high-technology features unheard of in the 1950's. The EXP standard manual four-speed transaxle and 1.6 liter CVH engine have projected fuel-economy estimates of at least 28 mpy (city) and 45 (highway). The EXP optional list-limited because of the car's high level of standard equipment includes a flip-up open-air roof, a premium stereo-radio sound system, and leather seating surfaces. The EXP is now at Rogers Ford.

For working, for playing. On the road, or off the road. Our new Datsun 4X4 trucks are something special, with more power than ever before.

The revolutionary 2.2-liter NAPS-Z engine actually gets over 13 percent more torque from less gas than last year's engine. Put that into a rugged, comfortable Datsun 4X4 and you've got the kind of truck you've always wanted. Test drive it today.

4X4 Standard Equipment: • 2.2-liter NAPS-Z 4-cylinder engine • Power-assisted front disc brakes • Independent front suspension • 4-speed manual transmission (5-speed overdrive on King Cab®) • Bright T-type tie-down hooks • Center console • and lots more, all at no extra cost.

MORE POWER THAN EVER BEFORE

21 EPA EST MPG 29 EPA EST HWY

King Cab 4x4 with standard 5-speed transmission

Remember, use estimated MPG for comparison. Your mileage may differ, depending on speed, weather and trip length. Your actual highway mileage will probably be less.

Memorial Day

Memorial Day represents something more than just another day off from work. In this time of national and world uncertainty, we have been reminded of the need for a strong, unified, national identity-a spirit of cooperation. It's increasingly important that we, as Americans, learn to appreci ate what we have: our resources, the varied qualities we have in each other. It is a time to reflect on the work and sacrifice of those who fought for our right to a secure, profit- able life. Our veterans stand out in this group. Through the decades, from our very beginning, our service men have given their youth, risked personal safety and comfort to protect and prolong what we know as the American Way of Life. Many have lost their lives. At this time, we feel it crucial to honor the memory of those men and women, to keep it alive, in all of us. It's time to start working together again to keep our values intact.

We Shall Not Forget Them!

High fashion—thrift shop style

The ever-rising cost of living has most of us searching for ways to trim our budgets whenever we can, and clothing budgets are no exception.

One alternative to high clothing costs is to shop the bargains at second-hand stores, many of which offer good quality, fashionable clothes at greatly-reduced prices.

One such store in Midland is the Next To New Shop located at 509 E. Illinois.

The store is operated by the Junior League of Midland with all proceeds going toward the league's Community Trust Fund to be returned to the community through league projects.

"The shop is an ongoing league project which helps insure a steady source of income for the league," said Judy Martin, chairman in charge of the shop.

Program was begun in 1951 with league members leaving clothing and other items on a consignment basis with a used clothing store in Midland. In 1953, the group rented space and opened the Next to New Shop on Weatherford Street. In 1956, the league had its own building constructed in its present location.

"The purpose of the shop is to provide good used clothing and household items at a low cost to the people of Midland," noted Ms. Martin. Shop offers clothing for the entire family, plus shoes, books, games, toys, household items and furniture.

League members are required to donate a certain amount of clothing per year to the shop and outside donations are also accepted, Ms. Martin said.

Ms. Martin said that clothing is priced according to it's condition and style. The "Blue Ribbon" area of the store features high quality clothing in immaculate condition, she explained. Many of the items in this area have designer labels and some of the articles are brand new.

The first Monday of each month, the Next to New Shop has a sale during which all items in the store are sold for half-price, with the exception of articles in the "Blue Ribbon" area.

Shop is open Monday through Saturday from 9:30 a.m. to 1 p.m., 12 months a year, and is closed on school holidays. It is staffed by league members and volunteers.

"The shop has been very successful from the beginning," noted Shari Koziol, publicity chairman for the group.

Ms. Martin said that different people from all races, sexes and income levels are among the shop's customers.

So, next time you're in the mood for bargain shopping, check out a second-hand shop for economical fashions.

Junior League of Midland members model some of the finer fashions available for a bargain price at the group's Next to New Shop, a second-hand store.

In top left photo, Mrs. C.O. "Ted" Collins Jr. is wearing a peach-colored ultra suede skirt which the store is selling for approximately $25. Ultra suede skirts are normally priced at regular retail price at around $150 to $190. Her off-white silk blouse, which sells new from $60 to $120, is priced at $10 at the Next to New shop. And the beige ultra suede blazer she's holding sells for $35. New blazers are priced in Midland stores at around $390.

Mrs. Darrell Smith, in center photo, models a purple silk shirtwaist dress which costs $10. Savings here is from $100 to $200 as a new silk dress can cost from $100 to $300.

Mrs. Nicholas C. Taylor, bottom right, is ready for a day on the golf course with this sun visor priced at 50 cents. She is also wearing a halter sundress of nylon knit fabric for $2.50. The golf clubs, complete with golf bag, sell for $10.

DEAR ABBY

Wife's lover a skyrocket, her husband's a dud

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I have been married (in name only) for five years. I was a lonely divorcee (age 47) and John was a well-to-do widower (60) when we were married.

The first night we were married I found out he was impotent. I know it's not his fault, but he should have told me. (He later said he was afraid he'd lose me.)

We had everything a happily married couple could want — a lovely home, friends, trips. I can't say I wasn't living a good life, although I missed the physical side of marriage some.

Now I have met a wonderful man. He is my age (52) and it was skyrockets and Roman candles the first time we were alone together. We're in love and want to get married, but hate to hurt John.

Would it be wrong to leave John and grab what little happiness is left in life? — IN LOVE

DEAR IN: If you want to justify leaving John, the fact that he failed to tell you about his impotence is sufficient. (That's probably grounds for an annulment.) Trying to keep an affair a secret will be like trying to smuggle dawn past a rooster. You'd better tell John before he tells you.

DEAR ABBY: Everybody starts out by saying they have a problem, and that's the way I am starting out, but don't throw this away yet because I get better as I go along. (Ha ha!)

I am a married man with three kids, 9, 12 and 13. I always wanted to be a writer but I can't seem to break into the field. I bet I sent 100 short stories to different magazines, but I never heard back from nobody. A person would like to be told what is wrong with their stuff, wouldn't you think?

You must know a lot of big shots in the publishing business, Abby. Can't you put in a good word for me? I don't expeck you to say I am any good unless you see some of my stuff, so I am sending you 26 stories I've wrote. If you are too busy to write and tell me what you think of them, you can call me up. I'm sending you my phone number, and if the line is busy, keep calling because my kids are on the phone a lot. In the meantime, have you got any suggestions? — LOVES TO WRITE

DEAR LOVES: Please don't send me anything, because my lawyer advises against reading unpublished material. And in the meantime, don't help your kids with their English.

(You're never too young or too old to learn how to make people like you. Get Abby's new booklet of practical advice. Send $1 and a stamped (35 cents), self-addressed envelope to Abby, Popularity, 132 Lasky Dr., Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.)

Roof shingles: Heavier material leads to longer life

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Q. — We are considering buying new shingles for our roof, since the old ones are nearly 30 years old and are showing signs of wear. The five types we are thinking about are asphalt, asbestos-cement, wood, slate and aluminum. Can you tell us something about the relative costs and which lasts longest?

A. — The Small Homes Council-Building Research Council of the University of Illinois recently gave this appraisal, which fits your case: "Asphalt shingles are low cost with short or medium life; asbestos-cement and wood shingles, medium cost with medium life; slate or aluminum shingles, expensive but with long life and minimum maintenance costs." To that analysis can be added the reminder that there are different price ranges and durability factors within each type of material. For instance, asphalt shingles have a life expectancy between 15 and 25 years depending on the kind you buy. Generally, the heavier the shingle, the longer its probable life. An exception is asphalt shingles with a fiber-glass base mat, which are comparatively lighter than those with an organic base mat of equivalent life expectancy.

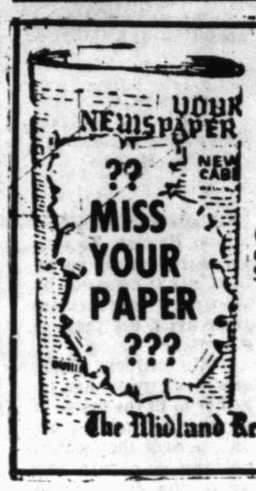

Q. — I understand there are two types of termites in the United States. Can you tell me where each type exists and what differences there are between them.

A. — The most common termites in the United States are the subterranean type. They cause damage from the East Coast to the West Coast with the exception of the very cold northern areas. The other kind, the nonsubterraneans, are found only along the very southern borders of the United States. The subterranean termites reach the wooden portions of a house via tiny tunnels across non-wooden surfaces. One of the best ways to detect them is to look for these tunnels going from the ground upward on foundation walls to wooden areas. Nonsubterranean termites fly directly to the wood and work their way inside. They stay there, whereas subterranean termites return to the earth often to obtain water.

HINTS FROM HELOISE

Highly-valued heirlooms take up space

Many possessions hold memories. Some sometimes show others how prosperous we are (or aren't). But most of the time, possessions end up taking valuable and much-needed space, not to mention the extra work and care they require in upkeep.

Many parents are finding out the pleasure of giving their children the family heirlooms earlier in life, while the children can use and enjoy them. As parents get older they find they no longer need that silver service or fancy linen cloth, as they don't entertain as they once did.

Give it to the child you know will love, use and appreciate it. After all, they're young and have the energy and desire to take care of it.

When a loved one passes, many families have the awesome task of distributing and disbursing all those "keepsakes."

Why not do it a little at a time, while you can enjoy the smiles and appreciation of the recipient? Besides, sometimes a family member who really wants a special item never receives it, while another member gets something of no real sentimental value or use to him. And, oh, the family squabbles that can result!

A widower once wrote that after his wife had passed away and he opened her private bank box, he found two diamond rings she had not worn in years. He wondered why she had never worn them and enjoyed them, or at least given them to someone who would.

True joy comes from sharing and giving. Don't wait for a special occasion. If you have something you know someone wants and you no longer need, give it to them today and experience their joy and delight firsthand. They'll love you all the more.

And I love each and everyone of you who takes the time to write me. Each letter is read, many are re-read, and ALL are cherished! — Hugs, Heloise

LETTER OF LAUGHTER

Dear Heloise: Here's a little poem I've framed and hung over my kitchen table for the benefit of the coffee-klatch that gathers each morning:

"Although you find my house a mess,
Come in, sit down — converse.
It doesn't always look like this,
Some days it's even worse!" — H.S.

\+ + +

That's the spirit! Enjoy those gals and that coffee! — Heloise

NYLON NET AGAIN!

Dear Heloise: To save pot marks on my porcelain sink caused by scraping aluminum pans, nylon net came to my rescue!

I stitched four thicknesses of nylon net together to fit the inside of my sink. I stitched a big "x" across the center, cutting a circle out where the drain would fit.

This pad sure saves my sink from scratches and the cost is very nominal. Easy to keep clean too. — O. Boothe

PLANTING TIME

Dear Heloise: I wanted to put some trailing plants (which need a lot of water) in with my large philodendron plant (which doesn't require much).

I put the trailing plants into a small vase and planted it in the center of the larger plant, leaving about an inch of the vase above the soil level.

Now the vine can be frequently watered without overwatering the philodendron. — L.L.

\+ + +

Now that's what I call having your cake and eating it too. — Heloise

QUICK CLEAN-UP

Dear Heloise: I've found a quick and easy way to clean my large metal trash cans.

I just invert them over my lawn sprinkler, turning it on full force for a few minutes. — Mrs. F.E.

\+ + +

That's the way I like to clean — with no effort. — Heloise

Gorilla finds romance

DENVER (AP) — After five years of being rebuffed by her mate, Bibi, a well-groomed lowland gorilla, is being shipped to the Cincinnati Zoo to seek romance and a chance to propagate the race.

Although Bibi has shiny, dark hair and gleaming teeth, her current cage mate, Thomas, just looks the other way when she comes near. Occasionally, zoo officials said, he responds by crossing the cage to give a resounding thump on his cage door.

Clayton Freiheit, director of the Denver Zoo, said he's tried everything to encourage the two apparently healthy gorillas to breed, but without success.

Freiheit said he now has other plans for the reluctant Thomas, who may be partnered with the zoo's other female gorilla, Maguba, in an artificial-insemination scheme.

The situation is critical, he said, because gorillas are an endangered species and babies are needed.

The 10-year-old Bibi will leave at the beginning of next month on a $6,500 chartered jet to Ohio.

"We chose Cincinnati because it has possibly the best track record for breeding gorillas of any zoo in the United States and maybe in the world," he said.

Under terms of the breeding agreement, the two zoos will divide any future offspring.

Costa Rican student learns to bypass language barriers

Ivannia Vasquez, an AFS student who will graduate with the senior class at Midland High School, poses in traditional Costa Rican costume with her doll, Rosario, which was given to her by Costa Rican friends before her first trip to the United States.

When Ivannia Vasquez, an 18-year-old Costa Rican student, first came to Midland as part of the American Field Service program, her knowledge of the English language was limited to textbook dialogues.

Now, almost a year later, Ivannia, who is currently attending Midland High School can boast a full-fledged fluency because of the help of her host family.

"No one could communicate with her in the beginning," says Janne White, her host mother. "But, we worked to force her to learn the language, because we knew she would have to sit in a classroom."

The purpose of the AFS program is to send high school students from foreign countries to the United States to learn English and to introduce them to American customs, some of which, Ivannia notes, are radically different from her native town; Roman, a small city of 25,000 not far from San Jose.

Although overcoming the language barrier was the most difficult dilemna, she had problems adjusting to the agressiveness of her fellow male classmates and the less-structured routine of the American family.

"When Ivannia first came here, I just told her to make herself at home while I was at work," Mrs. White says. Ivannia was confused as to wheter she should take the offer literally and help herself to the family's refrigerator. "I would come home at the end of the day and she would be starving. She would not have had anything to eat all day."

"It was true," Ivannia admits, a little embarrassed. "I didn't understand at first. I just ate popcorn for breakfast, lunch and dinner."

AFS students are carefully instructed by program instructors before they are released to host families to follow all the rules of the house. "Instructions are not to do anything without the permission of the house mother," Mrs. White said. "They're threatened with their life if they drink or smoke."

Students participating in the AFS program have little choice where they are placed in the United States and are randomly placed in cities or towns where a family has expressed an interest to bring one into their home for a year. However, Mrs. White says AFS tries to match the interests and dislikes of the family and students "so there is a compatible union when they get over here."

The White family became involved in the AFS program, when daughter Camie Timm, a senior at Midland High School expressed an interest to have a sister in the house.

"We took her in as our own. It's been the best year of her life with Ivannia around," Mrs. White says. "And it has certainly broadened our horizons."

After Ivannia and Camie graduate together on May 29, the family will travel to Colorado for a one-week stay at a Young Life Camp in Colorado.

Ivannia will return to Costa Rica in mid-summer where she will begin studies in social work at a university in her hometown.

In addition to developing a taste for fried chicken and American television which offers more programming that Costa Rica's government-owned stations, Ivannia is relunctant to leave behind a following of friends she has grown close to during her time here.

"I'm looking forward to going back," she says. "But, I am already starting to feel sad."

Frequent diets may add weight

By MARJORIE RICE
Copley News Serice

Frequent dieters may end up gaining more weight than they would have if they just had kept on eating their usual way, says an official of the Mayo Medical School.

In a "pattern of take off 10 pounds and put on 15, they end up gaining more than what they lost," said Dr. C. Wayne Callaway, director of nutrition consulting services for the school in Rochester, Minn. "They might have been better off if they never had dieted."

Losing weight may even be a state of mind, Callaway said.

"There is reasonable evidence that anything you do will result in some weight loss," he said. In one study, patients regularly saw a 'physician figure,' a man who wore a white coat and gave the patients consistent moral support — nothing else. The patients lost weight."

Callaway particularly criticized low-carbohydrate diets, which call for high amounts of protein and fat and few or no carbohydrates, which are found in such foods as bread and potatoes.

The diets cause the kidneys to work overtime, he said, excreting water and salt in a diuretic effect.

The result is a constant state of dehydration, which is why proponents of the low-carbohydrate diets stress that dieters drink eight to 10 glasses of water a day. This dehydration also accounts for sometimes dramatic weight loss. "The fatter you are, or if you are a female, the more it 'works,'" Callaway said, adding that some persons can lose 10 to 15 pounds on the diet in one week.

When the smallest amount of carbohydrate is eaten, sudden weight gain, again of water, is the result, Callaway said. "They gain back the weight and, instead of seeing that the diet is a trick, they say, 'I'm no good.'"

Low-carbohydrate diets also can result in loss of calcium, sodium, potassium and phosphorus from the body, he said. "Some women ... have actually lost calcium in their bones" from the diet.

Callaway outlined what he termed a more sensible, and successful, weight-loss approach:

-- Don't skip meals. Breakfast is particularly important. There apparently is some truth to the "night eating" theory that food consumed before retiring tends to be stored as fat. "If you let rats eat only one meal a day, their activity level drops and they become obese," Callaway said.

"They're more efficient at making fat."

When an individual fasts all day, the result is slower metabolism. Also, the person who is fasting tends to be less physically active than the one who has three reasonable meals a day, further lowering the metabolic rate. "When you do eat, you convert most of it into fat," he said.

— Don't skip "complex" carbohydrates. Not only do carbohydrates have fewer calories per gram than fat, but they occur in foods that also are high in natural fiber and water. Those foods are less concentrated sources of calories than such higher-fat foods as butter, meat and whole meat.

— Lose a little over a long time. One or two pounds a week is plenty, Callaway said, particularly when dieters at the same time learn behavior modification that can become a lifetime habit. Those techniques include eating all meals at the table, passing up second portions, reducing portion size and cutting back on concentrated sweets and fats while moderately increasing physical activity.

Obesity studies have shown that up to 60 percent of the persons who followed this moderate course kept their weight off after two years while the success rate for persons who tried rapid weight loss was closer to 2 percent.

While Callaway came down hard on low-carbohydrate diets, he was no easier on members of his own profession.

It's hard for consumers to know who to believe, he said, because "the people in academia are just as bad, if not worse," than persons pushing food fads. "They are just as arbitrary, just as dogmatic and arrogrant."

So many people in the field spend so much time personally attacking those who disagree with them that their message is lost in the crossfire, Callaway said.

"It's called the 'Father Damien' theory." Father Damien was a priest who went to Hawaii to treat victims of Hansen's disease (leprosy) and who himself contracted the disease.

"It means you get what you fight," Callaway said. "To label everybody who doesn't agree with you a food-faddist is kind of holy-roller mentality."

A popular bit of wisdom holds that consumers are conservatives when it comes to home-furnishings purchases but adventurous when they buy clothing.

Mary McFadden disputes this conventional idea. The designer is best known for her advanced, couture clothing. But with several sheet collections and two fabric lines as well as carpet, glassware, ceramics and table-linen designs in the planning stages, she qualifies as a home-furnishings designer, too.

According to Ms. McFadden, it sometimes seems that consumers are adventurous when they buy apparel because some of the retailers who sell clothing have more sophisticated tastes than their customers. Retailers of home furnishings, on the other hand, often seem to be less sophisticated than their customers.

However, once home-furnishings designs get onto the retail floor, she has found that most consumers will take more of a chance on products for the home than on clothing.

Taking chances is something Mary McFadden understands and practices in her own life. She started the habit when she was very young.

When she was 13, she was given some jewelry by her grandmother. She promptly sold it and used the money to buy drawings by Salvador Dali.

Later, while a student at Columbia University, she talked her way into a job as director of public relations for Christian Dior in New York.

Eventually she went to Africa, became a journalist and while there sewed some dresses of colorful African fabric. Once back in the United States, she landed a job with Vogue Magazine, where her dresses were much admired. Vogue decided to feature one of her designs on the cover. But first she had to find a retail outlet to carry them.

"So I went over to Bendel's and sold them some. I put my first collection together in a basement in the East '80s," she recalled in an interview at her newly-decorated New York apartment. The next collection sold $1 million, and soon she had left Vogue and was establishing herself as a couture designer.

The originality of her work inspired a sheet manufacturer to ask her to design a sheet line. And its success led to further home-furnishings products. Although couture now represents only a fraction of the sales of products bearing her name, Ms. McFadden regards it as the basis for all her other design work.

"It's crazy — a couture show is a theatrical event. And only one-half of 1 percent of women have the chance and the desire to wear high-style couture clothes. But without the couture, the sheet manufacturers and others wouldn't come to me for designs," she remarked.

Better bargains

ABILENE, Texas (AP) — Americans who complain about how much groceries cost should recognize what a good deal they are getting on food, Texas Agriculture Commissioner Reagan Brown said this week.

"Food was one of the best bargains available to American consumers in 1980," Brown told the American Institute of Banking. "Many Amricans feel their food bills are high, but when you compare food prices in this country to those in many other places, it is clear we enjoy one of the best food deals in the world."

Brown said a survey by the U.S. Department of Agriculture showed consumers must pay $5.60 in London for a pound or sirloin; $4.10 in Tokyo for a pound of pork chops; $2.21 a pound for chicken in Stockholm and $2.26 for a dozen eggs in Paris.

Wright on

DAYTON, Ohio (AP) — The Wright brothers dispatched the first air shipment from here in 1910, and from that flying start this Midwestern city has become a focal point of the air-freight industry.

Aboard that maiden voyage more than 70 years ago was a 200-pound bolt of silk "air-expressed" from Dayton to a Columbus dry-goods store. Today, Emery Air Freight moves more than half a million pounds of air cargo through its main hub facility here each night.

Hospital pay

NEW YORK (AP) — Hospital administrators are the highest paid of all non-medical personnel, according to a recent study published by the American Management Association.

The study reports that in 1980, hospital administrators earned between $45,000 and $67,700 in hospitals with 300 or more beds. The highest-paid administrators nationwide, those earning between $49,000 and $80,000, worked in the North Central section of the United States, in non-government hospitals with 500 or more beds.

Improvise a plumber's helper

By AL CARRELL

I think every household should have a plumber's friend. That's the rubber suction cup type plunger that helps to unstop lots of drain clogs. One of my readers told about being in a lake house where they didn't have a plunger and where the kitchen sink was backed up. In true home handyman fashion, Mr. G.S.I. decided to improvise. The idea he finally came up with worked and saved him a trip into town. His plunger was made from a rag mop and a plastic bag. He securely tied the plastic bag around the mop head. Then he flattened the thing out over the drain opening. It didn't give as much force as a regular plumber's friend, but enough so it eventually pulled the clog loose. In a pinch, it might do the job for you. If it doesn't, at least you have the mop out to clean up the mess.

Dear Al: If you change your own auto motor oil, you can improve the grip of the oil filter wrench by simply gluing a strip of sapdpaper to the inside of the gripping ring. I used rubber cement and had cut the strip to the right size. You never have a problem with the wrench slipping. — A.K.

+ + +

Dear Al: This will sound weird, but it really works. To hide furniture scratches, I make a paste of instant coffee and boiled linseed oil. (Remember you don't boil the linseed oil. That's what you ask for in the paint department.) Just a few drops will do. Rub this into the surface over the cracks. Then carefully remove the excess so only the paste in the crack stays. When the paste sets up, you can polish over it with your regular furniture polish, and the scratches will be hidden. — T.C.

AT WIT'S END

Headaches handy

When it comes to respect in this country, there's nothing to equal the American Headache.

It ranks right up there with penicillin, hot chicken soup and Mt. Rushmore.

You want to leave a party early? Announce you have a headache.

You want to cancel a meeting with the tax auditor? Phone in a headache.

You want to go to sleep on your honeymoon? Retire early with a headache. The headache is one of the last great mystiques in the world. Why? Because no one ever questions them, or tries to cure them. There is absolutely no substitute for it.

If you can't go shopping because your stomach hurts, the reaction is, "Of course you can. You probably just need a laxative."

If you don't feel like going to Aunt May's funeral because you have a throbbing pain in your lower back, you're told, "You're just bored. Get your coat and you'll forget about it."

If you don't feel like going to bed because you are experiencing blinding spots before your eyes, you're assured, "Close your eyes and you'll never notice them."

But, if you can't possibly leave on a vacation because you have a headache, everyone advises, "Go lie down. We'll talk when you're feeling better."

Women everywhere are indebted to Winona Haslipp of London who invented the headache in 1813, quite by accident. Winona was the mother of eleven children. One night as she was blowing out the candles, she hit her head on a shelf holding pewter mugs. When her husband yelled, "Aren't you coming to bed?" she announced, "I have a headache." When she reached the top of the stairs, she was amazed to see that he had gone to sleep.

The story spread like wildfire. Within days, every woman in London was banging her head on a shelf holding pewter mugs and shouting, "I have a headache." The phrase not only earned Winona a page in history, but 136,000 write-in votes for Queen.

A widower was telling me a few weeks ago he broached a delicate subject to his 13-year-old daughter when he told her perhaps they should go shopping for a training bra. She turned on him and shouted hysterically, "Dad! Please! I have a headache!"

He said he understood.

Planning a cruise on the Love Boat? A camping trip to Big Bend? A weekend of home entertaining? Whatever the occasion, come by and let us help you get it together.

Electricity's costing a lot more this summer.

Live warmer and help hold down your bills.

You may not feel quite comfortable at first when you set your thermostat at 80° or higher, but most people adjust very quickly to living warmer. At the same time, if you dress cooler and use a fan, you may not even notice the difference. But it will help hold down your electric bill.

Mobility may not be right path to success

By JIM SHEA
Associated Press Writer

STORRS, Conn. (AP) — The belief that mobility marks the way to the executive suite is a myth, says a University of Connecticut professor who recently completed a study of 2,000 middle management employees at three major U.S. corporations.

John F. Veiga says that while a certain amount of mobility is necessary for advancement, moving regularly from one position to another does not always mean that an executive is advancing.

In his study, Veiga found that the mobile manager often did not come out ahead of his less mobile counterpart in terms of salary and job satisfaction.

He also found that the mobile manager paid a higher price in family-life disruption, strain and career disillusionment.

"While mobile managers are not corporate malcontents, they are considerably more restless and impatient with their careers, and I suspect, more readily frustrated and anxious about the prospects of plateauing than are immobile managers," Veiga said.

Veiga definied mid-level managers as supervisors below the rank of vice president. He said their salary range was between $33,000 to $38,000 per year.

Corporations sometimes promote the mobility myth as a work incentive and disguise moves which are lateral to keep employees happy, according to Veiga, a professor of management and administrative sciences.

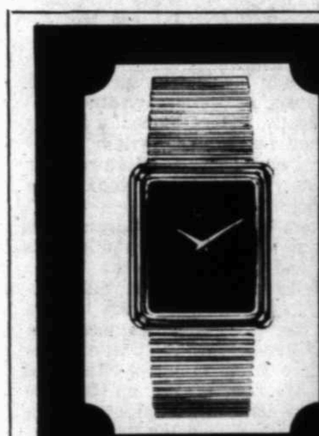

He added that his study showed that top management often tends to cloud what was really a lateral move or even a demotion with rewards that obscured the true nature of the job switch.

Veiga said companies should deal more realistically with managers over advancement.

"I'd like to take every manager on an elevator ride (to the top of an office) and show them how the number of desks decreases as you get closer to the top," Veiga said.

Veiga noted that some companies are beginning to address the mobility myth by conducting seminars with their employees in which they attempt to lay out realistic career goals.

Mobility was highest before age 30 and then tended to peak again when the employee was in his 40s, according to Veiga's study. He attributed the later peaking to a "last chance" syndrome.

Youth sports program gives kids chance in life

By BOB PETRIE
Tempe Daily News

TEMPE, Ariz. (AP) — It may be only a coincidence that his name is Simon Peters and that he lives on Halo Drive in Compton, Calif.

But with the miracles he has worked for the youngsters in his neighborhood over the past 20 years, Peters' name fits in quite well. He is the guiding light for kids to whom sports offered an alternative to life on the streets.

Peters, through a youth baseball program he started in Compton, is responsible for sending a number of youngsters from the predominantly black suburb of Los Angeles into the major leagues, via Arizona State University.

Included among them is his son, Rick Peters of the Detroit Tigers, who starred for the Sun Devils from 1974-77.

Others who have started with Peters' program and gone on to the majors include Minnesota's Ken Landreaux and Darrell Jackson, Montreal's Bob Pate and Hubie Brooks of the New York Mets. Outfielder Ed "Dog" Irvine is a budding prospect in the Milwaukee Brewer organization.

Recently, Peters, himself a former baseball player and Harlem Globetrotter, was given a special award for his contributions to Arizona State baseball.

Peters started his program with someone who didn't go on to Arizona State and who wasn't his son.

"We had this park in our neighborhood, Roy Campanella Park, named after the old Dodger catcher," recalled Peters, now a 50-year-old interior decorator in Compton. "They had this Little League program structure with six coaches out there and they were always choosing ballplayers, anybody who could hit, throw or run.

"There was this blond-haired kid named David Hale, who had a new cap, new shoes and glove and a couple other kids who never were chosen, and I went home quite upset.

"My wife told me, 'Why don't you get a team of your own? All you're doing is telling someone else to do it,'" Peters continued. "So I went and got a list of David and all those other fellas who weren't chosen, and I started working with these kids, and next year, everyone wanted to pick David Hale because he had become a good pitcher.

"He said, 'If Mr. Peters doesn't have a team, I don't want to play.' So that's how it got going," Peters said.

The program grew quite successful, Peters said, because the kids were involved with baseball and not roaming the increasingly dangerous streets of Compton. Currently, he runs five different teams in the area.

As Rick and the others became older and more proficient in baseball, the elder Peters began looking for an avenue to success for his players. He found it in Arizona State baseball coach Jim Brock.

Despite the success of several of Peters' proteges, he places the highest emphasis on education.

"Just about anybody can play baseball, but what do they do without baseball?" he said. "In our neighborhood, a lot of kids were signing right out of high school, and they'd be in pro ball maybe a year or a year and a half and return home. High school prepared them for nothing.

"So my thing is to stress education, and I see to it that every player who played in my program has a chance at something.

"Kids like to rap, so we have rap sessions, and I've been able to reach kids that way," he added. "I tell them that if they can't all be good ballplayers, they can become good citizens. You've got to give yourself a chance."

Antique or junque: Inquirer questions value of piano

By JAMES G. McCOLLAM
Copley News Service

Dear Mr. McCollam: We have this square grand piano made by Steinway in 1876. We would like to know who the original owner was and its value. — B.L.O., Glendale, Calif.

Dear B.L.O.: How could anyone possibly know who the original owner was? If you have the time (which I don't) to write to Steinway and give them the serial number, they might be able to tell you who the dealer was that it was shipped to in 1876 (if they keep records that far back). If the dealer is still in existence, he can tell you who bought the piano (if he keeps records that far back).

The value would be in the $2,500 to $3,500 range.

Dear Mr. McCollam: This cheese dish has an insignia inside the cover as shown. I would like to know when and where it was made and its value. The painting of the birds and tree are natural colors and the edge of the lid and the dish are gold. — Y.G., Pelham, N.H.

Dear Y.G.: This is Royal Bonn china and was made in the late 19th century. The mark is that of the F.A. Mehlem factory in Bonn, Germany. It was in use from 1836 on. The date 1755 isthe date of the founding of the pottery at Bonn.

What does 20th century art have to do with antiques? Not a thing, but vintage is not what makes art collectible. There are 69 full color reproductions of 20th century art, which will lead you through the transition from the realism of 19th century paintings through surrealism and cubism and then to the recent shift back to realism.

Vasectomy risk stirs controversy

By SHARON COHEN
Associated Press Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — Research on monkeys that indicates vasectomies may increase the chance of arteriosclerosis has led some scientists to caution against this form of contraception for men with a high risk of the disease.

But their findings have stirred up vasectomy proponents, who point out it is not known whether the studies can be applied to humans and argue that the benefits outweigh the risks.

A summary of the studies and reaction to them appeared in the current issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association.

Nancy Alexander of the Oregon Regional Primate Research Center suggested that until further research is completed, men should avoid vasectomies if they smoke, have high blood pressure, high cholesterol levels or other multiple cardiovascular risk factors.

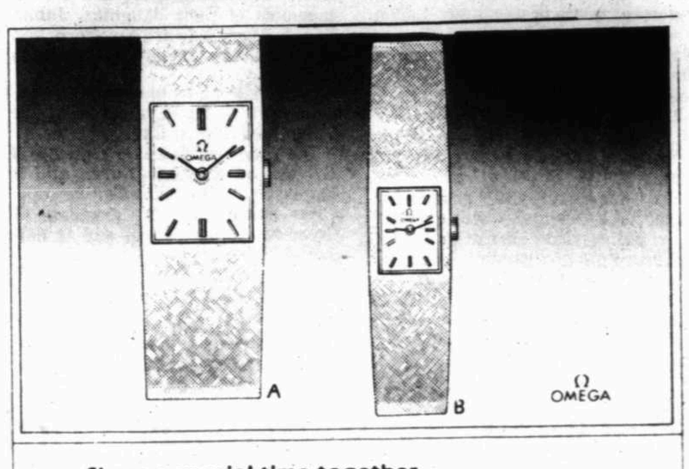

The Association for Voluntary Sterilization criticized the studies as inconclusive and said they have caused undue concern among the 500,000 men who have the operation each year.

"The risk-benefit ratio is decidedly in favor of vasectomy as a contraceptive procedure," the group said.

In a vasectomy, the ducts that carries sperm from the testicles to the penis are tied off, thus preventing conception.

Ira S. Richards, a scientist for the association, said, "Men who have already had the operation are calling and writing letters expressing concern about what they are reading."

Baby formula: Rebuke for Reagan administration

By W. JOSEPH CAMPBELL
Associated Press Writer

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — In a stinging rebuke to the United States, the World Health Organization voted almost unanimously this week for a set of intricately drafted guidelines that propose strict regulations on how baby formula is marketed.

By 118 votes to one — that of the United States — member states at the organization's annual assembly formally adopted a global code that calls for a ban on direct advertising of infant formula and seeks to encourage breast-feeding. The results produced rousing applause.

"The weight of moral pressure is now on the United States to adopt the code," said a health organization source who requested anonmyity. "Whenever the assembly passes a resolution by this majority, there is unquestionably moral pressure (for the dissenting state) to study the resolution and see if it can be implemented."

Consumer activists who lobbied aggressively on behalf of the code were more disparaging of the U.S. opposition.

"The message from the Reagan regime is unmistakable: protect profit above and beyond any consideration of the sickness and death caused by these companies" that produce infant formula, declared the International Baby Food Action Network.

Leah Margulies, a spokeswoman for the action network, a loose coalition of consumer and church groups, asserted: "The message to the Reagan regime is that the world's health ministers cannot be intimidated by U.S. muscle. It is unfortunate that the U.S. cannot join in this celebration with the world's leading health authorities in what is a beginning of the protection of infants from improper bottle feeding."

Although the guidelines are universal they are addressed mainly to developing countries where poor sanitary conditions are said to render contamination of infant formula virtually inevitable. Estimates are that 1 million infants die in developing countries each year from inadequate artificial feeding.

U.S. officials in Geneva were mum Thursday about America's exclusive opposition to the code, which was based on arguements that it posed unacceptable challenges to laws forbidding restraint-of-trade agreements.

U.S. Ambassador Gerald Helman, who cast the sole no vote, could not be reached for comment.

"He's not going to tell you how it feels" to have registered the unique dissenting vote, said Henry Grady, a spokesman at the U.S. mission to U.N. organizations in Geneva, where Helman is ambassador.

"The comment we had to make, we've already made," said Grady, referring to Helman's speech Wednesday in which he expressed the Reagan administration's "serious concerns about this organization's involvement in commercial codes."

In the initial assembly roll call Wednesday, the United States was joined by Chad and Bangladesh in casting the only negative votes. Delegates from Chad and Bangladesh said Thursday they realized their no votes were cast mistakenly, due to confusion over a procedural motion to close debate.

They voted Thursday with the crushing majority.

Japan, Argentina and South Korea abstained.

Don't rest your face on your hand, don't wrinkle your nose when you smile, don't squint and don't use a large bed pillow.

Those are some of the hints face exercise expert and author M.J. Saffon advises to keep your face looking good enough to avoid having a face lift.

He also suggests that you drink at least six glasses of water daily, spray your face with mineral water before applying cream or makeup, include fresh fruit and vegetables in your diet and protect your skin from sudden temperature changes.

And while there is much controversy about exercising the face — some experts say that not exercising is better — Saffon points out that he advocates exercising the muscles, not stretching the skin.

Some research now supports exercising the face, he says.

Work with arthritis patients at Cornell University in New York has shown that as they did neck exercises, their double chins improved, he says.

Saffon's program is followed and endorsed by enthusiasts such as Helen Gurley Brown, Sophia Loren, Jennifer Jones and Cyd Charisse. The skin specialist promises some results in about four months with "full results" in six to nine months.

His book, "The 15-Minute a Day Natural Face Lift" published by Warner Books, suggests a dozen basic exercises done with cream on the face in front of a mirror. A supplement at the back gives special exercises for spot problems, tips for good habits and instructions for a "Hollywood Instant Face Lift" achieved with surgical tape and string.

This "trick," as the author calls it, is to be reserved only for once-in-awhile occasions such as a party or having aphotograph made because the use of tape and alcohol it entails is not good for the skin.

Saffon, who does the exercises daily himself, looks about 10 years younger than his 51 years, an important point, he believes, in "selling" the exercises at his salons in Los Angeles and New York and on television talk shows. He developed the system after the exercises were created 25 years ago by his father, a plastic surgeon in Beverly Hills involved in reconstructive surgery.

And while a surgical face lift may be the only answer for problems such as bags under the eyes caused by fat deposits — one condition exercise won't help, Saffon says he believes that the "daily dozen" will do wonders for most faces. People in their late 60s or beyond may not benefit as much as younger exercisers, he says, but still report "marvelous results."

"The underlying principle of the series is to work the muscles and improve the muscle tone," he says. "We think of exercising the body only from the neck down, we walk and exercise, but we don't do anything for the 50 muscles of the face. We don't develop the face.

"The point is to work the muscles, but not stretch the skin, and that's both preventative and corrective. I think of this exercising as an alternative to surgery.

"There are a lot of people, those with diabetes or hypertension, for example, who can't have elective or cosmetic surgery. But looking better is the key, looking good as though you don't need a face lift. Everyone has a certain portrait of himself or herself, and if you look good, you feel good."

In addition to the exercises, Saffon also advocated hydrating the skin by spraying it with a solution of one pint mineral water and one teaspoon apple cider vinegar (to restore Ph balance), always wearing a sunscreen when outside, avoiding intense midday sun and following a sensible diet.

Take the sting out of furniture burns

By AL CARRELL

Maybe the surgeon-general should also require a stamp on the side of the cigarette pack that says that cigarette smoking can also be hazardous to your furniture. When I used to smoke, I know I was guilty of placing a lighted cigarette down on a table edge "for just a moment," and then retrieving it just a moment after it had singed the finish. The cigarette burn on furniture is a very common problem.

Some will say that the first thing to do is to break the arm of the person who put the cigarette down. However, I'd rather see you attack the piece of furniture. The first step is to get rid of the charred black area. A dull kitchen knife can get rid of most of it. Don't scrape too hard because you don't want to go down into the piece of furniture anymore than to just remove that black char. A very fine steel wool can be used to get the last vestiges off if the knife won't do. Use steel wool designated as 000 (three ought) or 0000 (four ought). If you have to actually scrape down into the wood, go ahead and do so because you'll never hide the burn if there's any black char left.

If you have to get down beyond the finish and into the wood, and if the wood has a stain in it, you'll have to replace the stain. Your paint dealer should have a stain to match. If you take that route, however, you'll also have to add enough finish — varnish, shellac, lacquer, etc. — to bring the level of the surface back up to match the rest of the table.

There is another way that lets you add the stain and the finish at the same time: use stick shellac. This is what many furniture refinishers and repair experts would use. Stick shellac isn't often found at the home center, hardware store or paint store. You'll probably have to find a place that sells furniture refinishing supplies. And stick shellac isn't easy for the novice to use. I'd suggest that if you plan to do the coverup this way that you ask for all the instructions you can get and that you practice before you actually get to the piece of furniture. Stick shellac is applied by melting. You heat a flexible bladed knife over an alcohol lamp, and then let the knife melt the stick and flow it into place. Alcohol is used so as not to leave soot on the knife that could be transferred to your shellac. The various shades can be blended to match.

There is a similar treatment in the form of melt sticks. These are like crayons, and they are melted into the indentation much like stick shellac, but they are easier to control. They come in many shades and can also be blended.

If you would like a simple way to just cover up the spot and maybe end up with an almost invisible bit of first aid, here's a way. You still have to remove all the charred part. You still have to replace the stain if the scraping removed it. However, for building up the finish, you can use fingernail polish. Use the clear kind and thin it out with an equal part of the nail polish remover. Mix this well.

Now with the fingernail polish brush, dab at the spot, but take care to touch only the part where the finish has been removed. Make a very thin one-pass coat. Let it dry. It will dry very quickly because of the polish remover you added. When dry, dab on a second coat. Keep doing this until the surface is level with the rest of the table. Done right, you can then go over the entire table top with your regular furniture polish, and folks may not be able to see your repair. Done wrong, you can have a bad spot where the burn was and may have removed some more of the stain with the nail polish remover.

There are lots of ways to add stain to a small spot other than getting a stain from the paint department. Sometimes iodine will work. Sometimes a regular child's crayon will match. Shoe polish can even be used if the shade of the wood is just right. Experiment on a scrap first.

If you have a table with very deep burns or with a whole lot of spots, you may have to resort to sanding away enough of the table top to remove all the burns. Or you could make up a story about the piece having belonged to some famous person, and that it was used at a stag smoker he had with other famous folks.

Peru raging war against terrorism

LIMA, Peru (AP) — The Peruvian government has begun a "war to the death" against a wave of terrorism that has caused considerable damage but few injuries, Interior Minister Jose Maria de la Jara said.

De la Jara announced Thursday that all three national police forces have been ordered to arrest anyone suspected of involvement in terrorist acts, even people who had been arrested before and released for lack of evidence.

The government estimates that since July there have been 700 dynamite attacks against public and private property, causing some $12.3 million in damages. In the latest incident, unidentified terrorists used dynamite to topple two power-line towers in Lima on Tuesday.

Jet is diverted

CASABLANCA, Morocco (AP) — A Brazilian jetliner flying from Lisbon to Rio de Janeiro was diverted to the Casablanca airport Thursday when authorities received reports of a bomb planted aboard the aircraft.

The plane, a Varig jet carrying 150 passengers, landed safely. Officials said no bomb was found.

Breast-feeding popular again

NEW YORK (AP) — When today's mom leaves the hospital with her newborn, more often than not she's breast-feeding. This is in contrast to her own mother, who usually went home to the complicated procedure of mixing the ingredients for an evaporated milk formula.

According to a recent article in "Pediatrics," the professional journal of the American Academy of Pediatrics, the percentage of mothers breast-feeding their infants in 1979 reached a 25-year high, with 51 percent choosing to breast-feed their newborns.

In 1955, only 29 percent of mothers were breast-feeding. Twenty-three percent used a commercially prepared infant formula, with the rest feeding evaporated milk or whole cow's milk. Over the next 15 years, the percentage of breast-feeding mothers dropped, until only 25 percent were choosing this feeding method in 1971.

Then breast-feeding began to increase dramatically — almost 10 percent per year, reports the article. If this rate of gain continues, almost 60 percent of the babies born in the United States during 1981 will be breast-fed.

Fire safety saves energy

HAYWARD, Calif. (AP) — Fire safety preparations are being coupled with energy savings at an industrial plant here, reports an energy-oriented publication.

According to Energy User News, a water tank required for fire safety by insurance regulations is being designed to hold nearly triple the mandated capacity so the firm can chill water during off-peak electricity rate hours at night.

Save money by eating garbage

By EDWARD STILES
Tucson Citizen

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — You could save as much as 15 percent on your grocery bills by eating your garbage — or, more precisely, by cutting down on waste that becomes garbage, a University of Arizona professor says.

Anthropologist William Rathje and his students have been studying Tucson's garbage for the past seven years, much as archeologists study the trash piles left by vanished civilizations to learn more about how they lived.

They have found that Tucsonians throw out 15 percent of the food they buy.

And it isn't just table scraps. Most of it, 70 percent in fact, is untouched — whole cuts of meat, unopened canned goods, loaves of bread and other items.

"With $9 to $12 million of food going to waste in Tucson each year, we all could save a good bit of money by watching how we eat," he said.

Rathje has some simple methods for cutting down on waste. The suggestions cut across lines of class and income because Rathje has found that those factors have little to do with the amount of food people throw away.

He says the majority of the food found in garbage still looks good, but people apparently are afraid to eat it because they've had it too long.

He's not suggesting that people eat something that might be unsafe. What he is suggesting is that they avoid getting into the position of making the decision in the first place.

So the first rule in saving money on the grocery bill is to stay away from specialty items as much as possible. Buy food that has a wide range of uses and that can be consumed quickly. Buy a standard loaf of bread, for instance, instead of hot-dog buns and hamburger buns.

And if that bread still goes stale, use it for toast or bread crumbs.

Experimenting with food also leads to waste, he explains. People who buy the same kind of food all the time may have more boring diets, but they also waste less. They know how long it takes the food to spoil, they know how to prepare it and, therefore, make fewer cooking mistakes.

Above all, don't succumb to panic buying, Rathje cautions. People wasted beef when beef prices skyrocketed. The same thing happened when sugar suddenly became more expensive. Some people apparently started to hoard food, but didn't store it properly and it spoiled.

Some started experimenting with cheaper cuts of meat. Because they were unfamiliar with how to prepare the new food, they didn't like the taste.

When sugar prices increased, some Tucsonians began experimenting with new desserts, only to throw them out when they found they didn't like the taste. The message is simple: Don't change your eating habits overnight in response to prices. Gradual change will mean less waste.

"You can lose a lot of money trying to buy around price increases," Rathje said.

In families where both husband and wife work, it's a good idea to be conservative when buying fresh food, Rathje said. Fresh food often is green or blue or soggy by the time someone finds enough time to make a home-cooked dinner.

Sorry girls: But, Bruce is gone

By STEVE BISHEFF
Copley News Service

They are in mourning — all the pretty, young things who parade around golf courses in their halter tops and tight pants.

No, nobody died.

It's just that the most eligible bachelor on the pro golf tour no longer is very eligible. Bruce Lietzke is getting married soon.

So try to sympathize with the groupies who follow this sport. Try to understand that this is their John Travolta, we're talking about. This is tall, dark and handsome Bruce, who wheels around America in his flashy, souped-up Pontiac Trans-Am, probably breaking hearts as often as he breaks par.

I mean, talk to any of these girls. They'll tell you Tom Watson may be cute and freckled. But Bruce Lietzke ... well, he's what they refer to as "a fox."

They might smile at Watson, but they're much more likely to wink at Lietzke.

Bruce could probably be described as the sport's ranking sex symbol, except for one thing.

He cringes at the mere thought of it. Bruce Lietzke is about as much a playboy as Ralph Nader.

That's right. Despite the good looks, the big money and the flashy car, this 29-year-old Oklahoman is a homebody who swears he's never been in a singles bar in his life.

"I made up my mind 10 years ago, when I knew I was going to make this my career," explained Lietzke. "I elected not to follow that lifestyle.

"I have some friends on the tour, men who have a lot more talent than me, who have left their careers in some of those singles bars. I decided I didn't want that to happen to me.

"So, I've always hung around with married couples on the road. My best friends on the tour, Bill Rogers and Ben Crenshaw, are both married. And I've always felt comfortable around them and their wives."

So, how did he acquire this other image? Why did Golf magazine pinpoint him as the game's most eligible bachelor a year ago?

It may have started in 1977, when he recorded his first big win on the tour at the Hawaiian Open. Afterward, a network TV announcer stuck a microphone in his face and asked him to talk about himself.

"Well," said a smiling Bruce Lietzke, "I'm 25, single and available."

The result of that one flippant remark was slightly phenomenal. "I said it because I thought it sounded cute," recalled Lietzke. "Well, for the next four months, I was inundated with cards, letters, phone calls, all kinds of propositions. It was awesome, it really was.

"I got mail from all over the United States and even some from overseas. I finally had to hire a secretary to handle it all.

"The whole thing really got blown out of proportion."

The temptations were great. Even now, Lietzke admits that much.

"Lord knows it was tough to pass up sometimes," he said. "These young girls come out here and they like to be seen. And it's amazing, you see the same faces week after week.

"Some don't give up, either. They call you in your room. They try everything."

Lietzke claims he resisted, though. "I wouldn't have achieved what I have on the tour if I had gone the other way," he said.

Waldorf Bread is something new

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

In 1896, Oscar Tschirky, the famous maitre d' of New York City's Waldorf Hotel, wrote a cook book and in it gave his recipe for what is probably America's best-known salad.

He called it Waldorf Salad and listed the ingredients as raw apple, celery and mayonnaise; later he included walnuts as a topping.

Recently, leafing through a 1920 booklet by a manufacturer of mayonnaise, I found that Oscar was not above "giving a commercial." At the front of the booklet under his signature, "Oscar of The Waldorf-Astoria," is printed: "The recipes contained (here) have my hearty endorsement. They will prove delicious additions to the home menu." Oscar's original recipe for Waldorf Salad is of course in the pamphlet.

The booklet, however, contains no recipes in which mayonnaise is used in a baked product. That didn't happen until the 1930s, when, according to legend, a mayonnaise-salesman's wife put some mayonnaise into a chocolate cake. From then on the use of mayonnaise as a baking ingredient grew.

Why it did is anyone's guess. A friend believes it's because Americans are ingenious and adore secret ingredients. They love to say, "You'll never guess what's in this!"

Well, now I've invented something new: Waldorf Salad Quick bread. Yes, it contains, along with the usual quick-bread ingredients, apple, celery, mayonnaise and walnuts. It's delicious.

WALDORF SALAD QUICK BREAD

2½ cups fork-stirred all-purpose flour
3 teaspoons baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt
¾ cup sugar
2 large eggs
½ cup canned or bottled unsweetened apple juice
½ cup real (not imitation) commercial mayonnaise
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 cup unpeeled diced (¼ inch) red apple
¼ cup finely diced (⅛ inch) celery
¾ cup coarsely broken walnuts

Grease and flour 2 loaf pans (each about 7½ by 3½ by 2¼ inches). In a large bowl stir together the flour, baking powder, salt and sugar. In a small bowl beat the eggs slightly; add the apple juice, mayonnaise and vanilla; beat until blended; add to the flour mixture with the apple, celery and walnuts; stir just until flour mixture is moistened. Turn into prepared pans. Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven until a cake tester inserted in the center comes out clean — 45 to 50 minutes. Tops will be cracked. Cool in pans on wire rack for 10 minutes; loosen edges and turn out on rack. Cool completely. Store overnight in tightly closed plastic bags before cutting; do not try to slice thin. Store any leftover in refrigerator; slice while cold but serve at room temperature or heat. Pass butter or cream cheese.

Fire safety saves energy

HAYWARD, Calif. (AP) — Fire safety preparations are being coupled with energy savings at an industrial plant here, reports an energy-oriented publication.

According to Energy User News, a water tank required for fire safety by insurance regulations is being designed to hold nearly triple the mandated capacity so the firm can chill water during off-peak electricity rate hours at night.

The water then will be used to meet all the 465,000-square-foot building's air-conditioning needs during the day.

When we think of brass, we are likely to think of a metal that has an attractive appearance, is fairly costly and will not rust. But its resistance to corrosion does not prevent it from tarnishing unless it is maintained properly and, most important, protected from the air.

Brass is an alloy consisting of copper and zinc in variable proportions. Sometimes such materials as lead, tin, nickel, iron, aluminum and manganese are added to give it special properties.

Tarnishing comes from oxidation, which occurs when air reaches the surface. Brass doorknobs will discolor sooner than many other brass objects because they are touched so often by hands that are moist. The combination of the moisture and the friction eventually wears away the lacquer that originally was put on to keep out the air.

When tarnishing takes place, it usually is best to strip off the old lacquer finish and put on two or three new coats. Before the new lacquer is applied, the tarnish and whatever dirt has accumulated must be removed.

You can do both the stripping and cleaning with lacquer thinner, but extra care must be taken to see that there is plenty of ventilation and no open flame in the room.

In fact, if at all possible, this is a project that is accomplished most safely outdoors, although it must be admitted that will be difficult if there is a wind.

When certain the surface of the brass is clean, apply two or three coats of lacquer, preferably the spraying type. If you are not used to spraying, practice on some scrap metal until you get the hang of it, otherwise you will waste a lot of lacquer, mess up nearby objects and get poor results.

The most common fault of the beginner is to spray on too much lacquer, causing it to run.

Oddly enough, you should leave on the tarnish if you plan to paint the brass, not usually a good idea but often done. Apply a coat of metal primer which contains lead and, most especially, no zinc. When the primer is thoroughly dry, apply the paint or enamel, again one without zinc.

Brass polish can be used on solid brass that is not coated with lacquer or on plated brass, but not on lacquered brass. If you have a grinder or a drill with a polishing accessory, use a cloth buffing wheel with an appropriate buffing compound. To get a high polish, a substance called brown tripoli is excellent for brass and other soft metals.

Gardening president

NEW YORK (AP) — Halfway through his term as president, John Quincy Adams discovered that he had plenty of time for gardening.

Mocked by the American people, his dreams shattered by a recalcitrant Congress, Adams awaited an inevitable defeat in 1828.

He turned, as people often do in time of personal tragedy, to gardening.

According to Jack Shepherd, author of "Cannibals of the Heart: A Personal Biography of Louisa and John Quincy Adams," Adams spent two years planting the barren White House grounds.

He put in with his own hands 300 oaks grown from acorns gathered in Washington, shagbark hickory, persimmon, tulip trees, black and English walnut, apples, pears, peaches, plums, wild and red cherries, chestnut, honey locusts, "and some which I do not yet know."

When Andrew Jackson took office in 1828, however, Adams's plants were neglected, and none survived.

Men's clothing competitive

By JEFFREY MILLS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Palm Beach Co., maker of men's clothes sold nationwide, has agreed not to tell retailers what prices they should charge, the Federal Trade Commission said this week.

The action, which could result in a lowering of prices at some of the 4,000 stores that sell Palm Beach men's clothes, came after the FTC charged that the manufacturer refused to deal with retailers who sold below prices it set.

William Anneken, spokesman for the Cincinnati-based company, said Palm Beach stopped suggesting retail prices several years ago. "We intend to comply fully," he said. The agreement contains no admission of any legal violation and applies only to Palm Beach's men's division, he said.

The pricing policy of Palm Beach's men's division, which had sales of more than $60 million in 1979, allegedly was announced to dealers and those who refused to charge the set prices were cut off by the manufacturer, the FTC charged.

The case is one of a series brought by the FTC in various industries, especially the apparel industry, over alleged interference by manufacturers with prices charged by retailers.

In the most noted of these cases, industry giant Levi Strauss & Co. allowed retailers to set their own prices, causing a marked lowering of retail prices for blue jeans and other Levi Strauss clothes.

Palm Beach, under the agreement it signed, may not fix resale prices and sale periods for men's clothes or refuse to deal with a retailer who does not go along with the suggessted prices.

Palm Beach also may not compensate dealers because a competitor has sold the clothes below the suggested prices.

Offshore gas resources potential lower than estimates

By MAX B. SKELTON
AP Oil Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — An independent study group says there is indication the potential for domestic offshore natural gas resources is lower than earlier estimates.

At the same time, however, the Potential Gas Committee, in its biennial evaluation of exploration and drilling activity, says current data indicates geologic formations below 15,000 feet hold more resources than previously estimated.

The committee discussed the trends while estimating the nation's potential natural gas resources, exclusive of proved reserves, at 913 trillion cubic feet at the end of 1980.

The new estimate is 106 trillin cubic feet below the 978 estimate but the committee said about one-fourth of the decrease can be attributed to transfers from potential resources to proved reserves through drilling and discovery.

Since the early 1960s, the committee has evaluated the potential for production of natural gas from conventional domestic sources. The more than 100 members include representatives of the natural gas industry, federal and state agencies, and academic institutions. Most are geologists and petroleum engineers engaged in exploration and drilling in every producing region and frontier area of the nation.

The 1980 estimates, the committee reported, reflect significant shifts in the pattern of distribution of estimated potential supply when compared with the 1978 report.

"For the lower 48 states 39 percent of the potential is estimated to lie at depths between 15,00 and 30,000 feet, compared with 32 percent of the potential in 1978," the new report said.

"In spite of the decrease in the total estimated potential for the United States, the estimates for this deeper drilling, below 15,000 feet, have also been increased in terms of the actual estimated volume from 199 trillion cubic feet in 1978 to 240 trillion cubic feet in 1980."

The committee said the increases in the estimates are the result of increased focus on exploration for deep targets and are made possible by better geophysical information and by the results of exploratory drilling in the deep portions of the sedimentary basins.

"Also for the lower 48 states," the committee said, "20 percent of the total potential is estimated to occur offshore as compared to 26 percent in 1978. This represents a decrease in the actual estimated volumes from 216 trillion cubic feet in 1978 to 157 trillion in 1980."

The committee said the decreases in offshore areas of the lower 48 states were greatly influenced by the activity in the Gulf Coast region in terms of exploration, development of proved reserves and production and by disappointing results of offshore explorations in the Baltimore Canyon area of the Atlantic.

Alaska's share of domestic potential natural gas resources was said to have dropped from 19 percent to 16 percent the past two years.

"This reflects a decrease in estimates of Alaskan potential from 189 trillion trillion feet in 1978 to 145 trillion in 1980," the report said.

The study group said the Alaskan decreases result from disappointing results in offshore areas, especially in the Gulf of Alaska, and re-evaluation of the potential of certain onshore basins.

On deeper resources, the committee said there has been a very definite increase in the number of wells drilled below 15,000 feet.

"In 1977, there were 472 wells drilled below 15,000 in the entire United States, including the offshore regions," the commitee said.

"In 1980, the API Quarterly Review of Drilling Statistics lists 712 wells drilled to depths below 15,000. In each of the years 1978 and 1979, between 600 and 700 wells were drilled."

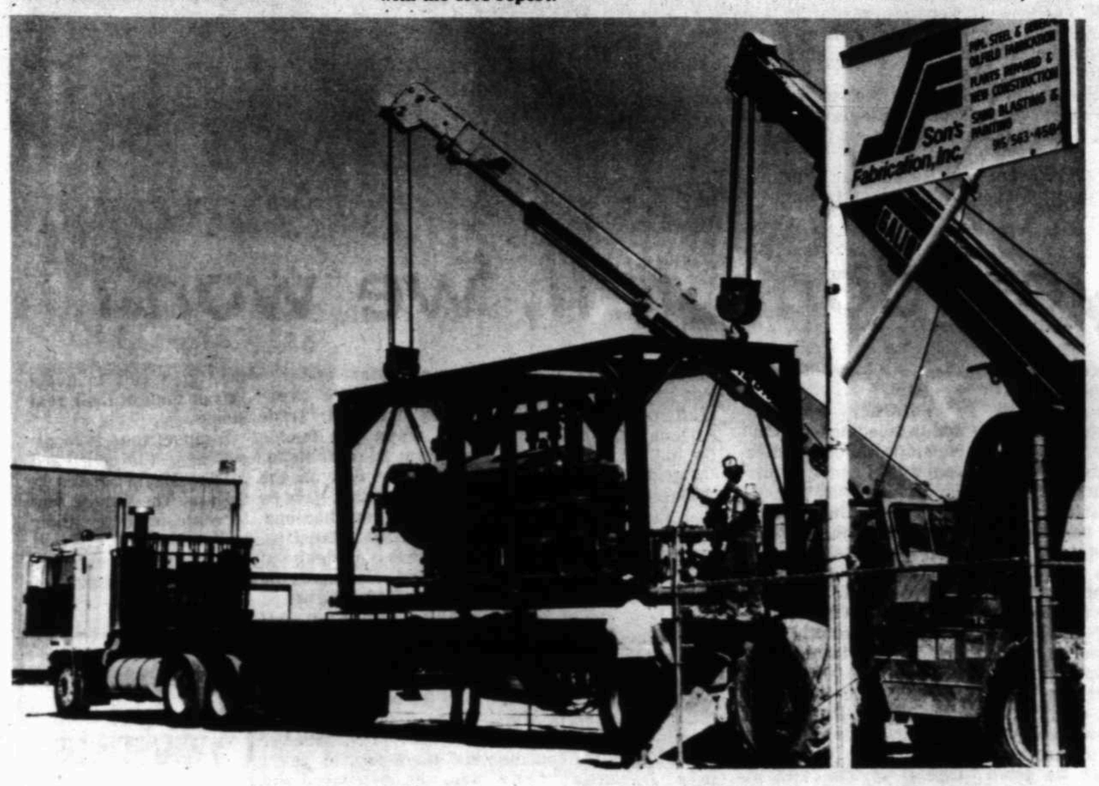

The potential supply of natural gas from the Eastern region that includes the Appalachian basin and all the Atlantic Seaboard except Florida was dropped from 121 trillion to 86 trillion cubic feet.

"This is primarily a result of indications of a reduced natural gas potential from the U.S. Atlantic offshore region," the committee reportd.

The group said that of 23 tests drilled in the Baltimore Canyon area and six in the Southeast Georgia Embayment area significant hydrocarbon shows were indicated in only five wildcats, all within a few miles of each other about 100 miles off the New Jersey Coast.

"While the natural gas potential of the Atlantic continential margins is diminished, industry indicates by decisive actions that the expensive search for economical accumulations of new reserves in the region will continue," the committee said.

The formal report by the committee that operates through the Potential Gas Agency at the Colorado School of Mines will be released in June.

A packaged three-phase test separator, one of two such units designed and frabricated by Son's Fabrication, Inc., is shown being loaded in the firm's Odessa yard, en route to Baker Production Services of Houston. Both units were scheduled for offshore installation. Son's Fabrication is a specialist in A.S.M.E. pressure vessel fabrication and total rig-up service, in addition to the design, fabrication, installation and start-up of gas processing plants.

Japan is among countries rich in geothermal energy

By HIDESUKE NAGASHIMA
Kyodo - Copley News Service

TOKYO — Japan is poor in energy resources, right?

Well, not necessarily. Though it depends almost wholly on imports for its oil needs, Japan is among the countries considered rich in certain energy resources — geothermal energy, that is.

The nation's electric power industry, facing the rocketing cost of oil that is pushing electric utility bills further and further into orbit, seeks to generate more power by using the heat from the depth of the earth.

It's all part of the national efforts to exploit alternative energy sources, and the government's Environment Agency appears to be moving to ease restrictions on geothermal power plants in national parks.

With most energy-rich areas located in national parks, the restrictions so far have blocked expansion of geothermal power projects beyond the existing ones in the nation.

Japan, which is situated on the Pacific "ring of fire" and has more than 30 volcanic vents, already has six geothermal power plants with a total capacity of 162,000 kilowatts. It is next to the United States, Italy, the Philippines and New Zealand, in that order, in terms of existing geothermal power generation capacity.

A study suggests that in Japan, there are potential reserves of geothermal energy convertible to 145 million kilowatts of electric power. With today's technology, 20 million kilowatts of power could be generated commercially.

Construction of new geothermal power facilities is controlled under a 1972 intra-governmental agreement — reached before the 1973-74 world oil crisis — between the Environment Agency and the Ministry of International Trade and Industry.

Under that agreement, geothermal power generation is limited to six sites in Japan and is to be carried out in harmony with the protection of nature.

No new geothermal power plants have been built since that agreement was reached. However, with the nation increasingly feeling the energy pinch, electric power companies have been seeking permission to expand the existing facilities.

"We have been reviewing applications for expansion of two geothermal power plants within national parks," says a spokesman for the Environment Agency, which is in charge of protecting the nation's natural environment.

WTGS plans meeting Tuesday

The West Texas Geological Society will meet Tuesday in the Midland Hilton Hotel Ballroom at 11:20 a.m.

The annual development paper "Developments in West Texas and Eastern New Mexico in 1980" will be presented by L. D. Robbins, exploration manager for Marathon Oil Company, Midland district. Increases were recorded in the following areas: total wells drilled, success rate in both development and wildcat wells and, total footage in development and exploratory projects. Seismic crew activity also showed a continuing upward trend in 1980. Despite the increase in activity, oil production again declined last year.

The Society will present an Honorary Life Membership, a Distinguished Service Award and a Dedicated Service Award to three of its oustanding members. Recipients of the John Emery Adams Scholarships and the Bert Swanson, Jr. Scholarship will be introduced.

Reservations should be made through the WTGS office (683-1573) by 5:00 p.m. Friday.

'If you don't tell, we won't'

Diamontrigue wants you to know the fascinating story of a product of technology which rivals the beauty of nature's own diamonds. Our simulated diamonds are made from Cubic Zirconia, the most convincing diamond simulant yet developed. In fact, it so closely resembles a diamond that even experienced jewelers are being fooled. The stones must be weighed in order to know for certain that they are not diamonds. Diamontrigue stones weigh approximately twice as much as genuine diamonds. However, Diamontrigue sells their stones by diamond size and not actual weight.

As a result of research and development by scientists working on outer space programs, Cubic Zirconium was discovered. Zirconium Oxide stabilized with Calcium Oxide is melted down at temperatures exceeding 5,000 degrees. This tremendous heat is generated by bombarding the crucible containing the minerals, with superpowered high frequency radio waves. During this melt down, the crystal is grown in an isometric crystal system, and at the same time, its form is altered. This amazing substance is then carefully and expertly hand-cut by highly skilled craftsmen. Finally each stone is hand-polished to the highest standards of the gemological art.

Diamontrigue believes that they are unique in offering an unconditional guarantee on the clarity and brilliance of their stones. They sell only the very best stones available. Their stones are checked by two qualified gemologists. You should be aware that all simulated and genuine diamonds come in many different qualities. You can mix Diamontrigue stones with high grade genuine diamonds.

Diamontrigue's quality is consistant and they will exchange their stones. You can "trade up," when you decide you want a larger stone.

The only flaw in the fakes is that they have no flaws, as a real diamond usually has. The Diamontrigue is as clear and clean and colorless as the finest diamond that money can buy. All mountings are 14 karat gold, too.

There are many reasons for buying Diamontrigue stones. When Zsa Zsa Gabor was robbed of her diamonds 10 years ago, she announced she would replace them with fakes. Many have duplicates made of their genuine diamonds to avoid loss or theft of their real stones.

Diamontrigue is located inside the courtyard at The Market Place in Odessa. They invite you to come in to see their brilliant stones. You will be delighted with the price and the beauty of Diamontrigues.

Use good paper on books; They have to last lifetime

WASHINGTON (AP) — Here's one for the books.

The Library of Congress reports that progress is being made in the battle to have books published on paper that doesn't crumble into dust in 25 to 50 years. Most books manufactured in this country have a lifespan of no longer than that.

The problem has been particularly acute for the library, which tries to keep a copy of virtually every book ever published in America. It has 35 acres of books, 18 million volumes, and about a third of them are too brittle to read.

Watt can't touch 1.5 million acres

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Interior Committee, concerned about Interior Secretary James Watt's attitude toward wilderness preservation, is invoking an obscure section of federal law to put 1.5 million acres of Montana wilderness beyond his reach.

Over Republican protests, the committee voted 23-18 on Thursday to declare an emergency in the Bob Marshall Wilderness Area in Montana, effectively prohibiting Watt from approving oil or natural gas drilling leases in the region.

The emergency is the threat to wilderness values posed by oil companies awaiting Watt's formal permission to begin work, said Rep. Pat Williams, D-Mont., who sponsored the resolution. He said some drilling rigs are now operating only 20 yards from the wilderness boundary.

The action also covers Montana's Great Bear and Scapegoat wilderness areas, which are adjacent to the Bob Marshall. The decision is effective immediately, requiring no further approval by either the Senate or the full House.

Committee members said Watt's statements that he wants to open wilderness areas and seek greater use of the nation's resources justifies the exemption granted to the Bob Marshall.

"With the failure of Mr. Watt to warn us in advance, let alone consult with us, I think this committee has to act on its own," sad Rep. John Seiberling, D-Ohio.

Senate gives approval to legislation

AUSTIN-The Senate gave unanimous approval recently to legislation which would add oil to the provisions applicable to shut-in gas and compensatory royalties.

House Bill 1691, by Joe Hanna of Breckenridge, also adds oil to the shut-in provisions presently applicable to gas.

The bill pssed on the Senate Local and Uncontested Calendar.

Senate members receive more than $1 million from groups

WASHINGTON — Members of the Senate Committee on Environment and Public Works and the House Subcommittee on Health and Environment received more than one million dollars, during their most recent elections, from political action committees (PACs) of seven key industries affected by the Clean Air Act, according to a Common Cause study released recently.

Nearly half the amount ($540,495) was contributed by corporations which, according to the Environmental Protection Agency, are in violation of emission limits set under the Clean Air Act. The seven industries cited in the study are the automobile, chemical, forest products, metals and mining, oil and gas, steel, and utilities industries.

The study shows that: in the steel industry, 98 percent of the corporate PAC money came from Clean Air Act violators; in the forest products industry, 91 percent of the corporate PAC money came from violators; and in the chemical industry, 82 percent of the corporate PAC money came from violators.

Authorization for the Clean Air Act, which was enacted to protect the public from unhealthy air, expires on September 30, 1981.

Scheduled to be completed by year-end 1983, the project will require, at peak manpower, approximately 1,500 craftsmen, managers and supervisors.

Foster Wheeler Energy Corporation of Houston, Texas, is serving as design engineer for the project.

Wives stage 12-hour sit-in SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — The wives of several men arrested in student riots a year ago staged a 12-hour sit-in at the American Cultural Center in the southern city of Kwangju to call attention to their plight, the U.S. Embassy said today.

A U.S. Embassy spokesman said the women presented two letters, one addressed to Ambassador William Gleysteen and the other to the center director, before leaving peacefully Thursday. He said the contents of the letters were not known.

The Kwangju uprising began on May 18 last year and was crushed by military force on May 27. Official government figures put the number of dead during that period at 189. Fifty-seven of the people held in connection with the uprising were freed by a government amnesty April 3, but 23 others still are held.

Watt overrules recommendations

(c) 1981, The Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — Secretary of the Interior James G. Watt, in his efforts to speed up oil and gas leasing off the California coast, apparently overruled recommendations by government ocean experts who said more study was needed of the effects of oil exploitation on marine wildlife.

According to documents released Thursday by Watt's office to Rep. John Burton, D-Calif., the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, a branch of the Department of Commerce, protested that unless there is more study, "important management decisions will be made without the benefit of scientifically sound information."

In a letter dated April 10 to the Bureau of Land Management, Robert W. Knecht, of the Office of Coastal Zone Management, also recommended a 10-mile buffer zone off the California coast and seasonal drilling to protect migrating whales.

The overuling of NOAA came after an Interior Department memo, dated April 13, suggested that Watt's top advisers should inform him that "NOAA is not cooperating."

A key concern for Rep. Burton is the possiblity of drilling within the boundaries of the Point-Reyes-Farallon Islands National Marine Sancturary north of San Francisco. Watt is expected to make a decision on this question sometime in the next few weeks as part of his determination whether to lease four northern offshore tracts, called Lease Sale 53.

One letter from Heather Ross, Watt's deputy assistant secretary, noted that "exploratory drilling" within the sanctuaries "will not be necessary" to determine whether oil is available in those areas.

"In any event," Ross added, "the (Interior) Department has the necessary authorities and regulations to assure safe (offshore) operations."

The Oklahoma tradition

By Ernest B. Furgurson

Los Angeles Times Syndicate

WASHINGTON -- Caricature an Oklahoma politician in the provincial Eastern imagination and he is likely a Bible-thumping Democrat with a gallon of crude squishing out of his fancy boots at every step.

Then take a look at the three who have most influenced national politics in the post-war generation, and the one who swings most weight now. Only the Democrat part holds up across the board. Look at them:

The late Bob Kerr and Carl Albert, the erstwhile Fred Harris and the present and future Jim Jones.

Lyndon Johnson used to say that Harry Byrd the Elder, then the parsimonious chairman of the Finance Committee, had to ask Bob Kerr to explain the tax bill to him every year. Chances are, Kerr wrote most of it. He was not merely unashamed, he was exceedingly proud that he was both chairman of Kerr-McGee Oil Industries and a power in shaping national tax policy. What's good for oil is good for Oklahoma, he said. Eastern liberals fainted, but back home they loved it.

Carl Albert, who became Speaker of the House, was not renowned for the damage he did to the oil business, either. Two of the things he was most renowned for were being from Bug Tussle, Okla., and becoming a Rhodes scholar. Some wondered whether the scholarship committee chose him despite his hometown, or because of it.

Fred Harris, of course, was a wild mutation from the historic breeding pattern of Oklahoma politicians. For a while, he was paired in the Senate with that relatively liberal veteran and gentleman, Mike Monroney. But I call Monroney liberal relative only to the Oklahoma tradition. Compared with Harris, he was just barely a moderate.

Compared to anybody, Harris was a steam-driven liberal. Eventually, after seeking the presidential nomination on a populist platform, he dropped out to teach in New Mexico. On his record, and considering Oklahoma's political mood today, there is legitimate doubt that he could get elected deputy fireplug inspector in his hometown of Lawton.

But Jim Jones -- now, that's a live proposition. In him, Republican Tulsa and the state have a a man of the times. Born in Muskogee, son of a country mailman, he combines some of what his predecessors had and didn't have:

Bob Kerr's fondness for oil and power, his association with LBJ (Jones worked in the Johnson White House), but none of Kerr's blatancy.

Carl Albert's quietness and unobtrusive appearance (Jones is slim, of medium height, wears rimless glasses, combs his fringe across his balding pate) -- but with more steel and ambition behind that front.

Fred Harris' brain and drive -- even a passing suggestion that the Democratic Party should still stand for civil rights and liberties -- but infinitely more tact, enough to have won him five terms in the House, chairmanship of the Budget Committee and growing influence on Ways and Means.

Jones has been described as conservative, which is fine for his Tulsa constituents, and a pragmatist, which doesn't hurt much. He also has been called a mixed-breed Middle Eastern rug merchant and a Southwestern oil wildcatter. No serious image problem there, either.

Fascinating, then, that one of the right-wing political- action committees has focused in on Jones as a priority target in its effort to remove alleged obstructions to Mr. Reagan's economic program. This is based on Jones' sponsorship of one of the alternate programs to the administration's budget resolution. True, the Jones version failed, although it was kinder to business than even the Reagan measure. And true, Jones has made it clear he intends now to fight to hold the House to the spending cuts mandated in the president's bill.

But since that is not quite total knee-jerk compliance with every letter of the Reagan program, the National Conservative PAC has tried to savage Jones in TV commercials. So far, however, conservative Tulsa is not buying that line. NCPAC's own public-opinion polls demonstrate this. It may be that the Sooners are thus setting a healthy example for other constituents of PAC-targeted politicians -- insisting that they know, better than some computerized out-of-state ideologue, who does and does not fit the Oklahoma tradition.

Emotions in check

Every so often, it seems, we are given the grim opportunity to address the topic of gun control. No doubt the issue will be raised again in the wake of the recent shooting of Pope John Paul II in Rome.

The most recent shooting incident, though, should serve to quell the talk about the sickness of the American society. The man arrested in connection with the shooting of the pope is not an American and the shooting did not occur on American soil.

It's sad that the shooting does indicate a deeper, more widespread problem. Violence is not strictly an American problem; it's prevalent throughout the world and throughout all cultures.

That realization negates the argument of handgun control advocates. Making hundguns more difficult to obtain — in America or anywhere in the world — only will send madmen and angry people on the trail of other weapons. Such control will not stop killing enacted out of anger or for any other reason.

The real root of the shootings and the killings is the failure to suppress basic emotions such as fear, hate and anger. Civilization depends upon a certain degree of suppression of those emotions.

Individuals in an orderly society practice self-discipline and restraint. They appropriately punish those among them who give way to their more volatile emotions, but even that punishment is carried out in an orderly, low-key fashion.

Mankind relies on this self-discipline and restraint to protect us all from our baser emotions. Without that discipline, civilization as we know it truly would crumble.

It's time to get off the handgun contol kick and start concentrating on a disciplined and orderly society. We can stop the killings and shootings by changing people, not by banning guns.

Reagan's nostalgic bath

President Reagan won a notable oratorical victory with his first outing on the lecture circuit since the tragic attempt on his life.

In his speech at the University of Notre Dame he came up with a medley of serious commentary about the goals of his administration and less serious reflections about his days as an actor.

Naturally he had to mention his role as George Gipp, the legendary football player whose life was filmed in a Reagan-starred movie 40 years ago. But lest he dwell unduly on that memorable line, "Win one for the Gipper," the president cautioned himself:

"If I don't watch myself this may turn out to be less of a commencement than a warm bath in the nostalgic memories."

Once he warmed himself in a bit of nostalgia, Mr. Reagan got down to the business of outlining some of his more urgent policies. He warned of the dangers of a too-powerful "central government," that too much centralization eventually could impair the freedom of our academic institutions.

He looked to the future with optimism: "The years ahead will be great ones for our country, for the cause of freedom and the spread of civilization. The West will not contain Communism, it will transcend Communism."

From these few excerpts we can see that the president chose his words well, as well as the site for his re-entry to the public podia.

He did a good job for Notre Dame, nostalgia and all.

ART BUCHWALD

Any doctor 'in the house' surely can't save a patient

● Art Buchwald ●

When I saw Glover the other day, he looked sick.

"Why don't you go to your doctor?" I asked him.

"I did go. He wants me to see a specialist."

"So why don't you go see the specialist?"

"He's delivering a paper in Sydney, Australia, on his specialty. He won't be back until July."

"All right, then go to another specialist."

"I called another specialist and his secretary said he can't see me until September. I told her I might be dead by then. So she said she'd move me up to August."

"This is May — that seems like a long time to wait. Did you go back to your regular doctor?"

"Yeah. He called around and he finally found a guy who would see me right away."

"That's great," I said. "Why don't you go to see him?"

"Because I'm not sure how good a specialist he is."

"Why? Did you check him out?"

"No. But if he's such a hot doctor, how come he isn't delivering a paper in Vienna, instead of seeing patients?"

"Maybe he is in between lectures," I suggested.

"All right. But if he knows his stuff, why doesn't he have a two-month waiting list like everybody else?"

"That's a good question. He can't be a great medical man if he's willing to see you right away. Maybe he's just starting out in practice."

"I thought the same thing. So that means if I go see him, I'm going to have to get a second opinion."

"Wasn't your family doctor suspicious when the specialist said you could come over so soon?"

"It did make him nervous. He said he had never known a specialist who would see a patient right away. But he also said I didn't have any choice. It was either go to him or NOT see the best man in the field because he was in Australia."

"Maybe the guy who will see you had a cancellation?" I said, trying to cheer him up. "I once knew of a case where a top orthopedic man saw a friend of mine just four weeks after he called."

"What did the orthopedist tell him?"

"That there was nothing wrong with him. Whatever the problem was had cleared up."

"So you think if I wait for the specialist to come back from Sydney, I'll get better, too?"

"I'm not a doctor. But I've heard of many cases where a patient has had to wait so long to see the top man in the field, that he's cured himself."

"But don't you look like a fool if you wait all that time and when you finally see the specialist, he can't find anything wrong?"

"Specialists don't care. They're so busy, it saves them spending a lot of time with you."

"I still wonder if I should cancel the appointment with the specialist who will see me, and try to get one with the one who can't."

"Well, the one who can't is probably the better man, and you'd be more confident with him. At the same time, if you kept your appointment with the doctor who will see you, you could be pleasantly surprised. He might be good at what he does, but doesn't like to deliver papers at medical meetings. You know, there are some doctors who are afraid to fly."

"Why can't the top specialists in their fields just practice medicine?" Glover asked. "Why do they have to keep going to Nairobi and Cairo and Stockholm all the time to read papers?"

"Because if they just took care of patients, no one would know they were the top men in their field. Look, I think you're hurting yourself wrestling with the problem. My suggestion is to go to the specialist who told you to come over right away. But before you let him examine you, ask him how many conventions he's been to this year. If he replies, 'None,' walk out of his office without taking your clothes off."

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

FDA became 'lap dog' for drug company

● Jack Anderson ●

WASHINGTON — You don't have to be a small businessman drowning in a sea of government forms to realize that federal regulation of our lives and livelihoods has gotten out of control.

But though I agree with President Reagan's determination to "get the government off our backs," there is a danger that the deregulation effort may go too far. There are federal regulatory agencies that serve a vital purpose — particularly those that involve the health and safety of the public.

One such agency is — or should be — the Food and Drug Administration. It is supposed to make absolutely certain that products offered for sale are safe to consume, with no unknown harmful side effects. In the case of drugs, the FDA is also supposed to determine whether a new product will actually do what its manufacturer claims it will.

The trouble with the FDA is that, like all too many other federal watchdogs, it often acts more like the pet poodle of the industry it is supposed to be protecting the public from. A disturbing example of this relationship involves the controversial drug Bendectin, an anti-nausea medication prescribed for millions of pregnant women each year.

In past columns, I exposed the faulty process that led to Bendectin's approval in 1956. Internal documents revealed that the drug's manufacturer, Merrell Laboratories (now Merrell Dow Pharmaceuticals), barely tested the drug for safety and withheld damaging information about the drug's effects from the FDA and the public.

Merrell is being sued by several women who took Bendectin during pregnancy and subsequently gave birth to severely deformed babies. Even the drug's creator, Merrell's research director, Dr. Raymond Pogge, testified at one point that he will not prescribe it for his own patients.

The FDA took the company's word that Bendectin was OK and did nothing even after it learned that Merrell had been less than candid about the drug's potential dangers.

Now my reporters Indy Badhwar and Judy Grande have obtained additional Merrell documents that provide even more shocking evidence of the FDA's role as lap dog for the drug company. These show that when an FDA official in charge of policing new drugs was faced with a possible press interview on the effects of Bendectin, she turned to Merrell for a secret briefing on what she should say.

The incredible coaching session took place in April 1977. What triggered the secret meeting was a report that the CBS investigative program "60 Minutes" was considering an expose of Bendectin.

When word got around FDA that the formidable Mike Wallace was preparing to ask agency officials some tough questions about the drug, Marion Finkel, associate director for new drug evaluation, asked Merrell for a briefing on Bendectin's safety. I have obtained copies of handwritten notes of the meeting made by a company official.

The notes show that Finkel and her assistant, Jack Purvis, met with Merrell's vice president and general counsel, Fred Lamb, and the company's medical research director, Dorsey Holtkamp. They discussed ways to give Bendectin its best defense in the face of Wallace's expected assault.

According to the notes, the government and company officials rambled at length through the history of the drug, the studies that had been done, the number of reported birth defects in Merrell and FDA files, and the lawsuits filed against the company. The handwritten notes are larded with references to the dreaded "60 Minutes" investigation.

Soon after the secret meeting, FDA issued a four-page public statement on Bendectin in response to inquiries. A comparison of the FDA statement with the notes of the secret Merrell-FDA meeting shows that the statement was based almost entirely on the discussion that took place that day in April 1977.

The FDA statement, for example, support's Merrell's position — based on studies mentioned in the secret meeting — that birth defects occur less frequently among Bendectin users than among the general population.

This claim, which is vehemently disputed by many experts, is based primarily on a study of 2,000 infants whose mothers had taken Bendectin during their pregnancies. What is shocking is that the FDA cited this study as an accurate safety evaluator even though it was aware — and in fact admitted in its statement — that the study was riddled with "methodological defects."

The prescription for "60 Minutes" was not the first time the FDA had obligingly ministered to Merrell's Bendectin headache.

A few years after the drug was approved, it was listed in the Federal Register as "possibly effective." This designation cost Merrell substantial sales to government agencies, which are forbidden by law to buy drugs that are only "possibly effective." This meant a big loss for Merrell; the Defense Medical Supply Center, for example, is one of the largest drug purchasers in the world.

The company complained to the same Marion Finkel at FDA, and Bendectin's designation was changed to "probably effective" — a label that allowed government agencies to buy it.

Footnote: Finkel refused to accept calls from my office even when informed that she was directly involved. Both FDA and Merrell officials denied any collusion and the company insisted that Bendectin is safe. It is still on the market. Incidentally, the "60 Minutes" segment on Bendectin never aired.

NICK THIMMESCH

Eminently likeable Irishmen square off on social issues

● Nick Thimmesch ●

WASHINGTON — These seem like dark days for "Tip" O'Neill, the leviathan who now appears to be belly-up on the rocky beach of conservatism, gasping for air, and amply filling his appointed role as scapegoat for the Democratic demise in the House.

The Reagan forces, a coalition of Republicans and conservative Democrats, dealt him a stinging defeat on the budget. He is pained to see liberal programs scorned by his own Democrats. He endures the criticism that at 68 he has lost touch with the country, and that he's not attractive enough for TV.

True, Speaker O'Neill doesn't fit the television age. His huge pink face needs a cigar. He's 6 foot 4 inches tall, 260 pounds. There's no spring in his step — he waddles. Tip operates first from gut and heart. But Tip's got a good enough political head to know that for a decade the voter has been fickle indeed.

How else to explain a Nixon, proclaimed dead and buried in 1963, was twice elected president; Jimmy Carter, a peanut farmer and long shot, passing through the Oval Office; or the current rage, President Reagan, long scoffed at as an aging former movie star with California Tory views?

So Tip argues that Reagan has the citizenry in a trance, and when they come out and see what budget cuts will do to them, like those proposed for Social Security, they'll swing back.

"We'll make tremendous gains in 1982," he says, voice booming through his office. "The in party always loses seats in midterm elections. Besides, we won't be running on the Democratic program, but against the Reagan dollar, inflation, high prime rate and so forth. I'm optimistic."

Whatever the future, the present landscape must look dreary to the Speaker. His Democratic majority is easily vanquished by the forces of total GOP House support for the president and threescore defecting Democrats. O'Neill admits his party is badly splintered because of Reagan's enormous popularity.

"He's a folk hero," Tip says, "and people say, give him what he wants, especially since the assassination attempt. People have no idea what his program is. The mail is 100 to 1 for him. They make this a battle between Tip O'Neill and the most popular president in the history of the country. So there's no way we can win.

"But it can change. Reagan annihilated the Democrats in California at the start, but he lost assembly seats and eventually had to compromise, even though his image stayed high, never went below 55 percent."

Nowadays, Tip mutters about how the people "we move from being poor to $15,000 to $50,000 a year" are forgetting. He complains that "the Democratic Party has too many academics and not enough businessmen." He laments the decline of party discipline and the "me-first" trend among politicians.

"Sam Rayburn (legendary strong man Speaker) would do no better today," Tip declares. "We've got splinters and we've got the old-age caucus, the liberal caucus, the conservative caucus, caucuses for Middle America, the farmers, the Sun Belt, recreation, rice, steel and tourism. There's caucuses for blacks, Hispanics, and Italians. The Jewish people deny they have a caucus, but, boy, are they strong when they get together."

Then he tells how years ago an all-Irish Catholic cast dealt with the chocolate-candy issue. President Kennedy wanted support for his trade bill, affecting chocolate, so Speaker John McCormack and Irish Democrat bosses up and down the East Coast were automatically for it. But Chicago's Congressman Tom O'Brien was against it, so that meant 17 "no" votes. So Tip called Larry O'Brien at the White House, who got Kennedy to call Mayor Richard Daley, who called Tom O'Brien, who immediately turned the entire Chicago delegation around.

"That's the way politics was," Tip sighed. "If somebody in the Massachusetts delegation voted against Kennedy, he wouldn't come back to Congress. Hell, last year, we couldn't even get the Georgia delegation to back Carter."

Today, the citizenry is conservative, wants the federal budget cut big and deep, wants the waste of liberal programs dumped in the sea, and rejects "Irish" politics.

This leaves Tip flustered, but still fighting. "Some of Reagan's promises are crazy as a goose," he sputters. "Some in my party say, give it all to him, and let the Republicans stew in their own juice. I am opposed to this. We've got to fight, cut programs, but not scuttle them.

"It's horrendous what he's trying to do to Social Security. Here's people born in the '20s, suffered the Depression in the '30s, went to war in the '40s, come back, and raise families and help make America great. Now he wants to cut Social Security after he gave his word he wouldn't. He is bilking the poor, and we'll cut him down to size on this Social Security thing."

The politics of 1981 have come down to two eminently likeable Irishmen pitted against each other, with the older, more telegenic one far ahead for the moment. But voters, properly angry at the obese federal government, could turn around in the months ahead, especially if their dollar doesn't buy more, and the Reagan charm doesn't still their uneasiness.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Sunday, May 24, the 144th day of 1981. There are 221 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On May 24, 1625, Peter Minuit of the Dutch West India Trading Company bought the island of Manhattan from Indians for $24 worth of goods.

On this date:

In 1830, the first passenger railroad in the United States began service between Baltimore, Md., and Elliott's Mills — 13 miles away.

In 1844, Samuel Morse transmitted the first public message by telegraph — from Washington D.C. to Baltimore.

In 1883, New York's Brooklyn Bridge was opened.

And in 1941, the German battleship "Bismarck" sank the British battle cruiser "Hood" in the North Atlantic, with a loss of more than 1,300 lives.

Ten years ago: Soviet Chief of State Nikolai Podgorny began a visit to Egypt.

Five years ago: the British-French Concorde Supersonic Airlines inaugurated a 16-month trial of scheduled flights to Dulles Airport near Washington.

One year ago: the International World Court ordered Iran to release the American hostages, but the Tehran government dismissed the order as "meaningless."

Today's birthdays: singer Bob Dylan is 40 years old, actress Lilli Palmer is 64 and former Democratic Rep. Wilbur Mills of Arkansas is 72.

AUSTIN NOTEBOOK

Redistricting may succeed in dividing Legislature along party lines

By BILL KIDD
Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Congressional redistricting may provide an answer to the question of whether the Texas House of Representatives will divide increasingly along party lines or (as in the past) along philosphical lines.

That, at least, is the opinion of Rep. Bob Bush, Sherman, head of the newly formed House Democratic Caucus.

This is the first session the Democrats have met as a caucus.

The Republicans have been doing that for years — and with 38 members (counting two recent conversions), they've arrived at the point where the telephone booth outside the House Chamber isn't pointed out as their caucus room any more.

Thus far, the new caucus is acting pretty much as Democrats usually do when they get together in groups of any size.

Bush says the "infant Democratic caucus has found things they can agree on and things they can disagree on."

They have agreed, he says, on a primary bill, shifting the primary dates from the first Saturday in May (with a runoffs the first Saturday in June) to the third Saturday in July (with runoffs the third Saturday in August).

That proposal, incidentally, is sponsored by Bush.

Gov. Bill Clements has promised his fellow Republicans that he'll veto the proposal — which he says is aimed at growing GOP strength in Texas.

Bush also says the caucus has agreed on a resolution stating its goals on congressional redistricting; that resolution cites the need to continue Democratic control of the U.S. House.

Should the Democrats lose control of the House in Washington, the resolution argues, that would mean "loss of 45 of the 69 chairmanships of committees and subcommittees for the Sun Belt states and a corresponding gain by the Frost Belt states."

And, it notes, Fort Worth's Jim Wright, House majority leader, next in line for the speakership, would be "supplanted by a Republican from Illinois...."

While the Texas House caucus is new, it's already becoming involved in a number of matters — and plans to do more.

At its meeting prior to House floor action of congressional redistricting, the group voted 38-14 to offer its own redistricting plan.

That proposal, by Rep. Gene Green, Houston, failed to get the support of black members, due to the fact that the House committee plan would create a black congressional districts in Dallas.

Bush argues that the bill was designed, with Republican connivance, to divide black and brown Democrats while create strong congressional districts for Republicans in the Dallas area, dominated by suburban areas.

Green's plan received 58 votes — and Bush argues that if the caucus had pushed the proposal instead of simply allowing the House to vote on it (and if Democratic Party leadership had been asked to push the plan), it would have done even better.

Bush also syas the Speaker Bill Clayton and Rep. Tim Von Dohlen, D-Goliad, the chairman of the House Committee on Regions, Compacts and Districts, were asking members personally to vote for the committee's plan — adding to the general pressure.

With all that, Bush says, it was decided "not to get the members cut up" in a major floor fight, since the bill "would be written by the conference committee anyway."

Bush says that the increasing success of the Republican Party in Texas has prompted the Democrats to become more concerned with partisan issues.

Thus far, however, partisanship hasn't been particularly an overriding consideration as debate on the redistricting legislation showed.

Rep. Milton Fox, R-Houston, attempted, prior to final passage of the congressional redistricting plan, to amend the measure to the so-called "Republican Plan," which he argued would give a better chance to challengers.

Fox found his fellow republican working to kill his proposal — while Rep. Ron Coleman, El Paso, one of the members of the Democratic caucus steering committee, supported the proposal.

Fox facetiously promised "amnesty" in the 1982 elections for Coleman and any other Democrats who would support the proposal. (It failed.)

Earlier in the session, Clayton indicated he didn't think Democrats would organize, and that partisanship wouldn't be a particularly significant factor in the session.

The Legislature, he noted, hasn't operated along party lines much in the past; the divisions have been philosophical ones.

But with the growth of the Republican Party, there's come as well a growth in partisan feelings — although those feelings as yet appear less important than philosophy or other factors.

Still, it appears that the character of the Legislature is changing — albeit slowly — as the long talked about two-party system becomes more of a reality for Texas.

Incentives to save may result for wrangling

By JOSEPH KINGSBURY-SMITH
National Editor
The Hearst Newspapers

WASHINGTON — While it is now apparent American taxpayers are not going to get as much of a tax cut this year as President Reagan had hoped to give them, there are encouraging signs the administration and Congress will act to provide new incentives for saving money.

The time may come, perhaps next year, when you can have some reasonable hope that a moderate amount of money put into a savings account or certificate of deposit will be worth, with the help of its earned interest, at least as much when you take it out as it was when you put it in. That has not been the case for some years. Inflation has made the value of what you put in a savings account worth considerably less when you took it out a year or more later.

Apart from discouraging you to save, that has had a devastating effect on many savings and loans associations. The Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp. estimates there are now 246 S&L's in trouble because deposits have declined drastically in recent years and high interest rates have made it costly to cover withdrawals. Banks and S&L's have not been allowed to pay interest rates high enough to keep pace with inflation. As a result, people of moderate means have been spending instead of saving. Those who could afford to invest $10,000 or more have been putting the money into certificates of deposit or Treasury bills, paying much higher interest rates.

Now there is a realization on the part of the Reagan administration and many Republican and Democratic members of Congress that something must be done to encourage the American people to save more money.

There is talk of increasing the exemption on savings account interest earnings from the existing $200 annually to several thousand dollars. There is also talk of allowing banks and S&L's to offer the same interest rates that money market funds pay. At present, money market funds are paying nearly 16 percent. If double digit inflation continued for two and a half years, the purchasing power of what you put in would still be less than the value of the original investment. However, if the interest was tax exempt, you might at least break even, and if the inflationary rate declined to around 8 percent, as the administration hopes it will, you might make a little profit on your investment.

Texas Republican Rep. Ron Paul told The Hearst Newspapers he believes something will be done at this session of Congress to provide greater incentives for saving.

"The Savings and Loan associations are in real trouble," he said. "If Congress and the administration were really sincere about helping them, we would eliminate all taxes on interest and dividends from savings. I would remove them all, and I would remove controls on the interest rates that could be offered on savings. If that was done, you would suddenly see billions of dollars flowing into S&L associations. It could be done in just one week of good legislation."

Two leading Senate Democrats, California's Alan Cranston and Texas's Lloyd Bentsen, said they favor tax incentives for saving.

"I would certainly favor incentives for savings provided they are not so deep that the loss of revenue would prevent us from achieving a balanced budget," Senator Cranston, the Senate minority whip, said. "I don't think the exemption could be as high as $5,000. That would be too big to handle. But some increase over the $200 figure could be handled.

"There may also be some other approach that hasn't been thought of yet that would be helpful. One approach that I firmly support is what's called IRA — Independent Retirement Accounts. That is a way for people to set aside money and save it for their own individual retirement. It's a very fine way to promote savings and it doesn't have any big revenue loss to it."

Search your mind

To The Editor:

The Texas Legislature has been considering a bill described as "relating to the crime and penalties for possession, delivery and advertisement of drug paraphernalia." On the surface this may appear to be a worthwhile cause but the copy of the bill we obtained and read is frightening. If the bill were enacted as in the version we obtained, and then strictly applied by oppressive police actions, almost every household in the state could be subject to legal searches and seizure of many household items. Citizens and voters of the state of Texas should become informed on the wording of this bill and possibly advocate its rewriting or defeat.

The bill goes to great length to list and describe items that will be considered to be drug paraphernalia and therefore subject to seizure and use as evidence in a court trial of the owner. Some of the listed items include: a scale or balance (look out, weight watchers); a blender, bowl, container, spoon or mixing device (no more modern kitchens); a capsule, balloon, envelope or other container (no more kid's birthday parties); a metal, wooden acrylic, glass, stone, plastic or ceramic pipe (only corncob pipes exempted); and a hypodermic syringe or needle.

The bill is written so that anyone that owns, possesses, advertises, sells, uses, etc., one of the contraband items listed above is subject to a trip to the courthuse for a speedy and just trial by his or her peers. The bill spends several pages describing how the jury is to determine if a blender, a scale, a mixing bowl, a measuring spoon, etc., is really drug paraphernalia or not. This section does say "the innocence of an owner or of anyone in control of the object as to a direct violation of this Act does not prevent a finding that the object is intended for use or designed for use as drug paraphernalia." Maybe this means that birthday party balloons can still be drug paraphernalia even if everyone at the party is under six years of age and uses nothing stronger than cake and ice cream.

Surely the citizens and voters of Texas should expect better legislation than that described here. The drug problem among people of all ages needs more serious attention than this sweeping condemnation of blenders, measuring spoons and party balloons. We hope the media will investigate this proposed bill and expose what it really says to the public.

Misrepresentation

To The Editor:

The April 27, 1981, column by Charlie Reese ("International Firms Shouldn't Interfere With Foreign Policy") misrepresents both the situation in Angola and the position of Gulf Oil Corporation in regard to that country.

Reese asserts that the regime in Angola is dominated by the Cubans and the Soviets. This view ignores the growing role in Angola of Western companies, Western European diplomatic ties, and Western trade. The Western countries and their business firms offer economic and technological advantages that are unavailable from the Soviets and Cubans. The Angolans have said they want to increase the role of Western interests, and the Foreign Minister has said specifically that Angola is prepared to dispense with the Cuban presence once a settlement on Namibia is reached (New York Times, January 23, 1981).

In the case of Gulf's "lobbying" efforts against the repeal of the Clark Amendment, Gulf specifically stated in our testimony before the Subcommittee on Africa of the House Committee on Foreign Affairs that what we objected to was the timing of the repeal. We think repeal at this time would send the wrong signal to those African nations that supply the U.S. with essential minerals and with abut one-third of our petroleum imports.

Gulf's testimony on Angola was made not to thwart U.S. foreign policy, but to assist in the formulation of that policy. We were asked to present our views because of our extensive experience at doing business in Angola. We spoke honestly and candidly about the situation in Angola and West Africa, with the goal of providing the kind of information our government needs to formulate policies in the best interests of the United States. Senior officials of the Reagan Administration have made it clear they welcome the expression of business views on foreign policy matters.

Clearly, the survival of our way of life in the Western world depends largely on the security of our energy supplies. The nations of Black Africa, including Nigeria and Angola, have proven to be dependable suppliers of oil, especially when petroleum exports from other nations have been cut off. Moreover, Nigeria and the other black nations of Africa uniformly recognize and support the present regime in Angola. These facts should be considered in the development of U.S. policy.

Thank you for the opportunity to set the record straight on this matter.

The real 'root'

To The Editor:

"Tearing apart a nation," on Page 6F of the May 17 Reporter-Telegram offers a widely publicized view of the struggle in Northern Ireland, a perspective which seems to overlook the vital component of the conflict. Religion is often named as the spark of the Irish violence, and your editorial also blamed Marxism, which is a secular faith for some. But the fighting does not seem to be based on philosophic grounds as Catholicism vs. Protestantism or Marxism vs. democracy would suggest. It is instead rooted in earthly politics.

The Irish Republican Army is not fighting to suppress Protestants or capitalists; it wants the British government out of Ireland. Northern Ireland is one of the few lands of the once globe-encompassing British empire that has not successfully booted Her Majesty's bureaucrats off of their thrones.

That the IRA's bid for freedom is branded as a senseless religious feud is not suprising when one thinks of the manner in which history is recorded. "History" is typically penned by the folks who come out on top in revolutions, wars or usurpations. The British, being on top in Northern Ireland, are able to shape the new pretty much to their own liking. In their words, Northern Ireland is "plagued by terrorists," not "having a civil war." Admitting the existence of a civil war would make the IRA's stand seem more valid than the British would like to let on, so they are compelled to keep the religious struggle myth alive.

Certainly it is true, as The Reporter-Telegram has paraphrased Margaret Thatcher, that the hunger strikers are no more than criminals. All IRA activists are criminals. A criminal is anyone who willfully disobeys existing law, which the IRA does with determination. But this does not mean that the hunger strikers or the IRA is bad. If the law is unjust then the criminal cold seemingly be just, but unquestionably a criminal. George Washington and Thomas Jefferson were criminals, and never would have achieved status as heroes if they has not won their fight. In fact if the Crown's law had successfully kept the colonies under control, events which inspire American natioanlism such as the Boston Massacre would have been recorded in history as necessary police action, if they had been recorded at all. And Britain's point of view on the American revolution would have been the same as its perspective of Northern Ireland: a bunch of terrorists trying to destroy the existing order.

So we can see that Britains's interest is to hold onto the reins of Northern Ireland, and a convenient aid to this is to portray the struggle as a hopeless religious fight. It is disheartening to see American publications buy this line.

Pitching tents

To The Editor:

Governor Clements has proposed the establishment of tent cities within our prison complexes to alleviate overcrowding of prisoners. He has a valid point in his comment: "If tents are good enough for our Army, for our Marines, and for our National Guard, they're good enough for our prisoners."

Our servicemen not only trained and lived in tents, but many attained a mental and moral toughness therein through the years. This could be a strong aid in the rehabilitation of the prisoners.

It is to be hoped that any challenges to his proposal will be rejected by the courts, while the opinions rendered will be strongly supportive of the underlying philosophy.

Governor Clements has made a number of sound suggestions and policies since his inauguration, but this is undoubtedly one of his best. And it's gratifying to see that he has intensified his efforts on prison reform.

It is time...

To The Editor:

The following resolution has been adopted by the Daughters of the American Revolution. It seems particularly appropriate at this time of remembering our war dead — Memorial Day.

Whereas the recent hostage crisis in Iran received daily attention by the government and the media, and

Whereas DAR believes that the duty and necessity to serve in the countrys' armed forces is fundamental to the privileges of American citizenship and as much a part of the heritage from our founding fathers as the freedoms which were won for us by their sacrifices and courageous service in arms, and

Whereas the veterans of Vietnam feel betrayed by a nation which has not recognized their sacrifices, and

Whereas the several thousand United States prisoners of war from the Korean and Vietnam Wars still missing and unaccounted for have been grossly ignored and some have been reported enslaved in various parts of Southeast Asia,

Resolved that we as individuals now reaffirm our pride in the dedicated service of the Vietnam veterans who performed under especially difficult and adverse conditions, without the full support of their country at large, and

Resolved that we as individuals insist that a full-scale investigation be made into the fate of all United States' POW/MIAs still unaccounted for, emphasizing that this is a United States Government responsibility due every serviceman.

It is heatwarming to know that a monument to the Vietnam War dead is being erected close by the Washington Monument looking toward the Jefferson Memorial. Heretofore the conscientious objectors and draft dodgers received a great deal more recognition, (even amnesty), than those who served their country. And we are all aware of the lionization of the hostages held in Iran. So it is time — time for a Memorial Day prayer — a monument — and for resolutions showing in every way the gratefulness all of US hold for the sacrifices made by each person who served US in the Vietnam War.

Keeping it clean

To The Editor:

The city of Midland and Midland Chamber of Commerce have requested citizens to get involved in cleaning up the city...yet the biggest amount of the trash citywide is not being mentioned! That is the dirt and debris that rest in the city streets against the curbs. In the 1950's Midlanders took pride in the fact that we had a clean city...street sweepers regularly swept the dirt and litter off both downtown and residential streets.

When people drive down a street filled with litter, they think nothing of adding to that litter...but if the streets were cleaned REGULARLY people would think twice before they would toss junk on the streets. Homeowners tend to let the grass grow over the curb to hide the trash there, the grass then slows the flow of water when it rains (or a thoughtless homeowner lets his sprinkler water the street for blocks!) and this causes more dirt to collect and allows weeds to grow above the pavement. This happens in all sections of the city, and no matter how many old sofas and ranges the city hauls away, the first impression visitors to the city get is of the streets they drive on...where there is dirt, trash, weeds, grass, paper and broken bottles.

Crews used a grader with a blade to move the dirt away from the curb on Florida Street just east of Garfield, then a front-end loader was used to scoop up the dirt and junk to be hauled away in a truck. This same method would help the residential neighborhoods, but unless the city will sweep the streets the mess will return.

Of course, city officials will say they cannot sweep the streets because of the cars parked in the streets...but Dallas and Houston and other cities have overcome the problem and perhaps Midland could also, if enough people put the pressure at the right place...City Hall.

Housing board to meet to get future directions

By BILL KIDD

AUSTIN — On May 27, the Texas Housing Authority plans to meet to determine what direction THA will take in the future — but Executive Administrator Earline Jewett says the agency will continue this commitment to single-family housing.

THA sold a $150 million bond issue in October to assist single-family housing, with the funds substantially committed by the end of December, she notes.

"We're right at the end of purchase all of the loans...about 3,000," she adds.

Mrs. Jewett says THA has been using the time since the end of the bond sale to "take a long look at the future," with the THA board holding a two-day meeting in February to "look at some of the broad housing issues in Texas..(including) rising costs of housing and financing housing."

THA also is looking at problems of housing for the elderly and handicapped, and at the possibility of assisting in providing rental housing for families, and at various rehabilitation programs.

At the May 27 meeting, the board expects to make "some further decisions on what we will be doing...long-term and short-term goals," Mrs. Jewett says.

THA wants to act in areas other than simply serving as a funding vehicle, she says.

"We don't want to be just issuing bonds...We are treating our ability to issue bonds as a scarce resource; it's not something that's unlimited."

Many localities which have looked at financing their own housing programs appear to have limited their efforts, perhaps, she says, due to the "very complex" and vague language of the final regulations on such bond programs.

Without new language from the U.S. Treasury Department, bond attorneys aren't willing to give a "clean opinion" on bond issues — and while the Treasury Department has promised amended language, the regulations haven't been issued.

But at present, THA is considering other areas which may not require additional bonds, while continuing to emphasize single-family housing assitance.

State Board of Insurance has been charged, under the proposed general appropriations bill, with making a study, at a cost not to exceed $200,000 of the role of investment income in developing rates for various lines of insurance.

Use of investment income has been a controversial subject for several years, with arguments over whether, how, and to what extend it is considered in rate-making; the study is an attempt to resolve some of the controversy.

In another insurance related matter, SBI has been urged by the Texas Association of Insurance Agents to proceed with implementation of the simplified homeowners policy.

At the May 7 property hearing, TAII asked SBI to adopt the policy, which was developed by a board advisory committee appointed in 1977.

Midland Community Theatre volunteers, from left, Cindy Fox, Karen Evans, and Shawn Gilstrap are spending getting-it-together nights at Theatre Midland for the Friday opening of "On Golden Pond."

BACKSTAGE — Life in the back lane

It took time, patience and a knack for personal endurance. For some it would have been too much to tackle. Just looking at the mountains of clothing, jewelry, hats (6,000 to be exact), scraps of cloth, shoes, wigs, feathers and other accessories, would have been more than enough to send all but the hardiest off with a gesture of hopelessness.

For volunteers Nita Lloyd, Peggy Jones and staff member Mae Dawson it was a challenge. Together, they spent 2 years cataloguing all of the miscellaneous ware accumulated at Midland Community Theatre. Today the fourth floor storage at Theatre Midland has a place-for-everything-and-everything-in-its-place glow.

The reward volunteers receive at MCT is not one of money because there is no monetary reward, but rather of pride in knowing they have helped bring enjoyment to audiences by their bit by bit building of a show.

And as Karen Evans, a volunteer costumer, said humorously, "If you aren't crazy before you get here, you are after the first show."

The MCT production board includes departments for make-up, stage crew, publicity, sound, lights, costumes, props, paint, casting and play selection. The chairpersons of each are volunteers, as are a large portion of those who work with them. As Dottie Fox, staff member and volunteer coordinator, explained, "It takes 10 to 15 workers backstage to put one actor onstage."

After the play selection committee has spent the summer reading and choosing plays to submit to MCT's board of governors, which then reads and selects the best choice for each respective time slot, the casting committee holds auditions to cast the show, and the director designs the sets. Then the problem of creating the necessary effect onstage goes to the construction shop where illusions and dreams are put to the test.

Can it be done?

Once the sets are built, colors for costumes and backgrounds are chosen. The work of creating an evening's make-believe made real world for the audience begins.

MCT has approximately 230 volunteers in all, Mrs. Fox said. Some have been with the theatre for years while others are new to the theater world. It takes both to put a production onstage.

And it takes love. The love of helping to create enjoyment for others without the publicity and public awareness that those onstage receive.

But perhaps its ultimate reward is one of satisfaction — the knowledge of a job well done.

Parliament approves emergency powers

MADRID, Spain (AP) — Spain's Parliament has approved a law giving the government emergency powers to arrest at will, search private homes, tap all communications, close newspapers, suspend business operations, seize transport, banish citizens, ban strikes and establish curfews.

Some of the measures are tougher than any ever used during the Franco dictatorship. The legislation was approved overwhelmingly Wednesday by Premier Leopoldo Calvo Sotelo's ruling center party and the opposition Socialists of Felipe Gonzalez.

The vote was 266 in favor. Seven Basques voted no, and 21 Communists abstained in the 350-seat lower house. The bill already had been passed by the Senate.

The new law came amid indications Calvo Sotelo's government was considering more drastic measures to try to stem Basque separatist terrorism three months after an abortive right-wing military coup and following the terrorist slaying of the 10th military man this year.

Unconfirmed reports from military sources said some armored units had been moved from Madrid to join the 3,000 soldiers sent to help in the anti-terrorist fight in morthern Spain.

Police reported 10 new arrests of terrorist suspects Wednesday in San Sebastian, bringing the total to nearly 75 in the last two weeks.

The law gives the government the power, after prior majority approval of the lower house of Parliament, to arrest and hold without charge for 10 days people "suspected of trying to alter public order." A judge can extend the arrest for an additional 10 days.

Under declaraion of a 0-day state of emergency, the government can "intervene in all cases of communication, including mail, telegraph and telephone." Citizens can be banished to other parts of Spain, public meetings banned, operations of industry, business, newspapers, radio, state television, movies and theaters suspended. Bars, nightclubs and restaurants can be closed.

Under states of emergency in the dictatorship of Gen. Francisco Franco, who died five years ago, the government established press censorship, banishment, search without warrant and indefinite arrest without arraignment. In a two-month national state of emergency in 1969, Franco's police arrested 719 people and sent 243 of them to prison.

Trolleys may return to El Paso

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — David Martinez remembers driving the old trolleys through the streets of El Paso, carrying wide-eyed tourists and quiet workers back and forth between the city and Ciudad Juarez, Mexico.

Martinez, like most of the streetcar veterans, longs for the return of the clang-clang of the bell and the bustle of hundreds of passengers.

If some El Pasoans have their way, Martinez and the others may get their wish.

Local businessmen, city officials and nostalgia lovers are trying to get federal funds to revamp the streetcar system, or at least part of it, and to return to the downtown area a cheap mode of rapid transit.

"I don't think I could go back to driving them because of my position now," said Martinez, who is a supervisor with the city's bus system. "But a lot of drivers would enjoy going out and driving those streetcars, especially the old timers."

The electric streetcars ran in El Paso from 1902 until May 1974, when the system was dismantled and the streamlined old trolleys were stowed in a transit system shop to gather dust, spider webs and rust.

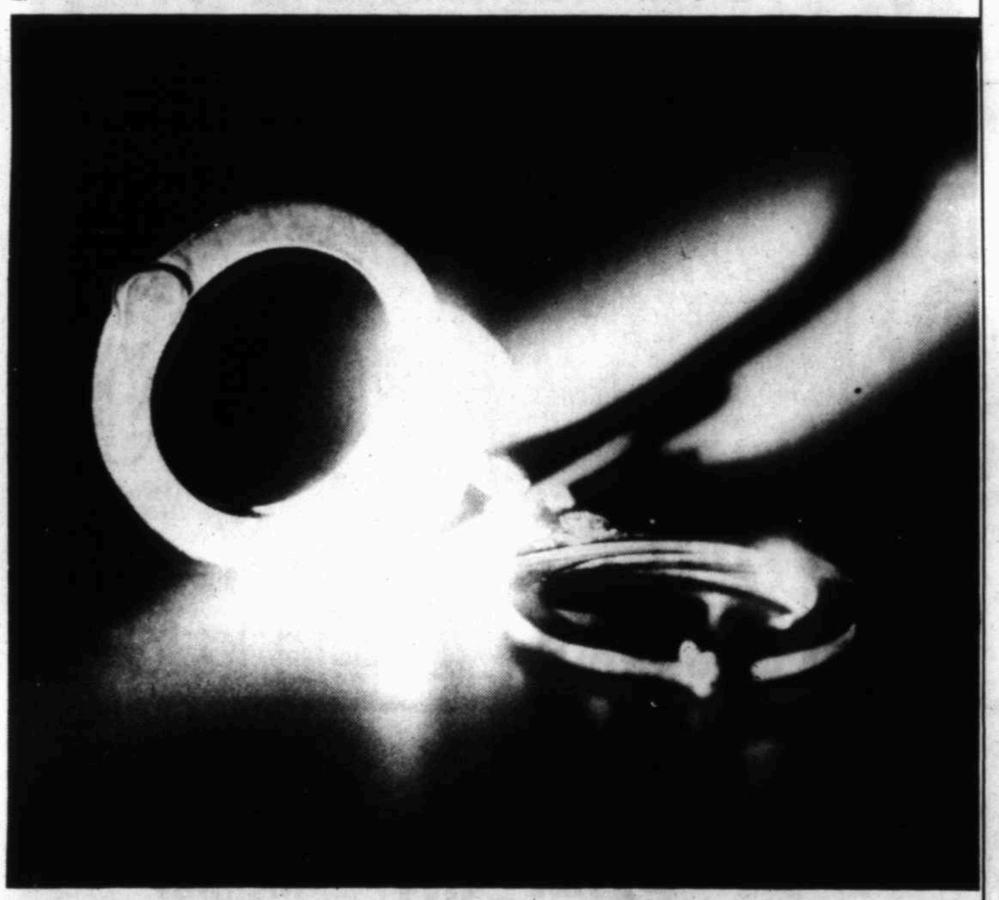

Most of the drivers went to work for Sun City Area Transit, or SCAT, the bus system that serves most of the city. But many would be ready to return to driving the streetcars, Martinez, 40, said.

"Buses are harder to maneuver downtown," said Martinez, who drove trolleys for seven years before switching to buses. "Overall, the streetcars are very, very easy to drive and handle. The track takes care of it.

"We enjoyed the driving," he added. "Business was good."

From the 1950s until 1973 when the franchise to Juarez was canceled by the Mexican government, the streetcar system carried 14,000 to 15,000 people per day, according to Judy Price, the city's transit planner.

Ms. Price is one of the El Pasoans working to revive the streetcar system.

Changing British conventional defense plans threaten Trans-Atlantic rift

By ARTHUR GAVSHON
AP Diplomatic Correspondent

LONDON (AP) — Britain is planning to bolster its nuclear arsenal at the expense of conventional forces, a policy that threatens strains between Margaret Thatcher's government and the Reagan administration.

The government defense policy withstood a test in the House of Commons on Wednesday night, surviving a Labor Party censure motion 313-232 after two days of debate. The opposition challenge specifically attacked plans to spend at least $10 billion to build for submarines to carry U.S.-made Trident missiles.

The cost of the Trident program will force changes in the allocation of Britain's limited resources set aside for the navy, army and air force, Defense Secretary John Nott conceded during the debate.

"Money spent on Trident," Nott said, "is money not spent on something else."

Nott's and Thatcher's responses to questions from their own Conservative supporters left little doubt that that "something else" almost certainly is the storied Royal Navy. British land forces, too, will be expected to yield. A bit might come from the Royal Air Force.

Any reduction of conventional forces by the European allies cuts against the grain of NATO and U.S. strategy.

"There is a critical need to strengthen the conventional force structure in Europe," U.S. Deputy Defense Secretary Frank Carlucci said recently. "This requires additional resources rather than more rhetoric"

Thatcher and Nott said this week in the House of Commons they mean to stand by the 1977 NATO decision to increase defense spending by 3 percent annually, after accounting for inflation. But they acknowledged the competition for funds between nuclear weaponry and conventional forces.

A far-reaching review of Britain's defense priorities is to be completed by July. No formal decisions have yet been taken, but some of the options under consideration have been discussed with politicians and journalists by senior service chiefs, whose motives clearly are to touch off a public debate that could head off some of the arms cuts.

Major options facing Nott and the Thatcher cabinet, as outlined to The Associated Press by sources who declined to be identified, include:

—Reducing the Royal Navy's surface fleet in the Eastern Atlantic.

—Trimming the Army of the Rhine, the British force based in West Germany.

-Changing Britain's anti-submarine warfare strategy by replacing surface ships with hunter-killer submarines.

There has been talk of saving as much as $20 billion dollars over the coming decade to meet the cost of the Tridents. Nott discounted such estimates as much too high.

Britain's budget trimming plans come at a time when the U.S. Congress is considering an $80 billion, or 17 percent, increase in U.S. defense spending — the largest peacetime hike in U.S. history.

Thus any British cutbacks in defense spending or military contributions to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization are likely to strain relations with Washington.

Officials assigned to Mexico

WASHINGTON — In a move to strengthen working relations with Mexico, the State Department has assigned new officials to positions dealing with Mexican affairs.

Everett E. (Ted) Briggs, director of the Mexican desk since August 1979, has been promoted to deputy assistant secretary of state for inter-American affairs.

There are four deputy assistant secretaries in the Latin American bureau, and Briggs' area of responsibility will include Mexico, department officials said.

Briggs has been replaced on the Mexican desk by T. Frank Crigler, who had been the senior Foreign Service officer at the U.S. Embassy in Bogota, Colombia, also since August 1979.

Neither appointment has been announced by the State Department because the Senate has not yet confirmed Thomas Enders to be the assistant secretary for inter-American affairs. Briggs and Crigler were selected for their new posts by Enders.

Briggs, 47, has been with the Foreign Service since 1956. Fluent in Spanish and Portuguese, he has served in La Paz, Bolivia, Asuncion, Paraguay, Bogota, Lisbon, Berlin and Luanda, Angola.

Crigler, 45, joined the Foreign Service in 1961. He has served in Mexico City and Guadalajara, and several African capitals. Crigler was the ambassador to the Republic of Rwanda from 1976 to 1979.

He received the State Department's Christian Herter Award last January for outstanding performance as the deputy chief of mission in Bogota during the period in which U.S. Ambassador Diego Asencio was held hostage by a Colombian terrorist group.

Military benefits attractive

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Texas could become a haven for military men with divorce on their minds, lawyers for a retired colonel's ex-wife have told the State Supreme Court.

The court agreed Wednesday to hear the woman's challenge to a ruling that ex-wives are not entitled to part of the military retirement benefits their husbands accrued while stationed in states without community property laws.

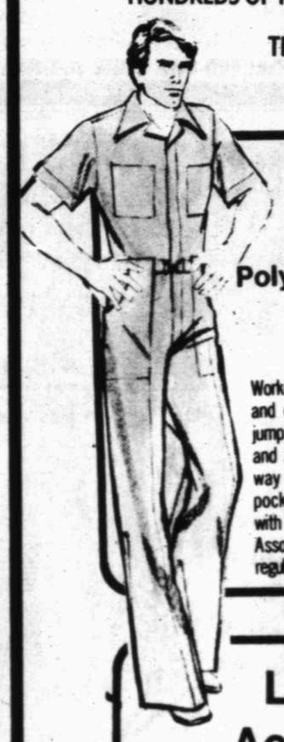

The Corpus Christi Court of Civil Appeals denied Sue Akers Cameron any of the retirement benefits paid to Paul A. Cameron, her ex-husband.

It said that during the couple's 20-year marriage, Cameron had been stationed only in states without community property laws, except for about three months in California.

"The military retirement benefits which accrue during the marriage while residing in common-law states and the benefits which accrue while single are separate property of the spouse in the military. Conversely, the retirement benefits which accrue while residing in community property states are community property," the appeals court said.

Allies asked to create reserve by Atlantic Council

By L. EDGAR PRINA
Copley News Service

WASHINGTON — The Atlantic Council called on the European allies this week to create a strategic reserve to replace U.S. troops earmarked for NATO which may have to be sent to Southwest Asia or other danger spots.

In a newly published report entitled, "The Credibility of the NATO Deterrent," the bipartisan panel of diplomats and military officers said:

"Since the United States must now undertake significant military measures in the Middle East which are just as much in the interest of Europe and Japan as they are of the United States, the group proposes that the European allies seek to compensate for this contingent drain on the net resources available to reinforce defense in Europe."

The panel was headed by Kenneth Rush, chairman of the council and former acting secretary of state, and Lt. Gen. Brent Scowcroft, former national security assistant to President Ford.

The report explained that, while the allies have large numbers of reserves, in many cases they are mainly intended to be individual replacements and lack the training and organizational equipment that would make them quickly available for unit duty.

"The advantages that would accrue from developing the potential of reserves already in Europe are so significant as to suggest that this method of procedure also be increasingly relied on by the alliance in the longer term future," it said.

"Organizing the trained reserves in Europe into additional combat units which would be speedily mobilized and deployed in time of crisis could provide the most efficient and effective solution to that need (for improved conventional capability)."

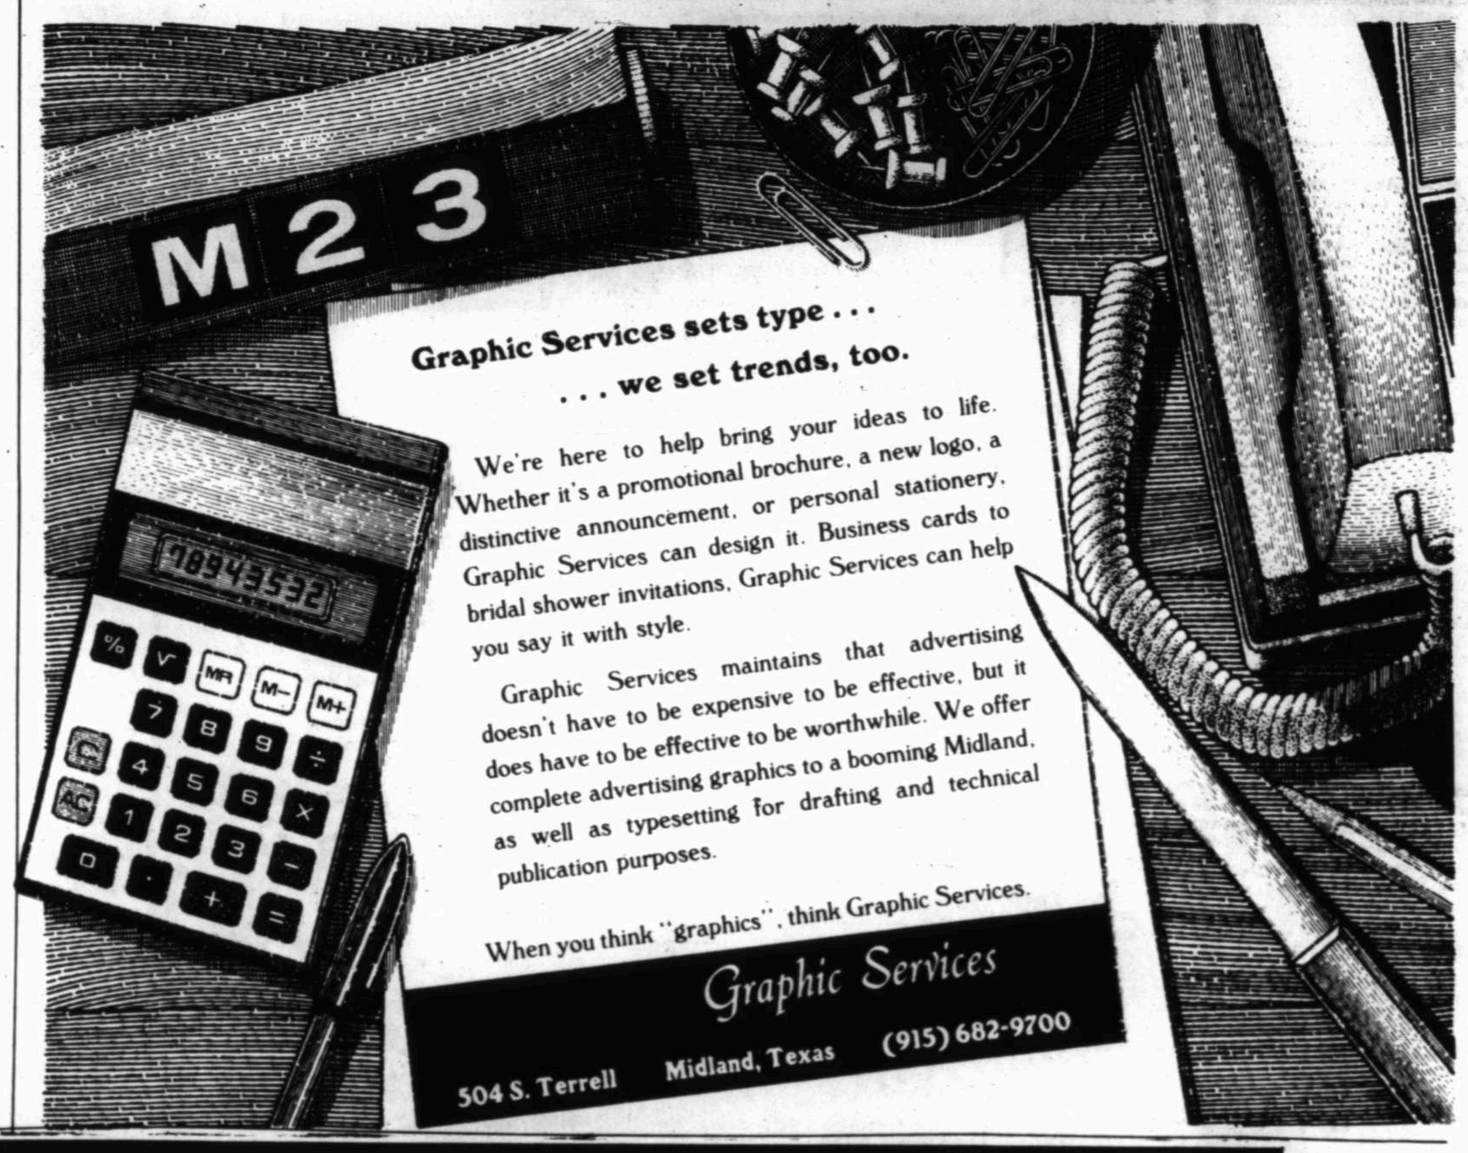

In addition to reserves for the central front, the panel urged the allies to provide trans-Atlantic airlift for U.S. reinforcements to Europe.

The panel found that NATO's strength vis-a-vis the Soviet Union and Warsaw Pact has declined so much in the last decade that the alliance cannot have high confidence of maintaining a forward defense without early resort to nuclear weapons. The panel did not think that was such a good idea.

"Resort to tactical nuclear weapons by the allies would be likely to make them worse off, as not only the national infrastructure and populations of Western Europe, but also NATO's military forces themselves would be vulnerable to Soviet nuclear counter-attack," it asserted.

"To the extent that control of the situation through escalation to tactical or theater nuclear war exists, it can be said to now rest with the Warsaw Pact rather than the West."

As for the reasons the West has lost ground to the Warsaw Pact in the last 10 years, the panel said it was due as much to the "inadequate" Western effort as to the Soviet military buildup.

Harold J. Reynolds examines one of the more than 500 species of wild flowers growing on his 11 acre homestead near Pleasant Grove, Pa. Reynolds believes the beautiful flowers can cure diseases.

New type of gonhorrhea found

ATLANTA (AP) — A strain of gonorrhea resistant both to penicillin and the back-up drug spectinomycin has been found in a 20-year-old American serviceman, the first known infection of its type, the national Centers for Disease Control said today.

The serviceman, subsequently cured by treatment with yet another antibiotic, apparently developed the infection this winter while stationed at Clark Air Force Base in the Philippines, the CDC said.

Dr. Harold Jaffe, a clinical researcher in the CDC's Venereal Disease Control Division, said an Air Force medical team had been sent to the Philippines to test gonorrhea strains for resistance to the two drugs which are the first choice for treatment.

In addition, the CDC said in its Morbidity and Mortality Weekly Report that it is urging health departments in the United States to test penicillin-resistant gonorrhea strains for evidence of resistance to spectinoymcin.

"We don't know how common this strain is — possibly this is very, very rare and we won't come across it again," Jaffe said. "It's also possible there are more of these strains we are not aware of."

Until 1976, penicillin was the treatment of choice for gonorrhea. Then scientists found strains which produced enzymes that broke up the penicillin molecule in the body.

Doctors turned to spectinomycin as a back-up drug.

"Spectinomycin was a good drug to use on these kind of (penicillin-resistant) infections because the enzyme had no effect on it at all," Jaffe said.

The drug has been used extensively on cases which developed in the Far East, where as many as 30 to 35 percent of the gonorrhea cases have been penicillin-resistant, he said.

The curerate for pectinomycin has been about 95 percent, he said.

The serviceman, who was not identified, was given three injections of spectinomycin between April 24 and April 30, according to the CDC's report.

But upon his return to the United States, tests showed he had not been cured and doctors at Travis Air Force Base, Calif., treated him with tetracycline, another antibiotic whose cure rate in gonorrhea cases is about 60 percent, Jaffe said.

That treatment cured the patient, Jaffe said.

Jaffe said at least two other drug-treatment regimens can be used to combat gonorrhea strains resistant to both penicillin and spectinomycin, but that both are more expensive and have been in use for shorter periods of time.

"Our biggest concern is that this new strain won't be recognized; that patients will receive inadequate therapy and continue spreading disease," Jaffe said.

About 1 million cases of gonorrhea were reported in the United States last year. About 1,100 were reported to be penicillin-resistant.

Moses fills in for Lord

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A judge named Lord is on vacation so a temporary magistrate named Moses has been assigned to the trial of a damage suit against the San Diego Diocese of the Roman Catholic Church.

Attorney Elliott Moses will handle the personal injury case in place of vacationing Superior Court Judge Alfred Lord.

Mary Wilson, 57, of San Diego is suing the diocese for $200,000 as the result of back and neck injuries she said she received when she fell down stairs.

Your horoscope

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Philosopher Ralph Waldo Emerson was born on this date, as was the late Marshal Tito, the longtime ruler of Yugoslavia. Your finances are due to show slow steady improvement in the coming year. Investigate opportunities to indulge your love for travel. Gentle and sensitive, you are sometimes too self-effacing for your own good. Try to be a little less modest about your accomplishments. Otherwise, higher-ups may take you for granted, promoting those with less ability but more aggressiveness. Love relationships become much deeper and more satisfying. A romance of long duration may result in marriage.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Stress cooperation in discussions with higher-ups or mate. A hurried decision could put you in an uncompromising position. Refuse to be rushed! Scrutinize fine print before signing contracts.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Ambition can be a powerful asset now but it is timing that is your key to success. Move slowly! Get all the facts before making long-range decisions.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): An unorthodox approach may work best today. Keep up to date with new developments in your field. Check fine print if negotiating a loan or signing an important agreement.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Be more objective about business matters. Cut back on spending. The prospects for travel are excellent. Ask for loved ones' views before making long-range decisions.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A tendency to be boastful could get you into trouble today. Watch what you say, and be modest about past accomplishments. Daydreams, fantasies could occupy your thoughts this afternoon.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Finding the answer to a puzzle will put you in a cheerful mood. Showcase any special talents or ideas you have to attract the attention of an influential higher-up.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A hasty decision could boomerang. Take your time when making up your mind. Recycle old ideas to boost profits. Greater financial rewards will be yours in the future.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Put your ideas in writing to protect your interests. Tackle paperwork, routine tasks before launching new project. New alliances can mean faster progress. Renew an old friendship.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Eliminate confusion by showing more confidence in your decisions. Stress the power of positive thinking when encouraging co-workers. Welcome friend's suggestion on how to meet a challenge.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You may decide to attend or take part in a parade today. Invite friends, neighbors to join you for a picnic! You and mate are on the same wavelength now. Pool your ideas.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Conversation with family member may evoke a nostalgic mood. A short trip could be part of today's plan. Use public transportation whenever possible. Others are apt to be absent-minded.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Vocational and financial gains are indicated. You may receive a message sooner than you expected. A talk with an influential associate helps you set some important new goals.

FDA extending recall for bad mushrooms in 30 states

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Food and Drug Administration, extending a recall begun last week, is warning residents of 30 states not to eat certain brands of four-ounce canned mushrooms packaged by Oxford Royal Mushroom Products Inc.

The FDA issued the warning Thursday night after tests conducted by the government and the National Food Processors Association, an industry trade organization, turned up several cans contaminated with botulinum toxin.

FDA spokesman Wayne Pines said the mushrooms could cause illness if eaten. But, he said, the FDA so far knows of no injuries or deaths associated with consumption of the contaminated mushrooms.

Most of the cans probably will not contain the toxin, but the possibility is serious enough to warrant a general warning, Pine said. About 5 million cans were distributed nationwide under several brand names. Some cans were sold under generic names.

The cans have the letters DK on the top line of a code followed by numbers from 101 through 130 or EK followed by the numbers 101 through 113. In each instance there also is a bottom line with the letters P or LP followed by the numeral 1 or 2.

"We are telling consumers if they have four-ounce cans of mushroom pieces and stems, look carefully at the lid," Pines said. "If they have mushrooms with those codes they should return them to the place of purchase. Certainly that product should not be opened or consumed."

The cause of the contamination is still under investigation, he said, indicating that Oxford Royal may issue another recall later.

"What we're doing now is issuing the warning and discussing with the company the recall situation," he said. "The situation is somewhat in flux."

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Radiation may not be as damaging as thought

Dear Dr. Solomon: I just completed reading an article about the devastating effects of an atomic explosion — how wide an area would be contaminated, how many people would be killed and injured, and how much property would be destroyed. Although the writer indicated that death and destruction would be enormous, he seemed to suggest that the survivors would then pick up the pieces and start life all over again. Personally, I find this very hard to believe.

What I feel the article ignored was the effect of the intense radiation on those who might survive such an attack. My own feeling is that those who survived might not be any better off than those who died. This belief is strengthened when one considers the inevitable increase in birth defects in children born to people exposed to massive radiation. I realize that different people will have different views on this often controversial subject, but I would welcome your comments. — Alex

Dear Alex: First, let me emphasize that nothing I say should be interpreted as an effort to minimize the horrors of atomic warfare, or the need for people of goodwill everywhere to try to assure that such a catastrophic event never takes place. From a strictly factual standpoint, however, there is some evidence that the threat of genetic damage to the children of individuals exposed to atomic radiation may not be as great as was once feared.

While no one person has the final answer on the subject, at least one geneticist suggests that humans may not be as sensitive to radiation as was once thought to be the case. He is Dr. James V. Neel, chairman of the department of human genetics at the University of Michigan Medical School, and a senior consultant on genetics for the Radiation Effects Research Foundation. Dr. Neel speaks with some expertise on the subject sinc he is a longtime student of the genetic effects of radiation on the children of individuals who survived the World War II atomic bomb attacks on Japan.

Dr. Neel headed a study under the joint auspices of the United States' National Academy of Sciences and Japan's National Institutes of Health. More than 70,000 pregnancies that occurred in Hiroshima and Nagasaki between May, 1946, and December, 1953, were reviewed, Almost 19,000 children in the study had one or both parents who were within 200 meters (a meter is a little less than 40 inches) beneath the center of the blast; more than 16,000 other children had one parent who had been 2,500 meters or more from the center. The researchers calculated the increased risk of genetic damage as radiation exposure increased, concluding that the increased incidence of genetic abnormalities was not statistically significant.

Previous, more pessimistic, predictions about the influence of radiation as a factor in birth defects were based on experiments with mice. Apparently mice, who usually live a maximum of about two years, are not as efficient as humans at repairing the damage caused by radiation.

I want to emphasize that radiation can cause genetic damage, and this danger should not be ignored. But Dr. Neel, for one, believes that the danger is not as great as the public thinks it is, and I thought you would be interested in his views.

Students get medical skills from doctors and patients

By JERRY HARKAVY
Associated Press Writer

HIRAM, Maine (AP) — It's not unusual for patients of Dr. Lowell Barnes to find a young man or woman peering over the doctor's shoulder.

During office hours or on house calls, Dr. Barnes is often accompanied by a student from the University of New England College of Osteopathic Medicine (NECOM) in Biddeford, an hour's drive away.

Twice a week, four hours at a stint, students tag along with Barnes and other osteopathic physicians in southern Maine, picking up diagnostic skills, office management practices and, most important of all, the elements of a successful doctor-patient relationship.

"The chief purpose of the program is not to learn clinical skills. It's to find out how you relate to someone as a patient," says Dr. J. Jerry Rodos, NECOM's dean. "It's the ability to communicate, to find out how the health system functions."

In one recent preceptorship, as the program is known, freshman Anthony Toth watched and listened as Barnes examined one patient for circulatory problems, checked another for muscle spasms and scrutinized X-rays of a compound finger fracture.

The doctor took time out to explain each step in his diagnosis or treatment process. But he made it plain later that it was time well spent.

"I was lucky to be afforded a good education, but this means nothing unless I can take what I learned and hand it on to somebody else," said Barnes.

That's a common attitude among the 150 practicing osteopaths who make up the clinical staff of NECOM, the only medical school in Maine and the only osteopathic college in New England.

While the school's basic science curriculum is similar to that of a traditional, or allopathic, medical college, NECOM has no full-time clinical instructors, relying instead on physicians who serve as classroom teachers, preceptors, or both.

"It's all on a voluntary basis," says John R. Founier, dean of student affairs. "They're offered a small sum to cover their expenses, but nearly 90 percent of them actually return that money."

The support shown by practicing physicians for a school that has yet to graduate its first class reflects the pride and loyalty of its founders. "This is their school. These students are their students," says Rodos. "They're proud of it."

Weather affects planting

By CHARLES W. GREEN
Midland County Extension Agent — Agriculture

Cotton planting is about complete in the Midland area. Some of the earlier planted cotton is up to a good stand while some is still under the ground. The cool weather conditions the past week have slowed emergence of cotton planted since the middle of the month. Surface moisture has depleted in the wind conditions experienced last weekend and high temperatures and windy weather could cause some problems with the later planted cotton.

YOU'LL OFTEN HEAR vetern West Texas gardeners say that their plants "need iron," and perhaps you've wondered if they've gotten their gardening mixed up with the Geritol commercial. Well, not really. Plants do need iron — just like people — and in fairly large amounts.

Iron deficiency in plants is a problem common to many landscape and vegetable plants and because of several reasons. There could be an actual deficiency of the element in some very sandy soils, but more likely it is non-available to some plants due to alkaline soil reaction or an excess of soil phosphorus. Therefore, when iron is unavailable to the plant, iron deficiency (sometimes referred to as iron chlorosis) results.

Identification of the problem is not difficult. Look for two things: (1) Progressive yellowing of the newest leaves first. If lower, older leaves turn yellow first, then the problem is something other than iron deficiency. (2) Leaves with darker green veins and the tissues betweens the veins turning yellowish green. Where iron deficiency is severe the entire leaf may become white and finally brown.

We had always thought that the most common reason for iron deficiency is the high pH (alkalinity) or our soils. However, the results of many soil analyses in Midland landscapes suggests that the overuse of phosphorus fertilizers is also a significant contributor to iron deficiency. In both situations a chemical reaction occurs which ties up the iron and makes it unavailable for the plant to absorb.

Iron chlorosis is most prevalent on members of the grass family (such as St. Augustine), certain fruit trees (peaches and pears), many vegetables (particularly beans), many flowers and ornamentals, and some shade trees. Plants that like acid soil, such as roses or magnolias, can likewise be severely affected with "iron poor blood."

If you find that your plants are suffering from "iron poor blood," the problem can be corrected in one of two ways:

Treat the soil to release chemically inactive iron. Adding organic matter such as sphagnum pear moss, compost, etc., will act to reduce the alkalinity of the soil, thereby making more iron abailable. Sulfur (at one pound per 100 square feet) or other soil acidifiers can be added to the soil to accomplish the same purpose.

Or you can add more iron. The best approach is to use either chelated iron or iron sulfate (copperas) as both a soil treatment and as a foliar spray. Spary application of sulfates and chelates oftne are more effective and give quicker results than soil applications. However, the effect will normally not be as long-lasting and repeat applications may be necessary. Be certain to keep any iron sprays of wall, driveways, brick or masonry surfaces since it can cause staining.

THE INTERNATIONAL Ranchers' Roundup set in Del Rio August 10 through 14 is attracting widespread attention. It is being organized by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

More than 100 speakers from seven prominent ranching states have been confirmed. Representatives from some premier ranching enterprises will participate along with speakers from five Southwester land-grant universities and two state agriculturally oriented institutions.

Three days of general and concurrent sessions have been scheduled with the first and last days devoted to touring progessively managed ranches in southwest Texas and northeast New Mexico.

The remaining three days will consist of daily general and concurrent sessions.

The concurrent session will present ranchers with the latest technology geared to better management of all domestic ranch animals and wildlife and utilization of range resourses, animal nutrition, ranch business and mineral lease agreements.

Program details and registration information can be obtained by writing IRR, P.O. Drawer 1849, Uvalde, Texas 78801.

Less meat produced, figures say

WASHINGTON (AP) — Total meat production by the nation's federally inspected slaughter plants dipped below year-earlier levels in April, says the Agriculture Department.

But all of the decline occurred because of reduced hog slaughter, the department said Thursday in a monthly report.

Beef output, at 1.81 billion pounds, was up 4 percent from April 1980. Veal production was 32 million pounds, up 7 percent from a year earlier.

But pork production dropped 6 percent from a year earlier to 1.42 billion pounds in April, the report said.

Lamb and mutton production was 29 million pounds, up 4 percent from April of last year.

Sino-Japanese trade hits roadblock

By I. KAWAKAMI
Copley News Service

TOKYO — Japan's relations with China have suddenly hit a major roadblock that is seriously worrying government officials here.

The immediate issue is China's abrupt suspension in January of several major industrial development projects in which Japanese companies were deeply involved.

But this is far more than a mere commercial problem. Within the Japanese government there is considerable feeling that major strategic considerations are involved which could affect Japan's security.

The Chinese decided to halt construction of the Baoshan steel mill near Shanghai, and foub petrochemical projects in Nanking, Shantung and near Beijing. China, it was felt, simply couldn't afford such grandiose, expensive industrial developments at present.

This decision left Japanese trading firms and plant engineering companies facing potential losses up to $1.5 billion.

The Chinese promised compensation according to international practice, while at the same time hinting that the projects could continud with Japanese long-term, low-interest loans.

The latter alternative seemed more promising in initial negotiations to settle the issue, especially as experts here estimate the amount of compensation involved would use up China's entire foreign exchange reserves.

The Foreign Ministry is particularly worried that the issue Should not turn into a political problem damaging the carefully-nurtured Sino-Japanese friendship.

In Japanese business circles there is already a growing sense of distrust and disillusionment with the Chinese for unilaterally scrapping plant import contracts and then demanding Japanese low-interest loans.

Meanwhile, the Chinese have criticized Japanese economic cooperation as merely a means for big business monopolies here to advance their tentacles into China.

And, countering demands for compensation, they point out that China has renounced war reparations from Japan exceeding $10 billion.

The government here is closely watching developments, fearing that the mutual distrust being generated could be extremely harmful in the long run.

Japan, officials point out, needs China as a vital pillar in its overall diplomatic policy towards Asia.

It was this concern that sent special trade representative Saburo Okita to Beijing in February to alert Chinese leaders to the larger issues at stake – a theme he developed with Japanese business leaders on his return.

Former Foreign Minister Sunao Sonoda has explained why Chinese goodwill is so essential to Japan at this stage.

In order to prevent Sino-Soviet rapprochement, China had to be firmly integrated into the Western world's economic structure.

Japan would suffer immeasurable, nightmarish pressures from both north and west if China, with its very large population and potential strength, ever joined hands with the Russian military juggernaut, Sonoda explained.

Thus, Japan is deeply committed to China's modernization program for better or for worse.

U.S. embargo against South Africa urged

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States should back up its opposition to South Africa's apartheid discrimination against blacks with an arms and investment embargo, says a new study financed by the Rockefeller Foundation.

For South Africa itself, the two-year study said, the choice is "between a slow, uneven, sporadically violent evolutionary process and a slow but much more violent descent into civil war."

It concluded that the United States should help speed black rule by stockpiling such minerals as chromium, ferrochorme, manganese, platinum and vanadium in order to "reduce the impact of stoppages" that would result from an embargo.

The study, released Thursday, was conducted by an 11-member group called The Study Commission on U.S. Policy Toward Southern Africa. The group was chaired by Franklin A. Thomas, president of the Ford Foundation.

Noting that blacks don't yet have enough leverage to force whites to share political authority, the study said the United States should support groups in South Africa working for change and assist in developing black leaders.

"For blacks and whites, certain positions are nonnegotiable," the study said. "For blacks, an acceptable solution must give them a genuine share in political power. For whites, an acceptable solution cannot be based on a winner-take-all form of majority rule."

Senate votes to protect horses

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The Senate has approved a bill that would authorize the inspection of slaughter houses to keep stolen horses from being slaughtered.

Sen. Peyton McKnight said thieves make off with expensive quarter-horses as well as children's pets. The stolen horses are taken to slaughter houses, he said, and made it to horse meat to be sent overseas.

"You can take a bucket of feed and catch almost any horse," said McKnight.

"If you have ever seen a child after somebody has stolen his horse ... it's certainly a heart-rending thing," he said.

McKnight said his bill would authorize the Texas Animal Health Commission to contract with the Texas Southwestern Cattle Raisers Association to police slaughter houses.

A slaughterer could not slaughter a horse until an authorized inspector had released the horse. McKnight also said the slaughterer would have to hold the horse for at least 24 hours.

Records would have to be kept of all horses, including the name and address of the person delivering the horse.

San Francisco police force recruiting gay officers

By LARRY MAATZ AND CAROL POGASH
Hearst Special News Service

SAN FRANCISCO — A year and a half after San Francisco became the first city in the nation to recruit gay police officers openly, 37 known gay officers are on the street, in uniform, wearing badges and carrying guns.

According to Les Morgan of Gay Outreach, a private organization that prepares gays for Police Department exams and interviews, one of every seven recruits in the department is gay.

The department, which under a federal court consent decree has hiring quotas for women and minorities, has no gay quota. But Police Chief Cornelius Murphy has endorsed efforts to bring gays into the force.

Morgan says that out of the 883 gay men and women who have responded to Gay Outreach's recruitment effort, 419 went on to file applications with the department and about 225 took the tests. Of those, 49 were hired and 37 made it through the academy and the field-training programs to the street, he said.

OFFICIALLY, THE POLICE Department says it doesn't know how many gays are patrolling the streets. It doesn't ask its recruits about sexual inclination.

But Capt. Vic Macia, who until a recent promotion headed the department's field-training office and supervised the 14-week street-training program that follows the police academy's 19-week schedule, acknowledges the existence of the gay recruits and says they have had no special problems.

"The ones that have failed have failed for the same reasons that the straight recruits have failed -- such as faulty report writing, slowness in response, lack of aggressiveness. And some of them, gay and straight alike, have simply found out that they really didn't like police work."

Some of the gay and lesbian officers said that, although most of them are known to their fellow officers To be homosexual, they have been accepted professionally, with little or no harassment.

SEVERAL DISAGREED. They said that their acceptance within the department, while officially correct, has been less than rosy.

These officers said they enjoy their work, find it exciting and want to continue. But when they referred to anti-gay sentiment, they didn't talk about the street, they talked about their fellow officers. Some of the things that make them uncomfortable:

-- Graffiti like "Jack loves Joe" with full names spelled out, frequently appears in some station bathrooms and in a Hall of Justice elevator.

-- A list of gay and suspected gay officers was scribbled under the heading: "Fruits and nuts at Park."

-- A newspaper clipping of a multiple murder was reworked with the names of gay officers listed as the victims.

Morgan of Gay Outreach who reported that last incident, said most of the actions have been more teasing than harassing, little more than a cop-initiation rite.

CAPT. MACIA SAID: "There's been some baiting, some childish behavior, but I haven't seen any evidence of harassment. There certainly isn't any on an official level. We wouldn't tolerate it. So far as I can see the vast majority of officers, straight and gay alike, are treating the situation in a professional manner. I just don't think it's the problem other people seem to think it is."

One gay officer, who like all the others didn't want his name used, said: "Ninety-five percent (of the straight officers) are very good." The other five percent he said, "ignore me. It's nothing vicious to my face."

Still, he added, after being on the force for a year and a half, "Nobody rushes up and says 'Do you want to go have a drink after work?'"

And for those who ignore him, he said, probably "nothing is going to change their minds."

Asked about their attitude toward gay cops, most straight officers gave a cold, swift "No comment."

Others were more open.

"AS LONG AS A POLICE officer conducts himself in a professional manner and does not bring disgrace on the department or to the uniform, then there shouldn't be any complaints at all about what he is or does off-duty," said 34-year-old veteran officer Edward Casazza.

'Police departments are pretty conservative organizations," observed one sergeant. "Anybody who tells you it's not going to be difficult for gays to make it (or) that they are accepted and we love them dearly, isn't telling the truth."

"They have to prove themselves like anyone else but we're tougher on them....They have to come up to our standards," said the 16-year-veteran.

He called the recruitment of gays demoralizing and said the Police Department is "so progressive....It is the laughingstock of the country."

"COPS HAVE FEELINGS about it," offered another sergeant who has trained some of the gay recruits. "But things are too hectic. You can't afford to let it influence the way you act."

"Most do not accept it," said a lesbian officer. "Some don't care. A majority thinks it's amusing or disgusting."

She said most of her difficulty stems from her being female: "You aren't regarded as equal much of the time." But being gay hasn't made it easier.

"Homophobia is on the increase (in the Police Department). More of us are in, so we're more of a threat."

She quoted a gay officer friend who explained the pressures she felt: "One third is stress on the street. Two thirds is from my co-workers."

"ANTI-GAY SENTIMENT from some of the officers," said a 30-year-old gay male officer, adds "a little bit extra stress. It would be minor except that it's added on top of everything else."

He described the feelings of many straight cops as, "If the queers make it, that's OK. If they don't, that's good."

Some gay officers, though, seem to be untouched by such reaction.

"I went into it with the idea that (being gay) just doesn't matter," said a 26-year-old gay. "And it doesn't." He had no difficulty "choosing up partners" because his partner also is gay, he said.

A 30-year-old Army veteran said he has had no problems with his fellow officers or his work.

Awarded a Bronze Star for gallantry as a door-gunner in Vietnam, he has picked up two captain's commendations in the last year. "There were five of us in my class at the academy," he says, "three gay men and two lesbians. All of us were open to the rest of our class, and all of us have been open to the other officers we work with. And none of us, to my knowledge, has had any real problems."

AWARE OF GAY-BAITING, graffiti and gibes over the radio, he said it's "nothing more than that, nothing more than you'd expect from the few rednecks in the department. The vast majority of the officers I've worked with have been totally professional. I've got no complaints."

The officer, who said he loves his work, has a straight woman partner.

"I'm not going to lie about it to anyone, and I've made it a practice in the past not to lie about it. On the oher hand, I don't see why I should run around making a statement about it. All that would do is make it more difficult to do my job. And that's what I'm really interested in -- doing my job.

"I've arrested gays, and I've booked them for felonies. I've busted gays for dope. Being gay or straight has nothing to do with it. You break the law and you're going to go to jail."

One thing he worried about before he made the street was whether straight officers would respond if he were in trouble. That's the biggest fear prospective gay cops have, Outreach's Morgan said.

Illinois House, Senate divided

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — Civil "war" has broken out in Illinois.

Chicago legislators have turned against their downstate cousins in a verbal battle which may leave the House — not to mention the Senate — divided against itself.

Mike Royko, the Pulitzer Prize-winning columnist for the Chicago Sun-Times, fired his journalistic guns this week on downstate and suburban lawmakers for rejecting subsidies to the city's struggling transportation network. He said the city should secede from Illinois.

Royko denounced what he called the Legislature's "rural yokels," "hostile bumpkins," "downstate rubes" and "smug suburbanites" bent on destroying the city of Chicago.

Village Lodge Success Story Continues

ADVERTISEMENT

SPECIAL

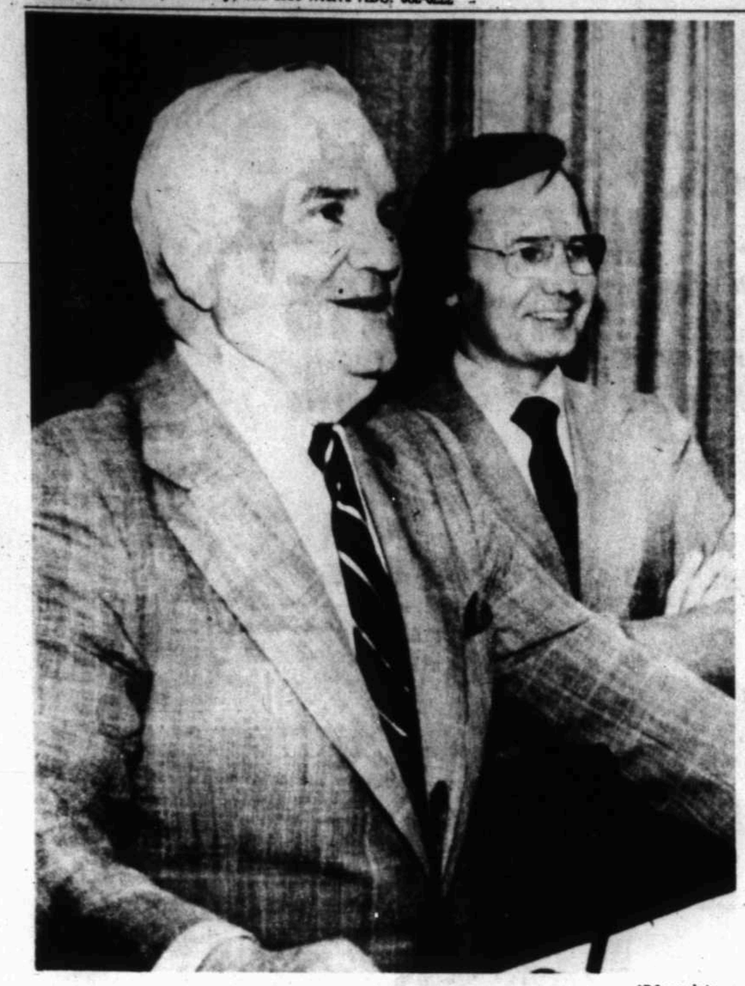

There are a number of reasons for visiting Ruidoso. Whether it be for the horse races, the charm, the mountains, or rest and relaxation, the place to enjoy it all is the Village Lodge.

Last winter, Jack Stahl announced the opening of Village Lodge, located at Innsbrook Village on Alto Highway across from the Ranger Station. Each of the 32 units at Village Lodge is a three-room suite containing living room, fully equipped kitchenette, bedroom and bath. In addition, each suite features a woodburning fireplace, wet bar and two color TV's with in-room movies.

"Each one of our suites is ideal for up to four persons," said Stahl. "The living room contains a hide-a-bed and the bedroom can be closed off for privacy. We've planned Village Lodge to be the utmost in resort living," Stahl continued. "Our guests have full use of all Innsbrook Village facilities such as swimming, tennis, golf and trout fishing in the stocked pond. Initial occupancy rates have been very high so reservations are necessary, especially during this racing season," said Stahl.

Wine battles raging in Shenandoah Valleys

By DENIS COLLINS
(c) 1981, The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The Indians named it, George Washington surveyed it, and now, some Virginians claim, Californians are trying to filch its good name.

Wine makers in Virginia's Shenandoah Valley, a 110-mile-long vale celebrated in song, Civil War lore and travel brochures, are popping their corks over winemakers in another Shenandoah Valley 3,000 miles away in California. Those vintners have stirred the wrath of Virginia grape growers by asking the federal government to grant them exclusive rights to the words "Shenandoah Valley" on their wine bottles.

"The Californians surely must have a wealth of their own historic names to use, without trying to pre-empt one of the proudest, most treasured names in all Virginia," fumes U.S. Rep. J. Kenneth Robinson, a Republican who represents most of Virginia's Shenandoah Valley.

HE CHARACTERIZES the West Coast action as "an astonishing ploy by some grape growers in an obscure area of California" and has appealed to Virginians, who are attempting to develop their own wine industry, to fight the move.

But Ken Deaver, a California vineyard owner and representative for the grape growers in the Golden State's 10,000-acre Shenandoah Valley, is adamant about the claim. He says his valley may be less rich in history than Virginia's but for the past 100 years his has been the more famous for grapes.

"We are not trying to take anything away from the Virginia Shenandoah Valley area," asserts Deaver. His family has grown wine grapes in the California valley 40 miles east of Sacramento since 1850, one year before it was named by some Virginians who said it reminded them of home.

THE BUREAU OF ALCOHOL, Tobacco and Firearms (BATF), which oversees the nation's wine industry, provoked the dispute when it revised its regulations two years ago to require wine makers to be more precise about the origins of their vintages. By 1983, only one area of the country will be able to use "Shenandoah Valley" on its labels and advertising.

"We realize that this issue is very controversial, but we are obligated to go forward and make a decision based on the facts presented," said Stephen E. Higgins, the bureau's deputy director, in a letter to Robinson.

Tom Minton, another bureau official, said he didn't know when — or if — the agency can fully resolve the issue. "If they both demand Shenandoah Valley, I don't know what would happen," he said.

What has already happened is that two wine makers, Shenandoah Vineyards of Edinburg, Va., and Shenandoah Vineyards of Plymouth, Calif., are facing the loss of a brand that each established four years ago.

"I DIDN'T KNOW ANOTHER Shenandoah Valley existed," says James Randel, a New Jersey utility executive who with his wife, Emma, converted a Virginia family farm into a vineyard in 1977. "When I found out they (the Californians) had applied for (the Shenandoah designation) I was somewhat upset."

The Shenandoah Vineyards in California is owned and operated by Leon and Shirley Sobon and family. Their winery, one of 10 in the Shenandoah Valley there, produces 6,000 gallons a year. While the 10,000 gallons produced by Virginia's Shenandoah Vineyards are not marketed outside the state, the Sobons ship their wine to more than a dozen states and the District of Columbia.

If some grape growers are trying to sound conciliatory, many Virginians aren't. Their letters to the federal government over the issue read like a call to arms.

"STOP THE PEOPLE in California from bastardizing a proud and honorable name," wrote William Foster of Harrisonburg.

"I suggest that you send those people a map with the western portion of Virginia circled prominently, and a free ticket to the James Stewart movie 'Shenandoah'," wrote Winchester's Lulu M. Williams.

The Shenandoah file also contains a letter from Virginia Gov. John N. Dalton that calls the state's Shenandoah Valley "a place of cherished traditions that live in the minds and hearts of people all over the world."

RINGING THE BELL

The Black Experience and a Better Day

With BOB TIEUEL

The Black Experience and a Better Day: "Dear Bob — If you create some kind of illusion for yourself, and say that's a reality, then you really are dealing with an illusion and not a reality... This is a world that is increasingly competitive. It has nothing to do whether it is competitive of black, white or whomever, it is competitive for everybody that is out there. And he or she who is not equipped to be more competitive in a more and more competitive society has got fall by the wayside. It's just the way it is.

"As a people, one thing I really think is true of us more than we realize is that we still bear a lot of legacies of slavery...we are still too prone to be taken care of, which is a slavery legacy. I am not saying that help is not needed. I am only saying that much of our problem is self-correctable and it is up to us to do it because you can't expect somebody to do everything for you forever.

"And if that's the case, then there is a challenge to all of us, whether in school or out of school, to try to do the very utmost that we can. We must reach for the utmost of our potential and I guess what that potential is probably is beyond any ordinary adjective.

"Roots" has a message for all mankind, having nothing to do with race but to us as human beings, the creation of one God, a message about what our potentials are if we but learn to get it together and to work together. Roots was really a saga of a people. The story is the same for us all. The question is, who is your Kunta? I remain, yours fraternally, Alex Haley.

PASS THE WORD: "Strategies for the 80's will be the theme for the Youth Conference to be held at St. Paul in Midland, June 5 and 6, according to Mrs. C.M. Davis, District director of Christian education of the Christian Methodist Episcopal Church. See you there bellringers and bring a youth when you come.

CHIMES: According to bellringer H. Parmley of Dallas, billionaire Nelson Bunker Hunt is about a quarter of the way toward raising $1 billion for a worldwide evangelistic campaign calld "Here's Life, World." About four years ago, Hunt was joined by Holiday Inn founder Wallace Johnson and Campus Crusade founder-president Bill Bright, in a campaign to raise $1 billion to finance a drive to "present the Christian gospel to every person on Earth by the end of 1980." Four years later, the crusade appears to have become an ongoing campaign with no deadlines.

Bright said 40 million Soviets weekly hear Here's Life messages through Voice of America radio, and "there is a great spiritual awakening in China." He added: "Only Christ can bring together people who hate each other." Campus Crusade has 13,000 fulltime missionaries in 135 countries of the world, Bright stated.

Hunt added: "The strategies of Here's Life, World, have a potential that, given significant support, could revolutionize our approach and solutions to world problems."

Family planning experts say a breakthrough in curbing world population growth during the past 10 to 20 years, particularly in developing countries, could be jeopardized by cuts in aid planned by Eastern countries. Representatives from 90 countries recently participated in an international conference on family planning in Jakarta, Indonesia. Projection see a need to provide adequte food, clothing and shelter for the world's four and a half billion inhabitants, while prospects for continued high level of assistance from the Reagan administration, it was reported.

DEAR JEAN — We did enjoy much our recent flight to Oklahoma City to attend the annual session of the General Board of the C.M.E. Church. Indeed the black church is alive and moving and we pray in the right direction. Many of our friends and comrades who started with us some forty years ago, had passed on and some came with bent bodies and canes and walkers. We were reminded of that old spiritual as we thought of the church of our youth: 'I can't think of this world as my home anymore.' Yet we are grateful that God has left us here for a few more days and we will do all we can for the ongoing of His kingdom, while it is yet day for the night will come soon and none can work then. Plese write again. Your ole bellringer — Bob P.S. Small town and rural churches are the big problem now. We must find a solution here, it seems.

Nurse back working after charges dropped

The Los Angeles Times

LAS VEGAS, Nev. — Jani Adams, the nurse accused a year ago of murdering a patient in a Las Vegas hospital, is back at work after months of being unemployed or earning so little there were times when, she said, she did not have enough to eat.

Adams was charged with murdering Vincent Fraser, who died March 4, 1980, in the intensive care unit at Sunrise Hospital while she was in charge. She allegedly had reduced the flow of oxygen to his respirator.

The investigation began after a nurse reported hearing a conversation in which two hospital workers referred to a nurse they called "death's angel." The nurse said they predicted the approximate time the next patient would die and who it would be.

But Dist. Judge Michael J. Wendell dismissed the case. Not only was there insufficient evidence against Ms. Adams, the judge ruled, but the evidence did not prove that a crime had been committed.

Ms. Adans said she couldn't get a job for five months after the case.

"The hospital says they didn't fire me, but that's just a technicality," she said. "They pressured me and pressured me, making my life miserable until I left."

"She resigned and it's not true that we pressured her," an official said. "In fact, during this whole trying period for her, we backed her 100 percent. We paid her a full salary even after she was indicted because we all really believed she was innocent.

"When it was over, she criticized us and then one day she came in and resigned. Then she changed her mind and wanted to rescind her resignation, but we'd had enough. We accepted it."

Ms. Adams said that when she finally got a secretarial job, it paid only $4 an hour, compared with the $11 an hour she had earned nursing.

Her boyfriend, Bernard Deters, a respiration therapist at the same hospital, stuck by her. He quit the hospital, and last October they were married.

It's sandstorm season in Cairo

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — First the sky turns slightly dun colored. Then waves of fine soot and desert sand begin billowing into the crowded streets. One can taste the grit. There is a brownish fog all around.

Sandstorm!

"It's as crippling as a blizzard, but the sand doesn't melt away. It stays where the storm puts it," says Egypt's top weather forecaster, Mohamed Saad Harb. "This is damaging, whether you are talking about a car or an airplane."

This overcrowded, gritty capital is weathering its dirtiest and most costly time of the year with the arrival of choking sandstorms that are as fabled as the ancient pharaohs and the River Nile.

The storms, which bring the entire city to a halt, are called "khamaseens," pronounced almost like "come and see." The literal translation into English is "fifty" — meaning the 50 days of severe weather that kicks up in northeastern Africa and the Arabian peninsula during the break between winter and summer.

Following one recent storm the semi-official newspaper Al-Ahram said 5,000 tons of dust had fallen on Cairo in one 12-hour period.

The blinding storms routinely cause shutdowns of Egypt's seaports and air strips. Virtually all construction comes to a halt. Offices empty as workers dash home with handkerchiefs held close to their faces. Telephone service gets worse and power failures pock Cairo's sprawling neighborhoods.

The busy Suez Canal can be closed for days.

There are no government figures on how much the khamaseens cost Egypt's capital-poor economy in terms of industrial or business closings and employee absenteeism. But a reflection of the ruin might be seen in the fact Egypt Air, the national airline, reports the stormy season heralds its greatest number of canceled or delayed flights.

Khamaseens also can bury entire fields of agricultural crops such as strawberries, beans or wheat.

When the storms hit women rush to grab the laundry from clotheslines and make sure their windows are snugly shut, sometimes even sealed with tape.

Says Harb, who is chairman of Egypt's Meteorological Authority, the government weather service: "Don't try to use your air conditioner because the dust chokes the filter."

He says the khamaseens, which have become sort of a hobby with him, are caused by clashes between cold air that is retreating north for the summer and the tropical air aggressively pursuing the cold.

At Cairo's latitude, which is the same as New Orleans, the wintry air stalls and is overtaken by the faster-moving heat. Storms erupt.

Health officials here say they lack statistics on whether the khamaseens bring increased deaths among patients with respiratory troubles, or among the generally frail.

"Of course it's bad for almost anyone, especially infants," says one physician, Dr. Anthony Jamal. "We shut everything up and live with it. You wonder about the khamaseens the same way we are curious how you survive your snowstorms."

Arab lore once held that any man who killed his wife after the third day of a khamaseen could claim the devastating weather had impaired his judgment.

And in this part of the globe where public displays of Islamic faith are a cornerstone of daily life, residents of Cairo recall the gustier khamaseens with tales of uneducated brethren all of a sudden dropping down to pray because they thought the storms signaled the end of the world.

"During the worst of the khamaseens, it is very easy for anyone to think this might be true," says Harb.

POSITIVE THINKING

We could benefit from lesson of poor rich man

By NORMAN VINCENT PEALE

He had a quarter of a million dollars but lived in poverty. This is the amazing story of a man who died recently in a midwestern state.

This rich pauper operated a small farm and lived in a run-down house without modern conveniences of any kind. He lived a hand-to-mouth existence and went about in clothes that were almost tatters. He was a recluse, shunning human society. Then he died and his property passed to some distant relative whom he had never known.

Some months later county officials decided to widen the main highway, and an exit road passed close to the silo on the deceased poor rich man's place. During the excavating, workmen unearthed two milk cans such as dairy farmers use. To their astonishment the cans were crammed with bills, many of large denomination, totaling over $250,000 in cash.

You may say to yourself that this fellow was just an "oddball" to have all that money and yet live in poverty. How stupid to deny himself the ordinary comforts and other values which such wealth could buy.

But wait a minute. Don't write off this strange character so easily. Why not let his story serve to activate a little serious thinking? Shouldn't I, perhaps, ask myself whether I am utilizing all of the rich values open to me in this life? Am I, maybe, enduring in a kind of mental and spiritual poverty when all the time I actually possess resources which could make life really worthwhile?

Take, for example, cultural opportunities. The greatest music of all time is available today in many forms and a marvelous enrichment of mind and heart is provided in the works of famous masters. But many content themselves with jumbles of sound of musical noise produced with a kind of rhythm and this is all the so-called music they know. Either they don't realize there is something better or it's too much trouble to upgrade musical tastes, so they spend their lives in cultural poverty.

I can talk realistically about this. My own children told me that I could have the greatest music in my own home. I go to symphony concerts on trips to Europe and to the famous opera houses of Paris and Vienna, but at home I thought I had no time for music.

Then my children persuaded me to have the house wired for stereo. Now our home resounds to the exciting works I only dimly knew by name and their full richness is becoming art of my cultural inheritance. At last I've decided to draw on the musical and cultural wealth of the ages which is available for only a modest outlay.

And again, the world offers so much fun and pleasure that it is positively pathetic how little of it many people find. It is good to observe that more people every year are learning to relax and play a bit. And this is good. I've just been in the winter sports area of Switzerland and have been amazed at how much fun one can have even in the wintertime.

There's skiing, skating, sleighing, ice hockey, bobsled riding, curling and on a frozen lake at St. Moritz I saw people having a terrific time ice boat sailing. And this only lists outdoor winter activities. Perhaps there are even more opportunities for good and beneficial and enjoyable fun in summer.

But despite this wealth of fun opportunities, would you belive it, there are more thousands than you can count who live in what you might call a pleasure poverty. They keep their noses to the grindstone and develop a fine crop of neuroses and tensions. Work is fine, but when it's mixed wth fun it's a lot better. Don't be a fun pauper. Get into the delights a good God has put into the world.

There is another kind of pauper who deserves mention. A friend with whom I had recently a pleasant but calorie-loaded British high tea in London, tells about a spiritual pauper whom he knew. It was this man's custom to arrive late for church services and he had a quirk. He would never go fully into the main church but would stand in the vestibule and hear what he could through the crack in the swinging doors.

This queer character is a kind of symbol of all those people who get a faint smattering of faith and try to live on this paltry spiritual support. All this man needed to do was to push through those doors and expose himself to an atmosphere were the vast riches of spirituality are available to him. There for the taking is a source of strength, joy and peace to every person. Think twice. Don't be a poor rich man.

No thanks, I'd rather do it myself

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Though it's said nothing is certain but death and taxes, car wash worker Gary Hanson is certain of one other thing: He's not going to ask the IRS to figure his taxes next year. This year they charged him about 60 times more than his yearly wages.

Hanson had been waiting for the $318 tax refund the Internal Revenue Service said he was due on the less than $3,000 he earned last year.

Then he got a bill for $189,424 in taxes.

Hanson went to the local IRS office, which had figured his taxes and the refund, to try to straighten it all out.

The clerk in the Problem Resolution Program office told him it was an error on the part of the person who put his tax return into the computer, and he was indeed due his refund.

Hanson said he had no hard feelings, adding, "Anybody can make mistakes, but I'll get someone else to do my taxes next year."

Short stories are printed in Peking

PEKING (AP) — A Shanghai publishing house is printing the first selection of American writer Ernest Hemingway's short stories in Chinese, the official Xinhua news agency reported tday.

The book includes 21 stories, including "The Snows of Kilimanjaro," "The Undefeated" and "Old Man at the Bridge," Xinhua said.

It said the publisher also will publish a Chinese translation of Hemingway's novel about the Spanish civil war, "For Whom the Bell Tolls."
