Houston slayings

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. — A third suspect was charged with capital murder Tuesday in the weekend execution-style shootings in Houston that resulted in four deaths,and two Texas investigators went to Alabama to help try to solve the case, police said. Three gunmen barged into a house in southwest Houston Saturday night and tied up and shot the six people inside, officials said. All three men remained at large Tuesday, authorities said.

American on fares

NEW YORK — American Airlines said Tuesday it wants to raise fares by at least 4.4 percent to cover higher fuel costs. It apparently was a belated response to Northwest's attempt to push up prices by 10 percent across the board. Rivals were studying American's move a day after four of the nation's largest airlines, American, United, Delta and USAir, agreed to settle claims that they cheated passengers by fixing prices through reservations computers.

George W.'s role

DALLAS — George W. Bush, the president's oldest son, said Tuesday he was taking a leave of absence as director and consultant at Harken Energy Corp. to help his father's re-election campaign. "I don't want to involve this company in any kind of allegations of conflicts or whatever may arise," he said. "I am going to take this leave so as not to drag Harken into this campaign in any shape or form." Bush, 45, said he would be an adviser to his father, the same role he played in the 1988 campaign.

Ex-Beatle reflects

NEW YORK — Ringo Starr, reflecting on his post-Beatles drinking days, says he was content to exist as a "celebrity" rather than a musician. "Someone in England put it so cruelly: They said if there's an opening of an envelope, he'll be there. That hit me," Starr, 51, says in the July 9 issue of Rolling Stone magazine. "I thought, 'Yeah, this is what I'm doing now.' I'd be at movie premieres in London with my bow tie on and a bottle of cognac in my pocket, mixed with some Coca-Cola so people would think it was just soda." Starr underwent rehabilitation for a drug and alcohol problem.

Council fills vacant seat

Brooks wins appointment to District 2 slot

At-large opening application process begins

Staff report

Applications are available beginning today for the appointment to the vacant at-large seat on the Midland City Council.

Interested persons can pick up an application at the City Secretary's office on the fourth floor of City Hall. Information must be returned to the office by July 9.

Interviews are scheduled for July 14, at a public meeting after which a new member may be chosen. The process will be similar to that used for the District 2 member, which included a set of five questions to be answered.

All business related to the choice will be conducted in open session, officials said.

Any city resident who is a qualified voter may apply for the appointment.

The seat, one of two at-large positions on the council, was vacated by J.D. Faircloth when he became mayor on June 1.

Restaurateur Juluis L. Brooks, speaking with patient determination Tuesday night, convinced three out of five City Council members of his commitment and desire to serve the constituents of District 2, thus assuring his appointment to the vacant council seat.

Brooks

"When I was asked to fill the seat I asked 'Lord, why me?' and I concluded 'Why not me?' I consider myself a sound candidate," Brooks said.

"Hopefully, Mr. Morrow and Mr. Devenport, I will be able to change your minds once I get started," Brooks told the two council members who dissented.

U.S. averts rail strike

Unions postpone action at Amtrak

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rail unions agreed Tuesday night to postpone for at least 48 hours a nationwide strike against the passenger railroad Amtrak while negotiations continue, a union negotiator said.

Jedd Dodd, chief negotiator for the railroad's maintenance workers, said no decision had been reached about the separate Labor dispute with Conrail, a freight railroad on the East Coast.

Asked what commuters should do this morning, Dodd said, "Ride Amtrak." He said "there should not be much disruption" of service.

Dodd, speaking to reporters only minutes before the midnight strike deadline, said negotiators were making significant progress and he was hopeful of settlement.

"We are having some serious dialogue probably for the first time in four years," he said. "There's a possiblity the contract will be settled."

Max Fleming, president of the Brotherhood of Maintenance of Way Employes, said: "The unions agreed a strike would hurt our members as much as it would inconvenience the public."

There was no immediate comment from management.

Earlier Tuesday, commuters, freight shippers and farmers scrambled to arrange backup ways to work and markets as the strike deadline neared with no indication of progress in the talks.

Negotiators had been deadlocked on basic issues, including wage increases and work rules.

Council paves way for north shopping area

■ Zoning change for new center north of Loop 250 passes on first reading.

By Debbie Lincecum
Staff writer

Development got the green light Tuesday as Midland City Council members paved the way for a new north Midland shopping center.

Council members voted 3-1 with one abstention in favor of a zoning change sought by a Dallas real estate corporation. The center is planned along the north side of Loop 250 between Whitman Drive and Billingsley Boulevard, on 48.8 acres of vacant land.

The lot, now zoned for a planned housing district, must be rezoned for retail businesses before the construction can proceed. The measure will require a second reading on July 14.

Attacks by GOP, Bush throw Perot camp on defense

Mob boss gets life as protesters brawl

NEW YORK (AP) — A smirking John Gotti was sentenced Tuesday to life in prison for his bloody reign as America's most powerful mobster, and 1,000 supporters stormed the courthouse and battled the police.

Gotti, dressed impeccably in a charcoal suit with a bright yellow tie and matching pocket square, shook his head "no" when the judge asked if he wanted to speak.

"Get it over with without anybody making any speeches," he had told his lawyer earlier.

Then he and Frank "Frankie Locs" Locascio listened as U.S. District Judge I. Leo Glasser said, "The guidelines in your case require me to commit you to the custody of the attorney general for the duration of your life."

Prosecutors said the federal statute has no provision for parole.

Both defendants also were fined $250,000.

Glasser rejected defense arguments to set aside Gotti's convictions, order a new trial or conduct a hearing on allegations of irregularities in the jury deliberations. Two jurors were quoted as saying the trial was unfair and that they voted to convict Gotti because of government pressure.

Locascio told the judge he was guilty only "of being a good friend of John Gotti, and if there were more men like John Gotti on this Earth, we would have a better country."

But U.S. Attorney Andrew J. Ma-

Texans form chain, rescue dogs from burning kennel

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Body builders, ex-flight attendants and others rushed into a burning kennel and formed a human chain to rescue approximately 50 dogs that had been trapped inside.

"About 15 or 20 people got the dogs out. They did a good job," District Fire Chief Alfred Sandoval said after the fire Monday night.

Sandoval said one small dog died, six were seriously injured and at least 15 suffered minor injuries in the fire that erupted at just before 7:30 p.m. at Northport Boarding Kennels.

The blaze appeared to have been caused by an electrical short, said arson unit Lt. Raymond Trevino.

Rescued dogs were taken to nearby animal hospitals and veterinary clinics for treatment, Sandoval said.

Donnie Neubauer, 41, a television and commercial producer, said he was driving on the street in front of the kennel when he saw the smoke. When

Homeless camp features color TV, VCR, security

By Elisabeth Dunham
Associated Press writer

SAN RAFAEL, Calif. — Across a parking lot from the sprawling civic center, a cluster of tents marks the spot where dozens of homeless people are spending the summer in one of the nation's wealthiest counties.

It is far from the world's first homeless camp. But this one is equipped with color TV, videocassette recorder, stocked pantry and security staff.

"We are doing our best to make sure it's run like any other company," said camp coordinator Ambbeei Hall, who is homeless.

Multicolored tents, clotheslines and sleeping bags dot a landscape shaded with evergreens and enveloped by highway noise. Marin County's civic center, designed by Frank Lloyd Wright, looms on the horizon like a huge pink snake.

The camp emerged a few months ago after the National

GOTTI: Judge gives smirking mob boss life sentence

loney said putting Gotti behind bars for life was "one more step in destroying the stranglehold that the mob has in certain parts of this city."

Outside, baton-wielding officers cordoned off the courthouse and kept the protesters out, but the angry crowd overturned one car and smashed the windows of a half-dozen others.

Eight officers and several protesters were injured. Police reported seven arrests.

"Free John Gotti, baby! Free him!" one young man yelled into a bullhorn as police and demonstrators clashed. "We want another trial! The government stinks!"

The melee ended with demonstrators climbing back aboard the dozen chartered buses that brought them to Brooklyn and driving away.

At a news conference, Maloney and James M. Fox, the head of the FBI's New York office, said Gotti's son, John Gotti Jr., was behind the protests and said he would be charged if federal property was damaged.

Gotti, 51, and Locascio, 59, were convicted April 2 of racketeering charges that included murders, murder conspiracies, obstruction of justice, gambling, loan sharking, extortion and tax fraud. They have been jailed without bail since their December 1990 arrests.

Defense lawyer Albert J. Krieger said Gotti had been upbeat and jovial as awaited the sentencing, which lasted only five minutes.

"He said to me, 'Get it over with without anybody making any speeches. I know what the sentencing is going to be, and I am prepared to take it,'" Krieger said. "He said he was going to conduct himself with dignity and restraint, and he did."

Gotti was confident his conviction would be overturned on appeal, the lawyer said.

Gotti was convicted of five murders, including masterminding the brazen Dec. 16, 1985, mob hit on "Big" Paul Castellano. The former Gambino boss was gunned down as he arrived at a Manhattan restaurant for a meeting with his lawyers and cronies.

Federal and state law enforcers had been after Gotti for years. Acquittal at three previous trials earned him a reputation of being invincible and the nickname the "Teflon Don."

But at his last trial, the anonymous and sequestered jury took just 13 hours to find America's best-known mobster guilty on all 13 counts of the indictment.

Under Gotti's leadership, the Gambino family — the largest of New York City's five traditional Mafia families — was a powerhouse in the gambling, loan sharking, labor union and extortion rackets.

At his 10-week trial, the flamboyant, high-profile mobster was brought down by his own words intercepted by bugs secretly planted by the FBI inside his favored hangouts and the testimony of Salvatore "Sammy Bull" Gravano.

Gravano, once Gotti's trusted friend, confidant, co-defendant and heir apparent, turned against his crime boss and became the government's star witness in exchange for leniency. He could have been sentenced to life in prison, but now faces a sentence ranging from probation to 20 years.

On the witness stand, Gravano admitted to 19 murders, testifying that 10 of them were ordered by Gotti. He also gave the jury a graphic and chilling account of the killings that boosted Gotti from capo to boss.

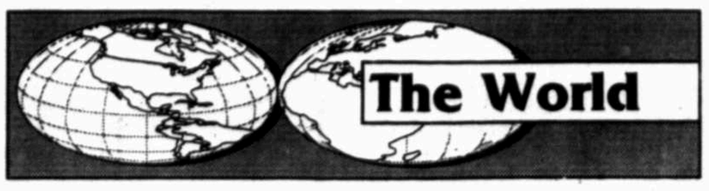
Rabin apparent winner in Israel



JERUSALEM (AP) — The Labor party trounced the right-wing Likud faction in elections Tuesday. Nearly complete results showed Yitzhak Rabin, who promised to curtail Jewish settlement and give autonomy to Palestinians, poised to form Israel's next government.

Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir refused to concede defeat, holding out the hope the results might swing back in his favor. But the tone of speeches by Shamir and other ministers suggested they were braced for the end of Likud's 15 years in power.

"We don't know how this night will end," said Likud's housing minister, Ariel Sharon, "but as we can see, we certainly didn't come out winners."

If the projections are borne out, Israel will have a center-left coalition with a strong dovish component — a change that could have a major bearing on U.S.-brokered peace talks.

Rabin has pledged to intensify peace talks with the Arabs, curtail settlement construction in the occupied territories and give the Palestinians autonomy within six to nine months.

There was no immediate comment from the Bush administration.

An Israel TV exit poll gave Labor 47 seats to Likud's 33, and 13 to Labor's likely coalition partner, the left-wing Meretz bloc. It gave 4 seats to two anti-Likud Arab parties, which would effectively kill Shamir's chances of forming a coalition in the 120-seat Parliament.

With 73.7 percent of ballots officially counted, Labor had 35.5 percent and Meretz 9.6. Likud had 25.1 percent, and its former religious and ultra-right allies shared just over 20 percent.

Israel army radio projected from its count of 81 percent of the vote that Labor and Meretz had 58 seats, and Arabs parties 3 seats — enough to block Likud.

Labor apparently will need another party to govern. But Likud could not form a government even with the three religious and two right-wing parties.

"The first stage has begun, the first stage of a new hope," Rabin said in a speech at Labor headquarters in Tel Aviv interrupted by chants and cheers.

Both leaders cautioned that the results were not complete, but Shamir's speech sounded more like a eulogy. He has been prime minister since 1983, with a two-year break when Labor led a national unity government.

Addressing downcast supporters at party headquarters, his voice hoarse but a smile on his face, the 76-year-old Shamir evoked the memory of Likud's forefathers, spoke of "upsets in political life," and declared: "We are proud of everything we did during the period we were in office."

Rabin promised to form a centrist government that would focus on unemployment and social needs by "reordering national priorities" — a phrase he uses to connote diverting money from settlements to meeting domestic needs.

The shofar, or ram's horn sounded and ecstatic supporters sang "Rabin king of Israel."

Hugged and kissed by aides on the dais, Rabin clutched a red carnation handed up from the crowd. Supporters outside the hall threw candy at passersby.

The projected results would mean a stunning comeback for Rabin, premier from 1974 to 1977 and defense minister from 1984 to 1990, partly under Shamir.

U.S. Jewish leaders see greater peace prospects

NEW YORK (AP) — Leaders of major Jewish organizations in the United States hailed the apparent victory of the Labor Party in Israel on Tuesday night as boding well for Middle East peace talks.

"I welcome the clear victory of the political parties in Israel that advocate moderation and compromise," Henry Siegman, executive director of the American Jewish Congress, said in a news release.

"The election results constitute a repudiation of those who traded on Israel's very real security fears to advance narrow ideological goals, to the detriment of the country's safety and its prospects for peace," he said.

Rabbi Eric Yoffie, vice president of the Union of American Hebrew Congregations, paid tribute to apparent loser Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir for opening the path toward Mideast peace — "for which he has earned our respect and admiration."

But Yoffie said a government under Labor party chief Yitzhak Rabin "will mean an immediate improvement in U.S.-Israel relations."

He said this should help in other areas. If a Labor government can free $10 billion in frozen U.S. loan guarantees, it will encourage an increase in the emigration of Jews from the former Soviet Union, he said.

But he listed as "perhaps most important ... progress on the path toward peace ... Rabin will have the support of the people."

Mercury to flirt with 100

Today's forecast calls for partly cloudy skies with a 20 percent chance of thunderstorms and a high near 100 with south winds at five to 15 mph. Tonight should be partly cloudy with a 20 percent chance of thunderstorms and a low in the mid-to-upper 60s, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Thursday should be mostly sunny with the high once again near 100.

After an overnight low of 66, Tuesday's high reached 92 compared with the record high for that date of 102 set in 1990. The record low for that date is 60 set in 1946.

STATE

Mostly sunny skies prevailed Tuesday across Texas, but late-developing storms threatened the coast with heavy rains and gusty winds.

The National Weather Service placed much of North Texas under a severe thunderstorm watch. Rapidly developing thunderstorms were seen near Wichita Falls.

Skies were partly cloudy across the region, where temperatures soared into the 90s.

West Texas thunderstorms were developing in the Big Bend. Skies were sunny elsewhere as the mercury hit 96 in El Paso.

Abundant sunshine and plenty of low-level moisture kept conditions hot and humid over much of South Texas. Afternoon thunderstorms occurred over parts of Central Texas.

RAIL: Unions agree to postpone nationwide strike

(From 1A)

Bush said a nationwide rail strike would be so devastating to the economy that "it ought to end the day it begins."

Most union leaders refused to say in advance if they would walk off the job when the deadline passed. And members of Congress wouldn't say just what action they might take in the event of a strike, though Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., pledged, "Congress will not sit idly by."

A freight strike in April 1991 lasted only 19 hours before Congress and the White House stepped in to stop it.

Four of the smaller unions involved resolved their disputes with Amtrak on Tuesday. But talks were continuing into late into the night with the three largest unions representing maintenance workers, engineers and machinists.

The effects of a strike could vary from region to region.

"Obviously we're going to shut down all the freight in the United States on railroads; a strike is imminent," said Lloyd Wickersham, general chairman of the 12,000 Machinists union members working for the Union Pacific and Kansas City Southern railroads.

But Jed Dodd, chief negotiator for the Brotherhood of Maintenance of Way Employes, a key figure in the negotiations, predicted any strike would be confined to Amtrak and to Conrail, a freight line in the East, and would not precipitate a national economic crisis.

Commuters in New York, Boston, Washington and other cities along the East Coast faced nightmarish transportation problems if a strike against Amtrak spread to commuter lines that share Amtrak facilities.

For example, about 70,000 Boston area commuters could be affected by a strike. As in many areas, transportation officials arranged for extra buses but said they would not be able to meet demand.

A strike could also hit 40,000 rail riders in New Jersey and extra buses were expected to be able to carry only half of the rush hour passengers. Some 10,000 rail commuters would feel the impact in Maryland.

Amtrak said a strike would close commuter operations at New York City's Penn Station in the event of a strike. The station serves Amtrak, and two commuter lines, New Jersey Transit and the Long Island Railroad.

Union leader Dodd accused the railroad of "manufacturing a crisis by needlessly threatening to close its stations."

Rail travelers prepared for the worst.

"Everyone else will be on the highway, I'll be there, too," said Adam Psichos of Princeton, N.J. as he began his commute home.

DEFENSE: Perot schedules interview on 'Today'

day" program.

The appearance will be 24 hours after his top lieutenant appeared on the same show to respond to news reports about Perot's use of private investigators to dig up damaging information on his enemies, including Bush.

Perot also has scheduled a news conference after a campaign rally in Annapolis, Md., today. If he holds the question-and-answer session with reporters, it will be the first in nearly a month. He has scheduled such sessions after other rallies, but they have been called off.

Aides to Perot said the "Today" interview had been in the works for some time. NBC officials said they had been trying to arrange an interview for some time, but that Perot agreed only Tuesday.

President Bush, both personally and through surrogates, has begun an aggressive attack on Perot. In an interview to be broadcast Friday night on the ABC News program "20/20," Bush termed news reports about Perot's investigations "beyond the pale."

"I am sick about it if it's true, and I think the American people will reject that kind of tactic to go around investigating the family of the president of the United States, or then vice president, or another American," Bush said.

Vice President Dan Quayle attempted to provoke fear on Monday when he referrred to Perot's "compulsion to investigate people" and remarked: "Imagine having the IRS, the FBI and the CIA under his control. Who would be investigated next?"

Other Republicans also have tried to portray Perot as unstable, dangerous or unsuitable to be president. Bob Martinez, head of drug policy for the Bush administration, said in a speech before the nation's mayors Tuesday in Houston that "this nation didn't gain a hard-won victory in the Cold War only to surrender its constitutioal liberties to a secretive computer salesman with a penchant for skullduggery."

Even as the Perot campaign organization seeks to fight back, explanations of Perot's past activities have not laid the matter to rest.

Thomas W. Luce III, Perot's longtime lawyer and chairman of his Petition drive, called the recent reports "character assassination" in an interview in Dallas on Tuesday, but he said he could not explain why Perot turned over his investigative findings about a friend of Bush's to The Washington Post, not to to legal authorities.

The transaction that Perot investigated involved the donation of 100,000 acres of land owned by Pennzoil Co. to the U.S. Forest Service in 1982. In return, Pennzoil, whose chairman, Hugh Liedtke, was a former partner of Bush's in the oil business in the 1950s, received a $48 million tax deduction.

Perot turned over material on the land transaction to The Washington Post in 1987, but Luce said Tuesday he was not trying to discredit Bush.

But when asked, if Perot thought the tax deduction was improper, why he did not give the material to the IRS rather than a newspaper, Luce replied: "I don't know. I haven't asked him that question."

Earlier Tuesday, in an interview on the "Today" program, Luce defended Perot's investigation.

CAMP: Multicolored tents dot Marin landscape

(From 1A)

Guard closed its San Rafael armory for the spring and summer.

Homeless people housed in the armory have been forced outdoors and dispersed over the summer in previous years. But this year they set up a protest camp next to the armory and convinced the county Board of Supervisors they needed a summer shelter.

The board agreed to the camp's move to its present site. Residents and activists hope it is a step toward building a permanent center offering social services and job placement along with housing.

While some have applauded the supervisors for embracing the unusual project, others say it is too little, too late.

"I think (the camp) is remarkable in that the county has failed to take any action to provide year-round shelter until now," said Chet Tchozewski, coordinator of the Marin Countywide Coalition on Homelessness.

For years, supervisors have squabbled over what to do about homeless people in this wealthy, liberal county across the Golden Gate Bridge from San Francisco.

Advocates for the homeless have long viewed Supervisor Bob Roumiguiere as one of their chief foes. Recently, however, he has come to support the camp and the linked plan to establish a service center at Hamilton Field, a decommissioned Air Force base in Novato, about 20 miles north of San Rafael.

Supervisor Brady Bevis, long seen as sympathetic to the homeless, opposes the plan. She argues that Hamilton doesn't make sense because it is far removed from city services and the places where homeless people congregate.

While Bevis supports the spirit behind the camp, she advocates a different, long-term solution: placing homeless centers throughout the county.

An estimated 2,500 homeless live in Marin County. About 50 people live in the camp.

"One of the positives of the camp is that the people who live there have gained a sense of community," Bevis said. "For the first time, they've felt a sense of authority over their own lives." But the camp's appeal to some others, she said, is that it keeps the homeless out of their sight.

The camp is spread beneath pine trees at a far edge of the parking lot to the long civic center building.

At the entrance, people sat recently at two tables, eating and chatting. The nearby kitchen was stocked with donated flour, milk, eggs, pancake mix, meats and canned vegetables and fruits.

At night, a donated television and VCR provide entertainment underneath an awning. The camp has portable toilets and a shower.

Members of a security team made up of residents take turns patrolling the camp. Alcohol and drugs aren't allowed.

"We've got tents, a toilet and we've got food," said resident Tracy Lowmiller, 29. "That's more than we've had for the past 15 summers. It's just now starting to feel like a community."

SHOPPING: Vote gives development green light

(From 1A)

Wal-Mart is within a week of signing a contract to build a new, larger store on the site. Interest has been shown by chain restaurants — including the Olive Garden — and other retail businesses, they said.

"Various retailers have shown interest," said Jerry Meyering of Visser Real Estate Investments, the Dallas company that expects to buy the property from Amresco Management, the holding company for the FDIC.

Meyering said the development, just east of One North Park shopping center, which houses the current Wal-Mart store, will work well with retail businesses already grouped around Midkiff Road at the Loop.

"What we're experiencing around the country is that retailers like this regional retailing concept," he said. "They like to clump together."

He said developers will attract quality retail businesses with the location.

City staff opposed the development from its first proposal to the Planning and Zoning Commission several months ago. Their major concerns included traffic — which staffers said would greatly increase with development.

City planners said approving the zone change would set a precedent for "strip zoning," or elongated areas of a particular land use. They said such zoning is undesirable along major thoroughfares such as Loop 250.

"The question is, why would we want to concentrate that development here?" said Planning and Development Director Richard Hennessy.

Planners suggested the shopping center be moved to west Midland, along State Highway 191 next to Sam's Wholesale Club.

Residents, especially those living in the Vista West subdivision, have complained about various aspects of the plan.

Since then, the developers — represented by West Texas Consultants and local attorney Jack Ladd — have agreed to several changes in the plan. Meyering said they have made an unusual amount of concessions to keep the plan afloat.

"But rezoning can be a difficult process," he said.

Even up to the last minute before the council's vote, the two sides were negotiating for details of the plan.

A park will be built north of the shopping center, and a retention pond along the east side will collect stormwater. The developers will pay for the upkeep of the park for 15 years.

Caldera Drive will be redirected to head south through the middle of the complex. A wall will be built along the road separating the park from the back of the buildings.

Access to the center will be primarily from Caldera Drive and Loop 250. Cars will not be allowed to cross through the Vista West neighborhood to enter the shopping area.

City officials expect a traffic light to be installed at the intersection of Caldera Drive and Midkiff Road, and the developer will pay one quarter of the cost.

"The city is already on the way to a regional shopping center at that area," Meyering said. "This is just another piece of the puzzle."

Developers said their plan may actually help distribute traffic in the area, one of the city's busiest intersections. At any rate, a consultant for the company said, traffic won't get much worse.

City staffers, however, disagreed.

"We do have problems out there," said Harvey Hansen, city Engineering Director. "Many can be resolved, but it will come with a price tag."

RESCUE: One small dog dies

he drove over to investigate, he heard dogs howling.

"The sound of the dogs was half-barking, half-screaming. It was bad," Neubauer said, who saw a dog lying in the middle of the kennel with its back on fire.

"It was real calm. I got a garden hose and put it out," he said.

A group of body builders from a nearby Olympic Gym rushed over and joined other people to form a human chain, Neubauer said.

Beverly Nielsen, who was attending a meeting of ex-Eastern Airlines flight attendants across the street, said they saw the smoke and hurried to the kennel.

"We sort of formed a relay system. It was all so calm, like we had practiced this before and knew what to do," Ms. Nielsen said while cuddling a wet poodle under her neck.

A German shepherd bit one rescuer on both arms, but the rescuer did not require hospitalization, Sandoval said.

Fire officials were not immediately able to find the owner of the kennel. Damage to the building was estimated at $7,500.

COUNCIL: Restaurateur Brooks wins appointment to District 2 seat

(From 1A)

The District 2 seat, vacated two weeks ago by the Rev. Michael DeVaughn when his church transferred him to Tyler, had become a source of mild debate among minorities seeking to ensure they kept a voice on the council. All seven applicants belonged to minorities. Before his departure, DeVaughn threw his support behind Brooks as his successor.

Brooks, 52, cited his success as a small businessman and his "extensive" management skills.

"I know the value of strict budgeting and I know the council faces tough budget decisions all the time. I feel that as a small but successful businessman, I understand the value of making sound decisions," Brooks said.

Council members moved quickly to make the appointment, thus allowing the new member a voice in the selection of the seventh council seat, left vacant when Mayor J.D. Faircloth took office on June 1.

Each of the seven applicants vying for the position was granted 15 minutes to present their qualifications and arguments in support of their candidacy. The applicants then fielded brief questions from council members.

About 50 citizens attended the special council session.

At the conclusion of the interviewing process, the council recessed for 15 minutes while each member considered their choice. Applicants drew numbers before the session to determine the interviewing order. Brooks spoke last.

Brooks, who is married with four children, opened his first Brooks Barbeque restaurant at 501 E. Texas St. in 1979. Since then he has expanded to two other locations: 4400 N. Big Spring St. and 1024 Andrews Highway.

During Brooks' interview, Faircloth questioned whether Brooks would be able to fulfill the significant time committment often required of council members.

"Sir, I would not be here if I didn't think I had the time. I would not waste your time or my own," he said. "I'm self-employed and I will make the time when necessary."

Apparently satisfied with the answer, Faircloth — along with council members Claudia Egan and Buddy Sipes — voted for Brooks. At-large councilman Bill Morrow supported the Rev. Hadley Edwards, 33, and councilman James Devenport selected semi-retired teacher James Bradford, 61.

Morrow and Devenport both praised all of the applicants and said their decisions weren't easy.

"I tried to look at experience, management of payroll, communication skills and budgeting — it was close, let me tell you. But Mr. Edwards came out one point ahead ... in my opinion," Morrow said.

Devenport cited Bradford's community service, particularly his time on the planning and zoning committee, "an always important council agenda item."

Faircloth praised the council's hastily constructed appointment process.

"I hope the citizens of Midland appreciate the efforts put forth by the council and all of the candidates," Faircloth said. "I thought it was a great process and I thought we had a group of excellent candidates.

"Hopefully the constituents of District 2 will fully support Mr. Brooks."

Brooks, a 26-year Midland resident, believes gathering input from District 2 residents at Town Hall meetings is his top priority.

"We need to work together to determine the problems and then go out and tackle them," he said.

Ms. Egan called Brooks a visionary and said his "obvious attribute of being a people person" will serve him well on the council.

During the interview, Ms. Egan recalled a meeting with a local police sergeant who once approached Brooks at an abandoned gas station lot to ask what he was doing.

He replied, Egan said, "You don't understand officer — someday I'm going to open a restaurant here." He did, several years later.

On his application, Brooks singled out the expansion of Midland International Airport as a main concern for the city.

"Expansion and development is essential because the first concern of businessmen new to Midland is transportation," he said.

He also said he sympathizes with the large unemployment rate in District 2.

"I have one young man at the restaurant now that I'm training personally. He has been into some trouble but he's doing well, and I've even talked to him about opening a business some day," he said.

Others who applied for the position included: Patrick Aleman, 40, a master electrician; Rodney Ransom, 21, an evangelist and Christian lecturer; Ruby Morris, 58, a public school administrator; and Robbyne Fuller, 48, founder of the Midland Black Chamber of Entrepreneurs.

Baker says force being considered in Bosnia

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States and other nations, impatient with Serbian "barbarism at its worst extreme," is exploring ways to break the blockade of relief deliveries to suffering civilians in Bosnia-Herzegovina, Secretary of State James A. Baker III said Tuesday.

While announcing stepped-up diplomatic and political pressure on the Serbian-dominated government in Belgrade, Baker said American military planners were holding "intensive consultations" with other governments on the U.N. Security Council on ways to alleviate the suffering.

"We have not ruled out — we haven't ruled it in but we have not ruled out — participating in some multilateral operation, if that should become necessary," Baker told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

Baker, appearing before the committee to press for Senate ratification of the START treaty on reducing long-range nuclear missile, also rejected proposals the United States suspend nuclear weapons testing. He said the tests are needed to maintain nuclear weapons that deter "renegade regimes" such as Iraq from military aggression.

He stressed that in contrast to the bombing and invasion of Iraq in Operation Desert Storm to liberate Kuwait, any force in what was once Yugoslavia would be confined to opening Sarajevo airport and other measures to deliver food and supplies to trapped civilians in Bosnia-Herzegovina.

Even so, Baker's statement represented a tougher administration line on what he again referred to as "a humanitarian nightmare." Asked by Sen. Richard G. Lugar, R-Ind., if collective force might be necessary to ease the suffering, Baker replied:

"I think as this nightmare drags on, the willingness of countries around the world to see it happen or stand by as it does happen is going to diminish and diminish and diminish...

"And I think it is an absolute outrage and it is barbarism at its worst extreme," Baker said of attacks by Serbian militia on the Bosnian capital of Sarajevo.

As a result, Baker said, the United States would no longer accept diplomats from Belgrade as representing a legal government, would close the consulate in Chicago and require Serbia and Montenegro, which is all that remains of what was once Yugoslavia, to apply all over as new nations to the United Nations and other world groups.

At the Pentagon, spokesman Pete Williams said the Pentagon is making preparations in the event the United Nations seeks U.S. help in Yugoslavia "with the provision of humanitarian assistance, and it's solely related to humanitarian assistance."

Williams said the planning consists of deciding where such supplies might come from, where it would be flown from, what type of aircraft would be used to fly such supplies, and what kind of manpower would be needed to handle the operation.

ANC breaks negotiations

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — The African National Congress broke off all talks with the government on Tuesday and demanded an international inquiry into political violence in South Africa.

President F.W. de Klerk immediately rejected their demands. "We say 'no' to foreign intervention," he told reporters in Madrid, Spain before flying home for an emergency Cabinet meeting Wednesday.

The ANC on Sunday suspended bilateral talks with the government after 42 blacks in Boipatong were killed by attackers with guns, knives and machetes last Wednesday.

Tuesday's withdrawal from all talks created the nation's worst political crisis since de Klerk legalized the ANC in 1990 and began talks on ending the apartheid system of racial segregation and white domination.

The ANC said police failed to heed warnings before the Boipatong attack and failed to respond once it began. The ANC has long accused security forces of having a hand in township violence.

De Klerk said the ANC decision was "based on a fundamental untruth — namely that the government is involved in the killing of people."

Bush can lead nation if he will

President George Bush sounded a lot like candidate George Bush on Saturday in Dallas at the state Republican convention, as he told delegates "snappy answers and glib talk will not get the job done" and vowed to win in November.

A New York Times/CBS News Poll released this week showed Bush virtually tied with unannounced independent candidate Ross Perot for first place in the presidential sweepstakes, while Democratic nominee Bill Clinton is well behind the two front-runners. But the poll also found that four in 10 registered voters are not satisfied with the choices for president and, in a nutshell, that is the barrier Bush must overcome to win.

The fact that many voters are wary of Clinton and, up until recently, have flocked to Perot indicates the electorate is still searching, hoping to find one candidate who will give them a vision of what the future should hold in store for the United States. Recent polls have shown that voters aren't finding that vision in Clinton or Perot, and President Bush, while being an acknowledged leader on the international stage, still does not warm the nationalistic passions of Americans.

Most Americans are pleased with the leadership Bush displayed during the Persian Gulf War and how he has responded to what has transpired over the past few years in the communist world. But voters are seeking a candidate who can present a vision of what the United States in the years after the turn of the century will be like.

They want to see a vision in which opportunity is still available to all who seek it, families are the building blocks of our society, criminal activity is punished, freedom is our guiding light, skin color is no detriment, justice is assured, the red, white and blue still proudly waves, and the right to worship is protected. That is the vision Americans seek — and the vision Vice President Dan Quayle has been attempting to convey.

President Bush should pick up the banner and run with it. He is the president — and our national leader. But that position should not be filled by someone uncertain of where he stands. The American people are still waiting, hoping for such a leader. It's not too late to reclaim that vision of the future.

Now is Bush's opportunity to assert the leadership Americans want.

Mayor's 'all wet' on gun issue

The regulatory crowd, it seems, has found a new issue: water gun control. The mayor of Boston has asked department stores to quit selling high-powered squirt guns.

Here's what happened: Some kids in Boston were having a water gun fight; one of them became angry, got a real gun and killed a 15-year-old boy. Mayor Raymond L. Flynn blamed the water guns.

In a letter to merchants, Flynn also pointed out that a woman and her 4-year-old son had received minor burns in an earlier episode when someone put bleach, instead of water, into a "Super Soaker" squirt gun.

It doesn't take a water gun, of course, to injure someone with bleach or chemicals. And people have gotten angry and resorted to deadly violence over many things besides water fights. If the boys in Boston had been playing baseball instead of with water guns when the trouble started, would the mayor have sought to ban the sale of baseball equipment?

There is nothing inherently dangerous about playing with a water gun, at least nothing more dangerous than playing with, say, a garden hose. If the Mayor Flynns of the world had their way, children would never have any fun.

Summit focused on problems

The Earth Summit — formally the U.N. Conference on Environment and Development — ended . . . in Brazil with much acrimony and disappointment among staunch environmentalists and Third World countries.

As expected, the summit revolved around expectations from southern hemisphere countries that were looking for financial aid from the richer northern nations.

President George Bush and his delegation — which managed to depart the summit as a xenophobic environmental Satan — was upstaged by the European Community and Japan. Both agreed to contribute considerably to the global ecosystem.

Canadian Maurice Strong, organizer of the summit, had to choke back tears as he told delegates from 178 nations that there was "agreement without sufficient commitment."

Much of that can be blamed on the United States, which refused, unlike most nations, to accept restrictions on carbon dioxide emissions and refused to sign a treaty to protect endangered species.

Despite the United States' lack of leadership, the Earth Summit if nothing else focused international attention on serious problems facing the global community.

Women serve notice to male Congress

WASHINGTON — A sequel to the smash comedy film "Tootsie" — the story of a down on his luck actor who masquerades as a woman to win a big job — could be in the making with a Washington twist: An incumbent congressman — in deep political trouble with voters and fighting desperately to keep his job — takes to dressing in drag. Far-fetched?

Rep. Pat Schroeder, D-Colo., told us that the sentiment, if not the script, is very real in an election year in which women are wooing large numbers of voters bent on busting the male bastion that is the U.S. Congress.

"I literally had one male colleague in the House say to me that this was the first time in his life he wished he were a woman," Schroeder recalls. "It was very funny, and it was said very sincerely."

Schroeder is one of many politicians predicting that what has been hailed as the Year of the Woman will usher in a bumper crop of new faces, new attitudes and new agendas. If more women are elected, she says, there could be a veritable coup that changes everything from bathrooms to the smoke-filled backrooms. Currently, the one bathroom near the House floor is a male bathroom, but the females have a long trek to reach one. The same applies on the Senate side.

"They (male House members) should enjoy it now because we're going to take it next year. (Those) guys get to walk," Schroeder says.

Most of the changes Schroeder foresees are of a more substantive nature, such as a heavy focus on quality of life, health and family issues. No more "jockocracy," says Schroeder, who adds, "you have to read the sports pages or you can't talk to them (male colleagues)."

Some 28 states have no women in Congress, including Texas and Pennsylvania. Now there are only two women senators (one Democrat and one Republican) and 28 congresswomen (19 Democrats and nine Republicans).

But times are changing rapidly. In the recent California primary, 19 women won their races for the House this fall. There are 17 female Senate candidates running nationwide, and 141 women running for House seats.

Theories abound that attempt to explain the female insurgency that is taking place across the country. But the Clarence Thomas hearings last fall, which showcased the all-male Senate appearing to bully Anita Hill, was a spectacle many women found inciting.

Already, at least one incumbent senator, Alan Dixon, D-Ill., was defeated by the underfunded Carol Moseley Braun because of his vote confirming Thomas as a Supreme Court justice.

Nothing illustrates the uphill climb for women better than the behind-the-scenes story of Life magazine's June cover story titled, "If Women Ran America." Life asked 98 women and two men to assemble on the Capitol steps to show what the Senate would look like if its male/female proportions were reversed. By imposing a rigorous appearance test upon the women who posed, Life seemed to make a point inadvertently about stereotyping. Several women were pulled, according to participants we interviewed, because they looked too young or because of their hair style or dress. One woman had to hide behind others in the photo because she was wearing pants.

A spokeswoman for the magazine told our associate Ed Henry that "we were looking for women that looked the part of a senator."

After November, Schroeder and others are threatening to smash these and other stereotypes.

State Department ignored Iraq warnings

WASHINGTON — A young Foreign Service officer named Frank Lemay ought to be a hero. He was the first to warn his bosses at the State Department that Iraqi President Saddam Hussein was using U.S.-backed grain loans to build a nuclear bomb.

Safire

In his memorandum of October 13, 1989, he recounted a conversation with four nervous Department of Agriculture officials who had been briefed on a probe into Iraq's multi-billion dollar abuse of the Lavoro bank's Atlanta branch.

"Payments required by Iraq of exporters . . . may have been diverted into acquiring sensitive nuclear technologies," Lemay wrote to his superiors two and a half years ago.

He reported Agriculture's inspector general to be concerned that "commodities were bartered in Jordan and Turkey for military hardware" and that the U.S. attorney in Atlanta (a former CIA man) had indicated that diverted funds "were used to procure nuclear related equipment."

Lest the diplomatic and political import of this perversion of taxpayer funds be missed, he added: "If smoke indicates fire, we may be facing a four alarm blaze in the near future."

But Frank Lemay is a pariah, not a hero, at State because his memo — made public by Rep. Henry Gonzales, D-Texas — proves that State policymakers possessed the guilty knowlege of Saddam's unlawful use of American financing.

Despite that written notification of likely diversion, Secretary of State James A. Baker III leaned on Secretary of Agriculture Clayton Yeutter to extend an additional $500 million to Saddam.

And despite Yeutter's 1989 pledge to Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., chairman of the Agriculture Committee, not to issue new credits until suspicions of corruption were resolved, Yeutter — under heavy Baker pressure — rushed the "grain" financing to Saddam.

Lemay is one of the witnesses scheduled to testify this week before the House Judiciary Committee as it decides whether to request that the attorney general determine in 30 days if evidence exists of high-level malfeasance requiring a court-appointed independent counsel.

Why is Baker allowing Lemay to appear, when the White House has refused to let higher-ups testify? The answer is provided me by a colleague of his at State: "Because Frank is being set up to be discredited by the coverup crowd at Agriculture, who have already lied to Congress. And because Frank does not know to this day what happened after his memo went upstairs."

What did happen to the Lemay warning at State? Copies went to his boss, Undersecretary for Economic Affairs Richard McCormack, who has left government, as has then-Counsel Abraham Sofaer; to Sam Hoskinson, who has gone to CIA; to State's Jack "Mr. Iraq" Covey of the Near East Bureau; and to four participants in the meeting at Agriculture.

My mid-level State source believes that McCormack took his assistant's red-hot memo to Baker and read sections of it aloud. Amazing result: the economic oversight was taken away from Economic Affairs and assigned to "Baker's man", Robert Zoellick. From that point on, the troublesome Lemay was out of the loop.

What motivated Baker, a lawyer of legendary caution, to ignore the written report of the way our money was being diverted to Saddam's nuclear program?

A better-placed source, who keeps my essays dated Nov. 30, 1989, and March 19, 1990, in his or her desk drawer, says: "At the time, this was Saddam's only ready source of major cash. And it was the only string we had on him."

String to do what? To become, in President Bush's words, a respected member of the family of nations?

"That's extremely classified. All I can say is we were asked by foreign officials at the highest levels for help on a particular matter. There was a task we wanted Iraq to accomplish and this CCC program was the only way we had to pay for it.

"Our goal," he adds, "was honorable; maybe it was a fool's errand, but it was worth a try."

Who else knows the Bush-Baker motive for knowingly allowing a dictator to divert a half billion dollars in supposed grain credits to military and nuclear use?

My source will say only that the motive was "sufficiently compelling" and the men closest to Baker then and now were in on it. But nobody that the Bush administration is sending to the Judiciary Committee knows the secret motive for corrupting our export program to pay off Saddam.

Supreme Court makes it a jungle out there

I am not one of those people who is always criticizing a Supreme Court decision — but every once in a while I wonder if the justices' elevators really go to the top floor.

The court's recent 6-to-3 decision on kidnapping is a case in point. The Supremes ruled it was legal for the United States to kidnap someone in a foreign country and bring him or her back for trial without the approval of the nation whose borders have been violated.

Buchwald

As a hard-liner I am not disturbed about the U.S. violating international law, particularly if the person kidnapped is guilty. What troubles me is that the people doing the kidnapping are prone to make mistakes, and you may wind up with a number of foreigners being snatched who have nothing to do with any American crimes.

I will give you an example.

"Alvarez, Alacazar — they both have one 'l.' Trust us. We don't make mistakes."

"But you have the wrong man. Alvarez lives in the next block. He weighs 290 pounds. I weigh 140 pounds."

"It isn't for us to decide if we have the wrong man or not. When we get you over the border we will assign you a lawyer, and it will be his job to prove you are a victim of mistaken identity. It says right here on our kidnap authorization slip that our man lives at 234 Simon Bolivar Lane. That is this house."

"But this is 234 Simon Bolivar Boulevard. Are you going to take me from family?"

"You should have thought of that before you illegally shipped 300 pounds of fireworks to your cousin on Long Island for his daughter's wedding."

"By what authority can you kidnap me from my own country?"

"By authority of the Supreme Court of the law. Come with us, Mr. Alvarez."

"Alacazar, my name is Alacazar."

"If you're going to be picky-picky about your name, we're not going to let you plea-bargain for a lighter sentence."

Although this type of behavior bothers me, what really has me distressed is that if the Supremes say we can kidnap foreign citizens, what is to prevent foreign agents from snatching ours?

"Mr. Smith, we are from the Mexican secret police. Please step into this coffin so we can take you back to Guadalajara for trial as a war criminal."

"I have never been to Guadalajara."

"Several people have identified you as Ivan the Terrible."

"My name isn't Ivan."

"Alacazar's name wasn't Alvarez, either, yet they took him anyway."

"But I am an American citizen, and we're in Santa Monica, Calif."

"We can't help it. Your Supreme Court has made it a jungle out there."

Clinton mum on running-mate search

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bill Clinton's secretive search for a running mate is said to be entering its final phase, with a handful of elected Democrats from across the party spectrum believed to be in leading contention.

Even most of Clinton's most senior advisers profess to be in the dark as to his thinking. They say no public announcement is likely until Clinton returns from a July 1-7 vacation, and perhaps not until the Democratic National Convention, which opens July 13 in New York.

Clinton has said he is moving closer to a pick but refuses to discuss names. Some Clinton advisers believe the Arkansas governor has a choice in mind, but say that speculation is based on hunches more than any signal from Clinton.

Although Democrats who have had some involvement in the process do not rule out a surprise pick, those said to be under closest scrutiny are all elected Democrats.

Sens. Albert Gore Jr. of Tennessee and Harris Wofford of Pennsylvania, for example, have been contacted for additional information in recent days, according to party sources who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Others said to be in leading contention are Sens. Jay Rockefeller of West Virginia and Bob Kerrey of Nebraska, as well as Indiana Rep. Lee Hamilton.

The political leanings of those believed in contention range across the party spectrum from moderates such as Gore and Hamilton to somewhat more liberal choices, including Kerrey and Wofford.

Democrats familiar with the search say Wofford, Gore, Kerrey, Rockefeller and Hamilton are among those who have been contacted and recontacted by members of the search committee headed by former Carter administration official Warren Christopher.

Others contacted by Christopher who are considered by prominent Democrats to be on a secondary list of potential candidates include former Arizona Gov. Bruce Babbitt, Colorado Gov. Roy Romer, Sens. Joseph Lieberman of Connecticut, Tom Harkin of Iowa and Paul Simon of Illinois.

Among possible female running mates, Texas Gov. Ann Richards is most often mentioned, but is viewed as an unlikely choice.

Quayle jeered during visit to L.A. projects

LOS ANGELES (NYT) — Vice President Dan Quayle learned first-hand about the tensions that still exist in Los Angeles as he was booed by dissatisfied residents during a tour of a public housing project.

Quayle also was cheered by schoolchildren later in the morning on Tuesday. But as he walked through the Pueblo del Rio housing project in southeast Los Angeles, Quayle faced a knot of two dozen residents holding up signs asking for jobs.

The vice president then was confronted by two residents who said that he could never understand their problems.

"Unless you live here, you don't know nothing," said Diane Freeman, 37, who has lived in the 660-unit complex for 10 years with her four children.

"That's why I'm here," Quayle said. "If I can keep an open mind, can't you?"

But another resident, who only gave his first name, Joe, questioned the reason for Quayle's visit.

"You just want to be president," Joe said. "This is just a publicity stunt. You don't care about what happens here. I know all about you white folks."

But Quayle said that his visit was designed to learn about the project.

"I'm not here to argue," Quayle said. "I want to know what you need."

Later, Quayle toured the playground of Holmes Avenue Elementary School where more than 500 excited students shook hands, received autographs and hugs from the vice president.

Pueblo del Rio is one of seven city housing projects that have qualified for $1 million in federal grants to study the steps needed to allow tenants to buy the units in which they live.

The 50-year-old Pueblo del Rio is the most ethnically mixed of all the projects operated by the city, with 45 percent Latino, 35 percent African-American and 20 percent Cambodian residents. It also has been the site of frequent clashes in the past among the residents.

Quayle also used the opportunity to continue his attack on the Democratic-controlled Congress, saying it was inaction on President Bush's domestic program that has resulted in problems.

"We have not neglected the cities," Quayle said. "They're the ones who have neglected the cities by failing to act on our reforms."

Quayle also continued his criticism of undeclared presidential candidate Ross Perot and news reports over his investigation of then-Vice President Bush.

"Ross Perot only knows two types of people," Quayle said. "Those who agree with him and those he investigates."

Bush vetoes fetal-tissue research bill

WASHINGTON (NYT) — President Bush on Tuesday vetoed legislation that would have lifted the administration's ban on federal financing of research using tissue from aborted fetuses.

Bush said he vetoed the bill "to prevent taxpayer funds from being used for research that many Americans find morally repugnant and because of its potential for promoting and legitimizing abortion."

Supporters of the measure have argued that the potential for the use of aborted tissue in treating Parkinson's disease, diabetes and Alzheimer's disease cannot be realized under the ban, which advisory committees of the National Institutes of Health have said should be ended.

Bush said in his veto message that despite the ban the research could continue, using tissue from miscarried fetuses. Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., who heads the Senate Labor and Public Welfare Committee, said that source was insufficient. "Once again, the administration's practice of government-by-veto has foisted a flawed and irresponsible policy on the nation," he said.

The House scheduled action for this morning. Action was put off Tuesday night after a long, snarling day in which Republicans repeatedly delayed proceedings, asserting that Democrats intended to impose unfair limits on their right to offer amendments to another bill, a measure that pays the expenses of running Congress.

When the House votes on whether to overturn the veto, Bush's veto is expected to be sustained. The bill was passed on May 28 by a vote of 260-148, well under the two-thirds majority required to override a veto.

But in the Senate there are enough votes to override a Bush veto for the first time. The Senate passed the bill on June 4, 85-12.

The bill provides $5.4 billion in spending authority for the National Institutes of Health and calls for greater efforts on cancer research and on women's health issues.

This was Bush's 30th veto. His 29th has not yet come up for a vote; it was a June 16 rejection of a bill that would allow three Sioux Indian tribes in South Dakota to sue for a greater share of Federal payments for their land.

The president objected to the fetal-tissue bill on several other grounds, including its cost, but his emphasis was on abortion.

He argued in his veto message that fetal-tissue research could proceed because in May he issued an executive order establishing a tissue bank to collect tissue from miscarriages and ectopic pregnancies.

But research groups argue that almost all such tissue is so damaged that it is unsuitable for research.

AMA rejects guidelines for ensuring charity care

CHICAGO (NYT) — Backed by the Texas contingent, delegates to the American Medical Association's annual convention Tuesday rejected guidelines urging doctors to ensure that the health needs of the poor are met.

A slim majority of doctors felt the proposals could lead to overly burdensome state regulations, or even lawsuits.

"To put this in the form of a violation of ethics is to shackle physicians further," said Dr. Donald Palmisano of New Orleans. "This will be used by the courts to take action against physicians. This is a problem that doesn't need a solution at this time."

Many doctors, arguing against the resolution, said they already provide an ethical amount of charity care.

Others, including some in the organization's leadership, wanted to send a message to the public that the AMA is socially responsible, and to impress that message on physicians. But the proposal was sent back to a reference committee for future consideration despite support from the AMA board.

Before the vote, Dr. Oscar Clarke, whose AMA Council on Ethical and Judicial Affairs had written the proposed guidelines, said: "There are not legal entrapments in this. We are on the high ground with this report. Many people are watching us. Vote your heart, don't vote your legal fears."

The proposed ethical guidelines for treating the poor would have gone far beyond existing AMA policy, set in 1989, that every citizen should have "access to medical care when needed."

The new guidelines not only called on doctors to "ensure that the needs of the poor in their community are met," but suggested they go beyond offering free or reduced-cost care in a doctor's office by setting up weekend clinics, volunteering at night shelters or at public hospitals and clinics.

The proposal also would have had medical societies to share the ethical obligation to treat the poor.

The proposed guidelines had stemmed in part from increasing concern over the growing number of Americans who are uninsured and underinsured.

Moreover, the AMA's own Council of Ethical and Judicial Affairs found that "the burdens of treating the indigent are unequally shared among physicians and the percentage of time directed to that pursuit appears to have dropped from historic levels."

On another measure, the AMA decided to loosen ethical restrictions for doctors who refer patients to clinics and laboratories in which they have a financial stake. The patient must be informed of the doctor's ownership and the availability of alternative facilities, however.

The resolution on what is known as "self-referral" was passed by the AMA's policy-setting House of Delegates at its annual meeting, apparently in response to recent laws in some states that severely limit the practice.

Critics have alleged that self-referrals cause price gouging, unfair competition and conflicts of interest. Some studies have found that patients end up getting more tests at labs in which their doctors have a stake.

Previous AMA policy set limited circumstances, allowing self-referral if the facility was within the owner-doctor's area of practice and the physician was the one providing direct services.

Also previously allowed were self-referrals in cases where, as in many rural Texas areas, local physicians were the primary investors in local medical facilities.

The AMA had hoped that policy would be sufficient to restore public trust in the practice of self-referral and forestall state legislation against it.

Lucci loses award, wins ovation

NEW YORK (AP) — Erica Slezak of ABC's "One Life to Live" won her third Daytime Emmy for best actress Tuesday, but Susan Lucci won a spontaneous standing ovation after losing the honor for the 13th time.

Her series, ABC's "All My Children," won its first Emmy as best drama in its history.

"Thank you, thank you," Miss Lucci, struggling against tears, told the audience of 1,500 at NBC's live, prime time telecast of the 19th Annual Daytime Emmy Awards. "I couldn't begin to tell you how much that meant to me."

Miss Lucci, co-host with Phil Donahue of the special, earned 13 best-actress nominations since she began playing the devious, manipulative Erica Kane in 1970.

"Thank you to ABC, for keeping us on for 22½ years so we could win!" said the series' executive producer, Felicia Minei Behr.

Miss Slezak, who plays Victoria Buchanan on ABC's "One Life to Live," said she was proud to have been with the show for 21 years. "I don't really know of another actress who's had that kind of opportunity ... to act, as I have, for 21 years, almost every day."

Peter Bergman, who plays Jack Abbott on CBS' "The Young and the Restless," won his second consecutive Emmy for best actor, and Oprah Winfrey won her second straight award as talk show host.

"We dedicate this to Oprah Winfrey," executive producer Debra DiMaio said in accepting the award for best talk show. "She's our muse, she's our mentor, she's our sister, she's our friend, she's one damn phenomenal woman and she's our inspiration! Thank you, Oprah."

"Sesame Street" won its 50th Emmy with the award for best children's series. "Vincent and Me" on cable's TV's Disney Channel won for children's special, and "Rugrats," on cable's Nickelodeon, won for animated program.

"Jeopardy" won its ninth Emmy as best game show, and Bob Barker won the game show host honors for CBS' "The Price is Right."

NBC's "Another World" won the Emmy for best direction, while ABC's "The Young and the Restless" won the writing award, its first in the show's 19-year history.

The award for best supporting actress went to Maeve Kinkead, who plays Vanessa Chamberlain on CBS' "Guiding Light." Thom Christopher, who plays Carlo Hesser on ABC's "One Life to Live," won the Emmy for supporting actor.

"I've kind of squelched any critics who say that daytime is about people with hair only," said Christopher, chuckling and patting his bald pate.

Kristoff St. John and Tricia Cast of CBS' top-rated "The Young and the Restless" won Emmys as outstanding younger actors.

The Daytime Emmys ceremony on NBC marked its second year live in prime time, presenting awards in 17 categories at the Sheraton New York Hotel.

Preliminary MISD budget includes teacher raises

■ MISD trustees discussed a preliminary budget that includes a 5 percent raise for teaching staff.

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff writer

Midland school board trustees discussed a preliminary 1992-93 budget with a proposed $4.2 million increase in salary costs Tuesday.

Payroll costs for 1991-92 amounted to more than $60 million. Requests for additional positions would cost more than $1.5 million next year, and an overall proposed 5 percent raise for teaching staff — including benefits — would cost an additional $2.7 million.

Total general fund requests amount to $86.7 million, but administrators expect to receive $3.6 million less from the state than previously budgeted.

After projected revenues are figured in, the proposed budget totals $86.3 million.

Last year's operating budget amounted to just less than $84 million. Trustees said more cuts might be in order before the budget is presented for approval later in the summer.

Trustee Gary Willis said, "We are hearing there will be no new state money in 1993-94, at best. As the population continues to grow and they don't send one more dollar ... what are we going to do?"

State leaders recently announced that they will not be able to provide the full $3 billion in additional money that was to be phased in as part of the 1991 school finance equalization plan. So far, the state has provided $1.3 billion but will not have the revenues to provide the rest.

Trustee George Staley also voiced concern about the budget being fully funded. "We need more flexibility in the budget, and a cushion," he said.

The proposed budget requests additional personnel, including five teachers for the new Viola Coleman High School, seven secondary school teachers and 16 full-time elementary school teachers to meet state mandates of teacher-to-pupil ratios.

Following an executive session at the Tuesday meeting, trustees announced the appointment of new principals. David Dennis, instructional services director at Lee High School, will be the new principal at Alamo Junior High School. Former Alamo principal David Adams will be the principal of Abell Junior High School.

Thomas Miller was named principal of Ben Milam Elementary, effective Aug. 3. Miller served previously as administrative intern to Fannin Elementary School, Bunche and West Early Childhood Centers, and Carver Cultural Center.

Susan Ward, an administrative intern for Bonham and Washington Elementary Schools, has been named principal of Bowie Elementary School. Former Bowie principal Bob Watkins will be the principal of Santa Rita with Santa Rita principal William Mauer taking the helm of the Barney Greathouse Elementary School when it opens in the 1993-94 school year.

Trustees announced they will meet in executive session 5 p.m. Friday to decide the replacement of Principal Dolores Medrano at DeZavala Elementary School. Ms. Medrano has taken a job outside of the school district.

In other action items trustees approved merit pay stipends for librarians, counselors and diagnosticians.

They also approved two pilot programs for kindergarteners in Crockett and Bush Elementary Schools.

Unemployment rate inches up to 7.4 percent

By Mella McEwen
Staff writer

Midland's unemployment rate continued more than 2 percent above year-earlier levels in May, according to figures released Tuesday by the Texas Employment Commission.

The city's unemployment rate for May rose to 7.4 percent, up from 7.2 percent in April and from 5.1 percent in May 1991.

An estimated 100 Midlanders left the civilian labor force during May. The labor pool stood at 50,100 for the month, as compared to 50,200 a month earlier and 48,900 a year earlier.

Total employment also fell, by 200 to 46,400; it was at that same figure a year ago.

Total unemployment rose by 100 to 3,700 during the month; it was 2,500 in May 1991. The figures indicate that of the 200 Midlanders who left the ranks of the employed, 100 people joined the unemployed and 100 either were not job-hunting or were no longer in Midland.

In Odessa, the unemployment rate inched up to 10.1 percent from 10 percent.

Midland and Odessa's weak job markets are consistent with other markets in the state, according to TEC officials, who say the Texas economy remains largely in the grip of the slow national economy.

Among the TEC's metropolitan statistical areas, Midland ranked 16th, tied with Brazoria and Waco. Odessa ranked 24th. Bryan-College Station had the lowest rate in the state, 4.2 percent. It was followed by Austin with 5.1 percent, Amarillo with 5.6 percent, San Angelo with 6.1 percent and Lubbock with 6.2 percent. McAllen-Edinburg-Mission had the highest unemployment in the rate, 15.5 percent.

Statewide, the rate remained at 7.4 percent for the third month; it was 6.3 percent in May 1991.

There were 645,000 Texans out of work, up from 540,200 a year ago.

Total employment in May was 8.08 million, up from 7.99 million a year ago.

"The state's unemployment rate is too high and too inflexible," Texas Employment Commissioner Mary Scott Nabers said.

"Defense (industry) cutbacks are really beginning to impact labor market statistics in Texas. Many ex-federal employees are now drawing unemployment benefits, and that trend appears to set an upward spiral at least for the time being," she said.

"The good news is there were additional jobs. But the bad news is that most of these were lower-paying positions. That is an economic negative — a change we do not like," Ms. Nabers said.

Employment program receives more funding

Staff report

The Summer Youth Employment and Training Program, funded through the Job Training Partnership Act (JTPA), has been expanded, according to Willie Taylor, director of Employment and Training for the Permian Basin Private Industry Council.

The 17-county Permian Basin Region will be able to serve 300 more youths between the ages of 14 and 21 years. Currently, 186 worksites are serving more than 800 youths in the first round of the Summer Youth Employment and Training program that began earlier this month.

Commenting on the impact of the additional funding, Taylor said, "Our funds were cut drastically this year. There simply wasn't enough money to begin touching the needs here. This new money will help some kids have clothes for school this fall, and, hopefully, make it possible to return to school instead of dropping out."

President Bush signed legislation earlier this week that would put an additional $500 million into the summer youth programs. Concerns about inner city youth and lack of work opportunities prompted Congress to direct that 75 of the country's major urban areas would receive $100 million allocated directly.

In Texas, the cities of Arlington, Austin, Corpus Christi, Dallas, El Paso, Fort Worth, Houston and San Antonio will receive direct funding totalling approximately $40.7 million.

The State of Texas will allocate approximately $28 million to the remaining areas using the same formula established earlier this year when the original grants were announced.

In the first wave of the Summer Youth Program, the Permian Basin program geared up to spend $616,000 for training and employment wages. The second wave of funding, $369,000, will enable field offices in Big Spring, Odessa, Midland, Fort Stockton, Pecos, Lamesa, Andrews and Seminole to expand the number of youths being served and the worksite programs based in non-profit and public sector agencies.

In Midland, office manager W.C. Wilson said his staff will be enrolling additional youths

Rice chosen for CAF director position

By Ed Todd
Staff writer

Bob Rice, a retired U.S. Army colonel and aviator, has been elected executive director of the Confederate Air Force (CAF) and the American Airpower Heritage Group, according to Joe Mabee, chief of staff of the Midland-based group.

Rice

Rice, 50, served as the CAF's director of flight operations until January, when the general staff appointed him acting executive director following the resignation of Richard "Ish" Ingram.

"We are ecstatic that we have a man of such high caliber," Mabee said of Rice. "In my 16 years in the CAF, I think he has brought more integrity and responsibility to the office than I have seen."

Rice was the general staff's unanimous choice for the job.

"He is by far the best that I've ever seen," Mabee said. "He is very mild yet firm."

Ingram, a retired U.S. Air Force brigadier general who fulfilled his one-year contract in helping get the CAF headquarters established in Midland in 1991, earlier described Rice as a "great manager and a great leader. He's a perfect gentleman."

Rice had been "part and parcel" in building the CAF Midland headquarters and in establishing the world-class American Airpower Heritage Museum at Midland International Airport, Ingram said.

The 1957-founded CAF moved to Midland from Harlingen last year.

The American Airpower Heritage Group includes the CAF, the American Airpower Heritage Foundation, the American Airpower Heritage Museum, and the American Airpower Heritage Flying Museum of World War II-era warplanes.

The CAF's fleet — Ghost Squadron — of 140 warplanes of the 1939-'45 period includes 80 aircraft in airworthy condition. The other aircraft are in various phases of restoration, Mabee said. CAF airplanes include trainers, pursuit aircraft (fighters), bombers, transports, and liaison and rescue aircraft from the war's Allied forces and the Axis powers.

Much of the year, CAF aircraft and their crews are on tour to explain the role of air power in World War II.

Currently, the four-engine Consolidated B-24 Liberator, "Dia-

City OKs advertisement; painting to be delayed

By Debbie Lincecum
Staff writer

A water tower advertisement got the City Council's okay Tuesday, but drivers aren't likely to see the message for at least four more months.

The water tower at Midland International Airport will be painted to honor the Confederate Air Force and will include a Coca-Cola logo. The soft drink company gave the CAF $30,000 in advertising money.

But contractor troubles and the long delay in reaching an agreement about the slogan have left the city with no choice but to hold off on painting the tower's outside until October, officials said. Repainting on the inside of the tower is complete.

In addition, most of the scraping of old, lead-based paint on the outside of the tower is done — a preparatory step for the new coat of paint.

Deputy City Manager Mike McGregor said the tower is badly needed for water storage during the hot summer months, so it must be filled immediately. Both the contractor and the health department, he said, have said it can't be painted while it is full of water because of condensation and possible safety hazards.

So the water tower will remain as it is for about four months. Painting is hoped to begin in October or November.

When complete, the tower will read, "Home of the Confederate Air Force" with a wing logo and a small Coca-Cola logo across a red and blue Texas flag. The Coke advertisement is slated to be 3 feet tall by 5 feet wide, about half as tall as the CAF letters.

According to the agreement between the city and the soft drink company, the tower sign will stay up for one year, after which the face could be repainted.

There had been talk of leasing out the face to other advertisers after the time limit, but delays in negotiations created frustration.

"Next year, when this comes up (for renewal), let's declare this thing a non-commercial water tower," said James Devenport, District 1 representative.

Texas lawman dies in auto accident in Waco

N.Y. Times News Service

Clint Peoples, the epitome of an old-time Texas lawman who rose to head the fabled Texas Rangers in the 1960s and retired in 1989 as an executive U.S. Marshal, has died.

Peoples, 81, was killed Monday when the car he was driving veered off the road and hit a utility pole in Waco, Texas, his adopted hometown.

A colorful crimefighter in a western straw hat, Peoples began his 59-year career hunting bootleggers, hog thieves and gangsters in Depression-era southeast Texas.

"He was a good man, a good law enforcement officer and a good friend," said Texas Ranger Capt. Bob Mitchell, who worked with Peoples for 35 years.

Said Tom Burks, curator of the Texas Ranger Hall of Fame: "A man who was in it for that much time, who rose that high — that speaks for itself."

Born in Bridgeport and raised on the King Ranch in south Texas, Peoples started in 1930 as a deputy sheriff in Montgomery County, north of Houston. For 11 years, through the rowdy and desperate days of oil boom and Deression, he worked the piney woods, fields and barrooms around the county seat of Conroe. He remembered that time as his "roughest."

"I didn't get into this work because I wanted to feel a gun on my hip, but in those days I carried two, one on each side," People told a reporter in 1978. "We had to. It was that bad."

Conroe, a fast-living boomtown, drew its share of gangland characters, including the bankrobbing couple of Bonnie Parker and Clyde Barrow.

As the story goes, in 1934 Peoples stopped a suspected moonshiner who said he knew where Bonnie and Clyde were because he and others were supplying them with food and water.

"Bonnie and Clyde had relatives in that part of the piney woods and that's where they came to cool their heels," Peoples told an interviewer in 1987.

Peoples and several other law enforcement officials staked out the Nacogdoches River bottoms in hopes of ambushing the gangsters when they fled the shack in which they were hiding. The lawmen soon learned that they had fled to Arcadia, La., where a six-man posse ambushed and killed them several days later.

In line with his straight-arrow persona, Peoples was fond of telling another Depression-era story involving a father of five whom he caught stealing a 48-pound sack of flour from a Conroe grocer. Peoples would recall how he paid the grocer for the stolen flour. Years later, when he had nearly forgotten the incident, the man reimbursed him, saying he finally got a job.

In 1941, Peoples moved to Kingsville to take a job with the Texas Highway Patrol. He had been promoted to captain by the time he joined the Texas Rangers in 1945. In one way or another — as a lawman at the scene, as undercover agent, or as administrator — he was involved over the next 20 years in investigating most of the biggest crimes in the state.

"He was a real innovator," recalled former Department of Public Safety director Col. Wilson Speir, who had known Peoples since 1941.

As the Rangers' senior captain and top administrator from 1968 until 1974, Peoples instituted entrance exams, installed its first training and education programs and outfitted the service in tan dress uniforms with black ties.

Regarded by Speir as "a man good at public relations," Peoples was credited with blunting the crisis brought on by a 1970 U.S. Civil Rights Commission report accusing the Rangers of various abuses in connection with the beating of farm workers during a strike in the lower Rio Grande Valley in 1966.

Peoples responded by insisting that Rangers not be used to police strikes unless asked to by both labor and management or by local police.

Also in those years, Peoples played a central role in raising the $800,000 used to build the Texas Ranger Hall of Fame in Waco. It was completed in the early 1970s and ranks as that city's most popular tourist attraction.

In 1974, at age 64, Peoples was named federal marshal of the Northern District of Texas, a Dallas-based post he held for 14 years. In 1988, he was made an executive marshal, an honorary position given him by President Ronald Reagan, and he spent the final year of his career helping organize the marshals' bicentennial celebration.

Richards urges cooperation in fighting urban troubles

HOUSTON (AP) — Gov. Ann Richards said Tuesday she hopes the Los Angeles riots have convinced the federal government that urban areas are facing serious common threats and need help to overcome their economic and social problems.

Richards, speaking to the U.S. Conference of Mayors, said she was pleased Washington had approved funding to help rebuild that city, but she added it "is a damn shame we nearly had to burn the city of Los Angeles to get their attention."

The Texas governor also said the nation "can no longer afford to militarily defend financially strong countries any more than we can build other nations at the expense of our own people. And that is what we are doing."

"That is not an attitude of isolationism. It is a matter of survival for this nation," Richards said.

She spoke during a noon luncheon held to present awards to seven cities that have launched innovative programs to fight drunken driving. The awards are sponsored by the mayors conference and the Century Council, a nonprofit organization dedicated to reducing alcohol abuse.

The National City Challenge to Stop Drunk Driving Awards were announced by John Gavin, former U.S. Ambassador to Mexico and current chairman of the Century Council.

While criticizing the federal government, Richards also urged more cooperation between state and local leaders as they try to cope with growing problems and shrinking resources.

"The lack of leadership and responsibility at the top has created government by adversarial combat," she said. "They stay in office by pitting us against each other, and we are so desperate for dollars and for jobs, for anything that will help us meet the needs of our people, that we are more than ready for the fight."

"There's not much question about whether a federal program is good or not, the only question is 'How do I get some of the money, for my state, for my city, for my district.'"

State and local governments spend so much time competing against each other, Richards said, that there is little energy left to deal with the real challenge — international competition.

"Federal funds have been cut, state governments have not been able to pick up the slack or they have broken budgets trying to do so," she said. "As the feds look down on their deficit, they decide to take aim on us by sending us programs and sending us mandates without the money to pay for them."

Although she said many federal officials have good intentions, she complained it has become common practice to "pass on the responsibility without taking responsibility for the bill that has to be paid."

"We watch Washington in their limo cruise down the fast lane and we are standing their with our thumbs stuck out, and frankly it is not the hand signal of choice," she told the mayors, most of whom laughed at the remark.

mond Lil," is on a tour of Europe as an ambassador of Midland, Mabee said.

And the Boeing B-29 Superfortress, "Fifi," soon is to take to the air for its annual tour of the continental United States. Both bombers are based in Midland.

Rice, who was named to his post in Midland Saturday, subsequently announced headquarters staff changes.

Norma Webb, the CAF's director of marketing and communications, will take charge of the CAF's development program on July 1.

Ms. Webb will be succeeded by Barbi Woods, the CAF flight operations coordinator. Debbie Calloway, an administrative assistant, is taking over flight operations.

"Norma will be an excellent person to do that," Mabee said of Ms. Webb's new duties, which include funding an endowment to help finance the restoration, maintenance, and operation of CAF aircraft.

"They are getting so old and so expensive for the (CAF) volunteers to operate," Mabee said of the airplanes. "We see this as a future need of high priority."

"I will be seeking funding for education, historical preservation, museum development, the restoration of nose art, and to endow the fleet — to save our rare warbirds from extinction," Ms. Webb said. "It's exciting because there are lots of opportunities and challenges."

Mabee described Ms. Woods as "very personable," with "a lot of enthusiasm. It's kind of catching. If you are around her too much, you will go to work."

"It's really going to be a challenge," Ms. Woods said of her new role in CAF public relations. "And I'm really looking forward to working with everyone in the community."

into the program from a waiting list of more than 200 applicants who applied for the program earlier this spring. If that list is not sufficient to recruit the number needed, an announcement will be made at a later date.

"My office is swamped," Wilson said. "It is important to make the public aware that calling or visiting our office to follow up on prior applications or the progress of enrollment is not appropriate at this time and will slow down the process of getting the program expansion up and running.

Wilson expects to begin the second round of the program on July 13.

Jackson offers praise for Clinton economic program

HOUSTON (AP) — Jesse Jackson said Tuesday that Bill Clinton's economic program heads in "the right direction, down the right road" but revived his complaint of an affront from the Democratic presidential candidate.

Speaking to the U.S. Conference of Mayors, the civil rights leader renewed his vow not to endorse Clinton or any other candidate before next month's Democratic National Convention in New York.

Jackson did say Clinton's $50 billion program, which would be financed by tax increases and spending cuts, "allows the national debate to shift to real issues."

"It deserves serious analysis and comprehensive debate," Jackson said. "To paraphrase a gospel song, he has come a long way from where he started."

But Jackson complained anew about Clinton's remarks 10 days ago at a meeting of Jackson's Rainbow Coalition.

Clinton had used that forum to take issue with harshly worded racial remarks by rapper Sister Souljah, also a Jackson guest.

The Arkansas governor's comments have been widely viewed as a political plus, showing him as his own man and unafraid to stand up to Jackson. But the price tag has been a prolonged public dispute with Jackson.

Jackson told a news conference that Clinton had followed a "calculated strategy" designed to distance himself from Jackson.

"This was part of a week of activities of political calculation" by Clinton, Jackson said. He cited that as one reason why he will not make an endorsement before the convention.

Triggering the entire flap were Sister Souljah's remarks to a newspaper that were interpreted widely as suggesting white people should be murdered.

Jackson spoke a day after Clinton won praise from Democratic mayors, including several black mayors, for his economic proposal that includes $20 billion in public works projects sought by urban leaders.

One black mayor, Atlanta's Maynard Jackson, had flatly refused to discuss the rapper controversy in a deliberate effort to keep the focus on Clinton's plan.

Jesse Jackson told the mayors Clinton's plan "shows an authentic concern for the urban crisis and the need to reinvest."

He said Clinton's plan to cut 5 percent from defense spending over four years was "a good start" but not enough.

Jackson also applauded Clinton's proposal to increase taxes on the wealthy but said it too was "a small step."

"The Clinton plan points us in the right direction, down the right road," he said.

Jackson outlined his own plan, which he has developed in meetings with financier Felix Rohatyn and others, to use billions of dollars in pension funds as capital for domestic investment. The money would be secured through a tax increase.

Jerry Brown, Clinton's unsuccessful primary opponent, took a more skeptical view of Clinton's plan.

Brown told mayors they should push for half the money, $25 billion, from the Democratic-controlled Congress this year. He said that would provide "a downpayment" on the program, and that if President Bush vetoed the bill it would still provide voters with a clear choice in November.

"It's OK to say the check's in the mail — I'd rather have it in hand," Brown said.

He ridiculed the $1 billion urban aid bill just signed by Bush, saying it showed Washington regards the crisis in cities as "worth less than one-day's borrowing of the federal government."

"Let's be real," Brown said. "Clinton was here proposing $50 billion a year. Congress ... came up with $1 billion There's a gap between the rhetoric and the reality."

Bush's drug policy chief, Bob Martinez, delivered a harsh attack on independent presidential candidate Ross Perot in his speech to the mayors. He called Perot "a secretive computer salesman with a penchant for skullduggery" who is "not fit to be president."

Officials charge 3 with murder in shootings

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. (AP) — A third suspect was charged with capital murder Tuesday in the weekend execution-style shootings in Houston that resulted in four deaths,and two Texas investigators went to Alabama to help try to solve the case, police said.

Three gunmen barged into a house in southwest Houston Saturday night and tied up and shot the six people inside, including a pregnant teen-ager, officials said. A survivor told police the men came in brandishing weapons and demanding money.

Antonia Lamone Dunson, 19, believed to be from the Birmingham-Tuscaloosa area, was charged with capital murder late Tuesday, Houston police spokesman Robert Hurst said.

Arthur Brown Jr., 21, and Marion Butler Dudley Jr., 20, both also believed to be from the Tuscaloosa area, were charged with capital murder in the case late Monday. All three men remained at large Tuesday, authorities said.

"These are the three that witnesses have identified as being there at the house on Saturday," Hurst said.

Hurst said authorities were searching in Alabama for the suspects, but also were looking in other areas and states that he did not identify.

"At this time, it's still an open investigation," he said.

Officials have received contradictory information as to whether the suspects are in the Tuscaloosa area, the city's police chief, Ken Swindle, said at a news conference Tuesday.

Swindle said Brown and Dudley both have been involved with drugs, but would not elaborate.

Houston authorities said they believe the mass attack may have been linked to drugs, although only a small amount of marijuana was found in the house.

"We think they came to town to rip them off and then kill them," one investigator has said.

Two homicide detectives from the Houston Police Department arrived in Tuscaloosa Tuesday, Hurst said.

Swindle said the Houston officers will go through a beige minivan found in Tuscaloosa and help in other aspects of the case. The van, discovered midday Monday at an apartment complex, is similar to one witnesses described fleeing the shooting scene.

Swindle said the minivan had been rented from a Tuscaloosa agency by a third party. He said that person had been interviewed and released, but would not say what the third person's relationship was to the two suspects.

Houston police spokesman Joe Gamino said he didn't know whether either of the two survivors of Saturday's attack identified the two suspects in photographs.

Police called to the shooting scene shortly before 11 p.m. Saturday found the victims in various rooms, their hands tied behind their backs.

Jessica Quinones, 19, who was seven months pregnant, and Jose Tovar, 32, died at the scene. Frank Farias, 17, and Audrey Brown, 21, died the next day.

The two other victims, Alexander Camarillo, 22, and Rachel Tovar, 33, both were in fair condition Tuesday at Ben Taub General Hospital.

Plaintiffs push $2 billion plan

AUSTIN (AP) — A $2 billion plan to improve higher education in the border area was offered Tuesday by Hispanic leaders as a way to end a lawsuit in which Texas' public college and university system has been declared unconstitutional.

State leaders promised to review the proposed settlement, praised its goals, but said a lack of money would be a major hurdle.

Gov. Ann Richards said the proposal "is an ambitious list," and added, "It's very difficult for me to figure how successful it will be."

The 10-year blueprint is designed to lift higher education opportunities in the region up to par with the rest of the state. The 41-county area runs from the Coastal Bend to El Paso.

Supporters of the proposal promised to scrutinize all funding sources to provide the $200 million per year needed for implementation. And they said they were not afraid to seek a tax increase if that's what it took.

"We are not new when it comes to putting our necks on the line," said state Sen. Carlos Truan, D-Corpus Christi.

In January, a judge in Brownsville declared the state's higher education system unconstitutional because it deprived border area residents of access to educational opportunities available to other Texans.

State District Judge Ben Euresti Jr. gave the state until May 1, 1993 to fix the inequities. The state has appealed to the Texas Supreme Court, which has scheduled oral arguments in the case Oct. 13.

But plaintiffs said Tuesday they would drop their lawsuit if the state accepted their proposal.

Norma Cantu, an attorney representing the League of United Latin American Citizens, said the settlement would "give people in the border area the opportunities that people outside the border area already have."

Frozen side dishes not missed

By Linda Anderson

For those who think frozen dinners contain too much corn and apple sauce (mashed potatoes, tater tots, mixed vegetables or whatever) and not enough entree, new Healthy Portion frozen entrees from Tyson might be the answer.

Anderson

Tyson, which basically specializes in chicken dishes, has introduced Healthy Portion single-serving entrees, which feature some kind of chicken on a bed of pasta, rice or potatoes.

Since I am one of those above-mentioned people (to me, corn or peas in a frozen dinner is just a waste of time), I bought four varieties of Healthy Portion entrees to check them out for taste, price and advertising accuracy.

The four chicken-and-side-dish entrees I bought were Italian style, Salsa, Herb and Barbecue. All contained pieces of boneless chicken (remember, frozen dinner chicken is somewhere between fresh-cooked chicken and "parts is parts" chicken) on a bed of pasta, rice or potatoes. All four cost $2.99 each for a 13.75 ounce single-serving.

Since this product has the word "healthy" in its name, label advertising is geared for that mind-set: "Tyson Healthy Portion meals are created with your healthy, active lifestyle in mind. These gourmet inspired combinations are low fat, low cholesterol and sodium controlled." Even those of us who live a non- "healthy, active lifestyle" can appreciate that.

The Italian style dinner consisted of "Pasta Primavera; Boneless, Skinless, Chicken Breast Strips & Italian Herb Glaze," according to its label. I always get nervous when something is described as a "glaze" and it's supposed to be on some kind of meat — I do not like anything sweet with any kind of meat — but this glaze was not sweet at all.

The entree was just the right size — no corn or strange tasting mashed potatoes in sight — with plenty of noodles with pieces of broccoli, carrots and zucchini (Italian, you know). I enjoyed it.

I tried the Salsa kind too, but it wasn't hot enough. Had a nice flavor, but it wasn't salsa.

The entrees were the right size and without all the extras that I'm not going to eat anyway. They weren't too expensive (though they weren't too inexpensive either) so that I can indulge in them now and then.

And I probably will. I liked them.

Price listed is from a local supermarket. Prices at other locations may vary.

Microwave makes dinner in a hurry

Associated Press

No time to cook? Roll turkey cutlets and turkey ham around sticks of Monterey Jack cheese. Cook in your microwave oven. Top with yogurt or a sour cream substitute. Dinner is served!

TURKEY ROLL-UPS

⅓ cup maple syrup
1 tablespoon margarine
1 pound turkey cutlets or slices
2 slices (about ⅛-inch thick) turkey ham, cut in half
1 ounce Monterey Jack cheese, cut into ¼x1x2-inch sticks
2 teaspoons Creole seasoning
¼ cup pecans, finely chopped
4 tablespoons yogurt (optional)

In an 8-inch microwave-safe dish, combine syrup and margarine. Cook on high (100 percent power) 20 to 30 seconds or until margarine is melted; set aside.

On each cutlet, place a turkey ham slice. Arrange a cheese stick at one end of the ham-topped cutlet. Roll cutlets, jellyroll style, to encase cheese. Place turkey rolls, seam side down, in baking dish with syrup mixture. Sprinkle each roll with ½ teaspoon Creole seasoning. Cover dish with waxed paper. Cook on 100 percent power for 1½ minutes. Rotate dish one-half turn. Baste rolls with sauce. Sprinkle pecans over top; cover again with waxed paper. Cook on 100 percent power for 2½ minutes. Allow turkey rolls to stand, covered, 1 to 2 minutes before serving. Top each with 1 tablespoon yogurt, if desired.

Celebration foods are 'melting pot'

By Jonathan A. Zearfoss

Associated Press

In recent years, ingredients and preparations from diverse cultural backgrounds have been shared and mixed, something of an American melting pot cuisine.

For example, many Americans of Vietnamese heritage have settled in Texas. There they have found foods similar to those of their former homeland. This has resulted in an overlapping of two distinct cultures, such as the recipe below for Asian-style marinade, which goes great with traditional Texas barbecue.

A melting pot theme can be taken one step further with the addition of Virginia corn bread, a recipe from Jeff Duncan, a native of Blacksburg, Va.
binations together.

Each recipe is high in flavor and low in fat, so let's celebrate a melting pot Fourth of July!

VIRGINIA CORN BREAD

2 cups self-rising cornmeal
1 cup all-purpose flour
1 tablespoon baking powder
1 teaspoon baking soda
½ teaspoon salt
2 eggs
1½ cups buttermilk

Preheat oven to 325 degrees F. Grease an 8x8-inch baking pan. Combine dry ingredients. In a separate bowl, combine eggs and buttermilk. Add liquid ingredients to dry; stir just until mixed. Pour batter into prepared baking pan. Bake in a 325-degree F oven about 20 minutes, or until a skewer or toothpick inserted in the center comes out clean.

Note: If self-rising cornmeal is not available in your area, substitute regular yellow cornmeal and increase baking powder to 1½ tablespoons and salt to 1 teaspoon.

ASIAN-STYLE MARINADE FOR SHRIMP OR CHICKEN

¼ teaspoon Chinese five-spice powder, or a combination of star anise, fennel seed, cinnamon, Szechuan pepper, nutmeg and cloves
3 drops hot pepper sauce
½ teaspoon chopped fresh ginger
1 clove garlic, minced
1 tablespoon rice vinegar
1 teaspoon fish sauce or soy sauce
½ teaspoon sesame oil

Combine all ingredients. Coat shrimp or chicken and marinate about 1 hour before grilling. Makes enough for 30 shrimp or five chicken breasts.

Peaches are just peachy for spiked sorbet

By Nancy Byal
Associated Press

Perfectly ripened peaches, citrus and wine give this dessert its summer-fresh flavor. To select peaches at their peak, look for well-shaped fruit with no blemishes or soft spots.

You can tell if they're ripe by gently pressing the skin. They should feel firm to slightly soft. The skin color may vary from golden yellow to dark reddish brown, but the fruit should have no hint of green. To ripen firm peaches, store them in a paper bag at room temperature until they're slightly soft, then refrigerate the ripe fruit for up to five days or make the sorbet below.

SPIKED PEACH SORBET

1¼ pounds fresh peaches, peeled, pitted and cut up (2½ cups), or one 16-ounce package frozen unsweetened peach slices, thawed slightly
3 tablespoons lemon juice
1 cup sugar
1 cup boiling water
1 cup dry white wine
1½ teaspoons finely shredded orange peel
Long, thin strips of orange peel (optional)
Raspberries (optional)

In a blender container or food processor bowl combine peaches and lemon juice; cover and blend or process until smooth. In a large mixing bowl combine sugar and boiling water; stir until sugar is dissolved. Stir in peach mixture, wine and shredded orange peel. Turn into a 9x9x2-inch pan; cover and freeze 3 to 4 hours or until firm.

Break the frozen mixture into chunks; transfer to a chilled, large mixer bowl. Beat with an electric mixer on medium-high speed until smooth. Return to pan; cover. Freeze for several hours or until firm.

Before serving, let stand 20 minutes at room temperature. Scoop into dessert dishes. Garnish with orange peel strips and berries, if desired. Makes 8 servings.

Americans sample pleasures of eating exotic vegetables

By Joan Cirillo
Associated Press

Americans are being introduced to new and exotic plants — and this is changing the produce we eat and the way we prepare it, says cookbook author Colette Rossant.

"About 15 years ago, you ate Boston lettuce, romaine and escarole," Rossant said. "Today, you have half a dozen or more different types of salads." Her new cookbook, "Vegetables," is an outgrowth of this trend (Viking, $40).

"Vegetables" clearly categorizes vegetables, showing what each looks like, when and where it is available, and how it should be selected, stored and cooked.

Rossant tell readers about root vegetables, miniature vegetables and Chinese vegetables — crunchy lotus root, cardoon (an edible thistle popular in Mediterranean countries) and Romanesco cauliflower; fiddlehead fern, cactus leaf and salicornia (a salty, crunchy, briny plant that grows in marshes and along seacoasts).

One reason for this change, Rossant says, is that in the past 15 years, a new crop of farmers has emerged who are not necessarily from traditional farming families. Although the innovators began in California, farmers in New York, New Jersey and Florida are growing and developing new produce.

"They've collected unusual seeds from around the world, as well as developed new produce, such as miniature vegetables," she said.

Another reason for change: Americans are seeking a more healthful diet, and new vegetables will continue to be discovered and developed because of the new generation of environmentally-conscious consumers.

"We are going to really start being careful of what we grow and how we grow it," she said.

In addition, the farm market movement — and its green markets — has grown in cities throughout the country. "There is a new contact between the farmer and the public who buys these products. They talk to one another. They find out what one another wants," she said.

Finally, Rossant says, a new generation of chefs — with their aesthetic presentation and unusual treatment of foods — has elevated the importance of vegetables, and made Americans more aware of these foods.

Spicy Southwestern salad, dressing perfect for summer dining

Associated Press

A dressing made with chili powder and cumin — and strips of Monterey Jack cheese — add a Southwestern flavor to tomato and orange salad. Serve with corn tortillas, crisp taco triangles or ears of fresh corn.

MONTEREY TOMATO AND ORANGE SALAD

2½ cups tomatoes, cut in wedges
1 6-ounce package sliced Monterery Jack cheese, cut in ½-inch strips (about 1 and ⅓ cups)
1 cup green bell pepper, sliced and halved
1 cup orange sections
1 cup cucumbers, peeled, sliced and halved
2 tablespoons vegetable oil
2 tablespoons orange juice
2 tablespoons plain, low-fat yogurt
1½ teaspoons chili powder
1 teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon ground cumin
Pinch ground red pepper

In a large bowl, combine tomatoes, cheese, green pepper, orange sections and cucumber. In a small bowl, combine oil, orange juice, yogurt, chili powder, salt, cumin and pepper. Pour over vegetables; toss to coat. Serve over salad greens, if desired. Makes 3 to 4 servings.

DEAR ABBY

Man hopes his 'teen angel' is still waiting in the wings

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Twenty years ago, when I was a senior in high school, I dated a sweet, bright and very pretty girl I'll call "Lisa." I was crazy about her, but I am ashamed to say that I hurt her deeply when I dropped her because I was ready for a sexual relationship and she wasn't.

Van Buren

I ended up dating several girls I couldn't take home to Momma, and Lisa started dating a real "straight arrow."

I lost track of Lisa when she went off to college and became engaged to the straight arrow. I married someone else and later divorced (no children), but I've never been able to forget Lisa.

With our 20th high school reunion approaching, I've been in touch with some old friends from high school and learned that Lisa never married the straight arrow — in fact, she never married at all. However, she had a son a few years ago and gave him the same first name as mine. While it may have been a coincidence, it is not a very common name. Now I'm wondering if maybe she hasn't been able to forget me either, but I haven't the faintest idea of how to approach her.

I live 2,000 miles from my hometown, and don't know if there is another man in Lisa's life. I would go to the reunion if I knew she'd be there and was not involved. But how do I find out? I don't want to contact old friends for fear of making a fool of myself.

Any ideas, Abby? — REMEMBERING LISA

DEAR REMEMBERING: Don't worry about making a fool of yourself. Use whatever means you have to track down Lisa. One telephone call to her will tell you all you need to know.

However, don't get your hopes up. Even if Lisa goes to the reunion solo, she may not be the girl you remember from your high school days. And you may not be the boy she remembers. But it's worth a gamble. Win or lose, it could be an exciting adventure.

DEAR ABBY: I have a problem concerning my wedding, which will take place in August in a banquet hall instead of a church. Bill (not his real name) and I have been dating long enough to know that we are right for each other. This is a first marriage for both of us.

My problem is that Bill doesn't want to wear a necktie. I have no problem with this because I know Bill hates neckties. However, my mother is upset; she says she will be embarrassed in front of her friends if Bill doesn't wear a tie.

Abby, you have always given great advice in the past. Bill says I should ask you, and he will do whatever you say. So what do you say? — BILL'S "TWEETIE PIE" (HIS NAME FOR ME)

DEAR TWEETIE PIE: Where is it written that the bridegroom MUST wear a tie? Couples have been married parachuting from airplanes, suspended from hot air balloons, and even under water. If Bill is mature enough for marriage, then he — not your mother — is responsible for what he wears. This big day belongs to you and Bill. Please yourselves and don't worry about your mother.

DEAR READERS: Spied in the column titled "Sno' Foolin' " by A.C. Snow in the News and Observer in Raleigh, N.C.:

"All the media mileage on candidates' past peccadilloes makes us appreciate Dorothy Sayers' comment:

'As I grow older and older
'And totter toward the tomb
'I find that I care less and less
'Who goes to bed with whom.' "

Everything you'll need to know about planning a wedding can be found in Abby's booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." To order, send a long, business-size, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included.)

Grilled shrimp served with herb butter

By Pierre Franey
N.Y. Times News Service

Any cook who is experienced in outdoor grilling knows that there is a nettlesome problem in the technique. You want the ingredients to remain moist and full of flavor, yet excessive basting and marinating leads to liquids and oils dripping onto the coals, causing flare-ups and burning.

I thought about this while preparing some grilled shrimp with herb butter recently. The shrimp are tossed in a mustard vinaigrette with thyme, but they are brushed carefully before cooking to minimize flare-ups.

Much of the moisture and flavor in this dish comes from a separate herb butter sauce, which is easy to make and is endlessly versatile.

In this recipe the herb butter is made by combining shallots cooked in wine with a little cream and butter. I chose not to baste the shrimp with this incendiary sauce and instead just serve it at the table. Jumbo shrimp should cook thoroughly in about four minutes.

GRILLED SHRIMP WITH HERB BUTTER

24 jumbo shrimp, about 2 pounds, shelled and deveined
¼ teaspoon red pepper flakes
4 tablespoons Dijon mustard
2 tablespoons olive oil, plus extra for brushing
2 tablespoons fresh lemon juice
1 tablespoon chopped fresh thyme or 1 teaspoon dried
Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste
Herb butter (see recipe)

Preheat outdoor grill or oven broiler to high.

In a bowl, combine the shrimp with the red pepper, mustard, olive oil, lemon juice, thyme, salt and pepper, and blend well.

Arrange 6 shrimps on each of 4 skewers. Brush the sides with oil.

Place the shrimp on the grill or under the broiler about 4 inches from the heat source. Cook for about 2 minutes and turn, continue grilling for about 2 minutes more. Serve with herb butter sauce.

¼ cup minced shallots
¾ cup dry white wine
¼ cup heavy cream
8 tablespoons unsalted butter
Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste
2 tablespoons finely chopped basil
2 tablespoons finely chopped fresh chervil leaves
2 tablespoons finely chopped fresh chives

Combine the shallots and the wine in a heavy saucepan. Cook over medium-high heat until the wine has almost evaporated. Add the cream and reduce by half. Add the butter quickly, one tablespoon at a time, whisking constantly. Remove the saucepan from the heat and stir in the salt, pepper and herbs.

Yield: 4 servings.

4 ears fresh corn
1 sweet red pepper
1 sweet green pepper
1 tablespoon butter
⅓ cup chopped scallions

Western drops basketball

Officials at Snyder school say economics, 'bad timing' to blame

By Jimmy Patterson
Assistant sports editor

SNYDER — The number of men's basketball programs in the Western Junior College Athletic Conference surprisingly shrunk to eight Tuesday when it was announced trustees at Western Texas College voted to drop the sport for the 1992-93 season.

The decision comes in the wake of the resignation of head coach Kelly Green, brother of Midland College head coach Steve Green. Green stepped down last week to accept a position as assistant to Mark Adams at Texas-Pan American, an NCAA Division I program.

In addition to Green's resignation, WTC athletic director Milton Ham also said budget considerations played a part in the move drop the sport.

"Basically more than anything, it was a matter of very poor timing," said Ham, a former assistant basketball coach at Midland High. "What literally happened is Coach Green resigned a week ago, and after we (the board of trustees) discussed athletics and the cost of athletics ... we're just like everybody else, we're fighting things economically. We found out we had expended all of our recruiting money Coach Green had before he left.

"We talked about hiring a coach for an interim period of two months to recruit for us, but that was going to be $7,000-$10,000 and we just didn't have it."

Board members said they would reserve the right to consider reinstating the program later, but added it was doubtful. The women's basketball program, men's golf and rodeo will continue.

"I'm real disappointed in them," MC's Green said. "To me, its like a self-imposed probation. And I don't understand the financial reasons, but from a competitive sense, they punched themselves for the next year. Now they'll have to go out and get an entire team instead of just a half a team."

Ham said although there would be some disappointed die-hard basketball fans in Snyder, he felt the board's decision would not be entirely unpopular.

"The basketball program at WTC has been a great program over the years," Ham said. "We have won two national titles and have had a lot of great players. But when you get to the bottom line, our attendance has been very poor the last few years. That doesn't mean anything until you have to start funding it whether it be in Midland County or in Scurry County, where oil production is going down. Economically, the program had been running about $100,000 a year. When you try to visualize what you're going to do with a program and expenditures, people look at it differently now than they did in the past because of the economy."

Kelly Green could not be reached for comment Tuesday.

MC's Green said the decision by the WTC trustees is not good news for the WJCAC.

"It throws the conference into a mess for several

Detroit Lion killed

THIBODAUX, La. (AP) — Detroit Lions offensive lineman Eric Andolsek was killed Tuesday when a truck ran off the road and struck him as he worked in the front yard of his south Louisiana home, state police said.

Andolsek

Andolsek, 25, was pronounced dead at 1:54 p.m. at Thibodaux General Hospital, about 30 minutes after he was brought in by ambulance, said Toni Martinez, a hospital spokeswoman.

The accident took place about 1 p.m. at Andolsek's home in rural Lafourche Parish, authorities said.

Andolsek, 6-foot-2 and 286 pounds, was working with a weed cutter in his front yard when the truck ran off a straight stretch of Louisiana Highway 1, struck him and continued 400 feet before stopping, said Sgt. Hamilton Mixon, a state police spokesman.

"The driver apparently fell asleep, but the accident is still under investigation," Mixon said.

The truck was a cab of an 18-wheeler that did not have a trailer, Mixon said.

The driver of the truck, James E. Bennett, 34, of Baton Rouge, was charged with negligent homicide and failure to maintain control, Mixon said.

Gruntometer in use

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — While Monica Seles' grunting seemed quieter than usual, the media reaction grew louder and louder.

Seles

Two British tabloids introduced a "gruntometer," a hand-held machine the size of a portable phone to measure the amount of noise Seles makes when she hits the ball.

The Daily Express and Daily Mail gruntometers both measured 93.6 decibels during Seles' 6-2, 6-2 victory over Jenny Byrne on Monday. The papers said that was more than the noise made by a diesel train (80 decibels) but quieter than a pneumatic drill.

However, everyone seemed to agree that Seles had toned down her grunts Monday.

"Big Grunt Hushed," headlined the Daily Mail, adding "Seles Keeps the Gutturals Down to London Taxi Level." The Sun headlined, "Seles-SSH!" and "Moaner Monica Is All Quiet on the Western Grunt."

First seeded player falls

No. 2 seed Steffi Graf quickly did away with Noelle Van Lottum, 6-1, 6-0.

■ Seeds and rankings mean little as little known Jeremy Bates, ranked 113th in the world, defeats American Michael Chang, who was seeded No. 7 at the outset of the Wimbledon fortnight.

By Rob Gloster
AP Sports Writer

WIMBLEDON, England — Michael Chang became the first major upset victim of the year at Wimbledon, losing today in straight sets to Briton Jeremy Bates.

The seventh-seeded Chang sprayed shots off the court in all directions in a 6-4, 6-3, 6-3 loss to Bates, ranked 113th in the world and often a butt of jokes in his own country.

Chang was the first seed to lose in the tournament. Ten women's seeds and three men's seeds advanced to the second round today, though not all with the same ease.

Defending women's champion Steffi Graf, nine-time champion Martina Navratilova and third seed Gabriela Sabatini hardly broke a sweat while winning. Jennifer Capriati had to work harder to complete her first-round victory.

Other women advancing included seventh seed Mary Joe Fernandez, eighth seed Conchita Martinez, 11th seed Jana Novotna, 13th seed Zina Garrison, 15th seed Kimiko Date and 16th seed Judith Wiesner.

Rain and darkness ended play late in the day.

Graf, the second seed this year, swept to a 6-1, 6-0 victory over Noelle Van Lottum and Sabatini was a 6-1, 6-1 winner against Christelle Fauche. Navratilova, seeded fourth, won 6-2, 6-2 over Magdalena Maleeva.

John McEnroe argues a call.

Capriati, the sixth seed, was on her way to a routine victory over Chanda Rubin, but lost four straight games near the end of the match before finishing off a 6-0, 7-5 victory.

"There was not a lot of rhythm out there," Capriati said of the battle of 16-year-old Americans. "I was leading and I just should've put it away."

The victorious men's seeds were Guy Forget, seeded ninth, Richard Krajicek, seeded 11th, and David Wheaton, seeded 16th.

Drafting Shaquille is only half the battle

Associated Press

PORTLAND, Ore. — With just one day to wait before becoming the first pick in the NBA draft, Shaquille O'Neal was in no hurry Tuesday.

The biggest questions surrounding his No. 1 selection in Wednesday's draft are whether the Orlando Magic can satisfy his contract demands and whether he can turn the team into a winner.

NBA Draft

On both counts, the 7-foot-1, 290-pound O'Neal was preaching patience at a pre-draft press conference.

"I'd like to be signed before the first game, but these things take time," O'Neal said. "I don't plan on holding out or being stubborn, but I plan on being patient. I met the owners in Orlando on June 18 and they have a classy organization and a young team."

That team won just 21 of 82 games last season, presenting a challenge for O'Neal to turn the Magic into a winner.

"I haven't played a game in the NBA yet, so I have to prove myself," he said. "I plan to take my time and take it one step at a time.

"The expectations were huge for me in high school and college, and they are huge in the NBA. But I'm young, and if I don't do that well my first year, I still have my second and third year to improve.

"It took Michael Jordan seven years to win a championship, so I know I have to have patience. It's not like

One writer's view of the NBA draft

By Bill Barnard
AP Basketball Writer

PORTLAND, Ore. — The first-round order for Wednesday's NBA draft, with one scenario for how the selections could proceed:

1, Orlando, Shaquille O'Neal, LSU — If the Magic can sign him, he could have the impact of Larry Bird, Magic Johnson or Michael Jordan.

2, Charlotte, Alonzo Mourning, Georgetown — The Hornets, further down the road to respectability than Orlando, add an important piece to the puzzle already filled by Larry Johnson and Kendall Gill.

3, Minnesota, Christian Laettner, Duke — Laettner says the Hornets are making a mistake not taking him, and the Timberwolves will give him a chance to prove it.

4, Dallas, Jimmy Jackson, Ohio State — The Mavericks, who cleaned house in the front court last season, start with the backcourt this year.

5, Denver, Adam Keefe, Stanford — The first of a trio of power forwards who likely will go 5-6-7.

6, Washington, Tom Gugliotta, North Carolina State — Has impressed scouts with his shooting ability. Also an underrated rebounder.

7, Sacramento, LaPhonso Ellis, Notre Dame — The Nuggets and Bullets also are strongly considering him.

8, Milwaukee, Walt Williams, Maryland — This year's "next Magic Johnson." The 6-foot-8 Williams could play point guard, shooting guard or forward.

9, Philadelphia, Clarence Weatherspoon, Southern Mississippi — The closest man in the draft to the departed Charles Barkley.

10, Atlanta, Harold Miner, Southern Cal — Stacey Augmon, a rookie star last season, is more suited for forward, and Miner could let Augmon move, especially if Dominique Wilkins isn't completely recovered from injury.

11, Houston, Tracy Murray, UCLA — The Rockets are a woeful shooting team, and Murray is a sharpshooter.

12, Miami, Robert Horry, Alabama — The Heat opt for more toughness and defense inside.

13, Denver, Todd Day, Arkansas — The Nuggets try for more scoring punch with their second first-round pick.

14, Indiana, Malik Sealy, St. John's — His selection could open the way for a trade of Chuck Person.

15, Los Angeles Lakers, Bryant Stith, Virginia — Guard help for the day Byron Scott departs.

16, Los Angeles Clippers, Doug Christie, Pepperdine — The Clippers look down the beach for Pepperdine star.

17, Seattle, Don MacLean, UCLA — The Sonics go for a 6-10 shooter to go with the inside strength of Shawn Kemp.

18, San Antonio, Lee Mayberry, Arkansas — Think the Spurs aren't disenchanted with Rod Strickland?

19, Detroit, Byron Houston, Oklahoma State — Dropped down because he measured less than 6-5 at draft camp, but the Pistons notice that he was one of the best college players for two years.

20, New York, Hubert Davis, North Carolina — The Knicks desperately need outside shooting help.

21, Boston, Marlon Maxey, Texas-El Paso — Inside help for aging Celtics front court.

22, Phoenix, David Johnson, Syracuse — His tremendous leaping ability gives him a chance at forward, and he also can play guard.

23, Utah, Elmore Spencer, UNLV — The Jazz, with Mark Eaton aging, take the second-best center before Golden State can.

24, Golden State, Sean Rooks, Arizona — The Warriors are always looking for a big man.

25, Los Angeles Clippers, Tony Bennett, Wisconsin-Green Bay — The Clippers have never been that happy with Gary Grant, and Doc Rivers will be 31 when the season starts.

26, Portland, Latrell Sprewell, Alabama — The Trail Blazers need an outside scorer.

27, Chicago, Jon Barry, Georgia Tech — The end of the first round is a good time to take a chance on Rick Barry's bloodlines.

Diablos slip by Angels

By Joe Wyatt
Staff writer

Angels Stadium lived up to its reputation as a hitter's haven Tuesday night, but after the dust had cleared and the wear and tear on the bases was taken into account, the 25 hits three errors and three walks merely tallied up to a 4-3 El Paso win over Midland.

Former Angel pitcher Glenn Carter upped his record to 6-2, scattering nine hits over six innings, and Tim Dell fired one-hit ball over the last three frames for his first save as the Diablos captured their third straight win over the hosts and moved to 3-1 in the second half.

The Angels fell to 1-3 in the early going, despite getting 8⅔ innings of work from starter Dave Adams, who walked just one Diablo in the game.

But Adams allowed at least one hit in each of his first seven innings — 15 hits in all — and El Paso scored twice in the second and twice more in the sixth to drop the righthander to 3-8.

Craig Faulkner's one-out triple off the right-centerfield wall drove home Alan Lewis to break a 2-2 tie in the sixth inning, and Faulkner scored the eventual winning run on a chopper over a drawn-in infield as El Paso gave Carter a 4-2 lead.

"With two outs I would have definitely pulled up at second, but with one out I went for third," said the 6-5, 230-pound El Paso catcher, whose triple was his first of the campaign.

"He (Adams) threw me a fast ball and I got inside it. Luckily I think the centerfielder was playing me to pull, so that's probably why I was able to get a triple

WIMBLEDON: Connors falls; calls his game 'way past disappointment'

(From 1C)

Unseeded John McEnroe, a three-time Wimbledon winner, overcame early sloppiness to defeat Luiz Mattar 5-7, 6-1, 6-3, 6-3. His next opponent will be another unseeded former champ, Pat Cash, who won 6-4, 6-4, 7-6 (7-3) against Jacco Eltingh.

No British man has won a singles title at Wimbledon since 1936 and Bates, as his country's top male player for the last few years, has often been used as an example of what is wrong with the country's tennis programs.

But all was forgiven today. Crowds dangled from staircases overlooking Court 14 to see the match, and a Union Jack fluttered in triumph in the crowd after Bates' victory.

"It's one match. I played it very well, but it's still one match," Bates said, showing considerably more restraint than the British press is likely to show Wednesday morning. "It's one of the best wins I've ever had in 12 years, but it's not going to change the face of tennis overnight."

Chang also lost in the first round last year, to fellow American Tim Mayotte.

"Obviously it's frustrating to come out here to Wimbledon and prepare on the grass for a few weeks and lose here in the first round," he said.

'I get to a point in a match where things just get too painful.'

— Jimmy Connors

All 16 seeds that played Monday — 11 men and five women — won with relative ease. The only big loser Monday was crowd favorite Jimmy Connors.

The magic missing from his game and the enthusiasm drained from his heart, Connors left his 20th and probably final Wimbledon as a pained loser.

Connors, who thrilled crowds at the All England Club last year with a display of guts and great tennis, was listless on court and downright depressed after a loss to Luis Herrera.

"I get to a point in a match where things just get too painful," said Connors, who produced moments of brilliance but lacked bite against Herrera. "My hips go and my knees get too sore and my back stiffens up.

"I hurt every day. I just don't hurt as bad two out of three sets. Three out of five is rough," he said. "I don't enjoy being around the tennis anymore. I basically come with a bad attitude."

Last year was a joyride for Connors and his fans. He reached the third round at the French Open and Wimbledon and then rode a serious of incredible comebacks to the U.S. Open semifinals.

But 1992 has been a downer for Connors, who turns 40 in September. He lost to Michael Stich in the first round of the French Open last month and was defeated 6-2, 1-6, 7-5, 6-3 by Herrera in Wimbledon's first round.

"My tennis is way past disappointment," said Connors, a two-time Wimbledon champion who said his chances of returning next year are less than 50-50. "I've been through all that, and got through it without ever crying and shedding tears."

WTC: Move could hurt conference

reasons," Green said. "One, we lose some of our voting power at a time when we're having discussions about the future of the state tournament. We now lose one vote. Secondly, it messes up the conference schedule. We were scheduled January 11 to open the spring semester against them."

Green added that a coach's meeting will likely be held soon to see if a new schedule can be drawn up in time for the upcoming conference season, which begins in less than six months.

MC has already absorbed one of WTC's non-conference opponents. Southwest Christian will play in Chaparral Center on November 9 after losing its date with the Westerners.

The absence of WTC also creates a scheduling disparity for the Chaps. MC will play 13 non-conference games in November alone, and as of now, only 11 conference games in January and February of 1993.

One source inside the league said a fear now is that within the next year or two, Clarendon College may move down to Division II basketball, and that Frank Phillips would follow. Should that happen, the conference would drop to just six member schools.

Western compiled a record of 439-238 in 21 years. Last season, the Westerners finished 14-16 overall, and struggled to a sixth-place finish in the WJCAC with a 6-10 mark.

Western won its second national title in 1980 when the Westerners went 33-0 under head coach Nolan Richardson, who now coaches the Arkansas Razorbacks.

Reynolds earns Olympic berth

Associated Press

NEW ORLEANS — World record-holder Butch Reynolds, who won the right to run in the courts, won both of his 400-meter preliminary heats with sub-45-second sprints Tuesday in a bid to earn a berth on the U.S. Olympic track and field team.

Running under a Supreme Court order and the grudging permission of the International Amateur Athletic Federation, Reynolds was timed in 44.58 seconds in the first heat, well off his world record of 43.29.

He was timed in 44.68 in the quarterfinal race five hours later. It is a rare performance for a runner to go under 45 seconds in consecutive heats on the same day.

Seven other runners — Danny Everett, Darnell Hall, Clarence Daniel, Raymond Pierre, Tony Miller, Daniel Fredericks and Anthuan Maybank — ran in the fourth and final heat of the first round against Reynolds after the IAAF waived its "contamination" rule that would have penalized anyone running against him. All but Maybank advanced to the second heat.

Fredericks, Hall and four others — Timmy Thomas, Frankie Atwater, Derek Mills and Travis Hannah — ran against Reynolds later in the first heat of the quarterfinals. Hall finished second in 45.39, and Mills was third in 45.61.

Reynolds, under suspension by the IAAF after testing positive for steroids, fought his ban through the courts and obtained a Supreme Court order requiring The Athletics Congress, governing body for American track and field, to let him run in the event that selects the U.S. Olympic team.

He got off to a good start in his first race Tuesday, held his position through the first 200 meters and turned it on through the final stages to win comfortably.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

WEDNESDAY JUNE 24, 1992

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: People from overseas could exert a powerful influence on your professional or personal life. A spiritual experience impacts on everything you do in September. Safeguard jointly owned funds; lasting financial security is a top priority! The December holidays find you in a family-oriented frame of mind. A love relationship improves enormously in early 1993. Regular care makes a health concern less bothersome.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actress Nancy Allen, author Norman Cousins, musician Mick Fleetwood, actress Michele Lee.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Opportunities to increase your income may surface, but you will have to work hard to keep the cash flowing. Make sure your loved ones do not feel neglected by being more affectionate.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Pay careful attention to everything you hear and see today. Someone who seems to be on the level could be playing games. Consultations with a professional adviser produce lucrative results.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A wonderful surge of vitality helps you through this hectic day. Even though your future may be unsettled, you should adopt an optimistic attitude. Things have a way of working out just fine!

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Events at a distance look promising. Real estate ventures are also favored. A talk with your loved ones proves enlightening. Avoid squandering limited resources when you feel restless.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Get an early start today! Career advancement is likely, along with a raise in pay. Get in touch with someone who has been out of touch. Evening is the best time for romance.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Caution is advised in all financial deals. You may be vulnerable to an underhanded plan or scam. Later today, drop your personal plans and come to a partner's rescue.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Your leadership skills could take you a long way today, especially in business. The changes you are considering will meet with approval from your associates.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Avoid risky investments and people who promote get-rich-quick schemes. Sticking to your budget will make money worries a part of the past. Romance sizzles when you turn on the charm.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Trust the ideas you feel strongly about today; they could be flashes of genius! Discuss important matters in person — nobody does it better than you. The days of self-doubt are over.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Sprout wings and soar into an exciting new alliance or venture. The long-term results will be super. Call on your detective skills when asked to find the root causes of complaints.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A financial victory is at hand. You are fully prepared and have reached the point when you can take action. Be cautious in both love and business. Rely on instinct as well as logic.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Certain expenditures are both fun and wise today. You find an intimate lunch date is well worth the cost. A former romantic partner could throw you an emotional curve.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are tenderhearted, friendly and in need of emotional support from those they love. As students, they will work twice as hard in class if they like the teacher. Their sensitivity to other people's feelings helps make them wonderful artists and writers. Born pack rats, these Cancerians will want to hang on to outgrown clothes as well as their first doll or toy truck. Their respect for their friends' privacy is just one reason these children keep their pals for life.

WHERE'S THE ENTRY?

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
3 ◇	Pass	Pass	Dbl
Pass	3 NT	Pass	Pass
Pass

Opening lead: Seven of ◇

Here's a chance for you to test your analytical powers. Would you rather play or defend three no trump after a diamond lead?

South might have been wiser to pass North's double of three diamonds. However, the honors and spot cards are particularly well placed for East-West, so it is unlikely that East will be set more than one trick—a paltry penalty when there's a vulnerable game in the offing.

When this hand was played, East covered the opening lead with the eight and declarer ducked, winning a low diamond continuation with the queen. The jack of clubs was run to East's queen, and declarer's last diamond stopper was forced out. However, East had no entry to the good diamonds, so declarer came to nine tricks after forcing out the aces of clubs and hearts.

All seems pretty normal, but does the result answer our question?

Although it might look reasonable on the surface, that's not really the case. West made a critical blunder that gave declarer the contract.

Suppose West were to shoot up with the ace of clubs on the first lead and return the remaining diamond, allowing East to force out the ace of diamonds. Since declarer has no way to come to nine tricks without setting up clubs, and that suit cannot be established without allowing East to gain the lead with the queen, the contract goes the way of the dodo bird.

Declarer has no way to counter this defense. Move to the head of the class if you spotted it.

Fans cheer Tom Hanks, Geena Davis, but miss seeing Madonna

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. — Fans cheered Tom Hanks and Geena Davis at the premiere of their new movie "A League of Their Own," but many who came to see Madonna went home disappointed.

Davis

"Where's Madonna?" fans screamed Monday at a celebrity screening that benefited a center for abused and neglected children.

Comedian Rosie O'Donnell, who plays Madonna's best friend in the movie and became a close friend during filming, said the pop singer was recording in New York.

"We have a lot in common," said Miss O'Donnell, who shook fans' hands and posed for photographers at the Monday night premiere. "My mom died at an early age, and so did hers."

"A League of Their Own" was filmed in Midwest cities including Evansville, Ind., Henderson, Ky., and Chicago.

"We pretty much took over Evansville," Hanks said. "It was fun. We received an extremely warm welcome from everyone back there."

Hanks plays an alcoholic ex-ballplayer who coaches an all-female baseball team formed during World War II. Miss Davis stars as the team's catcher, and Madonna portrays a tough, sassy-talking player.

LOS ANGELES — Rap star Hammer's hunger relief concert last month in Louisville, Ky., has turned into a bonanza for a Los Angeles charity.

Seedling, a food pantry in riot-ravaged South Central Los Angeles, began distributing 40,000 pounds of food to needy people Monday, said Rita Russo, executive director of the non-profit organization.

"We're so grateful. ... This is like a real blessing from heaven. It will last us, I hope, to the middle of July," she said.

The items were part of 500,000 pounds donated to Louisville-based USA Harvest, an organization working in 72 cities nationwide to help the hungry.

Hammer asked that Seedling be aided by USA Harvest after reading an Associated Press story about the pantry's need for donations for those affected by the rioting in late April.

Stan Curtis, an investment banker who is president of the all-volunteer USA Harvest, said an additional 25,000 pounds of food is being trucked to Seedling. He commended Hammer for his continuing efforts.

Hammer's "National Hunger Relief Concert" on May 1 was sponsored by the Kentucky Derby Festival. He plans to ask for more food donations at shows at Los Angeles' Great Western Forum July 10 and 11, in Denver on July 19 and Terre Haute, Ind., on July 24.

PHOENIX — Gale-force interest in country singer Garth Brooks knocked out telephone lines as fans tried to buy tickets for his upcoming concerts in Phoenix and Tucson.

Brooks

The number of calls handled by a US West Communications station in Phoenix soared from a normal 15,000 at 9 a.m. Monday to 90,000 when ticket sales began at 10 a.m. and 198,000 by 10:15 a.m., phone company spokesman David Banks said. All 18,000 tickets for Brooks' July 19 concert at the new America West Arena were sold by 12:10 p.m., arena spokeswoman Debra Stevens said.

US West officials said a similar problem occurred in Tucson before all 8,205 tickets for Brooks' July 26 show there sold out shortly after noon Monday.

MYRTLE BEACH, S.C. — Dolly Parton christened her new club in this coastal city and suggested she might want to duplicate Dollywood, her theme park in the Tennessee mountains.

The country singer appeared Monday to officially open the Dixie Stampede, a dinner theater that features comedy and animal entertainment. The show employs about 225 people, 35 horses, four chickens and eight pigs, she said.

Parton said she hopes to create more Dixie Stampedes around the country and that she may decide to locate a "Dollywood II" in Myrtle Beach.

Lt. Gov. Nick Theodore presented Parton with a proclamation and a quick buss on the cheek. "Is a kiss all I get from you?" the flirtatious singer responded.

NEW YORK — Mary Alice Williams and Garrick Utley will soon be replaced on NBC's "Sunday Today," the network said.

Network spokeswoman Peggy Hubble said NBC wants to use the same anchor for both "Sunday Today" and the new "Saturday Today," to premiere Aug. 1.

Utley had no interest in the Saturday show and Williams, who is having twins in November, has been told by her doctors to stop working in July, Hubble said.

A new anchor team has not been announced.

Prices gain

NEW YORK — Oil prices showed a modest increase Tuesday as traders waited to see whether Iraq would re-enter the world petroleum market.

West Texas Intermediate for delivery in August settled at $22.59 per barrel, up 11 cents, at the New York Merçantile Exchange.

Phillips Petroleum raised its posted price 10 cents to $21.85.

The market was still not sure what to make of a session between United Nations and Iraqi negotiators who met in Vienna, Austria, to discuss the possibility of Iraq resuming crude oil sales.

The two sides said Monday they reached a deal to be presented to the Iraqi government and the U.N. Security Council, but oil traders were not sure whether that would get Iraq back into the market.

Natural gas prices fell, with contracts for delivery in July settling at $1.517 per 1,000 cubic feet, down 2.8 cents.

At the New York Mercantile Exchange, lower-grade sour crude for delivery in August settled at $20.69 per barrel, up 11 cents.

After the oil markets were closed, the American Petroleum Institute reported that U.S. supplies of crude oil fell sharply last week, while supplies of gasoline and home heating oil rose and the nation's refineries slightly increased their operations.

The nation's supply of crude fell 6.2 million barrels, to 341.1 million, for the week ending Friday.

The supply of distillates, which includes home heating oil, rose 1.4 million barrels, to 100.1 million, while the supply of gasoline rose 1.4 million barrels, to 221.8 million.

The nation's refineries ran at 91.4 percent of capacity, up from 91.2 percent a week earlier.

Houston bonds

HOUSTON — Standard & Poor's Corp. has lowered Houston's bond rating for the first time in five years.

The New York agency downgraded Houston's rating from AA to AA-, citing "a substantially weakened financial position, very limited property tax flexibility and tenuous solutions for the fiscal 1993 budget."

The rating applies to both the city's $448.4 million in public improvement refunding bonds and its $609.5 million of outstanding parity general obligation debt.

Stocks recover

NEW YORK — The stock market rose broadly Tuesday, pushed upward by bargain-hunting and a rebound in stock prices in Tokyo.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 4.82 points to 3,285.62.

Advancing issues outnumbered declines by about 11 to 8 on the New York Stock Exchange.

Bush urges Fed to cut interest rates

■ President expresses frustration that most Americans believe the economy is still declining.

By Steven Greenhouse
N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — Showing election-year eagerness to speed up economic growth, President Bush urged the Federal Reserve on Tuesday to lower interest rates further, saying the central bank was wrong to worry that such a reduction would fuel inflation.

"I'd like to see another lowering of interest rates," the president said in an interview with The New York Times. "I think there's room to do that. I can understand people worrying about inflation. But I don't think that's the big problem now."

His call for the Federal Reserve to lower rates was by far his strongest jawboning statement this year on interest rates and shows the president's frustration over the slow recovery of the nation from its longest postwar recession.

The president's new pressure on the central bank comes after the Federal Reserve's governors signaled in recent weeks that they believed no further easing was needed because the economy was picking up steam. In recent interviews, several of the governors said they worried that the potential inflation danger from further rate cuts outweighed the need for added stimulus.

But in his remarks on Tuesday, the president disagreed with their economic calculus. "I think inflation appears to be pretty well under control," he said. "I don't think the argument that lowering the rates will stimulate the long-term — shoot the long-term rates up — is valid anymore. And so, yes, I'd like to see it come down."

The Fed's chairman, Alan Greenspan, would not respond to Bush's comments.

But in recent interviews, Federal Reserve officials said they feared that further cuts in short-term rates could push up long-term rates because investors might conclude that the Federal Reserve was not going to be tough in cracking down on inflation.

Various Federal Reserve officials have contended that reducing long-term rates is crucial for strengthening economic growth because home mortgages, home building and capital investment are largely influenced by long-term rates.

Administration officials have been encouraged by several economic reports, including the increase in industrial production and housing starts in May. But they were disappointed by the jump in the unemployment rate to 7.5 percent in May, even though they asserted that it resulted principally from more people returning to the labor force.

The president also expressed frustration that most Americans believed the economy was still declining even though he said statistics showed that it was growing. His approval ratings have dropped sharply since the Persian Gulf War, largely because, White House officials acknowledge, the recovery from a prolonged recession has been so slow and weak.

A New York Times/CBS News Poll of 1,029 registered voters nationwide, conducted June 17 to June 20, found that 78 percent disapproved of the way the president was handling the economy.

The president's argument that inflation is so low that the Federal Reserve can reduce rates received some indirect support from congressional testimony last week by Greenspan.

TI sells computer business

Associated Press

SAN JOSE, Calif. — Hewlett-Packard Co. said Tuesday it agreed to buy Texas Instruments Inc.'s computer systems business in a deal that will expand HP's distribution network and rid Texas Instruments of a struggling division.

The companies refused to say how much Hewlett-Packard would pay to acquire the computer and service business, but an analyst who follows both companies said it must be several hundred million dollars.

Under the letter of intent the two companies signed, Hewlett-Packard would obtain Texas Instruments' multiuser computers, known as the 1500 Computer Family, and access to its dealer network that sells the machines mostly to businesses.

But Palo Alto-based HP will not take over the Dallas-based company's other computer-related businesses, including notebook-sized portable computers, printers, software, computer chips, computing tools and telecommunications.

Both companies said the transaction was not expected to have much financial impact on them.

"This is the latest step in our strategy to aggressively expand our position in the commercial Unix market," said Lewis Platt, an HP executive vice president and head of the company's Computer Systems Organization.

Unix is a popular operating system software used on minicomputers such as the Texas Instruments' models. An operating system is the base layer of computer software.

John White, president of Texas Instruments' Information Technology Group, said the move will let his company concentrate on other high-tech businesses where it is more successful, such as software and chips.

"The sale is consistent with TI's strategy ... to concentrate our investment and emphasis on software productivity tools, as well as on hardware where we have a sustainable competitive advantage," he said in a statement.

Texas Instruments isn't one of the more successful minicomputer sellers, although it is an otherwise profitable $6.8 billion company know for its microprocessors, or "brains" of computers.

Hewlett-Packard is the No. 3 computer manufacturer in the worldwide marketplace with a wide array of machines that accounted for revenue of about $14.5 billion last year.

Management bids for First City

■ Published reports say present management is bidding for First City.

Associated Press

HOUSTON — An investment group headed by present management has offered to buy troubled First City Bancorporation, according to a published report.

"I understand there are two offers on the table, and one of them is from current management," a source representing another potential bidder told The Houston Post in Tuesday's editions.

The management-led group wants to buy First City on an open-bank basis, meaning the buyer assumes most liabilities, the unidentified source said. In a closed-bank transaction, regulators declare the institution insolvent, wiping out its liabilities.

Although there have been reports of other potential bidders, the only acknowledged bidder for First City is Dallas-based First Gibraltar, which is negotiating the buy on an open-bank basis.

Industry experts estimate First City needs at least $400 million in new capital, and the company hopes to raise that money by finding another institutions to acquire it.

Federal regulators took bids for First City in April, but the Federal Deposit and Insurance Corp. has not yet named a winning bid.

Tandy opening computer superstores

N.Y. Times News Service

ARLINGTON, Texas — In bringing its Computer City retailing format to north Texas this week, Tandy Corp. is putting to test the old adage that says "two is company but three is a crowd."

Computer City, which specializes in brand-name computer equipment, will launch a marketing blitz this week in an effort to grab part of the local personal computer market now shared by BizMart Inc. and CompUSA.

And with the opening of new Tandy computer superstores in Arlington and Dallas, the north Texas area will become the second U.S. market to see direct competition between the three companies.

The result of the local face-off may provide a glimpse into how the three retailers' distinct approaches to selling computers will fare as competition heats up nationwide, experts said.

All three compete in the relatively new business of selling computer equipment to consumers at discount prices out of large, 25,000-square-foot stores carrying a broad selection of products.

In this emerging industry, however, the paths of Computer City, BizMart and CompUSA rarely cross. To date, all three have pursued national expansion primarily by moving into markets not occupied by competitors.

Some larger markets, such as Houston, may see two of these superstore competitors, but only in Los Angeles do all three now face each other.

For its size, north Texas probably has more computer superstores than any region in the United States, said Computer City President Alan Bush.

Elcor President Roy Campbell said, "While Elcor continues to expect that income from continuing operations will be in line with security analysts' estimates of 55 cents per share for its fiscal year 1992, the additional 25 cents per share in extraordinary items should bring total extraordinary items up to about 52 cents per share and net income up to about $1.07 per share for the fiscal year."

Geopolitical changes keep cartographers busy

By John Noble Wilford
N.Y. Times News Service

Cartographers of old were slow to change their maps. In the 15th century, they kept drawing maps faithful to the second-century works of Ptolemy. Even the startling discoveries of 1492 were a decade old before they began appearing on world maps.

Today's cartographers can't revise them fast enough. The reunification of Germany, the disintegration of the former Soviet Union and the current turmoil in Yugoslavia have sent them back to the drafting boards time after time, desperately looking over their shoulders at each day's headlines.

No sooner published, their maps are glaringly out-of-date, much to the exasperation of impatient consumers.

The morning after the final collapse of the Soviet Union last December, a customer called a Manhattan map retailer insisting on a new chart reflecting all the changes.

Many people awaiting revisions have deferred purchases, so retailers are stuck with obsolete inventories, quaint artifacts of a 20th-century world that was but is no more.

To meet the crisis, a major producer of globes, Replogle Globes of Broadview, Ill., is promising buyers of outdated globes a free replacement as soon as revised models are available.

Company cartographers are concentrating on the new boundaries, names and color shadings for the old Soviet Union and accepting the fact that events could overtake them in the Balkans.

"You can get away with map discrepancies for a place like Yugoslavia — it's so small," said Bob Nickels, the company president. "But you can't have the Soviet Union on any of your globes. People spot that immediately and demand the latest."

Commercial and research cartographers have seen nothing like this before. They struggled through German reunification with little embarrassment, anticipating the changes by months; though in early revisions, they had to dodge the unsettled issue of whether the capital would be in Bonn or Berlin.

But no one was prepared for the post-Soviet cartographic chaos. The National Geographic Society had to revise its basic world map five times in eight months.

"You might say our jobs used to be like a grocer's — in canned goods, where everything had long shelf lives," said John F. Shupe, the society's chief cartographer. "Now I feel more like a produce clerk — each day going in and having to replace wilted lettuce with something fresh."

Changing boundaries and country names is straightforward compared to the tedium of researching and lettering new name spellings.

Thousands of communist-inspired names are gone, the change from Leningrad back to St. Petersburg being only the most notable example. Map makers must also contend with de-Russification fashions as the republics replace Cyrillic with Roman or Arabic alphabets, requiring new transliterations into English.

Cartographers think, or at least hope, the worst is over. Commitments are finally being made to roll the presses for new maps and atlases.

How many more republics can possibly be created out of the old Soviet Union? Who can wait for a resolution of boundaries in Yugoslavia? The National Geographic is planning a complete revision of its world atlas in November and a new map of Europe for inclusion in the December issue of its magazine.

Even software for the popular computer game "Where in the World Is Carmen Sandiego?" will be revised this fall.

Who could ever trace the imaginary criminal to Moscow with a clue like "flags bearing the hammer and sickle"? You might as well be looking at ancient maps embellished with sea monsters.
