TO FILL CHEST TODAY

Open Hearts Meant Life Here; Yours Helped, Too

Quite a transformation in this lad!
He's just the same in the right hand picture as he is in the left, except that funds from charity organizations here have had a chance at him. Read the story of his rescue and open your heart when you are called on today or tomorrow to give till it hurts.

Oil Field Hovel Was a Living Tomb Until Charity Aided Him

A TOTTERING youngster scarcely able to keep his balance on two uncertain feet was playing about the limited confines of a Wichita county oil lease one blistering day last August. A merciless sun that had hung high overhead for days had baked and boiled the baby's small "playground" until it was a miniature furnace. Not a shred of cloud gave relief on this particular day; there was no artificial shade; yet the boy, with nothing else to do, was out of doors in the full glare—"playing." Some discarded tools, some battered bits of casing and the rubbish that accumulates in such a section were his toys.

His garb was typical of the neglect and sordidness in evidence all about. His shoes out at the toes and with soles of paper-thinness had been far better days. A tattered gingham jumper and ragged shirt were slung in some fashion over the frail frame. He had no socks or underwear and a fading thatch of sandy hair atop his head was the only protection against the sun.

* * *

JUVENILE OFFICER BRALLEY on an inspection tour through the fields chanced that way on this particular day and, attracted by the tiny mite alone and apparently deserted in that region of dirt and heat, stopped to make some inquiries. The boy was able to lisp a little and after some coaxing had dispelled his wonderment, was quiet enough to listen.

The officer asked him where his mother was.

A vague "she gone" was all he could learn.

"Where's your daddy?" he asked again.

The boy waved an arm toward some distant derricks.

Wonderingly Mr. Bralley walked into a one-room, ramshackle hut in the shadow of a towering derrick. No one was there; the disordered room was filthy; yet it bore evidence of being used as a human habitation. There were three-legged stools, a rickety table and a pile of gunny sacks that seemed to be doing duty as a bed in one corner. The holes in the roof over the bags were not as large as some of the others.

The cupboard, like Old Mother Hubbard's was bare. A milk bottle with a half inch of sour curds in the bottom sat in a cracker box on the table. A few bread-crusts that served as convenient perches for the flies that buzzed about the bottle were the only "food products" in sight.

* * *

"DO you live here?" asked the man.

The baby nodded.

Across the road on an adjoining lease stood two other houses, fit counterparts for the one he had just been looking at. They too were in wrack and ruin but still serving as a shelter of a sort for those whose calling takes them to the stern and uncompromising tasks of bringing oil from hidden sands. A woman was standing in the door of one, and with the lad in his arms Mr. Bralley sought information from her.

What he learned was the more appalling because of its unusualness.

For a month, he heard, the home across the way had been without the saving grace of a mother or wife. The woman who had once ruled it had gone the way of those others in whom the lust for pleasure overbalances better judgment. It was the usual story—another man, a flight in the night, a forgotten babe. The father, a bootlegger by dark, a laborer by day, a wildcatter between times and a drunkard always, accepted the loss with philosophic calm. Good riddance, be imagined.

* * *

THUS it was that a four-year old tot was left to his own resources in a desolate and depressing hovel that offered little enough protection in a torrid Texas summer. His dad, home occasionally at night but never by day, offered little enough in the way of help and support. The boy had a pair of shoes and enough rags to cover him. The small item of food was of insufficient importance to excite worry. If his son had to eat, his sire knew, he'd get a morsel now and then at the neighbors.

That was where the only morsels had been provided, it developed, for the whole month a small visitor appeared regularly at one or the other of the homes and there was given what nourishment the meagre family larders could spare. But it was no wholesome milk or fresh eggs that had been keeping the spark of life aflame in his small body. Hunger, abuse, loneliness, weariness, faithliness, friendliness—these were the herritages this boy won as his birthright. Such was his condition when Mr. Bralley found him. Such was the equipment given him to make his start in life.

* * *

THAT chance visit of the county officer opened up a new world for the boy, a world that was as strange and delightful to him as was the remorse and regret that his misguided parents later came to know. He was brought to Wichita Falls and three charitable organizations here got busy. The Red Cross gave him medical inspections and attention; it provided the simple treatments necessary for the emaciated frame; it gave him the cleansing and healthful baths that he had been denied; it looked to his teeth and eyes. The Salvation Army came forward with clothing that he needed; it covered him with garments, the comfort of which he had never suspected, let alone possessed. Everything that could be done was done.

The two pictures above tell the story. The left hand photo is one made of him the day of his rescue and the other is as he appears today. Responding to proper care he rapidly developed into a healthy, active normal youngster and was subsequently placed in a foster home where he is now receiving love and attention that should have been his from birth. The look of pathetic despair in the one picture has been replaced by that of joyous animation in the other. Life, for that boy who got his start under circumstances that were a blot on civilization, has turned out fairly well after all. Charity has accomplished for him those things which he might never have known had not a community which recognized its duty to just such waifs been willing to pay for the sins of his parents.

* * *

THE organizations which have made this reformation possible are dependent on popular subscription for their financing. Their work requires funds, and these can come only from those who are willing to open their purses in behalf of the needy. Wichita Falls launches its community chest drive for $52,000 today. It is a sum ridiculously small when the scope of its influence is considered. Cases fully as appaling as the one outlined above are found with disconcerting frequency in Wichita county; there are today other children in scanty attire, hungry and lonely, playing with toys that most babies would scorn. Their only salvation, too, lies in the charitable organization whose aim it is to care for them.

Your subscription will be solicited soon. Give till it hurts.

BIG INDEMNITY TO BE PAID FOR STACK MURDER

Egyptian Government Consents to Make Apology and Punish Assassins.

MAKE SOME PROTESTS

Reply Says England Breaks Rules Regulating Her Foreign Policies.

CAIRO, Nov. 23.—(AP)—Anti-British demonstrations were renewed in Cairo today by students. Afterwards British troops marched through the city.

Two airplanes from Cairo flew over Tantap, where some restlessness among the natives had been observed.

The publication of the British notes caused a sensation in Cairo. Special editions of the European vernacular newspapers were exhausted early in the day.

CAIRO, Nov. 23.— (AP) — The Egyptian government's reply to the British note in connection with the assassination of General Sir Lee Oliver Stack, governor general of the Sudan and sirdar of the Egyptian army, agrees to Great Britain's demand for an apology, punishment of assassins and an indemnity of 500,000 pounds. It also promises to prevent any disturbance of the peace by demonstrations.

The reply says the British demands regarding the Sudan breaks the status quo and is contrary to the constitution under which King Fuad is commander in chief of the Egyptian army. It considers the demand regarding the Gezira irrigation project premature.

Makes Other Kicks

The communication further says the position of foreign officials is regulated by diplomatic agreement and cannot be modified without the consent of parliament.

Field Marshal Viscount Allenby, the British high commissioner, promptly replied to the Egyptian note, which was signed by Zagloul Pasha, the Egyptian premier.

General Allenby said that in view of the refusal of the Egyptians of the British requirements numbers five and six, instructions were being sent to the Sudan government to effect the withdrawal from the Sudan of Egyptian officers and units with the specified charges resulting from these measures and that the Sudan government was at liberty to increase the area of irrigation in the Gebira district to an unlimited extent.

General Allenby's reply to Zagloul requests the payment of the indemnity of 500,000 pounds by noon Monday and adds:

Gangsters Shoot Again

One Killed and Two Wounded In Sunday Brawls.

CHICAGO, Nov. 23.—The killing of the owner of a resort in Cicero, a suburb and the probable fatal wounding of two gangsters has marked the renewal of gang warfare in Chicago and its environs.

Eddie Tancl, known to police as a power in gambling circles, was slain in his saloon and gambling place in the western suburb during a revolver fight that followed a brawl. Myles (Klondike) O'Donnell and Leo Climax, were wounded and were reported at hospitals to be near death tonight.

NEW TURKISH PREMIER

Fethi Bey Will Take Over Post Again.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Nov. 23. —(AP)—Fethi Bey who held the premiership of Turkey for a brief period last year, has agreed to again take the post, succeeding Ismet Pasha, who resigned today.

Although ill health has been assigned as the reason for Ismet's assignment, it is generally felt that the more probable explanation is that it was due to the recent crisis within his party, which caused the defection of many of its most prominent members.

FEDERAL JUDGE QUITS

Forwards Resignation to Coolidge Yesterday.

ATLANTA, Ga., Nov. 23.—Judge Alex C. King of Atlanta, member of the United States circuit court of appeals, has forwarded his resignation to President Coolidge to take effect January 1, it became know here today.

Judge King, who is well known in all parts of the south, will re-enter the practice of law in Atlanta, it is said.

WORRIED OVER SHOALS

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23.—The disposition congress may make of the government properties at Muscle Shoals, Alabama, it was learned today is being watched carefully by several members of the house irrigation committee who believe the course pursued in regard to the shoals may influence action on the Johnson-Ewing bill which is pending in the irrigation committee.

CRIMINAL LIBEL

DRUMRIGHT, Okla., Nov. 23.—The Rev. Robert J. Lowell, elder of the church of Christ here was arrested Saturday on a charge of criminal libel brought by the Rev. Thomas Enix. The Rev. Mr. Lowell was made a defendant in a $10,000 damage suit brought by the Rev. Mr. Enix several days ago, who alleged Mr. Lowell was circulating false statements about him

Church Affirms Faith In Pastor Whose Wife Met Death In Furnace

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Nov. 23.—Devine guidance was called upon to direct authorities in bringing to justice the "real culprit" who caused the death of Mrs. Addie Sheatsley, 50, whose body was found Monday by her husband, the Rev. C. V. Sheatsley, in the furnace of the parsonage of Christ Evangelical Lutheran church in the exclusive Bexley district today in a resolution adopted by members of the congregation.

The resolution also expressed "unqualified confidence in the integrity and nobility of character," in the Rev. Mr. Sheatsley, who on Wednesday expressed to County Prosecutor John R. King, his conviction that his wife took her life by casting herself into the furnace after becoming violently insane.

The resolution was drafted by the Rev. Dr. E. Pfeiffer, a professor in the theological seminary at the capital university, where the Rev. Mr. Sheatsley is a lecturer on religious subjects.

Over the telephone from Paris, Ohio, the Rev. Mr. Sheatsley today said that he and his four children do not expect to return to Columbus until Wednesday. Previously he said they would return tomorrow. In view of this development, Prosecutor King will be without the services of the family in conducting his investigation during the next three days.

Another Mexican Revolt Is Feared, Labor Head Says

Rebellion Being Organized To Kick Over Present Regime.

JAUREZ, Chihuahu, Mexico, Nov. 23.—(AP.)—Enriquez Salcedo, personal representative of president-elect Calles in the convention of the Mexican Confederation of Labor, issued a public statement after final adjournment of the convention today in which he said "another rebellion" was being "organized for the attempted overthrow of the constitutional and democratic government of Mexico."

In addressing the closing session of the convention this afternoon he said "neither I nor Mexican labor delegates indicate any fear as to outcome of this new rebel plot."

Rico Denies Knowledge.

Juan Rico, president of the convention, denied emphatically that any telegram from President Obregon warning of a new uprising against the government has been received by officers of the convention. He knew nothing, he said, of reports in Mexico City that such a message had been received. Ricardo Trevino, retiring general secretary of the Mexican Confederation of Labor, also denied receipt of any such message by the convention.

CLAIM CRIME DECREASES

Prohibition Brings Drop, Dry Proponents Declare.

NEW YORK, Nov. 23.—Crime in the United States, in proportion to the population, has decreased rather than increased since prohibition went into effect, according to a report made public today by the World League Against Alcoholism. Savings to the state as a result of the decrease in crime exceeded amount formerly paid as revenue by the liquor interests, the report sets forth, the savings being "conservatively estimated at approximately $200,000,000 annually."

BEAN FAILURE AFTERMATH

Woman Jailed for Forgery May Have Some Connection With Sands

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Nov. 23—An echo of the failure of Lewis E. Sands, missing bean king of Albion, was the arrest last night at Huntington, Ind., of Mrs. Grace K. Gerks of Rochester, on a charge of forgery, in her alleged part in the bean transactions.

Mrs. Gerks was manager of the Lone Star Inn, owned by Sands, near Albion and also of the Brayton Bean Co., a subsidiary of his company.

BARNARD RESIGNS POST.

Confederate Adjutant General Gives Way on Commander's Death.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Nov. 23.—General J. P. Barnard, announced last night he had tendered his resignation as adjutant general of the United Confederate Veterans effective December 1.

The desire of General Barnard to be relieved of the duties of the office is due primarily to the death recently of General W. B. Haldeman, commander in chief of the veterans' organization, he said.

Thousands Pass In Quiet Tribute To Mrs. Harding

Last Respects Are Paid to Memory of the Late President's Wife.

MARION, Ohio, Nov. 23.—(AP) Thousands of neighbors and friends today passed the bier of Mrs. Florence Kling Harding to pay their last respects. Since early morning, when a line formed at the Longshore home here, where the body of the first lady of the land reposes, a steady stream of people passed in and out. It was a silent reverent newspaper folk and who had watched their political fortunes rise until one March day in 1921 they bade them farewell as they left for the presidential inauguration ceremonies in Washington.

Finally Granted.

The public was permitted to view the remains only after repeated requests had been made to the family. Decision was no reached until it was suggested that "Mrs. Harding never denied the public a privilege that she thought belonged to them."

Dr. G. T. Harding, aged father of the late president, visited the Longshore home for the first time today. "She was a splendid woman," Dr. Harding said.

Flowers From Coolidge.

Flowers sent by President Coolidge rest at the foot of the casket. So many floral pieces have arrived that it has been necessary to place scores on the front porch of the home.

It became known today that one of Mrs. Harding's last acts was the gift of $125 t othe soldiers on guard at President Harding's tomb to provide them with a Thanksgiving dinner.

The funeral cortege following services at Epworth Methodist Episcopal church tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock will move from the church to the cemetery over the same route as that taken when President Harding was entombed.

Slash Vernon Man

Carnival Concessionaire Gets Throat Cut During Argument.

VERNON, Texas, Nov. 23.—J. W. Spell in charge of a concession at a carnival on North Main street is in the hospital here with his throat cut. His assailant escaped and has not been apprehended.

It is said that Spell bent an air gun over the other man's head in an argument last night at the carnival over some money, the other man claiming he had been fleeced. When Spell hit the man he drew his knife and cut Spell's throat. It was necessary to take fifteen stitches. He is resting easy. The police force was out all over town searching for the knife wielder, whose name is not known and who was described as an elderly man.

FEDERAL JUDGE DEAD

Henry Groves Conner of North Carolina Succumbs Sunday.

WILSON, N. C., Nov. 23.—Henry Groves Conner, United States district judge of the eastern district of North Carolina, died at his home here at 4 o'clock this afternoon after an illness of several months. Judge Conner was 74 years old.

Ashes of Famous French Socialist Entombed In Paris Temple of Honor

PARIS, Nov. 23. — (AP) — The ashes of Jean Jaures, the famous French socialist, were laid to rest today in the Pantheon to the strains of "La Carmagnole," the old anthem of the French revolution. A lone cornetist played the anthem at the moment the casket was placed on the great improvised altar in the famous church, which had been converted into a sort of temple of republicanism.

Tonight the ashes of the great socialist and pacifist orator lie alongside those of the Chevalier de la Tour D'Auvergne, Napoleon's "first grenadier of France."

The procession to the Pantheon from the chamber of deputies where Jaures achieved international fame by his oratory was one of the most impressive seen in Paris since President Wilson's triumphal welcome in 1918.

As the mammoth float bearing the coffin, pushed by miners of Jaures' home department of the Tarn, passed through the heart of the Latin quarter, the intellectual center of Paris, men, women and children broke through the lines of police and troops to throw flowers on the bier—mainly red eglantines and red carnations. In the procession were socialist and communist delegations carrying red flags.

Inside the Pantheon and in the presence of President Doumergue and a notable gathering, Premier Herriot delivered the oration.

The strains of "The Marseillaise," played at the conclusion of the ceremony, gave the only nationalistic touch to a great international demonstration. A German delegation marched in the funeral procession. After the regular official delegations had passed by the Pantheon, a communist column estimated at 60,000, with a forest of bright red flags, all topped with the bronze soviet emblem—the crossed hammer and scythe—came on.

CITY SPENDING EVEN IF CASH SUPPLY IS LOW

Administration Busy With Needed Improvements In Wichita Falls.

HAS EYE TO FUTURE.

"Spends It Now or Regret" It Later Is Collier's Belief.

An improvement and expansion program made necessary by an ever-increasing demand on the services that it offers has brought to Wichita Falls recently the rather unusual spectacle of a city spending steadily when its exchequer is at low ebb.

It is a pleasing commentary on the local administration that a financial shortage at the end of the year has not been allowed to stand in the way of improvements that were badly needed. Pressing as has been the demand for rigid economy in all departments, Mayor Collier and his aides have considered progress even more pressing. Accordingly, they have spent lavishly but well, content to work out as they arise those stringencies following in the wake of a depleted treasury.

City Not Broke.

Lest an erroneous impression be gained, let it be understood at the outset that the city is by no means a civic derelict on financial seas. It is neither broke nor badly bent, but it is in a position that requires careful nursing until tax payments roll in heavily next February. With 1924 assessments already due the shortage will be eliminated when the real rush of taxpayers comes, but until then it is no rosy row that must be hoed. And even then, no one ever heard of a municipality that had cash to play with.

But be that as it may, the city council within the past month has contracted for improvements costing over $14,000 and has taken action that will mean an annual decrease of about $50,000 in the revenue of the water department. This latter represents just that much saving to residents here who would have paid it out in water bills.

This decrease, of course, is attributable to the recent revision of water rates which were scaled down to lower levels. It has been estimated that $50,000 a year is a conservative figure for the loss that will accrue as a result of this revision. This is a considerable slice to whack from municipal income, but the council did it knowing that it was possible and hence should be done.

Two Investments.

The $14,000 output comes under the head of two investments, one the new Somers system of tax appraisement and equalization and the other the new traffic control lighting system that is to go in on the down town corners. The tax matter has been purchased for $9,000 and the traffic lights for $5,100, and in both instances it was a case of "buy now and save it later." Leaks that are known to have existed in the present taxing system are due for elimination under the new plan and greater facility in the handling of traffic conditions is expected to come from the new lights.

These, however, are only examples of the same spirit that has been manifest throughout the year and which has resulted in a long array of civic improvements. Over five miles of new paving has been added in 1924, a tourist park has been opened and equipped at a cost of more than $2,000, more than $2,000 has been expended in the purchase of playground equipment for city parks and an elaborate improvement program is now being outlined for the new city park recently donated by Fred Weeks.

Others Too.

All these and many others have been carried out in the face of the ever-present damper that close financing imposes. Revenues on hand have been made to pay the bills, too, for in only one instance has an interest bearing warrant issue been necessary. That was about six weeks ago when a $52,000 street improvement issue was floated. Current taxes have cared for the balance.

A new sewage disposal plant that will cost at least $150,000 or more is now being considered although it is still in the formative stage. A new city hall and municipal auditorium is also a dream of rather indistinct outline, but that it will eventually materialize there can be no doubt.

TRAIN ROBBER RETRACTS

Man Confesses Crime and Then Backs Up, Officers Assert

M'ALESTER, Okla., Nov. 23.—"Dick" D'Autremont, alias W. J. Porter, held here on a charge of passing bogus checks, whom Chief of Police J. R. McCulley declared confessed he was one of a trio of brothers wanted for train robbery and murder at Siskiyou, Ore., had not been definitely identified Sunday as one of the men sought in connection with the Oregon case, police authorities announced.

According to a story told police by a fellow prisoner, D'Autremont said he was not afraid to face Oregon officers as he could establish an alibi which would exonorate him.

SHE DRINKS POISON

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 23.—Inability to read the English printed labels on two bottles resulted here tonight in the death of Mrs. Ruffino, 49, Italian, one hour after she drank a spoonful of silver polish, mistaking it for medicine for a cold

Obregon Is Riled Over Fake Note

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 23.—(AP) — President Obregon is aroused over a message bearing his signature and alleged to have been sent by him to the convention of the Mexican regional confederation of labor now in session at Jaurez. This message transmitted verbatim in special dispatches to El Universal, this city, announced that General Angel Flores, unsuccessful presidential candidate had taken up arms against the central government in the state of Sonora.

The moment President Obregon was shown the text of the message as received from El Universal's correspondent at the Jaurez convention he indignantly repudiated it.

The president announced that he would order an immediate investigation to ascertain whether the message had been sent to Jaurez from Mexico City, or whether the forgery had been committed at Jaurez or some telegraph station along the line.

Armed Guards To Convey Delegates To Mexico City

Labor Heads to Make Trip To Inauguration In Special Trains.

EL PASO, Texas, Nov. 23.—(AP) The opening session of the second week will bring before the annual convention of the American Federation of Labor tomorrow the heaviest quota of important business considered in any session to date.

Under a special order of business voted Saturday, the report of the resolutions committee will go before the gathering immediately after the opening formalities of the morning session. Should that report, embracing recommendations of some 30 resolutions dealing with almost as many subjects, be disposed of Monday, the committee on the executive council's report will be ready to present to the delegates its recommendations on the activities of the officers of the federation since the last convention.

Go to Mexico City

The convention probably will complete its business in extra-hour sessions Monday and Tuesday. Under plans announced tonight, the delegates and officers will leave Thursday evening for Mexico City to attend the inauguration of President-elect Calles.

In view of murmurings of a revolutionary uprising in the northern states, spokesmen for the Mexican government said, pilot trains will precede the specials, and two armored cars will be attached to each train.

ANOTHER BIG LAKE PRODUCER

Twelfth Well Comes In On University Land In Reagan County

SAN ANGELO, Texas, Nov. 23.—Producing oil wells in Reagan county on land owned by the University of Texas were increased to 12 today when the Big Lake Oil company's well No. 13, came in at noon. The initial flow of the new well was 120 barrels an hour with the oil sand being penetrated for five feet, struck slightly below the 3,000 foot level.

Drillers claim that the well will be good for at least 3,500 barrels a day when completed.

LOAN LAUNCHED MONDAY

Morgan to Float Issue of 100 Millions For French

NEW YORK, Nov. 23.—J. P. Morgan and associates will launch the new $100,000,000 loan to the French republic here tomorrow. The loan will be offered in a single issue of 25 years, 7 per cent gold bonds at 94. The effect of the loan is to absorb the recent series of short term credits and convert the funding into a 25-year operation.

KORETZ, SWINDLER CAUGHT

Man Wanted by Chicago Cops Jailed in Halifax, N. S.

HALIFAX, N. S., Nov. 23.—Described by assistant state Attorneys Sharbero and McSwiggin, of Chicago, Ill., as the "smoothest and most dangerous confidence man in the United States," Leo Koretz, alias Lou Keyte, was arrested at a hotel here tonight on a charge of using the mails to defraud, to the extent of $2,000,000 and will leave for Chicago tomorrow. He waived extradition.

TOWN HARD HIT BY FIRE

Willets, Miss., Suffers Severe Loss In Lumber Blaze.

NATCHEZ, Miss., Nov. 23.—A fire which broke out early this afternoon at Willets, ten miles south of Natchez, on the Louisiana side of the Mississippi river, destroyed the plant of the Black River Lumber company, and other property, and for a time threatened the entire town, was brought under control at 8 o'clock tonight, according to reports received here. It was estimated the loss would exceed $500,000.

KILLED IN AIR CRASH

CLOVER FIELD, Santa Monica, Calif., Nov. 23.—A man and a woman were killed and two other persons were seriously injured here today when the airplanes in which they were flying collided in midair.

CITY AWAITING $52,000 DRIVE FOR CHARITIES

Committees to Start Out Monday on Intensive Campaign.

EVERYTHING READY

Hope to Secure Full Amount By Tuesday Evening.

With five organizations already announcing that their employes have subscribed 100 per cent and with sentiment for the drive pronouncedly favorable elsewhere, Wichita Falls launches today on its 1924 community chest campaign. It is the hope of those in charge to have the entire $52,000 wanted collected or pledged by Tuesday night. A two-day drive, they believe, will be sufficient.

4 Already In.

It was announced last night by Marvin Smith, chairman of the campaign committee, that four business houses and one labor union have turned in 100 per cent subscriptions for their workers. These are the First National bank, Texhoma Oil and Refining company, McClurkans store, Railey Printing company and the carpenters union. Executives of the city's numerous business houses have been asked to make collections from their own employes and to have the amounts ready when the committees call. Many more such 100 percenters are expected to report before nightfall Monday.

Eager to Start.

All committee chairman declared yesterday that their workers were eager to make the start and that they would start today on the intensive collection campaign for the nine organizations to share in the chest. A few will begin this morning, but the brunt of the work will be allowed to pile up until the afternoon. The chairmen will meet with the Kiwanis club at the Kemp hotel this noon and will go from there directly into the offices of the city. Cards and the "I Care Buttons" are ready for distribution.

Civic leaders yesterday expressed absolute confidence that the nine organizations—Red Cross, Salvation Army, Welfare Board, Boy Scouts, Camp Fire Girls, Texas Childrens Home and Aid Society, Day Nurse, Y. W. C. A. and negro charities, could be assured by Tuesday that the sums allotted each would be forthcoming. No fear was felt but that the city would acknowledge its responsibilities by responding liberally and quickly. The task of collection, it was thought, could be limited to two days at the most and for this reason Tuesday night was set as the tentative date on which the $52,000 should be accounted for.

Favorable Sentiment.

Sentiment typical of that found everywhere was expressed yesterday by four prominent Wichitans who were questioned regarding their attitude on the drive. This is what they had to say:

"It is the direct responsibility of every Wichita Falls man and woman who has enough of the necessities of life to respond generously to the call which will be made for funds by the welfare campaign committees this week. This work is being handled here economically and efficiently and it is urgent that every penny of the $52,000 asked for be raised."

A. H. BRITAIN.
President chamber of commerce.

"Wichita Falls' welfare work has been handled with remarkably little overlaping and with great efficiency under the community chest method and I am sure that the citizens realize this to the extent that there will be little difficulty in raising the $52,000 asked for by the campaign committee. It would indeed be a disgrace to Wichita Falls should this sum fail to be subscribed this week."

FRANK COLLIER.
Mayor of Wichita Falls.

"From every standpoint I believe the community chest method of handling welfare work is the most satisfactory. Duplication of effort is avoided and every citizen has an opportunity to bear his share of the burden of helping the needy and suffering. No self-respecting man can afford to side-step his duty in this respect."

W. B. HAMILTON.
Texhoma Oil and Refining Company.

"I know of no other city that handles its welfare work more economically than Wichita Falls and the budget of $52,000 which is being asked for at this time should be heartily supported by every citizen. Contribution to this fund is a duty and a privilege which no man should avoid."

P. A. ROGERS.
Wichita Falls Electric Company.

YEATS TO TRIAL TUESDAY.

Former Alluwee Minister Who Abducted Girl Without Bond.

NOWATA, Okla., Nov. 23.—Joseph E. Yeats, former minister of the Methodist Episcopal church at Alluwee near here, will go to trial in district court here Tuesday on a charge of having abducted Georgia Fields, 14, of Alluwee. Yeats, since his arrest at Winters, Texas, September 20, has been confined in the county jail here unable to make the $3,000 bond fixed at the preliminary hearing. The Fields girl, whom Yeats claims to have married, formerly was a member of the choir in Yeats' church

Cal's Friends Think He Will Try Again, 1928

Believe Mr. Coolidge Will Try for Re-election In Next Campaign.

BUTLER RETAINED.

Nothing Said Publicly As Yet, But the Signs Are There.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23.—(INS)—President Coolidge's friends believe he will be a candidate to succeed himself in 1928.

This belief, which is beginning to be widely shared by most republican leaders in the capital has been strengthened in the last week by the president's insistence that William M. Butler retain the chairmanship of the republican national committee in addition to assuming his new duties as senator from Massachusetts.

Whatever purpose really lies behind President Coolidge's wish that Butler keep the headship of the republican machine, it is plain at least that the president intends to keep a tight grip on the efficient political engine that plowed through all opposition in the campaign and landed him in the white house by the popular and electoral majority that has seldom been equalled in history.

With Butler acting as white house spokesman in the senate and remaining in control of the national committee, the outlook will be poor indeed for anti-Coolidge elements within the party to promote any other presidential booms in the direction of 1928.

President Coolidge, of course, has not said publicly that he intends being a candidate again four years from now. But neither has he said that he would not be, as Theodore Roosevelt did in 1904, following his election. Roosevelt and Coolidge both came into the white house by the vice presidency route and both became presidents later by a direct expression of the will of the people. Within a week after his election, Roosevelt announced he had no thoughts of another term. Mr. Coolidge has been silent and in that silence political leaders here see a determination on his part to at least keep the gate open.

No hard and fast decision concerning another term will be possible of course, for a long time yet. He has four years to make up his mind and conditions in that time probably will determine his candidacy or his retirement.

GLASS GOWN TO MUSEUM

Presented to Deutches Museum At Munich For Safekeeping.

BERLIN, Nov. 23.—The infanta Eulalie's glass gown, which attracted much attention at the Chicago Columbian exposition in 1893, has been presented to the Deutsches Museum at Munich by Princess Marie de La Paz, sister of Eulalie and of King Alfonso XIII.

This marvelous ball gown which Princess Eulalie wore at the grand ball in Chicago and which afterwards was exhibited in the manufacturers building, is of soft spun glass, which has the appearance of imitation silk. So fine was the glass spun that the 2,500,000 threads in the dress weigh only one pound and bend as readily as silk. The gown is not transparent and it makes no more noise when moved than ordinary silk.

Princess Eulalie, who represented Spain at the Chicago exposition, is an aunt of Alfonso XIII, and the wife of Antonio, Prince of Orleans. She was only 29 years old when she visited Chicago, and because of her beauty and vivacity she was the most discussed visitor entertained by the Chicago exposition officials. The smoking of cigarettes by Eulalie, which at that time was not a custom among American women, provoked much comment.

SPLENDOR IN A TOMB.

Indian's Sepulchre a Vault of Barbaric Splendor.

STERLING CITY, Texas.—When W. F. Kellis, editor of the Sterling City Record, and his brother, Tom Kellis, opened an Indian tomb in a canyon on the Concho river near here, they found not only articles of barbaric splendor but products of the white man's handicraft as well. Chief among them was a mantle of beads, sprinkled with stones of sapphire, opal and emeralds and here and there a nugget of gold. The mantle was laid over the face of the Indian on whose head also sat a silver goblet inscribed on one side in small type, "T. Warner." On the opposite side was the inscription in script, "For the best Carlisle Colt, 1830." The cup apparently had been made in England and likely was the property of an early settler whose frontier home the aborigine had looted.

A crouching bear, skillfully cut from rock, the token of a Comanche chief, was buried with him. Nearby were four brass finger rings, four ankle rings and one nose ring.

BILLY WHISKERS

BY FRANCES TREGO MONTGOMERY

In the last story we read how the motion picture men drove into the farmer's yard in a limousine.

The farmer, who was just coming across the barnyard when they drove in, walked up to them and Billy heard Mr. Strobel say, "I am the president of the Emmenenn Studio, and this is our director, Mr. Dates. We have come for our billy-goat. You may think it strange that we have come in a limousine, but this is the machine in which we always take Billy from the livery to the studio and back again. He loves to ride in it. Just wait until you see him in it. He sits up on the back seat just like a person, with his fore legs hanging down in front of him. And he keeps his balance and sways his body when rounding corners exactly as if he was a human. If he sees a dog or anything he wants to look at out of the window, he slips off the seat, sticks his head out of the window, looks at it then bunches himself back on the seat just as a child does whose legs are too short to reach the floor. It is most comical to see him. And there are crowds of children at the door of the livery every morning to see him ride out. He is a very valuable goat to us since we have him trained, and he is holding up our play by running away."

Billy ran to the further corner of the goat yard and tried to jump the fence, but when he raised up on his wounded hind leg it hurt so he could not make the spring that would carry him over the fence.

"I guess I am caught this time, so I will go along quietly with them and trust to luck to get away from them before we reach the studio. If it is far I am sure to have plenty of chances."

"Well, Billy, old fellow," said Dates, "you thought you had given us the slip once more, didn't you? But I hear you have made friends here and been most heroic. Good for you! And what I am thinking is that that same scene enacted for the movies would be great. It would surely send thrills through the audience when you toss the old black dog up to the sky on your horns," and as he talked he slipped a halter around Billy's neck and led him off to the waiting automobile.

"Good-bye! Good-bye!" baaed Billy. "Thank you all for the pleasant time I have had. And you kind people, too, for the good care you gave me when I was hurt."

When Mr. Strobel shook hands with the farmer's son, he said, "I will send you a check for five hundred as soon as I reach my office," and with Billy baaing and the men bowing, they drove off, with Mr. Strobel sitting on the back seat beside Billy, Mr. Dates on the front seat.

(We will have to leave another story to tell whether Billy had any chance to escape his captors on the ride to the picture studio.)

HAS A FUNNY NAME

French Newspapers Get Mixed On Parker Gilbert.

PARIS, Nov. 23.—Seymour Parker Gilbert, Jr., agent general for reparation payments under the Dawes plan, is having more trouble with his name Anglo-Saxon names seem peculiarly than in collecting from Germany. Anglo-Saxon names seem peculiarly difficult for the French, who frequently transpose the christian and surnames and juggle the spelling into a rather sad mixture.

Mr. Gilbert from the start has fared badly. His job, which is the biggest in the European reconstruction, attracted great attention to him and his youth excited amazement; but the newspapers welcomed him indifferently as Gilbert, Parker or Seymour.

Le Journal, second largest newspaper in France, reached the climax of inaccuracy in a front page story about Mr. Gilbert in which he was called "Monsieur Gilbert Parker" and instead of his youthful face there appeared an old picture of the bearded British novelist, blainly labeled "Sir Gilbert Parker."

That this was not a mere accident was shown when the same paper continued its erroneous appellation in succeeding stories and other papers followed suit. One, spotting a telegraphed story about the departure of the novelist for Canada, promptly printed it, believing that the agent-general had left Europe, although at the same time there were daily stories from Berlin reporting the American's activities.

WEAR SHOES IN PARIS

Low Quarters For Milady Give Way To High Tops.

PARIS, Nov. 23—The Paris fashion experts apparently believe the weather prophets prediction of a hard winter, for high shoes are to be worn this year—so high that the tops reach the knees.

The bottoms are of patent leather and the tops of fine smooth cloth, in fact so fine that it will be hard to see where shoe ends and stocking begins. Some of the shoes will be trimmed with a broad band of color running up the back from the heel to the hollow of the knee. Silk stockings already have been discarded by many women except for indoor wear. They are replaced by woolen or silk-and-woolen in plaid, check or other elaborate designs. These fashionable woolen stockings are often more expensive than the finest silk.

GERMANS CAN SEE SHOWS

Ban On Carnivals Being Gradually Lifted

BERLIN, Nov. 23.—German cities gradually are lifting the ban which has existed for many years on public carnivals and costumers are preparing to meet the demands of olden times for costumes to be worn by revellers at celebrations and balls during carnival week preceding Lent. Munich, Cologne and other cities have arranged to lift the police ban on masks and also on the closing hours of cafes and dance halls during the carnival period.

This is considered one of the many signs of more stable political conditions brought about by Germany's acceptance of the Dawes plan for reparations payments.

U. S. WIVES STAY IN U. S.

Otherwise Citizenship Forfeited, So Says New Ruling

BERLIN, Nov. 23. — American women married to foreigners who had hoped to regain their American citizenship under the Cable law by residing one year in the United States and then returning to Europe to resume their marital relations under protection of American law, have been bitterly disappointed by a ruling of the state department at Washington. This ruling is to the effect that the American naturalization thus effected will be the forfeit in case the women resume their European residence.

Many American born women with extensive property interests who married before the Cable law became effective, hoped to make its provisions restroactive by again becoming naturalized, but the American officials have made it clear that such naturalization will hold good only if the women remain in the United States.

CHILDREN MORE PRECOCIOUS

Marrs' Report Indicates They Make Headway More Rapidly

AUSTIN, Texas, Nov. 23.—Are Texas children more precocious than those of 20 years ago?

The report of State Superintendent of Education S. M. N. Marrs would indicate he thinks so.

"Lower the free school minimum from seven to six years," he advised in his recommendations now being printed, for presentation to the legislature.

"Take the upper limit off, and raise the age of compulsory attendance to 16 years," he further recommended.

He reiterated his advocacy of re strictling junior colleges. He renewed his plea for a minimum annual apportionment not less than $15 for each of the 1,300,000 children recorded in the scholastic census.

Neff Vetoes 93 Bills While He Holds His Post

Balks On More Measures Than Any Other State Head In Years.

AUSTIN, Texas, Nov. 23.—Gov. Pat M. Neff, during his four-year term, vetoed more than one-fourth of the bills which have been vetoed since the beginning of the Hogg administration, or in a third of a century, an investigation of the secretary of state's records has revealed.

Gov. Neff vetoed 93 bills. Of those, 12, which were for the creation of new courts in the state, were passed over his veto. No other measure which received his disapproval has gone into effect. The data does not refer to appropriation bills from which particular items were stricken.

According to the records of the state department, Governor W. P. Hobby vetoed 10 measures during his term, and J. E. Ferguson 19.

Gov. Colquitt is credited with 68 vetoes, the highest number of any other executive than Neff. Gov. T. N. Campbell sent back with his disapproval, 33 bills, while Gov. Lanham vetoed 32, Gov. Sayers 33 bills, Gov. Charles A. Culberson 25, and James Stephen Hogg 16 measures. The total number of bills thus vetoed since the beginning of Hogg's term is given as 329.

REDS FIRE SERVANTS

Czar's Personnel Get Blow From Soviet.

PARIS, Nov. 23. — The Russian Soviet's first act of authority at the Czar's old embassy in Paris after obtaining recognition from France was to discharge the little staff of French employes which has been there for a quarter of a century or more, during which many ambassadors have come and gone. The five old servants went out with one month's pay each.

"The worst of it is," said the concierge, "we thought we were here for life. This was our home."

Whether they have any rights, under oral or implied contracts, to an indemnity of one months' wages for each year of service, they are debarred from legal action as the embassy is protected from suits by diplomatic immunity.

The oldest servant was Mme. Meurie, whose husband died in the embassy's employ and who, after 30 years service left her with a matress, three valises and 300 francs.

The staff recently turned over to Christian Rakovsky, the soviet envoy, the treasures which they guarded during the war. In the embassy vault, to his great surprise, was the magnificent gold and silver service, intact and valued at 5,000,000 gold francs.

50 YEARS A CABBIE

Hoffman Rounds Out Half-Century of "Where to, Lary?"

Friederich Hoffman, who was in jail with Carl Schurz and other famous "forty-niners" who participated in the insurrection in the Palatinate and Baden and who later fled to the United States, recently rounded out his fiftieth year of uninterrupted service as a Berlin cab driver. Hoffman says in the early days policemen frequently threw him into jail if he was caught smoking a cigar while on duty or if a button were missing from his uniform. A fine of three marks usually was imposed, but rather than pay that sum, which then was a considerable amount, he elected to accept jail sentences, as the political prisoners in those days were good companions and no one felt any disgrace to be locked up.

Color Cut-Outs

Some one was knocking at the door of the big old-fashioned house which belonged to Betty Cut-out's grandmother. Betty, who was visiting there, ran to open the door. Into the room, with a swirl of wind-blown snow, stepped a rosy-cheeked girl about Betty's age.

"Are you Betty Cut-out?" asked the new comer, talking very fast. She didn't wait for Betty to answer, but went right on. "I'm Sarah Mann and I live on the next farm. Sometimes I come down and work for your grandmother when she has company. She sent for me to come today and here I am."

Betty smiled politely. "Well, come in and take off your wraps," she said. "I'm helping Grandmother, too. I'm chopping up things to go in the mincemeat."

(Tomorrow Betty and Sarah will play at being cooks.)

Sarah has very black hair and eyes. She is wearing a light green dress with dark green checks in the skirt.

FINAL RETURNS

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Nov. 23.—Official returns from 74 of the 75 counties in Arkansas, compiled by the secretary of state today gave 82,542 votes for the democratic presidential electors; 38,928 for the republican presidential electors and 12,833 for the LaFollette-Wheeler ticket. Efforts to get returns from Washington county have failed.

Want Proof Of British Claims Against Seamen

Must Produce Evidence Or Cases Will Be Dropped In U. S. Court.

ATLANTA, Ga., Nov. 23—The British government must show cause Monday why Sam Case, alias Foster, should be taken to England or the warrant will be dismissed, United States Commissioner Joe Abbott ruled here in postponing until Monday further hearings on charges of piracy brought against the seaman. Case is charged in a warrant sworn out by British Consul W. M. Gurney of Savannah, with having committed piracy in seizing the British vessel, Louis F., imprisoning her captain, and inciting the crew to mutiny.

Started a Mutiny

The government charges that after forcibly seizing the vessel, Case sailed her into port at Jacksonville, Fla., "on October 3, 1923," the charges say, "Case, a seaman of the Louise F. excited the crew to mutiny, seized the ship which was loaded with whiskey, placed the captain in irons, and sailed the ship into a Floride port. While attempting to unload the cargo he was arrested by revenue agents on a prohibition charge and following conviction, was brought to Atlanta to serve his sentence."

The sentence of Case had just expired when he was called on to face the charge of piracy.

$300,000 Cargo

Attorney Paul Carpenter, representing the prisoner, placed the value of the cargo of the Louise F., at $300,000. He said the vessel was libeled but it was lifted when the crew contended that it was logical for the United States to seek to disprove the piracy charges, for in that case the British government, he recited, would have to pay this government $300,000, the value of the cargo, "which the United States rightfully seized but which was released when the piracy story was concocted."

FRENCH TRY TEA BATHS

French Maids Take to Lipton Product For Complexion

PARIS, Nov. 23.—Anna Held's milk baths have been gone one better by some Parisian beauties, not averse to publicity, who are filling their tubs with tea. The idea was greeted with great laughter when first heard of but its advocates said that their doctors assured them the pores of the skin acted as so many little mouths and they had concluded that if the stimulation of tea was worth while when taken internally it ought to have a wonderful effect if the whole body could have a chance at it.

Another argument and not the least, was that the fashionable ochre skin tint and the expensive beach tan could thus be had at home, and although some of the commentators remark that 40 gallons of tea seems a rather high priced dip.

FIVE FRENCH PUMPKINS

Pies and Tarts for 500 Lonely American Londoners.

LONDON, Nov. 23.—Last year's tragedy, when a 140 pound pumpkin sent from France to provide pies for the Thanksgiving dinner of 500 lonely, Americans in London, exploded just after it was loaded from an airplane, is to have a happy sequel this year. Five pumpkins, one weighing 170 pounds, grown from the seeds saved from last year's debacle, are to be made into tempting "tarts"—as the English call pies—for the great feast.

Another treat will be wild turkeys, to be shot in Norfolk a few days in advance and shipped to London especially for the occasion. The American ambassador and Mrs. Kellogg and the prince of Wales will be among the principal guests at the dinner, which will be under the auspices of the American society.

The excellent wheat harvest in Hardeman county, bringing hundreds of thousands of do rs to the farmers before their cotton crop matured; then the unusually heavy cotton crop with the exceptionally high price which has been paid by local buyers all season, has placed much money in circulation here. The banks report that farmers are paying off their obligations at an 'alarming' rate, and that the merchants and townspeople generally are in a very prosperous condition.

Salary Of $8,000 A Year Proposed For T.U. President

Board of Control Makes Its Recommendations For Teachers' Wages.

AUSTIN, Texas, Nov. 23.—A salary of $8,000 a year for the president of the University of Texas was recommended by the state board of control in the budget. President Splawn is now receiving $10,000 a year under the lump-sum appropriations made two years ago, and the university regents have recommended the salary remain at $10,000.

The board of control in preparing its budgets recommended $7,500 a year to the presidents of A. & M. and Texas Tech. colleges, $6,500 to the president of the college of industrial arts, $5,000 each to the presidents of the nine teacher colleges, and $4,250 to the president of the junior agricultural college.

Slight increases are included in the salary scale for the schools, but not what was asked in the estimates of those schools. The board announced that the salaries were based on $4,250 a year to full professors in the university, $3,750 in A. & M. and Tech, $3,310 at C. I. A., $3,00 at the normal colleges, and $2,700 in the junior agricultural college.

FIRE INSURANCE RAISED

AUSTIN, Texas, Nov. 23.—The fire insurance key rate of Bartlett has been raised by the fire insurance commission 17 cents, from 45 cents to 62 cents, it was announced. The new schedules, worked out by the commission recently, resulted in the increase, it was stated. The rate of Edna was raised from 97 cents to $1, while the cities and towns of Coupland, Falls City and Cranfills Gap retained their old rates of $1.

How Often Do You Use Your Telephone?

Do you use your residence telephone often enough to warrant the expense of a "one-party-line?" Consider the number of hours that your line is not in use, and you will probably conclude that a "selective-ringing" telephone would handle your traffic just as well—and at a reduced expense.

By sharing your line with another subscriber you not only save money, but you enable the Telephone Company to add more telephones to the exchange—and thus make your telephone more valuable. For the value of your telephone increases in proportion to the number of other telephones you can be connected with.

In this and other cities where "selective-ringing" service is offered, as many as one out of two residence subscribers finds that this service satisfactorily meets their needs.

UNITED WELFARE CAMPAIGN NOVEMBER 24, 25, 26.

SUPPOSE NOBODY CARED—

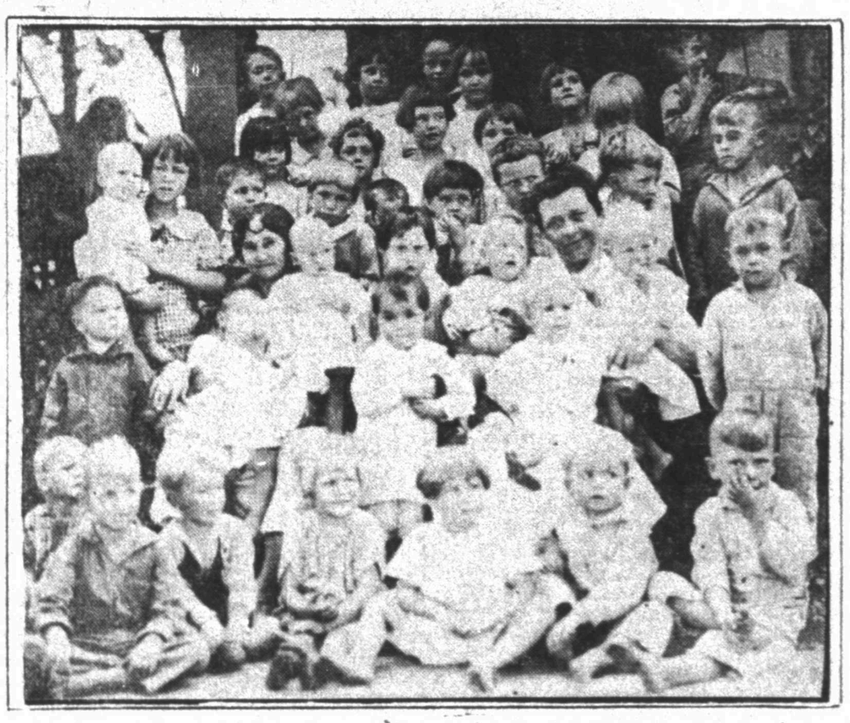

—You cannot dodge your individual, personal responsibility. The campaign will not be successful and Wichita Falls will not be able to care for her welfare needs unless you do your share.

—Somebody else cannot do your part for you. Your duty to humanity, to your city and to yourself demands that you bear your share of the burden.

How About You?

—Wichita Falls takes care of its welfare needs with less money than any other city of its size in the United States. The $52,000 asked is less than one dollar per capita. This is due to the very strict supervision of the welfare board and the careful elimination of overlaping in the administration of the work.

—Your money will be spent wisely and well and you may have the satisfaction of knowing that the unfortunate of Wichita Falls will profit to the utmost by your donation.

BROTHER CHARLES.

By Hugh Nugent Fitzgerald.

Brother Charles W. Bryan, democratic governor of Nebraska, says the republican victory is already costing the people of Nebraska $300,000 a day. Brother William has pounded Wall Street for 30 years. Brother Charles has been pounding what he calls the oil trust for two years. His latest is that as soon as the ballots were counted and the announcement made that a republican president had been elected gasoline advanced from 2 1-2 to 3c a gallon all over Nebraska.

Brother Charles is a bit ugly. This is his indictment: "As soon as the oil combination saw there was no danger of prosecution with republicans in control it raised the price. Democrats have only 6 weeks more in office and the oil combination knows we can do nothing in that time and it also knows that the incoming administration will do nothing. Therefore the increase in price."

Brother Charles should be a good sportsman. There is another election coming two years hence. All he has to do is to promise the voters of Nebraska that if they will return him to the governor's office he will run all the plutocrats into the Missouri river.

Just now his plutocrats appear to be in majority from Sandy Hook to the Golden Gate with busks for the democrats and milk and honey for the republicans. It has been a sad year for the Bryans; it has been a great year for those who prefer the promise of prosperity to poverty.

ENROLLMENT OF ALIENS.

James J. Davis, secretary of labor in the cabinet of Calvin Coolidge is for the registration of all immigrants immediately upon arrival in this country under the bureau of naturalization. James J. Davis is a native of Wales. He is the head of the loyal order of Moose. He will retire from the cabinet on March 4, 1924. He came to America when a small lad. He found this a land of opportunity. Now he is giving his viewpoint for the benefit of all the people.

In a recent address, pointing out that of 14,000,000 aliens in the United States 8,000,000 are not citizens, the secretary suggested that enrollment for a preparatory course in citizenship could be defrayed by the immigrants themselves paying a $10 fee to cover instruction in the English language and American history.

In his address the secretary of labor urged passage of a law by congress making compulsory the enrollment of every foreign born person. President Coolidge is said to be committed to the Davis plan of alien enrollment. There should be compulsory naturalization as well as compulsory enrollment.

Millions of aliens come to this country to better their economic fortunes. They should be willing to accept the responsibility of citizenship and become loyal defenders of the flag and the constitution.

What Today Means to You

SAGITTARIUS

Today's planetary aspects are quite inauspicious although there are some stimulating vibrations towards the latter part of the evening; they are not, however, of such a favorable character as to warrant any decisions being made on matters of significance. All important business should as far as practicable, be avoided and no agreements or contracts involving finance, or anything related thereto should be executed. There will be experienced very generally today a disposition to find fault and criticize; this tendency should be held in check, unless you desire the breaking up of old associations.

A child born today will be physically robust, and given wholesome environment and good surroundings, it will develop into average physical maturity. It will display mechanical ability, be methodical, careful and patient. It will be conservative in its judgment, observing, candid and versatile. It will profit by the mistakes of others, and will always be ready to help others avoid the rough places. It will not form attachments hastily, and will probably not marry early in life. Its love will be deep, true, and strong.

If today is your birthday, you have great self-control, and abundant conceit. You do not distinguish between pride and conceit; the former, when based on strength of character and deeds accomplished is a valuable asset in the makeup of any man or woman; the latter, however, is unworthy of your traditions and your abilities. It causes much unfavorable comment amongst your friends.

You are ambitious and idealistic, but you are lacking in perseverance and tenacity, and often fall just short of attaining your goal. You are able to conceive valuable plans and to visualize good profitable schemes; you soon tire, however, of the detailed work involved in putting them into execution, and often permit others, by your slackness, to take full advantage of your ideas, which they do to their profit, in which you have no share or participation.

You are musical and artistic, steadfast in your love, loyal in your friendships, and loving in your home.

More Truth Than Poetry

WHAT BRUTES WE ARE!

The mouse's child
Is meek and mild,
He's never rough,
Nor rude, nor wild;
Throughout his days,
He goes his ways
Both modestly and shyly.
But when the cat,
Who's sleek and fat
Discovers where
This child it at,
And eats him up
At one fell sup,
We praise her very highly.

The gopher's son,
His dinner done,
Delights to play
And romp and run,
Or on a hill
Beside the rill,
To sleep serene and placid.
But we destroy
With brutal joy
This harmless little
Gopher boy,
Or poison him,
In burrows dim,
With hydrochloric acid.

Which proves that we
Find fiendish glee
In butchery and slaughter;
And this is bad, because we had
N't ever, ever oughter!

FORESTRY.

It is time the United States devoted its attention seriously to the question of forestry. Timber farming has not been profitable in this country, notwithstanding the fact shortages constantly occur and that $250,000,000 is spent annually on freight and other forms of transportation.

The passage of the McNary-Clarke bill may improve the situation.

This bill provides for the protection of forest lands, for the reforestation of denuded areas, for the extension of national forests,

We consume 60,000,000,000 board feet of lumber every year. According to Senator McNary seven billion of this is waste through fire, insects and disease. We grow naturally and artificially but one-fifth of this annual sixty billion. Soft timber is disappearing eight times faster than it grows and hard woods more than three times faster.

Reforestation is manifestly a subject of education and of slow growth. It involves not only fire protection but a study of forest taxation and a distribution of forest planting material, the creation of additional national forests and encouragment to private owners.

The McNary-Clarke bill aims to do this and to establish the foundation of a national forest policy and though it is far from complete its provisions are good as far as they go.

In order to protect the forests properly, state cooperation with the nation is required as, according to our peculiar American system, it is necessary for the state and the nation to work together.

Forests have much to do with the prevention of destructive floods and have an influence upon climatic conditions.

The sooner the American people turn their attention to forestation the better it will be for the country.

Especially the planting of trees along the national highways should be encouraged, as it is in France. Also as in Germany, no man should be allowed to cut down a tree unless one is planted at the same time. There should be ample provision for reforestation. A tree should be recognized as a national asset and no man should be allowed to do as he pleases with his own trees but the government should have supervision over them all.

THIS LIQUOR QUESTION

A few days ago a girl wrote and asked me to write an article on this liquor question. It seemed that her sweetheart was inclined to take a drink or two and she wanted to know what to do about it.

The less published about the subject, the better, I think. If a man who drinks reads the article it reminds him that he wants a drink, and if the man who does not drink reads it—he has wasted his time—so what's the use of writing it.

But I feel I must say this to the girl—it will help her understand human nature better, and perhaps aid her in regaining the affections of her sweetheart.

The other day I was talking to a big advertising man in New York. I had an idea that I thought was a whiz—and I wanted to sell it to a radio concern.

He looked it over and said—"The public want to be amused, they do not want to be improved."

With that remark the letter I had received from the girl flashed into my mind—there was her answer, right there—her lover wanted to be amused—not improved.

This is true of most men. If they want to be reformed, they begin reading the Bible or going to church, and they try to overcome their evil habits themselves. They certainly do not want any woman to try to reform them. And believe this or not, they will dodge her—they will duck away when they see her coming down the street.

And so I firmly believe that men should work out their own salvation—and that women should attract them so greatly with their charm and understanding that the men will be willing to do anything to please them.

We, in the Modern World, Have Learned Something Our Grandparents Didn't Know: How to Laugh at Misfortune Instead of Weeping Over It.

Do you ever stop to think how much more cheerful a place the world is to live in than it was fifty years ago? We are always talking about the good old times when you did not have to worry over your income tax, nor listen to your friends' radios, nor dodge joy-riders, nor see the society of bootleggers, and when a dollar dinner was a banquet, and there was no jazz music, and women stayed put in their homes.

But in reality, if we could be shunted back to the dear, dead days, we would think that we had gotten into the melancholia ward of a lunatic asylum.

Of course, life does not change. There always has been sickness and sorrow and loss and death, and these misfortunes still tear at our hearts as they tore at our grandparents'. But somehow, some way, we meet with more philosophy than our forebears did, and we have a braver attitude toward life than they had.

Our grandparents, and especially the female of the species, made a cult of their griefs. It was thought interesting to brood over a disappointment. Tears were esteemed an ointment to women. They cultivated secret sorrows. Broken hearts were in fashion, and a woman counted it unto herself for righteousness if she never got over the death of some one she loved.

And a nice, blue, pessimistic time they must have had of it, because no one is so fortunate as not to have some broken hope, some blighted dream, some empty chair by his fireside, out of which he can manufacture a blighting sorrow if he gives his mind to the job.

God knows we have the same reasons to weep as our grandparents did, but we have purged our system of morbidness. We have learned to accept defeat with a grin, instead of a whine, and instead of going out of our way to hunt up trouble, we never trouble until troubles trouble us. We laugh at the man who poses around in a tragic attitude because someone has gone awry with his plans, or he has missed getting the thing he set his heart upon. We call him a quitter. And we brand those as cowards and poor sports who have not the courage to put their sorrow behind them and carry on.

It used to be that invalidism was considered elegant. It was a real distinction to have an incurable disease, especially for women. In almost every household there was a frail creature lying on a sofa, wasting away, boring everybody to death with his or her symptoms, and working the family to death waiting on him or her.

Chronic invalids now are almost as scarce as hen's teeth. We are ashamed to be sick. It brands us as weaklings or fools. So we rush off to doctors or sanitariums or take up golf whenever we get out of kilter. We literally think ourselves into health once more in thousands of cases that would have made our grandparents take to their beds for the balance of their lives.

As for talking about our ailments and describing our operations, we know that so few of our friends really enjoy clinics that we leave that topic to the conversationally destitute.

In olden times when a man lost his money, everybody gathered around him and held a lodge of sorrow. "Poor John, what a terrible thing to be down and out at fifty! An old man, destined to drag out the balance of his life in dependence on others. And his unfortunate wife, used to living in comfort! And his poor, poor daughters! Four of them. How in the world can they be supported? A sad, sad case! Hopeless."

When a man fails nowadays in business, we don't waste any sympathy on him. Too bad, of course, but we know that if he has any pep it is just a temporary misfortune. He will pick himself up, and, profiting by his experience, he will probably make more money than he ever did before. Thousands of our most prominent business men were broke at fifty and millionaires at seventy.

Nor do we shed any tears over the wife and daughters. They are not going to sponge on their relatives the balance of their days, nor go about afflicting every one with the tales of their former grandeur and moaning out that they never expected to come to this. The wife will probably start a tearoom. The girls will take up stenography or go into stores, and they will all be cheerful and interested and as jolly as sand boys.

Nor do we, ghoul-like, feast on past sorrows. Well do I remember in my childhood a group of tall, gaunt women, who wore black garments and long black veils and who never smiled, who came every now and then to spend the day with my grandmother and hold a tear-fest over grief twenty-five and thirty years old that they still cherished.

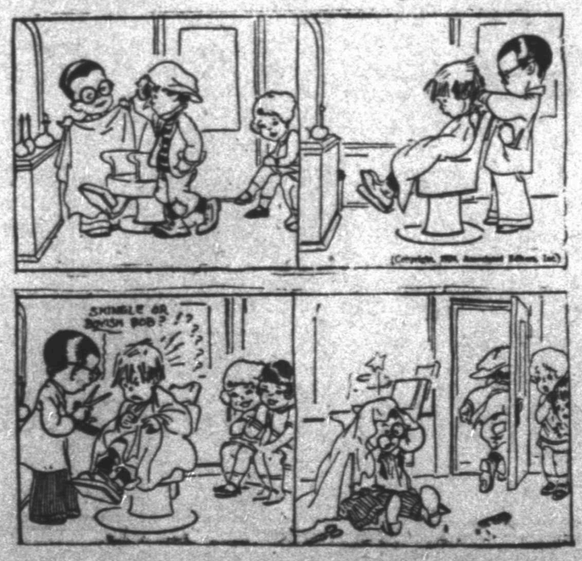

No such melancholy sisters come to see me. I have friends whose hearts are buried on some battlefield in France. I know women whose very souls died with their husbands, but they shed no tears in public, they wear no mourning garments. They go about and do their part in making the world a brighter and a cheerier place for others.

Doubtless our grandparents were our superior in many ways, but we have learned one thing that they did not know, and that is how to laugh at misfortune, instead of weeping over it.

HOW IT STARTED

"QUANDARY"

In the use of this word to indicate a state of puzzlement and difficulty in knowing what to do we are borrowing or appropriating from another language. Which language, however, and the precise line of its evolution, are in dispute.

The theory has been advanced that the word is a survival of the old English "wandreth" and the Icelandic "vanraeoi," meaning difficulty, trouble, a state of perplexity. Properly pronounced there is similarity in sound as well as kinship of meaning between these and our "quandary."

The popularly accepted version of the origin of the word, however, is that it is a corruption of the French "pu en dirai je?" (what shall I say?) come down to us from the time of the Norman invasion of England when many French words as well as customs took root in the new soil.

SMOULDERING FIRES

BY LAIN C. LANE

CHAPTER VIII.

To understand Grace Kingston, it is necessary to know something of what she had learned about life.

A truthful understanding of any one is impossible without a knowledge of his environment and the determining influence in his life. This is more particularly true of women. They are even more susceptible to external influences than men. A woman can learn the great lessons of life overnight, while a man must plod on and on to obtain an understanding of them, and very often he does not realize that they are taught to him.

Grace Kingston's childhood was not a happy one. She was one of three children. If she had been one of six, or eight, she would have been much happier. Her mother did not understand children, but was not aware of the fact. She wanted to be one of them, to know all their secrets, and be the captain of their souls. She didn't realize that she could not see things as their blossoming minds did, nor that they could look at things in her way. She tried to be their life as well as their mother, and the result was inevitably unhappy.

In her childhood and girlhood Grace had always felt as one apart. The same lack of misunderstanding in her mother she found in her two sisters. A difference in ages of two or three years is enormous in youth.

When she was fourteen she went to visit an aunt in a large city. She went alone, the first time she had ever been out of the sight of her mother. She felt her first marvelously delicious freedom. A sense of just having been born captured her. The city revealed to her wonders she had long dreamed about, and others that she had not heard of. Her aunt, childless, was totally unlike Grace's mother, so wonderfully so, that Grace quite shocked and amused her one day by saying in a childishly wistful way:

"I wish you were my mother."

There was little to read in her own home. She had been starved for books without knowing it. Her aunt had a considerable collection, and when she saw that Grace was interested, and endeavoring to drag sense out of books much beyond her years, she bought for her a half dozen volumes that opened a new world to her niece. It was the world of Romance.

Grace became a princess now. When she went home, she became a beautiful princess imprisoned in a tower, and she waited for a handsome knight to come and rescue her.

When she was sixteen she fell in love with one Neil Severn. He was two years older, with the stature of a man and the mind of a boy. Her love for him was not open, but silent. When she was alone, that was when she loved him. He was her knight, the personification of the heroic. He played the leading role in all the romantic stories she made up for herself. She played many love scenes with him—before a mirror when she was alone in her room.

And always the city beckoned to her. On another visit to her aunt she so impressed her that when the aunt died a year later there was provision in her will for the education of Grace at a girl's school in the city. She wanted Grace to study music.

So Grace's dreams began to fade before reality.

And then Carl came into her life.

CHAPTER IX.

Until Grace Kingston met Carl, and for some time thereafter, she thought of love in terms of story-book romances. Love was a matter of wandering with one's knight hand in hand along flower-lined paths. Marriage itself played little or no part in her thoughts on the subject. It just bound lovers together.

She was almost totally ignorant of the nature of conjugal relations. Her knowledge of sex was limited to realization that men and women were different. Her mother had followed the negligent course of most parents and allowed her children to grow up in ignorance of the most important facts of life. So Grace had to learn them at first hand at bitter cost. Blame her mother, and blame all mothers who commit Mrs. Kingston's error.

Billy Wentworth, whom she met at a school dance, took her to a Hallowe'en ball. There, in the course of the evening, through Billy, she met Carl. She never went out with Billy again.

In defense of Carl, this can be said: He was immediately attracted by her beauty, and charmed by her naive unsophistication. He was 10 years older, a tall, dignified, heroic looking figure, who was the personification of a romantic knight to Grace.

She did not know for some time that he was married.

He invited her to tea, took her to several studio parties, presented her with books and meaningless little gifts. He did this merely because he found her innervating and delightful company. He enjoyed the outlook she had upon things. To him, at first, she was no more than a doll is to a little girl—a pretty plaything. Just as the little girl eventually loves her doll so did he in time find himself in love with Grace.

He was carried on and on. And so was she.

It was inevitable that there should be a smash-up. She found herself in a serious condition. Without losing his head, he sought the best way out. He knew that it would take time to get a divorce from his wife. And he wanted to avoid that; not because he desired to shirk in his duty towards Grace, but because he would rather have died than shattered the happiness of his wife.

What was he to do? He chose the other way. When Grace had passed the crisis without harm, thanks to a devoted medical friend of Carl's he decided that it was time for them to part. He loved her—that is why he was unwilling to go on.

Her love for him—that was all that mattered to Grace. Then she would have done anything she told him. In her darkest hour she doubted him, and went to her cousin, Lura Baylir, for advice, but when Lura, with womanly curiosity endeavored to learn the name of the man in the case, she fled from her cousin, and placed her whole trust in Carl. Thus Lura inadvertently drove her cousin back into Carl's arms.

He forced a parting. She went home, wretchedly unhappy, to play a smiling role. She couldn't stand it, and had to get away. She sought an excuse and hit upon the plan of going into the movies. At first she had, no serious intention of really doing so, but it grew upon her, and she fled from her home, with money furnished by Carl.

She had almost forgotten him when he came back into her life. Now she had the same heartache to withstand again.

CHAPTER X.

Grace forgot Carl, home, all of her troubles, everything, the next morning. And no wonder. You have seen Courtleigh Curtis on the screen. You know how handsome he is. And you have probably read in the fan magazines how he receives a wagon-load of mail every day. Mr. Lampson, his director, a brow-beaten man, picked Grace out of a crowd standing around the studio to play a brief part opposite Mr. Curtis. Mr. Lampson was rather doubtful whether she would do until he brought her in for Mr. Curtis' inspection.

Mr. Curtis, having his nails manicured, lifted his eyes to her a moment, and guessed that she would do.

Oh joy! Grace's sophisticated air disappeared. She was thrilled through and through. She was to appear on the screen all alone with Courtleigh Curtis!

As hat girl in a restaurant, she received the hero's hat, and allowed him to wink at her. The scene was intended to give film fans a hint as to what a dangerous fellow with the women the hero was.

The director filmed the scene after rehearsing Grace five times, four times by herself, and once with the hero.

She was bubbling over with elation when she went home that afternoon. She could hardly wait to tell the girls the news.

They absorbed her enthusiasm at the first telling, and thrilled with her as she went back over the story, adding details.

"He's really an awfully nice fellow," she confided. "He smiled at me before we began taking the scene and told me not to be nervous."

"Of course he would say that," Mabel chimed in. "He's an awful ass. Thinks everybody ought to be nervous in his presence—the great Courtleigh Curtis." She resumed the chewing of a stick of gum.

Grace stared at Mabel a moment, as if resentful at an unexpected and uncalled for attack. She resumed, and was in the middle of a new recital of Curtis, when the bell rang.

Dickie Dennyson was waiting in the lobby to see her. She went down to see him, without stopping, as usual, to powder her nose.

"Want to go to a dance with me tonight?" he asked.

"Yes," she assented, and burst out to him. "Dickie, guess what! I played a scene with Courtleigh Curtis today!"

He smiled but was not enthusiastically stirred by the announcement.

"All alone with him," she continued.

"That's fine," he finally agreed.

"He chose me himself," she further confided.

"Oh, he did?" For a fraction of a second he paused then: "Well, I don't see how he could help picking you."

She beamed an appreciation of his compliment, knowing full well that it had been said for effect alone.

"We can go to dinner before we go to the dance if you like," he continued. She noted that he acted as if there had not been an angry scene between them. She concluded he was sorry for what had happened, and was trying to make amends.

"All, right, let's do. Wait here for me!" She started for the elevator. Midway she halted. At the information desk she saw Carl. She turned, as if to go in another direction, but he saw her and called her name: "Grace."

Uncommon Sense

By JOHN BLAKE

What You Can Tell

It is true that "you never can tell about the future."

One does not know today whether next year he will be rich, poor, sick, well or dead.

There is no eye that can pierce the wall of darkness which separates one from tomorrow.

We speculate about this world and the next.

But really we know nothing about them.

The ship which leaves today, with colors flying and a crowd of happy passengers may never reach port.

The youth who begins a career full of promise may end in a felon's cell.

Which all sounds very lugubrious until you reflect that as a rule calamities seldom occur, and that today's conduct, generally speaking, goes far towards governing tomorrow's happiness or misery.

We none of us know what opportunities await us around the corner.

But this we do know:

If we are ready for them they will be of benefit to us.

If we are not ready for them, some one else will seize them and profit by them.

We do not know that the train we take for a distance city will arrive at its destination on time.

But we are reasonably sure that it will, for trains do arrive at their destinations, and nearly on time, about nine hundred and ninety-nine times out of a thousand.

The future of course is hidden.

But we are being swept along toward it by a force which we cannot abate nor alter.

And we know from past experience—not only of our own but of the race since man first walked on the earth—that intelligence and industry and patience and energy will come as near assuring happiness and prosperity as anything in this world can do.

If we do not know our futures there is no reason why we should worry about them.

We can, by use of the doctrine of probabilities figure on them as the scientist figures on the progress of his experiments or the builder figures on accomplishing the plans that the architect has made for him.

There is probably nothing in life so futile as continual worry about tomorrow, if the worry takes up all the time that ought to be spent in getting ready for tomorrow when it arrives.

Waiting idly for something to turn up will almost inevitably result in an unhappy future.

Keeping busy, with a view to what may happen, based on a study of what has happened, will, we can be reasonably sure, get us ready to withstand tomorrow's storms and to enjoy its air, skies, and gentle breezes.

All we can tell about what is to be, comes from a knowledge of what was.

That knowledge is in the power of anybody to acquire.

Act on it, and when you turn the corner of the street, you will be ready to profit by whatever you may find there.

Longhorn Eleven Shows Many Weaknesses as Hour of Big Game Nears

Backfield Still Worries Texas Football Coach

Stewart Has Forward Wall Fairly Well In Hand.

WINGMEN A QUESTION

Veteran Berry Refuses To Cause Joy For Pessimists.

AUSTIN, Nov. 23.—Doc Stewart is marshalling his strength for the classic of southwestern football, the annual A. & M.-Texas contest slated Thursday. And the redoubtable mentor apparently is up against it more and more as the battle hour draws nearer.

The backfield has always been a doubtful proposition this year. Any one of the eight or ten men who has had his try at it seems about as good as another. But the line is more nearly a known quantity. It is there that the Longhorns were expected to show their greatest power, and it is there that they have done so.

Yet the ends who will start against the Aggies are still uncertain. Ben Dave Allen, Matt Newell, Lester Settegast and Sailor Shearer are the quartet from whom the two are almost sure to be chosen, but none of them is sure of his place.

Allen Has Edge.

Allen, who has played in every game this season, apparently has the edge on the other three. His chief asset is his ability to play at his best against teams stronger than the Longhorns. In the early games and against Rice and T. C. U. his work was at times of the poorest, but when he faced the Gators of Florida his work was on a par with any who played in that game. He is a tall rangy felow, fast and one of the hardest tacklers on the squad.

Settegast, playing his first year of varsity football, though he has two years basket ball behind him, has developed rapidly during the season, but is yet short of being a first-class end. He is frequently swept out of the play, is not a reliable receiver of passes and is not as fast at getting down the field as Allen is. Settegast's value is in the stubborn determination with which he plays. He is the hardest man except Berry to hurt, and plays like an inspired Mohammedan.

Shearer, a swift runner but a poor man to take a pass, has alternated between halfback and end, with his best work done at the latter position. Throughout the season he has been handicapped by injuries, his bad luck being almost on a par with that of Wright, Newell and Smith. Though he is not a brilliant end, his work is steady at all times and against all teams.

Dayvault in the Game.

Another man who has alternated between end and another position is Newell, who has played most of his games at tackle. He, too, has suffered one injury after another. At tackle he has usually played a good game, but his brilliance as a receiver in Stewart's passing game makes it probable that he will be shifted to end; at that work he is clearly the superior of any man on the team.

From tackle to tackle, there is little doubt about the Longhorn lineup. Cotton Dayvault, line captain, will be back in the game. Dayvault has yet to meet his match in the line. He is one of the biggest men on the team, and he is also one of the most dependable. At disgnosing the play, he yields only to Berry.

With a record behind him that shows good work at all times and frequent flashes of brilliance, Bud Sprague, the 19-year-old behemoth of the squad, is also due to start. It is Sprague who fights in every game until he has to be carried from the field, and it is Sprague who tackles so viciously that his man often has to be carried from the field.

Berry Good Anywhere.

Game after game, week after week, K. L. Berry, the 32-year-old captain, who returned from the shades of 1915 to take another try at football, refuses to furnish joy to the pessimists. At the first of the season they said Berry had forgotten his football and that he couldn't stand the gaff because of his stiff, aging muscles. And through a long and bitter season the bearer of excess winters has shown that he knows more than others know, and his injuries have been less than any man on the squad. This is not because he has not been in every play. He has probably broken up more plays than any man in the line. But he refuses to be hurt because he is in the best condition of any man on the squad. Through the years he has trained, and he shows it now. Last Saturday he demonstrated that he can do other things besides line work by playing a strong game in the backfield. He may be played there for awhile against A. and M., though he will probably start in the line.

Pfannkuche Strong on Defense.

Heinie Pfannkuche seems due to get the call for his part in the Thompson-Pfannkuche combination, playing center on the defense and tackle on the offense. Since that memorable stand on the three-yard line in the Florida game, the bright spot in a doleful season, Pfann has been selected as a strong defensive player. On the offense, however, he is weak and has to be replaced by Thompson. The latter is not a great player, but has filled acceptably in the emergency.

Of the reserves, Murray Moore and Aubrey Gooch are picked as the best. Moore does not diagnose plays quickly and hence is often guilty of letting gains through. But he was in better condition at the first of the year than Gooch, due to the latter's having been out two years and substitutes more frequently than the heavier man. Bob Homan and Bob Neblett are next in line. Homan's work has not been impressive during the games that he has played, and Neblett has had the edge. Rundell and Waite, two other substitutes, may also be called on for extra work at some time during the game, Rundell being apparently the best of the pa

Bulldog Rises To Gridiron Heights With Dartmouth

Lafayette Downs Lehigh, and Bucknell Stops Rutgers.

NEW YORK, Nov. 23.—Yale sailed forth on the crest of the flood. Mud-caked reeking sons of old Eli staggered out of the be-puddled bowl in darkness Saturday afternoon undefeated for the year and victorious over the ancient enemy from Cambridge by plowing through ankle deep mire for three touchdowns after the cause had seemed lost in the first half of the battle.

Duckey Pond, Yale halfback, who splashed through a submerged Harvard stadium in 1923 to cross the crimson goal line for Yale's first touchdown in many seasons, repeated his performance in New Haven waters for the score that gave his team the lead, never to be relinquished. Two team mates later followed his example. One hero was developed by Harvard in the most crushing football season the Crimson has ever undergone. Gehrke, injured in previous battles, returned to offer his last effort against an overpowering enemy and for a time it seemed that the brilliant crimson backfield man would win the day by sheer gameness.

Favorite from all angles, the Jones eleven was struggling against 6 to 0 odds, the result of two field goals by the Cambridge cripple. Yale took advantage of scrambles and failures, and won 19 to 6.

With the victory went a high place in eastern football, by the side of Dartmouth.

Rutgers failed to realize its hope for football greatness when it fell before Bucknell in a sea of mud at Philadelphia.

LaFayette returned to power and hammered down formidable Lehigh in an open spurt in which Chicknoski crossed the line for six points, deciding the issue. It was Lehigh's first defeat of the year.

Kearns Puts OK On Montgomery

Dempsey's Manager Sees Grid Star Do Stuff.

BOSTON, Nov. 23.—Jack Kearns, manager of Jack Dempsey, dropped in unannounced at Jim Toland's gymnasium the other day to give Sully Montgomery, southern heavyweight contender, the once over. Montgomery was right in the middle of his training stunt and going great. Kearns's eyes opened wide when he saw the new luminary step around with his sparring partners. Sully was extra nimble and speedy, fast with his hands and hitting with precision.

"That bird looks pretty good for a greenhorn. He has a lot of Jim Corbetts' stuff and I hope he continues to climb; then the champion will be sure of another opponent next summer," said Kearns.

The former Centre college gridiron star is only 23 years old. He is built something like Dempsey, with small legs and waist and fine arms and shoulders. He has engaged in 28 contests and won 15 with knockouts. He has won nine decisions and lost three times. Pueblo Jim Flynn stopped Montgomery in one of his early contests, but he came back afterwards and flattened the old I. C. line fireman.

Montgomery will have a good chance to show what he can do when he faces Battling McCreary here this week. The battler is as tough as they come.

Bulk is the Bunk; Speed's the Real Dope Now Adays

Giants Can't Make Grade Any More in World Of Sports.

By ROBERT EDGREN.

Red Grange, Knute Rockne and the Notre Dame team, Bud Houser and Jack Dempsey all point to a new theory in athletic sport.

Bulk is the bunk.

This boy Red Grange of Illinois isn't so big. He's rather light and built for speed. But he can fend off the big boys with a straight arm and he can outdodge any of them, big or little.

Knute Rockne, Notre Dame coach, doesn't care anything about bulk. He gets his team candidates out in the spring and puts them on the running track. He tries them out, trains them, keeps trying them out, and finally picks the fastest men with the biggest hands, and makes his team of them. He likes speed, and he likes big hands for handling the ball. Everybody knows what Rockne's team has done this year. For one thing, Notre Dame ran all over Princeton, and Princeton learned something. In the second period of the Harvard game, a couple of weeks later, Princeton put in its light backfield, and ran Harvard ragged and won by 34-0. Harvard had the usual "big Red team." The big team is obsolete.

Bulk Is Old Stuff.

I remember one football team, years ago in the time of the flying wedge and when football was just a matter of line bucking and hammering to find weak spots, that averaged over 200 pounds per man, and the lightest man in the line weighed 205. The center and two guards weighed 240, and 230 pounds. There were giants in those days, and any giant could get a job playing football.

Those old teams of giants were all right when they played other giants. But against a modern team like Notre Dame they'd be as helpless as a big fat bull in the bullring. Even in bull fighting it is the small, quick bull that worries the matador. The big, plunging bull runs himself on the sword.

Bud Houser, winner of two Olympic championships, in shot and discus, was one of the lightest men in the competitions at Paris. He weighed only 184 pounds, and he beat men weighing from 50 to 80 pounds more. He had the speed, the form, and the grim determination to win that makes a champion. There were men in both events who figured, on past performances, and in the supposed advantages of bulk and strength to beat him easily. They couldn't do it. Houser has shown that it isn't necessary to be a giant to win weight throwing championships.

Bulk is the bunk in boxing too. Jack Dempsey proved that when he went along knocking out Carl Morris and Fred Fulton before he was 182 pounds in the Toledo fight. Willard 265.

The "White Hope" Craze.

Dempsey has two or three favorite sayings about fighting giants. He figures it about the way old Bob Fitzsimmons did when Bob used to say: "The bigger they are the harder they fall."

"I like to fight the big fellows," said Dempsey. "They're easy to hit. They're slow and it's easy to beat them to the punch."

Dempsey once laughingly remarked that he'd rather fight Willard or Morris than Harry Greb. "The little fellows won't stand still while you sock 'em," said Dempsey.

That's the same principle discovered in football by coach Rockne.

When Jack Johnson was first champion there was a "white hope" craze, a search all over the country for big men to take back the championship. The first big "white hope" fight was between Carl Morris, the Oklahoma giant, and Jim Flynn, the veteran Pueblo fireman. Morris was six feet and weighed 220 pounds, Flynn about five feet eight and weighed 180. Flynn massacred Morris. The spectacle was so incredible that a good many people believed the story that Jim had half a pound of tea lead wrapped around his left hand under the bandages, although nobody ever produced any proof of it. Morris went on fighting, after a while, and became pretty good, but never did entirely get over that first beating.

The toughest fights Jess Willard ran up against, before he was champion, were with two small, light men, Gunboat Smith and Bearcat McMahon, both fast and hard hitters. The Gunner slammed Jess so hard in the fourth round of their 20-round bout in Frisco that Jess wouldn't go near him again.

Not long ago Jim Jeffries told me; "I never had any trouble with the big fellows I fought. They were easy to hit. But Sharkey always gave me a tough job. He was so short and so fat it was almost impossible to hit him except when he was tearing in. Old Fitz didn't hurt me in the first fight, but the second time he nearly tore my head off before I got him. Joe Choynski only weighed 170 pounds when I fought him—when I was a kid. Joe bit me the hardest punch I ever felt and we went to a 20-round draw. The punch was a right hand on the mouth that drove my upper lip between my teeth so far I couldn't get it out and Billy Delaney had to run his knife blade along my teeth and cut it loose."

Of course Jeffries had plenty of bulk, and he was unbeatable in his time, but he was a rare exception. Jeffries was raised on a farm, hardened in an iron foundry, was the strongest man that ever drew on a glove, and was astonishingly fast. I never knew any big man who could run with Jeffries either over a distance or a sprint.

ARGENTINE CRACK LOSES.

Heretofore Undefeated Three-year-old Beaten by Serio.

BUENOS AIRES, Nov. 23.—Argentine's crack 3-year-old, Lombardo, suffered the first set back of his career today when he was defeated by Serio in the Clasico Conparacion" at 2,200 meters. The purse was 20,000 pesos, and the time two minutes 13 4-5 seconds. Three horses run.

Lombardo, November 9 won his sixth successive race and was then hailed by racing critics as one of the world's fastest horses. Serio run second to him on that occasion.

AUTO RACE POSTPONED.

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 23.—The 250-mile automobile race, which was to have been held at Culver City, near here, Thanksgiving day, has been postponed until December 7.

BREAKS OF THE GAME

By BILL BRUCE

Zuppke is going to make his backfielders copy Red Grange's training methods. Ought to be a great game next fall when the Four Horsemen of Notre Dame meet the Four Ice-Men of Illinois.

If the sheriffs are going to pinch Fred Fulton after every fight, the plastered plasterer will have to get some bail player to teach him the hit-and-run play.

Fulton must have made big money in the ring. He gave up the plastering profession.

Change the Rules.

Main agitation this fall is for the moving back of the kickoff spot to the kicking side's 40-yard line or even further. Some folks don't like the present try-for-point rule, and there are also minor changes suggested, but the kickoff business is the chief complaint.

Great Britain tennis circles want something done about profanity on the courts. Some folks say decisions by boxing referees and judges are bad noise. Golf, baseball, rowing and billiards critics all have come out with onward and upward notions.

Our Semipros.

FISHBALL, Okla., Nov. 23.—The Sharks marshaled virtually their full line-up on Shellbark Field today for the final scrimmage before the annual clash with the Pinetown Needles Saturday. The only casualty not in action was Lantern-Mouth Slattery, the great southpaw tackle. Slattery's left hand is still suffering from the effects of last Saturday's contest.

HILLSIDE, Tex., Nov. 23.—The protest made by the Rattleton Hippos of last Saturday's gridiron grapple here has not yet been decided by the central board. The local management guaranteed the Hippos traveling expenses and two meals. The Hippos lodged a protest because the noon meal consisted of only two courses, bouloona and pretzels. Because of the dry spell no water was to be had until they reached the field of play, and the entire visiting team drank so heavily out of the water-buckets taht it was entirely unable to cope with the fast running attack of the Hillers. It is felt that the protest will not be allowed, as the Hippos greatly outweighed the local team in all four periods.

PART OF THE GAME

They do not razz the gridders,
When a costly fumble comes;
They do not call them boneheads,
Nor a set of "has been" bums.

They do not taunt the basketeers,
When a needed shot is missed;
You never heard a tennis crowd,
That jibbed and jeered and hissed.

And mercy, my! the golfer,
Who would dare utter groans!
When a player booked an easy drive,
Is listed with the "bones."

You never heard the knockers,
When a trapster missed a bird;
The gallery holds its feelings,
And it never says a word.

But when a referee tells 'em
In Wichita what he thinks
A hundred goofy voices
Act like LaFollette pinks.

Notre Dame Only Big Team Untied And Undefeated

CHICAGO, Nov. 23.—Notre Dame, the only big school in the country not beaten and not tied on the gridiron this fall, has piled up the highest total of points of any big middle western eleven, 218 against 25 points for their opponents, which issued such formidable foes as Princeton, Army, Nebraska and Georgia Tech.

"The four horsemen," Crowley, Layden, Miller and Stuhldreher, with their understudies, have made 32 touchdowns and not a single field goal despite numerous attempts. The famous four complete their college careers this year.

Only two touchdowns have been made against them one by Army and one by Nebraska. Georgia Tech, Wisconsin and Northwestern scored on them with field goals.

Of the team's total of 218, the "four horsemen" have made 156, Crowley leading with 55 points. Three of the "big ten" point winners, have higher totals than this, Grange of Illinois, 78; Rockwell, Michigan, 77; and Baker, Northwestern, 60.

Notre Dame still has one scheduled game with Carnegie Tech at Pittsburgh next Saturday and may possibly play on the coast during the holidays.

Moody Most Promising Fighter Turned Out By England in Years

Invader Scheduled to Take on Johnny Wilson Tonight in One of Feature Bouth of Week

NEW YORK, Nov. 23.—In more than a score of years Great Britain has developed one real world's boxing champion. That one was Jimmy Wilde, the little mite who won the flyweight title and retained it until his chin collided with the good right fist of Pancho Villa, a bronze-skinned athlete from Uncle Sam's possession in the far Pacific, and then Wilde retired from the boxing game.

Now it appears that England has a chance to place one more man at the head of one of the most popular divisions of pugilism—the middleweight.

The man in question is Frank Moody, whose recent success in eastern rings, due largely to his lately acquired knowledge of American ring methods, indicates that he is one of the leaders of that section of fistiana and may some day mount the throne now occupied by Harry Greb, the "human windmill" from Darkest Pittsburgh and one of the veterans of the prize ring.

Moody's chance to prove his worth as a championship contender will come Monday night, when he meets Johnny Wilson, former champion, in a scheduled 12-round contest in Boston, one of the fistic centers of this country. Should the Briton make the hurdle handily, it will be impossible to keep him out of a match with Greb in New York later in the season when his opportunity to annex the title will be offered.

Moody came to this country at about the same time the much heralded Ted Moore made his appearance. Moore was then considered the best of the invading British middleweights, but he has met with some reverses that make it appear he lacks the necessary qualifications to make him a king pin of his class. He recently was held to a draw by Joey O'Hara, which does not speak so well for the clever Englishman as a title contender.

England has sent many fighters to this country in the past score of years. All have failed except Wilde. Moody and Moore appear to be far above the average English mittman.

There are some other interesting bouts on this week's schedule. One of the best fighters in the east, is Sid Terris, a fast, shifty youngster, who is trying to get to the top in the lightweight class. He is said to be the most scientific of the aspiring young lightweights. He meets Luis Vicentini, champion of Chile, in New York's feature fistic attraction. If he beats Vicentini, his claims to recognition as a challenger for the crown worn by Benny Leonard will be taken rather seriously.

Jack Bernstein, former junior lightweight champion, not dismayed at his defeat at the hands of Sammy Mandell, one of the leading contenders for the title held by Leonard, is to meet Rocky Kansas in Buffalo. Bernstein will improve his standing in the division if he can whip the stumbling block of the lightweight ranks.

Dartmouth Quarterback Writes Rhymes For Student Publication

All-American Gridiron Candidate Also Pens Philosophical Treatises—Thespians and Esthetes on Squad

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 23.—There have been several columns printed about the scholarly inclination of the Dartmouth football players. The boys go to bed with a Latin line and arise with a verse of Greek.

The impression is that philosophical treatises flow from their pens in less time than financial S O S's do "dear old dad."

Now take Dooley, for instance. That's a name with a personality. Think about it and you picture a two-fisted gentleman who needs neither name nor flag to ballyhoo his nationality.

Just guessing from the name, we would say Dooley was a football player; in fact, very much of a football player. The imagination could run all over the place on Dooley. In our mind's eye we could see him clinging everlastingly to any game that demanded courage and fighting spirit.

Could you drape a Ph. D and poetical mantle about him? We don't believe we could, but they say he is headed for literary and philosophical fame.

Try to view a two-fisted, broad-shouldered, squatty football player balancing a pencil while his brain is throbbing on all cylinders weaving words into a romantic rhyme. Dooley's a poet! Think of that!

Furthermore, his stuff does not jingle. It has heart and soul, they tell us. His verse has appeared in The Tower, an undergraduate publication which prides itself on its literary standard.

That's just about the half of it. Dooley's philosophical inclinations crystallized last winter into a treatise on the "Significance of Moral Values." What is football coming to?

But first of all Dooley, of Dartmouth, is a football player. Cornell knows little of his literary talent, but is quite familiar with his gridiron ability.

There also are Thespians on the Dartmouth squad. Ken Montgomery and Jack Reeder had roles in a student production last spring and both hold membership in The Arts, an undergraduate organization of esthetes, of which Don Kilby and Larry Leavitt also are members.

Kilby and Montgomery are on the roll of a senior literary society. Ed Duffy, the big guard, turns his writing ability into dollars and cents. He's a student correspondent for several metropolitan newspapers. In addition, he's on the staffs of the undergraduate daily, the comic and the literary pictorial.

To command the respect of these high-brow football players, the quarterback just naturally has to be a poet, philosopher and—oh, yes, we forgot—musician, too.

Dooley, of Dartmouth, is well equipped mentally and physically to pilot the Green eleven.

If Walter Camp does not place Dooley on his All-American team there will be howls from thousands of throats.

AGGIES-TEXAS GAME WILL BE THRILLER

AUSTIN, Nov. 23.—The annual traditional Aggie-Texas game which will probably draw a crowd of 38,000 at the new stadium should prove a thriller even though the game will mean absolutely nothing in the championship race. It is much more difficult to pick the winner this year than was the case last season. Bible will have a great defensive club on the field Turkey day. There is no doubt of that fact, and so will Texas. The team that gets the breaks is quite apt to win this game though a lucky pass may prove the undoing of one of these clubs. Both are fairly weak in smearing passes.

Drake Lets Go Missouri Valley Conference Lead

Nebraska and Missouri to Fore When Bulldogs Beaten.

KANSAS CITY, Nov. 23.—The Iowa Aggies proved the bitter pill for Drake university Saturday and the Drake Bulldogs, with a clear record for the season dropped their final 1924 conference game and with it first place in the race for the mythical football title of the Missouri valley conference. Missouri, resting in preparation for the Thanksgiving day battle with Kansas, automatically ascended to first place in the conference standings.

Through three periods Drake and Ames battled to a standstill. The Bulldogs, unvanquished in the valley, were unable to cross the Aggie goal line, although having a slight edge. Then in the final quarter the Cyclones let loose a powerful offensive that swept aside the conference leaders and blasted their hopes for a clear cut path to the mythical championship. Final score was 10 to 0, a field goal and a touchdown making the count.

It was a terrific onslaught that Nebraska turned on the Kansas Aggies at Manhattan and the Cornhuskers won their third and final conference game, 24 to 0.

Oklahoma chalked up its second conference victory at St. Louis by defeating Washington university 7 to 0. Washington closed its conference season without scoring a point against any opponent.

Whether Missouri will emerge the 1924 winner depends upon the turkey day fray with Kansas at Columbia.

The standing:

Teams	W	L	T
Missouri	4	1	0
Nebraska	3	1	0
Drake	3	1	1
Grinnell	2	1	0
Iowa State	3	2	0
Oklahoma	2	3	0
Kansas	2	3	1
Kan. Aggies	1	4	0
Washington	0	4	0

SAGE TO MEET GREB.

Britton Had Been Signed, But Card Comes in for Change.

DETROIT, Nov. 23.—Bob Sage, Detroit middleweight, today wired his acceptance of a bout with Harry Greb, to be held at Pittsburgh on December 1. It will be a ten-round decision affair.

Billy Britton of New York had been signed to meet Greb but after his showing against Sage here last Friday night the eastern promoters decided to alter the card.

TEXANS GET A PRISONER

Man Turned Over to Waco Officers At Lincoln, Neb.

LINCOLN, Nebr. Nov. 23.—Homer Haley alias James McCormick, an inmate of the state reformatory here was turned over today to Texas officials. He has been serving a term of one to three years on a charge of issuing fraudulent checks and recently was paroled for release to Waco, Texas, authorities who charge him with forgery and automobile stealing. Sheriff Stegall and Deputy Sheriff Roberts of Waco, arrived in Lincoln today to get the prisoner.

Baylor Goes After Another Title Thursday

Rice Prepared for Bear Invasion With Strong Defense.

OWL TEAM CONFIDENT

"Beat Baylor" Cry Now A Good Omen, Believe Bruins.

WACO, Nov. 23. — Bring that championship back to Baylor.

That will be the cry of 1,000 loyal Baylor students and supporters as they board the special train for Houston early Thursday morning. Furthermore they are going to the bayou city for the express purpose of bringing that title back to Waco—its home from Thanksgiving day of 1922 until Thanksgiving day of 1923.

It is quite a task that the Baylor team faces in this Houston assignment. The Owls have a strong team, a powerful club, chuck full of confidence. They are going to be at home and have been doing nothing but prepare for the Baylor game since the clash with the Aggies in College Station more than a week ago. John Heisman, veteran, wily Rice mentor, is going to have his boys highly primed for the Bears.

Owls Perfect Defense.

They say that Rice has a perfect defense against each Baylor formation, that the Baylor offense will be completely stopped, and that the powerful Rice line will lead the Owls to a victory. "Rice will settle Baylor's championship status beyond a doubt," is the cry of the Rice players, and the Rice authorities as they prepare to "beat Baylor."

That "beat Baylor" cry, however, has been heard so often by Bridges, Crow and their proteges, that they are beginning to take it as a good omen. It was "beat Baylor" in Fayetteville, "beat Baylor" at Aggieland, and when the Bears trotted on the field in Austin, they were received with a "beat Baylor" chant from the throats of thousands of loyal University of Texas supporters. In fact, practically every team in the conference adopted this "beat Baylor" cry, sometimes varying in with "we want bear meat," but no conference team has as yet "beat Baylor" this year. All have been forced to get along without their diet of bear meat, and when that "beat Baylor" cry is heard by the Bears down in Houston, it will merely tend to give the Bruins a bit more confidence.

Bears Undefeated.

Baylor has not been beaten by a conference rival this year, despite one of the most arduous schedules within the conference, and if a fighting football heart, with a great determination to win aided by their superb native football ability can carry them to victory over the Rice Owls, the Bears of 1924 will not be beaten by a conference rival.

The game in Houston Thursday afternoon will be the last in the respective careers of Riley Biggs, stalwart Baylor guard, Sniper Connally, brilliant Baylor wing, and Captain Ralph Pittman, the greatest punter the old school has known since the days of T. P. Robinson more than a decade ago. Surely this trio of sterling athletes will have the inspiration to win the game Thursday. Surely they will put forth their every effort to close their respective gridiron careers in a blaze of glory.

WAIVERS ON DUGEY.

CHICAGO, Nov. 23. — Waivers have been asked on Oscar Dugey, coach of the Chicago Cubs, William L. Veeck, president of the Chicago National League club, announced tonight.

Transfiguration A Great Lesson, Judge Kay Says

That Is His Theme Sunday Morning At Bible Class Lecture.

330 HEAR ADDRESS.

Speaker Says It Is One Of The High Points Of the Bible.

The story of the transfiguration was the theme used by Judge John C. Kay Sunday morning in his Bible class talk to a class of 330 men and women at the Strand theater. His address was as follows:

The story of the transfiguration is one of the high points in the Bible; one of the most dramatic stories in the Bible; as fine a conception as has ever been vouchsafed to humanity. It is told very briefly. Everything is told briefly in the Bible! Can you do that? Can I? The story of the prodigal son would not make half a column in the newspaper. The story of the transfiguration is even shorter.

On the Mountain.

The Savior took three of his best educated apostles up on a great snow mountain, and there was transfigured, and there came from some other world Moses of old and Elijah of old, and talked with Him. Now, that means a great deal. It is not that I should know, or you, just what it does mean. These great men, Moses and Elijah, whatever they said, brought us no news from the other world. These fakers, who pretend to communicate with the departed in many cities lack imagination. The stuff that they report is the merest drivel. Generally, they are trying to search you for your roll. Big people do not do that. Let us take Shakespeare. Does he dare to bring from the mouth of the departed some news from another world? In the story of his great "Hamlet," where the ghost, after making several appearances, finally talks to Hamlet, Shakespeare knew better than to report stories from another world. So, the ghost says: "I am forbid to disclose the secrets of my prison house, else I could a tale unfold whose lightest word would harrow up thy soul." Did Tennyson dare to do it, when he writes about the raising of Lazarus, and he says that the sisters said to Lazarus: "Where were you, brother, these four days?" There lives no record of reply, or else something sealed the lips of that evangelist.

These men talked, but we have no record of whatever news or matter that they discussed.

Strong in Suffering.

Let us look, for a moment, at the characters of the men who were there. Men that were strong in experience, and in wisdom, and in suffering. Did it ever occur to you that the Savior, Moses and Elijah were three men who had all fasted forty days and nights in the wilderness? Do you suppose that Moses, when he stood there as the representative of the law and of all the law-makers, remembered how he brought his people out of Egypt, and how he had asked them to look up toward the brazen serpent as a type of the Christ that stood on that mountain. And, Elijah, he who had confronted the prophets of Baal; he who had been led out in the desert, waiting for the ravens to feed him, and had watched the fires from heaven consume the heathen altars. These are the types of men who are lifted up, and up, and up.

If you have not had any experience, if you haven't had hardship, if you haven't had long, patient, infinite toil, if you have not had suffering, then you are unable and unworthy to reach the great mountain tops, where the raiment of your Lord shall sparkle and shine in the morning.

But, there came a voice and said: "This is my Son: hear Him." Now, right there is the trouble with the world. I was talking with a friend of mine yesterday, whose judgment I greatly respect, and it was his idea that there was a new dispensation right there; that the old Jewish law became relatively unimportant, and that they were to hear the new gospel, and the new law. "Hear Him." That sounds simple. If I should say, "listen to Him," how simple that is. But, it means more than that, and the New Testament is full of that thought. He that hath ears, let him hear. "Hear Him!" Hear Him say—what? "Take up your cross and follow me." And, just before this lesson, He said to the apostles, "He that shall lose his life, shall find it." And, in another place, "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature."

They Don't Hear.

Men hear Him, but they do not hear Him obediently. You folks have been hearing Him all your lives, living in a Christian country, among educated people, and with every facility for education. Now, how many signals have you gone by? How many? Can you come up to Heaven's gate at last any say: "I never saw a signal light?" Can you come to heaven's gate and say: "I had no warning?" Can you come there at last and say: "I never heard Him?" Can you say: "I did not know what His requirements were?" No, we cannot do that.

Now, to "hear Him" means ...s, as I think. It means that if you do hear Him, and hear Him rightly, that you, also, ought to be transfigured, and that His life, and light, and liberty will shine in your soul, and in your countenance. I believe that with all my heart.

So, I am saying to you this morning, it is idle, it is foolish, and, I think, even dangerous, to go to church and hear the gospel and walk away like an ox, giving no heed thereto. I think that it shall be better for a man here and hereafter, if he never heard the voice of God's ministers, than it shall be if he hears it and heeds it not. I want you to think about these things.

This transfiguration is a tremendous lesson. It is too much for humanity to grasp; too much for us to understand. We can only clasp our hands and read it, and get such thoughts from it as we may, and such as we shall, and believe that somewhere, somehow, we shall understand it all.

DALLAS YOUTH SHOT.

Affray Outcome of Family Troubles, Declares Man Arrested.

DALLAS, Nov. 23.—C. B. Brumley, 23 years old, in in Parkland hospital here not expected to live and W. H. Evitts is under arrest as the result of a shooting this afternoon in which Brumley was wounded in the right arm and breast. Evitts told officers investigating the affair that the shooting followed family trouble.

LESSON NO. 8

LIGHTING THE BATH ROOM

Have you ever watched your father shave? Does he try to keep shadows away by turning his face this way and that? Or can he shave comfortably and easily with a smile on his face like the man in the second picture? Shaving is really the best test of lighting in bathrooms. A man shaves each side of his face and under his chin, and if he is to see well, he needs a light on each side down low enough to light underneath the chin.

Wrong Right

Lighting the mirror in the bathroom is exactly the same problem as lighting the mirror in the bedroom, and two bracket fixtures are needed for good lighting—one at either side of the mirror at eye level or a little above. The fixtures should point upward and should have long dense milk-white shades open at the top to conceal the 50-watt "bulbs" inside.

If the bathroom is large, you may have a fixture in the center of the ceiling just like the fixture used in the kitchen. If this is properly put in and equipped with a bulb of 75-watts or more, it will furnish good general lighting all over the room on occasions when the mirror is not being used.

When sister goes to curl her hair in front of the mirror, does she find it necessary to take the bulb out of the light to connect her electric iron?

If she does, she probably does not curl her hair in the evening, because many bathrooms are lighted by only one fixture. And if your bathroom has two fixtures and sister uses one for a curling iron, then she must twist and turn her head because she cannot see well when only one is used for lighting.

That curling iron of sister's is just one of the handy little electric appliances which should be provided with an outlet of their own—a convenience outlet 36 inches or more above the floor, so that good lighting is always ready when it is most needed.

LIGHTING THE SUN ROOM

In the sun room we usually want a ceiling fixture to give us general lighting and to flood the whole room with warm, soft light and an atmosphere of cheerfulness; we also need lighting from portable lamps for reading or sewing, or as decorative spots of light and color around the room. Do you remember the lesson which told how to light the living room? It was much the same as this, for the sun room or sun porch is really another living room in most homes.

In the sun room, however, the furniture and decorations usually require lighting fixtures which will look well with wicker and cretonne and which will make the sun room feel like a sun room even after dark.

Big Row Brews In Prisons Over Probe Prospects

Reported Bogle Assaulted And Assailant Arrested; Neff At Dallas.

AUSTIN, Tex., Nov. 23.—Interest in the show-down on the prison commission's recent refusal to allow M. E. Bogle of Austin, prison auditor, access to certain books and records, and the prospect for court action following it, was revived Friday when a report reached here that Bogle, as he left a Walker county grand jury room at Huntsville, Texas, had been assaulted and beaten up so that he was confined to his bed from Tuesday to Thursday, and that Ennis Herring, son on Chairman J. A. Herring of the prison commission, and R. E. McAdams, manager of the Ferguson farm, had paid fines for the assault.

Governor Neff was in Dallas, attending a Baptist meeting, and could not be reached to be asked what he is going to do about the matter. An investigation of prison affairs was recently made by the governor, when charges of inefficiency and "ring" tactics were before him.

During one of Neff's visits to the prison, the commission discharged the warden who had been selected by Governor Neff a year before and the warden was fired it was stated by the governor without his having had any part in the action.

Immediately afterward, the attorney general's department was called upon to rule whether the prison auditor should have access to the books and records Bogle had demanded; and the ruling was that the law intended his access to them. A court action to compel the commission to produce the records ni case they were still withheld has been anticipated. It is not known whether Bogle's appearance before the grand jury this week, had to do with the records.

Immediately after the tieup, the prison commission challenged an expense account of Bogle, and that matter was sent to the attorney general department fo ra further ruling. What was said about it is not known.

Governor Neff made two or more trips to Huntsville in connection with the probe of prison affairs.

BOX AWARD RESUMED

Starts Functioning Again As Congress Session Nears

NEW YORK, Nov. 23—The American peace award, founded by Edward W. Bok announced today that, looking forward to the opening of congress two weeks hence it had resumed functioning for the immediate purpose of influencing the senate foreign relations committee to report the resolution which provides for United States adherence to the world court terms of the Harding-Hughes plan.

The Bok organization will conduct a campaign of education on the league of nations.

INDIANA DOCTOR SURRENDERS

Falls Asleep, Patient Dies, Deserts, Surrenders.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Nov. 23.—Asserting he had deserted from the United States army medical corps at Columbus, Ohio, barracks when he learned officers were planning to prefer charges against him because a patient in his charge had died, Paul A. Sheldoon, 22, surrendered to police here today. He said his home was in Woodlawn, Pa.

Sheldon said he had been on duty with a pneumonia patient for five days and nights and that when he fell asleep while on duty the patient died.

CHAPLIN EXPECTED TO WED

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 23.—(AP)—Charlie Chaplin was expected to arrive in Guaymas today and marry his leading woman, Lita Grey, in the nearby town of Empalme, according to dispatches received from Guaymas early today. The dispatches assert that Chaplin obtained the marriage license Oct. 14, they add that the bride-to-be and her mother arrived in Guaymas last Friday

SCHOONER IN DISTRESS.

Battleship Utah Rescues Crew Off Cape Hatteras.

NORFOLK, Va., Nov. 23.—A radio message received here at 8 o'clock tonight from the battleship Utah reported an unidentified four-masted schooner in distress just below Cape Hatteras. No details were given other than that the crew of the schooner had been taken off by the battleship which asked that a coast guard cutter be sent to the scene. The name of the schooner was not given.

LOUISIANA TOWN IN FLAMES

Fear Destruction of Willets, La., From Lumber Mill Blaze

NATCHEZ, Miss., Nov. 23.—Fire is threatening to destroy the town of Willets, La., 10 miles south of Natchez. Large lumber mill, saw mill and a box factory have already been burned with a loss estimated at $500,000, according to reports reaching here.

OKLAHOMA TO FREEZE

Bureau Forecasts Rain or Snow to Follow Cold Spell

OKLAHOMA CITY., Nov. 23.—Freezing weather for Oklahoma with a thermometer drop to between 32 and 28 degrees is predicted for Monday by the United States weather bureau here. Rain or snow likely will follow the cold wave, the bureau forecasts.

MATRIMONY VS. HIGHWAYS.

Girls in State Department Just Work to Get Married.

AUSIN, Texas.—A depository of "engaged" girls, young women about to be married—such is the state highway department here, in the opinion of one old-timer of Austin.

A girl secures a stenographical position in "the highway," as it is known, works a few months, possibly even a year, and then, having saved enough money to purchase an appropriate wardrobe for the honeymoon, allows herself to be led to the altar by her beloved, according to the old-timer.

"All a girl ever goes to work over there for," he said, "is to save up enough money to buy her trousseau; and then she gets married. I've seen them go in and out of the highway regularly now for years.

GUNMEN "MOTHER HUBBARDS"

Old Fashioned Garment Takes Berlin By Storm

BERLIN, Nov. 23.—"Old mother Hubbard" gowns, with the waistlines just under the armpits, are coming into favor in Germany. Berlin modistes have imported many directoire models from Paris, and women who are sufficiently slender are appearing in ball gowns similar to those worn by Josephine, empress of France, in her most famous pictures of the Napoleonic period.

Fashion experts say that next summer's gowns will be fashioned after these models and that Nile green will be the most fashionable color. Costumers who make gowns for portly women are evincing no enthusiasm over the edict of the modistes.

CATHOLIC PRIESTS ARRESTED

Are Jailed in Moscow For Teaching Secret School

MOSCOW, Nov. 23.—According to a telegram from Odessa to the semi-official Pravda, the authorities there have arrested a group of Catholic priests who were conducting a secret school for orphans which the police allege was supported by funds supplied by organizations abroad. The purpose of the school, according to the police, was to bring up the children in the Catholic faith, but they assert part of the funds were diverted by the priests and spent in high living.

MRS. TUMULTY IMPROVES

ROCHESTER, Minn., Nov. 23.—The condition of Mrs. Joseph Tumulty, whose husband was private secretary to the late President Wilson, was reported here tonight to be "very satisfactory."

Mrs. Tumulty was operated on November 20.

RAY-MASSIE'S NO. 4, HAUSLER, SHOWS FOR 400 BBLS., SAND AT 1,109-30 FEET; TWO MORE DUE

Texhoma and Humble Both Setting Pipe on Test; Both Get Sand Way Lower

Ray and Massie completed a third good well in south Archer county on their Hausler lease yesterday afternoon in their No. 4, Hausler, north offset to the Humble Oil and Refining company's No. 1, the well showing last night for at least a 400-barrell producer from 2 feet of sand encountered at 1,109 feet.

Three wells, the Ray-Massie well, the Texhoma Oil and Refining company's No. 6, Hausler, and the Humble test Saturday, were all looking for the sand at about the same time, drilling at about the same depth. Ray and Massie found the sand at 1,109 feet, almost on a level with the wells to the north; Texhoma found it at 1,132 feet, two feet below the bottom of the Ray-Massie hole after they had drilled twenty-two feet of sand. Humble had encountered the sand last night and was setting pipe, depth below 1,127 feet, but exact measurement not learned. Texhoma was rotating their pipe in an effort to get a seat, yesterday afternoon.

The Ray-Massie well is showing up for an unusually nice producer, flowing by heads and showing a great deal of gas. Its completion extends the producing area about a thousand feet to the south. Ray and Massie's two other tests are drilling at reported depth of 950 (No. 5, offsetting Petroleum Producers No. 1), and 650, (No. 5, between No. 2 and No. 4).

Safety Pictures For Wichita Falls 'All Coming Week

An intensive safety program for Wichita Falls territory over the next two weeks is contemplated as a result of the showing of the third series of motion pictures of the safety section, Texas division of the Midcontinent Oil and Gas association, in Wichita Falls this week, and the visit of the bureau of mines first aid car to the city on the week following.

A comedy feature has been added to the shows this time and according to J. D. Bright, chairman in charge of their display, they are much better than have been given here before. There are eight reels, four of which pertain to the industry in Mexico.

Admission is free; the program for this territory follows:

Monday night, 7:30 p. m., Fannin school, north Wichita; Tuesday night, 7:30 p. m., Burkburnett, Texas; Wednesday night, 7:30 p. m., Electra, Texas; Friday night, 7:30 p. m., Petrolia, Texas; Saturday night, 7:30 p. m., Holliday, Texas. If it is possible to make arrangments a show will also be given at Olney on Thursday.

Announcements regarding the first aid car will be made later in the week. Its visit will give every Wichita Falls business house an opportunity to have one of its staff acquaint himself with first aid methods under competent guidance.

The program for the car's visit is given:

Wichita Falls, Dec. 1-6; Burkburnett, Dec. 8-13; Electra, Dec. 15-20; Petrolia, Dec. 22-27; Breckenridge, Jan. 5-10, 1925.

LUNATICS' MAGAZINE

English Asylum Has Own Publication.

LONDON, Nov. 23.—A magazine written and edited by lunatics has been started in England. Some cynics may say there is nothing new in this, judging from some of the exhibits on the news stands, but these lunatics are actually in an asylum and are not merely literary bugs. They are inmates of the city mental hospital at Humberstone, Leicester.

The patinents' magazine, which contains both prose and poetry, is never edited or censored by saner outsiders, according to the medical superintendent. He added, however, that it was not quite correct to say that the patients were insane as the majority of the cases were between convalescence and cure.

A recent number of the magazines contained some verses on the buttercup and a sociological study captioned: "Should married women work?"

Sacred Heart Altar society will hold a bazaar at 912 Indiana avenue. Come and see thir beautiful fancy work; aprons and hand-dressed dolls, also plenty of good things to eat. Lunch will be served at noon.—Adv.

South Vernon.

Promising to beat even the Sheerin-McCamey and Prince Brothers tests in the Bridwell-Heydrick No. 4, Stephens, a location south of their No. 1, section 83, south Vernon, was running pipe last night to seat on a sand encountered at 1,966 feet and drilled into twenty-two feet. It was not expected that bailing would start before Tuesday. This well is located just across the road from Winnipeg's second well, and in actual feet has obtained the sand two feet higher than in any well at south Vernon, Ray and Massie's No. 1, Bond et al, 300 feet west and 300 feet south, having reached the sand at 1,968 feet, but with the little dip in the surface toward the southeast, this depth can be regarded as practically the some.

Sheerin-McCamey-Lucey were reported bailing again last night, on the well south of the fied, while Prince Brothers will probably bail today with the bottom of the hole at 1,993 in good oil sand, on their No. 1, Zipperle.

The Bridwell and Heydrick No. 4, Stephens, was spudded exactly three weeks ago last night. Their time of about twenty drilling days is the record for south Vernon, where about forty has been the average.

A PAROLE FOR ANDERSON

Can Spend Christmas With His Family, Board Says

OSSINING, N. Y., Nov. 23.—William H. Anderson will be paroled in care of Captain Stanley Sheppard, parole agent of the Salvation Army when he leaves Sing Sing on Christmas eve, prison officials announced today. Anderson will be required to report to Captain Sheppard monthly for 12 months.

Agents of two other organizations, the prison association of New York and the Christian Science church, offered to vouch for Anderson while on parole, but he chose the Salvation Army.

TO DEDICATE STADIUM.

"Ma" and "Pat" Will March Around New Edifice.

AUSTIN, Texas, Nov. 23.—The University of Texas new memorial stadium will be dedicated Thanksgiving afternoon by exercises preceding the Texas-A. & M. game, Governor Pat M. Neff being the principal speaker. A procession headed by the governor and including Mrs. Ferguson, governor-elect, will march around the great field at 1:45 p. m. There will be bands from both colleges and singing by the students. The exercises will consume about thirty minutes to be followed immediately by the annual grid classic.

Don't Put Ban On Street Hucksters, Farmer Argues

Both City and Cropmen Are Benefited By Peddler.

An indication that the movement to rid the streets of Wichita Falls of hucksters is not everywhere meeting with favor is found in a letter received from a farmer living on the road to Mineral Wells who says in part:

Editor Record News,

Distribution is the one and only key that unlocks the door to prosperity—to the farmer and especially the truck and fruit grower. It has for years occupied the minds of some of the best men in the country even up to the department of agriculture of the United States.

In production centers great quantities of food stuffs often go to waste for want of a market while just a little way off the people would be rejoiced to have what is rotting in the fields and pay the price if it could only be put at their doors.

Former Worries Over Market.

Cotton has been crowned king of production in the south chiefly because it brings spot cash. Like the cotton grower the truck grower has to face many chances of loss of his product on account of insects and from other pests, but these hazards are as nothing compared to the question—"Can he sell it?"

The area around Wichita Falls has at a great expense erected a large irrigation project for the purpose of increasing production, but the whole thing will go up in smoke and will be a ghastly failure unless that increased production can be distributed and sold at a fair price.

Those who are working for the success of the irrigation project should do all in their power to assist in distribution of produce. Help the farmer in the one place that he cannot help himself and Wichita Falls will see the irrigation project go over with a roar.

Hucksters A Benefit.

At present the farmer has three outlet for his product, the produce house ,the merchant, and the huckster. And it would be a calamity to eliminate or hamper either. The huckster occupies a legitimate though modest place in the life of every community I know anything about, bringing as he does vegetables and fruits fresh from the farm to the housewife. The sale of his wares does much to increase consumption.

The huckster is one real source benefit to the farmer, and to attempt to rid your city of him does more to hurt the farmer than possibly anything except direct aggression. The farmer is a meek animal as a general thing, saying little until the mischief is done. I have merely given the side of the farmer as I see it.

MAKE 'EM OVER HERE

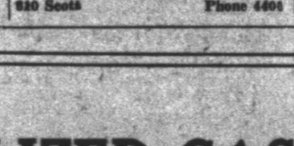

British Picture Makers Allow U. S. To Capture Trade.

LONDON, Nov. 23.—While the flood of American made motion picture films still pours into Great Britain and her dominions the production end of the British film industry continues at a standstill and, according to a correspondent of the Daily Mail, for the first time in years not a single studio is operating in England at present.

The producers ascribe the situation to various causes, particularly that the theatres will not use home made films even when they are equal or superior t othe American product, and they point out that the popularity of the English movies is proved when the exhibitors have been finally persuaded to exhibit such pictures as "Zeebruggee," a film version of the war time attack on the German naval base.

On the other hand the exhibitors assert that the quality of some of the films compares unfavorably with the importations from America. One exhibitor, who turned down a chance to show "Zeeburgee" said: "The people are not interested in patriotic stuff."

Commerce Dep't Completes First Work of Survey

Organization Matters Are Wound Up for Texas; Wichita Included.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23.—The department of commerce has completed the preliminary organization of the field work on the census of agriculture for the state of Texas, and announces the names and addresses of the supervisors of the fourteen districts into which the state has been divided for census purposes, together with the probable number of enumerators, number of farms in 1920, and the names of the counties in each district. Beaver, Cimarron and Texas counties, Oklahoma, are included in the first Texas district.

The Texas divisions include district No. 3, supervisor, Samuel Wulff, Wichita Falls, Texas, number of enumerators, 64; number of farms, 1920 census, 18,632; counties (16) Archer, Baylor, Clay, Foard, Hardeman, Haskell, Jack, Jones, Knox, Palo Pinto, Shackelford, Stephens, Throckmorton, Wichita, Wilbarger, Young.

Heretofore the census of agriculture has always been taken in connection with a complete census of population. This time it will cover the farm population only, showing the number of persons living on the farm, including the family of the operator and the farm laborers and their families. These persons will be classified as under or over ten years of age and as white or colored.

The extent to which farm operators used the purchasing and selling facilities of farmers' organizations will be brought out by two inquiries; one calling for the value of products of the farm sold through a farmers' marketing organization, and the other calling for the value of all farm supplies purchased from or through a farmers' organization.

ETHYLIZED GASOLINE

For one year and nine months ethylized gasoline has been on sale. It is now being distributed through about 20,000 filling stations covering one-third of the territory of the United States.

About 200,000,000 gallons have been used by more than 1,000,000 motorists with complete safety and satisfaction.

Recently a distressing accident occurred at an experimental plant, where a new process for the manufacture of tetraethyl lead, one of the constituents used in ethylizing gasoline, was under development. Tetraethyl lead is a poison, as are many raw materials which enter into the manufacture of harmless compounds. Ethylized gasoline consists of 1300 parts of ordinary gasoline containing less than one part of tetraethyl lead.

This statement is issued to make plain the all-important difference between tetraethyl lead, the raw material, and ethylized gasoline, the commercial product.

Ethylized gasoline is more than an improved fuel, giving smoothness to the motor and eliminating knocks; it is a scientific discovery which, in its ultimate development, will contribute largely to the conservation of the world's supply of gasoline.

Exhaustive tests have been conducted which have established the safety of ethylized gasoline when used as a motor fuel. These tests have been confirmed by the United States Bureau of Mines, which is making additional studies to determine whether any possible injury can result from continued contact when used for other than motor purposes. Scientific data based on these studies will be submitted to any health commissioner or other public health official upon request
