Gunman killed

French nursery school children, teacher freed

NEUILLY-SUR-SEINE, France (AP) — A man armed with dynamite who held six nursery school children and their teacher hostage was killed Saturday morning by police who stole into the classroom as he dozed. His captives were unharmed.

"The nightmare is over, the children are in good health ... the madman is dead, the law has triumphed," Interior Minister Charles Pasqua told reporters.

Pasqua identified the man as Eric Schmitt, a 42-year-old Frenchman born in Algeria, part of France until 1962.

The Interior Ministry said Schmitt was killed by members of an elite police squad who entered the classroom after he fell asleep. Schmitt had been struggling to stay awake throughout the drama, which began Thursday.

Members of the squad known as RAID — Research, Assistance, Intervention, Dissuasion — entered the classroom at 7:25 a.m., planning simply to evacuate the hostages, the ministry said. But Schmitt awoke and was killed instantly.

Government sources said he was shot three times in the head.

Police found 21 sticks of dynamite in the classroom, 16 of them strapped to the gunman's belt. The hostage-taker had broken off negotiations with authorities several hours before the ordeal ended.

Masked sharpshooters had been positioned on rooftops of the school since Thursday. But the Interior Ministry had stressed that the safety of the children was paramount, suggesting a blind assault on the building had been ruled out.

Five men encounter sour gas

Five men, four of them from Snyder, were injured Friday after being exposed to hydrogen sulfide at the Texaco Gas Plant, about eight miles west of Vincent.

Four employees of Snyder's E.D. Walton Construction Co. — Leo Aguilar, Frank Konvika, Earl Ware and Juan Silvas — were transported to Scenic Mountain Medical Center in Big Spring following the accident which occurred just before 9 a.m.

According to a nursing supervisor at Scenic Mountain, all four men Saturday morning were in stable condition. Aguilar and Konvika were on the medical floor. Silvas was in the intensive care unit, but was expected to be moved out of ICU Saturday. Ware was in ICU in stable, but guarded condition.

Jimmy Lockhart, 50, a Texaco field construction supervisor from Big Spring, was airlifted to Lubbock's Methodist Hospital. Lockhart was still in Methodist's intensive care unit Saturday morning.

According to Lockhart's brother, Howard County Judge Ben Lockhart, he was doing much better Saturday. "He is awake this morning and more alert than he was last night. He is not out of the woods yet, but he seems much better than last night," Lockhart said.

The five men were working on a gas line which contained the hazardous chemical. Charles Rentz, a Texaco spokesman, said the leak was an isolated incident and was relatively small. "It was confined to a small area," he said. Texaco employees confined the leak without outside assistance.

Hydrogen sulfide is a toxic chemical that affects the body's respiratory system.

'No smoking' to be mulled

Scurry County commissioners will reconsider a non-smoking policy for the coliseum and the fee for putting dirt in the facility when they meet in regular session Monday at 10 a.m.

Commissioners had tabled both items last Monday.

Jack Dorris, a representative of Pack Rat Service, Inc., is expected to address the court concerning rural trash collection. Dorris was scheduled to appear at last Monday's meeting but was unable to attend.

Other agenda items include review of reports from Scurry County committees and boards and approval of bills and minutes.

Explosion rocks Rome's elite

ROME (AP) — The field was wide open for suspects in an apparent car-bombing in one of Rome's fanciest neighborhoods: Yugoslav factions, the Mafia, someone who had it in for one of the country's most popular talk show hosts.

The blast at 9:40 p.m. (12:40 p.m. CDT) Friday injured at least 18 people, including the driver and several escorts of the host, Maurizio Costanzo. Costanzo, who was unhurt, had just left the theater where he tapes his program when the explosion hit.

It set off a heavy fire in a six-story building, shattered windows in a half-kilometer radius and knocked out power for about an hour in the swank neighborhood of embassies, expensive restaurants and chic stores.

The explosion blew doors off buildings and windows out of their frames, sent the wreckage of a car hurtling through a storefront and blew pieces of twisted metal into treetops.

The news agency ANSA, quoting unnamed investigators, said it appeared Costanzo may have been the target.

Costanzo's programs tackle the leading issues of the day, and he has devoted several to raising public opinion against the Mafia. His last show on the Mafia was about six weeks ago.

Costanzo said his show had received threats in the past but none recently, and said he doubted he was the victim of a Mafia attack.

"I've done a lot on organized crime; I intend to keep doing it," Costanzo said.

Baccalaureate service planned Monday night

Snyder High School baccalaureate services will be held Monday at 7 p.m in the coliseum with Dr. Vernard Johnson of Fort Worth as guest speaker.

Johnson is credited for having popularized the gospel saxophone in the church throughout the world. He has performed before presidents of many countries, including Ronald Reagan and George Bush. He has also appeared on numerous Christian television broadcasts.

DR. VERNARD JOHNSON

Seniors Jason Warren, Chris Meador, Dell Blackwell and Kyle Hayle will also take part in the service. Warren will lead the processional, Meador will give the invocation, Blackwell will welcome guests and Hayle will read a scripture.

Senior choral members will sing "Friends." Those members are Stephanie Fambro, Minerva Gonzalez, Sam Grimes, Joellen King, Mendy Miller, Gilbert Orosco, Willie Ray Page, Steven Pena and Amy Steakley.

A woodwind quartet of Jennifer Cervantez, Michelle Blythe, Minera Gonzales and Julie Zeck will provide music for the recessional.

Graduation is set for May 21.

Capital murder trial begins here Monday

Jury selection in the capital murder trial of Nina Jonell Henderson is to begin Monday morning in 132nd District Court here.

Henderson, 28, is charged in the November 1991 slaying of Snyder businessman Paul Milford.

Presiding over the case will be District Judge Gene Dulaney. Henderson is represented by Lubbock attorney Jim Bob Darnell. District Attorney Ernie Armstrong will prosecute.

Dulaney denied key motions by the defendant in the weeks leading up to Monday's trial, rejecting a request for change of venue and a motion to suppress statements made by Henderson at the time of her arrest.

Milford, owner of Fast Oil Change, was reported missing by business acquaintances on Monday, Nov. 4, 1991.

Friends had reported seeing him at Rip Griffin's Truck Stop on the evening of Nov. 2. Milford had told them he was going to Abilene to purchase some supplies. When he failed to open his business on Monday, police were notified.

Henderson and her reputed boyfriend, Fast Oil Change employee Arthur Lee Harding, left Snyder about the same time and became key suspects in the case.

Milford's billfold was discovered in Abilene on Nov. 11 and his 1982 GMC Suburban was found abandoned in a parking lot there three days later.

In March of 1992, Milford's body was discovered in a cistern adjacent to a vacant house on County Road 612, near Fluvanna. An autopsy revealed he had been shot twice in the abdomen.

Henderson and Harding were arrested on murder warrants outside a Monroe, La., motel in July of 1992.

Harding, 43, is also charged with capital murder in the case. His trial date has not been set.

The SDN Column — By Roy McQueen

The feller on Deep Creek says, "In the city, the only place you can park as long as you want to, you don't want to."

An event with world-wide significance could happen right here in Scurry County this weekend.

The world's population will reach 5.5 billion on Sunday, and if a local expectant mother cooperates, the mother and Cogdell Hospital can lay claim to pushing the count over the top.

Estimates by the Population Research Bureau in Washington, D.C. says that the 5.5 billion will be achieved on May 16.

Just to show how massive the world's population explosion is, it took 130 years, from 1800 to 1930, for the population to grow from one to two billion.

Today, however, the world is adding another billion people every 11 years. That's 250,000 per day!

Sunday's the day...we're counting on some soon-to-be mom and Cogdell's obstetrics staff.

The only thing growing faster than the general world population is the nation's prison population.

According to the Justice Department, the inmate population at state and federal prisons in the U.S. reached a record 883,593 last year.

The increase was almost 60,000 and represents a gain of 7.2 percent over the previous year. State prison populations grew by 6.8 percent while the federal inmate load jumped 12.1 percent.

Researchers blamed the increased prison population on drug-related convictions. The Justice Department said 1990 was the first year that the number of inmates imprisoned for drug offenses exceeded those in prison for property crimes.

When the current building program is completed, the Texas Department of Criminal Justice will have space for more than 100,000.

Panel adopts bill allowing right to carry gun

AUSTIN (AP) — Texans could openly carry handguns under a bill passed Friday by a Senate committee.

The Criminal Justice panel voted 5-1 to send the measure to the full Senate, which will probably consider it Monday.

About 30 people testified during the four-hour hearing, including clergy, police, politicians, crime victims, doctors and gun advocates. Dozens more signed up to show their opposition to the bill. Opponents of the measure outnumbered supporters about 10 to one.

The bill has already passed the House, and enjoys a 24-7 edge in the Senate, according to Sen. Jerry Patterson, R-Pasadena, who is the Senate sponsor of the legislation.

Gov. Ann Richards has vowed to veto it, saying the proposal would lead to more violence.

Richards' spokesman Chuck McDonald, who attended the committee hearing, said she will keep that promise. "Absolutely, 100 percent." Referring to those who spoke against the bill, he said, "They know it means death, injury and will cost the taxpayers money."

Under the bill, a 21-year-old person with a clean criminal history, and who is deemed of sound mind, could receive, after 15 hours of training, a license to carry "a concealed or exposed handgun."

The bill would not take effect unless voters approve the proposal in a November, Patterson said.

"It is presumptuous and arrogant of us to ... not give them the right to vote on it," he said.

Currently, state law doesn't allow citizens to be licensed to carry concealed or exposed handguns. It restricts Texans to keeping handguns at home, carrying them from a purchase, taking them on a hunting or fishing trip, or if they are traveling.

Advocates of the gun proposal said it would make criminals think twice before attacking a person, and ensure that well-intentioned people who are illegally carrying concealed handguns would be trained.

"This legislation scares the hell out of the criminal element in Texas," McLennan County sheriff's deputy Randall Gates said.

"Everybody is already on the street carrying guns ... but it's the wrong folks," said Rep. Ron Wilson, D-Houston, who is one of the House authors of the bill.

Many spoke about how women are especially vulnerable to assaults and that if they had a gun it would give them a chance.

But others said more people carrying handguns would just lead to more tragedy.

"To approve this legislation would be tantamount to an injection of violence into an already violent society," said Sen. Mike Moncrief, D-Fort Worth, who is not a member of the committee, but attended the hearing.

Becky Cooper, 20, of Dallas, who said her 17-year-old brother was killed recently by a handgun, testified against the bill. "I don't want to grow up in a vigilante society," she said.

Police officers said allowing people to carry handguns would give them a false sense of security, and could lead to violence in confrontational situations that without guns would have been smoothed over.

They said in most instances, a person with a gun would not be able to use it if attacked because the criminal always has the element of surprise. And they said the training requirements were far too little.

Sen. Royce West, D-Dallas, the only one on the committee who voted against the bill, said he still may filibuster against it.

Since there is less than 21/2 weeks left in the regular session, any delaying maneuver could kill it.

Competition nixed between factions

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Southern Baptist moderates may crack the bedrock of their denomination — autonomous local churches — if they split too far with conservative leaders, former President Jimmy Carter warned Friday.

Carter, a member of the Southern Baptist Convention since childhood, said he was worried about what would happen if the smaller Cooperative Baptist Fellowship tried to become a denomination of its own.

"I don't want to see our home church fragmented," said Carter, a Sunday School teacher at Maranatha Baptist Church in his hometown of Plains, Ga.

Rather than pulling away completely from the fundamentalist-dominated denomination, Carter said, the fellowship should strive for peaceful coexistence.

"I see us going in individual ways ... to serve Christ in God's grace," Carter said at a news conference. "We have plenty of room not to be competitive."

Carter completed his personal break from the Southern Baptist Convention, the nation's largest protestant denomination, by addressing the moderate group Thursday night at the start of its third annual meeting.

"Tonight I come here, I would say, with mixed emotions," Carter told some 6,000 people attending a worship service at the Birmingham-Jefferson Civic Center. "In the Cooperative Baptist Fellowship, my wife and I have found a home."

Patricia Ayres, the elected leader of the 3-year-old organization, said Carter's appearance "was a very significant moment

"He really challenged us to ... rise beyond our usual way of doing things," said Ms. Ayres of San Antonio, Texas. "He's shown such integrity in his faith."

Moderates and conservatives within the 15 million-member Southern Baptist Convention struggled over leadership for more than a decade before the moderate wing organized the Cooperative Baptist Fellowship.

Conservatives believe the Bible should be taken literally without personal interpretation, and they frown on women in leadership positions or the clergy. Fundamentalist leaders have fostered tighter control by preachers and a larger profile in politics.

The moderates allow women in church leadership roles, including the ministry, and they emphasize each believer's ability to read and understand the Scriptures. They are seeking more active missions work, both at home and abroad.

Ms. Ayres, moderator of the fellowship, said about 1,000 of the Southern Baptist Convention's 38,000 churches contribute financially to the upstart organization. But she said leaders of the group have not tried to translate that into a number of members.

Whatever the membership, she said, "we still sense ourselves as being a movement," not a denomination.

Included on the meeting agenda were the adoption of a permanent bylaws and a constitution, plus approval of a $5.1 million budget for 1994, up from $3.7 million this year. Most of the money goes to missions work.

There was also some commercialism mixed in with the spiritualism.

Smuggling ring cracked by feds

SEATTLE (AP) — Army soldiers used military transport planes to smuggle more than 200 pounds of cocaine into the United States from Panama, authorities said.

Three of 11 people charged in a federal indictment have been arrested, prosecutors said Thursday. Those arrested are current or former soldiers who were stationed at Fort Lewis, near Tacoma.

Spot inspections revealed the shipment method when 4.4 pounds of cocaine was found in the false sides of a briefcase carried by a passenger who arrived at Charleston, S.C., on a October 1990 military flight bound for Fort Lewis from Panama.

UNITY OF THE CHURCH
By Homer Anderson

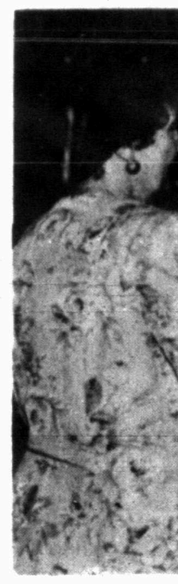

Most every denominational organization and sect calls itself a "church". The Bible introduces the church and depicts it as a single, unified organism. The Bible, which traces Christ's church through prophecy, its founding in Acts chapter two, and its early spread, must also be the one authority for the church's pattern of worship, organization and doctrine today.

The Bible stresses God's oneness and teaches the unity of His followers (Deuteronomy 6:4; Ephesians 4:4-6). Jesus prayed for unity of His disciples, "that they all may be one" (John 17:21). Paul warned the church at Corinth against following men--even good men--instead of Christ (1 Corinthians 1:10-13). Division comes from humans and their views, and especially so when we look to men rather than to the Bible for our authority.

The Lord adds to the church those who are being saved (Acts 2:41, 47). Paul said Christ is the "head over all things to the church, which is His body" (4:4), and that Christ is "the Savior of the body" (5:23). Therefore all the saved are in one body, the church. Jesus said, "Not every one who says to Me, 'Lord, Lord,' will enter the kingdom of heaven; but he who does the will of My Father who is in heaven" (Matthew 7:21).

High school congress bans gays from Student Council

SEATTLE (AP) — A high school's student congress approved a measure barring openly gay teens from serving in student government, but the principal says it's unlikely the rule will ever take effect.

The amendment to the Bremerton High School constitution would bar from office students found to be practicing "immoral activities" such as sexual harassment, indecent exposure, sodomy and homosexuality. Its stated purpose is "to preserve the integrity and high moral standards that BHS is built upon."

After hours of heated debate, the measure passed on a 49-47 vote Wednesday. The 1,350-member student body votes Monday. But even if the amendment wins the required two-thirds majority, chances of it passing a review by the school administration are slim, said principal Marilee Hansen.

"Every year we deny a couple of amendments," she said in a telephone interview Friday. "I haven't talked to a staff member yet who is pleased with the measure."

Hansen said the anti-gay amendment was proposed by a group of conservative, religious students at the public school in the town of Bremerton, located just across Puget Sound from Seattle.

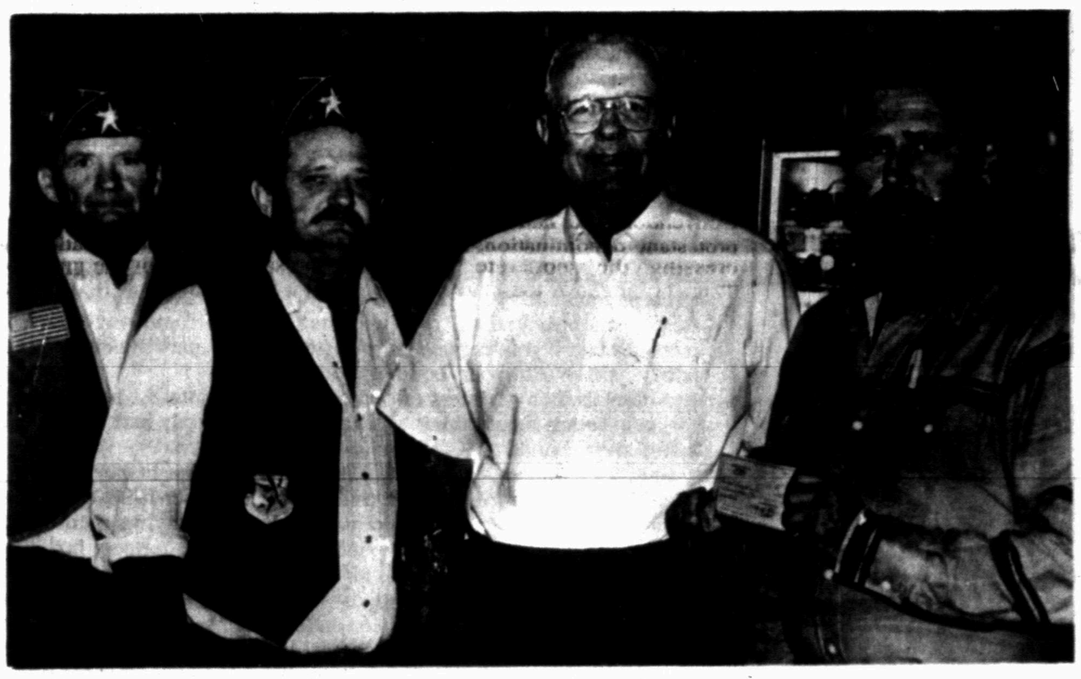

Among them was Mike Mercer, president of the Young Republicans Club, who addressed the congress wearing a T-shirt that read, "On a Mission from God."

"This sends a message to the school that homosexuality is wrong," he told the delegates.

On the other side were students like senior Todd McCauley, who told the congress that he is gay and made a plea for tolerance.

"What I do in my bedroom is no one else's business," he said. "All I do is come here for an education."

Hansen says she disagrees with the amendment and "kind of got sick to my stomach" while listening to the debate.

The foundation used the funds to purchase a Comfort-Plus invacare recliner. The chair will benefit cancer patients who receive chemotherapy treatments at Cogdell.

Representatives from the American Legion said this would not have been possible if businesses and individuals had not been generous in their contributions to the tournament.

Man gets 40-year sentence in Texas condom rape case

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A rape victim who asked her attacker to wear a condom tearfully thanked the jury that sentenced him to 40 years in prison and said the case shows women who try to protect themselves aren't consenting to sex.

Joel Valdez, who was sentenced Friday, had testified during his trial that Elizabeth "Xan" Wilson consented to have sex when she asked that he wear a condom. Ms. Wilson testified that the request was a desperate effort to protect herself from AIDS as he raped her at knifepoint.

"Self-defense does not equal consent," Ms. Wilson told the jury Friday as Valdez stared at the floor.

The 26-year-old artist, who agreed to disclose her name after the trial, smiled and embraced friends as the jury announced the sentence. But she cried when she got up afterward to read her statement, thanking the jurors and saying she would not live as a victim.

"In the past I have been known as the condom rape victim," she said. "I am not the condom rape victim. I do not have victim's mentality.

"I am a survivor of rape, which is a violent crime. The man that raped me used his power to take over my life for a short period of time — my home and my total being."

Prosecutors had asked for a life sentence but said they were pleased with the 40-year verdict, under which Valdez, 28, will be eligible for parole in 10 years.

As a first time offender, Valdez could have been sentenced to anything from probation to life in prison.

He showed no emotion as the sentence was read and wouldn't comment as he was taken from the courtroom to jail.

After the same eight-woman, four-man jury convicted him of rape the day before, he had said of Ms. Wilson, "She lied."

During the three-day trial, Valdez admitted stumbling drunk into the woman's apartment at 3 a.m. on Sept. 17 "looking for someone to party with" and confronting Ms. Wilson with a knife.

"She told me to do her a favor. She told me to wear a condom so I did," he said. "She tore the package off. She put it on me. We were making love after that."

The first grand jury to hear the case in September refused to indict Valdez, prompting a national outcry from women's groups. A second grand jury indicted him in October.

Representatives of women's groups praised the verdict and sentence.

"I think it will tell women who have taken measures to protect themselves with a condom that it won't be held against them and that their attackers will get prison time," said Lynn Thompson-Haas, executive director of the Austin Rape Crisis Center and a member of the National Coalition Against Sexual Assault.

Ross Perot & son disagree over benefit of trade pact

DALLAS (AP) — Ross Perot has emerged as a leading critic of the proposed North American Free Trade Agreement while his son urgently is pushing it as a boon for Texas and a Perot-developed 17,000, $200 million industrial airport.

Perot, in a high-profile campaign to defeat the pact, says the treaty will create "a giant sucking sound" as jobs migrate to Mexico.

But Ross Perot Jr. insists the agreement not only will help establish Alliance Airport as a worldwide hub for free trade but will bring thousands of jobs to North Texas.

"On NAFTA, I basically believe one thing, and he believes in another," Ross Perot Jr. said in an interview with The Dallas Morning News. "We certainly have a difference of opinion on NAFTA, but his scope is much broader than my scope."

The newspaper published its story in Saturday morning's editions.

Ross Perot Jr. plays down the difference of opinion, saying his father has no role in the Alliance project other than partial ownership and has little input in the project. He noted that his father at first argued against building the industrial airport because "airports make noise."

"He has no idea what I'm doing with the foreign trade zone application. He's never seen it. He's never read it. I'm in one direction, and he's going in another direction," the younger Perot said.

The contrasting views come as the Dallas billionaire prepares to take his battle against NAFTA to prime-time television May 30. His son, meanwhile, is awaiting approval from the U.S. Commerce Department on his trade zone application.

The younger Perot has offered NAFTA as a reason why the federal government should grant Alliance the nation's largest foreign trade zone designation — a lure to corporations that makes the airport more attractive as an international manufacturing and distribution center.

"It's a marketing tool," the younger Perot said. "It's one more thing we have to offer."

The newspaper said the senior Perot declined to be interviewed regarding the variance of views concerning the proposed trade agreement linking the United States, Mexico and Canada.

"Alliance and what they're doing is absolutely, totally separate from Mr. Perot's business," said Sharon Holman, spokeswoman for the elder Perot.

Foreign trade zones allow companies to import parts without paying tariffs until a completed product is ready for sale. If the product is exported, the manufacturer pays no duty. Tariffs are often reduced if the product is finished in the zone and sold into the U.S. market.

NAFTA would provide similar benefits for products moving among the United States, Mexico and Canada. It envisions a unified market of 360 million people doing business largely without trade barriers.

In asking the federal government for a 15-square-mile foreign trade zone, the younger Perot said NAFTA presents a "special opportunity" for Alliance because the airport is "perfectly located" to be an international free-trade hub.

"The free trade agreement will benefit the United States economy," he said in his application, "by expanding trade opportunities, lowering prices, increasing competition and improving the ability of United States companies to exploit economies of scale."

That description sharply contrasts to the bleak picture his father painted during testimony before the Senate Banking Committee on April 22.

"The first rule of war is don't shoot yourself. Our trade agreements, including this one, violate that rule. We consistently shoot ourselves," Perot Sr. told senators.

"The American people don't want this. They know this agreement is going to cost them jobs. What we've got is a bad agreement."

U.S. Rep. Henry Bonilla, R-San Antonio, one of the Texas congressional delegation's strongest NAFTA supporters, calls it "an obvious inconsistency."

"On the one hand, there's a recognition that NAFTA is going to be beneficial to all of America, but on the other hand, what's coming out of Perot's mouth is that it's bad for America."

The younger Perot says there is no contradiction between his father's political agenda and financial interest in Alliance. The land was purchased with part of the $1.5 billion the elder Perot made by selling Electronic Data Systems Corp.

He also loaned his son the use of a business organization that transformed part of Plano into the Legacy Park development.

Teen convicted of murdering ice cream vendor

DALLAS (AP) — A Dallas County jury has convicted a teenager and sentenced him to 99 years in prison for shooting to death an ice cream truck driver last July.

Jurors took less than an hour Thursday to convict Angus Lewis of killing Sylvanus "Ochi" Onwuchekwa, 34, as the man drove his ice cream truck through a Dallas neighborhood July 23.

They took two hours to decide the sentence.

Judge John C. Creuzot commented on the sentence, urging Lewis to "do us all a favor and get on the phone and tell some of your friends" about the stiff sentence.

Lewis was 16 at the time of the shooting. He had been certified to stand trial as an adult.

Lewis' relatives said they didn't believe he received a fair trial.

"I think those people that testified against him were pressured to do it," said Lou Ann Cooper, the man's aunt.

Defense attorney Doug Parks argued that police had arrested the wrong person. Afterward, though, he said he was not surprised at the conviction or the stiff sentence.

Prosecutor Patrick Kirlin said the jury's decision was "appropriate," adding that "it speaks highly of the jury."

Lewis must serve at least 15 years before he is eligible for parole.

Financial Focus

Before June 1983, tax-exempt bonds were commonly issued in bearer form with no owner registration or name. The bearer, or person who held the bond, owned it. Like a dollar bill, if I hold it, it's mine; if you hold it, it's yours.

Issuing bonds in bearer form was simple and inexpensive. It eliminated the need for a transfer agent to register ownership each time the bond was bought or sold.

A coupon for each interest payment stated the amount of interest and the date it was due. Twice a year, at payment time, the owner clipped the coupon from the bond and mailed it to a designated bank for payment. This designated paying agent paid the interest when the coupon was presented.

Since 1983, all new tax-exempt bonds have been issued in registered form. This means the owner's name must appear on the bond certificate and must be recorded with the paying agent. Nearly half of all new tax-exempt bonds are issued in book-entry form, which is a type of electronic registration. Interest checks are automatically mailed to the registered owner on the due date. There's no delay in receiving interest and no chance of forgetting to mail a coupon.

Unfortunately, thousands of bearer bonds are still circulating and will continue to earn interest by coupon until they either mature or are called for early redemption. If you hold one of these old bearer bonds, there are a few things you should remember.

When a bearer bond matures, you must mail the certificate and the last coupon to the paying agent. Only then will you receive the final interest payment and your principal. If you forget to return the bond certificate, your principal will remain in the bank but will no longer earn interest. Because your name is not registered, the bank will not be able to notify you when your bond matures.

Although many holders of bearer bonds lose interest because they forget to return matured bonds, they more commonly lose interest because their bonds are redeemed early.

Say, for example, you own a $10,000 tax-exempt bearer bond that pays 12 percent interest and will mature in December 1998. Every December and June, you mail a coupon to the bank paying agent. After you receive the interest from your December 1992 coupon, however, the bond is redeemed by the issuer and ceases earning interest. When you mail in your June 1993 coupon, it's returned with a note from the bank telling you the bond has been called and instructing you to return the bond certificate with all remaining coupons attached. By now, you have lost $600 because the bond stopped earning interest at the time it was redeemed.

Although this may seem unfair, banks claim that no one can be notified because there are no names on bearer bonds. The bank must wait until bearer bond owners mail the next coupons to notify them of redemption.

It sounds like a "catch-22," but there are two ways to receive your interest when due and have your principal returned promptly when a bond is called. Both will be discussed in the second part of this series.

Student killed in Irving school

IRVING, Texas (AP) — A 17-year-old student at a high school in suburban Irving is accused of shooting another student in the head at school because of a dispute over a girl, officials say.

Jose Balderas, also 17, was pronounced dead at 10:35 p.m. Friday in the intensive care unit of Parkland Memorial Hospital in Dallas, said Raji Bolton, administrator on call at the hospital.

The shooting occurred Friday afternoon just minutes before Irving Nimitz High School was to let out for the weekend.

Max Alexander Martinez was taken into custody a few minutes later about one block from the school in a car that was fleeing the school, officials said.

Martinez was jailed in lieu of $50,000 bond, Irving police Capt. Travis Hall said. Charges of attempted murder were filed Friday, but those charges could be upgraded now because of Balderas' death.

Other students said Balderas was shot in the back of the head.

"This was some sort of personal dispute. There's girls involved," Hall said.

A .38 caliber revolver believed to be used in the shooting was recovered at the home of one of Martinez' friends, a 17-year-old female, police said.

Irving police officers arrested Martinez with two others in a car. Martinez was taken into custody and the other two were released after questioning, police said. Authorities declined to give any information about the two others.

Students and school officials said there had never been trouble with weapons at the school.

"You hear of this at other schools. You think it's going to come to your school, but not this soon," one student said.

"I was standing right next to the guy who got shot," freshman Eric Lentz, 16, said. "This guy just came up to him, took his gun, put it to the back of his head and shot him."

The gunman then bolted from the hallway, as did another person who seemed to be with him, Lentz said.

Democrats offer capital-gains break

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton and congressional Democrats are offering high-income investors something they couldn't get under President Bush: a sizable capital-gains tax break. But there's a big catch.

Bush proposed to attract investors by cutting the capital-gains rate while holding steady the rate on wages and other ordinary income. Clinton's deficit-reduction bill would freeze the top capital-gains rate at 28 percent and boost the tax on other income as high as 43 percent, creating a differential of up to 15 percentage points in favor of capital gains.

Capital-gains backers are less than enthusiastic about that idea, which is part of a bill raising taxes by about $246 billion over the next five years to reduce the federal budget deficit.

"Investors aren't stupid," Mark Bloomfield, president of Americans for Capital Formation and lobbyist for capital-gains cuts, said Friday. The savvy will simply put their money into tax-free ventures, he said, because Clinton's plan lacks any real incentive for investment.

The bill was cleared by the House Ways and Means Committee on Thursday over the unanimous opposition of Republicans. House debate is expected to begin May 26.

Although the legislation would impose a broad energy tax affecting most people and businesses and increase the portion of Social Security benefits subject to taxation, more than 60 percent of the money would come from several tax increases on upper-income people.

The top nominal tax rate, now 31 percent, would be raised to 36 percent. A 10 percent surtax on taxable incomes over $250,000 would have the effect of pushing the rate to 39.6 percent for the richest couples and individuals. A combination of other targeted increases could mean an real top rate of 43.1 percent for the wealthy.

But the maximum tax on capital gains, which are profits from the sale of investments, would be held at the current 28 percent.

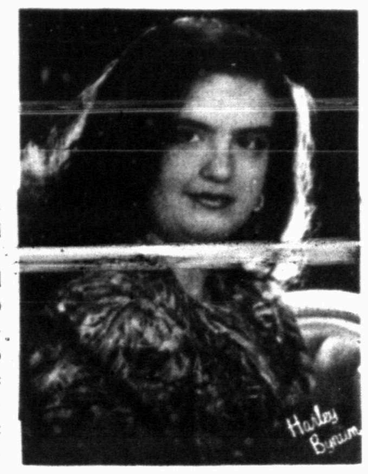

Bush, arguing that a reduced capital-gains rate was necessary to encourage risk-taking by investors, wanted to cut capital gains to a maximum 20 percent rate while holding the top rate on other income at 31 percent. Democratic leaders blocked those efforts, saying that because the overwhelming majority of capital gains are claimed by the well-to-do, any such change should be paid for by raising rates on other income.

The bill contains a very limited version of what Bush wanted. Half the gain from the sale of stock in certain small businesses could be excluded from taxation if the shares were owned five years or longer.

The rate differential between capital gains and other income under Clinton's plan "obviously means people will look for investments that provide capital gains as opposed to those that generate dividends and interest," Bloomfield said. But the plan is no way to attract investment because it penalizes success, he argued.

The 15-point differential compares with up to 6 points under current law. As recently as 1969, there was a 50-point difference. President Reagan's tax plan cut it to 30 percent in 1982 before the tax overhaul in 1986 wiped out any preference for capital gains.

Singer-actress Judy Garland died in London in 1969 at the age of 47.

PROPERTY TAX PROTEST AND APPEAL PROCEDURES

THE SCURRY COUNTY APPRAISAL DISTRICT WILL MAIL NOTICES OF APPRAISED VALUE IN MAY, 1993

The law gives property owners the right to protest actions concerning their property tax appraisals. You may follow these procedures if you have a concern about:

- The value placed on your property;
- Exemptions that may apply to you;
- Cancellation of agricultural appraisal;
- Whether your property is taxable;
- Which local governments should be taxing your property; or
- You think the appraisal district has done something else that adversely affected you.

INFORMAL REVIEW:

Taxpayers are encouraged to make an appointment with an appraiser to discuss their property value. This may be done by calling 573-8549. They should bring information to substantiate why they feel that their property value is incorrect. The appraiser will discuss their property and may recommend an adjustment to the Appraisal Review Board. If the taxpayer is satisfied with the adjustment, he does not have to appear before the ARB.

REVIEW BY THE APPRAISAL REVIEW BOARD:

If you can't resolve your problem informally with the appraisal district staff, you may have your case heard by the Appraisal Review Board.

The Appraisal Review Board (ARB) is an independent board of citizens that reviews problems with appraisals and other concerns listed above. They have the power to order changes to solve problems. If you file a written request for an ARB hearing (called a NOTICE OF PROTEST) before the deadline, the ARB will set your case for a hearing. You'll receive written notification of the time, date, and place of the hearing. The hearing will be informal. You and the appraisal district representative will be asked to present evidence about your case. The ARB will make its decision based on the evidence presented. You can get a copy of a protest form from the Appraisal District office at 2612 College Avenue, or the Appraisal District in your county.

NOTE: YOU SHOULDN'T TRY TO CONTACT APPRAISAL REVIEW BOARD MEMBERS OUTSIDE OF THE HEARING. THE LAW REQUIRES BOARD MEMBERS TO SIGN AN AFFIDAVIT SAYING THAT THEY HAVE NOT TALKED ABOUT YOUR CASE BEFORE THE ARB HEARS IT.

REVIEW BY THE DISTRICT COURT:

After it decides your case, the ARB must send you a copy of its order by certified mail. If you're not satisfied with the decision you have the right to appeal to district court. If you choose to go to court, you must start the process by filing a petition within 45 days of the date you receive the ARB's order. If the Appraisal District has appraised your property at $1,000,000 or more, you must file a notice of appeal with the chief appraiser within 15 days of the date you receive the ARB's order.

MORE INFORMATION:

You can get more information by contacting your Appraisal District at 2612 College Avenue, Snyder, TX 79549 (915) 573-8549 or the Appraisal District in your county. You can also get a pamphlet describing how to prepare a protest from the Appraisal District or from the State Comptroller's Property Tax Division at 4301 Westbank Drive, Building B, Suite 100, Austin, Texas 78746-6565.

DEADLINE FOR FILING PROTEST WITH THE ARB

(the deadline is postponed to the next business day if it falls on a weekend or holiday)

USUAL DEADLINE:	On or before May 31 (or 30 days after a Notice of Appraised Value was mailed to you whichever is later)
LATE PROTEST:	(If you miss the usual deadline for good cause. Good cause is some reason beyond your control, like a medical emergency. The ARB decides whether you have good cause.) Late protests must be filed before the day the ARB approves records for the year. Contact the Appraisal District for more information.
SPECIAL DEADLINES:
CHANGE OF USE:	(If the Appraisal District has informed you that you are losing agricultural appraisal because you changed the use of your land.) Change of use protests must be filed before the 30th day after the notice of the determination was mailed to you.
ARB CHANGES:	(If the ARB has informed you of a change that increases your tax liability and the change didn't result from a protest you filed.) ARB change protests must be filed before the 30th day after the notice of the determination was mailed to you.

If you believe the Appraisal District or ARB should have sent you a notice and did not, you may file a protest until the day before taxes become delinquent (usually February 1). The ARB decides whether it will hear your case based on evidence about whether a required notice was mailed to you.

Scores staying low at Nelson

IRVING, Texas (AP) — When a players shoots the 11th best score in the history of the PGA Tour and finds himself three shots back in a tie for third, something weird is going on.

That's what happened to Billy Mayfair on Friday after he led a re- [illegible] second round of the Byron Nelson Classic.

"That's 61 today. But they hand out the checks on Sunday. I have to stay aggressive, keep on trying to make birdies," he said.

Mayfair's 9-under-par 61 has been bettered only 10 times in the history of the pro tour, the last a record-tying 59 by Chip Beck in 1991.

Bruce Lietzke checked in with a 62 and a card that showed 12 "3's." Fred Couples had a 63 and Dan Forsman, the tournament leader after 36 holes, recorded one of three 64's.

Along with his opening 65, he had a two-shot lead at 129, a course record score on the TPC at Las Colinas and equal to the best on the tour this year.

In all, the 156-man field blistered the revised, toughened course with an average score of 69.82. Eighty-three players broke par.

"The [illegible] beautiful," Forsman explained. "There was no wind at all. They'd put some water on the greens and they were soft and receptive. The fairways were dry and the ball was running.

"You get conditions like this, and players like this and somebody gets it going and they just run with it," he said.

Not all of them ran with it, however. Dillard Pruitt, for example, was nailed with a $1,000 fine and a one-stroke penalty for slow play.

And Forsman was warned about being out of position late in the day, but responded with the burst that lifted him two shots clear of the field. He birdied three of the last four holes.

"I told myself to be aggressive, not be afraid to take a lead and expand a lead," he said.

Scott Simpson, who shared the [illegible] with Forsman and Mayfair in 1977 and tied two years ago by Beck.

Mayfair, who has yet to win in a five-season tour career and missed the cut in seven of 14 previous starts this season, attributed his remarkable effort to his putter.

He one-putted 12 times, including a pair from 20 feet, another from 25 and a downhill 50-footer from the upper tier on the fifth hole.

"Everything started flowing," he said. "I just let it happen. I got in that rhythm and just took off."

a bogey-free 66 and was alone in second at 131.

[illegible] and Brian Claperchia, who had a 65, were next at 132. Lietzke and D.A. Weibring, also with a 65, followed at 133.

Couples was tied at 134 with Davis Love III, Doug Tewell and South African David Frost, each with a second round 66.

Mayfair, who started his day's play from the 10th tee, admitted he "started thinking about a 59" after dropping a 50-foot birdie putt on the sixth hole, his 14th of the round.

Mayfair, however, drove into the rough and bogeyed the next hole and lost any realistic chance at matching the record 59 set by Al [illegible] in 1977 and tied two years ago by Beck.

San Antonio hopes for big comeback

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The San Antonio Spurs are trying to stage the same type of playoff comeback the Phoenix Suns did when they were down two games to none in the first round.

But the Spurs, behind 0-2 in their series with the Suns, admit it will be difficult to do so against the smaller, quicker Phoenix team.

"We have tried to slow things down," Spurs coach John Lucas said Friday. "They're very, very athletic. They've been able to counter any move we've been able to make so far, and they've had us making adjustments."

San Antonio faces Phoenix today in Game 3 of their best-of-7 series. The teams play again Sunday in Game 4.

"We've got to win two games here. We have to come in and take care of our own business," Lucas said. "We just have to get back into a sync and a rhythm."

The Suns say they are prepared in case that happens.

"They are going to come out and play hard," said the Suns' Charles Barkley. "They are like us. They're a good team and they're not going to quit."

The Spurs say they will continue to try to play their passing game while concentrating on getting the ball inside to center David Robinson, who led the Spurs with 27 points in Thursday's 109-103 loss.

Lucas said several other players will have to step up their contributions for San Antonio to win. And, he said, the Spurs have to avoid getting far behind early on, as they did in the first two games.

Spurs forward Sean Elliott said in addition to some offensive adjustments — like finding more ways for he and Dale Ellis to score — San Antonio must play better defense.

"They make their big runs here and there and eventually we catch up. As long as we stay steady we can win," Elliott said.

Phoenix is trying to continue with what has worked so far.

"Robinson is going to get his shots and his points, but we have to keep Ellis and Elliott from hurting us and so far we've done that," said Dan Majerle.

Elliott had 14 points Thursday night, and Ellis had eight — subpar performances for both players.

The Suns said they expect the back-to-back games in San Antonio to be difficult, though point guard Kevin Johnson said he believes the back-to-back schedule favors the road team.

Johnson, who had 15 points and 12 assists Thursday night, said the Suns just have to keep playing hard.

"Every time we've let up even a little bit, the results have been bad," he said. "We know we can't afford any less than 100 percent now."

Hartley gives up just one hit as 'Dogs shut out Westbrook

IRA — Jason Hartley tossed a one-hitter Friday as the Ira Bulldogs shutout Westbrook, 13-0, in the regular-season baseball finale for both teams.

Ira, which finished the regular season campaign with a 10-4 slate and a 6-0 loop mark. Hermleigh, in its first season playing baseball, a 7-9 slate, including a 4-2 run through District 4-A, good for the loop's runner-up spot in the playoffs.

Westbrook winds up at 1-6 and 1-5.

The Bulldogs will face Paducah, District 3 champion, at 7:30 p.m. Thursday at Lubbock Christian University in a bi-district matchup.

"Jason pitched as close to a perfect game as you could have," said Ira coach Lynn Cauley. "He had a career game. He was really on."

The IHS senior gave up just one hit, walked only one and struck out 10 in five innings before the game was called on the 10-run rule.

"We played a good all-around game," Cauley said. "We were aggressive at the plate, we had good pitching and we were sharp defensively."

The Bulldogs committed just one error.

"This was a good way for us to go into the playoffs," Cauley added.

Mike Hughes and Hartley were the big offensive threats against Westbrook.

Hughes had four hits, including a pair of triples and a double, and drove in four runs and Hartley was 3-for-3 with a three-sacker.

Coy Henderson had two hits in two plate appearances for the 'Dogs and Lee Haddox and Wyatt Webster each went 1-for-3.

McDowell, Sox blank Texas

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Jack McDowell found his groove and made the Texas Rangers pay.

The Chicago White Sox righthander, who took a bloated 5.25 ERA into Arlington Stadium Friday night along with six victories, took serious steps at reducing the first statistic and adding to the second with a four-hit 4-0 victory.

"He's got great stuff," White Sox manager Gene Lamont said. "I've said it 100 times. He seems to get the big outs. When he strikes a guy out, it's usually in a big situation."

McDowell (7-1) outdueled Texas Rangers' ace righthander Kevin Brown, shrinking his ERA to 4.42 and taking the major league lead in victories.

"That was the best he's thrown all year," said White Sox catcher Ron Karkovice, who backed McDowell with a two-run homer in the second. "He was winning before, but he was giving up some runs. Tonight, he stayed on top of his forkball and he had good pop on his fastball."

McDowell struck out six, walked one and allowed only one Ranger to reach third base while posting his first complete game and first shutout of the season.

"He hadn't gotten into a groove until tonight," Lamont said.

Three of McDowell's strikeouts came at the expense of Rangers' slugger Jose Canseco. McDowell, who registered his second career shutout against Texas, struck out Canseco with David Hulse on third in the sixth to survive his biggest crisis of the evening.

McDowell had little to say after the game. "I thought he pitched a tremendous game," McDowell said of Brown. "Other than that, I don't feel like talking. I'm just trying to get my bearings."

Canseco, who also struck out with two outs and runners on first and second in the third, said McDowell brought his best stuff.

"He was on tonight," Canseco said. "Everything he threw was moving. He had a great forkball. You have to give him credit. He pitched a great game."

Brown gave up three runs in the first two innings then settled down to throw a complete-game four-hitter.

Nation's factories resumed moderate growth in output

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's factories boosted output modestly in April, which analysts said was evidence that a winter storm had only temporarily interrupted growth in the manufacturing economy.

Despite a meager 0.1 percent advance in overall industrial production, the Federal Reserve said Friday that factory output increased 0.4 percent after edging up just 0.1 percent in March when a blizzard socked in much of the East Coast.

"We'll see more of this kind of modest gains (in factory output) in the next few months," predicted economist Bruce Steinberg of Merrill Lynch & Co. "We'll see gains, but not robust gains."

Ironically, the weather continued to curb industrial production in April when, the Fed said, "a return to more normal temperatures led to a sharp drop in utilities." Utility output fell 3.6 percent.

Industrial output was flat in March, when the storm closed factories and delayed deliveries of parts and materials. Until then, production had risen for five straight months

But the earlier production increases combined with the weather to boost inventories by 0.8 percent in March, which is likely to help crimp production levels in the months to come.

Analysts say a big jump in inventories could mean a decrease in production as businesses restrain their orders until demand picks up and reduces their stocks.

"Those inventories need to be worked down," said Paul Getman, an economist with Regional Financial Associates in West Chester, Pa. "It doesn't bode well for short-term increases in manufacturing production."

But the report did suggest that inflation may not advance so fast as some economists fear. It said U.S. industry operated at an 81.4 percent of its capacity in April for the second straight month.

Analysts contend that when capacity utilization is below 85 percent, businesses have plenty of room to expand output without applying upward pressure on prices.

Some analysts had expressed concern that inflation might be accelerating after the government reported earlier this week that both wholesale and consumer prices had shot up in April.

But President Clinton told a news conference Friday to look at long-term trends, not one month's figures, and cited the capacity utilization figure among reasons he does not think inflation has accelerated.

The Fed report said a 0.4 percent increase in the output of durable goods paced the 0.4 percent gain in factory production.

RECIPIENT — Becca Wilson was named the third grade "Student of the Month" at Hermleigh for April. She also received third place in ready writing at the UIL elementary meet at Jayton. (SDN Staff Photo)

First heart transplant was 25 years ago

HOUSTON (AP) — Penny Eastham is one of the thousands of Americans over the past 25 years given "the ultimate gift" — a second chance at life through heart transplantation.

"You really have a different appreciation for life. The sun is brighter, the flowers prettier, children more important — your family more important. You don't take things for granted," Mrs. Eastham, 47, who received a new heart eight years ago, said Friday.

She was a guest at one of a weekend full of activities celebrating the 25th anniversary of the first successful heart transplantation in the United States.

Dr. Denton Cooley performed that operation on May 3, 1968, a few months after Dr. Christiaan Barnard achieved the first-ever such surgery in Cape Town, South Africa.

The two doctors — longtime friends — held a relaxed news conference Friday at St. Luke's Episcopal Hospital in Houston, during which they joked and reminisced about the landmark operations.

Barnard downplayed the scientific significance of the first heart transplant.

"You'll be surprised to know that the one thing that amazed us after the first transplant was the tremendous interest in this procedure and the tremendous amount of publicity that followed this procedure, because we never considered the transplant as a great scientific event. In fact, I still don't consider it a great scientific event. It was a technical event," he said.

Louis Washkansky lived 18 days after receiving the first transplanted heart from an accident victim on Dec. 2, 1967. Everett Thomas, the first American patient at St. Luke's, died within a year.

But the lifespans lengthened, and Barnard said his seventh patient still is alive, 23 years after his transplant.

"One has a lot of luck in this game. I think this patient who's alive 23 years after surgery is just pure luck that we managed to get a donor that was very compatible," Barnard said. "We were lucky more than once."

Frequent recipient rejection of the new heart caused the surgery to decline in popularity after 1972. However, the procedure rebounded in the early 1980s with new organ preservation techniques and immuno-suppressive drugs, particularly the anti-rejection drug cyclosporine, Cooley said.

More than 2,000 heart transplants were performed in the United States last year alone. The one-year survival rate now is about 80 percent.

Barnard is retired from active surgical practice and is professor emeritus of the University of Capetown. Cooley is surgeon-in-chief at Texas Heart Institute, chief of cardiovascular surgery at St. Luke's and a professor at The University of Texas Medical School in Houston.

Cooley said one of the main breakthroughs that has fostered the growth of transplantation is the concept of brain death, that life ends not when all organs stop working but when the brain quits functioning.

"Of course, transplanting the heart isn't like transplanting a kidney or a liver or a lung. People have these concepts of the heart as the seat of the soul, and we wondered how one could take a heart from an individual with the heart still beating and then use it for the benefit of a recipient," Cooley said.

The two agreed that making organ donation automatic in trauma cases could help combat the organ shortage. More than 2,800 patients in the United States are on the waiting list for heart transplants, Cooley said.

Cooley and Barnard also said advances in mechanical hearts notwithstanding, they believe human heart transplantation will remain the ideal because it offers patients a superior quality of life.

Mrs. Eastham, a speech pathologist, said she is proof of that.

She received her new heart in 1985 at the end of the 18 months she was told she could live following failure of her original heart's muscle. She now enjoys skiing, swimming, snowmobiling, and life in general with her husband, two teen-age children and four dogs and cats.

"I am normal. I have a completely normal quality of life. I do anything I want to do," Mrs. Eastham said.

"I would encourage people to be donors. It is the ultimate gift."

Juveniles indicted on adult charges

DAYTON, Ohio (AP) — Two 17-year-olds were indicted Friday in a shooting rampage that left six people dead.

Demarcus Maurice Smith and Laura Jeanne Taylor were initially charged as juveniles, but they were transferred to adult court after a judge decided they couldn't be rehabilitated within the juvenile justice system.

Had they been convicted as juveniles, they couldn't have been held beyond age 21. Now, they face a maximum punishment of life in prison.

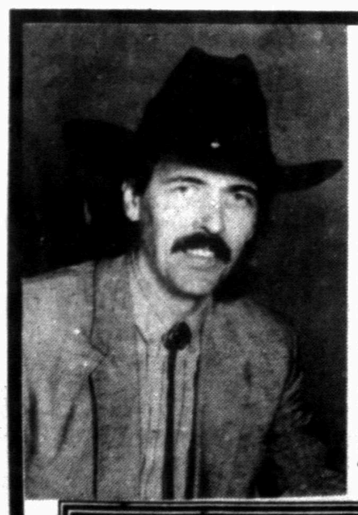

A 19-year-old man and 20-year-old woman also face charges in the three-day robbery and killing spree that put this economically ailing city on edge last December.

"I think these indictments say that despite your age, if you're going to commit adult-type crimes and heinous crimes like these two committed, that you're going to be held accountable for them," said Montgomery County Prosecutor Mathias Heck Jr.

Spike Lee will be honored next week

Lee will receive the 1993 Entertainment Media Award at a formal ceremony at the Century Plaza Hotel on May 19, which commemorates the birthday of the slain civil rights leader, according to Elissa Vecchione, a publicist.

The annual award recognizes positive portrayals of Islam in the entertainment media.

Lee's other films include "Do The Right Thing" and "Jungle Fever."

FCC needs money to enforce rollback

WASHINGTON (AP) — The only way to enforce new cable TV regulations without extra money from Congress would be to charge cable companies directly, the chairman of the Federal Communications Commission said Friday.

The fees would amount to 2.5 cents a month per subscriber, said Chairman James Quello.

This would not push cable rates higher, because the money would be spent to ensure that cable companies lower their monthly charges to subscribers by a much larger amount, estimated at $2 to $3 a month, Quello said.

The cable industry, which already pays a total $916 million in franchise fees to local communities, is not enthusiastic about any new charges, no matter how small.

"A continuing theme in the cable re-regulation process seems to be to add to our costs while restricting our revenues," said National Cable Television Association spokeswoman Peggy Laramie. "We understand the pressures the FCC is under, but at some point this will no longer compute."

The idea was suggested by the Office of Management and Budget.

"It may become necessary," Quello said, because of the budget deficit. "Naturally, we would prefer congressional appropriation of funds."

The FCC has asked Congress for $12 million more this year and $16 million in 1994 to hire the attorneys and accountants to enforce the law.

The House Appropriations Committee rejected the request Thursday when it passed a fiscal 1993 supplemental funding bill. The money could be added when the bill reaches the House floor or the Senate.

FCC paperwork will swell because the new law:

—Requires every cable franchising authority to document to the commission that the local cable company is a monopoly that can be regulated.

—Allows any cable company that believes required rate changes cut too deeply into income to complain to the FCC.

—Enables subscribers who believe charges for nonbasic channels are too high to file complaints with the FCC.

There are more than 10,000 cable operations and 57 million cable subscribers.

The World Health Organization was founded in 1948.

Bosnian Serbs casting ballots

ZVORNIK, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — Loudspeakers blared national songs in the streets of this Serb-held Bosnian town Saturday as hundreds of people voted on a long-disputed peace plan.

The two-day plebiscite was being held despite opposition both from the international community and Serb-led Yugoslavia, the chief backer of Bosnian Serb war efforts which is now preaching peace.

Maps of Bosnia were on public display, inscribed, "This is ours," referring to the 70 percent of Bosnian territory captured by Serb forces in 13 months of war.

Under the peace plan, drafted by Cyrus Vance and Lord Owen, Bosnia would be divided into ten semi-autonomous provinces, with Muslims, Croats and Serbs each controlling three. The tenth, Sarajevo, would be shared by all.

Bosnian Serb hard-liners complain, however, that they would have to cede too much conquered territory under the plan and the areas under their control would not be contiguous.

"I'm gong to vote as it's proper — against Vance's plan and only for the Serbs," said Milica Miladinovic, dressed in mourning for her brother who she said was killed by Muslim-led government forces.

Zvornik, on the border with Serbia, was once predominately Muslim, but Serbs forced out all but about 20 Muslims remain, most of them children left behind in the hospital when their parents fled.

All Muslim-owned shops and cafe's were demolished. Serb-owned cafes were full Saturday.

Yugoslav legislators on Friday endorsed the U.N.-backed peace initiative, a symbolic move meant to show the way for Bosnian Serbs. But a Bosnian Serb delegation observing the proceedings denounced the move as illegitimate.

Bosnian Serb leader Radovan Karadzic signed the peace plan May 2, but made his acceptance conditional on endorsement by the self-proclaimed Bosnian Serb parliament.

May 16, 1993

In the year ahead, exciting new developments in your social life could be in the offing. It's very good to make lots of new friends, but don't ignore your old pals.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Even tasks that are normally easy for you shouldn't be taken for granted today. Mistakes are likely if you treat routine matters indifferently. Taurus, treat yourself to a birthday gift. Send for Taurus' Astro-Graph predictions for the year ahead by mailing $1.25 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 4465, New York, NY 10163. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) It might be difficult for you to keep your priorities in order today. The time you allot to frivolous activities could be drawn from time that should be allocated for duties.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Significant objectives are achievable today, provided you're not looking for a free ride. Lady Luck won't fill in the empty spaces that your motivation misses.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) If you want to give your friends a poor impression today, all you have to do is toot your own horn. Boasting about your accomplishments won't be well-received.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Be very careful in joint ventures today, or else you could be the guy or gal who makes the biggest contribution and ends up with the smallest share.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) In order to appease another today, you might make a commitment to do something you'll feel you can wiggle out of later. However, this might not be the case.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Your judgment regarding a situation you feel will work out OK could be erroneous today. If you want it to work, you'll have to fix it.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Try to practice moderation in all of your involvements today. Your tendencies to overindulge could be rather strong, so you might need some self-discipline to keep them in check.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Don't let it be said of you today that you're only capable of performing well up to a fixed point. Give finishing a project as much energy as starting it.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Today you might be so concerned with the big picture that you'll fail to see all of the component details. Don't overlook the small parts.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Be both prudent and deliberate in your financial dealings today. Impulsive actions could suddenly move you from the profit to the loss column.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Your judgment could be biased today. You'll be doing yourself a disservice if you fail to listen to the opinions of companions. Keep an open mind.

A noticeable improvement in your financial position is indicated for the year ahead. However, the gains you make are likely to come about in ways that you would least suspect.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Treat serious developments soberly today, but don't let them overwhelm you. Events will be manageable, provided you don't make mountains out of molehills. Major changes are ahead for Taurus in the coming year. Send for Taurus' Astro-Graph predictions today. Mail $1.25 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 4465, New York, NY 10163. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Conditions might be similar today to those that caused you a problem previously. If you think your moves through carefully, it is doubtful that you will make the same mistakes.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) If you're involved in an activity with friends today where expenses are shared, don't make a big deal about paying a small amount of the bill. It isn't worth it.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Should you feel a need to go to others for advice today, don't pick a negative counselor. You need encouragement, not discouragement, if you hope to succeed.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) If you have a poor attitude toward your work today, it will make things much harder than they actually are. This could also have a deleterious effect on co-workers.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Avoid taking financial risks today on situations that others control. Your luck may be a bit fragile even in endeavors that you personally direct.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Disagreements with your mate should be resolved as promptly as possible today, or else the bitterness might linger and fester. Don't spoil what could be a good day.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Even though your assessment of others' faults might be legitimate today, it's best that you keep your criticism to yourself. Your comments won't serve a constructive purpose.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You're adept at sorting things out for others today, but you may not be competent in your personal affairs, owing to inclinations to treat small but significant details indifferently.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) If you anticipate a poor performance from people with whom you'll be involved today, they're likely to play out the roles you scripted for them. Your projections will influence the show.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) There's a possibility that you might suffer some form of inconvenience today when someone holds you to a promise you made in a weak moment. Fulfill this promise for the sake of your reputation.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) When dealing with friends today, don't give material matters priority over relationships. Make an effort to be generous to those who treat you generously.

Money laundering reported in Poland

MIKOLAJKI, Poland (AP) — This is a country where checks are unknown, credit cards a rarity and a briefcase full of cash seems a normal business tool: the perfect place to launder ill-gotten money.

Law officers and bankers agree that Poland is on its way to becoming a major money launderer for international gangsters and domestic swindlers.

"If I had a large amount of cash from drugs ... Poland would look very attractive to me," said Swiss criminologist Gunther Arzt.

He spoke at a recent conference on the problem that brought European experts to this lakeside resort.

Money laundering involves transfering earnings from criminal activity to legal endeavors to conceal the source. The name stems from Chicago gangster Al Capone's operations. He legitimized money made from illegal alcohol sales by overstating the profits of his legally operating laundries.

The scale of money laundering in Poland is hard to estimate, but Professor Emil Plywaczewski, author of the only Polish book on the subject, estimated that up to tens of billions of dollars may be involved annually.

Aiding launderers is the fact that Poland is in the midst of an economic and administrative transformation, its outmoded financial system is trying to emulate Western standards, cooperation among its banks is slack, bank workers are inexperienced, and the law enforcement apparatus is inefficient.

In a first effort to curb money laundering, the National Bank last year obliged banks to register the identity of all customers depositing more than $12,500.

Arzt speculated the foreign cash comes mainly from Turkish drugs taken to the West but may also come from Colombian drug cartels.

Woman convicted

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — A jury decided on voluntary manslaughter instead of murder for a woman who said she shot her husband in his sleep to end a 14-year cycle of domestic abuse.

Evangelina Saenz, 46, was convicted Thursday in the December 1990 shooting death of Delfino Cantu Morales.

Jurors also found that Saenz used a deadly weapon, meaning she must serve two years before becoming eligible for parole.

Facts speak best on chelation therapy

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I've undergone chelation therapy to treat hardening of the arteries. So far, I've had 10 treatments at $200 a piece. I think I feel much better already. My therapist says that you have unfairly criticized chelation and that traditional doctors do not accept this marvelous new treatment. What's the story? Why can't M.D.s get their act together?

DEAR READER: Chelation involves the administration of a compound, usually ethylenediamine tetra acetic acid (EDTA), to absorb and detoxify a substance in the body. Chelation is the treatment of choice for heavy metal poisoning. Specifically, the process is life-saving in cases of toxicity caused by arsenic, bismuth, cadmium, chromium, cobalt, copper, gold, iron, lead, manganese, mercury, nickel, radium, selenium, tungsten, uranium and zinc. Chelating agents are given by pill or injection.

In most instances, the agent binds to the metal and transports it to the kidneys, where both substances are excreted. Thus, chelation drugs should not be used in the presence of kidney disease. In addition, they can cause renal damage, fever, diarrhea, rash, fluid retention, low white blood cell counts, anemia and liver toxicity.

Despite the potential dangers of chelating agents, their benefits have been well-documented in many medical studies. Thus, the treatment is ethical when used specifically for heavy metal poisoning.

Unfortunately, in this field — as in others, such as some forms of cancer treatment — crooks move in when there's a buck to be made. This principle holds true in many professions, but it is especially worrisome when it affects patients' health and deprives them of the chance to obtain less expensive, more effective treatment.

In some parts of the country, unscrupulous promoters are using chelation inappropriately at a cost to patients of thousands of dollars. These flim-flam artists claim that chelation therapy can cure or retard arteriosclerosis, heart attack, diabetes, cancer, stroke, kidney disease, cirrhosis, multiple sclerosis, Parkinson's disease, emphysema, arthritis, psoriasis and senility. These scientific fact, have never been proved in valid medical [illegible] the manufacturers of chelating agents do not recommend these products for the treatment of these diseases.

This topic was extensively reviewed in the Harvard Medical School Health Letter in July 1984 and in the Mayo Clinic Health Letter in April 1986, as well as in several medical publications.

For those readers interested in obtaining objective information about the many manifestations of quackery, I unequivocally recommend the following inexpensive and up-to-date resources (which I have used to support my case against inappropriate chelation).

— "The Reader's Guide to Alternative Health Methods" by John Zwicky et al, published in 1993 by the American Medical Association. This 348-page soft cover reference book, contains analyses of alternative health treatments, from acupuncture to "New Age" practices. The order number is OP-313792. To order, call the AMA Order Department at 1-800-621-8335. This is a definitive publication, especially designed for the patient.

— "Popular Nutritional Practices: Sense and Nonsense" by Jack Yetiv, published in 1987 by Dell Publishing Co. This 392-page paperback is a fully referenced guide to nutrition and vitamins. A must for any person who is interested in this subject, the book can be ordered through Dell Reader's Service, P.O. Box 5057, Des Plaines, IL 60017.

— "The Nutrition Forum" edited by Stephen Barrett, M.D. is a periodic health letter that focuses on analysis of nutrition fads and controversies. It provides invaluable, updated information every two months. The subscription price is $35 a year. The newsletter, as well as several anti-quackery publications, can be ordered through LVCAHF, P.O. Box 1747, Allentown, PA 18105. This resource is extremely informative.

DEAR DR. GOTT: My husband was hospitalized for six days recently with congestive heart failure. His cardiologist wasn't sure what was wrong and when I asked for a second opinion, he indicated this would simply cause too much confusion. Should we stay with him or find another [illegible] ly?

DEAR READER: Don't do anything immediately. First give your husband's cardiologist another chance.

Congestive heart failure is extreme shortness of breath caused by an accumulation of fluid in the lungs due to an inefficient heart action. Thus, CHF is a symptom for which a cause must be identified: Why is the heart action inefficient?

In many cases, the cause is surprisingly inconsequential: a fever, a little over-exertion, or a bit too much salt in the diet. In other cases, however, the cause is ominous, such as a heart attack. Because some heart attacks can be "silent" (no chest pain), the prudent doctor should always investigate the source of the heart failure at the same time that he treats it.

Perhaps your husband's cardiologist did not, in fact, dig deeply enough into your husband's heart condition. This is not consistent with standard procedure. More likely, he was simply too busy to take the time to explain the situation to you.

I do not for a moment believe that an explanation would "cause too much confusion." Quite the reverse; a terse explanation would relieve confusion. Therefore, I urge you to return to the cardiologist and insist that he explain the reason for your husband's heart failure.

If he continues to duck the issue or if he failed to test your husband thoroughly for a heart attack, with cardiograms and blood tests, change doctors. Both you and your husband will fare better with a doctor who is willing to keep you abreast of your health problems.

To give you more information, I am sending you a free copy of my new Health Report "Heart Disease." Other readers who would like a copy should send $1.25 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 2433, New York, NY 10163. Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I have an enlarged salivary gland and wonder if this is cause for concern. Should I see my own general practitioner or a specialist?

DEAR READER: See your family doctor. Although enlargement of a salivary gland could be caused by a tumor (which would require surgery), a simple infection or a blocked salivary duct may be your problem. These conditions can be diagnosed and treated by a general practitioner, who can call on specialists if the need arises.

Five children killed as car goes out of control in Ohio

FREDERICKSBURG, Ohio (AP) — Hundreds of Amish from as far away as Illinois arrived here Friday to console relatives of five [illegible] and killed by a car while they walked home from a birthday party.

Several hundred Amish had traveled by car to this community in the heart of Ohio's Amish country by late afternoon. Up to 1,500 were expected.

It wasn't clear if the Amish were driving themselves under these special circumstances or being driven by non-Amish.

None of the people outside the homes of the victims was willing to speak to reporters. Sheriff's deputies asked reporters to avoid intruding.

Residents of this community, about 60 miles south of Cleveland, said everyone wanted to help the victims' families.

"You can't imagine how many people are offering to help with food and things like that," said Martha Miller, an Amish woman who lives nearby. "And not just the Amish."

"We're a very close-knit community," said Vernon Weaver, 46, a non-Amish man watching the arriving Amish from his front porch. "We don't let different traditions stand in the way."

Witnesses said the car was trying to pass a truck on a hill when the driver lost control Thursday. [illegible] rolled down an embankment, over a creek. It hit an embankment nose-first and came to rest on its top. One of the victims was pinned underneath.

When emergency workers arrived, they found neighbors and relatives trying to comfort the stunned survivors.

"There was crying and hysteria," Fire Chief Terry Speelman said. "There were bodies and victims strewn over the area."

Police identified the dead, all from Fredericksburg, as Neva Kurtz, 14; Ruby Troyer, 14; and three siblings — 11-year-old Wilma Weaver; Freda Weaver, who would have been 9 on Friday; and 2-year-old Ivan Weaver. The Weavers are not related to Vernon Weaver.

Three other children were in serious condition at Children's Hospital Medical Center in Akron. Two others were treated for minor injuries and not hospitalized.

The children had been walking home from a birthday party for Freda and for Elsie Kurtz, one of the seriously injured, who turned 7 Wednesday.

Ms. Miller said the older children had been sent to walk the little [illegible]

"Neva was a very motherly [illegible] know she was taking care of them," Ms. Miller said.

David Swartzentruber, at whose home the party was held, appeared dazed and sad Friday as he talked with a reporter outside his home.

"When I heard I just couldn't believe it," he said. "I still can't."

The driver of the car, 18-year-old Eric Bache, told police the brakes on his car failed as he tried to pass the truck. Police said Friday they tested the brakes and they worked.

Bache was arraigned Friday on five felony counts of aggravated vehicular homicide and misdemeanor charges of having no driver's license, failure to control a motor vehicle and driving left of center. He entered no plea.

The felony charges are punishable by up to 10 years in prison on each count. Wooster Municipal Judge D. William Evans set bond at $25,000.

State Highway Patrol troopers said their investigation was continuing.

Man too close to children

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Parents of students at Hubbard Heights Elementary said they always thought a former volunteer charged with sexually molesting five children was always too close to the youngsters.

Lou Ann Homer, a member of the school's PTA board, said Lawrence "Chris" Shirley would never socialize with adults.

Shirley, 32, worked as a freelance photographer and had been a volunteer at Hubbard for four years. He faces three counts of aggravated sexual assault of a child, one charge of sexual performance by a child and two counts of indecency with a child.

Police and court documents allege that the offenses occurred with five children on camping trips or overnight stays at Shirley's home and when he was babysitting.

When police executed a search warrant at Shirley's home last month, several boxes of photos and 72 videotapes were confiscated.

Scurry County Folks

By Shirley A. Gorman

Four elementary teachers and the high school librarian are among Snyder Independent School District personnel who are retiring at the end of the 1992-93 school year.

Retiring teachers who have a combined total of 113 years of service in Scurry County classrooms are Bobbie Taylor, fifth grade at Northeast Elementary; Gayle Wittie, first grade at Northeast; Jeanelle Hammack, fourth grade at East Elementary; and Mary Jimm Floyd, third grade at Central.

Also retiring is Billie Harding, high school librarian since 1984. She also served as the librarian at Northeast from 1980-1984; taught high school English from 1970-1980; and junior high English for the 1969-1970 school year.

BOBBIE TAYLOR

A native of Robert Lee, Bobbie has the distinction of having the longest tenure of current SISD employees.

Her teaching career in Scurry County began in 1951 in Hermleigh where she taught in the high school. Two years later she accepted her first Snyder teaching assignment — sixth grade at East Elementary.

"I will never forget that first job," Bobbie said. "I was hired by Superintendent Red Yarbrough who sent me to East where I met Principal Frank Weaver for the first time. He was waiting for me when I arrived.

"I can imagine what he must have been thinking when he saw me. I was 22 years old, weighed 98 pounds and he gave me 37 sixth graders that first year," she laughed. "In later years, I often kidded him about that."

After five years, Bobbie took a leave of absence so she could stay home with her daughter, Cheryl Lemmons, who now lives in Abilene with her husband, Thom.

After two years, she returned to East where she taught fourth grade for one year. When her son, Brent, was born, she decided to stay home for another two years. Brent now lives in Littlefield with his wife, DeShonna.

She was later assigned to Stanfield where she taught the fifth grade. After all the teachers were shuffled to other schools, Bobbie went to Central and taught fifth grade for the next four years. She later returned to Stanfield where she taught fifth grade for another nine years.

After the school district was reorganized in 1992, Bobbie was assigned to Northeast. She taught a total of 25 years at Stanfield.

Bobbie has taught under several principals besides Weaver: Pat Falls, Joel Griffin, Herman Trigg, Wayne Kennedy, Bob Travis and Lee Presswood.

"All the principals I worked under were very supporting," she said. "But I will never forget the support I received from Mr. Weaver when I was a new teacher."

Bobbie said her 38 years as a teacher has been based on one major premise, "wanting to make a difference in the lives of the children I have touched every year."

"I have always tried to be the kind of teacher I wanted my children to have," she said. "I would like to be remembered as a teacher who taught 38 successful years, meeting the needs of every student to the best of my ability."

Bobbie also said, "I never taught a grade I did not like. I have always enjoyed the challenge of taking a group of boys and girls and helping them to succeed. I have always felt that I had someone higher above to answer for how I worked with the children each year."

Throughout her years in the classroom, Bobbie said, "I have always changed my teaching methods to meet the needs of the students."

While teaching methods have changed over the years, Bobbie said the students have remained basically the same.

In 38 years, Bobbie has experienced many changes in the Snyder school system. "We didn't have a gym when I started at East. Before one was added, we had to go outside with our students and when the weather was bad we had to keep them inside the classroom."

Other additions in later years included elementary libraries, resource rooms and computer labs.

Fond memories include one sixth grade boy who didn't like something she had done and complained to the principal. After the principal paddled him and sent him back to class, the boy decided he didn't want to do that again.

Another time, two high school girls whom she taught when they were fifth graders sent her flowers on her birthday.

In 1992, Bobbie said she received one of the greatest honors of her teaching career when she was selected by an honor student as making a difference in her life and being listed as a distinguished educator in "Who's Who Among America's Teachers."

Though she wasn't born in Scurry County, she has lived here since she was five, attending school in both Snyder and Fluvanna. She attended Cisco Junior College for two years before graduating from Abilene Christian University with a bachelor of science degree in education and secretarial training.

She has also completed graduate work at Texas Tech, Sul Ross University, ACU and Hardin-Simmons University.

Bobbie's first career choice had been nursing. Later she switched to business, adding education courses so that she would be qualified to teach. By the time she graduated, she was certified to teach all levels from elementary to secondary.

After teaching business two years at Hermleigh High School, Bobbie joined the Snyder school system, choosing to remain at the elementary level because "I decided I liked it better."

When asked what advice she would give a first-year teacher, Bobbie offered these words: "Take each child where they are and love them and nurture them and meet their needs to the very best of your ability and theirs."

Making the decision to retire has been difficult for the longtime teacher who admits that "I will really miss the students."

"I think the time has come for me to close this chapter of my life

Homemakers get instruction for cross-stitching

Members attending the Patchwork Squares Extension Homemaking Club on May 10 learned the techniques for cross-stitching from Dana Barnes of Hermleigh.

Following the craft session in the home of Dana Barnes, the group planned a garage sale set for June 3-4 from 8 a.m. to 3 p.m., with place to be announced. Also, discussion was held on a Past, Present and Future bazaar set for Oct. 30.

Attending were Jeanie Carden, Cleo Clare, Freida Dever, Tootsie Jennings, Dycie Kemp, Katrina Wemken, Terri Williams and Barnes. They answered roll call with "something I started and never finished."

Reception planned

Odyne and C.D. (Pat) Jones of Fluvanna will be honored at a reception from 3 to 5 p.m. on May 23 at the Fluvanna Community Center celebrating their 70th wedding anniversary.

Mrs. Jones was born in Jonesboro on Dec. 7, 1903, and Jones was born on March 29, 1900, in Scurry County. They both attended Snyder schools and were married on May 20, 1923, in Scurry County. They now live in Borden County where they have been involved in ranching. Mr. and Mrs. Jones are members of Snyder's First Presbyterian Church.

Their grandson, James Aaron Jones III; their nephew and his wife, Don and Nelva Jones; another nephew and his wife, James E. and Lynda Beaver, will host the occasion along with other family members and friends.

Travel tips at RTA

Scurry County Retired Teachers Association met recently at the Senior Citizens Center with Bob Bell as guest speaker.

After a "Dutch treat" luncheon, first vice president Charles Anderson presided over the business session. He announced a workshop for retired teachers was set for May 27 in Abilene.

Members of the nominating committee, Phyllis McGinnis, June McGlaun and Jack Gorman, presented the slate of officers for 1993-94. Elected by acclamation were Charles Anderson, president; Geraldine Parker, first vice president; Francene Allen-Noah, second vice president; and Frank Miller, secretary/treasurer.

Georgene Galloway, member of the program committee, introduced Bell, travel consultant since 1986. He advised the most popular place to visit at the present time is Las Vegas, Nev., by Southwest Airlines. Walt Disney World and Epcot Center in Orlando, Fla., are other popular places.

Out of a dozen options, the Carnival Cruise Line's "Fun Ship" is popular, he said. The ships have 24-hour entertainment and the cost per day is approximately $200 per person and six or seven days on a ship will cost $1,200 and up.

Branson, Mo., with 33 theaters showing two shows daily, is another popular tourist site, along with Nashville, Tenn.

In October, he noted, many people go on tours to see the fall foliage. Air fare to New York from around Snyder is approximately $490. Many like to travel by train, he concluded.

Others attending were Joan Bell, Carolyn and Horrace Bostick, Dorothy and Don Duncan, Peggy and Wayne Eubank, Nettie Faye Gardner, Durelle Gorman, Viola Gracey, Dycie Ward Kemp, ElWanda Nall, Stanley Noah, Ruth Powell, Sallie Tate and Elizabeth Wilson.

Entertainer urges healthy diet habits

NEW YORK (AP) — TV host Regis Philbin, who underwent a procedure to clear a blocked heart artery in January, returned to the hospital for tests after complaining of "heaviness" in his chest.

Philbin, 59, felt the pressure while taping "Live With Regis and Kathie Lee" on Wednesday, according to a statement from his publicist.

"It's just a little heaviness, not anything like the last time, but enough to make me call my doctor," Philbin said.

Philbin has talked on the show about the earlier procedure and urged people to follow healthy diets.

Dermott Schoolhouse luncheon

Beta Sigma Phi sorority was hostess at a recent Mother's Day luncheon where they honored mothers, daughters and friends.

Brenda welcomed the guests and introduced Sue Sewell who sang "M-O-T-H-E-R," accompanied by Betty Watts at the piano. Carolyn House led in a prayer before the salad luncheon.

Tables, set with old fashioned dinnerware, were covered with blue and cream cloths and decorated with dried rose buds. Centerpieces were bouquets of wildflowers in depression glass containers.

Carolyn Limmer's program was entitled "The Stages of Motherhood."

Guests attending were Carrie Roark of Lubbock, Irene Bennett, Sandy Pollard, Claire Pollard, Veda Minor, Sandy Crawford, Tonya Warren, Janette Allen, Jeanne Cumbie, Debra Ward, Kathy Watts, Annette Waller, Jennifer Harden, Wanda Foster, Meriah Worthen, Lilith McArthur, Lea Ann Bell, Scotti Boone, Nickki McKenney, Charli Boone, Lola Pohl of Matador and Cari Limmer of Colorado City.

Hostesses for the event were Barbara Bills, Jeanne Johnson Dena Ellis, Limmer, Hedges and House.

Following the luncheon, members and their guests toured the Dodson House.

GOLDEN ANNIVERSARY — Don and Katherine Wemken of Hermleigh, and Odessa, were honored on their 50th wedding anniversary with a dinner at Zetner's Daughter in Abilene by their children and their spouses, Marilyn and Gilbert Briggs of Lake Jackson and Tommy and Paula Wemken of Odessa. The couple was married on April 15, 1943 in Snyder. They have eight grandchildren and six great-grandchildren. Wemken is retired from the city of Odessa and Mrs. Wemken is a retired beautician. Snyder exes reminisce at recent reunion

Mayme Lee Crowder was hostess for her Snyder High School graduation class reunion on April 30-May 2. Class members and guests met at The Shack for dinner where Mrs. Crowder presented Charles J. Lewis of San Diego, Calif., an award for traveling the farthest.

Otha Lee Clark, president of the senior class of 1936, was master of ceremonies. Earl Randolph of Gage, Okla., gave the invocation.

Geneva Randolph, retired teacher, spoke on educational problems and school difficulties then and now. She offered an excellent example of the class motto "Quiters never win, and winners never quit." Her school district chose not to consolidate when no advantages were evident and confronted the state legislature until they achieved local control of their schools. In conclusion, she urged everyone to vote in each election concerning education to assure grandchildren quality education.

Mrs. Crowder noted that her husband, Elmo, wrote an English theme, an assigned topic, "What Our School Needs Most." At the time, football was played on hard, rocky ground at various locations. Shortly afterwards, the school board approved the building of a stadium with a grass field.

Eva Nelson, Red Hill and Effie McCloud remain the most remembered teachers, results from a game, "Do You Remember?"

The exes honored their hostess, Crowder, with a commemorative plate containing Snyder scenes.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles J. Lewis Jr. showed slides of their tour of England and Scotland last year, highlighting the largest flower show in the world at Chelsea, England.

The group toured Western Texas College and museum on Saturday.

and open a new one," she added.

Part of the new chapter will include spending more time with four grandchildren (Heather, Jessica, Austin and Joshua), church work at 37th Street Church of Christ, sewing, and traveling. In past years, she had visited Europe three times.

She is also a member of the National Education Association, the Texas Classroom Teachers Association and a life member of the Texas State Teachers Association. She has also served as an officer in TSTA.

MARY JIMM FLOYD

Mary Jimm Floyd, a native of Snyder, has taught 26 years in Snyder. Her present assignment is the third grade at Central, but she has also taught second grade at Central.

Prior to that, she taught first and second grades at West. Before moving to Snyder in 1960, Mary Jimm had taught first and second grades in Houston.

The veteran teacher still vividly remembers her first day in class. She had finished final exams at Texas Tech University on Wednesday. The next day she was taken to Houston by her husband's parents. The next morning — Friday — she was told at a faculty meeting that she would have a class of 39 beginning first graders on Monday.

While her husband Dean was in pharmacy school, Mary Jimm said she got through that first teaching job with the "help of other teachers."

Since then, Mary Jimm said she has always tried to give her students "the skills and self-esteem to succeed in today's world.

Mary Jimm said, "Education of our children must be a joint endeavor between the student, the parents and the teacher. To make the job of learning less overwhelming, all should be actively involved. Each child is unique and deserves our love and our utmost effort. I have always strived to teach children — not books."

The longtime teacher also shared a couple of her fondest memories. One day in Houston, a jet broke the sound barrier right over the school she was in. The teachers all screamed and ran outside, while the students sat in their chairs, she laughed.

Another story concerns a youngster who was wearing his hat in the hall. She asked him to remove it. When he asked "Why," Mary Jimm said, "because gentlemen don't wear their hats inside buildings."

The youngster was quick to respond, "I'm not a gentleman, I'm just a seven-year-old boy."

Teaching methods have changed since Mary Jimm first entered the profession. The emphasis now seems to be on "present and test" rather than on teaching. Teachers are also now required to do more paperwork.

Mary Jimm said that early in her career, "Children were emphasized more." Reflecting on how students have changed, she noted that they have made "big strides in writing compositions." She currently teaches three composition classes and credits her students with doing some fine work.

She will miss the students as well as her colleagues when she joins her husband in retirement.

When asked what advice she would give to first-year teachers, Mary Jimm said, "Ask for help from veteran teachers."

She noted that Snyder has always been fortunate to have new teachers as well as veterans on staff.

Mary Jimm's desire to become a teacher started in elementary school. Snyder educators having the most influence on her career include J. M. Kayser, Franklin Pruitt, Ollie Peek, Jane Gilmore Rushing, Melvin Montgomery, Bice Harrell, Pat Falls, Ethel Lynn Mitchell and Madge Popnoe, her fifth grade teacher.

Since graduating from Tech, she has taken graduate courses at Abilene Christian University and Sul Ross. She also took undergraduate courses at the University of Colorado.

The Floyds have two married sons and six grandchildren. Alan and Deana and their sons, Clayton and Will, live in Snyder. Brad and Sylvia and their children, Raymond, Robert, Stacey and Brandon, all live in the Houston area.

JEANELLE HAMMACK

Some 34 years ago, Jeanelle was a new teacher on her first assignment — fourth grade at East. Since then, she has taught 33 years in Snyder, and one year as a substitute teacher.

With some time off to spend with newborn children, she has also taught first, second and fifth grades at East, for a total of 13 years, as well as fifth grade at Central for five years and fourth grade at Stanfield for 15 years.

Though she did not start her teaching career in Snyder until 1959, Jeanelle has been in school ever since the age of five.

Jeanelle's desire to teach in Snyder surfaced before she ever graduated from college. She and her parents were en route to Colorado in the mid 1950s and had stopped in Snyder to spend the night.

"I told my dad I thought I might like to come back to Snyder to teach," Jeanelle said.

He liked the idea too, so they all drove around "looking the town over." After graduating from Baylor, she applied at Snyder and two other towns. They all accepted her, but Jeanelle chose to come to Snyder. It's a decision she said she has never regretted.

Jeanelle is very fond of Snyder not only because she has appreciated the opportunity to teach here, but also because she met her husband, Bob Hammack, who was an area supervisor for Chevron before he retired.

She said she has also been fortunate to have taught "a multitude of wonderful students whose parents were pretty great too."

"My philosophy has always been to prepare students to live in the real world and to make it a better place in which to live."

Reflecting on her career, Jeanelle said, "It's becoming increasingly difficult to make school important in light of other things which are now going on."

"When parents consider education important, it's always easier to teach their children," she added.

Even though she described herself as a "stern disciplinarian," Jeanelle said she has "always put my students first. My greatest reward is to see them succeed in school and in life and I hope that I have made a difference in their lives," she said.

Her goal has always been to encourage her students to be "the best they can be."

She said she keeps up with former students as much as she can and is always very proud of their achievements.

Throughout her career, Jeanelle said she has worked with some "very fine teachers, aides and principals." One principal who had a positive influence on her life and teaching is Frank Weaver. Other principals she feels "blessed" to have worked under include Joel Griffin, Bob Travis, Wayne Kennedy, Charles Anderson and Herman Trigg.

The long-time educator considers education a privilege, but she isn't sure that everyone in America realizes how important it is to have freedom of education.

When asked what advice she would give to a new teacher Jeanelle said, "Don't get discouraged. Teaching is an important responsibility. Realize that you can make a difference in people's lives."

Jeanelle was born in Abilene as an only child, but moved to South Texas while a fourth grader. The family did not return to West Texas until her father retired.

She was influenced to pick education as a career because her mother, and aunt and several cousins have all been teachers.

While Jeanelle doesn't have any specific plans, spending more time with a grandson, Myles Addison who is 11 months old and an "absolute delight," is high on her list. She and her husband also intend to travel.

A daughter, Kay and her husband, Shane, live in Hugo, Okla., where they are part owners of a funeral home along with his parents.

A son, Mike, is a development director for a children's home near Houston. They live in Katy where his wife, Marsha, also teaches.

GAYLE WITTIE

For the past 21 years, Gayle has devoted her life to teaching, the last 16 in Snyder. Her career started in Colorado City where she taught first grade for five years.

She then went to work at Northeast where she has taught the first grade ever since. She has been in Snyder for the past 31 years.

She and her husband, Don, who is now retired from Chevron, moved to Snyder in 1962 after the company tranferred them here from Wink.

She said she will miss her students most of all because "six-year-olds love you to death."

Her basic philosophy has been "to accept a child as the child is and start from there."

She said her students today are basically the same as they were 21 years ago, but today's first graders know more because of television. "Television has changed and so have the kids."

In 21 years, she has also seen curriculum priorities and ways of teaching change. Most of the changes have been mandated by the state.

Her advice to a first-year teacher is: "Be firm and flexible."

A native of Shackleford County, Gayle has both a bachelor of science and masters in education from Angelo State University. She was working for an accountant in Snyder when she decided she could be a teacher.

Once her retirement is official, Gayle said she intends to catch up on her reading. She and her husband also want to travel and they count camping among their favorite hobbies.

The Witties have three growns sons, David who lives in Snyder and Gary and Steven who both live in Austin, and seven grandchildren.

BILLIE HARDING

Billie Harding, who lives on a farm in Vincent, has been commuting 60 miles a day to Snyder schools since 1969. She enjoys farm life, especially raising a garden, and is looking forward to spending more time there after she retires.

All in all, she has spent 35 years in education, first as a teacher and later as a librarian.

Billie has served as high school librarian since 1984. Before that she was the librarian at Northeast from 1980-84. Prior to that, she had taught English at the high school for a decade, 1970-1980. She taught junior high English from 1969-1970.

Before joining the local school system, Billie taught English two years in Big Spring, eight years in Andrews and one year in Houston.

Ironically, Billie first majored in chemistry in college, but the more she studied, she said, "the more I realized that I did not really want to become a chemist."

Since English was something she had always loved she decided to major in it at Texas Tech University. She also earned her master's at Tech.

A bachelor's degree in English did not give the longtime school employee many options so she chose to teach, a decision she has never regretted.

"I have always enjoyed my years as a teacher," she said. "I liked teaching students values, philosophies and ideas. But it was hard work. I found myself grading papers every evening."

That is what prompted Billie to change professions. She obtained her library certification through Texas Women's University.

While teaching, Billie said they were often asked to do something in a different way, but that didn't always work.

She recalled in past years when high schools throughout the state were required to reorganize according to a "quarter system" which was designed to make the high schools more like colleges.

"On paper, the idea looked very good," she said, "But in really it didn't work because too many students fell through the cracks."

During that phase, she said that some students received "excellent English backgrounds," while others did not.

One of the main changes she weathered as a librarian was the advent of the computer age which meant that all 20,000 volumes had to be entered into the system.

She said this occurred in the mid-1980s and it took her, an assistant, and students helpers a year to complete the task.

Today, she calls the computer "a marvelous change" which has simplified and made the way books are tracked more efficient. "I wouldn't go back to the old way for anything," she said.

Though Billie will miss her work, she said she is looking forward to being on the farm and spending more time with her garden as well as family which includes a brother, sister, nieces, nephews and cousins.

In addition, she also likes quilting and needlework.

There are child prodigies in most activities — but not in bridge. How old are the youngest-ever bridge internationals — male and female — do you think?

In today's deal, declarer won the diamond-queen lead with the ace, drew three rounds of trumps ending in hand and played a spade. When West produced the king, declarer won with dummy's ace, played a diamond to the king and led another spade, confirming the 4-1 break.

At first glance it looks as though South needs to find East with the club jack, but declarer showed that this isn't true. At trick eight, declarer ran dummy's club 10 and claimed. The defenders were welcome to three club tricks, but whichever defender won the last trick would be endplayed.

If West wins the third club trick, his forced minor-suit exit concedes a ruff-and-discard, whereas if East is on play and exits with a spade, it is away from the 10. Declarer's nine thus keeps the losers in the suit to zero.

It's a pretty example of an elimination and endplay. Not bad for an experienced player, let alone a girl who is only 16 years old. Yes, 16. The declarer was Abbey Walker, who lives in Scotforth, England, and has qualified for the English junior (under-20) team. I expect she is the youngest female international ever.

The youngest U.S. player in this year's World Junior (under-25) Championship will be Eric Greco, who is 17.

The youngest non-junior international ever is Patrick Huang, who was only 15 when he played for Taiwan in the 1958 Far East Championships.

Scurry County Library News and Views

Are you interested in the ostrich business? If so, the Scurry County Library has two new books that might be of interest. These books contain a compilation of information that could mean thousands of dollars to anyone involved in this new industry. It is becoming an alternative to the cattle and farming business, and these books offer insights into what works — and what doesn't. The books are "Ostrich Ranching in America," by Dub Oliver, and "Finding Success in the Ostrich Business."

BOOK FEATURE

"The Government Racket," by Maryin L. Gross.

If you knew how the government was wasting billions of your tax dollars — nearly enough to balance the budget — wouldn't you try to stop it? Now you can get all the facts in this shocking and persuasive book. For example, the department of education doesn't teach a single one of our children, and only contributes 6% of the massive cost of education.

The department of energy provides cheap energy to a mere handful of Americans. The government will "borrow" $50 billion this year from the social security fund and use the money to pay the bills of a bloated bureaucracy. These and other infuriating truths about government waste and inefficiency are discussed, and clear, possible solutions are given so we may send an urgent message to Washington: Stop Wasting Our Money!

NEW FICTION

"Where There's Smoke," by Sandra Brown.

"Endangered Species," by Rex Burns.

"Concert of Ghosts," by Campbell Armstrong.

"Queen," by Alex Haley.

Country Life

By Deanie Francis Mills

In a remote corner of our kitchen rests a cabinet, the main purpose of which is to hide the fuse box.

Through the years, that poor cabinet has been stuffed with so much flotsam and jetsam of family life that simply to open it incurs the risk of being killed in an avalanche. Recently, we did some wiring in this old house, and it was definitely time to clean out Fibber McGee's cabinet.

The first thing that caught my eye, beneath all the debris, was a neatly folded stack of baby bibs.

Baby bibs. I couldn't believe it. I pulled out the sweet little pink and blue things my friend Lana had sewed for me, and in a flash, I could see my babies, grinning up at me from their high chair, covered head to foot in chocolate cake, Dustin with his great dark fan-lashed eyes, Jessie with her big bold mischievous grin.

Of course, I couldn't throw those away.

There were all sorts of physician's medicine samples gathering dust, from back in the days when our family doctor took pity on our struggling young family and generously handed out free samples of infant antibiotics and chewable kid pills to save us money on prescription drugs.

I threw them all away, remembering those days when Dustin would fight taking medicine so hard that it would take the both of us to hold him down. Then, like as not, he'd spit it back out. In our faces.

I counted no less than four first aid poison charts, which explained why all the children's medicine was stored up high in that cabinet.

There was an old 4-H Horse Club checkbook, from back in the days when my husband ran the club. Three checks had been written mostly for trophies to be given at horse shows.

I remembered when the club threw Kent a big surprise baby shower at their regular meeting, when Jessica was about three days old. I'll never forget looking up from the bed where I was resting, to see that big craggy-faced cowboy standing in the doorway, laden with all sorts of pink and white and pastel boxes.

Then I found an old schedule from Mother's Day Out — I think it's called Children's Day Out now. Whatever, it was brand new back then and those fine ladies at the First United Methodist Church will never know what a lifesaver they were to a lonely young mother whose family all lived hundreds of miles away and who had virtually no neighbors.

I never had any help with my kids when they were little — ever; we either took them with us or we didn't go, and that one day was a sweet, sweet break in a week crammed with sticky hands, dirty diapers, spilled Kool-Aid, and too many bills. To those women, I say, Bless You.

In the end, I threw everything away except the bibs. It was like closing a book on one era of my life. We don't have children anymore; we have teens.

I don't have to worry about any of the things that plagued me then, like where it is exactly, that they feel bad when they are sick; and when's the last time blankie was washed; and are there enough Cheerios to put in the butter dishes for car-seat treats?

Now I have to worry about them driving out on the highways late at night; and whether we've given them the strength of character to say no to alcohol or drugs or premarital sex; and whether they will do well enough in school to insure some sort of choice in life as they reach adulthood.

And if I squint, I can actually see a time when they won't be here anymore.

I think it's going to be a long time before I clean out that cabinet again.

BUBBLE GUM WRAPPER COMIX

Buffalo Reef

By Bill McClellan

School is almost out for another year, but as usual, there are those pesky finals to contend with first. Therefore, we offer a test.

Don't worry. No one's looking. In fact, we're not even grading.

The object is to determine the words which are represented by initials. In the first question, a., 26 = L. of the A., the answer would be 26 Letters of the Alphabet.

It's one of those "tests" that seems difficult at first glance, but becomes easier as you work on it. So give it a few minutes.

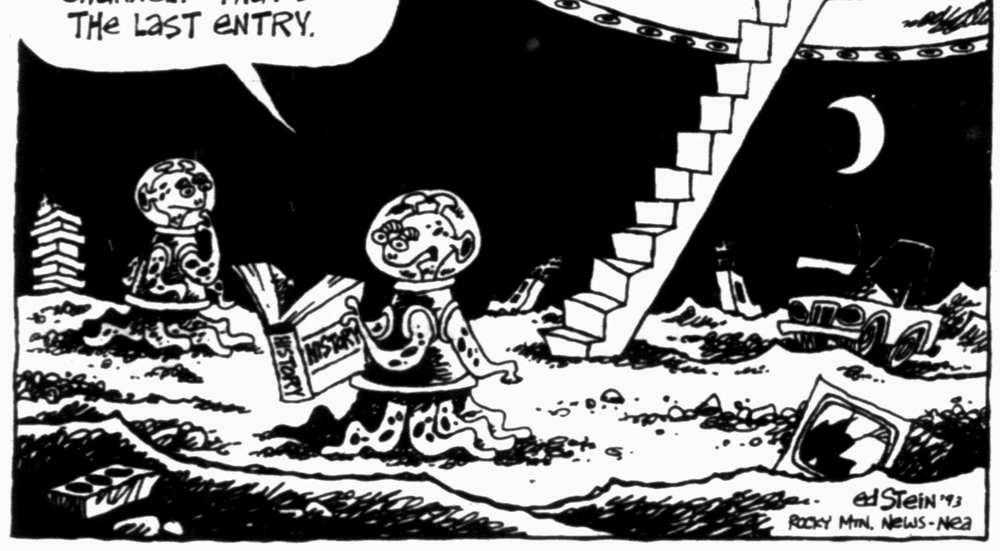

There is no score.

See. It's simple.

a. 26 = L. of the A.
b. 7 = W. of the A. W.
c. 1001 = A.N.
d. 12 = S. of the Z.
e. 54 = C. in a D. (with the J.)
f. 9 = P. in the S.S.
g. 88 = P.K.
h. 13 = S. on the A.F.
i. 32 = D.F. at which W.F.
j. 18 = H. on a G.C.
k. 90 = D. in a R.A.
l. 16 = O. in a P.
m. 3 = B.M. (S.H.T.R.)
n. 4 = Q. in a G.
o. 24 = H. in a D.
p. 57 = H.V.
q. 11 = P. on a F.T.
r. 1000 = W. that a P. is W.
s. 29 = D. in a F. in a L.Y.
t. 64 = S. on a C.
u. 40 = D. and N. of the G.F.

ANSWERS

a. Letters of the Alphabet; b. Wonders of the Ancient World; c. Arabian Nights; d. Signs of the Zodiac; 3. Cards in a Deck (with the Jokers); f. Planets in the Solar System; g. Piano Keys; h. Stars on the American Flag; i. Degrees Farenheit at which Water Freezes; j. Holes on a Golf Course; k. Degrees in a Right Angle; l. Ounces in a Pound; m. Blind Mice (See How They Run); n. Dear Editor,

Our loss is your gain! Steve Qualls will move to your community soon to continue a tradition of excellence within the girls basketball program at Snyder High School.

Steve is one of the best coaches Tahoka has ever had because he has always been so positive and encouraging to his team members, their families, his fellow teachers, and community members.

Even though we're disappointed that he's leaving Tahoka, we hope you enjoy his involvement in Snyder activities. Good luck to Coach Qualls and to the Snyder girls basketball team in future endeavors.

Dumb ideas for history's trash can

By JOSEPH SPEAR

Grunge, glabrous men, baseball blasphemy.

These are just three examples of what can happen when a tank doesn't think. I take full responsibility and I apologize.

The problem is, my small but scrappy think tank, the Spear Foundation, is mainly a one-person shop. I get some research help once in a while, but I have to do all the thinking. And for the past 10 months, I've been thinking so much about elections and the economy that I've let other things slip.

Actually, it's an autonomous unit within the foundation that has slipped — the Dumb Ideas and Grevious Bunkum Auditing Team. I promised at least two DINGBAT reports a year, and I haven't produced once since last July. In the meantime, numerous dumb ideas have gained credence and public acceptance.

The Grunge Look, for example, has gone mainstream. There has never been a shortage of young people who want to look like slobs, but now clothing designers are actually peddling grubby flannel shirts, tattered jeans and run-down work boots.

Smooth-chested men have bcome the rage in advertisements, fashion shows, even on beaches. And now, average males who sound and look perfectly normal are showing up in beauty salons to have their backs, cheeks and chests shaved, creamed or waxed.

Baseball, that most hallowed of pastimes, is being tinkered with in foreign nations. In Japan, they've come up with an "Attack Points" system, in which total bases attained on hits and steals are toted up to break ties. In Australia, they're awarding batters with walks after only three balls.

These are the sorts of asinine notions that can gain public favor when dumb idea monitors relax their vigil. But the DINGBAT investigators are back on the job and hereby finger the following dumb ideas as candidates for obliteration:

The monster cigarette tax. The Clinton administration is reportedly considering a $2-a-pack tax on cigarettes to finance its health-care reforms and discourage smoking.

The Health Police love it, but it is a stupid idea. The new tax would drive the average carton of cigarettes up to about $40. That is getting into serious money territory and is tantamount to outright prohibition. A bootleg industry would spring up overnight, as has already occurred in Canada, where cigarettes go for $60 a carton. Precisely as has happened with the idiotic war on drugs, people would be shooting each other in the streets and innocent bystanders would be dying.

Which is deadlier, tobacco or guns? Kill the monster tax.

Corporate sponsorships. Most of us can live with the Blockbuster Bowl and Michael Jordan's Nike caps, but should public property be used to promote businesses?

That's what they're doing in Atlanta to raise funds. A plan is in the works, for example, that will allow Visa to advertise as the "official preferred credit card of Atlanta." Streets, parks and city vehicles will be renamed and adorned with corporate logos.

I realize that most government entities are financially strapped, but this is a very bad idea. Where will the line be drawn? Will we soon have a Poulan/ Weed Eater White House?

Teacher receives $5.21 million in lawsuit

NEW YORK (AP) — A jury ordered the Board of Education to pay $5.21 million to a teacher who was beaten bloody in a school hallway by a student's big brother.

Larry Krakower, a 46-year-old who was permanently disabled in the 1988 attack, had claimed that the Board of Education had a duty to ensure his safety. On Thursday, a state Supreme Court jury in the Bronx agreed.

Krakower was assaulted at a school in the South Bronx by Alfie Sims, the brother of one his students. The 13-year-old girl, Anetha Sims, had come to school late and Krakower, following school policy, took away her coat to "ground" her during lunch. Instead, she left the school and walked home.

Infuriated that his sister had no coat on a cool day, Sims, 22 at the time, went to the school and signed in at the front desk. A school safety officer then escorted him — contrary to regulations — to the visitors' area instead of to the principal's office.

Sims found Krakower outside his classroom and began punching and kicking him in front of a group of students. Krakower, who still has severe headaches and cannot speak well, took disability retirement after 18 years as a teacher.

Sims was convicted of assault in 1990 and sentenced to a year in jail.

In his lawsuit, the former reading teacher said the board had a special duty to protect teachers under their union contract. Krakower also cited regulations requiring safety officers to escort visitors to the principal's office.

The city's corporation counsel, who represents the board, could not be reached for comment late Thursday on whether the board would appeal.

Sonny Bono seeks restraining order

INDIO, Calif. (AP) — Sonny Bono wants a restraining order against a man he says has stalked him, threatened to kill him and asked him for money.

Bono, half of the 1970s pop duo Sonny and Cher, filed a petition in Superior Court this month asking that James Hamlin be ordered to stay at least 150 yards away from him and his family. A hearing is set for May 25.

Police Capt. Gary Boswell of Palm Springs, where Bono lives and was formerly mayor, said that Hamlin "does appear to have some self-admitted mental problems." Hamlin is about 40 and has no permanent address.

According to the petition, Hamlin has stalked Bono and his family since 1986.

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Fifteen years ago, my husband had an affair with a close friend of mine. I thought the hurtful memory had faded, but now it hit me in the face a second time with a computer twist.

My husband spends a lot of time on his home computer. He belongs to some services on the computer using the telephone.

He has spent more than $2,000 on charges over the last year. He met a woman through one of these services. She lives 3,000 miles away. We have been married more than 40 years — we're no spring chickens.

I just received an anonymous phone call telling me to start checking out my husband's computer activities. Abby, I don't know anything about computers, but I started listening and looking around for whatever I could find.

I found greeting cards and little gifts this computer pal had sent to my husband. She had even sent pictures of the gifts he had sent to her!

I thought I made the right decision years ago when he asked for a second chance; now the hurt and distrust are back again.

How does one confront another woman with a computer 3,000 miles away? Or do I forgive my computer-crazy husband again, with a cloud over my trust in him?

HATES COMPUTERS
IN SIMI VALLEY, CALIF.

DEAR HATES: Let your husband know that your feelings are hurt, and you do not condone his long-distance romance complete with "little gifts."

DEAR ABBY: Our consumer center has produced a book titled "Why Women Pay More." The first of its kind, the report demonstrates how women are cheated and harmed in the marketplace because they are women, and shows women how they can avoid these marketplace perils. Covering topics that range from clothing to medical care, auto to home repair, pensions and insurance, lawyers to advertising, "Why Women Pay More" blows the whistle on gender gouging while providing useful advice on how to avoid these abuses and how to report them to authorities.

We want women to stop the billions of dollars of deceptive promotions, poor-quality merchandise, unnecessary surgery, drugs and car/home repairs from being handed over to unscrupulous merchants. The result would be greater health, efficiency and peace of mind.

Can you help bring this book to the attention of your readers? (Men need to know about these things, too.) The introduction and preface by me and the author, Frances Cerra Whittelsey, summarize the situation — one too long ignored by consumer agencies, women's groups and business schools. It is truly an outrage — and something can be done about it. Thank you for your interest.

RALPH NADER,
WASHINGTON, D.C.

DEAR RALPH AND DEAR READERS: I found the book to be a real eye-opener, and certainly worth looking into. This non-profit book is NOT available through bookstores. It is available only by sending $10 (check or money order) to "Why Women Pay More," P.O. Box 19367, Washington, D.C. 20036. The price includes postage.

DEAR ABBY: On Easter Sunday, I wore a brand-new hat with a medium-sized brim. Midway through the service, the minister requested that we all "squeeze in" a little closer together in order to accommodate some of the people who were standing.

Suddenly I felt a sharp jab on the shoulder. It was an usher who asked, "Would you mind removing your hat?" I replied, "Yes, I would mind." Then I started to feel a little guilty and tried to get back into the spirit of worshiping. I could no longer see the minister because of the new position of the people in front of me. (Should I have asked them to remove their heads?)

At the service's conclusion, the woman seated directly behind me planted herself in the middle of the aisle and announced that I had ruined her Easter because she couldn't see the minister. I told her that everyone's vision was impaired because of the overcrowding. She loudly admonished me to consider others, and stomped off!

Abby, please share with your readers the etiquette concerning women wearing hats, and also address the issue of men removing their hats indoors, in cafes, elevators, etc. Sign me ...

EASTER BONNET

DEAR EASTER BONNET: A woman who has bought a new hat for Easter should not be expected to remove it during the service. (Her hair may be a mess.)

And as for the woman who accused you of ruining her Easter because she couldn't see the minister, pray the Lord give her more patience and understanding.

Regarding gentlemen: They should remove their hats indoors, in restaurants, in homes, and most definitely in a theater — but never in a crowded elevator, if removing it might place an elbow in someone's eye.

DEAR ABBY: Before we know it, it will be vacation time again. May I pass on some tips on how to be the perfect houseguest? (Mine just left.)

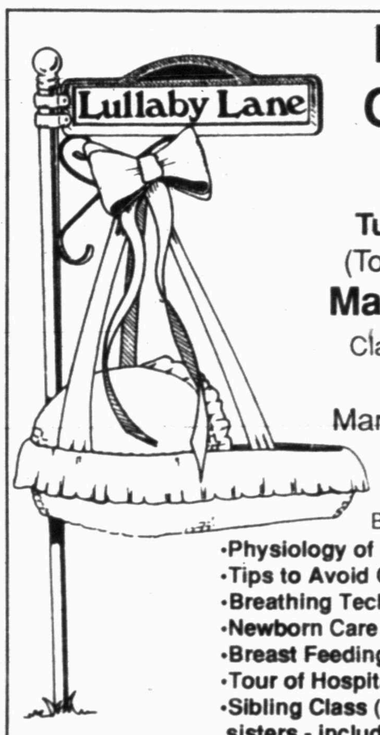

She always put her dirty dishes in the sink, kept her bathroom clean, didn't run the water forever, and hung her wet towels on the drying rack over the tub.

She didn't chatter endlessly — she wrote cards to friends while I read the newspaper. When I drove her anywhere, she paid for the parking. She took me out to dinner several times. She wore "footsies" around the house that were quiet and rug-saving. She kept her bed made, and when she left, she neatly folded extra blankets, ready for storing.

She used her own credit card for long-distance telephone calls. And when she left, I was not exhausted, nor was my house in need of maid service. Need I say more? I will welcome her back with open arms!

JEANE L. ALLEN

DEAR JEANE: Your houseguest could give lessons on how to be the perfect houseguest. (Wouldn't this be a nice letter to have framed, and hung in the guest room?)

Charges leveled at immigration agencies

WASHINGTON (AP) — A human rights advocacy group is once again raising allegations that abuses at the hands of U.S. immigration agents continue to occur regularly along the U.S.-Mexican border.

In a report issued Thursday, Americas Watch accused the Border Patrol, the Immigration and Naturalization Service and to a lesser extent the Customs Service of violating human rights. The agencies denied the charges.

"Americas Watch finds that beatings and other forms of mistreatment are still common during the arrest and detention of undocumented immigrants, U.S. citizens and legal residents," the organization said in a study based on a fact-finding mission along the border in March. "While less frequent than beatings and mistreatment, unjustified shootings and sexual assaults also occur."

The study is a follow-up to one issued a year ago by the group, which is a division of Human Rights Watch.

The Border Patrol has long been under fire for allegations, some proven, some not — of agents abusing the undocumented immigrants they catch and harassing U.S. citizens who look Hispanic.

"When you have a Border Patrol force of 4,000 men and when in a period of eight or nine years you make 9 million arrests, you're going to have situations arise," said Duke Austin, a spokesman for the INS, which is the Border Patrol's parent agency. "I think we will challenge any law enforcement agency in the world of comparable size with that record."

But he added, "That doesn't mean we accept any abuses."

Austin called the report a collage of "unfounded allegations" that Americas Watch accepted at face value.

Steven Duchesne, a Customs Service spokesman, said Customs officials hadn't seen the report yet.

Locals' relative becomes Eagle Scout in San Antonio

SAN ANTONIO — Jeffrey B. Gates received his Eagle Scout Award March 28 in a ceremony conducted at Northminster Presbyterian Church.

The Eagle Scout Court of Honor ceremony opened with the Presentation of Colors. Fr. Tom Flannagan, pastor of St. Brigid's Catholic Church, gave the invocation. Terrence Smith gave the welcome and Eagle Scout certification. Eagle Scout Dennis Smith presented the Eagle Scout Challenge and Charge and Gates gave the response.

Christopher Warden, Eagle Scout Master, read "What's It Worth?" and the presentation of rank. Edward Kern, pastor of the Northminster Church, gave the benediction and the program closed with the Retirement of Colors by the Color Guard and escorts. A reception followed the ceremony.

Gates was born in Abilene on Jan. 27, 1975. He has also lived in Omaha, Neb., Kadena Air Base, Okinawa; Mildenhall, England and San Antonio.

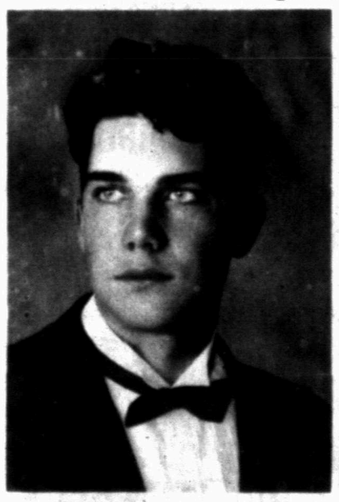

He entered the scouting program in 1982 at the age of 8 as a Cub Scout with Pack 126 in England. He received his Arrow of Light Award in 1986 from Pack 37 in Bellevue, Neb. He then joined Troop 231 and advanced to First Class Rank.

Gates was one of 14 young men who founded Troop 945 in April, 1988 and served as its first Senior Patrol Leader. He also served as assistant Senior Patrol Leader, troop guide and instructor. In 1988, he also attended Cedar Badge Junior Leadership Training.

That same year, he was the first honor camper in the troop elected as a member of the Order of the Arrow. Gates sealed his bonds in Brotherhood in 1989. He is also a member of the Aina Topa Hutsi Lodge.

Gates is a senior at William Howard Taft High School in San Antonio. He is active in drama and was a member of the state runner-up one-act play cast. He also is an active member of St. Brigid's Church where he is a "greeter" and a member of the Youth Ministry Team. He plans to become an engineer.

Gates is the son of Major and Mrs. A.E. Gates III of San Antonio and the grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Aubrey Williams of Hermleigh. He is also the nephew of Aubrey Gene, Virginia and David Williams, Janie Sullenger and Betty Thompson of Snyder.

CDC: overall Lyme disease is probably underestimated

ATLANTA (AP) — Almost 50,000 Americans were diagnosed with Lyme disease in the last decade, but nobody knows if that's an accurate count of the illness, federal health officials contend.

The number is probably low because of cases misdiagnosed or never reported to the government, the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention warned Thursday.

"It's difficult to say exactly how accurate (the number) is," the CDC's Dr. Paul Ettestad said. "There are probably more cases than we know."

The CDC recorded 9,677 new cases last year, up 2.2 percent from 1991. That brings to 49,872 the number reported since 1982, when CDC began counting the painful, tick-borne disease.

Lyme disease, caused by a microorganism that lives inside ucks, was discovered in Connecticut in 1975 and now has been reported in every U.S. state except Alaska and Montana, Ettestad said.

Symptoms include a round, red rash with a clear center, resembling a bull's eye, as well as fever and joint pain. Antibiotics can cure it fairly quickly. Left untreated, it can cause chronic arthritis and some heart problems.

It's most prevalent in New England, the East Coast, Wisconsin and the Pacific Northwest.

New York had the most cases last year — 3,370 — followed by Connecticut with 1,760 and Pennsylvania with 1,119. Connecticut had the highest rate — 53.6 cases per 100,000 people last year, compared with a national rate of 3.9.

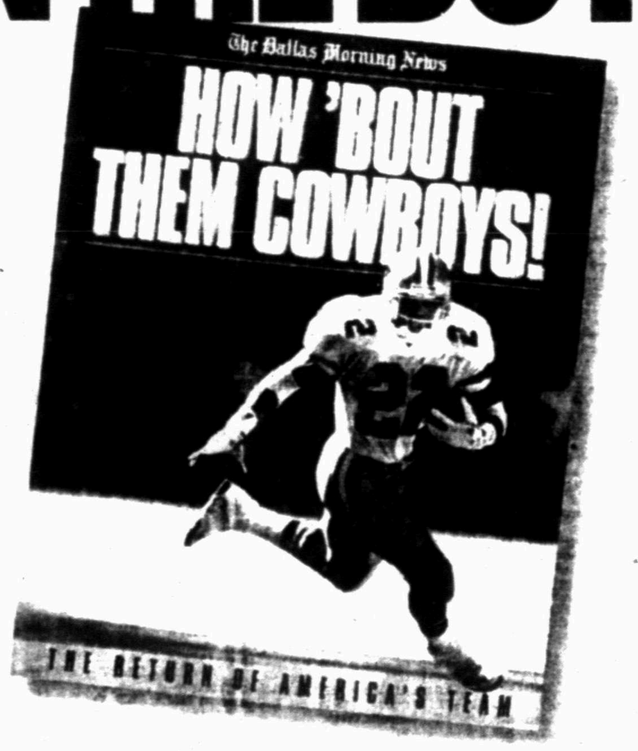

Most at risk are rural Americans and suburbanites who move onto wooded lots recently developed from farmland and forests, Ettestad said. Ticks native to these areas [illegible] dents; when people move in, the insects latch onto them as well.

But doctors argue over just how prevalent Lyme disease really is. Dr. Allen C. Steere, who discovered it, studied 788 patients who were referred to a Boston Lyme disease clinic in the last four years and discovered only 23 percent actually had the illness.

Overdiagnosis is a problem in some patients, the CDC conceded. One problem is that the laboratory test used to detect it often is wrong and isn't standardized, so different labs use different versions. The CDC hopes to standardize the test this summer.

But the CDC contends that overall, the disease actually is underestimated.
