Site of prison selection delayed until November

AUSTIN (AP) — Thirty-three Texas communities that want a state prison probably will have to wait until November to find out if they will get one, says a Texas Department of Corrections spokesman.

The Texas Board of Corrections has called a Monday meeting to discuss prison construction, but spokesman Charles Brown said Wednesday the discussion will be limited to privately built and operated prisons.

The for-profit prisons, Texas' first, are part of the state's plan in the continuing battle against overcrowding in the 38,000-inmate system. The Legislature approved the concept earlier this year.

Rider Scott, general counsel to Gov. Bill Clements, said the private prisons would be similar to proposed state-built pre-release centers. Four 500-bed private prisons are planned.

"They will take inmates who are soon to return to society and give them intensive training and education and help re-orient them with their families and help them find jobs," Scott said.

The Legislative Budget Board on Tuesday cleared the way for prison board consideration of private prison bids by setting $41.67 per prisoner per day as the state cost of running such prisons. Under the legislation approved this year, private prisons must operate at a cost of no more than 90 percent of the state cost.

A. — This is decided by drawing numbers at random by the secretary of state's office.

In Brief

Well rescue

MIDLAND, Texas (AP) — Rescue workers feverishly drilled through solid rock today toward a crying toddler who tumbled into an abandoned backyard well and was trapped more than 20 feet down, officials said.

Eighteen-month-old Jessica McClure had been inside the well since about 9:30 a.m. Wednesday and the effort to retrieve her was still under way early today.

"The emergency room doctor at the scene last night said the baby can last as long as 36 hours. We hope it doesn't take that long," said Midland Police Cpl. Jim White.

"It is solid rock right now. It is pretty slow going," said paramedic David Felice, one of the diggers. He said the girl was getting adequate oxygen and was believed to be on her back in a relatively comfortable position.

Rescue workers said it was not known when they would reach the child, and at mid-morning they reported about 8 inches of solid rock still separated them from her.

White said the girl's mother talked to her this morning, and "(Jessica) is still crying and making noise."

Lion attack

CRYSTAL BEACH, Texas (AP) — A man was bitten on the chest by a 320-pound lion in the second lion attack in the Houston area in four days.

Shawn Schilder, 20, of Port Bolivar, was treated for his wounds at John Sealy Hospital in Galveston and then released.

The lion's owner, Mike Kujawa, said late Wednesday he was desperately trying to find a way to avoid having the 17-month-old African lion, Shanda, killed today. Galveston County health officials earlier ordered the animal killed and its brains examined for rabies.

Saturday, 8-year-old Roxanne Hernandez, was mauled by a 300-pound lion being led through a North Houston flea market on a leash. She remains in the intensive care unit at Hermann Hospital.

Jobless figure declines

Lowest for year at 7.3 percent

Unemployment figures for Scurry County--the latest reports reflecting the month of August--fell almost a full percentage point, from 8.2 to 7.3 percent.

It marked the first time this year that the percentage fell below 8 percent and also the year's lowest estimate for number of persons classified as "unemployed."

These are those identified by the Texas Employment Commission as "actively seeking employment." For this category, the county's total was listed at 723.

Regarding the number of persons said working, in August it was counted at 9,193.

The high unemployment total for 1987 was noted in January, when it rose to 9.9 percent. At

Displays will show craftsmen

If you want to know how to make bread, stained glass, knives or beaded ornaments, you can learn Saturday at Scurry County Coliseum.

More than 30 local artisans will be there from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. in the White Buffalo Days Master Crafts Displays — a feature of the annual celebration which will be given more emphasis this year due to the cancellation of the general arts and crafts show with out-of-town sellers.

Organizer Gingah Williamson said the show sponsor, the American Business Women's Association, decided not to have the general show because many of the out-of-town vendors were already committed for the weekend.

The Master Crafts show will be quite extensive and will offer numerous items for sale, she said.

Jo Flynn will be spinning, Lila Guinn weaving, Gil Fleer making bread, Mike McCormack making stained glass and Ernest Hinson making knives.

Alice Guerra will demonstrate tamale and tortilla-cooking, Carol Davis beaded ornaments, Shirley Leftwich basket-weaving, Besse Wilson quilted pillows and Michele Rinker scherenschnitte or German-style

Jr. high 'no-pass' totals 22 percent

The first report for no-pass, no-play statistics at Snyder Junior High were released Thursday morning, an indication that fewer students failed one grade or more this year at that campus when compared to 1986.

Similar statistics for Snyder High School were still being compiled Thursday.

At junior high, the current figures show 22 percent of the student body failed one grade or more. This compares to 32 percent last year.

On the positive side, junior high officials say 44 percent of the seventh graders and 34 percent of the eighth graders made the honor roll for the first six-week period. This indicates the students made no grade under a B.

Regarding no-pass, no-play, those failing at least one grade will now be eliminated from extracurricular activities for the next six weeks.

By grade level, this is 45 students in the seventh grade out of 265 (17 percent) and 72 in the eighth grade out of 256 students (28) percent.

This combines for 117 students out of 521 for 22 percent.

AD nominations end here with 5

Nominations for the five-member Scurry County Appraisal District Board ended Wednesday with local taxing entities responding by proposing five candidates.

Two nominees are holdover board members, Mairl McFaul and Dwaine Williams. Williams was nominated by Scurry County commissioners and McFaul by Snyder ISD.

The three new nominees all received nominations from the county's three school districts, Snyder, Hermleigh and Ira. They include E.D. (Doug) Flynn, Julius Roemisch and Mickey Sterling.

The City of Snyder, which had the option to nominate also, said it would support individuals proposed by other boards.

Voting for the five--in practical terms a moot point since only five are nominated--must now be completed prior to Nov. 16. The board will begin its new two-year term Jan. 1.

Under state law which created appraisal districts in Texas, the number of votes is distributed among the various entities based upon each's tax base.

Snyder ISD has the largest share of votes with some 66 percent. Scurry County has some 20 percent; Ira ISD some 6.5 percent; the City of Snyder some 4 percent; and Hermleigh ISD, less than 2 percent.

Outgoing board members, who indicated they would not be able to serve another term, are Pete Hester, Ross Blanchard and John Reed.

Water project funds linked to amendment

Proposition 23 would authorize the Texas Water Development Board to issue $400 million in general obligation bonds, $200 million for "hardship" water supply projects, $150 million for hardship waste water treatment projects and $50 million for flood control.

"Texas needs money for water projects because the customary sources of funding, especially federal grants, are dwindling," a spokesman said. "Additional bonding authority is needed to replenish the funds supporting water supply and flood control projects."

Supporters say general obligation bonds are the most cost-effective means of raising the large amount of money needed for water projects.

The state uses its superior credit rating to raise money that is in turn loaned to local governments to finance water projects at a lower rate than the local governments would have to pay on their own bonds, they explained.

Opponents argue that the implications of such debt-financing should be seriously considered.

"Although it may be a short-term solution to state government's cash flow problems, there are risks involved."

The feller on Deep Creek says, "Technology improves so fast that by the time we can afford the best, there's something better."

Educators are impressed with bright, aggressive and ambitious students. They often hope they will be remembered when the student becomes rich and famous.

Robert Patterson, 8th grade son of Snyder Drug's Robert and Maria Patterson, recently asked assistance from junior high principal Charles Anderson.

The young Patterson needed a letter from his principal as part of requirements for a scouting merit badge. Anderson gladly obliged.

Patterson had caught the attention of Anderson on many occasions. A good student, Anderson had seen him reading and studying in such an unlikely place as the cafeteria line.

Handing Robert the letter, Anderson said, "Good luck. I hope you'll remember me when you become president. Maybe you'll give me some kind of grant."

"No way," replied Robert. "That's what's wrong with this country. There's already too many grants, and the first thing I'm going to do is stop all grants."

If the presidential candidates keep dropping out, maybe we can get one of the parties to draft young Robert Patterson.

Many of the candidates are having to say they are sorry for their past behavior and actions. That's nothing new. We've had sorry excuses for presidents--and congressmen--before.

Doc says an Aggie recently showed up in his office with two burned ears. Asked how it happened, the Aggie explained:

"I was ironing and had the telephone sitting on the ironing board. When the phone rang, I picked up the iron by mistake. To make matters worse, it was a wrong number."

"But," asked the doctor, "how did you burn the other ear?"

"The dummy called back again."

Reagan vows to fight to the end over Bork's nomination

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan is promising a fight "to the last ballot" for Robert H. Bork, and backers of the Supreme Court nominee insist that they need until next week to make last-ditch arguments to the American people.

Reagan said in a speech Wednesday that the confirmation process was "marred by distortions and innuendos," and Senate Republicans argued — over Democratic objections — that it could take until Oct. 23 to set the record straight.

The opening day for debate was left unsettled, but the outcome is no longer in doubt. Fifty-four senators have announced their opposition to Bork, while just 36 have said they support him. Ten remain undecided.

Both parties argued on the Senate floor Wednesday over the timing of a vote, with Majority Leader Robert Byrd, D-W.Va. pushing at various times for a vote today, then next Tuesday and finally next Wednesday.

Republicans, for their part, appeared divided over their tactics, with GOP Whip Alan K. Simpson, R-Wyo., commenting, "We really are working here to assure that we don't have a filibuster. A filibuster would be painful to all of us."

But he later said he used the term loosely, and added there was no attempt by Republicans "to stretch anything out." A Republican filibuster would place GOP senators in the ironic position of filibustering against their own president's nominee.

Simpson suggested a vote Oct. 22 or Oct. 23.

Conservative groups supporting Bork urged his Senate supporters to delay the vote because they wanted time to run a new round of advertisements in possibly a dozen states.

Dan Casey of the American Conservative Union said representatives of a number of pro-Bork groups contacted senators and their staffs Wednesday night urging the delay.

"We've got radio and newspaper ads kicking in," Casey said. "We need a chance to get this in place. The American people have got to be focused on this. They've got to see what was done to this man."

Reagan's brief speech from the Oval Office was made available to the television networks, but only the Cable News Network carried it live, followed by a response by Democratic Sen. Terry Sanford of North Carolina.

"I hope that in the days and weeks ahead you will let (senators) know that the confirmation process must never again be compromised with high pressure politics," Reagan said. "I am determined to fight right down to the last ballot on the Senate floor."

Sanford struck back with anger at Reagan's remarks.

He said the Constitution spells out senators' role of advise and consent on presidential nominees.

"We are tired of having our integrity impugned. We are tired of having our sincerity questioned. We are tired of having our intelligence insulted," Sanford said. "It is time for that corrosive dialogue to stop."

Dear Abby

Misinformation Tarnishes Man's Sterling Reputation

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1987 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I am a 37-year-old, single, honorably discharged Vietnam veteran who is well-thought-of in my community. I have excellent credit, a responsible job as an investment manager, and I work with disadvantaged children. I help raise money for charities and have a wonderful circle of friends. So what's the problem?

Recently, pursuant to the upgrading of corporate policy, a new background check was run on employees. No problem. Nothing for me to hide. Right? Wrong. It seems this large international investigation company returned a report on me saying that I had been arrested six years ago for drug possession, fined and imprisoned. There's just one minor problem. It wasn't me. By referencing the case number and calling the records divisions of the court, I was able to discover that the individual they referred to in the background report:

1. Had a different middle name.
2. Obviously, a very different Social Security number.
3. Was a different race than I am.

This little fiasco caused indescribable tension with my employer and unbelievable embarrassment to me.

Abby, I am lucky. My employer at least showed me the report rather than immediately firing me as he might have. The point is not that I was able to get things straightened out and obtain a very halfhearted apology from this firm. The point, more significantly, is, how many innocent people are haunted by these grossly inaccurate, indeed, even libelous reports that they never get the chance to see? Jobs, mortgage loans, memberships to organizations — who knows what all a person will be denied because of one of these "small errors" in data retrieval?

Please let your readers know that anytime they suspect that one of these checks will be run on them, they have the right to request that a copy of the report be sent to their home. It would be a hell of a nice idea if some legislators would introduce a bill making dual reporting mandatory. What do you think? Incidentally, I am suing the reporting company.

DEAR MAD: I think I would be even "madder" than you had I been victimized in that manner. Thank you for a valuable letter.

DEAR ABBY: I work as a secretary in New York City. I recently purchased — from a vendor on the sidewalk — a "1987 Edition of Webster's Dictionary."

On several occasions I have consulted that dictionary to verify the spelling of a word, and much to my amazement, those words were not to be found!

On closer examination, I noticed in small print on the title page a disclaimer stating: "This book is not published by the original publishers of Webster's Dictionary — or by their successors."

Abby, please print this letter to alert my fellow secretaries, students, and the public in general.

JANE LABRIOLA, N.Y.C.

DEAR JANE: Lucky you. You got a worthless dictionary but learned a valuable lesson: Never buy in haste, and only from reputable dealers.

Newborns seem particularly susceptible to inner-ear damage from loud noises and may suffer loss of brain cells as a result, according to research by Dr. Edwin W. Rubel, professor of otolaryngology at the University of Washington School of Medicine. "We haven't figured out why newborns are so vulnerable, but we think the noise risk is heightened for at least the first few months of a baby's life," says Rubel. He advises parents to avoid exposing their newborns to continuous loud low-frequency sounds such as those emitted by unshielded jet engines or chain saws.

Thatcher planning to visit

DALLAS (AP) — British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher will visit her only son and his wife, Mark and Diane Burgdorf Thatcher, during an unofficial trip to Dallas, sources say.

Thatcher is expected to arrive Sunday afternoon after a 49-nation, seven-day summit conference in Vancouver, British Columbia, sources told the Dallas Times Herald.

The private trip to Dallas, reportedly her first to the city, is shrouded in secrecy.

Sources said she will stay at her son's home in Highland Park, a city surrounded by Dallas and University Park.

The official spokesman for the prime minister would neither confirm nor deny the Dallas trip.

Dallas attorney Paul Eggers, a friend of Mark Thatcher, is planning a dinner Monday evening for Margaret Thatcher and her husband, Denis.

"We don't know how it got out that she's even coming here," Eggers said. "I took the oath of secrecy."

The dinner for 50 invited guests, including Mark and Diane Thatcher, will be at the Verandah Club at the Loews Anatole hotel, a source told the newspaper.

Ted Burgdorf, the father of Diane Burgdorf Thatcher, said, "We'll see them, but I don't know exactly when."

Blue-moon special

The type of play depicted here is seen only a little more frequently than Halley's comet. Still, readers of this column and those less enlightened need to be ready for it. Although North's jump overcall of two no-trump showed length in both minors and only minimum high-card strength, South knew his aces would minimize his major-suit losers. With four cards in diamonds facing known five-card support, and the club queen to solidify North's holding, he was right to go to game in diamonds. The next task was to make the contract.

With two diamonds and possibly a spade for losers, declarer had to hope that clubs were 3-3 so he could rid himself of his spade loser before attacking trumps. So he won the spade ace and played Q-K-A of clubs. East ruffed the final high club with the diamond five, overruffed by South. Now declarer played the heart ace, ruffed a heart and ruffed another club. Another heart was ruffed in dummy, and then the last club, now a winner, was played. East could not gain by ruffing with the ace of trumps, so discarded. Declarer let his remaining spade go, and West ruffed with the diamond three. West could do nothing better than try to cash the spade queen. Declarer ruffed and a diamond lead brought down the defenders' king and ace together.

Study club meets

Cliff Smith, volunteer with Scurry County Council on Alcohol and Drug Abuse, spoke at the Oct. 6 afternoon meeting of the 20th Century Study Club.

Smith pointed out that 70% of Snyder High School students use drugs or alcohol on a regular basis. This percentage was taken from the recent student survey and includes those who are monthly users.

Following the Substance Abuse Workshop which was held in Snyder the past weekend, a counciling program will be available in Snyder schools offering confidential support to students with problems of any kind.

Smith commented that Snyder people have been very responsive with some 120 people attending the workshop.

President Mary Ann Key presided at the meeting. Lois Bishop was hostess with the meeting at her home. Seven members were present for the presentation and refreshments.

Makes date for World Series...

St. Louis claims NL Series

ST. LOUIS (AP) - In winning pitcher Danny Cox's opinion, it was appropriate that light-hitting Jose Oquendo's home run was the blow that powered the St. Louis Cardinals into the World Series.

"We seem to have a different hero every night," Cox said Wednesday night after combining with Oquendo, an unsung utility player, to lead St. Louis to its 15th National League pennant.

"No one expected Jose to hit a home run, so we weren't expecting it either," Cox said. "We seem to find a different way to win each time."

Oquendo's three-run shot in the second inning, only the third homer of his major league career, was all that the Cardinals really needed in tandem with Cox's pitching for a 6-0 victory over the San Francisco Giants.

But for good measure, shortstop Ozzie Smith stuck in his defense as the middle man on three double plays. And, with the Giants' hopes waning in the late innings, Tommy Herr sealed their doom with a two-run single.

"This is the kind of victory that reads like a storybook," Rick Horton said in a tumultuous St. Louis clubhouse, where champagne flowed.

"All year long, people kept counting us out because of all our injuries. Well, tonight we had injuries, too. We overcame them. It makes it all that much sweeter because of the adversities we've overcome."

Cox, no stranger in the past to difficulty, went at San Francisco from the start with both vengeance and purpose.

The 6-foot-4 pitcher challenged Giants hitters throughout. He yielded eight hits, but all were singles - including two by playoff MVP Jeffrey Leonard. And he struck out five while walking none.

"You go with your best stuff," Cox said of the format he used to keep San Francisco from collecting more than one hit in all but the third inning.

"He's a good pitcher, no matter what the score is," Mike Aldrete of the Giants said. "When he gets a lead, it makes him that much tougher."

Part of Cox's bravado stemmed from the Cardinals' four-run eruption in the second, capped by Oquendo's homer on a 3-2 count off Atlee Hammaker.

"Jose has played great all year," St. Louis Manager Whitey Herzog said of the 24-year-old utilityman, who played eight positions during the regular season. "No matter where we stuck him, whether it was for Herr at second base or for McGee in center, he has always done the job."

Giants Manager Roger Craig said Oquendo's homer restricted San Francisco's offensive options and set the game's tone.

"That put us four runs down. In that situation, there was no chance to hit and run and that set up the (St. Louis) double plays," Craig said. "I'm proud of my team. We'll have nothing to be ashamed of all winter."

War of words begins between Cards, Twins

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) - The war of words has already begun between this year's World Series participants, the Minnesota Twins and the St. Louis Cardinals.

Before St. Louis had even wrapped up its National League playoff series against the San Francisco Giants, Cardinals Manager Whitey Herzog said it was "a shame" that the Detroit Tigers won 98 games but lost to the Twins in the American League playoffs.

"It's a shame that one team wins 98 games and the other 85 and the one with 85 wins (the AL pennant)," said Herzog, whose team went on to defeat the Giants 6-0 Wednesday night to wrap up the NL pennant.

When told Wednesday afternoon about Herzog's comments, Twins first baseman Kent Hrbek said: "It's a shame they can only score one run a ballgame, too. That's too bad."

Hrbek was referring to the Cardinals' troubles manufacturing runs when the injured Jack Clark is out of their lineup.

Twins shortstop Greg Gagne, reached at home Wednesday night after the Cardinals' triumph, said the Twins have won more than 85 games counting the four playoff victories.

"Right now, we've won 89 and we hope to make it 93," Gagne said. "Hey, that's just the way the thing is set up in both leagues. We only needed to win 85 games to get there. Heck, we could have won 84 and still won it. That has nothing to do with anything now. Now it's 0-0 and the best team's going to win the seven-game series. Talking can't do nothing."

Added second baseman Steve Lombardozzi: "I don't have a comment (on Herzog's statement). I'll just let it go and let other people talk."

Lombardozzi said the World Series seems closer now that the Twins know who they'll be playing Saturday night at the Metrodome in Game 1.

"It feels much better to know for sure who we're going to play," he said. "Now we can set our sights on one team and we'll have the scouting reports pouring in."

The Cardinals' victory means that Frank Viola, the Twins' 17-10 left-hander, will start Game 1. Minnesota Manager Tom Kelly said that early scouting reports have indicated that St. Louis' switch-hitters are less dangerous from the right side of the plate.

Kelly said he was planning to start right-hander Bert Blyleven if the Giants won the pennant.

"It doesn't matter to me," said Blyleven, who will start Game 2. "I know I'll get my pitches and my innings in. Our scouting department did a great job with the Tigers and I'm sure they know what they're talking about for the World Series."

Rookie right-hander Les Straker will start Game 3 and Viola will come back for Game 4 unless the Twins have a 3-0 series lead. In the unlikely event that happens, Joe Niekro would start Game 4, Kelly said.

Minnesota players don't know much about the Cardinals because they have seen very little of the National League this season.

"One thing we do know is they got speed," Gagne said. "They come at you with Tommy Herr and Ozzie Smith and Vince Coleman and Willie McGee and Jose Oquendo. They're a running club. They're supposedly a lot of singles hitters who get on base and then run a lot.

"It's going to keep us on our toes. We gotta make sure we hold our own when they hit-and-run. We're probably going to have to play a little closer to the (second base) bag, play them up the middle."

The Twins, playing in their first World Series since 1965 and only their second ever, on Wednesday held their first workout since Monday's pennant-clinching triumph at Detroit.

One of the main purposes of the workout was to give their pitchers some batting practice. Pitchers must bat in the three games at St. Louis and most Twins hurlers haven't gone to the plate in years.

Strike games bring enthusiasm to NFL

By BILL McCLELLAN
SDN Sports Editor

I've heard enough talk about how the replacement football games are going to ruin NFL football.

Baloney. It simply isn't true.

Oh yeah. The replacement games have changed professional football. Like, how do you spell EFFORT? Like how do you spell ENTHUSIASM?

It's great to see players putting more effort into playing the game than negotiating a contract. We haven't seen that it a while. Hooray for Mike Dwyer.

I'll admit the replacement games are sloppy at times. Some scores have been lopsided. But so were the NFL preseason contests. You can't expect guys to work out two weeks, put on uniforms and play error-free football.

Is the caliber of play that much less than with the veterans?

To a degree, sure. Most of the replacement players were cut by NFL teams at one time or another, which can mean that they weren't quite up to par talent-wise. But we're not talking about a tremendous drop-off here. The extra edge a lot of the veterans have on these guys is just experience.

Attendance figures show that fans will accept the new football players in most cities. Crowds doubled from the first week of replacement football to the second in most locations. Strong union towns, such as Philadelphia, aren't getting many fans and may not. Another reason is that the Eagles are losing. And if replacement football continues the rest of the season, the Eagles may not win. Here's why...

There are three reasons some teams are winning and some aren't. They are: 1) some teams did a better job of keeping contact with free agents and then obtaining them, 2) some teams have benefitted from the few veterans who have walked across the picket lines and, 3) some coaching staffs have approached the situation with a positive frame of mind while others haven't.

The first two are obviously important, but the third is the one that binds it all together. Check this quote from Philadelphia Coach Buddy Ryan after his Eagles lost to Dallas last Sunday.

> "I hope the strike is over next week. And I'm looking foward to getting them in Philadelphia. I'm looking forward to playing 'em with our real guys."

A big difference between the success of the Cowboys and the devastation of the Eagles the past two weeks has been the attitude of the coaching staffs. Cowboys Coach Tom Landry and his staff are making the best of the situation, praising players for doing well, for their enthusiasm, and approaching each game positively. Philadelphia would rather comment on the "real guys" coming back, which does noting more than alienate the new Eagles.

How can you expect a team to play well when its coach is commenting about how sorry the situation is and how much he wants his veterans back?

In Washington the Redskins are winning. No doubt they want their "real players" back, too. But in the meantime Coach Joe Gibbs is approaching the situation with positives.

In Denver, where the Broncs were stomped upon by Houston two weeks ago then knocked off the Raiders on Monday, they are approaching the situation with positives. Over 60,000 fans showed up to cheer the Broncos on Monday night. Obviously that didn't hurt any. Coach Danny Reeves said the loss to Houston was his fault. He says now things are in better prespective.

If you watched Monday's game you noticed Reeves' approach to the situation. He congratulated players after each play. He even hugged a few. Sort of mocked-hugged ol' Monte McGuire.

Remember McGuire? Graduated from Monahans in 1981 as second-team all-district 2-4A quarterback and later spent time behind center with Texas Tech.

McGuire played late in Monday's game and even then he was alternated at quarterback. But he was two-for-two passing as I recall and helped lead the Broncos on a touchdown drive.

At' a way to go, Monte.

But without a contract...

Players appear ready to go back to work

NEW YORK (AP) - The largest mass defection in its 24-day-old strike has the NFL players union ready to send its members back to work. But whether they will return in time to play real games this weekend remains in doubt.

While union and management haggled Wednesday over the final I's to be dotted and T's to be crossed in an agreement that would end the strike without a contract, a total of 89 players returned to their teams. "Our strike seems to be winding down," union head Gene Upshaw conceded this morning in a recorded message to players.

Moreover, the Washington Redskins, the only team without a striking player in camp, were set to return en masse and the Los Angeles Rams were reported nearly ready to do the same. The rest of the league probably won't be far behind.

"I would suggest that all of the players in the National Football League hang together because we're now on the verge of returning you all back to work," Upshaw told players this morning in the telephone message.

The Redskins' lone potential defector, All-Pro defensive end Dexter Manley, changed his mind Wednesday, saying he preferred to act with his teammates. While Neal Olkewicz, the team's player representative, had no comment on the return, Gene Upshaw, the union's executive director, said Wednesday night: "I'm sure they're going back. They've said they're going back."

The rest of the players will follow them as soon as the two sides can agree on the expiration date of the 1982 contract, which will be extended while negotiations continue. The union is seeking an expiration date of Feb. 1 so that any new gains on free agency wouldn't be delayed another year; the owners are seeking a June 16 expiration date.

"We would be willing to return to work. We would be willing to play under the 1982 agreement," Upshaw said. "But everything must expire February 1. If we took their agreement, all the rights under the standard player contract would vest for an additional year, so we're not going to have that."

Among Wednesday's defectors were such stars as Lawrence Taylor, Steve Largent, Ozzie Newsome and Andre Tippett, with the prospect of Eric Dickerson, Jim Everett and 11 of their Los Angeles Rams teammates reporting today.

Upshaw, while minimizing the numbers, conceded the defections were having an effect, particularly if a full team like Washington were to cross the line. He noted that 16 Cleveland Browns reported Wednesday and they play Cincinnati, with only two defectors, on Sunday.

"If you consider one full genuine team, say the Cleveland Browns playing the Cincinnati scabs, I don't think that would be very fair and wouldn't be good for competitive balance or for the integrity of the game," Upshaw said.

But most of Wednesday's action was on the telephone lines as the union seemed to be running out of both time and support.

The two chief negotiators, Upshaw for the union and Jack Donlan for management, talked twice during the day. Upshaw said he also had had conversations with Commissioner Pete Rozelle, who he said was working "quietly ... behind the scenes."

Donlan also spent the day talking to owners while Upshaw spent much of the late afternoon and evening in conference calls with the 28 player representatives.

But whether the union could get the players back in time to forestall another round of replacement games this weekend was a question.

"There has been progress made," Mike Lynn, general manager of the Minnesota Vikings, said Wednesday.

Newton, others cross Cowboys picket lines

IRVING, Texas (AP) - Starting offensive guard Nate Newton and two wide receivers on injured reserve became the most recent Dallas Cowboys to cross the picket line - and linebacker Garth Jax indicated he would join the team today.

Rumors swirled around the league Wednesday that a resolution to the strike was near at hand, and Jax said the only reason he didn't report with Newton and wide receivers Kelvin Martin and Ray Alexander was because he felt the end of the strike was imminent.

"I talked to someone of high authority and decided I didn't want to go in today if there was a chance of the whole team coming back tomorrow," Jax said Wednesday.

"Nobody has said this, but I would imagine that a lot of players around the NFL have elected to wait until tonight to see what happens. You will definitely see me in there tomorrow. I don't want to have something taken away from me that I worked my butt off for six to eight weeks to get."

Players had been told to report by noon Wednesday to qualify for pay this week and to be eligible for this weekend's games. The Cowboys host the Washington Redskins on Monday night.

Cowboys president Tex Schramm said he did not know of any way - barring a major development in the strike - that Jax or other Cowboys could be paid or activated this week if they waited until today to show up.

"If the union sent everyone back to work, that could change the situation. But the way the rule is right now, the deadline is passed," Schramm said.

When Newton, Martin and Alexander reported Wednesday, it brought to 19 the Dallas Cowboys who have crossed the picket line in the 22-day work stoppage. Nine are on injured reserve and 10 are on the regular roster.

Martin, a rookie, was the team's fourth-round draft pick from Boston College. Alexander has Canadian Football League experience.

Only Martin was given a doctor's go-ahead to be available for Monday night's game against the Washington Redskins in Texas Stadium.

Cowboys spokesman Doug Todd said 46,925 tickets remained sold as of Wednesday afternoon.

Six Oilers cross lines

HOUSTON (AP) - The solidarity of the striking Houston Oilers has started to crack with six regular players crossing the picket lines to prepare for Sunday's game against New England.

Nose guard Doug Smith had been the only member of the Oilers 45-player roster to cross the striking players' picket line.

He was joined Wednesday by punter Lee Johnson, rookie linebacker Walter Johnson, offensive lineman Doug Williams, kicker Tony Zendejas, defensive end Ray Childress and first round draft choice Haywood Jeffires.

Some teams face elimination...

Key 2-4A battles set Friday

It could well be elimination time in District 2-4A this week, as San Angelo Lake View, Big Spring and Fort Stockton all face what appears to be must-win situations to stay alive in the playoff race.

Locally, Snyder hopes a week off has helped it prepare physically and mentally for Andrews. Both teams felt the wrath of a strong Monahans team in recent weeks. Snyder fell 63-0 to the undefeated Loboes two weeks ago while Andrews succumbed 56-0 to the same bunch last Friday.

Coach Dennis Tomlin's Ragin' Tigers will be looking for their first win of the season after five outings while Andrews comes into Tiger Stadium at 2-3-1 overall and 1-2-1 in district play. One of those non-district wins is actually a forfeit victory. Hereford had to give up its win over the Mustangs when the Herd was found to be using an ineligible player.

In one of the biggest 2-4A games this Friday, Fort Stockton entertains the Steers of Big Spring. Fort Stockton is 3-1 in league play while Big Spring is 2-1. It's doubtful either could sustain a loss and stay alive in the race for the playoffs. Monahans and Sweetwater lead the loop with 3-0 marks.

Monahans will entertain San Angelo, which at 2-2 can't afford another loss. The Sweetwater Mustangs play Pecos, a 1-2-1 squad.

In Monahans, San Angelo will find itself against the league's top offensive team. Monahans is averaging 405.5 yards and a whopping 48.7 points per game. Senior running back Charles Thompson is the Loboes' spark. He boasts 844 yards rushing and 17 touchdowns at the season's midway point.

Averaging 321.3 yards and 26 points, Lake View is no offensive slouch itself. Quarterback Eric Dumas has connected on 60 of 124 passes for 843 yards and 8 touchdowns to lead the Chiefs.

The Big Spring-Fort Stockton game features two of the better balanced teams in the league. Fort Stockton is averaging 303.5 yards and allowing just 155.7. Big Spring, which struggled in a 16-10 win over Lamesa last week, averages 290.4 but is allowing a misleading 281.2. The Steers, bit by the fumble bug of late, have mishandled the ball on 34 occasions this season and lost 18 of them.

If it weren't for Sweetwater's obvious edge in offensive power, the Sweetwater-Pecos game would match up as a good defensive confrontation. Sweetwater is allowing just 146.4 yards a game while Pecos is allowing only 229.7 - which includes a 46-3 loss to Monahans. The Eagles held offense-minded San Angelo to 8 points last weekend.

Pecos' offense has sputtered, however, while Sweetwater is averaging 335.0 yards and 32 points a game.

Offensive output, or lack of it, has been the downfall of both the Snyder Tigers and Andrews Mustangs this season. Andrews is located at the bottom of the offensive statistics, averaging just 150.3 yards a game. Snyder averages 194.8. Defensively, Andrews is allowing 306; Snyder 347.

All of the games are scheduled for 8 p.m. kickoffs.

Swimmer's ear can be treated

DEAR DR. GOTT — I have a black fungus of a yeast family growing in my ear canal. VoSol HC and Vioform only keep the ear canal clear for two or three hours, then it fills up again and I can't hear. Do you have any recommendations?

DEAR READER — You are describing a form of external otitis or swimmer's ear. This condition is not usually caused by a fungus; more commonly, the culprit is a bacterium called pseudomonas. In either case, the key to cure is careful cleansing of the ear canal. You can do this at home using a bulb syringe filled with a half-and-half solution of vinegar and rubbing alcohol. Gently flush out the canal every day for a few days. If improvement is not prompt, see an ear, nose and throat specialist, who will regularly clean the ear canal with a tiny vacuum device.

Once the skin of the canal has been cleared of debris and dried, the ear drops you have been using should be more effective in curing the infection. For obvious reasons, a resistant or continuing condition should be seen and treated by a specialist.

Many people with recurrent swimmer's ear find that prevention is superior to dealing with a painful, inflamed ear. After swimming or showering, dry the canal with a towel and then pour about a half a capful of rubbing alcohol into the ear. Wait a few seconds and shake it out. As well as drying the canal, the alcohol will evaporate any residual moisture, thus making the area much less conducive to bacterial or yeast growth.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I have a spastic colon and have been taking Lomotil three times a week for 10 years. Am I in danger of getting glaucoma?

DEAR READER — Lomotil is an effective anti-diarrhea medicine that contains diphenoxylate (a narcotic) and atrophine. Diphenoxylate is habit-forming and, with long-term use, can produce signs and symptoms of narcotic habituation. Atrophine causes relaxation of certain muscles in the body, including those that control peristalsis, urination and the flow of fluid from the eye. Therefore, patients with certain forms of colitis, urinary retention or glaucoma must not use Lomotil unless it is administered under close medical supervision.

The atrophine in Lomotil probably will not cause glaucoma in the low dose you are taking; however, it can make glaucoma worse. Check with your doctor about this.

To give you more information about colon problems in general, I'm sending you a free copy of my Health Report on IRRITABLE BOWEL SYNDROME. Others who want information on the subject should send $1 and their name and address to P.O. Box 91369, Cleveland, OH 44101-3369. Be sure to mention the title.

Zaccaro acquitted of charge

NEW YORK (AP) — Geraldine Ferraro lashed out at her former boss, the Queens district attorney, with a "four-letter word" — dumb — after he tried and failed to convict her husband of trying to shake down a cable TV company.

John Zaccaro, 54, was acquitted Wednesday on bribery and extortion charges in an indictment Ms. Ferraro reiterated would not have been brought if she hadn't been the 1984 Democratic vice presidential candidate.

After the verdict, Ms. Ferraro said she might run for office again and would work to defeat in 1989 District Attorney John Santucci, who helped launch her career by hiring her as a prosecutor and later backed her for Congress.

"If we can't find a Democrat to do it, and the Republicans come up with someone ... I'll be there to help out," she said.

Ms. Ferrao's real-estate broker husband was accused of scheming in 1981 with then-Queens Borough President Donald Manes to solicit a bribe from Cablevision Systems Corp. for the lucrative contract to wire the borough.

Manes, who also was implicated in unrelated corruption cases, committed suicide in 1986.

Zaccaro, if convicted, could have received up to seven years in prison.

"I'm angry at John Santucci for bringing this obviously empty indictment," Ms. Ferraro said on the courthouse steps. "It should never have happened. There's a four-letter word I can use to describe John Santucci."

"What is it?" someone yelled.

"Dumb," she replied, smiling. "It is a dumb indictment. It was a dumb political action. But I guess, of course, anybody who sits on their brains for 14 hours at a time must suffer some sort of damage."

Asked if she would consider running for office again, Ms. Ferraro said, "Perhaps."

"I really don't see answering the charges," Santucci responded. "She worked here. She and her family have been through a very trying episode, and I will take the statements in the manner in which they were made."

Zaccaro's business dealings had come under intense scrutiny after Ms. Ferraro's nomination as Walter Mondale's running mate.

"John is going back to being John Zaccaro, real estate broker, no longer John Zaccaro, husband of Geraldine Ferraro, who ran for vice president of the United States," Ms. Ferraro said.

Prosecutor Paul Pickelle had characterized Zaccaro and Manes as partners in crime, and the judge, State Supreme Court Justice John Thorp, told the jury it must find that Manes broke the law to convict Zaccaro.

"Insufficient evidence," said Lester Anthony, the jury foreman, declining further comment.

"They never proved he was working for Donald Manes," said juror Ronald Forte, a postal worker.

Drug effective against illness

BOSTON (AP) — An experimental cancer drug shows promise in combating a form of pneumonia that often kills AIDS victims, doctors reported today.

The drug does not cure the AIDS victims' underlying disease, but can effectively repel pneumocystis carinii pneumonia, the most common lethal infection among those with acquired immune deficiency syndrome.

The researchers reported that the drug's major advantage is its lack of toxic side effects, which limit the use of other common antibiotics.

The drug, call trimetrexate, is one of several under development for pneumocystis, which is rare in all but AIDS patients. About 80 percent of AIDS victims get the lung infection.

Dr. Carmen J. Allegra, who directed the study, said the drugs might delay inevitable death from the complications of AIDS for several years.

"For people who have AIDS and this particular pneumonia, having those two or three years of high-quality life is very important," he said. "It is not a trivial thing to give someone several more years of life."

A report on his work, conducted at the National Cancer Institute, was published in today's New England Journal of Medicine.

In an accompanying editorial, Dr. Walter T. Hughes of St. Jude Children's Hospital in Memphis, Tenn., said there has been "a remarkable dearth" of carefully controlled studies of drugs intended for pneumocystis.

During the past year, he said, more Americans have died from pneumocystis than the combined total of viral hepatitis, viral encephalitis, meningococcal infections, gonorrhea, syphilis, chicken pox, measles, mumps, rubella, diphtheria, tetanus, whooping cough, polio, amoeba infections, bacterial dysentery, salmonella infections, typhoid fever, typhus fevers, cholera, rabies, brucellosis, anthrax, tularemia, botulism and malaria.

AIDS destroys the body's ability to fight microbes. Victims usually die of pneumocystis and other infections that healthy people easily repel.

V-P Bush proposes tax cut

DEARBORN, Mich. (AP) — Vice President George Bush, his resolve to hold down taxes called into question, promised anew to "hold the line" on increases and went a step further, proposing a cut in the capital-gains tax for individuals.

The tax cut, outlined during a speech to a business audience Wednesday in Atlanta would actually bring in more revenue because it would "create more jobs than you can imagine" and stimulate the economy, Bush said.

Later, during a $1,000-a-plate fund-raiser that drew about 500 people, he renewed a campaign pledge made when he formally announced his candidacy for the GOP presidential nomination on Monday.

"I am not going to raise the taxes on the working men and women in our country. We've got to hold the line. I'm the guy to keep 'em down. We brought 'em down and we'll keep 'em down," Bush said.
