Against navigation district

ACTA is asking for non-feasance action

By Becky Werhan

The Aransas County Taxpayers Association, meeting Tuesday night, took dramatic action regarding the lack of response to their request for a legal investigation of the Aransas County Navigation District.

Since their request for a Grand Jury probe of the navigation district, made some months ago, has seemingly come to nothing, the ACTA membership voted to request the county commissioner's court to initiate non-feasance of office procedures against the district.

The membership, following an oral presentation by Ed Brennan on the lack of progress in the Grand Jury probe, also voted to send a letter to District Attorney Tom Bridges demanding an explanation. Also agreed on was a plan to send copies of the request to Bridges on to the county's state representative and senator. A committee was appointed to write the letter to Bridges, inviting the D.A. to make an appearance at one of ACTA's next meetings.

The request for the non-feasance charge by the commissioners is still in the beginning stages, as Brennan told the membership he would prepare the paperwork needed to make the request, bring it to the June ACTA meeting for approval and only then would proceed to the court. A complete body of evidence of the charges to be made must be assembled by ACTA prior to their request.

ACTA president Mitch Ammons, speaking after the meeting, said of the non-feasance procedure, "We will file with the commissioners and the charge will have to include specifics."

Ammons said that he had asked County Attorney James Anderson about the possibility of such procedure earlier in the week and was told "that we might as well go ahead with it."

Said Ammons, "I asked him, Anderson, if there would be a problem with the other case (Grand Jury) since it was still pending. He told me there would be no problem in pursuing it on both levels."

In the event that a non-feasance procedure was carried through by the court and the charges were found to be true, the court could remove all the navigation commissioners at once, or as individuals.

In his presentation to the membership Tuesday, Brennan, who has been in charge of the ACTA investigation of the navigation district, termed the lack of response to their requests as "a disgusting thing."

In regard to the letter to Anderson, a committee of Ed Brennan, Harold Pinchin and Wayne Vaughan was appointed to draft the letter. ACTA member Homer Faber told the group during the discussion of the action, "This is one way to begin to add pressure."

Brennan told the group that he had "officially" learned that no Grand Jury action was to be taken on the ACTA request. Brennan added that in light of such a decision, Bridges should have "at least contacted us and let us know."

"He apparently holds us in complete contempt and complete disregard," said Brennan of Bridges. In the ensuing discussion, President Ammons stated, "These are the things to remember at election time. These are the things the people want to remember."

"If he can treat us like this, how does he feel about the rest of the community?"

Leases dominate ACND workshop

By Ted Norman

The commissioners of the Aransas County Navigation District (ACND), discussed 11 items on the agenda of their Tuesday, May 25, workshop meeting including two bait stand leases and a new 30 year lease at the new Key Allegro condominiums. They deferred discussion on three items pertaining to the budget and a new mini-computer bookkeeping system.

During discussion of the lease on a bait stand to Dr. William D. Lewis the board asked why Dr. Lewis was being charged more for his bait stand lease than other bait stand leases and should they renew the lease.

Dr. Lewis has requested an extension of one year on his lease and Commissioner Hal B. McKnight said, "Lewis paid $8,000 for the business and I think he made a bad business deal and deserves the extension."

ACND Chairman Bobby Landrum said he believed that Lewis was being charged more because they offload shrimp and use a lot of water.

The commissioners also discussed a request by bait stand owner Tommy Webb to expand his business at the Rockport Harbor.

The request from Webb said he wants to expand to the west of his existing building in order to install some ice boxes.

It was disclosed that Dudley Bracht holds the lease on the boat stall next to Webb and McKnight said he was told that Bracht was

Charter work initiated

With a deadline of two weeks before they must report to the city council, members of Rockport's charter steering committee were sworn in and held their first meeting at City Hall shortly after 10:30 a.m. Wednesday, May 26.

Eddie Ratliff, who was on Rockport's first charter steering committee in 1978, was elected chairman and William (Bill) Walston was elected secretary.

The seven members and two alternate members of the steering committee were sworn into office by Rockport Mayor Burt Mills who then called the group into its first session.

Purpose of the committee is to determine whether Rockport has the minimum 5,000 population required in order to call a home rule election. Mills and City Administrator Herman Johnson told the committee members they must submit their report in time for the city council to call a charter election by June 14.

Johnson explained this is because Rockport can only hold a special election on one day this year — Aug. 14. In order to hold the election and give candidates a chance to file for the charter commission which must be elected at that time, the election must be called no later than June 14.

After electing officers, the charter steering committee voted to hold its next meeting at 5 p.m. Tuesday, June 1.

Other members of the steering committee are Jerry Brundrett Jr., Don Meek, George McCague, Barbara Armstrong and Marcelino Ramirez. Alternate members are Christi Vaughn and Juanita Wagley who was also an alternate on the 1978 steering committee.

Members of the current steering committee were given copies of the 1978 report which

Chosen by Business & Professional Women

District clerk is 'District Woman of the Year'

By Pat Blair

When Tony Harden became the first woman elected to Rockport's city council, a man on the city council in Corpus Christi predicted that Rockport "would surely go down the tubes" with a woman in office.

That was in 1961 and the city obviously survived — as did Tony who went on to become Aransas County's district clerk, a post she's held for the past decade. Now she remembers that grim prediction — made in the early 1960s — with laughter.

"I feel I contributed to Rockport and I know I learned a vast amount," she says of the several terms she served on the council. Among the accomplishments she recalls from those years were the expansion of the city's sanitary sewer system and construction of Memorial Park, funded in part with federal grant money.

This year, Tony is being recognized for those years of service to the city — as well as to Aransas County — as the Business and Professional Women's "Woman of the Year" first on local and currently at district level.

In June, she will compete for the "Woman of the Year" title at the BP&W's state level.

A member of the B&PW for 17 years, Tony's accomplishments with that organization include appointment to the B&PW's state committee this year.

A native of Taylor, Tony spent her early years in Taft and admits that, though she loves Rockport now, "the first time I saw it, I hated it with a passion!"

That was in the early 1940s. Tony's parents moved here from Taft and, Tony recalls, "The school system didn't have any facilities." Ingleside was then the site of a Humble Refinery and its school system "was the Gregory-Portland of the time," Tony recalls, "so my parents let me live with this family and attend school in Ingleside."

Weekends were spent with her parents in Rockport "and a lot of people think I graduated from the high school here, but I finished high school in Ingleside."

From high school, Tony went, with the aid of a scholarship, to Mary Harden Baylor. She didn't stay long — "It was at the time a very exclusive girls' school."

Feeling that her parents couldn't afford the school and not happy with the surroundings, Tony came south again, to San Antonio where she attended Draughon's Business School (no longer in existence) for two years, taking accounting and secretarial courses.

From San Antonio, she returned to Rockport where she worked in a succession of jobs, starting with the Heldenfels Brothers who needed a fill-in employee for a few weeks while one of their regular employees recovered from surgery.

Later she provided accounting services for the Red & White Grocery Store owned by Fred Bracht Sr., Aransas County Natural Gas, Picton Lumber, RYSCO, Jack Sanders Enterprises...

Along the way, in 1951, she married J.W. Harden and for about 20 years they had a "tavern/dance hall with drive-in service" in the building now occupied by Kluge Real Estate. "We built that building," she added.

For a time during this period, she worked in Corpus Christi and took courses at Del Mar at night — "basic English, math, science, advanced shorthand and typing courses..."

Around 1961 or so, Ernest Harris resigned from the Rockport city council as a result of moving out of the city. "I decided I had some thoughts on the direction I'd like to see Rockport move in," Tony said. "I talked to several people and they encouraged me to run — so I gritted my teeth and signed as a candidate."

"I was delighted when I won," she added. "I had three male opponents."

She not only was elected to the unexpired council term but was re-elected "two or three times."

Despite her activities on behalf of the city during this period, Tony also entered into the business of motherhood in 1964 with the birth of her son Adam — a graduate this year from Rockport-Fulton High School.

The next major event in Tony's life began with the 1970 Census which, when the results were in, showed that Aransas County exceeded the limit, set by Texas statutes, that allows a county to combine the offices of county and district clerks.

The county didn't have money budgeted for a separate district clerk's position in 1971 when the Census came out, so they appointed Tony as the district clerk but she didn't actually take office until January, 1972.

She held the post until November, 1972, elections when she was elected for one year, until November, 1973, elections. In 1973 she was elected to the first full

Editorial & opinion

Texas prison system meddling brings woes

U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice has all but taken over supervision of Texas prisons and county law enforcement agencies, and has circumvented lawful functions of a state district court in Harris County.

County sheriffs over the state have been told by the Texas Board of Corrections, on Judge Justice's orders, to restrict the number of convicts scheduled for admission to state prisons. This has caused severe overcrowding in county jails and flies in the face of other federal court orders limiting the number of jail inmates.

Orders coming from almost every direction have frustrated officials who are trying to run the prison system and have left normal admission procedures in disarray. The result has been to stop the criminal justice system from operating effectively in Texas.

There is only one answer to prison overcrowding in Texas — or any other state for that matter: build more prisons. Since this cannot be done quickly, interim solutions create more problems than they solve.

It has been estimated it would cost upwards of $100 million to build prison facilities to accommodate the expected influx of convicts in the next five years.

One of the most dangerous side effects of Judge Justice's order to curtail the prison population is that officials are being forced to permit early release of felons, including murderers and rapists. Even more hazardous, as far as society is concerned, is a consideration to parole several hundred more high-risk inmates.

Unbridled power exercises by Judge Justice and other members of the federal judiciary must be curbed before the system deteriorates into a judicial dictatorship too far out of control to be checked.

The Founding Fathers, anxious to raise the federal judiciary beyond the reach of petty politics, could not have foreseen that appointed judges would go far beyond constitutional power limits.

The time is overdue when Americans should consider amending the Constitution to provide for election of all judges, even members of the U.S. Supreme Court, to make them accountable to the people.

Judge Justice's actions in the prison case and in circumventing lawful functions of a state district court underline the need for restraints that can only be achieved through constitutional changes.

The judge summarily dismissed a contempt action brought against W.J. Estelle, Texas Department of Corrections director, ordering him to show cause why he should not be held in contempt for refusing to accept 68 prisoners from Harris County.

State District Judge Ted Poe of Houston had set a show cause hearing for Estelle, but it was blocked by Judge Justice who said, "I think it's a clear-cut case of interference with this court's prerogatives and this court's order."

He said it was his decree that the TDC was closed to new admissions. In it he set population limits based on available space and declared the prison "shall not accept any prisoner whose confinement would cause the population to exceed such figure."

The judge said allowing the state to hold a contempt hearing would be an "excessive restraining influence" on Estelle in executing the court's reform orders.

It is not a question of which party to this action you would believe is right, but whether you believe any judge should have power to bar courts from performing their legal functions. To do so is to exercise prior restraint before the facts in a case are argued.

Judge Justice's rulings have frustrated officials on nearly all levels of Texas civil authority and raise the question of which federal judge's order should be obeyed and in what order.

The Texas Board of Corrections set off a statewide furor when it closed prisons because they were violating inmate housing standards.

Sheriffs in several Texas counties, including Harris County Sheriff Jack Heard, called for immediate reopening of the prisons. Heard said the county jail is about 1,000 inmates over capacity in violation of a federal court order to reduce the population. (Not Judge Justice's order).

Angry because he said he was not told of TDC's plans to close the prisons, Gov. Bill Clements ordered them to reopen. They did, but are admitting only small numbers of convicts.

El Paso County challenged Judge Justice's inmate housing order, but lost a bid before the U.S. 5th Circuit Court of Appeals to consider the county's emergency petition for a writ of prohibition against his order.

The Rockport Pilot fails to understand the surge of pity for the plight of persons who have chosen to live outside the law and have been deprived of their freedom because of crimes against society.

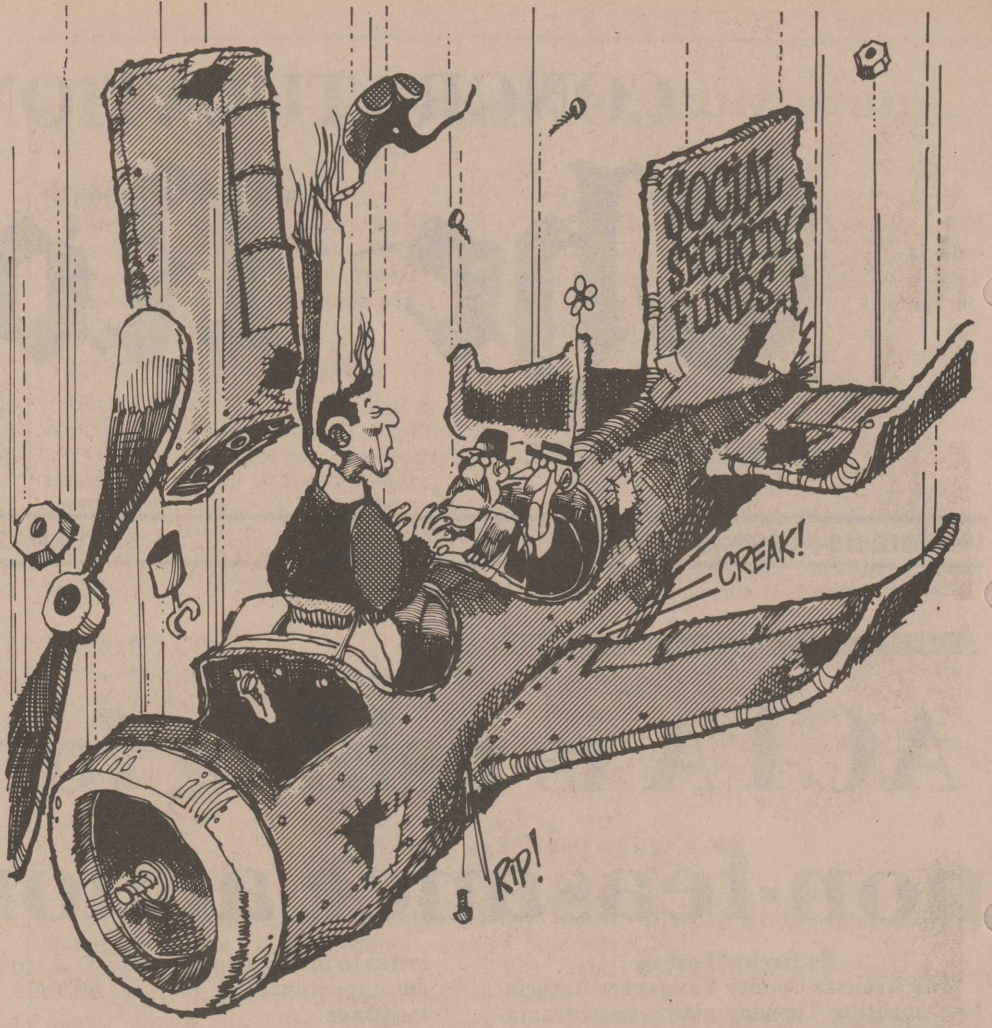

Why do we not pity victims instead of criminals?

Why should tax funds be used to provide comforts for people who have turned their backs on society, and by criminal acts have sacrificed their right to constitutional protection.

Why do we not fight to preserve the constitutional rights of citizens who obey the law? Do they not deserve the ultimate protection of the law and the courts?

There is only one answer to these questions:

We should rearrange our priorities to protect law-abiding citizens first.

'Comfy as you may seem, there are some things you should understand about the craft as a whole'

Speaking Out

An open letter to the choir

An open letter from just a plain old citizen to the Vienna-bound H.S. choir.

Most, if not all of you know how hard all of you have worked in order to make this trip possible. In a way it sort of typifies the "American dream," which in effect is that in our country most anything is possible, especially when a little "elbow grease" (or a lot) is used in conjunction with our dreams.

Now if you will just tolerate an old man's thoughts in conjunction with your trip, it may perhaps assist you in enjoying it even more and most may be things which you had already planned anyway. I personally have not visited Vienna in some 23 years — before any of you were more than a dream in your mom and dad's future — but to make one of the greatest understatement of all times — the pleasant memories are extremely lasting.

One thing you may wish to remember is that to the Viennese, Vienna is not Vienna, but rather Wien, probably caused in part by the German substitution of v's for w's. During your travels around the town by all means stop off at one of the sidewalk cafes and have a piece of cake and coffee. You can be assured the cake is not only beautiful but tastes even better than it looks, if that's possible. One thing you may notice while doing that is that no matter what the hurry was for getting there, all at once all activity would seem to almost come to a standstill and you can sit there all morning if you want to and no one will bother you, including waiters or waitresses — that is your spot for as long as you want it.

Should you desire to take an old-fashioned trolley ride, then may I suggest that you do so by all means and ride it out to the edge of town, walk through the beautiful parks alongside the Danube river and dream of what Johan Strauss must have been inspired by when he wrote some of the most beautiful waltz music that mankind has ever known and never been able to exceed, only copy, and integrate with varying success in some of our most popular music, however well hidden.

After seeing a lot of things in the downtown district, you will — in all probability — come across a building at the outskirts known as Karl's Kirche. It is a domed church that is rather unimpressive on the outside, but just wait until you get inside. Man with all of his technological advances has to this date never devised a camera that can anywhere near approach doing justice to that impression, which seems to be one of looking into heaven itself. The artist spent about 11 years working on it and after his death his son, who had been working with him, completed the work.

A little way up the street, if you are lucky and being choir members yourselves, you may even get a chance to hear the "angels" sing, or at least rehearse. Originally the members of the Vienna boys' choir were orphans and wards of the state — I do not know if that is still true or not, but can tell you one thing — if you practiced as much as they do, then you might be just as good. Don't count on it though, or even worry about it for that matter. That is just one of the things that make different cultures unique.

As you go towards the downtown district, in all likelihood you will notice a rather large building and if you should happen to go inside you may see one of this old world's greatest wonders — white horses that seem to defy gravity itself.

Although there are some very good imitations that travel hereabouts, you will be witnesses the true Lipizzaners! If you ever want an exercise in futility, try figuring out how man and such a beautiful animal can work in almost perfect unison.

Before you leave, look for the tallest object in Vienna, that will be the Stephanskirche. One of the saddest things about wars — any of them, is that in order to zero in with bombs, mortars, artillery or whatever, you need a "benchmark" and that in laymen's terms is the highest object — somewhere near your target that can be used for triangulation and then you zero in on your actual target.

Stephanskirche being among the "tallest of the tall" was excellent for such purposes, but a lot of effort was exercised in order to limit the damage — unfortunately those efforts were not too successful and the church was severely damaged.

Here comes the good part — after many, many years of loving, painstaking and agonizing — piece by piece — rock by rock, the church was rebuilt and if you are one of the lucky ones you may even see a little cloud caught on the spire, which is so high that it almost seems to touch the sky.

Although not being a person of religious faith myself, I do have a very high degree of respect and honest curiosity about others' beliefs, therefore I will only tell you this: should you go inside, walk very slowly — look around you and absorb one of the most magnificent, lovely sights that you will ever hope to experience in your entire lifetime.

Look back over your shoulder, at least for a while and see the organ pipes — some almost as large as cathedrals themselves and the smallest about like a bud vase — each hand made and perfectly tuned. Then look at the workmanship not only of the doors, windows, etc., but going up into the spire itself and wonder how man being so mortal could have created such a lovely place on this earth.

And think of all the prayers that have been offered for the past seven hundred or so years, from the spot where you are standing and the sacrifices that humankind has made over those centuries in your behalf just so you could enjoy such a lovely place in an otherwise upset world.

I do not know what you will do in that circumstance. I do know what I did — I stood there with tears running down my face and wept, unashamedly.

Bon voyage, you've earned it.

Officials stop greedy landlords

There was a frenzied planning by landlords in Knoxville, Tenn., to "make a killing" during the 1982 World's Fair in that city that started in May and is expected to attract 11 million visitors.

Some landlords even went so far as to evict tenants so they can charge fair-goers up to $190 a night for lodging during the six-months-long fair. Some 1,500 tenants were reported evicted in the rush to clear the premises for high-paying customers.

The landlords threw civic pride and fair treatment to the wind in anticipation of the rental windfall, and it appeared for a time they would get by with it.

However, the city council doesn't want Knoxville's long-standing image as one of Tennessee's friendliest cities tarnished — even if most of the visitors to the fair come from distant cities and lands, and aren't likely to pass that way again.

The council quickly approved Tennessee's first rent control ordinance after a raucous session attended by an estimated 300 landlords and tenants.

Crestfallen landlords claimed the council created a monster with passage of the controversial ordinance, but the mayor and council members didn't agree.

"I've had it with these evictions and I'm not going to have any more of it," declared Mayor Randy Tyree. Landlords, represented by an outfit called World Property Management, served notice on the mayor they would appeal.

The ordinance denies nightly rental permits to landlords who have evicted tenants, some of them long-term, to open apartments for fair tourists.

At the stormy council meeting, Mayor Tyree urged churches, unions and civic clubs to set up rooming houses during the fair to prevent landlords from gouging tourists.

"I think it would be poetic justice if landlords find themselves with vacant rental facilities during the fair," the mayor said, adding, "Warm hospitality, charity and fairness are trademarks of the vast majority of Tennesseans. Literally hundreds of people have given freely of their time over a period of seven years to make the fair a reality. We simply are not going to let the actions of a few prohibit the success of this project."

The Rockport Pilot congratulates Mayor Tyree and council members for their firmness and determination in dealing with the rent problem. It would be a shame if the long-time efforts of so many dedicated Knoxville citizens were sullied by a few greedy landlords.

A look at NATO arms problem

If you are among those who oppose spending billions on national defense, as proposed by President Reagan in his current budget, you might want to hear what the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) says about the Soviet Union's military capabilities.

The Western Alliance has revealed a detailed comparison of its own and Warsaw Pact armed forces, showing the Soviet-led pact ahead in nearly all elements of military power.

However, there is one bright spot in the assessment: the West's nuclear strength still "ensures deterrence" of war, NATO officials claim.

Even so, President Reagan views the Western Alliance document as exposing a dangerous trend that must be reversed "if we are to safeguard interests of the United States and its allies" and induce the Soviet Union to negotiate arms reductions.

Plans are in the formative stage for summit talks on arms and other issues between the U.S. and Soviets, possibly in June, although Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev has indicated he would oppose a proposal by the U.S. while negotiations are in progress.

With hints by the Soviet Union that it would like to reopen arms negotiations with the U.S., foreign affairs analysts are predicting a warm-up in East-West relations that have remained cool since President Reagan took office.

The 71-page arms assessment document, prepared by NATO in Brussels, was commissioned a year ago by NATO defense ministers encountering resistance, to their pleas for improved defenses in the European sector. In that area, the study said, the Soviet Union and its Warsaw Pact allies face NATO with four million troops under arms while the alliance has 2.6 million.

In one of the most comprehensive calculations of relative numerical strength ever published by NATO, the analysis gave an accounting of virtually every item of conventional and nuclear equipment on each side.

The Warsaw Pact leads by large margins in land combat divisions, tanks, anti-tank weapons, artillery, armored personnel vehicles, combat aircraft, anti-aircraft weapons, intermediate-range nuclear forces and strategic, or intercontinental, nuclear forces.

The West leads in total numbers of military helicopters but trails in the armed, attack types, is about equal in fighter-bomber planes, has a diminishing numerical advantage in warheads for strategic missiles and excels in numbers of battlefield missiles and artillery pieces that can fire nuclear shells.

The numerical balance of forces has moved slowly but steadily in favor of the Warsaw Pact over the last two decades. The Rockport Pilot is convinced this alone is enough to dictate a course of action for Congress as it wrestles with President Reagan's multi-billion defense budget.

On this day: John F. Kennedy was born on May 29, 1917.

Another flaw in congress' new attempt at balancing the budget

Editor's note: The Live Oak Peninsula Philosopher on his grassy farm discusses the national deficit this week, generally speaking.

Dear editor: As I understand it, the housing industry, car manufacturers, airlines and other segments of the economy are in trouble because of high interest rates. For example, who wants to build a $50,000 house that'll cost $100,000 by the time you get it paid for if you live that long and don't get laid off because the company you work for went under because it couldn't pay those high interest rates either?

And high interest rates,

Wall Street says, won't come down so long as we've got a huge Federal deficit.

What we need of course is low interest rates for borrowers and high interest rates for lenders, although Congress hasn't attacked the problem from that angle yet.

But Congress is trying to do something about the deficit, which is either $100 billion or $125 billion, depending on whether you hear the morning or the evening news.

The most original idea so far is now under consideration. Some members have come up with the idea of taking the $200 billion cost of Social Security out of the budget. Keep paying it, certainly, but put it on some other page in the government's account book and presto, the deficit is wiped out, Wall Street perks up and regains confidence, stocks go up, interest rates come down, people start buying cars and building houses and riding in airplanes and the country is rolling again.

This looks like a sound idea except for one thing. At first Wall Street, on hearing that the deficit finally is wiped out and the budget balanced, will throw confetti out the windows in celebration and order interest rates to come down.

But then some busy-body TV reporter, instead of covering wars and murder trials like he's supposed to, will take it on himself to explain to Wall Street that the deficit really hasn't come down, it's just been reported on a different page and the government is still head over heels in debt.

We're right back where we started and Congress will have to try some other plan. And it will, so long as none of the cuts affect the district each one is elected from.

Yours faithfully,
J.A.

Aransas County Paramedics kept busy during April answering emergency calls

Aransas County paramedics responded to 68 calls and traveled a total of 3,060 miles in the three county ambulance units in April, according to a report by Chief Paramedic Bill Aston.

Heart attacks headed the list of reasons for calls during the month, with 18 calls being to aid heart attack victims, and eight calls were to aid victims of vehicular accidents, including five auto accidents, one motorcycle and two auto-pedestrian mishaps.

Recreational accidents accounted for three calls during the month, industrial accidents one.

Other reasons for calls during the month included strokes, five; falls, three; assaults, one; drunks, four; drug overdose, two; childbirth/obstetrics, one; diabetic complications, two; respiratory distress, three; gastrointestinal complications/internal bleeding, six.

Eleven of the calls were classified as "miscellaneous."

Two units were on the same scene 16 times and all three units were the same scene twice during the month, Aston reported, and 53 patients were transported and eight not transported.

The unit was cancelled en route twice during the month, the patient was gone on arrival twice, one patient was dead at the scene and two patients refused service.

Paramedics used the Life-Pak 22 times. Fourteen patients were given drugs, IVs were administered to 20 and one patient required defibrillation.

Of the patients transported, 23 were taken to Coastal Bend Hospital in Aransas Pass. Eleven were taken to Spohn, four to Memorial Medical Center and three to Driscoll Children's Hospital, all in Corpus Christi. Nine were taken to Enterprise Clinic and one to Aransas Hospital.

Two were reported taken to "other" hospitals. Forty of the calls during April were in Rockport, six in Fulton and 22 elsewhere in Aransas County. There were no calls outside the county during the month.

The Emergency Medical Service has responded to a total 327 calls and traveled 13,480 miles through April 30 this year.

344 reasons for Memorial Day

By Pat Blair

They died, some of them, in the heat of the battle, others in the comparative peace of homes or hospitals after they had lived out long and active lives.

They are the 344 war veterans buried in Aransas County cemeteries — the men who will be honored, along with living veterans, in Memorial Day ceremonies hosted by Rockport's Steward-Wendell VFW post this Monday, May 31.

One of those dead, the Rev. Amos Rooke, is Aransas County's sole veteran of the Indian Wars. Two others — P.C. Paul and Maraduke Box — were veterans of the War of 1812. S.F. Sparks, Jim Smith and John Smith participated in the Texas Revolution.

There are, buried in Aransas County, 50 veterans of the Civil War, 13 of the Spanish-American War, 114 of World War I and 126 of World War II. Two of those World War II veterans, Rick Stewart and Ralph Wendell, are immortalized in the name of the local VFW post. Organized in 1944, the post took its name from the first two Aransas County casualties of the then current war.

Twenty-two of the veterans saw action in the Korean Conflict and 13 in Vietnam.

These were men, many of them, who gave Aransas County other reasons to remember them, too — not just as veterans but as movers and doers in their community.

There was, for example, Col. George Ware Fulton: Civil War veteran, cattle baron, designer and owner of the Mansion that bears his name, founder of Rockport's first bank...

J.M. Hoopes, another Civil War veteran, was also among the bank founders.

Then there was Capt. Charles F. Bailey who, in company with Geraldo Alonzo Beeman, established the first newspaper known to have been published in what was then Refugio County. "The Vaquero" first saw light of day around October, 1868, in the settlement of St. Mary's, according to Alpha Kennedy Wood's book, "Texas Coastal Bend."

In 1869, Bailey and Beeman moved to the then new town of Rockport and founded the "Transcript" — from which today's Pilot claims direct lineage.

Names familiar from the community's earliest days are found among the lists of veterans: Kennedy, Brundrett, another Sparks in the list of Civil War veterans, Caspary, DuBoise, more Brundretts, Casterlines in both World Wars.

Emory Spencer was a veteran of World War II. So was James S. King... and Henry Bent who died not long ago while serving out a term as Rockport alderman...and Charles E. Vermillion...So was Virginia Rippy.

These — the 344 veterans buried in Aransas

Dilworth in meet

Darlene Dilworth, a member of the Lamar University Women's track team, participated in the State Meet held at A&M University earlier in May.

Darlene finished fifth in the long jump with a personal best jump of 17'7" and anchored the 400 meter relay to a fifth place finish.

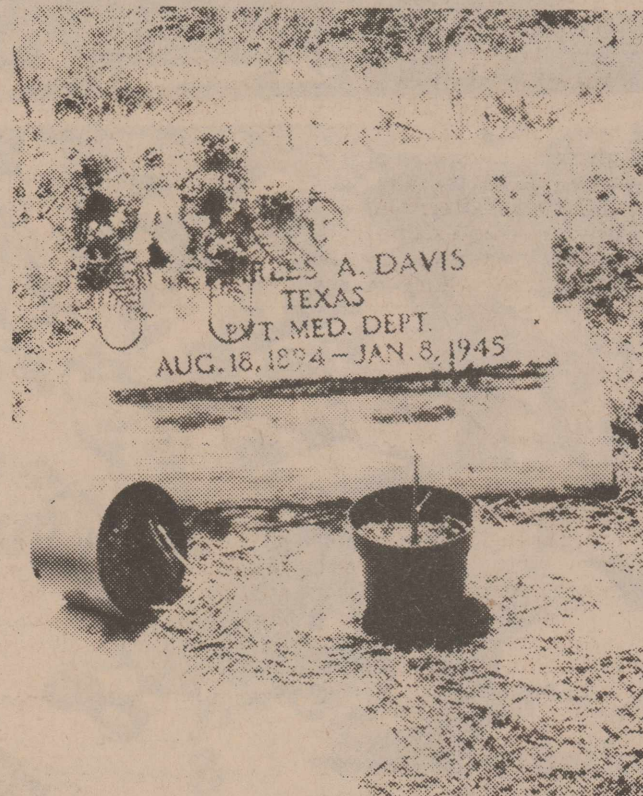

Darlene is a 1981 graduate of Rockport-Fulton High School and was formerly coached by Karen Richter. Darlene is the daughter of Mrs. Pauline Dilworth of Rockport.

County — are the people who will be honored this Monday.

These are the people who have served their community in war and in peace.

They are the reason for Memorial Day.

Nursing home is center of activity

The Aransas Pass Nursing and Convalescent Center was a busy place last week with social activities, visitors, families and friends out to make our residents happy.

Our volunteers were on hand to visit one-to-one and run small errands for us.

Monday afternoon was Blue Grass Music time with John Blair and wife, Jewell, Altie Albers and George and Fannie Langley doing the honors of entertaining our residents. Also, on Monday, the United Methodist Church of Rockport brought some very pretty baskets of flowers for all to enjoy.

Tuesday, Jo Ellen Mack brought two beautiful pot plants in memory of her father, Louis Nelson.

Tuesday afternoon, our residents had a surprise ice cream social given by the staff and helping serve were our Presbyterian Ladies of Rockport who were over to visit one-to-one with our people.

Wednesday afternoon was Bible Study and Holy Communion with Bro. Bob DeWolfe. Friday morning paint class was held by Frankie and Lyla.

Friday afternoon, the Rockport A.A.R.P. Club was over to have our "Old Fashioned Sing Along" with our residents.

Saturday morning Father James Hamilton was out to give Holy Communion to all of our Catholic residents.

Sunday morning worship services were led by Rev. Al Bankert with his text being, "Praise For the Lord's Benefits", Psalms 103:1-5.

Sunday afternoon was "Sing In" time with the First Christian Church of Ingleside.

Bon Appetit

By Ann Thomas

Weather permitting, most of the population moves outdoors for Memorial Day entertaining, so with that thought in mind I have gathered a few recipes which should take a minimum of preparation with a maximum of gastronomic enjoyment!

BAR-B-QUEED BEEF
This makes 8 to 12 servings. Why not double it and freeze leftovers?

One 4-lb. sirloin tip roast or rump roast
Salt & pepper

SAUCE
1 med. onion, chopped
3 T. drippings or oil
1 T. sugar
1 t. dry mustard
1 t. salt
1/4 t. pepper
1 t. paprika
1/2 c. catsup
1/2 c. water
1/4 c. vinegar
1 T. Worcestershire sauce

SIRLOIN TIP ROAST
Place roast in shallow pan, fat side up and season. Roast at 325° F. for 30-45 minutes per pound.

After half the roasting time has elapsed, pour the barbecue sauce over the meat, continuing roasting and basting meat two or three times during final cooking period.

RUMPROAST
Rub the roast all over with salt and pepper. Heat 1 T. fat in a kettle and brown meat on all sides. Pour sauce over meat, cover kettle cook in 325° F. oven 4-1/2 hours. Baste frequently last half of roasting time. Slice thin.

To prepare sauce: Cook onion in oil until golden brown. Add combined ingredients and simmer for 15 minutes.

WISCONSIN GERMAN POTATO SALAD
15 lbs. small new red potatoes
1/2 lb. bacon, cut in small pieces
1 c. chopped onions
1 c. chopped celery
1-1/2 c. vinegar
1-1/2 c. water
3 c. sugar
6 T. flour

Salt & pepper to taste
Cook potatoes in jackets, cool and peel. Add salt and pepper to layers of potatoes along with onions, celery. Fry bacon. Stir in flour to hot bacon grease, blend until smooth. Slowly add vinegar and water, stirring all the time. Add sugar and blend until thickened. Keep stirring to prevent sticking. Pour over potatoes. Gently fold over and over.

Sprinkle with bacon crumbs.

SAUERKRAUT SALAD
1 can sauerkraut
1 c. sugar
1 c. chopped celery
1 c. chopped green pepper
1 t. celery seed
1 chopped onion
1 small jar pimento, chopped

1/4 c. vinegar
1/4 c. oil
Mix and cover. Let "age" overnight.

FRUIT COMPOTE
This makes such a good dessert and is "just right" after a heavy meal.

Any amount desired of:
Apples
Bananas
Oranges
Strawberries
Melon
Cut into bite-size pieces.

I use whatever fresh fruits are available and coat it all lightly with fresh lemon juice to preserve color and freshness. Then cover with Poppy Seed Dressing. Yummy!

POPPY SEED DRESSING
Mix well with rotary beater:
1-1/4 c. sugar
2 t. dry mustard
2 t. salt
3 T. onion sauce
2/3 c. vinegar
Add gradually, beating constantly — 2 c. salad oil.
Add — 3 T. poppy seeds.
Store in tightly lidded jar in refrigerator. Shake well before using. Yields 4 cups.
Have a fun holiday and a safe one. Until next week, Bon Appetit!

'Next to Nature' exhibit to open at Art Museum of South Texas

Opening July 1, an exhibit organized by the National Academy of Design and the American Federation of the Arts, entitled 'Next To Nature' will be on display at the Art Museum of South Texas. The exhibit was curated by Dr. Barbara Novak, a professor of art history at Barnard College and Columbia University, and a noted authority on American landscape painting. Eleven graduate students at Columbia University assisted Dr. Novak in researching and in preparing the catalog accompanying the exhibit. The National Endowment for the Arts and The New York State Council on the Arts provided grant funds for the exhibition.

The exhibit consists of 75 landscape paintings done by such artists as Albert Bierstadt, Ralph Blakelock, Charles Burchfield, Frederic Church, Asher B. Durand, Childe

Hassam, Daniel Huntington, John Kensett, William Trost Richards, Albert Pinkham Ryder and Worthington

Whittredge. All of these artists were members of the National Academy of Design which was founded in 1826 and soon became the focus of the New York art world during the 19th century.

Landscape paintings tended to be the most popular type of depicting untouched nature. Although important, very few of the paintings are known to the public.

The A.M.S.T. showing of 'Next to Nature' is sponsored by the Corpus Christi

Art Foundation Inc. The Art Museum of South Texas is located at 1902 N. Shoreline

Dr. 'Next To Nature' will run from July 1 through Aug.

15. Museum hours are Tuesday through Saturday 10-5, Sunday 1-5, closed Mondays.

4H offers child development projects

4-H offers three different but related projects in child development for young people 9 to 19 years of age, says Kathy Farrow, county extension agent with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System.

One of these projects, "Steps to Tomorrow," is divided into three levels. Level one is designed for nine-11-year-olds, Level two nine to 11-year-olds, Level three for 12 to 14-year olds and Level three for 15 to 19-year-olds.

In Level one, the younger 4-H member may choose activities ranging from observation of developmental traits in small children to playing word games which teach the member certain words related to families and child development. Some members develop plays and skits based on family situations. All activities are based on knowledge and skills related to the social, mental, emotional and physical development of children.

For more information about this program as well as other activities available to 4-H members, contact the county Extension office.

4-H is open to all youth regardless of socioeconomic level, race, color, sex, religion or national origin.

Mask of the Soul

The face is the mask of the soul. It can convey a peace we do not feel, a strength we do not possess, a courage we hope for but haven't gained. With apparent concern for the dignity and privacy of the individual God permits us to shield our inner self from the prodding eyes of others.

But a calm face doesn't still the soul's turmoil or satisfy its need. Spiritual peace, spiritual nourishment must come from God.

The millions who come to church each week to worship do not look any different from their neighbors. But they are seeking earnestly to fill an emptiness which we all feel, yet hide from one another.

Why not be one of them, one of us who worship regularly each week?

The Shepherd's Staff

By the Rev. Charles Fake
Pastor, First Baptist Church

"Why didn't you catch that man?" asked the bystander. The out-of-breath pursuer replied, "Because the closer I got to him, the farther he was away, and the last I saw of him he was clean out of sight!"

What did he say?

Sometimes folks say things that don't mean anything. But not Jesus.

Jesus spoke plainly.

He said to the wealthy and prestigious Nicodemus: "You must be born again!" When Nicodemus seemed puzzled by that divine imperative, Jesus made it even clearer by explaining that one must not only be physically born, but must also be spiritually born.

There is no need for us to guess at the meaning of the New Testament message. It's not what we don't understand that should trouble us: it's what we do understand.

Grown gray, reading the story of the Prodigal Son, Coleridge, his heart greatly moved, his throat full of sobs, said, "It finds me, it finds me. This Divine Book is a mould that fits my heart."

Read the Bible: it's your book. There's a message in it just for you.

Colonial service set at First Presbyterian

A worship service patterned after those of 18th century Colonial America will be observed at Rockport's 1st Presbyterian Church at 11 a.m. Sunday, May 30.

Following Puritan customs during the colonial period, fathers and sons will sit on the east side of the Sanctuary and mothers and daughters on the west side. Those attending the service are invited to wear dark clothing such as was typical of the colonial period.

Graduating seniors will be recognized during the Sunday morning worship. It is open to the public.

A hand to hold. An arm to lean on. A willing ear.

That's what The Salvation Army represents to thousands of people with nowhere to turn. But The Salvation Army is more than that. It's a place of worship. And a center for wholesome recreation.

The Salvation Army can be summed up in just six words:

"Heart to God, Hand to Man"

What about the Rockport crud?

Pet talks

By Dr. Hap Lutz

Dr. Lutz is a former instructor of diseases of dogs and cats in the College of Veterinary Medicine, Texas A&M University.

Dear Dr. Lutz, What is the veterinary profession doing about the "Rockport Crud?"

Signed, Herbert

Dear Herbert, Since your letter was so lengthy, I have taken the privilege of reducing its length. In essence you ask, "What is the veterinary profession doing about the 'Rockport Crud?' You then mention a skin condition caused (apparently) by fleas to explain the 'Crud.'"

Dermatological research is being conducted continuously by most of the veterinary colleges throughout the United States. Research departments of the major pharmaceutical manufacturers are also working on all types of skin diseases.

There are veterinary dermatologists in private practices in Texas that diagnose and treat nothing but skin diseases, also.

Signed, Dr. Hap Lutz

If you have any questions concerning the health and care of your pet, mail them to the Rockport Pilot, 1002 Wharf St., Rockport, Tex. 78382. Dr. Lutz will answer your questions in the Weekend Edition of the Pilot.

Rockport PTA has very good year

A group of 292 people were part of something special this past year — they were members of the Rockport Elementary Parent Teacher Association (PTA).

This year was the best one yet for the organization, formed in 1980. The school year saw an almost 20 percent growth in membership for the PTA and the group was able to accomplish a great deal.

Outgoing President Penny Baldwin explains the PTA this way: "The goal of PTA is parents and teachers working together for the welfare of our children, locally, statewide and nationally."

Part of that working included the highly successful PTA-sponsored Halloween Carnival at the school, which gave hundreds of area children a fun-filled, safe Halloween night.

Another PTA accomplishment was the presentation of school board candidates at an open forum meeting. Candidates were given an opportunity to explain their platform and goals to the public during the session. This was only one of the educational programs the Rockport organization sponsored during the school year.

PTA members were on hand at the first day of school, stationed in the front hall of the main building giving assistance to parents, children and school staff.

During the year, school librarian Jackie Hattenbach was aided by PTA members, who also showed up at various school functions, helping out in any way needed. The auditorium stage was decorated by the PTA for the school's Christmas program.

Also thanks to the PTA, each room in the school was provided with a filmstrip projector.

Topping off the list of Rockport PTA's accomplishments during the year was the achievement of their main goal — the purchase of some badly needed playground equipment for the school.

Following a PTA convention last fall at which fundraising ideas were discussed, group members decided to organize a fund-raising drive for the equipment.

Through the PTA organization, cases and cases of cookies were ordered and were sold by school children last winter. The cookie sale garnered some $7,000 and the equipment was then purchased and installed this spring. The PTA awarded students selling the most cookies with Speak and Spell machines.

Of the PTA's effort to obtain the playground equipment, Rockport Elementary principal Norman Spears says, "We could have gotten the equipment eventually, but it would have taken three to five years, probably. They organized and worked hard and got it all at once."

PTA President Penny Baldwin says that, while the group has gotten better each year, a matter of importance is still increased parent participation in the program. "We would like to see much more active participation."

In light of this year's growth, hopes are high for continued expansion in the coming year. Incoming president for the year is Marsha Brundrett.

Other new officers for the year are Margie Lewis, first vice president; Sylvia Buttler, second vice president; Penny Mills, third vice president; Becky Merritt, secretary; Carol Buckley, treasurer and Penny Baldwin, parliamentarian.

Outgoing officers in the PTA are Jane Adams, stepping down from the secretary post and Jeannie White, former parliamentarian.

Sea Camp program announced

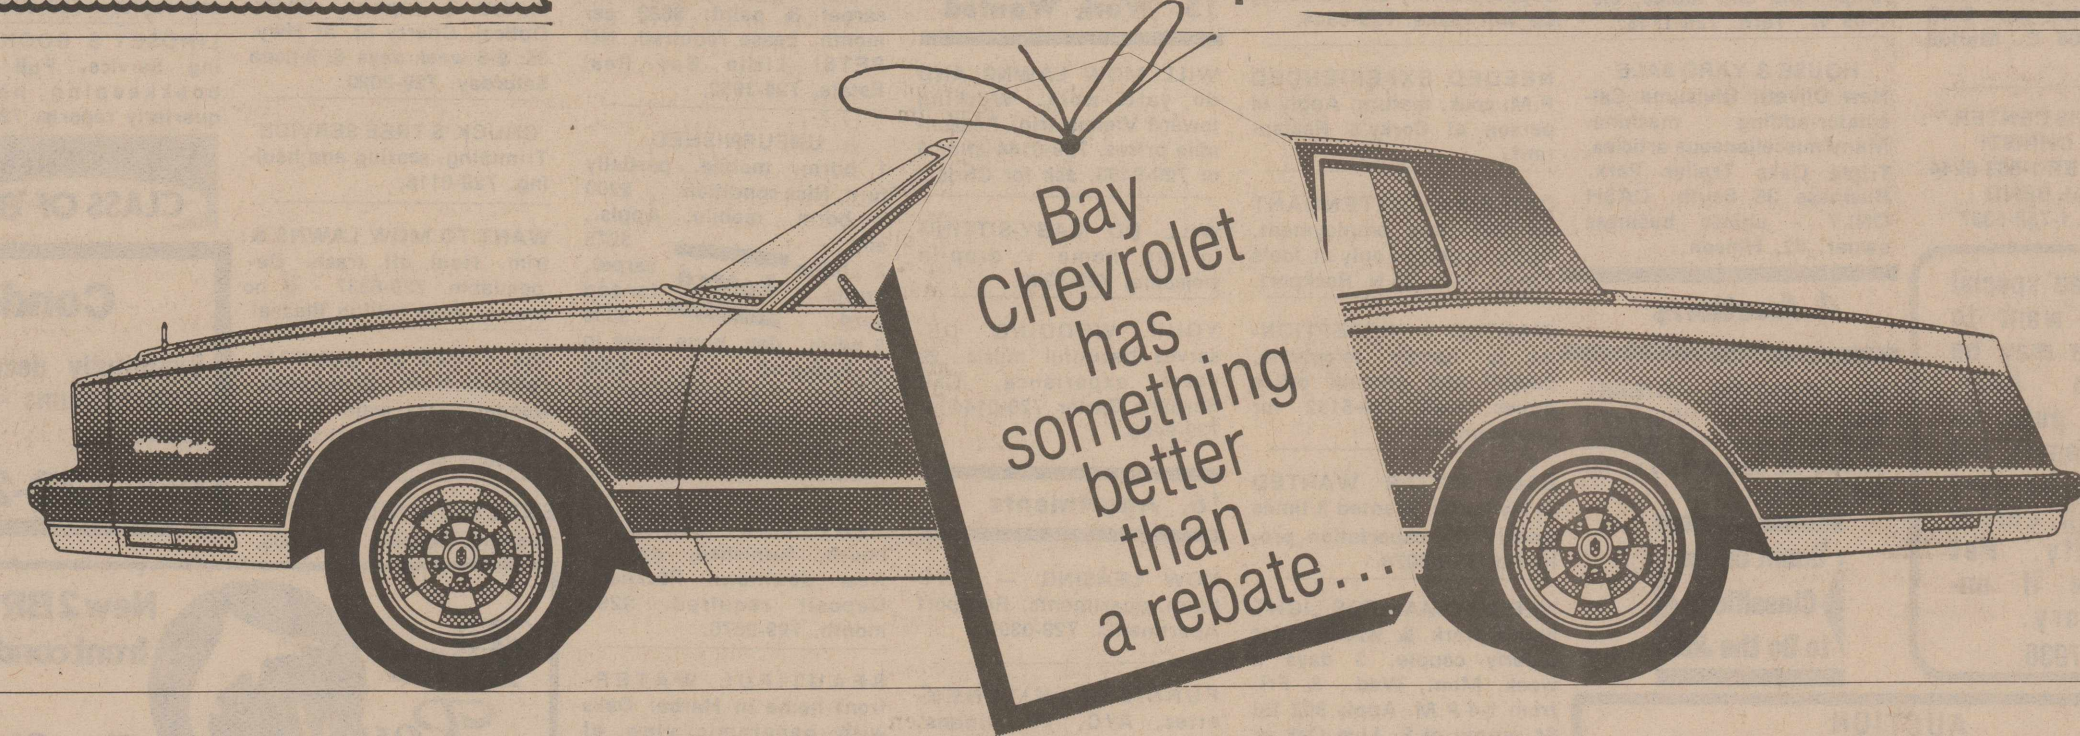

COLLEGE STATION — Texas A&M University's Sea Grant College Program announces the inaugural Sea Camp for students entering grades five through seven. Scheduled Aug. 6-13, Sea Camp will be at Crystal Beach on Bolivar Peninsula near Galveston.

Sea Camp focuses on the unique environment of the Galveston Bay and coast. It will encourage the development of an understanding and respect for the marine environment while helping students improve their science skills and knowledge.

During the week campers will collect live organisms; explore the beaches, jetties and marshes; visit historical sites; complete sea-related arts and crafts projects; explore local seafood; and take field trips to the surrounding area.

Sea Camp's $375 registration fee includes all food, lodging, transportation, materials, instruction and recreational activities. Transportation will be provided from the Texas A&M College Station campus or parents may arrange to bring students directly to the Galveston area.

Those interested in receiving an application form, or in more Sea Camp details, should write the Marine Education Program office, 317 Harrington, Texas A&M University, College Station, Tx. 77843, or call (713) 845-7969.

Venue changed for attempted murder trial

Trial of Arnold Rudolph Frieda Jr., charged with attempted capital murder and unlawful possession of a controlled substance (cocaine) has been transferred to Live Oak County on a change of venue granted Tuesday morning, May 25, in district court here.

Three other cases were set for trial Tuesday, June 1, following pretrial this past week in the 156th District Court of Judge Rachel Littlejohn in the Aransas County Courthouse.

Frieda's change of venue was also granted by Judge Littlejohn. The charges against Frieda — including that he attempted to shoot Aransas County Sheriff Bob Hewes and a Texas Department of Public Safety narcotics officer — arise out of an incident that allegedly occurred Feb. 4.

Following pretrial hearing in Judge

Littlejohn's court Monday, trial of Tomas de la Garza, charged, with burglary of habitation and rape with enhancement, is scheduled for June 1, according to dockets in the Aransas County District Clerk's office.

Also on the docket for June 1 trial are Richard Watkins, charged with rape of a child, and Jose Luis Perez Garza, charged with aggravated assault. Both men appeared for pretrial this past Monday.

Others up for pretrial this past week included Phillips Hernandez, charged with aggravated assault with enhancement. Pretrial and trial were reset for June 28.

Also set for June 28 were pretrial and trial on Antonio M. Cisneros, charged with burglary of a habitation.

The court docket showed the case is to be dismissed against Douglas V. and Sylvia Hart, charged with unlawful possession of a controlled substance, following pretrial hearings Monday.

District court will convene at 10 a.m. Tuesday, June 1, for trials. Also on the court docket for that date are cases against the following:

Camillo Romero, charged with rape.

Andrew L. Deason II, charged with unlawful delivery of cocaine.

Freda Gail Stutts Johnson, charged with forgery.

Freda Gail Johnson a.k.a. Freda Gail Wilhoite, charged with felony theft with enhancement.

The dockets show two pretrials set for June 3, against Timmy Lee Jones, charged with aggravated assault, and Nathan D. White, charged with felony theft.

Both cases are scheduled for June 28 trial.

determined at that time, that Rockport had a population of 5,500. That report was based on the 1970 U.S. Census, Revenue Sharing reports, the City of Rockport Water Department, Central Power & Light Company, Aransas Natural Gas Company, Southwestern Bell Telephone, a land occupancy survey, records from Aransas County Independent School District and a September, 1977, report of the Coastal Bend Council of Governments.

four-year term — and has continued to run and be re-elected in the years since.

A major change she's seen in the district clerk's office in those years, she says, is "volume! When I was appointed in 1972, we had two judicial district courts — the 36th and 156th. The grand jury met twice a year and we'd have maybe three juries a year.

"Now," she continued, "the grand jury meets every six weeks and there's a minimum," she emphasizes the word, "of one jury a month."

In addition to her work as district clerk and with the B&PW — in which she has held most of the offices including president and chairman of various committees — Tony is, active in the Aransas County discussed the purchase of the property but told the commissioners that it would probably cost around $65,000 to buy the property.

Commissioner Kirk Holman said he thought the area where the ramp is would be a good place to build some boat slips for about eight medium size sailboats and he said the existing boat ramp is in the wrong part of the harbor and suggested that a new location be found.

Audience member L.E. Casterline said the boat ramp use to be a well used ramp, "until the house keeping got so bad the ramp couldn't be used."

McKnight said he thought because of the cost of a new ramp and the added parking that the old ramp should just be cleaned up and made useable.

Commissioner Hillis Dominguez asked the board members if they were interested in spending $50,000 on a boat ramp and Commissioner Dave Maguglin replied, "Not if the state will give us one on the other end for free."

Don Douglas appeared before the board requesting that his lease on the land and the boat docks at the Key Allegro condominiums be extended to 30 years.

Douglas said that most lending institutions who make loans for property on leased land want the lease to run five or 10 years beyond the life of the mortgage and that the 30 year lease would help him in his efforts to sell the condominiums.

He said he would also like to be able to assign a boat stall to each condominium and would like a 30 years lease on the boat stalls.

Maguglin said, "I think what Mr. Douglas is asking for is definitely not unreasonable. He really went all out and built some pretty condos."

"We welcome that kind of business, the tax base is welcomed," added Maguglin.

The commissioners then discussed the plans to build new boat stalls at the Rockport Harbor and said that Jackson Seafood had filed a protest against the plan.

The plan calls for the addition of 31 new stalls in the harbor and the commissioners indicated they would like to move forward with the plan but felt a new protest would come from Jackson Seafood. McKnight told the commissioners, "I don't care if he does or not."

McKnight continued saying, "Even with a protest I don't see where we would be in jeopardy of a suit. I can't understand Mr. Jackson's reason for not wanting more slips."

The commissioners delayed discussion on the items of the budget review, a Mini-computer bookkeeping system and expansion of the ACND office building.

Burial site reveals Indian trade routes

Not all contemporaries of Jesus Christ lived in Rome or the Middle East. People also inhabited east central Texas during that time, and an archaeologist at UTSA believes those prehistoric Indians were locked into violent combat as their civilizations began to wane.

Grant Hall, a research associate at the university's Center for Archaeological Research, investigated one of the more spectacular Indian burial sites to be discovered in Texas. The site is the subject of his recently published archaeological report. It is located near Allens Creek, approximately 43 miles west of Houston, and excavation began there in 1974.

Nearly 240 individuals had been buried there during a time that spanned thousands of years. For some unexplained reason, groups of basically nomadic people returned to that spot year after year for centuries to bury their dead.

The oldest group of burials dated from around 2700 to 1600 B.C. The remains of 61 individuals were found in this group, seven of which were buried with artifacts.

"The people in central Texas during this time lived strictly by hunting and gathering," Hall said. "They did not have pottery and did not yet use the bow and arrow."

The next oldest group had the largest number of burials. There were 145 recovered, 70 of which were found with artifacts. They dated from 650 B.C. to 300 A.D.

Among the artifacts found in this group were boat-stones, believed to have been attached to spearthrowers for weight and balance. They were made of stones which originated near Little Rock, Ark.

"That's nearly 425 miles from where we found them," Hall said. "That appears to me to be a definite line of evidence indicating a kind of import-export system among prehistoric Indian groups during this time-period."

Hall believes further evidence supporting his theory is found in analyzing the next group of burials. In this third group, dating from 550 to 950 A.D., only 10 burials were recovered and only one had artifacts included.

"This might indicate fewer people began ranging across wider areas again."

The report detailing the finds at Allens Creek is the only one to date concerning a major Indian burial ground to be published. As additional reports are written concerning such prehistoric burial sites Hall said new information will be added to our knowledge of Texas' past.
