Hart wins 13 delegates in Vermont

By The Associated Press

Gary Hart has won another delegate contest in Vermont's caucuses and is attacking Walter F. Mondale for "failed vision," while the former vice president keeps his focus on President Reagan, saying he has pushed the world closer to nuclear holocaust.

Hart's margin of victory in Vermont's Democratic caucuses Tuesday night, where just 13 national convention delegates were at stake, was short of the 71 percent majority he ran up in that state's non-binding presidential primary in early March.

The Colorado senator had 49 percent of the vote with 81 percent of the caucuses reporting, compared to 33 percent for Mondale and 14 percent for the Rev. Jesse Jackson.

Both Mondale and Hart were in Tennessee today and were traveling to North Carolina to campaign in that state's May 8 primary before moving on, Mondale to Texas and Hart to Ohio.

Another contest comes tonight when Utah Democrats caucus to decide 22 national convention delegates. Next, on May 1, Tennessee and the District of Columbia hold primaries.

In Cleveland on Tuesday, Hart chided Mondale for what he called "old and tired ideas, held together by paralyzing commitments to special interests and constitutent groups."

"It will take more than changing parties to save our economy," he said. "If we seek merely to exchange one failed vision for another, our nation will still be in a period of dramatic decline."

Hart also attacked the Reagan administration and the past three years of record budget deficits. He said Mondale's program may be more humane, but it has "no less failure in its soul."

Mondale, also in Cleveland on Tuesday, maintained his newfound practice of focusing primarily on Reagan, this time attacking the president's backing for space weapons systems and proposing his own "space freeze."

"Reagan wants to open the heavens for warfare," Mondale said. "If Mr. Reagan is re-elected the arms race on earth will be extended to the skies."

"Every president since the bomb first went off...has done something to reduce the risk of nuclear war until this guy came along," Mondale said later in Nashville.

He ridiculed Reagan's space weaponry program as a "fairy tale" and "a hoax on the American people."

Hart and Mondale renewed their exchange on a familiar issue — the federal loan guarantees that bailed out Chrysler Corp. and the larger issue of bailouts for other businesses and industries.

"Thousands of workers still take paycuts, thousands more lose their jobs," Hart said. "A bailout is not a cure; it is simply a symptom."

Quake registers 6.2 on Richter scale

MORGAN HILL, Calif. (AP) — Police closed off damaged homes today in the wake of a strong earthquake that caused millions of dollars in damage in Northern California, and authorities marveled that a temblor strong enough to crack bridges and a dam caused only 21 minor injuries.

The quake struck at 1:15 p.m. Tuesday and measured 6.2 on the Richter scale of ground motion, the University of California Seismographic Station said. It was centered on the Calaveras Fault, about 12 miles east of San Jose and 50 miles south of San Francisco.

Although the tremor was felt for hundreds of miles, damage was centered in Morgan Hill, about 10 miles south of San Jose. Twenty-one people were reported injured, including two hospitalized with concussions and 19 treated and released, authorities said.

Hardest hit was the Jackson Oaks subdivision of luxury homes in Morgan Hill, where 30 houses were damaged, several knocked completely off their foundations.

Eight homes were left uninhabitable, said Dick Maulden of the Morgan Hill Fire Department. Residents were barred from the structures and police patroled today to protect the area.

Residents reported chimneys falling into living rooms, broken glass and crockery, drawers spilling throughout the house and cement fountains toppling on their sides. Morgan Hill City Manager Charles Cate estimated damage at $5 million to $10 million in the immediate area.

"It's amazing there wasn't more damage or more injuries," said Jane Decker, spokeswoman for emergency services in Santa Clara County.

Bill Berry, 42, a San Jose State University basketball coach, was at home napping when the quake woke him.

"There was no way I could do anything but hold on like a bucking bronco," Berry said. "I was helpless. The TV went off the dresser. The dresser tipped over."

The quake, felt as far away as western Nevada and Ventura, nearly 250 miles south, was the strongest on the Calaveras Fault since 1911, according to Bill Ellsworth, chief of the seismology branch of the United States Geological Survey in Menlo Park. It was the fourth quake measuring more than 6.0 in the San Francisco Bay area since the great quake of 1906.

Almost one year ago, on May 2, 1983, a 6.7 earthquake hit Coalinga, 180 miles to the south, leveling the downtown, causing $31 million in damage and injuring 47 people.

Between 15 and 20 aftershocks in the 3.0 to 4.0 range were reported in the six hours following Tuesday's quake, said Bruce Bolt, director of

Council opposes home for abused, neglected youths

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

Using the arguments of fear and lowering property values, a northwest Midland neighborhood convinced the City Council Tuesday night to prohibit the First Baptist Church and Junior League from building a shelter on Sunshine Drive for abused and neglected children.

Working as a coalition with the Texas Baptist Children's Home, the First Baptist Church and Junior League had proposed a shelter to house a maximum of 12 children under the age of 17 who need to get out of their home environment. The group had found two lots on a vacant block bordered by Sunshine and Sunburst streets for the $250,000 shelter. The area already was zoned for duplexes.

But neighbors — most living at least three to five blocks away and outside the 200 foot limit for notification — objected, packing into the council chambers for the 2½-hour hearing. The concept was fine, they said, but not in their neighborhood. They cited fear of safety from these children and falling property values.

■ Council OKs new street paint, decides oil company must pay for laying pipe — Page 1C

The council wrestled with the decision, going first 2-4 to deny the zone change petition. On a motion to approve it, the council voted 3-3, thus denying the application.

The group proposing the shelter noted it had been listed as a top priority by the Objectives for the '80s, and a survey by the United Way showed a shelter was a number one priority for the city.

Mark Withrow represented the partnership involving the Junior League and the First Baptist Church and explained the concept behind Hearthstone, the shelter's name. He said once it was constructed it would be operated by the Texas Baptist Children's Home (TBCH), and would be a "foster group for abused children and children facing a crisis in their home."

IN 1982, DHR investigated 526 complaints of child abuse in Midland County. Last year, the number was 555, an increase of 9 percent, said Withrow. "And we know there are countless others not reported." The number of approved foster homes can't keep up with the need.

David Gibson with the TBCH in Round Rock presented a 12 minute slide presentation about that shelter. He emphasized Hearthstone would take in only "Midland children. We're not bringing in children from other parts of the state. A need documented by the Department of Human Resources exists here. We would not accept any child who would be a danger to himself, the other children, the staff or the neighbors," he said.

A child which has committed a crime would be handled through the police department," Gibson said. "If a crime has been committed against the child, he would come through DHR."

Chicago man kills his wife, two children

CHICAGO (AP) — A 37-year-old man who sprayed eight people with gunfire, killing his wife, their two children and a bystander before police shot him, had been fired the previous day and could be heard "pacing nervously" that night, police and a neighbor said.

Two of the four survivors of Charles Hunt's rampage Tuesday remained hospitalized today. In addition, a police sergeant who was wounded in the foot was treated at a hospital and released, and a fourth person refused treatment.

Police said a family dispute apparently touched off the shootings, which began in Hunt's 23rd-floor apartment in a high-rise building on Chicago's South Side.

After killing his wife, Betty, 37, son Charles Jr., 16, and daughter Linda, 15, Hunt rushed from the apartment carrying an automatic pistol, a .38-caliber revolver and about 80 rounds of ammunition, said police Cmdr. James Delaney.

At the 18th-floor elevator, Hunt killed Gloria Carney, 39, with three shots to the head, then went to the building's lobby and shot at "everyone he encountered," Delaney said. In the parking lot, witnesses said, he appeared to be reloading the pistol when police caught him in a hail of gunfire.

Hunt had lost his job Monday at a suburban Northbrook security company, Midwest Multifamily Inc., for unknown reasons, Delaney said. Company officials did not return repeated telephone calls Tuesday.

Diane Barr, who lives in the apartment next to the Hunts, said Hunt "terrified me" as he frequently

MISD board of trustees consider Perot committee recommendations

By RHONDA RIGENHAGEN
Staff Writer

Although the tax rate probably will decrease, taxes may go up for most residents of the Midland Independent School District.

MISD trustees Tuesday learned the tax base is expected to increase by about 20 percent, gave their views on recently-released recommendations by H. Ross Perot's Select Committee on Public Education and heard a proposal to reopen the high school youth centers.

Roland Wilkinson, chief appraiser for Midland County Appraisal District, told trustees he expects the tax base to increase from the 1980 valuation of $3.8 billion to about $4.6 billion. The result, according to Superintendent Dr. Joe Baressi, is the district's actual tax rate will decrease, although the effective tax rate "will probably stay about the same or go up slightly."

The actual tax rate in 1983 was 77 cents per $100 valuation. The effective tax rate — the amount required to raise the same amount of revenues — will be about 64 cents in 1984, Wilkinson estimated.

The reappraisal also will bring about a shift in the tax burden, Wilkinson predicted, although figures won't be finalized for about two weeks. While mineral valuations are decreasing, the typical homeowner will probably have a 25 to 35 percent increase in the valuation of his residence.

"The bread and butter in Midland is the single-family residences," Wilkinson added. "They pay the majority of the taxes."

Baressi said the board probably will consider allowing homeowners a homestead exemption — taking 15 to 20 percent off the valuation — "to maintain the current balance as far as the tax burden between homestead properties and other properties."

Wilkinson plans to conduct valuations every year "to prevent the shock of increasing or decreasing values that can accumulate over four years. I think if you let something like this slide for this period of time people are going to be very much in opposition to dramatic increases," he said.

The board also considered the impact of recommendations from the Select Committee on Public Education and opposed some of its suggestions. Except for newly elected president Parker Humes, trustees were against replacing the elected State Board of Education with an appointed body.

WEATHER SUMMARY

National Weather Service NOAA, U.S. Dept. of Commerce

AP Laserphoto Map

The National Weather Service forecasts snow for the northern Plains, rain for the Midwest, the Gulf statesand northern New England.

Windy weather forecast for area tonight, Thursday

Winds will be whipping around Midland tonight and Thursday.

For tonight, the weatherman at the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport has forecast a low near 60 degrees and southwesterly winds at 20 to 30 mph and gusty.

For Thursday, the weatherman is calling for possible blowing dust, winds at 20 to 35 mph and gusty and a high in the upper 80s.

Tuesday's peak temperature was 93 degrees, while the record high for an April 24 is 95 degrees in 1943. The overnight low was 62, and the record low for an April 25 is 39 degrees in 1937.

STATE

A surface low pressure system in the central Rockies intensified today, bringing gusty winds and blowing dust to portions of Texas.

Winds gusted to as high as 30 mph early today across portions of North Central Texas, the Edwards Plateau and the southern High Plains. It was calm over East Texas and southerly winds of about 20 mph were reported over the rest of Texas.

Low clouds were reported over South Texas and the Lower Rio Grande Valley while the rest of the state reported clear skies, the National Weather Service reported.

Early morning temperatures were warmer than in previous days, mostly in the low to middle 60s except in portions of the Panhandle and Davis Mountains of Southwest Texas where readings dipped into the low to middle 50s. Extremes ranged from 51 at Amarillo to 72 at McAllen.

Forecasts called for windy conditions across much of the state today with blowing dust expected over the High Plains. It was to be clear to partly cloudy and warm statewide. Highs were to range from the middle 80s to the middle 90s, forecasters said.

NATION

Heralded by cold winds gusting over 80 mph, a big spring storm was taking shape in Utah today and promised to bring a variety of bad weather as it moved into the Plains.

The high winds forced trucks off a 100-mile stretch of Interstate 80 for several hours Tuesday, and whipped up waves on the Great Salt Lake that sent a section of a dike crashing onto railroad tracks.

But the cool weather was holding back snowmelt threatening to unloose mudslides, with April's 3.03 inches of rain at Salt Lake City already 1.3 inches above normal for the whole month.

Colorado residents, freshly dug out from up to 3 feet of Easter snow, were told to expect more of the same in the mountains, and Wyoming and South Dakota were also due for a new coat of snow.

The Northeast was still feeling the effects of the last storm as drizzle and clouds persisted.

Elsewhere, fair skies stretched from the Carolinas to the southern Plains, the Mississippi Valley and the northern Plains.

Edwina Sandys displays her sculpture representing Jesus Christ as a woman at the cathedral of St. John Divine in New York City.

Statue of female Christ

NEW YORK (AP) — A statue depicting the crucified Jesus Christ as a woman has received an "overwhelmingly positive" response at the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, says the church's dean — although some, including his boss, find it scandalous.

Christ has always been portrayed in a form comfortable for worshippers — black Christs in Africa and Oriental Christs in China, for example, the Very Rev. James Park Morton said Tuesday.

"What hasn't been done visually is the female sexuality incarnate," he said.

The statue, in the form of a crucifix but without a cross behind it, was sculpted by Edwina Sandys, a granddaughter of Winston Churchill. It went on temporary display behind the main altar at the Episcopal cathedral during Holy Week, the week before Easter.

In the 4-foot, 250-pound bronze statue, which Morton calls "Christa," Christ is presented in the traditional crucified posture but with a woman's figure.

However, Morton's superior, the Right Rev. Walter Dennis, Episcopal Suffragan Bishop of New York and deputy to Bishop Paul Moore, accused Morton of "desecrating our symbols" in the cathedral.

At a pre-Easter service in the Church of St. Mary the Virgin, Dennis said he felt forced to speak out against the statue as "theologically and historically indefensible."

"I ask you to visit the cathedral," Dennis told the congregation. "If it shocks you as much as it did me, then write to Bishop Moore and tell him so."

The text of Dennis' remarks was release by his office Tuesday. Moore is on leave and not available for comment, his office said.

Morton called criticism of the statue "on the same level as the reaction to ordination of woman as priests."

The shelter, being a private agency, doesn't have to accept every child brought to it, he said. If one is admitted and found to have a drug or alcohol problem, that child is taken immediately to another agency. "If there are criminal components to this child, he won't come into this system. He'll go to Culver Youth Home.

"THESE ARE battered, abused and neglected children," he stressed.

Because the shelter would be operated as a wing of the Texas Baptist Children's Home, the houseparents would be trained to meet certain requirements, said Gibson. And Hearthstone would be designed as a temporary shelter, keeping children an average of 30 days or less.

If a child needs additional help or care, he can be moved on to another wing of TBCH.

However, the one point that bothered the neighborhood is that the advisory board couldn't guarantee that no drug or alcohol abuser would be sent to the home.

Gibson tried to show that rarely does a child with such a problem wind up in the Baptist children's home system. Out of 350 children handled last year, less than five had drug or alcohol problems and those youths were removed quickly, he said.

Rick Walker, an architect who had been working on preliminary drawings, said the plans called for enhancing the neighborhood, serving the community and blending into the neighborhood. The shelter would be constructed to look like a residence with landscaping to serve as a buffer.

It would consist of six children's bedrooms with a nursery and two apartment type rooms for the houseparents.

The city planning department had pointed out the shelter would not be near single family homes and the area north of it is platted for rental duplexes.

Leading the opposition was Fred Kester, 105 Abell Hangar Circle, a part of the retirement community known as Manor Park. This fenced development sits across Sunshine Street and south of the proposed shelter.

Kester said he had talked with other residents of Manor Park — "widows living alone" — who are afraid there would be a chance "for a child with a drug problem or alcohol problem climbing the fence and getting into one of the homes."

Steve Johnson, 2701 Whittle Way, said, "We believe the concept is good but we're concerned there are no restrictions as to who would be admitted. We have a fear of parents whose children have been removed and are trying to get them back, a fear of children with drug or alcohol problems."

Asked about his property in location to this proposed shelter, Johnson said it is "a strong stone's throw away." Councilman Steve Davidson noted that it is 3½ blocks away. "That's a heck of a stone's throw," said Councilman Tom Sloan.

TO RETAIN the "integrity, security and property values of the neighborhood," George Hyde of 5007 Rainbow objected to the shelter and said he hoped to "keep out any dangerous children." He also contended that the home would lower property values.

Mark Anders, 2404 Arbor Circle, stating he is a Southern Baptist, questioned the location. His father, a Baptist minister in Odessa, worked to set up a children's home on the western edge of that city. Known as Buckner's Children's Home, it has encountered problems with some children over the years, said Anders.

He suggested that Hearthstone be placed at High Sky Girls' Ranch, which is located west of Midland.

Withrow countered Anders' arguments, saying that the Odessa facility is part of the Texas Youth Council, which means it takes in children who are "judicially determined delinquent."

The High Sky Girls Ranch site had never been suggested to the Junior League-Baptist Church group, he added.

Also objecting to Hearthstone was Don Lett, 905 Idlewilde, who complained that the group had not notified the neighborhood about the project nor had it explained the project.

Because the residents had complained the TBCH couldn't guarantee that Hearthstone would never accept a child with drug or alcohol problems, Withrow said the board follows the same thinking that no parent can guarantee his child would never have such a problem.

WITHIN THE SEVEN block area of residents objecting to the shelter, Withrow said, "I'll bet there are kids with drug and alcohol problems. Midland is not free of those problems. For the vast majority of kids, their parents are unaware of it. Not every child who uses drugs or alcohol is a problem kid."

He later said he would be willing to have a resident on Hearthstone's advisory board, pointing out that the Baptist Children's Home has final decision-making authority.

While Lett said he had no objection to that agreement, many of the neighbors said it wouldn't remove their opposition.

Before a motion was made by the council, Mayor G. Thane Akins said he had kept foster children in his home and has a different attitude toward the type of youth this shelter would house. Councilman Jesse Hatfield added that he, too, has kept foster children.

Davidson, saying the case "is a tough one to call," moved to deny the application, but it was defeated on a 2-4 vote.

Sloan then suggested the council wait until another meeting to take a vote, but was chided by the rest of the council since Tuesday was his last meeting.

He warned the residents: "If I cast my vote now, I'll vote for it (the shelter). In the time I've been on the council I've made every effort to look at things from the perspective of the homeowner. I put myself in their position. My personal conclusion is I would be supportive of it if it were in my neighborhood, and I would support it financially."

His motion for approval failed to draw a majority show of hands. Voting in favor were Sloan, Akins and Councilman David Godfrey. Going against were Hatfield, Gordon Marcum II and Davidson.

The denial puts the advisory board back on the trail to seeking another location. Withrow told the council it wouldn't stop them from seeing their goal realized.

"The staff feels the need for the state school board to be responsible to the needs of the state," Baressi said. An appointed board would not provide adequate geographic and ethnic representation, they felt.

"This report is obviously '1984' personified," Baressi continued. "It is centralized government taking from us some of the authority we now have."

"I think the school board needs to remain responsive to the people who elected them and not to the governor who appointed them," trustee Joe Reed said.

Another proposal calls for equalization — decreasing state funding to wealthy districts and providing more money to poor districts. Currently, state funding is determined by the number of students and the state salary schedule.

"Equalization from the state standpoint is something we need," Baressi said. "From the local standpoint it could very well mean that we will lose.

"It occurs to me that it would be an incentive to hire inexperienced teachers. In the long term, districts would be put in the position of, instead of hiring the best teacher, hiring the cheapest teacher."

"Much of what they speak to (in the recommendations) Midland is already doing. But this is total Big Brotherism," Baressi said.

"Part of it would make the bureaucracy 10 times what it is now. It talks about reducing the paperwork, but if we do all that's in here there'd be half of us working and half of us watching," Baressi said.

The board also considered, but took no action on, a proposal to reopen the high school youth centers. The Youth Center Board asked MISD to take over operation of the centers, which were closed about a year ago because of insufficient funding.

If the board turns down the proposal, the Youth Center Board has said it will try to raise about $45,000 over the summer to keep the centers open.

In other action, trustees:

—Awarded a bid of nearly $60,000 to Abacus Computers for 77 educational microcomputer systems to be installed in the elementary schools.

—Voted Bill Jackson vice president and Joyce Sherrod secretary.

—Recognized valedictorians and salutatorians Celeste Elig and Barry Friemel from Lee High and Deirdre Bell and Karen Eggleston from Midland High.

—Heard a report on the vocational education program.

—Accepted a $1,000 donation from Carver Occupational Development Lab Parent-Teacher Association for the purchase of musical instruments.

stalked sullenly through the hallway. She said she heard him "pacing nervously" through his apartment Monday night.

"This doesn't surprise me at all. I knew the man was very strange," she said.

But at Dunbar High School, Principal Richard Stephenson said Hunt's two children were "were very, very courteous, which reflected a strong home background. Linda was in the top 8 percent of her class and Charles was in the top half of his class."

The son had played trombone and belonged to the All-City Jazz band, said instructor Willie Naylor. The youth had not mentioned problems at home, and his father often accompanied him to concerts, Naylor said.

Erma Davis, a dance instructor at Dunbar, said Linda Hunt reported her father was becoming "exceptionally strict" with her.

Police identified those wounded in Tuesday's shootings as Londa McDaniel, 29, who had been in the lobby; Anthony Smith, 16, who was slightly injured by flying glass when Hunt shot at him through a glass partition; building employee Robert Gholar, 31, who was shot outside the high rise; and police Sgt. Oleon Hennings, who was wounded in the foot during a chase through the parking lot.

Ms. McDaniel underwent surgery Tuesday afternoon at Michael Reese Hospital and was in fair condition early today, said spokeswoman Sally Benjamin. Gholar remained hospitalized there in fair condition, she said.

Hunt was placed under a one-year court supervision after a robbery conviction in 1964, police said. He was arrested twice in the 1970s on weapons charges but not convicted, Delaney said.

Hart wins 13 national delegates in Vermont's caucuses

Mondale, appearing outside a Chrysler plant in Indianapolis, said Hart's charge that the bailout did not save jobs was "pure bunk" and added: "It's time for Gary Hart to admit that he made a mistake when he opposed helping the Chrysler Corporation."

Jackson, in Baltimore on Tuesday, joined Hart in condemning Mondale's use of independent delegate committees.

"There is a lot of back door financing going on," Jackson said. "The law is either being stretched or extended or broken."

Hart has been attacking Mondale in recent days for the committees, which are working on Mondale's behalf and are receiving money from political action committees representing special interest groups. Both Mondale and Hart have said they won't accept the PAC money for their own campaigns.

Hart has also filed a complaint with the Federal Election Commission, contending that the committees are not acting independently and arguing that their spending should count toward Mondale's total campaign spending, which is limited under federal law.

Common Cause, the self-styled citizens lobby, also spoke against Mondale's committees, saying they threaten the integrity of the public campaign finance system.

In Nashville, Mondale said: "These committees are autonomous committees under the Federal Election Commission. We are obeying both the spirit and the letter of the law."

The Washington Post said in today's editions that reports received from the committees by the FEC show a pattern of apparent coordination between them and the Mondale national campaign organization. It said the FEC records show transfers of money from one committee to another and that national campaign staffers have been shifted to delegate committee payrolls in states with upcoming primaries or caucuses.

Quake registers 6.2 on Richter scale

the University of California Seismographic Station.

Bolt attributed the minor damage and injuries to the fact that the epicenter was located away from urban areas with older buildings. "This was out more or less in the country and the buildings out there are modern buildings built to modern codes," Bolt said.

A broken fuel line at the Blossom Hill Auto Repair Shop in San Jose triggered a fire that caused $1 million in damage to the shop and two others, fire officials said.

The quake caused cracks along the top of the 1,400-foot-long Anderson Dam near Morgan Hill, and the bridge over the dam was knocked from its foundation.

A bridge leading to Henry Coe State Park east of Morgan Hill was knocked from its foundation and suffered "serious damage," keeping some visitors from leaving the park, a spokesman said.

In San Francisco, high-rise windows shook and workers reported that buildings swayed for 20 to 30 seconds. Glass popped out of windows in the Western Merchandise Mart, but no injuries were reported. Many people said it was the worst quake they had experienced in years.

"I got under the table and I'm a native San Franciscan," said Bernice Johnston. "It sure rumbled."

San Jose City Hall and the Santa Clara County Building were evacuated while officials looked for structural damage. Power was knocked out to thousands of Santa Clara County Pacific Gas & Electric customers, and about 260 prisoners at the Santa Clara County Elmwood Jail facility in Milpitas were evacuated.

The Richter scale is a measure of ground motion as recorded on seismographs. Every increase of one number means a tenfold increase in magnitude; thus a reading of 6.5 reflects an earthquake 10 times stronger than one of 5.5.

An earthquake of 3.5 on the Richter scale can cause slight damage. One of 8 magnitude is a "great" quake capable of tremendous damage.

Astronauts: Practice, practice, practice for next satellite repair

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — If the space shuttle attempts rescue of two crippled communications satellites later this year, there should be lots of practice and careful preparation, according to the five astronauts who earlier this month salvaged the Solar Maximum satellite.

The space shuttle is a good craft to affect a satellite salvage, said Robert Crippen, the commander of the Solar Max mission. But he cautioned that astronauts on any future salvage flight "should know what you're going to do well ahead of time."

Crippen made the comments at a news conference Tuesday in which he and crewmates Dick Scobee, Terry Hart, James van Hoften and George Nelson reported on their highly successful flight.

The astronauts were able to retrieve, repair and re-launch the Solar Max, despite the failure of their primary plan — to first stabilize, using an asutonat jet pack. The success of the mission has encouraged consideration of other orbital salvage flights.

NASA is now studying the possibility of salvaging two communications satellites which failed to achieve their planned orbits earlier this year. If the rescue mission is approved, it could fly as early as this fall.

Van Hoften, who with Nelson made the spacewalk repairs, said that there may not be enough time to prepare for a fall launch of the proposed rescue mission.

"Going about a mission with very little time to prepare is not the ideal way to do it," van Hoften said. He said the repair plan he and Nelson used took two years to prepare and a full year to practice.

But the astronaut noted "there are a whole host of ways" the two communications satellites could be salvaged.

Woman sorry for killing two with ax

HOUSTON (AP) — No punishment is enough to make up for the gruesome pickax slayings of two people last year in Houston, the woman convicted of one of the killings says.

"Sometimes I think that if someone were to come up to me and do the very same thing I did or worse — it still would not be justice for me," Karla Faye Tucker said Tuesday in testimony in the punishment phase of her capital murder trial.

A jury of eight women and four men, which convicted her last week of the June 13 slaying of Jerry Lynn Dean, could begin deliberating late today whether she receives life in prison or death by injection.

"I don't see how anyone could ever be forgiven for something like I've done," she said. "I've hurt a lot of people. I wish I could take the hurt out of everybody and put it on myself."

Prosecutor Joe Magliolo asked if that statement meant she was telling the jury to sentence her to death. "I've thought about that," she replied. "I don't know what I'm asking."

Ms. Tucker, 24, spent about five hours on the stand Tuesday, describing how her life of drugs and prostitution led to the pickax slaying of Dean, a man she said she hated for destroying a photo album which contained the only pictures of her and her mother.

Ms. Tucker said gurgling sounds from the victim's body drove her to keep swinging the ax into Dean after Danny Garrett, who is awaiting trial for the slaying, beat Dean with a hammer.

"I kept hearing that sound, I saw a pickax over against the wall. I reached over and grabbed it. I swung it — about four or five times," she said. "After I hit him quite a few times he kept making that noise."

She said Garrett rolled Dean over and started hitting him with the ax and the gurgling eventually ceased. "I just wanted to make the noise stop," she said.

She said she then saw a movement under a blanket in another part of Dean's bedroom, realized a person was underneath and began swinging the ax.

"All I know was that it was a person under some covers," she said.

That victim later was identified as Deborah Thornton. Ms. Tucker has been charged, but not tried, for that killing.

Ms. Tucker remained unemotional as she recounted her life, how she quit school after failing the seventh grade, how earlier marijuana use prompted her to shoot heroin at age 10, and how at age 13 she became part of the entourage touring the country with the hard-rock Allman Brothers Band.

"I was doing every drug I could do," she said. She later turned to prostitution to "support my habit and pay my bills."

Texas to surpass New York state in population

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas will become the nation's second-largest state before the end of the decade, and Austin will be its fastest-growing area over the next 25 years, a new study says.

The study, published by the University of Texas' Bureau of Business Research, says Texas' population will surpass New York state's by 1990. California leads the nation in population.

Texas will continue to experience high economic and population growth during the next 25 years.

The study, a joint effort of the university and Data Resources Inc., said the fastest-growing area of Texas will be around Austin. It is expected to have an economic growth rate of 4.3 percent.

Boy's future home up in air

DENVER (AP) — A 12-year-old boy who insists he should live with his mother instead of his homosexual father, who has legal custody, won't be living with either parent for a while.

Domestic Relations Judge Harold Reed refused Tuesday to send Brian Batey back to Southern California, where his father lives. He also refused to allow the boy to return to his mother, who spent 12 days in a Denver jail rather than reveal Brian's whereabouts before the boy appeared in court Tuesday.

Instead, Brian, who will be 13 on May 15, will stay at the Denver Crisis Center for up to two weeks while the judge studies the case.

Betty Lou Batey admits that she took her son from her ex-husband's home in September 1982 in violation of a 1982 San Diego Superior Court order that granted custody to her ex-husband, Frank Batey.

The boy and Mrs. Batey, a fundamentalist Christian, say Batey is not a fit parent because of his admitted homosexuality.

Batey has argued that the Lovingway Pentecostal Church in Aurora, east of Denver, "brainwashed" his son against him.

The father has filed a $5 million damage suit against Mrs. Batey and members of the Lovingway congregation, many of whom have filled Denver courtrooms since Mrs. Batey turned herself in to the FBI on April 4.

The elder Batey, of Palm Springs, Calif., has previously told reporters that he feared Brian had been "brainwashed" by Rev. Gordon, Lovingway's pastor.

Betty Lou Batey (center) cries happy tears as she is escorted from a Denver courtroom by Denver sheriff's deputies on Tuesday. Batey's 12-year-old son Brian made an appearance before Denver District Judge Robert Fullerton enabling Mrs. Batey to be freed from jail.

Mrs. Batey said she turned herself in because being a fugitive was against her religious principles. Brian told reporters Tuesday that he and his mother had lived most of the last 19 months in Texas, moving to the Denver area within the last two months.

After Brian appeared in court Tuesday morning, Denver District Judge Robert Fullerton — who had jailed Mrs. Batey on April 12 and made her release contingent on producing the boy — lowered her bond from $25,000 to $5,000.

Eastern outraged by plane seizure

MIAMI (AP) — Eastern Airlines officials were "livid" at the seizure of one of their commercial airliners by U.S. Customs Service agents who found cocaine on board, a company spokesman said.

Agents seized the L-1011 jet at Miami International Airport on Tuesday after its arrival from Lima, Peru, and a search turned up 3 pounds of cocaine in a cargo hold under the cockpit, said Dennis Murphy, a customs spokesman in Washington.

It was the 22nd drug seizure from an Eastern jetliner since November, all from flights originating in Colombia or Peru, said Kitty Pryor, a Customs Service spokeswoman in Miami.

Agents released the 298-seat passenger craft about four hours after seizing it, after customs and airline officials reached a "landmark agreement" outlining ways to improve drug policing on commerical carriers, Murphy said.

"Following the seizure of the aircraft, Commissioner of Customs William von Raab was called by senior Eastern officials, including Eastern's president, Frank Borman," according to a statement read by Murphy. "The discussions resulted in a landmark agreement between Eastern Airlines and the Customs Service."

Murphy said the accord was "a big plus for customs."

"The fact is that for years, we have cooperated with everybody," said airline spokesman Richard McGraw, adding that "Eastern was livid" at the seizure of the $20 million aircraft.

"Because we were livid about what some bureaucrat at the customs did ... does not diminish our willingness to cooperate," he said late Tuesday in a telephone interview from New York, where Eastern is holding its annual shareholders meeting.

McGraw challenged the Customs Service's contention that it was within the agency's legal rights to seize the aircraft.

McGraw said Eastern had not yet decided what, if any, action the airline would take in response to the seizure.

Action would depend on the extent of any damage done "by way of embarrassment to Eastern, by way of passenger inconvenience. Because customs has seized an airplane, Eastern's name has been besmirched," he said.

No one has been arrested in connection with any of the 22 seizures on Eastern planes, which usually involved cocaine found in the jets' lavatory, customs officials said.

The "multi-point agreement" as described by Murphy calls for:

—Customs officials to train Eastern employees to identify "unusual circumstances which might indicate that a particular shipment needs further scrutiny by customs."

—Eastern employees to search their planes prior to departure from certain unnamed countries.

MIDLAND COUNTY VOTERS

Midland is a proud city. It is a city with a tremendous amount of educated people. Many of our city and county leaders have four years of college and more. Why not have a 4 year college graduate to lead our Sheriff's Department.

Let's elect a 4 year college educated graduate into office May 5.

Midland deserves a man with this type of education. He has the ability to use this knowledge and will put it to work, for a better Midland.

New mayor lifts ban

GLEN COVE, N.Y. (AP) — The City Council's decision to let Soviet diplomats resume using the beaches, golf course and tennis court was a "capitulation" to federal pressure, says the former mayor who imposed the ban two years ago.

The agreement, approved 5-2 Tuesday, was proposed by the new mayor after residents of a Soviet compound in this Long Island city demonstrated "by word and deed that they want to be neighbors." The U.S. Justice Department said it would now drop a suit against the town seeking to overturn the ban.

Former Mayor Alan Parente, who had ordered the ban after a Soviet defector charged the compound was used for eavesdropping on defense contractors, said the vote ignored the "spying" issue.

Bailout plan presented

BOSTON (AP) — A new bailout plan for New Hampshire's Seabrook nuclear plant calls for creation of a company to finish building one of the twin reactors, says a member of a New York securities firm hired as a consultant on the project.

Robert G. Hildreth Jr., managing director of Merrill Lynch Pierce Fenner & Smith's investment banking division, presented the plan Tuesday to the plant's 16 owners, mostly public utilities in New England.

Public Service Company of New Hampshire, which owns the largest share and has been managing the construction, halted the project April 18 because it could no longer raise construction money and was facing possible bankruptcy.

Hemlock roots kill hiker

BOISE, Idaho (AP) — A group of hikers "felt the fear of our own death" as they watched a guide die and a companion become seriously ill after mistakenly eating poisonous water hemlock roots.

"We were sitting around in a circle just waiting to see who would be next," 27-year-old James Appel of Denver, who with five friends had rafted down southeast Oregon's Owyhee River, said Tuesday.

The seizures began about 45 minutes after five of the six hikers and one of their guides ate water hemlock roots, which resemble parsnips. The hikers said 22-year-old guide Ken Kromer, who died, and 27-year-old hiker Sam Allen, 27, who had a seizure but survived had each eaten more of the root than anyone else.

Woman leaves school

ANNAPOLIS (AP) — A pregnant midshipman who resigned voluntarily from the U.S Naval Academy just 37 days before her graduation was the first woman to leave the school for that reason, officials said.

Naval Academy policy prohibits a midshipman from being pregnant or causing pregnancy while at the academy, because "the demands of being a midshipman and a parent are too great," academy spokesman Dennis Boxx said.

Officials of the academy, which began admitting women in 1976, would not identify the woman. The Evening Capital newspaper said she was a fourth-year student.

Trolly accident probed

BOSTON (AP) — Transit officials say they are checking whether the driver of a trolley car that slammed into another trolley may have "gone a little wild" when a short circuit started a fire under his seat.

An estimated 200 screaming passengers fled the underground Boylston subway station when one trolley hit the rear of the other Tuesday afternoon.

Britain protests Pravda article

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Foreign Ministry made a slight retreat after Britain's ambassador protested an article in the Communist Party newspaper blaming Britain for the shooting at the Libyan Embassy in London.

In an unusual move, Deputy Foreign Minister Georgi Kornienko told Ambassador Sir Iain Sutherland the Pravda article Tuesday did not necessarily reflect official Soviet thinking on the issue, a British Embassy spokesman said.

Kornienko told the ambassador the article "not necessarily represent the view of the Soviet government, nor was its appearance approved by the Central Committee," the spokesman said. In keeping with embassy policy, he asked that his name not be used.

Pravda, the official newspaper of the Communist Party Central Committee, is closely controlled by the party. It is used to reflect party policy, publish party decisions and serve as a medium for party leaders to address the public.

Articles in Pravda are taken by Western diplomats and journalists to reflect party thinking at the highest levels.

Soviet press reports about the shootings April 17 at Libya's London Embassy have been sketchy and unfavorable toward Britain.

A British policewoman was killed and 11 Libyan protesters demonstrating outside the embassy were wounded. The mission has been under siege by British police since the shooting, and on Sunday, Britain broke diplomatic relations with Libya.

None of the Soviet reports has mentioned that British officials and witnesses say the gunfire came from inside the embassy.

Tuesday's Pravda article said "gunfire was unexpectedly started outside" the mission. "The official authorities of Britain blamed the incident on the staff of the Libyan Embassy and staged a siege of it."

The Pravda story was in keeping with Libyan accounts of the incident.

Libya annexes northern Chad

N'DJAMENA, Chad (AP) — Libya has annexed the desert northern third of this former French colony, dropping all pretense of simply supporting rebels based in the sparsely populated region, Western diplomats here say.

The diplomats' assertions were supported by a statement Sunday by Col. Moammar Khadafy, the Libyan leader. The official Libyan news agency JANA quoted him as describing Chad "an extension" of Libya and warned of continued conflicts unless French troops withdraw from the country.

"Chad is an extension of us and we are an extension of Chad," the agency quoted Khadafy as telling a news conference in Tripoli, the Libyan capital. "France has no right to intervene on our borders in an African country which concerns us as Africans and as Libyans."

The annexation, the Western envoys said, occurred during a virtual stalemate in Chad's sporadic, two-decade-long civil war. There has been little fighting since French troops intervened last August to halt a rebel advance spearheaded by Libyan armored columns and warplanes.

A senior Western diplomat, who declined to be further identified, said there was no indication France or Libya intends to disturb the effective partition of Chad. He said Libyan-style People's Committees have been set up in northern Chad and "they are well on their way to making it Libya south."

A French diplomat, who also requested anonymity said, "We have no intention of going north at this stage. The solution is political, not military."

Libya denies having any troops south of the Aozou Strip, a mineral-rich 45,600-square-mile area north of the Tibesti Mountains. The Libyans occupied Aozou in 1973, claiming it under a pre-World War II treaty.

Western diplomats say there are 6,000 to 7,000 Libyan troops south of Aozou, but they avoid contact with the French. Their movements are monitored by U.S. spy satellites and French reconnaissance planes, the diplomats said.

The diplomats agreed to discuss the issue with a reporter only on condition that their names not be used.

There are 3,000 French soldiers here, including Foreign Legion units, and their commanders have sought permission to push north.

But public opinion in France, according to recent surveys, favors withdrawal from Chad. Opposition to the war intensified after nine soldiers were killed by a land mine April 8.

Before the land-mine incident, one French soldier had died — a pilot shot down in January. French commanders responded by moving their defensive line roughly 90 miles north to the 16th parallel.

"We will not leave as long as the Libyans are here, unless we are asked to go by the government," the French diplomat said.

Proposal withdrawn

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — The Foreign Ministry has dropped its plan to name its fourth-ranking official as ambassador to Washington after objections arose over his past ties with a magazine that published anti-Semitic articles.

Foreign Minister Jaime del Valle said Tuesday that the proposal, made privately to the Reagan administration, was withdrawn at the request of the nominee, Mario Barros Van Buren.

Del Valle said the charge of anti-Semitism against Barros "is absolutely unfounded, but it was going to cause excruciations that he was unwilling for the government to suffer."

Chile's military government has had no ambassador in Washington since Enrique Valenzuela resigned last November.

Barros was assistant editor of the magazine Estanquero from 1948 to 1952. The Conservative Party magazine in those years opposed the emigration of European Jews to Chile.

Jewish organizations in Chile and the United States objected to Barros' appointment to Washington.

Hotel strike ends

TORONTO (AP) — A two-week strike involving 3,500 hotel employees in Toronto has ended with acceptance of a new three-year contract.

A spokesman for the provincial labor ministry said representatives of the 10 affected hotels and the union signed a memorandum Tuesday to accept the contract. Employees returned to work Tuesday afternoon.

The contract gives workers who do not get tips a 9.6 percent pay increase this year, 5 percent in 1985 and 8 percent in 1986, bringing hourly wages to about $6.75 in the third year. Workers who do get tips, and now are paid between $4.20 and $5.50 an hour, will get 5 percent raises in each of the three years.

Union negotiators wanted retroactive pay Feb. 1, expiration of the last contract, but management refused.

The walkout was Toronto's first mass hotel strike and affected about 20 percent of the city's hotel rooms.

Officials attacked

LIMA, Peru (AP) — Authorities say Maoist guerrillas of the Shining Path Movement hanged a leftist mayor and gunned down a lieutenant governor in an Easter offensive.

The Civil Guard, in a report Tuesday, said guerrillas staged three attacks to mark the fourth anniversary of the start of their rebellion. Last Easter, the government said, the guerrillas stormed a peasant village in the Andes and massacred 67 people.

About 12 masked guerrillas seized a radio station at Huanta, 50 miles north of Ayacucho, at sunset Sunday and broadcast a message declaring "the guerrilla army is not dead and will begin new attacks," the Civil Guard said.

The Civil Guard said about 40 guerrillas took over the village of Huamanguilla at midday Sunday and hanged Mayor Juan Contreras after staging a trial. A former health official also was hanged in the main square, the Civil Guard said.

Nationalists march

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — More than 1,000 demonstrators marking the 69th anniversary of the killings of Armenians in Turkey marched to the Turkish Embassy and burned a Turkish flag outside the mission.

The extremist Armenian Secret Army issued a statement in Athens vowing to continue attacks on "those who conspire against our people."

The group has claimed responsibility for numerous terrorist attacks against Turkish diplomats and their families in Europe and the United States.

Landslide buries tracks

MOSCOW (AP) — A huge landslide smashed into a major railroad line in southern Russia, burying the tracks, damaging a bridge and forcing 25,000 passengers on 80 trains to finish their journeys by bus, the government newspaper Izvestia reports.

The report Tuesday said the mudslide caused no injuries but forced railroad crews and bus drivers to work around the clock for two days to move passengers. Izvestia said the slide was triggered by heavy rains in the north Caucasus Mountains. It said the slide occurred early on a Sunday but did not specify if it was last Sunday.

Frisco immune to hoopla

By DON DAVIS
Copley News Service

SAN FRANCISCO — The address is not posh, by Old California standards, but for four days in July, 747 Howard St. will be the most important place in the City by the Bay.

Sprawling over that location between Third and Fourth Streets in the downtown district is the George R. Moscone Convention Center, site of the 1984 Democratic National Convention that will bestow the mantle of presidential nominee upon former Vice President Walter Mondale, Sen. Gary Hart of Colorado, the Rev. Jesse Jackson or whomever is first to gain 1,967 delegate votes.

The political circus is coming to town. If, however, a town ever had an immunity to the hoopla associated with such shows, it is San Francisco.

It will take more than some delegate putting on a star-spangled top hat to raise an eyebrow on streets where people are not considered extraordinary for dyeing their hair pink and green or shaving it into patterns.

Citizens who pay absolutely no heed to the homosexual couple embracing on the sun-washed grass in front of City Hall will not be overly concerned about a boozy delegate singing in the hotel lobby.

Ladies of the night who work the streets of other cities might want to reconsider any plans to fly West for the convention, since there are 22 Yellow Pages in San Francisco's phone book advertising massage parlors.

The behavior of the thousands of delegates, politicians, media representatives and assorted other convention folk will, quite frankly, hardly make a dent in the lifestyle of San Francisco. At least not outside of the Moscone Center.

Ah, but behind the doors at 747 Howard, there will be action of the sort not seen here in decades — the making of a presidential contender.

The events on the summer days of July 16-20 will be attended by thousands and watched on television by millions across the land, even if the residents of the East Coast have to stay up into the wee hours to catch the events. In addition, loads of foreign journalists will send the news back to their homelands.

It will be the first time in 64 years that the Democrats have held their convention here. The last time, in 1920, it took a marathon 44-ballot effort to choose a candidate because departing President Woodrow Wilson had declined to endorse a successor. Twenty-four candidates were nominated on the first ballot and it was not until eight days later that the convention finally chose Ohio's Gov. James Middleton Cox as the party nominee.

Cox lost the November general election to another Ohio resident, Republican Sen. Warren Gamaliel Harding. However, in true convention style, where a surprise can become a legend, the vice presidential nominee for the Democrats that year eventually went on to make a name for himself.

Chosen for the second spot on the 1920 ticket was a 38-year-old assistant secretary of the Navy named Franklin D. Roosevelt.

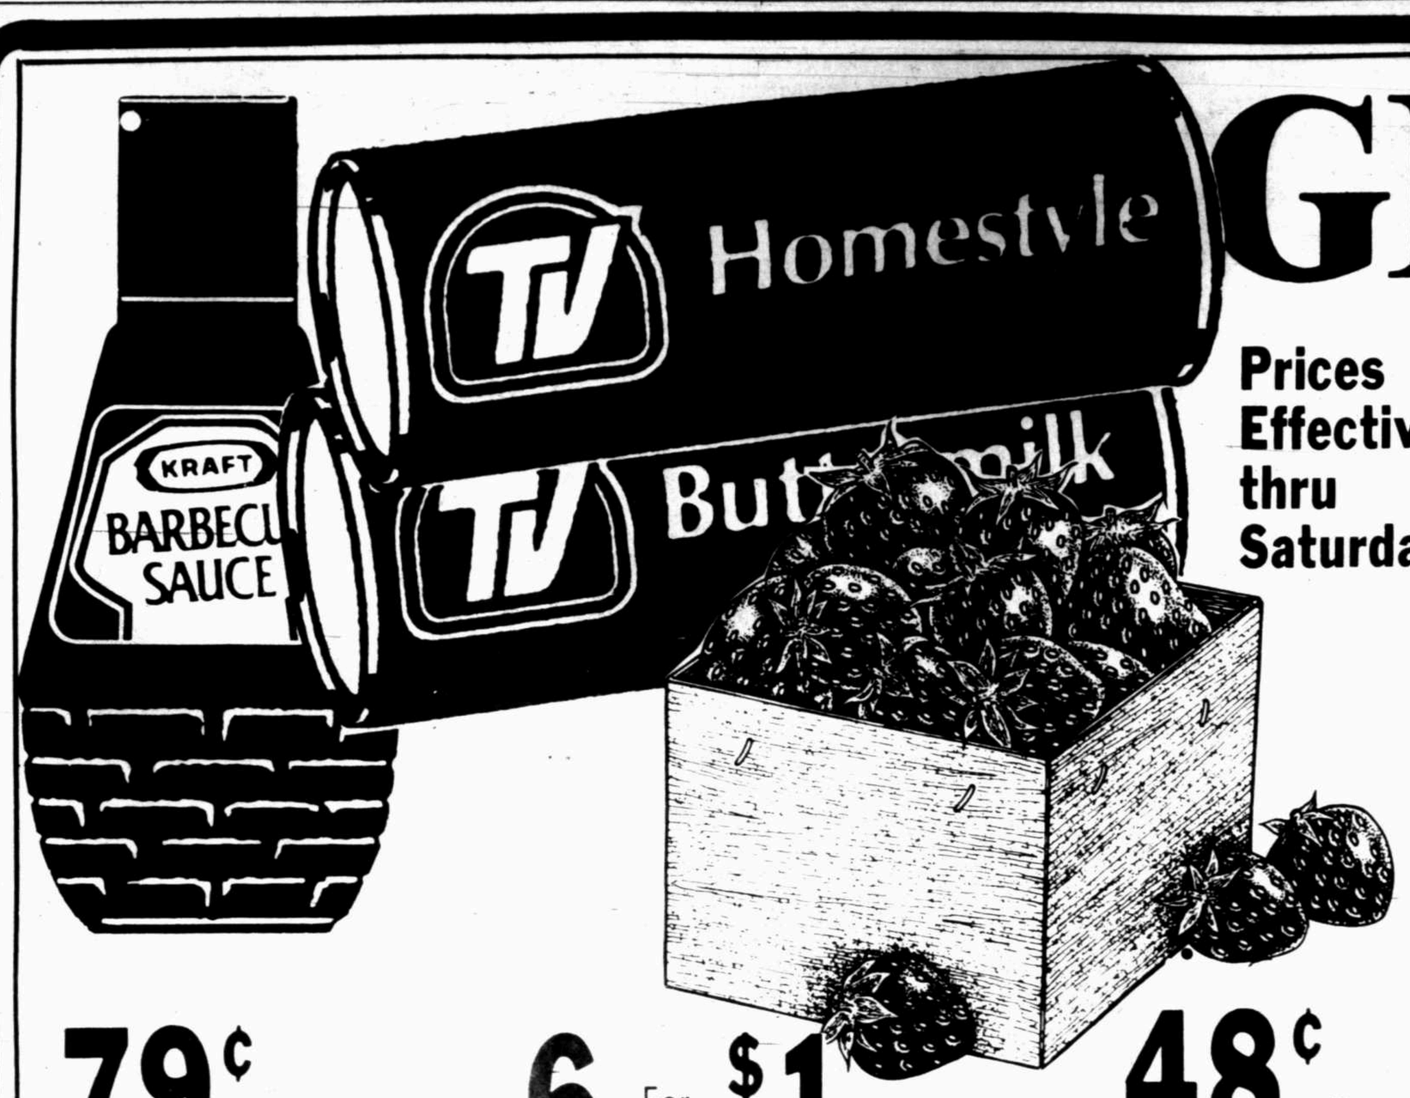

While the official headquarters will be at the 1,800-room San Francisco Hilton and Tower, the show is being fashioned currently in the secret headquarters of the Democratic National Convention Committee.

The address is not given out to keep away the kooks, explained one staffer. A visitor reaches the fourth-floor offices by invitation only and via a tiny elevator. After talking on a telephone, the visitor is buzzed through a locked door to enter a small four-chair waiting room where a single receptionist contacts the boys — and girls — in the back room.

Beyond this shroud of secrecy is the huge workspace, divided into cubicles littered with papers and coffee cups and drink cans that is actually the heart of the DNCC operation, where 30 full-time staff members and numerous volunteers are plugging any holes still left on the convention.

Wht kinds of this have caused panic? An unidentified employee recalls that the Cathedral Hill Hotel, where the Florida and Wisconsin delegations are to stay, burned down. With a push, the hotel is expected to be back in operation by the time convention Chairwoman Martha Layne Collins, the governor of Kentucky, bangs down her opening gavel.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Woman's diet vital for baby

Dear Dr. Solomon: Just how important is a woman's diet before she becomes pregnant on the health of the baby? I hear of lots of girls who don't have the best diets but who give birth to healthy children. I can understand how smoking and drinking can affect the baby, but I don't understand this emphasis on what a woman eats. How important is this anyway to the baby? — Mrs. D.O., Philadelphia, Penn.

Solomon

Dear Mrs. O.: According to one study, the nutritional status of a woman before she becomes pregnant has an even greater effect on the birth weight of her baby than does either cigarette smoking or the use of alcohol. Dr. Frederick C. Battaglia, of the University of Colorado School of Medicine in Denver, reports in addition that poor diet during pregnancy is associated with a number of birth defects and a high incidence of miscarriages.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My son is an all-round athlete and plays three sports for is high school team. He is given a physical examination at the start of each school year to make sure that he is in good health, but he has never been given an electrocardiogram as part of the examination. Don't you think that a youngster who takes part in school sports should have an electrocardiogram? — Mrs. J.A., N.Y.

Dear Mrs. A.: A routine electrocardiogram in a high school athlete who is symptom-free is not necessary, according to Dr. William C. Roberts, of the National Heart, Lung, and Blood Institute in Bethesda, Md. However, a young athlete who, for example, becomes weak or blacks out during strenuous exercise should be carefully evaluated.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Is it or isn't it true that the pill can cause problems with the circulation? I've heard exactly opposite things said about the danger of being on the pill for this reason. — Sandi, Scranton, Penn.

Dear Sandi: Women on oral contraceptives who are over 35 years of age and who smoke do have an increased risk of vascular disease, according to Dr. Clifford R. Kay, of the Royal College of Practitioners in Manchester, England. In other women, however, the risk is not very different from that in women who do not use oral contraceptives.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Suppose a woman has an ectopic pregnancy. Is it still possible for her to have children later on? — Greta, Kansas City, Mo.

Dear Greta: A woman who has an ectopic pregnancy — that is, a pregnancy outside the uterus — has less than a 50 percent chance of having another child, according to Dr. D.E. Darnell Jones, of East Carolina School of Medicine, Greenville, N.C. Why this is so is not clear.

One possible solution to this problem is earlier diagnosis so that conservative surgery for the ectopic pregnancy is possible.

Dear Dr. Solomon: What is meant by joint protection when referring to the treatment of a person who has arthritis? — Mrs. L.W., Oklahoma City, Okla.

Dear Mrs. W.: Joint protection refers to efforts to minimize the stress or damage to diseased joints. A simple example is the use of a cane or a walker to reduce the amount of weight placed on some joints.

Splints may also be used to prevent joints from becoming permanently stiff. The splints enable the joints to rest and keep the muscles and ligaments around the joints flexible.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I have a lot of aches and pain around my neck and back, and a physical therapist I know has suggested that I ought to go for muscle relaxation exercises. Before I start anything I like to know what I'm getting into and what it is supposed to do. Would you explain how muscle relaxation exerciss work? — Don, Bryan, Texas

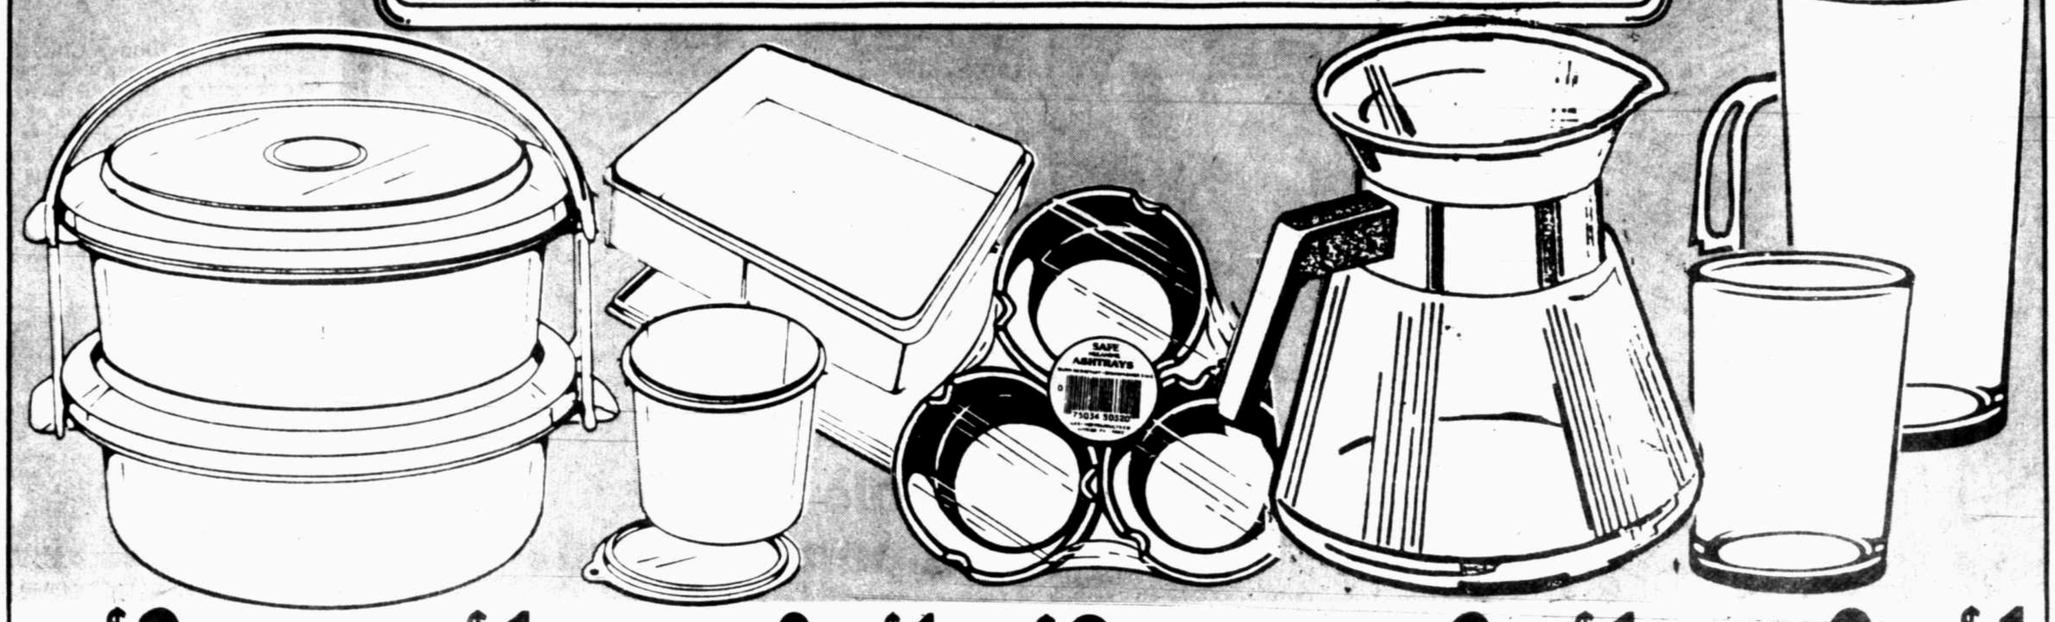

Dear Don: There is of course no guarantee that muscle relaxation exercises will be effective in any particular case, but they can be helpful. A person who experiences anxiety over a period of time responds to such a situation with muscle contraction. This, in turn, can result in such symptoms as headaches, backaches, and neck pain.

Dr. Joel A. DeLisa, of the Veterans Administration Medical Center in Seattle, explains that muscle relaxation exercises teach the patient to recognize when a muscle is contracted, when it is relaxed, and how to relax muscles that are not needed for a given activity. As a result, the pain that accompanies prolonged muscle tension eventually disappears.

Vietnam lives on

In the American nightmare that was — and remains today — Vietnam, there weren't many rays of hope. It remains even now a maze, a house of mirrors, where what you believe you see may not exist at all and where what actually exists may never be revealed to observers.

Recently, though, leaders of the Vietnam Veterans of America organization said they have received information from the governments of Vietnam and Cambodia that remains of dead American servicemen exist and may be returned soon. For a number of American families that surely constitutes a ray of hope.

And why shouldn't it? While the families of all the Americans who fought and were injured or died in the jungles of Vietnam suffered the alienation and divisiveness that marked the era, the families of men taken prisoner or those listed even now as missing-in-action continue to suffer. They live in a world of uncertainty — never knowing if a ringing telephone will bring the dreaded confirmation they've so long anticipated.

There is the additional horror — the thought that, perhaps, the unimaginable is reality. That in the jungles and prison camps of Southeast Asia Americans are still held, forgotten men from an unforgettable war.

All Americans surely tire of Vietnam at one point or another. It becomes too much of a burden, too much a recurring nightmare. It's easy to push it aside. But for some Americans, the book on Vietnam won't be closed until the 2,490 servicemen still listed as missing-in-action are accounted for.

For them, the Vietnam Veterans of America and organizations like it are, in fact, the last shred of hope.

Countering terror

The British government did what it had to do Sunday in breaking diplomatic relations with Libya. No other course was open once it became clear that Libya's Col. Moammar Khadafy was refusing to cooperate in an inquiry into the shooting of a British policewoman and 11 anti-Khadafy demonstrators by someone firing from inside the Libyan Embassy in London.

Britons wanted the murderer brought to justice, or at least identified and expelled if the culprit enjoyed diplomatic immunity from prosecution. But the international law that Britain respects and Libya flouts makes embassies the inviolable territory of foreign nations. That meant that British police could not enter what the Libyans refer to as their "People's Bureau" to search for weapons and question suspects in the April 17 shootings.

As it is, the British are now treating the Khadafy government with the contempt it deserves, even if the assailant may get away unpunished when the Libyans vacate their embassy and depart Britain before midnight Sunday.

But there is a larger issue that tended to get lost in all the drama of events in London. How are the practitioners of state-sponsored terrorism — Khadafy, for example — to be stopped if decent nations shrink from the collective sanctions that might deter these crimes?

Britain's ties to Libya are a perfect case in point. The dictator Khadafy and his Soviet-backed, revolutionary regime were known to every Western intelligence service years ago as aggressive sponsors and exporters of terrorism. Yet, Britain maintained a robust trade with Libya and 8,000 British nationals, together with other Western Europeans and Americans, helped pump Libya's oil and run its economy.

None of the Western Europeans stirred themselves to protest when a Libyan mob, no doubt organized by Khadafy's men, sacked and burned the American Embassy in Libya in 1980. Similarly, Europeans paid little attention a year later when the Reagan administration urged Americans working in Libya to come home.

Nor, finally, did any of America's allies pay particular attention when the Reagan administration ordered the entire Libyan Embassy staff out of the United States in 1981. Libya's crime? The Libyan "People's Bureau" in Washington was helping plot assassinations of anti-Khadafy Libyans living in the United States. It was a chilling reminder of past violence against Libyan dissidents in Europe, and a portent of future crimes — in London, as elsewhere.

Moammar Khadafy thinks he and his country are above international law and the accepted norms of diplomatic conduct. So do other outlaw nations; among them Iran, Syria, North Korea, Cuba and, of course, the Soviet Union. These nations will have more incentive to behave in a minimally civilized fashion when more countries are prepared to sacrifice for the sake of applying sanctions against the lawless.

Just playing games

Waste seems to cover every area of government as morning dew blankets the grass. A recent case involves the U.S. Army, which spent $20,000 to prepare 30,000 multicolored pamphlets explaining how to play that old childhood game, King of the Hill.

The booklet, with preface and four pages of detailed rules, says its purpose is to "incorporate leadership, strategy-planning and decision-making skills into the physical fitness training program."

Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., pointed out that kids have learned the rules for decades without military assistance or tax funds.

What next, a pamphlet on jacks to teach development of manual skills or maybe one on hide-and-seek to learn how to ferret out a hidden sniper?

JACK ANDERSON

CBO wants to deny vets care

WASHINGTON — In a move that can only be described as unrealistic in an election year, the non-partisan Congressional Budget Office is recommending that millions of veterans be denied care in hospitals and nursing homes operated by the Veterans Administration.

Jack Anderson

The proposal would cut $3.3 billion a year from the VA's budget. It would dump most of the vets, who are now treated in the agency's 172 hospitals and 100 nursing homes, on the already overburdened Medicare and Medicaid systems. Many of the veterans would have to turn to private or community services for institutional care.

My associate Indy Badhwar has seen a copy of the hush-hush draft report. Here are the main proposals:

— "No VA-supported hospital or nursing home care would be available to veterans without service-connected disabilities unless they were unable to defray the costs of their care." Most VA hospital and nursing home care is for non-service-connected injuries or illnesses, though priority is given to veterans who were disabled as the result of their military service.

— Even help for poor vets and for those with service-connected disabilities could require reimbursement. The amount would be determined by "means tests" of the veteran's ability to pay. "The test of poverty might be based on ... benefits such as veterans pensions or food stamps or income and assets," the draft report suggests.

— A "co-payment" procedure would be started immediately. "Deductibles charged for any hospital stay up to 60 days in length would be set at $356 ...." A short hospital stay, 99 days or less, would cost a veteran $100 a month if he has $1,000 in annual income above the VA pension level of about $6,980.

— As for the priority patients with service-connected disabilities, the draft recommends that "eligibility could be tightened even further" by eliminating coverage for vets who are deemed to be less than 50 percent disabled.

The most severe impact of the proposed cutoffs would be on older veterans who have no service-connected condition but who need long-term care. A significant number of these World War I and World War II veterans would no longer be eligible for VA medical care.

Aggravating the situation for these old-timers would be the fact that 41 percent of them have no private health insurance. This means they'd have to rely on Medicare — the Social Security Administration's health program for the elderly.

Unfortunately, Medicare is designed for the treatment of acute medical disorders and is inadequate for long-term care. So, many elderly VA patients would have to turn to Medicaid, which provides long-term care for the indigent.

But Medicaid, which is financed mostly by the states, is already in difficulty because of the Reagan administration's cutbacks in federal aid.

James Roosevelt, chairman of the National Committee to Preserve Social Security and Medicare, himself a World War II veteran and son of the president who signed the Social Security Act, pointed out that Medicare and Medicaid are already stretched to the limit.

In a moment of candor, the Budget Office's draft report admits that the annual savings would actually be less than half of the projected $3.3 billion, since about 55 percent of the VA's savings would simply be shifted as costs to Medicare and Medicaid.

WATCH ON CENTRAL AMÉRICA: My roving reporter Jon Lee Anderson is in the Caribbean and Central America keeping an eye on present and potential trouble spots. In Costa Rica, he had a brief interview with Gen. Gustavo Alvarez Martines, the former chief of the Honduran armed forces who was abruptly arrested and shipped into exile by the Honduran government. Alvarez was whisked off by Costa Rican security agents before he could say much, but he winked and said, "I may see you in Washington," and hinted that he might "tell a lot more" about his years behind the scenes in Honduras.

— In Guyana, the leftist, notoriously corrupt regime of President Linden Forbes Burnham has reportedly brought in Cuban military advisers and troops. This is the word being spread by right-wing Guyanese exiles operating in the United States and Canada. They'd like to see Burnham follow the lead of the leftist regime in neighboring Suriname, which booted out its Cuban advisers after the U.S. invasion of Grenada. A group of the Guyanese exiles was caught in Ohio trying to buy weapons early this year — but they have ruled out the military option against Burnham "for now," they say.

NOW's 'sheep' playing politics

With all that is said and written about the "gender gap" and "women's issues," one would get the impression that American women march in lockstep with one another. Or, from another perspective, that they act like a bunch of sheep.

But is there a herd?

Edwin Feulner

Let the 250,000 sheep who pledge their allegiance to the National Organization of Women (NOW) follow Walter Mondale into the shed. They deserve each other.

The rest of the female population of this country — housewives, secretaries, business executives, school teachers, nurses, industrial workers — will have more to say in the coming elections than the "herd" can hear above the baaing.

Most women, like most men, vote as individuals. Their voting decisions are based more on their personal interests and circumstances than on their sex. The NOW crowd long ago lost real sight of what real "women's issues" are; theyre too involved with politics.

What should the real "women's issues" be?

One which NOW has ignored to date is a law which forbids people from knitting caps and outerwear, embroidring, handkerchief-making, manufacturing jewelry, and doing similar work at home.

Of course, the antiquated law — which is vigorously supported by NOW's comrades-in-arms at the AFL-CIO — affects mostly women, especially women with young children to care for.

NOW would like to see these women on the factory floor and their children in government day-care centers. But there are millions of women who would prefer to care for their children AND work at home. And what about women without transportation? And women who live in rural areas in which no factories or day-care centers are to be found.

While the law makes a few exceptions (for handicapped individuals, for example) the people most hurt and exploited by the work-at-home restrictions obviously are the same people NOW pretends to speak for.

The Secretary of Labor, Ray Donovan, attempted to do away with the restrictions last year — but was rebuffed by the courts. A decision, if carried to its illogical conclusion, that could be "a blow to the vast potential of people who want to work in their homes at computer terminals," says labor economist Peter Germanis. By the year 1990, Germanis says, as many as fifteen-million jobs could be performed at home. Most of those potential workers will be women. But will NOW let them work?

Another real women's issue involves the regulatins which discriminate against non-working women in the area of retirement planning. Currently, a husband and his non-working wife can put only $2,250 into an Individual Retirement Account (IRA), while a family with both spouses working can invest up to $4,000. That clearly discriminates against woman who choose to stay home to raise a family. Does NOW care about these women?

These are only two of the issues that the sheep refuse to address. They're too busy playing politics to bother with things that might actually improve the life of women in America.

ART BUCHWALD

If covert turns overt watch out!

An old-timer from Langley, now living in a safe house in McLean, said of Nicaragua, "I've never seen a C.I.A. covert operation more overt in my life."

Art Buchwald

"I was thinking the same thing myself," I said. "I thought you guys were supposed to have deep cover when you went into the jungles of Central America."

"That used to be the case. But present U.S. foreign policy demands we let the whole world know we're operating covertly to save El Salvador and bring down Nicaragua. President Reagan wants to make sure friend and foe are aware the United States is actively involved."

"Why doesn't he just declare an overt war and let it go at that?"

"He needs Congress to declare an overt war. He's not going to ask for one during an election year. So the president is conducting a covert war, with all the fanfare of an overt one. The only problem is that when you conduct a covert war you have a lot of restrictions placed on you, in order for it not to become overt. The mining of Nicaraguan harbors is a good example of that. The president said it was covert — the rest of the world considered it overt."

"And Congress cut off the CIA's funding for its war in Central America."

"It was a big mistake on the president's part because up until then the House and Senate supported the CIA's covert operations in the hemisphere. You see, the object of fighting a secret war is that when something goes wrong, the government can say it knew nothing about it. But in the case of the mining, everyone in the administration defended it, and there was no way of dumping it on a wild rogue elephant at the CIA.

"The administration's strategy was, the more publicity the covert mining operation received, the stronger message we would be sending to the Sandinista government that we really meant business. Unfortunately, Congress got the same message."

"Does this mean that the CIA's covert war in Central America is over?"

"Of course not. But it will have to be done much more covertly. Funds for it will have to be channeled from money buried in the education budget, CIA agents will have to be given cover in the Honduran-American Coffee Bean Exchange, and President Reagan will have to shut up about how well his administration's covert operations are going in the Western Hemisphere."

"That's going to be hard for the president to do," I said.

"He has no choice. He needs congressional support for his policy in El Salvador to train the army to fight the Nicaraguan-trained Salvadoran rebels."

"You mean the Nicaraguans are fighting a covert war against El Salvador, at the same time we're fighting a covert war against Nicaragua?"

"Yes, the only difference is that Nicaragua is denying it, which I must say is to their credit."

"Why is that?"

"If you deny you're fighting a covert war, then everyone can pretend your country is not involved. But if you make a legal case for it like President Reagan did, and it goes sour, you're up a Central American creek without a paddle."

"What should the president have done when the mining story leaked out?"

"He should have been publicly horrified. Then he should have appointed a presidential commission headed by Henry Kissinger to see how such future incidents could be avoided. Finally, he should have told Bill Casey if the CIA was going to act in such a despicable manner, he didn't want to be his friend any more."

"But the country needs a CIA," I protested.

"There's nothing wrong with having a CIA," the old-timer from Langley said. "But there is something wrong when it suddenly becomes the most overt agency in the government."

Marathon Chamber excludes men

MARATHON, Texas (AP) — When the chamber of commerce for this tiny West Texas town holds its monthly meetings, they're strictly female affairs. The 34-member organization has no male members and never has. Men are not allowed.

"They (men in the community) didn't want to form a chamber so the women just did it," explains Patsy Cavness, the chamber's current president.

And since the chamber's establishment some 20 years ago, women have made up its membership.

"We think it's really interesting," Mrs. Cavness said recently. "We do so many things for the community and it's unique that it's just women in the group."

But she quickly added that "the men help out a lot when we ask them."

For Marathon, a town of about 650 people 250 miles east of El Paso, the all-woman chamber of commerce also has become a promotional gimmick.

A large billboard on the fringes of town proclaims the town's unique group. Emblazoned in faded red letters beneath the announcement that Marathon is the "Official Gateway to Big Bend National Park" is the line "All-woman Chamber of Commerce."

"We think people should know that. We're so small here that a lot of people don't know anything about us," Mrs. Cavness said.

AP Laserphoto

This billboard outside the tiny West Texas town of Marathon states the policy regarding the community's chamber of commerce. It has no male members and never has — men are not allowed

Men in Marathon don't seem to mind that they're excluded from the chamber.

One male resident said he "would join if I could" because of other commitments or because of the time involved in belonging to the chamber.

"We have a lot of other organizations in town and the men belong to lots of them. We're so small that when you belong to two or three things, it takes up all your time," she said.

Still there have been some men interested in joining, she conceded.

"I guess at times it has made the men mad, but nobody really pressed it. And, after all, they didn't want to start one up. Why shouldn't it be just for women?" she said.

Mrs. Cavness said the chamber has had as many as 50 members at different times.

It was founded in the mid-1960s after a women's civic club disbanded, she said.

"We needed something and decided since there was no chamber, we'd get one going," she said.

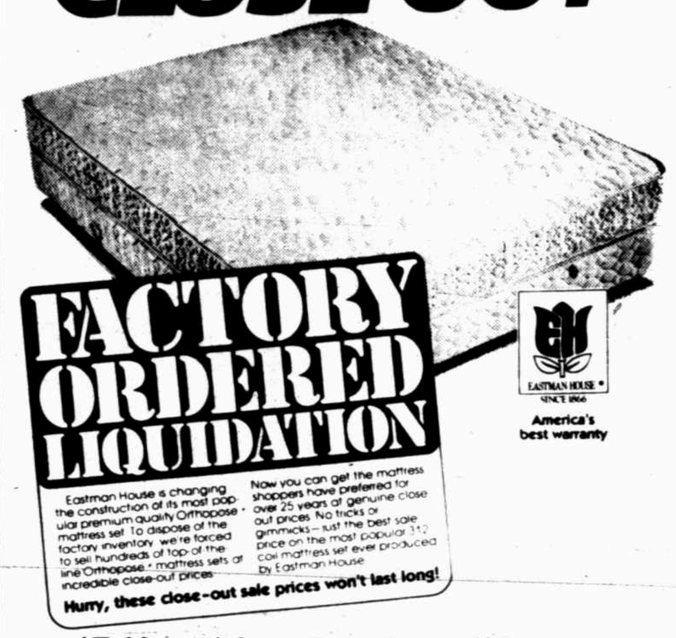

Its membership includes businesswomen as well as women not involved in the town's businesses, she said.

"It's typical in every other way," she said, explaining that the primary purpose of the group is to promote Marathon and the Big Bend National Park, which has its headquarters about 70 miles south of the town.

And Mrs. Cavness said the chamber participates in various local happenings, such as making financial contributions to Marathon's school and maintaining the town's community building.

"I guess what it boils down to is that there are many chances for the men to become involved in things and they didn't need a chamber," she said. "But I think before we had a fight with anyone, we'd let men join."

4-5A BASEBALL

The District 4-5A title race is over but the battle for second place rages on.

Crossing the finish line first with one game to spare is Abilene Cooper. The Cougars pounded the Midland Lee Rebels 10-2 at Lee Diamond Tuesday for an 11-2 record. Lee held on to second place, but fell to 9-4 in league play.

Meanwhile, in San Angelo, the Odessa High Bronchos rallied and then held on to edge the Bobcats 9-8. The win gives the Bronchos an 8-5 record, keeps their hopes for the second place playoff berth alive and makes Saturday's district finales between Lee and Midland High, and OHS and Odessa Permian very big ball games.

The Cougars will have to wait a few days before knowing who they will face in the bi-district round of the state playoffs. Right now, District 3-5A's Lubbock Coronado and Plainview are tied for second at 10-4. The 4-5A winner will meet 14-0, (22-2 overall) Lubbock Monterey in the first round.

"THIS FEELS great," said Abilene Cooper coach Andy Malone. "This was a goal (to win district) we set last spring. When you have all those kids back and you set a goal like that and achieve it, that's the ultimate for a coach."

The Cougars did everything they needed to against Lee to wrap up the title. They got good pitching, strong hitting and a defense that committed only one error.

Cooper pitcher Terry Suggs, 5-1 with the win, went 4⅔ innings before giving up Lee's only runs on a Jimmy Phillips single to right field. When he fell behind 3-0 to Steve Woodlee, Malone called for Joby Hill to finish the game. Woodlee ended up walking, but Rob Walker went down swinging to end the inning with two runners stranded.

Hill pitched the final 2⅓ innings, allowing no hits and one walk to ensure the victory.

At the plate, Nathan Jones scattered hits to all corners of the Rebel outfield in a 4-for-4 performance, all any coach can ask of a leadoff hitter. On three of his hits he ended up scoring runs. Kent Strain, went 2-for-4 to bring home three runs to add to the Cougars' 12-hit attack.

REBEL PITCHER Bryan Willis, who took the loss and fell to 6-2 in 4-5A play, 9-3 overall, pitched two strong innings before getting into trouble in the third. Unfortunately for the Rebels, the defense behind him didn't help him get out of the inning, commtting their second and third errors in the game to put Lee in a 4-0 hole.

Cooper added two runs in the fifth on Strain's single up the middle and, with reliever Mike Small on the mound, picked up their final four runs in the game, getting help from two more errors in the seventh inning.

"The best team won this game," said Lee coach Ernie Johnson. "We played a very poor ball game and that helped them really pour it on. The way we're playing, we don't deserve to be in the playoffs. We've been playing down hill from the fourth district game on. We got off to a good start, winning two tournaments and then fizzled and fell on our faces.

"Against Big Spring, his mechanics were back to basic," said Johnson about Willis who had a near-perfect one-hitter against the Steers on Thursday. "Against the first five or six Cooper batters he was pitching the same. He did strike out the next two on high pitches and then, all of a sudden, the bad mechanics came back and he couldn't get the ball down and they hit every bad pitch.

"When Willis pitches with proper mechanics, he's a great pitcher," continued Johnson. "Against a good team look Cooper, without those mechanics he's just another pitcher."

Lee managed only six hits against the Cougars with Phillips collecting two of them. Dennis Matta's double in the third inning was the lone Rebel extra-base hit.

4-5A BASEBALL

ABILENE — The Midland High Bulldogs guaranteed themselves a .500 or better District 4-5A season Tuesday by posting a 14-11 victory here over the Abilene High Eagles.

"We've played them three times and they've never hit the ball like that before," said amazed Abilene High coach Bob Harmon. "It's tough to win when you let them score 14 runs."

No one else has seen Midland High hit that much either. The Bulldogs drilled a season-high 21 hits (as many as any two previous 4-5A games combined), getting at least one hit and one RBI from every starter in the lineup.

Mike Stanton led the way with a 4-for-3 performance for one RBI followed Chris Herbert, Greg Hatcher and Steve Wootan each went 3-for-5 for two RBIs and Keith Clay at 3-for-5 for one RBI.

The game started out as a pitchers duel with Steve Wootan, the eventual winner, holding an 3-0 lead through three innings. The Bulldogs added five more runs in the fourth and three in the fifth and seventh innings for their 14 runs.

Abilene finally got to Wootan in the fourth for two runs and chased him off the mound after a five-run fifth inning that cut Midland's lead to 11-7. Mike Timlin relieved and lasted 1⅓ innings before giving way to Doug Daehling in the seventh. Daehling picked up his first save of the year after two-thirds of an inning of relief.

Mike Keith and Steve Stacy combined to give up the 21 Bulldog hits, each tagged for seven runs.

ELSEWHERE AROUND the 4-5A, Odessa High Odessa High scored five unearned runs in a seven-run fourth inning to build up a 9-3 lead after trailing 3-1 in the second inning.

San Angelo answered the Broncho scoring in the bottom of the fourth with five unearned runs of its own for a 9-8 score. The two teams played shutout ball from their on, giving the Bronchos the victory and an 8-5 record.

The victory leaves Odessa High one game behind 9-4 Midland Lee in the 4-5A playoff race for second place. Abilene Cooper, with a 10-2 victory over the Rebels, clinched first place. Odessa High needs a victory over Odessa Permian and a Lee loss to Midland High to gain the second and final playoff berth.

In Odessa, the Permian Panthers shelled the Big Spring Steers, 11-3. The loss kept the Steers' perfect season in tact at 0-13 while Permian pulled within one game of .500 at 6-7.

NBA PLAYOFFS

Moses Malone and Julius Erving each scored 22 points and Malone dominated the backboards with 15 rebounds as the Philadelphia 76ers defeated the New Jersey Nets 110-102 Tuesday night to tie their National Basketball Association playoff series at two games apiece.

Once down 2-0 in the best-of-five, opening-round series, the defending NBA champions can bounce the Nets out of the playoffs in their final game Thursday night in Philadelphia.

"If there is a driver's seat, I'd say we're in it," noted Erving. "We didn't come back from 2-0 to go back to Philadelphia and cough it up. They had success in Philadelphia. But they're not going to win in Philadelphia. You can mail in the stats."

In other NBA playoff action Tuesday night, Boston defeated Washington 99-96; Atlanta trimmed Milwaukee 100-97; Utah beat Denver 129-124; Portland bounced Phoenix 113-110 and Dallas whipped Seattle 107-96.

Larry Bird and Dennis Johnson combined for 19 points in the fourth quarter as Boston defeated Washington to win their series, 3-1.

The Celtics stayed ahead after substitutes Quinn Buckner and Kevin McHale sparked a 15-point streak late in the second quarter to give Boston a 46-34 advantage.

Jeff Ruland scored 30 points for Washington, which closed to within 70-65 at the end of three quarters but could get no closer until Jeff Malone scored the final basket just before the buzzer.

Dominique Wilkins gave Atlanta the lead on an 18-footer with 47 seconds remaining and Doc Rivers drilled two free throws with two seconds left as Atlanta trimmed Milwaukee to tie their series at 2-2.

The Bucks had an opportunity to take the lead after Wilkins' basket, but Dan Roundfield blocked Bob Lanier's shot with eight seconds remaining.

Darrell Griffith scored 10 of his 26 points in the fourth quarter to spark a Utah rally that carried the Jazz over the Nuggets, trying their series at 2-2.

Utah forward Adrian Dantley, the NBA's scoring champion, tossed in a game-high 39 points, but was held scoreless over the final five minutes of the game.

Calvin Natt scored 11 of his game-high 30 points in the fourth period as Portland beat Phoenix to even their series at 2-2.The score was tied 87-87 with 11:14 remaining in the game when Natt's jumper put the Trail Blazers ahead to stay.

Mark Aguirre scored 29 points and Jay Vincent added 21 to lead Dallas over Seattle, tying the series 2-2.Dallas also got 20 points from Rolando

New York Yankee knuckleballer Phil Niekro, age 45, won his fourth American League game in four outings in a 4-0 shutout of Kansas City.

Niekro silences Royals

AMERICAN LEAGUE

Ancient Phil Niekro may be knuckling a little less these days, but rival batters are knuckling under more than ever.

The oldest player in the majors — he was 45 on April 1 — and the oldest ever to perform for the New York Yankees, Niekro did something Tuesday which he failed to accomplish in 19 National League seasons. He is 4-0 for the first time in his career following an eight-hit, eight-strikeout 4-0 blanking of the Kansas City Royals.

"At my age, I've forgotten what young is," said Niekro, whose 44th career shutout also was his 272nd triumph. "I have to keep myself in great shape. So far, I've done what my body has told me to do. I sleep when I have to, eat when I have to and work when I have to."

His work includes mixing a fastball, sinker and slider with his famed knuckleball and he owns a 0.98 earned run average and a string of 21 1-3 scoreless innings to go with his unbeaten record.

Niekro, who was released by Atlanta after last season, feels that some of his difficulties with the Braves — he was 1-14 prior to April 25 over the last seven years — stemmed from relying too much on the knuckleball.

The Yankees snapped a 25-inning scoreless drought with two unearned runs in the second off Bud Black on Butch Wynegar's bases-loaded single. Don Baylor added an RBI single in the fifth and Don Mattingly homered in the sixth.

Angels 8, Red Sox 7

California got solo homers from four veterans — Reggie Jackson, Brian Downing, Bobby Grich and Doug DeCinces — and Jackson doubled in the ninth and scored the winning run on a single by Bob Boone, another old-timer. Jackson, Downing and Grich hit consecutive homers off Dennis "Oil Can" Boyd in the fourth, the 52nd time in AL history the feat was accomplished, while Boone collected four hits and Rod Carew three in the Angels' 16-hit assault. That offset Boston slugger Jim Rice's first hitting spree of the season — a single, double and triple and four RBIs.

Orioles 8, White Sox 3

Eddie Murray's two-run homer, a solo shot by Cal Ripken Jr. and Scott McGregor's nine-hit pitching helped world champion Baltimore win for only the fifth time in 17 games this season. Vance Law and Ron Kittle homered for the White Sox, who led 2-0 after four innings.

But John Lowenstein opened the Orioles' fifth with a walk and Ken Singleton singled for the first hit off Richard Dotson. Rick Dempsey doubled to score Lowenstein. John Shelby opened the sixth with a single and Murray's homer put the Orioles in front. Ripken hit his seventh homer in the eighth, tying Oakland's Dave Kingman for the major-league lead, and Ripken and Murray added RBI singles in the ninth.

Tigers 6-4, Twins 5-3

Lou Whitaker's two-out single capped a three-run ninth inning in the opener as the Tigers rallied to make a winner of Jack Morris, 4-0, who scattered seven hits. In the nightcap, Lance Parrish belted a three-run homer in the fifth inning to erase a 3-1 deficit and give the red-hot Tigers a five-game winning streak and a 14-1 record.

Mariners 4, Blue Jays 2

Al Cowens, who singled home Seattle's first run in a two-run sixth inning, broke a 2-2 tie with an RBI single in the eighth and eventually scored on Darnell Coles' grounder. Dave Beard, the third Seattle pitcher, earned the victory with 2 2-3 innings of hitless relief after Toronto tied the game in the bottom of the sixth on Lloyd Moseby's two-run homer. Moseby has 12 RBIs in his last five games.

Brewers 3, Athletics 2

Oakland's Lary Sorensen came close to working out of a bases-loaded jam in the seventh when Charlie Moore lined back to the mound and Ben Oglivie, who homered in the second inning for Milwaukee's first run, was doubled off third. But Rick Manning then hit a drive to the gap in left-center to drive in the tying and winning runs.The A's had gone in front 2-1 with a run in the top of the seventh on Donnie Hill's infield hit, Tony Phillips' double and Rickey Henderson's single.

Ballooning, anyone?

Latest rage in personal sports

The latest rage in personal sport is backpack ballooning.

You just strap a balloon to your person and sail through the air with the greatest of ease. Sound like a lot of hot air?

Well, it isn't. Popular Mechanic's Outdoors editor Fred Mackerdot actually flight-tested the new balloons not long ago and reports that there are a number of advantages to one-man ballooning.

First of all, the price of new balloons is one third that of the ordinary hot air variety which hoist two or more people into the air. With a conventional balloon, you need a trailer, van or truck to transport it. The one-person balloons can be hauled in the trunk of a car.

And they do work. With one model being imported from Europe, the Cloudhopper, you simply strap a 100-pound, 10-gallon propane tank and burner on your back, and—with the help of some friends—inflate the balloon by operating the burner. As soon as the bag fills with 21,000 cubic feet or so of hot air, you're up up and away. Altitude is regulated by pulling a lever with your left hand to operate the burner. The longer you leave the burner on, the higher you go.

While going up is no problem, coming down can get a little bit tricker. After flying the new balloons, Mackerodt advises that before heading off into the blue on your own, the novice balloonist should stay tethered to the ground for a while to practice landings.

Look who's in first! Hebner leads Cubs over Cards

By BEN WALKER
AP Sports Writer

When the Chicago Cubs signed free agent Richie Hebner in January, they were looking for someone who could fill in at third base, first base and the outfield, and also help bring a winning attitude to the clubhouse.

What they got was all of that, plus someone who could hit game-winning home runs off ex-Yankees.

Hebner, now 36 years old and with his sixth major league team, lashed a solo homer in the top of the ninth inning Tuesday night off Bruce Sutter to propel the Cubs past the slumping St. Louis Cardinals 3-2.

The blast, Hebner's first of the season, put Chicago in first place in the National League East, a half game ahead of Philadelphia and Montreal, which lost their seventh straight game to fall into last place.

"We're like any other team in the NL East," Hebner said. "We've got to get consistent pitching. If we get consistent pitching, we'll score a ton of runs. In this division, if you play .500 ball by Labor Day, you've got a chance."

Chicago General Manager Dallas Green, in St. Louis to watch his team, was pleased.

"When we looked at our situation, we didn't have anyone in our organization that we thought could take over the job should (third baseman) Ron Cey break down," said Green, explaining why the Cubs signed Hebner. "I know he's a winner."

In other NL games, Pittsburgh held off Philadelphia 3-2, Atlanta downed Cincinnati 4-2, San Diego stopped San Francisco 6-1, Los Angeles beat Houston 5-3, and New York at Montreal was rained out.

"I hit it good, but it's a big ballpark," Hebner said of his game-winning homer. "When he (Sutter) gets the ball up, he's hittable."

Sutter, 0-1, entered the game to start the eighth with a 2-1 lead, but the Cubs tied it when Ryne Sandberg led off with a double, took third on a single by Gary Matthews and scored on Leon Durham's single.

Winner Tim Stoddard, 2-0, went two innings. Lee Smith pitched the ninth for his fourth save.

"It was a good win for us; there's no question about that," gleamed Chicago Manager Jim Frey.

"We just can't get any runs," moaned St. Louis skipper Whitey Herzog.

Pirates 3, Phillies 2

Kent Tekulve pitched out of a ninth-inning jam to preserve Pittsburgh's victory in Philadelphia.

Tekulve entered the game with a 3-1 lead in the ninth after the Phillies had loaded the bases against Don Robinson on singles by Ivan DeJesus and Greg Gross and a walk to pinch hitter Len Matuszek.

Mike Schmidt was the first batter to face Tekulve, and the submarining reliever induced the Philadelphia slugger to bounce into a fielder's choice at second as a run scored. Tekulve then retired his first batter of the season, getting Von Hayes to ground out.

Ben Hebner's sacrifice fly in the [illegible] gave Atlanta a [illegible] Braves' victory.

Loser Tom Hume, 0-3, the first of three Cincinnati pitchers in the seventh, gave up Horner's one-out sacrifice fly.

Winner Len Barker, 2-2, went seven innings and Steve Bedrosian went the last two for his third save.

Padres 6, Giants 1

Garry Templeton capped a six-run first inning with a long drive that bounced off the outstretched glove of San Francisco right fielder Jack Clark for a three-run homer.

San Diego went to work quickly against Mike Krukow, 1-3, as Alan Wiggins led off with a walk, Tony Gwynn doubled and Graig Nettles walked to load the bases with none out.

Steve Garvey drove in the first run with a groundout, Terry Kennedy's single made it 2-0 and Kevin McReynolds hit into a fielder's choice for a third run.

Then Templeton, playing in his 1,093th major league game, drilled a shot to right that Clark jumped for and touched above the eight-foot fence but could not hold.

It was the first home run of the season for Templeton, who added two singles to raise his average to .381. Gwynn added two singles to increase his major league-leading average to .462.

Ed Whitson, 2-1, went 7 2-3 innings for the victory in San Diego.

Dodgers 5, Astros 3

Pedro Guerrero, who came into the game hitting just .164, walked and scored in the first inning, smacked a two-run triple in the fourth and later doubled.

Steve Sax, Bill Russell and Steve Yeager also had two hits apiece for Los Angeles, which had 12 hits off four Houston pitchers.

Dodger starter Alejandro Pena, 3-1, got the victory with two innings of relief from Tom Niedenfuer, who got his third save. Mike Madden, 0-1, took the loss.

Reagan deficit-reduction plan attacked

WASHINGTON (AP) — The $144 billion "Rose Garden" deficit-reduction plan worked out by President Reagan and Republican congressional leaders is facing attacks from senators in both parties as too timid to make a meaningful reduction in red ink.

The proposal would give Reagan less than he wants for defense but permit more domestic spending than he recommended.

"This just confides how weak we are, how indecisive we are" and shows "a weakness in political courage," Sen. William Armstrong, R-Colo., said Tuesday as the Senate began debating the legislation.

"This is not a perfect deal, but it is a good deal," said Republican Leader Howard Baker. "After the weeks of negotiations and the compromises made, I am convinced that this is the best deal we can get."

The plan was worked out by Republicans after attempts by the White House to reach a bipartisan agreement fell apart. The GOP version was announced with fanfare by Reagan in the White House Rose Garden March 15.

It calls for $47 billion in tax increases through Sept, 30, 1987, which the Senate already has approved, and a slowing of the growth in spending for defense and discretionary domestic programs. It would not affect Social Security, welfare and other entitlements — benefits on which total spending is not limited by Congress each year.

The Congressional Budget Office estimates that if the plan is approved, the federal deficit will drop about $10 billion next year, to nearly $181 billion, but will grow again in 1986 and 1987. During the three-year period, the CBO says, the deficits will total $570 billion — even with the plan.

"Deficits are going up — not down — and that is the worst signal we could send" to the American people and to those who influence interest rates, said Sen. Lawton Chiles of Florida, senior Democrat on the Senate Budget Committee. He called for a bigger deficit-reduction plan.

"We should do more and we will," said Sen. Pete Domenici, R-N.M., chairman of the Budget Committee. "But let us not be fooled into waiting for a perfect package."

The GOP proposal would allow defense spending to rise by 7.2 percent plus inflation over the next three years. That would mean about $56.8 billion less in spending authority than Reagan recommended, but still permit more than $1 trillion for defense during that period.

It would result in a $37.4 billion cut in other domestic programs. Spending in 1985 would be limited to this year's level; it would be allowed to increase at the rate of inflation in 1986 and 1987.

The entire GOP package would fit into the target budget recommended by the Senate Budget Committee.

The House has approved a target budget that would produce a deficit reduction totaling $182 billion over three years. The House also has approved its version of a tax increase, totaling $49 billion.

The tax plans approved by the two houses are quite similar. Neither would tinker with Reagan's individual tax cuts, which were enacted in 1981. The burden of either tax plan would fall chiefly on businesses and investors.

Workers work for no strike

WASHINGTON (AP) — The president of the United Mine Workers says he will fight any demand for wage givebacks to the soft coal industry, while management's top bargainer says his chief aim is "to restore competitiveness" to unionized companies.

With those opening salvos, UMW President Richard Trumka and chief industry negotiator Bobby R. Brown embarked with fellow negotiators on bargaining aimed at achieving a strike-free settlement by the end of September.

The kickoff of coal industry bargaining was one of two major collective bargaining events Tuesday as representatives of labor and management in the U.S. Postal Service likewise commenced talks on a new pact.

Tough talk by Trumka and his counterparts who head the postal unions signal tense negotiations in two industries with separate sets of problems.

Both the U.S. Postal Service and the management of unionized coal companies face rapidly increasing competition, but the Postal Service turned a $616 million profit in fiscal 1983, whereas slackened demand for coal has idled many mines and forced the layoffs of some 50,000 of the UMW's 160,000 members.

Trumka said the UMW "will not engage in concessionary bargaining" on a new contract with the soft coal industry.

"The UMWA will not accept any backward steps in contract negotiations .... No rational arguments have been put forth that justify concessionary demands upon the union," he added.

The last time the two parties bargained in 1981, the UMW struck the industry for more than seven weeks before accepting a pact which provided miners wage and other economic gains averaging 37.5 percent over the three-year life of the contract.

Texas Instruments Inc. employee Gloria Lawson, a member of the Tag Stompers quality circle team, summerizes part of the team's findings to TI management during the quality circle management presentation Tuesday. TI hopes to take its concept of quality circles into the Permian Basin business community in an effort to help the two cities work better together.

Who says nobody's perfect

"Nobody's perfect," is a phrase that doesn't apply in TI quality circles, where perfection is no only sought, but awarded.

As part of Texas Instruments Inc.'s renewed committment to quality, each quarter the company's military products division of the semiconductor group in Midland recognizes one special employee who has displayed quality and excellence in his or her work with zero defects.

The presentation of the award is part of "Quality Emphasis Day" at the plant located on Interstate 20, mid-way between Midland and Odessa.

Called the Willoughby Award for excellence, it is named in honor of Will Willoughby, a "ledgend in quality" at TI. The award is given to an employee who has displayed excellence in his or her work.

This quarter's award went to Calvin Daniels. For Daniels a bonder at TI, the third time was a charm. As one who strives "to be the best" at his job, Daniels was also nominated for the two previous awards — which means he has had, among other qualities, zero defects in his work since the beginning of the third quarter 1983.

Being perfect with zero defects takes team work according to Daniels.

"Everybody works together and they understand me and my determination to do the job right. Most of the credit goes to them without them, I couldn't do the job as well as I do," said the Odessa native.

TI problem-solving concept could help other institutions, businesses

By JULIE FAUBEL
Business-Oil Writer

Since 1960 Texas Instruments Inc.'s military products division of the semiconductor group in Midland, has made good use of a problem solving technique which has dramatically improved the quality of the company's productivity. TI believes the program can be utilized by a number of Permian Basin institutions.

According to James F. Watson, vice president of the semiconductor group, the problem solving concept can be effectively utilized by banks, newspapers, churches, schools and other businesses. And TI proposes to expose this concept to those who are receptive.

"We want to bring this concept to the rest of the community and businesses in the area because quality circles, will work in any business or office," he said.

Watson has made a proposal to the Midland and Odessa Chambers of Commerce to bring them into TI and let them observe the quality circles at work.

"We think there are many, many benefits to be derived for the two communities from utilizing quality control circles and it will help us accomplish our goals as well."

TI's goals include bringing more high tech companies into the area. And the only way to accomplish this, Watson said, is for the two communities to work together to attract new industry. For this reason Watson has been instrumental behind the scenes to bring the two cities together.

"One of the problems we have here at TI in Midland-Odessa is that we are a different type of a business. We are a high tech electronics company; we're not in the oil business and our people suffer a little bit because everything around them is oil."

Quality improvement programs began at TI as early as 1960, he said, and over the years the program has evolved into what is now called "People and Asset Effectiveness," or P&AE. Simply stated, P&AE is making people and equipment and facilities more productive.

In Midland TI uses quality circles to involve employees and management in identifying and solving problems within the operation. Each quarter, one day is set aside as "Quality Emphasis Day." For first quarter 1984, Quality Emphasis Day was observed Tuesday and activities included a quality circle management presentation and the quarterly presentation of the coveted Willoughby Award for Excellence.

At the military products division, one of 37 plants in 17 countries, the program has become a way of working, according to Watson.

"Quality is more than just what you think about it, it's everything. Quality is delivering on time, being to work on time, doing your job right the first time. It's really a part of our jobs."

The quality circle management presentation consists of a team of about 10 employees presenting to management their ideas for solving a specific problem within the company or within their department.

The formal presentation lasts between 15-20 minutes and involves each member of the team. However, a lot of time has been spent getting ready for the short presentation. The group spent three months researching and determining a solution to their problem.

The first order of business is to establish the ground rules. From there the group holds a brain storming session to determine the most pressing problem. Once the problem is identified, data is collected and converted to a pareto chart showing the problem at a glance.

Then, using the cause and affect process to locate the problem, the group works on a solution.

The latest quality circle management presentation was made by the Tag Stompers, whose goal is to "stomp out rejects."

According to team member Ann Keeling, the group's problem was to reduce excessive visual and mechanical rejects at quality assurance lot acceptance, the fianl check point before products are shipped to customers.

The group determined that a lack of training was the cause and recommended that engineering staff conduct ongoing weekly training sessions to teach employees proper procedures.

To support their findings the group told management that the rate of rejection had dropped significantly since the problem had been identified. In past months, the rejection rate had gone from 60 percent in October to more than 80 percent in December. In January, after the problem had been identified, the rejection rate fell below 6 percent.

As a result of the group's efforts and with the recommended training implemented, the group estimated total savings would amount to more than $19,000.

Watson praised TI employees for their work and for how well they presented their ideas to management.

"It's exciting to see and hear how well they do," Watson said.

Ms. Keeling, who works in the special products area, likes the idea of quality circles. "Two heads or 10 are always better than one. What one thinks of the other people might not have considered. It's easier for a group to solve a problem than for one person."

Keeling and other team members agreed that it's a valuable learning experience for TI employees to be involved and communicating with all levels of management.

One reason TI's quality program works well in the Permian Basin, Watson said, is because of West Texas people.

"We are blessed with people you won't find in a big city. They're more dedicated and down to earth. They believe in the work ethic and they're not self-centered."

Hughes Tool loses $14.6 million

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston-based Hughes Tool Co. experienced a net loss of $14.6 million during the first quarter of 1984, compared to net profits of $1.4 million during the same period in 1983, the company announced Monday.

Hughes, a manufacturer of oil field drilling equipment, reported net sales of $228.6 million for the first three months of 1984, a drop of 7 percent from the net sales of $310.9 million during the first quarter of 1983.

Loss per share for the period ending March 31, 1984 was 26 cents, compared to per share earnings of 2 cents for first quarter 1983, according to a statement released by the company.

The company's operating income for first quarter 1984 was $3.5 million, the firm reported.

James R. Lesch, Hughes Tool chairman, attributed the losses to apathy toward drilling by the oil industry.

"Although U.S. drilling activity in the first quarter showed a modest increase compared to a year ago, most of this increase was offset by declines in overseas drilling activity," Leasch said.

Company officials said the average number of active rigs in the United States for the first three months of 1984 was 2,462, up 7 percent from 2,299 in first quarter 1983.

Active rigs in Canada averaged 312 for first quarter 1984, rising 33 percent from an average 234 during the same period of 1983, Hughes Tool reported.

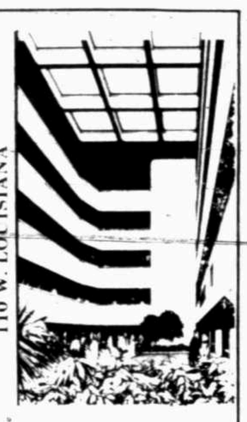

In other non-communist countries, active rigs during first quarter 1984 dropped 12 percent from the first three months of 1983.

TRW takes on seat belt business

CLEVELAND — TRW Inc. and The Firestone Tire & Rubber Co. announced that they have reached agreement for TRW to acquire Firestone's passenger estraint business. The transaction is subject to negotiation of definitive agreements and receipt of regulatory and company approvals.

"This acquisition is a logical companion to TRW's passenger restraint businss in Europe," said Charles L. Miller, vice president and general manager, TRW General Components Group. "Currently, TRW supplies passenger restraint systems in Europe from manufacturing facilities in West Germany, Austria, France, and Spain. The acquisition provides TRW its first seat belt operations in the United States and in Mexico. The acquisition is consistent with TRW's long-range program of being the low-cost producer to worldwide customers."

OIL & GAS REPORT

EXPLORATION HIGHLIGHTS

Fusselman wildcat seeks multipay structure

By JOHN PAUL PITTS
Business-Oil Editor

AA Energy Corp., Dallas and Midland, is drilling at 6060 ft. on a 10,700 ft. Fusselman exploratory well in Howard County.

AA Energy, a subsidary of American Airlines, feels it is on trend with activity in western Glasscock and Howard counties and is looking for a smaller structure similar to the Moore(Deep) field, six miles to the southeast. The Moore field is a multipay field, producing from the San Andres, Wolfcamp, and Fusselman. The well is also l 1/2 miles from the Spraberry trend, but no Spraberry is expected to show up in the well. Exxon is a 50 percent partner in the well, which is the No. 1 McNew, located 1900 ft. from the south line and 1980 ft. from the west line of Section 28, Block 34, T-1-N, T&P survey.

The operator says the wildcat location was predicated on seismic and sub-surface work, but declined to say what size structure was involved in the prospector.

Wildcat completed for 2.1 Mmcfd in Runnels

Seago Oil Inc. has completed a 5338 ft. wildcat in Runnels County for 2.1 Mmcfd. The well is the No.l Green, located 467 ft. from the south line and 3400 ft. from the west line of Section 25, H&GN survey, six miles west of Ballinger. The well was plugged back to 4800 ft. and completed in perforations between 4715-4719 ft. Formation tops were established as Palo Pinto 3765; Goen 4255; Gardner 4420; Odom Lime 4715.

HNG announces significant East Texas discovery

HNG Fossil Fuels Co., a subsidary of HNG Oil Co., Midland, has announced the completion of a significant gas discovery in East Harris County in East Texas. The No.1 Steve Cochran, flowed 3.13 Mmcfd and 75 bbls condensate on a 9/64 in. choke with a tubing pressure of 7733 psi. Calculated absolute open flow for the well was 42 Mmcfd. It is producing from the Yegua formation.

HNG Fossil Fuels Co. is operator of the well and owns a 38.8 percent interest in the well and approximately 7000 acres in the area. Drilling partners are: Prudential Drilling and Reynolds Metals. Houston Pipe Line Co., a sister company, will purchase the gas.

Firm announces significant oil, gas discoveries

American National Petroleum Co. of which Coquina Oil Corp., Midland, is a wholly owned subsidary has announced completion of Never a doubt No.l, a wildcat oil discovery in Scurry County. The well was completed in the Strawn and flowed 187 bopd of 45 degree API oil and 125 Mcfd gas from perforations at 7310-7322 ft. on a 10/64 choke. ANPC and its partners own a 33.6 interest in the well and an additional 1100 acres in the area.

The same firm also reports a significant discovery and confirmations in Eddy County, New Mexico. Its Stonewall State No.6 was drilled to 4900 ft. and completed in the Delaware sand. It flowed 150 bopd of 43 degree API crude and 250 Mcfd gas on a 20/64 in. choke, from perforations at 3350-3500 ft. Location is:1650 ft. from south line, 1990 ft. from west line of Section 30,TS 20-5, Range 28 East.

In the same section, the Stonewall No.5 flowed 120 bopd of 41 degree API and 240 Mcfd gas on a half-inch choke from perforations at 3370-3576 ft. Location is 1650 ft. from south line and 1980 ft. from west line.

Stonewall No.4 flowed 105 bopd of 41 degree API and 110 Mcfd gas on a quarter inch choke from perforations at 2718-2727 ft. Location is 330 ft. from south line and 990 ft. from west line.

Coquina and ANPC own a 17.6 percent interest in the wells and an additional 1800 acres in offsetting leases. Coquina plans to drill three more wells on the discovery.

OIL & GAS DIGEST

Humble Gas applies for certificate

NEW ORLEANS — Humble Gas System, Inc., a new subsidiary of Exxon Corp., has applied to the Louisiana Commissioner of Conservation for a Certificate of Transportation to serve Louisiana industrial consumers with natural gas.

B.H. Roark, Humble Gas System president, said the company plans to purchase competitively priced supplies of natural gas from producers for resale to Louisiana industry. Gas purchase efforts will be focused in Louisiana, he added, but the company will meet the qualifications of a "hinshaw pipeline" which will permit purchases also from other states and offshore areas of the federal Outer Continental Shelf.

Named after the U.S. Senator who sponsored the Hinshaw provision to the Natural Gas Act, a Hinshaw pipeline is a intrastate facility which may purchase supplis from outside the state in which it operates if the gas is received by the pipeline and totally utilized within the state in which it operates. The Hinshaw provision permits quaifying pipelines to purchase out-of-state gas while remaining exempt from Natural Gas Act jurisdiction.

"In addition to producers in Louisiana and the OCS, those in Alabama, Arkansas, Mississippi, Oklahoma and Texas may provide gas supplies to Humble Gas System in order to serve, both long and short term, Louisiana's substantial industrial complex," Roark said. "Depending on opportunities, we may also purchase gas from producers in other states."

Texas refinery production up

AUSTIN — Railroad Commission Chairman Mack Wallace has announced that Texas refineries processes 1,566,981,414 barrels of crude oil and hydrocarbon blends during 1983. Last year they processed 1,534,992,906 barrels of these materials.

A total of 1,201,237,792 barrels of crude oil made up most of te input into the state's refineries last year. In 1982, a total of 1,170,722,045 barrels of crude oil were run.

Products manufactured in 1983 totaled 1,570,956,101 barrels, up from 1,547,042,720 barrels in 1982.

Maufacture of motor gasoline in 1983 totaled 680,428,594 barrels, compared to 565,100,7?8 barrels in 1982.

Texas refineries produced 118,246,950 barrels of home heating oil in 1983 — a decrease of 8,351,474 barrels from the 1982 volume.

At the end of 1983, there were 60 refineries operating in the state.

Proxy material mailed to shareholders

HOUSTON — ENSTAR Corp. has announced that it mailed its proxy materials to shareholders recently. The company had previously announced that it would strenuously oppose the attempt by dissident director Roy M. Huffington to alter ENSTAR's by-laws and take control of the company by means of a proxy fight.

In announcing these events, ENSTAR Chairman O. Charles Honig said: "There are two things to note here. First, the most important, marked progress has been made by ENSTAR on its commitment to find a buyer or buyers for the company or its assets. A number of companies have already reviewed detailed information on a confidential basis.

"Second, we are not opposing Huffington's nominees for the four open seats on the ENSTAR board. These are the same seats we previously offered him. We continue to believe, however, that it would be unwise to turn over absolute control of the company to a new board of directors controlled by Huffington since the current board is working to bring about a sale of the company."

Honig concluded, "if Huffington is so concerned about his fellow ENSTAR shareholders, why is he insisting on putting the company and its shareholders through this unnecessary proxy fight?"

U.S. drilling permits issued climbs

DENVER — A total of 1,879 permits to drill wells for oil or gas were issued in the United States during the week ended April 6, Petrolum Information Corp. reported.

The total is slightly higher than the 1,863 permirs issued the previous week — an increase of 0.8 percent. The total is slightly below the 1,898 permits issued during the same week a year ago. Permits to drill are a measure of the drilling intentions of the nation's oil operators.

On a regional basis, the major increase in permits issued came in the Appalachian Basin, where permits jumped from 206 a week ago to 405. Also showing a gain was the southern Louisiana and Texas gulf coast area, where permits increased from 215 a week ago to 243.

Among individual states, California showed a sharp decline in permits issued — from 100 to 36. Permits issued in Ohio jumped from five a week ago to 232.

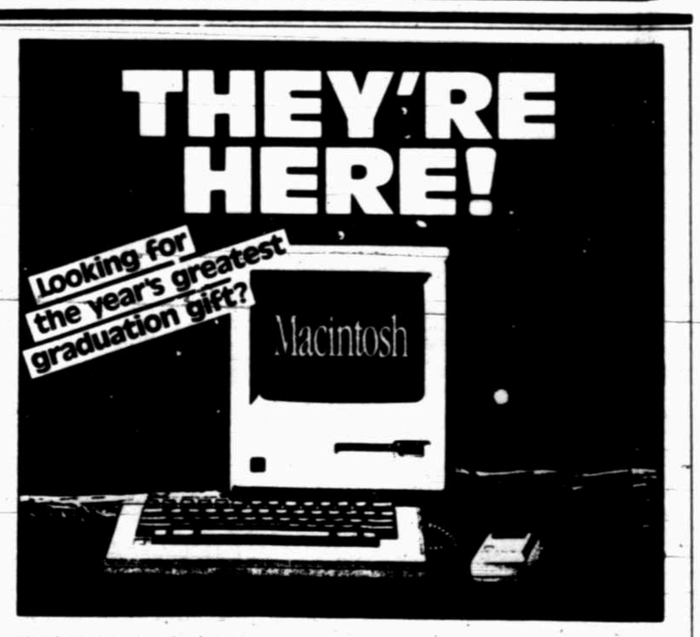

Other state totals for permits issued were: Texas, 612; Oklahoma, 191; Kansas and Kentucky, both 134; Louisiana, 122; Illinois and West Virginia, both 60.

THE BETTER HALF

"Anything to liven up a boring Wednesday!"

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Thursday, April 26, 1984

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Artist and naturalist John J. Audubon was born on this date, as were artist Ferdinand Delacroix, playwright-author Anita Loos and MCA founder Jules Stein. Also sharing your birthday: Carol Burnett, baseball great Sal Maglie, author Bernard Malamud, football's John Ralston and Detroit Tigers pitcher Virgil Trucks. You get the job you want and feel great! Deal with any financial problems immediately. A wonderful new love appears this summer. Travel aids both romance and business. Strike a better balance between work and play. Taking a breather now and then will increase your effectiveness on the job. New alliances boost profits.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Set your own pace. Seek out specialized knowledge in libraries and museums. Family members may be more demanding than usual. To drum up new business, make better use of your contacts.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Pick your colleagues' brains for helpful information before making presentations. You cannot rely on verbal promises of support. Self-improvement activities improve your image and self-confidence.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Visits to secondhand stores could yield wonderful treasures. Greater self-discipline will solve a financial problem. You begin to feel more confident of someone you care for. Go slow.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Continued restraint is necessary to reduce bills. Influential person could be unpredictable. You may prefer to spend the evening on your own, reading or watching TV. Call a good friend.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): The business scene is lively. Avoid speculative ventures. Turn to higher-ups if in need of expert advice. Adjustments must be made to continue a longtime relationship. Admit your faults.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A creative or speculative project brings good luck. Excellent timing is needed to nail down financial deals. Try not to overreact to a family incident. Patience pays big dividends.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A "lost" cause can be saved if you really care. Find a quiet place to do detail work. Romantic fireworks could be a plus if you play your cards right.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You work best when under a deadline. Stop trying to burn the candle at both ends. You will do yourself and loved ones a favor by developing a regular work schedule.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Good luck is yours when you decide to display your creative talents. Get out more. You need the stimulation that comes from being with other people. Throw a small dinner party.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You enjoy travel but need to arrange things so that it does not wear you out. A short business trip could lead to new romance. Take steps to guard your valuables.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Help someone who is depressed if you can, but refuse to be dragged down too. Exercise and better eating habits could add years to your life. Consult experts before signing an agreement.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Follow up on a lead you get from an old friend. A timely investment could make you rich. A romance is not over unless you want it to be. Learn to compromise.

NBC movie raises anew news issues

NEW YORK (AP) — The rebroadcast of NBC's Emmy-winning movie, "Special Bulletin," on Sunday night will likely reawaken concerns about responsible and tasteful news coverage — questions that television news organizations should be asking all the time.

In recent months, there's been live TV coverage of the barroom rape trial on Cable News Network and graphic footage on ABC, CBS and NBC of the "Twilight Zone" movie deaths. Last month, a Death Row inmate in Texas wanted his execution shown live on TV.

Television's immediacy and visual impact make it the most powerful news medium, and with that comes a need for greater vigilance in assuring that coverage of these events are motivated by sound journalism and not a desire to titillate.

Don Ohlmeyer, executive producer of "Special Bulletin," said one way to do this might be to exclude news shows from the network ratings race. At least, then, the suspicion of commercial interests would not be as strong.

"Special Bulletin," which won four Emmys last year, including awards for best TV movie and best writing, is about a fictitious network news operation covering a life-and-death news story live.

The movie's perspective is that of the network anchors and correspondents as they describe and report, on and off-camera, how anti-nuclear protesters, armed with a nuclear device, are threatening to blow up Charleston, S.C., unless warheads stored in the area are destroyed.

Ohlmeyer said the movie made strong statements about "some of the obscenities of network news. For example: Does exploiting these stories on TV end up trivializing them?"

The ultimate question facing TV news is whether its reporting, particularly live coverage, is the underlying motivation for the original protest, demonstration or event. "The whole reason the protesters took the measures they did was to get this kind of TV coverage," Ohlmeyer said.

Ohlmeyer, former executive producer of NBC Sports, said he was fascinated by the use and misuse of live TV. "Like many people, I sat mesmerized watching the barroom rape trial on CNN," he said. "It was fascinating TV, yet I could also make a case for restricting the cameras for right-to-privacy reasons.

"These are not black-and-white issues. TV is a young medium which is constantly grappling with its own power."

In fact, TV coverage of the Fall River, Mass., rape trial produced divided reaction.

Opening lead: Two of ♣.

When you first learn the art of finessing, you tend to take every finesse in sight. After you master it, you look for ways to avoid unnecessary finesses.

North's three diamonds was a transfer to hearts, and four diamonds was a cue bid. South decided that, if North could show interest in slam, his hand was worth six hearts because of its fine fit and controls, despite the fact that, in terms of point count, it was a minimum two no trump opener.

West led a low club and, when dummy came down, it seemed that declarer would need a winning diamond finesse to land his slam. However, he soon showed that, with correct technique, the diamond position was immaterial to the success of the contract.

Declarer won the club lead in hand, drew two rounds of trumps ending on the table, then successfully finessed the queen of spades. With the king of spades marked in the East hand, declarer could now claim his contract.

He cashed the king of clubs and ruffed a club in dummy. He returned to his hand with the ace of spades and ruffed his last club. Now he led the jack of spades from the board and, when East covered with the king, declarer discarded a diamond instead of ruffing.

East was saddled with the lead and a choice of losing options. A diamond return would be into dummy's ace queen, and a spade return would allow declarer to sluff his remaining diamond while ruffing on the table. No matter what East did, the slam was assured.

Larry Albert, the president of R.L. Albert & Sons, says he doesn't believe there's anything wrong with the concept of a thumb-size chocolate skull that oozes blood-like strawberry creme when pinched. Skull Crushers, the candy Albert is importing from Scotland, hits the New York metropolitan area this week.

Crushing Skulls makes a very sweet treat

GREENWICH, Conn. (AP) — The importer of Skull Crushers was explaining the method European kids have developed for eating the macabre candy his company is introducing to the New York metropolitan area this week.

"They squeeze them on the sides so the blood comes squirting through the eyes," Larry Albert said, quite seriously.

Albert said he doesn't believe there's anything wrong with the concept of a thumb-size white chocolate skull that oozes a blood-like strawberry cream through the mouth and eyes when pinched.

The candies, which cost a nickel apiece, will be sold starting this week in New York City, parts of New Jersey and southern Connecticut.

If they prove popular, Albert said, he'll try to sell them nationally.

R.L. Albert & Son Inc., a family business which has operated out of Greenwich for 60 years, is importing the grisly sweets from Alma Confectionary Ltd. of Kirkcaldy, Scotland. The inventor of the candy was not Dr. Frankenstein, but the Scottish company's sales director, Mario Maciocia, whom Albert described as "kind of a nut."

Albert said his company is also toying with the idea of bringing another novelty candy into the American market soon.

"A little squiggly worm — they look like fishing lures," he said, dangling the colored candy worm.

In America, he said, they would be known as Squirmy Worms.

"We don't think kids are actually going to go out and eat worms because they eat these," he said.

He admitted, however, that some people might question Skull Crushers.

"A lot of people have a lot of different ideas and ways of looking at things, and I understand that it's possible for people to look at it in a negative way," he said. "But I think it's much more fun and happy to look at in a positive way."

Albert said there have been "relatively few" complaints about Skull Crushers in Europe, where they have been available for about a year and a half. More than 50 million of the novelty sweets have been sold in Europe, Australia and Africa, he said.

Launch sites designated as landmarks

MERRITT ISLAND, Fla. (AP) — Eight abandoned launch sites at Cape Canaveral Air Force Station, the birthplace of America's space program, have been named national historic landmarks.

The Department of Interior's designation was announced Monday by U.S. Rep. Bill Nelson of Melbourne. The landmark status will require the U.S. Air Force to consult with a board of historians before changing the sites in any way.

After the rocket towers fell into disuse, they were first ignored. Then some were blasted with dynamite as hazards and others were sold for scrap metal. The rest are rusting away, and Nelson said he didn't know what plans the Air Force might have to prevent further decay.

The sites are launch complexes 5 and 6, where the two manned Mercury-Redstone flights began, complex 26, which is the Air Force Museum; and complex 13, where Atlas-Agenas launched deep space probes.

Also, complex 14, where manned Mercury-Atlas flights originated; complex 19, where manned Gemini flights were launched; complex 34, where Apollo-Saturn 1 and Apollo-Saturn 1B Earth-orbit test flights were launched; and the old Mercury mission control building.

In 1982, the Interior Department requested studies of whether the entire station should be made a landmark, Nelson said.

"As a result of these studies and working with the Air Force, the final decision was that specific launch pads would be made historic sites," he said.

"The reason that the whole thing wasn't designated a historic landmark is that once designated a historic landmark, it is a monumental effort to change it, and that just wouldn't do in an operational missile launch facility."

Among the sites sold for scrap were the towers at complex 19, where 20 men were placed into orbit; complex 14, where John Glenn started the first orbital flight by an American; and complex 34.

The remains of complex 26, where America's first satellite was launched into orbit, are in danger of rusting into oblivion. They are part of the Air Force Museum.

The last Apollo launch tower at Kennedy Space Center was saved from sale for scrap after a yearlong battle that resulted in its being dismantled and stored for preservation.

Mitchell Keith Olguin

Midlander on trial for cocaine delivery

By RICHARD ORR
Staff Writer

Accused Midland drug dealer Mitchell Keith Olguin went on trial Tuesday in a drug case involving the husband of former Midland school teacher Rosie Luna, who was sentenced to 10 years in prison last week following her plea of guilty to a delivery of heroin charge.

Olguin, 23, is charged with delivering two grams of cocaine to Heradio Luna Jr., who was Ms. Luna's husband at the time, on the parking lot of a convenience store at the corner of Garfield and Front streets last Oct. 27.

Luna bought the cocaine with $260 supplied by a Department of Public Safety narcotics agent who testified that he drove Luna to the store and observed the transaction take place. Luna now is serving an eight-year prison sentence after pleading guilty to delivering the cocaine to the agent.

Ms. Luna, who taught fourth grade at Jane Long Elementary School, was sentenced April 18 for selling two grams of heroin to the same agent last fall. She divorced Luna following the couple's Jan. 6 arrest. They had been married 10 years and have two children.

In testimony at Olguin's trial Tuesday, the agent told the three-man, nine-woman jury that he picked up Luna at the couple's mobile home about 3:30 p.m. and drove to the store, where Luna placed a call from an outside pay phone.

About 4 p.m., Olguin — accompanied by a 16-year-old girl — allegedly pulled up in a brown Buick and parked beside the agent's car. The agent said Olguin's car was about 10 feet away and that the transaction took place as Olguin and Luna stood between the two vehicles. The teenage girl was later placed on a year's probation.

A second DPS drug agent assigned to witness the deal "and provide security" buttressed the first agent's testimony. He said he parked across the street and observed through binoculars as Olguin and Luna "exchanged something between the two of them" on the parking lot.

The "something," according to testimony by DPS chemist Dr. Burgess Cooke, was about two grams of 19-percent pure cocaine.

Olguin was indicted by a Midland County grand jury in January. He was freed on $100,000 bond posted by his attorney, former Ector County District Attorney John Green.

The state, represented by Assistant District Attorneys Janet Copeland and David Joers, rested its case at 6 p.m. The trial is expected to conclude today in Judge Pat M. Baskin's courtroom.

Midland jury fails to award damages in business dispute

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

A federal jury in Midland has awarded no damages in a civil suit brought against Thomas L. Owens, a former employee-consultant for Richard E. Witte, president of Witte Energy Management of Midland.

Witte had claimed Owens, of Hobbs, N.M., violated a non-competition and secrecy agreement between the two on March 18, 1982. Owens was a Witte consultant from May 1981 until November 1982, when he resigned and entered another infra-red scanning service business.

"The judge (U.S. District Judge Lucius D. Bunton) had already ruled before the jury did that we could compete," Owens said. "The judge ruled that there was no secrecy and that I did not steal anything." Bunton had determined that the Witte-Owens contract was invalid before the jury got the case, Owens said. The jury was not so informed, he said.

In its verdict, the jury held that the agreement "gave rise to a valid and enforceable contract" between Witte and Owens.

However, the jury found that the infra-red analysis of pumping unit bearings as performed by Witte was neither a trade secret nor confidential information.

Other companies already were using the infra-red technique, Owens said, and Witte had published a paper on the technique, which made the procedure public, Owens said.

Further, the jury said that neither party "tortiously interfered" with the business relations of each other.

No money damages were awarded to either party.

"My intentions were good on that day (March 18) and so were his," Owens said of Witte. "My intentions at the time were to build that business." Owens said he was to become a partner in Witte Energy Managment but never did.

Witte, who could not be reached for comment early this morning, had brought the suit against Owens and Pumping Units Service Inc. (PUSI) of Hobbs, N.M., in April 1983. Owens operates Infra Red Enterprises (IRE), a division of PUSI.

Council decides firm can pay price

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

Phillips Petroleum buried a pipeline across city property southeast of the city without asking permission and on Tuesday the City Council decided the company could pay the price.

During a regular meeting in City Hall Chambers, the council set the price for the pipeline, heard an update on the sewage waste disposal project, looked at a layout for runways at the new Air Park site, questioned practices of a state agency in approving day care centers and opted to let free enterprise into the waste disposal businesses in the residential areas.

Deputy City Manager Fred Poe noted that Phillips had put the pipeline across the city land where the sewage disposal site is being constructed, about 15 miles southeast of the city, without asking permission.

He had recommended the city charge $2 per rod per year for use of city land. But Councilman Tom Sloan, at his last meeting before his replacement takes the oath, disagreed.

"Instead of getting $2 a rod we should get $10," said Sloan.

"Yeah," said Councilman David Godfrey. "If it was my ranch and they did it, it'd cost them $20 a rod or they'd dig it up."

"We have to live with the oil companies from now on," said Poe.

"And they have to live with us," added Sloan.

Poe commented that the $2 charge was higher than normal and Councilman Steve Davidson didn't think it was a fair price. "It's a fair penalty," said Mayor G. Thane Akins.

But Sloan's motion to increase the charge to $10 a rod per year passed on a 4-2 vote with Akins and Councilman Jesse Hatfield dissenting.

A proposed layout of the north-south, east-west runways for a new Air Park on a site northeast of Midland revealed three oil wells in the way on one side. And to avoid numerous wells, the north-south runway was placed on land not belonging to the city.

The city acquired this site of more than 2,400 acres in a trade in which JDS Development received 96 acres of city land. The council indicated it would have to buy or trade land to get the configuration needed for the runways.

A change order on construction of the sewage disposal site also was approved. Utilities Director John Lowe said the $20 million project was still on budget. Poe added that the city would be getting "a substantial amount of credit coming to us" on one part of the project. Lowe also mentioned a $400,000 savings on construction of the holding pond.

An agreement was amended with J. "Timber" Floyd, who owns part of the land on which the sewage disposal project is planned, in which the city will pay up to $550,000 for farming equipment. About three sections of land will be irrigated with the treated sewage water and farmed.

During a second reading for a specific use permit for a day nursery south of Oak Avenue and west of Main Street, Davidson questioned the licensing procedures of the Department of Human Resources. He was told the city must grant the specific use permit on the question of zoning before the DHR will inspect the facility to see if it meets state requirements. Davidson said he was wanting to require a fire marshal's inspection before granting a permit.

Sam Listi, city planner, said he had obtained a copy of DHR standards but hadn't had time to study them. "They don't go into the quality of the building until after a permit is given by the city," he said.

Deputy City Manager Fred Poe suggested the city open up some residential areas for trial runs by private waste disposal companies. He also recommended setting up a franchise system whereby the city receives money for allowing private companies to use the city streets. The council accepted both recommendations.

Basic burgers

At the newly opened Hamburger Place on Big Spring, customers find that the menu may be abbreviated, but so are the prices.

Fast-food place pushes no-frills burgers

By MARK LEWIS
Staff Writer

From its modest beginnings as a food item, the hamburger has long since evolved into a marketing concept.

An endless struggle for hamburger hegemony has led McDonald's and its fast-food competitors to spend millions of advertising dollars to persuade a skeptical public that all burgers are not created equal.

This frenzied competition for brand loyalty has led to a kind of fast-food arms race, as each company strives to build a bigger, better burger. But the price increases which followed these gastronomical advances have tempted some new fast-food entrepreneurs to introduce a revolutionary new concept: the generic burger.

"We're going back to basics," said Joe Brimus, manager of the newly opened Hamburger Place on Big Spring and Kansas. "This is the market everybody else left behind."

Open a little longer than a week, the Hamburger Place is already selling more than 2,000 burgers per day, all of them served in plain white wrappers. To help maintain its basic burger price of 39¢, the company spends no money stamping its name on napkins and cups. It doesn't even advertise.

"All we need is that sign out there," said Brimus. "Everybody in Midland knew we were here even before we opened."

The idea behind The Hamburger Place is that the fast-food industry has strayed from its roots as a purveyor of cheap, convenient food. By keeping volume high and expenses low, the theory goes, The Hamburger Place can sell basically the same food at lower prices than the competition.

"We're just trying to give people value," said Brimus.

The no-frills approach precludes the expanded menus that other fast-food emporiums have adopted. No chicken nuggets or breakfast specials here; the emphasis is on the traditional burgers, fries and sodas.

"I think we're a definate threat" to the competition, said Brimus. "They're goinng to have to do something."

Another Hamburger Place will be opening soon on Andrews Highway — not too far from McDonald's.

Midlanders can now dance in the streets

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

Midlanders may not be able to see the stripes as they drive down the road but they can kick up their heels and dance in the streets after the Midland City Council approved permits for two celebrations.

During a regular meeting in City Hall Chambers Tuesday, the council concentrated on street and building demolition projects.

The council approved buying new paint for striping the streets after Public Works Director Fred Baker assured them this is another type of paint. In the city's Don Quixote-like quest for the perfect paint that will stay visible on the streets, Baker said the new traffic engineer was amazed "at how fast it's getting covered up."

Councilman Steve Davidson recalled the city had striped Wadley using its new paint and a new striping machine, and the stripes already have disappeared. "It's not lasting at all. It's dangerous to drive down Wadley."

Once the city has completed the task of digging up Wadley to install a sanitary sewer line, the street will have reflective glass buttons put down. Baker said paint containing glass beads isn't lasting as long as other paint. "There are new specs (specifications) on this order," he added.

Midland Arts Assembly will be able to carry on its celebration May 19 in Loraine Street between Texas and Wall streets. The Parks and Recreation Department will continue to have its "Life Be In It Day" celebration June 2 on Colorado Street. Both groups received beer permits.

Hispanics to lobby against immigration bill

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas Hispanic organizations have invited House Majority Leader Jim Wright, D-Texas, to attend a hearing that will focus on opposition to the Simpson-Mazzoli immigration bill.

The April 29 hearing in Fort Worth will be conducted by Red. Ed Roybal, D-California, who has an alternative bill favored by many Hispanics, and will be highlighted by testimony from Texas Hispanic groups.

Wright has proposed an amendment that would allow undocumented workers to become citizens if they were in the U.S. before Jan. 1, 1984, and if they can read and write English.

Wright's efforts to compromise on immigration law, however, have been opposed by Texas Hispanic groups. Sponsors of the hearing say Wright has not answered their invitation.

The Simpson-Mazzoli bill is scheduled for a U.S. House vote in May. The Roybal bill, meanwhile, has not been heard by a congressional committee.

At a Capitol news conference Tuesday, the state's Hispanic organizations denounced the Simpson-Mazzoli bill, as well as Wright's proposed amendment.

"This (Simpson-Mazzoli) immigration bill is probably one of the worst pieces of legislation and one of the most dangerous to civil liberties and to the Hispanic community that has been proposed to Congress in recent years," said James Harrington, legal director of the Texas Civil Liberties Union.

He said Wright's compromise efforts were "a public relations ploy" that make it "a proverbial legislative Christmas tree with a present for everyone."

Harrington said the TCLU "finds the bill's proposed system of national identification cards particularly offensive and dangerous. The American Civil Liberties Union views national ID cards as a potentially serious control technique by the government, a mechanism that has historically been used by leaders to seize totalitarian control."

He said the system of employer sanctions "cannot but lead to discriminatory employment against Hispanics in the Southwest and elsewhere."

Basically, the Simpson-Mazzoli bill would provide penalties for employers who hire undocumented workers, would require a national identification card and would allow aliens to become legal citizens according to their length of stay in the U.S.

Rebecca Harrington, spokeswoman for the United Farm Workers (AFL-CIO) in Texas and Harrington's wife, is opposed to Roybal's bill, saying it "proposes stricter enforcement of existing fair labor laws.

"It has a legalization (amnesty) program for undocumented workers here prior to Jan. 1, 1982; established guidelines for the Immigration and Naturalization Service enforcement activities to prevent accidental deportation of legal residents; does not have guest worker provision and creates a national commission to recommend long-term solutions to immigration issues."

DEATHS

Sam Buchanan

BIG SPRING — Sam Buchanan, 91, of Luther, died Tuesday in a care center.

Services will be at 10 a.m. Thursday in Nalley, Pickle & Welch Funeral Home Rosewood Chapel in Big Spring. Burial will be in Mount Olive Memorial Park.

Buchanan was a retired farmer and rancher and had lived most of his life in the Luther community. He was a Baptist.

Joe Hill

Joe Hill, 76, died Monday at a local nursing home after a long illness.

Graveside services were to be at 2:30 p.m. today in Fairview Cemetery with Paul Walker, minister of the University Boulevard Church of Christ in Odessa, officiating, directed by Thomas Funeral Home.

Hill was born Oct. 21, 1907, in Brady. He married Molly Cornelius Nov. 21, 1925, in Brady. He was a longtime Brady resident and a member of the Bridge and 4th Street Church of Christ in Brady. He was a member of the Masonic Lodge No. 623, in Midland, and the Shriners.

Survivors include his wife of Midland; a daughter, Peggy Bloomer of Midland; a son, Billy J. Hill of Odessa; a brother, Dave Hill of Lake Texhoma; a sister, Lennie Mae Kilgore of Brady; six grandchildren and 10 great-grandchildren.

Lynn Fausett

Lynn Fausett of Midland died at her home Tuesday afternoon. Services are pending at Ellis Funeral Home.

Survivors include her husband, William Fausett; a daughter, Nicki Dancy of Midland; two sons, Randy Fausett and Lance Fausett, both of Midland; and a grandson, Jarrod Fausett of Midland.

Mary Rylee

Mary Rylee of Midland died in Galveston Tuesday night. Services are pending at Ellis Funeral Home.

Harris Eastham

Services for Harris G. Eastham, 81, of Midland will be at 11 a.m. Thursday in the First Presbyterian Church chapel with Dr. R. Mathew Lynn officiating. Burial will be in Fairview Cemetery, directed by Ellis Funeral Home.

Pallbearers will be Bob Martin, Bob Van Ness, Ray Mays, Ray Mize, Ed Hall and Dave Holster. Honorary pallbearers will be Jno. P. Butler, W.A. Yeager Sr., Charlie Palmer, Bill Collyns, Donald S. Johnson, James Burnett, John E. Turner, Luke Cathey and Oscar Pechaelk.

He died in his home Monday evening.

Eastham was born Jan. 8, 1903, in Huntsville. He attended New Mexico Military Institute in Roswell, N.M., Sam Houston State College in Huntsville and the University of Texas at Austin.

Eastham began his banking career in Groesbeck and later moved to San Antonio. In 1931 he began work with the Texas Railroad Commission in Conroe. He moved to Midland and then Pecos in 1937. He became an independent oil operator and returned to Midland in 1939.

In partnership with M.C. Ulmer and others, he was instrumental in developing several West Texas oil fields. He was also active in ranching in New Mexico and Texas. He married Clara Murchison of Athens. She died in 1969. He later married Byrta Rose of Eastland.

Eastham was a member of First Presbyterian Church, Suez Shrine and Masonic Lodge. He helped found Trinity Towers in 1969.

Survivors include his wife; a sister, Winifred Staples of Houston; two daughters, Elle Kerr of Midland and Sally Anne Rawlings of Atlanta, Ga.; five grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

Clovis Martin

Clovis Martin of Midland died in a Big Spring hospital Tuesday night. Services are pending at Ellis Funeral Home.

Mondale gets backing from Glenn supporters

FORT WORTH (AP) — Democratic presidential candidate Walter F. Mondale, who starts a Texas tour here tonight, has received the support of 12 Texans who previously supported Sen. John Glenn.

Mondale stops at Meacham Field, north of here tonight, and will be in San Antonio Thursday.

On Tuesday, Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, former Gov. Dolph Briscoe and 10 other Texans who supported Glenn, endorsed Mondale for his presidential bid.

"Walter Mondale understands how to adapt unchanging principles to changing circumstances," said a statement released by the group. "That's why we believe he is the best candidate to lead us into the future.

But former Lt. Gov. Ben Barnes, one of those listed in the statement, said his name should not have been released.

"Up until this time, I have not publicly endorsed anyone," said Barnes, a businssman based in Austin. "I am not going to endorse Mondale, but I had not given permission for them to use my name. I'm sure it's a legitimate mistake.

The statement was released by Dallas mortgage banker Jess Hay, who said he had understood Barnes agreed on the endorsement.

"As far as I was concerned, we had cleared it when I talked to him week before last," Hays said.

Hobby, Glenn's state campaign chairman said, "I think Vice President Mondale pretty well has the nomination and it's time to unite the party."

In other endorsements, the Dallas County Progressive Voters League reaffirmed its endorsement of U.S. Senate candidate Bob Krueger and accused U.S. Sen. Lloyd Doggett's campaign of distributing literature offensive to blacks.

The League's executive committee met Tuesday to review the group's endorsement after learning that Krueger, while a congressmen, introduced a bill that would have prevented the Justice Department from reviewing whether San Antonio had diluted minority voting strength by annexing 13 predominately white neighborhoods.

Krueger, whose district included northwest San Antonio, said he filed the legislation because the Justice Department "was abusing its review power in order to trigger opposition to the Voting Rights Act."

Jesse Jones, president of the predominately black political organization, said the revelation of the 1976 bill was to divide the black community.

He then produced a Doggett flyer that shows a picture of Doggett next to one of civil rights leader Martin Luther King Jr. as King was being arrested.

The caption reads: "They Fought FOR Your Voting Rights." Next to the pictures are photos of President Reagan and Krueger. The caption reads: "They Tried to Undercut Your Voting Rights."

Also Tuesday, U.S. Rep. Martin Frost, Texas chairman of the U.S. Sen. Gary Hart's campaign, said the May 5 Democratic precinct caucuses would be close.

Midland Texas Exes to host dinner with business dean

From Staff Reports

The Midland Texas Exes will host a dinner Sunday at Green Tree Country Club which will feature Dr. William H. Cunningham, dean of the business school at the University of Texas at Austin, as special guest speaker.

Dr. Cunningham, a marketing professor, is editor of The Journal of Marketing. He has published many articles and books on marketing management, market research, international business and strategic market planning, and serves on the economic advisory committee of the U.S. Commerce Department.

He is a recipient of the Distinguished Scholastic Contribution Award given by the College of Business Administration Foundation and he holds the Centennial Chair in Business Education Leadership. Dr. Cunningham currently serves on the Economics Advisory Committee of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce.

The dinner is from 6:30 to 9 p.m., and costs $17.50 per person. For reservations, call 683-3092.

Permian Civic Ballet to perform 'Spring Gala' at Lee High School

Performances of the Permian Civic Ballet's "Spring Gala" will be Friday at 8 p.m. and Saturday at 2 p.m. at Lee High School Auditorium.

Included on the "Spring Gala" program are "Rags and Things," a toe-tapping medley of dances set to ragtime music, and "The Dancing Princesses," performed by the corps de ballet augmented by guest dancers from Dallas.

Former Midlander Donna Ross of the Dallas Ballet is the guest artist. Miss Ross will perform the peasant pas de deux from "Giselle."

Miss Ross has studied under, among others, Georgia Goss Harston of Midland, David Howard, Melissa Hayden, Maggie Black, Natalie Krassovska, Nikita Talin and Kathleen Crofton.

She has attended American Dance Camp at Gulfport, Miss., Ballet Center of Buffalo, N.Y., Joffrey II, N.Y., and Stuttgart Ballet School, Stuttgart, Germany. She has also danced with the main company of Joffrey.

Tickets for both performances may be purchased at the door.

The "Spring Gala" is the third performance of the Permian Civic Ballet Association's '84 season. The season opened with the traditional "Nutcracker" and was followed in March by a guest performance of the Ballet El Paso.

PCB has more than 50 dancers. Besides the performances, which give the students an opportunity to perform with professional dancers, the Permian Civic Ballet Association hosts a summer workshop each year with professional teachers.

For more information on this weekend's performances call 686-0731.

Commissioners to meet Thursday

Midland County commissioners will convene at 1:30 p.m. Thursday to open bids for a new boiler for the Midland County Public Library, approve the auditor's annual report and discuss altering a contract with Brown's Energy Management.

In addition, the commissioners are to consider requests for use of the Midland County Exhibit Building and to consider a report on the state of the Road and Bridge Department from Albert Stewart, department superintendent.

The meeting will be in the Commissioners' Courtroom on the second floor of the Midland County Courthouse.

MISD sponsors IEP workshop

The Special Education Department of Midland Independent School District and several disability groups are sponsoring an IEP Parent Training Workshop from 7 to 9:30 p.m. Thursday at Bowie Elementary, 805 W. Elk.

Dayle Bebee, executive director of Advocacy Inc., will present the workshop, which will focus on preparing parents for participation in writing the Individual Education Plan for children in special education. The workshop is intended to reach all parents in special education.

'Sick' female prankster cost family '$4,000 plus grief'

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Police say a "sick" female prankster has cost several people thousands of dollars and mental anguish by calling residents and saying that a relative or close friend has just died.

"We had people all over the country in shock," said one of the latest victims, who had spread the fake story to others. "It cost the family $4,000 plus grief.

"If I ever talk to her again, I'd say, 'May the Lord have mercy on your soul because you're doing some very evil things.' "

Police said a woman has been calling each victim more than once, first to gather information and again to use those details to build the credibility of her death story.

In one case this past weekend, a frantic couple flew to California to search for a "dead" brother and a "critically ill" sister-in-law. They found them alive and bewildered by all the concern.

The caller had said she was the victim's sister-in-law from San Diego, that she was critically ill and that her husband had just died.

Jackson begins to mediate long-running labor dispute

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The Rev. Jesse Jackson said today he has begun to mediate a long-running labor dispute between the giant Campbell Soup Co. and a group of farmworkers.

As the Democratic presidential hopeful flew from Washington to San Antonio, he talked in the front cabin of his campaign's chartered turboprop with Campbell Soup executive Ray Page and the farmworkers' leader.

"Whenever you're able to get contending forces to a common table, you're making progress," Jackson said on arrival at 1 a.m. CST in San Antonio.

Another meeting was planned for later today here.

Jackson spent the night in a poor Hispanic section of San Antonio with the family of Hortense Cabrera. Despite his 1:30 a.m. arrival, he was met by a crowd and a mariachi band.

Jackson planned a three-day swing through Texas to organize supporters for May 5 caucuses in which 169 pledged delegates will be parceled out.

Jackson called his role in the labor dispute an example of the "action, not advocacy," which he says marks his style.

On April 14 in Cleveland, Jackson endorsed the efforts of the Farm Labor Organizing Committee of Toledo to bargain with Campbell's on behalf of 2,000 migrant workers in Ohio. He said Tuesday the group had been seeking for four years to meet with the company.

Council allows street dancing

Four structures which fit the city's code for being declared dilapidated were added to the growing list of buildings to be torn down. The council also accepted a bid for demolishing 36 other buildings that had been approved in this category.

Freddie Nelms told the council the project was a good thing but he wondered if they were including the abandoned structures around Washington Elementary School. Told that they were, Nelms commented, "We've been working on this several years and those houses are still sitting there."

"Did you expect them to be gone the first year?" asked Mayor G. Thane Akins.

"No, but the second year," said Nelms.

Remodeling of the fire station at 202 E. New Jersy was approved along with street paving and drainage in the area. Bids totaled $42,000, which fell below the $50,000 allocated by the council from its Community Development Block Grant funds.

Nelms questioned the council as to who was responsible for paving some streets near Cloverdale Road and was told the State Highway Department controls that right of way. The city has requested the state repair the drainage problems along Cloverdale, said Baker.

Lucas charged with murder of Anahuac teller in 1980

ANAHUAC, Texas (AP) — Condemned murderer Henry Lee Lucas, who claims he killed 360 people during years of coast-to-coast carnage, has been charged in the slaying of a bank teller four years ago after recreating the crime for authorities.

Lucas was charged Monday with the 1980 robbery and slaying of Betty Choate, a 41-year-old Mont Belvieu bank teller who was shot three times in the back during a holdup.

Lucas was taken to the branch of the Mainland Savings and Loan Association where Ms. Choate was killed June 11, 1980, and later led authorities on a tour of other potential crime sites, according to Fred Dodd, chief deputy of the Chambers County Sheriff's department.

"He's indicated that he may have done some more things in our county," said Dodd, who declined further comment.

Lucas, a 48-year-old drifter, already has been convicted of three Texas murders. He is charged with 17 other killings in six states. Justice of the Peace Larry Cryer arraigned Lucas on Monday, but set no bond.

Lucas has been sentenced to die by lethal injection for one murder, and was given terms of life and 75 years for the other two.

Fingerprint links man to victim in hangar

SHERMAN (AP) — A Dallas County Sheriff's Department investigator says pieces of aluminum tubing confiscated from Lester Leroy Bower's home contained a fingerprint of one of the men Bower is accused of killing.

Lt. James Cron, in the second day of testimony in Bower's capital murder trial, testified Tuesday that the fingerprint was "definitely" that of Jerry Mac Brown, who was shot to death Oct. 8, 1983, in a hangar northeast of Sherman.

Bower is charged with killing Brown, 52, a Sherman interior designer; Bob G. Tate, 51, a Denison building contractor; Philip Good, 29, a Grayson County sheriff's deputy; and Ronald Mayes, 39, a former Sherman police officer.

Prosecutors contend Boer is charged with killing Brown, 52, a Sherman interior designer; Bob G. Tate, 51, a Denison building contractor; Philip Good, 29, a Grayson County sheriff's deputy; and Ronald Mayes, 39, a former Sherman police officer.

Prosecutors contend Bower, a chemical salesman, shot the four men at an ultralight hangar at Tate's B&B Ranch and then made off with one of two aircraft at the hangar.

Also testifying Tuesday was Texas Ranger Weldon Lucas, who identified more than 30 items officers confiscated from Bower's Arlington home on Jan. 20.

The officers found ultralight parts, including ultralight wheels with the name "Tate" on them, and gun magazines, Lucas testified.

A week before his home was searched, Bower told FBI agents "that the only time he ever felt free was when piloting a fixed-wing glider," an agent testified.

"The word obsession is not explicit enough to explain how interested (Bower) was in finding an aircraft he could fly," said FBI agent William K. Teigen.

Teigen, who interviewed Bower at the Dallas FBI office Jan. 13, testified outside the jury's presence that Bower had declined to submit hair or fingerprint samples or take a polygraph examination.

State District Judge R.C. Vaughan refused to allow jurors to hear that part of Teigen's testimony.

Other prosecution witnesses have testified that Bower called Good one day before the four men were killed, charging the call to a company-issued credit card.

Tate's widow, Bobbie, testified Monday that she saw two ultralight aircrafts in a hangar at the Tates' ranch the day of the murders, and that when she returned to the hangar four hours later, only one remained.

Lawyer says jurors acted improperly in deliberations

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — Jurors acted improperly while deliberating the fate of a Texas prison inmate scheduled to die early Friday for killing a convenience store clerk in a 1979 robbery, says an attorney trying to spare the condemned man's life.

Attorney Ron Guyer filed an appeal with the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans on Tuesday shortly after U.S. District Judge H.F. Garcia of San Antonio, without explanation, turned down a request for a stay of execution for Jesse de la Rosa.

Guyer said he hoped the three-judge panel would grant a reprieve today.

"I think these may be the judges to do it (grant a reprieve)," Guyer said.

The appeal outlines a "multitude of errors," Guyer said, but the "most glaring" concerned jury misconduct during the punishment phase of de la Rosa's 1981 trial.

"While they were trying to decide whether the sentence should be death or life in prison, one juror — a 73-year-old black minister — related a story. He said he had a stepfather who had murdered, been released and then murdered again. He said 'I think it's easier the second time,'" Guyer said.

"Eight jurors acknowledged hearing the story. One said it occurred after the verdict was reached, but the other seven disagreed," he said.

De la Rosa, 23 and the father of a 5-year-old boy, was convicted in the Aug. 22, 1979, slaying of Masaoud Ghazali, a clerk at a 7-11 convenience store in San Antonio.

State District Judge Roy Barrera Jr. last month set de la Rosa's first execution date.

The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals in Austin voted 9-0 on Monday against blocking Friday's execution. The U.S. Supreme Court has not reviewed his case.

Ghazali, a former captain in the Iranian Air Force, was shot twice in the head during a robbery.

His body was then placed into a cooler at the store, according to police. The robbery netted only one six-pack of beer because the cash register could not be opened.

Attorneys begin defense of inmate in murder trial

EDINBURG (AP) — Defense attorneys had the chance this morning to begin presenting Eroy Brown's side of what happened when the former inmate allegedly shot and drowned two prison officials.

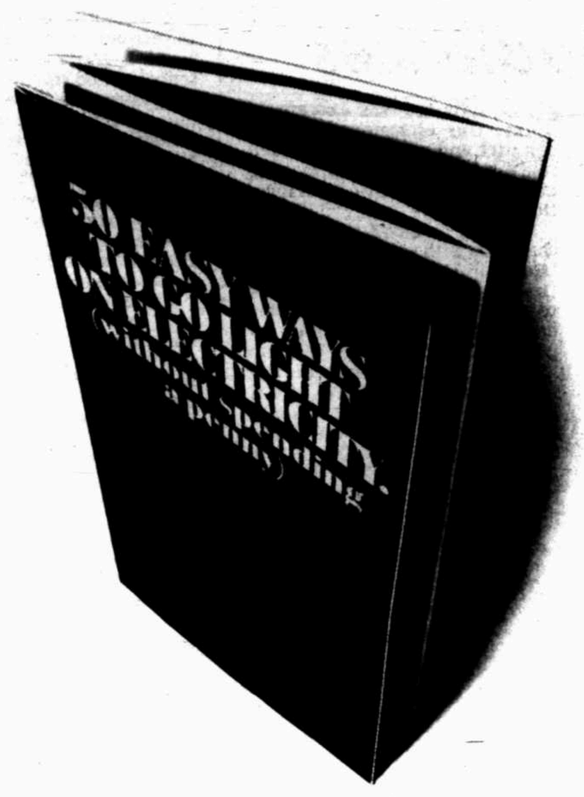

Brown, 33, is being tried for murder in connection with the shooting of Ellis Unit prison farm manager Billy Max Moore in 1981.

The Waco native has already been tried and found innocent of capital murder in connection with the drowning death of Warden Wallace Pack, who accompanied Moore when the two were killed.

Brown has said he killed the two in the course of defending himself. He said he believed the men planned to torture him.

The first defense witness scheduled to be called was Texas Ranger Wesley Stiles of Huntsville. Stiles was the first law enforcement official to arrive at the garden shop at the prison farm, scene of the killing.

Later in the week, defense attorneys plan to put Brown oss scheduled to be called was Texas Ranger Wesley Stiles of Huntsville. Stiles was the first law enforcement official to arrive at the garden shop at the prison farm, scene of the killing.

Scanner measures radio audiences

WASHINGTON (AP) — It's not Big Brother, but it is an example of how technology can be used to check up on one of your habits.

The habit — listening to the radio in your car. The means — a special electronic scanning system that can detect whether your car radio is turned on and to which station it's tuned as you drive by an unmarked vehicle.

For the past four years, a small Louisiana firm known as AudiScan Inc. has been using the special scanning equipment to provide commercial radio stations with information on just how many listeners they have traveling out and about on local streets.

The company and its surveys have attracted little attention, mainly because it has restricted itself to smaller markets like Wichita, Kansas, and Odessa, Texas. But that's changing now thanks to an expansion bid by company founder and president Hal Evans.

Evans bills his service as "the only accurate method of measuring radio's largest listening audience — motorists." He promises precise readings that don't depend on a listener's recall of such things as a station's call letters, frequency or when he was in the car.

The 49-year-old Evans gave up his job as a part-owner and manager of a radio station in Shreveport to found AudiScan after a 1979 experience sitting at a traffic light. A carload of teen-agers pulled up beside him with a radio blaring, "and I could hear their station through my radio. When they pulled away, I couldn't."

"When I got to the office, I asked my engineer how that could happen," Evans continues. "He told me that all radios throw out a signal as well as receive them."

Thus was born the idea for AudiScan.

Evans says the concept of such spurious scanning is nothing new; similar systems were constructed in the 1960's.

"It's just that we benefitted from the development of integrated circuits," he adds. "The old equipment was extremely bulky. Our equipment is very compact and you can do a much more practical survey, moving around from location to location."

Evans is sensitive to the fears that arise with any comparison to the Big Brother of George Orwell's novel, "1984." He is quick to point out an AudiScan survey cannot identify the person or persons inside a car or pick up any conversations — only the station the car radio is tuned to if it is on. He also notes the equipment doesn't work with radios inside a home because there's too much interference from TV sets, computers, video games and appliances.

But the firm promises a wealth of information to radio stations or advertisers. For example, a typical AudiScan survey will break down listener preferences on the basis of the kind of car being driven — subcompact, luxury, pick-up trucks and vans, new or old.

The firm will also break out its results on the basis of listening during four different time periods and in five different types of locations — major highways and shopping centers; industrial zones; areas around high schools and colleges; downtown business districts, and residential streets. Depending on the size of the market, either 2,000, 4,000 or 8,000 readings are taken to guarantee a representative sample.

AudiScan uses an unmarked car or truck, parked near intersections, to conduct its monitoring.

"We generally get about 100 yards away from an intersection and catch cars as they slow down or speed up," Evans says. "It takes only about two or three seconds (to get a reading). We don't get them when they're going faster than 45 miles per hour."

The fee charged of a single broadcaster for survey results ranges from about $1,000 to $2,500, depending on the size of the market. So far, Evans' privately held firm remains small. Revenues totaled roughly $160,000 in 1983.

Organization helps teen-age mothers

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — Nine months ago, 14-year-old Edith Dougherty was finishing up the seventh grade at a central Illinois elementary school — and finding out she was pregnant.

At about the same time, 19-year-old Mary, who didn't want her last name published, was without a home of her own after being forced to leave her parents' house — only months before the birth of her child.

Today, both young women are mothers of healthy babies and have found help and support in dealing with their unplanned parenthood. They received the help through a new state program, called Parents Too Soon.

"In the past, teen-agers have been teen-agers until they get pregnant...and so they're adults," said program coordinator Linda P. Miller. "But they are still children and they need more care and more help than an older person in the same situation."

The project, involving nine state agencies and administered by the state, is funded with $12.9 million in federal block grants, and offers services ranging from advice on contraception to job training. Though not all of the services are new, they haven't been united in one comprehensive program before. Ms. Miller said she knew of no similar program anywhere in the nation.

She said the need for the program is evident from the number of Illinois teen-agers who give birth each year. In 1982, more than 25,000 infants were born to teen-agers between the ages of 11 and 19 in Illinois, accounting for 13.9 percent of children born in the state that year. This year, one in 10 girls between the ages of 15 and 19 is likely to become pregnant, she said.

Parents Too Soon is intended to reduce the number of teen-age pregnancies, help teen mothers and their babies get health care and help young mothers learn the job skills they need to make it on their own.

The program is also aimed at reducing the incidence of child abuse and saving tax dollars by cutting the number of welfare cases. Ms. Miller noted that half the recipients of Aid to Families with Dependent Children are women who had their first child during their teen years.

Edith Doughtery, 14, left, and her infant daughter, Laura Lyn, pose with Jan Wheeler, a consultant from Parents Too Soon. The organization gives aid to teen-age mothers.

"I think in the long run it ought to save money," Ms. Miller said.

Fiscal benefits aside, the program is best understood in terms of the basic services it provides to young mothers.

Edith, for example, needed a ride from her family's trailer in Auburn to her doctor's appointments, information about social service programs and someone to talk to about having a baby.

Mary needed more — help in finding an affordable apartment and furniture, getting public aid, learning to take care of a baby and how to stretch money. She also needed someone to talk to.

"I ain't growed up all the way," she said.

Her problems started not long after she became pregnant with her daughter, Trixy. She didn't get along with her family and she was kicked out of their home.

"I was on the streets for six months with Trixy in my belly," living with friends and getting along as best she could, she said.

In January, after the baby was born, Mary shared a one-room apartment with her child and a swarm of roaches. Family Services found her another apartment, but she was forced out by fire. Parents Too Soon helped find her a new and better home and helped furnish it.

Edith lives at home in Auburn with her newborn daughter, her mother, brothers and sisters. She hopes to return to school.

"I want to make something out of my life...not always be on public aid," she said. "I want to set a good example."

Ms. Miller said that as of mid-March, the Parents Too Soon program had served about 13,600 clients and expected to serve about 21,000 by the end of September.

Earlier this month, Gov. James Thompson told lawmakers that Parents Too Soon was "one of the most ambitious programs this state has undertaken."

Thompson said the program involves "helping young people avoid the mistake of having children before they are ready to handle the responsibilities or helping them to understand what goes into child-raising if they do have children."

For Edith, Mary and others whom Parents Too Soon has helped, the message is simpler.

"Don't ever close the program," Mary said. "There's a whole bunch of girls out there who need help and these people can do it."

Explorer's bones, skull matched 400 years after death

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP) — More than 400 years after his death, scientists have matched the skull with the bones of Spanish explorer Francisco Pizarro, who was killed by disgruntled followers in Peru in 1541.

Robert Benfer, an anthropologist at the University of Missouri-Columbia, was asked by the Peruvian Institute of Culture to examine bones workers had uncovered while cleaning a crypt in Lima in 1977.

The workers had found a lead box containing a skull identified as that of Pizarro, who conquered the Inca empire in the early 1530s. There was also another box that contained remains from several skeletons, but the institute was unable to precisely match the skull with the correct bones.

Last month, the office of Chancellor Barbara Uehling issued a $4,000 grant to Benfer and William Maples, a forensic specialist from the University of Florida Museum, to conduct the study.

Pizarro was slain by a sword that was thrust under his neck and into his skull. Benfer and Maples matched cuts in the skull bones with deep gouges in some of the bones to determine which were from Pizarro's skeleton, Benfer said. Metal from a sword also was found in the bones by exposing the relics to radiation from the university's nuclear reactor.

"On a fresh bone a sharp knife will leave a very distinct slice," Benfer said. "Maples was able to prove it was Pizarro without a doubt. It is a very important historical find, especially for the people of Europe and Peru."

the CONSUMER'S right to know

Here's To Your HEALTH!

The gift of good health is a present we can all afford to give ourselves. It costs only a minimum amount of time spent each day on building healthy habits such as eating nutritionally and getting enough exercise. At such a small price, its benefits can be enjoyed by adults and children alike.

To maintain this valuable possession, some helpful recommendations from the Consumer's Right To Know booklet, Guidelines to Good Health, are listed below:

- Balance the daily diet to include a variety of foods at each meal.
- Eat at regular intervals, including breakfast and lunch.
- Brush teeth after meals and floss once each day.
- Sleep 6 to 8 hours each night.
- Exercise regularly.
- Allow time for relaxation and entertainment.
- Maintain recommended body weight according to age, sex, height, body build and amount of physical activity.
- Drink 6 to 8 glasses of water daily or the equivalent in beverages and soups.
- Avoid smoking and excessive consumption of alcohol.
- Regularly schedule medical and dental appointments.

Flourless cakes' popularity on the rise

Copley News Service

George Banchet, the world-renowned chef of Le Francais Restaurant in Illinois sometimes calls his version a "Torte Souffle." John Sedlar of Saint Estephe Restaurant in Manhattan Beach, Calif., calls his a "Chocolate Truffle Cake."

And in San Francisco these luscious creations are known as "Earthquake Cakes" because of their crusty, "ravine"-ridden appearance.

Many of today's fashionable flourless confections rely on ground nuts for their tantalizing texture, others rely on egg-enriched blends of sour cream and cheese.

But those that rely on eggs and chocolate — dark, dense and intoxicatingly rich — are probably the most popular.

The incorporation of 10 or 12 beaten egg whites causes the "cake" to soar in the oven. As it cools, however, it collapses into a dense, ultra-moist dessert that closely resembles a piece of fine fudge.

The "ravines" are easily camouflaged with a dusting of powdered sugar, whipped cream rosettes or a few deep-red rosebuds (kept fresh in a glass of water until the moment of serving).

Flourless cakes using either ground nuts or pure chocolate rely on the incorporation of beaten egg whites for their stature. When beating the egg whites, it is important to use a clean bowl and beaters or whisk, to add a pinch of cream of tartar for increased volume, and to beat the egg whites until stiff but not dry (when the beater or whisk is held upside down, the "peak" will retain its shape).

GATEAU AU CHOCOLAT

This incredibly dense, luscious cake is a chocolate lover's dream-come-true. Be sure to select chocolate that you like the taste of, because the finished cake will deliver the same flavor, enhanced by Grand Marnier and vanilla.

14 ozs. semisweet chocolate, broken into small chunks
¾ cup plus 2 tbsps. unsalted butter
1½ cups sugar
10 eggs, separated
1 tbsp. Grand Marnier
1 tsp. pure vanilla

Garnish: Chocolate shavings or powdered sugar, strawberries in season.

Prehat oven to 250 F. Butter and dust 12-inch springform pan with unsweetened cocoa.

Melt chocolate and butter in top of double boiler over simmering water, stirring slowly until smooth. Add 1¼ cups sugar, stirring until almost dissolved.

Lightly beat egg yolks in a separate bowl. Beat in 5 to 6 tablespoons hot chocolate, a tablespoon at a time (add hot chocolate too fast and the yolks will scramble). Return yolks and chocolate to top of the double boiler. Cook several minutes, stirring constantly, until slightly thickened. Add Grand Marnier and vanilla. Let cool 6 to 8 minutes, stirring occasionally. Beat the whites to soft peaks, gradually add remaining ¼ cup sugar. Beat the whites until stiff but not dry. Fold warm chocolate into the beaten whites.

Pour batter into pan. Bake 3 hours. Cool cake in the pan at room temperature, then cover and chill. When cold, take cake out of the pan. Serve thin wedges sprinkled with powdered sugar or chocolate shavings, and pass a bowl of melted vanilla ice cream.

Serves 12 to 14.

HAZELNUT CAKE

Very finely ground hazelnuts (filberts) replace flour in this tender, moist cake. Grind the nuts as fine as cornmeal, using either a food processor, nut grater or blender.

10 ozs. shelled hazelnuts
10 egg yolks
¼ tsp. salt
1 cup sugar
1 tsp. vanilla
6 egg whites
Garnish: Sweetened whipped cream, hazelnuts

Preheat the oven to 325 F. Set oven rack in lower third of oven.

Butter anddust 10-inch angle cake pan with 2 to 3 tablespoons of ground hazelnuts. Set aside.

Bet egg yolks several minutes until very light. Add salt, sugar and vanilla. Mix well. Lightly fold in hazelnut meal. Beat egg whites until stiff but not dry. Fold into hazelnut mixture.

Pour cake batter into prepared cake pan. Bake approximately 60 minutes until done. Let cake stand, upside down in its pan, until completely cool. Serve frosted with sweetened whipped cream and hazelnuts.

CHOCOLATE DECADENCE

1 lb. semisweet chocolate, cut in small pieces
½ cup plus 2 tbsps. unsalted butter
4 eggs
1 tbsp. sugar
1 tbsp. flour
2 cups whipping cream
1 tbsp. powdered sugar
1 tsp. pure vanilla
¼ lb. semisweet chocolate, cut into curls
8 ozs. fresh or frozen raspberries, pureed and strained.

Preheat oven to 425 F. Cut parchment paper to fit bottom of 8-inch round cae pan. Butter and flour paper and sides of pan. Melt chocolate and butter in top of double boiler over hot, not boiling, water. Stir until smooth; remove from heat. Whisk eggs and sugar in top of double boiler over hot, not boiling, water. Whisk until sugar dissolves, mixture darkens and becomes barely warm to the touch. Remove from heat; beat at highest speed of mixer until eggs are consistency of light whipped cream, 5 to 10 minutes. Center will be soft; tap lightly on table to remove air bubbles. Bake 15 minutes. Center will be soft; top will be crusty. Cool; freeze overnight. To serve, whip cream with powdered sugar and vanilla to soft peaks. Don't overwhip. Remove Chocolate Decadence from freezer; turn out on flat platter. Remove parchment paper. Frost with two-thirds of whipped cream; top with chocolate curls. Pipe rosette of whipped cream around edges of cake. Cut in thin wedges; serve with Raspberry Sauce.

Makes 8 to 10 servings.

Cakes popular at tea time

STRAWBERRY TEACAKES

A new version of a popular recipe.
1¾ cups all-purpose flour
1 teaspoon baking soda
¼ teaspoon salt
1 cup sugar
½ cup coarsely broken pecan halves
2 large eggs
½ cup corn oil
9- or 10-ounce package frozen strawberries, thawed but undrained

Grease and lightly flour 24 muffin-pan cups (each 2½ by 1¼ inches). In a small bowl stir together flour, baking soda and salt. Stir in sugar and pecans. In a medium bowl, with an electric beater at medium speed, beat together eggs and corn oil until blended; add undrained strawberries; at lowest speed and moving beater around bowl, beat just until strawberries are partly broken up. Add flour mixture; beat until batter is smooth and strawberries are in small irregular pieces. Divide batter among prepared muffin-pan cups. Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven until cake tester inserted in center comes out clean — 30 minutes. Cool 10 minutes; remove to wire rack to cool completely. Makes 24.

Hummus promises love at first bite

By DIANE SAVAGE
Copley News Service

I can still remember my first taste of hummus, served to me many years ago in a small family-owned Middle Eastern restaurant. Smooth-textured and delicately flavored with garlic, cumin and coriander, topped with tahini and served with piping hot pita bread, it was love at first bite.

I've been hooked on hummus ever since, and often serve it as an appetizer, or with salad for lunch (accompanied, of course, by fresh hot pita bread).

Hummus is prepared from cooked, mashed chickpeas, which also are known as garbanzo beans by Spanish-speaking people. Italians call them "ceci," and in India they are known as "gram," and form the basis of the typical Indian dish, dhal.

Actually the seeds of an annual bush which is found in many arid climes, chickpeas were cultivated by ancient Greeks, Romans, Hebrews and Egyptians

In the United States, chickpeas seem to be more popular with vegetarians than with anyone else, perhaps because they are such an excellent source of protein, and thus provide a good meat substitute. They're also high in carbohydrates, thiamine and iron, and have a fair amount of other minerals.

To cook dried chickpeas, soak overnight in a pot with enough water to cover. Add more water, if necessary, the next day and bring the pot to a boil. Reduce heat and simmer until tender, about 1 to 1½ hours. Drain and use as directed in recipe.

When storing cooked chickpeas, pour some of the cooking liquid over them to keep them moist.

Dried chickpeas have a shelf life of approximately one year. Store in a covered container and keep cool and dry.

CHICKPEA SALAD

2 cups cooked chickpeas, drained
1 medium tomato, diced
¼ cup shredded carrot
¼ cup sliced green onion
¼ cup chopped fresh parsley
1 clove garlic, crushed or minced
3 tbsps. white wine vinegar
3 tbsps. vegetable oil
¼ tsp. salt
Freshly ground black pepper

In a medium-sized salad bowl combine chickpeas, tomato, carrot, onio and parsley. Sprinkle with remaining ingredients, toss, and chill before serving. Serves 4.

HOT SAUTEED CHICKPEAS

½ cup minced onion
¼ cup butter or margarine
1/4 tsp. ground cumin
¼ tsp. ground red pepper
½ tsp. salt
2 medium-sized tomatoes, diced
3 cups cooked chickpeas, drained
4 tsps. freshly squeezed lemon juice
4 tbsps. flaked coconut

Saute onions in butter or margarine until translucent. Add cumin and red pepper; saute for 2 minutes, stirring frequently. Stir in salt and tomatoes. Cook for 2 minutes. Then add chickpeas and cook for 5 minutes longer, stirring occasionally. Just before serving sprinkle with lemon juice and coconut. Serve hot. Makes 6 servings.

HUMMUS BI TAHINI

3 cups cooked chickpeas, drained (reserve some of the liquid)
3 medium cloves garlic, crushed or minced
2 tbsps. cider vinegar
½ tsp. salt
¼ cup tahini
¼ tsp. ground cumin
¼ tsp. ground coriander
¼ tsp. paprika
1 tbsp. vegetable oil

Mash chickpeas or put through a blender, adding some of the cooking iquid, a little at a time, until it has the consisternсy of mayonnaise. (It should be spreadable and smooth.) Place mashed chickpeas in a large bowl and stir in remaining ingredients. Cover and chill until ready to serve. Serve with pita bread or crackers. Makes about 3 cups.

Daiquiri a town, as well

Copley News Service

The daiquiri cocktail, made of rum, sugar and lime or lemon, got its name from the eastern Cuba village of Daiquiri, source of the rum first used in this drink.

Shed pounds for summer

Don't let excess weight chill summer fun. Although slinky shorts and teeny-weeny bikini season is rapidly approaching, there is still time to lose weight safely and effectively before summer — if started now.

Diet Center Inc., franchised weight-control program, advises considering the following criteria before making a dieting decision:

— There is more to the diet that the diet itself. Select a program that provides nutrition education, behavior modification and exercise.

— Diet program should be based on well-balanced nutritious meals. If it employs the use of drugs, forget it.

— Diet program should have an impressive track record. Talk to people who have used the diet. Don't be afraid to ask for specifics.

— Be sure the program is adaptable to individual needs and provides the foundation for eating habits to keep firm, slim and healthy.

— Investigate all phases of the program, not just the reducing diet. A maintenance program is essential to long-term success.

— Do not select any diet until the merits of all those available have been compared.

— Doctor's advice should be asked for before making a final decision.

Finding the right diet program — one that helps with weight loss and also teaches how to keep the weight off — takes time.

Milk's life prolonged

Hearst Feature Service

Microwaving can keep milk wholesome-tasting up to 10 days longer than usual with almost no loss in nutritional value, says a Cornell University study.

By heating 11-day-old pasteurized, homogenized milk for 100-120 seconds in a microwave oven, Cornell researchers found they were able to give milk a shelf life of almost three weeks. This compares with the average time of one week to 10 days.

"We found this type of mild heat treatment kills a dramatic percentage of bacteria that progressively multiply in milk," says Gertrude Armbruster, professor of nutritional sciences at Cornell. "We were able to get the number of these microorganisms down to levels found in two-day old milk."

Although thiamine, one of the B-vitamins in milk, is sensitive to heat, the other primary nutrients — protein, riboflavin and calcium — are not vulnerable to the mild heat treatment.

Armbruster says to maximize the benefits of the heat treatment, milk needs to be heated before any off-flavors develop.

"Fruity, fermented or rancid off-flavors are caused by enzymes produced by fast-growing microorganisms naturally found in milk," the nutritionist explained. "Once produced, the distasteful flavors can't be destroyed. It's important, therefore, to kill the microorganisms before they rapidly multiply and grow."

Using microwaves to extend the shelf life of food is not a new idea. Microwaves also have been found to prolong the refrigerated life of cured ham, fresh poultry and other meat products.

Although conventional ovens and stoves also may be used to heat-treat foods such as milk to stave off the development of off-flavors, Armbruster points out that it would be more time-consuming and more difficult to standardize the treatment.

A two-minute microwave treatment at full power is ideal for about a cup of milk, but Armbruster said that more research is necessary to determine the optimal heat treatment for larger volumes of milk.

If consumers would like to heat-treat milk, the Cornell nutritionist recommend doing it before the date stamped on the milk container.

"Place the milk in the center of the microwave oven in any microwave appropriate container and heat it for at least a minute," she recommends. "Then cool it immediately."

Wendy's dad expresses delight over ad's success

Hearst Feature Service

MIDLAND, Mich. — R. David Thomas, president and founder of Wendy's Old Fashioned Hamburgers, tells of his delight in greeting workers at many of his 2,719 restaurants with the statement, "Hi, I'm Wendy's dad." The chain was named after one of his daughters and its logo developed from her freckles and red pigtails.

He also is pleased with the national response to Wendy's current advertising campaign in which Clara Peller asks the question, "Where's the beef?" The slogan was picked up by Walter Mondale in his presidential campaign and has spread throughout the country. He thinks politicians responded to it because "they are trying to get simple rhetoric."

Thomas says the response to the "Where's the beef?" ad was a surprise. "The campaign was to let people know we have a larger burger," he says. "Actually, we always had a larger burger, but people didn't believe it."

Previous slogans like "Wendy's kind of people" and "Hot and juicy" were designed to take the Wendy message into an advertising milieu where Thomas says competitors outspend him "15 to 1."

Asked about criticism by senior citizens' groups that the television commercials exploit older people, including Ms. Peller, Thomas says she has profited handsomely from the commercials. "She's 80 years old and has an opportunity that could only happen in America.

Thomas says he's loved hamburgers since he was a child, when he fantasized that if he owned a restaurant, he might not have to pay. "I still have to pay, even at Wendy's," he says. His favorite menu is a double hamburger with mustard, pickle and onion, a bowl of chili and a Frosty, topped off with a diet Pepsi.

Thomas has worked since he was 12 years old — he was fired from his first job because he lied about his age. He says he learned the lesson of getting along with other people from necessity, trying to put down roots in a family that moved often during his formative years.

He began his restaurant career as a busboy at Hobby House in Fort Wayne, Ind., at age 15, and then returned there after military service.

Since the first Wendy's restaurant opened in Columbus, Ohio, in 1969, there have been changes in the menu. Salads have been added to the staple hamburger, which Thomas claims can be served 256 ways, and most recently, the baked potato, served with an assortment of toppings. Nutrition is playing a large role in future planning.

Machelle Mitchell

Finalist selected

Machelle Mitchell, 16, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A.L. Mitchell of Midland, has been selected a finalist in the 1984 Miss West Texas National Teen-Ager Pageant. The pageant will be Friday-Sunday in Odessa, and is the official pageant to the 13th annual Miss Texas National Teen-Ager Pageant to be June 1-3 in Fort Worth.

Winner of the Miss West Texas National Teen-Ager Pageant will receive a $1,000 cash scholarship, a full four-year tuition scholarship to Oklahoma City University, a full-tuition modeling scholarship to Barbizon of Dallas, an all-expense paid trip to compete in the Miss Texas National Teen-Ager Pageant and numerous other awards.

Miss Mitchell is sponsored by Camcorp Incorporated, Design and Construction in Midland. Her hobbies include singing, playing various instruments and drama.

Ripening Bananas

The International Banana Association offers the following tips for keeping bananas in prime condition:

— Bananas are delicate so handle with care. Don't drop or squeeze them.

— For gradual ripening, keep bananas uncovered in a dry spot at comfortable room temperature.

— For quicker ripening store bananas in a paper bag to trap the natural ethylene gas that helps ripen the fruit. Adding another fruit such as an apple will speed up ripening even more.

— Bananas can be refrigerated when they reach the stage of ripeness prefered. The cold will slow down further ripening for several days. The peel of the banana will turn dark but the fruit inside will stay luscious.

Midland homes featured at show

Midland Junior Womens' Club, a non-profit social and service organization, presents its 25th Annual Parade of Homes on Sunday, from 2 to 6 p.m.

Of the four houses featured this year, two are newly constructed and two are newly remodeled.

Charlene and Douglas C. Bunnell II's home, 905 Country Club Drive, is a late 1950s modern style, but updated by a remodeling project in 1981. Mrs. Bunnell, former professional contract designer and space planner, decorated the house.

Fred and Pam Walsh's Victorian/Country Colonial home, 9 Hialeah, was built by Joe Johnson of Reese Construction of Odessa under the direction of architects Walter Pate and James Riggin. Mrs. Walsh also assisted in the architecture and decoration of the home.

Marylyn and Dave Leonard's ranch-style home, 3402 Choate Place, was built by HBF Costruction, designed by architect Bill Bell and decorated by James Van Stavern of Santa Fe Contract and Design.

Don and Gwyn Sparks, 2407 Dartmouth, have a 14-year-old traditional-style home built by Ed Brannon and architect David Vincent of Odessa.

Proceeds from last year's Parade of Homes, in excess of $9,000, were donated to the Palmer Drug Abuse Program. This year's proceeds will benefit the Palmer Drug Abuse Program and the Permian Basin Battered Women's and Children's Home in Midland.

Tickets, sold exclusively by the club's members, are $7.50. For information, contact 694-3366, 694-2791 or 694-0186. Tickets will not be sold at the door and children younger than 12 will not be admitted.

Chives bring spring to souffle

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

When springtime comes so do chives, that delicate herb with its onion-like flavor and intense green color.

In New York City, greengrocers who stow vegetables and fruit in bins outside their doors often have chives growing in containers, all ready for indoor gardeners to take home.

With chives in hand, I'm ready to find a use for them that was new to me — and may be to you. We put them in a hominy and cheese puff and they added welcome flavor.

HOMINY, CHEESE AND CHIVE SOUFFLE

1¼ cups water
¼ cup enriched white hominy grits
¼ teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons minced chives
3 large eggs, separated
2 ounces cheddar cheese, grated medium fine (½ slightly packed cup)

In a heavy large saucepan, bring the water to a boil. Gradually stir in the grits and salt; bring to a boil again and cook, uncovered, over low heat, stirring often until thick — about 25 minutes.

Off heat, stir in the chives; whisk in the egg yolks, one at a time, until blended after each addition; stir in the cheese.

In a small bowl beat egg whites until stiff peaks form and fold into grits mixture. Turn into a 1-quart casserole or 5-cup souffle dish. Bake, uncovered, in a preheated 350-degree oven until heated through and top is golden brown — about 45 minutes. Serve at once. Makes 4 servings.

Citrus Cup Plus contains 'spirited fruit'

CITRUS CUP PLUS
Spirited fruit.
3 large seedless grapefruit
½ cup orange juice
¼ cup orange liqueur
Garnish: watercress sprigs

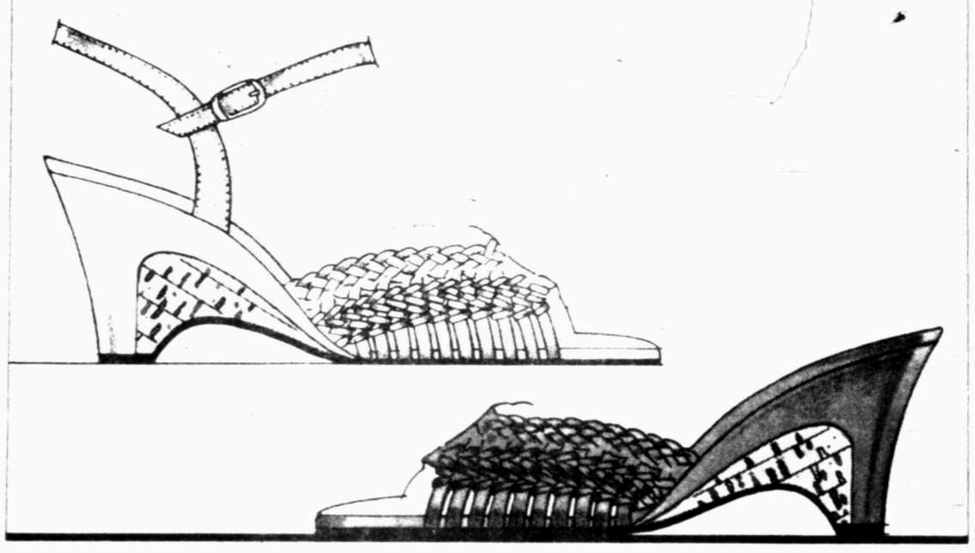

Cut peel from grapefruit so no white membrane remains; over a bowl, cut away sections from dividing membranes, saving juice.

Stir in orange juice and liqueur; cover and chill. At serving time garnish with watercress sprigs. Makes 4 servings.

DEAR ABBY

Woman wants to get rid of mustache

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I am one of those very unfortunate women who have dark facial hair. Can you give me any information about electrolysis? Is it safe? Is it expensive? What about those electrified tweezers you can buy to do electrolysis on yourself at home?

I'm 26 years old and I've had it with remarks about my mustache. — SUFFERED ENOUGH IN WISCONSIN

DEAR SUFFERED: Don't confuse professional electrolysis with the electrified tweezers now being marketed. The Food and Drug Administration has found them to be no more effective that ordinary household tweezers.

While "do-it-yourself" electrolysis equipment can be purchased by anyone, I would never recommend it. Safe and successful permanent hair removal by electrolysis depends upon the angle of the needle when it is inserted, and an unsteady hand can cause skin damage that may leave permanent scars.

First, see a dermatologist to determine whether you are a candidate for electrolysis. (Not everyone is.) To learn more about hair removal — both permanent and temporary — write to: The International Guild of Professional Electrologists Inc., Medical Center, 15 Bond St., Great Neck, N.Y. 11021, and request its booklet. You will be given the names and addresses of skilled electrologists in your area. The booklet is free, but please enclose a long, stamped (20 cents), self-addressed envelope, as this is a non-profit organization.

DEAR ABBY: A couple of readers had a difference of opinion on how to respond when asked, "How are you?"

One said, "Always say, 'I'm fine,' because nobody really wants to hear about somebody else's aches and pains." The other said, "Be honest. If something is ailing you, say so."

I know a little old German lady who always answers that question this way: "I'm better than I was, but I'm not so well as I was before I got to be as bad as I am now."

Does this help? — ESTHER

DEAR ESTHER: It helps more than it did, but not as much as it would have helped before.

DEAR ABBY: I can sympathize with the daughter of "Oldie at 32." I, too, at age 11 was not allowed some of the things other girls my age were allowed (i.e. shaving legs, wearing nylons and bras).

At 11, I was the only girl in my Sunday school class without nylons, so I went to the local Woolworth store and bought a pair. I had no idea how to hold them up (panty hose had not been invented yet), so I went back and bought four garters but didn't know what to do with them. Didn't know about girdles or garter belts either.

Being raised by a father (Mother died when I was 8), I didn't have a bra. Then one day, while playing catch in a T-shirt with the boys, I heard some giggles over my bouncing small, but developing breasts. Back to Woolworth's!

When I started seventh grade, the girls wore skirts, not jeans. A boy looked at my hairy legs and said, "I'm gonna get you a razor for Christmas." I could have died! The next day, I borrowed my father's razor and cut my left shin bone so badly I still have the scar.

I also went to a movie with a boy unchaperoned. We went on our bicycles.

Eye makeup? No eyeliner, mascara or eye shadow. I used an eyelash curler and a little eyebrow pencil. But that wasn't until the 10th grade.

Peer pressure can be hard at any age. — YOUNG AT 44

DEAR YOUNG: You certainly jogged a few memories. Thanks for a stroll down memory lane.

(Every teen-ager should know the truth about drugs, sex and how to be happy. For Abby's booklet, send your name and address clearly printed with a check or money order for $2.50 (this includes postage) to: Abby, Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

Rice pudding plain

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

There are all kinds of rice puddings in this world, but one that remains a great favorite is a combination of rice and a creamy sauce. No fruit. No nuts. No other adornments. Just the lovely pure flavor of vanilla.

CREAMY RICE PUDDING

⅔ cup converted-type rice
2¼ cups water
⅔ cup sugar
2 teaspoons cornstarch
½ teaspoon salt
2⅔ cups half-and-half
2 tablespoons butter
1 teaspoon vanilla
4 egg yolks

In a medium saucepan bring the rice and the water to a boil. Simmer, covered, until the rice is very tender and most of the water is absorbed — about 25 minutes.

In a small bowl stir together the cornstarch and salt; stir into hot rice mixture with half-and-half. Stirring constantly, bring to a boil and boil 1 minute.

Off heat stir in the butter and vanilla.

In a small bowl slightly beat the egg yolks; gradually stir in about 1 cup of the hot rice mixture; stir back into remaining rice mixture.

Stirring often, cook over moderate heat just until mixture starts to bubble. Let stand at room temperature and serve warm.

Makes about 5 cups — 6 to 8 servings.

Advice offered for successful barbecuing

The Reynolds Wrap Kitchens offer these tips for successful barbecuing:

— Make a fire-starter from a large can which has had the top and bottom removed. Punch holes every two inches around the lower edge of the can and place in the grill fire bowl. Crumple newspaper and put in the bottom of the can; put charcoal on top of newspaper. Lift the can and light the newspaper. Prop up the bottom edge of the can to create a draft. When the charcoal is hot lift the chimney and spread coals out.

— When barbecuing, heat may be increased by fanning or tapping ashes off the coals, and decreased by sprinkling water on the coals.

— A meat thermometer should be used to determine doneness.

THE BUTCHER

Oxtails messy 'family fare' meat

By MERLE ELLIS

Oxtails in the market don't really come from oxen anymore, if, indeed, they ever did. They come from the same steers and heifers that our steaks come from, but to my taste they have more good, rich, lip-smackin' flavor than most any cut of beef in the meat case.

Oxtails have remained a relatively inexpensive cut of meat over the years and one that can provide good hearty family fare for far less than a fortune. They are definitely, however, "family fare" (or at least for very good friends) since they are the messiest of meats to eat.

Each joint in the tail of the "ox" is a vertebra containing not only sweet meat, but a gelatinous substance so delicious it defies description that must be unceremoniously sucked from the tiny holes where it hides to be enjoyed. To miss that part is to miss the best part.

Most butchers separate the joints of the tail by cutting through the cartilage between the joints, exposing a round spot of pure white cartilage that turns to gelatin in the long, slow cooking process required for oxtails. That's the way it should be done.

If your butcher cuts them on the saw or with a meat cleaver — if you don't see that spot of white cartilage in the center of each joint — ask for a tail or two whole and cut them up yourself. It's no trick. First trim off any excess fat. Then, starting at the large end of the tail and using a sharp knife, feel for the space between the first and second joint — there is a space and you can't cut through the bone so just keep on cutting.

The first joint should be about 1½ inches from the large end of the tail. Keep cutting until you find the space so your knife slides through easily. The joints are equidistant one from the other, so once you've found one, finding the rest is easy.

Here are a few recipes that have become favorites around our house.

GRANDMA AKI'S OXTAILS

1 large or 2 small oxtails, cut in sections between joints
2 quarts cold water
3 or 4 pieces star anise
1 stick cinnamon
2 tablespoons brown sugar
3 tablespoons soy sauce

Put the oxtails in a good-sized pot, cover with water and bring to a boil. Simmer for about 5 minutes. Drain and rinse the oxtails; this eliminates the scum that can cloud up the finished sauce. Now start all over again. Put the tails back in the pot and add 2 quarts fresh water, star anise and cinnamon.

Cover and bring to a boil, reduce heat and simmer gently for 1 hour. Add the remaining ingredients, cover and continue simmering for 2 hours. Remove oxtails to a serving platter. Turn the heat to high and boil the sauce down to about 1 cup.

Because of the brown sugar in it, the sauce will thicken into a rich, delicious glaze. Pour the sauce over the oxtails and enjoy. Don't try to be neat!

OXTAIL SOUP

1 oxtail (approximately 2 pounds)
2 tablespoons cooking oil or beef drippings
1 tablespoon salt
½ teaspoon each, rosemary, marjoram, sage
2 quarts beef stock or water
1 medium onion, chopped
1 or 2 carrots, sliced thin
1 stalk celery, sliced thin
½ cup sauerkraut, rinsed, drained
1 medium tomato, peeled, chopped

Cut oxtail into joints. Brown the oxtails in cooking oil or beef drippings in a heavy skillet. Remove to a large covered kettle or Dutch oven. Add salt, seasonings, beef stock (or water).

Cover and simmer 3½ hours. Add vegetables, cover and simmer 30 minutes. Taste for seasonings, adding salt, pepper, and additional herbs if needed.

A touch of hot pepper is good if you like a bit of heat to wake up your taste buds. Skim off any fat and serve. Serves 6 to 8.

OXTAIL RAGOUT

2 oxtails (3½ to 4 pounds)
1 cup chopped onion
3 cloves garlic, crushed
2 tablespoons butter
½ cup flour
2 tablespoons cooking oil
6 cups beef stock (or water)
¼ teaspoon pepper
1 teaspoon thyme
1 bay leaf
2 tablespoons tomato paste
Potatoes, carrots

Cut oxtail into joints. Saute onion and garlic in butter in a heavy skillet until soft but not brown. Use low heat so the garlic won't burn and turn bitter.

Dust oxtails with flour. Brown well on all sides in cooking oil in a good-sized covered kettle or Dutch oven. Add onion and garlic, beef stock, pepper, thyme, bay leaf and tomato paste. Bring to a boil, reduce heat and simmer slowly for 2½ to 3 hours, or until meat is tender.

Peel and quarter potatoes and carrots and cook separately in boiling salted water until just tender; add to the ragout just before serving.

Oxtails, because of the cartilage between the joints, make a nice rich broth, which I like just as is.

If you would like a little thicker ragout, simply thicken the sauce before you add the carrots and potatoes, using a tablespoon of arrowroot dissolved in a little water. Serves 6 to 8.

Cholesterol level lowered

By SHIRLEY BRIGHT BOODY
Registered Dietitian
Copley News Service

If you can't get your cholesterol levels down by changing your diet, there is a new but drastic approach — surgery.

Rather than surgically bypassing the blocked arteries of the heart, this new technique bypasses the small intestine, where the cholesterol (and many nutrients) is absorbed. Lowering dangerously high cholesterol levels is supposed to help the heart.

So far, approximately 500 people have had their cholesterol lowered by this means, from destructive levels of 250, which can damage the heart, down to 170, which can help protect it.

The procedure involves detouring the absorptive small intestine, and connecting directly into the large bowel, some 6 to 8 feet down the line, prematurely. That is, the foods that are eaten and normally digested, first in the small intestine, and then move on to the large intestine, will, instead, go directly to the large intestine.

But aren't a lot of other nutrients lost to absorption as well as cholesterol? Are such drastic means justified to lower cholesterol by less than 100 milligrams?

Major surgery, no matter what kind, always has its risks, and they could, indeed, be greater than a cholesterol level of 250. In addition, the malabsorption or non-absorption of other vitally needed nutrients could cause severe disorders that could dwarf elevated cholesterol level dangers.

Fiber in the diet has virtually the same effect of lowering the cholesterol levels by entrapping it, and moving it quickly into the large bowel.

While not all food fiber is able to collect the cholesterol, at least two types are very effective in capturing it. By simply adding pectin, the fruit fiber, and oat bran, the other cholesterol collecting fiber, to the daily diet, the effects could be a significant lowering of cholesterol levels.

Other changes in the diet are also important and effective in controlling cholesterol excesses. Polyunsaturated oils and soft margarines that replace hard, saturated animal fats — butter fats and fatty meats — in the diet do cause lowered cholesterol levels.

Avoiding cholesterol-laden foods such as egg yolk, shrimp, liver and glandular meats, as well as dairy fats and fatty meats, will help keep cholesterol levels down.

Not all cholesterol comes from foods we eat. It is manufactured by the body itself, and as much as a couple of teaspoons can be found in the one to two cups of bile secreted daily and dumped into the digestive tract. Food fiber can collect a lot of it, and carry it quickly to the large intestine to be excreted. The surgical intervention to the large bowel, however, could provoke eventual cancer by unnaturally exposing the large bowel to the direct and constant effects of the highly irritating bile.

Manipulating our body chemistry by the foods we eat is, without doubt, the safest and most effective way of staying within normal limits of not only cholesterol levels, but also of the hundreds of other compounds that make up the human body.

Clearly, distortion of them causes trouble. How do they become distorted? By eating improperly, for one thing. Excessive eating and the development of extra weight predisposes the body to unnecessary stresses that lead to disease-producing effects.

Cholesterol collects as fatty plaque on the interior walls of arteries to the point where they can become completely blocked and the blood cannot get through. Damage to the heart muscle or brain tissue may be severe. The danger of heart attacks and strokes is more acute in people with high cholesterol levels.

Food allergies common

Hearst Feature Service

While the majority of us can sit down to dinner with a zesty appetite and a free mind, five million Americans must approach food with caution, apprehensive that an allergen lurks among the goodies heaped on their plates.

Millions of others can't tolerate particular foods, and although their reaction to the hidden offender may not fit the classical definition of "allergy," that's scant comfort when migraines, diarrhea, itching and sinus congestion mimic the real thing.

"Allergy is a difficult term," acknowledges Dr. Gregory Lanpher of the Johns Hopkins Allergic Disease Center at Good Samaritan Hospital in Baltimore. "Allergy relates to allergic antibodies, but, to the general public, it includes any unexplained, adverse reaction, more often intolerance."

According to Lanpher, food allergies develop when an individual eats a particular food and develops an unknown sensitivity, a sensitivity later discovered when the allergen is ingested again.

The most common food culprits include milk products, eggs, corn, wheat (gluten) and other cereals, chocolate, citrus fruits and tomatoes, pork and seafood. For example, if a person develops an allergy to peaches and eats a peach, the body produces allergic antibodies. These antibodies connect with the allergic substance (antigen) and set off a series of reactions in cells that result in the release of a series of chemicals called "mediators." The result is swelling, itching, hives and, at times, pain. Some individuals have internal swelling of intestinal mucosa and suffer diarrhea.

Simply put, some portion of a foodstuff (usually protein) provokes the body's defense mechanism. The enzyme or toxin to which the body reacts is an antigen, and when the antibody proteins and defending white blood cells react against the antigen, they stimulate an allergic reaction. Reactions in children include runny noses, coughing, eczema, constipation or vomiting. Adult symptoms often include hay fever, asthma, diarrhea, headache, dizziness, eczema and eye problems.

Isolating the offending culprit can be a long, frustrating process, as Terry Traub, author of "Food Allergy Detection Program" (Frederick Fell Publishers, $15.95), found in trying to deal with her son's allergies.

Some common allergens prompt immediate symptoms. Others, like wheat, are sneakier, and symptoms may not appear for 12 to 72 hours. To further muddy the waters, ingredients in many prepared foods are not always apparent. Sausage and bologna contain milk products. Marshmallows, tartar sauce and sausages include eggs. Instant coffee and ketchup contain corn, and wheat is found in gin, whiskey and chocolate candy bars. Prepared foods bear labels with lists of ingedients, but ingredients in restaurant-prepared foods are less obvious.

If an allergy or intolerance is suspected, sufferers should work with a physician or registered dietitian to isolate the cause. Diagnostic tools include a complete medical history, skin tests (which aren't always indicative), serum or blood tests and in-hospital fasting and elemental diets.

A strong history and positive skin test probably indicates an allergy, says Langher. When there's a history but the substance can't clearly be identified, physicians turn to elimination diets to remove classes of food and gradually reintroduce them.

"You're not entirely sure you're eliminating something, not sure how long it needs to be eliminated," and unlike drugs, reseachers aren't sure how long a particular foodstuff may stay in the system, Langher says. Perhaps more important, these diets "leave you without a lot that's interesting to eat — a rice-and-water diet."

Traub also criticizes the standard elimination diet — in use for almost four decades — because it doesn't take into account additives, sweeteners and preservatives that can compromise its effectiveness. These diets also need revisions "to make them more palatable and practical."

The system eliminates possible allergens class by class over a 12-day period and reintroduces them one by one for three days before going back to the stricter diet for four days. All food must be prepared in the home. To broaden menus as well as eliminate related foods, she gives substitutes and fruits and vegetables in the same groups. Once the offending foods are discovered, a physician must diagnose and treat the problem.

List of various allergy symptoms, possible food causes compiled

Hearst Feature Service

Following is a list of allergic symptoms and possible food causes compiled from "Food Allergy Detection Program" by Terry Traub.

Diarrhea and Gastric Distress
Wheat and gluten-related food (oats, barley, rye), raw meat, pineapple juice, citrus juices, milk, beer, gin, whiskey.

Migraines
Monosodium glutamate, salt (even a small amount), cheese (yellow especially), chocolate, colas, ham, milk products, nuts (especially coconuts), pineapple, beer, wine (especially red), bourbon, scotch, liqueurs and brandy (very potent).

Headaches
Same as migraines plus caffeine (in tea and coffee), refined sugar, wheat.

Eczema
Milk.

Hives and Itching
Chocolate, fruits such as strawberries, oranges, tomatoes.

Swelling
Honey, egg whites.

Anaphylactic Shock
Egg whites.

Sinus and Nasal Congestion
Milk, cheese, meats, chocolate, sauerkraut, wines and beer.

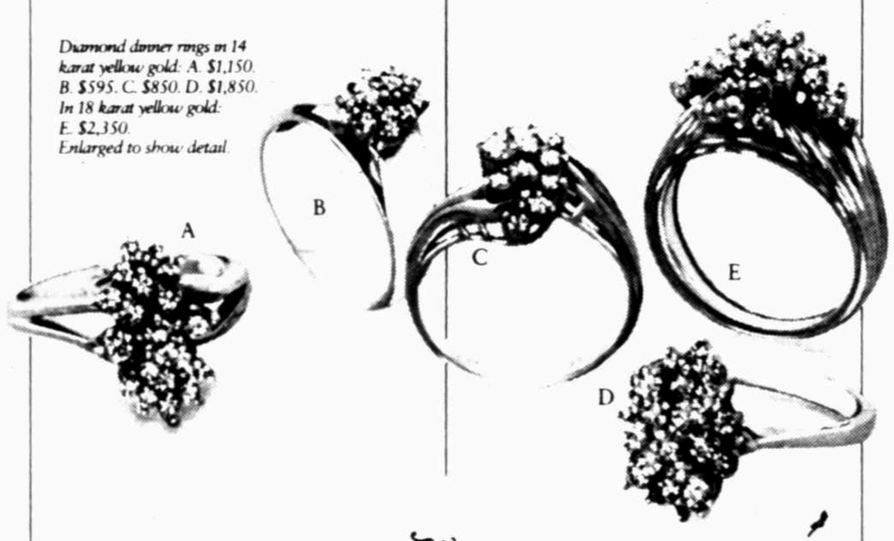

Asthma
Many foods — list is endless. Usually complicated by stress and other allergies to pollen and grasses.

Reagan's emphasis on school discipline runs into dissent, praise

"No learning can take place without good order in the classroom, and that means restoring good old-fashioned discipline. In too many schools, teachers lack authority to make students take tests, hand in homework, or even quiet down in class."

—President Reagan
Speech at principals' convention
Las Vegas, 1984

By CHRISTOPHER CONNELL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Is discipline — or the lack of it — the skeleton in American educators' closets? Who controls the classroom: teachers and principals, or students and delinquents?

President Reagan almost singlehandedly has forced renewed national attention on those questions and injected the discipline issue into the fervid debate over how to improve the education of America's children.

The question has never been far from the minds of parents. In the Gallup annual surveys on public attitudes toward the schools, discipline has ranked as the No. 1 problem in 14 of the past 15 years.

Many educators insist the problem is not so severe. Schools have ended their fling with permissiveness and restored the standards and codes of conduct that were jettisoned in the protest era of the late 1960s and early 1970s, they say.

One survey of school administrators found that most viewed student apathy, not disorder, as their biggest problem.

"The 'discipline problem' in 1982 is nowhere near as severe as in 1972. Every school teacher and administrator knows that," says Mary Hatwood Futrell, president of the National Education Association, who has accused the Reagan administration of dredging up old statistics to "hype" the problem.

BUT A RECENT administration white paper on "Disorder in our Public Schools" said the situation has probably gotten worse since a major 1978 federal study of school violence.

"For many teachers, schools have become hazardous places to teach and definitely places to fear," the White House report said. "Self-preservation rather than instruction has become their prime concern."

That report theorized that school officials play down the situation to avoid appearing incompetent and also because of "perceived and at times actual legal obstacles which stand in their way."

Some educators — including those who applauded Reagan's remarks at the high school principals' convention in Las Vegas — say they welcome the president's tough words because they need all the help they can get.

A SPOT check of urban and suburban school districts by Associated Press bureaus across the country turned up signs that some schools have turned the corner on discipline, but others — particularly inner-city schools — remain places where both students and teachers work with trepidation. Some examples:

—In a recent two-week period in Chicago, three students were shot, two were stabbed and a teacher was raped in the public schools.

—Some cities, including New York, Detroit, New Orleans and Chicago, have resorted to using metal detectors to keep weapons out of troubled schools.

In Detroit, where nearly 1,500 students were suspended or transferred last year for possessing weapons, Cody High School student Gwenae Bennett, 16, said, "There was all that on TV about metal detectors, but they didn't bring them in but once. If you're slick, you can get away with it."

—In Philadelphia, a no-nonsense principal named Louis D'Antonio boasts that Bartram High School, once torn by racial fighting, is now "the best integrated school of any large city." He and the faculty established a strict code of behavior, including a crackdown on truancy, tardiness and class-cutting, "and slowly but surely the kids started to behave."

AMITAI ETZIONI, a George Washington University sociology professor and former Carter administration adviser, has dismissed the White House report on school violence as "an amazing concoction of figures whose interpretations are grossly overblown."

The report drew heavily from the 1978 National Institute of Education report, "Violent Schools — Safe Schools," which estimated the extent of school violence and vandalism based on a survey of more than 4,000 school and visits to 642 schools.

The NIE report, ordered by Congress in 1975, concluded: "Although school violence and vandalism increased during the 1960s, they have leveled off since the early 1970s, and there are some hints of a decline. Still, about 8 percent of the nation's schools (6,700) have a serious problem with crime.

"About 2.4 million secondary school students (11 percent) have something stolen from them in a typical month. About 1.3 percent of the students (282,000) report being attacked in a month. Relatively few are injured seriously enough to need medical attention.

"Among secondary school teachers, about 12 percent (120,000) have something stolen at school in a month's time. Some 5,200 are physically attacked, about 1,000 of whom are seriously enough injured to require medical attention. Around 6,000 have something taken from them by force, weapons or threats."

THE NEA, which has accused Reagan of unfairly portraying the schools as a blackboard jungle, recently reissued a discipline manual for teachers that calls it "the most explosive problem in our schools today."

Jackson Toby, a sociology professor and director of the Institute for Criminological Research at Rutgers University, believes schools beset with troublemakers must choose "between the education of the majority and the education of the minority."

"We have to recognize that it is not possible to educate everyone," he says. "If they can't be students, then you have to ask them to leave."

LeRoy Larson, principal of Sage Valley Junior High School in Gillette, Wyo., does not feel that courts have tied his hands on discipline. "I have to do more paperwork and keep better records, but that's good," he says. "There were some principals going off the deep end and pounding on kids and kicking them out without giving them any rights."

Larson says school officials are using more common sense these days on matters like dress codes. "A lot of our old dress codes were stupid," he said. "I remember 10 years ago making girls kneel and measuring their miniskirts to see if they were 3 inches from the floor. That was ridiculous. We've gotten over those kind of hangups."

Battles continue in some locales, including Bound Brook, N.J., where educators are trying to stop Michael Jackson fans from wearing a single sequined glove to class.

Pro-Syrian politician meets with Gemayel

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Rashid Karami, a veteran pro-Syrian politician, met today with President Amin Gemayel and indicated afterwards he was likely to accept appointment as prime minister of a new Moslem-Christian cabinet.

His designation would be in accordance with agreements reached by Gemayel and Syrian President Hafez Assad in last week on ways to form a national unity government in Lebanon to end the nine-year civil war.

Karami, a former prime minister and Sunni Moslem from northern Lebanon, supports factions opposed to the Gemayel government and he conferred with Assad in Damascus for five hours Monday.

Syria has backed opposition militias in the civil war against a coalition of rightist Christian militias and the Christian-led Lebanese army.

After nearly two hours of talks today with Gemayel at the presidential palace in Baabda, eight miles east of Beirut, Karami indicated to reporters he would accept the prime minister's post. But he said formal announcement of the designation was "premature for the time being" because Gemayel has to go through the traditional motions of consulting various parliament blocs.

"We all should be recruited to serve Lebanon," Karami said. "There is a real chance for salvation. There is a strong hope to steer Lebanon to the shores of peace."

Karami, 62, said Lebanon's Moslem and Christian communities should be united in order to achieve "national entente, security and stability based on justice, equality and democracy."

Presidential palace sources said Gemayel and Karami agreed that Karami would conduct a round of consultations with Moslem political and religious leaders on the mandate of the projected cabinet before the designation is formally announced, probably Thursday.

Gemayel at the same time would consult with parliamentary leaders and Christian political parties to ensure their support for the new cabinet on the basis of an equal Christian-Moslem sharing of power.

"It's going to be a commando mission," Karami said in response to a question about the mandate of the new cabinet.

The overhaul of the cabinet would accompany other reforms to give Moslems an equal share in the administration and in parliament. Christians have dominated politics since Lebanon became independent from France in 1943.

Assad took a mediator's role after Gemayel, at Syria's demand, scrapped a pact with Israel that called for the Israelis to withdrawal their troops from Lebanon.

Israel has pulled its forces in Lebanon farther south, toward the Israeli-Lebanese border, but has said it won't completely withdraw until Syrian troops leave Lebanon.

Karami has served as prime minister nine times in the past 30 years. His last stretch in the office ended with first round of Lebanon's civil war in 1976.

Prime Minister Shafik Wazzan, now acting in a caretaker role, submitted his resignation in February, after anti-government Shiite Moslem and Druse militias wrested control of mostly Moslem west Beirut from the Lebanese army.

Syria's government-controlled newspapers today reiterated Assad's determination to help stop the Lebanese civil war through the formation of a national coalition Cabinet.

Diplomat says rebels still fighting in valley

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Afghanistan's regime claimed today that Soviet and Afghan forces controlled a strategic valley after routing anti-Marxist rebels in a major offensive, but a Western diplomat said fighting still raged there.

"Our valiant forces have crushed all rebel resistance in the Panjsher Valley," Afghan government radio said in a broadcast monitored in India.

A Western diplomatic source in New Delhi was skeptical.

"Considering the geography of the large, narrow valley, we disbelieve Kabul's claim that Soviet and Afghan forces captured Panjsher in one single day," said the source who spoke on condition of anonymity.

The 100-mile-long gorge — controlling important supply routes from the Soviet Union to Kabul, the Afghan capital — has been a springboard for guerrilla attacks on nearby Bagram air base, the largest Soviet installation in the nation.

Battle claims could not be independently confirmed, since Western journalists are rarely allowed into Afghanistan.

For four years, Soviets have waged offensives to try to crush the anti-communist resistance. Guerrillas control much of the rugged, mountainous countryside. The Soviets have concentrated on securing major cities and their lines of communication.

An estimated 10,000 insurgents in the area had resisted six previous Soviet assaults in the valley over the past four years.

"We believe the battle is still on in Panjsher," the diplomatic source said.

An Afghan exile leader, S.M. Maiwand, said the rebels apparently had retreated to the mountains and were expected to launch a major attack soon on the invaders.

Rebel leader Ahmad Shah Masoud last year agreed to a truce after Soviet-Afghan troops were pinned down at four places in the gorge.

The Afghan government said the latest offensive was triggered by repeated violation of the truce by Masoud, "acting at the behest of his two masters, American cowboy President Ronald Reagan and Pakistan dictator Mohammad Zia ul-Haq."

The radio added: "We could not tolerate this and sent the joint forces of Afghan and Soviet governments into Panjsher."

Western diplomats said the truce expired in January and the latest fighting was sparked by the guerrilla destruction of a key bridge on the most important supply route to the Soviet border.

Kabul's broadcast said: "After the crushing defeat of Masoud's criminal band, there is absolute calm in the beautiful Panjsher valley. We appeal to Panjsher residents who fled during the fighting to return to their homes."

U.S. government sources in Washington said up to 20,000 Soviet troops may be involved in the offensive, along with more than 500 tanks, armored troop carriers and helicopter gunships. The Soviets may be using bombers in high-altitude bombing raids on Panjsher, the sources added.

Coffee may do more than clear heads

Coffee was introduced to London in 1652 by a Turk known as Edwards who, with his Greek servant Pasqua Rosee, established the first coffee-house. In a handbill they praised coffee as a pleasant-tasting remedy, and added:

"In Turkey, where this is generally drunk, they are not troubled with the stone, gout, dropsy or scurvy, and their skins are exceedingly clear and white. It is neither laxative nor restringent."

Nicaragua complains about U.S.

THE HAGUE, Netherlands (AP) — Nicaragua charged today that the United States carried out "savage, brutal acts" to try to overthrow its leftist Sandinista government. It asked the World Court to order the campaign to stop.

In his opening statement at preliminary hearings on Nicaragua's case against the United States, Carlos Arguello, representing the Sandinista regime, claimed the U.S. government "flagrantly violated international law" by supporting rebel Nicaraguan forces based in neighboring Central American nations.

Nicaragua has asked the International Court of Justice to declare that the United States has violated international law by aiding the rebels and by supervising the mining of Nicaraguan ports.

It also is seeking the payment of reparations for "damages to persons, property and the Nicaraguan economy" caused by the alleged actions of the United States.

On April 9, before Nicaragua's petition to the World Court was filed, the U.S. State Department announced it would not recognize the court's jurisdiction over Central America for two years.

The mining is believed to have ceased after the disclosure that the CIA, with President Reagan's approval, participated in the mining.

Arguello, who is Nicaragua's ambassador to the Netherlands, referred to the rebels as a "mercenary army fighting to overthrow the (Nicaraguan) government."

He urged the court to rule that the United States should "immediately cease and desist from all use and threat of force" against Nicaragua "to prevent further loss of human life and further debasement of Nicaragua's sovereign rights.

"We have come to knock at the court's door ... searching not for armaments or troops to defend us, but for the moral support of the highest legal authority in the world," said Arguello.

Despite the State Department refusal to recognize Central American cases in the World Court, the United States will argue its side. Its argument was expected to be made on Thursday.

Jeane J. Kirkpatrick, ambassador to the United Nations, and other Reagan administration officials have said the Sandinistas would exploit the World Court for propaganda.

In its court complaint, Nicaragua accused the U.S. government of the "killing, wounding and kidnapping of Nicaraguan citizens," and claimed that the United States was violating Nicaragua's territorial integrity with "armed attacks" on air, land and sea.

The 15-member World Court is empowered to order interim measures when the sovereign rights of a nation are in jeopardy but has no powers of enforcement.

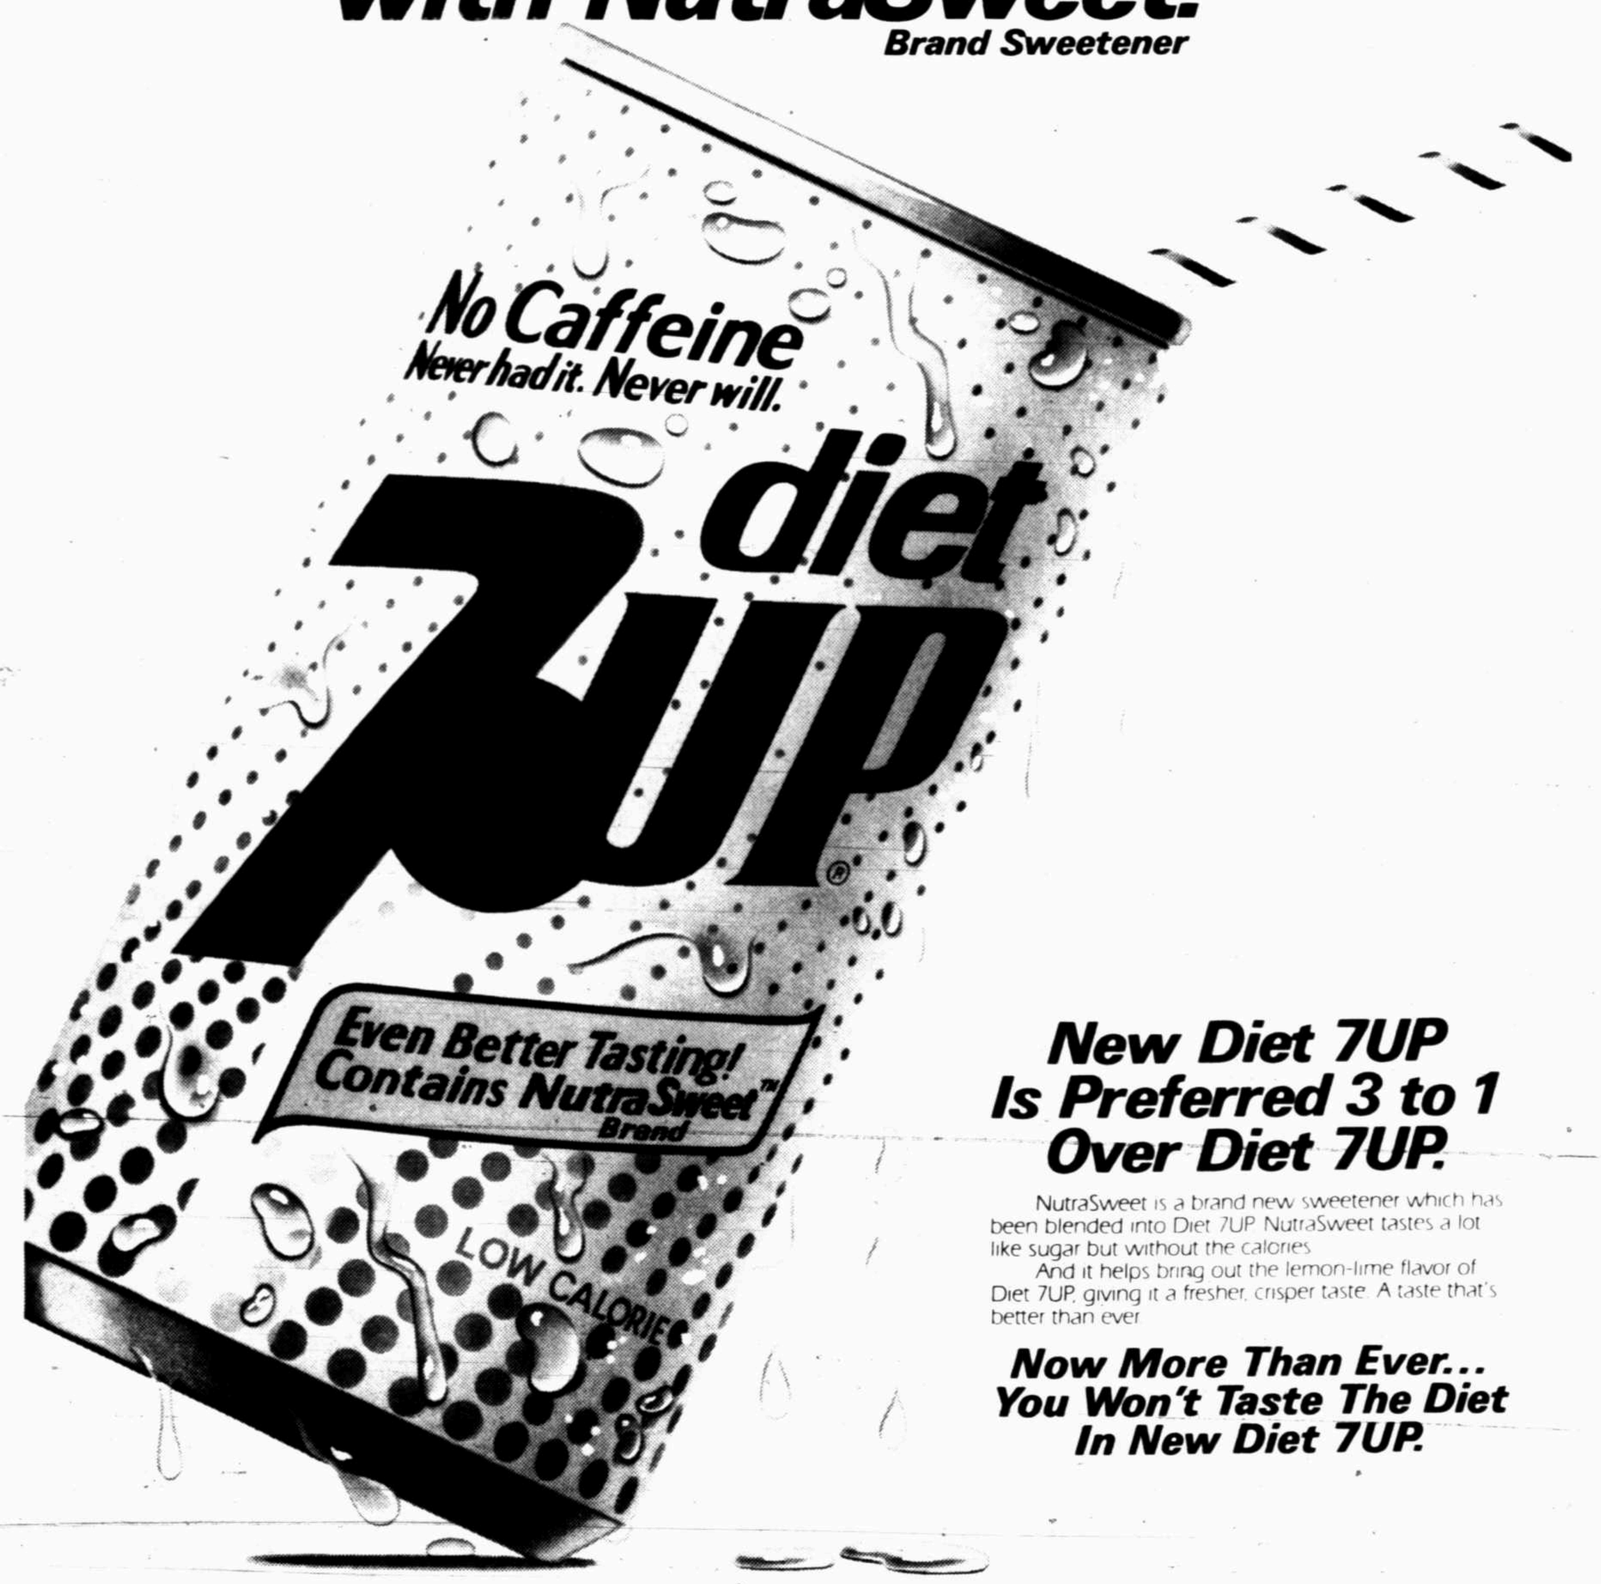

Many cases before the World Court last for years.

Chinese criticize U.S.-Taiwan links

PEKING (AP) — A U.S. Senate committee's resolution on Taiwan violates Chinese sovereignty, according to a political newspaper published today on the eve of President Reagan's arrival.

The article in the People's Political Consultative Conference newspaper said some U.S. officials cling to a "two Chinas" policy by supporting Taiwan, the capitalist island nation which Peking considers a renegade province.

Salt Lake City prepares to 'deal with the worst'

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The Wasatch Mountains that beckoned Brigham Young and his Mormons to this desert Zion in the 1800s are like the cannon of a hostile invader this spring, primed and loaded for an assault of water and mud.

Last spring, Salt Lake City's wide streets became muddy rivers with banks made of sandbags when the mountain runoff overwhelmed its normal channels. The floods caused $480 million in damage but, surprisingly, only one death.

The snowpack across the Rockies at mid-April was as much as 40 percent deeper than normal in Utah and Colorado, which has had 1,600 avalanches this year. In the Cascades of Oregon, record snows had left accumulations more than twice as deep as normal. The upper Midwest was soggy and "any appreciable rain would cause serious floods," said Robert Clark, chief hydrologist for the National Weather Service in Washington, D.C.

"It would only take a few inches of rain to produce serious flooding," Clark added.

WITH MORE cold and wet weather in the forecast, conditions were nearly identical to the disastrous spring of 1983.

"I think we are going to have to deal with the worst," said Larry Lunnen, the state public service commissioner who heads a task force preparing for a possible repeat performance in this city of 160,000 people.

To help deal with the threatened deluge, Utah has done everything short of reconstructing Noah's Ark. The state has spent $50 million in the past year building dikes, enlarging culverts and dredging the Jordan, which courses through the city on a 35-mile route from Utah Lake to the Great Salt Lake.

The Mormons, who include three out of every four residents of Utah, are organized to muster up to 150,000 volunteers — as they did last year — to fill sandbags and help evacuate residents in such canyon communities as Bountiful and Farmington to the north if that becomes necessary.

"THERE'S KIND of a spirit here of let's take care of ourselves," said Lunnen, who is himself a member of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. "It is fostered by the LDS Church."

Salt Lake County has stockpiled a million sandbags, with sacks of red, green, gray and white. Even so, said Public Works Director Donald G. Spencer, "customers" won't be allowed to order the color of their choice. Last year, one woman tried to insist that bags of only one color be stacked in front of her house.

Mormon Elder Robert E. Wells boasted last year that as a result of the church's close-knit organization at the grass-roots level, he could deliver truckloads of 200 to 500 volunteers within 30 minutes.

The Mormons feel they are in the Rocky Mountains in fulfillment of the prophecy of Joseph Smith, who founded the church in upstate New York in the early 19th century. But the mountains have not always been kind to them.

The first spring after Brigham Young arrived in this arid valley in 1847 and declared, "This is the place," hordes of crickets descended from the hills and began devouring the Mormons' crops. The crops were saved only when thousands of gulls from an island on the Great Salt Lake swooped down to feast on the crickets.

A GOLDEN monument to the sea gull stands in Temple Square in the heart of the city today.

The latest threat to the Mormons' promised land was aggravated by two snowstorms in the first week of April that deposited 4 feet of snow in the Wasatch Range, more than is normal for the entire month. At the Alta ski resort, a 40-minute drive from Temple Square, more than 50 feet of snow has been measured this season, a record.

By last week, the mudslides had begun, blocking highways and knocking out power in scattered areas around Salt Lake City. One avalanche roared a mile down Spring Mountain east of Ogden.

The Great Salt Lake, a briny inland sea 75 miles long and 30 miles wide, had risen to its highest point in 105 years — causing $100 million in damage — and was still rising.

Jobs become main issue for Appalachia

HERSHEY, Pa. (AP) — No longer the nation's stepchild, Appalachia is finally catching up to the rest of the United States, boasting new schools, new hospitals and new roads.

What's lacking now, however, are jobs in this once-mighty industrial region where coal was king and steel reigned supreme, according to 350 leaders and experts meeting to explore how Appalachia's 13 states can help dislocated workers.

"The industrial boom in the United States is over. No amount of modernization can return us to our former position of a heavy-industry superstar," explained Winifred A. Pizzano, co-chairwoman of the federal Appalachian Regional Commission and head of the three-day conference which began Wednesday.

"A new economy is taking place right before our eyes. And it involves new kinds of skills," agreed Thomas A. Bartlett, chancellor for the University of Alabama System.

"We have to have a different kind of mentality than we've had all our lives. There are no 40-year jobs anymore of high value. Jobs are going to keep changing," Bartlett said.

UNEMPLOYMENT currently averages 11.8 percent in the 13 Eastern states which straddle the Appalachian Mountains from New York to Mississippi, up slightly from a few years ago and still well above the national average.

The nationwide slide in employment began four years ago when heavy industry faltered because of the economic recession. Appalachia was particularly hard hit because manufacturing accounts for 30 percent of the region's employment, compared with 20 percent for the entire United States.

Since 1980, 500,000 Appalachian jobs have been lost. Most experts agree they're gone forever.

"It (heavy industry) is not going to come back. But nobody wants to tell the workers that, not the companies, not the unions. And the workers are sitting there waiting to be called back," said Marvin J. Cetron, president of Forecasting International Ltd.

A major problem, according to the regional commission, is convincing the blue-collar workforce that it has no choice but to start over.

STUDIES BY the commission, established in 1965 to rid Appalachia of poverty, illiteracy and inadequate health and educational facilities, show that displaced workers, or those left jobless due to structural changes in the economy, most often are middle-class men who thought they were "making it." They had home mortgages, school-age children and community commitments.

"Honest to gosh, these people think these jobs are going to come back or should come back. And everybody in the community thinks that. That's a serious problem with their becoming involved in other jobs," Ms. Pizzano said.

The findings were based on interviews with 100 Pittsburgh-area steelworkers.

Meanwhile, many of the new skills being learned may also become outmoded in the near future, according to Bartlett.

"IF ONE isn't computer-literate, one has a very bleak employment future. If you don't have some idea of information processing, you're going to be obsolete," he said, citing the futility of blue-collar workers studying to become upholsterers, auto mechanics and welders.

Existing programs to retrain workers must be made more "relevant," Ms. Pizzano said.

"If you're training them to do something they don't think they're going to get a job in, they won't go. If you're talking to them about relocation and they have mortgages to pay, they don't want to relocate," she said.

But Hans F. Mayer, an aide to Maryland Gov. Harry R. Hughes, said retraining programs are not a panacea because few workers will earn as much as they did in the mines or the mills.

WHAT'S needed, most experts agree, is for Appalachia's 13 states to increase their economic growth — and thus increase employment — by revamping old industries, attracting high technology and claiming a larger share of the world market.

Such tactics already are being followed in North Carolina, which has established a research center for microelectronics, according to J. Paul Essex Jr., an aide to Gov. James B. Hunt Jr.

"To be continuous, to be perpetual, to be ongoing, we must learn to live more competitively not only in Appalachia but in our country in general, too," Dunlop said.

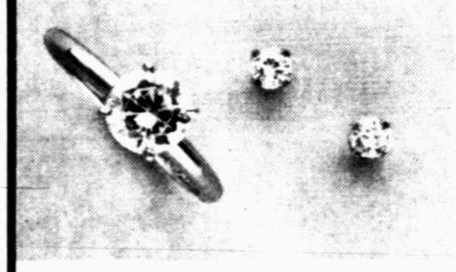

"We've got to look to the future," Cetron added. "We can't keep looking behind."

Salt Lake City prepares to 'deal with the worst'

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The Wasatch Mountains that beckoned Brigham Young and his Mormons to this desert Zion in the 1800s are like the cannon of a hostile invader this spring, primed and loaded for an assault of water and mud.

Last spring, Salt Lake City's wide streets became muddy rivers with banks made of sandbags when the mountain runoff overwhelmed its normal channels. The floods caused $480 million in damage but, surprisingly, only one death.

The snowpack across the Rockies at mid-April was as much as 40 percent deeper than normal in Utah and Colorado, which has had 1,600 avalanches this year. In the Cascades of Oregon, record snows had left accumulations more than twice as deep as normal. The upper Midwest was soggy and "any appreciable rain would cause serious floods," said Robert Clark, chief hydrologist for the National Weather Service in Washington, D.C.

"It would only take a few inches of rain to produce serious flooding," Clark added.

WITH MORE cold and wet weather in the forecast, conditions were nearly identical to the disastrous spring of 1983.

"I think we are going to have to deal with the worst," said Larry Lunnen, the state public service commissioner who heads a task force preparing for a possible repeat performance in this city of 160,000 people.

To help deal with the threatened deluge, Utah has done everything short of reconstructing Noah's Ark. The state has spent $50 million in the past year building dikes, enlarging culverts and dredging the Jordan, which courses through the city on a 35-mile route from Utah Lake to the Great Salt Lake.

The Mormons, who include three out of every four residents of Utah, are organized to muster up to 150,000 volunteers — as they did last year — to fill sandbags and help evacuate residents in such canyon communities as Bountiful and Farmington to the north if that becomes necessary.

"THERE'S KIND of a spirit here of let's take care of ourselves," said Lunnen, who is himself a member of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. "It is fostered by the LDS Church."

Salt Lake County has stockpiled a million sandbags, with sacks of red, green, gray and white. Even so, said Public Works Director Donald G. Spencer, "customers" won't be allowed to order the color of their choice. Last year, one woman tried to insist that bags of only one color be stacked in front of her house.

Mormon Elder Robert E. Wells boasted last year that as a result of the church's close-knit organization at the grass-roots level, he could deliver truckloads of 200 to 500 volunteers within 30 minutes.

The Mormons feel they are in the Rocky Mountains in fulfillment of the prophecy of Joseph Smith, who founded the church in upstate New York in the early 19th century. But the mountains have not always been kind to them.

The first spring after Brigham Young arrived in this arid valley in 1847 and declared, "This is the place," hordes of crickets descended from the hills and began devouring the Mormons' crops. The crops were saved only when thousands of gulls from an island on the Great Salt Lake swooped down to feast on the crickets.

A GOLDEN monument to the sea gull stands in Temple Square in the heart of the city today.

The latest threat to the Mormons' promised land was aggravated by two snowstorms in the first week of April that deposited 4 feet of snow in the Wasatch Range, more than is normal for the entire month. At the Alta ski resort, a 40-minute drive from Temple Square, more than 50 feet of snow has been measured this season, a record.

By last week, the mudslides had begun, blocking highways and knocking out power in scattered areas around Salt Lake City. One avalanche roared a mile down Spring Mountain east of Ogden.

The Great Salt Lake, a briny inland sea 75 miles long and 30 miles wide, had risen to its highest point in 105 years — causing $100 million in damage — and was still rising.

Jobs become main issue for Appalachia

HERSHEY, Pa. (AP) — No longer the nation's stepchild, Appalachia is finally catching up to the rest of the United States, boasting new schools, new hospitals and new roads.

What's lacking now, however, are jobs in this once-mighty industrial region where coal was king and steel reigned supreme, according to 350 leaders and experts meeting to explore how Appalachia's 13 states can help dislocated workers.

"The industrial boom in the United States is over. No amount of modernization can return us to our former position of a heavy-industry superstar," explained Winifred A. Pizzano, co-chairwoman of the federal Appalachian Regional Commission and head of the three-day conference which began Wednesday.

"A new economy is taking place right before our eyes. And it involves new kinds of skills," agreed Thomas A. Bartlett, chancellor for the University of Alabama System.

"We have to have a different kind of mentality than we've had all our lives. There are no 40-year jobs anymore of high value. Jobs are going to keep changing," Bartlett said.

UNEMPLOYMENT currently averages 11.8 percent in the 13 Eastern states which straddle the Appalachian Mountains from New York to Mississippi, up slightly from a few years ago and still well above the national average.

The nationwide slide in employment began four years ago when heavy industry faltered because of the economic recession. Appalachia was particularly hard hit because manufacturing accounts for 30 percent of the region's employment, compared with 20 percent for the entire United States.

Since 1980, 500,000 Appalachian jobs have been lost. Most experts agree they're gone forever.

"It (heavy industry) is not going to come back. But nobody wants to tell the workers that, not the companies, not the unions. And the workers are sitting there waiting to be called back," said Marvin J. Cetron, president of Forecasting International Ltd.

A major problem, according to the regional commission, is convincing the blue-collar workforce that it has no choice but to start over.

STUDIES BY the commission, established in 1965 to rid Appalachia of poverty, illiteracy and inadequate health and educational facilities, show that displaced workers, or those left jobless due to structural changes in the economy, most often are middle-class men who thought they were "making it." They had home mortgages, school-age children and community commitments.

"Honest to gosh, these people think these jobs are going to come back or should come back. And everybody in the community thinks that. That's a serious problem with their becoming involved in other jobs," Ms. Pizzano said.

The findings were based on interviews with 100 Pittsburgh-area steelworkers.

Meanwhile, many of the new skills being learned may also become outmoded in the near future, according to Bartlett.

"IF ONE isn't computer-literate, one has a very bleak employment future. If you don't have some idea of information processing, you're going to be obsolete," he said, citing the futility of blue-collar workers studying to become upholsterers, auto mechanics and welders.

Existing programs to retrain workers must be made more "relevant," Ms. Pizzano said.

"If you're training them to do something they don't think they're going to get a job in, they won't go. If you're talking to them about relocation and they have mortgages to pay, they don't want to relocate," she said.

But Hans F. Mayer, an aide to Maryland Gov. Harry R. Hughes, said retraining programs are not a panacea because few workers will earn as much as they did in the mines or the mills.

WHAT'S needed, most experts agree, is for Appalachia's 13 states to increase their economic growth — and thus increase employment — by revamping old industries, attracting high technology and claiming a larger share of the world market.

Such tactics already are being followed in North Carolina, which has established a research center for microelectronics, according to J. Paul Essex Jr., an aide to Gov. James B. Hunt Jr.

"To be continuous, to be perpetual, to be ongoing, we must learn to live more competitively not only in Appalachia but in our country in general, too," Dunlop said.

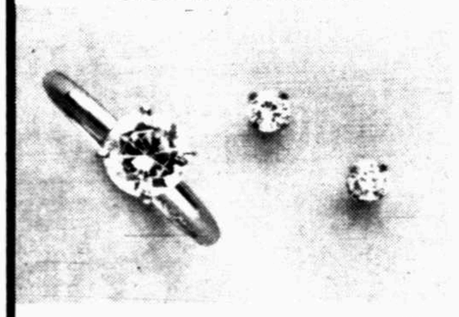

"We've got to look to the future," Cetron added. "We can't keep looking behind."

Dyngus Day ushers in spring

WEST SENECA, N.Y. (AP) — Dyngus Day may not ring a bell with most people, but for Stella Rodak and others of Polish descent it brings back fond memories.

"I remember when I was a girl, I opened our window and the man next door sprayed me with a garden hose," recalled Mrs. Rodak. "Then you had to go mop the floor."

The tradition of dousing single, young women is one aspect of Dyngus Day that wasn't visible Monday at what organizers billed as "The World's Largest Dyngus Day Festival."

But drinking, polka dancing and eating were much in evidence among the 600 people attending the celebration.

Dyngus Day is the day after Easter, and it signals both an end to the austerity of Lent and the beginning of spring. Mixed in are various courtship rituals.

The day sometimes is referred to as the Polish Sadie Hawkins Day, explained organizer Ron Polak, because women are allowed to display affection toward a fellow, either by dousing him with water or striking him in the legs with pussy willows.

Just as St. Patrick's Day allows all to be Irish for a day, Dyngus Day makes honorary Poles of everyone who wishes they were, according to the celebrants.

Man returns home to identify brother's body

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Felipe Menjivar fled the spreading civil war three years ago, taking his family to Austria. But last month he returned, with the grim task of identifiying the body of his brother, who was robbed and slain, then buried in a shallow grave.

Menjivar, a 34-year-old political scientist, and his brother Ernesto, 32, were the sons of an army colonel and both had studied abroad.

When Felipe, fearing for the safety of his wife and two children, decided to leave El Salvador, he suggested that Ernesto, his wife and three children join him.

But the younger brother declined, staying in San Salvador to teach mathematics at the National University and a French school. Early this year, he took a third job, teaching computer science in Sonsonate, to provide more money for his family.

On March 7, Ernesto Menjivar telephoned his wife from Sonsonate, 40 miles west of the capital, to say he would be home for supper.

His yellow Datsun pickup truck was discovered the next day, stripped down and abandoned on a road in a shantytown on the northern outskirts of San Salvador.

A week later, Felipe received a call at his home in Vienna, and was told that his mother, unable to find Ernesto, had a nervous breakdown.

Felipe flew home and on March 20, accompanied by a lawyer and a judge, went to a desolate spot on the road 11 miles northwest of the capital where a rotting body had been found a few days earlier.

He identified the remains from dental records and a Texas A&M T-shirt Ernesto was wearing when he disappeared.

Such murders often are blamed on right-wing death squads linked to government security forces, but Felipe Menjivar said, "I have searched my brother's past, and came up with nothing. I know of no political activities. Even with the family, he never talked about olitics."

"The legal system here has so many problems. They have armed so many crazy people and given them uniforms. They don't even know who all these men are."

—Felipe Menjivar

The Menjivar family pressed officials to find the killers, and their action coincided with a police investigation into the slayings of three other men that had led to two arrests.

Police said Walter Daniel Lone Oliva, Manuel de Jesus Bolanos, and former police agent Balmore Pena Lopez were shot and killed near Sacacoyo, 22 miles west of the capital, and the bodies were found after Lone Oliva's father reported their disappearance.

The father, Remberto Oliva Duarte, told police he had been stopped March 15 by members of the local civil defense force at a checkpoint on the road leading to Sononate.

He said the guards also stopped the car in which his son was riding, and then ordered Oliva Duarte to drive on. When his son did not arrive home, Oliva Duarte went to police and the other car was found abanonded at the spot where it had been stopped.

Using the father's information, police on March 21 arrested civil defense Sgt. Juan Sanchez Velasquez and patrolman Carlos Wilfredo Chulo Roque for the killings of Duarte's son and the two other men.

On April 14, Chulo admitted in testimony given to police that he also was involved in the murder of Ernesto Menjivar.

He said he, Sanchez Velasquez and four other men had stopped Menjivar at a roadblock and drove him to an isolated section of the road where the sergeant accused the captive of being a communist.

Chulo testified that Menjivar pleaded with the guards to consider his wife and children, but they stabbed him to death with a bayonet.

Menjivar left three children, two by an earlier marriage and a five-month-old son by his second wife, Carolina.

Police said robbery was the apparent motive for the murders of Menjivar and the three other men. They said Menjivar's watch and the tires from his truck had been sold to peddlers in San Salvador.

Two of the other civil defense guards named by Chulo have been arrested but two fled and have not been found, the police reported.

Ernesto Menjivar's death was added to the toll of some 50,000 Salvadorans who have perished in the 4½-year-old civil war between left-wing guerrillas and the government, with security forces blamed for most of the deaths.

The civil defense force is a paramilitary unit with about 15,000 men. They are under the command of the Defense Ministry, but receive no pay and get their funds from the local communities.

Felipe Menjivar said he doubted that his brother's killers would be brought to justice.

"The legal system here has so many problems," he said.

"They have armed so many crazy people and given them uniforms. They don't even know who all these men are."

Marisa Bellisario, the first woman to head an Italian company, she has also made it profitable.

Woman saves ailing company

ROME (AP) — Marisa Bellisario is an oddity in the world of Italian industry. Not only is she the first woman to head a major company, she also has made it profitable.

At 48, Ms. Bellisario has risen to the top of Italy's leading telecommunications manufacturer, Italtel, and in just three years has transformed it from a deficit-ridden monolith into a tough competitor.

In a country where unions are so powerful they frequently dictate the future of an industry, the tall, self-assured executive gained labor backing to completely restructure the company and cut the workforce.

And she's aiming to do more.

"I don't underestimate my abilities, but I owe a lot to luck," she said in an interview with The Associated Press, speaking in the fluent English she learned working in the United States for Olivetti in 1979. "There's no doubt that taking over Italtel was risky. It had to change in order to survive."

The press treats Ms. Bellisario as something of a star. "Blonde, beautiful and efficient — a miracle," ran a recent headline in the Milan newspaper Il Giorno. Rome's La Repubblica put her on its list of the top 10 industrial executives in the country.

Her male counterparts in other leading industries tend to be more grudging in their praise, but Ms. Bellisario said she was too busy to pay much attention to either view.

When she was appointed managing director and chief executive officer of Italtel in 1981, the company had a massive bureaucracy, heavy losses and a decade-long history of a lack of innovation.

She launched a housecleaning that, in her words, "succeeded in three years in making the changes most industries make in 15," cutting the workforce from 29,000 to 21,700, replacing nearly half of the management and shifting the emphasis of Italtel's products from mechanical to electronic.

"Italtel was solely a manufacturing company when I took over," she said. "I realized immediately that we needed to drastically modernize in order to increase sales."

The results: In 1983 Italtel made a profit worth the equivalent of $3 million, compared to losses of $84 million in 1982 and more than twice that the year before.

Company sales were about $700 million last year, and Italtel currently supplies the Italian state telephone company, SIP, with about 60 percent of its equipment.

Ms. Bellisario relates her success in spurring rapid changes to a direct negotiating approach with STET, the Italian state holding for communications that controls Italtel, and with the unions.

"I was extremely frank: I showed them that unless these modernizations were implemented, even more drastic measures would become necessary," she said.

The executive has lived in a male-dominated world since she studied economics at Turin University and began her career in 1960 as program analyst in the electronics division of Olivetti, Italy's information processing giant.

By 1979 she had moved up the hierarchy to become president of the Olivetti Corporation of America, with stints in between at Italian subsidiaries of General Electric and Honeywell.

Often she was the only woman on a project, and was looked upon as "something unusual" by her male colleagues, she acknowledges.

But Ms. Bellisario, whose brightly colored clothes, red-blond hair and wide smile stand out in a world of dark suits and ties, insists that being a woman has not made her job more difficult.

"After you work with people professionally it ceases to become an issue," she said.

In 1980 she entered Italtel as co-general manager, but when her recommendations for changes were resisted, she threatened to quit. Instead of firing her, STET moved her into the No. 1 position at Italtel and transferred her predecessor to another company.

Ms. Bellisario credits much of her rise in power to a love of hard work. She starts the day at 9 a.m. and rarely leaves the office before 9 p.m., using nights to shuttle between the company's headquarters in Milan and her spacious but simple offices in Rome.

But work is off-limits on weekends, which Ms. Bellisario spends at her home in Turin with her husband, Lionello Cantoni, a mathematics professor at Turin University.

The couple has no children, something the executive calls a "conscious decision."

"For me it is really important to be free and flexible, something I could not be as a responsible mother," she said.

Hart burdening Mondale with labor, Carter

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — If Walter Mondale is to win the Democratic presidential nomination, Gary Hart wants to make the former vice president do it under the weight of excess baggage from the AFL-CIO and the presidency of Jimmy Carter.

Hart, who picked up another delegate-contest victory Tuesday in Vermont's caucuses, was stopping at an agricultural demonstration center in Memphis today. Later he was going to Nashville for a speech at Vanderbilt University, hammering at Mondale on the issues of his support from organized labor and the way money has been flowing to Mondale's campaign through delegate committees.

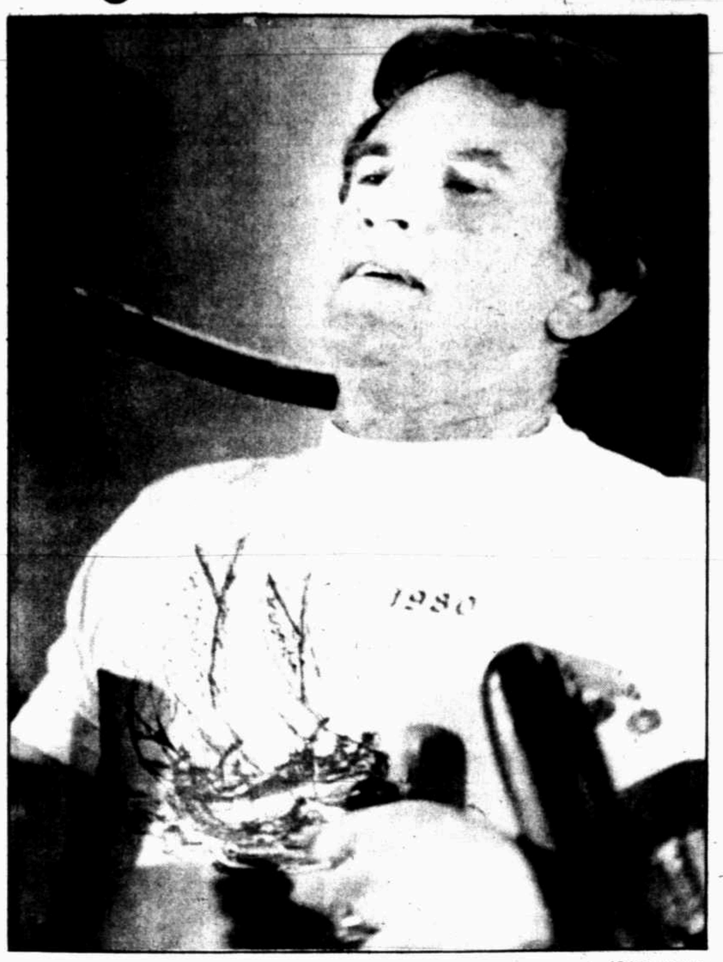

In blunt speeches this week in Texas, Ohio and Tennessee, Hart has attempted to link Mondale to Republican President Reagan as examples of old-style politicians who cater to selected special interest groups at the expense of the general population.

He also has increasingly linked Mondale to former President Carter, suggesting the Democratic Party may be no more successful this year with a ticket headed by Mondale than it was with the Carter-Mondale combination voters rejected in 1980.

During a speech Tuesday in Cleveland, Ohio, Hart told his audience that Reagan's economic program has left their "industrial heartland ... scarred with once-thriving factories fallen silent, machines turing to rust, furnaces that forged steel turned cold, hard-working men and women discarded and ignored."

He added, "It will take more than changing parties to save our economy. If we seek merely to exchange one failed vision for another, our nation will still be in a period of dramatic decline."

In Vermont, with 81 percent of the local caucuses counted, Hart won with 49 percent of the vote to 33 percent for Mondale and 14 percent for the Rev. Jesse Jackson. At stake were 13 national convention delegates.

Democratic presidential hopeful Gary Hart works out on an exercise machine at the 13th Street Racquet Club in Cleveland Tuesday morning before embarking on a full day of campaigning in Cleveland and Youngstown, Ohio.

Following the Cleveland speech, Hart visited an an idled steel plant in Youngstown. There he said Mondale's economic program may be more humane than Reagan's but that it has "no less failure in its soul."

Hart added Mondale's program "is a collection of old and tired ideas, held together by paralyzing commitments to special interests and constituent groups."

He also contrasted Mondale's promises with the record of the Carter administration during which Mondale was vice president.

"Walter Mondale may promise industrial renewal, but Carter-Mondale delivered bailouts, Band-Aids and industrial decline," Hart said, also citing high interest rates and inflation during Jimmy Carter's presidency.

Hart hit specifically at the loan guarantees for Chrysler Corp., which Mondale has hailed by pointing to the company's record quarterly profits posted recently.

Hart said the Chrysler example does not show the success of the bailout strategy.

"Thousands of workers still take paycuts, thousands more lose their jobs. A bailout is not a cure, it is simply a symptom."

Hart also quoted then-Sen. Mondale from the Congressional Record in 1971 as saying a similar bailout for Lockheed Corp. "cannot help but undermine the incentives and the discipline needed for efficiency."

On the delegate committees, more than 100 of the state-level committees have been set up to receive money from political action committees.

Hart's campaign has filed a complaint with the Federal Election Commission accusing Mondale of using the committees to exceed federal campaign spending limits. Mondale has said he would not accept money from political action committees, but the Hart campaign has charged Mondale is encouraging formation of the committees by slates of delegates to raise and spend money on his behalf.

Mondale makes no apologies on money

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (AP) — Walter F. Mondale says he has no apologies to make about "very modest amounts of money" that delegate committees are spending on his behalf with the help of labor unions' political action committees.

The front-runner for the Democratic presidential nomination was visitig a robotics station and computer design program at Chattanooga State Technical College today before taking his campaign to Raleigh, N.C., and Fort Worth, Texas.

Mondale, through spokeswoman Ann Stock, declined to comment Tuesday night on his loss to Gary Hart in Vermont's Democratic caucuses, the first round in that state's delegate-selection process where 13 national convention delegates were at stake.

Mondale's second-place finish was stronger than his showing in the state's non-binding primary in early March, however, when Hart rolled up a 71 percent majority. In the caucuses, Hart won about 49 percent of the vote to 33 percent for Mondale, based on reports from 81 percent of the caucuses.

Common Cause, the self-styled citizens' lobby, charged Tuesday that Mondale's use of independent delegate committees threatened the integrity of federal campaign spending laws. The organization's president, Fred Wertheimer, urged Mondale to halt the activitfes of the committees or to include them as part of his official campaign for purposes of federal election laws.

The Washington Post said in today's editions that reports to the Federal Election Commission reveal a pattern of apparent coordination between the committees, which are supposedly independent, and Mondale's national campaign organization. The newspaper said FEC records show repeated transfers of money from delegate committees in one state to similar groups in another.

Presidential aspirant Waler Mondale has a lengthy discussion with auto worker Winston Hammon at the Indianapolis Chrysler electrical plant Tuesday. Mondale made a single stop at the plant where he blasted Gary Hart for not supporting the 1979 federal bailout of the Chrysler Corporation.

Twenty-two delegates at stake in Utah caucuses

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Gary Hart, the senator from neighboring Colorado, hoped to cash in on his regional clout and demonstrate his strength in the West tonight as Utah Democrats caucus to divide 22 national convention delegates.

Utah voters have had no direct guidance from the candidates. With the stakes so small here, Hart, Walter F. Mondale and the Rev. Jesse Jackson have not campaigned personally in Utah in favor of more lucrative delegate territory such as Ohio and Texas, where upcoming contests will decide more than 300 delegates.

However, Hart participated in a news conference via telephone at his campaign headquarters Monday night. A strong Hart showing here would back up his claims to a healthy constituency in the West.

Mondale supporters, meanwhile, are not willing to write off the state. State coordinator Blaze Wharton said the former vice president can win in Utah with a better organization to offset Hart's regional popularity. But he said even a close loss in Hart's backyard still should be counted as a victory for Mondale.

Jackson is not expected to do well in the presidential preference vote. Utah has only about 10,000 blacks, less than 1 percent of the state's population.

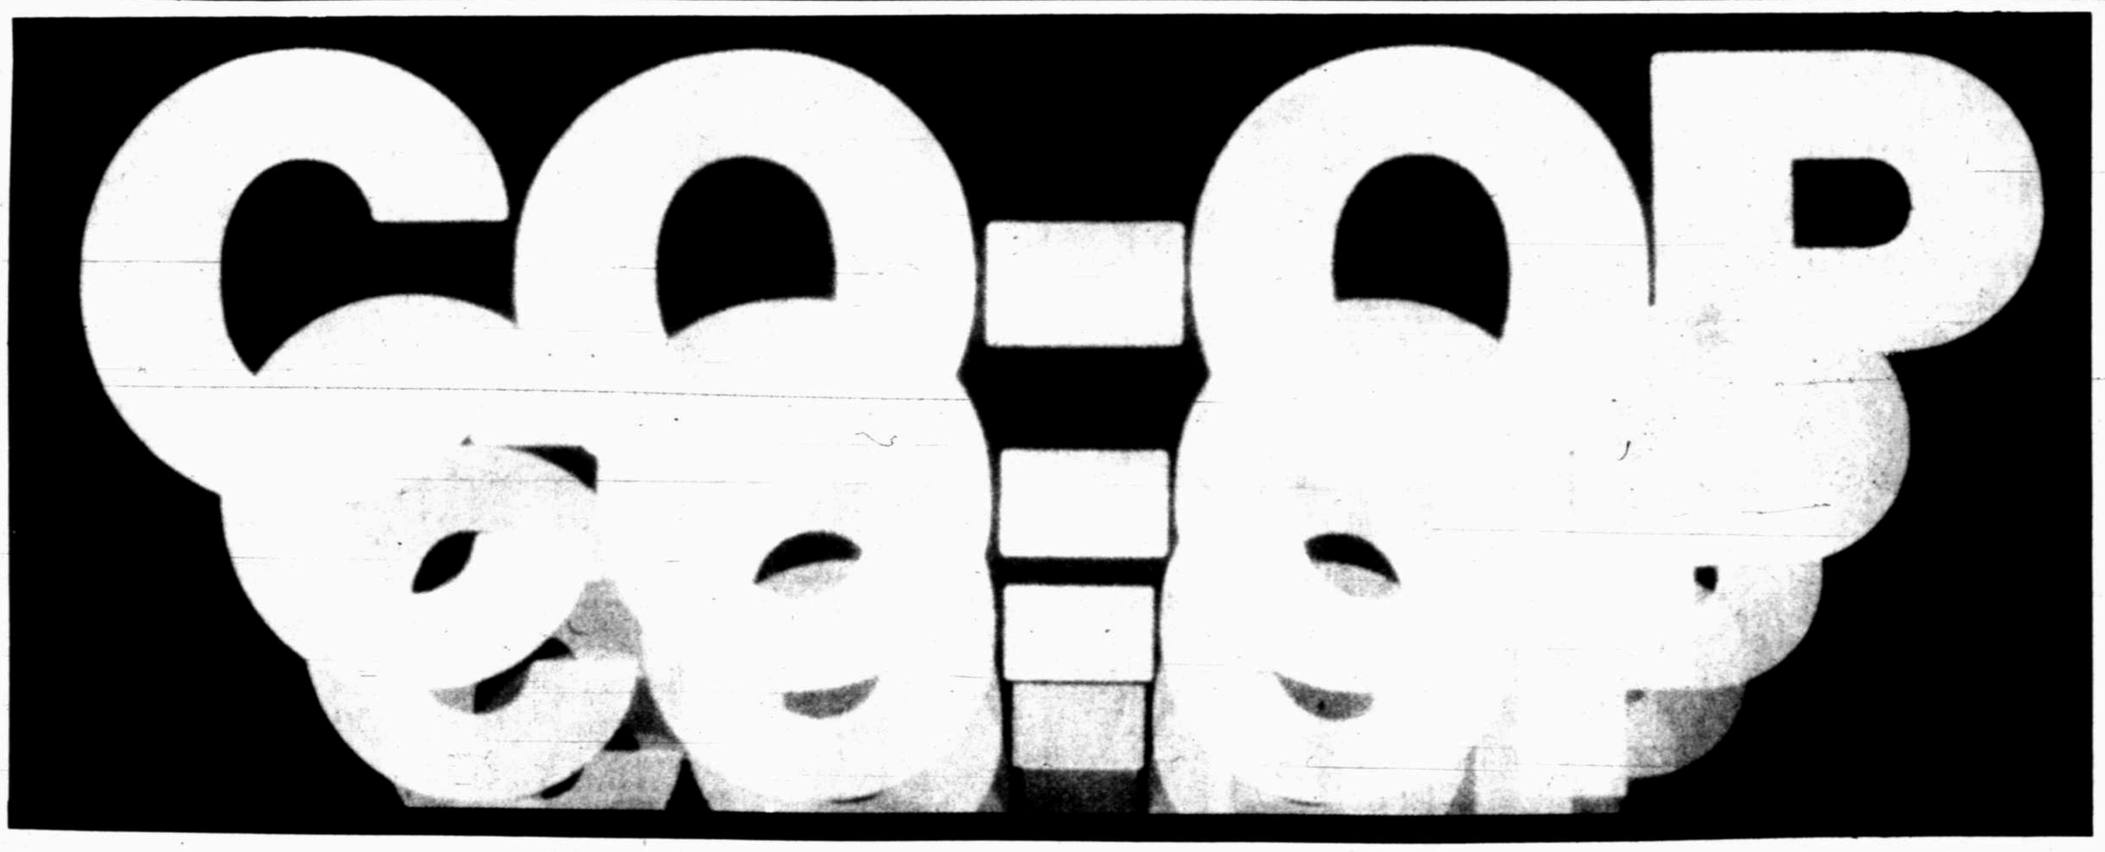

The mass meetings, held in voting districts around the state, are expected to attract 5 percent to 10 percent of the state's 750,000 registered voters. Starting times vary from county to county.

The mass meetings originally were scheduled April 16, but the Legislature changed the date to avoid a conflict with Passover observance.

Democrats, in addition to electing delegates to the state convention, will cast secret ballots for Mondale, Hart and Jackson in the presidential preference vote. The 22 unpledged national delegate slots will be apportioned according to the percentage of the vote received by each candidate.

The remaining five delegate slots are reserved for party and elected officials.

Gubernatorial candidates hoping to replace outgoing Gov. Scott Matheson face their first major hurdle at the neighborhood political mass meetings. Delegates elected at the caucuses will trim the gubernatorial field to no more than two candidates each at the state conventions in June.

Entertainer Jerry Lee Lewis poses with his sixth wife, Kerri McCarver, 22, before they were married Tuesday in Memphis.

Singer weds for sixth time

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Rockabilly piano pounder Jerry Lee Lewis has tied the knot for the sixth time, marrying Kerrie McCarver, an aspiring 22-year-old country singer from Memphis.

Lewis, 48, and Miss McCarver exchanged vows Tuesday at the home of the bride's parents in a ceremony restricted to family and friends.

Lewis' fifth wife, Shawn Michelle, 25, was found dead in bed Aug. 24 of a methadone overdose at the couple's residence in nearby Nesbit, Miss. She and Lewis had been married three months.

Three of Lewis' marriages ended in divorce, and his fourth wife, Jaren, drowned in 1982. His most publicized marriage was his third, in 1957, to his 13-year-old cousin, Myra Gail Brown.

Lewis' biggest hits include "Great Balls of Fire" and "Whole Lotta Shakin' Goin' On."

James Dozier

FORT HOOD (AP) — James L. Dozier, the Army brigadier general held prisoner 42 days by Itzlian terrorists in 1982, has been awarded a second star.

Dozier was promoted to major general Tuesday, and the 3rd Corps and Fort Hood deputy commander said it is "an exciting time to be in the Army."

"When you combine the best soldiers I've seen in my 34 years of service with the superb equipment we're now getting, you can't help but get excited," said the 53-year-old officer.

Dozier was kidnapped while serving as deputy chief of staff for the Allied Land Forces in southern Europe. He was freed Jan. 28, 1982, when Italian police stormed a Red Brigades apartment.

Gordon Liddy

PEORIA, Ill. (AP) — Convicted Watergate burglar G. Gordon Liddy says the problem with most Americans is that they have a "deep and abiding belief in the Easter Bunny."

"There's something different about us — different from people of Europe, Africa, Asia," Liddy told about 800 people gathered Monday night at Bradley University to hear him.

"The vast majority of our fellow citizens live lives of illusion," he said. "Either they are unable at all to comprehend the real world or, if they can, they tend to turn away from it and shun the harsher aspects of it."

On Watergate, Liddy said he regrets only that the break-in failed, saying that "any success is brilliant and any failure is stupid."

Liddy served 4½ years in prison for his Watergate crimes.

Elizabeth Dole

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration's auto safety information hotline gets 200,000 calls a year, and about a half-dozen callers got an added bonus when Transportation Secretary Elizabeth Dole herself picked up the phone.

Mrs. Dole, who handled the calls Tuesday to promote National Safety Week, said the experience "is bringing out the consumerist in me."

"I think people find it (the hotline) very helpful," she said. But she stopped short of promising additional funds for the program.

The hotline phone number is 800-424-9393, with a special number, 800-424-9153, for the hearing impaired.

Liv Ullman

ROME (AP) — Liv Ullman says she'll be taking a break from the movies for a while.

"I'm a little tired of cinema and have no film roles planned for the future," the 45-year-old actress said Tuesday. "I intend to devote the next year to social causes and the theater."

Ms. Ullman has been busy with her latest book, "Tides," which she hopes will be in print by the end of the year. Ms. Ullmann's previous book, the best-selling "Changing," was translated into more than 24 languages.

She was in Rome to attend the opening Tuesday of the annual conference of the United Nations Children's Fund. She is currently a "goodwill ambassador" to UNICEF, a post that has taken her to 16 countries to review the agency's programs.

Ms. Ullman is best known for her roles in films by Swedish director Ingmar Bergman, including "Persona," "Scenes from a Marriage," "Face to Face" and "Autumn Sonata."
