Reagan, Gorbachev conclude their talks

By TERENCE HUNT
AP White House Correspondent

MOSCOW — Mikhail S. Gorbachev and President Reagan concluded four days of summit talks today with an impasse on a major arms control agreement but muted differences on human rights.

The Soviet Communist Party general secretary called their meetings "a blow to the foundations of the Cold War" and Reagan said "we must not stop here."

In remarks after their formal talks ended with smiles and handshakes, Gorbachev said Reagan had disavowed his description of the Soviet Union as an "evil empire," and noted with satisfaction that he did it "within the walls of the Kremlin."

Reagan in turn praised Gorbachev's moves to open up his country's society to the point of suggesting that Soviet refusal to permit thousands of dissidents to emigrate over a period of several decades may be due to an unresponsive bureaucracy rather than deliberate government policy.

Asked at a news conference if he wasn't letting Gorbachev off a little too easy on that score, Reagan replied, "I just have to believe that in any sort of government some of us do find ourselves bound in by bureaucracy."

Both men vowed to persist in efforts to negotiate a new treaty calling for sweeping reductions in nuclear weapons despite their inability to achieve a breakthrough in four days in Moscow.

The president said he hopes for an arms control agreement by the end of his term in January to supplement the INF treaty that was formally ratified during his four days in Russia. But, he quickly added, "I am dead set against deadlines."

Some distrust Soviet promises

By RICK BROWN
Assistant City Editor

Soviet Communist Party boss Mikhail S. Gorbachev may represent a new breed of Kremlin leadership, but Midlanders interviewed Tuesday weren't ready to take the Soviet leader's promises at face value.

All fifteen city residents contacted at the U.S. Post Office downtown voiced reservations concerning how far Gorbachev should be trusted during this week's summit in Moscow with President Ronald Reagan.

Bobby Kuykendall, 3509 Gaston, wondered if Gorbachev's glasnost, or openness, is "just a front."

"I don't know whether he's sincere or not," said Mike Daniel, 33, P.O. Box 1575.

And asked if agreements with the Soviets could be trusted under Gorbachev, Leroy Mattke, 62, of the Pecan Grove Trailer Park, was leery. "With the Russians?" he asked with a laugh.

In their skepticism, the Midlanders seemed to echo President Reagan's arms negotiations policy of "trust but verify." Americans shouldn't "let our guard down until they prove themselves," said Kuykendall.

Still, most of those interviewed said the Soviet general secretary offered a different kind of leadership.

"I think he's an improvement over what they've had in the past," said Don Becker, 65, of 729 Midland Tower. Gorbachev "is putting on a good show," he said.

Turner estate among defendants in Yates Field suit

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas public school trust fund lost millions of dollars in revenue from a rich Pecos County oilfield and should be allowed to recover the money, Land Commissioner Garry Mauro says.

"What we're trying to do is make the school fund whole, and it's possible with the remaining revenue stream that's projected in this field," Mauro said Tuesday while waiting to testify at a hearing in a state lawsuit over the matter.

Over the next 35 years, the 3.97-acre tract in Yates Field could yield $150 million to $250 million in total revenue, depending on oil prices, he said.

The state is asking that Exxon Corp. and Marathon Oil Co., which buy oil and gas from the tract, suspend payment to certain lease owners or pay the money to a receiver until a trial is concluded.

But a legal brief filed for the defendants denounced the lawsuit as a political effort instigated by Mauro.

"Behold! There charges onto the stage a new, young land commissioner with unabashed high political ambitions.... 'Conspiracy! Conspiracy!' cries the whippersnapper, glorifying himself with self adulation as a knight-errant called from on high to save the children," said the brief filed by defense lawyer Cecil Munn of Fort Worth.

Assistant Attorney General Jose Manuel Rangel told State District Judge Peter Lowry said at the injunction hearing that royalty payments from the Pecos County tract should be halted to descendants of people who allegedly cheated the Permanent School Fund out of millions of dollars.

"This is not a case where an honest and shrewd businessman made a good deal and is merely collecting his profits, or a case of an oil and gas operator risking everything to make the big oil and gas discovery," Rangel said.

"This case is about a vacancy hunter and his lawyers drilling a well which was a sure thing, and using a position of trust and confidence to obtain benefits for themselves at the expense of the school children of this state," he said.

Attorneys said the injunction hearing is expected to last through the week.

The state has sued 25 parties in the case, including the estate of Fred Turner Jr. of Midland. More than 50 years ago, Turner claimed the tract as a vacancy, or land left out of a legal survey.

The state says Turner, as owner of the tract's surface rights, engineered a deal that yielded substantially more royalties for his interests than for the state's Permanent School Fund.

Under a Texas Supreme Court ruling reaffirmed in 1932, the state as owner of mineral rights gets half of bonuses, rentals and royalties from oil and gas leases. The surface landowner also gets half in return for acting as the state's agent and to compensate for damage to soil.

According to Rangel, the tract has produced $161 million worth of oil and gas since 1934, but only $10 million of that has gone to the school fund.

Police agents search vehicles for drugs at a checkpoint about 60 miles south of the Arizona border.

Mexican drug enforcement leaves much to chance

By DAN FREEDMAN
Hearst Washington Bureau

SASABE, Mexico — The cries of "corriendo! corriendo!" alert Francisco Almanzer that someone is trying to evade the anti-drug checkpoint his police detachment has erected outside this speck of a border town, just a few miles south of Arizona.

It is near midnight. The lights of an approaching pickup truck have just gone out. Almanzer's agents are hollering that the vehicle's occupants are running off.

Saguaro cactus and mesquite are barely discernible, even in the brilliant starlight.

In an instant, the squad of Mexican Federal Judicial Police auxiliaries is frisking three men who chose not to run. They are now spread-eagle across the hood of the truck proclaiming their innocence, saying they were just driving to town for a few drinks on a Saturday night.

The search reveals no drugs. The pickup rumbles off, and those who fled are left to fend for themselves among the coyotes and lizards of the Sonoran desert.

Welcome to drug enforcement, Mexican style.

Local speller survives first round of bee

By PEGGY ROBERSON
Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON — Rodolfo G. (Rudy) Ramirez Jr., a 12-year-old sixth grader from St. Ann's School in Midland, correctly spelled the word "harmonica" in the first round Wednesday of a two-day contest for a $1,500 first prize in the 61st National Spelling Bee.

At the end of the round, Rudy and 197 other champion spellers from around the country remained in the contest.

Two spellers were forced out after they failed to spell the words "jargon" and "hitchhike."

Rudy, one of 12 Texans in the contest, said he had been anxious about the competition but his nervousness had worn off as the "pronouncers" dished out big and little words to the youngsters.

Rudy came to Washington as the winner of a four-county regional contest, sponsored by the Midland Reporter-Telegram. The counties are Midland, Glasscock, Upton and Martin.

The quiet, dark-haired youngster said going into the national spelling bee that he had no idea what words might be thrown at him. He and the others had been treated to a day-long sightseeing tour of Washington Tuesday.

After that, he shut himself in his room at the Capitol Hilton Hotel and plowed through a list of words from previous spelling competitions.

Rudy said he knew from first grade that he had a special talent for spelling, adding that his parents and teachers have helped him sharpen the skill. He said he believes other students in his class also have become more interested in spelling because of his success.

Earlier, to prepare for the regional competition, he pored over a dictionary, choosing the longest and most difficult words to study, he said. His mother, Yolanda Ramirez, drilled him on the words again and again.

Mrs. Ramirez, a registered nurse, and Rudy's father, a shoe repairman, are here with the contestant while his two older sisters remain at home in Midland.

In the national contest that starts Wednesday, contestants spell words aloud and remain in the game until they miss one.

Duarte in U.S. for medical help

WASHINGTON (AP) — Salvadoran President Jose Napoleon Duarte was at Walter Reed Army Medical Center today for treatment of what he described as a stomach disease "of a malignant nature."

The 62-year-old president, who faces a stubborn civil war and a crisis within his Christian Democratic Party, has been rumored to be suffering from cancer, but he did not use the word in describing his condition.

Duarte was taken to Walter Reed immediately after his arrival Tuesday night at Andrews Air Force Base outside of Washington, according to a spokeswoman at the base.

Hospital spokesman Pete Esker said late Tuesday that Duarte had been admitted, but said he had no information about the Salvadoran president's condition.

Before his departure the same day from Ilopango military airport in El Salvador, Duarte told reporters of his illness but described himself as "a man who fights."

"The designs of God are unpredictable," Duarte said. "What I have is a bleeding ulcer seven centimeters (2½ inches) long in the stomach, of a malignant nature.

"The doctors have said that the prognosis is reserved until studies are made in the United States...."

Media Communications Minister Roberto Viera, asked about the president's statement, said Duarte has "a large tumor" in his stomach. "The doctors don't want to characterize it until they do a biopsy," Viera said.

56 believed trapped in German mine

BORKEN, West Germany (AP) — An explosion ripped through a coal mine today in central West Germany, trapping scores of miners hundreds of feet underground, authorities said.

An engineer for the power company that owns the lignite coal mine said 56 miners were believed trapped by the blast, but that the number could change. Police estimated 40 to 60 miners were trapped 300 feet below ground.

Police said they could not say if there were any survivors underground. Eight workers were seriously injured on the surface by flying debris and taken to a hospital, police said.

Dense smoke spread over the area after the blast in this town 70 miles northeast of Frankfurt. Hundreds of rescuers rushed to the scene, including several helicopters.

The explosion occurred shortly before 1 p.m. Two hours later, no contact had been established with the those underground, according to Gerhard Heinz, an engineer for mine owner Preussen Elektra.

Heinz, who was at the mine, said 56 miners were believed to have been trapped by the blast. He said the explosion occurred in a pit between 200 and 450 feet below ground.

The cause of the explosion was not immediately known.

WEATHER SUMMARY

From Staff and Wire Reports

We can expect partly cloudy skies and a less than 20 percent chance of evening thunderstorms, according to the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport. The low will be near 60, and winds will be light and southeasterly.

Thursday will be sunny and warm with the high in the upper 80s, and the winds will be light and will shift to north-northwesterly.

Tuesday's high of 85 was 17 degrees cooler than the record high temperature of 102 set for that date in 1969. The overnight low of 61 was 14 degrees warmer than the record low temperature of 47 set for this date in 1983.

STATE

A vast area of North Central Texas was under a flash flood watch after heavy thunderstorms roared across the area, producing flash flooding in at least 10 counties.

The thunderstorms moved northeastward across the state in advance of a cool front that extended along the Texas-New Mexico border southward into extreme West Texas.

A flash flood watch covred an area generally west of a line from Sherman to Dallas to Waco.

Showers and thunderstorms also were reported in part of South Texas along the Rio Grande east into central South Texas.

About 33 residents of Comanche were evacuated from their homes early today by Civil Defense workers and volunteers driving four-wheel-drive vehicles through water 6-8 feet deep.

Forecasts called for a flash flood watch today for central and southern parts of North Texas. Scattered thunderstorms were forecast over most of the state.

Lows tonight will be in the 70s over most of the state, except in the Panhandle where readings will be in the 50s and in North Texas where readings will be in the 60s.

NATION

Heavy thunderstorms roared across parts of Texas and Oklahoma early today, dumping heavy rainfall across a vast area and triggering flash flooding in at least 10 Texas counties.

Showers and thunderstorms continued into the morning hours from western Iowa and Nebraska across Kansas, eastern Colorado, Oklahoma and north-central through south-central Texas. Rain was scattered from the northern half of the Pacific Coast into eastern Washington and the Idaho Panhandle.

"We can look with optimism on future negotiations," he said, even he continued to defend his proposal for Star Wars, which has been a key stumbling block in superpower arms-control negotiations.

"The conversations are still going on and they are still being discussed and I say progress is still being made or we wouldn't be talking as we are," he said. But Reagan said "I honestly can't answer that question" when asked whether he thought he and Gorbachev would meet once more time as the leaders of the two superpowers.

It was Reagan's decision to soft-pedal differences on human rights that seemed likely to be his most memorable comments at a news conference televised live in the United States — particularly after his meeting two days earlier with dissidents who told him personally of their imprisonment and internment in labor camps during their struggle to emigrate.

The leaders ended their fourth summit by exchanging the documents of ratification of the intermediate-range nuclear arms treaty (INF) signed last December. They said they will press to complete an elusive agreement to cut strategic nuclear weapons by up to 50 percent.

"The first lines have already been written into a book of the world without nuclear weapons," Gorbachev said. "...I don't think anyone can close that book and put it aside."

In his news conference — the first such session ever held by a Soviet leader in Moscow — Gorbachev said the president's Strategic Defense Initiative remained as one key obstacle to an offensive arms agreement, along with a dispute over limits on submarine launched cruise missiles.

He said he told Reagan that the view that the so-called Star Wars program is strictly a defensive one is "just not serious." The issue snagged dramatic bargaining during the second sumit held in 1986 in Iceland.

In a brief ceremony in the Kremlin's St. Vladimir Hall, Reagan and Gorbachev shook hands four separate times, giving no indication that differences on issues had soured the warm personal relationship they have displayed here. In his remarks to reporters, Gorbachev generally praised Reagan although he said American economic and arms policies were often contradictory.

Gorbachev summarized their meetings as "big politics, politics that affect millions of millions of people." He said that with the INF treaty, "the era of nuclear disarmament has begun."

Reagan, praising the INF treaty as historic because it mandates the elimination of an entire class of nuclear weapons, said, "We must not stop here, Mr. general secretary. There is much more to be done."

Despite the lack of major agreements, it was an upbeat windup to the fourth summit in 30 months between the two leaders and the first visit to Moscow by an American president in 14 years.

Gorbachev made a point of noting that Reagan had said he no longer viewed the Soviet Union as an "evil empire." Reagan said Tuesday he had been talking about "another time, another era."

The Soviet leader said, "We take note of this," remarking that "Everything flows, everything changes."

In the absence in a strategic arms pact, Gorbachev said "we will not make any dramatic conclusions" at this summit. However, he said, they were moving "step by step" toward an eventual treaty.

Daniel thought Gorbachev is a "strong leader" and a "good communicator." He "comes off well to the American people," said Daniel.

Rhonda Tucker, 32, 6614 E. County Road 96, agreed that Gorbachev is "better than the others" because he is "more open."

"He may turn out," said Nora Lee, 76, of Midland, "but I could be wrong."

"I think maybe he's not so bad," said Debra Peckham, 34, of 4800 Sunshine Parkway, mentioning perestroika, the internal reforms the Soviet leader is attempting to affect.

Ms. Peckham thought Reagan's tough stance on Soviet relations — including human rights considerations — had "a lot of influence" on Gorbachev and "softened him up."

Dick Wallace, 61, of 4422 Fairgate Drive, said he was "rather favorably disposed" to the Soviet leader, who he called "open-minded."

"He and Reagan make a good mix," added Wallace.

Political realities within the Kremlin were uppermost in the mind of Brent Derington, 33, 4303 Erie Drive, who gave Gorbachev credit for "good intentions." Still, the party boss remains hampered by "other authorities there who have more control," said Derington.

Dissenting from the positive note was Huey Jones, 64, 400 E. Wadley Ave. "I feel like he's a man that wants to get what he wants only," said Jones, who remained pessimistic about summit results.

Relations between the two superpowers would "mainly stay the same if they have to give up anything," Jones said.

But the Soviet leader at least is "approachable" said Shelia Leggett, 157 Barbara Lane. "As long as they keep talking, I think we've got a chance," she said.

"I wish I could say I had confidence that things will be worked out, but deep down, I don't think they will," she said, echoing other Midlanders' hopes for agreements to limit nuclear arms.

Derington noted that "we're closer now than we ever have been" to an agreement.

And Carolyn Cookson, 32, of Midland said Gorbachev "appears to be" sincere.

"I just hope no lies get told," said Rhonda Tucker.

Other hopes for the summit included Lorenza Tucker's who wanted "further peace and understanding of both their and our cultures."

Daniel's hopes included "better communication between the two countries and possibly more honest-type talks down the line."

But Ms. Lee may have spoken for many when she said: "Everybody has hopes, but we've been through it so many times."

Munn said in his brief for the defendants that the amount of money in question is about $400,000 a month.

"Obviously any interruption of that income would create a serious hardship on the defendants — a result frankly desired by the plaintiff as a 'pressure tactic' to coerce a 'settlement,' " said the brief.

"A citizen brought to his knees at the outset would be at a mighty serious disadvantage in trying to defend his rights against an abuse of power by his government," Munn said in the brief.

Munn criticized Mauro's instigation of the lawsuit, saying a 1934 court judgment changed and validated the lease negotiated by Turner, and a 1968 attorney general investigation found no basis for a suit.

Mauro said the significance of the Yates Field tract "is there is as much oil in the ground as has come out of the ground, so it's a reasonable position for the state to try to be made whole again."

"We ought to bend over backwards to mitigate the damage done to innocent bystanders, but the fact is the oil we're speaking of belongs to the Permanent School Fund, and that means each and every person in Texas," he said.

DRUGS

It's a seat-of-the pants operation, lacking such modern American investigative amenities as long-range communications, wiretaps and a nationwide, computerized criminal identification system.

The Mexicans rely on chance interceptions and tough interrogations to ferret out suspected drug traffickers.

Under the circumstances, many American law enforcement officials privately wonder whether Mexico's war on drugs isn't hopelessly compromised by corruption and backwardness.

In a nation beset with economic woes and a foreign debt in excess of $100 billion, Mexico's "Federales" operate like a guerrilla force.

About 1,000 strong with an unknown number of locally hired deputies, they use a hodgepodge of weapons seized from drug traffickers to augment their standard-issue shotguns and semi-automatic AR-15 rifles. And they ride around in the trucks and cars they capture from drug runners.

In fact, the new building in Mexico City that houses the Attorney General's office was paid for with assets seized from traffickers.

Still, increasing amounts of narcotics flow into the United States through Mexico.

Part of the problem is that, along most of the 1,933-mile border, communications between Mexican police and their U.S. counterparts range from minimal to non-existent.

Said Jose Maria Ortega, Mexico's deputy attorney general in charge of the anti-narcotics program: "Generally, we give (the Americans) information and receive no answer...or we receive a very poor answer."

Jerry Padolino, who coordinates Operation Alliance, an amalgam of U.S. drug-fighting agencies along the border, acknowledged that "relations have sunk to an all time low," but Padolino said he and Ortega are working to improve things.

Several U.S. law enforcement sources, who spoke on condition they not be named, said that corruption among Mexican officials makes it difficult to decide whom to trust.

By the same token, Hector Espino, commandante of the Federal Judicial Police detachment in the border town of Nogales, does not understand why his American counterparts in Nogales, Ariz., are not willing to share more information with him.

"We are told that the Americans have more information, so I think they should keep us better informed," said Espino, chain smoking through a white cigarette holder. "But they have not done so."

Long distances, primitive technology, and the threats of drug traffickers combine to make the life of a Mexican policeman difficult.

For instance, in the sparsely populated state of Sonora, just over 100 agents are patrolling an area slightly larger than the state of Washington. Their only means of communicating with each other in the field are walkie-talkies.

Sonora is one of the major staging areas in Mexico for drugs moving into the United States. And many remote air strips there go virtually unpoliced.

Against these odds, Manuel Garcia Pecellin, commandante of the Federal Judicial Police in Hermosillo, the capital of Sonora, tries to teach his subordinates to use gut instincts in tracking down drug traffickers.

"We ask ourselves 'Does a car come from a drug growing region of Mexico? Does it have American plates? Does the driver appear respectable? Does his story about where he is going make sense?' " said Pecellin as he manned a checkpoint at Santa Ana, 60 miles south of the Arizona border.

Affirmative answers to such question may inspire an inspection that is more rigorous than the norm. Trucks are particularly difficult to monitor, Pecellin said, because stashes of drugs often are hidden behind false walls or under floorboards beneath huge loads of watermelons or tomatoes.

Pecellin also noted that trucks with perishable loads of fruit or vegetables destined for U.S. markets cannot be detained indefinitely because "our nation's economy won't permit it."

Undermanned and often outgunned, Sonora's agents constantly face threats of violence.

"Drug dealers have threatened to gun my family down," said Pecellin. "Once my family had to hide in the bathroom and watch out so the dealers would not come into the house.... At first I though of killing someone, but then I told myself 'I have to catch them.' "

Mexican law does not openly permit police to use American-style investigative techniques such as wiretaps, paid informants and undercover agents.

At the same time, however, Mexican officials can develop information from interrogations of suspects that "would not be permitted in our system," according to one U.S. source. "They work within (a) system of morality that...does not concern the Bill of Rights or the Miranda warning (requiring that suspects be advised of their constitutional rights)."

As one U.S. source put it: "(Mexican authorities) can be very effective when they want to be, without all this fancy equipment."

Smiling at questions regarding Mexican law and the efficiency of its police, Ortega said that prisoners in Mexico are afforded an equivalent of American due process.

Then he turned the issue around. "Washington has a legal system that is advanced and (they have) modern technology," he said. "But nevertheless, one may ask: Have they won? Or are they losing against the drug traffickers?"

Not to be outdone, a U.S. law enforcement agent responded: "Everything (the Mexicans) do is a quick, down-and-dirty.... It's a raid, a roadblock or a seizure. They have some good investigators, but they don't peel cases backwards. Their system doesn't lend itself to the long-term, conspiratorial investigations that we do."

BEE

The spelling bee this year attracted an estimated 8 million to 9 million participants at the local level. The 200 contestants this year are the largest number in the history of the program.

Of this year's champions, 102 are girls and 98 are boys. The youngest finalist is eight years old; none are nine years old; five are 10 years old; 17 are 11 years old; 40 are 12 years old; 79 are 13 years old, and 58 are 14 years old.

The Louisville Courier-Journal started the event as a national competition in 1925. In 1941, Scripps Howard Newspapers acquired the rights to the program. While the 14 Scripps Howard newspapers have sent contestants, 183 other daily, weekly and Sunday newspapers also are sponsoring students. The Midland Reporter-Telegram is a sponsor this year for the first time.

On Friday, contestants will unwind with a visit to the Air and Space Museum, the National Museum of American History, and the White House.

At an awards banquet Friday night, sponsors will give the national champion a first prize of $1,500, a trophy cup, an engraved plaque for his or her school, and special awards for the champion and his or her school from Encyclopaedia Britannica Inc.

Second prize is $1,000; third prize, $750; fourth prize, $500; fifth prize, $400, sixth prize, $300, and seventh through tenth prizes, $200 each. Each of the remaining 180 contestants will receive $50.

Community organizer changing face of Texas politics

By PETER APPLEBOME
New York Times News Service

AUSTIN — When a statewide business magazine listed the most powerful Texans not long ago, it included familiar businessmen like H. Ross Perot and T. Boone Pickens and politicians like Sen. Lloyd Bentsen and Mayor Henry Cisneros of San Antonio.

It also included a short, stocky community organizer few of its readers had ever heard of: Ernesto Cortes Jr.

Cortes is more amused than impressed by the judgment of the magazine Texas Business. But over the past 15 years he has helped build a remarkable network that, in ways large and small, is changing politics in Texas.

Cortes oversees the most extensive statewide network of community groups in the country, one that has organizations in most of Texas's major population centers. It has helped pass some of the most important legislation in the state over the past decade, on education, health care and farm safety, among others.

Neither his low-income constituency nor his intense demeanor and slightly disheveled appearance peg him as a likely power in the collegial world of Texas politics. But he has parlayed anger, insight and shrewd instincts into a force that is a telling indicator of fundamental demographic and political changes here.

"Ernie Cortes has a genius for understanding how to empower people, how to organize people, how to find rallying themes that will bring people together," said Cisneros, who has been both an ally and a bitter foe of Cortes on local issues.

"He has the potential to be one of the key policy- and influence-molders of the next decade in Texas and the Southwest."

CORTES, WHO IS 44 years old, heads the 11 Texas groups affiliated with the Industrial Areas Foundation, which was founded by Saul Alinksy, the Chicago-based apostle of community organizing. The foundation has 22 organizations nationwide.

The oldest Texas group is Communities Organized for Public Service, which Cortes organized in San Antonio in 1974. It is generally regarded as the most powerful group of its kind in the country. Cisneros has said that COPS has "fundamentally altered the moral tone and the political and physical face of San Antonio."

With organizations in Houston, El Paso, Fort Worth, the Rio Grande Valley and Austin, the foundation is represented in all the state's largest population centers except Dallas, where it is likely to expand before long.

Cortes, a former economics graduate student at the University of Texas and a United Farm Workers organizer, is philosophically ill at ease with taking much credit for the success, since IAF stresses developing local leaders. But he has built enough of a reputation so that in 1984 he received one of the $204,000, five-year, no-strings-attached grants awarded by the MacArthur Foundation to individuals who have shown extraordinary creativity in their work.

The Texas Interfaith network, the umbrella group for the Texas IAF organizations, is based around affiliations with close to 300 churches representing perhaps 300,000 families. They use that membership as a base to organize around local issues like the flooding that affected poor Mexican-American neighborhoods in San Antonio or the South Texas colonias, where tens of thousands of people live without water and sewer service.

But with Cortes as the point man, Texas Interfaith has become a major legislative player statewide. The foundation groups were key backers of the state's groundbreaking 1984 educational reforms that provided more resources for poor school districts.

CORTES HELPED shape landmark legislation on indigent health care and various bills affecting farm workers' safety. A current priority is a campaign aimed at getting petitions signed by 350,000 registered voters supporting improved public education, health care, job training and housing programs.

Cortes, a prodigious reader whose interests range from theology to politics, insists, however, that the foundation should not just be judged by the battles it is now fighting. Instead, he said, its main thrust is on developing organizations and leaders and trying to focus "politics on issues, not individuals."

"We're trying to build an organization with staying power, not a movement based on instant power and charisma," Cortes said. "We're trying to create a constituency, because if you build the constituency the politicians will follow."

"This is one of the only organizations I know of that's teaching people about what politics is really about — public discourse, negotiations, how to argue, when to compromise," he continued. "Not just the quadrennial electronic plebiscite we usually call politics."

COPS and some of its offspring got their start with confrontational tactics aimed at drawing attention to local problems. The tactics are usually quieter now, but some conservatives still see the foundation as a radical force in a conservative state.

"There's not much question their basic philosophy is basically a communistic philosophy," said Mayor Othal Brand of McAllen, a powerful grower in the Rio Grande Valley. "It's basically a group that claims credit for everything and does nothing."

But Cortes has managed to build alliances on issues across the political spectrum.

"In all my work with them, Ernie has been totally professional, totally constructive and a lot of fun to work with," said Perot, the billionaire businessman who worked with him on school reform. "They're the kind of people you need to accomplish things like major changes in the public schools."

IAF FILLS AN ambiguous political niche. It is viewed as a powerful political force, but is prohibited by its bylaws from endorsing candidates.

"Valley Interfaith and COPS are very effective in getting politicians to commit to their issues," said State Sen. Hector Uribe of Brownsville. "My question is, what do they give in return?"

But their clout is enough that, when Valley Interfaith held a convention last year with 5,000 delegates, it brought out two Congressmen, all the local state legislators, a Catholic bishop and several top state officials.

Skeptics wonder whether the foundation can be as successful in multi-ethnic communities as it has been in largely Hispanic ones. Others wonder if the group will be as successful in organizing around issues like education.

Man sets skydiving record with 301 jumps in 24 hours

GILBERTSVILLE, Pa. (AP) — It took six planes and 22 parachute packers, but Dale Nelson has set what he thinks is a record — 301 dives in less than 24 hours, about 4½ minutes per jump.

He said he completed the feat Friday, which raised thousands of dollars for four charities, with no fear and no stress.

Witnesses said Nelson completed 301 consecutive skydives between 5 p.m. Thursday and about 3:30 p.m. Friday, surpassing the mark of 250 listed by the Guinness Book of World Records.

"I'm not that tired. It was an adrenaline rush all 24 hours," Nelson, 38 and a father of two teenagers, said in a telephone interview shortly after completing jump No. 301.

Over and over again, Nelson would ride an airplane to 2,000 feet, jump out and parachute to a landing, take off the used 'chute, strap on a freshly packed one, and climb on another waiting airplane.

With a crew of pilots and 22 parachute packers, Nelson, a 291-jump veteran before the record attempt, said he never feared for his safety.

"It was 100 percent trust — zero stress," he said.

David Huber, of Issaquah, Wash., set the 250-jump mark over the Fourth of July weekend in 1985. Nelson's jumps won't be noted as a record until the Guinness editors verify the feat through interviews with witnesses, according to David Boehm, American editor for Guinness.

Nelson, of Bryn Mawr, received $26,000 in cash and pledges before he started jumping and has gathered more money through donations.

Studies pave the way for smoother streets

By STEVE WEINGARTEN

AUSTIN (AP) — Bill Ward says the biggest one he saw was out near Yoakum back in 1981, and it blocked a whole highway.

"It was so big you could fit a city bus in it and, if I'm not mistaken, a pickup truck was stuck at the bottom," Ward said with a chuckle. "You could say it was a pothole of Herculean proportions."

Blacktop rarely unravels to the point described by Ward, coordinator of the Transportation Research Center at the University of Texas. The former Highway Department official said "the whole road just disappeared" when a sulfur mine undermined the asphalt.

Sooner or later, however, every motorist experiences the sickening feeling of bearing down on an axle-snapping, wheel-warping, hubcap-stealing pothole at 60 mph.

Spring is pothole season and repair crews are up to their asphalt in alligator cracks — as blacktop fractures are known.

There is good and bad news where the rubber meets the road. Engineers have thoroughly researched the dynamics of potholes and scientists are applying the knowledge to create a new generation of paving materials. But construction and maintenance costs are becoming so high that politicians may balk when it's time to build and maintain highways.

The Federal Highway Administration lists 285,962 miles of highways, roads and streets in Texas, more than in New York and California combined. If stretched end to end, the state's pavement would reach the moon and complete an orbit.

Keeping Texans rolling is expensive. Scores of federal, state, county and city agencies spent more than $900 million to patch an estimated 90 million potholes across the state during fiscal year 1986.

"People think that once a highway is built, it's forever, like the pyramids in Egypt, but we are continually rebuilding," said John Cagle, a spokesman for the Texas Highway Department.

Cagle said an average stretch of asphalt lasts 20 years. And Texas has its share of abuse: scorching El Paso summers, numbing Amarillo winters, seemingly endless 18-wheelers rolling through. Ant colonies tunneling under the road are even blamed for potholes near Muleshoe.

Robert McGennis, regional director of the Asphalt Institute, said no road or street is immune from potholes.

"All it takes are traffic, a thin road surface and a yielding base. But if just one of those things is absent, you can't get a pothole," McGennis said.

Contrary to popular belief, McGennis said, temperature has almost no effect on potholes. Winter and spring are tough seasons for roadways, he said, because snow and rain seep through cracks and undermine the pavement. Moisture forms a growing air pocket and the pavement finally cracks under the pounding of tires.

Experts say 18-wheel trucks cause most potholes. For decades, road planners designed highways for a balance of cars and trucks that has since changed. An estimated 30 million trucks travel the nation's pavement, more than triple the traffic 20 years ago.

Ironically, new tires are helping truckers improve gas mileage but putting additional stress on roads. Radial truck tires are inflated up to 150 pounds per square inch, nearly twice the air pressure of traditional bias-ply tires.

The strain is magnified by drivers who overload rigs and use back roads to dodge Highway Department inspection stations. Besides avoiding extra fees used to maintain highways, the vehicles crack surfaces not meant to support tons of steel and freight. Texas A&M researchers are developing a portable scale for officials to use against overweight trucks.

The strain is too much for paving materials that have remained basically unchanged for centuries.

Portland cement is still made by grinding calcium, magnesium and silica into fine powder to mix with gravel, sand and water. The concrete surfaces are durable but their expense limits them to high-volume roads like urban freeways and interstate highways.

Most highways, roads and streets are paved with asphaltic concrete, made by heating pebbles and asphalt — the goop left after gasoline, naptha, engine oils and other products are refined from petroleum — to 275 degrees. Three inches of the "hot mix" are spread over a crushed limestone base.

The preferred surface for building farm roads and recovering city streets is "chip seal," made by spreading crushed rocks over a quarter-inch of hot asphalt. The method is cheap but tricky: if the pebbles are sunk too deeply, the surface will lack traction and cars will skid; if the stones are too exposed, traffic will knock them off.

Scientists are beginning to provide maintenance crews with their first modern weapons in the war against highway wear.

The Dallas official charged with maintaining 3,330 miles of streets said his repair crews tested experimental compounds on 10 miles of potholes last year. Coy Evans said he hopes blending plasticizers with Portland cement and adding polymers and latexes to asphalt will make surfaces more flexible to better resist cracking.

"It will take a few years to know whether it really inhibits potholes, but we think we're on the leading edge of technology in this field," said Evans, who also recently organized the Innovative Pavements Association.

Indestructible plastic highways are years away. Meanwhile, builders are modifying construction techniques to confront punishing conditions. High-volume interstates are now paved with 14 inches of concrete, compared to 10 inches on older roads, to compensate for higher tire pressures and heavier freight loads.

Those improvements aside, however, Ward said most officials are asleep at the wheel when it comes to the state of U.S. highways. Construction and repair costs will be "astronomical" in the future, he warned, adding that the price- tag will skyrocket if traffic delays are included.

"Every time you block a freeway with 100,000 vehicles daily, the user costs are tremendous. It's a lot different from a farm road with 100 cars," Ward said.

On January 4, millions of people saw "The Ann Jillian Story" on NBC-TV.

On June 18, you'll have a chance to hear it firsthand.

Actress Ann Jillian talks about surviving cancer, in a special personal appearance in Midland June 18.

Hers is a story of hope. Of courage. Of strength and survival. It's the story of a woman who battled cancer — and won.

Ann Jillian brings her message of hope to Midland on June 18 at the Midland Community Theater, in honor of those who have survived cancer.

Tickets to this special event are $10, which includes a noon luncheon. Ms. Jillian will speak at 1:00 p.m.

To reserve your tickets, call 685-1559 between 8:30 a.m. and 4:00 p.m., Monday through Friday. Due to limited seating, reservations are requested by June 15. Tickets may be purchased and picked up at the Allison Cancer Center of Midland Memorial Hospital, 200 W. Illinois.

Ann Jillian's appearance in Midland is sponsored by the Allison Permian Basin Cancer Therapy Center, Midland Memorial Hospital, Texas Oncology P.A., and the American Cancer Society.

Houston restaurant owner cited for hiring illegal aliens

HOUSTON (AP) — A restaurant chain owner slapped with a $10,000 citation for allegedly hiring illegal aliens is in a quandary over whether to dismiss undocumented workers or risk government sanctions, his lawyer says.

Lawyers for Ghulan Bombaywala received citations and notices of intent to fine from U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service agents on Tuesday. Bombaywala is president and chief executive officer of Marco's Restaurants Inc., a chain that operates 10 Mexican restaurants and employs about 500 people.

INS officials claim the Pakistani restaurant owner is the most blatant employer of illegal aliens.

"What a dubious distinction," said Harry Gee, Bombaywala's attorney.

Tuesday was the last day federal officials had to serve citations before issuing fines, according to provisions of the 1986 Immigration Reform Act.

Beginning today, "we can go directly to the fine. That's the major difference," INS District Director Ronald Parra said at a news conference Tuesday.

INS officials said they raided one Marco's Restaurant in January and arrested 18 illegal aliens who were working there. Another raid in April netted nine illegal workers.

"He didn't have any intention to clean up his act," said Michael McMahon, INS deputy director in charge of employer sanctions. "The top rung of the ladder — the corporate structure — had some knowledge."

But Gee said the INS citations and fines were an overreaction by the government and the result of a misunderstanding.

"Our client has made very strenuous efforts to comply," Gee said. "All of our people now are in compliance."

Gee, who described Bombaywala as a Pakistani who is a U.S. citizen, said his client has made good-faith efforts by meeting with INS officials and by getting attorneys for undocumented aliens who wished to apply for amnesty.

"We have a disagreement (with the INS) as to what constitutes a good-faith effort," Gee said.

He estimated more than 100 aliens had been aided by Bombaywala, whom he described as in a dilemma over what to do.

"He had gotten calls from attorneys representing aliens (saying) that if they were terminated, he could be prosecuted for discrimination," Gee said.

Ronald Finch, the INS special agent who delivered the four-page citation and intent to fine to Gee with about a dozen reporters and photographers in tow, said the Houston INS office was working about 25 such cases, with around 15 nearing the stage that fines will be sought.

Parra said most of the 66,000 Houston businesses have been cooperative in working with immigration officials to comply with the tougher federal laws regarding hiring of illegal aliens.

"We are not going to tolerate non-compliance with the law," he said. "The message to employers is: It's no longer good business to hire illegal aliens."

Parra said Bombaywala and Gee had 30 days to respond to Tuesday's notices by either paying the fine or requesting a hearing before a federal administrative law judge. Gee said it was likely the fine would be appealed to the judge.

"We are not going to tolerate non-compliance with the law. The message to employers is: It's no longer good business to hire illegal aliens."

Perot urges police to meet black ministers

DALLAS (AP) — Dallas billionaire H. Ross Perot says Dallas police officers need to meet with black ministers and their congregations in an attempt to get to know them better.

Perot made the remark Tuesday after meeting with more than 100 black ministers.

The police officers want a chance to get to know the ministers and their congregations better, Perot said.

"We think it's important for police officers who work in this part of town to know the ministers, to know the congregations, to know the people they serve," Perot said.

Perot has worked for more than three months with Dallas Police in an effort to represent their concerns.

The ministers agreed following a two-hour, closed-door meeting that they should work together to help improve strained relations between the police and minority residents.

"This is a just a time when we have a lot of misunderstanding," said the Rev. S.M. Wright, pastor of the Peoples Missionary Baptist Church, site of the meeting. "We've got to put Dallas first. We want to make certain that he (Perot) can relay to them (police) what is on our our hearts so there won't be any miscommunication.

"The time is right for diplomacy," he said.

Members of the Black Ministerial Alliance will invite oficers to attend churhces within their beats so they can get to know better the people they serve.

Perot

Wright said.

The Dallas billionaire said he would take that message back to the Dallas Police Association, which represents 98 percent of the force, and encourage officers to meet with church groups.

Monica Smith, president of the association, could not be reached for comment.

Wright said the ministers and Perot discussed several issues of concern to the black community, including the controversial Citizens Police Review Board.

"There is a definite need" for the review board, which investigates police shootings and complaints of police misconduct, Wright said.

El Paso-area city faces disincorporation fight

SOCORRO, Texas (AP) — Some residents of one of Texas' newest cities say they're disenchanted with their new government and would rather disincorporate and become part of El Paso.

About 600 people have signed a disincorporation petition in the city of 21,000 people about 20 miles east of downtown El Paso. Only 400 signatures are needed to call for a disincorporation election.

Some of the people most anxious to dissolve the city were those who worked hardest to incorporate two years ago.

Richard Ortiz Sr., president of Concerned Citizens of Socorro which lobbied for incorporation in 1986, now says the city's government isn't working.

"The City Council is going to bankrupt Socorro at the rate it's going," he said. "They're raising taxes, and they are buying on credit. This is not what we voted for when we supported the movement to incorporate."

Citizens were irked when the City Council recently established a $15,000 salary for Mayor Joe Carrasco and $10,000 salaries for each of the five council members.

Carrasco had no comment on the disincorporation move.

City Council member Amado Padilla said people behind the incorporation drive are business owners who don't want another government watching over their shoulders. He said most people "are smarter" than to advocate disincorporation.

"We've got too many things going to disincorporate," he said. "If El Paso annexed us, all the money that was raised for Socorro would go to El Paso, not to Socorro."

Tom Burks, a lumber company manager who is collecting petition signatures, said he supports disincorporation because the city isn't taking the lead in getting water. About half the city's residents are without running water or sewerage service.

Burks said he supported incorporation so the city could try to get water.

"The City Council is going to bankrupt Socorro at the rate it's going. They're raising taxes, and they are buying on credit. This is not what we voted for when we supported the movement to incorporate."

Mayor quits after charged with DWI

ROCKPORT, Texas (AP) — Former Mayor Burt Mills says he is confident that a jury will find him innocent of felony driving while intoxicated charges filed against him in connection with an incident involving a joy ride in a city fire truck.

Mills, 40, who had been mayor this coastal community since 1984, resigned Tuesday after he was indicted last week.

The charge came after he and five other men wen on a ride in fire truck on May 8, the day after he won a runoff election.

City Secretary Helen Braffett said Mayor Pro Tem Danny Adams was appointed mayor Tuesday at an emergency meeting of the city council.

"This was very unexpected," Adams said.

"I really feel for Mr. Mills. I have no doubt he'll come through this with a clean record. I hope he and his family can enjoy the freedom of peace and tranquility they have long deserved."

Mills was not at the meeting and could not be reached for comment. He did not return telephone calls to The Associated Press Tuesday.

"I am confident that a jury of my peers will exonerate me in a fair trial," Mills said in a statement Tuesday.

"It saddens me, but I think the city need not be burdened with my personal problems at this time."

Chief investigator Balde Quintanilla of the San Patricio County District Attorney's office said the charge against Mills was a felony because Mills had two prior drunken driving convictions.

Officers received a report May 8 that a fire truck was driving recklessly on Texas 35, Quintanilla said.

The investigator said that when officers went to the Duck Inn, a restaurant owned by Mills, they discovered that the mayor was driving the truck.

"He was never arrested. While he was being questioned, he collapsed and was rushed to the hospital," Quintanilla said.

"But based on some of the evidence we were able to collect, we were determined that he was operating the motor vehicle while intoxicated," Quintanilla said.

Mills said later he was driving the fire truck as a joy ride.

The fire truck was parked outside his restaurant and bar and that some of his friends decided it would be fun to go for a ride and convinced him to go along, he said.

A felony DWI conviction is punishable by a maximum five years in prison and a $5,000 fine.

Son keeps family together after mother dies in wreck

FORT CAMPBELL, Ky. (AP) — Instead of state lines and thousands of miles, a short hallway is now all that separates 24-year-old David Luntz from his younger sister and brothers.

When their mother died two months ago in an auto accident near Fort Worth, Luntz wasn't sure he could keep the family together, especially considering he lived several states away and had a new family of his own.

But perseverance paid off with a little help from friends. Luntz, the oldest sibling has taken guardianship of Alice Luntz's six youngest children and moved them to Kentucky into a pair of mobile homes near the Army's Fort Campbell.

"I built a hallway to connect the back door of one home to the front door of the other," supply sergeant Luntz told the Dallas Times Herald. "Then we went shopping for bunk beds. Everyone's doing OK."

Such an outcome seemed unlikely when Mrs. Luntz, 44, a courthouse clerk and fast-food restaurant employee, was killed March 11 in a pick-up accident just outside the Tarrant County town of Azle.

She left behind eight children: David; Keith, 20; Tiffany, 14; Stormy, 12; Sunny, 10; Rocky, 9; Tony, 8; and Mikey, 6.

David feared that the younger children would be split up and sent to foster homes, so he rushed back to Texas from Fort Campbell. After handling the funeral arrangements, David filed for guardianship of the six youngest siblings.

A Tarrant County court granted the petition March 28, and that night, they loaded up everything and moved to Kentucky.

Before Mrs. Luntz's death, David and his wife, Joan, and their two sons were living in a two-bedroom mobile home on a half-acre a few miles from the base.

After getting guardianship, David bought a three-bedroom mobile home, parked it behind the first home and connected them.

Tiffany, the only girl in the family, has her own room, and the boys are assigned two or three to the remaining rooms.

"We buy food in bulk, and I mean big bulk," said Joan Luntz, who does most of the cooking.

David inherited his mother's compact car, and the family needs every inch of it and his truck to transport the children, Joan said. "What we really need is a bus."

Gramm announces drought relief

DALLAS (AP) — Farmers and ranchers in more than 100 Texas counties facing a serious drought will get emergency relief from federal officials, Texas Sen. Phil Gramm said Tuesday.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture Tuesday agreed to provide emergency grazing and hay rights to farmers and ranchers seeking drought aid, Gramm said in a press release issued Tuesday. On Friday, the USDA agreed to open its emergency feed program in 35 Texas counties.

Both the emergency rights and feed programs will continue until the drought has ended, Gramm said.

The emergency rights will open land for grazing and haying that is normally closed from June to July, the traditional growing months. The land is usually closed under agreement so livestock producers may qualify for different farm program benefits, Gramm said.

The emergency feed program allows USDA to pay half the cost of feed, including hay, grain and other feeds, for agricultural operators who are running short because of the drought, Gramm said.

"It is unfortunate the USDA did not respond earlier to a rapidly deteriorating situation," he said. "But we plan to push until aid is fully available to Texas farmers and ranchers."

The USDA has promised speedy processing of the emergency rights applications submitted by 113 Texas counties and will approve for counties "truly devastated by the drought," Gramm said.

Soviet greets Texan

AUSTIN (AP) — A World War II bomber pilot says his recent reunion with a Soviet officer he met during the war was an education in understanding.

"You have to understand your neighbor before you can know him. The trip was utterly fantastic. It was hard to describe. I have never felt so welcome anywhere. It came straight from the heart," said Kemp Forest, a Lake Travis resident.

"Friendship between our countries has to start with someone — let it be me," said Forest, a retired representative of a clothing manufacturer.

Fighter pilot flips jet

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — An F-16 Falcon fighter jet pilot from Kelly Air Force Base in San Antonio remained hospitalized today after his jet ran off the end of a runway and flipped over during an emergency landing at Corpus Christi Naval Air Station, officials said.

Capt. Victor H. Simon of San Antonio and a Navy rescue worker were held overnight at the base hospital after inhaling fuel vapors from the jet, said Lt. Col Ed Cooke, public affairs officer at Kelly. Another 13 rescue workers were treated and released from the hospital.

Simon, a 10-year veteran Air Force pilot, flew one of two F-16s on a training mission over the Gulf of Mexico Tuesday, said Frank Weatherly, another Kelly spokesman.

Murder charges pending

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Murder charges are pending against a 29-year-old man in connection with the death of a two-week-old baby.

An autopsy revealed the infant, Carlos Rodriguez, died of a blunt trauma head injury Monday, said Doug Clark, public information officer for the Fort Worth Police Department.

Cease-fire extension keeping hope alive

While we're not overly optimistic that Nicaraguan President Daniel Ortega and company will suddenly turn over a new leaf in the cease-fire in that embattled country, the fact that the deadline that was to have passed Tuesday was extended another 30 days is a hopeful move at least.

Even if nothing comes of this extension, continuing the cease-fire is better than starting the bloodshed again. It will provide a breathing spell which could lead to another cessation of firing, or even a permanent peace. However, nothing as historic or encouraging as that is going to happen unless the Marxist regime in Managua demonstrates a more conciliatory mood than it has in the past.

Two rounds of talks during the two-month cease-fire of April and May laid little foundation for hopes of success in the third round. Those factors included:

■ Disintegration of a united front among the contras. Leaders argued about who had the authority to speak for the rebels in the negotiations, and for obvious reasons the arguments could not have come at a worse time.

■ Recognition that the Sandinistas have been using the truce as an opportunity to regroup their forces, and to prepare for their next moves against the contras. That doesn't encourage development of a peaceful relationship.

■ Lack of help from the U.S. Congress. The Reagan Administration's plea to the lawmakers to save Central America for democracy continued to fall on deaf ears. Until the Congress is willing to work toward peace in Central America, it isn't likely to occur.

With these negative forces at work it's little wonder the talks were not fruitful.

During forthcoming days in June we honestly hope that the freedom fighters will end their squabbling, that the Sandinistas will bargain in good faith, and that the Congress will lend a more sympathetic ear to efforts to return a democratic government to Nicaragua. That is important to the future of not only the inhabitants of Central America but the United States as well.

All those who have been loudly proclaiming their desire for peace in Nicaragua should work toward that end now while the guns are not firing.

Abell-Hanger help cited

This time of year I am again reminded of the contributions made to the local community by the Abell-Hanger Foundation's support of local high school graduates choosing to continue their education at Midland College.

This month marks the receipt of associate degrees by over 200 local young men and women and I understand the current total of Midland College students using the foundation's "scholarship" nears 600.

Even though our children are years away from college age, I would like to thank Abell-Hanger for supporting the educational efforts of so many local students, particularly in these difficult times. Their generosity has made an important impact on the lives of these young men and women, and it is sincerely appreciated.

Angels offer thanks

On behalf of the Midland Angel organization, I want to congratulate Mayor Carroll Thomas, the Midland City Council and most importantly all Midlanders for the recent renovation of Angel Stadium.

Through collective efforts, the grandstand, press box, ticket office, parking areas, and outfield fence have all been improved and expanded in order to accommodate the tremendous support Midlanders have bestowed upon the Midland Angels.

With a new six-year lease for Angel Stadium in hand, the Midland Angels look forward to providing all West Texans with the best in inexpensive family entertainment for years to come.

Koop's history lesson

Among the various insect vectors of blood diseases are the culex mosquito (encephalitis), the anopheles mosquito (malaria), the flea (bubonic plague), and the tick (Rocky Mountain spotted fever). It took years for researchers to establish these associations.

Yet the Surgeon General declares unequivocally that AIDS, another blood disease, cannot be transmitted by insects. Maybe Dr. Koop should bone up on his medical history.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Wednesday, June 1, the 153rd day of 1988. There are 213 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On June 1, 1813, the U.S. Navy gained its motto as the mortally wounded commander of the U.S. frigate Chesapeake, Capt. James Lawrence, was heard to say, "Don't give up the ship" during a losing battle with a British frigate.

On this date:

In 1792, Kentucky became the 15th state of the union.

In 1796, Tennessee became the 16th state.

In 1801, Mormon leader Brigham Young was born in Whitingham, Vt.

In 1868, James Buchanan, the 15th president of the United States, died near Lancaster, Pa.

In 1888, California got its first seismographs as three of the devices were installed at the Lick Observatory.

In 1926, actress Marilyn Monroe was born in Los Angeles.

In 1943, actor Leslie Howard was killed when his civilian flight from Lisbon to London was shot down by the Germans during World War II.

In 1958, Charles de Gaulle became premier of France.

In 1967, the Beatles released their now-classic album, "Sergeant Pepper's Lonely Hearts Club Band."

In 1968, Helen Keller, who received a college degree and became an author and lecturer despite having been blind and deaf most of her life, died in Westport, Conn.

Five years ago: Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin, in a speech to the Knesset, gave assurances his country would not attack Syrian forces in Lebanon.

Solution for troubled thrifts expensive

WASHINGTON — The nation's savings and loan system, repository of almost $1 trillion in savings and provider of most home mortgage money, is in serious jeopardy and could collapse.

Jack Anderson

Should this disaster come about, American taxpayers may be called on to bail out the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation's insurance fund that guarantees deposits. The tab for this salvage project could approach $100 billion.

Savings and loans have been sliding downhill since 1982, when they were "deregulated" by an act of Congress, and they are now reeling from a raft of bad loans, poor management and speculative investments. The true extent of the damage is described in stark terms in a highly confidential, 1,200-page "supervisory briefing" book prepared monthly by the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, the federal agency that oversees the thrifts. The tightly guarded documents are distributed to only 12 top bank board officials.

Our associate Michael Binstein obtained the supervisory briefing book prepared last July. It contains a list of 183 "FSLIC cases" and another 200 "significant supervisory cases."

Think of the first category as S&Ls that are already in the morgue, the second as those that are in intensive care.

Here are just a few of the alarming conclusions in the sensitive document:

■ Bailing out the 40 weakest savings and loans in Texas alone would require an average of $173.4 million per institution and wipe out FSLIC's existing cash reserves twice over. If Texas citizens took on the task themselves, it would cost every man, woman and child in the Lone Star State $424.

■ Bailing out the 23 weakest thrifts in California alone would cost an average of $165.8 million, about $145 for every person in the state.

■ The more than $10.7 billion required to deal with the terminal thrifts in these two states would deplete the sum recently authorized by Congress to recapitalize the insolvent FSLIC through the sale of bonds.

■ The states with the worst S&L problems, counting both FSLIC cases and significant supervisory cases, are Texas, California and Illinois with 112, 30 and 26, respectively. Trailing close behind on the bad cases list are Louisiana with 25, Florida with 17 and Arkansas with 13.

A close examination of the FSLIC cases offers insight into the geographic dimensions of the problem. East of the Mississippi, there were 55 of these terminal institutions. Estimated cost to the insurance fund: $1.27 billion, or an average of $23.2 million per thrift.

West of the Mississippi, there were 127 such cases, projected to cost more than $14 billion, or about $107 million per institution.

DIPLOMATIC NONSENSE — Thanks to internationally accepted protocol, diplomats are largely immune from the laws of their host countries. Now we've tripped across a case which suggests that representatives of foreign nations in this country are even exempt from workman's compensation suits.

A Lebanese immigrant was injured last year when he fell in the house of his employer, a Lebanese national who worked at that country's embassy. The immigrant filed a workman's compensation claim, but the employer claimed she was immune from such actions. Our investigation showed that she had not officially received diplomatic status before the claim was filed. But the embassy is supporting her and has even revoked the worker's passport, apparently in retaliation for his claim.

We'll have more on this story in a future column.

WILLIAM SAFIRE

Summit may bring another Soviet retreat

MOSCOW — At last we face the possibility of a sobersided Reagan-Gorbachev summit meeting. After the euphoria of Geneva, the frenzy at Reykjavik and the super-salesmanship in Washington, we approached R-G IV somewhat subdued. Pity we have to break up the team just when they're getting the hang of it.

William Safire

The reason that this summit may be historic is that its runup has not been histrionic. Instead of concentrating on arms control, as the Russians always want, the U.S. plan this time is to address the entire range of relations, a linkage that nettles the Kremlin.

Ronald Reagan's intention here to dwell on human and religious rights at first caused a touch of diplomatic froth to invigorate these warm Moscow summer nights. But Mikhail Gorbachev knows he cannot now demand an arms deal to ease his economic plight; ever since Richard Nixon and Henry Kissinger withdrew their support of the proposed strategic arms reduction agreement, that plan was doomed for this presidency.

What ingredients are left with which to bake a respectable summit pie? The Soviet leader scorns rights for dissidents because he is encouraging free speech for non-dissidents who will castigate his bureaucratic enemies. Nor do cultural exchanges and navigation treaties make the kind of news that will grace the Reagan sunset or the Gorbachev party conference.

That leaves "regional issues" — the euphemism for U.S.-backed resistance to Soviet imperialism — as the test of superpower progress. Afghanistan is all but solved; Ethiopia, with its proximity to the Middle East, is too useful to the Russians to solve now, despite the famine; the occupation of Cambodia by Vietnam is not ripe for solution; with the Contras abandoned, the Russians have no incentives to help make peace in Central America; and Eastern Europe, which is so un-Russian it calls itself Central Europe, is an area where the coming turmoil catches us without a policy.

Which leaves Angola. That central African oil-producing nation, twice the size of Texas, is a Soviet puppet held up by Cuban mercenaries. To gain a military advantage against Jonas Savimbi and his Unita resistance, Gorbachev sent in 7,000 more Cubans in the last few months, bringing the total to 45,000. But the African adventure is costing the U.S.S.R. well over $1 billion a year, and with the lack of economic growth at home, such a cost of empire is becoming intolerable.

The deal in the works is this: South Africa has occupied Namibia, south of Angola, since World War I; President Botha's government in Pretoria is prepared to pull out of that territory, as the United Nations has been hollering at it to do, provided that the Soviet-armed Cubans leave Angola. That seems reasonable enough; once the Communist mercenaries go home, South Africa would have no need of a buffer to its north.

The second step is on the model of the Afghanistan solution. As the Russians cut their arms shipments to the regime in Luanda, Angola, the United States would cut our support of the scrappy Savimbi. (But no early cutoff — our negotiators have learned their symmetry lessons from Afghanistan.) Unless Jesse Jackson prevails and we have no leverage at all with South Africa, we would then ask Botha to stop supplying Unita, too.

At that point, the process of reconciliation between the Luanda regime and the resistance would begin. Perhaps it would begin with the resumption of hostilities but after a while, if the deal made outside holds, the warring factions would be fighting it out with indigenous weaponry — spears and poison darts — rather than the Kalishnikovs and Stingers of proxy wars. That would be up to them; in that neighborhood, Moscow cannot pay the price of mischief and the United States does not want to play policeman to the world.

A top-level directive to push this along is what we can hope will come out of R-G IV. We do not have to pay for this in arms concessions or trade deals or silence about refuseniks; the shutdown of the Soviet penetration of central Africa will come about, if it does, not by virtue of a sudden lust for peace by the Soviet leadership but because Moscow is overextended and wants out of Quagmire Two. Gorbachev can use that billion-a-year saving to put meat in the stores and to buy some more time for his perestroika.

That is not rooted in the "mutual trust" Reagan likes to call for here, but is based on mutual interest, the fundament for lasting agreements.

A personal note: I'm a summit groupie. If you count the "kitchen conference" in 1959, this is my fourth in Moscow. In 1972, I wrote some of the soaring rhetoric of detente that came from a president flushed with the heady wine of history-making, and from that experience can today raise my glass of Moscow mineral water to sobriety in summitry.

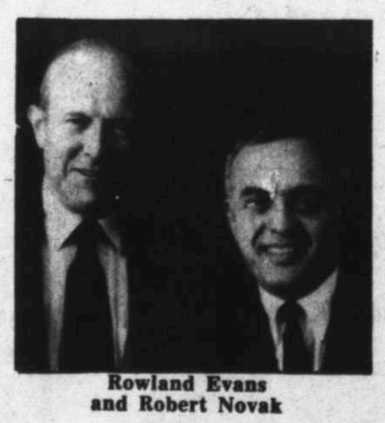
Bush's chain-of-command showing strain

WASHINGTON — An unmistakable signal that Pete Teeley would not much longer continue as the Bush campaign's communications director was flashed May 10 when Craig Fuller, chief-of-staff in the vice president's office, approached a senior aide to President Reagan.

In the modulated tone that has helped him quickly climb the bureaucratic mountain, Fuller complained that Teeley kept putting out one version after another of George Bush's denial of prior knowledge of Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega's drug-dealing. That was shooting at lifeboats. Since Fuller's complaint was bound to leak immediately to the news media, the credibility of the vice president's spokesman was undermined while staving off the vultures.

A week later to the day, Teeley informed the vice president he could not continue as his principal spokesman if frozen out by Fuller. But more than a rancid personal relationship is involved. Behind mutual animosity is deep cleavage between the Office of the Vice President and the Bush presidential campaign.

Jostling to get nearer the throne partially explains why Bush's campaign is troubled while the Dukakis campaign majestically builds support. Downgrading Teeley builds Republican demands for James A. Baker III to resign from the Treasury next month and assume the vacant campaign chairmanship. Bush's prowess as a candidate is debatable, but even a Franklin Roosevelt or a Ronald Reagan would falter under these conditions.



Rowland Evans and Robert Novak

While the Reagan White House impassively takes no interest in gearing decisions to the presidential campaign, Bush's own efforts are bifurcated. The vice presidential office, headed by Fuller, is allied with pollster-consultant Robert Teeter, who dominates strategic decision-making, and Wall Street financier Nicholas Brady, an influential Bush adviser.

Against this phalanx, the actual Bush-for-President campaign under manager Lee Atwater and deputy Rich Bond, and including Teeley, is outgunned. Their attempts at a bolder course in defining the vice president's posture and more access for the news media are undermined.

Exclusion is the watchword at the vice president's office, explaining the otherwise incomprehensible inability by Education Secretary William J. Bennett to get five minutes with Bush before he released his education report. Bush later told Bennett somebody would hang for that omission. Nobody did, because it was Fuller's staff that routinely stiffed the popular Bennett without even informing the campaign.

While Bush has coasted in two months of steady decline, Fuller has stood ready to repel any boarding party of newcomers. He has only one failure, trying but failing to keep out ex-Nixon aide (and current Marriott Corp. multimillionaire) Fred Malek as convention manager. Fuller gave way when it became clear Bush himself wanted Malek.

But mostly it has been Atwater who finesses. He is not about to sacrifice all these years of drudgery in Bush's behalf out of irritation with Fuller. It is another matter for Teeley, a street-smart campaign veteran who left his public relations firm to handle press for Bush in 1988 as he had in 1980 and 1984. He decided he could not function when he could not even get advance wording of the candidate's speeches.

Teeley was frozen out supposedly because he leaked and was unfairly accused of disloyalty in criticizing the boss. But the real reason is similar to why another feisty veteran, ex-Bush speechwriter Vic Gold, is nowhere to be seen in the 1988 campaign. Teeley and Gold had direct links to Bush, potentially disruptive of the chain-of-command.

Unlike many in the current inner circle, Teeley goes back to the come-from-nowhere 1980 campaign and never has deviated in loyalty to the vice president. Bush might well ponder the superior track record of campaigns abundant in operatives who, like Teeley and Gold, really love their candidate.

Teeley was deeply concerned that Bush was getting the wrong advice during these past two months of coasting — supporting Reagan's opposition to plant-closing notification and the civil rights bill. Old Bush backers are happy that by staying with the campaign in a lesser role, Teeley and his advice remains available to the vice president.

Bush's candidacy is far from hopeless. But downgrading the voice calling for openness, inclusion and action underlines doubts growing in Republican ranks. It also heightens the call for Jim Baker to come in, take charge and stop the jostling in the throneroom.

Excavation of buried cast-iron fence reveals intricate detail

By MAX RIZLEY Jr.

GALVESTON (AP) — The only force more destructive than nature on a rampage is the good intentions of man, it seems.

That's what the staff of Ashton Villa has found out after digging out part of the cast-iron fence surrounding the 1859 house museum.

That fence, which may date back as far as the house itself, is now about waist-high. Originally, its height was closer to 6 feet, but during the city-wide grade raising following the 1900 storm, the bottom half of the fence was buried under 38 inches of sand.

Recently, island iron restoration specialist Doug McLean, whose credentials include work on the cast-iron columns at the 1861 custom house and on the iron hull of the Elissa, asked the Galveston Historical Foundation for permission to excavate a small portion of the fence, to see how the buried part had fared over the past 80-odd years.

What he found surprised him. After scaling off thick encrustations of rust-impregnated sand, he found the intricate detail in the cast-iron posts and finials was more intact on the buried-and-forgotten portion than on the part that had been exposed and maintained all along.

"It was really amazing, the detail," McLean said. He explained that the sandy fill used around Ashton Villa in the grade raising allowed ground water to drain away, keeping the buried iron relatively free of contact with corrosive elements.

Also, he said, being buried, the lower part of the fence was not exposed to air or ultraviolet light, which are required to complete the chemical reactions that cause corrosion.

The lower part of the fence is an inverted mirror image of the upper half, making comparison easy. Whereas grooves and scrolls that make up the fence's intricate pattern are sharply defined on the below grade parts, their counterparts above are more softly and indistinctly detailed. McLean attributes this more to mankind's ministrations than to exposure to the elements.

"The standard procedure over the years for cleaning iron has been sandblasting," McLean expalined. The high pressures used to force old paint and dirt out of deep recesses in the design eroded the higher spots, wearing away detail.

As an example of the damage this work can do, McLean noted that in restoring the custom house's cast-iron columns, he found old grit that had lodged deep in the acanthus-leaf capitals of the columns during previous sandblastings. The sand had held water in those spaces, which then rusted severely.

In addition to the damage sandblasting has done to the fence, almost all of the arrowhead-shaped finials surmounting each post in the fence have been clipped off.

McLean surmised that the points began breaking off on their own, due to wear and tear, and — before preservation was in vogue — "some contractor had them broken off.

The lower part of the fence is an inverted mirror image of the upper half, making comparison easy. Whereas grooves and scrolls that make up the fence's intricate pattern are sharply defined on the below grade parts, their counterparts above are more softly and indistinctly detailed. McLean attributes this more to mankind's ministrations than to exposure to the elements.

Landscaping ordinance budding city issue

By CHRIS VAN WAGENEN
Staff Writer

As far as tree lovers go, there's nothing right about a right-away that no one has right to — no one, except the City of Midland.

While the city hasn't broken out the axes, officials here have managed to shake a few limbs over an ordinance revision aimed at Midland's green and mortar.

From trees to fortified concrete mailboxes that line city streets, Midland has at least verbally invoked the idea of making a mid-course adjustment to make its streets safer.

To hear Kirk Swinney tell it: "The logical assumption is if it's not on the sidewalk or the street (the property) it must be mine"

And that, says the assistant city attorney, is the center of the problem — a misconception of who owns the rights to what.

Technically, the city already is empowered to move everything in its line, according to Mayor Carroll Thomas. It's when the city announced it was relaxing its standards that a mild furor began among nursery owners, developers and members of Keep Midland Beautiful.

Swinney said it is not the city's intent to go around removing every tree in sight, as has been misunderstood. "To a large degree, I think we've already reached an understanding with the nursery people and developers."

And Traffic Engineer Fred McGary said he plans to stay put until City Council spells out exactly what it wants.

"I think for the legal people it's a liability problem...I want something I can enforce...technically a lot of trees out there are illegal."

Midland knows about liability.

In June 1981, the Texas Supreme Court ordered the city to pay $975,000 in damages to the father of a youth who was injured in a car-pickup collision at an obstructed T-intersection at a road annexed on the southwest side in 1976.

Sixteen-year-old Calvin Keith Jezek, of Midland was paralyzed and and in a coma following the accident at the blind intersection, which the court maintained should have been cleared by the city. Jezek died two years later.

The Jezek settlement hiked Midland's tax rate by a nickel per $100 valuation for a year's duration until the city was able to satisfy the judgment.

Ray Vaden, chairman of the parks and beautification committee for Keep Midland Beautiful, understands the city's concern. He also agrees that the city needs to control "blatant violations."

However, Vaden said he's troubled by certain gray areas of the ordinance, in particular, a proposal that would place all trees five feet behind the curb. In the downtown area, Vaden said all trees would be in violation.

"We're sure we can come with something that will accomplish protection for the city and also beautification of the city," said Vaden, who wants the city to adopt a landscape ordinance.

Swinney said the city wants to retain the flavor of the original ordinance, but it also wants to modify it. He said residents will still be allowed to grow grass and keep shrubbery up to 18 inches in height.

As for the legal department's proposal that trees be distanced five feet behind the curb, Swinney said its only purpose is to provide motorists with a clear view of oncoming traffic.

Specifically, trees would have to be pruned from the ground up to five feet on residential roadways and eight feet along commercial sectors.

Swinney also said that the proposed revision would require mailbox owners on all right-of-ways to construct "break away" posts or masonary work, to provide an added measure of safety for vehicles that could hop a curb.

"Beyond that, I imagine we would take it on a case by case basis...council wants to relax the standards. The question is, how much and in what way?" said Swinney.

In the meantime, a public hearing on the issue will be held in the basement conference room of city hall at 3 p.m. June 13. Once final revisions are made, the ordinance is expected to be acted on at council's July 25 meeting.

Swinney said he understands the issue has touched some "raw nerves," but added all the city wants is safe streets.

Man says he couldn't flee attacker in attempted murder trial

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

A 31-year-old Midland man testified early today he "couldn't get away" from a man who stabbed him repeatedly at an April birthday party.

Enrique Lara told a state district court jury he was trying to leave the April 16 gathering when 18-year-old Alfredo Vela rushed up to him.

Lara, through an interpreter, told the eight-man, four-woman jury he never saw the knife Vela allegedly pulled.

"My only intention was to box," he told prosecutor Will Lundy. "He just came toward me — he didn't give me a chance to say anything."

Vela is being tried for attempted murder and aggravated assault in Judge Pat Baskin's 142nd State District Court.

After he was stabbed once in the arm, Lara took off his belt and swung it overhead, he told jurors.

"I was trying to get away from him," Lara, wearing a splint on his damaged arm, said.

On cross-examination by Vela's court-appointed attorney, Lara said he had never used a belt as a weapon before.

"And I never get into fights," he told attorney Matt Blair.

But on Tuesday, Blair told the jury that his client acted to protect himself from Lara, who was swinging a heavy-buckled belt wildly at him when the stabbing occurred.

"He (Lara) got stabbed," Blair told the jury during his opening argument. "But under what circumstances did he get stabbed?

"Clearly, this was a case of self-defense," he said the testimony would show.

According to testimony Tuesday, the men attended an outdoor birthday party and family reunion at a south Midland residence near County Road 1165. Lara — who earlier had argued with Vela's brother, Valentin — apparently became enraged when the defendant called him a name, one witness told prosecutor Lundy.

After the earlier fight, Lara tried to leave the party but was confronted by the defendant, Casamina Colunga testified through an interpreter.

Alfredo Vela walked toward Lara and called him a "wetback," then challenged him to a fight, Ms. Colunga testified.

The defendant then pulled out a pocket knife, she told jurors.

"He paid no attention to me" when she said "calm down," she said. "He was looking for the right spot to stab him."

Lara took off his belt with a heavy metal buckle and swung it at least twice over his head, Ms. Colunga continued. Vela then stabbed him once, he fell, and the defendant ran up to him and stabbed him several more times, she said.

On cross-examination, Blair asked Ms. Colunga about an earlier hearing, where he said she testified that Lara had "attacked" Vela before the stabbing. But she denied ever saying it.

Bullock says Texas won't need tax hike

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Texas Legislature will not need a tax hike to maintain state current services for the 1990-1991 budget cycle, Comptroller Bob Bullock predicted this morning.

Bullock, whose official estimates guide legislative budget deliberations, said the economic recovery will more than makeup for the nearly $1 billion lost through the use of one-time budget gimmicks and the expiration of temporary taxes. In addition, he said, the treasury will have enough money even if the state loses $1.9 billion in tax protest cases.

"I'd say it's official," an obviously happy Bullock said in a telephone interview this morning. "I'd love to think that it's going to get even better."

Bullock, who has already announced he will seek the Democratic nomination for lieutenant governor in 1990, has delivered more bad news than good since the oil price slump began in the early 1980s. "Things are on the upswing, man," he said this morning when asked why he released an earlier-than-usual revenue estimate.

"We've been talking about this for a while, now things are really gelling down fine."

Gov. Bill Clements attributed the "great news" to his economic development programs. "Jobs, jobs, jobs equate into good news for the state budget," Clements said. "Today's revenue forecast is concrete evidence that the Texas economy has turned the corner and is driving ahead."

"I'm delighted, I'm elated," said House Appropriations Committee Chairman Jim Rudd, D-Brownfield, who has presided over six years of balancing the budget amidst dwindling revenues. "Now I get to see the other side of the coin, what it's like to be a nice guy for a change."

Big projected increases in sales tax and motor vehicle tax revenues largely fuel Bullock's estimate that 1990-1991 major fund income will total $29.9 billion, 4.8 percent over the 1988-1989 figures. The projections also include an 11.5-percent growth in natural gas taxes, a 6.2-percent increase in crude oil taxes and a 2.8 percent hike in motor fuels taxes.

"Even the oil business has picked up," Bullock said. He predicted average oil prices of $20 a barrel in fiscal 1990 and $21.61 in 1991.

The comptroller's staff estimates that the state already has lost $500 million of the $1.9 billion in court cases challenging the state's corporate franchise, insurance and utility taxes. Bullock called the remaining $1.4 billion "crucial," and his top economist said lawmakers would have a total of about $2.8 billion in excess funds available should the state win those cases.

Report: State spending among lowest

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Compared to other states, Texas ranks slightly below average on most state spending and taxing programs, dead last on welfare spending and above average in property tax levies, the Texas Research League reported Tuesday.

Based on fiscal 1986 figures from the U.S. Census Bureau, the non-partisan league found that the state and local governments collect $1,292 in taxes from every man, woman and child in Texas. That ranks the state 30th in the nation, 16.5 percent below the national average of $1,547.

The government took 9.58 percent of Texans' personal income in taxes, 39th in the country. Texas' per capita personal income of $13,480 ranks 27th in the country.

Property tax is the lone income category in which Texas places above the national average. The $51 per person, all collected by local governments, ranks the state 20th in the country, 11.7 percent above the national average of $463. Our four neighboring states all rank in the bottom 10.

With $4,489 in tax collections per person — 25.24 percent of personal income — Alaska easily topped the list. Mississippi collected the least in taxes from each of its residents — $965 — and New Hampshire took in the smallest percentage of personal income — 7.64 percent. Wyoming led the property tax list at $1,173 per capita, compared with No. 50 Alabama's $118.

Texas brings in $330 per person in federal aid, less than only Arizona and Florida and 70 percent of the $469 national average.

On the other side of the ledger, Texas governments spent $2,626 per capita in 1986, 33rd among the 50 states and 11.6 percent below the $2,971 national average.

Among individual spending items, only local schools ($650 per person, No. 12 nationally) and higher education ($260 per capita, No. 21) beat the national average. On health and hospitals, highways and police protection, Texas spending falls within two or three states of the national median.

When it comes to public welfare, however, Texas' $141 per person ranks 50th among the states. That's 45.5 percent of the $310 national average and nearly 4.5 times less than No. 1 New York's $625. Texas' national ranking on welfare spending has fallen from 35th in 1970 and 46th in 1980, the league reported.

Alaska also leads the states in total spending at $19,597 per capita, while Arkansas' $2,086 per person holds down the bottom of the list.

The following figures show 1986 per capita income and spending amounts for Texas state and local governments, with national rankings.

- Tax revenue, $1,292, rank 30th.
- Property tax, $517, rank 20th.
- Federal aid, $330, rank 48th.
- Total spending, $2,262, rank 33rd.
- Public schools, $650, rank 12th.
- Higher education, $260, rank 21st.
- Highways, $230, rank 26th.
- Police protection, $76, rank 28th
- Public welfare, $141, rank 50th.

Rain welcomed but timing may be too late

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Rain that causes farmers to dance a jig came almost too late.

But the rains did come to moisten the dry land in time enough to get cottonseed into the ground and primed to sprout and bear fruit.

"We got started good a little bit late," said Midland County farmer Vernon Chandler, who was grateful for rains this week and last week. "Everything is in good shape right now. I'm proud of it," he said today.

"An old Indian in Snyder said it was going to be a dry year, and I was beginning to think he was about right."

Chandler noted that the timing was "getting late" into the planting season, which in West Texas extends from late April through mid-June.

"We need to get done and get the cotton started on its way," he said.

Chandler said many farmers figure that "about the middle of June" is as late as West Texas farmers can plant cotton and still expect a long-enough growing season to get the cotton into bloom and bearing full bolls before the first freeze in autumn.

"That's about as late as you want to plant it," he said. "I've planted it later and got by with it."

Shane Lowrie, Midland County agricultural agent, said the late May rains provided "enough adequate rainfall to cover all of the (dryness) problems" so far.

"The local farmers are going to be able to get that seed into the ground and get a good stand," he said.

However, the recent rains are "not going to be enough to last through the (summer) growing season," Lowrie said. "But it's certainly going to give them a good start."

This season, some farmers have planted two or three times — a costly routine.

They would plant. Then a shower would come along and cause a crust to form over the seed.

As a result, the germinating seed could not punch through the hardened upper layer of top soil. Many farmers would have to re-plant.

And other producers haven't planted.

"Some of the farmers who have not been able to get into the field are fighting the time clock," Lowrie said. "That's due to the old rule of thumb of June 10 — the last planting date," he said.

"You want so many days of growing season before the plant starts shutting down in the fall," Lowrie said.

Due to advancements in genetic engineering and breeding programs, varieties of cotton have been developed for a shorter growing season, he said.

"Producers have the technology to use shorter-seasoned varieties of cotton, which in turn help alleviate problems of late planting."

Bureau warns homeowners to beware of non-established roofers

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

With hundreds of homeowners searching for the most affordable repairman to patch their hail-damaged roofs, the Better Business Bureau of the Permian Basin is crying comsumer beware.

"Some companies may not be what they seem," said Better Business Bureau President John Schmidt, who has received reports from at least two local members who claim out-of-town roofers have moved into the area, paid for the use of a local company's name and lured homeowners into roof repair agreements that may be substandard.

The out-of-towners — operating under the name of an established local merchant — lures homeowners into the business with massive advertising campaigns that offer special reduced rates, he said.

"I've seen ads in the newspaper offering a 10 to 100 percent discount on the estimate," he remarked, observing that the practice is not illegal, though it is certainly questionable if the out-of-town business has traded on a local company's name without providing references.

"We don't know what part of the country they come from," said Schmidt. "Whether they buy the company outright or whether they use the name for a period of time is the question."

Schmidt said the quality of workmanship provided by some of these particular companies is of particular concern.

"Some want to do only shingle jobs and won't touch a complicated tile, tin, copper or aluminum roof," he said. "You'll find folks who don't know much more than the storm damage they've done in the past."

The Better Business Bureau warns homeowners to beware of some of the out-of-town businesses, storm chasers or those individuals who move into an area following a severe hail storm, who begin doing business under the name of a local company after signing a sales contract with a local merchant.

To protect homeowners, Schmidt said his organization will gladly check the bank references of any roofing company in town. If the company is a member of the Better Business Bureau, a bank reference is available, he added.

Furthermore, Schmidt urges customers to obtain some form of written guarantee prior to signing a roof repair agreement.

"If someone is established, they more than likely will have met our standards and will do a better job," he said.

DEATHS

Cassie B. Johnson

Johnson

Cassie B. Johnson, 77, of Midland died last Saturday in a local hospital following a brief illness.

Services will at 1:30 p.m. Saturday at Greater Ideal Baptist Church with Rev. Norris Harris, pastor, officiating. Burial will follow in Fairview Cemetery with Thomas Funeral Home in charge of arrangements.

She was born Nov. 8, 1910, in Ennis County and had been a Midland resident since 1940. She was preceeded in death by her husband, Goldmon, and a son, Leon Hendrix. She was a member of Greater Ideal Baptist Church.

Survivors include one brother, Dave Briggs of Midland; two grandchildren and six great-grandchildren.

Mrs. Helen Ball

Services for Mrs. Helen E. Ball of Midland will be at 11 a.m. Thursday in the Calvary Hill Cemetery with Ellis Funeral Home in charge of arrangements.

Mrs. Ball died at her home Monday night.

She was born Dec. 8 1906, in Pueblo, Colo. She lived in Denver and Colorado Springs, where she did her dress making apprenticeship with Madom Jacque Dumenil before attending "Fashion Academy" and "McDowell's School of Design" in New York.

She was associated with the Couture House of Valentina as a fitter. She moved to Dallas in 1970 and was affiliated with Lillie Ruben. She moved to Midland in 1980.

Survivors include, one sister, Joan R. Fritz of Kirkland, Wash.; one half-sister, Margaret Hasenbalg of Romah, Colo.; two half-brothers, Steve Cvaniga and Paul Swaniga, both of Colorado Springs; three nieces, including Betty Barnes of Midland; and two nephews.

The family requests memorials be directed to the SPCA or to the American Heart Association.

Houston H. Johnson

GRANBURY — Graveside services for Houston H. Johnson, 84, of Granbury and formerly of Midland, will be at 1 p.m. Friday at Resthaven Memorial Park in Midland under the direction of Martin's Funeral Home.

Johnson died Monday at a Granbury hospital following a lengthy illness.

He was born Nov. 21, 1903, in Clairette and was a retired transportation foreman for the Humble Oil Co. Johnson worked for the company for 42 years prior to his retirement. He had lived in Midland for 33 years before moving to Granbury 14 years ago.

Survivors include two sons, Perry Johnson of Portland, Ore., and Ralph Johnson of Midland; two brothers, Jesse Johnson of Azle and Arnold Johnson of Irving; six grandchildren; and five great-grandchildren.

Theophilous Drew

Services for Theophilous "T.P." Drew of Midland are pending with Ellis Funeral Home.

He died at a Midland hospital Tuesday night.

MC Continuing Education offers six classes

From Staff Reports

The Midland College Department of Continuing Education will offer six short courses beginning the week of June 6. Courses are as follows:

Ballroom Dance will be taught by Ellen Gonzalez on Mondays and Wednesdays from 7:30-9:30 p.m., June 6 through June 29. The course includes the basic rhythms, movements, and techniques used for ballroom dancing. Students will learn to recognize different types of dance music and receive instruction in the cha cha cha, fox trot, waltz, swing, rumba, mambo, tango, samba and merengue. Course fee is $29.

Bridge I will be taught by Joe Salman on Mondays and Thursdays from 7-9 p.m., June 6 through June 30. The course is an introduction to standard American Goren with emphasis on 5 card, major bidding. It includes bidding, play of hands, leads, and scoring. Class will be limited to 16 students. Course fee is $29.

Self-Hypnosis I will be taught by Sam Kalill on Mondays from 7-9 p.m., June 6 through July 18. This course is designed to enlighten students about hypnosis, to clarify any misconceptions and myths about hypnosis.

Hypnosis is a vehicle by which people can reach the subconscious mind. Subsequently, once a person masters the various techniques, he can apply them for his own self-improvement in many walks of life.

The enormity of its wide range and power will be discussed, as well as its limitations. This course is highly recommended for anyone who wants to learn the fine art of hypnosis, including physicians, businessmen, laymen, etc. Course fee is $22.

Self-Hypnosis II will be taught by Sam Kalill on Wednesdays from 7-9 p.m., June 8 through July 13. Advanced techniques and applications of self-hypnosis for use in self-improvement, mind expansion and pain control. Suggestions for using self-hypnosis to overcome personal bad habits will also presented. No prerequisite is required. Course fee is $22.

Spanish I-Conversational will be taught by Marjorie Ulmo on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 7-9 p.m., June 7 through July 14. The course will include the fundamentals of conversational Spanish. The course should be useful for travelers as well as business persons needing a knowledge of Spanish in their daily activities. Class is limited to 25 students. Course fee is $43.

Study Skills Clinic will be taught by Barbara Stoltz on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 7-9 p.m., June 7 through June 9. This will help teach how to complete difficult homework assignments, get over feelings of anxiousness and distraction and effective note taking. The clinic is sponsored by the Special Needs Program and the Continuing Education Department. Course fee is $8.

For more information on these and other Continuing Education short courses come by the Continuing Education Office in the Administration Building or call 685-4518.

Mothers of chronically ill children seek help

AUSTIN (AP) — A Senate committee chairman says the state probably will never be able to do enough for families with chronically ill children.

"We sure have identified some gaps," Sen. Chet Brooks, D-Pasadena, said after hearing emotional testimony from mothers who said their children need much more help from the state.

"Almost any figure you come up with probably would be inadequate," Brooks said. "That's going to be a problem that is probably going to be with us for awhile."

His Senate Committee on Health and Human Services on Tuesday heard from several mothers whose children have devastating combinations of severe diseases. Debbie Johnson of Austin referred to the children, including her 4-year-old daughter Monica, as "high-tech children," young people whose lives were saved by modern medical technology.

But high-tech kids produce high-cost and high-stress problems for their families, the witnesses said.

"You have to live in poverty or very near it to get help," Ms. Johnson said.

"I cannot do this on my own," said Sandra Davis of Paige, whose quadriplegic son sat in a wheelchair near her in the Senate chamber.

She said her biggest problem now is affording the disposable diapers her son needs. Thirty-three agencies have turned down her requests for help, she said.

Tena Peterson of Austin, mother of a chronically ill 2-year-old boy, said the bills add up, even for people like herself who have insurance that pays 80 percent of many of the costs.

"His nursery lookes like a neo-natal unit," she told the Senate Committee on Health and Human Services.

"The stress is incredible...we don't have time or energy to find out what programs are available. There are 101 questions you have that you don't know where to turn for the answers."

— Tena Peterson, mother of severely ill child

Mrs. Peterson, representing a group of parents with severely ill children, said what is most needed is a "clearing house" to help parents find the agencies and programs that can help.

"The stress is incredible," she said of the full-time job of caring for her son. "We don't have time or energy to find out what programs are available. There are 101 questions you have that you don't know where to turn for the answers."

Sometimes, it comes down to a question of, "Are we going to eat dinner tonight or get his medicine? That's a fine line to draw. That's a tough decision."

Brooks said the state's Board of Human Resources could provide needed help when it acts next month on recommendations from a special task force that proposed several changes, including expanded Medicaid benefits for chronically ill children.

Teachers rave over students' cooking

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — The teachers at Hamlin Middle School can't say enough good things about the monthly luncheons that students in Diane Lauritzen's class have been putting on this year.

And the teachers rave about the soups, salads and desserts the students take to the teachers' workroom once a week.

"We've never been as well fed as we have been this year," said Melinda Parmer, who with other teachers began describing the meals they've bought for a nominal fee from the class.

There have been baked potatoes with all kinds of toppings, from broccoli-cheese sauce to chili. Another time it was a chef's salad. Once it was an enchilada dinner. And another time it was spaghetti.

But the soups the students made during the winter really brought out the appreciative oohs and aahs.

"I wish they'd do the soups and sandwiches again. We loved that," said Aneece Hughes.

Between bites of lasagne, salad and garlic bread, Steve Skidmore said, "We've only got 25 minutes for lunch so we can't go anywhere and the cafeteria food gets old fast. This is great."

The students think it's great, too.

"When I was a little kid I always wanted to have a restaurant. I'm starting to work on that dream," said Peter Vance as he manned his position on the serving line.

Although Peter is the only student who dreams of making a career out of cooking, all the students say they enjoy it. Some now cook at home for their families.

Jessica Frye said she likes to make macaroni and cheese, stir-fried shrimp and vegetables, and sate, an Oriental marinated meat appetizer. "My mom appreciates it because she works until 8 p.m. sometimes," said Jessica.

There are eight students in the class, which is known as VEH (Vocational Education for the Handicapped). It is specially geared for students with learning disabilities.

"It's really for people who need help in their education, who can't function in a regular class. That's what this is made for," said Peter.

Besides studying food preparation, the students study sanitation, safety when handling food service machinery, nutrition and dealing with customers.

Police look for suspects in sexual assault cases

From Staff Reports

Midland police are looking for three men who sexually assaulted two high school students after they stopped their car near a south Midland elementary school.

The attack early today followed another sexual assault which occurred Tuesday morning in the swimming pool of a west side Midland apartment complex, according to police.

The two women, ages 17 and 18, were apparently driving around about 12:30 a.m. today when their car had mechanical trouble or was deliberately stopped, police spokesman Cpl. Jim White said. The women earlier had noticed three men following them in a pickup truck, reports said.

When the car stopped near Travis Elementary School, 900 E. Gist Ave., the men approached the car. The 17-year-old was then taken from the car near the school where she was raped by one of the men, White said.

The 18-year-old was then assaulted in the car by a second man while the third man watched. After the attacks, the women went to a nearby convenience store and called police, White said.

The attackers were described only as Hispanic, and no description of the pickup truck was released by police.

In the earlier attack, a 17-year-old Midland high school student was attacked after a man forced her into the swimming pool at Midland Elms apartment complex, 3601 Andrews Hwy., police said.

The attack occurred about 10:30 a.m. Tuesday, but was not reported until 12 hours later, White said.

Investigators are trying to identify the man, who was described as Hispanic, according to reports.

Program in works to exercise sea turtles

GALVESTON, Texas (AP) — An exercise program in the works for endangered Kemp's Ridley sea turtles will not have them racing hares, but it may help them dodge sharks.

Marine scientists at the National Marine Fisheries Service are researching the exercise program for the more than 1,000 turtles raised in captivity each year.

The turtles are released into the Gulf of Mexico in an effort to save them from extinction. About two weeks ago, 1,150 Ridleys were released into the Gulf.

During captivity, the turtles are too aggressive to be placed together in a tank and they have to live in one-gallon plastic milk cartons or other small containers that are placed in larger tanks that hold about 80 turtles each.

"We can't just put them all in one tank, they'll attack each other," said Tim Fontaine, manager of the federally funded program to save the turtles.

But scientsits fear that the more than 13,500 Ridleys already released into the Gulf have been too vulnerable to their No. 1 enemy — the shark. The turtles have had virtually no exercise their entire lives, which may be endangering them when let into the Gulf, Fontaine said.

About the only exercise the turtles have in captivity is when they flap inside their containers, Fontaine said.

Earlier, right after they hatch, the young turtles are allowed to scurry briefly to the Gulf from Padre Island. The act is called imprinting, and it is believed the turtles always will remember where they hatched and someday will return there to nest, Fontaine said.

After imprinting, the turtles are netted and shipped to the Galveston facility to mature.

But a program to exercise the turtles has been developed by Fontaine with the help of Dr. Charles Caillouet, chief of the life studies division for the fisheries service.

The system, which will be tested this year, involves pumping water through the tanks to create a current the turtles will swim against.

Convicted contract murderer sentenced

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — A federal judge has sentenced Richard Michael Savage to a maximum 40-year prison term for soliciting a contract murder through Soldier of Fortune magazine.

The sentence was assessed Monday by U.S. District Judge James DeAnda.

The man, 39, is currently serving a 40-year term in a Florida federal prison for arranging the beating death of the former assistant city manager of West Palm Beach, Fla. He also has been sentenced to 25 years in a federal prison in Arkansas on a conviction for attempted murder-for-hire and threatening a witness.

"That was the maximum that he was exposed to,"said Assistant U.S. Attorney Gary Cobe. "I think that he deserved to get the maximum in this type of case."

Savage was convicted April 6 on charges he masterminded the bungled grenade bombing two years ago of Dana Free's Houston-area home. Savage, of Knoxville, Tenn., ran a "gun for hire" advertisement in Soldier of Fortune magazine in June 1985.

A teminally ill Colorado widow pleaded guilty to paying Savage $20,000 to kill Free, her former business partner.

Alice V. Brado, who later died in prison, said she wanted Free dead because he bilked her out of her life savings of $300,000.

The intended victim, who testified against Savage, was not at home at the time of the October 1985 bombing. He also was able to escape two previous attempts to bomb his car in Atlanta.

The trial was moved to Brownsville after the judge ruled that Savage could not get a fair trial in Houston because of publicity from an unrelated civil lawsuit against Soldier of Fortune.

A federal jury awarded $9.4 million to the family of a woman killed after an ad ran in the magazine.

In a handwritten motion for a new trial last Friday, Savage claimed he had ineffective assistance of counsel. The document criticized Michael Brown, his court-appointed Houston attorney, for failing to call witnesses to testify in his defense.

The federal judge appointed Brownsville attorney Rey Cantu to represent Savage during the sentencing, and will appoint another attorney to handle his appeal.

Suspect in cop killing on trial

WAXAHACHIE, Texas (AP) — Testimony began Tuesday in the capital murder trial of a 16-year-old Midlothian High School student accused of killing an undercover narotics officer.

Greg Knighten, the son of a Dallas police officer, is charged with shooting undercover Midlothian officer George Raffield Jr., 21, on Oct. 23.

The trial is the first of several in the case. Also charged in connection with the officer's slaying are Midlothian students Richard Geoglein Jr., 17, and Jonathon Jobe, 16, and Cynthia Fedrick, 23, an unemployed cashier.

Both Knighten and Jobe have been certified to stand trial as adults. But because of their age, they cannot receive the death penalty, if convicted.

Lt. Billy Fowler testified that authorities were led to Raffield's body, which was found Oct. 24. Raffield had been shot in the back of the head twice.

Geoglein has told police that Knighten used his father's .38-caliber revolver to shoot the officer, who was posing as a Midlothian senior to investigate drug sale and use in the school. Prosecutors say Geoglein and Knighten took Raffield to a field and Knighten was the one who actually pulled the trigger.

Geoglein has said Knighten was angered that several of his friends had been arrested and he blamed Raffield for causing their arrest.

In testimony at the Ellis County Courthouse Tuesday, Raffield's superior officers told jurors the young policeman was "a very careful officer" who had been well-trained for his undercover work.

Knighten's trial is expected to last more than a week as prosecutors call as many as 31 witnesses.

Defense attorneys are expected to present testimony that Knighten was involved in devil worship and the occult.

TRIAL

She also told Blair that Lara was drunk at the party, but "I've never seen him angry."

Midland surgeon Dr. Guillermo Brachetta told jurors Lara was stabbed twice in the chest and twice in the arm. He suffered a collapsed lung, a partially collapsed lung, lost his blood volume twice and required three operations before his life was saved, Brachetta said.

Tendons in one arm were sliced, and he has lost the use of two fingers, the doctor testified.

The doctor also told Blair that Lara's blood alcohol level was .158 when he was tested in the emergency room of Midland Memorial Hospital. According to Texas law, .10 is considered intoxication.

Vela — who has been in Midland County Jail since the April 20 hearing when Baskin ordered he be denied bond — is also under indictment for another attempted murder.

Vela was among several men indicted for an Aug. 16, 1987 assault, according to court records.

In the earlier attack, Eduardo Salcido, 18, 309 E. Cuthbert Ave., was "stabbed and kicked" several times by a group of youths that approached him in the 700 block of North Dallas Street.

He was paralyzed by the attack and remains a quadriplegic, Lundy said.

DIFFICULT CHILDREN:
Not always the parents fault.

In a recently published book entitled: ATTENTION DEFICIT DISORDER, a common but often overlooked disorder of children; parents of difficult children are given support and praise.

The book states that children who are having academic or behavior problems, have a high probability of having Attention Deficit Disorder (or A.D.D.). A.D.D. is one of the most common disorders of children, especially boys, but is often overlooked due to the variations in symptoms among children.

Characteristics of A.D.D. children are:
- *Directions must be repeated often
- *Difficulty in concentrating on tasks for long periods of time.
- *Rarely finishes anything, especially school work
- *Becomes frustrated easily.
- *Impulsive
- *Easily distracted
- *Irresponsible behavior

Children with A.D.D. are usually average or above average intelligence but their school performance is poor or below their potential. Many of these children are creative in areas not related to academic endeavors. These children are sometimes overly sensitive to criticism and other times exhibit no remorse for their deeds. This type of behavior is confusing to the parents and usually leads the parents to blaming themselves. The behavior and academic performance of these children is not the fault of the parents.

The book is written in a conversational tone and is easily understood. The author, Glenn Hunsucker, is Director of an A.D.D. Treatment Center in Abilene, Texas and has worked with hundreds of these children.

This book is now available at Hastings Books in San Angelo, Midland & Abilene.

Remains those of Green River Killer's 40th victim

SEATTLE (AP) — Remains dug up this week are those of the Green River Killer's 40th victim, and the discovery should help in the search for the nation's worst known serial killer, whose first victims were found six years ago, police say.

The bones and skull of Debra Lorraine Estes, a runaway who long had been feared a victim of the killer, were identified Tuesday through dental records.

In addition to the 40 women known dead, eight missing women are listed as probable victims of the killer, who frequently dumped bodies in clusters in wooded areas east and south of Seattle.

Ms. Estes, who was 15 when she vanished nearly six years ago, had been on that missing list until her remains were found Monday by workers digging post holes at a new apartment complex in Federal Way, a town between Seattle and Tacoma, said King County Police Sgt. Steve Davis.

Police spokesman Dick Larson characterized the discovery as "another piece in the puzzle," but couldn't say how it might affect the overall investigation.

The case takes its name from the Green River in south King County, where the bodies of the first five victims were found in the summer of 1982.

Ms. Estes' family declined to be interviewed Tuesday.

Ms. Estes, also known as Betty Lorraine Jones, was reported as a juvenile runaway by her parents in July 1982. She was last seen Sept. 20, 1982, along Pacific Highway South in Federal Way. The area is 8 miles south of a strip of the highway near Seattle-Tacoma International Airport that was frequented by many of the victims, most of whom had ties to prostitution.

She was included on the Green River missing list on April 23, 1984.

Ms. Estes had prior contacts with King County and Seattle police for prostitution and theft.

Her remains were identified by comparison with dental X-rays on file with the county medical examiner's office, said Vaughn Van Zant, medical investigator.

The cause of death was listed as "homicidal violence of undetermined nature," the official cause listed for all Green River victims.

The victims disappeared between the summer of 1982 and early 1984. The bodies of four were found in Oregon, but the killer has operated primarily in the Puget Sound area.

The killer is thought to have picked up many of his victims along the "Sea-Tac strip," an area of motels and fast food restaurants near the airport. Others disappeared from downtown Seattle and the city's Aurora Avenue and Rainier Valley area.

The early victims were strangled. Police later refused to discuss causes of death and attributed them only to "homicidal violence."

The most recent "bone find" before Monday was last June, when the bones of 17-year-old Cindy Anne Smith were discovered in a wooded ravine about 15 miles south of Seattle. Ms. Smith, an underage topless dancer, disappeared March 21, 1984, from the Sea-Tac strip.

The police task force investigating the Green River killings has said that it has 50 to 70 suspects.

In February 1986, the task force picked up a 52-year-old Seattle man and questioned him for nearly 11 hours before telling him he was free to go. The home of a second man was later searched, but there have been no arrests.

NATION

AIDS virus may enter dormancy, studies say

BALTIMORE (AP) — Researchers have discovered that the AIDS virus apparently may become dormant in the human body and undetectable by the standard test, but say the finding does not mean the nation's blood supply is endangered.

"The blood supply is exceptionally safe and protected to a great extent by existing screning tests and the self-deferral of individuals at high risk," said B. Frank Polk, a professor of epidemiology at the Johns Hopkins School of Public Health and co-author of the study published today in June's Annals of Internal Medicine.

Tests to pinpoint the disease and protect blood supplies are based on detection of HIV-1 antibodies, produced naturally by the body to fight the acquired immune deficiency syndrome virus.

The instances of AIDS victims who stop producing detectable antibodies to the disease appear to be rare and so far have only been observed in those who have shown small amounts of the virus in their bodies, said Homayoon Farzadegan and Alfred J. Saah, also professors of epidemiology at Hopkins and authors of the study.

Farzadegan and Saah said at a news conference Tuesday that four homosexual men infected with AIDS stopped producing detectable antibodies, though a newer test showed they still are infected with the virus. Farzadegan said the phenomenon may mean that the virus has the potential of going into a latent phase, during which it does not reproduce.

The four were among 1,000 homosexual men infected with the virus who participated in the continuing study. The four showed the loss of antibodies up to 3½ years ago, though one has since shown signs of the AIDS infection and has developed antibodies again.

"Usually when an infected person loses HIV-1 antibodies, he or she is in the end stages of AIDS and has a deteriorated immune system," said Polk. The four "had no clinical symptoms of illness, such as swollen lymph glands or abnormal counts of the white blood cells targeted by the virus."

The researchers reported their findings last June, but could not determine whether the men had been properly diagnosed as having AIDS or whether mistakes had been made in laboratory tests.

During the follow-up study, the researchers used a new method to test for the virus instead of the antibody test and determined that the men showed evidence of infection, but not HIV-1 antibodies.

The new test, called PCR or polymerase chain reaction assay, magnifies the presence of the virus' genetic material inside cells up to 1 million times.

"We don't know if something in the virus itself is defective and causing it not to reproduce, or whether it is something within the host," Saah said, adding that researchers have not determined whether the disease is transmittable during this phase.

Farzadegan said the new test was not commonly used to screen blood donors because of the complexity of conducting it and interpreting its results.

Academy feels HIV infection should be viewed as disease

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Academy of Sciences said today the hundreds of thousands of Americans unknowingly infected with the AIDS virus should be considered as suffering from a disease even if they don't have full-scale AIDS.

"Viewing HIV infection as a disease is important because it may eventually be amenable to treatment and patients will need to be diagnosed and treated as early as possible," the academy said in a report.

The report based its recommendation on what is now "scientifically conclusive" evidence that the human immunodeficiency virus, or HIV, causes AIDS.

"From a public health perspective the important event is infection rather than full-blown disease because even asymptomatic infected persons are capable of infecting others," it said.

But the report also called for a federal law to prevent discrimination against people with the AIDS virus — a measure opposed by the Reagan administration.

And although it encouraged more voluntary testing to get better information on the magnitude of the epidemic, the report says mandatory testing "is currently appropriate only for blood, tissue and organ donations" and specifically says testing should not be a requirement for getting a marriage license.

The report also called for establishment of a new, semi-permanent federal commission to oversee the nation's response to the epidemic after the present White House commission goes out of business this month.

The report was prepared by a joint committee of the academy and one of its operating arms, the Institute of Medicine, and was presented as "an update of and a supplement" to the academy's initial 1986 report on AIDS.

Nine years later, murder arrest made

By LISA LEVITT RYCKMAN

The statute of limitations never runs out for homicide in New York state. Murder cases never die, and the 44th precinct has ones sitting around from 50 years ago.

NEW YORK (AP) — In the mean, material world of the 44th precinct, hard against the Harlem River, Tireak Ghandy was stabbed to death at age 12 over his $200 bike.

That was nine years ago.

Sometimes, people get away with murder. Sometimes, everyone walks away, except John Hennessy and Gerard Dunn, detectives in the self-proclaimed home of the world's busiest cops.

"We're what they call 'off the chart,'" said Hennessy. "We're not catching cases. We're just trying to solve the old ones."

Hennessy and Dunn were to receive "Cop of the Month" commendations today for the dogged work that led to an arrest in April in the 1979 slaying of Tireak Ghandy.

The statute of limitations never runs out for homicide in New York state. Murder cases never die, and the 44th precinct has ones sitting around from 50 years ago. Time heals some old wounds, but this case still lay open and bleeding when the detectives inherited it 2½ years ago.

Partly it was because he was his mother's only child, and his mother, Carol, was a decent, hard-working person. Mostly, it was because he was a child who died the kind of death usually reserved for people who see it coming.

"The kid was doing what every kid who ever grew up in the Bronx did," said Hennessy, 49, who grew up in the Bronx and used to do the same when he was Tireak's age. "He rode his bike to Yankee Stadium."

On a warm night at the end of July 1979, Tireak pedaled his new $200 10-speed to the stadium, to a place in the back where kids play basketball. He was on his way home when a teen-ager demanded his bike.

"He was a frail little kid," Hennessy said. "This guy was a lot bigger than him. He was four or five years older. He could have smacked the kid in the mouth and taken the bike, that's all he really had to do. He didn't have to stab him."

But he did stab him, plunging a knife into the smaller boy's chest.

"A lot of people heard him yell 'Don't take my bike!' and starting to scream, right? He was trying to pull the bike away from him, and when the kid wouldn't give up the bike, he stabbed him," Hennessy said.

As Tireak fell, the attacker snatched the basketball from his hands and escaped on his bike. The child was bleeding so badly that police didn't wait for an ambulance, but drove him to the hospital themselves. He was dead before they reached the emergency room.

"He was so young and innocent, to lose his life over a basketball and a bicycle," said Dunn, 43, who has a daughter Tireak's age. "He didn't have a chance. He just didn't have a chance."

People saw the killer's face. They left the neighborhood but couldn't shake the memory. They remembered, for all the good it did. The police had no leads.

"We asked everyone brought in from that area, and 99 percent of them didn't know anything," Hennessy said.

About 2½ years ago, the detectives received some information off the street. Not much, just a fairly common nickname: "Flaco." The thin man. The informant told them the guy who did it had lived two blocks from the scene. The detectives persisted. They came up with a name and a photograph.

The next job was to find the witnesses, most of whom had left the area, and persuade them to testify.

"We have witnesses to homicides, if you go back two months from now, they're gone," Hennessy said.

Most of the murders in the city's most murderous precinct — a record 81 last year — are over drugs. Money means more than human life, and civic responsibility smothers under fear.

"Witnesses don't want to get involved in a neighborhood like this," Hennessy said. "They're afraid. We have people all the time tell us, 'Look, Hennessy, Dunn, I'd gladly testify against this guy, and I'd like to see this guy in jail.

"'But you know what's going to happen: They'll go after my mother or my brother or my wife, and I'm not going to do it.' And you can sympathize with them."

Mothers see their sons murdered and refuse to testify. Wives see their husbands murdered and free their killers by lying in court. "That's the kind of thing that makes you mad," Hennessy said. They still keep trying.

The partners spent a year tracking down the witnesses they knew of and turning up new ones. Most still lived within 25 miles of the crime. In at least one case, they had to travel 200 miles to find the person they wanted.

With the witnesses in line, Hennessy and Dunn arrested Pedro Lozada, 26, as he visited his parole officer on April 20. Lozada, released from prison last December after serving three years for criminal possession of stolen property, never said a word, but the detectives could see the shock on his face.

"He couldn't believe that after all these years, it had caught up with him," Dunn said. "I guess he figured he'd beat it."

Two days later, three witnesses identified Lozada in a lineup as the youth they saw stab Tireak Ghandy to death. He pleaded innocent to charges of second-degree murder and first-degree robbery. Pretrial motions were scheduled today.

"A few of the witnesses felt like, they had lived with this thing so long, and the kid was such a nice kid, and he had such a bad death, we got the feeling these people were really glad — 'Let me help the cops out and get this thing off my shoulders,'" Hennessy said.

Sometimes, people get away with murder. Sometimes, they only think they have.

"We never gave up on it," Dunn said. "It was only a matter of time."

Surgeons reattach 5-year-old's arm

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Surgeons today completed a 12-hour operation to reattach a 5-year-old boy's right arm that was ripped out by a conveyor belt used to sort tomatoes, a hospital spokesman said.

The boy was in critical condition after surgery, said Marc Kutash, spokesman at Tampa General Hospital.

No information was immediately available on whether the surgery was successful, Kutash said.

Surgeons began efforts to reconnect the arm at about 2:30 p.m. Tuesday.

The accident occurred about 1½ hours earlier at a barn at Singletary Farms outside Dade, where his mother, Eustolia Jaurequi, a migrant laborer, was working at a conveyor belt, said a co-owner of the 75-acre vegetable farm.

The boy stuck his arm into the machine and it got caught under the belt on the roller, said co-owner Earl Singletary.

While Singletary tried to stop the bleeding in Fidencio Jaurequi's shoulder, Singletary's brother, Walter, called an ambulance. The limb, which was severed at the shoulder, was retrieved from the machine.

"I had them put ice on his arm...and I held a shirt up on his arm — that much I knew to do," Singletary said.

Rescue workers arrived within 15 minutes after the accident was reported and packed the limb in ice and a saline solution, said Pasco County Emergency Services Chief Derryl O'Neal.

Park leaders gather

GRAND TETON NATIONAL PARK, Wyo. (AP) — With the tourist season fast approaching, superintendents of the National Park Service gathered today for a summit meeting to discuss how to attack threats to America's natural heritage.

The four-day conference at Jackson Lake Lodge, the first of its kind in 12 years, was called by National Park Service Director William Penn Mott, who was to officially open the conclave today. All 341 superintendents were invited.

It comes on the brink of summer, as many national parks and recreation areas gear up for record crowds. It is also the latest chapter in the continuing controversy over the nation's officially preserved natural heritage.

Among the topics expected to be discussed are the strains imposed by too many visitors at some parks, where popular natural resources are taxed to the limit by crowds; the Parks Service budget; and increasing external pressures such as logging, oil drilling and commercial and residential development on park borders.

Bakkers want 'chance'

FORT MILL, S.C. (AP) — Former PTL leader Jim Bakker says he and his wife, Tammy, should have a chance to salvage the failing ministry before its liquidation in bankruptcy court.

"I think everybody else has had a chance," Bakker told reporters Tuesday outside PTL headquarters. "It's gone through so many regimes; it's being sold off. What would be wrong with giving Jim and Tammy a chance?"

Similar previous pleas by the PTL founder to leaders who succeeded him have been rebuffed.

PTL's opinion that Bakker could never return as the ministry's leader has not changed, ministry spokesman David West said Tuesday. U.S. Bankruptcy Court Judge Rufus Reynolds, who is overseeing the ministry's bankruptcy reorganization, "agrees with the legal opinion presented by our attorneys that Bakker cannot return," West said.

Bakker, who left the television ministry in March 1987 amid a sex-and-money scandal, returned to PTL's Heritage USA theme park at the request of Roe Messner, its primary builder and PTL's second-largest creditor.

Expulsions threatened

NEW YORK (AP) — Students who assault teachers will be expelled and some classrooms will be get panic-button-like alarms under sweeping security measures announced in response to a series of attacks against teachers.

The security plan also will include use of metal detectors, electromagnetic locks, and more police in certain schools, Mayor Edward I. Koch said Tuesday after meeting with schools Chancellor Richard R. Green and other officials.

In addition, Koch said, the officials agreed to ask the state Legislature to upgrade the crime of assaulting a teacher or other public official from a misdemeanor to a felony punishable by more than a year in prison.

Six teachers have been attacked during the past 1½ weeks.

King holiday favored

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — A state holiday honoring the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. won preliminary Senate approval by one vote, but the future of the bill was uncertain.

"We'll have to see what the (Republican) caucus wants to do," Senate President Carl Kunasek said after Tuesday's vote.

Kunasek, a Republican who blocked a similar measure earlier this year, is not required to bring the bill to the floor for a final vote.

The bill cleared the calendar for debate on a 14-13 vote Tuesday, but 16 votes are needed for final passage by the 30-member Senate, and sponsors were unsure whether they could muster the needed support.

Runner's plan stumbles

YAKIMA, Wash. (AP) — A distance runner's plan to finance a 964-mile jog across Great Britain with a raffle has been tripped up by the state Gambling Commission, which says the plan is illegal.

"We didn't know anything about it," Dick Goodman, a 68-year-old real-estate agent and long-distance runner, said Tuesday. "I've never done anything in my life that is wrong."

Goodman said he has located two corporate sponsors willing to put up the $10,000 to $12,000 needed, and will return the approximately $800 he had raised from the $10 raffle tickets, as the commission has ordered.

Only bona fide non-profit organizations are allowed to operate raffles, and state law sets the maximum raffle ticket price at $5, said Ron Layton, a commission spokesman.

Goodman had enticed raffle purchasers with the chance to win round trip tickets for two to London.

OU presidents resigns

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — University of Oklahoma President Frank Horton resigned Tuesday, saying in a letter to the university's regents that he wants to return to teaching.

In a news release issued through the university, Regents Chairman Elwood Kemp said that Horton's resignation would be addressed at the regents' regular meeting June 8 and 9.

"Dr. Horton has provided important leadership to the university in difficult economic times, and I know he will continue to make contributions to the university and the state in the future," Kemp said.

In his letter, Horton said he would continue to focus his efforts "on the continued strengthening of the University of Oklahoma's academic programs, economic development initiatives that will strengthen Oklahoma's economic base and assist in the development of strategies necessary to make education a stronger component of the economic development process."

Horton, 48, became Oklahoma's 11th president Sept. 11, 1985. He replaced William S. Banowsky, who resigned to become president of Gaylord Broadcasting Co. in Dallas.

Horton's resignation is effective Aug. 1.

Burglar killed in vent

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — A would-be burglar who tried to enter a restaurant through an exhaust vent got stuck and was found dead with his feet in a vat of hot fat, police said.

"He got wedged in there and his feet dropped down into that hot grease. He couldn't get up and he couldn't get down," police Lt. Carl Goolsby said Tuesday.

Dr. O.C. Smith, a Shelby County medical examiner, said Dennis Johnson, 34, was apparently asphyxiated.

"By being wedged in the vent it compressed his chest and he couldn't breathe," Smith said.

Campaign effort flies to West Coast

Associated Press

Democrats Jesse Jackson and Michael Dukakis are heading for California, scene of their final big face-off, but both are already looking beyond the end of the primary season. George Bush, meanwhile, says he will stick to his pledge not to raise federal taxes.

Jackson, with virtually no chance of overtaking Dukakis in the national delegate race, is focusing increasingly on the Democratic National Convention in July and the clout he expects to wield there.

"I do not foresee confrontation," Jackson said Tuesday as he campaigned in New Jersey. But he added that his supporters may take their issues to the full convention if they feel slighted by party platform writers.

"There's room to take one's case to the floor," Jackson said.

He also said he has "earned consideration" for the No. 2 spot on the ticket, although he won't say whether he's interested in it.

Dukakis has been discouraging discussion of possible running mates. "I can tell you I have not spent two minutes of my time on the subject," he told reporters after a Baltimore fund-raiser Tuesday night.

As for any claims Jackson might have, the front-runner said: "He himself said he thought it was the nominee's responsibility to pick a running mate, and I agree with that."

Democratic presidential candidate Michael Dukakis meets the press during a campaign appearance Tuesday at a Baltimore hotel. Dukakis received the endorsement of Congressmen Benjamin L. Cardin and TM McMillen, both of Maryland.

Jackson is continuing to fire up crowds, even as he tacitly concedes that his presidential bid is all but finished.

"When our hope is alive, we push back mountains and remove ceilings," he told a crowd at a shopping center in Willingboro, N.J. on Tuesday night. "On our way to the White House, there are no more impossible dreams."

Jackson was campaigning in New Jersey this morning, then leaving for California.

Dukakis, for his part, was mapping out his post-primary strategy. His aides are indicating he'll plunge directly into his fall campaign after the final round of primaries on Tuesday in California, New Jersey, Montana and New Mexico.

Those contests are expected to give the Massachusetts governor a mathematical lock on the nomination. Rather than taking a traditional pre-convention break, however, the Dukakis campaign will hit the road again.

"We want to spend a good part of June out there in America, traveling, telling people who Mike Dukakis is and why he would be a good president," said Dukakis spokesman Leslie Dach.

The Massachusetts governor was spending most of today on state business, then flying to California tonight for two days of campaigning.

Bush was still at his summer home in Kennebunkport, Maine, where he has been holding strategy sessions since last week. On Tuesday he met with economists, including Martin Feldstein, the former chairman of the president's Council of Economic Advisers.

Bush said after the meeting that he would reject any call for a federal tax hike, even if one is called for by a blue-ribbon bipartisan commission now working on ways to bring down the enormous federal deficit.

"I'll be saying, wait a minute, I've taken my case to the American people to hold the line on taxes," the vice president said. However, he said that in order to carry out his education policies, local school taxes might have to be raised.

Bush was holding more economic meetings today.

New Jersey faces big Senate campaign

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — Republicans believe Peter Dawkins, a Heisman Trophy winner, Rhodes scholar and war hero, is the star-quality candidate who can unseat Democratic U.S. Sen. Frank Lautenberg.

Lautenberg, a rags-to-riches business pioneer seeking a second six-year term, warns that he won't give up his seat without a big fight.

With that battle well under way, Lautenberg, 64, and Dawkins, 50, say they are confident of victory. They are prepared to spend $7 million or more apiece to get it.

The two are crisscrossing the state in anticipation of Tuesday's primary election.

Dawkins faces no GOP challenger. Lautenberg faces nominal opposition from two little-known Democrats: Elnardo J. Webster, a 40-year-old state Corrections Department recreation official who contends the senator is out of touch with constituents, and Harold J. Young, who is running as a "conservative-radical."

Nationally, the Republicans have targeted Lautenberg as one of the Senate's most vulnerable incumbents. President Reagan spoke at a Dawkins fund-raiser in March that took in $300,000. New Jersey's popular GOP governor, Thomas H. Kean, is chairing Dawkins' campaign.

Lautenberg's bid is led by the equally popular Sen. Bill Bradley, the state's Democratic senior senator. Lautenberg has raised nearly $4 million and has tried to get the best campaign help money can buy.

In a way, Bradley is part of Lautenberg's problem. Since taking office in 1982, Lautenberg has worked to emerge from the shadow of his nationally known colleague, a former National Basketball Association star and like Dawkins a Rhodes scholar.

Part of Dawkins' strategy has been to subtly stress his similarities to Bradley.

The message has been clear: by electing Dawkins, New Jersey — the brunt of garbage-dump and gangster jokes — could be the only state to boast two Rhodes scholars as senators.

Dawkins has begun to sell himself as a natural senator. He was captain of his West Point football team, decorated as a paratrooper in Vietnam and named the youngest general in Army history. Along the way, he studied at Oxford and earned a Ph.D. from Princeton.

Dawkins left the Army in 1983 to join the Shearson-Lehman brokerage house in New York. He resigned last year to become a full-time candidate, and moved from New York City to the exclusive New Jersey suburb of Rumson.

Dawkins has a larger-than-than life presence, augmented by piercing eyes, a Steve Canyon jaw and a broadcaster's voice.

"When he walks in a room, heads turn. People know he's there," said Campaign Manager Doug Goodyear.

Lautenberg's camp says its candidate also has a remarkable background, and two things Dawkins doesn't have: a proven legislative record and a long-term connection with New Jersey.

As he did in his 1982 upset of Republican Sen. Millicent Fenwick, Lautenberg — affable, white-haired and with a noticable gap in his front teeth — is stressing his roots as the son of poor immigrants, raised in the textile center of Paterson.

He attended Columbia University on the GI Bill, and helped to found the worldwide Automatic Data Processing Corp. En route, he amassed a personal fortune topping $25 million, and became an international philanthropist.

Court backs distributors' 'gray market' prices

WASHINGTON (AP) — Distributors of discount merchandise say consumers are the big winners in a Supreme Court ruling upholding a lion's share of the multibillion-dollar "gray market" that allows costly imports to be sold at reduced prices.

Sen. John H. Chafee, R-R.I., sponsor of a bill favoring gray market imports, also praised the decision. "This is very good news for everyone in the United States who likes to save a dollar or many dollars on imported goods like televisions, cameras, and perfume," he said.

Nathan Lewin, a lawyer for discount dealer 47th Street Photo Inc. in New York City, said the decision will mean savings for buyers of brand-name imports.

"I think the Supreme Court's ruling today is a great victory for American consumers and for the right of merchandisers in the United States seeking to bring products manufactured abroad into the United States at realistic and honest prices," he said.

By a 5-4 vote, the court upheld key U.S. Customs Service regulations that permit the gray market — brand-name, foreign-made goods bearing valid U.S. trademarks sold in this country without approval from trademark owners.

The gray market is estimated to produce $5 billion to $10 billion a year in the United States, with consumers buying everything from German sedans and French champagne to Japanese cameras and watches.

The business began to flourish when the value of the dollar on the international currency exchange rose dramatically in the early 1980s. But the more recent decline in the dollar apparently has not substantially depressed the American appetite for gray market foreign goods.

The gray market is created when foreign goods are purchased abroad and sold through discount retailers in the United States in competition with the owners of U.S. trademarks of those products.

Trademark owners say they are being shortchanged because they are forced to charge a markup to help cover advertising, warranty and service costs.

K mart Corp. and 47th Street Photo, two leading discount distributors, joined with the Customs Service to defend the gray market.

Justice Anthony M. Kennedy — the court's newest member — provided the pivotal vote in the decision.

By a separate 5-4 vote, the court struck down another Customs Service rule that could have been used to expand the gray market. Some lawyers for discounters said that rule probably is inconsequential.

The Customs Service for more than 50 years permitted gray market imports when foreign manufacturers of the goods are affiliated with the owners of the U.S. trademarks. The rules apply when the U.S. trademark holder is a subsidiary of, parent of or the same as the foreign manufacturer.

The regulations were challenged by some 60 major trademark owners that banded together to form the Coalition to Preserve the Integrity of American Trademarks.

In other matters, the court:

■ Ruled by a 5-3 vote that states sometimes may execute convicted murderers even if their constitutional right to a lawyer's help was violated.

The justices said such violations may be deemed "harmless" but they overturned a Texas killer's death sentence after ruling that the violation in his case was not harmless.

■ Unanimously struck down the way Ohio promotes through tax credits the use of "gasohol," a motor vehicle fuel less environmentally troublesome than gasoline.

■ Cleared the way for price deregulation of some natural gas — an 8-0 decision the Reagan administration said could save consumers an estimated $100 million a year.

■ Unanimously gave federal regulators, in a test case from Iowa, broad power to oust bank executives from their jobs temporarily when the executives are accused of serious crimes.

JOIN THE NATIONAL DEPRESSIVE AND MANIC DEPRESSIVE ASSOCIATION

It's a shocking statistic. But at some point in their lives, one in five Americans will suffer from Depressive or Manic Depressive Illness. Sadly, only a few ever learn that this is a biochemical illness, an illness which can be treated successfully through medication and therapy. As well as through comprehensive, common denominator support for patients and families affected by this illness. Which is why the National Depressive and Manic Depressive Associatiin (NDMDA) was founded.

A Unique Association

What makes the NDMDA different?
The simple fact that it's directed by patients and their families. Members of the medical community work closely with the association in an advisory and educatiinal capacity.

Stock rally defies explanations

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market broke out of its May doldrums with a buying spree that carried the Dow Jones industrial average to its second biggest gain of the year.

But analysts were hard-pressed to come up with an explanation for Tuesday's surge, which came on the heaviest daily volume since late January.

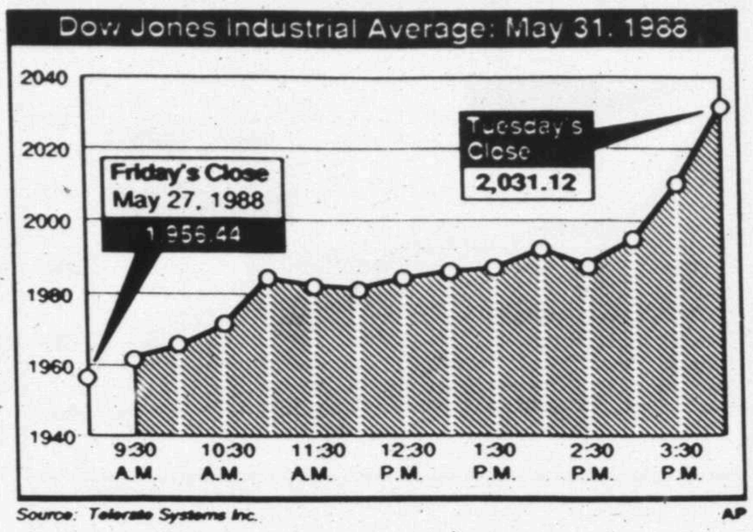
"Sometimes it's better just to enjoy and not analyze things like this," said John L. Manley Jr., a portfolio strategist for Smith Barney, Harris Upham & Co. "It's been a bad May."

Peter DaPuzzo, manager of retail equity trading for Shearson Lehman Hutton Inc., said warm weather over the Memorial Day holiday may have brightened investors' outlooks and prompted them to put some cash to work.

"You've got to start a summer rally sometime, and Memorial Day is usually the threshold to the summer," he said.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials climbed 74.68 on Tuesday to 2,031.12, its highest level since it closed at 2,036.31 on May 4.

It was the biggest one-day advance in the market's most widely-followed index since a 76.42-point gain Jan. 4, the first trading day of the year, and the sixth biggest rise ever.



Source: Telerate Systems Inc. AP

The gain in the Dow Jones industrials was so strong that a voluntary limit on computerized program trading was triggered when the Dow's rise swept past 50 points in the last hour of trading.

But even after the so-called "collar" went into effect for the rest of the day, the blue-chip average extended its gain. It was the third time the collar had gone into effect since its adoption in the aftermath of the Oct. 19 market crash in a bid to curb market volatility.

Gainers outpaced losers by nearly 4 to 1 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed stocks, with 1,211 up, 333 down and 401 unchanged.

Volume on the floor of the NYSE came to 247.61 million shares, up from 133.59 million in the previous session and the highest since 275.25 million shares were traded there on Jan. 25. Two utility stocks with dividend deadlines approaching accounted for about 90 million shares of volume.

Nonetheless, volume was up from the sluggish pace of recent weeks that has prompted speculation that brokerage firms may resort to a round of layoffs.

Analysts had been saying that the slow pace of trading reflected investors' uncertainty about the implications of continued strength in the economy.

Sematech selects 5 to get grants

AUSTIN (AP) — Five universities have been chosen to receive grants of up to $1.5 million per year for manufacturing research by Sematech, the new consortium of semi-conductor companies.

Sematech, an Austin-based group whose goal is world leadership in semiconductor technology by 1993, on Tuesday designated "Centers of Excellence" in Arizona, California, New Jersey, New Mexico and Massachusetts.

Each center will receive between $500,000 to $1.5 million a year to fund a different area of manufacturing research, Sematech spokesman Dam Rime said.

Sematech's choices included the University of New Mexico and Sandia National Laboratories, which submitted a joint proposal to create a facility for manufacturing research at UNM. The university's center will deal with metrology for semiconductor manufacturing.

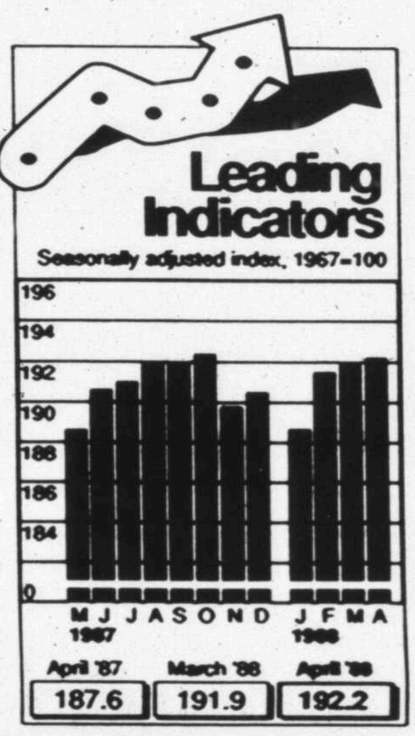
Index gain signals steady growth

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government said today its chief forecasting gauge of economic activity rose a moderate 0.2 percent last month in what amounted to a signal of steady economic growth with no danger of a recession this year.



The Commerce Department said its Index of Leading Indicators rose for the third consecutive month, following a revised 0.2 percent March increase and a 1.5 percent February surge, the biggest gain in more than two years.

Economists said the performance of the leading index was entirely consistent with their belief that the economy was headed for its best year since 1984 as smokestack America benefits from a boom in export sales.

All of this should be good news to Vice President George Bush, who hopes to benefit from a feeling among voters that the Reagan administration is managing the economy well.

The March increase had originally been reported as a much larger 0.8 percent rise. Analysts had expected both the big downward revision to the March figure and the small increase in April.

They said the gains reflected a return to more normal economic activity following a roller-coaster period after the October stock market crash.

At one point, the leading index actually fell for three consecutive months, the traditional signal of an impending recession. Later revisions, however, showed the index posted big declines in both November and January, but registered increases in other months.

Fears of a recession this year have largely evaporated as the economy shook off the jolt from the market collapse to turn in surprisingly strong growth for this advanced stage of a five-year-old economic recovery.

The government reported last week that the overall economy, as measured by the gross national product, raced ahead at an annual rate of 3.9 percent for the first three months of the year.

Based on this GNP performance, many economists are now predicting the GNP will grow at an annual rate of around 3.5 percent for the whole year, which would be the fastest expansion pace since 1984, also a presidential election year, when the GNP rose 6.8 percent.

The 0.2 percent April rise in the leading index reflected increases in five separate business indicators and declines in four others.

TIPRO tips 'Hat' in honor of local rep Craddick

From Staff Reports

State Representative Tom Craddick of Midland is the 1988 recipient of the Texas Independent Producers & Royalty Owners "Hats Off" award.

The honor is given annually to recognize the outstanding performance of those who have worked in the best interest of the oil and gas industry and the citizens of Texas.

Craddick

In announcing the award, TIPRO said Craddick, in addition to oil and gas issues, had been a major player in a broad range of issues including water resources, environmental protection, and restructuring of the Texas Railroad Commission.

The salute to Craddick called him a "legislative master" capable of using many forms of political leverage to author many amendments that turned bad legislation into good legislation.

TIPRO cited Craddick's efforts in the following energy legislation:

- freeing producers from the threat of regulation as a public utility,
- giving secured creditor status to royalty owners, working interest owners and operators when purchasers have not paid for production;
- modernizing statutes governing the Railroad Commission's handling of balancing issues in natural gas fields;
- protecting the rights of producers who operate state leases.

First elected to the Texas House of Representatives in 1968, he has served District 76 for nine terms, and has served for 11 years on the House Natural Resources Committee and for 15 years on the House Energy Resources Committee.

Other assignments include: Natural Resources & Environmental Committee of the National Conference of State Legislatures and the Environmental Quality, the Natural Resources Committee of the Council of State Governments and the Southwest Energy Research Council. He has also served on the Texas Mining Council, Interstate Oil Compact Commission, Texas Energy & Natural Resources Advisory Council.

Craddick, 44, received his BBA and MBA degrees from Texas Tech University. He is a sales representative of Mustang Mud Inc. and owner of Craddick Properties and president of Craddick Inc.

Icahn adds 'greenmail' charges to Texaco suit

By MATTHEW L. WALD
New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — Carl C. Icahn amended his lawsuit against Texaco Inc. Tuesday to include an accusation he had made publicly last week: that the company offered him "greenmail" to sell his 14.8 percent share.

Texaco, meanwhile, continued its legal maneuvering to gain information in its lawsuit against Icahn, charging its largest shareholder with insider trading.

The sides are engaged in a bitter proxy battle, in which Icahn is seeking to elect himself and four associates to Texaco's 14-member board, at the annual meeting on June 17. Icahn made a $60-a-share merger proposal last week that was turned down by Texaco's board on Friday. The offer valued the company at about $14.6 billion.

He said that institutions holding large blocks of the company's stock "agree with me on how reprehensible it is not to allow shareholders to hold a vote" on his merger proposal.

Texaco's board rejected the proposal in part because they did not believe that Icahn could finance it. The market has also shown skepticism.

Icahn is scheduled to meet with securities analysts on Thursday to describe how he would complete the merger, which, if completed, would be the second-largest corporate takeover ever. He has mentioned the sale of Texaco's share of Texaco Canada Inc., and of the assets of the Caltex Petroleum Corp., Texaco's venture with the Chevron Corp. in Eastern Asia.

The New York financier amended his lawsuit Tuesda to contend that Texaco's management had failed to tell shareholders that it had offered to buy Icahn's shares at a price that included a premium over the market price and that it had falsely asserted that Icahn was seeking such greenmail. Texaco has vigorously denied making such an offer.

Icahn has been highly critical of Texaco's management, including its failure to avoid legal problems with the Pennzoil Corp.

Texaco continued to take depositions in its lawsuit against Icahn, seeking to prove that he coordinated purchases of its stock with Bear, Stearns & Co.

Bear, Stearns has denied Texaco's allegations.

U.S. firms still attractive to foreign buyers

WASHINGTON (AP) — American businesses continue to attract high levels of foreign investment, in part because of the cheaper dollar and favorable U.S. economic conditions, the government says.

Foreigners spent $30.5 billion in 1987 to acquire or establish businesses in the United States, the Commerce Department said Tuesday. That was down 22 percent from the record $39.2 billion in 1986, but nearly four times greater than the 1983 level of $8.1 billion.

The driving force behind the big jump in foreign investment has been this country's huge trade deficit, which hit a record $171.2 billion last year.

Foreigners have looked for ways to invest their dollars, earned through sales to Americans. As a consequence, the United States has moved from the world's largest creditor to the world's largest debtor.

The report identified four factors that made U.S. businesses attractive to foreigners last year:

- The continued depreciation of the dollar encouraged foreign companies to shift operations to the United States so that their expenses as well as sales were paid in dollars.
- Moderate inflation and an expanding economy made prospects for U.S. businesses look good.
- Continuing takeover activity created opportunities for purchases.
- And, fear that Congress would enact legislation to restrict imports likely motivated foreign companies to produce in, rather than export to, this country.

Analysts read little significance into the decline from 1986, cautioning that tax law changes and other factors may have held down the reported number for 1987.

"Everybody was trying to close deals in 1986 because of tax considerations, so it's quite possible that 1986 just borrowed some sales from 1987," said David Wyss, an economist with Data Resources Inc. of Lexington, Mass.

Ellen M. Herr, a Commerce Department analyst, said if past years are any guide, the 1987 total will be revised upward by 10 percent or more as additional deals are reported to the government.

The 1986 figure had originally been reported at $31.5 billion, nearly 20 percent less than the revised figure released Tuesday.

Wyss said foreign investment would likely increase again in 1988 because of the continued fall of the dollar, which has lost about half of its value since 1985 as measured against the Japanese yen.

"The U.S. right now looks like a very competitive place to produce. U.S. companies, especially when you look at them in yen terms, look very cheap and you're going to see continued strong buying," he said.

Foreigners also have been buying corporate bonds, Treasury notes, stocks and other investments that do not show up in the report released Tuesday. It tracks money spent to establish new businesses or purchase a 10 percent or greater stake in existing companies.

U.S. businesses acquired or established by foreigners in 1987 employed 346,000 workers and owned 316,000 acres of land.

The report showed that Great Britain was the largest purchaser at $11.5 billion, up from $8.6 billion in 1986. It was followed by Japan with $5.3 billion, down from $5.4 billion a year earlier; and West Germany, $4.1 billion, up from $1.4 billion. Investment by all European nations dropped to $19.5 billion from $21.1 billion.

Canadian investment, which was $6.5 billion in 1986, was reported at $849 million last year.

From Staff and Wire Reports

Oil futures prices continue an upward trend, with contracts for July delivery of West Texas Intermediate gaining 14 cents to stand at $17.66 at midmorning.

Oil prices rose in extremely light trading Tuesday, reflecting widespread dealer reluctance to participate in advance of the OPEC meeting June 8.

On the New York Mercantile Exchange, WTI closed up 8 cents at $17.51 per 42-gallon barrel.

Among refined products traded on the exchange, wholesale unleaded gasoline rose 0.40 cent to 52.95 cents a gallon. Wholesale heating oil rose 0.45 cent a gallon to 48.23 cents.

"You had a very boring day today," said Jayne Ball, a trader in the international energy futures department at Dean Witter Reynolds Inc. in New York. Asked why the market was so slow, she said, "Would you put your money on a horse that hasn't run yet?"

Traders said they were concerned about taking speculative positions primarily because of the uncertain outcome of the planned meeting among ministers of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries in Vienna.

Dollar falls, gold levels off

LONDON (AP) — The dollar fell against most major foreign currencies in Europe early today after a Japanese financial official said the currency's recent rise could be short-lived.

Gold bullion, underpinned by speculative buying of platinum, leveled off in Europe at the higher price of $457.

—1.7225 West German marks, down from 1.7292

—1.4355 Swiss francs, down from 1.4437

—5.8055 French francs, down from 5.8215

—1.9328 Dutch guilders, down from 1.9333

—1,280.50 Italian lire, up from 1,279.95

—1.2330 Canadian dollars, down from 1.2357.

The dollar advanced on the British pound, which dropped to $1.8320 from $1.8385.

The dollar closed in Tokyo at 125.23 Japanese yen, up from 124.80 yen on Tuesday. In later London trading today, the dollar slipped to 125.15 yen.

Gold bullion settled at higher levels in Europe after rising in tandem with platinum. Heavy speculative buying by Japanese investors pushed platinum to a high of $670 an ounce in Tokyo overnight, before easing to $620 in London.

At midmorning, London's major bullion houses fixed a recommended gold price of $457 a troy ounce, down from an opening bid of $458.30 but up from Tuesday's late rate of $454.80.

BUSINESS IN BRIEF

New construction contracts off 6 percent

NEW YORK (AP) — Contracting for new construction projects declined 6 percent in April from the previous month, extending a downward slide that began last fall, a report said.

The survey, released Tuesday by the F.W. Dodge Division of McGraw-Hill Information Systems Co., estimated the annualized value of all newly started construction projects in April at $226.97 billion, compared with $242.38 billion in March.

May agriculture prices up 3.1 percent

WASHINGTON (AP) — Prices farmers got for raw products in May averaged 3.1 percent over April levels and were 4.7 percent over their mark for the same month last year, the Agriculture Department said.

"Higher prices for hogs, oranges, soybeans and broilers were partially offset by lower prices for tomatoes, onions, milk and upland cotton," the department's Agricultural Statistics Board said in its preliminary report Tuesday.

May farm commodity prices averaged 134 percent of a 1977 base used for comparison, according to the preliminary figures. A year ago the index was 128.

FTC approves purchase of Lucky Stores

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Trade Commission approved American Stores Co.'s plans to acquire Lucky Stores Inc., provided American divest itself of stores in California and its interest in a Midwestern grocery chain.

The acquisition was approved Tuesday by a 3-1 vote, with Commissioner Mary L. Azcuenaga dissenting.

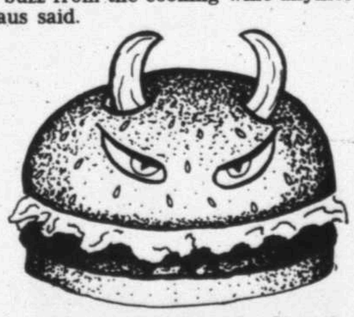
BUSINESS TRENDS

Beware of the demon hamburger

NEW YORK — A California inventor claims to have developed a process for treating alcohol so that it will not burn off during cooking.

"I've made 60-proof chili, 40-proof mayonnaise and 44-proof bread," said Hana Chaus, a chemist in Ridgecrest, Calif. "The possibilities are endless."

Julia Childs might balk, but could 80-proof chicken cordon bleu be next? "No one will have to get a buzz from the cooking wine anymore; they can just eat the food," Chaus said.



The chemist said he has been experimenting for several years with products based on beer. He speaks mysteriously of having developed a lightweight beer-based cement. His secret process for cooking alcohol involves microencapsulating the alcohol, although he will not give any other details. He said he had chosen not to seek a patent on his invention.

But lest this sound like so much workshop tinkering, Chaus has formed Beerstone Products Inc., which is marketing Klaus' Beer Bread in supermarkets.

Chaus offered a sample to Salvador Ramirez, the manager of the bakery department at Albertson's supermarket in Ridgecrest. "I like the flavor," Ramirez said. "It tastes like alcohol and it smells good." Albertson's is considering marketing the bread.

What remains unclear is whether products like high-proof bread are likely to run afoul of the law. According to Chuck Petras, manager of special projects for Beerstone Products, the California Legislature has never tackled regulations concerning the high alcohol content in food.

He said the Federal Treasury Department's Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms was mainly concerned with making sure that the alcohol used came from a licensed distillery or brewery and that minors would not have access to the products.

The Inyokern Market in Inyokern, Calif., has been selling "Buzz-Burgers" for the last two weeks. "We've sold some," a store worker said, "but they haven't really caught on yet. The label says not to operate machinery for an hour after consumption, and maybe that makes people nervous."

Entex tests San Joaquin find

HOUSTON (SWN) — Entex Oil Co., a wholly owned subsidiary of Arkla Inc., has successfully tested its first major oil and gas discovery in California's San Joaquin Valley.

The well, designated the Greer No. 9-64X, was completed on the Malaga Prospect in the Mountain View Field, a historically-productive area approximately five miles southeast of Bakersfield, in Kern County, Calif.

"Not only is this well a significant discovery in its own right, but it also marks the successful culmination of the first oil and gas venture on the West Coast for either Entex Oil, or our parent company, Arkla," said Gale L. Galloway, chairman, president and chief executive officer of Entex.

"The San Joaquin Valley is one of the most prolific oil and gas producing provinces in the nation, and we are very pleased by our progress here."

Entex Oil Company owns a ⅜-working interest in the well, a joint venture with McFarland Energy, Inc. of Santa Fe Springs, Calif.

The discovery flowed 265 barrels of oil and 150,000 cubic feet of natural gas per day with no water through an 18/64-in. choke. The well was drilled to a total depth of 7,452 feet, and was tested from selected perforations into pay zones between 7,086 and 7,096 feet. Oil gravity is approximately 30 degrees API.

Entex is currently evaluating plans to further develop this prospect.

Texaco group garners 84 Alaskan tracts at Federal OCS lease sale in Anchorage

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y., (SWN) — Texaco Inc. announced that at Federal OCS Lease Sale 109 it was the apparent high bidder on numerous oil and gas exploration tracts in an area offshore Alaska which is one of the few remaining "frontier" areas of the United States with the potential for multi-billion barrel discoveries.

In Sale 109 held last week in Anchorage, Alaska, Texaco — both alone and in partnership with Petrofina Delaware, Murphy Oil USA Inc. and Odeco Oil & Gas Co., a subsidiary of Murphy Oil Corp. — bid on 126 tracts in the Chukchi Sea and was apparent high bidder on 84 tracts. The company will have sole interest in 19 tracts and its interest in the 65 joint bids ranges from 65 percent to 85 percent. All bids are subject to approval by the Minerals Management Service of the U.S. Department of the Interior.

Texaco had bid a total of some $60 million, and its net outlay totaled $40.5 million for these tracts.

Texaco, together with its partners, had bid nearly $75 million, with a gross expenditure of $49 million.

Clarence P. Cazalot, general manager of the frontier exploration department of Texaco Inc., said, "We are extremely pleased with our success at last week's oil lease sale, which was the most active federal offshore lease auction ever outside the Gulf of Mexico and drew a record number of bids. Collectively, Texaco's net interest in the 84 tracts in which it participated as high bidder totalled nearly 373,000 acres, making it the second-highest net acreage won.

"Not only is the quantity of the acreage itself significant," Cazalot continued, "but the tracts will give the company an excellent acreage position on 13 of the 14 primary prospects that have been identified by geological and seismic data.

"We consider the overall bidding efficiency of Texaco and its partners to be outstanding, considering that the group's high bid amount of nearly $49 million represented only about 10 percent of the total sum of the high bids, while the group was apparent high bidder on some 24 percent of the total tracts bid."

Nugent sets Alberta trip

Texas Railroad Commission chairman James Nugent announced plans to meet later this month with energy regulatory and business leaders in Alberta to exchange views on energy matters.

"Texas and Alberta have much in common when it comes to energy," Nugent said. "We both have significant oil and gas resources and we both have problems with our national governments on energy policy.

Nugent said he will be meeting with members of the Alberta Petroleum Marketing Commission and the Energy Resources Conservation Board as well as the provincial government and business leaders in Calgary.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Sometimes insurance is the best policy

By BILL DOYLE

Q. I'm 27, go to school and support myself as a hostess. I manage to save $250 monthly and put it into certificates of deposit. My goal is a down payment on a house. Sometimes, I toy with the idea of buying a new car or going into business by myself. So, I need the cash available and don't want to tie it up in an individual retirement account.

A friend works for an insurance company and is trying to sell me a whole life, cash value insurance policy with a $50 monthly premium as an alternative to an IRA. He says the insurance policy would be more flexible. What are the pros and cons of such an idea?

Doyle

A. They are virtually all con. Don't succumb to your friend's blandishments.

The buildup in a whole life policy's cash value would be sheltered from income tax. However, to get your hands on that money you would have to borrow the policy's loan value. Convoluted reasoning might claim that makes the policy "more flexible" than an IRA, from which money normally cannot be withdrawn without penalty until age 59½.

But the policy's loan value would not equal the premiums paid in for a long, long time — if ever. That's because of various charges, including the commission paid to the friendly salesman.

Whether you buy a house, a new car or start your own business, you will need accessible cash. It would make no sense to put money into an insurance policy, where it would not be readily available. Considering your tentative plans, you should buy short-term CDs.

Finally, based on the information in your letter, your friend is attempting to sell you much more life insurance than you need. As a single person with no dependents, you really require only enough life insurance to pay for your departure from this world — be it burial or cremation.

Q. Is it true that insurance premiums are lower if I pay every three months, rather than monthly?

A. Sure. Unless it's a very strange insurance policy, a quarterly premium payment is not as large as three monthly payments. You save more by paying premiums semiannually and even more by paying annually.

This stands to reason. The less frequently an insurance company collects premiums, the lower its expenses. Those savings should be passed on to the customer.

With some policies, it is necessary to arrange for quarterly, semiannual or annual premium payments at the time the policies are purchased. With others, changes in premium payment schedules can be made after the policies are in force.

Q. Our son, who is 32, has lived with a woman for six years. They were never married. She had two children by another man before our son moved in. They now have two more. He has named her the beneficiary of the life insurance policy he has through his place of employment.

We carry life and accident insurance on him. We do not want to continue paying the premiums and wish to cash in the policy.

In the event of our son's death, who will be responsible for the expense of his funeral and burial? What steps must we take to cash in the policy?

A. Since they have been together all that time, your son's housemate will be morally responsible to pay for his final expenses. Whether that's her legal responsibility hinges on the laws of your state. This column can't cite the laws of all 50 states.

If you are the owner of that policy, you can turn it in to the insurance company and get the cash surrender value. If your son is the owner, as well as the insured, he will have to sign the surrender papers.

The insurance agent through whom you bought the policy should be able to provide the necessary documents and handle all the details of the policy surrender.

Macmillan restructures to fend off Bass

NEW YORK (NYT) — In a move that caught few Wall Street professionals by surprise, Macmillan Inc., the publishing and information company, took strong defensive moves on Tuesday against a possible takeover bid by the Robert Bass Group of Texas.

Macmillan's management announced that its board had adopted a complex restructuring involving a reorganization into two separate entities: Macmillan Publishing, which will include all publishing operations, and the Macmillan Information Co., which will include other businesses.

Among the holdings of the Information Co. will be the Berlitz Schools, the Katherine Gibbs Schools and Gump's, the department stores. Ken Noble, a media industry analyst at Paine Webber, said he believed the company might try to sell Gump's, which had been up for sale about a decade ago. However, Charles G. McCurdy, Macmillan's chief financial officer, said there were no plans to sell assets.

Shareholders will hold a share of stock in Macmillan Publishing and receive a half share in the new company, the stock of which will be spun off to shareholders as a dividend, thus making it a tax-free transaction both to the company and to shareholders.

Macmillan shareholders will also receive a special cash dividend of $52.35 a share: $25.20 from Macmillan Inc. and $27.15 from Macmillan Information. They will also get a $4.50 principal amount of Macmillan Information subordinated debentures.

Several arbitragers and Wall Street analysts valued the offer at roughly $68 to $72 a share, noting that it was somewhat higher than the Bass offer of $64. At $72, the total value of the recapitalization will be about $2 billion, the cash portion of which will be $1.46 billion.

Some Wall Street experts had said the company was worth at least $80 a share. On the New York Stock Exchange on Tuesday, Macmillan stock, which was trading at less than $51 before the Bass offer was made on May 17, closed at $70.25, down $2.25.

Noble said he thought the company's restructuring plan was reasonably valued, adding that stock in the new companies had a good deal of potential for long-term earnings growth. He put a value on the subordinated debt of about $3.25 a share and estimated that stock in the new companies was worth about $15 to $20 for each shareholder.

INDEX

The biggest source of strength was a rise in the length of the average workweek.

Other sources of strength came from gains in the money supply; a drop in weekly unemployment claims; a rise in raw materials prices, which is seen as a positive sign for future economic growth; and an increase in plant and equipment orders.

The biggest negative factor was a speed-up in delivery times for business orders, seen as a sign of weaker demand. This was followed by a decline in stock prices, a drop in building permits and a drop in orders for consumer goods.

The various changes left the index at 192.2 percent of its 1967 base of 100.

Michael Evans, head of a Washington consulting firm, said he has boosted his GNP forecast to 3.7 percent for 1988, a far cry from the recession he had expected in the wake of the stock market collapse.

"A lot of people used to think the stock market was one of the better indicators of the economy's performance, but it fell on its face this time," he said.

The administration's official forecast is for GNP growth of 2.9 percent this year, but Beryl Sprinkel, the president's chief economic adviser, said recently that the administration may boost that assessment when it issues its midterm economic review in August.

While the economic strength has caused economists to put away their recession scenarios for 1988, many analysts still believe that a downturn is likely sometime in 1989.

The National Association of Business Economists said last week that its latest member survey found that 57 percent were looking for a recession to begin in 1989.

This pessimistic view is based on a belief that the economic strength this year will ignite inflationary pressures, leading in turn to higher interest rates that could topple the country into a recession. The Federal Reserve already has tightened credit twice in the past two months in an effort to dampen demand.

But Michael Penzer, senior economist at Bank of America in San Francisco, said that was too pessimistic an outlook.

"The key is whether the Fed can gradually tighten and slow the economy down without sending it into a recession," he said. "They are walking a tightrope, but they may be successful in their attempt at fine tuning."

Baker Hughes, Dresser look to sell BJ-Titan

HOUSTON (SWN) — Baker Hughes Inc. and Dresser Industries Inc. announced they have begun actively seeking purchasers for BJ-Titan, their partnership in the pressure pumping services business in the United States and Canada.

Separately, Baker Hughes announced it intends to dispose of its interest in BJ Services International, its wholly owned division which is in the pressure pumping services business in the Eastern Hemisphere and Latin America. Shearson Lehman Hutton has been retained to advise the owners as to potential acquirers of both concerns.

For its last fiscal year BJ-Titan generated approximately $165 million in revenues; BJ Services International generated approximately $115 million in revenues during the same period.

James D. Woods, chief executive officer of Baker Hughes, and Jack D. Murphy, chief executive of Dresser Industries, jointly stated that the decision to sell their equity in BJ-Titan was based on a decision to concentrate on the respective core businesses of Baker Hughes and Dresser. Baker Hughes owns 72.5 percent of BJ-Titan and Dresser owns the remaining 27.5 percent.

Baker Hughes Incorporated is a leading provider of products and services to the oil, gas and mining industries.

First City extends share tender date

HOUSTON (AP) — First City Bancorporation of Texas Inc. extended its deadline until July 1 for holders of the company's old common and preferred stock to tender their shares.

Under the bank holding company's reorganization, a new Delaware corporation has been formed with the same name as the former Texas corporation.

As of the close of business May 27, 52.6 percent of the common shares and 45.7 percent of preferred shares in the previous company had been tendered, First City said in a prepared statement Tuesday.

Under the reorganization, each share of the old common stock can be exchanged for one one-hundredth of a share of common stock in the new corporation, and one share of Collecting Bank, N.A., which is not expected to have any economic value.

Old shares of preferred stock can be exchanged for cash and shares of Collecting Bank common stock.

Old First City shares not tendered by their holders will expire worthless, the company said. The reorganization is not contingent upon any fixed number of shareholders tendering.

First City, with 59 banks in Texas and one in South Dakota, grew quickly during the Texas oil boom years, but suffered heavy energy and real estate-related losses when oil prices plummeted.

First City was bailed out in April by $970 million in federal assistance, a $500 million infusion of capital by an investor group led by Chicago banker A. Robert Abboud, who became First City's chairman, and the spinning off of $1.79 billion of poorly performing assets.

Also chosen were: the University of Arizona, for contamination-defect control; the University of California at Berkeley in cooperation with Stanford University, for optical lithography; a New Jersey consortium of universities headed by the David Sarnoff Research Center, for plasma etching; and the Massachusetts Microelectronics Center, for single wafer processing.

"It is expected that these centers will not only conduct meaningful research in advanced manufacturing sciences, but will also provide the U.S. semiconductor industry with a new type of electrical or computer engineer trained in the science of manufacturing," said Sanford L. Kane, chairman of Sematech's executive committee.

"Sematech's primary goal for establishing Centers of Excellence is to provide focus for development of manufacturing programs within the graduate schools of U.S. universities."

CAN YOU TRUST TEXACO'S FUTURE TO CARL ICAHN?

HIS INTENTIONS TO CONTROL TEXACO'S BOARD

"As for myself—as I told Texaco from the beginning and now reiterate to you—I do not seek control of Texaco nor do I seek any representation on its board."[1]

Icahn now says he wants seats for himself and four allies on Texaco's board—and that he wants to put together a group to seek control. That explains why he signed up an investment banking firm for two years to help him target Texaco.

THE DANGERS OF A DIVIDED BOARD

"A divided board... would be ruinous to the company at this time."[1]

Through his grab for five board seats Icahn is attempting to saddle Texaco with exactly such a divided board, just as it is gearing up to restructure.

TEXACO'S REORGANIZATION PLAN

"An insult to shareholders' integrity."[2]

96 percent of Texaco's shareholders voted for the plan.

"I will definitely vote against this plan."[2]

Icahn voted for the plan.

HOW THE PENNZOIL SETTLEMENT WAS ACHIEVED

"I immediately became involved in the Texaco-Pennzoil settlement negotiations and, following much 'shuttle diplomacy,' a deal was struck for $3 billion."[3]

Icahn actually urged Texaco to accept $4 billion, then $3.5 billion, which Texaco rejected. After Texaco's management was successful in negotiating a $3 billion settlement, he turned around and called the settlement a "$3 billion debacle."[4]

WHAT ARE ICAHN'S TRUE VIEWS? WHAT WILL HE BE SAYING NEXT? HOW CAN WE BELIEVE HIM?

Icahn's past statements have caused the SEC to charge him with numerous securities law violations.

This isn't the first time Icahn has been charged with making misleading statements about a target company. In fact, in complaints filed in 1981 and 1983, the Securities and Exchange Commission has charged him or his affiliates with 17 violations of securities laws, including laws requiring full disclosure to other shareholders. Without either admitting or denying the allegations, Icahn consented to SEC orders against him and these affiliates that encompass all 17 of these violations.

Today more than ever, Texaco needs honest, decisive leadership.

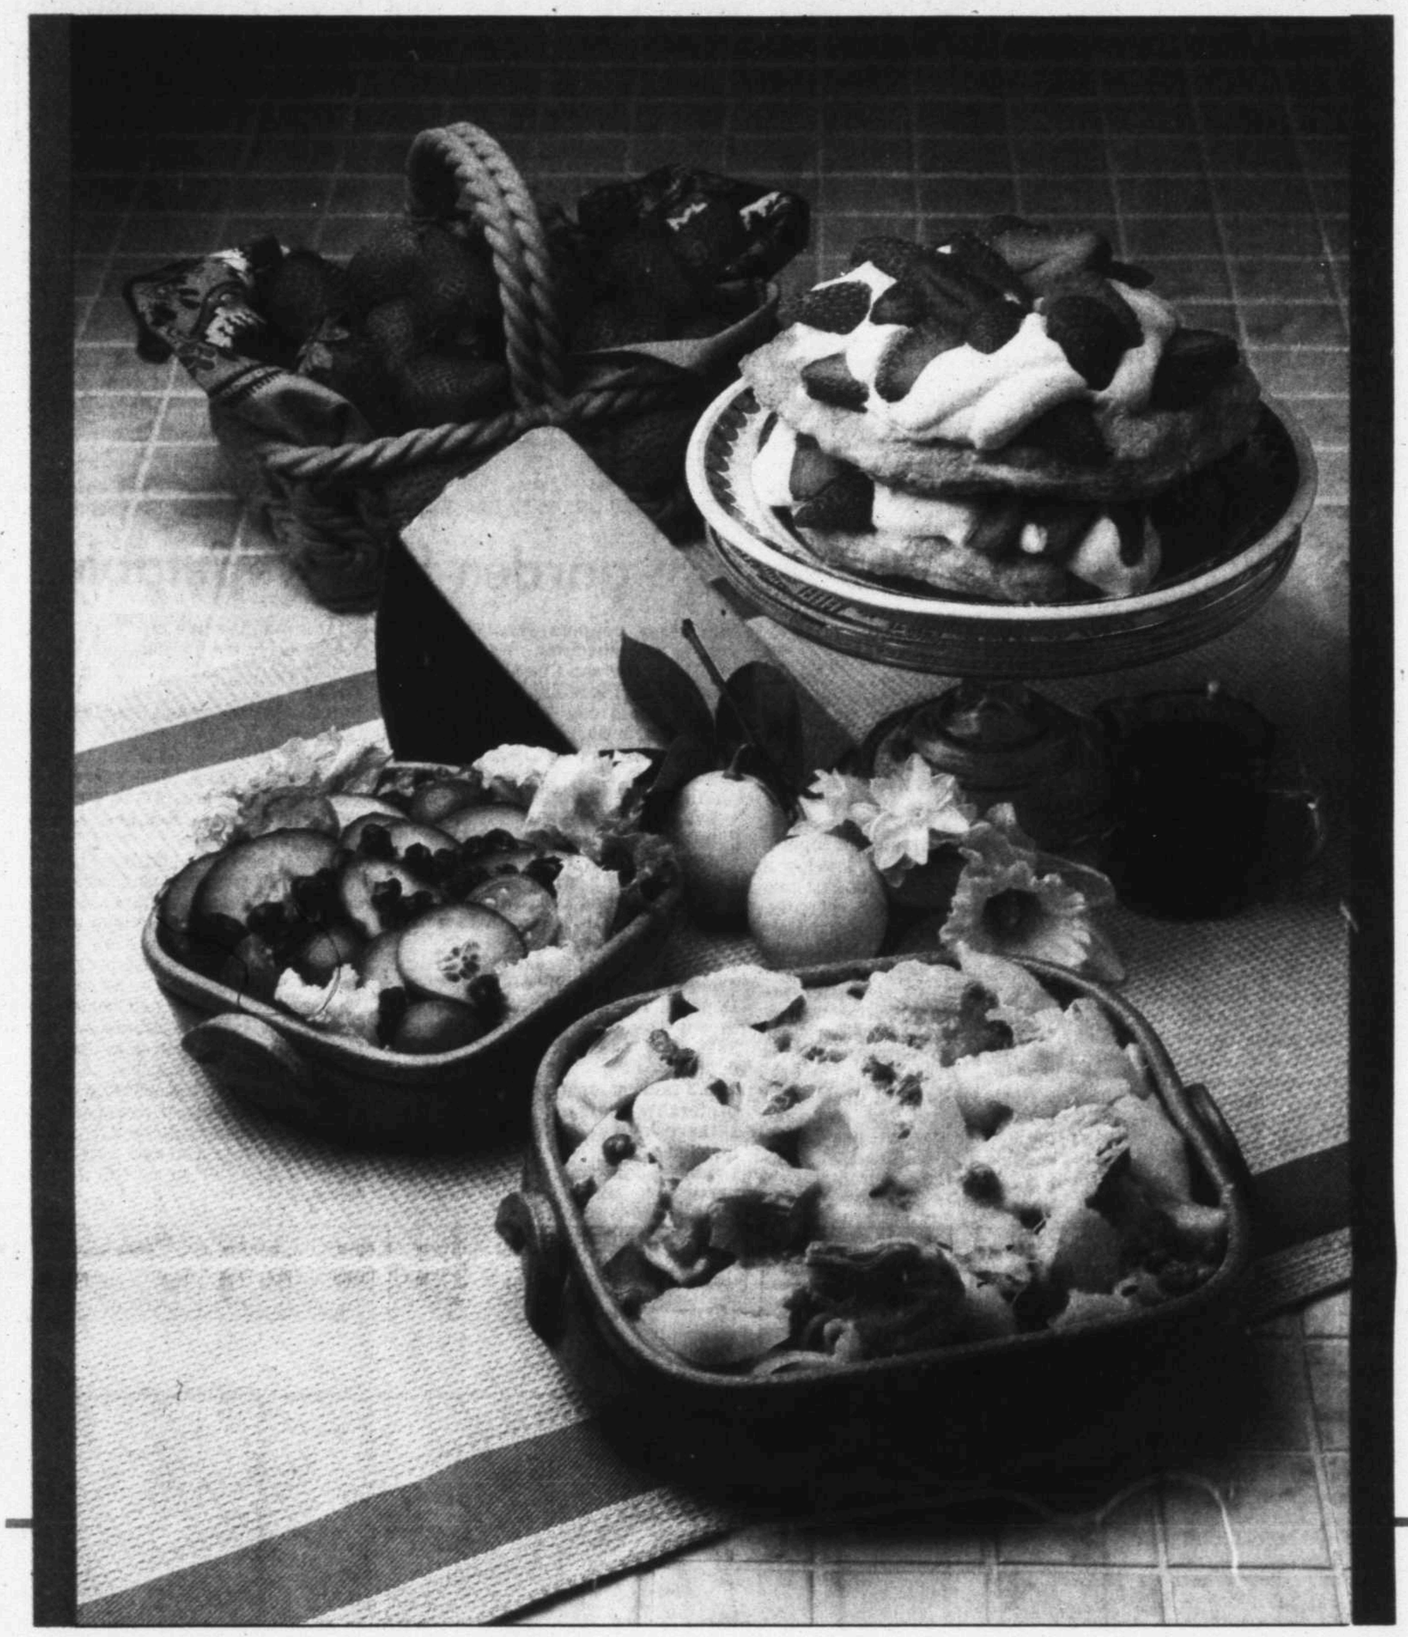
THREE-COURSE MASTERPIECE

In One Hour



Quick, creative cooking is an art. Mastering it requires planning, resourcefulness and recipes that offer satisying ways to beat the clock.

Start with high quality, readily available ingredients such as the tangy California raisins, premium Wisconsin cheeses and red-ripe California strawberries that are featured in the menu pictured here. The key is to combine these ingredients simply yet imaginatively, and to be aware of the impact of presentation. Create a meal that has taste and eye appeal. Use the timetable provided to help you prepare this colorful and elegant meal in only one hour.

Crisp and fresh, a salad is a fast-to-prepare side dish to accompany any quick and easy entrée. Give your salad distinctive flavor with moist, chewy and naturally sweet California raisins. Marinated with orange juice and honey, raisins bring a wonderfully fruity and slightly tangy surprise to Raisin Citrus Cucumbers.

Cheese is another ready-to-use convenience food. Choose two from over 200 varieties made in America's Dairyland, Wisconsin. In our entrée, Seashell Pasta with Two Cheeses, the flavors and textures of smooth Mozzarella cheese and aged Wisconsin Asiago cheese combine in an updated twist on a classic: macaroni and cheese. The lively flavor of premium Wisconsin Asiago, first made by the state's Italian immigrants, adds a new taste sensation to this easily prepared dish.

To top off the meal, dazzle your family and guests with Strawberry Torta featuring fresh California strawberries piled high on tender, flaky puff pastry shells. Rich whipped cream adds velvety, melt-in-your-mouth flavor. Red-ripe strawberries, available almost year-round, put the finishing touch on this glorious creation.

STEP-BY-STEP

Coordinate steps when cooking for optimum time savings:

1. Remove frozen pastry shells from freezer; thaw until pliable, about 15 minutes; preheat oven to 400 degrees F.
2. Prepare Citrus Marinade; combine with all other salad ingredients except lettuce; marinate 30 minutes.
3. Roll pastry shells according to recipe; bake 12 minutes.
4. Cook pasta shells according to package directions; drain.
5. Remove puff pastry from oven; cool.
6. Reduce oven temperature to 350 degrees F.
7. Assemble pasta dish as directed; bake 15 minutes.
8. Beat whipping cream; toss sliced strawberries with liqueur.
9. Uncover pasta dish; bake 5 minutes.
10. Assemble salads as directed.
11. Assemble Strawberry Torta as directed.
12. Remove pasta dish from oven.

YOUR MEAL IS READY TO SERVE!

RAISIN STORAGE TIPS

- For maximum flavor, appearance and nutritive value store raisins in a sealed, airtight container or plastic bag and refrigerate to prevent them from drying out. If stored properly, raisins will last up to 15 months.
- Raisins keep even longer when frozen and thaw easily at room temperature.
- If raisins form sugar crystals or become dry due to improper storage, simply cover with hot tap water, soak 2 to 5 minutes, drain and pat dry.
- Keep raisins on hand to add to cereal, trail mixes, meat sauces and other dishes for great taste and a nutrition boost. Raisins are a good source of potassium and iron. They provide fiber, too.

TIPS FOR CHEESE CARE

- Once opened, cheese will stay fresh several weeks in the refrigerator; longer if unopened. Rewrap in clean plastic wrap after each use so it doesn't absorb odors from other foods.
- Although best when served fresh, cheese can be frozen for longer storage if necessary. Because freezing causes textural changes (cheese becomes more crumbly), use cheese that has been frozen in cooking.
- Freeze cheese in chunks no larger than a pound. Double wrap cheese before freezing. Thaw slowly in the refrigerator before using.

STRAWBERRY HANDLING TIPS

- Strawberries do not ripen after being picked, so choose berries that are plump, with a natural shine, rich red color and bright green caps.
- To ensure delectable flavor, appearance and the highest nutritional value, use strawberries as soon after purchase as possible. One cup of strawberries contains only 60 calories, and provides 150 percent of the U.S. RDA for vitamin C.
- Store strawberries unwashed in the refrigerator until ready to eat. Just before using, wash strawberries in a gentle spray of cool water with caps still attached and pat dry with a paper towel.

Raisin Citrus Cucumbers

3/4 cup California raisins
2 cups thinly sliced cucumber*
8 cherry tomatoes, halved
Citrus Marinade (recipe follows)
Curly leaf lettuce

In bowl combine all ingredients except lettuce. Marinate at room temperature 30 minutes. Spoon cucumber mixture into four bowls. Garnish with lettuce. Makes 4 servings

*English or European cucumbers have thinner skins and don't need to be peeled.

CITRUS MARINADE: In bowl whisk 1/3 cup olive oil, 3 tablespoons white wine vinegar, 1 tablespoon frozen orange juice concentrate (thawed), 1 teaspoon honey and 1/4 teaspoon red pepper flakes. Add salt to taste.

Seashell Pasta With Two Cheeses

8 ounces shell-shaped pasta
1 1/2 cups (4 ounces) freshly grated Wisconsin Asiago, Romano or Parmesan Cheese
1 1/2 cups (6 ounces) shredded Wisconsin Mozzarella Cheese
1 teaspoon grated lemon peel
1 can (7 ounces) artichoke hearts, drained
1/2 cup frozen peas
3/4 cup milk
1/8 teaspoon cayenne pepper

Cook pasta as package directs; drain. Combine cheeses and lemon peel. To assemble: Layer half the pasta in buttered, 2-quart casserole. Top with half the artichokes and peas; sprinkle with half the cheeses. Repeat layers. Pour milk over casserole; dust with cayenne. Bake, covered, in 350-degree oven 15 minutes; uncover and bake 5 minutes longer. Serve hot. Makes 4 servings

Strawberry Torta

4 frozen puff pastry shells, thawed
1 tablespoon butter, melted
2 teaspoons granulated sugar
2 pint baskets fresh California strawberries, stemmed and halved
1/4 cup orange-flavored liqueur
1 cup whipping cream
1/4 cup prepared chocolate sauce

On lightly floured surface, roll pastry shells 1/8 inch thick. Brush with butter, sprinkle with 1 teaspoon of the sugar; prick with fork. Bake on ungreased baking sheet in 400-degree oven about 12 minutes until golden. Cool. Toss strawberries with liqueur. Beat whipping cream and remaining teaspoon sugar to form soft peaks. To assemble: Place 1 pastry on serving plate, spread with one-fourth of the cream, top with one-fourth of the strawberries. Top with second pastry, one-fourth of the cream and one-fourth of the strawberries. Repeat for second torta. To serve, remove top layers to serving plates, making four equal servings; drizzle each with 1 tablespoon chocolate sauce. Makes 2 tortas; 4 servings

DEAR ABBY

Weight figures in decision to smoke

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am currently dating a good-looking, 33-year-old woman who has a medium frame and a shapely figure. She smokes and would like to quit, but she's afraid if she quits she will gain weight. I do not want her to lose her shapely figure, nor do I want her to smoke.

Can you list some possible solutions to win in both departments? — GENE IN JASPER, IND.

DEAR GENE: Your good-looking friend is not alone. There are many people who smoke to stay trim, but few will admit it.

If she really wants to quit, she should get in touch with her local branch of the American Cancer Society and latch onto the stop-smoking program. She'll be given tips on weight maintenance at the same time. The longer she smokes, the harder it will be to quit. DEAR ABBY: We have a problem. Some close relatives sold their home, bought an expensive RV, and told everybody that they were going to travel.

In three months they have taken two short trips. The rest of the time — you guessed it — the "monster" sits on the street in front of our house, connected to our electricity!

These "travelers" also have pets that are a nuisance. Our neighbors do not appreciate all this and neither do we, although we do love these relatives.

There is a city ordinance that prohibits a vehicle from sitting for more than 72 hours in one place. We haven't been bothered yet, but we are getting nervous.

How does one handle a problem like this? I hope you put this in your column. Maybe they will see it and take the hint. — UNHAPPY AND BEWILDERED

DEAR UNHAPPY: Don't leave a message as important as this one to chance. Tell your relatives that there is a city ordinance prohibiting the parking of vehicles in one spot for more than 72 hours. Also inform them that their pets have become a neighborhood nuisance — and suggest that maybe it's time they moseyed down the road. Harsh? Perhaps, but consider the alternative: The meek stand to inherit some insensitive guests, and a long list of inconveniences.

DEAR ABBY: My family tells me I'm abnormal because I eat only one item at a time. I dish out three or four items on my plate and eat them separately. Just because I don't take a few bites of this and a few bites of that, they say I'm abnormal and peculiar. My family is always putting me down and degrading me for the way I eat.

So what's wrong with the way I eat? Please put your answer in the paper so they can see it. Then maybe they will get off my back. Thank you. — J.M.B., MARYLAND

DEAR J.M.B.: I wonder what's eating your family. Your manner of eating is neither abnormal nor peculiar. Many others prefer to eat one item at a time.

DEAR ABBY: I sincerely hope the Minnesota son takes your advice and asks his father how he can help him. He is young and has many years ahead of him. Happiness doesn't thrive on hatred and bitterness. Forgiveness is much more satisfying. I should know. — TRIED BOTH IN ARIZONA

Blueberries make elegant brulee

Associated Press

Blueberries, a native American fruit, are better when they are bigger.

BLUEBERRY BRULEE

1 (8-ounce) container soft-style cream cheese with pineapple
1 (8-ounce) carton plain yogurt
3 cups fresh blueberries
½ cup packed brown sugar

In small mixing bowl stir together cream cheese and yogurt. Place blueberries in shallow 8-inch round broiler-proof dish. Spoon cream cheese mixture over blueberries. Sprinkle brown sugar over cheese mixture. Broil 4 to 5 inches from heat for 2 to 3 minutes or until sugar starts to melt. Serve immediately.

Cookbooks feature garden-fresh vegetables

By ELAINE WIKSTROM
Hearst News Service

What could be more natural than combining the thoughts of one of the foremost proponents of using fresh vegetables with the expertise of one of the oldest vegetable seed companies around?

That's exactly what Burpee had in mind when the company got together with Perla Meyers to develop a series of six cookbooks, the first two of which were released recently. They are called the American Harvest series, and each of the 121-page paperback volumes deals with vegetables that are harvested during specific times of the year. The company plans to release two books a year until the full six-volume series is complete.

"The Spring Garden" deals with asparagus, beets, broccoli, kohlrabi, salad and other greens, peas, spinach, radishes and scallions. The second book, "The Early Summer Garden," addresses snap beans, corn, cucumbers, peppers, swiss chard, tomatoes and zucchini.

If the books can't be found in local bookstores, those interested in acquiring them can find information in this year's Burpee Annual Catalog and the Burpee Fall Garden Catalog. Information on ordering also can be obtained by calling 1-800-223-2348, which is the number for Simon and Schuster, the parent company of Fireside Books.

BROCCOLI TUNA SALAD

1 to 1½ pounds broccoli florets
1 large red bell pepper (seeded, cored and thinly sliced)
1 can (6-1/2 ounces) light tuna, drained and flaked
12 small black oil-cured olives
½ cup thinly sliced red onions
Salt and freshly ground black pepper
2 to 3 tablespoons red wine vinegar, preferably sherry
1 large clove garlic, peeled and mashed
1 tablespoon finely minced fresh parsley
6 tablespoons olive oil
8 ripe cherry tomatoes, cut in half
6 slices hard salami, cut into thin strips
2 hard-boiled eggs, peeled and quartered

Bring lightly salted water to boil in vegetable steamer. Add broccoli florets; cover and steam 2 to 4 minutes or until tender. Remove and set aside to cool.

In serving bowl, combine broccoli florets, red pepper, tuna, olives and red onions. Season with salt and pepper. Combine 2 tablespoons vinegar with garlic, parsley and oil in food processor or blender and process until smooth. Season with salt and pepper; pour over broccoli salad. Toss gently; let salad marinate at room temperature for 1 to 2 hours.

Add cherry tomatoes to salad. Taste and correct seasoning, adding remaining vinegar if necessary and generous grinding of black pepper. Garnish with salami and hard-boiled eggs. Chill 30 minutes before serving.

WHAT'S COOKING

Charter member active in Lioness Club

EDITOR'S NOTE: This series of "What's Cooking" interviews will feature nonprofit organizations that have published cookbooks. This is the first article in a series of interviews with members of Midland Suburban Lioness Club.

By LINDA ANDERSON
Lifestyle Writer

Marjorie Shaw is not just a charter member of Midland Suburban Lioness Club, she is a very active charter member of the organization.

"We (Midland Suburban Lioness Club) have been organized ever since 1984," Mrs. Shaw said. "We are a certified Lions' Club. We just now have enough to make district — it takes 12 clubs to make district. We were certified on Aug. 15."

Membership in the Lions' Club has proven to be a cooperative effort. "Our husbands organized their Lions' Club on March 28, 1984," Mrs. Shaw said. "They sponsored us."

Duties of the Lioness Club include helping raise funds for Lions' Club projects, she said, including making "money to help buy glasses for needy children or adults."

Although Lions' Clubs are famous for supporting eye care, their efforts are not limited to vision.

"We are helping the Lions' Club — the men are helping a little girl who needs a liver transplant. She's in Dallas and is 8 years old. She is a twin.

"We (also) bought 23 McGruff puppets for the elementary schools — to 'take a bite out of crime' and drugs."

"We helped families that needed help — for whatever," Mrs. Shaw said.

SINCE THE club's organization four years ago, members also have helped with Crippled Children's Camp in Kerrville — the Texas Lions Camp, Mrs. Shaw said.

Fund-raising projects of the Lioness Club have included gargage sales, sales of "baskets of goodies" and hand-made items such as potholders and towels. The women also helped the men with their poinsettia and rose sales. The poinsettias are delivered the first weekend in December, and the rose sales are the last weekend in March — that's the men's main project in money making."

Another fund-raising project of the Lioness Club was publication and sales of its cookbook, "Midland Suburban Lioness Club Kitchen Tested Recipes," which included contributions from Mrs. Shaw.

When her son, daughter-in-law and two grandchildren visit, Mrs. Shaw said she makes sure her kitchen is stocked with candy, cookies and pie. ... "We have 58 pecan trees, so that's the reason I cook with pecans,"

Some of Mrs. Shaw's favorite recipes follow:

MILK CHOCOLATE FUDGE
7 ounces marshmallow creme
1½ cups sugar
¾ cup evaporated milk
¾ stick butter
1 teaspoon vanilla
¼ teaspoon salt
2 cups milk chocolate chips or morsels
1 pound pecan halves

In large pan, mix sugar, milk, marshmallow creme, butter and salt. Bring to full boil over medium heat, stirring constantly. Let boil about 3 to 5 minutes.

Remove from heat. Add chocolate morsels, vanilla and pecans. Pour into buttered pan and let cool.

BEET SALAD
1 can (no. 303) sliced beets
1 small onion
¼ cup sugar
¼ cup oil
¼ cup cider vinegar
1 teaspoon salt
Dash pepper

Drain beets and slice in rings. Slice onions in rings and mix with beets. Shake remaining ingredients together in jar and pour over beets and onions. Chill at least one hour. Keeps well 3 or 4 days.

CHOCOLATE CHESS PIE
1 unbaked pastry shell, 8 or 9 inches
½ cup butter
1 square unsweetened chocolate
1 cup sugar
2 eggs, beaten
Dash salt
1 teaspoon vanilla
½ pint whipping cream
½ cup chopped nuts

Bake crust in 450 degree oven for about 5 minutes. Remove crust from oven and reduce heat to 350 degrees.

Melt butter and chocolate in top of double boiler. In bowl, stir sugar, eggs, salt and vanilla together. Stir in chocolate mixture.

Pour into pastry shell and bake 25 to 30 minutes. Cool. Top with whipped cream and nuts.

NEIMAN'S $250 COOKIES
2 cups butter
2 cups sugar
2 cups brown sugar
4 eggs
2 teaspoons vanilla
4 cups flour
5 cups blended oatmeal*
1 teaspoon salt
2 teaspoons baking powder
2 teaspoons baking soda
24 ounces chocolate chips
1 8-ounce grated chocolate bar
3 cups chopped nuts

* Blended oatmeal: Measure and blend in a blender to fine powder.

Cream butter and sugars; add eggs and vanilla. Mix together with flour, oatmeal, salt, baking powder and baking soda. Add chips, candy and nuts. Roll out into balls; place about 2 inches apart on cookie sheet. Bake 6 minutes at 375 degrees. Makes about 224 cookies. Recipe can be cut in half.

Marjorie Shaw

Brian Adamcik

PECAN MUFFINS
2 cups dark brown sugar
1½ cups whole wheat flour
2 tablespoons butter
¼ teaspoon vanilla
4 eggs
½ cup ground pecans

Mix all ingredients. Grease and flour small muffin tins, or use paper muffin cups. Bake at 350 degrees for 15 minutes. Do not overcook. Makes about 5½ dozen.

New cookbooks offer everyone something

New York Times News Service

A sampling of this season's cookbooks is proof that there is something for everybody, from off-the-cuff, off-the-wall zaniness to sober-sided kitchen craftsmanship. Of the many cookbooks released in recent months, a quartet stands out. Each is quite different from the others.

The first, "Cookin' Cheap" by Larry Bly and Laban Johnson (Taylor Publishing, $7.95), is based on a public-television series produced in Roanoke, Va. It combines elements of "White Trash Cooking" (Jargon Society, 1986), Ernest Matthew Mickler's ode to potato-chip sandwiches, and any of several television spinoff cookbooks.

The authors are stars of a cooking show on which they vamp a meal together in good-ole-boy style for the camera. The recipes reflect the low-tech nature of their food but are useful for people intimidated by fresh chicken stock, bechamel sauce and other ingredients made from scratch.

This is not a book to dissect for cooking technique or ethnic authenticity. The authors cheerfully acknowledge that steamed fish was the hardest thing they ever cooked on the show: when time came to remove the fish from the pot, Johnson burned himself, dropped the fish on the counter and watched as it "exploded into 100 pieces."

"The 100 Greatest Dishes of Louisiana Cookery" by Roy F. Guste Jr. (Norton, $17.50) is a bit more mainstream and a good example of a single-cuisine cookbook. The author is a former proprietor of Antoine's, the New Orleans restaurant founded by his family, and a great-grandson of Jules Alciatore, who is credited with inventing oysters Rockefeller. Guste has picked traditional recipes from the region and surrounded each with a little narrative and a nice woodcut illustration.

There is a healthy range of recipes, from red beans and rice to tripe creole, and all the Louisiana favorites in between. The opening chapter is devoted to native cocktails: the Sazerac, Ramos gin fizz and more.

But you won't need a fancy drink to get you through the recipes because the ingredients are, for the most part, easily obtainable and the directions are quite explicit. Eggs Florentine, adapted here, were delicious and altogether too rich for contemporary vascular etiquette.

Along with the old classics, Guste gives some space to blackened redfish, a dish popularized by the chef Paul Prudhomme. While traditionalists contend that the blackening trend has done more for smoke-alarm companies than for discerning eaters, Guste isn't among them.

Another restaurateur, Phillip Scully, and Annie Gilbar wrote "The Ultimate Breakfast Cookbook" (Weidenfeld & Nicolson, $19.95). Scully served breakfast at his small Beverly Hills, Calif., restaurant until late last year, when he closed the place, known as Scully's.

The introduction chronicles his adventures in waiting on the rich and famous at Chasen's for 16 years (before he bought his restaurant) and as a private cook for many well-known people: "I'll never forget J. Edgar Hoover's delight at the taste of my enchiladas!" he writes. Hoover would undoubtedly have approved of his dollar-size potato pancakes, made light with egg white and served with applesauce and sour cream.

A lot of people are secretly enamored of sumptuous breakfasts, or at least the idea of sumptuous breakfasts. Some of the recipes here will fulfill any big-breakfast fantasy, especially the omelets. Scully's omelet-making technique, however, is not by the book. He advocates cooking the eggs over low heat, letting a skin form, dropping the filling in and then turning the omelet into a second pan, already buttered and heated. This insures that the filling won't go flying all over the stove. Classicists employ the "high heat, stir constantly, fill and fold" method.

Meanwhile, down south and west, Anne Lindsay Greer has produced the classy "Foods of the Sun: Cooking of the West and Southwest" (Harper & Row, $22.50), and there's hardly a taco to be found.

Often, when an author tries to create a new cuisine out of existing ones, you end up with something like "chicken tandoori Mornay" or other confusions. Ms. Greer manages to stay crystal clear while pulling together a variety of native influences. What she provides are dishes like chicken and chili salad, roasted corn soup and cilantro hollandaise, all nice little whiffs of the Southwest. This is not the cookbook for those used to the combo platter at Chi-Chi's.

There is, though, a fine recipe for chicken fajitas, which are the rage at Tex-Mex and other theme restaurants. Fajitas are quickly seared strips of marinated beef or chicken served sizzling, hot off a griddle. Ms. Greer teams hers with flour tortillas, guacamole and salsa or chili relish.

The guacamole is good and pure, consisting of avocados, tomatilloes or lime juice, onions and tomatoes — all finely diced, not mashed.

Five pages are devoted to chili identification, and you'd better be able to tell an Anaheim from a jalapeno, or you'll get some unanticipated results. Ms. Greer takes time to explain other ingredients and cooking techniques, making the book one part techniques, one part beginner.

Salad greens confusing but tasty

Hearst News Service

Romaine, endive, escarole and chicory: Which is which?

The problem with these greens is that they are all related or at least similar. Like any large family, it is easy for a stranger to get the individual members mixed up, especially when they look alike. Endive, sometimes called curly endive to distinguish it from the straight, pale small Belgian endive, is often sold as its cousin, chicory.

Some people also are troubled by the strong, bitter flavor of these vegetables, but there are ways to tame them by mixing them with mild lettuces and vinegars.

We'll start with chicory, cichorium intybus, which grows wild all over the world, and is grown commercially in two forms. In the root group are witloof or Belgian endive, a pale, small plant and the red chicories, or radicchios. Leaf chicories are the Grumolo, a small, dark and broad-leafed plant, and the Catalonia, a green plant with deep lobes that is the most available chicory in the winter market.

Escarole and endive are similar to the chicories, actually belonging to the species cichorium endive. Endive is the Medusa of the greens, a thick bunch of wildly curling leaves, while escarole is somewhat tidier in appearance, with broader leaves.

Lettuces fall into three principal forms, of which romaine (Roman) or cos is one. This is a long-leafed lettuce. Other categories are the head lettuces, including the iceberg, bibb, Boston and butter types; and curled or leaf lettuce such as oak leaf or ruby.

While many of these greens can be braised and served as a vegetable side dish, their commonest use is for salads.

Since chicory, endive and escarole are bitter, it is best to mix them with a mild-flavored lettuce. In Provencal cookery, the technique is called mesclun, a flavorful and slightly bitter combination of greens that can include chicory, radicchio, endive and escarole.

ROQUEFORT VINAIGRETTE

2 to 3 ounces Roquefort cheese
6 tablespoons olive oil
2 tablespoons creme fraiche or sour cream
4 teaspoons sherry vinegar
Salt

Combine cheese, oil and creme fraiche or sour cream in blender jar and blend until fairly smooth. Scrape mixture and stir in vinegar. Season to taste with salt and adjust vinegar if necessary.

GREEN SALAD

6 handfuls mixed greens
1 shallot, finely diced
1½ tablespoons red wine vinegar, sherry vinegar or Champagne vinegar
¼ teaspoon salt
5 to 6 tablespoons virgin or extra virgin olive oil
Fresh herbs: parsley, chervil, marjoram, thyme leaves, basil or lovage, finely chopped
Pepper

Select greens from what is available, combining variety of tastes, colors and textures. If possible, use small, tender heads of lettuce. Wash them in large bowl of water and dry in salad spinner. If they are not to be used for a while, roll loosely in kitchen towel and refrigerate.

Combine shallot, vinegar and salt in bowl; whisk in olive oil. When ready to dress salad, toss leaves with herbs; pour dressing over greens and toss gently and thoroughly. Serve with freshly ground black pepper.

BELGIAN ENDIVE AND WATERCRESS WITH ROASTED WALNUTS

12 walnuts, cracked and shelled
1 teaspoon walnut oil
Salt and pepper
2 bunches watercress with large, flat leaves
Walnut-shallot vinaigrette (see below)
2 or 3 firm white Belgian endives

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Toss walnuts in oil with salt and pepper; bake 5 to 7 minutes or until they smell toasty. Set aside to cool.

Break apart branches of watercress into smaller leaf stems and discard thick trunks. Wash and dry.

Prepare vinaigrette. Just before serving, quarter endives, cut out cores, and slice wedges diagonally. Combine two greens, toss with walnuts and vinaigrette, and serve.

WALNUT-SHALLOT VINAIGRETTE

1 tablespoon sherry vinegar or strong red wine vinegar
¼ teaspoon salt
1 small shallot, finely diced
4 tablespoons virgin olive oil
1 teaspoon walnut oil, or more, to taste

Combine vinegar, salt and shallot in bowl; stir to dissolve salt. Whisk in oils. Taste and adjust ingredients if necessary.

ROMAINE HEARTS WITH ROQUEFORT VINAIGRETTE

2 heads romaine lettuce
Roquefort vinaigrette (recipe follows)
3 to 4 slices firm, good-quality white bread
2 tablespoons butter
Pepper
Chives, thinly sliced into rounds

Remove large outer leaves of lettuce until reaching the hearts, which should be well shaped, firm and pale green. (Retain outer leaves for another salad or soup stock.)

Cut hearts lengthwise into quarters, rinse, and dry; wrap in damp kitchen towel and refrigerate until needed.

Prepare vinaigrette. Preheat oven to 400 degrees. Slice crusts off bread and cut into small cubes. Melt butter; pour over bread cubes, and toss well. Bake until crisp and golden.

Set two quarters of romaine on each plate, ladle dressing over each, scatter croutons on top, and finish with plenty of coarsely ground black pepper and chives.

Halibut ideal for spring grilling

By PIERRE FRANEY
New York Times News Service

Firm-fleshed, meaty halibut, which is entering its peak season in Northeastern waters, is one of my favorite fish for outdoor barbecuing and broiling. Its mild flavor can be enhanced in limitless ways with herb marinades.

When buying steaks, ask for a center cut with the thick backbone left in and the skin on. The fish is more flavorful with the skin and bone, and it holds together better over the grill.

In the accompanying recipe I marinate the fillets for about half an hour with a mixture of olive oil, lemon juice and seasonings. Do not let them marinate too long because the acid in the lemon will begin to break down the fibers in the flesh.

If an outdoor grill is used, the surface should be scrubbed with a wire brush, wiped clean and rubbed with vegetable oil. The grill surface should be very hot to prevent sticking.

Whether grilling or broiling, resist the temptation to flip the fillet prematurely. Let it cook for five minutes untouched, then flip and cook until done (about five minutes for a 1½-inch thick steak).

I make a quick ginger sauce with the addition of a few hot jalapeno peppers. The sauce can be made in advance and refrigerated for several days in an airtight jar. If you make it ahead of time, omit the coriander leaves, adding them just before serving.

BROILED HALIBUT STEAKS WITH GINGER SAUCE

4 halibut steaks, center cut, about 1½ inches thick, about 2 pounds
Salt and freshly ground black pepper to taste
3 tablespoons olive oil
Juice of 1 lemon
4 sprigs fresh thyme, chopped, or 1 teaspoon dried
Ginger sauce (see recipe)

One-half hour before cooking the steaks, sprinkle them on all sides with salt and pepper. Brush with a mixture of the oil, lemon juice and thyme. Cover with plastic wrap and refrigerate.

When ready, preheat broiler to high or preheat an outdoor grill.

If broiling, arrange the steaks on a rack and place under the broiler about 6 inches from the source of heat. Broil 5 minutes with the door partly open. Turn the steaks and continue broiling, leaving the door open, about 5 minutes.

If grilling, put the steaks on a very hot grill and cover. Let cook 5 minutes. Turn the fish, cover the grill and continue cooking about 5 minutes. Serve with the ginger sauce spooned over.

Ginger Sauce

2 tablespoons grated fresh ginger
2 teaspoons minced garlic
1 tablespoon light soy sauce
⅓ cup dry white wine
2 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons olive oil
½ teaspoon finely chopped hot jalapeno pepper
Freshly ground pepper to taste
1 tablespoon Dijon-style mustard
2 tablespoons finely chopped coriander leaves

Put all ingredients, except the coriander, in a saucepan and bring to a boil. Simmer, stirring, over medium heat for 5 minutes. Remove from the heat.

Add the coriander just before serving.

GREEN BEANS WITH TOMATOES

¾ pound fresh green beans
Salt to taste
4 plum tomatoes, about ¾ pound
1 tablespoon butter
2 tablespoons olive oil
1 tablespoon finely chopped garlic
Freshly ground pepper to taste
10 fresh basil leaves, coarsely chopped

Cut off and discard the tips of the beans. Drop them into boiling salted water and return to the boil. Simmer about 7 minutes or until crisp tender. Do not overcook. Drain.

Core the tomatoes. Cut into ¾-inch cubes. There should be about 2 cups.

Melt the butter, then add the olive oil and the garlic. Cook briefly, being careful not to brown the garlic. Add the tomatoes, salt and pepper. Cook, stirring, for about 2 minutes. Add the green beans and chopped basil. Blend well and cook for 3 minutes.

Light, moist cakes possible when baking in microwave oven

In spite of past experiences, microwave desserts excellent

By TRISH BARR
Copley News Service

For years you've been told that you just can't bake a good cake in the microwave, right?

Bunk, says microwave cooking expert Janet Emal, editor of the quarterly microwave cooking journal Sunwaves and spokeswoman for Pillsbury.

"I can't stand conventionally cooked cakes now, after 12 years of microwaving," Emal says. "They are so dry. Microwave cakes are lighter and more moist and tender than those cooked conventionally."

While home microwave cooking first saw the light of day more than 20 years ago, it has not been until recently that baking in the microwave has become, well, conventional.

In addition to their improved quality, Emal says, microwaved cakes cut down on preparation and cooking time: "Generally, you can mix and bake a cake in 20 minutes."

Still, there are some differences in cooking procedures with microwave baking as compared with conventional baking.

"You can make all kinds of cakes in the microwave," Emal says. The key to success is knowing the techniques that will produce light, moist cakes instead of the soggy-middle-/burned-outside varieties that for years scared off the dedicated microwave user from baking.

According to Emal, it's best to use a round pie dish since it will produce more evenly cooked layers. Square and oblong dishes can be used, but be sure to shield the corners to prevent burning. Do so by covering the corners with aluminum foil, extending it about 2 inches over the batter, Emal recommends.

PREPARATION OF the pan also is important, she says. Pans should be greased and sugared, or, in the case of white or other pale batters, greased and sprinkled with crushed graham crackers or cinnamon. (Waxed paper can be used in place of greasing the pans. Cut two layers of waxed paper to fit the bottom of the pan surface.)

Be sure to spread the batter evenly in the dish since, unlike conventional cooking, microwaving will not level the batter as it cooks. Fill the container half full rather than the normal two-thirds, since microwave cakes will rise higher than conventionally cooked ones.

In the oven, place pans on a raised surface, such as an inverted saucer, to distribute cooking waves evenly over the cake bottom. It's best to start cooking cakes at medium (50 percent) power and finish them on high (100 percent), although some recipes call for only high cooking. For example, Emal suggests cooking a Bundt cake on medium for nine minutes and finishing it on high for four to 6½ minutes. Cake in a 9x13-inch pan should be cooked seven minutes on medium and eight minutes on high, shielding corners before going to high. Make sure to rotate the dish during cooking. Cakes are done when the surface appears glossy with no wet spots and the cake pulls away from the sides.

Cakes should be removed from the oven and left on a countertop, because they will continue to cook for about 10 minutes following microwaving. They should not be cooled on a rack for that reason. Because microwave cakes have no crust, they tend to dry out quicker than conventionally baked ones. Emal recommends covering them once they've cooled. Frosting also will prevent cakes from drying out.

SUNWAVES OATMEAL CAKE

1¼ cups water
1 cup quick cooking oats
½ cup margarine
1 cup granulated sugar
1 cup packed brown sugar
1 teaspoon vanilla
2 eggs
1½ cups flour
1 teaspoon baking soda
1 teaspoon cinnamon
½ teaspoon salt

In an 8-cup glass measure, microwave water on high for 5 to 6 minutes or until boiling. Add oats and margarine. Let stand 20 minutes. Add remaining ingredients and mix well. Grease and sugar 13x9-inch container. Pour batter in and bake on medium 12 to 14 minutes. Shield corners halfway through cooking to prevent overcooking. Microwave on high 2 to 3 minutes until top is glossy and cake springs back when touched.

SUNWAVES TOPPING

1 cup evaporated milk
1 cup brown sugar
½ cup margarine
¼ cup flour
1¼ cups flaked coconut
1 cup walnuts
1 teaspoon vanilla

In medium bowl, combine milk, sugar, margarine and flour. Microwave on high 4 to 5 minutes or until thickened, stirring twice. Add remaining ingredients. Cool until spreadable. Stir twice and top cake.

LEMON-BLUEBERRY MINI CAKES

¼ cup butter or margarine, melted
1 container (8 ounces) lemon yogurt
⅔ cup sugar
2 eggs
1⅔ cups sifted cake flour
¾ teaspoon baking soda
¾ cup blueberries
Confectioners' sugar or Cinnamon Topping (recipe follows)

In bowl, combine butter, yogurt and sugar. Beat in eggs, one at a time. Combine flour and baking soda; add to batter, stirring just until smooth. Fold in blueberries. Pour batter into paper-lined cupcake pans until generous ¼ full. Microwave on high for 2 to 4 minutes, until tops look almost dry, turning pan once. Remove from pan; let cool. Repeat with remaining batter. Sprinkle with confectioners' sugar or cinnamon topping.

Cinnamon Topping: Combine 2 tablespoons each sugar and finely chopped nuts, and 1 teaspoon cinnamon. Dip tops of cakes in 2 tablespoons melted butter, then dip in cinnamon mixture.

RASPBERRY FUDGE TORTE

Cake:
2 ounces unsweetened chocolate
½ cup butter or margarine
1 cup sifted cake flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt
½ cup seedless raspberry jam
½ cup sugar
2 eggs
2 tablespoons semisweet chocolate mini chips
Glaze:
4 ounces bittersweet chocolate
½ cup heavy cream
Fresh raspberries, optional
Whipped cream or vanilla ice cream, optional

To prepare pan: Spray a 1-quart microwave-safe casserole with non-stick cooking spray. Cut wax paper to fit inside of casserole. Spray wax paper in casserole with non-stick cooking spray.

To make cake: In 6-cup measuring cup, place unsweetened chocolate with butter on top. Microwave on high 1 to 1½ minutes until butter is melted; stir until well blended; set aside. In a medium bowl stir together flour, baking powder and salt; set aside. In medium bowl whisk together jam, sugar, eggs and chocolate mini chips. Whisk in unsweetened chocolate mixture; then gently stir in flour mixture until just blended. Pour batter into prepared casserole. Place casserole on an inverted saucer in the oven.

Microwave on high 4 to 6 minutes, rotating once until top is bubbly and still slightly wet. Cover with foil and let stand on counter 10 minutes. Turn out onto cake rack, remove wax paper, and let cool completely before glazing.

To make glaze: In 6-cup measuring cup, place chocolate and cream. Microwave on high 2 to 2½ minutes, until cream is just boiling. Remove from oven, stir until well blended. Let stand until mixture comes to room temperature, about 1 hour.

To glaze cake: Place cooling rack with cake in a wax paper-lined jelly roll pan. Pour glaze over cake, and with a small spatula or knife, smooth glaze over top and sides, letting excess drip into pan. Garnish with raspberries if desired, then chill cake about 30 minutes or until glaze is set. Transfer to serving plate with 2 spatulas.

To serve, cut into thin wedges and top with additional raspberries and whipped cream or vanilla ice cream if desired.

BUTTERSCOTCH BLONDIES

3 cups sifted cake flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
2 teaspoons ground cinnamon
½ teaspoon ground cloves
½ teaspoon ground nutmeg
¼ teaspoon salt
¾ cup butter or margarine
1¼ cups light brown sugar, firmly packed
2 eggs
1 cup butterscotch-flavored pieces
¾ cup chopped pecans
1 package (12 ounces) semisweet chocolate pieces

In medium bowl, stir together flour, baking powder, spices and salt; set aside. In large mixer bowl, cream butter and sugar until light and fluffy. Add eggs, beating well, then blend in flour mixture. Stir in butterscotch pieces and nuts. Spread batter evenly into 9x13-inch microwave-safe baking pan that has been sprayed with non-stick cooking spray. Shield corners of pan with aluminum foil squares, a common microwave technique to avoid overcooking (refer to your oven's instruction manual). Place pan on inverted saucer in oven. Microwave on high (100 percent) 5 minutes. Remove foil squares. Continue to cook at medium (50 percent) 5 to 7 minutes until center is set but not firm. Remove from oven and sprinkle with chocolate pieces. Cover with aluminum foil and let stand 10 minutes until pieces are soft enough to spread. Spread evenly. Cool completely before cutting.

CARROT SWIRL CAKE

Cake:
3 cups sifted cake flour
1 tablespoon ground cinnamon
2 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon baking soda
½ teaspoon ground nutmeg
¼ teaspoon salt
1 cup brown sugar, firmly packed
½ cup sugar
3 eggs
1¼ cups vegetable oil
3 cups finely shredded carrots
½ cup chopped walnuts
Confectioners' sugar (optional)

Filling:
1 can (8 ounces) crushed pineapple, well drained
1 package (8 ounces) cream cheese, softened
½ cup sifted confectioners' sugar
1 egg
2 tablespoons sifted cake flour

To prepare pan: Grease a 2-quart microwave-safe ring pan. Sprinkle with 2 tablespoons wheat germ or graham cracker crumbs to coat; set aside.

To make cake: In large bowl, stir together flour, cinnamon, baking powder, soda, nutmeg and salt; set aside. In large mixer bowl, blend sugars and eggs, add oil, flour mixture, carrots and walnuts until well blended.

To make filling: Stir together all ingredients until well blended. Pour 2 cups cake batter evenly around prepared pan. Carefully spoon filling on top of batter; then spoon remaining batter into pan to cover filling. Place pan on a inverted saucer in oven. Microwave on medium (50 percent power) 18 minutes, rotating once. Microwave on high 12 to 14 minutes until cake is just barely set on top, rotating as needed. Cover with foil and let stand on counter 15 minutes. Turn out onto cake rack to cool. Dust with confectioners' sugar, if desired.

Overripe bananas make homemade breads more tasty

By DIANE SAVAGE
Copley News Service

Got a banana that's about as ripe as it can get, but you don't have time to cook it? Toss it — in the freezer, that is! Whole bananas, peel and all, freeze remarkably well, and are fine for baking with later.

The classic and best-known recipe using overripe bananas is banana bread, for which there are hundreds, maybe thousands, of variations. The recipe offered below is homey and healthful with whole-wheat, wheat germ, honey, spices, and a generous sprinkling of chopped walnuts.

The following recipe for Thai-Fried Bananas isn't baked, like the other recipes here — but it's so good, and such an exotic dessert to create from a common kitchen banana, that I've included it anyway. (For this recipe, you don't want overripe bananas: just ripe, firm ones.)

THAI-FRIED BANANAS

4 medium-size, firm bananas
1 egg
2 tablespoons sugar
1½ tablespoons whole-wheat pastry flour
2 tablespoons butter or margarine (butter is best, if you use it)
½ cup shredded dried coconut

Peel bananas; cut in half lengthwise, then in half crosswise. In small mixing bowl combine egg, sugar and flour. Beat well to combine. Dip bananas in egg mixture to coat thoroughly. Melt butter in frying pan and saute bananas over medium heat about 5 minutes, turning to cook both sides. Sprinkle with coconut and serve piping hot.

BANANA-SPICE NUT BREAD

1¼ cups honey
1¼ cups vegetable oil
2 eggs
2 medium-size ripe bananas, peeled and mashed
1 teaspoon each baking powder and ground cloves
¾ teaspoon baking soda
½ teaspoon each salt and ground cinnamon
3 cups whole-wheat pastry flour
1 cup chopped walnuts
2 tablespoons wheat germ

Preheat oven to 325 degrees. Combine honey and oil in large mixing bowl; beat vigorously with wire whisk until well blended. Beat in eggs, then bananas, then baking powder, cloves, baking soda, salt and cinnamon. With a wooden spoon, beat in half of the flour. Add remaining flour, a little at a time, beating to blend. Fold in walnuts, reserving 2 tablespoons for topping.

Butter two 8½x4½x2½-inch baking pans; divide batter evenly between pans. Sprinkle each loaf with 1 tablespoon of wheat germ, then top with 1 tablespoon chopped walnuts. Bake in preheated oven 1 hour and 15 minutes, or until toothpick inserted in center comes out clean.

BANANA BRAN MUFFINS

⅓ cup brown sugar
⅓ cup honey
¼ cup butter or margarine
½ teaspoon vanilla extract
2 eggs
1 cup milk
1 cup bran
1½ cups whole-wheat flour
1½ teaspoons baking soda
2 medium-size, very ripe bananas
1 tablespoon lemon juice
1 cup coarsely chopped walnuts

Preheat oven to 375 degrees. In large mixing bowl combine brown sugar, honey and butter or margarine. Beat well with wooden spoon to cream mixture; beat in vanilla, then eggs, one at a time. Stir in milk, blending thoroughly.

Add bran all at once, stirring to moisten, then add unsifted flour and baking soda, stirring briefly. In small bowl combine peeled bananas and lemon juice; mash with fork. Fold bananas and nuts into bran mixture.

Line muffin cups with paper liners or butter lightly. Fill each two-thirds full with batter. Bake in preheated oven 15 to 20 minutes.

THURSDAY, JUNE 2, 1988

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Determination and lots of faith will get you almost everything you want. Those who desire to expand their family will find a way. You get an opportunity to make extra money in October. Your chances of winning a job or getting a loan will be best in September. Concentrate on reducing tensions in your personal relationships. A child's expectations for himself may be too high. Be supportive without adding extra pressure.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: composer Marvin Hamlisch, actor Stacy Keach, actress Sally Kellerman, "Tarzan" Johnny Weismuller.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Long-term business matters come to a head. Do not postpone a money decision one minute longer! A lack of honesty makes it very difficult to build a lasting relationship. Be candid.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Be flexible. Your future is in your hands. You may find it difficult to accept new technology, but you are smart enough to know that you must adapt: Go for it.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Do not give up on a relationship. A little adversity is good for the soul and can establish a stronger bond between two people in love. Let your hair down a little. Influences are favorable for travel.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You have many clever, innovative ideas. The key to financial success is applying them for practical purposes. You may have tunnel vision when it comes to a long-distance romance. Show common sense.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You sometimes are too fiery, but emotion may be just what is needed now to get things back on track. Know when to pull in your horns. Bank will be sympathetic to your needs.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Influential person offers financial support. Go slow; there could be hidden motives. Travel gives you a new perspective regarding romance. Keep in touch with loved ones. Let others know your itinerary.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A fine day for handling domestic affairs. You drum up new support for a difficult project. Influential person makes an unusual offer. Look into it carefully before making a final decision.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Tough business negotiations are favored. Romance takes a backseat to work. Complete important paperwork before mid-afternoon. A good time to experiment with new methods and procedures. Enlist your co-workers' support. Offer incentives.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Valuable contacts can be made at business meetings. Once you learn how to delegate authority, productivity will rise. Romance looks lively. Plan a special outing for the weekend. Shared experiences bring you closer.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A message or telephone call could change the direction of your career. Be true to your responsibilities. Postpone signing legal papers. Concentrate on family needs after office hours. Listen closely to offspring.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Keep your business obligations in mind when making investment decisions. A joint financial problem should soon be resolved. Certain promises made to you long ago will be fulfilled. Host a small party.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Problems with loved one can be resolved if you refuse to let pride stand in your way. Travel helps you clinch favorable agreements, boosting profits. Do not forget romance. Plan special outings.

Follow the play on this hand from the recent Spring North American Championships in Buffalo. Then decide for yourself whether anyone committed an error or whether everything proceeded normally.

Once his suit was raised, South's hand was borderline for a jump to game. A trial bid in one of the pointed suits might have been a wiser approach, and the final contract would have hinged on whether South chose two spades or three diamonds as the game try.

Against four hearts, West led his fourth-best diamond. Declarer won in dummy and drew trumps in two rounds with the ace and queen, then led a club. West played low and East captured the jack with the king. He shifted to the queen of spades, ducked by declarer who won the spade continuation to lead a second club. West rose with the ace but, since he was out of spades, the contract could not be defeated. What's your verdict?

It's not easy to spot, but West could have beaten the hand. To do so, he had to fly in the face of the old adage: "Second hand low." On the first club lead, West must go up with the ace and shift to the king of spades. Declarer has no counter. No matter how he twists and turns, sooner or later East will gain the lead with either the king of clubs or a spade, and the defenders can collect a total of four tricks in the black suits for a one-trick set.

Lucy recovering from heart attack

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — The husband of comedian Lucille Ball says the 76-year-old entertainer is doing "super" in her recovery from a mild heart attack.

"She didn't have a stroke," Gary Morton said Tuesday, dismissing tabloid reports that she had suffered a severe stroke last month.

Miss Ball was up and around at the couple's Beverly Hills home and healthy, Morton said, adding upcoming projects for his wife were on hold because of the prolonged Writers Guild of America strike.

Morton drove Miss Ball to Cedars-Sinai Medical Center on May 11 after she became ill at home. She underwent a complete physical and was released a few days later.

"Right now she's recovered from a very slight heart attack. She's doing super, sensational," Morton said.

Miss Ball, with her first husband, Desi Arnaz, starred in the 1951-1961 television show "I Love Lucy," one of the most popular television shows of all time. It is still seen around the world in syndicated reruns.

The Arnazes, who had two children, Lucie and Desi II, were divorced in 1960 and Miss Ball married nightclub comic Morton a year later. He later became her executive producer.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor Don Ameche, who won an Oscar for his role as an oldster given another shot at being a youngster in the movie "Cocoon," has turned 80 but isn't looking for anyone to draw attention to the fact.

"He has rejected any attention on his birthday," said publicist Nick Stevens in turning down an interview request.

Ameche finished "Cocoon II" in Florida on Saturday and returned to his Los Angeles-area home. How he spent his birthday, which was Tuesday, was not disclosed.

The 1985 film "Cocoon" was Ameche's 50th screen appearance. During his heydey as a 20th Century Fox leading man in the 1930s and '40s, Ameche was a utility star who was equally popular in musicals, comedies and dramas.

Previously, his greatest fame stemmed from the title role in "The Story of Alexander Graham Bell."

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y. (AP) — Patrick Alley, the reggae musician who claimed Mick Jagger stole his music, has filed notice he will appeal the verdict against him in his copyright lawsuit.

Brooke's day

Actress Brooke Shields prepares to cut a cake presented to her on the set of her new film, "The Great Diamond Robbery." The crew surprised her with the party Tuesday, her 23rd birthday.

Lawyer Jerome G. Lee Jr. said Tuesday he had filed a notice of appeal in U.S. District Court because he had found new evidence Jagger could have heard Alley's song. He would not elaborate.

Alley, 36, of the Bronx, claimed the chorus of Jagger's 1985 hit "Just Another Night" had been stolen from his 1979 song of the same title.

The jury found that Jagger could not have heard Alley's song, which was released both in New York and Britain and played on several small radio stations in New York in 1983.

Alley said he copyrighted his song in 1983 because drummer Sly Dunbar, who played with Jagger on the album, told him his song was "being ripped off," according to trial testimony. Alley said Dunbar also played on his version.

Alley claimed that Jagger had earned as much as $6 million from the song.

Jagger, whose song was copyrighted in 1985, testified he had never heard Alley's song.

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Gov. Rose Mofford hasn't fully recovered from a mild concussion and will stay home a while longer on her doctor's advice, aides said.

"She talked to (scheduling secretary) Mary Ann Kirklin and said she's feeling pretty good but decided to follow her doctor's advice and go on a limited calendar today," press secretary Vada Manager said Tuesday.

Mrs. Mofford, 65, suffered what doctors describe as a mild concussion May 22 in a fall from a platform.

She has since been working at home, and Manager said she will be "running government from the dinner table" as aides bring her reports and legislative bills.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn. (AP) — A deli owner testified he was promised part ownership of actor Paul Newman's food company in exchange for promoting the products.

Julius Gold claimed Tuesday that he was to receive a 1/12th interest in Newman's Salad King Inc. and any spinoff corporations for helping develop and sell Newman's Own salad dressing, spaghetti sauce, lemonade and popcorn.

Newman took copious notes on the opening day of testimony in the Westport deli owner's suit. The actor sat beside author, longtime friend and business partner A.E. Hotchner.

Gold testified about taste tests and bottling discussions. At a meeting in 1982, he said, the possibility of payment for his efforts was discussed.

The jury must decide whether Newman and the other defendants, Hotchner and food distributor David Kalman, owe Gold a share in the business.

Newman's attorneys deny Gold's claims.

NEW YORK (AP) — Chrysler Chairman and best-selling author Lee Iacocca is back with another autobiography, this time revealing that he once considered taking over General Motors but decided "it might be easier to buy Greece."

"Talking Straight" arrives in bookstores today. The initial printing is 750,000; booksellers can only hope it measures up to "Iacocca: An Autobiography," which has sold 2.6 million hardcover copies and 3.5 million paperbacks worldwide.

In the new book, Iacocca writes that last spring, automobile dealer Victor Potamkin and Allied-Signal chairman Ed Hennessy approached him separately to suggest an unsolicited takeover of the industry behemoth, General Motors Corp.

At first, Iacocca wrote, he dismissed the idea. But talks continued, and Iacocca even met secretly with investment banker Felix Rohatyn, consulted a takeover lawyer and investigated financing before dropping the proposal.

"I concluded that it might be easier to buy Greece," he said.

THURSDAY, JUNE 2, 1988

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Determination and lots of faith will get you almost everything you want. Those who desire to expand their family will find a way. You get an opportunity to make extra money in October. Your chances of winning a job or getting a loan will be best in September. Concentrate on reducing tensions in your personal relationships. A child's expectations for himself may be too high. Be supportive without adding extra pressure.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: composer Marvin Hamlisch, actor Stacy Keach, actress Sally Kellerman, "Tarzan" Johnny Weismuller.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Long-term business matters come to a head. Do not postpone a money decision one minute longer! A lack of honesty makes it very difficult to build a lasting relationship. Be candid.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Be flexible. Your future is in your hands. You may find it difficult to accept new technology, but you are smart enough to know that you must adapt. Go for it.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Do not give up on a relationship. A little adversity is good for the soul and can establish a stronger bond between two people in love. Let your hair down a little. Influences are favorable for travel.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You have many clever, innovative ideas. The key to financial success is applying them for practical purposes. You may have tunnel vision when it comes to a long-distance romance. Show common sense.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You sometimes are too fiery, but emotion may be just what is needed now to get things back on track. Know when to pull in your horns. Bank will be sympathetic to your needs.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Influential person offers financial support. Go slow; there could be hidden motives. Travel gives you a new perspective regarding romance. Keep in touch with loved ones. Let others know your itinerary.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A fine day for handling domestic affairs. You drum up new support for a difficult project. Influential person makes an unusual offer. Look into it carefully before making a final decision.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Tough business negotiations are favored. Romance takes a backseat to work. Complete important paperwork before mid-afternoon. A good time to experiment with new methods and procedures. Enlist your co-workers' support. Offer incentives.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Valuable contacts can be made at business meetings. Once you learn how to delegate authority, productivity will rise. Romance looks lively. Plan a special outing for the weekend. Shared experiences bring you closer.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A message or telephone call could change the direction of your career. Be true to your responsibilities. Postpone signing legal papers. Concentrate on family needs after office hours. Listen closely to offspring.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Keep your business obligations in mind when making investment decisions. A joint financial problem should soon be resolved. Certain promises made to you long ago will be fulfilled. Host a small party.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Problems with loved one can be resolved if you refuse to let pride stand in your way. Travel helps you clinch favorable agreements, boosting profits. Do not forget romance. Plan special outings.

Pass	2 ♡	Pass	4 ♡
Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Five of ◇

Follow the play on this hand from the recent Spring North American Championships in Buffalo. Then decide for yourself whether anyone committed an error or whether everything proceeded normally.

Once his suit was raised, South's hand was borderline for a jump to game. A trial bid in one of the pointed suits might have been a wiser approach, and the final contract would have hinged on whether South chose two spades or three diamonds as the game try.

Against four hearts, West led his fourth-best diamond. Declarer won in dummy and drew trumps in two rounds with the ace and queen, then led a club. West played low and East captured the jack with the king. He shifted to the queen of spades, ducked by declarer who won the spade continuation to lead a second club. West rose with the ace but, since he was out of spades, the contract could not be defeated. What's your verdict?

It's not easy to spot, but West could have beaten the hand. To do so, he had to fly in the face of the old adage: "Second hand low." On the first club lead, West must go up with the ace and shift to the king of spades. Declarer has no counter. No matter how he twists and turns, sooner or later East will gain the lead with either the king of clubs or a spade, and the defenders can collect a total of four tricks in the black suits for a one-trick set.

Lucy recovering from heart attack

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — The husband of comedian Lucille Ball says the 76-year-old entertainer is doing "super" in her recovery from a mild heart attack.

"She didn't have a stroke," Gary Morton said Tuesday, dismissing tabloid reports that she had suffered a severe stroke last month.

Miss Ball was up and around at the couple's Beverly Hills home and healthy, Morton said, adding upcoming projects for his wife were on hold because of the prolonged Writers Guild of America strike.

Morton drove Miss Ball to Cedars-Sinai Medical Center on May 11 after she became ill at home. She underwent a complete physical and was released a few days later.

"Right now she's recovered from a very slight heart attack. She's doing super, sensational," Morton said.

Miss Ball, with her first husband, Desi Arnaz, starred in the 1951-1961 television show "I Love Lucy," one of the most popular television shows of all time. It is still seen around the world in syndicated reruns.

The Arnazes, who had two children, Lucie and Desi II, were divorced in 1960 and Miss Ball married nightclub comic Morton a year later. He later became her executive producer.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor Don Ameche, who won an Oscar for his role as an oldster given another shot at being a youngster in the movie "Cocoon," has turned 80 but isn't looking for anyone to draw attention to the fact.

"He has rejected any attention on his birthday," said publicist Nick Stevens in turning down an interview request.

Ameche finished "Cocoon II" in Florida on Saturday and returned to his Los Angeles-area home. How he spent his birthday, which was Tuesday, was not disclosed.

The 1985 film "Cocoon" was Ameche's 50th screen appearance. During his heydey as a 20th Century Fox leading man in the 1930s and '40s, Ameche was a utility star who was equally popular in musicals, comedies and dramas.

Previously, his greatest fame stemmed from the title role in "The Story of Alexander Graham Bell."

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y. (AP) — Patrick Alley, the reggae musician who claimed Mick Jagger stole his music, has filed notice he will appeal the verdict against him in his copyright lawsuit.

Lawyer Jerome G. Lee Jr. said Tuesday he had filed a notice of appeal in U.S. District Court because he had found new evidence Jagger could have heard Alley's song. He would not elaborate.

Alley, 36, of the Bronx, claimed the chorus of Jagger's 1985 hit "Just Another Night" had been stolen from his 1979 song of the same title.

The jury found that Jagger could not have heard Alley's song, which was released both in New York and Britain and played on several small radio stations in New York in 1983.

Alley said he copyrighted his song in 1983 because drummer Sly Dunbar, who played with Jagger on the album, told him his song was "being ripped off," according to trial testimony. Alley said Dunbar also played on his version.

Alley claimed that Jagger had earned as much as $6 million from the song.

Jagger, whose song was copyrighted in 1985, testified he had never heard Alley's song.

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Gov. Rose Mofford hasn't fully recovered from a mild concussion and will stay home a while longer on her doctor's advice, aides said.

"She talked to (scheduling secretary) Mary Ann Kirklin and said she's feeling pretty good but decided to follow her doctor's advice and go on a limited calendar today," press secretary Vada Manager said Tuesday.

Mrs. Mofford, 65, suffered what doctors describe as a mild concussion May 22 in a fall from a platform.

She has since been working at home, and Manager said she will be "running government from the dinner table" as aides bring her reports and legislative bills.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn. (AP) — A deli owner testified he was promised part ownership of actor Paul Newman's food company in exchange for promoting the products.

Julius Gold claimed Tuesday that he was to receive a 1/12th interest in Newman's Salad King Inc. and any spinoff corporations for helping develop and sell Newman's Own salad dressing, spaghetti sauce, lemonade and popcorn.

Newman took copious notes on the opening day of testimony in the Westport deli owner's suit. The actor sat beside author, longtime friend and business partner A.E. Hotchner.

Gold testified about taste tests and bottling discussions. At a meeting in 1982, he said, the possibility of payment for his efforts was discussed.

The jury must decide whether Newman and the other defendants, Hotchner and food distributor David Kalman, owe Gold a share in the business.

Newman's attorneys deny Gold's claims.

NEW YORK (AP) — Chrysler Chairman and best-selling author Lee Iacocca is back with another autobiography, this time revealing that he once considered taking over General Motors but decided "it might be easier to buy Greece."

"Talking Straight" arrives in bookstores today. The initial printing is 750,000; booksellers can only hope it measures up to "Iacocca: An Autobiography," which has sold 2.6 million hardcover copies and 3.5 million paperbacks worldwide.

In the new book, Iacocca writes that last spring, automobile dealer Victor Potamkin and Allied-Signal chairman Ed Hennessy approached him separately to suggest an unsolicited takeover of the industry behemoth, General Motors Corp.

At first, Iacocca wrote, he dismissed the idea. But talks continued, and Iacocca even met secretly with investment banker Felix Rohatyn, consulted a takeover lawyer and investigated financing before dropping the proposal.

"I concluded that it might be easier to buy Greece," he said.

Shortcake: Strawberry classic

By MELANIE BARNARD
and BROOKE DOJNY
Copley News Service

We do love strawberries! Though they are available nearly year-round now, strawberries, for us at least, are still a signal that spring has truly arrived.

There is something very special about bringing home a box of berries fresh-picked from a local farm or garden. Somehow, though they may be smaller and imperfectly shaped, they are invariably sweeter and juicier than any expensive, giant, bright red berries shipped in from long distances.

The facts are that strawberries do ripen best on the plant, but commercial growers are often forced to pick them before their prime so that they will be better, more sturdy, "travelers."

Of course, eaten out of hand is the easiest and one of the nicest ways to enjoy these naturally beautiful berries. In addition, since strawberries have no pesky pits or tough skins, their simple nature makes them among the most accommodating of fruits to serve in myriad other ways.

Gentle handling is needed when cleaning and preparing strawberries. They tend to absorb water like a sponge, so never soak them. Instead, with the hulls still attached, quickly rinse them under cold running water and immediately pat dry between paper towels. Then hull, slice, crush or fix them the way your recipe directs.

CNS Graphic

AMERICA'S MOST famous strawberry dish is, of course, shortcake. Admittedly, this is no dessert for the faint-hearted, so we like to serve it as a finish to a very simple, very light supper.

As a child, Brooke remembers her mother serving up strawberry shortcake as the surprise main course whenever someone in the family needed a special boost. We also think that the biscuit, cream and fruit combination makes a terrific breakfast in itself.

Our recipe calls for a light, slightly tangy buttermilk biscuit, split and slathered with sweet butter, filled and topped with plenty of berries and crowned with a dollop of softly whipped cream. It's an old-fashioned classic that is updated to mix the shortcake in seconds in a food processor.

Strawberry-Rum Butter is a newer idea, and has nearly unlimited uses. Quickly prepared it is a slightly sweet and very pretty fruit butter. Spoon into a small tub garnished with a small whole berry and serve as a topping for waffles or pancakes, or as a spread for corn muffins.

OLD-FASHIONED STRAWBERRY SHORTCAKES

Strawberries:
1 quart fresh strawberries
6 to 7 tablespoons sugar
1 tablespoon orange juice or orange liqueur
¼ teaspoon vanilla

Shortcakes:
1½ cups flour
3 teaspoons sugar, divided
1¼ teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon baking soda
¼ teaspoon salt
3 tablespoons chilled butter, cut into 6 pieces
3 tablespoons chilled vegetable shortening, cut into 6 pieces
½ cup cold buttermilk, plus 2 teaspoons for brushing

Assembly:
¾ cup heavy cream, chilled
1 tablespoon softened butter

Quickly rinse strawberries and pat dry. Hull and set aside 4 or 5 of the nicest ones for garnish. In food processor, puree half of remaining berries with sugar, orange juice and vanilla. Slice remaining berries and stir into puree. Cover and let stand 20-25 minutes at room temperature or make up to 6 hours ahead and refrigerate. Bring back to room temperature before serving.

To prepare shortcakes preheat oven to 425 degrees. Place flour, 2 teaspoons sugar, baking powder, baking soda and salt in workbowl of food processor. Pulse 2 to 3 times to sift. Distribute butter and shortening evenly over flour and pulse about 10 times until mixture is crumbly and butter and shortening are in pieces the size of small peas. With motor running, pour the ½ cup buttermilk through feed tube and process only until dough masses together to form soft, but workable dough. With hands, gather dough into ball and place on floured work surface. (See note at end of recipe for hand mixing.)

Roll or pat dough to slightly less than ¾ inch thickness. Cut 4 or 5 shortcakes with 2½-inch biscuit cutter and place 2 inches apart on ungreased baking sheets. (Extra scraps of dough may be re-rolled and baked as biscuits.)

Brush tops of shortcakes with remaining 2 teaspoons buttermilk and sprinkle with remaining 1 teaspoon sugar.

Bake in center of oven for about 18 minutes until well risen and golden brown. Remove to rack to cool slightly. (Can be made early in day and reheated for a few minutes at 350 degrees.)

While shortcakes are baking, whip cream to soft peaks.

To assemble shortcakes, split and spread cut sides with softened butter. Spoon some of berry filling onto the bottom halves of shortcakes. Then replace tops. Spoon more berries around and over shortcake and top with dollop of whipped cream. Set reserved whole berries in whipped cream.

Note: To mix by hand, stir together dry ingredients. Cut or rub in butter and shortening. Add buttermilk and mix only until dough comes together. Turn out onto a floured surface and proceed with step No. 4.

STRAWBERRY-RUM BUTTER
1 cup fresh strawberries
8 tablespoons unsalted butter
¼ cup powdered sugar
1 tablespoon dark rum

Quickly rinse strawberries under cold water and pat thoroughly dry. Hull berries but leave whole.

In food processor, blend together butter, sugar and rum. Add berries and pulse 4 or 5 times until berries are coarsely chopped.

Let strawberry butter stand about 15 minutes before using to allow flavors to develop, or make a day ahead and refrigerate. Remove from refrigerator at least 15 minutes before using.

Cobbler recipe made with fresh or frozen fruits

By NANCY BYAL
Associated Press

This cobbler has the baked in flavor of fresh summer fruits.

PEACH-BLUEBERRY COBBLER
⅓ cup sugar
1 tablespoon cornstarch
¾ cup orange juice
1½ cups fresh or frozen peach slices
1 cup fresh or frozen blueberries
½ cup all-purpose flour
½ cup whole wheat flour
1½ teaspoons baking powder
⅓ cup milk
3 tablespoons cooking oil
1 teaspoon sugar

In a small saucepan stir together ⅓ cup sugar and the cornstarch; add orange juice. Cook and stir until bubbly. Add peaches and blueberries; cook until fruit is hot. Keep warm.

Stir together flours and baking powder. Add milk and oil; stir until mixture forms a ball.

On floured surface pat into an 8-inch circle. Cut into 8 wedges. Spoon hot berry mixture into a 9-inch pie plate; immediately top with pastry wedges. Sprinkle with 1 teaspoon sugar.

Bake in 425-degree oven 30 minutes or until pastry is brown. Serve warm.

Dessert chocolate

Associated Press

CHOCOLADAMIAS
⅓ cup margarine or butter
4 ounces white baking bar or pieces with cocoa butter
2 eggs
1 cup sugar
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 cup all-purpose flour
¼ teaspoon salt
½ cup chopped macadamia nuts
½ cup milk chocolate pieces

Grease 9x9x2-inch baking pan; line bottom and sides with wax paper. Grease wax paper. In small saucepan cook and stir margarine and baking bar or pieces over low heat until melted. (Mixture may separate.) Set aside.

In small mixer bowl beat eggs. Gradually add sugar, beating until light. Add margarine mixture and vanilla. Add flour and salt; mix well. Stir in nuts and chocolate pieces. Turn into prepared pan. Bake at 325 degrees for 35 minutes or until top is golden. Cool in pan on wire rack. Loosen edges and invert. Remove wax paper; invert again. Cut into bars.

Dessert combines strawberries, chocolate

Associated Press

You can't miss with this dessert. It combines two top-rated foods — strawberries and chocolate.

CHOCOLATE STRAWBERRY SHORTCAKE
6 cups fresh strawberries
¼ cup sugar
1⅔ cups all-purpose flour
⅓ cup unsweetened cocoa powder
¼ cup sugar
1 tablespoon baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt
½ cup margarine or butter
1 beaten egg
⅔ cup milk
1 cup whipping cream
2 tablespoons sugar

Slice berries; combine with ¼ cup sugar and set aside.

For shortcake, in a mixing bowl combine flour, cocoa powder, ¾ cup sugar, baking powder and salt. Cut in margarine until mixture resembles coarse crumbs. Combine egg and milk; add all at once to dry ingredients and stir just to moisten. Spread dough in greased 8x1½-inch round baking pan, building up edge slightly. Bake in a 450 degree oven for 15 to 18 minutes or until done.

Cool 10 minutes on wire rack. Remove from pan; place on serving plate. Beat whipping cream and 2 tablespoons sugar with electric mixer on medium speed until soft peaks form. Arrange some sliced berries on top of cake. Spoon whipped cream over top. Serve

'Light' picnic celebrates summer fare

By JUDY SHEPARD
Hearst News Service

It's time to put the wicker furniture on the porch, go to the farmers' market and think — or rethink — the picnic.

Instead of the classic cold fried chicken or baked ham, potato salad, and deviled eggs, here's a quick early menu in celebration of the first local produce.

This is dedicated to lighter fare, so while chicken makes an appearance, it's neither breaded nor fried. The chicken, skin removed, is marinated in a raspberry-herb vinaigrette, microwaved, then brushed with some of the marinade while it's being grilled.

If you wanted a meatless menu, substitute a salad that mixes vegetables and grains such as bulgur, brown rice or pasta.

This variation on potato salad is from a bistro in Lenox, Mass. The Dijon vinaigrette could be used on other vegetables in a variety of salads: Crunchy-tender parboiled cauliflower and broccoli florets with slivers of sweet red pepper and other combinations. The vegetables could be raw or cooked just enough to be slightly tender.

CHURCH STREET CAFE POTATO SALAD

1 pound sliced red potatoes
2 tablespoons Dijon mustard
¼ cup red wine vinegar
1 cup olive oil
1 tablespoon chopped fresh dill or 1 teaspoon dried dill
1 teaspoon freshly ground pepper
3 tablespoons finely chopped parsley
2 tablespoons finely chopped scallions

Boil potatoes until tender. Drain and cool. Whisk vinegar and mustard. Slowly whisk in oil and add remaining ingredients to make vinaigrette. Toss with potatoes.

RASPBERRY-MARINATED GRILLED CHICKEN

4 boned, skinned chicken breasts
MARINADE:
1½ cups raspberry vinegar
1 cup olive oil
1 teaspoon honey
¼ teaspoon chopped fresh rosemary
½ teaspoon chopped fresh thyme
½ teaspoon chopped fresh chives
¼ teaspoon Dijon mustard
Salt and freshly ground pepper, to taste

The night before, mix together marinade items in bowl; taste should be on tart side. Put chicken breasts in shallow dish; pour marinade over. Cover and marinate overnight in refrigerator. The next day, fire up grill to medium heat. Remove chicken from marinade. Meanwhile, put chicken in another pan and pre-cook until half-done, either in microwave or conventional oven (in conventional oven, this may take 15 minutes or more), adding couple of tablespoons of marinade to pan.

Finally, grill chicken over moderate heat, brushing on some marinade as it cooks. (This won't take long — marinade may make the coals flare up. That's why it pays to precook inside, avoiding chicken that's charred outside and raw inside). When chicken is crisp on the outside and juices no longer run red, it's done. This dish is excellent hot or cold.

The next recipe is an unusual sweet salad with the flavor of spring from Burpee's "American Harvest," a series of seasonal cookbooks for the home gardener. Cookbook author Perla Meyers wrote the books, two of which have been published — "The Spring Garden," from which this recipe comes, and "The Summer Garden." In this recipe, I substituted rice wine vinegar for the white wine vinegar, with happy results.

SUGAR SNAP PEA AND CARROT SALAD

1½ pounds Sugar Snap peas, strings removed
4 medium carrots, peeled and cut into matchsticks (¼x¼x1½-inches)
¾ cup minced scallions
4 tablespoons minced fresh dill
4 tablespoons minced fresh parsley
5 tablespoons white wine vinegar
9 tablespoons olive oil
1½ ounces walnut pieces
Freshly ground black pepper
½ cup thinly sliced radishes

Bring water to boil in vegetable steamer, add snap peas; cover and steam for 3 to 5 minutes or until crisp-tender. Remove and run under cold water to stop further cooking. Drain on paper towels. Place in salad bowl and set aside. Add carrots to steamer, cover and steam for 2 minutes. Add to salad bowl with the peas; cover and chill.

Combine scallions, dill, parsley, vinegar, olive oil and walnuts in food processor or blender and puree until smooth. Season with pepper to taste and pour dressing over peas and carrots. Cover and chill for at least 2 hours.

Just before serving, toss salad with radishes and correct seasoning. Serve slightly chilled.

For dessert, here's a simple recipe from Jane Brody's "Good Food Book." Ripe strawberries don't need much dressing up.

STRAWBERRIES 'N' PUREE

2 pints strawberries, washed, dried, hulled and halved, divided
⅓ cup fresh lemon juice
⅓ cup sugar

Place 1 cup of strawberries into blender or food processor. Add lemon juice and sugar. Puree mixture.

Place remaining berries in an attractive bowl. Pour puree over them, and toss berries to coat with puree. Chill strawberries, covered, for one hour or longer.

Angry Lakers control Mavericks

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — The Lakers-Mavericks playoff series turned rough, and Los Angeles coach Pat Riley predicts more of the same.

The Lakers, trying to become the first team to win consecutive NBA titles since 1969, regained control of the Western Conference finals Tuesday with a 119-102 victory that gave them a 3-2 edge over the Mavericks.

The best-of-seven series shifts back to Dallas for Game 6 Thursday night and a seventh game, if necessary, will be in Inglewood on Saturday afternoon.

The series winner will play in the NBA title series against the winner of the Detroit-Boston Eastern Conference matchup.

Midway through the first quarter of the Lakers' one-sided victory in the fifth game, Dallas forward Sam Perkins clotheslined Byron Scott as the LA guard drove to the basket.

That was the roughest play of the game, although there were other incidents.

"We're going to see a lot more of that kind of thing from here on out because teams want to win so badly," Riley said of Perkins' foul.

Scott, momentarily stunned, got up and tried to go after Perkins, but the Laker guard was restrained by teammates.

"If he's going up for a layup and I'm around, it'll be the same thing," Scott said after the game, in which the Lakers took control early and cruised to the victory.

"I didn't like it and I let him know it. There's no place for a play like that in basketball."

Perkins said of the play: "I would apologize to Byron; I didn't mean any harm."

NBA

Earlier in the first quarter, forwards A.C. Green of Los Angeles and Mark Aguirre of Dallas engaged in a brief shoving match that resulted in a double technical foul call against each.

Then, with 31 seconds left in the first half, Michael Cooper of the Lakers virtually tackled Derek Harper as the Mavericks' guard drove for the basket.

Laker guard Magic Johnson said Perkins' foul on Scott fired the Lakers up.

"I think that was an emotional lift for us," said Johnson, who had 20 assists and 15 points in the win.

"We said, 'OK, this is how it's going to be. OK, let's go.' It was like getting a shot of energy, taking a vitamin; we took off from there, played crazier, played harder."

Perkins was whistled for the foul and Scott sank two free throws to put the Lakers ahead 17-10 during a 20-4 scoring streak that put them up 24-14 with four minutes left in the opening quarter.

They never looked back, building a 64-47 halftime lead and a 92-71 pad after three periods.

James Worthy had 28 points, 18 in the first half, and Kareem Abdul-Jabbar added 21 for the Lakers, who shot a scorching 60 percent from the field.

The Mavericks, who beat the Lakers twice in Dallas with accurate outside shooting, were off in Game 5.

Celtics hope to work wonders on parquet

BOSTON (AP) — Kevin McHale doesn't think Boston's recent play gives any indication of how it will play tonight against Detroit. For the Celtics' sake, he better be right.

Three of their last four NBA playoff victories weren't assured until the last play. The other was nailed down in the final 10 seconds.

The Celtics edged Atlanta by two points in both the sixth and seventh games of the Eastern Conference semifinals. Then they beat the Pistons by four points in double overtime and by one point in the first playoff game in 32 years in which the winner had fewer than 80 points.

"Most people say we eked them out," Boston guard Dennis Johnson said. "We earned the victories. Ours just happened to come by less points than theirs, but we still earned them."

Monday's 79-78 victory in Pontiac, Mich., tied the best-of-seven conference final at 2-2 and returned the homecourt advantage to the Celtics.

The fifth game is scheduled for tonight on the parquet floor at Boston Garden. Game 6 will be Friday night at the Pontiac Silverdome. The Celtics would be home again Sunday if a seventh game is needed.

"Every game is a game unto itself," McHale said Tuesday. "I don't think you can look back on the last game and say that has any bearing on the next game."

McHale, who led the NBA in field goal percentage, made five of 12 shots Monday while the Celtics, who also led the league in that category, hit only 40 percent of their shots. The Pistons were even worse. They made 33.3 percent of their field goal attempts and missed 20 straight in the first half.

Detroit scored just 10 points in the first and fourth quarters.

"It's been a long time since I played in a game where (a team) only scored 20 points in two quarters," McHale said. "But my philosophy, as always: Better them than us."

Despite careless ballhandling and poor shooting throughout the series, Boston has managed to play well enough down the stretch to win.

"We have a knack for maybe scraping out some wins," McHale said. "We've won a few games that maybe we shouldn't win."

He wouldn't mind a little more breathing room.

"We don't have many blowouts," he added. "I wish we had more blowouts."

"We're pretty happy with being 2-2 right now," Boston forward Larry Bird said, "because we don't feel we've played a good game yet."

West Texans expect to be drafted high

NEW YORK (AP) — Pitcher Andy Benes of the University of Evansville is surprised that the San Diego Padres might take him as the top pick in baseball's amateur draft.

"If you would have said that a year ago or even months ago, I never would have believed it," Benes said.

But that's probably what will happen today in baseball's annual selection of high school and college players begins.

West Texas standouts Willie Ansley of Plainview and Jason Satre of Abilene Cooper are expected to go in the first three rounds today.

Jack McKeon, vice president for baseball operations and manager of the Padres, said Tuesday that San Diego would choose either Benes or Gregg Olson, a right-handed relief pitcher from Auburn University.

"We've probably gone more for college players," McKeon said. "We're trying to build and get guys to the big leagues quicker. The guy that has the college experience has a better chance to get here quicker."

Though McKeon said that the choice had not been made, Padres officials have told people in recent days that Benes probably would be their choice.

Benes, a 6-foot-5 right-hander, was 16-3 with a 1.42 earned-run average for Evansville with 187 strikeouts and 36 walks in 146 innings.

San Diego will be drafting first for the fourth time and hopes to do better with this pick than it did with its previous three — Mike Ivie (1970), Dave Roberts (1972) and Bill Almon (1974).

The Cleveland Indians, who pick second, were expected to take Mark Lewis, a shortstop from Hamilton, Ohio, High School. Lewis batted .598 this season with 13 homers and 63 RBI in 27 games.

Lewis, the top high-school prospect, said he prefers professional ball rather than going to college.

"That would be a great way to live, to go out and hit a little white ball for $500,000," Lewis said.

Atlanta, picking third, probably will go for Olson, who was 7-3 with 10 saves and 113 strikeouts in 72 innings for Auburn.

Baltimore, which drafts fourth, mostly likely will choose Steve Avery, a left-handed pitcher from Kennedy High School in Taylor, Mich.

Los Angeles, picking fifth, is expected to pick third baseman Robin Ventura, the Oklahoma State player who last season set an NCAA record with a 58-game hitting streak.

The next five players to go, according to Baseball America magazine, which surveyed major-league scouting directors, should be shortstop Monty Fariss of Oklahoma State, first baseman Tino Martinez of the University of Tampa, right-handed pitcher Bill Bene of Los Angeles State, right-hander Reid Cornelius of Thomasville, Ala., High School and catcher Brian Johnson of the University of Texas.

Continuing a recent trend, more of the top players drafted will come from college rather than high school.

Missions nip Angels

From Staff Reports

SAN ANTONIO — The San Antonio Missions parlayed three singles and an error into the only two runs they needed in a 5-1 win over the Midland Angels at V.J. Keefe Field here Tuesday. The teams opened a six-game series with Tuesday's game.

With two out in the third inning, Wayne Kirby, Mike Huff and Kesselmark all singled off Midland starter Steve McGuire. Kirby scored on Keseelmark's single, then Huff came all the way around when Angel center fielder C.L. Penigar misplayed the ball.

The Missions added three insurance runs in the seventh, before Midland scratched across its only run in the ninth off San Antonio standout Ramon Martinez. Jim McCollom doubled and came home on Tom Alfredson's single.

Dan Grunhard then drove out Martinez with a single, but reliever Mike Munoz collected his seventh save by inducing Jeff Manto to pop out.

The Angels will face another tough hurler tonight in Texas League strikeout leader John Wetteland, 6-3. Tim Burcham, 1-2, will take the mound for Midland.

In other Texas League action Tuesday night, Jackson defeated Tulsa, 4-1, and Arkansas beat Shreveport, 6-2. El Paso's scheduled game at Wichita was postponed because of rain and will be made up as part of a doubleheader tonight.

ANGEL NOTES: Starting pitcher Mike Fetters is expected to come off the disabled list later this week after recuperating from a viral infection, but it was unknown at press time what roster move would be made.

Lendl nips McEnroe after rain

PARIS (AP) — Ivan Lendl, matching cool precision against John McEnroe's display of fiery brilliance, won their rain-delayed fourth round match at the French Open 6-7, 7-6, 6-4, 6-4 on Wednesday.

Lendl, the defending champion and top seed, earned a berth in the quarterfinals, where he will meet Jonas B. Svensson of Sweden.

The 16th-seeded McEnroe served vigorously and rushed the net at every chance, but Lendl moved him back with pinpoint lobs, or whipped passing shots around the charging American, landing them within inches of the lines.

"I thought I played well," McEnroe said. "That's how I have to play against him if I'm going to have a chance to beat him, especially on a surface like this."

Lendl said McEnroe, who is trying a comeback, had returned to the top of his game, especially at the beginning of the match, but seemed to tire before the match was suspended for darkness Tuesday night.

"I don't think he can play much better than he did in the first two sets," Lendl said. "If we played four or five sets in a row, could he last? I don't know that."

In the crucial seventh game of the fourth set, with the scored tied at 3-3 and McEnore serving, Lendl won with two perfect lobs and a scorching passing return of serve on break point.

Both players held serve for the remainder of the match, with Lendl losing just one point when serving in the final set, and none when serving the final game.

"I was very lucky, I hit three good shots," Lendl said. "I was fortunate to play well at that stage."

McEnroe said he thought Lendl hit least a dozen shots directly on the white lines in the final set.

"I've never seen a guy hit so many lines," McEnroe said. "It's better to be lucky and good."

McEnroe also criticized the officiating, saying the last two points in the second-set tiebreaker were taken from him by bad line calls. In the second case, he said chair umpire Richard Kaufmann should have come down to inspect the ball mark himself.

UCLA favored in NCAA's

Track

EUGENE, Ore. (AP) — Four years ago, when Bob Larsen became men's track and field coach at UCLA, he made a decision that has paid spectacular dividends for the Bruins.

He decided to build his program around sprinters.

"We went in a sprint direction, because we saw the potential of scoring high in the NCAAs," Larsen said.

Larsen's plan paid off earlier than expected.

In last year's NCAA Championships at Baton Rouge, La., the Bruins, triggered by their sprinters, overwhelmed the field, winning their seventh title — and first since 1978 — with 81 points, equal to the total of the next three teams (Texas, 28; Texas Christian, 27, and Arkansas, 26).

Where are the answers from 4-5A's spring training?

Williamson

The spring training grind is over for all seven District 4-5A schools, leaving the fans with the real headache.

One wonders if you can really make any pure predictions on what happens during spring training. Probably not. This corner has trouble picking winners even after the teams have started playing.

When Spike Dykes was coaching at Midland Lee, he used to say, "You can't get too high or too low over spring training. You never really know how good or bad you are until you meet up with some strangers."

Well, 1987's 4-5A teams are not allowed to face any "strangers" during spring training. The bump and grind is against school mates. Some of those battles can be intense when starting berths are involved, but it's not like playing the "other guys."

My unofficial scouting bureau has turned in its spring training report and it says that Odessa Permian should win it all next fall. However, second place is up for grabs.

Coach Gary Gaines' Panthers return enough veterans to make even Alexander The Great misty-eyed. District 4-5A's single season rushing leader Shawn Crow is gone, but James Miles is back. That in itself makes Permian a premium selection.

However, word has it that old Mojo's running game wasn't the darling of the spring training circuit. It was the passing game that looked in mid-season form with junior Lloyd Hill catching every thing in sight, but a cold. This could be bad news for the rest of the league because you know the Panther running game will be tough before all is said and done. But if they can throw too, watch out.

Midland Lee, who has reigned at the top of the loop for the past two seasons, has "miles and miles to go offensively," according to head coach Earl Miller. But any team would have "miles and miles to go" if you compare this year's crop with last year's state leading offensive machine.

Lee returns only two starters from last year in tight end Quincy White and linebacker Michael Pearson. They also have kicker Arthur Donnelly back. There are holes to fill. Running back David Whiteside was a big plus in the spring game, but the quarterback slot hasn't come through with a star as of yet.

Lee is also worried about depth and showed it by playing some athletes both ways during the spring, a practice that Lee hasn't done much of since 1983. Is that a sign of trouble or is it a practice that will send Lee back to the playoffs? Regardless, there are more questions here than answers after spring training.

Eyes seem to be bright across town at Midland High after spring training. Coach Doug McCutchen has never had this much experience returning and it looks like Dwane Roberts is headed for a 1,000-yard season. There are 18 returning letterman at MHS and 12 of them started in at least one game last year, the first winning season in 10 years at Midland High.

But all wasn't complete for the Bulldogs. The baseball playoffs robbed MHS of a lot of its skill people during the spring. And no matter how hard you hunt, it will be hard for the Bulldogs to find three linebackers like the departed Clyde Govan, Scott Mowles and Clif Coleman. And there is no equal in sight for lost defensive tackle Toby Box.

Still, MHS has the tools to be a potent offensive weapon on the field of battle this fall. The passing game wasn't there in the spring, but that was due in large part to the baseball absence of Russell Page and Jason Stone for most of the spring. MHS will be able to throw the ball before all is said and done. MHS also looks especially strong in the defensive secondary with the head hunting of Kevin Rychel.

Jack Tayrien, a former Lee coach who is now one of Dykes' assistants at Texas Tech, says that Abilene High is close to being a major contender.

"Abilene High has good numbers and a lot of talent back, but they still seem to be searching for a quarterback," said Tayrien. "They might be as good as anybody if they come up with a quarterback."

The Eagles do have Trey Forkerway back and both Lee and Midland High have the marks of his scars from the past two seasons. Abilene High is the only team in the district to own wins over both Lee and MHS in the past two years.

Of course, Abilene's quarterback is at the other school in the Key City. Scotty Pugh returns to Cooper coach Larry Peel. Pugh will probably be the All-District quarterback this season, but his receivers are gone and Cooper has a long way to go defensively to repair what was one of the most porous acts around.

Coach Jerry Taylor's Odessa High Bronchos will be better, but better isn't always good enough in this league. The Bronchos didn't win a district game last year. They will be better offensively with more speed, but are woefully lacking in size and the defensive line still seems to have Taylor worried.

San Angelo has running back David Brainard returning, but the Bobcats lost a lot to graduation. San Angelo could be better, but how much better? There are as many questions to be asked here as there are answers.

In fact, that seems to be the overview of the 4-5A league — which means, of course, that we are in for another eye-clawing season.

Braves turn on the power

Associated Press

Responding to a chewing-out by Manager Russ Nixon following Monday's 14-2 loss to Pittsburgh, the Atlanta Braves rapped out 17 hits and walloped the Pirates 11-1 Tuesday night.

"These guys are capable of hitting," said Nixon, who replaced the fired Chuck Tanner 10 days ago. "There's no reason why they can't come out of it. One guy gets it started and the rest of them fall in there."

Other unexpected power came from Ozzie Smith, whose first homer since the 1985 National League playoffs led St. Louis over Houston 9-7; rookie Kevin Elster, whose 11th-inning homer gave New York a 5-4 triumph over Los Angeles, and Robby Thompson, whose first homer of the season helped San Francisco defeat Montreal 9-2.

There was no word on whether the Braves' unaccustomed offense was responsible for a power failure in the eighth inning that knocked out half the stadium lights for 15 minutes. But Ken Oberkfell said Nixon's eruption helped the Braves come out of their hitting doldrums.

"Everybody did a lot of soul searching," said Oberkfell, who had four hits. "He's not going to let us play like we did (Monday) and get away with it. No one wanted to come in and get yelled at, but we needed that."

Gerald Perry drove in three runs, Dion James and Bruce Benedict added two-run singles, rookie Ron Gant hit his third home run of the season and Dale Murphy had three hits. Meanwhile, rookie Tom Glavine held Pittsburgh to four hits in eight innings and Atlanta tagged loser Mike Dunne for six runs and seven hits in 1 1-3 innings.

Mets 5, Dodgers 4

With two out in the 11th, Elster got exactly what he expected — a fastball from Alejandro Pena. He promptly hit it into the left-field bullpen, enabling the Mets to beat the Dodgers for the fifth time in as many meetings.

"As I walked up to the plate I was looking for a fastball on his very first pitch," said Elster, who entered the game as a defensive replacement in the eighth inning. "I told myself to swing for a home run and you saw what happened — I got it."

Los Angeles' Kirk Gibson tied the score 2-2 with a leadoff homer off Dwight Gooden in the ninth inning and the Dodgers took a 4-2 lead in the 10th. The Mets took Gooden off the hook by tying it against Jay Howell in their half of the 10th on RBI singles by Wally Backman and Keith Hernandez. Backman also had a two-run single off Don Sutton in the fifth.

Gooden gave up the four Los Angeles runs and seven hits in 9 1-3 innings. It marked the first time he pitched into extra innings in regular-season play.

National

Cardinals 9, Astros 7

Smith's last home run was his dramatic, three-run ninth-inning shot off the Dodgers' Tom Niedenfuer in Game 5 of the 1985 playoffs. This time, he hit a three-run shot off Bob Knepper to cap a five-run fourth inning after St. Louis had taken a 3-2 lead on a two-out throwing error by third baseman Chuck Jackson that allowed two runs to score.

The Cardinals' first six runs were unearned, the result of three errors, as they ended the previously unbeaten Knepper's career-high six-game winning streak.

Tom Pagnozzi had a pair of RBI singles for St. Louis and Tom Brunansky drove in two runs with a single and his seventh homer. For Houston, Alex Trevino had a two-run double and Billy Hatcher hit a two-run homer, both off winner Larry McWilliams.

Cubs 4, Reds 0

Jeff Pico pitched a four-hit shutout in his major-league debut and Andre Dawson homered. Pico, a 22-year-old right-hander brought up from Iowa — where he had a 5-2 record and 2.24 ERA — to help Cubs' injury-riddled pitching staff, didn't walk a batter and struck out six.

Dawson hit his 11th homer in the first inning off Mario Soto. Rookie Mark Grace opened the second with a double and scored on a single by Vance Law. Law scored on a double by Shawon Dunston. The Cubs added an insurance run in the seventh on singles by Grace, Law and Dunston.

The loss was the fourth straight and sixth in the last seven games for the Reds, who get back Manager Pete Rose — who completed his 30-day suspension for bumping umpire Dave Pallone on April 30 — tonight.

Giants 9, Expos 2

Thomspon's three-run homer capped a four-run sixth inning and Rick Reuschel scattered eight hits over seven innings for his seventh victory as San Francisco ended a four-game losing streak.

Padres 8, Phillies 0

Andy Hawkins pitched a four-hitter and Marvell Wynne had four hits, three of which started scoring innings, as San Diego snapped Philadelphia's four-game winning streak. Hawkins struck out two and walked two in pitching his second shutout of the season. Loser David Palmer gave up five runs and seven hits in five innings.

Rose returns to the dugout for Reds

CHICAGO (AP) — Pete Rose isn't sure how tight a rein the National League will be keeping him on once he resumes managing the Cincinnati Reds, but he doesn't intend to stay tied up in the dugout.

Rose spent Tuesday sitting out the final day of his 30-day suspension and $10,000 fine for bumping and shoving umpire Dave Pallone in an April 30 game against the New York Mets and he was to be in the dugout during a game today for the first time since then.

"I don't know how I'll react if the ump hits me in the face again," Rose said of his confrontation with Pallone. "It's hard to control your reactions and emotions. But if the ump makes a bad call again, I'm going to go out there."

Rose insists Pallone hit him in the face while pointing his finger. As for the bumping and shoving, Rose said, "There would have been more contact if we had been dancing."

Rose said his penalty would have been tougher to take if he hadn't been allowed to be at the ballpark before, during and after the games. He was not allowed to be in the dugout or the clubhouse during games.

"I've seen every pitch. I've made out every lineup," Rose said Tuesday. "It would have been worse if I hadn't been allowed to come out to the ballpark. Then I'd be anxious to get back. But I've been able to sit back and evaluate the ball club."

Rose said there's a different perspective to the game when one views it from the stands and the press boxes, as he has been doing the past month.

Allen picks up slack for injury-prone Yanks

Associated Press

A chance to relieve may have given Neil Allen a new start with the New York Yankees.

Allen, forced into the game because of an injury, held Oakland to three hits for nine innings Tuesday night as the Yankees won 5-0. New York ended the Athletics' six-game winning streak in a meeting of American League division leaders.

Al Leiter started for New York, but Carney Lansford led off with a liner back to the mound. The ball glanced off Leiter's left forearm for an infield hit and put him out of the game.

"They told me I was going to be the long relief man. They didn't tell me I'd have to start the game, too," Allen said.

Allen, a starter-turned-reliever, went the other direction and retired the next 19 batters. He finished and was credited with a shutout because of baseball rule 10.19 (f), which makes a provision for relievers who enter before any outs are recorded.

In the most famous example of the rule's application, reliever Ernie Shore of the Boston Red Sox was credited with a perfect game on June 23, 1917, against Washington. Starter Babe Ruth walked the leadoff hitter and was ejected; Shore came in, the runner was caught stealing and he got the last 26 batters.

Allen, 2-0, had pitched 2 2-3 innings two days earlier in his fourth relief outing of the season. He began the year on the disabled list because of a rib cage injury.

The Yankees, whose 33-16 record is second-best in the league to Oakland's 35-15, have been hurt by injuries to their pitchers all season. Rick Rhoden and John Candelaria have missed time and Ron Guidry, who started the season on the disabled list, was put back there Tuesday.

Allen, though, provided excellent relief for one day.

"I knew that Allen, with his breaking ball, could do a good job against this club. I told Charles Hudson to go get his shoes on, because if Allen ran out of gas, I would have used him in relief and started Tommy John instead of Hudson on Wednesday," Yankees manager Billy Martin said.

Allen walked none and struck out five in his first shutout since July 20, 1986, while with the Chicago White Sox against the Yankees.

"I'm not surprised by what he did tonight. He won seven games for me at Chicago," said Oakland manager Tony La Russa, a former White Sox manager.

Dave Winfield, leading the majors with 48 RBI, hit a two-run double in the sixth off Steve Ontiveros, 3-2, and a run-scoring single in the eighth against Todd Burns. Mike Pagliarulo hit a solo homer, his eighth.

Lansford, the top batter in the majors, extended his hitting streak to 17 games with his single off Leiter. X-rays on Leiter were negative and he is not expected to miss his next start.

Blue Jays 9, Brewers 0

Dave Stieb pitched a one-hitter and completed the most brilliant month of his career as Toronto beat visiting Milwaukee.

Stieb allowed only runner — a fourth-inning single by B.J. Surhoff. He struck out five.

Stieb won his sixth straight decision. He was 6-0 with a 2.34 ERA in May.

The one-hitter was the first for Stieb and the fifth in the Blue Jays' history. No Toronto pitcher has ever thrown a no-hitter.

Stieb pitched his first shutout since last July 10 and his second complete game of the season. He beat the Brewers for the second time in 10 days after going 0-4 against them last season.

American

Tony Fernandez hit a two-run double during a six-run second inning off Chris Bosio, 6-6.

Royals 6, Indians 3

Willie Wilson drove in three runs with three hits and scored the tie-breaking run in the 10th inning on Bill Buckner's sacrifice fly as Kansas City won in Cleveland.

Scotti Madison and Jamie Quirk followed Buckner with RBI singles.

Mark Gubicza, 6-5, gave up three runs in nine innings. Steve Farr got the final two outs for his third save. Dan Schatzeder, 0-2, took the loss.

Kurt Stillwell and Wilson opened the game with doubles. Wilson hit a two-run single in the seventh for a 3-3 tie.

Twins 8, Rangers 6

Dan Gladden went 4-for-5 with three doubles and scored the tie-breaking run on Steve Lombardozzi's single in the sixth inning as Minnesota defeated Texas at the Metrodome.

Greg Gagne hit a two-run homer in the sixth off Jose Cecena that made it 6-6. Gladden followed with a single against Dale Mohorcic, 2-2, stole second and Lombardozzi singled.

The Rangers were leading 6-1 in the fourth when pitcher Paul Kilgus was ejected for arguing a balk. Minnesota went on to score three times in the inning.

Juan Berenguer, 5-3, got the victory and Jeff Reardon earned his 13th save, seven in the last nine games.

White Sox 10, Tigers 1

Gary Redus hit a grand slam, Ron Karkovice had a three-run homer and Ivan Calderon connected for a two-run shot that led Chicago at Tiger Stadium.

Jerry Reuss, 3-2, shut out Detroit on six hits for seven innings. Pat Sheridan homered off Bill Long in the ninth.

Frank Tanana, 8-3, was shelled for seven runs in 1 2-3 innings. Calderon homered in the first and Redus' first career slam came in a five-run second.

Red Sox 4, Angels 3

Mike Smithson shut out California for seven innings and Boston held on to win in Anaheim.

Smithson, 1-1, gave up five hits and walked none. It was his first victory since last June 23 for Minnesota.

The Angels scored three times in the eighth against Lee Smith. Jack Howell's sacrifice fly made it 4-3, but George Hendrick popped up to end the inning with the tying run on third.

Willie Fraser, 4-4, took the loss. Marty Barrett and Todd Benzinger hit RBI doubles.

Orioles 12, Mariners 5

Cal Ripken, Fred Lynn and Rene Gonzales homered in the seventh inning and Baltimore got a season-high 16 hits in routing Seattle.

Larry Sheets, who hit three doubles, and Joe Orsulak each went 4-for-5. The Orioles entered the game with a .214 average, the lowest in the majors.

Baltimore, which had scored only eight runs in its last six games, is now 11-39. All 11 victories are against West Division teams.

Dave Schmidt, 2-2, went 3 1-3 innings for the victory. Edwin Nunez, 1-2, lost his first start of the season.

Ken Phelps hit his 11th home run for the Mariners.

Reagan, Gorbachev pass treaty

MOSCOW (AP) — President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev, at an impasse this week on strategic arms negotiations, celebrated a past summit success today by exchanging final ratification documents on last December's pact on intermediate-range weapons.

Reagan called the accord a "first step toward a brighter future, a safer world," while Gorbachev declared "the era of nuclear disarmament has begun."

The Soviet leader said he and Reagan had agreed at their fourth summit meeting that "the immediate task before us" was to complete the START treaty to sharply reduce strategic nuclear weapons. "It can and must be accomplished," he said.

Future American and Soviet leaders cannot reverse course, the 57-year-old Gorbachev said. "I don't think anyone can close that book and put it aside."

Reagan agreed. "We must not stop here," he said. "There is much more to be done."

He said a joint statement to be issued later in the day would reflect "more progress has been made toward a strategic arms treaty in our meetings."

As the two leaders put the unprecedented ban on medium-range missiles and monitoring program into effect, they set the set the stage for American and Soviet monitors to take up stations in each other's lands to guard against cheating.

Two Senate leaders, Democrat Robert Byrd and Republican Bob Dole, told reporters the so-called INF agreement was a crowning achievement for Reagan. But both said he should move cautiously on the more extensive strategic arms pact.

"Let's not have a framework adopted that lock us in," said Dole, R-Kan.

Reagan and Gorbachev are expected to issue a joint communique before Reagan's departure Thursday that, among other things, would note progress that has been made in the U.S.-Soviet relationship since Gorbachev took the Kremlin helm in 1985 and Reagan ceased calling Moscow the "evil empire."

And despite the failure to reach a breakthrough in arms control, the two sides made some headway on a stubborn issue: how to keep track of each other's elusive mobile missiles in the event of a new accord.

"We think we have most of the elements," Secretary of Defense Frank C. Carlucci said in a CBS-TV interview. "We're presenting it to the Soviets. Some of the elements they've accepted."

Colin Powell, the president's national security adviser, told CNN that "there's been quite a lot of convergence in U.S. and Soviet thinking on the verification of mobile missiles. So we've made progress."

But, Powell said, "not enough to say that the treaty is at hand."

Anf Carlucci said unless the Soviets stop trying to block the U.S. Star Wars program, "obviously we can't get an agreement."

The treaty the leaders are exchanging is the first in history to abolish an entire category of nuclear weapons. It was ratified last Friday by the Senate and 17 hours later by the Soviet Presidium. It bans all missiles in the range of 300 to 3,400 miles.

Byrd, who arrived here Tuesday with Dole to mark the Senate's ratification of the INF accord, said Reagan's "discipline and strength" prodded the Soviets to negotiate the accord. "I don't believe anyone else could have done that," he said.

Dole called the treaty "probably the highlight of his second term. It is a small step, but it is a step towards arms reduction."

Gorbachev and Reagan had hoped to complete a vastly more important treaty to reduce U.S. and Soviet armories of long-range bombers, land-based missiles and nuclear submarines by 30 to 50 percent, but disputes over verifying the pact and the Reagan's Star Wars program spoiled the plan.

Instead, they separated out a single provision for advance notification of missile launch tests. It was signed Tuesday. They instructed their senior negotiators to make as much progress as they could on the obstacles to a Strategic Arms Reduction Treaty (START) and left open the possibility of a fifth summit meeting to sign it before Reagan leaves office in January.

Progress on the proposed START treaty came on a U.S. proposal for verifying limits on mobile missiles and a compromise on counting air-launched cruise missiles, said a senior U.S. official, who spoke on condition he not be further identified.

Senators encouraged by Gorbachev reforms

MOSCOW (AP) — U.S. Senate leaders who joined a summit ceremony celebrating final ratification of the new missile ban treaty said today that Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev's reforms open the way for expanded U.S.-Soviet trade and joint efforts to combat drug trafficking.

Senate Minority Leader Robert Dole, R-Kan., who sat next to Gorbachev at a dinner Tuesday night given by President Reagan, said the Soviet leader is "deadly serious about economic reform, he is deadly serious about restructuring the economy."

Senate Majority Leader Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., joined Dole in applauding Reagan's role in negotiating the treaty eliminating medium-range nuclear missiles.

But neither senator held out much hope at a news conference that a new accord drastically reducing long-range strategic weapons could be signed and ratified by the Senate in this election year.

Asked if Congress might take steps to wide U.S.-Soviet trade, Dole replied: "I don't see any change this year. I think if this relationsship continues to grow, there are always possibilities that changes will be made."

Soviet officials are seeking elimination of one of the principal obstacles to expanded trade, the so-called Jackson-Vanik Amendment, which denies certain U.S. trade benefits so long as the Soviets restrict emigration by Jews and others.

At the dinner, Dole said, Gorbachev told him he is "a little frustrated" by adoption in Congress of resolutions condemning the Soviet Union. "He indicated it made his job that much more difficult," Dole said.

Byrd said he was pleased that Gorbachev recently agreed to allow the mass distribution of Bibles in the Soviet Union. "I have written to the general secretary commending him on taking this step and urging that there be an expansion of this effort," Byrd said.

Byrd also proposed that the superpowers agree to cooperate in the war against illicit drugs. "Instead of the suggested joint mission...to Mars, we could work jointly on the war on drugs," he said.

Said Dole: "Ronald Reagan has come a long way since 1981."

Guerillas capture valley Soviet army using to withdraw

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — Guerrillas have wrested control of the valley through which Soviet troops are withdrawing from Afghanistan but are sparing the retreating Red Army, Western diplomats and guerrilla officials say.

The sources, who spoke Tuesday, gave credence to reports that a deal had been struck between a guerrilla commander and the Kremlin's army allowing Soviet soldiers to leave Afghanistan if they do so peacefully.

The sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity, also reported rumors of an imminent military coup in Kabul and said the Soviets have been giving the Afghan army more sophisticated gear than before.

The gear includes Soviet-built AN-12 transports, jets comparable to the U.S. Turbo-prop C-130 Hercules, large bombs, infrared nightsighting devices for small arms and new radar equipment.

The anti-communist guerrillas are apparently also getting their share of top-notch weaponry.

Official Afghan television showed pictures of a new long-range rocket captured south of the city. The rocket has a range of about 12 miles and is believed to come from the United States.

Washington, while acknowledging it supplies the guerrillas, rarely discloses details of arms shipments. China and Pakistan also arm the guerrillas.

Meanwhile, the insurgents were reported to have stepped up rocket attacks on Kabul, a possible indication they are getting stronger and drawing nearer to Afghanistan's center of power.

Diplomats citing dispatches from the capital said 14 rockets slammed into the city, mainly into its western and southern districts, from May 23-30. That was the heaviest missile attack on Kabul in any week this year.

Several Western military analysts, all speaking on condition of anonymity, say guerrillas are now operating within six to 12 miles of Kabul, which is on a plain ringed by hills.

On Tuesday, the Soviet withdrawal continued as Red Army troops evacuated towns south of Kabul in their second major retreat from Afghan outposts.

Western and Soviet diplomatic sources in Kabul said Soviet troops left Ghazni, 85 miles southwest of Kabul, and Gardez, 60 miles south of Kabul, and were heading north toward the Soviet border.

The evacuation of Soviet troops from the area leaves the Afghan army largely unassisted, at least on the ground, against attacks by anti-government guerrillas in the provinces separating Kabul from the Pakistani border to the south and southeast.

On Tuesday, the guerrillas said from their headquarters in Pakistan that they captured the strategic Panjshir Valley northeast of Kabul last Thursday. Diplomats in Islamabad supported the claim.

The Salang highway, the major Soviet withdrawal route, runs through the valley, but the insurgents say they are letting the Red Army pass without attacking.

Recent reports said the guerrilla commander Ahmed Shah Masood made a deal with the Soviet military to leave its troops alone if they retreat peacefully.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Leader: Food not used as weapon

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia (AP) — President Mengistu Haile Mariam denies his government is using food as a weapon in northern provinces where secessionist insurgencies and crop failures threaten the lives of 3.2 million people.

For the first time, the Ethiopian leader also accused Arab countries of backing the rebel movement. He claimed the Moslem nations want to consolidate their control of the Red Sea.

During Tuesday's six-hour news conference, Mengistu's first with foreign reporters in two years, he also called for better relations with Washington.

The moustachioed Marxist leader spoke with unprecedented candor on numerous other issues, gesticulating with passion, occasionally smiling and laughing.

Mengistu denied his government is using food as a weapon in the north, where the war and a government counteroffensive have jeopardized a massive Western-financed relief effort for millions of people facing starvation in Eritrea and Tigre provinces.

Troops arrest dozens on campus

QUITO, Ecuador (AP) — Soldiers arrested dozens of protesting students and teachers on a university campus in Quito on Tuesday after the government declared a state of emergency to counter a planned nationwide strike.

Interior Minister Heinz Moeller said troops arrested 27 people at the National Polytechnical School, entering the school after students threw rocks at a car carrying military personnel.

At an evening news conference, he called the planned general strike "illegal and anti-constitutional."

Ruben Orellana, the university rector, said both students and professors were detained. The independent station Radio Quito said 60 people were seized.

Korean student suicides increasing

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Pressure from school work and exams drove at least 50 secondary school students to commit suicide last year and 10 students killed themselves in May alone, a newspaper reported today.

The Korea Herald reported a growing number of suicides among high school and middle school students because of pressure from school work and college entrance examinations.

It warned that the number of student suicides would increase unless education policy changes.

The latest death was reported Monday, when a 17-year-old student, upset over his poor academic performance, jumped from a bridge to his death. He left a note that said, "Sorry for my lack of responsibility."

On May 18, the newspaper said, a 16-year-old high school girl jumped to her death from an apartment one day after two high school girls killed themselves over their poor school record.

The offer which best serves the interest of VA will be processed for acceptance. The name of the successful offeror and sales broker will appear in subsequent publications. VA will accept cash offers up to 10 percent below the advertised term sales price. VA also will pay reasonable loan discount points and buyers' closing costs on cash offers. However, the combined loan discount points and buyers' closing costs may not exceed 10 percent of the advertised term sales price. Offers must be submitted at term listed price when buyers request a new GI loan with $1.00 move-in. Interest rate of available financing is 10 percent (APR 10.1 percent). VA has properties for sale statewide. If you desire to purchase properties in other areas, please contact any sales broker located in the area in which you are interested.

FORFEITURE OF EARNEST MONEY DEPOSIT

Prior to signing the offer, broker must deposit in broker's trust account at least $500 earnest money. Once a purchase offer has been accepted for processing by VA and is subsequently cancelled at the request of the purchaser, the Earnest Money Deposit WILL NOT be refunded and the broker will be required to forward the Earnest Money to the VA as liquidation expenses. There will be no exception to this policy. Therefore, the VA suggests that all brokers interview their buyers to assure they want the property, prior to submission of an offer to purchase.
VA pays 5% sales commission. Offers are subject to the provisions of VA Form 26-6705, Credit Statement of Prospective Purchaser and Contract of Sale, on which all offers must be submitted. VA Form 26-6705 must be submitted in duplicate to:
