O'Hair blasts proposed amendment

AUSTIN (AP) — Atheist Madalyn Murray O'Hair on Friday blasted President Bush's endorsement of a constitutional amendment to ban flag burning, calling it "a cheap political fight...to make himself look good."

"He is a little boat without a sail and without oars, just drifting in the currents of public opinion, and he feels this is a public opinion issue and that people will be for him," said Mrs. O'Hair.

"He has no program at all for his presidency...So what does he do? He grabs up the flag and pretends that this means something to him," she said. "George Bush wraps himself in the flag. He desecrates it."

Bush on Friday again urged passage and ratification of a proposed constitutional amendment at a ceremony at the Iwo Jima Memorial, the statue of five Marines raising the flag on a Pacific island during World War II.

Mrs. O'Hair said she does not support burning the flag and "could never" do so herself, but she does not believe the amendment is necessary.

"Do you need a constitutional amendment to love the flag? I don't," she said.

At one point during an interview, Mrs. O'Hair said she would ask "every atheist that can possibly do it to desecrate that...flag if they pass the constitutional amendment."

"This is one nation under God. Then what the hell should we care about..the flag?" she said.

But she later said that was just an angry response to the news of Bush's announcement.

Pausing at one point to brush tears from her eyes, Mrs. O'Hair said she has strong feelings for the flag. She said one of her forebears, William McHenry, was shot and died during the Civil War because he rushed to rescue a flag being carried by another man who was killed.

"William McHenry was one of those nuts who loved his country, and Bush doesn't know about that, because he uses his country, he doesn't love it," she said.

Mrs. O'Hair said the president hopes "that people will remember him as 'George Bush saved the flag.' No, he didn't," she said. "William McHenry saved the flag, if only for five or 10 minutes."

In other reaction, Texas Democratic Party Chairman Bob Slagle asked his Republican counterpart, Fred Meyer, to call on Bush to disavow anyone who would use the flag as a partisan issue.

"Those who would use the flag as a partisan issue to divide Americans show great disrespect for the flag and what it stands for," Slagle said.

Bush commemorates anniversary of Civil Rights Act

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush, telling civil rights leaders that he supports affirmative action and minority-outreach programs, said Friday that he will be satisfied with "nothing less than equality of opportunity for all Americans."

He drew applause from 200 people in the East Room of the White House when he called on Congress "to join me in a new partnership to reauthorize the Civil Rights Commission with a goal of launching a renewed civil rights mission."

The commission's six-year authorization expires Nov. 30.

Civil rights leaders Jesse Jackson, Martin Luther King III, Benjamin Hooks, Vernon Jordan and James Farmer were at the ceremony to mark the 25th anniversary of the landmark Civil Rights Act of 1964, signed into law by President Lyndon B. Johnson on July 2, 1964.

The act banned segregation in public accommodations and paved the way for court action to end bias in hiring and promotions.

Also in the audience was Rosa Parks, whose defiant refusal to move to the back of a Montgomery, Ala., bus on Dec. 1, 1955, was an early milestone in the civil rights movement.

Bush said the gathering was "not only to commemorate an anniversary, but to celebrate a movement, and to rededicate our efforts to the unfinished work of that movement."

However, some civil rights leaders say recent Supreme Court decisions have hurt the civil rights movement.

"There was more damage done to civil rights statutes in the last 2½ weeks than in the last 2½ decades," said Ralph Neas, executive director of the Leadership Conference on Civil Rights.

The court recently issued decisions to restrict affirmative action programs and make it more difficult for plaintiffs to prove discrimination in the workplace.

Jackson told reporters that justice had become "more expensive, more distant and less likely to come" because the high court shifted emphasis for remedies on intent to violate civil rights rather than the effect of such violations.

"If the Bulls are playing the Bullets, the referees couldn't call all fouls, they could only call intentional fouls," Jackson said after the East Room ceremony. "That makes for a longer game, a more violent game and the big guys beat up the little guys."

He said "we need a meeting of some substance with the president to deal with legislative remedies to offset the impact" of the Supreme Court decisions.

Civil rights leaders have said Bush seems more interested in defending the flag than the ideals the flag represents, alluding to his call for a constitutional amendment to outlaw desecration of the flag.

Bush, speaking at the Iwo Jima memorial earlier Friday, said the amendment is needed in the light of a Supreme Court decision that said flag desecration is protected under the free speech provision of the First Amendment.

Farmer says there's no protection against wild dogs

By BRIAN PEARSON
Staff Writer

Where, oh where has that little dog gone?

It could have been out savagely attacking two animals Friday morning at Brent Walker's farm or roaming the countryside in a pack and terrorizing livestock.

Walker had driven into town at 6 a.m. to pick up his wife from her graveyard shift job as a restaurant manager. He returned to his south Midland County home to find only three of his five-member herd of "barbadoes," a cross between a goat and a sheep, standing together in the field.

He discovered the other two lying in another part of the field. They were barely alive and bleeding from quarter-sized holes in their necks.

It was a familiar sight for Walker, who in the past three months has seen four of his seven barbadoes maimed or killed, apparently by roving dogs.

Later in the day, one of the creatures was still alive and able to stagger around the field before being brought to a veterinarian, while Walker took the other to the butcher to be turned into barbecue meat.

Three days ago a dog attacked and killed a pregnant doe, Walker said. A dog broke the neck of another barbado in April.

Walker, who owns eight acres of property about four miles south of Midland, claimed that county officials have been less than helpful in stopping further carnage.

"There's no protection whatsoever and we have to take the matter into our own hands," he said.

Dogs running rampant and terrorizing livestock have been a longtime nuisance for residents of the country, where even a domestic, lap-dog terrier can hear nature's call and set out for a night of rural "wilding."

County Commissioner Louisa Valencia, who lives outside the city, said tolerating the cannine terrorists is just a way of life.

"Sometimes it's just a neighbor's dog that if it tastes blood, it keeps coming," she said. "Most of the time it's not wild dogs."

Ms. Valencia said city residents often dump the pets in the country, leaving them scared and hungry to fend for themselves.

North denied retrial

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal judge in Oliver North's Iran-Contra case denied a motion for a mistrial Friday, saying a juror probably lied to the court but "had no desire to help or to hurt North."

The ruling by U.S. District Court Judge Gerhard Gesell clears the way for North to be sentenced Wednesday.

The former White House aide was convicted of aiding and abetting an obstruction of Congress, altering and destroying documents and illegally accepting a gratuity.

His lawyers sought a mistrial, disclosing after the May 4 verdict that juror Tara Leigh King had given incorrect information about her background. King answered "no" when asked whether she or any relatives had been involved in court proceedings or an investigation.

King failed to disclose that her brother, Sam King, had served time in prison for armed robbery and that she had been questioned, subpoenaed and testified before a grand jury in connection with that investigation.

At a Wednesday hearing, King testified that she had forgotten about the proceedings against her brother.

Ex-tax appraiser pleads guilty to stealing funds

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

Roland Wilkinson, the 41-year-old former chief tax appraiser of the Midland Central Appraisal District, pleaded guilty Friday to stealing more than $20,000 from the district using credit cards.

Wilkinson, now a Lubbock resident, received a 10-year probated sentence and was ordered by 142nd State District Judge Pat Baskin to pay $23,495 restitution at the rate of $100 a month. The sentence was agreed to by Midland County District Attorney Al Schorre and David Rosado, who was appointed to represent Wilkinson.

"Considering the defendant's lack of a prior record, I thought it was proper," Schorre said of the sentence.

Wilkinson pleaded guilty to one count of theft. Under terms of the agreement, four other counts of theft were dismissed by the judge.

Wilkinson, the former chief appraiser in Lubbock who held the job in Midland for five years, told Schorre he now works as a clerk at a stereo store in Lubbock. The father of two children told the prosecutor he is paid a salary of about $1,300 a month, and agreed with Rosado "very much so" that he is in "financial difficulty."

Schorre said the restitution will be paid to a bonding company, which earlier covered the losses of the district.

Wilkinson was indicted August 24, 1988 by a Midland grand jury. He had resigned as chief appraiser nearly a year before, on Sept. 9, 1987.

Girl accidentally run over

From Staff Reports

A Midland toddler died of traumatic head injuries Friday night after being run over by a car driven by her mother, police said.

Yesenia Gomez, 1, was playing in a driveway at 1608 S. Baird St. when her mother, Marisela Gomez drove in and accidentially ran over the child, police said.

The mother and daughter did not live at the South Baird Street address. Police said they were not certain of Ms. Gomez's address, but that the family did live in Midland.

Justice of the Peace Keith Jobe said late Friday night he likely would rule the death accidental, adding that the mother is "just beside herself."

The accident occurred at 5:15 p.m. Friday.

The girl was taken to the emergency room at Midland Memorial Hospital where she died less than three hours later, a nursing supervisor said.

Police Sgt. Mike Roberts said no charges were pending in the case as of Friday night.

Teen acquitted of killing abusive father

PENSACOLA, Fla. (AP) — A teenager who killed her abusive father was acquitted Friday in a judgment that extends to juveniles the post-traumatic stress defense previously used in cases of battered wives killing husbands.

Circuit Judge John Kuder found Diana Goodykoontz, 15, innocent of second-degree murder in the July 23 slaying of Navy Chief Petty Officer Dennis Goodykoontz at the family's home in this Panhandle city.

He was shot to death with his own .357-caliber Magnum revolver.

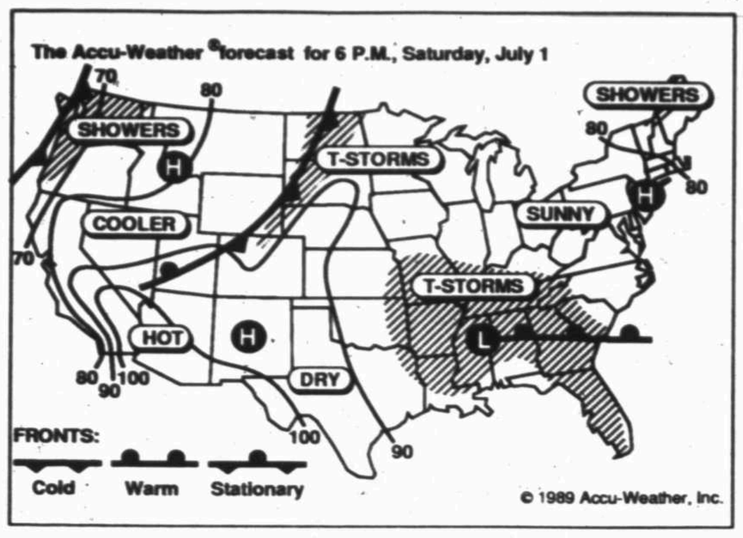
WEATHER SUMMARY



Weekend should be sunny

From Staff and Wire Reports

The beginning of the Independence Day weekend should be mostly sunny with low chances for rain, forecasters at the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport say.

Today will be mostly sunny with a high in the upper 90s. Winds will be from the south at 5-15 mph.

Tonight will be partly cloudy with less than a 20 percent chance of thunderstorms. The low will be in the upper 60s.

Sunday will be partly sunny with a high in the upper 90s.

The outlook for the holiday weekend is sunny skies with chances for isolated late afternoon and evening thunderstorms. Highs should be in the upper 90s and lows should be in the upper 60s.

The record high temperature for Friday was set in 1946 when it reached 105, while the record low for today was set in 1967 when it dipped to 60.

STATE

The remains of Tropical Storm Allison brought showers and thunderstorms to most of East and Southeast Texas along the Coastal Plains Friday.

A low pressure system left from the storm was located near Houston Friday.

A south wind prevailed in the Panhandle, near the Texas-New Mexico border and in the south near the Rio Grande and along the coast. Elsewhere, the wind was mainly from the north. Wind speeds were generally in the 10 to 15 mph.

Afternoon state temperatures were mostly in the 80s with readings in the 90s over the lower Rio Grande Valley. Also readings in the 70s were observed over rain-cooled East Texas.

The National Weather Service forecast scattered to numerous showers and thunderstorms over the east and southeast Saturday, with widely scattered showers or thunderstorms in North Central Texas becoming scattered in the South.

Mostly fair skies were forecast for the West, with isolated thunderstorms mostly cloudy skies in the east and southeast sections. Partly cloudy skies were expected to prevail elsewhere.

NATION

Showers and thunderstorms associated with what remained of Tropical Storm Allison brought heavy rain to parts of Texas and Louisiana on Friday.

Showers and thunderstorms continued in western Louisiana and coastal and extreme eastern sections of Texas. Flash flood watches were posted in both states.

Showers and thunderstorms also extended from Arkansas and Tennessee to Florida and Georgia. A thunderstorm and high winds southeast of Mobile, Ala., blew the window out of a store.

Showers and thunderstorms were in eastern Minnesota, northwestern Wisconsin, north central Kansas and eastern Nebraska, where a thunderstorm in southeastern Nebraska produced 4.80 inches of rain in two hours.

There were a few showers in western Oregon and New Mexico. The rest of the nation had fair to partly sunny skies.

Saturday's forecast called for showers and thunderstorms in central and eastern Texas, the rest of the Gulf Coast states, Kentucky, Tennessee and western Georgia. Widely scattered showers and a few thunderstorms were expected for northern New England, upstate New York, the Dakotas and the Pacific Northwest. Sunny skies were forecast across the rest of the nation.

Wright: Reagan overrated president

■ Wright's office furnishings on a truck bound for Texas — 5A

NEW YORK (AP) — Former House Speaker Jim Wright says Ronald Reagan was the most overrated among the eight presidents with whom he worked during a congressional career that spanned more than 34 years.

Wright, who left Congress on Thursday after more than 34 years, told ABC-TV's Barbara Walters he thought the nation's 41st president was "different than all the rest of 'em. What a magnificent ability to persuade people, but he never did really get the hang of the details of government.

"He could be very casual and very careless with facts."

In an interview aired Friday on ABC's "20-20" program, Wright and his wife, Betty, reflected on his years in Congress, the friends and enemies he has made, and the couple's plans after his resignation.

Wright announced May 31 that he would resign the speakership and his congressional seat amid allegations stemming from a house ethics probe. He turned the speaker's post over to Tom Foley, D-Washington, earlier this month.

Wright left Washington Thursday and returned to a hero's welcome in his hometown of Fort Worth, Texas.

Wright said he resigned because "I felt there was nothing left for me to do. Because it had been made very clear to me that as long as I stayed, I was going to be the object of a bitter partisan attack and that the media were not going to allow Congress to concentrate on any of the positive things that we need to be doing because the focus was going to be on this very strong and stringent public battle. And that it was going to go on for the rest of this year."

Betty Wright said she was angered and shocked that the allegations would prompt her husband to leave office.

She said she felt "anger that people didn't speak up in Jim's defense before. But...I really don't think that hardly anybody thought it was going to go this far."

Wright maintained, "I know in my heart that I didn't violate any of the rules of the House. I certainly didn't do it knowingly or intentionally."

Wright was accused of selling copies of his memoirs in exchange for speaking fees as a way of hiding additional income. In addition, critics charged that his wife's salary was a gift from one of Wright's business partners, Fort Worth developer George Mallick.

In reviewing his tenure in Congress, Wright reflected on the various presidents who served since he took office in 1955, saying Lyndon Johnson was the greatest, Jimmy Carter the most underrated and Reagan the most overrated.

Wright called Dwight Eisenhower "kind of a Daddy Warbucks figure. Somebody whom everybody admired and respected." He referred to John Kennedy as an "inspiration," and successor Johnson as "maybe the smartest man I ever knew."

Wright said he believed Richard Nixon "essentially (was) a man who wanted to do the right thing and the decent thing." He said Gerald Ford had "not a mean bone in his body," and Carter "had an engineer's mind, not a dreamer's mind. He's a good man. A decent, good man."

When asked about George Bush, Wright said he hadn't had much time to evaluate the current president. But he said, "I kind of wish he'd think bigger. I wish he'd dream bigger. I wish he'd try to do things on a grander scale."

Brent Walker, right, and his son, Jeremiah, 13, dig a grave for one of his "barbadoes" apparently killed by stray dogs. A barbado is a cross between a goat and a sheep. Walker said he has lost three animals to dogs since April.

DOGS

But other rural residents and Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals officials have criticized the county, saying it has done little to protect rural livestock.

SPCA employee Dalton Byerly said his organization can do little to stop the problem.

"We would be willing to help if the county was going to give us some help," Byerly said. "The county doesn't do anything about our animal problem.

"The county is responsible for the animals in the county, not the SPCA. We don't have the money."

The county also has no formal dog catcher or animal control department. If a dog suspected of having rabies bites someone, the case is turned over to Constable Ron Rice.

Skunks and cats make up the majority of the between four and eight suspected rabies cases Rice handles a week.

"I don't think we've ever had a rabid dog in Midland County," Rice said, adding that the last rabies case, a cat, was handled more than a year ago.

Rice said he never investigates incidents of dogs mauling livestock, adding that he doesn't consider the dogs a major problem.

"We don't have any authority to respond to those calls," he said. "Besides, the number of complaints that we get do not justify them being called a major problem."

Rice said no charges are filed on owners whose animals bite someone. The matter is a civil case between owner and victim, he said.

Ms. Valencia said the county has no reason to impose a rural leash law.

"How could we enforce it?" she said. "If we wanted all the restrictions in the city, we'd live in the city. If people want control of their animals, they can move into town."

Commissioner Win Brown said the county lacks the funds to establish an army of animal control officers to patrol the countryside for stray dogs. Creating such a force would mean a tax increase, he said.

"I have a lot of empathy for the people living in the county areas," said Brown, who grew up in the country. "There's not much you can do at night except go out and protect them (livestock animals) yourself."

Brown said rural neighbors have an almost unspoken understanding that any dog wandering onto their property is "fair game."

That has been south Midland County resident Frank Mathews' philosophy for the past decade.

"I just kill them," Mathews said. "There's probably 20 or 30 dogs buried out here. I don't say nothing to nobody.

"You can't expect people to tie up their dogs all the time, but people need to teach them dogs to stay at home."

Mathews said he has seen 10 dogs at once attack his animals. He has lost four calves.

"They're just town dogs that show up with nothing better to do," he said. "They go to chasing rabbits and then they go to chasing your calves."

Bill Powers has been a rural trapper for the U.S. Department of Agriculture office in Midland for the past 30 years.

He traps mostly bobcats and coyotes, but goes after dogs three or four times a year.

Powers said dogs running the countryside have posed problems not only because of their numbers but because they are more dangerous than wild predators.

"They'll kill for fun," he said. "A coyote kills to eat. A wild dog is something worse than a coyote."

DAR parade for children to be held July 4

From Staff Reports

The 27th annual July 4 Children's Sidewalk Parade, sponsored by the Col. Theunis Day Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, will begin at 10 a.m. Tuesday at the courthouse square in downtown Midland.

Registration will begin at 9 a.m.

The children should ride on sidewalk vehicles only, such as bicycles, tricycles, wagons, strollers or Hot Wheels.

Judges will select first, second, third and honorable mention winners in each of four categories — 0-3 year-olds; 4-6 year-olds; 7-10 year-olds and 10-12 year-olds. Children are welcomed to participate in groups, choosing the category that suits most of the participants in the group.

The theme of the parade is always "honoring the red, white and blue," as children decorate their vehicles and themselves in the appropriate colors. This year an emphasis will be the celebration of the 200th year of the presidential inaugural.

The parade route will begin at the north entrance of the courthouse going around the building on the west side of the street and then to the sidewalk of Centennial Plaza. A brief patriotic program will follow and then awards will be presented. Prizes will be ribbons.

For additional information, call 682-3376.

Witnesses testified during the four-day, non-jury trial that the girl suffered from battered child syndrome, a form of the post-traumatic stress disorder that afflicts some battle-shocked veterans.

The judge said it caused her to have the reasonable belief she was in "imminent danger of great bodily harm" although her father had taken no overt physical action just before he was shot.

"And (she) further reasonably believed that the use of deadly force was necessary to prevent that harm from occurring," the judge said.

Prosecutors argued that Ms. Goodykoontz acted under the influence of heavy-metal rock that dwells on the occult and suicide, but Kuder said evidence failed to show any connection.

"I thought that they were just going to do something to me, anyway, 'cause...I like the music," Ms. Goodykoontz said afterward. "It's not fair to judge somebody just because of what they listen to."

Ms. Goodykoontz had testified that her father made sexual overtures and she was afraid he was going to rape her. The judge also heard testimony that the father had a history of violence against his wife and three children that was tied to drinking, had virtually held them hostage at their home, had once threatened to kill the entire family and himself.

NORTH

"The court cannot credit King's testimony that she failed to mention her brother Sam's recent conviction by plea of guilty because she 'forgot,'" Gesell said in a nine-page ruling.

But he said "no proof was presented indicating that King was unfair or that she failed in any way to serve conscientiously. She voted to acquit North of many felony counts."

"King was not biased for or against either side," Gesell said.

North, who could be fined up to $750,000 and sentenced to 10 years in prison for the three felony convictions, was acquitted on nine other charges.

North's lawyers hired a private detective agency to investigate King after she told a television interviewer she had used drugs but stopped months before North's trial.

North was convicted of aiding and abetting an obstruction of Congress in connection with a 1985 arms shipment to Iran. He also was convicted of destroying sensitive National Security Council documents.

At the time of his resignation he cited "the stress of the job and stress on my entire family" for the decision.

After Wilkinson's indictment, Gilbert Tompson, chairman of the appraisal district board, released details of the investigation.

In August 1987, a member of the district staff contacted Tompson and "expressed concern about certain accounting procedures being used at Mr. Wilkinson's direction," apparently since January 1987.

Tompson said he looked into the matter and then told other board members of the discovery.

When Tompson and board member Margaret Cowden met with Wilkinson about the billings, his response was "injured innocence," Tompson said at the time.

The purchases were made with four American Express credit cards and a Visa credit card. One was issued in the name of the appraisal district and the other in Wilkinson's name, according to officials.

Wilkinson turned over credit card stubs to the appraisal district, including one for a trip to Disneyland, for payment as officials business, according to district officials.

Texas Rangers were asked to investigate the matter when a settlement with Wilkinson failed, district officials said.

Funds taken illegally were from the district's operating budget and were not from collected taxes. After the funds were discovered missing by the district, an audit was conducted and procedural safeguards installed, Tompson said.

DEATHS

W.J. Schindler

Services for W.J. "Bill" Schindler of Midland will be at 2 p.m. today at Grace Lutheran Church with Pastor Donald Hafeman officiating.

Interment will follow at Resthaven Memorial Park under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Pallbearers are to be Arlen Edgar, Ben Lippe, O.M. Plemmons, Donald Neujahr, Robert Walter and Kevin Robernaldt.

Honorary pallbearers are to be the West Texas Union of Wally Bryan Caravan Club International, David Penick, Rod Maxson and Dick Campbell.

BUSH

Attorney General Dick Thornburgh said in Chicago earlier this week that the Bush administration won't pursue legislation to overturn the recent high court decisions affecting civil rights, preferring to wait until their impact can be assessed.

Bush did not directly address civil rights leaders' concerns Friday, but called for "vigilant and aggressive enforcement" of civil rights and said his administration won't tolerate discrimination.

Bush said economic barriers affect the lives of the disadvantaged as much as the remnants of legal discrimination.

Austin man has seedlings grown from Treaty Oak's acorns

AUSTIN (AP) — Even if the Treaty Oak succumbs to a powerful poison that has infiltrated its roots, part of the historic tree will live on through seedlings grown by a man who picnicked beneath its branches as a child.

Israel

Gordon Israel, who lives across the street from the centuries-old oak, has about 80 seedlings grown from acorns he gathered last year in what was to be a business venture.

"I don't know what to do now. I don't want to capitalize" on the poisoning, Israel said Friday.

Police on Thursday arrested Paul Stedman Cullen, 45, and charged him with felony criminal mischief in the pouring of the herbicide Velpar around the tree.

"If something does happen that the Treaty Oak isn't saved or something, I would hope that some of these seedlings would end up in that park," said Israel, 37. The oak stands in a small park near downtown Austin.

Sgt. John Jones, who investigated the case, said police "feel fairly certain" that Cullen, who was being held in lieu of $20,000 bond, acted alone.

Authorities said the poisoning may have occurred during some sort of ritual. Jones said "ritual-related items" and occult books were found in a search of the makeshift trailer south of Austin in Elroy, where Cullen lives.

Israel said he is optimistic about survival of the tree, which has a special significance for him. He chose his home because it is near the oak and said he remembers stories of Stephen F. Austin and the tree on a grade-school visit to the park.

Legend says Austin, the father of Texas, signed the first boundary line agreement between Indians and settlers under the oak's branches. But the Handbook of Texas says there is little foundation for the tale.

Israel picnics under the tree with his children, who have hunted Easter eggs in the park.

"The primary reason we moved in was because we had this beautiful oak tree with all this history behind it in our front yard," he said. "We were really saddened to hear that it had been poisoned."

He said that since the poisoning became public, "A lot of people have really shown that they care, and that's real neat. I guess that's the most positive thing that you can draw from this whole experience."

Get-well messages, flowers and a can of cream-of-chicken soup are among the items that have been left at the tree.

Israel has given away some seedlings since the poisoning, including one to a couple who was married at the oak. But he said he had to cut back on such gestures because, "If I gave one to everybody that did something over the last couple of weeks, they'd be gone."

State and national experts are among those who have been at the oak, and Israel said he has been advised on caring for the seedlings.

Israel said feelings the oak has engendered will live on, even if it succumbs to the poison.

"I think the spirit of Treaty Oak is bigger than what one man can kill," he said.

Police think stabbing victim of random killing

BORGER (AP) — Police believe an Eastern New Mexico University student who was stabbed repeatedly was the victim of a random killing.

The body of Angela Tyson, 20, was found Thursday by police in a remote area north of here shortly before 1 a.m. Borger is a town of about 16,000 in the Texas panhandle.

"It was an extremely brutal, senseless, tragic crime," said Borger Police Chief Mike Smith. "At this time, we feel it was a random killing."

Miguel Angel Flores, 20, was charged Thursday with aggravated kidnapping in connection with Ms. Tyson's death. Flores, a Mexican national who had been living in Borger for about five months, was being held in the Borger City Jail and bail was set at $250,000.

Flores was turned over to police Thursday morning by his grandfather in connection with the kidnap-slaying of Ms. Tyson, a 1987 graduate of Borger High School. Police began searching for Ms. Tyson after her parents reported she had not returned home from her job at a video rental store Wednesday night.

Divers recover body of oil rig crewman

FREEPORT (AP) — Divers battling stormy seas Friday recovered the body of one of three missing crewmen thought trapped inside a capsized oil-drilling vessel in the Gulf of Mexico, but were unable to locate the others, Coast Guard officials said.

The body of an unidentified crewman was found inside the vessel's galley around 1 p.m. Friday, and was taken to Galveston aboard the Coast Guard cutter Point Spencer, Petty Officer John Royal said.

"All of the crew spaces have been searched, and they haven't located anyone else yet," Royal said. "We're trying to get in touch with the supervisor of the dive party to find out what is left to be searched."

A fourth man on a fishing vessel that reported the Thursday night accident fell overboard and also was missing, said Lt. Don Merwin with the U.S. Coast Guard in Galveston. The man, whose name was not released, was said to be a non-swimmer who was not wearing a life jacket.

Six workers from the 100-foot-long vessel Titan, containing a jack-up rig, were rescued late Thursday by Coast Guard helicopter and boat crews about 2½ hours after the accident. The men suffered only minor injuries, Merwin said.

One crewman, identified as Trent Chauvin of Houma, La., was treated for a broken ankle and released from Brazosport Memorial Hospital, spokeswoman Lynette Ennis said.

Two others, identified as Monroe Alvarez, 25, and Troy Hebert, 22, were treated for exposure Thursday night and released from John Sealy Hospital in Galveston, hospital spokesman Robert Nichols said.

Their hometowns, names of the other survivors and those missing were not immediately available.

Divers hired by rig operator Delta Lift Barges Inc. of Galliano, La., were delayed in their efforts to enter the overturned vessel Friday morning by thunderstorms and choppy seas, but eventually secured a safety line and began their search.

The fishing vessel Captain Gabriel reported the capsized rig at about 7:15 p.m. Thursday in 90 feet of water about 26 miles south of Freeport, Merwin said.

He said officials did not know what caused the collapse, but the vessel remained bottom-up in the water Friday. Waves were reportedly about 6 feet high at the time of the accident.

Royal said the vessel was believed to be headed toward Freeport before the accident, and the crew may have tried to lift it out of the water to escape the rough seas.

"It's pretty common practice for them when the weather kicks up like this to lift the legs and get up out of the water. That may be a possibility," he said. "If they were under way in 6-foot seas, they were probably having a rough time because these things are kind of top-heavy."

Chief says he survived 'witch hunt'

WACO (AP) — After he was cleared on two counts of official misconduct and one count of official oppression, the police chief of this Central Texas city says he survived a "witch hunt."

A McLennan County grand jury cleared Larry Scott on Thursday after reviewing evidence for two days. Scott said he had been confident he would be exonerated.

Scott attributed the accusations that sparked the grand jury investigation to another attempt by police Sgt. Malissa Sims to have him removed from office and discredited.

Ms. Sims, president of the Waco Police Association, had asked District Attorney Paul Gartner to investigate charges that Scott used on-duty police officers to work on his ranch in Limestone County.

Other allegations by Ms. Sims were that Scott used on-duty officers to investigate a pending civil lawsuit in which the chief is a defendant; and that he wrote two letters to city officials in an attempt to influence the awarding of a city contract to the wife of a police sergeant.

The grand jury issued the no-bills on the alleged misdemeanor violations after summoning Waco City Manager John Harrison to its chambers to discuss the case, Gartner told the Waco Tribune-Herald. The panel began its review of the case Wednesday.

Ms. Sims said she had a responsibility to the citizens of Waco to report the allegations.

"I felt like I had a sworn duty. Information of possible criminal activity involving the chief came to my attention and I did not ignore the information just because it involved the chief," Sims said.

"I reported it to the proper authorities, and action was taken. The action wasn't in my control, and I am only a small part of the judicial system."

Ms. Sims is one of 57 WPA members with a civil lawsuit pending against Scott. The suit alleges that certain positions within the department constitute promotions because they include benefits like better working hours.

The police association contends the department should fill the positions by testing applicants. Scott filed suit against Sims, four other officers and two statewide police unions, alleging that they conspired to drive him from his job.

Channel bridge closed after truck overturns

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Ship Channel bridge was closed to traffic Friday afternoon after a flatbed truck believed to be carrying barrels of a flammable liquid overturned, police said.

"The details are very sketchy," said Lt. J.E. Smith with the Houston Police Department accident division. "We're simply taking precautions since we don't know exactly what the chemical is."

Officials, however, believe the leaking chemical is xylene which is highly flammable and hazardous to breathe.

Crews from the Houston Fire Department's hazardous materials team and U.S. Coast Guard officials responded to the accident.

No injuries were reported.

Wright's office furnishings on Texas-bound truck

WASHINGTON (AP) — Workers took down chandeliers and blinds from Jim Wright's Capitol office Friday as an 18-wheel truck headed to Texas filled with possessions acquired during 34 years in Congress, including a pair of wingback chairs and a box marked "longhorns."

Hours before Wright's resignation officially was to take effect, the office of the fallen speaker was stripped bare. Tarps covered the carpet to catch drops of paint and workers on scaffolding were taking down the light fixtures to prepare the room for the arrival of new speaker Tom Foley.

Wright's furniture, drapes, and collection of papers and plaques, meanwhile, were loaded onto a 65-foot-long truck and headed for Texas Christian University.

Wright's chief of staff, Marshall Lynam, said Wright's office furnishings would be used by TCU to create "a simulated speaker's office."

"The speaker is entitled to (the furniture)," Lynam said.

Rank and file former members of Congress are allowed to buy their desk and chair for $100 when they retire. According to the law, former House speakers are allowed to use their furniture in an office in their congressional district.

TCU spokeswoman Betty Knox said office space will be made available to Wright at the TCU library "so he can work on his papers there" and that the school was expecting the furniture and papers.

She said she expected, but could not say with certainty, that Wright's Capitol furniture would be used in his office at TCU.

Ms. Knox said it should take about six months to sift through Wright's collection before a decision can be made about the use of the materials.

> "In time, these papers (of Wright's) will be made available to scholars and serious students of modern American history."
>
> — TCU Chancellor William E. Tucker

Forced out as speaker after a year-long ethics investigation into his personal financial dealings, Wright resigned his leadership job June 6. He kept his 12th District seat until the close of business Friday, although he said his last goodbyes in Washington on Thursday before flying home to Fort Worth.

Outside the Capitol Friday, movers loaded the new truck, packing in box after box of pictures and plaques. In went a credenza and book case, an upholstered couch and two wingback chairs, a jogging trampoline, boxed draperies, bookshelves and a crate marked "Jim Wright Sculpture."

After padlocking it closed, the driver positioned his shiny truck in front of the Capitol to be photographed, under an aquamarine sky, for future company advertising.

"We couldn't pass up an opportunity to have such a fantastic backdrop," said Jim Coleman, a vice president of San Antonio-based Sherwood Van Lines.

"We're getting some publicity shots for our company," said Coleman, who cited his company's recent purchase of 30 new trucks, including the one chosen to ferry Wright's things back to Fort Worth.

He said Wright's name, however, would not be mentioned in any advertising.

"We happen to have a truck at the Hill so we want the shots because this is a new piece of equipment," Coleman said before the truck headed for TCU.

At the time Wright announced he was turning over his papers to TCU, Chancellor William E. Tucker said the university would do whatever was necessary "to protect this extraordinary and substantiative historical record."

"In time, these papers will be made available to scholars and serious students of modern American history," Tucker said.

Meanwhile, employees in Wright's leadership office who do not find other work immediately can keep their jobs for up to 45 days, under a resolution passed by the House the day Wright turned over the speaker's gavel to Foley, D-Wash.

The resolution sets aside $60,000 for the compensation of personnel and other expenses of the office of the speaker.

At least 4 people die in Atlanta office building fire

NATION

ATLANTA (AP) — A fire touched off by a series of explosions sent choking smoke through a 10-story office building Friday, killing at least four people and injuring dozens. Terrified workers smashed windows with chairs, and a woman jumped from the sixth floor.

Many people escaped by climbing onto firefighters' ladders.

About 200 people, many of them office workers with soot-blackened clothing and skin, gathered on the street outside the Peachtree 25th Building. Some sat down, breathing from oxygen masks.

Witnesses said the fire in the south tower of the black glass building erupted about 10:30 a.m., about 30 minutes after a power failure.

The blaze was preceded by a series of explosions on the sixth floor, witnesses said, which occurred when two electrical workers were repairing a fuse 30 minutes after a power failure.

Fire officials said one of the electrical workers was killed. They could not account for the source of the explosions.

The blaze began on the sixth floor but spread two floors below and one above, said Sandra Walker, a spokeswoman for Mayor Andrew Young.

"My understanding is that some firefighters could have saved or helped more people if they didn't panic. But some people did panic," Ms. Walker said.

"When you have people jumping out of windows, you've got a panic situation," said Tom Perrin, Atlanta's acting fire chief.

Perrin said the building was built in 1962, before a requirement that public buildings have sprinklers. "Three of the fire victims could have been saved if there had been a sprinkler system in this building," he said.

Lavon McCord of the Atlanta-Fulton County Emergency Management Agency said five people died in the fire, but officials could not account for the fifth deaths. Tony Gaines, an attendant in the county medical examiner's office, said the office had received reports of only four deaths.

One woman who jumped from a sixth-floor window was critically injured, Ms. Walker said. The woman, one of 38 people taken to hospitals, suffered two broken legs, a fractured ankle and hand injuries, Piedmont Hospital spokeswoman Lisa Kelley said.

Some of the others injured were treated for burns, smoke inhalation and cardiac arrest. Five of the injured were firefighters, four of whom suffered smoke inhalation and one who burned his hands, Ms. Walker said.

One man was "cursed out" of jumping by a man who was walking by the building shortly after the fire started, Perrin said. Several people, including the unidentified man, climbed onto ladders raised to smashed windows, while the rest of the building was evacuated.

Darlene Dunn, 57, said she was one of eight people in a sixth-floor office when the fire began. She said she acted mainly on instinct before being rescued by the firefighters' ladder. She used her chair to break glass.

"I busted out a couple of windows so we could breathe fresh air," Ms. Dunn said after being treated for smoke inhalation. "We tried to get out of the building but there was no way — we were trapped."

Tom Steele, an office worker in a part of the building that was not burned, said people in his area first became aware of the fire when an alarm sounded.

"We made a practiced evacuation," Steele said, adding that fire drills are conducted about once a year. "Everyone was calm."

Perrin said several firefighters and private citizens would receive commendations for heroism. One man, identified as Michael Blackman, went into the building and carried five women out, burning his back in the process, Ms. Walker said.

The names of the dead were not immediately available. The last body was not recovered until about 2 p.m., 3½ hours after the fire started.

Officials said it probably would be Saturday before occupants of the building could re-enter and make damage estimates.

"My understanding is that some firefighters could have saved or helped more people if they didn't panic. But some people did panic."

Judge says he's sure lawmaker sex offender

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — A judge said Friday he was convinced U.S. Rep. Donald Lukens is a sex offender and sentenced him to 30 days in jail and a $500 fine for having sex with a 16-year-old girl last year.

"This court is particularly struck by the unwillingness of the defendant to recognize that he was not the victim," Franklin County Domestic Relations Judge Ronald Solove said, adding that he could not excuse Lukens' contention that he was "somehow seduced by a child."

"You have refused to take that degree of responsibility," Solove said. "This court is convinced you are a sex offender."

Lukens' face appeared ashen as Solove sentenced him to the maximum penalty on the misdemeanor charge of contributing to the unruliness of a child — 180 days in jail and a $1,000 fine. The judge then suspended all but 30 days of the sentence and $500 of the fine and placed Lukens on probation for one year.

The terms of probation require Lukens to participate in sex offender programs and submit to testing for sexually transmitted diseases.

A jury May 26 convicted the Middletown Republican following a five-day trial. Lukens, 58, who is divorced, allegedly paid Rosie Coffman of Columbus $40 to have sex with him at his Columbus apartment on Nov. 6.

Lukens left the courtroom without commenting to reporters. In a telephone interview from Washington, Lukens' spokesman, Bill Jarrell, said it was a mistake for the judge to claim Lukens was not apologetic because "it's absurd for someone to expect to show remorse for something they're innocent of."

Lukens went free after his lawyers posted $10,000 bond, pending appeal.

Ms. Coffman, now 17, could not be reached for comment. Her telephone has been disconnected. Her mother, Anna Coffman, was in the courtroom and showed no expression as the sentence was read.

Allegations that Lukens had sex with Ms. Coffman surfaced in February when Columbus television station WSYX broadcast a tape of a Nov. 11 meeting between Lukens and Anna Coffman.

Lukens did not know the meeting at a local fast-food restaurant was being taped. On the tape, Lukens offered to find Mrs. Coffman a government job after she accused him of "messing around" with her daughter on Nov. 6 and four years earlier, when the girl was 13.

Conviction on a misdemeanor does not automatically bar Lukens from Congress. But Ohio Republican Party Chairman Robert Bennett on June 1 called for Lukens to resign from Congress and the Ohio Republican State Committee. Bennett vowed that Lukens would not appear on the party ballot in 1990.

Student says he'll continue to fight for democracy

WALTHAM, Mass. (AP) — At 20, Shen Tong is already an outlaw in the eyes of the Chinese government, which has posted his name on a list of 21 students wanted for activities in the pro-democracy movement.

The lanky, self-assured fugitive said Friday that while he fears for his safety he intends to continue fighting for democracy in his homeland.

"We have to try our best," said Shen, who escaped China and arrived in the United States on June 11. "This movement is still a movement."

Shen, who is studying biology at Brandeis University, broke a self-imposed silence and gave an interview before a news conference in which he declared the Chinese student movement victorious.

Shen was among five executive members of an organizing committee for the April 27 demonstration at Beijing University, where he was a student. The demonstration was staged in response to a critical editorial the previous day in The People's Daily.

Shen was also a founder and leader of the Beijing Area Colleges' Dialogue Delegation, which tried May 18 to negotiate conditions with Chinese Premier Li Peng for the students to leave the square they had occupied for weeks before the troops moved in.

He was about one mile from Tiananmen Square on June 4, the day Chinese troops bore down with tanks and guns on the demonstrators and the people of Beijing.

Men standing beside him were shot dead, he said. He saw tanks bearing down on an angry, disbelieving throng.

"Beijing people were very brave," Shen said. "They didn't leave the street but walked around the bodies and in front of the soldiers. All of the soldiers were crazy, shooting people. I was just another brave Beijing person.

Shen escaped China under circumstances he refuses to reveal. He also declined to disclose anything about his family.

Shen belonged to the Olympic Institute, one of the groups that built the strategy and momentum of the movement. In China, university students customarily form small informal discussion groups along the lines of their particular discipline, he said.

The original aim of the students was to include the Communists in their efforts. But by fighting the student-led movement, the party showed it no longer was of the people but was their enemy, he said.

"When they declared martial law and imposed the most-wanted list, that means they stand opposed to the people," said Shen.

Shen had already won a place as a Wien scholar at Brandeis before the demonstration.

Alleged theft of $2 million in HUD funds being investigated

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — Federal prosecutors are looking into allegations that a Montgomery real estate broker kept more than $2 million that he was supposed to send to the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development, spending nearly $180,000 on cars.

U.S. Attorney Jim Wilson of Montgomery on Friday declined to comment about the Alabama HUD case or the broker, identified in HUD documents as Cy Walker. Wilson said he could not comment on pending investigative matters, with a meeting scheduled with HUD officials in about two weeks to review various potential cases.

An audit said the HUD money was placed in Walker's bank account, from which more than $1 million in checks had been written to cash, another $179,478 went to car dealers, $75,634 to retail stores and businesses, $238,000 to individuals or associates, and smaller amounts to others.

The bank account was depleted and closed on Nov. 9, 1987, the day after Walker allegedly pulled out of the offices of Rick's Lind-Davis Real Estate Inc. in Montgomery.

Attempts to reach Walker for comment were unsuccessful Friday. A Cy Walker is listed in the Montgomery residence phone book, but the number has been disconnected. Knox Argo, a Montgomery attorney who previously handled some closings with Walker, said he had not seen him in about a year.

The audit by the Office of Inspector General charged that an associate broker with Rick's Lind-Davis Real Estate Inc. failed to send HUD $2,011,915 from 67 sales closings that he handled for the federal agency.

The audit, covering from August 1984 to November 1987, also found that the company was late in remitting to HUD another $3.89 million from 148 sales, costing the government about $323,000 in lost interest.

No individuals were named in the audit. But documents in HUD's Board of Contract Appeals case file identify Walker as the associate broker.

A complaint filed with the HUD appeal board by Rick's Lind-Davis said Walker handled the HUD closings and controlled all the bank account records and files. The qualifying broker for the firm, Johnny M. Portis, did not learn about the missing HUD money until after Walker abandoned the premises of the firm on Nov. 8, 1987, taking all the HUD files with him, according to the complaint filed by Portis' attorney.

Joseph Carpenter, a Montgomery attorney, represents Rick's Lind-Davis and Portis, who closed down the company's operations and sold parts of it to another firm on Jan. 1, 1989. He said Portis did not know about the unremitted HUD funds until after Walker left the firm.

According to the audit, officials with the firm said they were not responsible for the $2,011,915 in unremitted sales proceeds. The Rick's Lind-Davis officials, according to the audit, said the HUD contract was with an associate broker for the firm and that, when they purchased the company in 1986, the former owners told them that the associate broker had the HUD account.

Accordingly, the audit said, the Rick's Lind-Davis officials "did not research or even review" the contract with HUD to handle closings "but continued to let things operate as they were before the purchase because their relationship with the associate broker was one of trust."

The audit said that the HUD contract required the firm, as the Area Management Broker for the federal agency, to establish an escrow account in the name of the firm and HUD. Instead, the audit said, the firm "allowed an associate broker to establish a regular commercial checking account...Although HUD appeared in the bank account name, we learned that this associate broker had sole control over the bank account."

"In addition, this broker collected all proceeds from the sale of HUD properties."

According to HUD officials, when the agency tried to see records from the account, the broker refused to authorize it. The audit said its findings were based on subpoenaed documents along with HUD records.

Jaruzelski not candidate for president

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski said Friday he doesn't intend to run for Poland's new presidency because the people see him as the man who imposed martial law, not the leader of reforms that followed, the government reported.

It said Jaruzelski, the Communist Party chief, recommended the interior minister, Gen. Czeslaw Kiszczak, for the job — a powerful post resembling the presidency created in the Soviet Union for Mikhail S. Gorbachev.

The party's Central Committee neither accepted nor rejected Jaruzelski's proposal. Instead, the plenum asked Jaruzelski to reconsider his decision, the state PAP news agency reported.

Party spokesman Jan Bisztyga said there would be a meeting in the near future to choose between Jaruzelski and Kiszczak, and the communist-allied Peasant and Democratic parties also would be consulted.

"I know well that public opinion associates me more often with martial law and less often with the line of reforms, with those so significant decisions of the 10th plenum," when the party agreed in principle to restore legal status to Solidarity, Jaruzelski told the Central Committee.

In his statement endorsing Kiszczak, Jaruzelski said, "in the eyes of the society, including also opposition circles, he (Kiszczak) is rightly considered as a leading representative of...reconciliation."

Jaruzelski stressed he was committed to removing obstacles to national reconciliation.

"When there is an obstacle to reconciliation, to uniting social forces, there is only one possible solution — even if that obstacle is Wojciech Jaruzelski," he said.

Anti-Jaruzelski demonstrators marched in the streets of Warsaw while the Central Committee met, hurling stones and gasoline bombs at police, who responded with water cannon.

The Central Committee convened Friday morning to choose a nominee for the presidency, which has been transformed from a ceremonial post. The president is to be elected by the legislature next week and the party nominee is considered certain of victory, although Solidarity won all but one of the seats put up for free election earlier in June.

Officials want the president in office before President Bush arrives for a three-day visit July 9.

Jaruzelski's election had been assumed since the new presidency was agreed upon by government and opposition negotiators. The agreements, signed in April, also legalized Solidarity and free elections.

In an interview with The Associated Press on Wednesday, however, he said he was not campaigning for the presidency and might not accept it without "at least a minimum of support" from the opposition. Solidarity legislators said last week they would not vote for Jaruzelski.

Kiszczak could be easier for Solidarity legislators to support because of Jaruzelski's connection with the martial law crackdown in December 1981 under which Solidarity, formed during strikes the year before, was suppressed and outlawed.

The 63-year-old army general, a Jaruzelski loyalist, directs Poland's extensive police network and helped conduct the government's war against Solidarity in much of the 1980s.

He won the Solidarity leadership's confidence, however, as leader of the government side in the "round table" negotiations. Also, he joined Jaruzelski during the January party meeting in threatening to resign unless Solidarity was made legal again.

The National Assembly, which will elect the president in joint session, is expected to convene as early as Tuesday. The communists have a 300-259 advantage.

Solidarity won 99 of the 100 seats in the new Senate and all 161 seats open to free election in the 460-member Sejm. One Solidarity senator-elect died of a heart attack Thursday, creating one vacancy in the Senate.

After the president is chosen, he is to name a premier to form a new government.

The president, who is limited to two six-year terms, will be commander-in-chief of the armed forces and be responsible for foreign relations. He may dissolve Parliament for new elections and declare one 90-day state of emergency.

Bank stops issuing Canadian dollar

TORONTO (AP) — The Bank of Canada stopped issuing dollar bills Friday in the latest step of a program to phase in the 11-sided, gold-colored "loonie" coin.

The Royal Canadian Mint has 240 million of the new $1 coins already in circulation and believes that any reluctance among Canadians to use them is fading, spokesman Michael Francis said.

Dollar bills remain legal currency indefinitely, but their life expectancy under normal use is from nine to 12 months. The $2 bill is now the smallest issued by the Bank of Canada.

Francis, in an interview from Ottawa, said banks and retailers might tire of handling both $1 coins and bills. He predicted that the coin might become standard by the fall.

"Demand for the dollar coin has gone up steadily since January," Francis said.

Youngsters defy lawn odds

By ROBIN FINN
New York Times News Service

WIMBLEDON, England — The two teen-agers who took Paris by storm earlier this month and captured the men's and women's singles titles at the French Open have continued to defy logic at Wimbledon.

Michael Chang of the United States and Arantxa Sanchez Vicario of Spain, both more at home on a clay court than a slippery lawn, were not expected to survive the first few rounds here.

The grass, a foreign foothold for both, was predicted to be an equalizer that would render moot the championships they brought to Wimbledon as the youngest winners of the French Grand Slam event.

But while other seeded players have fallen by the wayside, confounded by the close-clipped grass, the unsettling rain delays and the performance pressure this tournament inflicts with a chilly impartiality, the seventh-seeded Sanchez Vicario and the ninth-seeded Chang are toppling opponents without a blink.

Friday, Sanchez Vicario, who has modified her name to include the name of her mother, defeated Raffaella Reggi of Italy by 4-6, 6-3, 7-5, and Chang beat Ronald Agenor of Haiti, 4-6, 6-2, 6-1, 7-5.

The success of these two early bloomers, along with that of Monica Seles, 15, has been remarkable at a tournament where age and experience, like tradition, are expected to hold sway.

John McEnroe said he would remove his pants on Centre Court if Chang baselined his way through the draw to the final. He may live to regret that dare. Sanchez Vicario initially said she doubted that her game on grass had the polish to get her past the opening round. But she is now in pursuit of a quarterfinal meeting with Steffi Graf.

Sanchez Vicario, 17, got into a Centre Court dogfight with Reggi, a fellow baseliner, and rescued herself from elimination by scrambling out of a 3-5 third-set deficit. Her valiant victory sent her into the fourth round, twice as far as she has ever got here.

Even Chang, who emerged unscathed from his rematch with Agenor, whom he defeated in the French Open quarterfinals, admitted he could not find fault with the skepticism that seems to follow him and Sanchez Vicario everywhere they go on British soil.

"I think that's a very logical opinion," he said after using an intelligent mixture of serves, slices and volleys to stun Agenor and move into the third round. "You tend to give baseliners less of a chance on grass than on other surfaces."

Chang, 17, said the doubts over his ability to make the transition had only helped inspire him to prove the skeptics wrong.

"The more and more you play on grass, the more you understand the surface," said Chang, who revamped his play after his hesitancy about serving-and-volleying left him down a set against the hard-hitting Agenor.

"I play the way I know how to play," said Chang, who is better known for his endurance as a counterpuncher than for his flair for predatory play. "But if I'm getting beat, I'll change my style a bit."

Chang began darting toward the net in the second set and interspersed his ringing cross-court volleys with shorter, trickier shots.

The combination proved too much for Agenor, whose blasting serve kept coming straight back at him as if he were encountering a backboard as his opponent.

"I won the first set, 6-4, and then I don't know what happened," said Agenor, who found himself unable to match the multidimensional game Chang decided to try after the conservative approach failed him in the opening set.

"After the first set I thought I would win the match, but he surprised me a little. He showed today that he's a tough player even on grass."

The toughest players were Sanchez Vicario and Reggi, who used their racquets like slingshots in a most unfriendly fashion for 2 hours, 16 minutes. The match was suspended briefly by a shower just after Reggi broke Sanchez Vicario to go up, 4-3, in the final set.

When play resumed, Reggi held serve to take a 5-3 advantage. But Sanchez Vicario, who seemed able to use adversity to force her game to a bolder level, held serve as Reggi piloted three returns directly into the net.

In the ninth game of the set, with Reggi serving carefully but unaggressively to try to take the match, Sanchez Vicario fended off two match points and then broke Reggi to even the match at 5-5.

UTPB's Collins falls short

By BRAD WILLIAMS
Special to the MRT

LONDON — Odessa's Sandy Collins is competing in the world's most prestigious tennis tournament, the Lawn Tennis Championships, better known as Wimbledon.

In singles competition, Collins qualified for the main draw by winning three matches in last week's qualifying event. She first defeated the twelfth seed, Maya Kidowaki of Japan, 6-3, 6-2. Then, she defeated South Africa's Linda Barnard, 6-2, 6-0, before upsetting the No. 6 seed, Catherine Suire, of France.

In the first round of the main draw on Tuesday, Collins was forced to play the No. 16 seed, Susan Sloane, of Kentucky. Sloane, ranked No. 21 in the world, defeated Collins, 6-4, 6-0.

In the first round of doubles competition Friday, Collins and partner Eily Hakami of California, lost 7-6, 6-2, to the twelfth seeded Dutch-German duo of Manon Vollegras and Eva Pfaff.

Collins is still alive in two Wimbledon events. She is entered in the mixed doubles championship with Jean Fleurian of France. She will also compete in the Ladies' Plate competition, a traditional event for early-round singles' losers.

Collins is a native of California, but has lived in Odessa since playing for UTPB. Aside from being a popular star on the women's pro tour, Collins serves as assistant UTPB tennis coach.

What? Another pitchers' duel at Angel?

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

If this keeps up, Angels Stadium may become known as the Home of Fine Pitching, discarding its reputation as a Bombardier's Boudoir, a reputation earned over many long years and at the expense of a cast of shell-shocked pitchers too numerous to be listed.

Midland's Angels won again over Wichita, 6-2, Friday, but until a three-run burst in the eighth, this was one of those pitching duels that is changing the meaning of Hogan's Alley.

Dave Martinez, 8-4, after a shaky start and young Ricky Bones, no decision, were locked in a classic duel, more suited to San Antonio or Jackson environs for most of the game and Midland led only 3-2 going into the home eighth.

Martinez gave up both runs and three of the four hits he allowed in his seven inning stint in the first inning.

"It was my fault. I didn't start warming up early enough and just wasn't loose," said the right-hander from Austin, who has suffered through a couple of seasons of arm miseries.

"But they were coming after me pretty good and hit some good pitches."

Charles Hillemann beat out an infield hit, Pat Faries dropped a single into short center and Hillemann scored when Everett Graham couldn't hold Warren Newson's sac fly in left. Then Dave Hollins looped a run-scoring single into left. Wichita led 2-0 and was not exactly knocking the cover off the ball.

Hillemann's chopper through the left side in the fifth was the only other hit off Martinez, or anybody, for that matter. Jeff Richardson, with his fourth save, dispatched the Wranglers without a hit in the final two innings.

Giamatti won't stop hearing in Rose case

By MURRAY CHASS
New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — Lawyers for A. Bartlett Giamatti, the baseball commissioner, have decided not to go to the Ohio Supreme Court to try to block a hearing scheduled for Thursday in the Pete Rose case, a source in the commissioner's camp said Friday.

The decision would seem to leave the commissioner with only one option if he wants to avoid the hearing on Rose's request for a preliminary injunction that would indefinitely prevent Giamatti from hearing the case.

He could seek to have the case removed from the county level to the federal judicial level, but even that route seemed to be a difficult one.

Meanwhile, as talk of a potential deal between Giamatti and Rose continued, a baseball official made clear that Giamatti would not, as part of a deal, in any way relinquish his authority to hear the charges against Rose and decide if disciplinary action is appropriate.

"The one thing we would never negotiate is Bart's abdicating the decision-making process to somebody else," said Francis "Fay" Vincent, the deputy commissioner.

"I don't think we'd ever say we wouldn't look at an arrangement, but we wouldn't look at the process. Any negotiations for a deal would have to be on what happens with Mr. Rose, not on what Mr. Giamatti does with the decision-making process."

Rose filed a lawsuit in Hamilton County Common Pleas Court seeking to block Giamatti from being the decision-maker because, the Cincinnati Reds' manager contended, the commissioner had prejudged him and could not give him a fair hearing.

Judge Norbert A. Nadel agreed, issued a temporary restraining order and scheduled a hearing for Thursday.

The commissioner sought to have an appellate court suspend the restraining order while his appeal was heard, but a three-judge panel said it did not have jurisdiction and rejected the motion.

The commissioner's lawyers, the source said, decided against taking the case to Ohio's top court because they anticipated a similar decision.

They could try U.S. District Court, but they would face several problems there.

The most interesting is that the Southern District of Ohio has only three judges, and one of them is Carl Rubin, to whom Giamatti wrote the letter that prompted Nadel to say he had prejudged Rose.

The first step the commissioner's lawyers would have to take would be to try to remove the Reds from the case as a co-defendant with the commissioner.

As long as the Reds are co-defendants, the case would involve two "citizens" from the same state — Rose and the Reds — and the commissioner could not establish the diversity principle that is needed in federal court.

Lawyers and other legal experts who were asked suspect that Rose's lawyers included the Reds deliberately to prevent the diversity argument. The commissioner's lawyers, in seeking the Reds' removal, would presumably argue that the club has no standing in the case and was put there simply to block diversity.

The commissioner's lawyers could also get the case to federal court if they could show that some federal question is involved, but the lawsuit does not appear to include any questions of a federal nature.

In another matter, Judge William Mathews, assistant presiding judge of Hamilton County Common Pleas Court, scoffed Fridday at the implication that there was anything improper or unusual about campaign contributions made to Nadel by lawyers in the Rose case.

Tyrone big enough to have day in his honor

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

The Midland Jaycees honored Tyrone Thurman at their weekly meeting and Mayor Carroll Thomas officially declared Friday as "Tyrone Thurman Day." It was a sad day, indeed.

It means Midland and West Texas will have to share the former Midland Lee and Texas Tech star with the rest of the world from now on and everybody knows there isn't that much of the 5-3, 140-pound, (program weight) to go around.

Tech assistant Jack Tayrien, at the Midland Center luncheon to help honor the "littlest" All-American, alleviated that worry to an extent by hinting you can't see all of Tyrone without a microscope.

"He isn't the greatest athlete I ever saw, but he is the greatest competitor. And don't be surprised if he is not wearing the silver helmet with the big blue star on it next fall."

REFERENCE, of course, is to the fact that Thurman will be trying out for the Dallas Cowboys, after signing this spring as a free agent. And, of course, no one thinks he will make it, that is, unless your skepticism has been chased by one of those searing sideline punt returns.

George Wolf/Reporter Telegram

Tyrone Thurman, center, beams at a proclamation presented by mayor Carroll Thomas declaring Friday Tyrone Thurman day in Midland. Tech head coach Spike Dykes, right, looks on.

Texas Tech head coach Spike Dykes who, like Tayrien, coached Thurman both at Midland Lee High and as a Raider, was one of the earliest skeptics of Tyrone's chances.

When J.C. Gotcher told Dykes, "You've got to come over here and see this eighth grader. He's the darndest thing you've ever seen," Spike was impressed, but ...

A year later, Thurman was still wowing 'em at Lee Freshman school."

GOTCHER predicted, "He'll start for you next year." Spike tried to be nice, "He can't. He's too small."

Gotcher warned, "Spike, whatever you do, don't tell him that."

"And when he came to Lee High," relates Dykes, "to show you how smart we were, we put him on the sophomore team. He immediately set a record for touchdowns. So we moved him up to the JVs for a week, before we discovered that, too, was a mistake."

Thurman was a regular from then on, as Lee went to the state 5A finals in 1983 under Dykes and the 5A quarterfinals the next season under Tayrien.

"Tyrone doesn't have the little man complex," says Dykes, "He simply takes what he has, goes out and does the job."

ALTHOUGH he set three SWC records — most punt returns career, most kick returns for touchdowns in a season and most most yards returned in a season — Dykes feels there's a lot more to Thurman than his athletic ability.

"He has done well in football and basketball at Tech. He also has spoken to 5,000 young people while at Tech. It's unreal the influence he has had on poeple he has played with and associated with."

Mariners' pitcher puts ERA in check to beat Rangers, 4-3

Associated Press

Bill Swift, who had an 8.34 ERA in his last five starts, held Texas scoreless until the seventh inning as the Seattle Mariners beat Nolan Ryan and the Rangers.

Swift, 4-2, took a three-hit shutout into the seventh before yielding a leadoff single to Rick Leach and a triple to Pete Incaviglia. Mike Jackson relieved and retired two batters before Cecil Espy singled Incaviglia home.

Jackson gave up a run in the eighth on Julio Franco's RBI double and Mike Schooler pitched the ninth for his 17th save.

Ryan, 9-4, who had won his previous four decisions, gave up four runs and five hits in 5 1-3 innings after taking shutouts into the ninth inning in two of his previous three starts. He struck out eight, increasing his major-league-leading total to 136.

Greg Briley's fourth home run of the season gave Seattle a 1-0 lead in the first inning. After issuing a two-out walk to Jeffrey Leonard in the first, Ryan retired 12 straight batters before a two-out walk to Edgar Martinez in the fifth.

Ryan ran into problems in the sixth, yielding a leadoff single to Harold Reynolds, walking Briley and giving up an RBI single to Alvin Davis. Briley scored on Ryan's wild pitch and Ken Griffey Jr.'s RBI single made it 4-0 and knocked out Ryan.

Red Sox 3, Blue Jays 1

Dwight Evans doubled home the tie-breaking run with two out in the eighth inning and Mike Boddicker yielded five hits in eight innings as the Boston Red Sox beat Toronto, their first victory in the last eight meetings with the Blue Jays.

Mike Greenwell started the uprising against Toronto reliever David Wells, 2-3, with a two-out single. Greenwell was picked off first when Wells threw behind him as he broke for second. However, first baseman Fred McGriff had trouble getting the ball out of his glove and then threw late to second.

Greenwell was credited with a stolen base and scored on Evans' double. Evans scored an insurance run on Kevin Romine's single.

Boddicker yielded a run in the second inning. McGriff singled, took second when Lloyd Moseby beat out a bunt and came around on fly balls by Ernie Whitt and Rance Mulliniks. Right fielder Romine made a leaping catch of Whitt's drive at the wall to rob him of extra bases.

Boddicker then blanked the Blue Jays until Rob Murphy took over in the ninth for his third save.

Toronto starter Jimmy Key held the Red Sox scoreless until the seventh when they tied the score on Rick Cerone's leadoff double, Ed Romero's sacrifice and Randy Kutcher's sacrifice fly that scored pinch runner Dana Williams. Key allowed six hits in seven innings before giving way to Wells.

Boddicker worked out of a bases-loaded jam in the fourth when Nelson Liriano grounded back to the mound for the third out.

Athletics 5, Indians 0

Bob Welch, just off the disabled list, struggled through five scoreless innings and Dave Henderson broke out of a severe slump with three hits and an RBI as the Oakland Athletics beat the Cleveland Indians.

Welch, 9-4, who injured his right groin June 12, was in constant trouble, allowing seven hits and four walks. The Indians left the bases loaded in the third, fourth and ninth innings and stranded 13 runners, 10 in scoring position.

Gene Nelson pitched three hitless innings in relief of Welch but needed last-out help from Rick Honeycutt after the Indians loaded the bases on two hits and walk. Honeycutt retired Pete O'Brien on a fly ball for his ninth save as the A's snapped a three-game losing streak. They had lost six in a row on the road.

Loser Greg Swindell, 10-2, who had won his last six starts, yielded five runs and 11 hits in 6 2-3 innings. He kept the game scoreless until the fifth when singles by Ron Hassey and Mike Gallego and a walk to Rickey Henderson loaded the bases with one out.

Tony Phillips hit a sacrifice fly and Dave Henderson and Mark McGwire followed with run-scoring singles for a 3-0 lead.

Kansas City Royals' catcher Bob Boone searches high and low for a dropped ball as Chicago's Fred Manrique searches for the plate while scoring on a Harold Baines single.

Angels 7, Twins 2

Chuck Finley, who had lost four of his last five starts, stopped Minnesota on six hits and Chili Davis and Tony Armas homered on consecutive pitches in the fifth inning as the California Angels defeated the Twins.

Finley, 9-6, was the American League Pitcher of the Month in May with a 4-0 record, 1.37 ERA and three complete games in that stretch. He returned to form after giving up two earned runs in the first inning and pitched his seventh complete game.

The Angels for ther sixth time in the last seven games and remained one-half game of first-place Oakland in the American League West. Fifth-place Minnesota fell seven games back.

The Twins went ahead 2-0 on Kirby Puckett's sacrifice fly and Gene Larkin's RBI single. The Angels took the lead with three runs in the second off Allan Anderson, 9-5. Armas, Jack Howell and Dick Schofield had RBI singles as the Angels ended Anderson's string of 13 consecutive scoreless innings.

Yankees 4, Brewers 3

Steve Sax raised his batting average to .331 with three hits, including a tie-breaking double that drove in an unearned run in the eighth inning and gave the New York Yankees a win over the Milwaukee Brewers.

Winner Andy Hawkins, 9-6, yielded nine hits and all the Milwaukee runs in eight innings. Dave Righetti pitched a perfect ninth for his 15th save.

With the score tied 3-3, Wayne Tolleson reached first when third baseman Paul Molitor bobbled his grounder with one out in the eighth. Tolleson took second when Roberto Kelly singled sharply off Molitor's glove and scored when Sax doubled inside third.

Chuck Crim, 7-5, the third of four Milwaukee pitchers, was the loser. He relieved Tony Fossas with two out in the seventh and allowed a game-tying single to pinch hitter Ken Phelps.

The Yankees took a quick 2-0 lead off rookie Jaime Navarro when the first four batters to face him — Sax, Luis Polonia, Don Mattingly and Mel Hall — singled. With runners at second and third and no one out, Navarro prevented further scoring and the Brewers pecked away for a 3-2 lead.

Robin Yount's RBI single in the third made it 2-1 and Greg Brock tied it in the sixth with an upper-deck home run, his third of the season.

Milwaukee went ahead in the seventh when Terry Francona doubled and pinch runner Mike Felder scored when center fielder Kelly overran Jim Gantner's single.

Royals 6, White Sox 3

Bob Boone's 800th career RBI capped Kansas City's five-run, seven-hit third inning against Jerry Reuss and Danny Tartabull homered in his return from the disabled list as the Royals beat the Chicago White Sox.

Charlie Leibrandt, 5-8, won for only the second time in his last six starts, allowing eight hits and three runs in seven innings, including a leadoff homer to Eddie Williams in the seventh. Jeff Montgomery pitched the last two innings for his second save.

The 41-year-old Boone, signed as a "new look" free agent last Nov. 30, has 344 American League RBIs. Over his last 20 games, Boone is 24-for-63 — .382 — with 17 RBIs.

Reuss, 7-4, lasted only 2 2-3 innings, giving up eight singles and losing for only the second time in his last seven starts.

The White Sox took a 2-0 lead in the first inning on Harold Baines' RBI double and Carlton Fisk's single. It was Fisk's sixth RBI in the last three games.

But Frank White opened the Royals third with the first of seven Kansas City singles. One out later, Kurt Stillwell singled and Kevin Seitzer, George Brett, Bo Jackson and Pat Tabler followed with run-scoring singles. After Tartabull struck out, Boone's RBI single chased Reuss.

Tartabull, out since June 15 with a badly bruised left knee, homered off Bill Long in the eighth. It was his ninth homer and first since .

The Royals, who had lost eight of their previous 12 games, are 18-5 when Tartabull, Brett and Jackson are in the lineup.

Tigers 16, Orioles 5

Mike Heath hit two solo homers and Chet Lemon added a three-run shot and two other RBIs as the Detroit Tigers overcame a 5-1 deficit and defeated the Baltimore Orioles.

Heath, who had four hits and three RBIs, hit his first homer with two out in the fifth to make it 5-2. With two out in the sixth, Alan Trammell singled off Baltimore starter Bob Milacki and Keith Moreland walked. Fred Lynn singled Trammell home before Lemon hit his second home run of the season, giving Detroit a 6-5 lead.

Heath hit his second homer leading off the seventh against Mark Thurmond and the Tigers broke it open with eight runs in the eighth, their biggest inning of the year.

Mike Smith, making his major-league debut, was charged with all eight runs and yielded seven hits, two walks and a wild pitch in 1 1-3 innings. His ERA is 54.14.

Detroit's 16 runs and 18 hits were season highs and came one night after Baltimore pitchers yielded 11 runs and 19 hits to Toronto.

Zane's rotten luck

NY Times News Service

Braves starter Zane Smith has a 1-11 record, the worst in baseball.

But of his losses, three were by one run, three by two runs and one by three runs, and twice he's left the game with a lead, only to see the Braves' bullpen lose it for him.

Knepper loses ninth; Astros fall to Expos

NL Roundup

Dennis Martinez pitched a five-hitter to win his seventh straight decision and Andres Galarraga hit a two-run homer as the Montreal Expos defeated the Houston Astros.

Martinez, 8-1, struck out six and walked two as he went the distance for the second time this year.

Bob Knepper, 3-9, gave up nine hits in six innings to lose his third straight decision.

Galarraga followed an infield single by Rex Hudler in the first inning with his 12th homer for the Expos.

Montreal added a run in the third on singles by Hudler and Galarraga and a throwing error by Houston shortstop Rafael Ramirez, allowing Hudler to score from third. The Expos made it 5-0 in the fourth on a two-run single by Otis Nixon.

The Expos' final run came in the fifth when Mike Fitzgerald doubled home Damaso Garcia, who singled.

Houston got its run in the sixth when Terry Puhl reached third on a three-base error by right fielder Hubie Brooks and scored on a wild pitch by Martinez.

Brooks bumped his head when he crashed into the fence on the play, but he walked off the field without help.

Mets 11, Reds 1

Darryl Strawberry, Ron Darling and Howard Johnson hit three-run homers, powering the New York Mets over the Cincinnati Reds.

Darling's three-run shot, his second homer in two games and second of his career, came in the sixth inning after catcher Mackey Sasser walked and Kevin Elster singled. Darling is the first Mets pitcher to hit two home runs in a season since 1983, when Walt Terrell had three. Tom Seaver hit two in 1972.

Johnson made it 11-1 in the ninth with his 21st homer, and Darling, 6-5, gave up only one run on six hits in eight innings for his second victory over Cincinnati this season.

Rick Mahler, 8-8, gave up seven hits and four runs before being replaced by a pinch-hitter in the sixth inning. It was first appearance against New York since he was signed by Cincinnati before the season.

The Mets took a 4-0 lead in the third inning after singles by Darling and Juan Samuel and a run-scoring double by Johnson. Then Strawberry, out of action since June 19, hit the first pitch over the left-center field wall for his 16th homer.

Strawberry was out after breaking a bone in his toe when hit by a pitch by Kevin Gross of the Montreal Expos.

Cincinnati, which didn't get a hit until Lenny Harris' single to open the fourth inning, scored its run in the fifth. Paul O'Neill opened with a single, took third on Luis Quinones' single and scored on Bo Diaz's groundout.

The Mets added four runs in the ninth on Dave Magadan's RBI single and Johnson's homer.

Phillies 4, Braves 2, 1st game
Braves 3, Phillies 1, 2nd game

Andres Thomas drove in two runs and Derek Lilliquist allowed only one run in 6 1-3 innings as the Atlanta Braves defeated the Philadelphia Phillies to salvage a split of their doubleheader.

Terry Mulholland allowed two hits in eight innings before tiring in the ninth as the Phillies defeated the Braves 4-2 in the first game.

Lilliquist, 5-4, gave up five hits and got relief help from Jim Acker and Joe Boever in the nightcap. Acker allowed one hit in 1 2-3 innings and Boever pitched hitless ball in the ninth for his 13th save.

After the Phillies jumped ahead 1-0 in the fifth on Bob Dernier's RBI single, the Braves scored two unearned runs in the top of the sixth.

With one out, Jeff Blauser was safe on third baseman Charlie Hayes' error before Lonnie Smith singled Blauser to third and he scored on Thomas' sacrifice fly. Dale Murphy then singled and Geronimo Berroa followed with an RBI double.

The Braves added their final run in the seventh inning when Blauser tripled and scored on Thomas' single.

Mulholland, 1-2, acquired from the San Francisco Giants on June 18, allowed only a bunt single by Jeff Treadway in the third inning and a single by Blauser in the fourth until the ninth, when Smith singled and Thomas homered with one out. Jeff Parrett got the last two outs for his second save.

The Phillies scored two runs in the second after Randy Ready reached first on third baseman Blauser's error. Hayes, in his first Philadelphia at-bat, doubled Ready to third before Dickie Thon and Steve Lake followed with RBI singles.

In the fifth, the Phillies scored two more runs, knocking out losing pitcher Zane Smith, 1-12, who has lost eight straight decisions.

Mulholland opened with a single and Dernier walked. Tommy Herr singled in Mulholland, moving Dernier to third, and he scored when first baseman Gerald Perry booted Von Hayes' grounder.

Cardinals 4, Padres 3

Scott Terry scattered nine hits through five innings and hit his second major-league homer as the St. Louis Cardinals beat San Diego and snapped the Padres' four-game winning streak.

Terry's home run came off Walt Terrell, 4-11, who lost his sixth straight start since last winning on May 27. Bip Roberts tripled, singled twice and walked, scoring all three San Diego runs.

Tom Brunansky's run-scoring double keyed a three-run St. Louis second after Roberts tripled to start the game for the Padres and scored on Roberto Alomar's single.

Brunansky's hit scored Terry Pendleton, who singled. Tony Pena singled home Brunansky, and Vince Coleman and Milt Thompson each singled with two outs to give the Cardinals a 3-1 edge.

Roberts singled in the third and scored on Jack Clark's two-out triple, but St. Louis made it 4-2 in the fourth when Terry homered on a 0-2 count.

Terry, 6-7, became the first Cardinals pitcher to hit two home runs in one season since Bob Forsch did it in 1987. Bob Gibson holds the St. Louis team record, twice hitting five home runs in one season.

San Diego scored its third run on Marvell Wynne's grounder after Roberts and Alomar each singled and Clark walked in the fifth.

Future still uncertain for Celtics' top choice

By ED GOLDEN

BOSTON (AP) — Dino Radja arrived in the United States Friday bleary-eyed and without a contract, but excited about the possibility of playing for the Boston Celtics.

"I will do what is best for me," said Radja, a 6-foot-11 forward from Yugoslavia selected by the Celtics in the second round of Tuesday's NBA draft.

Radja, still under contract to his amateur team in Yugoslavia, wore a Celtics cap and showed off his number on a Boston uniform while sitting behind the desk of Celtics President Red Auerbach.

But the introduction was surrounded by uncertainty, which was not made any clearer by general manager Jan Volk.

"It's like any person who is drafted. We'll see what happens," said Volk, comparing Radja's contract with Jugoplastika to an NCAA contract and an NBA contract. "It's an amateur contract.

"We understand he wants to play in the NBA, we're not looking at this point for any confrontation" with Yugoslav officials, Volk said.

Officials of the Jugoplastika team said Thursday they have Radja under contract until 1992.

"The NBA must respect contracts between players and their clubs," Jugoplastika manager Josip Bilic said. "We have no intention of selling our players in America."

Radja, a member of Yugoslavia's silver-medal Olympic team last year, is primarily an inside player who can play the running game the Celtics developed last season.

Radja said he was looking forward to playing with the Celtics' veterans, especially center Robert Parish.

"I can learn a lot from him, and he can learn one thing from me," Radja said. But when asked what that might be, he said with a grin, "I don't know."

Radja admitted he needed to work on strengthening his arms to be able to compete in the NBA. "I'm not so strong right now," he said.

He displayed plenty of strength in helping Jugoplastika win the recent European Champions Cup and Yugoslavia the European championship this month.

Batman and Rose duke it out

By MARIO FOX

CHICAGO (AP) — Pete Rose's card was a hot item. So were Negro League sets, and even Batman photos were selling as hundreds of baseball card fans and sports memorabilia buffs crowded into a hotel exhibition hall for the 10th National Sports Collectors Convention.

Holy Babe Ruth! Batmania at a sports collectors' show?

"Batman was kind of a sporty guy in the way he dresses. Like baseball players are kids' heroes, Batman is a kid's hero. And we're trying to keep up with the trends. We've sold a few," Stanley Antonoff, a wholesaler from Dumont, N.J., said Thursday night.

About 600 exhibitors have set up shop, displaying their cards, stamps, programs, old uniforms, figurines, pennants, souvenirs and other sports items.

"Its the largest convention for number of booths, and hopefully, the largest crowd that has ever attended one of these shows," said convention chairman Bruce Paynter, a Chicago-area lawyer who has a collection that includes 1910 tobacco baseball cards.

The convention, which runs through Sunday at a downtown hotel, is expected to attract some 30,000 collectors. One lucky person will walk off with a 1952 Topps' Mickey Mantle rookie baseball card, worth an estimated $6,000, at a drawing Sunday.

ANGELS

Reed Peters pulled Midland even with a two-run homer in the third after a Gary DiSarcina infield bleeder that stretched his hitting streak to eight games.

"He hung a slider," said Peters, "but that's about the only mistake Bones made all night."

Bones notched three of his six strikeouts in the fifth and then retired for the night. He has had back trouble.

"He is one of the best prospects in the San Diego organization," said Max Oliveras, who turned his managerial chores over to Gary Ruby Friday. "He's only 19 or 20. I managed his father in Puerto Rico and I've known him since he was knee high."

Rafael Chavez, 0-3, surrendered the deciding run in the sixth when Dan Grunhard took second when his single was misplayed in left, moved to third on Steve DeAngelis' grounder to second and scored on Chris Cron's sac fly, his Texas League leading 60th RBI of the season.

The three run eighth off veteran Jim Lewis clinched it. A walk to Grunhard, a single by DeAngelis, Cron hit by a pitch and then Bob Rose stuffed it into the win column with a two-run single to left.

It leaves Midland 11-3 and Wichita 7-7 in the second half, but, remembering the first half, this is no time to relax with four games left in the series.

"This was decided by pitching and defense," said Ruby. "We took Dave (Martinez) out after seven because his arm felt a little tender and he was tiring. Dave has worked too hard to jeopardize it all now."

The defense: two double plays, one launched by second baseman Scott Cerny with a nifty stop and spin-around throw to DiSarcina in the fifth; in the third, Cerny had Hollins using nasty words after making a running leap to his left to one hand his banjo bid to right; and in the eighth, Cron robbed Hillemann of a three-hit night when he dove toward the line to glove his liner. As it turned out, Hillemann's sizzler was the closest Richardson came to trouble.

HALO HOOPS: Tonight at 7, one of the Angels' new faces, Chris Beasley 1-1, makes his third start for Midland against Omar Olivares, 7-6 ... Sunday it's Andy Benes, 8-3, for Wichita against lefty Frank DeMichele, 2-1 ... Bones was 28-11 in A ball the last two seasons, 12-5 at Charleston, Sally League, and 15-6 at Riverside, Cal League ... Midland whip arm Luis Merejo hopes to be back in the Angels' bullpen after this homestand. He went on the DL with an injured heel, but has been throwing to stay in shape ... Wrangler catcher Mike Basso played his college ball at the University of Houston...

TYRONE

Man of the hour Thurman acknowledged the support of the City of Midland "for backing me in all the things I have done and will do. But anything I have accomplished has not been one person."

Thurman referred not only to teammates, but a supportive family. Let's make that supportive family. Vivian, his mother, is so volatile in her enthusiasm that Curtis, his father, sits somewhere else for safety's sake.

Thurman thanked them "for bringing me up the right way."

As for his feats, "It's not the size, the stature of the body, but what you have in your heart."

The luncheon, the mayor's proclamation, the Jaycees plaque at the end, it was all pretty emotional for the little guy. He turned to the coach who guided him through high school and college and said, "I love you coach."

It may be the only time you'll ever see Tyrone Thurman choke up in the final seconds of anything.

Last year we fed millions of hungry people in the United States. You can help us. We're The Salvation Army.

Betsy King's 3-under par 69 moved her into first place in the LPGA duMaurier Classic in Montreal Friday.

King maintains lead

Associated Press

MONTREAL — Betsy King shot a 3-under-par 69 on Friday to maintain a one-stroke lead in the $600,000 du Maurier Classic, while Nancy Lopez had the day's best round, 67, to move into a tie for third.

Tammie Green matched King's round over the 6,261-yard Beaconsfield Golf Club to hold second place halfway through the richest tournament on the LPGA Tour.

Lopez, who returned to the tour after a three-week absence to be with her ailing father in New Mexico, made seven birdies and two bogeys to move into a tie with Deb Richard for third, three shots behind King, who was eight under par for the 36 holes. Richard shot a second-round 70.

LPGA

Amy Alcott, the 1979 champion, was tied at four under with Jane Geddes, Laura Davies and Beth Daniel. Davies and Daniel each shot 69, Alcott 70 and Geddes 71 in the third of the four major LPGA tournaments, which carries a top prize of $90,000.

King, this year's money leader with $365,986 and winner of four tournament this season, used the hard, sun-baked fairways to birdie all four par-5 holes but it was the putter, her best weapon, that saved her after bogeying the 17th.

King rebounded by sinking a 25-oot putt on 18 to keep the lead.

Beard takes one stroke lead at PGA U.S. Senior Open

By BOB GREEN

LIGONIER, Pa. (AP) — Frank Beard, as patient and conservative as ever, put together a 3-under-par 69 Friday and took a one-stroke lead in the second round of the U.S. Seniors Open Golf Championship.

Beard, who returned to competition when he became eligible for the over-50 set two months ago, moved in front with a 36-hole total of -139, five under par.

At the tournament's halfway point he held a one-shot lead over Don Bies, Al Geiberger and Bobby Nichols.

"This is all brand new to me," said Beard, who led golf's money-winners 20 years ago, then left competitive golf entirely eight years ago.

"It feels great. I'm still juggling, trying to put the pieces together, in my swing and in my own psychological comfort zone," he said.

"But, yes, it's great. Three months ago, three weeks ago, three days ago, I would have had no expectation of leading the U.S. Open. But this is a part of you that never burns out. There's that tiny flame that never goes away.

"Maybe it's as simple as this: this is what I do, play competitive golf. It's all I've done or wanted to do since I was 12 years old. To be able to do it again is beyond anything I've dreamed of."

Enberg blasts mens' tennis, colleague

By JOHN FREEMAN
Copley News Service

WIMBLEDON, England — Of the many things that amaze NBC's Dick Enberg about his colleague Bud Collins, one stands out like a sore thumb.

Enberg says he simply can't believe how Collins, a lifelong tennis writer and the game's leading booster, puts up with the game's often selfish top players.

Every year that Enberg anchors NBC's weekend French Open and Wimbledon coverage, that leaves him dumbfounded, he says.

"Bud's concern, compassion and embracing of a sport that has so many despicable people amazes me," said Enberg, everybody's Mr. Nice Guy who's usually inclined to praise the sports and athletes he covers."

Not so with male tennis players, not at all.

"As a group, they are by far the biggest, well, I'm trying not to use the word 'jerks,'" Enberg said as he relaxed in NBC's mobile unit here. "Let's just say that they are the most uncooperative, unpleasant athletes I've ever been around.

"In baseball, you can always get to somebody around the batting cage. The Steelers' Chuck Noll may be tough to corral, for example, but sooner or later, you're gonna get to him. In basketball, football and baseball, it's the same.

"But here is a sport in which all there are is two players (in the finals). And do you think we could get those players — on the night before the championship — to spend a half-hour with NBC, with no cameras, just for a personal anecdote to humanize them before the big match?

"No, they go out of their way to ignore us."

Who, in particular?

"All of them ... Ivan Lendl, Jimmy Connors, Mats Wilander, John McEnroe, although he's gotten better.

"Tim Mayotte is the best. There just aren't many more bright, sensitive tennis players who understand the role of TV in the success of their sport."

"I'd like to get 'em all in a room for two minutes and on a blackboard draw a picture of a tennis racket and an arrow to a dollar sign and an arrow to a 'TV set,'" said Enberg.

To clarify, all players are required to meet with the media as a group after every match, not only at Wimbledon, but in all sanctioned tournaments.

What Enberg decries is the athletes' frequent refusal to sit down with NBC for long, biographical sessions, the kind of features ABC popularized with "Up-Close and Personal" in its Olympic coverage.

"They don't even say, 'I'm sorry, maybe later and set a date,'" said Enberg. "It's just, 'No, I'm busy.'

"They are not very pleasant people to be around.

"The women are quite different. But a few months ago, Steffi Graf ... she chased our camera people away because we were just watching her hit in practice at a tournament in Hilton Head (S.C.).

"You feel like a fool, chasing after them to try and do a nice feature story that can only benefit them."

Continued Enberg: "Lendl has passed out his latest dictum that he will only do interviews (on NBC) with me, not with Bud. He's telling us how we should do our interviews."

CHANG

Reggi first failed to claim the match when she raced to meet Sanchez Vicario's drop shot but slammed her forehand into the net from midcourt.

Reggi, who said she had befriended a millionaire who owns the only grass court in Italy to give herself a Wimbledon practice court, again secured match point but again misfired a forehand.

Sanchez Vicario noticed her opponent wilting, and gained a break point by backing Reggi into a corner and rushing to net to send the Italian's weak return rocketing down the line.

Sanchez Vicario then blasted two backhand volleys at Reggi, who could not keep up and sent her replay wide. Sanchez Vicario held serve to go ahead, 6-5.

Then, sensing that Reggi's spirit had been broken, she won her fourth straight game with volleys so powerful that Reggi did not even make the attempt to snare the backhand that put Sanchez Vicario into the fourth round.

"Now I feel confidence in my game," Sanchez Vicario said. "When you pass the first round, you start to play much better."

MISL approves Sidekicks owner

DALLAS (AP) — David Paschal was unanimously approved as the majority owner of the Dallas Sidekicks Friday by the Major Indoor Soccer League owners.

"We had a conference call with the league, and they approved me as the new majority owner of the Dallas Sidekicks, as of today," Paschal said Friday. "The City Council approved our lease and note with Reunion Arena on Wednesday night, and we posted our letter of credit to the league on Thursday. We're locked in and ready to go."

McCumber pushes aside pain for lead

By JOE MOOSHIL

OAK BROOK, Ill. (AP) — Mark McCumber, wearing a corset and battling an aching back, shared the lead with Paul Azinger Friday after two rounds of the $1 million Western Open Golf Tournament.

McCumber shot a 67 after an opening-round 68 for a two-round total of 9-under-par 135. Azinger matched him with a 68 to go with his opening-day 67 over the Butler National course.

Chip Beck, the opening-round leader with a 65, had a 71 and was one shot behind the leaders at 136. Leonard Thompson, with a 69, was fourth with a 137, one shot ahead of Greg Norman, Peter Jacobsen and Russ Cochran.

Loren Roberts had the best round of the day, a 66 that put him at 139 along with Ray Stewart, Blaine McCallister, Mark Wiebe and Larry Mize.

Submarine's crew to visit namesake

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — The crew of the USS City of Corpus Christi will be spending the Fourth of July holiday in the Texas city from which it got its name.

The 360-foot-long submarine, which has a crew of 127, is making its third visit to Corpus Christi.

Mayor Betty Turner and the crew of the nuclear-powered submarine surfaced in Corpus Christi Friday. Plans called for the mayor to board the submarine at Port Aransas.

"They keep trying to talk me out of it," said Ms. Turner, with a loud laugh. "They keep telling me about all these horrible things I'll have to do, like ride out to it in a rubber raft. But they won't talk me out of it."

Entertainment — including a beach tournament, golf and softball — has been planned for the submarine's sailors. And on Saturday, the crew will be treated to a concert by the country group Alabama.

Scriptures Selected by The American Bible Society

A Symbol of Nobility

The bald eagle, a noble bird, emblem of America.

And yet it was not the choice of Benjamin Franklin, one of our wisest patriots.

To emphasize the difference between the world's first democracy and the warlike, aristocratic powers of Europe, Franklin chose the docile turkey, so common to America—instead of a bird of prey—to symbolize the United States.

But the eagle, long a sign of courage, freedom and power, caught the fancy of Franklin's fellow patriots gathered at Philadelphia in 1787.

To them "noble" meant more than hereditary rank.

Noble also meant "an exalted moral character, admirable in conception, stately"—all qualities epitomizing the democratic experiment called the United States.

And to this day the United States strives to retain that noble character symbolized by its emblem, embodied by its spiritual heritage.

As women in clergy increase, sexual harassment on rise

RELIGION

NEW YORK (AP) — Shocked at its extent, churches are grappling with a newly recognized problem in their own domain — sexual harassment of women, particularly female clergy.

Concern about it has risen as increasing numbers of women have entered the ordained ministry, traditionally a profession of males and largely limited to them until modern times.

The trouble, however, has surfaced among lay women as well as clergywomen.

It has turned up in "every setting of the church," declared the board of directors of the United Church of Christ's Coordinating Center for Women in Church and Society, after reviewing reports about it.

One of the center's research projects found that of 138 women clergy surveyed, 45 percent of them said they had been sexually harassed in the workplace, that is, in church precincts.

"It's a startling figure," said Marilyn Breitling of St. Louis, the center's executive director. "The harassment was not identified by type, but no matter how you define it, that's an inordinately high number.

"We were shocked."

However, there has been little or no awareness of the problem until recently, she said, but it now is drawing increased attention in major Protestant denominations, most of which now ordain women.

"It was very, very hidden and people did not talk about it, but now they're beginning to talk about it in a straightforward way, and seek ways to deal with it," she said in a telephone interview.

Especially in church, "you expect to be treated with respect and dignity," she said. For church colleagues "to intimidate, take advantage, harass or molest is just unconscionable.

"Unfortunately, those kind of things are happening. Harassment is occuring even in the church. The church needs to speak to that problem in its own life, just as it speaks to things in the culture at large."

Among lay women, the center's survey found 20 percent of them reported incidents of sexual harassment within the church, less than half the proportion of women clergy doing so.

The 1.7-million-member United Church through its antecedant Congregationalism (merged in 1957 with the Evangelical and Reformed Church) pioneered women's ordination, beginning in the 1850's.

Sixteen percent of the denomination's 10,000 clergy are women.

Other Protestant bodies, including Presbyterians, Lutherans, United Methodists, Episcopalians and others, have begun ordaining women only since the 1950's. More than 20,000 women now are among U.S. clergy.

Sexual harassment has aroused concern in several denominations. The Presbyterian Church (USA) last week called for development of a church-wide policy on sexual misbehavior in the church household.

In most denominations, "all of us are very much concerned about the issue," said Ann Dubois, a Louisville, Ky., Presbyterian specialist on women in church employment.

A special study about it is under way in the Northeast.

"It's no respecter of denominations," Mrs. Breitling said. "It's a very common experience. It's also one we've avoided dealing with. But the issue is coming to the fore in most every denomination."

The United Methodist Church at its 1986 governing conference said sexual harassment has been documented in congregations, agencies, seminaries and other institutions. One limited survey found one in eight United Methodist women reported being sexually harassed in church environs.

Pastor preaches from roof when school enrollment up

By SCOTT HALLMAN

VIDOR, Texas (AP) — Members of Northwest Baptist Church received the word from on high one recent Sunday morning.

Their pastor, the Rev. Joe Constantine, preached from the roof of the church. His rooftop sermon grew out of a challenge he made half in jest to one of the church deacons, who was helping him repair the roof of the church parsonage soon after he became pastor, Constantine said. Constantine told the deacon it would be nice if the parsonage had a patio and then issued the deacon a challenge.

"If we get 150 people in Sunday school will you give me a patio?" he asked the deacon. The deacon agreed, and when Constantine told the congregation about the bet, someone asked what the church would get out of the bargain. So Constantine offered to preach from the roof if the church met its Sunday school membership goal.

But prospects for getting 150 people to attend Sunday school weren't good. For the past 20 years, attendance in the classes and worship services steadily had dropped. When he became pastor in October 1987, about 20 people attended Sunday school, he said.

"When the church called me it was at a crossroads," he said. "They had to decide between hiring a full-time pastor or a bi-vocational pastor (a pastor who works a full-time job outside the church)."

Deciding to become pastor was a difficult decision for him and his wife Janice, Constantine said. Although he wanted to become a pastor, he was very comfortable in his job as youth director at First Baptist Church of Stowell and his full-time job at Mobil Chemical Co. in Beaumont, he said.

When he first visited the church, he found the parsonage in need of major repairs and a nearly empty church in an economically depressed neighborhood, he said.

"Janice didn't say much and I didn't either, but I knew what she was thinking. I wasn't so sure if this was the right place for us," he said.

He preached at the church, and his mind was made up.

"That Sunday when I stepped in the foyer I knew that this is where I should be. I didn't hear any voices, I just knew in my heart." Credit for the church's turn-around should go to its members, who worked hard to get their friends and family out to the church and give him the support that he needed, Constantine said.

Last month, Sunday school attendance reached 154 and it was time for Constantine to keep his promise. Because he had done carpentry work in the past, he said he was not afraid to walk on the roof.

The piano was moved outside and chairs arranged on the church's west side so that the congregation could be shaded by pine trees on the church lawn. Instead of merely preaching for the roof, he got an idea that made his sermon more meaningful, Constantine said.

With the help of an artistic church member, he drew a map of the ancient Holy Land on several bed sheets, tracing the route God instructed Abraham to take and the route Moses took in leading the Israelites out of Egypt. The sheet map was placed on the roof.

As he preached, Constantine walked the routes outlined on the map. He talked about how God had met the needs of his people then and how he had done the same thing for their church now. The experience helped him grow spiritually, Constantine said.

"God still moves. I learned that you don't need a big building or a lot of finances. God still meets the needs of his people." And he said he expects to get his patio soon.

Macedonia schedules homecoming service

The Macedonia Baptist Church, 201 S. Carver St., will hold its annual Homecoming Service July 9.

Special speakers are the Rev. Lonnie Chase, associate pastor at the Greater St. James Baptist Church of Fort Worth, and the Rev. Bill Gilbert, associate pastor of Thankful Baptist Church at Decatur, Ga. Both are former Midlanders. Chase will speak at 11 a.m. and Gilbert at 2:30 p.m.

Chase

Gilbert

The son of Rufus and Nell Chase, Chase was a member of Macedonia Baptist Church until 1966 when his family moved to Fort Worth.

Chase is active in many civic, religious and community organizations in Fort Worth. He serves as executive office and secretary of the Baptist Ministers Union of Tarrant County and vicinity, executive board member of the Fort Worth Clergy and on the Police Advisory Board. He also is active in the congregation's district association and within the national Baptist convention.

"Above all of his associations, Rev. Chase considers his most important identification is as a child of God, born of his spirit, called and chosen by him to preach his gospel," says a release from the church.

Gilbert, a member of Macedonia Baptist Church when he lived in Midland, graduated from Carver Junior/Senior High and attended Huston-Tillotson College, Austin. At Georgia State University he earned an associate degree in respiratory therapy. He is a member of Omega Psi Phi Fraternity, the Dekalb County NAACP and the National Association of Real Estate Brokers.

"He is the proud father of four boys and three girls," the release says. "As with Rev. Chase, he is a child of God."

The public is invited to hear Chase and Gilbert speak.

Retiring nuns, monks hurting church budgets

By JUDY DAUBENMIER

NAZARETH, Mich. (AP) — For 53 years, Sister Alice Trese labored in the Lord's vineyard as a college registrar and social worker for the Sisters of St. Joseph.

Now 89, Sister Alice spends her days in the order's retirement home, a wing on the convent she entered as a young woman in 1929.

"I can't get used to the idea I can't do what I used to do," says Sister Alice, who worked as a receptionist and in the order's laundry even after retiring seven years ago. "I can't get used to the idea of failing health."

Now, Sister Alice and her retired friends attend Mass every day, say their rosaries, and root for the Detroit Tigers just like they have since their younger days.

These frail women of God are part of an aging breed of Roman Catholic nuns and monks moving into retirement while fewer and fewer young women and men are entering convents and monasteries to support them.

The result is a fiscal nightmare that has left an estimated $3 billion deficit in retirement budgets across the country, says Sister Mary Oliver Hudon.

She is director of a retirement project of the National Conference of Catholic Bishops, Conference of Major Superiors of Men and the Leadership Conference of Women Religious.

Nearly 36 percent of the estimated 122,000 nuns and monks in the United States are over age 70 and less than 1 percent are under 30, she says.

"The base that can support the older religious (nuns and monks) has just been eroded away," she said.

Few orders stashed money away for retirement, in part because nuns worked for low wages and because they preferred to spend the money building hospitals or adding services, Sister Mary Oliver says.

"They made that choice on the assumption that when people were no longer active, they died," she says. "It sounds terrible, but I don't think anybody foresaw the social changes" that led to longer life spans and far fewer people entering religious life.

Diocesan priests, who aren't members of religious orders, weren't included in the retirement project, she says. Their pensions are funded by all the churches in the diocese for which they worked, rather than a single order.

The Sisters of St. Joseph mirror the national picture, with 220 of their 455 members retired, says Sister Betty Veenhuis, president of the congregation.

The order, founded 100 years ago by nuns from New York who came west to staff Borgess Hospital in Kalamazoo, once had 950 members working in hospitals, nursing homes, orphanages, and Catholic schools across southern Michigan.

Thirty years ago, Sister Betty says, as many as 50 young women would have been preparing to enter the convent, which comprises the spot on the map called Nazareth.

Now it has only 18 women under 40 and just one woman — in her 40s — preparing for admission, she says. At the other end of the spectrum, 13 are over 90.

Sister Betty says mergers with other orders could bolster the sisters' ranks in the future, as could discussions with a group of about 100 lay people in the Kalamazoo area who want to be affiliated in some way with the Sisters of St. Joseph.

Like many orders, the Sisters of St. Joseph joined Social Security in 1971 when the law was changed to permit nuns and monks to make back payments and enter the system.

Sister Emily Simons, treasurer of the order, says Social Security provides just $2,000 of the $10,000 annual cost of caring for a retired member. The rest comes from the earnings of younger sisters, who take vows of poverty and turn their earnings over to the order.

But Sister Betty says that isn't enough and this year the order will need to tap the interest on a retirement fund that it has been paying into since 1971.

Sister Emily says the congregation's assets, including its members' earnings, Social Security, retirement fund and the proceeds from selling all its property except the motherhouse, would be 45 percent short of the amount needed to care for the current members until their death.

She estimates the deficit to be in the millions of dollars, but declines to be more specific.

The sisters know of the looming financial crisis and try to cut corners, Sister Betty says.

"I don't think they at all fear that we're going to run out of money and that they're going to be on the street," she says.

"It simply calls us to good stewardship and good planning and good use of our resources over the next five or 10 years."

RELIGION IN BRIEF

Ranchland having prayer workshop

Ranchland Heights Baptist Church is sponsoring a Prayer for Spiritual Awakening Seminar Friday through July 9.

The Rev. Gene Hawkins, director of Missions of the Lubbock Baptist Association, will be the leader of the seminar. Time of the meeting will be at 7 p.m. Friday and July 8 and at 9:45 and 11 a.m. and 6 and 7 p.m. July 9.

Those presenting the seminar hope the participants will "learn how to develop a sustained individual prayer life, how to understand God's answers and how to develop a sustained church prayer ministry," says a release from the church.

Questions such as how to pray, when to pray, where to pray and obstacles to answered prayer will be covered by the discussions, the release says.

Hawkins is a graduate of Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary, Fort Worth. Before going to Lubbock, he served churches in West Texas including First Baptist Church, Seminole, where he was pastor.

The Rev. Lucian Rudd, pastor of Ranchland Heights Baptist Church, invites all those interested in taking the seminar to attend.

The church nursery will be open. For more information call 683-1947 or 684-7233.

Gang meeting weekly

The Alamo Heights Baptist Church has started a new ministry for the summer, "A Back Yard Gang." For children ages 4 through sixth grade, the group meets Wednesday nights at 6:25 p.m. in the patio area of the church.

Activities include crafts, art work, and Bible study. The program is under the direction of Mrs. Kate Ellison; workers include Stephanie Cope, Marty McCasland, Sherry Butler, Nita Williams and Teresa Constable.

The church's pastor, the Rev. John S. Rasco, invites children to attend each Wednesday at 1305 N. Midland Drive.

Special service planned

St. Paul United Methodist Church is holding a special church-wide worship service from 10 to 11:30 a.m. July 9 at the Alamo Junior High School auditorium, 3800 W. Storey Ave.

No Sunday School classes are scheduled, but an informal fellowship time will be before and after the service.

The church usually holds worship services each Sunday at 8, 9:30 and 11 a.m.

According to the Rev. Tom Thomson, the church's pastor, the purpose of the special service is "to become better acquainted with people in our church family and to rejoice in being one body in Christ and individually members of one another."

The public is invited. A nursery will be provided at the church for children ages 3 and under. The church is located at 4501 Thomason Drive.

Choir seminar begins today

ODESSA — Texas Mass Choir Workshop, Gospel Music Workshop of America is being hosted by the Permian Basin Area Chapter of the GMWA this weekend at Rose of Sharon Baptist Church, 1615 E. Murphy.

The workshop session begins at 8 a.m. today. A $5 admission to the workshop will be charged to help with the cost of lunch which will be served to those attending the workshop.

The Texas Mass Choir Concert will be held at 7:30 p.m. today. The concert is free and open to the public.

Guest choirs from all over the state will be coming to join their voices in this event, which is the second annual session to be held.

Mayor Don Carter has proclaimed June 30 and July 1, be named "Texas Mass Choir Days" in the city of Odessa.

Lecture series begins

"Tough Questions for Thinking Christians," a new series of lectures, is scheduled at 7 p.m. Wednesdays through August 23 at Golf Course Road Church of Christ.

Speakers for the class are Douglas Parsons, pulpit minister for the church, and Gary Grady, the church's family minister.

The series is designed to explore issues that face contemporary Christians in their daily lives, such as careers for mothers of small children, divorce and remarriage, funeral planning, homosexuality, the right-to-die movement and the care of the aged and infirm. A more specific calendar is available from the church office.

No offerings will be taken and children's classes will be provided during the lecture time.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Your respect for honesty and truth may lead to political activism. Take loved ones into your confidence. No matter how old or young you are, you can learn something by keeping your eyes and ears open. Your knack for calming others and providing useful advice brings you new prestige. A long-cherished dream comes true.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: White House Chief of Staff John Sununu, U.S. Supreme Court Justice Thurgood Marshall, former Philippines first lady Imelda Marcos, actress Cheryl Ladd, Norway's King Olav V, auto racing champion Richard Petty, actor Brock Peters, comedian Dan Rowan, actress Polly Holliday, tennis champion Rene Lacoste, actor Jimmy McNichol.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A short trip will be lots of fun if you can keep costs down. Visit with old friends. You are in an affectionate mood, but may be too talkative for your own good.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You and your mate make new financial gains. A youngster's antics will be more amusing than ever. A pet could play an important role in keeping loved one's spirits high.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Energy counts for more than brains at a company picnic. Give romance more time to mature. Curl up in your favorite chair tonight and read a good book or professional journal.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A stroke of luck focuses your attention on something you previously tried but gave up on. Give it a second chance. Things are looking better than ever for a romantic relationship.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Family members and longtime friends are the best company now. Keep meals simple but attractive if trying to lose weight. A former business or romantic partner could re-enter your life. Go slow.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A marriage proposal is part of the picture. Know your own heart before asking someone else for a commitment. The birth of a child affects the way you look at life.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Love can be an exciting adventure this Fourth of July. Good luck accompanies you on your travels. Family members could try to influence the course of romance. Stand up for your rights.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Someone could sweep you off your feet with an outpouring of attention. The love of a child produces unexpected happiness. Spending the holiday with family members will prove very satisfying. Be considerate.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A highly positive period for cultivating friendships and pursuing romance. Others are receptive to your ideas. A wonderful week lies ahead. Cook up something special for a picnic or party.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Views expressed by those who command your attention are worth hearing. Act on a constructive suggestion without delay. Your thinking is more down-to-earth than in the recent past. An associate is protective.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Try to get outdoors and commune with nature today and tomorrow. Sprucing up your surroundings will boost your spirits. Be creative when decorating; there is no need to spend a lot of money.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Do not be unduly influenced by what your friends or neighbors do now. Finalize vacation arrangements and confirm reservations. Permit children to speak their minds if they will do so politely.

Cliburn returns to Moscow

MOSCOW (AP) — American pianist Van Cliburn, who catapulted to fame when he captured the Tchaikovsky Competition 31 years ago, returned Friday to Moscow at the invitation of Raisa Gorbachev to perform two concerts.

The Fort Worth, Texas, resident, accompanied by his 92-year-old mother, arrived in Moscow aboard a private jet and was greeted at his hotel by eight elderly fans who presented him with bouquets of flowers.

"We would have waited all night," said Irina Barmash, who displayed photographs taken during Cliburn's most recent visit to the Soviet Union in 1972.

The wife of President Mikhail S. Gorbachev invited Cliburn to the Soviet Union after he performed for them during Gorbachev's summit meeting with then-President Ronald Reagan in December 1987.

Cliburn's White House performance of the Soviet composition "Moscow Nights" moved the Gorbachevs to song. The 54-year-old pianist had ended an 11-year hiatus from public concerts for the performance.

The pianist has been one of the world's most acclaimed musicians since his triumph at the 1958 Tchaikovsky Competition at the age of 23. After winning the international tournament for young pianists, Russian-born composer Peter Tchaikovsky's Piano Concerto No. 1 became his signature music.

Cliburn remained a darling of Soviet music-lovers despite the ups and downs of superpower relations.

He returned to the Soviet Union in 1965 to make his debut as a conductor in Leningrad and came back again in 1972 to perform a series of concerts.

"I feel so close to this town that I sometimes walk the streets in my dreams," Cliburn said at his hotel.

He will perform benefit concerts for the Soviet Culture Fund on Sunday and Monday. Mrs. Gorbachev serves on the board of the fund.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor Don Johnson denied accusations that someone at his wedding to actress Melanie Griffith opened fire with a shotgun on a helicopter carrying a tabloid reporter and photographer.

"The thought that any member of Don's party would attempt to bring down a chopper over the vicinity of his own guests is ridiculous," Johnson spokesman Elliot Mintz said Thursday.

The Star reporter Barry Levine said the craft came under fire as it circled a ranch eight miles west of Aspen, Colo., during Monday's private ceremony.

Local and federal authorities said the helicopter was hit by what appeared to be buckshot, usually fired by skeet shooters.

Mintz acknowledged that some guests were shooting skeet before the wedding, but he said the control tower at Aspen Airport was alerted to that.

Levine, 30, and photographer Ross Truiak, 44, were slightly wounded, apparently by buckshot, said Tom Stephenson, sheriff's deputy in Pitkin County, Colo. "A number of shotgun pellets have been found within the cockpit of the helicopter."

And Pitkin County Sheriff Bob Braudis said Thursday that investigators doubt there was a serious attempt to shoot down the helicopter. He said there is little chance the person firing the shots ever will be identified.

DALLAS (AP) — Actor Omar Sharif finished out of the money in a bridge tournament bearing his name, but it wasn't as unpleasant an experience as a previous visit to Dallas.

When he was in the city for a 1970 bridge tournament, a drunken woman came to his hotel room after 3 a.m. and ordered him to make love to her, The Dallas Morning News reported Friday.

"She opened her purse, took out a gun and pointed it at me," he recalled.

The actor demurred, explaining — in so many words — that pistol-waving took the edge off his desire, he told the newspaper.

"Maybe if you put the gun away...," he suggested. Sharif said the woman left in a huff.

"It was scary," he told a Morning News columnist during last week's tournament. "I'd rather be held up by a gangster than a drunken woman who doesn't know what she's doing."

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Celebrity attorney Marvin Mitchelson is facing more misconduct charges from the bar association, which now says he ducked customs duties on $1 million in jewels once belonging to the Duchess of Windsor.

The State Bar of California's Office of Trial Counsel filed amended disciplinary charges Thursday against the Los Angeles attorney.

Mitchelson obtained the jewels at a Sotheby's auction in August 1987, according to the bar. The bar alleged earlier that Mitchelson never paid Sotheby's for the jewels.

A disciplinary trial is set for Aug. 14, and will include other misconduct charges against Mitchelson alleging financial improprieties in dealing with client's fees.

Mitchelson has represented such star clients as Joan Collins and Bianca Jagger in divorce cases and was the lawyer in the landmark "palimony" case brought by Michele Triola, the live-in girlfriend of actor Lee Marvin.

MOAB, Utah (AP) — The travel-writer daughter of British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher is spending the Fourth of July week rafting, hiking and mountain biking in Utah. She's also hoping to interview actor Robert Redford.

Carol Thatcher is the guest of the Utah County Travel Council, said its director Jim Young.

Young is accompanying Thatcher and her personal security guards on her recreation-oriented tour of the state.

Thatcher was scheduled to interview Redford next week at Sundance Resort in Provo Canyon for a London magazine, Young said earlier this week. But officials at the council said Friday that schedules for the actor and the prime minister's daughter weren't meshing and they are now trying to work out an interview by telephone.

Thatcher is executive editor of the leisure section of The Daily Mail in London, and a free-lance writer for The Sunday Express magazine and other publications, Young said.

SPRINGHILL, Nova Scotia (AP) — Singer Anne Murray could be the motherlode of tourism for this economically depressed area of northern Nova Scotia, if the new museum planned in her honor takes off the way officials hope it will.

The coal-mining town where the singer grew up is opening its $1.5 million Anne Murray Centre on July 28, with Mayor Bill Howard boldly predicting that as many as 20,000 people could swarm into the community of 4,500.

"I get cautious when I get too excited about what may come out of this whole thing, but right now it's the best picture I've seen for quite a number of years," Howard said.

Murray, 44, best known for her 1970 hit "Snowbird," will be on hand to open the center, built with federal and provincial money on land donated by the town.

Her success in the American music industry — more than 20 million records sold, four Grammys and 11 gold albums — is unmatched by any other Canadian female solo artist. She has won 20 Canadian Juno recording awards.

Visitors to the center will be able to trace Murray's career through displays of memorabilia and costumes from her tours and television specials.

Mathematicians have been trying to 'square' circles for years

Hearst News Service

SAN FRANCISCO — The church said Galileo's theories of the heavens and Earth were wrong; but Galileo was right. Some "experts" said the Wright Brothers would never fly; but they did.

And it's long been held that mathematicians can't transform a circle into a square; but they have...sort of.

In high school geometry, students use straight edges (like rulers) and compasses to construct geometrical shapes out of other shapes. For example, they bisect an angle to turn it into two angles, each of the same size.

And for 2,000 years, mathematicians racked their brains trying to figure out whether it was possible to construct a square from a circle of precisely the same area, using only a straight edge and a compass.

It's the kind of mathematical exercise that has no known practical application. Hence it delights mathematicians, who tend to like their numbers big, pure and useless.

With rulers and compasses, they have sweated and cussed while struggling — on paper — to convert a circle into a square of the same area.

To no avail. During the last century, aided by rigorous rules of logic, mathematicians proved the quest was hopeless. Using only rulers and compasses, they could no more turn a circle into a square than they could turn a frog into a prince.

So some mathematicians changed tack and tried to "square" circles with scissors — specifically, by slicing up the circle, then trying to rearrange it into a square, like a jigsaw puzzle.

But that attempt was trounced in 1963 when mathematicians Lester E. Dubins, Morris W. Hirsch and Jack Karush of the University of California at Berkeley proved mathematically that even scissors couldn't be used to square a circle.

As perpetual motion is to physicists and Big Foot is to biologists, so "squaring the circle" is to mathematicians — a fantasy — if one uses only ordinary instruments such as rulers, scissors or compasses.

Enter Miklos Laczkovich of Hungary.

Obeying the timeless dictum that there's more than one way to skin a cat, the professor at Lorand Eotvos University in Budapest has excited his colleagues by using an unusual approach to square a circle.

"The Circle Can Be Squared!" says a headline in Science magazine.

"One hundred generations (of mathematicians) have not toiled in vain," the July issue of Scientific American declares. "The circle has been squared."

Normally such news would gladden the hearts of pseudo-scientists, who love to send science writers crank "proofs" that Einstein was wrong, that the CIA is monitoring their brain waves and that the circle can be squared.

But they have no cause for celebration.

Squaring a circle is still impossible the old-fashioned way (using straight edges, compasses and scissors).

Instead, Laczkovich squared a circle via a more bizarre technique. He found that if he cut a circle into jillions of pieces with very odd shapes — nothing remotely resembling lines or curves — he could reassemble them into a square of precisely the same area.

How many pieces? The number one followed by 50 zeroes — 100,000,000,000

South Korean woman defies ban to attend North Korean festival

PYONGYANG, North Korea (AP) — A South Korean woman defied a ban by her government and arrived Friday for a youth festival, which also drew the biggest U.S. delegation ever to isolated North Korea.

In Seoul, about 4,000 riot police firing tear gas stormed a university as more radical students prepared to defy the ban and march to the World Festival of Youth and Students, North Korea's first major interntional event.

About 90 Americans are among the 12,000 people participating in the festival, which begins Saturday with ceremonies in a new 150,000-seat stadium and ends on July 8.

"We're mostly progressive youths, liberals, Socialists and Communists," said Seth Godfrey, a delegation leader from New Haven, Conn.

The festival brings together people mostly from socialist countries for art exhibitions, songfests, plays and discussions on "anti-imperialist" themes.

"The point is to have a lot of discussions, to express our viewpoints and listen to theirs," said Godfrey, 31-year-old librarian.

On June 25, North Korea began its annual anti-United States month with a rally of 200,000 people in Pyongyang. North Korean troops fought against U.S. soldiers in the 1950-53 Korean war, and the communist nation says the presence of 43,000 U.S. troops in South Korea is a major obstacle to reunification.

But the government has opened its doors to Americans, including about a dozen journalists, for the festival, North Korea's attempt to show that it can stage an international event equivalent to the Seoul Olympics.

Godfrey said that among the U.S. groups represented are the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, the Georgia Black Students Association and the Young Communist League.

The only South Korean to attend was Im Suk-yong, a 20-year-old French major from Hankook University of Foreign Studies in Seoul.

"I'm very sorry to be taking part in the Pyongyang festival alone," she said at the airport. "This shows that the South Korean government is anti-reunification."

She ended her brief speech by shouting, "One million youth and students of South Korea, I have arrived in Pyongyang!...Long live the struggle for reunification of the fatherland!"

Miss Im said she traveled via Japan, West Germany and Moscow.

Seoul has accused North Korea of using the festival to stir up radical movements in South Korea.

South Korean intelligence authorities said Ms. Lim would be arrested and charged with national security violations when she returns home. The prosecutor general's office ordered an investigation into the funding and arrangements for her trip.

South Korea's National Police Headquarters said about 50 students were arrested Friday after trying to pass checkpoints leading to the demilitarized zone that divides the peninsula.

The two nations have been technically at war since North Korea invaded South Korea in 1950 and started the Korean war.

The confrontation between students and police in Seoul began with the biggest police assault on a college campus since President Roh Tae-woo came to power 18 months ago.

Students fled the surprise attack on Hanyang University coughing and vomitting as tear gas filled the air. Some fought back with steel bars, clubs, rocks and firebombs.

Authorities said about 600 students were arrested. About 100 students and police were injured, some seriously.

By nightfall, hundreds of students were barricaded in four buildings ringed by police. The campus was littered with rocks, clubs, tree limbs, broken chairs and lumber.

The youth festival, the 13th since 1947, follows one held in Moscow in 1985.

"It's the first time ever in Asia, so we prepared very, very hard," said official Kim Taesop.

Pyongyang, a city of 2 million people, was awash with newly planted flowers, flags and banners reading, "Let the world youth and students unite firmly under the banner of anti-imperialist solidarity, peace and friendship."

As foreigners drove from the airport, many citizens walking along the road and at bus stops smiled and waved.

Many of the buildings being used to house participants and stage events were constructed when North Korea sought to be a co-host of the Seoul Olympics. Seoul proposed that various events be staged in North Korea, but Pyongyang was dissatisfied with the offer and boycotted the games.

Flag waver opposes court decision

WASHINGTON (AP) — Joe Howe, who proudly waves hundreds of American flags daily atop the Capitol, believes flag burners should be punished — no matter what the Supreme Court says — and says he hopes he never meets one.

Howe, 32, of Hollywood, Md., is foreman of the crew that spends eight hours every weekday on the roof of the Capitol, raising and lowering flags for members of Congress who send them to constituents on request.

For prices ranging from $7.38 to $56.25 each, depending on size and such accessories as a pole and decorative eagle, constituents can boast that their flags actually flew over the Capitol — even if only for a few seconds.

"I take pride in my work," Howe said in an interview during a coffee break from his rooftop labors. "How many people have the job of flying the flag over the Capitol?"

Howe would be surprised if there weren't a patriotic surge in requests for flags inspired by the furor over the Supreme Court's ruling last week that flag-burning is a form of free speech guaranteed by the First Amendment.

"I don't agree with that decision, and you can quote me," Howe said, "and I don't agree with people who burn flags."

What would be suitable punishment for a flag burner? A lengthy stint on Howe's work crew, raising flags on the Capitol roof in the sweltering heat and suffocating humidity of summertime Washington?

"That's not stiff enough," Howe replied. He thought a moment and added: "I wouldn't want to be up there with someone who's burned a flag."

Howe and his nine helpers raise and lower an average of more than 350 flags each weekday. They sometimes work on weekends to meet requests for flags to be flown on special anniversary dates that happen to fall on a Saturday or Sunday.

The heaviest demand occurs on such patriotic holidays as Memorial Day and the Fourth of July, when as many as 1,200 flags have been flown in a single day.

Using three small flagpoles on the roof of the House side of the Capitol, they raise a flag for a few seconds, lower it and fold it back into its box. In bad weather, they use six ropes equipped with flag hooks under the sheltered skirt of the Capitol dome to "fly" their flags.

The practice began in 1937, when a dozen flags were flown over the Capitol for legislators' constituents. Last year, the number had risen to more than 114,000. Altogether, more than 1.4 million flags have been flown over the Capitol to meet public requests in the past half-century.

Mall walkers improve health, find camaraderie

By JANICE FORD
Advertising Feature Writer

If President Bush ever needs any advice on solving global issues, he needs to look no further than the the Food Court in Midland Park Mall.

Each morning following their walks, some members of the Mall Walkers Club advisory board gather for coffee and serious discussion.

"We're in charge of world wars and political situations at this table," joked Frank Cole, advisory board chairman, and also a veteran of close to 1000 miles. "I think we'll get this China problem solved this week," added Fred Roam, who also serves on the board.

Organized in November 1987, the Mall Walkers Club is sponsored by Midland Park Mall, Midland Memorial Hospital and the American Heart Association.

"The majority of our walkers are 65 and up," assessed Cole.

Roam, a retired Missouri highway patrol officer, holds the distinction of having accumulated more than 2500 miles at the mall. "That's just since we started counting," he said.

"After all those years of riding, I took up walking. I'm doing it for my health; that's my primary interest. I'm walking for my heart." He walks anywhere from an hour to two hours daily, even when he is out of town.

Not only do people walk at the mall to help prevent medical problems, many walk because they have ailments and want to improve their health. Said Cole, "I had arthritis of the right shoulder. I carry weights when I walk and it has controlled it — stopped its progression."

Blood pressure and pulse checks provided three times weekly by Midland Memorial Hospital are also a blessing cited by advisory board members. Commented Jean Cole, "Freddie Utsman, the nurse, is great. She takes care of her patients. You couldn't have found anyone better. If someone doesn't show up, she'll find out within a week."

In addition to the obvious health benefits, another advantage of mall walking is security. "You're not walking around by yourself," explained Laurie Johnson, director of public relations for Midland Memorial Hospital. "You have a group here willing to help you."

The hospital is attempting to set up a cardio-pulomonary resuscitation program to educate mall walkers. And for accessibility to emergency service, mall telephones can be used to dial 911 without a coin.

"This adds to the feeling of protection during the hours when the merchants are closed. Mall walkers are also very good to report suspicious people," Ms. Johnson continued.

New acquaintances formed make mall walking a pleasure, reported board members. "You meet some nice people you'd never meet anywhere else," said Mrs. Cole. "They are a very close group," added Ms. Johnson.

Members are asked to contribute $5 yearly to defray club expenses, which include a sunshine fund. Walkers are invited to join the club's approximately 300 members for meetings every other month.

Meetings are usually highlighted by talks from health care professionals on subjects such as nutrition, heart health and proper footwear. Membership includes eligibility for discounts at some mall merchants, and the blood pressure and pulse checks. Walkers work toward incentives based on mile accumulations.

Midland Park Mall Walkers include from left, James Beatty, Jean Cole, Frank Cole, Horace Burnett and Fred Roam.

They each receive a mileage card to keep track of the number of laps walked around the mall. The cards are turned in and a computer converts laps into miles.

The course is .63 of a mile, and markers are located at 1/8 mile intervals. Miles walked only at the mall are honored toward awards such as patches and jackets.

To register for the Mall Walkers Club, or to find out more information, contact the mall office at 694-1663. For the convenience of walkers, the Food Court doors open at 7 a.m. Monday through Friday and at 11 a.m. on Sundays. Other doors open at 8 a.m. Monday through Saturday and at noon Sundays.

New health care insurance to hit aged hard

By HARRY F. ROSENTHAL

The hottest topic of discussion among older Americans this summer may be the new catastrophic health care insurance, especially the catastrophic pain it can inflict on the pocketbook. And you can bet the cries will become louder next year when Uncle Sam claims his due.

Rosenthal

The new coverage, which went into effect New Year's Day, extensively changed the Part B Benefit of Medicare by limiting for the first time the amount a patient has to pay. That limit is $1,370 in 1990.

When Ronald Reagan signed the catastrophic care bill just a year ago, he called it a "historic piece of legislation" that would protect elderly Americans from "a choice between bankruptcy and death."

The 78-year-old president seemed happiest about the "sound insurance" basis for the measure because it would be paid for by the beneficiaries themselves.

A lot of elderly taxpayers don't share that enthusiasm.

The cost to the potential customer begins reasonably enough with a $4-a-month surcharge to the Part B premium this year. But that premium itself also increased — from $24.80 to $27.90 — so the total jump is $7.10. If the rise in premiums continues as predicted, the monthly bill will climb to $33.20 in 1990, $37.10 in 1991, $40.20 in 1992 and $42.60 in 1993.

That's expensive for the many people who live at or below the poverty level. But that isn't all.

What really aggravates a lot of older Americans is the tax bite that's tacked on. The supplemental premium to be collected along with federal income tax next year is based on tax liability. For every $150 you owe Uncle Sam, $22.50 will be added; a maximum $800 for an individual and $1,600 for couples. That tax surcharge, too, will climb with the years to $42 per $150 and a cap of $1,050 for individuals ($2,100 for couples) in 1993.

The joint tax committee of Congress estimated the approximate income levels at which the maximum premium amounts would be reached. These were $40,000 for a single return and $65,000-$75,000 for a couple. Of course, each person's situation is different. People with the same total income, but a different mix of taxed and non-taxed income and different deductions will have a different supplemental premium.

Since those with the highest taxable income will pay the most, it's not hard to see where the biggest complaints come from. "Can we now expect the wealthy to pay more for car insurance than do the poor?" asked a newspaper reader in a letter to the editor.

Others see an inequity in the very thing that Reagan found so pleasing: that the beneficiaries themselves pay the bill. "Is that a new principle in this country, only that groups that are directly affected should pay?" said that reader. "Why should I pay school taxes?"

And there is a very strong feeling by many that they were already covered by private insurance at far less cost.

These are concerns that are being and will continue to be debated. The Medicare Catastrophic Act doesn't help much with the single biggest medical catastrophe that can befall an aged person: winding up in a nursing home at a cost of $22,000 a year or more.

But there is another side of this coin. The government estimates that as many as 2.1 million elderly people had medical bills so high in 1987 that this law would have helped them.

In 1988, after day 60 in a hospital, a Medicare beneficiary was liable for a $135 daily co-payment. After day 90 that rose to $270 a day. At rates like these, catastrophe is just around the corner.

A lot of cliches come to mind. Nothing is for nothing. No pain, no gain. You gotta give to get.

Wild, Wild East?

By R. EDWARD TURNER
National Geographic

WOODSTOWN, N.J. — The cowboys were getting restless. Some stood near the livestock chutes, chewing tobacco and spitting. Others, the ones waiting to be first out of the gates, sat on the high fence, their polished gold and silver belt buckles catching the overhead lights of the arena as they watched their mounts being squeezed into the holding pens.

It was Saturday night in Cowtown, and the sounds of a four-piece Western band mingled with the noise of nearly 4,000 rodeo fans who waited, with the cowboys, for the events to begin. In the big wooden booth overlooking the arena, Dusty Cleveland switched on his microphone and, in a soft Western drawl, announced the promenade.

As the parading cowboys and cowgirls swirled their flags around the arena, anyone could see this was rodeo country, home of some of the toughest cowpokes in all New Jersey.

New Jersey? Rodeos and cowboys? Strange as it may seem, it's true. The Cowtown Rodeo, located in southern New Jersey, is the oldest continuously operating professional rodeo in the United States. Stranger still, lest any Texan scoff, most of the riders here are professional cowboys, men and women who, like their Western counterparts, make all or part of their livelihoods on the backs of wild horses and bulls.

The Cowtown Rodeo belongs to Grant Harris, who bought it from his father, who bought it from his father. Cowtown is in the Northeastern circuit of the Professional Rodeo Cowboy Association (PRCA), which is, says Harris, the most active of the eight circuits of the organization. There are professional rodeo arenas in several northeastern states, including a new arena opening this year in upstate New York.

"Hang on thar, cowboy, ride 'at bull to the ground!" Dusty Cleveland has the fans cheering, as cowboy after cowboy meet bronco after bull in the arena. "Awright folks, 'at was one good ride, les' give 'at cowboy a big hand!" Cleveland lives near Ballston Spa, N.Y., where, he says, Western wear and speech are the norm.

Many participants at Cowtown come from similarly unusual pockets of Wild West civilization: Troy Reynolds, a bareback bronco rider, lives just outside Hudson Falls, N.Y. Shockey Rengau is from Plainville, Conn., and Dale Simpkins lives in Port Deposit, Md. They, like Gary DuBois of Bantom, Conn., travel thousands of miles each summer to compete in PRCA events.

Of his Western accent, owner Harris has an easy explanation: "Son, you standin' three miles south of the Mason an' Dixon Line right here!"

The rodeo began on a whim, says Harris. His grandfather, Stoney Harris, went to Washington in 1934. "He came across the Miller Brothers Wild West Show and Rodeo," says Harris. The Miller Brothers owned the 101 Ranch in Ponca City, Okla., and had started the show as a sideline.

But those were the days of the Great Depression and the Dust Bowl, and the Oklahomans had fallen on hard times. They couldn't afford to take their rodeo home, so Stoney gave the Miller boys $1,500 in cold cash, shipped the rodeo equipment and stock back to New Jersey, and named part of his land Cowtown.

The rodeos were held sporadically at first, a few each summer, until Harris' father bought the rodeo in 1955.

Grant Harris grew up riding in his family's rodeo. "I guess when I went to high school, they just figured I was a hick," he says. "I showed up at school dressed just like this here," nodding down at his scruffed boots and giant belt buckle. "But I did purty well — I got a full college scholarship in bronc ridin'."

His scholarship was from Community College in Casper, Wyo. The college, like many schools in the West, offers a tuition-free education to outstanding rodeo competitors, just as other schools offer scholarships in football and basketball.

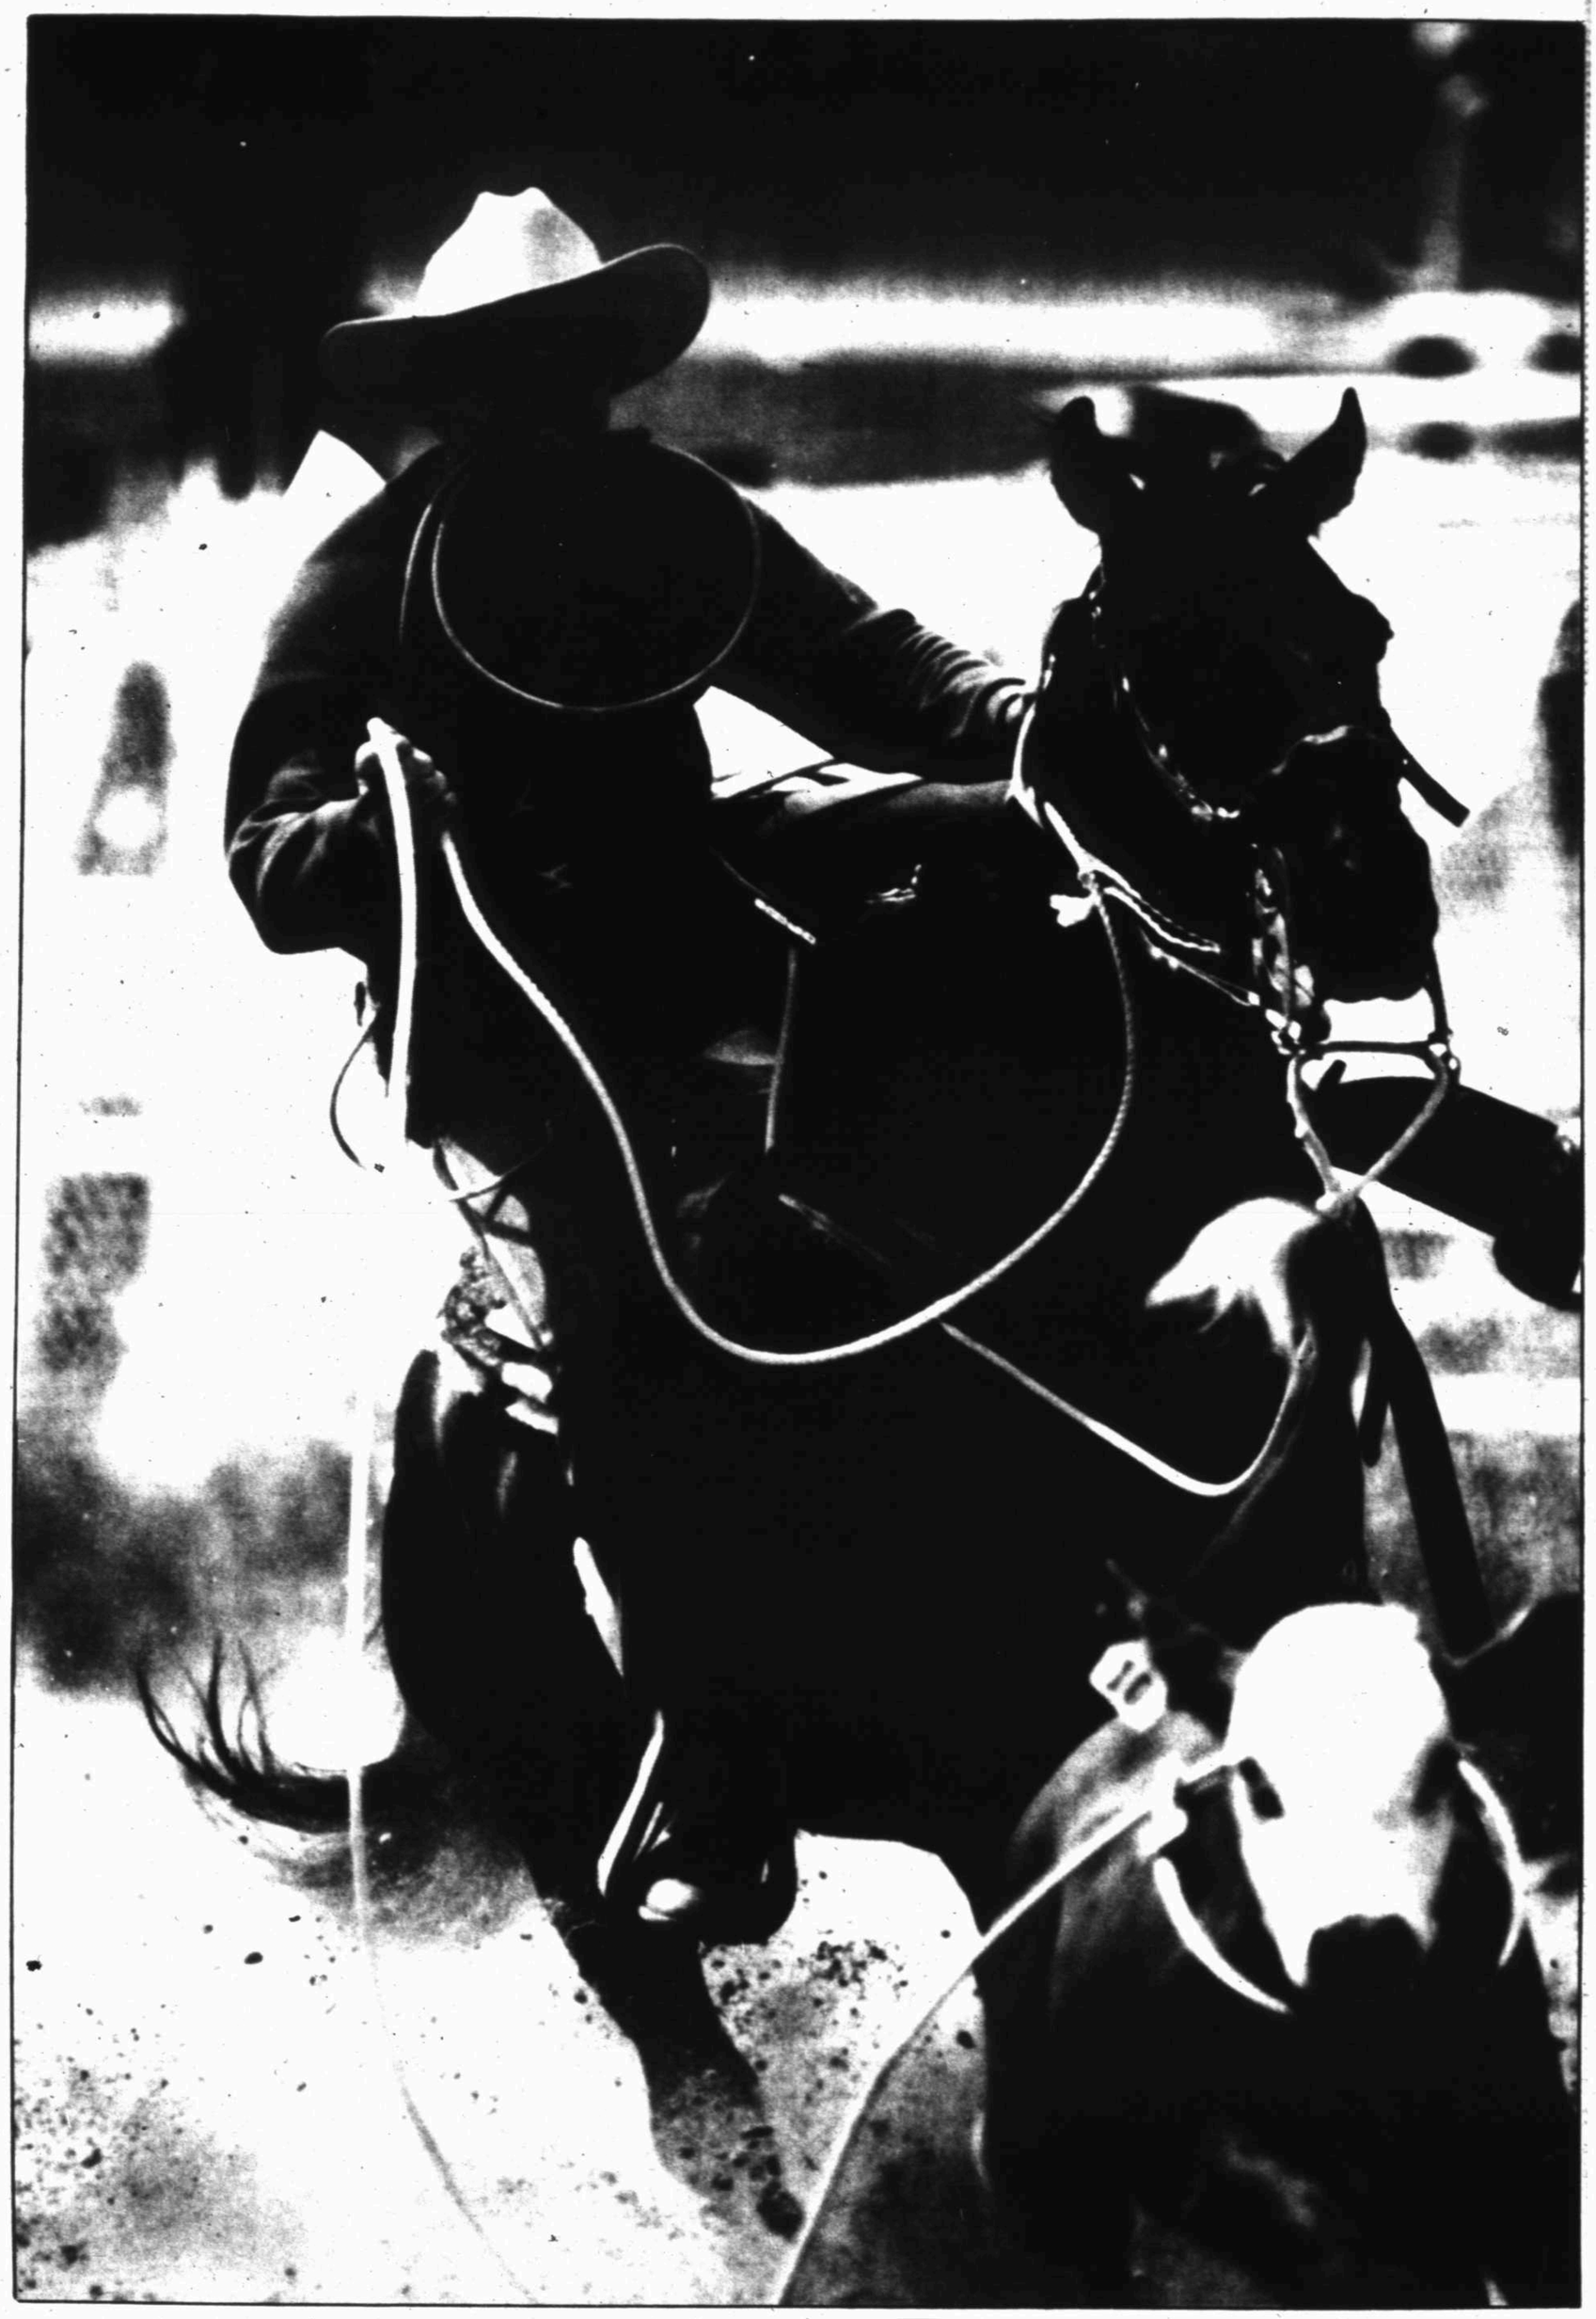
"Now, when I got out to Casper," Harris says, "there weren't no rodeos for about three months, and I got a lot of teasin' about bein' from New Jersey." But when interscholastic rodeo competition started, he says, "I took first place in saddle-bronc and bull ridin', and that stopped all them jokes about the cowboy from New Joisey."

Harris bought Cowtown from his father in 1978 and began expanding the operation. He has held five rodeos at Madison Square Garden in New York City, and sells bucking broncs and Brahma bulls to rodeo producers across the country. One of his bulls, a monster named Cowtown, was bought by rodeo producer Bennie Butler of Elk City, Okla., and was twice named PRCA bull of the year.

It's enough to make a lost cowboy from out West feel right at home, these rodeos of the Northeast. The Northeastern cowboys would tell you it simply demonstrates the popularity of their sport. Mark Hausman, an Army sergeant from McAllen, Texas, stationed at Ft. Meade, Md., has seen just how far the Wild West has spread.

A regular competitor and rodeo clown at Cowtown, he says he was not surprised to find places where he could compete when he arrived on the East Coast. After all, he boasts, during his last tour of duty he finished third in saddlebronc riding in the ERCA.

What's the ERCA? Pardner, that's the European Rodeo Cowboy Association, an affiliate of the PRCA, headquartered in West Berlin. You can, says Hausman, find someplace to rodeo just about anywhere you go in Western Europe. Which is doubtless why, as Hausman or any cowpoke could tell you, they decided to call the place "Western" Europe.



His lasso neatly looped around the neck of a fleeing calf, Cody Clement prepares to swing from the saddle and bring his quarry to the ground. Though many associate roping with the Wild West, this event takes place in New Jersey — home of the nation's oldest continuously operating professional rodeo.

A token of our appreciation.

We've decided to "come clean!" We're offering new residents $10 worth of laundry tokens to use in our coin-operated machines. That's loads of laundry (20 to be exact). And you'll continue to receive $5 in free tokens every month.

We have a few one bedroom apartments still available. So don't work up a lather looking for a new apartment. Lease with us today and wash 20 loads of clothes on the house. It's in the bag!

Club house, pool, tennis courts. On-site management and maintenance crew. Competitive rates. Convenient to downtown and ClayDesta.
