CISCO VOTING IN BEER ELECTION LIGHT

Explosive Issues Confront Congress Today

Through the Editor's
Spectacles
By GEORGE

Victims of his alleged, and certainly brutal wit who long have looked for something destructive to happen to Percy Warwick can now be more than satisfied. Those who were privileged to be spectators and auditors of that long-demanded episode last night are honestly satisfied. For once they saw the discomforted, red-faced Warwick squirm around on the edge of his chair, puffed up until he looked ready to explode, and stare at his tormentor utterly unable to do anything about it.

"There are, after all, some good republicans," Don Morris, Abilene, speaker for the Rotary club's ladies night program, was saying. One such is Perk Warwick, which is evident by the fact that he is a member of the Rotary club.

"Once, when Perk was taking his first—and his last—airplane ride, the bottom fell out of the ship while it was passing over a forest. Perk fell the 1,000 feet and landed in hollow tree, 20 feet deep. He was wedged so tightly in the tree that he couldn't move, much less climb back up the 20 feet of perpendicular tunnel. And, so, there he was. He yelled, but there was no one to hear him. He struggled, but the more he struggled the tighter he was wedged in the stump. For five long hours he was imprisoned there and he began to get hungry as well as frightened.

"Just about the time he was giving up hopes and resigning himself to face a death by starvation he happened to think that he voted for Herbert Hoover in 1932. Then he spied a little knot-hole just above his head and crawled through it."

"To beer or not to beer—that is the question." They say a pun is the lowest form of wit, but when it expresses to aptly the issue before the voters today it is all right to paraphrase old man Shakespeare.

Billion, 800 Million Deficit at Jan. 1st

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 3. (AP)—The government closed this year—half of the current fiscal year—with expenditures exceeding income by about $1,880,000,000, compared to slightly more than $3,000,000,000 the president estimated for the full fiscal year ending June 30.

NEUTRALITY BONUS BILLS INTRODUCED

Administration Measure Gives President Discretion.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 3. (AP)—Congress convened at noon today, confronted immediately by the explosive neutrality and bonus issues.

The gravel had hardly fallen before an administration bill seeking discretionary embargo powers for the president and a veterans' organization's bonus measure were introduced.

Many were ready to fight over whether the neutrality policy would be made mandatory by congress and whether, and how, congress would redeem veterans' compensation certificates.

The United States chamber of commerce rapped the compromise bonus bill, contending that it would cost over a billion more than congress originally intended.

Under a bill that Chairman McReynolds of the house foreign affairs committee introduced the president could have discretion as to embargoes on war materials, but would be required to embargo actual war implements. Financial transactions with belligerent governments would be barred. A prolonged dispute appeared inevitable because this is election year.

Roosevelt in his message tonight expected to give his legislative program in broad outline, but leaders were inclined to place more importance on his budget message Monday.

Both houses agreed to recess until evening for the president's speech, but Rep. Snell, republican leader, denounced the speech plan as a "cheap attempt" to use the message politely.

FUNERAL FOR BOY AT 5:30

Funeral services for Roy Edward McCarty, 9, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. McCarty, who died at the family home at 312 E. 21st street today at 5 a. m., will be held from the Green Funeral home chapel at 5:30 this afternoon, it was announced. Interment will be in Oakwood cemetery.

The Rev. David Tyndall, pastor of the First Christian church, will officiate.

Italy, Ethiopia Move to Suppress Internal Revolts

(By Associated Press)

Italy and Ethiopia moved today, informed sources said, to strangle any internal dissension.

In Italy, fascist party leaders called country-wide meetings to repeat to followers Mussolini's declaration ten years ago that opposition to his regime would be removed forcibly.

Five thousand troops were sent from Addis Ababa to Djibouti province, near Lake Tana, to quell disorders allegedly Italian-incited. Thousands of copies of an appeal for loyalty to Selassie were also dispatched to combat attempts to stir a revolt against imperial taxes.

Rome officials vigorously denied Paris reports that Italian soldiers and mutilated at Lugo di Romagna, killing a fascist militiaman and injuring several soldiers as they prepared to leave for Ethiopia.

Ethiopia announced that Italian planes bombed and machine-gunned tribes in the Ogaden sector on December 30, killing five and wounding two.

The French foreign office called "absurd" Paris newspaper stories saying that France had asked Britain if she was willing to send troops to the German frontier to replace French soldiers in the event of a war with Italy.

COUNTY MEET TO DETERMINE RELIEF NEED

Session to Be Held at Eastland Saturday at 1 P. M.

A county-wide meeting sponsored by the Texas Relief commission to determine the need for further relief in Eastland county and, if possible, devise ways and means of meeting that need will be held in the county court house at Eastland tomorrow afternoon beginning at 1 o'clock, it was announced today by F. A. Wells, supervisor of District 14 of the state relief set-up.

All city and county officials and representatives of civic clubs and other interested organizations are being invited as well as the public at large. All employees of the relief district will attend.

Principal speaker will be Dr. Jack Johnson, of the staff of the Texas Relief commission at Austin where he is administrative consultant, who is now engaged in making a survey of the state in an effort to determine the need for continuing relief grants.

All But Few of Old City Bonds Are Exchanged

Records in the state comptroller's office at Austin this week revealed that of approximately $4,500,000 in original city of Cisco bond principal, $4,124,000 had been refunded with term bonds under the agreement concluded between the city and the bondholders committee.

The amount of refunding bonds now outstanding in exchange for the $4,124,000 original bonds refunded, was given as $1,357,470.

The refunding bonds were issued at the rate of 25 per cent of both original principal and interest, or about one-third of the original principal. They bear interest on a graduated scale, rising from one per cent the first year to a top of 5 per cent in the 16th year, a rate which they continue to draw during the remainder of their 40-year term.

The rate at which the bonds have been refunded was considered surprisingly good. Only about $350,000 original principal remains, and it is said to be very unlikely that all of this will be exchanged. Many of the outstanding old bonds have been lost, destroyed by fire, forgotten or otherwise removed from any probability of being presented at the comptroller's office in exchange for the refunding bonds which will be held in readiness for them there indefinitely. Very likely, the greater part of the approximately $350,000 will never be seen again, it was said.

Special Services at Presbyterian Church

There will be special services at the First Presbyterian church Sunday with the regular New Year's service taking place at the 11 a. m. hour. The regular quarterly communion will also take place at the morning hour.

The pastor, the Rev. J. Stuart Pearce, especially urged that all who wish to unite with the church to meet with the session between the Sunday school hour and the morning worship service.

The evening service will be a continuation of the series of character studies of outstanding world characters. The young people's choir will furnish the music.

The average life of an automobile has risen to 8 1/2 years, compared with 6 1/2, the average prior to the depression.

Grand Jury to View Todd Death Scene

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 3. (AP)—Grand jurors, told by Ida Lupino, that Thelma Todd was "unhappy and dreary," today prepared to inspect Thelma's seaside cafe where she lived and the garage where she died.

Despite testimony that the actress was despondent occasionally, Jury Foreman George Rochester said "It looks like the suicide angle was just built up. We have found nothing to support this theory definitely."

10 Injured When Hotel Is Burned

ATLANTIC CITY, Jan. 3. (AP)—Ten men were injured when fire destroyed the 100-room Biltmore hotel, driving over 40 guests out in night clothes.

A first edition of Izaak Walton's "Compleat Angler," published in 1653 and sold for eightpence (about 15 cents), was sold in London recently for $2,550. A second edition brought $700.

EXPECT 500 OR LESS TO BE COUNTED

Only Those With 1934 Poll Taxes Permitted to Cast Ballot.

Negligible interest was exhibited today by Cisco voters in the special election called to determine whether Eastland county should remain in the dry column as regards 4 per cent beer and light wines or whether the local option dry law involved in the county since the early years of the century should be liberalized to permit legal sale of these beverages.

At the West Cisco box 275 had voted at 2:30. Eighty four ballots had been cast at the East Cisco box to the same hour.

Normally about 1,350 voters are attached to the west Cisco box and around 500 to East Cisco box.

None but holders of 1934 poll taxes were permitted to vote. On the tables at the boxes lay copies of a telegram from Assistant Atty Gen. Street ruling that only those who had paid 1934 poll taxes prior to January 31st 1935, were privileged to vote, of course, without poll tax receipts.

The judges said they had no alternatives but to obey the ruling.

Reports from other boxes in the county were not received. It was believed unlikely the Cisco vote would exceed 500.

Television To Get Test During '36

By C. E. BUTTERFIELD
(Associated Press Radio Editor)
NEW YORK, Jan. 3. (AP)—Looking backward and forward, there are many indications that 1935 was the year B. T.—before television.

It was during 1935 that RCA laboratories announced "comprehensive field tests of high definition television" would be attempted in 1936. The announcement, however, carried no introduction or participation. It was believed the tests would cost more than $1,000,000.

Also, there was the advice from the Bell laboratories that they had developed a cable-coaxial it is called capable of carrying television signals by wire to make possible network interconnection.

Other Nations Working
The RCA tests are to be predicated upon the research work in which Dr. Vladimir Zworykin and his cathode ray tubes are the center. These devices eliminate mechanics in television transmission and reception.

Meanwhile overseas, England, France and Germany gave indications that they too, were getting closer to actual television.

The year offered another radio bit that at least created a little excitement in the industry. It was the introduction of medal tubes. They were hailed both as better and worse than glass-envelope tubes. However, most manufacturers put them into general use in their new sets.

Broadcasting went merrily along, too, with probably the stratosphere broadcasts early in the fall as the year's outstanding accomplishment. The networks believed they would close 1935 with a total intake of $50,000,000, their best yet by several millions.

Laughing Around the World With IRVIN S. COBB

No Repetitions for Hubby

By IRVIN S. COBB

A FEW months ago an English illustrated paper published a joke which struck me as having merit. When I repeated it in company a gentleman who is supposed to know nearly all the jokes in the world told me that in slightly different guise the same wheeze was current on the Pacific Coast twenty years ago. He may or may not have been wrong. In any event, I like the British version.

A couple from the country have come up to London for a week's visit. They have seats in the first gallery for a performance of a society drama. To them the play proves exceedingly tiresome. In one of the intervals the husband, stifling a yawn, turns to his deeply bored wife.

"What comes next?" he asks. She consults the program. "It says 'ere, 'Act four, sime as Act one'."

"Ow!" he exclaims, "let's 'op it. I couldn't sit through all the awful mess again."

ANNOUNCEMENTS

The Cisco Daily and Weekly Rural Press are authorized to announce the following candidates for the offices under which their names appear, subject to the action of the democratic primaries, of 1936:

FOR COUNTY TAX ASSESSOR AND COLLECTOR:
C. H. O'Brien.
Clyde S. Karkalits.

Clyde Karkalits Announces for Collector Office

Clyde S. Karkalits, chief deputy tax assessor and collector, has authorized the Cisco Daily Press to formally announce his candidacy for county assessor-collector, subject to the action of the voters in the 1936 democratic primary. Mr. Karkalits, a long time resident of Cisco, has served as chief deputy for five years and feels himself to be thoroughly experienced at duties that place a heavy responsibility upon the executive in the office he seeks. Especially since the combination of the offices of assessor and collector are these responsibilities heavy, requiring, he points out, the services of a person thoroughly accustomed to business affairs of the ability involved and experienced in dealing with the intricate nature of the duties the assessor-collector now assumes.

In his formal statement Mr. Karkalits says:

In coming to the citizens of Eastland county and asking for their support for election to the office of tax assessor-collector, I feel that you are entitled to know something about me and my qualifications for this very important office.

I was born on a farm near Gorman, Texas, in 1884. My father, with his family moved to Cisco in 1890, where I was reared and received my education (except the years 1894, 1895 and 1896, during which time we lived in Eastland.)

My father, Jules A. Karkalits, while in his "teens" came to Eastland with his mother and sister in 1874 as pioneers and "settled" on Nash's creek east of where Carbon now stands. My mother was also a pioneer family. Her father, John Sidney Dunn, came with his family to this county in 1878.

My life is a matter of open history and is known to a large number of the older citizens of the county, but to those citizens who have come here in recent years will say that I gladly invite your close investigation of my character and my ability as a business man and an accountant. I am and have been a democrat all my life.

For the past five years I have been chief deputy in the tax assessor-collector's office. The first four years under T. L. Cooper and since January 1, 1935, (at which time the offices of assessor and collector were combined by law) I have been under Tom Haley, the present assessor-collector.

I invite your investigation of my record in performing my duties in the office. This information you can get from the county auditor's office, the commissioners' court, or the state comptroller's office at Austin, or from all of them if you so desire.

For some time I have had a strong ambition to become the executive in the tax assessor-collector's office, realizing at the same time the importance of the office and the heavy responsibilities connected with it, especially since the two offices have been combined.

If after inquiring into my character and investigating my ability and qualifications to conduct the affairs of the office in a credible and satisfactory manner, you feel that I am worthy of the promotion that I seek, I assure you that I shall give my best efforts to serving you courteously and efficiently, and where possible and practical will make such improvements in methods of handling the business of the office as will tend to greater efficiency.

For financial reasons I am compelled to continue my present employment for a while, but I expect to make an active campaign as soon as possible, and it is my purpose to see every citizen of the county during the campaign.

If you elect me I will give you the best service in my power to render.

Sincerely,
CLYDE S. KARKALITS.

ary, 1936, he need not have paid the poll tax which is now due, but which he has until Feb. 1, 1936, to pay. In other words, if he paid his poll tax prior to Jan. 31, 1935, that is if he holds what is commonly known as a "1935" poll tax receipt, he is eligible to vote during the month of January, 1936. If he does not hold such a receipt, then he is not eligible to vote during the said month, even though he may have paid the poll tax which is now due and payable, that is what is commonly known as "1936" poll tax receipt.

"I might say that Mr. Grady Owen, district attorney of Eastland county, has expressed himself as concurring with my views on this question."

12 Cisco High School Students Given NYA Aid

Cisco public schools' application for $72 per month from the National Youth administration to be used to help worthy high school students pay their way through the school has been approved, Supt. R. N. Cluck was informed this week.

The $72 per month represents Cisco's full quota. It will be distributed to 12 students, each of whom will receive $6 per month. Only those students who show that this aid is required to keep them in school may receive it. The regulations under which it is received will be enforced by the high school principal, H. Brandon, who is also disbursing officer.

The approval of the application was made to be effective on December 6, and 12 students were immediately placed on the roll to receive the aid. It is hoped, Mr. Cluck said, to receive approval of further grants in the near future.

Entertains Salesman With Banquet Monday

S. R. Wood of the "Maytag-S. R. Wood" company entertained his salesmen and their wives with a big banquet and a party at the Mobley hotel on Monday evening of this week. After the "eats" and fun, Mr. Wood addressed the group and acquainted them with the new plans which were formulated earlier in the week by the officials in Dallas. Salesmen present with their wives were J. T. Beaum, Cross Plains; G. T. Willett, Rising Star; G. E. Norris, Gorman; L. L. Whitfield, Ranger; K. D. Hancock, Eastland; Doye Campbell, Eastland; S. B. Sisk, Cisco and S. B. Parks, Cisco. There was one salesman, P. S. Lemley of Ranger, who was unable to come. All of the above salesmen are employed full time by Mr. Wood. In addition to the above there were several guests in attendance. Music throughout the evening was furnished by Misses Tylen Phillips and Blanche Stevens.

Cave-Bear Statue Is Found In Cave

ST. GAUDENS, France, Jan. 3. (AP)—A crude statue of a bear, carved by some pre-historic sculptor 20,000 years ago, has been discovered by Norbert Casteret, archeologist, in a cavern under the French Pyrenees.

To reach the statue, Casteret had to plunge into dark, icy streams, crawl through holes on all fours and traverse huge halls where stalactites hung from the vaulted ceilings.

His only light was a candle and a box of waterproof matches which he carried in his rubber bathing cap.

The French archeologist has uncovered primitive altars where cavemen prayed and left many curious votive offerings. He also stumbled upon a cavern so vast that "it could house the whole cathedral of Notre Dame."

Kleiner Named On Resources Advisory Group

Appointment of Charles J. Kleiner, Cisco oil operator, to a place on the Texas Centennial Natural Resources Board's advisory committee of 100 was announced in a notification to the Cisco chamber of commerce, which nominated Kleiner, this week.

NEVER MIND THE LADY

by David Garth

SYNOPSIS: Allaire West shot a man one night in the tropics to save the life of Terry Willett, whom she just had met. George Fox, attached at the American Embassy, knew about it. But when Terry looked Allaire up at her mother's Washington home the meeting was not a success. And now George has returned on leave, has gone to the same home to look for the same girl and instead has found a human snake named LaMarr. And LaMarr lets it be known that he has discovered Allaire's tropical indiscretion, but will keep his mouth shut for $30,000. George refused to pay.

Chapter 25 "IT CAME TAILS"

A flip of the coin: The actions of Terry Willett's life had always been dictated by impulse, and what was impulse but a flip of the coin in the mind? Reaction, which had been chasing him a long time, nearly caught him as he stood outside the West mansion with the taxi waiting. Reaction!—when a man rests on his oars a moment to get his bearings before he bends to them again.

Tommy Speede had leaned over his shoulder and sobbed: "I can't beat this game and you can't either. You'll see." Speede—a weakling, a failure, going out soaked with kina and leaving a native wife and a half breed brat. "Beautiful woman, Terry, slim-waisted and laughing and fresh—" the cry to a life left behind.

Women! Strange beings, women! Seemed to get into a man's life, made it more complete. Even his father had lived only half a life after Vic had traded her life for Terry's birth. And so Terry had stopped for a moment, wondered, and flipped a coin. Puff Harrington or the Palva.

And when the taxi had dropped him at Union Station he'd simply shrugged.

"It came tails, boss. Satisfied?" He was in the Tyndall Construction and Engineering Company offices at noon the next day. It was a widespread, internationally-known company and occupied nearly a whole floor of a New York skyscraper. Famous works of engineering were perpetuated in plaster models and long framed pictures scattered throughout the offices.

Terry Willett, being Terry Willett, asked to see Gregory Tyndall himself. He'd heard his father speak of him. And he wouldn't see anybody else. They finally sent in his name.

Surprisingly, Tyndall saw him right away. For all the power that emanated through the channels he controlled, his face with its youthful smile and intent blue eyes was kindly.

"So you're Terence Willett?" he smiled, shaking hands. "You and your father did some work for us down at Juarez. How is your father? I know him well a long time ago."

Willett told him in one short sentence how his father was. Tyndall didn't say anything for a moment. Then he bent forward and switched a buzzer on the call board and left orders not to disturb him. He snapped the buzzer back.

"Tell me about it Terry."

"Fever." Tyndall shook his head slowly. "What an end for Laurie. He could have been tops here if he hadn't decided to freelance and beat his way around the world."

"My father sat in this chair ahead of me and I was groomed for the time I could walk, but if Laurie had stuck he'd have beaten me out in spite of that. A great executive your father. I'm awfully sorry, son." He looked at Willett intently. "Are you freelancing too?"

"Yes," said Willett, "taking my jobs where I find them."

"How about taking a regular job with me?" "I've got a job. Under contract. Revolution and — circumstances knocked it in the head temporarily, but I'm going back to see it through. I'd like to borrow Corrigan."

"Corrigan? One of my engineers—oh, John Corrigan. So you need him."

"Like to have Bucky, but I don't want him to lose his job with you."

Tyndall repressed a smile. "I don't think losing a job ever makes much difference to Corrigan. What's on your mind, Terry?" "Job on the Palva River. It's a stinker and I need help." "Corrigan will be glad to help you. And anybody else you want—"

"That's all right. Corrigan and I will see it through. I'll return him to you maybe a little dented, but a few more dents won't hurt Bucky any."

He got up. "Don't rush off, Terry." Willett laughed.

"Funny. The governor said the same thing. Don't rush off. What else is there to do? I've had enough of this country already."

Tyndall arose and came around the corner of the desk. "Terry. I want you to come back when you're through down there." He put a hand on the young man's shoulder. "You have a place in this engineering world among the leaders, the place your father could have had. I respected and admired Laurie, but if ever a man wasted his life and his talents it was he. Don't make that mistake, son—drift from engineering camp with no steady goal. You're got too much. I know it."

"I haven't anything," said Willett, "but a job to do. I don't know whether I can swing it or not, but I owe it to Dad to make the try. As for your offer—thanks—maybe sometime—"

They shook hands.

"Wait," said Tyndall, as Terry turned to leave. "Where is—your father?"

"Carteret," said Willett. "In Virginia, near Washington."

"I'm glad it's there. Lovely old place, isn't it?" "I guess so," said Terry. "Lots of trees and things. Well, goodbye, an dthanks again."

Tyndall saw him leave the office with that long easy stride of his. He'd come for something, got it, and gone; nothing else seemed to matter. Tyndall thought it was too bad.

A lot of Lawrence Willett in that man—executive and organizing power, latent force, engineering genius probably—and need of a balance wheel. Be a shame if the only way he went to Carteret again was like his father—maybe somebody would bring him back too.

Terry stopped on the way back to his hotel to invest heavily in a couple of cables. He sent one to Drake, the National Coffee Company's Propionaire agent, and the other to Bucky Corrigan.

Corrigan's whereabouts stumped him. It might be a toss-up between the Redmonte Bar and the city jail. He finally sent it in care of the American Council, directing him to forward it to the Tyndall office down there. (Copyright, 1935, by David Garth)

Terry gets the surprise of his life, tomorrow.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

Blessed be the king that cometh in the name of the Lord. Peace in heaven, and glory in the highest.—Luke 6:38.

Thus saith the Lord to his own;
See ye are the trouble below;
Warfare of man from his birth.
—Amos.

"The true picture of peace is simply the restoral of relations, so that each soul of us should give its full due to, and so get its full due from, the souls around it, and its own self, and the soul of God, its father."

The Presidents Speech

A PRESIDENTIAL precedent will be set this evening when Roosevelt's "state of the union" speech to the opening session of congress is delivered at night and broadcast over the radio. A broadside of partisan criticism has been loosed by this proposal, the republican high command directing charges of politics against the administration. Spokesmen for the administration have replied that the message of the president concerns all the people and therefore should be delivered at a time when the largest number of the people can hear it. The republican charges sound too much of "politics" themselves to merit a serious thought. Even the enemies of the president should wish to hear his speech. The fact that the president's personal address via the radio to all the nation is attracting republican opposition on the score that it is "politics" smacks too much of a republican fear of the personality and appeal of the chief executive.

WHY shouldn't the people hear the president in his address to congress? Is this citizenship privilege to be closed to all save that fortunate few who may crowd themselves into the halls and galleries of the congressional meeting place? Is the business of being president of the American public so much of politics rather than statesmanship that the views, expressions and words of the chief executive must be interpreted through partisan lips and reactions to the general public, rather than permitting the citizen to hear directly and interpret for himself?

WE MAY not agree with the president, but the privilege of hearing him ought to be a right not subject to partisan outcries. As president, he is the chief executive of all the people, not the executive of a mere party. Decision of the president to speak to congress in person and at a time when most of the people of the nation can hear him over the radioes in their homes may produce its political advantages. But that does not mean that the people of the United States ought to be denied the privilege of hearing him and to judge of his words for themselves. Merely because a radio did not exist thirty or forty years ago is no reason to deny a precedent now.

A Resolution

LET us, as Rotarians, resolve that in 1936 we shall endeavor to make our businesses the best; that we shall take part in the activities of our community; and that we shall be loyal to our community."

SO said Don M. Morris, of Abilene Christian college, to a truly excellent Ladies Night meeting of the Cisco Rotary club last night.

THE creed of the Rotarian expressed in the motto: "He profits most who serves best," does not permit of a passive attitude of community citizenship. It requires the dynamic will and spirit. It does not admit the idea of a second-rate business, because a second-rate business does not fulfill the qualifications for the most profit. The Rotarian creed, therefore, contemplates a strongly competitive attitude, not so much a competition with one's fellows as a competition with established standards. The golfer who seeks to improve his game may compete with his fellow-players, but he pits himself against "Old Man Par" and the hazards of the greens and the course and the hazards of his own physical and mental self in the struggle to produce a more nearly perfect human production of the game. Similarly, the conscientious citizen and business man pits himself against those hazards that constantly beset him and his business to produce a more nearly perfect service. Those hazards are not necessarily the likelihood that a competitor will exceed him in sales and reach. They are more correctly the problems and obstacles that surround his business, the obscurity of the future and the necessity of wisdom and forethought in action and management. He must be constantly on the alert to see ahead and to plan ahead, to judge rightly of needs and correctly of the means for meeting those needs in the best manner possible. The business of going into competition with oneself is a business of looking after the little things with the thoroughness that meets contingencies.

ONE cannot be selfish and perform the highest type of service. The obligations of building a good business are community-wide. The business man who keeps within his doors and refuses to cooperate in the community good, who fails to see his town as, perhaps, not the best town, but a town capable of being the best town, is shirking that character of service that will bring him the most profits not merely in money but in personal satisfaction. The personal satisfaction in service is not measured in the quantity of the product, but in the quality. The small artisan who constructs a tiny model of a gacht gains from achievement just as much of the coin of satisfaction in doing that as the craftsman who builds the magnificent sailing model achieves. The millionaire business man who would battle stubbornly for a dime wager on the golf links, would not give a hoot for the dime except that it signifies achievement. He would readily toss a handful of them to a beggar.

THE best resolution to be made for 1936 is a resolution to achieve something which, in the privacy of our own room, we could be proud of.

bagpipe music celebrating the love of some lad for his bonny lassie, both of them clad in plaid as a sort of national garment, comes to mind as we anticipate a tour of this picturesque land. Then to give an antique color to the picture there is some old castle high up on some stony crag out of reach of its one time assailants and associated with the wars of its clans of other days (the Bruce formed one of them). Scott's description of his native land seems apt:

Oh Caledonia! stern and wild,
Meet nurse for a poetic child.
But religious, as well as racial-ly, I find an interest in tracing back to Scotland. Among the heroic struggles for religious recognition have been those of the Presbyterians who may almost look upon this rugged land as a cradle. It was from among these Presbyterians that the Campbells, Thomas and Alexander (from that clan about which the old song says, "The Campbells are coming!") stepped out to advocate what they believed to be an advanced position of religious freedom.

We see then that whatever the Scotch have in the way of political right, rugged literature, religious conviction, or any other possession or achievement, has become theirs by effort. What they have they know how they got it. We need not be surprised then that they are good at holding on to it. Go to sunny Italy, if you want to, or to the forests of Germany, or to the villages of England, or wherever sentiment or attachment may take you; but give me a ticket to the glens and crags, the castles and cottages, the bairns and lads and lassies, the bluebells and the heather of Scotland.

A Washington Daybook

By HERBERT PLUMMER

Washington — With President Roosevelt back in the capital, the supreme court clipping of a whole week from his holiday recess, and members of congress returning on each train, Washington has settled down for one of its most exciting seasons in years.

The air of being crowded and at the same time deserted has been dispelled from the capital. Crowded, because the "new deal" since its inception has brought increasing numbers to town on business and otherwise. Deserted, because with President Roosevelt either away at Hyde Park or Warm Springs some how there is something missing.

Everybody who comes to Washington comments on the colonial detachment of the White House when the presidential family and callers are not flitting in and out. It has a slumorous museum quality, contrasted with the teeming tempo generated by Roosevelt presences.

That AAA Decision

The supreme court's decision to shorten its holiday recess from three to two weeks, thus moving back from January 13 to January 6 its date for returning to the bench, has added to the excitement in the capital.

Privately both official and unofficial Washington had circled January 13 on their new calendars for 1936 as a date to be watched. They reasoned it would be on that day the nine black-robed justices might decide the fate of AAA. Now many of them have erased

January 13 and circled January 6.

During arguments before the court on the Hoosac Mills and other AAA test cases, the magnificent new quarters of the tribunal reminded one of a theatre first night. The "SRO" sign was out hours ahead.

The dramatic collapse of Solicitor General Reed climaxed the affair. The appearance of black-bearded, be-robed and sandaled Harris Tzotis of Detroit in the role of Diogenes, lantern and all, made the show complete from the spectators' viewpoint.

Canadian Treaty

What will happen to the reciprocity trade agreement with Canada in the coming session of congress is a matter of speculation among politicians.

Some lumbermen, especially those in the Pacific northwest, have raised their voices in loud and long protests against the 50 per cent cut in lumber duties in the Canadian agreement.

The "off the record" attitude of several western members of congress is that the lumbermen weren't hurt as badly as their cries would indicate.

Brazil's first nationally designed and constructed airplane was put through a successful test flight recently by Lieut.-Col. Antonio Guedes Muniz, its designer. All materials were Brazilian and the plane itself was produced by a new Brazilian airplane works in Minas Geraes state.

Trail Scouts With Comanche

Annual Meeting

The annual meeting of the Comanche Trail council, Boy Scouts of America will be held in Brownwood Friday, January 24th. The nominating committee was appointed recently by Dr. Jewel Daugherty, president of the council. They are as follows: M. S. Sellers of Rising Star, president, and Grady Pipkin, Eastland, and Walter Smith, Lampasas. This committee will make a report of nominations for 1936 at the above meeting. Details of the program will be announced shortly. A committee in charge is hopeful of having one of the best meetings that has ever been held during the history of the Comanche Trail council.

North Section Rally

Plans are going forward for a good scout rally to be held in Carbon, Saturday week, January 11. The rally will start at 7 p. m. However it will be preceded by a barbecue supper and an opportunity will be given those who come early to visit the Carbon scout camp. Contests in various scouting activities will be conducted. Troop No. 29, Carbon, is playing host and practically every troop in the north section of the country will be expected to participate.

Anniversary Week

Anniversary week this year starts on Saturday, February 8. Every troop in the council should begin making plans now for a special program for the night of February 8th, when James E. West, chief scout executive, will lead every scout and scouter in the United States in renewing their scout oath and law. This will be by radio. This gives an excellent opportunity for a parent and scout get-together. It is hoped by council officials that each scoutmaster will work toward his troop being in uniform on this date.

Reich postoffice figures show that 8,700 newspapers are being published in Germany today while 11,300 were printed in 1933. The number of daily copies sent through the mails has shrunk from 1,400,000 to around million.

GOODBYE OLD 1935

Goodbye old friend; it was just twelve months ago that I met you, you came in such a meek modest and unassuming way, I would not have recognized you had it not been that I was looking at my clock so as to know just the moment you arrived.

I can not forget our first meeting here in my home, Cisco Texas, neither can I forget some of the promises I made you that night and I freely confess I have not kept all of those promises. I meant to keep them when I made them, but things over which I seemed to have no control came so thick and fast that I became so confused if not confounded—then I did not remember just all I did promise you.

Now that we are parting I want you to know how much I appreciate you. You have been so patient, so kind and in so many ways proved to be a real friend to me. All of my dearest loved ones you have let stay on earth with me. You have brought to me many new friends and took from me none of my old ones as I see it you have made on the world an impression that will last through the centuries to come.

I confess to you I have not known how to take advantage of all the favors you have shown me for days, weeks and months you have brought nuggets in the form of minutes so valuable that all the money in the world could not buy one of them and yet I have squandered some of them. But the maker of time and eternity I believe will forgive.

Last night I was watching to see you go, I couldn't help breathing a sigh and shedding a tear as I said goodbye to you. This last request old friend of mine when you give place to your successor, if you have found me worthy, speak a word in my behalf. Tell him to be a patient with me as you have been.

As you and I well know things material must sometimes give place to eternal. So goodbye old year.

MRS. R. I. LEE,
Cisco, Texas.

Human and Other Nature

By W. F. BRUCE

I suppose most of us who have learned a little of the geography of the world, or have read descriptions of travel, have formed in our minds a picture of some place we would like more than any other to visit. My choice is probably Scotland. So much has got into literature of the land and its people that to me it has a romantic interest. One can almost hear the music from its highlands ringing down its glens and echoing among its rocky crags. Its

Gunsmith Plies His Trade in Birthplace of "Kentucky Rifles"

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Jan. 3 (AP)—Lean-stocked, long-barreled, small bore "Kentucky rifles" have given way to bulkier, stubbler firearms, but Gunsmith Sherman Flint—son of Gunsmith Harlan Flint and grandson of Gunsmith William Flint—still finds as many customers as he can handle coming to his weapon-littered shop.

The 44-year-old Flint has repaired 30,000 firearms since he was dubbed a full-fledged gunmaker at the age of 12.

To Flint's gunsmithy come rifles and shotguns owned by sportsmen throughout Kentucky and other states.

Long Barrels More Accurate

The guns of Louisville's crack-shot detectives and policemen, and officers' sidearms from Fort Knox, military reservation near here, pass through Flint's shop daily.

Flint's craft is at home in Kentucky, which gave the world the greatest advance of the art of armament in the eighteenth century. The principal of the firing arm has not been changed, even today.

"The first barrels were rifled in Germany," he says. "In America it was discovered that long barrels made them more accurate. But these were large bore weapons. This type of arm became known as the 'Pennsylvania rifle.' Take this one"—he picked up a heavy monster with a barrel you could stick your thumb in—"that gun belonged to Kit Carson. But Kit wouldn't use it because it was large bore. Virginia and Kentucky gunsmiths made small bore rifles for the first time. They were the most accurate made then . . . and the most accurate made until now."

Give British A Lesson

The pioneers preferred the small bore because there was less powder and ball to carry, and because a miss meant time wasted, and possibly a dead pioneer if the target missed was an Indian or a bear.

The small bore, straight shooter acquired Kentucky's name along with other characteristics.

Wilderness men taught the British the art of shooting in many frontier skirmishes. Some of these pioneers were captured and astonished their captors with marksmanship. A record of the time recounts that some were taken to England, where they dazzled the cabinet and the royal family with an exhibition in which they lay on their backs and put bullets through potatoes thrown into the air.

Reich Debates Tax on Waist Line

BERLIN, Jan. 3. (AP)—Folks with too much girth around the waist should be taxed according to size, the newspaper Judenkenner proposes in all seriousness.

The Sportsman

Albert Hill, England's great middle distance runner of a decade ago, believes that in S. C. Wooderson of the Blackheath Harriers, London, Britain has the "world's greatest miler," contending that he is better than such men as our Glenn Cunningham or Jack Lovelock, the New Zealander.

Hill maintains that Wooderson's aptitude for mile running is so strong that he will reveal himself next summer as one of the athletic wonders of the age, and that he should figure very prominently in the Berlin Olympics.

Although Wooderson twice defeated Jack Lovelock last year, Hill considers that he had not then reached his track maturity, and is emphatic in his view that there is not another country in the world with a miler of his possibilities.

Menace in 1,500-Meter

Hill, who has trained Wooderson from an early age, should know what is required of an Olympic champion. He sent the British flag to the mast twice during the Antwerp Olympics in 1920, winning the 800 and 1,500 meters.

After having watched Lovelock defeat three of our best milers, Cunningham, Bronthron and Venzke, in the easiest sort of fashion at the Princeton invitation meet last June, it is not difficult to imagine that Wooderson, who twice conquered Lovelock, might indeed prove a menace to our chances of winning the 1,500-meter title in Berlin.

Wooderson has yet to turn in a very fast mile in comparison to the record-breaking times we have become accustomed to in the last few years but that does not mean a thing. Like all British ly comes from folks who are too fat already." And it continues:

"We are in thorough agreement with proposals made by economic experts to introduce a 'Bauchsteuer' (stomach tax) for rotund citizens."

The paper finally observes: "Shakespeare's hackneyed phrase: 'Let me have men about me that are fat' may be disregarded, for Shakespeare himself was spare-built."

runners, he is only concerned with winning a race; the time is of little consequence.

Olympic Hopelings

America's trio of veteran milers will soon start preparing for the ultimate goal—the Berlin Olympics.

Glenn Cunningham has returned to Lawrence, Kas., to work out under his old coach, Bill Hargiss, at Kansas University. Cunningham plans to compete in several of the important indoor meets but his training schedule is so arranged that he will be arriving at the peak of his form when the Olympic trials roll around.

Bonthron continues his thrice-weekly running exercises with no thought of competing on the boards this winter. While he has not expressed any intention of bidding for a berth on the Olympic squad, Matty Geis, his coach at Princeton, reports that the urge to run is still strong in Bonthron. More than likely his current workouts are to provide the

Henry IV Takes Up Study of Agriculture—In the Blood

AMES, Ia., Jan. 3. (AP)—A tall, clean-cut youth of 21, whose father guides the farm policies of the nation, is learning the ABC's of agriculture at Iowa State College.

He is Henry Wallace IV, son of the secretary of agriculture.

Three generations of trail-blazing in agriculture have left their imprint on young Wallace. He is studying agronomy (a course of his own choosing) and he is keenly interested in poultry raising.

He plans later to study genetics, a field in which his father pioneered, and perhaps to make it his life's work.

It's In The Family Blood

"You can't breed agriculture out of the family's blood," he says.

The Wallaces have blazed a well-marked trail through the agricultural division here. In 1869, when the division boasted a half-score of students who spent as much time in the fields as in the classrooms, Henry I brought "Tama" Jim Wallace to the school as dean of agriculture.

Through this agricultural scholastic mill next went Henry II, who later became secretary of agriculture under President Wilson and Harding.

Then came Henry III, the present secretary of agriculture, whose curiosity to know why corn grew the way it did brought him recognition as a geneticist.

Declined To Be 'Pledge'

Henry IV, a living likeness of his father, is considered a better-than-average student, but he says he is not out to make a scholastic record. Nor does he intend to be-necessary foundation for the hard work ahead in the spring.

Venzke, rounding out his varsity career at the University of Pennsylvania, has one thought in mind, and that is to atone for his dismal failure in 1932 after a brilliant indoor season which set him up—briefly—as America's premier miler. Gene hopes to avoid the mistakes he made that winter when he ran himself out breaking records on the boards only to find he had nothing when the big test loomed.

should I fool around with that stuff?"

Air Line 'Spur' to Nippon May Speed Up Pacific Route

HONOLULU, Jan. 3. (AP)—When the quest for speed demands a faster transpacific air route from San Francisco to Tokyo than the nine-day schedule now available, aviation experts will have a "spur" line to offer.

They already have sighted what they call a readily adaptable route, clipping thousands of miles and at least two days from the recently established pathway via Manila.

It draws wreck-strewn Marcus island, alternately claimed since 1889 by the United States and Japan, into the aeronautical web.

Diplomatic Hurdle in Path
Ringed by a reef, the 740-acre island could be made into an air base, say experts, if touchy diplomatic problems can be settled.

Marcus lies 720 miles northwest of Wake atoll, the mid-oceanic base of Pan American Airways' route to Manila. It could be connected to Tokyo by two 600-mile hops, first to Japanese Bonin island and thence to Nippon's capital.

Also Marcus is within flying distance of Midway islands, second PAA base, and could be reached with a 1,560-mile hop, eliminating Wake.

Two Gates to Island
Such a route, say experts, can be used when storm warnings are posted between Wake and Manila. It would save thousands of miles from the present line through the Philippines, China and across to Tokyo.

Known chiefly for its bird and fish, Marcus island supports a small population. Its encircling reef can be entered only through two small openings on the southern flank. Experts admit that preparation for aeronautical use would entail considerable expense and labor, but probably no more than was expended on Wake.

Capt Rosehill is said to have claimed the island for the United States in 1889. Japanese base their claims upon the visit of a vessel driven there in a storm. The island was incorporated in the Bonin group in 1898, but later American sovereignty was reported to have been recognized.

By PAP

It was just about a year ago in Miami that Patty Berg, a freckle-faced, curly-haired youngster of 17, served notice on the elite of women's golf that she was going to be a contender for future tournament honors. Patty was put out of the Miami-Biltmore women's golf championship in the quarter-final round but only after she had carried her opponent, Mrs. Lillian Zech, of Chicago, to the nineteenth green.

She won the driving contest at the Miami-Biltmore in a representative field, with three fine, straight shots aggregating 567 yards; an average of 189 yards, which, on the sandy Florida turf with its short run, was indeed fair enough.

With the experience she gained last summer, particularly in the two big tournaments, the Trans-Mississippi and the National Women's—in both of which she won her way into the final rounds—Patty is going to have plenty to say about where the trophies are going to rest from now on.

Patty has come a long way in the past four years—from a score of 120, to scores of seventies and eighties, to be exact.

Wins Over Father
Four years ago, her father bought a junior membership at Interlachen, Minneapolis, for Patty's kid brother, Herman, jr. When she found out about it she badgered and pestered Herman, sr., until, as he says, "I got her a junior membership just to keep peace in the family."

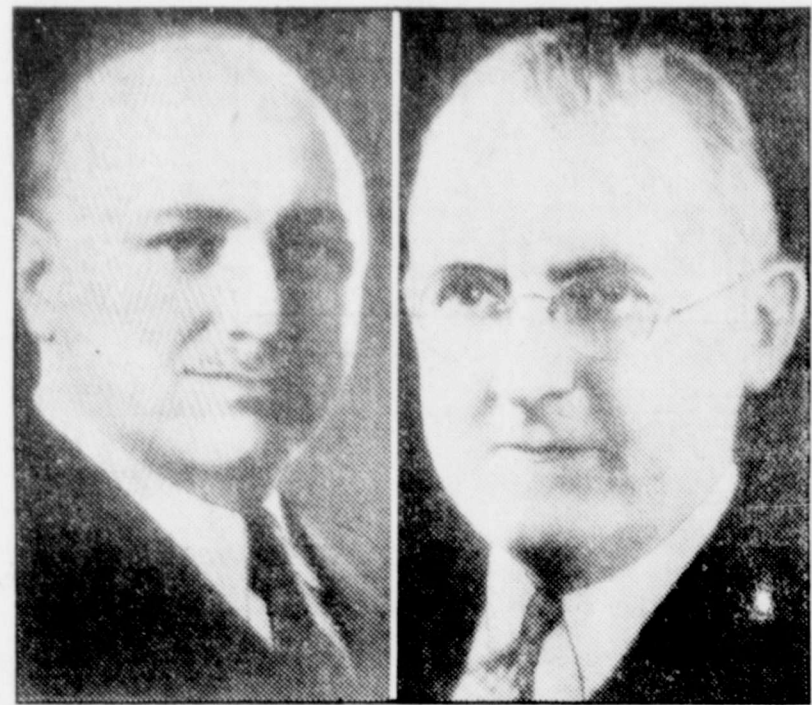

"I remember the first time she played 18 holes," recalled her father, "because she was 20 strokes better than I was and she scored a 120."

At the same time she was playing baseball and tennis and she still can throw a baseball as good as any boy her age and catch a football, too. But nowadays golf is her chief love and she has given up baseball and tennis to concentrate on the links and last summer, instead of going to a camp for

Willie Kidd, Interlachen professional, gave Patty her first lessons. Patty, to him, is "a great individual, always willing to try and improve—and that's what makes a great golfer."

For three years she puttered about the links and last summer, instead of going to a camp for girls, as usual, she wheeled her father into sending her to two women's tournaments.

Superstitious About Clothes
By this time she has grown a bit superstitious. It has nothing to do with horse shoes, rabbits' feet—or the little toy elephants women carry around. If she wins a match while wearing a particular skirt and sweater, all the king's horses and all the king's men couldn't keep her from wearing anything else the rest of the tournament.

She is unassuming, polite and modest. Her reward for winning her semi-final match in the "National" was an ice cream cone from her father. That tournament was mighty hard on him because he had to hide behind trees and loiter in the rear of the galleries since Patty insisted that he not follow her around.

It might make her nervous, she said.

Boylan Sees Better Year In Grain Trade

By JOHN P. BOUGHAN
(Associated Press Market Editor)
CHICAGO, Jan. 3. (AP)—Grain and transportation agencies face a more prosperous season in 1936 than during the 1934-35 crop year, Robert P. Boylan, president of the Chicago board of trade, said today.

He pointed out that United States combined grain crops total much more than in 1934, insuring a normally busy season, and that improvement of general business conditions indicates an improved and sustained consumer demand for grains and grain products. "These grain market factors," said Boylan, "should be reflected by increased activities in futures contracts because of additional hedging operations for which the Chicago board of trade and other exchanges provide the only available facilities."

U. S. Now Importer
Two striking developments in 1935 are cited by Boylan as making vivid contrast with previous years. Instead of being an export nation, the United States has become an importer of grains—wheat from Canada and corn from Argentina. Furthermore, for probably the first time in the history of this country bullish price conditions have been reflected to a greater extent in the cash grain markets throughout the year than in the purchase of futures.

Largely responsible has been partial failure of the domestic hard winter wheat crop and a devastating scourge of black rust in spring wheat territory. Moreover, at the beginning of the current corn crop year, October 1, terminal elevator stocks of corn were the nearest to depletion of any year of which records were kept.

Corn Supply Better
However, this year's corn crop, although small compared to a 10-year average, provides a much more generous supply than last year. Making up, too, for the moderate crop of corn are abundant crops of oats, barley, rye and hay, furnishing plentiful supplies of feedstuffs.

Lifting wheat prices to the highest levels of the year were war fears, domestic bullish crop news and drought damage in Argentina.

tina. December wheat sold up to $1.09 1-2 in Chicago on September 5, against 1 year's low, 81 cents, on July 1. Corn rose to 72 1-2 for December contracts, after falling a low of 54 3-4 cents.

VISITORS, ADMIRAL-- IT'S THE YOUNG PEOPLE YOU WERE EXPECTING--

GOOD! I'LL SEE THEM IN HERE, MARY

GOOD MORNING, DAWN-- HAL-- TED-- COME INTO MY "CABIN"

GOOD MORNING, SIR--

WELL, WELL-- I SEE THERE'S SOMETHING EXCITING ON YOUR MINDS-- AM I RIGHT, DAWN?

YES, SIR-- BUT IT'S THE BOYS' STORY

SOMETHING THAT HAPPENED ON OUR CRUISE

AN ADVENTURE, EH? WELL, SIR, IT'S SUCH A STRANGE STORY THAT YOU'LL HARDLY BELIEVE IT AT FIRST

SPLendid! SIT DOWN, ALL OF YOU, AND LET'S HAVE IT--

I'VE SEEN SOME MIGHTY STRANGE THINGS IN MY TIME, LAD-- FIRE AWAY!

IT'S ALL CONTAINED IN THIS BOOK, SIR-- THE LOG OF AN OLD TIME SAILING VESSEL-- THE "ELLEN BELL"--

HM-M, I'VE HEARD OF THAT SHIP-- LOST IN THE ARCTIC BACK IN THE NINETIES, WASN'T IT?

YES, SIR-- THAT'S THE ONE

BLESS MY SOUL! WHY IT DOESN'T SEEM POSSIBLE! CAPTAIN BELL'S OWN WRITTEN STORY OF THAT LAST VOYAGE!

YES, SIR-- AND WE THOUGHT--

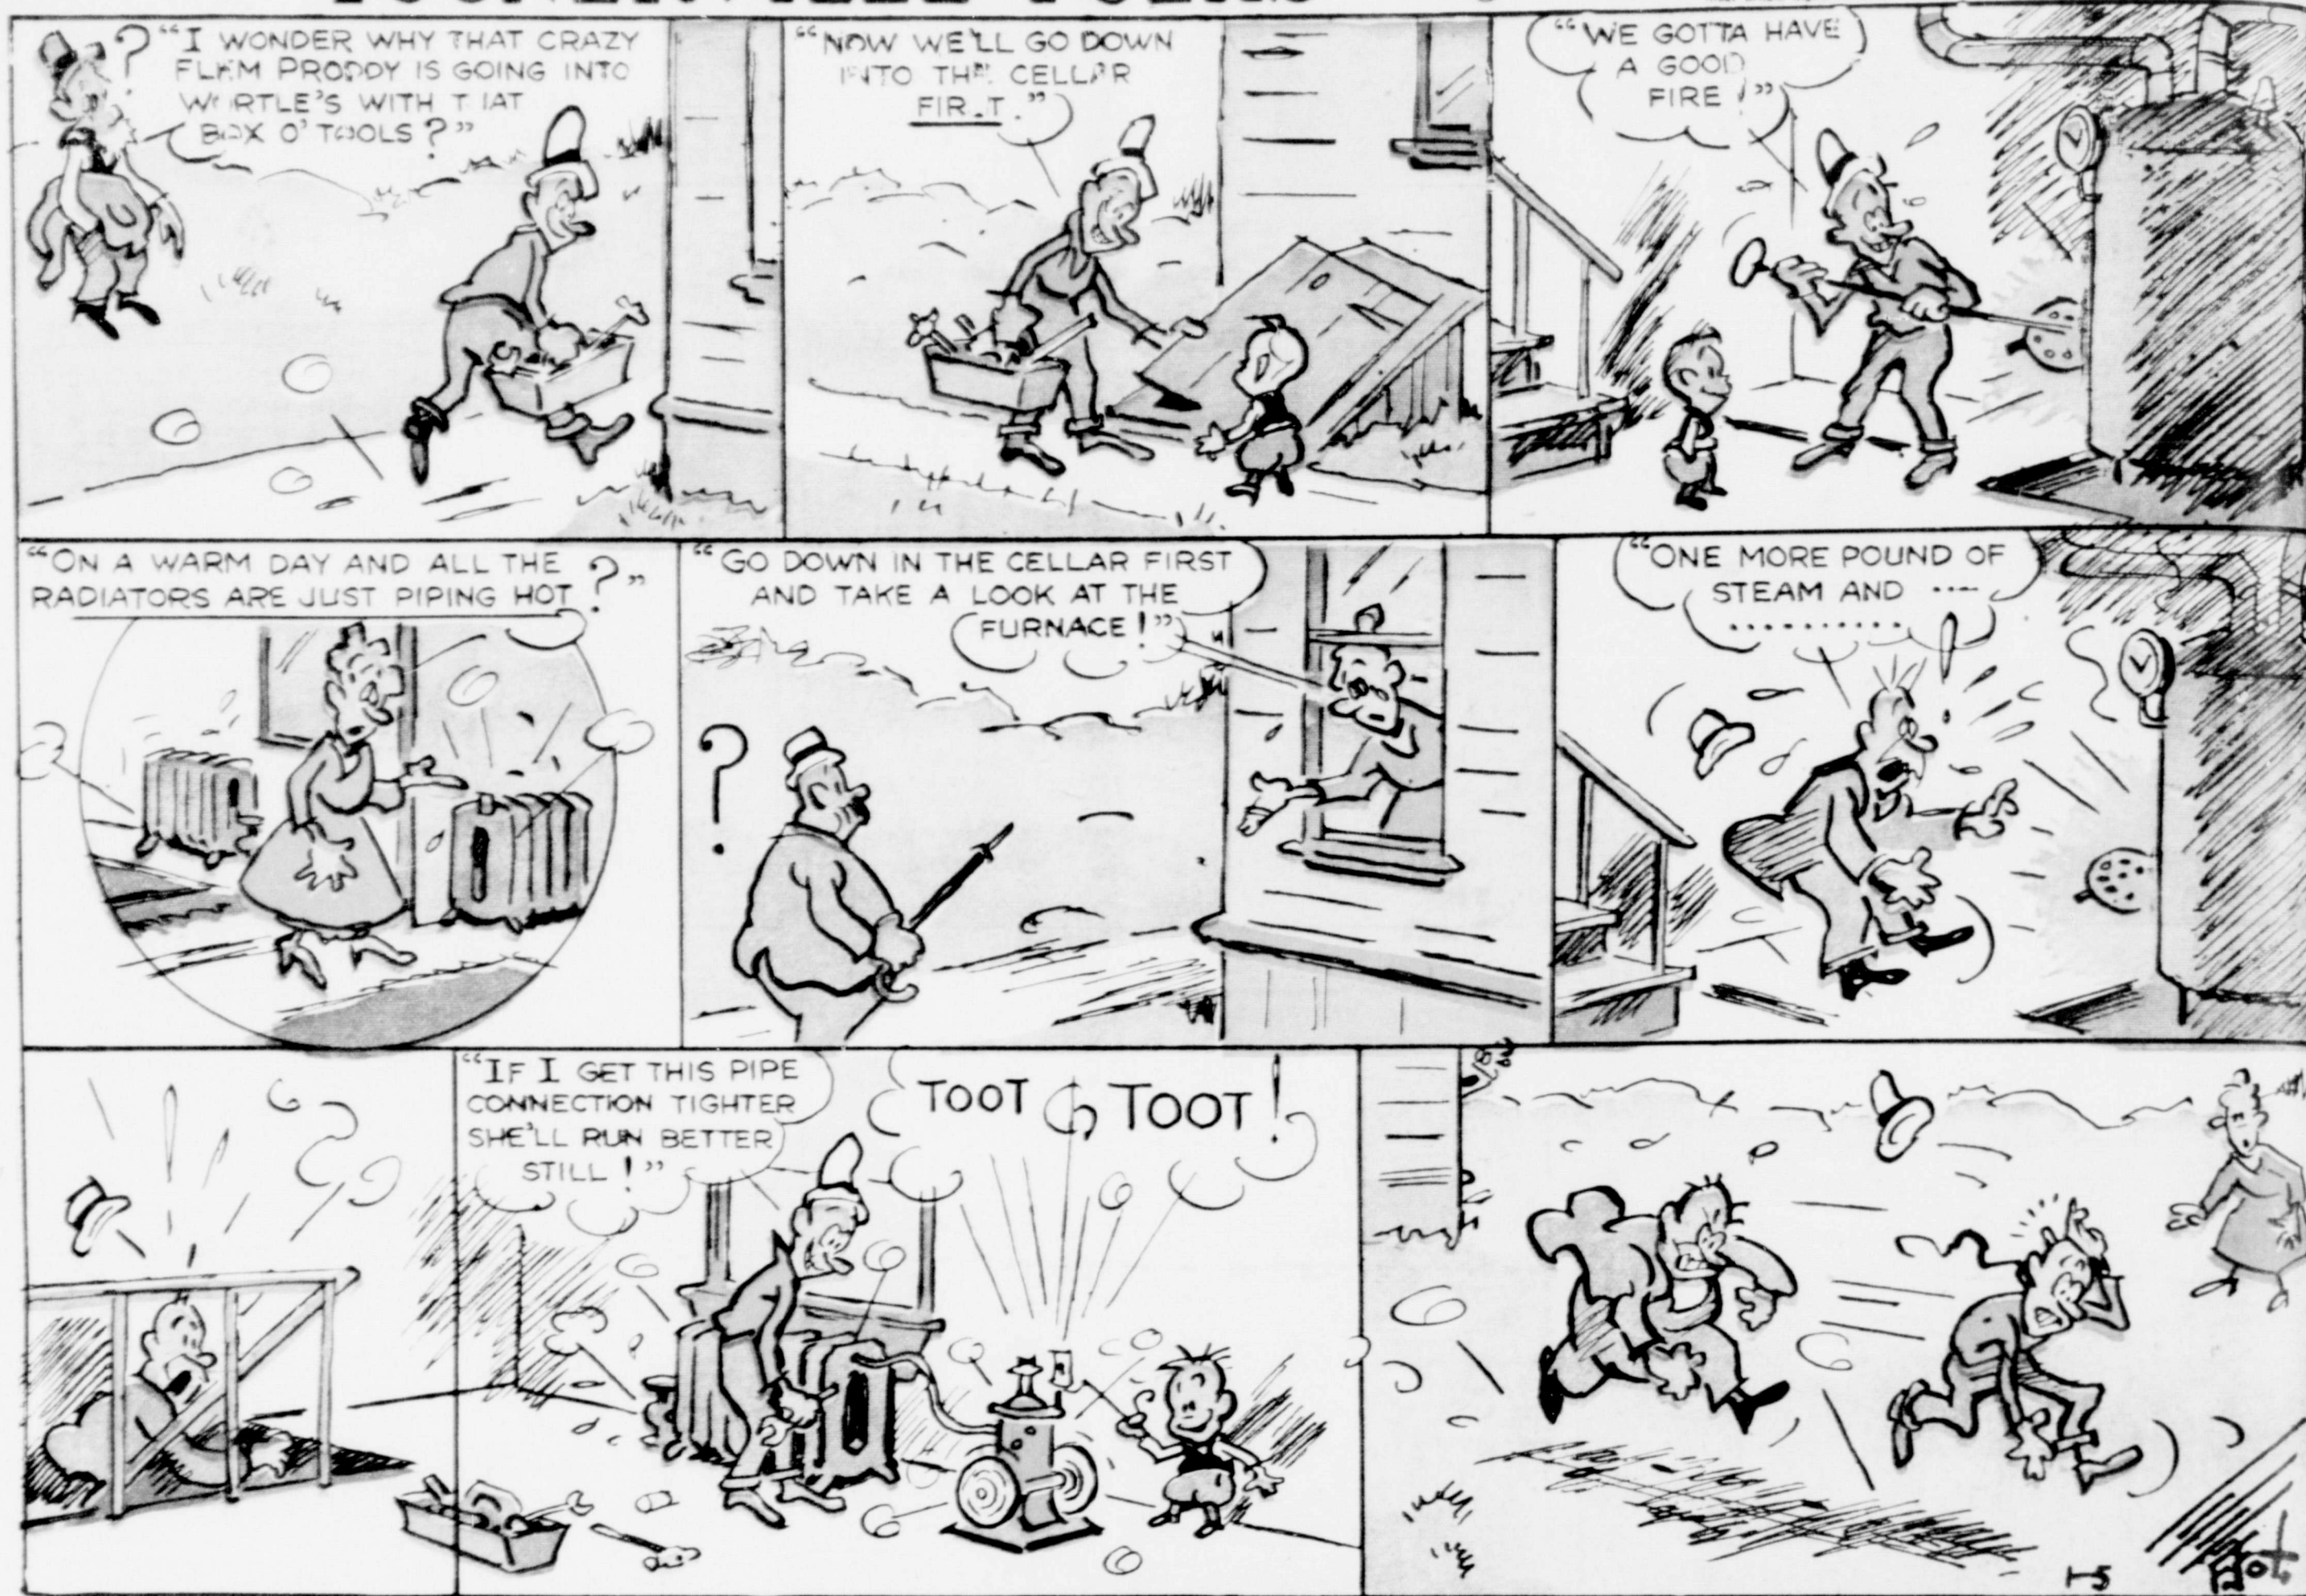

AMAZING! I MUST READ EVERY WORD OF THIS!
