J. K. Hubbard Receives State Health Citation

AUSTIN — An offical State Department citation for work proficiency has been awarded to J. K. Hubbard, plant operations specialist with the Burkburnett water system. The citation reflects the high esteem in which Hubbard is held by state water authorities.

Signed by the State Health Commissioner and authorities of the Texas Water and Sewage Works Association, the certificate of competency is awarded only to those utility plant operators who have successfully demonstrated their skill and knowledge in modern principles of plant management.

To qualify for certification, a plant operator must have accumulated a prescribed amount of actual work experience. He must also have attended both regional and statewide short schools at which the techniques of water treatment and waste water disposal are taught, and must have passed an examination given by State Health Department sanitary engineers.

State law requires that at least one operator per shift be certified for competency by health department engineers, but many operators seek certification on their own time and at their own expense to increase their efficiency as key public servants.

The engineers said the attainment is evidence of Hubbard's efforts to better prepare himself for the duties of his profession.

Buckeye, Arizona, has a water desalting plant that produces 650,000 gallons a day for municipal use.

Education And The Golden Age

What should be the objectives of education — and of those who are education's recipients? A good answer to that comes from President Gerholz of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States.

As he sees it, America's Golden Age will arrive when education produces "scientists who are not ignorant of politics, politicians who are not ignorant of science and businessmen who can rejoice in a sunset or a sonata as well as in the chatter of a computer." Then, later, he said, "Education should be philosophy. It should be our nation's way of life. Young people should aspire to knowledge for its own sake. Those who are deprived of wordly goods, and a good start in life, should look for enrichment of their minds as well as their pocketbooks. Those who have specialized in one branch of knowledge should branch out in other directions."

We live in a world and a time in which everything, one way or another, is related. Business, politics, the sciences, the arts — all touch and influence each other. The whole man, using that phrase in the classic Greek sense, must be concerned with them all and have a knowledge of them all.

Making The Most Of The Tools

No one, except the most dedicated of socialized power advocates, can any longer doubt the ability of the investor-owned electric utilities to meet any and all of the needs of this nation. That power is supplied at rates regulated by public bodies — rates which allow only for the costs of providing service plus a very modest profit. And, in the process, the utilities are among the largest and most dependable payers of taxes to governments at all levels in every section of the country.

An outstanding example of progress in which utilities have played a leading role is the production of power from nuclear sources. Not long ago, many thought it would be years before such power was economically feasible. But, one by one, and more swiftlty than was generally believed at the beginning, the problems have been solved and the barriers eliminated or lowered. Today, in many areas, nuclear power is becoming competitive in cost with power from conventional fields.

New York is now providing another example of this. There the Consolidated Edison Company's board of trustees have authorized the construction of a nuclear generating unit having an initial rating of 873,000 kilowatts. Operation is scheduled for the spring of 1969. It will be an all-nuclear installation, powered by a pressurized water reactor. And it is a very big undertaking indeed, with the cost estimated at $108 million.

This illustrates the way investor-owned utilities the nation over anticipate the needs of the future and prepare for them. And they make the most of every available tool, whether it be new or old.

THE REASONS FOR PESTICIDES

Agricultural pesticides and fertilizers are absolutely necessary to maintain the United States' food supply at its present level. And increased use of agricultural chemicals in other nations will be necessary to boost the world's food supply.

Those unequivocal statements were made by a distinguishd entomologist, George C. Decker, Ph. D., in addressing a session of the Western Hemisphere Nutrition Congress.

Mr. Decke emphasized a number of points that demonstrate our dependence on pesticides. For one thing, farming is big business with high capital investments, and farmers can't afford to share-crop with crop-destroying pests. For another, pest controls pay high dividends — expenditures made for them yield net returns ranging from 29 per cent to more than 1,000 per cent on the investment. And, of major importance, to quote him directly, the widespread use of pesticides in farming was not brought about by "the unselfishness of the farmer, the greed of the chemical industry, or the stupidity of the Land Grant college scientists. Rather, it was the public's demand for high quality, unblemsihed produce; it was demands imposed by government-established market standards; it was the Food and Drug Administration's insistence that foods must be free of biological contaminants."

He also observed that "The agricultural production and the standard use of living in the various nations of the world are proportionate to knowledge and use of chemicals in agriculture." These chemicals are a basic and all-important elements i nfeeding soaring populations.

REPORT FROM SOUTH AFRICA—Part V

Umtata, Transkei, South Africa — The town of Umtata is the largest town in the area called the Transkei, which is one of the "homelands" reserved for the black natives called Bantu. The Transkei area is larger than Switzerland (17,000 square miles), fertile and with rainfall from 20 to 80 inches annually. One and a half million Bantu live here. A few thousand whites are teaching them modern farming methods, but progress is slow. The Bantu resist changing the old tribal ways. One Bantu here spent 15 years as an assistant in the Agricultural Department helping teach the natives to plow on the contour instead of up and down the hill, thus minimizing erosion. When the Bantu teacher retired to his own farm, he immediately reverted to his old practice of plowing straight up and down his hillsides. Thus the farm problem here is not agricultural but human (and so it is in America!). If and when the Bantu can be converted into reasonably good farmers, this area can accomodate not 1.5 million, but at least 5 million people.

The aim of the whites is to help the natives become self-supporting and independent, in their own country. Eventually the "homelands" areas can become separate states, either completely independent of the whites or part of a South African federation of nations with a common defense effort and a preferential trading system, similar to the "Common Market" in Europe. The "apartheid" program, which has been grossly misrepresented and misunderstood throughout the world, is to help these natives to own their own country, their own homes, farms, and businesses; to be proud of their own, instead of copying whites.

The whites have established industries here—furniture manufacturing, weaving, meat-processing — employing all-native workers, except for a handful of white directors and technicians. The bottleneck in industry is not finding markets or workers, but technicians, skilled people to train more Bantus.

Whites can own nothing in the Transkei area, except for a limited length of time. Eventually, all land owned by whites will have to be sold to Bantu.

The natives I have seen here have a far better life than the Russian farmers I saw in the Ukraine of Russia ("The workers' paradise") a few years ago. The Bantu have far more freedom than the Russian peasant. We in the United States have helped the Kremlin criminals to tighten the chains of slavery; and we have helped them modernize their agriculture by giving them machinery, seed, animals, fertilizer.

For South Africa our government and the world offer nothing but condemnation. South African athletes were even excluded from the Olympic games —but not Russian athletes. It would appear that the supreme crime today is not murder, even by the millions, but racialism.

South Africa's greatest need is time. Time to develop the Bantu. Time to prove that separate development, separate ownership, separate cultures are not only right but workable.

Doctor in the Kitchen

by W. W. Bauer, M.D.
Consultant, National Dairy Council

THE KITCHEN IS A HEALTH CENTER

Doctor in the kitchen? What's a doctor doing in the tchen? Kitchens are for homemakers cooks; not doctors! Well, now, let's just see. Kitchens are certainly for king and otherwise preparing d, aren't they? Well then, t food a basic essential for ng, along with water and air? d isn't the right food, prop- y selected, important and in- d essential, for good health, or and fitness? I've always ught so.

So maybe a doctor in the chen might be of some use helping the homemaker with important job of feeding her ily correctly, economically, happily, and with the least r and tear on herself. Not telling her how to run her se. She knows about that. in keeping her up to the ute in the fast-moving world nutritional research.

New Knowledge

ew knowledge is being de- ped all the time by thou- s of nutritional and clinical arch workers, and reported more journals than the home- er could possibly read. dn't it be helpful to have and-by source of such infor- on in your kitchen once a k?

, may I look in?

Kitchens Also Dangerous

tchens, I regret to say, are places where homemakers hurt. They deal with sharp s, jagged cans, hot utensils and liquids, whirling beaters and other electric appliances. Water or grease gets spilled on floors and causes falls. Escaping gas may explode: hot grease may start fires. Broken glassware may cause serious cuts. Perhaps the doctor's advice might be helpful in knowing what to do when such situations develop—or still better to keep them from developing. With your permission, madam?

Many Opinions

Many questions arise in the course of a week's meal planning and preparation. And over the bridge table, or at the laundromat, many opinions about food are expressed, some correct, some not.

There are, for example, homemakers who even wonder whether proteins and carbohydrates should be eaten at the same meal. Let's get the record straight. There is absolutely no reason for such concern. The notion that proteins and carbohydrates should not be eaten at the same meal arose from a dietary fad more than thirty years ago, and still pops up once in a while. Indeed, most foods naturally contain both of these nutrients.

Common Sense Nutrition

In nutrition, there are plenty of questions. Most people don't know the facts. For this reason, I hope you'll join the doctor in the kitchen next week, and for many more weeks to come. We'll talk common-sense nutrition for you and your family.

Good day — and good eating!

New Texas Water Safety Act To Become Effective April 1st

Austin, Texas — More than 200,000 motorboats subject to the new Texas Water Safety Act must be registered by April 1, State Highway Engineer D. C. Greer said today.

The law gives the Motor Vehicle Division of the Texas Highway Department the task of issuing certificates of number for boats operating in Texas waters, just as the division administers issuing of licenses and titles to motor vehicles operating on Texas highways.

Renewal notices for boats now registered in Texas will go out starting January 3, along with a brochure outlining key features of the new act.

"This is a good time for Texas skippers to brush up on the law," Greer said, "to make certain their craft complies with the extensive changes in the new Water Safety Act."

For the first time, state game wardens have full authority to enforce water safety statutes.

All current certificates of number of motorboats operating in Texas waters expire March 31, Greer said.

The new registrations will be valid for a 2-year period instead of the old 3-year registration period.

New fees are: Class A boats (less than 16 feet), $3; Class 1 boats (at least 16 feet long, but less than 26 feet), $6; Class 2 boats (at least 26, but less than 40 feet long), $9; and Class 3 boats (40 feet long and over), $12.

As an example in the changes in equipment in the new act, Greer noted that under the old regulations a small Class A boat needed only to show a single white light for nighttime operation. Now, such craft cruising on Texas waters after sundown must have red portside and green starboard lights as well as a white light showing from the stern.

The regulations also require horns, bells, fire extinguishers, flame arresters and other equipment, depending on the class and type of boat.

It also requires a boat towing skiers to mount a 4-inch rear view mirror.

Details of the new regulations also are contained in booklets supplied by the Motor Vehicle Division in more than 500 marine dealers in Texas. Copies of the Texas Water Safety Act are available at 10 cents a copy from the Texas Highway Department, Motor Vehicle Division, 40th and Jackson Street, Austin, Texas, 78703.

All fees over the cost of administering the certificate of number program are used by the Highway Department in construction of boat ramps on Texas lakes and waterways. More than 40 ramps have been constructed so far.

The law authorized political subdivisions, the authorities operating many Texas lakes and waterways and the Texas Highway Department to "zone" Texas water for specific boating and recreational use, and make local rules and regulations relating to the operation and equipment of boats, provided a copy of any rule or regulation be filed with the Texas Highway Department and the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department.

The Texas Highway Department, however, has left such zoning to local authorities, since the Department has no means or facilities for enforcement.

VETERANS

Questions - Answers

(Editor's Note: Veterans and their families are asking thousands of questions concerning the benefits their Government provides for them through Veterans Administration. Below are some representative queries. Additional information may be obtained at any VA office.)

Q—I received a pension from the VA and also Social Security benefits. I would like to know if a veteran such as myself has any preference for housing being built with government funds.

A—Any information on preference in obtaining housing must come from the local housing board in the city or town where the veteran resides.

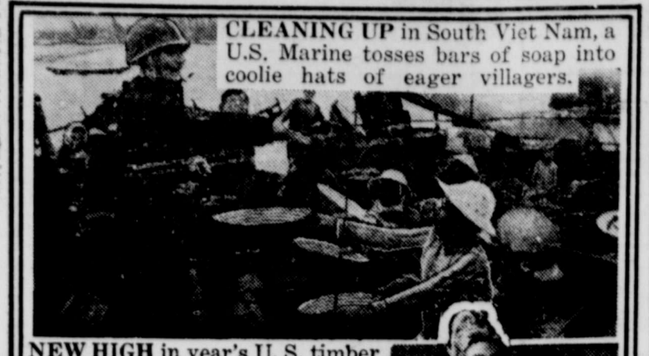

Q—My husband is a veteran of World War II. He is 40 years old and receiving compensation from the VA for a disability which is service-connected. I would like to know if he is still eligible for a 30-year mortgage on a home loan.

A—He may well be. An eligible World War II veteran's entitlement for a GI loan expires 10 years from the date of discharge from his last period of active duty, any part of which occurred in World War II, plus one year for each three months of active duty in World War II. In no case will entitlement extend beyond July 25, 1967. The nearest VA regional office can establish his deadline date.

Q—The VA considers me permanently, totally disabled as a result of an accident during peacetime military service. I was originally informed that my child is not entitled to VA educational assistance since my injury was not the result of the performance of an act of duty. Is this still true?

A—The law has now been changed and your child will be eligible for educational assistance. It is no longer necessary that the totally disabling condition (or death) result from the performance of an act of duty. It is only necessary that the permanently, totally disabled condition be service-connected.

"COOL HEADS" AND "ALL THAT JAZZ"

By D. R. SEGAL
Editor, Brownsville (Texas) Herald

Some deficiency in my otherwise flawless moral fibre leaves me peculiarly resistant to space hysteria.

I suppose this Gemini thing must be terribly important or that oil company wouldn't spend a jillion dollars televising every astronautical gulp, burb, sneeze and gasp.

Yet, it was almost a relief the other Sunday morning when Gemni Six came a cropper. It was a sort of reassurance that there is error even in the special world of science; and if a physics Ph.D from Cal Tech or MIT (reinforced by computers whose degree of sophistication is beyond belief) can blow one, get off my back, Doll, if I goof every once in a while!

Error, as much as success, is essential to human progress, especially if we're going to keep ourselves in proper prospective. The younger members of the household need to have it brought to their attention occasionally that even the government can poop off a few million bucks on a wet firecracker at Cape Kennedy it is capable of wasting billions on equally sodden programs to readjust the economy of the nation and redistribute the poverty.

Well, this is pretty heavy stuff to think about on a Sunday morning. I was about to turn from the oil company's living-color documentary of a colossal failure when I got caught up in the taped exchange of conversatins among the Gemini Seven astronauts, the Gemini Six earthbounds and the detached supermen who are heard from the NASA Valhalla in Houston.

At one point, Superman in Houston confirmed to the astronauts that all the insanely complicated gauges, knobs, meters and mechines were functioning properly, and, in his words, "all that jazz."

At another point Superman congratulated the astronauts as being "cool heads."

If you have a teenager in the house, you will recognize, with a groan, this "all that jazz" bit and the "cool head" reference.

To me, there was something utterly incongrouous, yet terrible pertinent, in the mixture of scienific jargon and highly inaccurate slang. The incongruity was the juxtaposition of exacititude with jargon. What is more precise than a pressure gauge reading? And what could be more inexact than "all that jazz?"

What has a "cool head" to do with the disciplined reaction of two men trained for years to do precisely what they did under a foreseeable set of circumstances?

The answer, of course, is hard to swallow: that space travel is a young man's game, just as wing-walking and barn-storming took the time and attention of the cream of an earlier era.

The wing-walkers of Lindy's day are the astronauts of the living-color era.

They are the jazz kids, the cool heads.

Where are the snows of yesterday? asks the poet.

Indeed — where are the 50-mission crushes, the swagger sticks, the Eighth Air Force mustaches, the hot pilots who flew by the seat of the pants?

And all that jazz?

ODE TO BURKBURNETT

By Joy Gresham Hagstrom

POET LAUREATE OF THE
TEXAS' FEDERATION OF WOMEN'S CL

There is a special liveliness
That dwells within the heart
Of Burkburnett, for everyone
Desires to do his part.

The people wearing friendly smiles
Possess the common aim
Of bettering the little town,
And honoring her name.

Progressive leaders forge ahead
To fill tomorrow's needs,
By urging all to higher goals
Through noble words and deeds.

There is a park where folks relax
Beside the swimming pool,
For thehy discerned that idleness
Is surely Satan's tool.

A library will rise to hold
A written treasure store,
For they discerned that idleness
Is something to deplore.

The Federated Study Clubs
Will never pause or fret,
Till all the finer things of life
Are brought to Burkburnett.

The Creation of Jobs

Dr. Kershner

THERE is something very wrong in principle about the President's instruction to all federal agencies that they must hire one youth for each one hundred regular employees. In the first place, there are persistant rumors that these jobs were supplied on a political patronage basis. That, however, is not the worst thing about this development.

A job exists when demand calls for some additional service or some form of goods for which the people are ready to pay. Jobs exist for the purpose of supplying the needs and wants of consumers, and not for the purpose of providing incomes for the workers.

There is no reason at all to assume that for every one hundred regular federal employees, another youth can be usefully employed. Some of the federal agencies unquestionably have more workers now than are needed. To take on extra help under such circumstances is unadulterated wastefulness. The interest of all of us, including the unemployed, is best served when public funds are conserved, not wasted.

The primary purpose of industry and of the service trades is to supply the wants of the people. People with money to spend create jobs. Jobs exist because demand creates them. If they are arbitrarily supplied on any other basis, public expenditure rises, leading to higher taxes, less demand on the part of the public for goods and services and, therefore, in the end, fewer jobs.

It cannot too often be repeated that the aim of business activity is not to supply jobs, but rather to meet the demands of the people. When the government undertakes to supply jobs, regardless of the demand arising from consumers, it is wasting public resources and heading us all in the direction of more government control of the economy and lower standards of living.

Policyholder Questions Answered by the Institute of Life Insurance 277 Park Ave., N.Y., N.Y., 10017

Q. I know a widow who is about 35 years old, and has two very young children. She has no life insurance, which surprised me. Shouldn't she have some?

A. It's not usually a good idea to answer a question with another question — but is she independently wealthy, and has she a carefully earmarked and established plan for the future upbringing of her children, in the event she should die? Otherwise, she has a very definite need for life insurance. Social Security benefits alone are usually insufficient to meet long-range financial goals, such as education, in the absence of a father. The unique advantage of the life insurance is its absolute guarantee as pre-arranged by the policyholder. Widows with young children usually budget money for these life insurance guarantees at least until they are past school age.

Q. I am trying to think ahead. In a couple of years I will be retiring from my job, and I want to plan now an income I can count on. I have a $25,000 straight life policy that I've had for 30 years and do not believe I will need for my wife after 65 because of other insurance. How can I use this towards retirement income?

A. Ask your agent or your company to give you their most economical plan for applying the cash value of this policy to a life income. You probably have a cash value by now of some $13,000 to $14,000 in this policy and with that you should be able to obtain a guaranteed monthly income for life (For you alone, guaranteed for 10 years) in the neighborhood of $80, which adds up to $960 a year.

GOD LOOKS ON THE HEART

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

Man's first reactions to another is based on outward appearances, and only time will help him to know the heart of another. God knows, immediately, every attitude of the heart, whether it is good or bad.

"Blessed are the pure in heart: for they shall see God."

There are many rewards for those that follow the Lord. "Let the heart of them rejoice that seek the Lord." Attend church Sunday and share in the joy of worshipping the Lord.

By H. T. ELMO

Knits have become an important part of every girl's wardrobe—since they are both smart and comfortable. Thelma Wirges, county home demonstration agent says that while knits are very much in the news, they do require special knowledge on the part of the buyer.

A single knit—such as Jersey—has just one set of wrap yarns and one set of filling yarns, so it is lighter in weight than a double knit. A double knit is knitted with double stitch, giving a double thickness to the fabric. Many new knits are prepared.

When choosing your patterns, select a simple one with as few seams as possible. Do not choose patterns requiring cutting on the bias, such as circular skirts, cautions Miss Wirges.

In preparing your knitted fabric for sewing, first establish your guideline (or grain line) by pulling and basting along one straight lengthwise rib. Fold double knits parallel with the basted rib and then lay out your pattern, using pins placed closely together.

On all knit fabrics, you should stay-stitch the edges you do not want to become distorted, such as necklines and shoulder seams. Use a fine sewing machine needle, synthetic or cotton thread, and sew from 12 to 16 stitches per inch. Single knits require a medium tension. Miss Wirges recommends a looser tension, a size 11 or 14 needle and a straight or small zig-zag stitch for double knits.

It's best to sew seam tape or ribbon into the shoulder seams and waistline of all knits. When hemming knit fabric, use bias seam binding on single knits. Stitch double knits around the bottom, and then catchstitch the raw edge invisibly to the garment.

Plans are being made for a workshop on "Sewing Skills." The workshop is to be open to all interested homemakers on a first come, first serve basis. To enroll a homemaker must contact Mrs. Jim Roberts, chairman of the Wichita County Program Building Committee on Clothing. The clothing committee is sponsoring the workshop.

Many styles of leather gloves now come in washable leathers: pigskin, glace kid, capeskin, suede, doeskin and chamois. These leathers have been treated with special chemicals to make them easy to care for.

Thelma Wirges, county home demonstration agent, has some good ideas on how to care for leather gloves.

After wearing leather gloves, inflate the fingers and air them out before storing. Fold the thumb inward and stretch each glove to shape while holding the fingertips with one hand and the cuff with the other.

You should not fold, roll or crease long leather gloves, Place each pair flat in a drawer, using tissue paper for wapping so the leather can "breath" fresh air during storage.

Make it a rule to suds leather gloves at the first sign of soil. They cannot be washed successfully after dry cleaning, because some of the fats and oils added to the leather to make it washable will dissolve in the cleaning process. Sudsing will not "degrease" the gloves enough to cause harm.

Wash leather gloves in warm soap or detergent suds. Don't rub leather on itself: just work the suds into the leather gently, using a well-lathered sponge or fingers to massage soiled spots. Highly colored leather may "bleed" a little, but usually there is no loss of color when dry.

After gloves are sudsed clean, rinse them thoroughly, roll briefly in a towel and then inflate the fingers. Hang them over a towel rack or spread them flat on a turkish towel. Avoid heat. Perforated plastic glove frames are convenient shaping devices which can be hung up for hurry-up-drying.

Leather gloves should be softened by "working" them while still damp onto the hands, a finger at a time. If the gloves dry completely, roll them briefly in a damp towel to soften. You can also "massage" and manipulate the leather between your fingers until it softens up.

Policyholder Questions Answered by the Institute of Life Insurance 277 Park Ave., N.Y., N.Y., 10017

Q. I remember seeing a story in the paper where a man was paid the face amount of his life insurance policy. Can you explain this?

A. Unlike term insurance, which pays off only if the policyholder dies within a limited period of time, proceeds under permanent life insurance must be paid at some future time. To build the necessary funds, part of each premium payment is placed in reserve. By the time a policyholder reaches the age of 96 or 100, this reserve has grown to equal the face value of the policy — at which time he can receive the full amount himself. Since only a few people achieve this ripe old age, when it does happen, newspapers in the community are apt to carry a little story about the event, including the fact that "he outlived his life insurance policy."

* * * *

Q. I have a $10,000 life insurance policy with a "guaranteed insurability" feature which allows me to buy an additional $10,000 of insurance every three years through the age of 40 — without a medical examination each time. What happens if I do not buy this insurance at the time it is available?

A. If you do not use your privilege to buy new insurance at the regular time, you simply lose that particular option. You cannot exercise it later on. (Each option usually runs for a certain period — for example, from 30 days before to 30 days after the anniversary date of your policy.)

However, failure to get additional life insurance at any given point in time does not affect your future options to buy more insurance. And, of course, it does not affect any insurance you have already purchased.

WATCH A DUCK'S HEAD

Stalking ducks on ponds and farm tanks is a popular Texas sport. However, ducks are wary critters and you must be careful and sly when creaping up on them. Otherwise they'll flush prematurely.

There is one sure way for you to determine when's the last minute to rise and shoot.

A duck—when it's ready to "take off"—will jerk its head rapidly back and forth.

THE AMERICAN TAXPAYER: CASUALTY IN THE WAR ON POVERTY

by Vant Neff

The War on Poverty is a noble idea. For almost two years the program has used vast amounts of the taxpayer's money. Has this money been used nobly? Let's examine the available record and see for ourselves.

New York City's War on Poverty is a good subject for review. A recent investigation of War on Poverty expenditures in Harlem has brought much material to light. Maybe New York will show how Federal money is handled in the War on Poverty across the nation.

New York's version of the War on Poverty, Haryou-Act, has a large staff. It is just as true of War on Poverty facilities throughout the country. For instance, one Job Corps training center in Kentucky has 350 staff members and only 358 students! In addition, a recent study showed that the wives of 51 of the camp's employees were on the payroll. Another Job Corps camp, in Indiana, has more employees than students! But, to get back to Harlem. The Haryou-Act staff is well paid. In fact, the monthly payroll comes to $500,000. That's $6 million a year!

So much for salaries. Let's examine other expenses. During its first eighteen months of operation, $800,000 "evaporated" from Haryou-Act's coffers. That is, no one can tell where it went. There are no vouchers, no receipts, no nothing. (This fact came out only after the Government seized the books of Haryou-Act. Previously, Haryou-Act's director had arrogantly refused to let government investigators see his records. Now that the cat is out of the bag, the director barefacedly claims that there was no "mismanagement" of funds . . . even though he can't say how the money was spent.)

There's a strange inconsistency here. The Federal Government requires you and me to account for our income and expenses in detail on our income tax reports. Businessmen must explain such small items as taxi rides, lunches, and tips in reporting on their expense accounts to the Internal Revenue Service. Yet, here's a Federal official who plays fast and loose with close to a million dollars of your money and mine, and so far has got by with a simple "I don't know where it went!"

Now that we've looked at salaries and other "expenses," let's take note of one example of how the poor get money from Haryou-Act.

Here's how one "crash program" got started. According to Haryou-Act's director, several hundred Harlem youths threatened him with a riot. They'd turn New York City into a bloodbath . . . "make Watts look like a tea party." (Thirty-three people were killed, and over 1000 injured, in the Watts "tea party.") What would a competent, balanced individual do in a similar situation? He'd pick up the phone and call the police. Hoodlums are a police matter. However, instead of doing the normal thing, Haryou-Act's director borrowed $400,000 from a bank. This money he used to set up "blind alley jobs" to appease the young extortionists. By "blind alley jobs" he meant jobs that didn't improve the youngsters' skills, but merely put money in their pockets!

That's the ignoble way money is being used in the noble War on Poverty. The "staffs" are well paid. Hundreds of thousands of dollars are disappearing . . . nobody wants to say where, or cares. And taxpayers' money is being used to buy civil obedience from juvenile delinquents at the rate of about $1000 per kid!

Two questions loom up: Who is responsible for this Harlem mess . . . and how did he get his job?

Livingston Wingate, the director of Haryou-Act, is responsible. How did he get his job? Very simple . . . he "knew somebody." And that "somebody" is the powerful political boss of Harlem, Congressman Adam Clayton Powell. (He's the lawmaker who put his wife on the Federal payroll to the tune of $18,900 although she spends most of her time in Puerto Rico. He's the minister who has had so much fun spending Federal money on foreign junkets that Congress had to confine his trips to the U.S. Recently a New York State Supreme Court judge described him as a man "not to be believed or trusted" because he "used every trick and device in the book to flout the law." His honor refers to Powell's efforts to avoid paying a fine imposed on him in 1963 for slandering a woman. The fine still isn't paid in full.

Few favored Wingate for the job. Even the ultra-liberal writers on the New York Times were against his appointment. But Wingate got the job because Powell "influenced" the House Committee that controls War on Poverty funds.

Apparently War on Poverty appointments are based more on "who you know" than his qualifications and sterling character. Even Black Muslims, members of the sect that has sworn to destroy the white man, are on the staff of Haryou-Act!

The point is, the bright promise of the War on Poverty is being tarnished by the dishonest or inept, hands to which it has been entrusted. Money — staggering amounts of it — is being lost, mishandled, or put to questionable use. The reason is simple: The War on Poverty is becoming the expensive plaything of politicians, professional "bleeding hearts" and unqualified administrators. (The "bleeding hearts" are just as dangerous as the unscrupulous. Recent reports have shown that one Job Corps camp was completely undisciplined . . . gangs of thugs terrorized the serious students. A staff member reported that the mess grew out of the director's "bleeding heart" philosophy: "Spoil these boys . . . they've never been spoiled before" was his dictum.)

The cure is equally simple: 1. Get the political hacks, the dreamers, and the parasites out of the program. 2. Put down in black and white what specific purposes Federal money is to be used for, exactly how much, and require precise accounting. Unless the cure is applied, the War on Poverty may end up wasting vast sums of the taxpayers' money without accomplishing any useful social purpose. After all, if it cost us $400,000 to quell a few hundred kids in Harlem, how much will it cost to appease similar threats across the country next year . . . two years from now . . . ten years hence?

Up to now the Government has taken only stop-gap measures. For example, Wingate was finally asked to take a leave of absence WITH PAY. But are stop-gap measures enough? Or should the program be stringently revised? Or, scrapped entirely? The Federal Government is already spending billions of dollars more than is taken in. How long can waste and profligacy be tolerated?

Fortunately, the People still have a voice in the United States Government . . . and a stream of mail to Washington could bring action. Tell your Congressman your opinion. After all, the War on Poverty is wasting your money!
