South Korea holds memorial for KAL victims

MANGHYANG GARDENS, South Korea (AP) — In a driving rain from a sky that had been leaden for days, South Korea held a memorial service Saturday for the 269 people killed one year ago when a Soviet jet fighter shot down a commercial Korean airliner.

About 900 relatives of the victims came to these gardens 50 miles south of the capital, Seoul, for the service and dedication of a twin-towered, granite monument to the dead. Officials of Korean Air — formerly Korean Air Lines — said the mourners included about 160 family members from 15 countries.

An estimated 1,200 people, including Korean government officials and members of the diplomatic corps huddled under umbrellas in front of the monument as a military band played funeral music and hymns.

A Buddhist monk, a Protestant pastor and a Roman Catholic priest offered prayers for the dead.

The ranking government official at the service at Manghyang Gardens, a burial place for Koreans who died overseas, was Transportation Minister Sohn Soo-ick.

The first anniversary of the incident was subdued, in contrast to the world outcry and protests one year ago.

South Korea has said it will still press for compensation from the Soviet Union, but will also seek to develop unofficial ties between Seoul and Moscow.

The two countries have no diplomatic relations. Even unofficial sports and scientific exchanges were ended after Flight 007 was blasted from the skies as it flew from New York to Seoul by way of Anchorage, Alaska.

The Soviets have rejected all demands for compensation.

Investigators said the airliner strayed off course. But the Soviets said the plane was on an espionage mission, in collusion with the United States. Both South Korea and the United States denied this.

After the speeches and prayers, family members filed past an altar before the monument, offering flowers and burning incense. Several Korean women appeared near collapse as they were escorted from the altar.

In the Sea of Japan, 79 relatives of 21 victims — 20 Japanese and one Korean — took part in a brief memorial service on a ferry near where the plane was downed.

Soviet warships were visible in the distance as the families threw overboard flowers, candy, fruit and other offerings to the dead at a point about 29 miles northeast of the Soviet Union's Moneron Island.

A Japanese Maritime Safety Agency patrol vessel escorted the boat.

The Soviet Union earlier conveyed its "tacit understanding" of the trip in a verbal message to the Japanese Embassy in Moscow.

After arriving at the designated spot, the ferry's horn sounded three short blasts and family members gathered on the main deck for the service.

"How are you, father?" asked Mei, the sobbing, 9-year-old daughter of Tokuhiro Osaka, a restaurant owner who died aboard the flight. "Please tell mother not to work so late into the night. We are so lonely without you, especially during dinner."

"We cannot forget the anger against the Soviet Union and the deep sorrow you left behind," said Kazuo Kono, father of the late actress Tomiko Kono.

After the service, the Japanese ships' horns sounded a 30-second blast in unison in a tribute to the souls of the dead.

On Friday, bereaved families gathered at Cape Soya, Japan, near Wakkanai, and prayed for the dead in a two-hour service that included speeches and laying wreaths before an altar overlooking the Soya Strait south of Sakhalin.

Reagan invites trouble when he charges expenses

WASHINGTON (AP) — With the election campaign about to begin in earnest, President Reagan is discovering that as long as he is an incumbent seeking another term, he will invite controversy when he charges his travel expenses to taxpayers.

There are signs that he doesn't plan to do that very often, especially in light of questions raised by the self-styled citizens lobby Common Cause and Democratic challenger Walter F. Mondale over Reagan's decision to bill taxpayers for his Aug. 23 trip to Chicago to speak to the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

For instance, White House spokesman Larry Speakes raised the possibility last week that portions of Reagan's three-day campaign kick-off trip — which begins today — would be considered official and thus charged to taxpayers.

But on Friday, Speakes announced that the entire journey will be charged to the Reagan-Bush '84 campaign.

On the other hand, Reagan's trip to the Goddard Space Flight Center in nearby Greenbelt, Md., on Thursday was charged to the taxpayers, even though the president delivered a speech reiterating his opposition to Mondale's suggestion that a post-election tax hike will be needed.

Neither Common Cause nor Mondale alleged that Reagan could not engage in any "official" travel during a campaign, but they maintained his speech to in Chicago was sufficiently partisan to merit being paid by the campaign.

The problem developed partly because, despite all the complex laws and regulations governing campaign finance, there are no firm rules governing what makes a presidential speech political, said Sharon Snyder, a spokeswoman for the Federal Election Commission.

White House Counsel Fred Fielding said Reagan is guided by a Justice Department opinion on the topic issued in 1977, during the Carter administration.

Generally, the opinion said, presidential and vice presidential travel should be considered political if its primary purpose "involves their positions as leaders of their political party." The main examples include appearing at party functions, fundraising and campaigning for specific candidates, including themselves.

"On the other hand," the opinion continued, "travel for inspections, meetings, non-partisan addresses and the like ordinarily should not be considered political travel even though they may have partisan consequences or concern questions on which opinion is politically divided.

"The president cannot perform his official duties effectively without the understanding, confidence and support of the public," the opinion said.

"Travel and appearances by the president and vice president to present, explain and secure public support for the administrations' measures are therefore an inherent part of the president's and vice president's official duties."

Common Cause last week asked the FEC to "move immediately to resolve this matter and make clear that the VFW trip and all similar trips must be treated as campaign expenditures." But it is likely to be at least three weeks and probably longer before the FEC decides the issue.

In his VFW speech, Reagan appeared to be referring to Mondale when he said: "Now some may insist they're just as committed to a strong deterrent, even as they would cancel the B-1 bomber and the (MX) missile. They may deny that a nuclear freeze would preserve today's high, unequal and unstable levels of nuclear weapons..."

Although he never mentioned Mondale by name, Reagan appeared to be likening him to a donkey when he quoted former House Speaker Sam Rayburn as saying: "Any jackass can kick a barn down. But it takes a carpenter to build one."

Maxine Isaacs, press secretary to Mondale, called it a "very, very partisan speech" that should paid with political funds.

"I think it's offensive to people that they have to fund the president's re-election drive," she said. "I don't think that's fair. They have the same amount of money to spend as we do and they ought to live within the same limits."

John F.W. Rogers, director of administration at the White House, said "We would argue that we were not making any specific references to the Mondale campaign or ticket."

Taxpayers pick up hidden costs

WASHINGTON (AP) — Even when President Reagan makes a clearly political trip that is charged to his campaign committee, there are many hidden costs that are actually picked up by taxpayers.

Each presidential trip costs about $50,000 to $75,000. The greatest expense always is Air Force One, the chief executive's Boeing 707 jet, and Marine One, his helicopter.

For instance, it costs the government $5,728 an hour to operate Air Force One. But when the Reagan campaign reimburses the government for travel expenses, that operating cost is not taken into consideration.

Instead, the campaign reimburses the government at the rate of a round trip first-class airline ticket, plus one dollar, for each seat on the plane that was occupied by someone traveling in a political capacity, including the president and most of his White House advisers.

But the taxpayers pay the costs of many others who travel on Reagan's airplane, including the Air Force flight crew and guards, Secret Service agents, the president's doctor and military aide. These people are always considered to be working in an official, rather than political, capacity.

A press "pool" consisting of 11 reporters, photographers and a television crew also rides on the presidential aircraft, but the news organizations involved pay their costs.

Men arrested after crime spree

LEWIS RUN, Pa. (AP) — Two men wanted in a spree of kidnappings, shootings and thefts across northwestern Pennsylvania were captured Saturday as scores of officers, bloodhounds and helicopters closed in around them, authorities said.

Donald F. Biauce, 27, who allegedly took two families hostage, shot three people and stole vehicles and guns since beginning his four-day flight from police, was captured at 1:30 a.m. Saturday by a local resident who had kept watch fearing for the safety of his family, according to authorities.

His companion, Donald Kinney, 19, was arrested at about 1 p.m. in a woods south of this McKean County hamlet, about seven hours after exchanging shots with police near Lewis Run, authorities said.

State and local police, aided by bloodhounds and helicopters, had "saturated" the area near Allegheny National Forest in their search for the pair, said state police Lt. Harry Ellenberger. Holiday weekend campers had been advised to stay out of the area during the manhunt.

Ellenberger called Kinney "extremely dangerous, as bad probably as I've ever experienced." State police Lt. Andrew Shedlock called Biauce "highly dangerous."

Kinney, of Iowa Park, Texas, was arraigned before District Justice Kenneth Jadlowiec at the state police barracks in Kane on multiple counts of attempted murder, conspiracy to commit murder, aggravated assault, burglary, kidnapping and other charges. Bond was set at $250,000.

He was later taken to the McKean County Jail. Assistant District Attorney Robert Saunders said additional charges were pending.

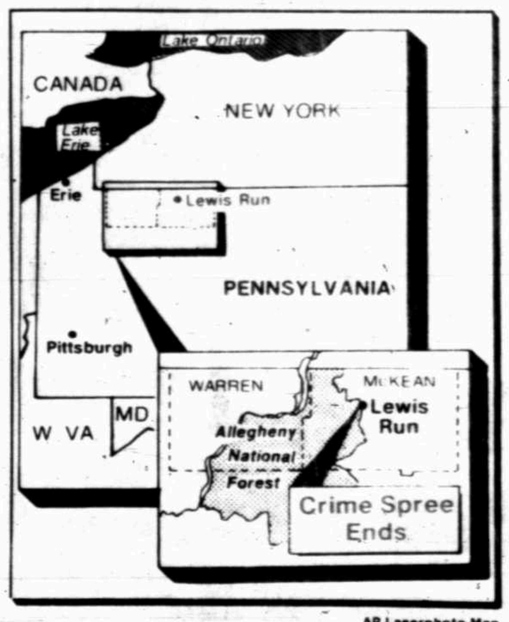

Biauce, who has addresses in Union City and Kane, was taken to the Bradford Jail, where he was arraigned in his cell.

He was charged with three counts of attempted murder, three counts of conspiracy to commit murder, five counts of aggravated assault and additional counts of burglary, theft, robbery, kidnapping, unlawful restraint and resisting arrest, according to Jadlowiec, who set a cash bond of $100,000.

Biauce was later transferred to Warren County to face additional charges of attempted murder and criminal conspiracy and was being held there under under $500,000 bail, said District Magistrate Dalton Hunter of Tidiote, who conducted the second arraignment.

Paul Difonzo, 55, a fire policeman in Lewis Run, said he was directing police to a command post at the local fire hall when he spotted Kinney running across a highway.

County proposes 1985 budget

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

While Midland County's proposed 1985 budget may be somewhat austere, it's not exactly stark.

The commissioners are tendering to the taxpayers a record $12.9 million budget — a 13 percent increase over 1984's $11.4 million budget.

"(It's) extremely conservative," said Commissioner Durward Wright.

"Exceedingly extremely," added Commissioner Win Brown.

In ensuring that revenue at least meets budget requirements, the county commissioners are proposing a 7.14 percent increase in the effective tax rate. That, coupled with an increase in the tax base from $4.048 billion to $5.067 billion, would bring in $8.58 million in ad valorem taxes. Additional revenue, such as that coming in via fines and fees, is estimated at $4.65 million and would gross the county an estimated $13.23 million in revenue in 1985, according to the proposed 1985 budget, which is on file in County Clerk Rosenelle Cherry's Office.

And in their 10 a.m. Sept. 10 meeting in the Midland County Courthouse, commissioners are to hold their second public hearing on the proposed budget and tax rate. Afterward, they are to vote to finalize the budget and to set the tax rate at 16.5 cents per $100 valuation.

Budget increases reflect a 4 percent across-the-board hike in salaries, salary adjustments by reclassifying about 70 of the county's 300 employees, new equipment for the road and bridge department, and an estimated $320,000 to pay interest on the interim financing of the proposed new county jail to be completed in 1986. The jail may cost upward of $8 million.

The county's proposed 1985 expenditures include:

Judiciary: $2.53 million. Estimated disbursements include $94,636 for the 142nd State District Court, presided over by Judge Pat Baskin; $92,776 for the 238th State District Court, presided over by Judge Vann Culp, and $83,306 for the 318th State District Court, presided over by Judge Barbara Culver. Not reflected in the budget is each judge's $54,500 state salary, which is paid by Texas. Each judge's salary is augmented by the county to bring each salary to the lower $60,000s: $62,540 for Baskin, $62,780 for Culp and $63,620 for Ms. Culver.

A&M students mourn, as officials vow to end hazing

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — Students this weekend were mourning the death of a Texas A&M University sophomore as officials vowed to make sure the hazing he underwent before he died never happens again.

Corps of Cadets Col. Donald Burton said that in January 1983 he outlawed "motivational exercises" such as those forced on Bruce Goodrich, 20, of Webster, N.Y., but former Corps members say physical abuse of freshmen and sophomores is common.

"It's rampant," said Jay Holland, a senior at Texas A&M and former Corps members. "If you want to stay in the Corps, you've got to go along."

Goodrich and his roommate, John McIntosh, were awakened by three juniors in their Corps unit at about 2:30 a.m. Thursday and taken out for "motivational exercises" that included nearly an hour of running, push-ups and sit-ups, officials said.

Goodrich collapsed about a half-hour later and died at St. Joseph Hospital in Bryan, apparently because of a heat stroke, according to preliminary autopsy results.

College officials have refused to identify the three juniors involved in the incident but said the trio could face suspension or expulsion.

Corps freshman, who are called "fish," are required to greet every upperclassman on sight and must work on the university's homecoming bonfire. Fish also must memorize a list of Aggie traditions, legends and other information about the school, the Houston Chronicle reported Saturday.

"If you miss one word or get one word out of place, you'll end up doing push-ups all afternoon," Holland said.

Bob Wiatt, university director of security, said the number of push-ups is determined by a student's graduation year. He said Goodrich, who was scheduled to graduate in 1987, was required to do 87 push-ups and sit-ups.

David Hatch, a former Corps member who graduated, said sophomores who transfer into the Corps undergo hazing more severe than that imposed upon freshman. The sophomore transfers are called "frogs."

"Frogs get the usual hazing that sophomores always get — plus what they missed as fish," said Hatch, 22.

But Student Commander Chuck Rollins said the exercises help students realize their capacities.

"Our intentions are not to hurt anybody," Rollins said. "It's to help them see what they can do."

One common Corps practice, according to the Chronicle, is "quadding," in which upperclassmen are held on the ground outside the Corps dormitory while freshmen pour buckets of hot and cold water on them from the floors above.

School policy forbids any activity that "submits a student to physical pain or discomfort, indignity or humiliation at any time," said John Koldus, vice president for student services. Koldus said physical abuse is punishable by suspension or expulsion.

But Holland said hazing still occurs.

"If you want to stay in the Corps and be commissioned into the service, you've got to do it," he said.

Holland said he complained about incidents in which he was hazed, but university and Corps officials ignored him.

Wiatt said he is conducting a criminal investigation of Goodrich's death and said he will present the case to a Brazos County grand jury if he finds sufficient evidence.

Background check didn't go far enough

ANGLETON (AP) — A more thorough background check might have kept the Texas prison system from hiring a psychologist who once allegedly tried to extort money from a Harris County jail inmate's family, a prison spokesman says.

The psychologist, Armando Simon, is one of three prison employees who have been suspended or fired recently after they were charged with sexual crimes involving teen-age girls, officials said.

Texas Department of Corrections spokesman Charles Brown said the TDC had a fingerprint check run on Simon, but it didn't reveal that he was asked to resign from the Harris County Sheriff's Department in 1981 after being accused of attempted extortion.

"We ran an FBI check on him, but we missed this one," Brown said. "I think we need to run a more thorough check on candidates, because anytime something like this happens, it's a bad reflection on the entire system."

The 33-year-old Simon, who responsibilities included counseling sex offenders, was suspended without pay Wednesday from the Ramsey III Unit near Rosharon in Brazoria County.

He was charged with sexually assaulting a 15-year-old girl and was released from Brazoria County Jail on $30,000 bond.

Also charged with sexual assault is Simon's 19-year-old wife, Angela, who is free on $10,000 bond.

Simon is accused of raping the teen-age girl several times at his Angleton apartment, said Angleton Police Detective Mike Jones. Simon's wife is accused of convincing the girl to participate in the sex act, Jones said.

Assistant Harris County Attorney Billy Lee said Friday that an inmate's father accused Simon in 1981 of trying to extort thousands of dollars from him for helping write a book on his son's involvement with organized crime.

Lee said Simon was given the option of resigning or being fired.

Simon filed a lawsuit against the Sheriff's Department in 1981 alleging he was discriminated against and that the department neglected to follow due process before terminating him.

The suit, which is pending in U.S. District Judge Gabrielle McDonald's court, asks for reinstatement with back pay, $250,000 in damages and another $1 million in punitive damages.

Brown said that although allegations against Simon were overlooked because of "human error," he thinks a more thorough background check — possibly an in-depth interview with potential employees — would help avoid such oversights.

Another Ramsey III employee, 30-year-old Dwayne David Dumesnil, was indefinitely suspended Aug. 6 after he was charged with the aggravated sexual assault of a 13-year-old girl, Brown said. Dumesnil had been employeed at TDC since February 1983.

Brown said another TDC employee, Raul Jaime Perez, a guard at the Ramsey I Unit, was fired Aug. 12 after he was charged with sexual assault in a case involving another 13-year-old girl. Perez began working for TDC in February 1981, Brown said.

The spokesman said he did not know the reason for the trio of alleged sexual assaults by TDC employees.

Utility gives lift to tubes, canoes on Guadalupe

NEW BRAUNFELS (AP) — A water purchase by a downstream utility company has given the tube and canoe rental businesses along the Guadalupe River an unexpected boost.

The river was expected to be running at 290 cubic feet per second Saturday, more than seven times the recent flow.

The additional flow comes from 500 acre-feet of Canyon Lake water bought by Central Power & Light Co., a Corpus Christi utility that needed the extra water for its Coleto Creek pumping station, the Austin American-Statesman said.

An acre-foot is 325,851 gallons.

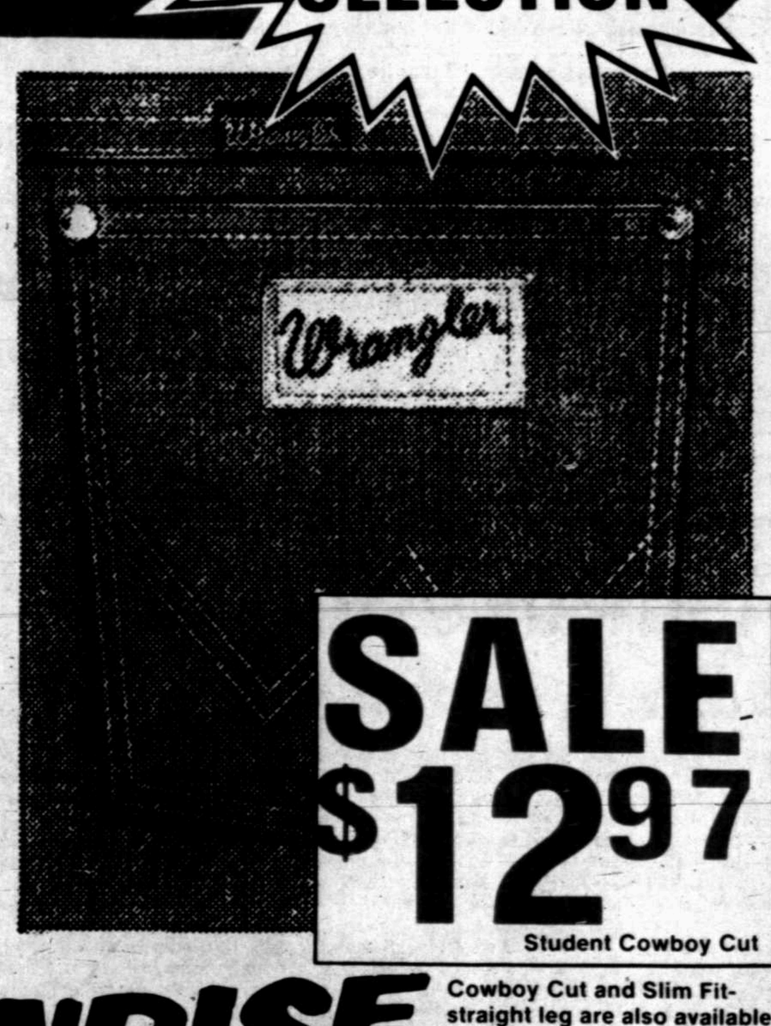

"This is real good. It means we'll have enough water to float rafts, which is something we haven't been able to do this year," said Ellen Martin, treasurer of the Lower Guadalupe Business Association and owner of Whitewater Sports, a river recreation business below Canyon Dam.

Tulsa evangelist gets $100,000 in donations

FORT WORTH (AP) — Tulsa evangelist Oral Roberts got more than $100,000 in donations for his financially strapped City of Faith Medical Center during evangelist Kenneth Copeland's Southwest Believer's Convention here this week.

"What we are going to do tonight, at least in the spirit realm, will be a historical thing," Copeland told the more than 6,000 people gathered at the convention Thursday night.

Copeland also urged other Christian groups to contribute to the Tulsa medical center, which Roberts has dedicated "to the poor of the world."

"The $100,000 doesn't include the donations he (Roberts) will receive from the thousands who were watching on television," said the Rev. Barry Tubbs, associate minister of Copeland's evangelical association.

The convention, which ended Friday night, was carried by satellite and closed-circuit television to 940 churches.

Copeland, a Fort Worth-based television evangelist who once was a co-pilot for Roberts, stood beside the Roberts family and urged people to "pay the bills" for the poor.

Amnesty International to monitor trial

SAN BENITO (AP) — Amnesty International, a Nobel-prize winning human rights organization, says it will send an observer to a pretrial hearing Tuesday in the case of Jack Elder, a sanctuary movement worker charged with transporting Salvadoran illegal aliens.

Elder, 40, director of the church-sponsored Casa Oscar Romero halfway house in San Benito, faces trial Sept. 10.

On Tuesday, U.S. District Judge Hayden Head Jr. of Corpus Christi is scheduled to hear 25 pretrial motions in the case, including a request for a change of venue.

Defense attorney Steven Cooper said he hoped to call to the stand a member of the National Jury Project, a Minnesota-based group which surveys juror attitudes. About 100 Corpus Christi residents were surveyed by phone in August to determine prior knowledge of the Elder case and opinions on immigration issues.

Cooper believes Elder would be more likely to get a fair trial "in another, non-border state where there hasn't been a lot of pre-trial publicity and potential jurors aren't likely to have such strong opinions on immigration issues."

Elder, a leader in a nationwide movement providing sanctuary to refugees from war-torn Central America, has been an outspoken critic of U.S. policy in that region.

He was arrested last April at the Catholic Church-owned Casa Oscar Romero refugee halfway house in San Benito, about 15 miles from the Mexican border near Brownsville.

If convicted, he faces up to 15 years in prison and a $14,000 fine.

Elder is the second sanctuary worker to be tried in Texas this year, and the third in the nation to face prosecution.

A volunteer at Casa Romero, 29-year-old Stacey Lynn Merkt of Colorado Springs, Colo., was convicted in May of conspiring to transport a Salvadoran man, woman and infant. She was given a two-year suspended sentence in June.

In August, the government dropped charges against Tucson, Ariz., church worker Philp Conger who had also been charged with transporting Salvadoran illegal aliens. Charges were dropped after a federal court ruling excluded key evidence in the case.

Rona Weitz, spokeswoman for Amnesty International in Washington, said the three cases indicate a "push on the part of the Immigration and Naturalization Service to harass and intimidate sanctuary workers."

But federal authorities said Elder, Ms. Merkt and Conger have been treated the same as any other person arrested for transporting undocumented aliens.

"They were not then and have not now been targeted for special treatment," said Assistant U.S. Attorney John Patrick Smith of Brownsville.

"It is our contention that they were violating the law and were apprehended in the course of routine law enforcement."

Weitz said Canadian immigration attorney Renata Krause would be monitoring the proceedings in Corpus Christi and submitting reports to the London office of Amnesty International.

Politics makes estranged bedfellows

DALLAS (AP) — Ellery Queen probably would have dubbed it "The Case of the Missing Portrait," but for former President Gerald Ford, it simply was another case of politics making estranged bedfellows.

This week's mystery actually began before the Republican National Convention, when Trammell Crow, owner of the Loews Anatole Hotel, asked Ford for permission to name a hotel suite in his honor.

For was so impressed by that request that he donated a 2-foot-by-3-foot portrait of himself to Crow.

The painting immediately was hung on the library wall of what formerly had been called the Sovereign Suite on the 14th floor.

The first official occupant of the Gerald Ford Suite was, appropriately enough, Vice President George Bush, who spent the convention week in Dallas. President Reagan stayed in another suite of the hotel.

The mystery began Monday. That's when occupant No. 2 — Democratic presidential hopeful Walter Mondale — showed up and was directed to the Gerald Ford Suite.

"We put him there because it's the most convenient suite for him from a security standpoint," said hotel manager Randy Gantenbein. "He had a fund-raiser that night with the reception in the atrium downstairs and the dinner in the Khmer Pavilion nearby.

On Tuesday, after Mondale departed, maids noticed that the Ford portrait was missing.

But alas, it seems Mondale never saw it, says his press secretary, Maxine Isaacs.

"It turns out that one of our well-meaning advance people did that (removed it from the wall) thinking it was the right thing to do. Neither Vice President Mondale nor his traveling party knew anything about it," Ms Isaacs said.

"Mondale wouldn't condone that kind of thing," she added.

The portrait, by the way, was recovered later. Maids found it in a closet.

WEATHER SUMMARY

National Weather Service NOAA, U S Dept of Commerce

AP Laserphoto Map

The National Weather Service forecasts showers for today from eatern Kansas through the Great Lakes region and northeast.

Rain possibility for rest of Labor Day weekend

Cooler temperatures and the possibility of rain are in the forecast for the Midland area today and Monday.

A 20 percent probability of thundershowers today will increase to 30 percent tonight and Monday, according to forecasters at the National Weather Service, Midland Regional Airport.

Today's high is expected to be near 90. Tonight a mid-60s low is predicted and Monday's high should be in the middle 80s. Southeast winds of 10 to 15 mph are forecast today.

Saturday's high was 93, 11 degrees below the record 104 set on that date in 1959. The 65-degree overnight low was nine marks below the 56 degrees recorded Sept. 2, 1968.

STATE

Heavy thundershowers pounded Southeast Texas Saturday while other parts of Texas were cooler and expected to stay that way the remainder of the Labor Day weekend.

Showers continued to stretch over the eastern fringes of the state on Saturday, producing heavy thunderstorms from north of Houston to the coast.

The cloudy skies and scattered showers brought welcome relief from dry 100-degree weather that dominated the state during the month of August.

Temperatures across Texas Saturday ranged from the upper 80s to the middle 90s.

The National Weather Service predicted an increase in showers over South Texas through Labor Day.

Widely scattered showers and thunderstorms are expected over West and North Texas through Monday. It will be a little cooler in northern regions and in the Panhandle Sunday. Lows will be in the 50s and 60s, rising to the mid 70s in the Big Bend.

High temperatures across the state will range from the middle 80s to near 104 degrees in extreme southern regions.

NATION

Cooler weather settled into the central Plains on Saturday but the central Mississippi Valley faced more blistering heat.

A cold front and showers brought early afternoon temperatures only in the 50s to the upper Midwest.

And showers were scattered from the central Rockies through the northern Plains and into the Great Lakes region and the Ohio Valley.

By contrast, St. Louis, Mo., reached 100 degrees by 3 p.m. EDT and the rest of Missouri, southern Illinois and eastern Kansas were in the upper 90s.

Elsewhere, a few thunderstorms developed along the Gulf Coast.

Three tropical disturbances were blowing across the Atlantic. The poorly defined center of tropical depression Arthur was located 90 miles northeast of Antigua in the Leeward Islands. Bertha had weakened below tropical storm strength and was 800 miles east of the Leeward Islands.

Gale warnings were issued for the offshore waters of Canada's Maritime provinces for tropical storm Cesar. It was located 100 miles southeast of Sable Island, Nova Scotia, with maximum sustained winds near the center near 45 mph.

Temperatures around the nation at 3 p.m. EDT ranged from 54 degrees at Duluth and International Falls, Minn., to 102 degrees at Palm Springs, Calif. The low for the day was 29 degrees at Truckee, Calif.

For today, scattered thunderstorms were forecast over the Mississippi Delta, southern Florida and over parts of the southern Plateau region. Showers and a few thunderstorms were expected to spread across the upper Midwest into the Great Lakes region.

Bush accused of playing up war record

Film of Bush as Navy officer surfaces

WASHINGTON (AP) — On Sept. 2, 1944, Navy Lt. j.g. George Bush, 20, was shot down on a bombing mission in the South Pacific and rescued at sea by a submarine.

Four decades later, the battleground has shifted to the race for vice president and Bush is fighting accusations he is playing up his war record to score political points against Democratic challenger Geraldine Ferraro.

Amazingly, Bush's rescue was recorded by a sailor with an 8mm camera on the USS Finback, the sub that plucked him from the water. Bush spent 30 days on the boat as it hunted Japanese ships and dodged depth charges and bombs.

For carrying out his mission — to attack a Japanese radio station on Chichijima in the Bonin Islands — after his torpedo bomber was disabled, Bush was awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross.

After all these years, the rescue film, in black and white and poor focus, is intact.

It was included in a biographical movie of Bush at the Republican National Convention. As Bush struggles across the deck of the submarine, the film freezes on his face.

The film also is the centerpiece today of a ceremony sponsored by the Navy in Norfolk, Va., marking the 40th anniversary of Bush's flight.

Democrats complain the vice president is trying to steal the spotlight with old war stories.

"I think events like this for the purpose of a national campaign trivialize the very values that they claim to commend," said Ann Lewis, political director of the Democratic National Committee.

She accused Bush of indulging in "epaulet-flexing."

"I want to distinguish between epaulet-flexing and muscle-flexing because it always seemed to me that muscle is real and epaulets are symbolic," Ms. Lewis said.

While saying she has a high regard for people who serve in the armed forces, Ms. Lewis said, "I do not remember this emphasis on his military career until after the nomination of Geraldine Ferraro."

Vice President Bush

"They're trying to put emphasis on his military career because that may wind up being the only point or the only issue between them in which he thinks he can score points off Geraldine Ferraro or which he can appeal," she said.

Bush took offense at Ms. Lewis' charges.

"I think she's as wrong as she can be, just outrageous in suggesting that," he said in an interview. He said the Norfolk ceremony was planned long before Ms. Ferraro became part of the Democratic presidential ticket. Bush also displayed the film in his 1980 campaign.

"I think in a broad sense having been in combat and having seen blood spilled...that whole combat experience was a very maturing, broadening, sobering thing, particularly in retrospect," Bush said. "At the time, you know, it didn't seem all that dramatic. It was a war story in essence, but everybody — not everyone but a lot of guys — were experiencing it.

"One of the things I'm most proud of and one of the things that gives me a certain dimension that I think makes me very understanding on issues of war and peace is having been in combat, having fought for my country and having known what it means to see people give their lives for their country."

"Let Miss Lewis...snipe away," Bush added.

A Navy spokesman also rejected criticism of the Norfolk ceremony. "The Navy does not view this ceremony as political. We see it as a legitimate 40th anniversary observance of an important naval event in the life of the vice president of the United States," said Capt. Jimmy Finkelstein, an aide to Navy Secretary John Lehman.

Bush is not the first candidate on a presidential ticket with a military record that played a role in his campaign. Beginning with George Washington, 25 of the 39 men who have held the presidency served in the armed forces. In recent years, the military achievements of Dwight D. Eisenhower and the heroism of John F. Kennedy helped serve as springboards to the White House.

Bush, who once was the youngest pilot in the Navy, is credited with 58 combat missions, 126 carrier landings and 1,228.3 flight hours overall.

Recalling the day his plane was hit, Bush said, "You could see a lot of anti-aircraft fire, these ugly black, sharp, black pocks threatening... and suddenly the plane just jolted and was lifted forward and hit underneath, I think. The plane started filling up with smoke and fire on the wings...

"I finished this (bombing) run, it was just a matter of seconds...and then pulled out and headed out to sea because I knew I was in serious trouble then."

Bush was the only survivor of the three-man crew. One man apparently was hit by the anti-aircraft fire and the other died when his parachute failed to open.

Fraser responds to charges levied by SEC

From Staff Reports

Charles D. Fraser — former president, chairman and chief executive officer of the now-defunct First National Bank of Midland — has responded to charges of fraud leveled against him by the the Securities and Exchange Commission.

"He decided to consent to the decree, which does nothing more than say that he will obey the law, which is exactly what he believes he's always done," Fraser's Dallas-based attorney Richard Haynes said Saturday. "Mr. Fraser didn't admit any of the allegations of the SEC. He simply decided that litigation would be protracted and extremely expensive.

The action, in layman's terms, is somewhat like pleading no contest, Haynes said. "The matter is ended."

The SEC and the Comptroller of the Currency had charged Fraser with preparing misleading financial reports before the bank's collapse nearly a year ago, according to a Friday story in the Wall Street Journal.

The civil complaint, filed in federal court in Washington, D.C., alleges Fraser overstated FNB's net income for the first three quarters of 1982.

FNB "failed to fully disclose a 'substantially increased' risk of loan losses for the period and (its) dependence on large-denomination certificates of deposit were having an adverse effect on the bank's liquidity," the article stated.

The complaint also charged the 1982 year-end statements were "materially false and misleading" because the sale and lease-back of the bank building at 303 W. Wall was improperly accounted for.

The building was sold for "substantially" more than it was worth to a coalition comprised mostly of its own customers and then leased back to FNB, according to the SEC. FNB, which generated $35 million from the sale, violated generally accepted accounting procedures in recording the transaction, the agency said.

Fraser, who is now self-employed in Midland, resigned in April 1983. FNB, now RepublicBank First National Midland, was declared insolvent in October.

SPREE

"I noticed a kid running across the road with an Army fatigue jacket on, long hair, a beard and overalls," Difonzo said. "He ran up the bank and into a wooded area. He was running pretty good. I hollered to a policeman to get on his radio and get some state police up there. Within two minutes the road was covered" with police.

Shedlock said that when officers spotted Kinney and pursued him, "he gave up." He said Kinney was not armed when taken into custody and did not resist.

Biauce was captured on the property of William Huber of Lewis Run, who said he had darkened his home, switched on outside floodlights and armed himself and several friends late Friday when he learned the manhunt was focusing in the neighborhood.

"I was afraid for my family," he said. "We were panicky."

He said he saw Biauce sneak across a neighbor's yard and head for the woods behind his own house.

"I...fired above his head," Huber said. "He dove for the ground and I said, 'If you move, I'm going to blow your head off.'"

Biauce yelled, "I'm unarmed, don't shoot," Huber said. He said he and a friend then guarded Biauce until police arrived.

Police had expected Biauce to be heavily armed. They said he stole several guns from two families he allegedly held hostage in separate incidents.

During the four-day spree, Biauce allegedly wounded three people — a security guard who gave chase and two of three motorists who refused to pick up Biauce, Kinney and their hostages Friday morning, police said.

Two of the motorists were shot, and one was listed in serious condition with bullet wounds in his upper arm. The third was injured by flying glass.

The chase began Wednesday when Biauce and Nicholas Peterson Jr., 18, of Union City, were seen trying to steal auto batteries, police said. The car they were driving crashed into an embankment during pursuit and they were taken to a hospital in Erie, but Biauce fled, police said.

Biauce found his way to Union Township, where he held members of the John R. Kennedy family hostage for several hours before fleeing Thursday evening in the family's truck with five guns and money, officers said. None of the Kennedys was injured.

Several hours later, police said, Biauce shot Dennis Crosby, a security guard who apparently heard a description of the stolen truck and gave chase. He told police there were two or three people in the truck and that a person riding in the bed of the truck opened the tailgate to fire at him with a rifle or pistol.

Crosby was listed in stable condition at Warren General Hospital with a gunshot wound in his arm, a hospital spokeswoman said.

Biauce apparently abandoned the pickup soon afterward, police said.He resurfaced Friday morning when he and Kinney allegedly kicked in the door at the home of Jim and Marie Silvis, both 35, of Mead Township, police said. The gunmen took two rifles, a pistol and about $75, and ordered the couple to drive them to New York, police said.

After crashing through a roadblock, they abandoned the car when it ran out of gas and stole a pickup, police said.But the truck also soon ran out of gas, according to Silvis.The two men opened fire when motorists refused to stop to pick them up, wounding two people, according to police.

The suspects and their two hostages then walked through the woods to the home of Theresa Carpenter, 32, near Marshburg, police said.

The two men fled in her four-wheel vehicle, leaving the hostages behind because the car could hold only two, Mrs. Carpenter said. It was later abandoned when it also ran out of gas.

Later Friday night, they allegedly entered the home of Mary Schiappa of Lewis Run and took additional money. Difonzo, a neighbor, said the pair "had her fry eggs" for them.

Preliminary hearings for both men were scheduled for Thursday.

COSTS

On any trip deemed political, the campaign also reimburses the government for the services of the White House Communications Agency, which installs the electronic support the president needs, such as telephones, radios and other equipment, including the TelePrompTer from which Reagan reads his speeches. Those costs average between $8,000 and $16,000 per trip.

Then there is the presidential motorcade. Reagan's armored limousines usually are flown ahead to wherever he is traveling. On a political journey, the campaign reimburses the government for use of his limousine at the going rate of renting such a car for the day, about $70.

Whereas there are two limousines in every motorcade — one for the president and one that acts as a combination decoy-spare — the campaign only pays for one on the theory that the other is a security expense.

The campaign does pay the costs of renting the other cars in the motorcade, except for Secret Service and police vehicles.

If there is an overnight stop, the campaign will pay for Reagan's hotel, as well the rooms and meal costs of the political aides traveling with him. But the taxpayers bear the costs of the rooms and meals of all non-political employees.

EXPENSES

Margaret Tutwiler, deputy assistant to the president for political affairs, echoed that view.

"They (the VFW) invited him as president of the United States," she said. "He can't help that at the same time he was a candidate. There was not a political person at the airport. He did not shake hands with a political person. He did not do anything with the Republican Party of Illinois nor the Reagan-Bush committee of Illinois.

As for the content of Reagan's speech, a White House official who spoke on condition he not be named, "He's been doing that for 3½ years."

A second White House aide, also speaking on condition of anonymity, said the decision on where to charge expenses is made by a group of presidential assistants and is reviewed at the senior level.

X-rated theater's owner appeals eviction order

GARLAND (AP) — A theater, which has raised local hackles for months over its X-rated films, will continue showing its spicy fare while its owner appeals a court-ordered eviction, an attorney says.

Peace Justice Charles Luedtke ordered the Eastgate Cinema out of the Eastgate Shopping Center on Friday, saying "I feel the X-rated movies are creating a public nuisance to the citizens of our home town, the city of Garland."

"And I think they are creating a private nuisance to the other tenants of the shopping center," he added.

The cinema in this Dallas suburb changed its format in June to show X-rated movies and controversy followed almost instantly.

Richard Anderson, lawyer for theater operator George Marules, said the decision will be appealed and the theater will remain in operation until final court action. Luedtke ordered the theater operator to post a $500 appeal bond.

Hank Dickerson Management Co., which manages the shopping center, sought the eviction order after Garland residents presented petitions, protesters picketed the theater, church officials and citizens sent letters to the management firm and other tenants in the shopping center complained.

The eviction suit was filed July 18, one day after the Garland City Council passed an ordiance prohibiting theaters from showing X-rated movies within 500 feet of a church, school, park or residential area.

AUSTIN NOTEBOOK

GOP officials upbeat, wary of overconfidence

By BILL KIDD

AUSTIN — Republican Party officials admit to being upbeat about prospects for the GOP in the Nov. 6 election, but say they don't want to become overconfident, remembering 1982.

State GOP Chairman George Strake, Houston, back home from the Republican National Convention, says he feels the unity and enthusiasm expressed at the GOP's gathering will carry on through the fall.

"Most of our folks came out of the national convention as unified as I've seen the party," Strake says. And, he reports, efforts by the GOP are going well on other fronts.

The party's voter registration drive has "done very well," Strake says. "We are finding that there are a lot of strong Republican precincts that don't have a lot of people registered. We have exceeded our goal of 200,000 in our 'A' and 'B' precincts."

"If we can maintain the momentum generated by our folks at the convention, and bring in the president by a wide mark," Strake says, Republicans "might surprise people on some of these other races."

Re-electing Ronald Reagan is, of course, the Texas GOP's No. 1 priority, party officials say, followed by electing U.S. Rep. Phil Gramm, R-College Station, to the U.S. Senate.

The next priority is building the Republican Party in Texas.

Republicans are hoping to make gains in the Texas congressional delegation, with the Republican National Committee planning to put some $400,000 into eight Texas races.

Only one of those involves an incumbent Republican (U.S. Jack Fields, R-Houston), and three (districts 6, 19 and 22) open districts.

The GOP currently holds six of the 27 U.S. House of Representatives seats and two incumbents (Gramm and Ron Paul, Lake Jackson) aren't returning to the House.

But Republicans think they can hold on to the seats being vacated — and think some Democratic incumbents are vulnerable — particularly with a heavy turnout for Reagan.

Strake reports the GOP's fundraising efforts in Texas have been "going well," and that "we have expanded our base of support."

The number of supporters, he says, has gone from around 21,000 when he took over the chairmanship somewhat more than a year ago to an expected 70,000 by November.

Statewide telephone bank operations are averaging $12.95 in contributions, he says.

GOP officials credit Strake with doing much to help the party's financial success, along with Strake's selection of Houston oilman and former Senate hopeful Rob Mosbacher.

Strake, they note, inherited a party which was smarting from the unexpected defeat of Gov. Bill Clements, whose victory had been seen by the GOP as perhaps showing that Texas was, at last, a two-party state.

But Clements lost to Mark White, and the Democrats swept statewide offices, and Republicans realized that there was still a long way to go before they could achieve equal, or near-equal, status with the Democrats.

"We realize," one Republican worker says, "we're not anywhere near control."

But Strake is hopeful Republicans are moving towards equality. He remains "cautiously optimistic" that the GOP will make gains in the Legislature in 1985, saying the party is "still shooting for a gain of 10" in the 150 member House (where there currently are 36 Republicans).

The Texas Senate races, with two GOP incumbents running unopposed, and four Repblicans hoping for seats, will be "very tough" as far as any gains, he says. (The GOP currently holds five Senate seats).

Strake and other Republicans also hope that there will be gains at the local level as well as the state and federal level.

"The only way we can build the party is from the grassroots level," one official comments, and points to the fact that "we have some candidates this year in areas where Republicans have never run before."

"Little by little," he says, the GOP is moving towards its long-hoped-for two-party status.

Victories by Reagan and Gramm will help that effort, he argues, and will "lock Texas into the GOP nationally."

Strake says he hopes that will be the case, but says he's not going to do any celebrating until after the election is over.

On that, he says, he agrees with Democrtic Party Chairman Bob Slagle: what counts is what happens on Nov. 6.

Pilot of small plane killed when it breaks up, crashes

MARTINDALE (AP) — The pilot of a small race plane was killed Saturday when his aircraft began falling apart and plunged into the ground.

The dead man was identified as 40-year-old Charles Thomas Andrews of Beckley, W. Va. There were no passengers in the aircraft.

The accident occurred at 11:20 a.m. about one mile east of Martindale in Caldwell County, said Department of Public Safety spokesman David Wells.

Martindale is about 5 miles east of San Marcos.

"Witnesses to the crash said the plane was flying at low altitude, and was revving up when there was a loud cracking noise," Wells said. "The plane began losing parts while it was airborne. The wings eventually came off and when that happened the plane went straight toward the ground and crashed."

Authorities don't know why the plane began falling apart and federal authorities are expected to investigate, he said.

Wells said the dead man was the chief pilot for Goodyear Co.

Anniversary rekindles fight over 'background'

By R. GREGORY NOKES
AP Diplomatic Writer

An Analysis

WASHINGTON — The first anniversary of the Soviet shooting down of a South Korean airliner led to a new episode in the long-running dispute between reporters and government officials over whether information should be routinely released on a not-for-attribution basis.

The latest episode seemed especially ludicrous to protesting reporters because information being given to State Department correspondents on background — meaning the official providing the information could not be named — was being publicly revealed in television interviews by some of the same officials.

Anxious to have the American view of the attack on the airliner made known, the State Department announced to reporters early last week that it had scheduled a background briefing.

It is common practice for the State Department, White House and other federal agencies to provide non-sensitive — as well as sensitive — information on background, a practice reporters frequently criticize but which continues nonetheless. It has been used by all recent administrations in Washington, Democratic as well as Republican.

Many news organizations object to the practice because they believe information given on background has less credibility with the public than information that can be attributed to a named government official.

Too often, reporters have learned, an official will be careless with the facts, or an interpretation of them, when he cannot be held accountable by name.

But reporters who refuse to abide by the government's rules at background briefings are asked to leave.

With respect to the airliner briefing, some reporters protested that a briefing they had not requested should be on the record. Protests intensified when it was learned that Richard R. Burt, the assistant secretary of state for European affairs, had agreed to interviews by the three major TV networks on the same subject.

A lower-ranking official than Burt conducted the State Department briefing. A few days later, however, that official, identified as Thomas Simons, head of the State Department's Soviet desk, himself granted an on-the-record TV interview in which he related much of the same information he had given background earlier in the week.

Among those raising protests were Bernard Kalb of NBC-TV, Bernard Gwertzman of The New York Times, Don Oberdorfer of the The Washington Post and this reporter, all of whom regularly cover the State Department.

In response to an AP request, John Hughes, the State Department's chief spokesman, said last Monday, in advance of the background briefing, that he would see whether it could be put on the record.

Hughes, himself an assistant secretary of state with an excellent reputation among reporters, was known to feel the briefing should be on-the-record. But he didn't prevail.

Another spokesman, Brian Carlson, announced the verdict to reporters at the start of the briefing on Tuesday that "we looked into that and we decided to keep it on background."

Among the reasons given — privately by two officials who insisted on not being identified — was that the official who would be doing the briefing did not want to upstage Burt's television appearances, as they presumably would be saying pretty much the same thing.

Burt, a former reporter for The New York Times, has a reputation among his staff for eagerly availing himself of opportunities to appear on TV. Indeed, he has been interviewed on TV many more times than any other State Department official in the Reagan administration.

But Burt said in a brief interview with AP that he didn't make the decision for the other official to hold a background briefing and was not even aware of it. "I don't know how it was decided," he said.

Other officials in the State Department's Bureau of European Affairs, which Burt heads, concurred that Burt was not involved in the decision, but they felt they were making a decision for him that he would approve.

Engineer making hormone in space

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — An electronic problem caused the loss of a full day's running time on an orbiting medicine-making machine, but an official said Saturday that enough of a revolutionary drug will be returned by space shuttle Discovery to start clinical testing on Earth.

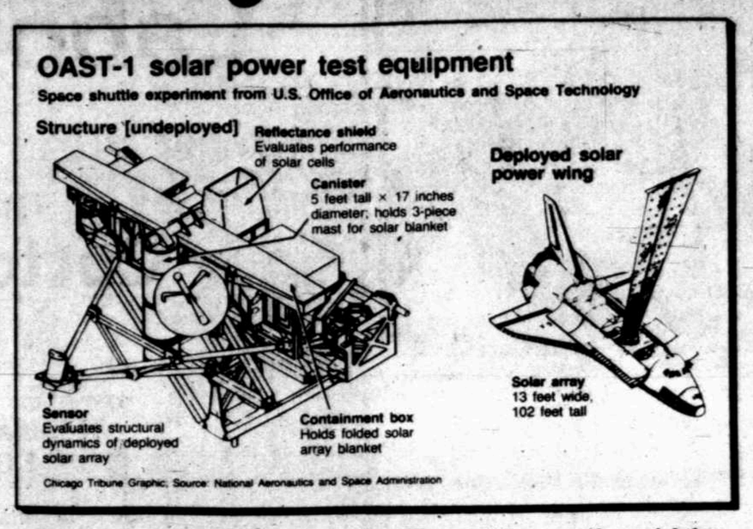

Charlie Walker, an engineer flying on Discovery to operate a machine that is making a special hormone in space, shut down a flawed automatic system and now is manually controlling part of the machine's operation.

"Charlie has to do more work, but it's going now like it is supposed to," James Rose of McDonnell Douglas said Saturday.

Rose said the machine was "up and running in good shape" for about 1½ hours on Friday, but then it shut down due to a flaw in an automatic system that controls pressures.

Engineers on the ground worked out a solution to the problem overnight. Rose said Walker followed instructions, and the device started working smoothly, but under manual pressure control.

"We should get enough product back to start the testing program," Rose said.

The medicine-making machine — called continuous flow electrophoresis, or CFES — is being developed by a partnership of McDonnell Douglas, an aerospace company, and Johnson & Johnson, a pharmaceutical firm.

The machine uses the weightlessness of space to separate and purify a rare hormone that the companies claim will save thousands of lives when it becomes commercially available. Neither of the partners have specifically identified the drug.

Walker is flying on Discovery as the space agency's first paying passenger. His only job is to operate the CFES long enough to produce about 0.35 liters of pure hormone. The material will be returned to Earth with Discovery on Wednesday, and a subsidiary of Johnson & Johnson then will start laboratory and clinical testing on the drug.

Rose said that by shutting down the automatic pressure system on CFES, Walker now will make adjustments manually on two pressure pumps. The CFES is scheduled to run through sleep periods for the Discovery crew, but Rose said there is an alarm system that will awaken only Walker if the machine requires adjustments.

Rose said Walker's presence on board Discovery made a big difference in the success of the CFES mission.

"Having Charlie there certainly enhanced where we are today in that we'll be able to complete the mission," said Rose.

McDonnell Douglas and Johnson & Johnson plan to complete clinical testing on the hormone to obtain a license from the Federal Drug Administration to use the drug for medical treatments.

Will new 'Brillo do' send women into orbit?

SPACE CENTER, Houston — Judy Resnik knew that her long, naturally-curly hair would "look like a Brillo pad" in the weightlessness of orbit and doesn't really care, but the astronaut's hairdresser plans a new style for the next voyage of America's second woman in space.

Sylvia Salinas, a staff member in the astronaut office and a close friend of Ms. Resnik, said they discussed the effect weightlessness would have on her long hair. It was forecast that a lack of gravity would cause the astronaut's curly hair to spring away from her head.

"I expected it," said Ms. Salinas. "We told her she'd look like a Brillo pad when she got up there. But I think she's having too much fun to really care."

Ms. Salinas said the astronaut's hair "looks great" on the ground, but television views of Ms. Resnik aboard the shuttle Discovery shows her curls standing straight up and out on all sides.

One hairstylist said Ms. Resnik "looks like she's stuck her finger in a light socket."

Ms. Resnik's hair dresser, Zeke Menchaca, said there is a lot he can do to make her hairstyle look better on her next spaceflight.

"Her hair is naturally beautiful. It's long, dark and naturally curly," Menchaca said. "It hangs down to the center of her back, but curls to shoulder length. On the ground, gravity and humidity hold it down. It does what we want it to do. We were very curious how it would react in space."

Menchaca said Ms. Resnik's natural curl has an energy that forces the strands to stand out away from her head, but that there are styles that will control the springiness in orbit.

"We talked about her taking something along, like a hair band, if she had that problem," said Menchaca. But Ms. Resnik has not been shown on television wearing anything in her hair.

"We can always come up with another style," said the hair dresser. "We could put in braids or an up-do without destroying the style."

Menchaca is the stylist for several of the women astronauts and he said they all have the same problem in day-to-day haircare.

"They are all extremely busy," he said, and all prefer styles requiring minimum care.

"Judy's is easy to take care of (on Earth) because of the natural curl," he said.

Kathy Sullivan, an astronaut who will become the first American woman spacewalker on a shuttle mission in October, has straight hair that she wears cut short.

Menchaca said Ms. Sullivan plays a lot of sports and spends hours wearing a space helmet while practicing for the spacewalk.

"She has to wake up and be ready to go," said Menchaca. "She doesn't want to have to worry about her hair."

Sally Ride, America's first woman in space, had curly hair on her first flight, but recently has worn short, straight hair. Ms. Ride will fly with Ms. Sullivan on the October mission.

Hair has always been something of a problem in outer space. During the early years of the space program, astronauts were told not to shave while in space because NASA engineers were afraid cut whiskers would float free and foul sensitive electronics. The astronauts grew beards which they quickly would shave after their spacecraft landed on Earth.

NASA spent thousands trying to invent a space shaver and tests were conducted, unsuccessfully, with devices that would vacuum away the whiskers at the same time they were cut.

President congratulates space shuttle crew on 'great job'

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan congratulated the space shuttle Discovery's six-member crew Saturday for "doing a great job" in successfully deploying three communications satellites.

"On top of being spacemen and a spacewoman, you're doing some very good work for your fellow citizens of earth," Reagan told the astronauts in a radiotelephone call from the White House.

His call came shortly after a third communications satellite — Telstar 3 of American Telephone & Telegraph Co. — was successfully launched from Discovery's cargo bay.

"We're following your exploits and you're doing a great job," Reagan said, adding: "You're three for three."

Mission commander Hank Hartsfield told the president that "this is really a tremendous ride. You ought to try it sometime."

Reagan replied, "I'll have to think about that for a while and then see whether I can appoint myself as a passenger."

The president asked Judy Resnik, America's second woman in space: "Well, Judy, how is it — your first flight? How is it going? Is it all that you hoped it would be?"

She responded, "It certainly is, and I couldn't have picked a better crew to be flying with, even if they are all Air Force and Navy and Army guys fighting about who's best."

"Well," Reagan said, "as for that, what does an electrical engineer do in space?"

"Whatever they tell me to."

UAW members vote to approve strike authorization

DETROIT (AP) — United Auto Workers members overwhelmingly approved strike authorizations against General Motors Corp. and Ford Motor Co., which offered no raises in contract proposals, union officials said Saturday.

Employees of both companies gave the go-ahead to strike by better than 90 percent margins, the UAW said in a statement.

GM earned $3,73 billion last year and Ford earned $1.87 billion. Both could nearly double those records this year, and union members want a bigger share of those profits.

Voting was completed last week at both companies, said UAW vice presidents Stephen Yokich, the union's top bargainer at Ford, and Donald Ephlin, its top bargainer at GM.

Yokich said in the statement that union members "know that they have widespread support from the American public for their overall bargaining goals of keeping auto jobs in this country, coupled with reasonable wage and benefit gains."

Said Ephlin, "Our membership has sent a clear message."

The UAW has its richest strike fund ever, $563 million.

The current contracts expire Sept. 14. Officials had announced Friday that bargaining would continue over the Labor Day weekend.

Chief GM bargainer Alfred Warren said that "by Monday night, we hoped to have out of the way" some minor items in the contract.

UAW President Owen Bieber appeared at the bargaining table last week for the first time since the talks' ceremonial opening session to warn the auto companies that they should throw out their proposals and "start all over."

Neither GM nor Ford offered to raise their blue-collar workers' base pay, although GM offered $900 in lump-sum payments over two years to its 350,000 UAW workers.

Ford offered a profit-sharing plan it estimated would amount to between $1,600 and $1,700 per person this year for its 115,000 UAW members.

The companies said they want the base wage frozen. While willing to start cost-of-living payments at the present $3.04, they want increases to be granted more slowly than the union demanded.

The union asked that the present GM base wage of $9.63 an hour and cost-of-living adjustment payments of $3.04 per hour be combined in a new base wage of $12.67 per hour, which would be the starting point for unspecified yearly wage increases.

Illinois officials take precautions to guard drawing

CHICAGO (AP) — With a record $40 million lottery jackpot at stake, officials took special precautions to ensure the security of Saturday's Illinois Lotto drawing as thousands of last-minute ticket buyers queued up at stores across the state.

A single winner is guaranteed $40 million — $2 million annually for 20 years — but the kitty could be larger depending on how many tickets were sold Saturday. Multiple winners will have to share the winnings.

Any increase in the prize from $40 million was to be announced after the 7:57 p.m. EDT drawing at the WFLD-TV studios, said lottery spokesman Joel Feldstein.

A total of 22,998,821 tickets had been sold by Friday night. At one point late Friday, tickets were selling at a rate of between 12,000 and 14,000 a minute, said lottery superintendent Michael Jones.

It was a gamble just trying to locate a ticket agent without a long line in front of the store. The $1 tickets, each giving two chances to pick the right number, are sold at 2,300 Illinois businesses, most of them shops and gas stations.

On Monday morning, the lottery computer will determine how many people, if any, picked the winning six numbers. The results will be announced at a Labor Day news conference, but the names of any winners won't be known until they contact lottery officials.

For three straight weeks, no one has won the Lotto grand prize, setting the stage for the largest jackpot in U.S. history.

One of eight sets of 44 numbered balls were to be loaded into a tumbling machine for the drawing of the six winning numbers, and beforehand the balls were kept in a sealed cabinet stored in a cinderblock room at WFLD. Burglar alarms, heat sensors and smoke detectors guarded the room against unauthorized entry or fire.

"We will do everything necessary to ensure the security of the drawing and to make sure we don't have any problems," said Robert Houk, supervisor of security for the drawings.

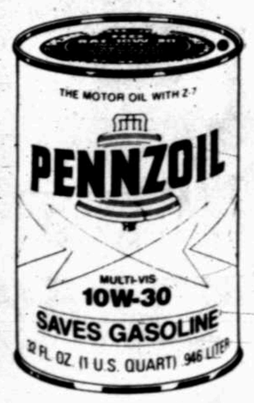

Access to the room required two keys carried by two certified public accountants from two firms. An official from Laventhol & Horwath prepared for the drawing while a representative of Peat, Marwick & Mitchell watched him. Lottery officials watched both accountants.

Reporters were invited to the drawing, but had to arrive at the studio nearly 90 minutes ahead of time, said a statement from N.W. Ayer, the lottery's public relations firm. In addition, reporters "will be required to stay within prescribed areas. Maintaining the integrity and randomness of the drawings is the lottery's primary goal."

Ferraro not alone in using exemption

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Geraldine Ferraro, whose vice presidential campaign has been dogged by her responses on a financial disclosure form, is one of 18 House members who claimed a legal exemption this year from having to reveal details about the finances of a spouse or dependent.

Interviews with 16 of the 18 — or their spokesmen — show some members are uncertain over what they need to disclose about their families. At least four of them claimed exemptions for items they did not have to disclose anyway.

While Ms. Ferraro, D-N.Y., continues to maintain that she meets the three tests the law requires for an exemption, three members of the group have either dropped the exemption claim or say they will do so soon.

Rep. Tom Kindness clearly remembers the post-Watergate days of 1978 when Congress wrestled with the touchy question of whether members should bare their financial souls to America.

"I do recall being generally concerned they were creating problems for people to deal with down the road," the Ohio Republican said last week.

That road has run straight to 1984, causing criminal problems for Rep. George Hansen, R-Idaho, and well as the political ones bedeviling Ms. Ferraro.

Hansen faces up to 15 months in prison and a $40,000 fine after being convicted by a federal jury last April for filing false financial disclosure statements for the first three years following enactment of the 1978 Ethics in Government Act.

More recently, Ms. Ferraro's historic campaign has been haunted by financial questions that partly center on her refusal to list the assets, liabilities and transactions of her husband, real estate dealer John Zaccaro, on her congressional disclosure forms.

Exemptions claimed by other members covered such things as U.S. savings bonds purchased for children and a wife's bank account worth $1,200. None of the items approached Zaccaro's net worth of $3 million that Ms. Ferraro excluded from her report.

The ethics law says that to qualify for an exemption, a member must have no detailed knowledge of the spouse's holdings, have no part in their acquisition and receive no benefit from them.

It also says there is no need to disclose a spouse's personal bank account if it amounts to less than $5,000 or anything about the spouse's finances if the couple was legally separated or divorced within the reporting year.

Kindness was one of the members claiming an exemption for information he did not have to report. He was divorced in 1983. "I always approach these things with an abundance of caution," he said.

On Aug. 6, after Ms. Ferraro's exemption was questioned, Rep. Norman Lent, R-N.Y., filed an amended statement listing assets of his wife, Barbara Morris. The ethics law allows valuation in broad ranges. Lent valued her holdings at between $35,000 and $145,000.

"He still felt he was qualified (for the exemption), but because of questions concerning others he filed the amendment," said his spokeswoman, Stephanie Taylor.

Rep. Barbara Boxer, D-Calif., said she checked the exemption box "as a precaution in case my spouse had made any investments through his law firm of which I was unaware."

She said that after double-checking and finding that her statement listed all their joint and individual holdings, she was amending her form to drop the claim and was urging the House ethics committee to discard the exemption box because it is "confusing."

Rep. Henson Moore, R-La., said his exemption covered Exxon stock given his three children by their maternal grandfather. The stock cannot be touched until they are adults and proceeds are automatically reinvested in more Exxon stock, according to Moore.

But under Louisiana law, Moore is the administrator of the stock funds. "I don't pass it," he said of the knowledge test. "I'm going to have to file an amended (disclosure) report."

Rep. Austin Murphy, D-Pa., exempted the savings bonds he has given his children as birthday presents.

Reagan, union head disagree about economy

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan on Saturday used the Labor Day holiday to proclaim the resurging economy "a hopeful thumbs-up" sign for American workers, while the head of the AFL-CIO accused him of seeking "to undermine and weaken the trade union movement."

"The outlook on Labor Day weekend 1984 is for a continuation of strong, steady growth, more jobs and low inflation," Reagan said in his weekly radio address, paid for by his re-election committee.

Acknowledging that "we still have great challenges to meet," Reagan took a jab at Democratic rival Walter F. Mondale when he said: "We're determined to bring inflation further down, just as we're determined to simplify our tax system so we can bring your tax rates further down — not up, as my opponent would do — harming the growth and progress that we've made."

"We know that what is good for the American worker is good for America," the president said. "And as we prepare for a new season of work, I believe there's good reason for giving a hopeful thumbs-up."

Meanwhile, AFL-CIO President Lane Kirkland, used his traditional Labor Day radio address to urge Mondale's election as president. He said "the trade union movement stood against Ronald Reagan and for common sense the first time around (in 1980), and we are prepared for Act Two."

Kirkland acknowledged that the Republican administration has brought inflation to its lowest ebb in years. But he argued that Reagan did this "in ways that wounded the middle class...What he eliminated was millions of jobs...He gave us the most massive unemployment since the Great Depression."

Civilian unemployment stood at 7.5 percent of the labor force when Reagan took office in January 1981. It soared to a post-Depression record rate of 10.7 percent in November 1982, during the depths of a long recession, but has since receded to 7.5 percent.

That rate, however, jumped back to 7.5 percent from a three-year low of 7.1 percent from June to July, and more than 8 million people were unemployed.

Since joblessness peaked at 10.7 percent in 1982, some 6.5 million Americans have found work and total employment has neared 106 million.

Black minister endorses Reagan re-election bid

WASHINGTON (AP) — Dr. Joseph Harrison Jackson, pastor of Olivet Baptist Church in Chicago and a former longtime president of the 7-million-member National Baptist Convention, said Saturday he will endorse President Reagan's 1984 re-election bid.

Jackson, a black Democrat, said in a telephone interview from Chicago that he was endorsing Reagan because his opponent, Walter F. Mondale, represented "entrenched Democrats" who would divide traditional party members from elements of the Rev. Jesse Jackson's Rainbow Coalition, which is comprised mostly of black voters.

Such a schism, he said, would bring "a return to a form of segregation we've been fighting for years."

Jackson also credited Reagan with bringing "a budding prosperity to this country."

"I was at the bank just the other day in my humble neighborhood. It was crowded to the streets because the government checks had come. That didn't look like poverty. It looked like prosperity to me. The money in America has trickled down to the poor people. Mr. Reagan has certainly not tried to stop this," he said.

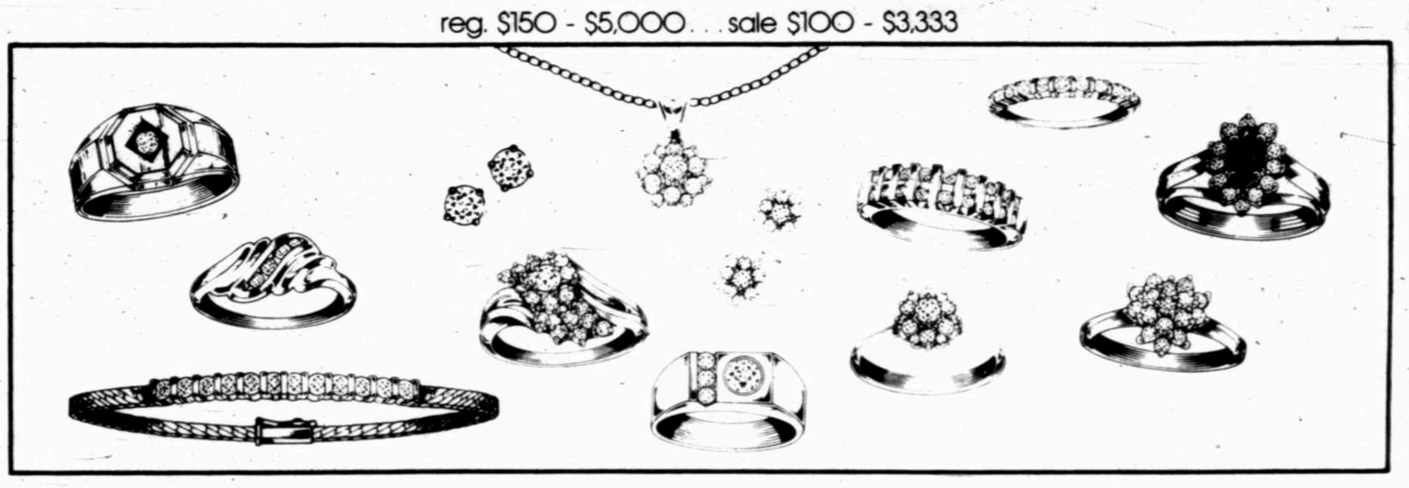

Jackson said he would formally announce his endorsement at a press conference here Tuesday during the group's national convention. He said his endorsement of Reagan is a personal one and does not constitute endorsement by the National Baptist Convention, a predominantly black association of churches that he led for 29 years.

Jerry Lewis Labor Day Telethon now holiday staple

NEW YORK (AP) — Jerry Lewis was a young goofball comic and television had only two colors. It was 1966, the first year Lewis was host of the Muscular Dystrophy Association telethon in New York City. It appeared on one television station and raised $500,000.

Lewis is still a goofball when the spirit strikes, but all the rest has changed. In 1981, its best year, the Jerry Lewis Labor Day Telethon was beamed from Las Vegas to 210 television stations and received pledges of $31.5 million.

Along the way, the telethon has endured controversy and foul-ups; Lewis has had some perilous personal times, including a heart attack Dec. 31, 1982, and double-bypass heart surgery. But he and the association have turned the telethon into what may be the most powerful single outpouring of charity in the nation. They have reshaped the way Americans give.

"MDA was a pioneer," said Fred Schnaue, vice president of the American Association of Fund-Raising Counsel, a trade group for professional fund-raisers. "They've been at telethons just about longer than anyone, and they've got it pretty well worked out. I think the MDA Telethon and Labor Day are just about synonymous."

This year's 21-hour telethon will be the 19th broadcast over the Labor Day weekend and will feature another all-star cast. It will be broadcast from Caesars Palace in Las Vegas to 194 television stations in the United States and cable television in Canada.

"Our goal," said telethon coordinator Jerry Weinberg, "is always $1 more than last year." In 1983, the telethon had pledges of $30,691,627.

The Muscular Dystrophy Association was founded in 1950 to help combat a range of muscle-destroying diseases that fell under the general heading of muscular dystrophy. The same year, United Cerebral Palsy held the first telethon. MDA followed about two years later.

The organization found its star in 1956, when Lewis began playing host for a series of Thanksgiving telethons in New York. They lasted until 1959, fading mostly because of scheduling conflicts.

But Muscular Dystrophy officials began planning something new: a national telethon. In 1966, they held the first Jerry Lewis Labor Day Telethon on station WNEW in New York. It expanded to five stations in 1968, 20 in 1969, 65 in 1970, 120 in 1971 and hit a peak of 213 in 1977-79. The stations were a blend of affiliates from the major networks and independents.

Through it all, Lewis was constantly before the camera: emotional, corny, funny, with a coterie of superstar guests. But what may have been the most dramatic moment came off camera, in 1978, when Lewis announced receiving 27 letters questioning whether he had been paid.

"I receive nothing from the telethon," he said in an emotional speech that went untelevised because the broadcast had switched to local stations. "Every dime is accounted for."

The question comes up each year at telethon time, and MDA officials are quick to note that neither Lewis nor any of the stars on the telethon are paid.

Some questions remain about the association's fund raising and its use of funds.

Two single-engine planes collide in mid-air, killing six

THE DALLES, Ore. (AP) — Two single-engine airplanes collided near here Saturday and "disintegrated" as they plunged to earth, killing all six people aboard the two craft, authorities and witnesses said.

There were two people on one plane and four on the other, said Mike O'Connor, a duty officer with the Federal Aviation Administration in Seattle. He said there were no survivors.

The planes collided at 10:05 a.m., two to three miles west of The Dalles, O'Connor said. The airplanes hit the ground about a mile apart, at separate ends of a large field, and burned on impact, he said.

Debris was scattered over the area and one body was hurled onto a nearby hillside. The other five bodies were burned severely, authorities said.

Wasco County Sheriff Bob Brown said the names of the victims were being withheld pending positive identification and notification of relatives.

The cause of the crash was not immediately known. The FAA was sending an investigative team to the site.

"The weather was not a factor," said an FAA spokesman who refused to give his name. He said visibilty was 30 miles and there were only scattered clouds when the collision occurred.

Matt Esselstrom, who saw the accident, said it appeared that one of the airplanes had just taken off from the nearby Dallesport, Wash., airport, which is across the Columbia River from the Dalles, when the collision occurred.

SPECIFY WHAT STAYS OR GOES

Probably the most important document in the sale of a home is the purchase & sales contract. In order to save a lot of aggravation, post-sale bickering, and possibly law suits, the gray area of which items will stay and which will go should be spelled out specifically in the contract.

Know the difference between Chattels (which can be picked up move without leaving nail holes); and fixtures, which have been attached with the intention of their becoming part of the real estate (furnace, fence, garbage disposal, etc.) Fixtures are expected to remain with property.

Items like wall-to-wall carpeting, smoke alarms and fireplace equipment should be specified in the contract to avoid confusion about what stays and what goes. Two usual troublesome items are the TV antenna and fancy lighting fixtures; people form strong emotional attachments to chandeliers. Don't get bogged down over such little matters. Simply make sure your offer stipulates that all fixtures remain except specific ones you're willing to give up.

Poll: Ferraro isn't drawing enough voters to ticket

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Democratic vice presidential nominee Geraldine Ferraro is more popular than her running mate, Walter Mondale, but isn't drawing enough voters to the ticket to make it a winner, according to a nationwide poll published in Sunday editions of The Los Angeles Times.

Sixty percent of those polled said that if the general election were held now, they would vote for President Reagan, while 33 percent would vote for Mondale.

When the vice presidential nominees were included, 59 percent said they would cast their ballot for Reagan and George Bush, with 36 percent for the Mondale-Ferraro ticket.

To the question of whether Ms. Ferraro would help or hurt Mondale's chances, 38 percent said she would help and 28 percent said she hurt the ticket. Another 27 percent felt she had no effect.

Ms. Ferraro received higher favorable ratings than did Mondale in the poll. Of those questioned, 59 percent had a favorable impression of her and 29 percent said they had an unfavorable impression. Mondale received a 53 percent favorable rating and a 42 percent negative response.

Police break up party

KALAMAZOO, Mich. (AP) — More than 200 officers used clubs and tear gas to break up a back-to-school party that got out of hand at Western Michigan University, and at least 40 of the 1,000 people who attended were arrested, police said Saturday.

The confrontation lasted nearly four hours Friday night and early Saturday as lines of police chased groups of students who hurled beer bottles and insults, said Kalamazoo Chief of Public Safety John Ross.

At least one officer was injured by a flying bottle, a shed was set on fire and there were numerous reports of vandalism, Ross said. Last year the off-campus party attracted 10,000 people without incident.

Printing students expelled

ROYAL OAK, Mich. (AP) — Eight vocational school students who took their printing training too far have been expelled for counterfeiting U.S. currency, the principal says.

The five adults among the Southeast Oakland Vocational Education Center students will not face criminal charges, but will be listed with the Secret Service for 10 years as counterfeiters, said John Daenzer. The other three were juveniles, he said.

The students made photographic printing plates from $1 and $20 bills in late July, but made no effort to pass the bills and either tore up or discarded most of them, Daenzer said. The Secret Service became involved through an anonymous tip.

Dealer's bond reduced

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Bond was reduced from $1 million to $150,000 for a Baton Rouge antiques dealer charged with bringing two teen-age girls from Florida for "prostitution, debauchery and other immoral purposes," authorities said.

One condition of Friday's bond reduction was that Robert Carter, 47, report to a federal probation officer, see a psychologist weekly and not leave the Baton Rouge area, U.S. Magistrate Ronal Fonseca said.

Scotland Yard looking for Nigerian politician

LONDON (AP) — Scotland Yard said Saturday it is looking into reports that the head of Nigeria Airways, sought in the bungled crate-kidnapping of a fugitive Nigerian politician, himself escaped from Britain in a crate marked diplomatic baggage.

Gerald Kaufman, an opposition Labor Party member of Parliament, demanded an urgent inquiry into reports that Group Capt. Bernard Bamfa had fled on one of his company's planes using the same method as Umaru Dikko's kidnappers.

Dikko, an outspoken critic of Nigeria's military government, was found drugged inside a cargo crate with diplomatic labels at Stansted Airport outside London on July 5. It was about to be put aboard a Nigeria Airways flight for Lagos, the capital of Nigeria.

The Nigerian military government has accused Dikko of plundering millions from state coffers.

A Scotland Yard spokesman said Bamfa was one of two Nigerians and two Israelis still being sought for questioning in connection with the Dikko episode. He refused to identify the others.

The Times of London and the British Broadcasting Corp. reported Saturday that Bamfa, managing director of Nigeria Airways, was taken through Heathrow Airport earlier this week in a crate marked diplomatic baggage. The Times said that Bamfa was in his house in the Lagos suburb of Ikeja on Friday, surrounded by heavily armed guards.

"We have no evidence that he (Bamfa) has been crated out of the country," said the Scotland Yard spokesman, who was not named in keeping with British custom. "We are aware of the rumors that he has been crated out of the country and we are investigating."

A Nigerian and three Israelis were charged with kidnapping and drugging Dikko, 47, a former transport minister and close associate of ousted civilian president Shehu Shagari. Dikko fled to Britain after the Dec. 31 military coup.

No date has been set for the criminal court trial of Nigerian Mohammed Yusufu, who has been denied diplomatic immunity, and the Israelis, hospital anesthetist Lev-Arie Shapiro and businessmen Alexander Barak and Felix Avital.

The Times said Bamfa was in Britain just before Dikko was seized "but disappeared when he was tipped off that the anti-terrorist squad was looking for him. It is believed he hid in a Nigerian diplomatic house and earlier this week was taken through the freight terminal at Heathrow in a diplomatic crate."

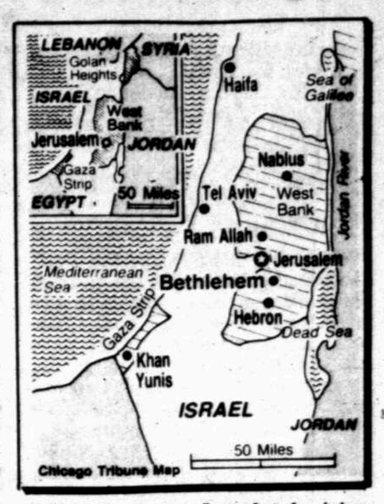

Shamir, Peres argue over leadership

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Yitzhak Shamir, the caretaker prime minister, and Labor Party leader Shimon Peres still differed over Jordan and who should be prime minister first as they prepared for talks today aimed at nailing down a bipartisan government, reports indicated.

Israel television said Saturday that Shamir, head of the right-wing Likud bloc, and Peres would try to resolve the prime ministership issue on Sunday, but both were determined to be the government leader in the first 25 months of the proposed coalition government.

Peres, named a month ago as premier-designate after Labor narrowly won more seats than Likud in the July election, insists he has the constitutional right to serve first. But Shamir's spokesman said before the last Shamir-Peres meeting Friday that Shamir had not conceded to Peres, and the television report indicated that Friday's meeting had not brought a decision.

Shamir, Peres and their spokesmen could not be reached by telephone late Saturday for comment on the report.

Shamir, in an Israel television interview Friday, indicated he also disagreed with Peres on making peace overtures to Jordan.

"There are diplomatic initiatives that are not agreed" between Labor and Likud, Shamir said. "These will not be taken. I can add that everyone knows that the period we are entering will not bring these initiatives."

Asked if he meant negotiation with Jordan, Shamir said, "For example."

But Peres said Friday in a separate interview that Likud and Labor had agreed in their coalition guidelines to invite Jordan's King Hussein to negotiate peace.

The two parties in the government would have to work out their differences "by mutual persuasion," he said. Although they would find it hard to reach decisions, "it will be easier to carry out the decisions."

A threatened walkout by the six members of Labor's left-wing Mapam faction could change the balance of power between Labor and Likud, and leave Peres scrambling to find enough support among the 13 smaller parties in the Knesset, or parliament, to restore his numerical advantage.

Mapam accused Peres of making too many ideological concessions to appease the right-wing Likud.

The coalition agreement would end nearly six weeks of political paralysis since the inconclusive July 23 general election that has kept the government from dealing effectively with Israel's problems.

Labor won 44 seats in the election and Likud 41, and neither could patch together the necessary 61 for a majority in the 120-member parliament.

Members of all parties agreed that the key issue was the economy, with inflation raging toward 400 percent this year and an impending foreign currency crisis.

Finance Minister Yigal Cohen-Orgad has prepared plans to cut more than $1 billion from government spending and freeze wages and prices, but the Histadrut labor federation refuses to take part in negotiations until a new government takes over.

Members of both major parties also want to pull the army out of south Lebanon, where it has been for nearly 27 months.

But Defense Minister Moshe Arens said in a radio interview that he believed a national unity government would not be able to withdraw the army any faster.

Saudi Arabia reportedly withdraws mission

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Saudi Arabia told Lebanon Saturday it has withdrawn its diplomatic mission from Beirut to protest an attack on its embassy compound by pro-Iranian zealots nine days ago, Foreign Ministry sources here said.

The sources, who spoke on condition they not be identified, said Saudi Charg d'Affaires Abu Bakr Rafi and his staff left the Lebanese capital Thursday. The embassy's telephones went unanswered Saturday.

There was no word on whether the Saudi decision will affect Lebanon's chances of getting a promised $450 million reconstruction grant from the oil-rich kingdom. The decision raised questions about what role Saudi Arabia will be willing to play in the future of Lebanon.

Along with many other diplomats, the Saudi Embassy staff had left Beirut after the Feb. 6 takeover of the mostly Moslem western sector of the capital by Moslem militias. The Saudis returned after assurances from Lebanese Prime Minister Rashid Karami that security conditions had improved.

Rafi and his staff had been back in Beirut three days when radical Shiite Moslem militiamen and demonstrators from the Hezbollah, or Party of God, faction on Aug. 24 ransacked the embassy's visa section and set it afire.

After the raid, Saudi Arabia charged that Karami's national coalition government knew of plans for the attack but did nothing to stop it.

Hezbollah members said they attacked the embassy to protest Saudi refusal to grant visas to Lebanese wanting to make the annual pilgrimage to Mecca, in Saudi Arabia, Islam's holiest city.

Local militias in Beirut's Moslem and Christian sectors still control the streets, although they have given up front-line positions along the mid-city "green line" as part of an army-enforced security plan that went into effect nearly two months ago.

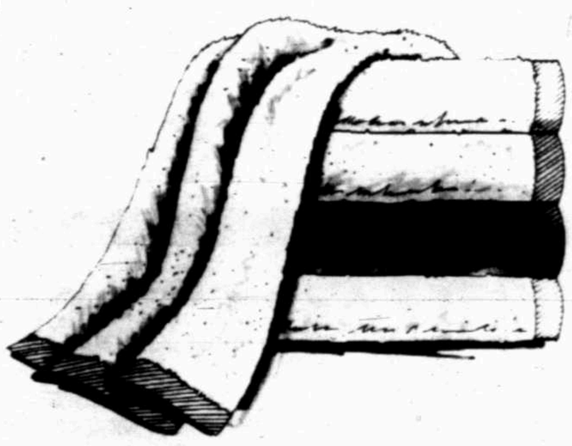

President Amin Gemayel's administration has so far been unable to carry out further phases of the Syrian-backed security plan to end nine years of sectarian warfare in Lebanon.

Official sources, who spoke on condition they were not identified, said Gemayel and Karami planned to discuss ways of breaking the deadlock.

British unions split over violent miners' strike

LONDON (AP) — Split by a violent miners' strike and a partial dock workers' walkout, Britain's labor union leaders gather this week for one of the most crucial meetings in their movement's 116-year history.

Mass demonstrations are planned by miners demanding all-out backing for their six-month-old strike from the 10-million-member Trades Union Congress, the national labor federation, which opens its annual congress Monday in the seaside resort of Brighton.

The left wing is headed by Arthur Scargill, president of the 183,000-member National Union of Mineworkers, who is urging what could amount to a national strike against the Conservative government of Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher.

The moderates contend that would be the road to perdition.

Scargill's supporters include the nation's biggest union, the 1.5-million member Transport and General Workers' Union, which encompasses the dock workers, the two major rail unions, and the seamen.

But rank-and-file longshoremen were far from unanimous in joining the past week's work stoppage called to support the miners. About one-third of the 35,000 dockers were on strike, the National Association of Port Employers estimated.

Other big guns against Scargill are the engineers and the municipal workers, the next two biggest unions with a total membership of 1.8 million. Scargill assails their leaders as sellouts of the working class.

They retort that militant miners are putting the dwindling and divided Trades Union Congress on a course that will finally split it and exacerbate wounds they say have been inflicted by the Thatcher government and by rising unemployment.

"The British trade union movement is now at its weakest since 1926," said engineers' leader Terry Duffy, referring to the last general strike which began in support of a miners' walkout and collapsed nine days later.

"We can't deliver an all-out strike...Emotion is ruling the day rather than logic," Duffy added in a radio interview.

"If we don't adopt some resolution that will give unanimity...we could see the demise of the trade union movement and therefore of our democracy as well."

The Trades Union Congress meets against a background of strikes dominating front pages daily. Mrs. Thatcher canceled a Far East trip next month because of the industrial unrest, unprecedented clashes between police and pickets in mining districts, and the second dock strike in as many months.

Resolutions before the 1,100 congress delegates, which moderates say will be unenforceable if passed and divisive if rejected, include:

— Scargill's insistence on total support, including a Trades Union Congress ban on any member crossing miners' picket lines. The miners struck last March against the state-run industry's plans to close 20 money-losing mines.

— A call by the print union Sogat 82 for a "public campaign to bring about the defeat of this Conservative government."

— A miners' demand for the Trades Union Congress to call strikes "involving all trade unions" in support of any union penalized under Mrs. Thatcher's employment laws. The laws allow employers to seek injunctions and file damage suits against unions that call sympathy strikes in support of another union or indulge in mass picketing.

United States, allies share fewer common interests

EDITOR'S NOTE — An election in New Zealand, a vote in the Dutch Parliament, tough talk from Central America. Recent events have loosened the ties binding the United States to some longtime friends.

CHARLES J. HANLEY
Associated Press Writer

FRAYING ALLIANCES

The web of U.S. alliances around the world is suddenly fraying in a half-dozen spots.

In the past three months, allies in Western Europe, in the South Pacific, and in Central America have rebelled over U.S. missiles, rejected U.S. warship visits and grown restless over American army maneuvers and bases.

On Aug. 17, the Pentagon announced it would close the U.S. Army school for Latin American soldiers in Panama because of a disagreement with the Panamanian government. The leaders of nearby Honduras, meanwhile, sound increasingly edgy over their close military partnership with Washington.

Western defense pacts are not the only ones under strain. New tensions have arisen also within the Soviet bloc's Warsaw Pact alliance, over the stationing of additional Soviet missiles in East Germany and Czechoslovakia, and over the East Germans' efforts to strengthen ties with West Germany.

But the disputes involving NATO and other U.S.-led defense arrangements are more widespread — and more visible.

Leaders and analysts on both sides of the Atlantic say the U.S.-West European friction is deep-rooted.

"THE INTERESTS and the objectives of the United States and the West European countries are increasingly diverging," Pieter Dankert, the Dutch Socialist who until last month was president of the European Parliament, wrote recently in the journal Foreign Policy.

Dankert said security arrangements created in 1949 — meaning the North Atlantic Treaty Organization — "cannot endure indefinitely."

Former U.S. Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger said earlier this year that NATO "has...increasingly maintained the appearance of unity by evading some fundamental issues."

Analysts identify two underlying causes for trans-Atlantic discord: Western Europe's strong economic rivalry with the United States since the early 1970s, and a generally "softer" European attitude toward Moscow.

The current issue most troubling to the 15-member Western alliance is the planned deployment of new U.S. missiles in five nations — West Germany, Britain, Italy, the Netherlands and Belgium — a nuclear force described as a counter to modernized Soviet missiles. The Soviets say the NATO deployment, which began in late 1983, is the reason they have pulled out of arms-control negotiations.

HERE IS A look at how alliance solidarity has weakened recently.

DENMARK

In a parliamentary vote May 10, the Danes were the first alliance members to withdraw from the NATO missile plan. The lawmakers voted to stop $4.8 million in payments on the Danish share of the missile expenses.

NETHERLANDS

Five weeks later, the Netherlands Parliament backed away from the NATO deployment schedule. The Dutch will not accept 48 U.S. cruise missiles by the end of 1986, as originally scheduled, but two years later, and then only if the Soviets have not reduced their nuclear forces.

The West German defense minister had warned that such a vote would "raise doubts about the...unity of the Western alliance."

GREECE

In May, Andreas Papandreou, Socialist premier of this NATO-member country, described the United States as the "mecca of imperialism." In June, U.S. officials criticized Papandreou's "intemperance" and his defense of Soviet policy. By August, the dispute boiled over — the United States indicated it might block warplane sales to its Greek ally, and the Greeks canceled joint U.S.-Greek military exercises and a planned visit by a U.S. Navy ship.

NEW ZEALAND

On July 14, New Zealanders elected a Labor Party government committed to banning nuclear warships from New Zealand waters, effectively locking out the U.S. Navy.

American officials say such a ban threatens to undo the 33-year-old ANZUS defense treaty, which unites Australia, New Zealand and the United States.

Women spent 21 years in China camp

By JOHN RODERICK
AP Special Correspondent

HARBIN, China — The granddaughter of an American clipper ship captain and her aged mother, caught up in Communist China's past turmoils, are spinning out the slender threads of their lives in the austere surroundings of an old people's home in Harbin.

Before arriving in 1980 to the comparative kindness and solicitude of the Harbin Old Peoples Home for Foreigners, they spent 21 uncomprehending and anguished years in a Shanghai internment camp for stateless foreigners.

They are Marjorie Fuller, a 61-year-old spinster, and her mother, Seraphine Laskovsky Fuller, 80.

Born in this northeast China city of Polish-Ukrainian parents, Seraphine married Alfred Graham Fuller, American executive of the Thomas Cook travel company, in Shanghai in the early 1920s. She became an American citizen and gave birth to Marjorie in 1923. Fuller divorced Seraphine in 1931, re-married and settled in San Francisco.

His father, Capt. William Alex Fuller, sailed clipper ships between San Francisco and Shanghai for the Robert Dollar Line in the closing days of the 19th Century.

As the growing threat of a Communist takeover of China grew in the late 1940s, Alfred Fuller, despite the divorce, sent the two women steamship tickets to the United States, but they decided to stay.

In 1955, they cut their last ties to the Fullers and the United States by turning in their American passports and becoming Chinese citizens. They lived on Marjorie's meager earnings as an English teacher.

ONE DAY in 1959, the Chinese announced they were no longer Chinese citizens.

"They said they didn't recognize us as either Chinese or American," Marjorie said after being located here. "They threw our papers in the fire. They wouldn't even let us keep them as souvenirs."

AP Laserphoto

Marjorie Fuller, left, 61, and her mother, 80-year-old Seraphine Laskovsky Fuller, are spinning out the slender threads of their lives in the austere surroundings of the Old Peoples Home for Foreigners in Harbin, China, today.

Thrown together with 200 other stateless foreigners, they lived a nightmare of bad, irregular and insufficient food and the uncertainty of not knowing how long their ordeal would last.

"They never gave us any reason why we were there (in the internment camp)," said Marjorie. "They told us not to be curious. Then they forgot about us."

Had she, or her mother, done anything which might have angered the Communist authorities?

"We were never politically active," she replied, sitting in their large plainly furnished room in the home. "You can't be a Christian and a Communist too. My mother was Catholic, but we became Methodists. We believe in the Bible."

The years passed slowly in the camp. Her mother's health was seriously affected. As Marjorie talked, the mother sat quietly, a distant smile on her face, one hand under her chin, the other on her lap.

"There was nothing seriously wrong with me," added Marjorie, "except for an occasional migraine headache. But all intelligent people have that."

IN 1966 Mao Tse-tung's Cultural Revolution began and soon after fanatic young Red Guards, intent on destroying everything old and sacred, burst into the camp and threatened to burn their Bibles.

"'Throw us on the bonfire instead!'" Marjorie said they cried. "That stopped them. After that, they left us alone, at least as far as religion goes."

"We were the last foreigners to leave," she said. The Cultural Revolution by then had been over for nearly four years. When they finally were freed in 1980, the Chinese didn't know what to do with them. They decided that since Seraphine came from Harbin she and Marjorie should return there.

They were free, Marjorie said, to leave China if they wished. But they decided, once more, to remain.

Why had they opted to stay?

"Many people have asked us," Marjorie said. "I've never told them. But the truth is that I am part Chinese, though you can't tell it from looking at me."

It goes back to her grandfather, the clipper captain, she said.

"He married a San Francisco Chinese girl. Americans just didn't marry Chinese in those days. So they ran away to Shanghai and lived happily there with their three children, all of whom looked 100 percent American."

LOOKING BACK on the days when she and her mother lived in Shanghai, Marjorie said it was a marvelous and exciting city.

And what about Harbin?

Seraphine, silent until now, brightened.

"My father was a railway engineer on the Manchurian Railway," she said. "He built a house here, but mother went back to Russia. He wrote, but she never answered, so he took up with another woman. Harbin was a city of culture and light. Everything centered around the railway. It was called the Paris of the Orient. What you see now isn't the real Harbin."

Having said this Seraphine relapsed into silence.

Walesa: Communists should negotiate with political opponents

GDANSK, Poland (AP) — Saying that it is "nonsense to go out into the street and get beaten by truncheons," Solidarity leader Lech Walesa called Saturday for negotiations with the communist government in the spirit of peaceful ceremonies that marked the free labor movement's fourth anniversary.

He told reporters at his apartment he hoped the peaceful demonstrations and rallies held on the anniversary Friday would characterize the future strategy of the now-outlawed Solidarity.

"It's nonsense to go out into the street and get beaten by truncheons, not to fight back, say 'thank you,' and pay the fine in the end," said Walesa, winner of the 1983 Nobel Peace Prize.

Buoyed by the lack of violence, Walesa urged Communist authorities to negotiate with their political opponents.

Friday's observances marked the anniversary of the signing of an agreement between the government and striking workers in Gdansk which made Solidarity the first and only independent labor organization in the Soviet bloc.

Walesa said the government should use the opportunity provided by Friday's show of moderation to begin talks with its opponents.

"We need as soon as possible to sit at a table and reach agreement to the advantage of both parties for all in the country," Walesa said. "We're all living in this country."

Walesa said participation in the anniversary ceremonies demonstrated the strength of Solidarity. "No one can have the slightest doubt that we are stronger and wiser than ever before," he said. "We announce all over that 90 percent of society is with us."

"Never before has there been so much applause and such a well-organized celebration as yesterday (Friday) — just painless without any losses," the 40-year-old electrician said.

But Walesa said: "I'd like to stress again that our victory does not mean taking over power and fighting with the authorities."

The anniversary was the calmest since the Gdansk accords were signed and then suspended when martial law was imposed in December 1981. Police patrols were increased in Gdansk, Warsaw, Wroclaw, Nowa Huta and other cities where there were confrontations between police and demonstrators in previous years.

More than 5,000 people chanting Solidarity slogans marched in Warsaw's Old Town on Friday night, but dispersed without incident after 15 minutes.

Solidarity supporters laid flowers at union monuments and attended evening Roman Catholic Masses commemorating the date in Nowa Huta, Wroclaw, Bydgoszcz, Gdansk and other cities.

About 10,000 people hear leaders vow to oust Gandhi's government

BANGALORE, India (AP) — Nearly 10,000 people packed a sports stadium in Bangalore on Saturday and heard top Indian opposition leaders pledge to work together to oust Prime Minister Indira Gandhi's government.

"The people have had enough of Mrs. Gandhi's despotism," said Chandra Sekhar, president of the centrist Janata Party. "The time has come to overthrow her tyrannical regime."

N. T. Rama Rao and Mohammad Farooq Abdullah, who recently were deposed as chief ministers of Andhra Pradesh and Kashmir states, told the rally the 66-year-old Mrs. Gandhi was becoming increasingly intolerant of opponents.

The audience shouted, "Down with Indira Gandhi!," "Long live Indian democracy!" and "We want opposition unity!"

Wearing the saffron-colored robes of an ascetic, Rama Rao of Andhra Pradesh said, "We will not rest content until we have defeated Mrs. Gandhi in the forthcoming elections."

"She talks of political morality, but she is the most immoral politician we have in this country," said Lal Kishen Advani of the right-wing Bharatiya Janata Party.

The dismissal of Rama Rao's 19-month government by Mrs. Gandhi's appointed state governor last month helped to unite India's splintered opposition and triggered an uproar in the Parliament and press.

The prime minister announced last week that parliamentary elections would be held next January on schedule, despite the furor over Rama Rao's dismissal.

Mrs. Gandhi has been the prime minister of this nation of 750 million people for all but three of the past 18 years. She was defeated at the end of her 21-month emergency rule in 1977, but returned to power when the opposition fragmented again.

In Andhra Pradesh in southern India, opposition party activists staged protests to demand the removal of the new "puppet state government" and reinstatement of Rama Rao, a 60-year-old former movie idol who was dismissed a day after he returned home from heart bypass surgery in the United States.

The reason advanced for ousting Rama Rao was that he had lost his legislative majority through political defections. But he paraded a majority of state deputies before Indian President Zail Singh in New Delhi to show that he was dismissed unconstitutionally.

Polls show Liberal Turner headed for landslide defeat

TORONTO (AP) — Liberal Prime Minister John Turner is headed for a landslide defeat at the hands of Progressive Conservative leader Brian Mulroney in Tuesday's elections, according to new public opinion surveys.

The final Gallup Poll of the campaign, published Saturday, found Mulroney's Tories with 50 percent of the decided vote to 28 percent for the Liberals and 19 percent for the New Democrats, Canada's socialist party.

Similar results were reported in a poll sponsored by the CTV television network. In that poll, 51 percent of the decided voters supported the Conservatives, 26 percent the Liberals, and 21 percent the New Democrats.

Mulroney, a Montreal lawyer and former president of a large U.S.-owned mining company, found himself warning his supporters against overconfidence in the final days of the campaign.

"I ask you never to relent for a moment," the Tory leader told about 150 supporters Friday in London, Ontario. "The battle is not yet won."

Some commentators, though, are suggesting a Conservative victory that could rival the biggest sweep in Canadian history, the 208 seats won by the Tories under John Diefenbaker in 1958. There are 282 seats in Parliament.

Canada's newspapers have swung over to the Conservatives. A Canadian Press survey of about half the country's 110 dailies found only the Toronto Star supporting the Liberals editorially, none backing the New Democrats, 22 favoring the Tories and the rest staying neutral.

Crews start retrieving radioactive cargo

Work begun eight days after freighter sunk

OSTEND, Belgium (AP) — Salvage crews are due to start retrieving the radioactive cargo of the wrecked French freighter Mont Louis today, eight days after the ship sank off the Belgian coast following a collision, a salvage company official reported.

Henk Drenth of the Dutch salvagers Smit Tak International said that a large pontoon with two cranes was anchored Saturday near the 4,210-ton Mont Louis.

"On Sunday morning we will cut a big hole in the side of the ship and in the afternoon we will bring out the first containers," Drenth said.

He said holes of about nine feet by 15 feet will be cut in each of the cargo ship's six holds.

The cranes will be used to pick up the parts of the hull that are going to be cut out, he said. Later in the day, a bigger crane will arrive to hoist the containers to the surface, Drenth said.

The 30 cylindrical containers holding 225 tons of uranium hexafluoride will be returned to France, officials said. Crews will also try to salvage 22 empty containers and some heavy equipment on the ship.

Drenth said that for a third straight day, strong winds and waves nine feet high at high tide hampered salvage workers, forcing one salvage craft to return to this North Sea port Saturday evening.

Two other vessels and the pontoon remained near the Mont Louis, which sank 12 miles off Belgium on Aug. 25 after colliding with a North Sea passenger ferry. It is resting in about 46 feet of water at low tide, and is partly visible at low tide.

The vessel was on a routine voyage to the Soviet Union where its cargo was to be made into enriched uranium for use in West European power plants.

Smit Tak International is assisted in the project by L'Union de Remorquage et de Sauvetage of Antwerp, Belgium.

Since the Mont Louis went down, Belgian officials said they have been taking water samples near the wreck at regular intervals. They said these showed no trace of radioactive contamination.

French officials will continue to monitor the ship's insides for radiation and chemical pollution, Drenth said.

The French Atomic Energy Commission has said the cargo consists of three types of uranium hexafluoride, all less than 1 percent Uranium 235, the material used in nuclear power stations.

Nine containers held natural uranium hexafluoride, 18 had "slightly impoverished" and three "slightly enriched" uranium hexafluoride, it said.

Mao's portrait restored to rightful place in square

PEKING (AP) — The imposing, 18-foot-high portrait of China's late revolutionary leader Mao Tse-tung stared down over Peking's Tiananmen Square for the first time in five months Saturday, restored to its place over the square's northern gate in preparation for National Day on Oct. 1.

The framed color picture had been removed in April while workers patched, plastered and repainted the gate's crimson facade and gold roof.

There had been speculation China's post-Mao leader Deng Xiaoping would scrap the portrait as part of an effort to play down the cult of "The Great Helmsman" as Mao is called.

But workers put the portait back up Friday night, confirmation that the Communist Party that Mao led is committed to exalting the man who founded the People's Republic of China on Oct. 1, 1949, with the proclamation: "The Chinese people have stood up."

Mao died Sept. 9, 1976, at the age of 83. Though Mao's successors officially revere him, he is blamed for making "errors" that wreaked havoc on the national economy and morale.

Voters turn out in Burundi

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Voters in the central African nation of Burundi turned out in large numbers Friday to show their support for Lt. Col. Jean-Baptiste Bagaza in a single-candidate presidential election, the offficial Burundi news agency said.

It said in a dispatch telexed to Nairobi, capital of Kenya, that results of the yes-no vote would be announced soon. No partial results were given.

The agency described the voting as the first Burundi presidential election with universal suffrage and secret ballots. Bagaza is leader of the country's only party, the Union for National Progress.

Bagaza, 38, seized power in a bloodless coup in November 1976.

Four million people live in the former Belgian protectorate of volcanic mountains and deep valleys. One of the poorest and most densely populated African nations, the Vermont-sized country lies on the shores of Lake Tanganyika between Rwanda, Zaire and Tanzania.

Train collision kills four

KARACHI, Pakistan (AP) — Two trains collided head-on near Bahawalpur city in Punjab province Friday, killing four people, including the two locomotive engineers, and injuring 20, according to railway sources in Karachi.

The sources spoke on condition they were not identified.

It was not clear what caused the accident.

Eight railway officials have been suspended following the crash, railroad officials announced Saturday.

Bahawalpur is about 500 miles north of Karachi.

Stolen busts recovered

ROME (AP) — Two 16th century silver busts were were recovered with other stolen art works from the apartment of an antique dealer in the Sicilian capital of Palermo, customs police announced Saturday.

The busts were taken from the Church of San Francesco d'Assisi in Catania, Sicily, in September 1980, police said. They gave no details.

Customs police said the dealer was arrested earlier this year on charges of suspected international drug trafficking, but they did not elaborate.

Floods ravage Cambodia

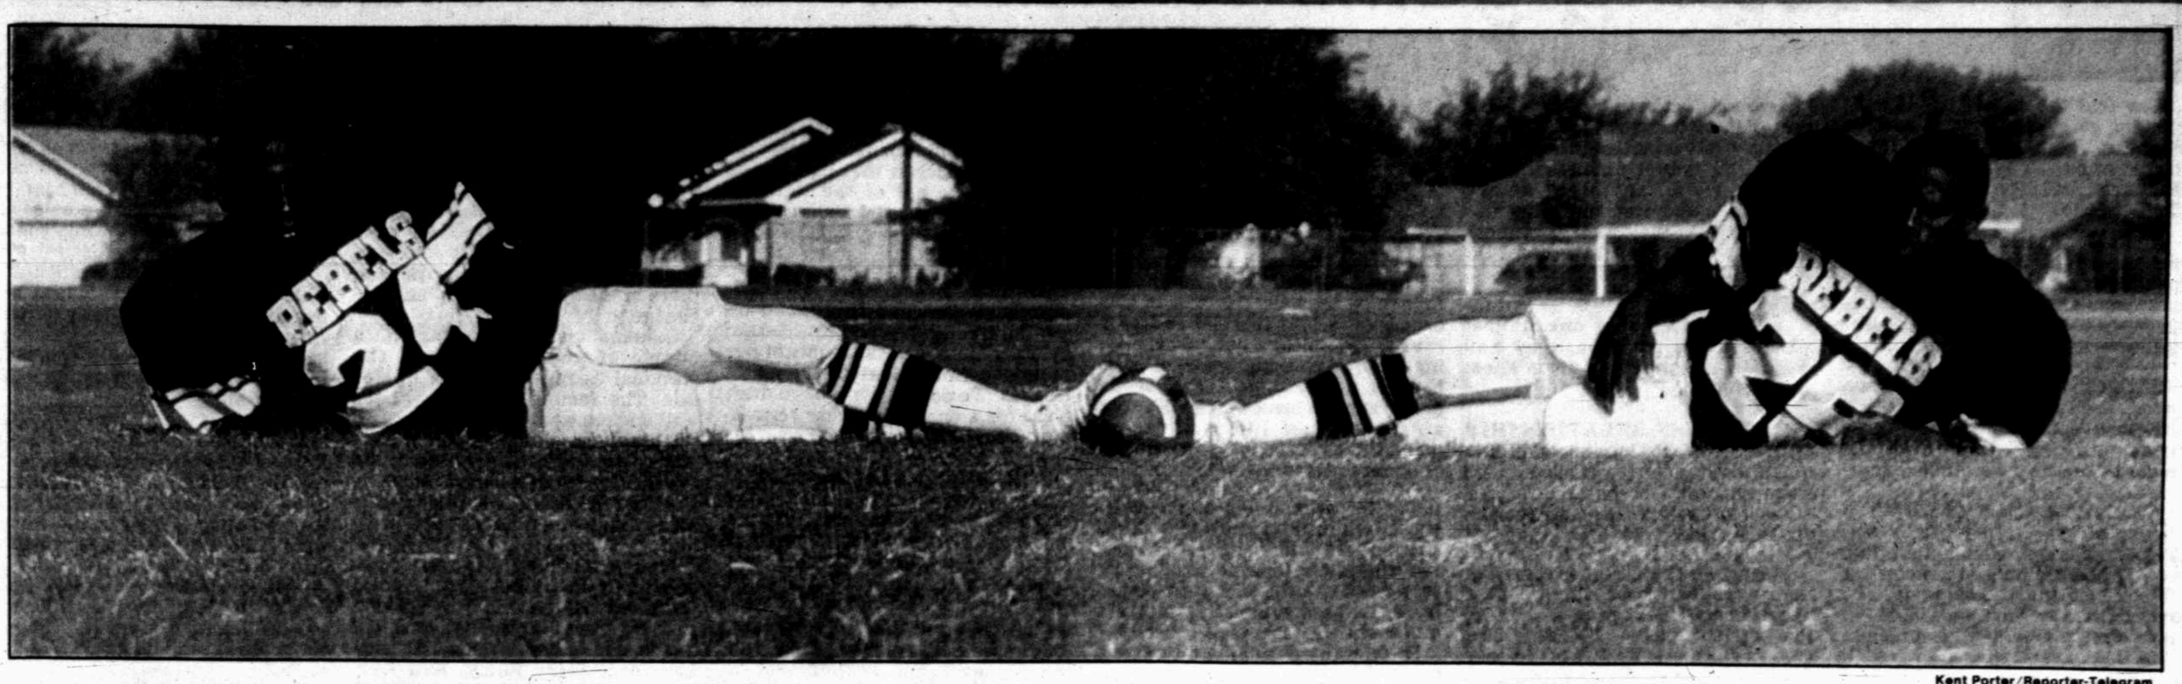

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Floods and drought that ravaged rice fields and cattle herds killed 12 people and left at least 10,000 families in Cambodia suffering from famine, the official Cambodian news agency SPK said Saturday.

Quoting Agriculture Minister Kong Som Ol, it said summer floods destroyed more than 583,000 acres of croplands and killed nearly 10,000 head of cattle. The agency appealed for foreign help.

SPK, monitored in Bangkok, did not specify when or where the floods occurred.

Lack of rain in other areas allowed a special planting in only 1.5 million of 4.2 million acres planned, SPK said. Of the area cultivated, 60,021 acres were later destroyed by drought, the agency said.

Midland Lee's Walter Jones (24) and Tyrone Thurman look harmless enough in this position, but the dynamic twosome give the Rebels over 2,000 yards of rushing experience.

Rebs still have some guns to fight off head hunters

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

After Midland Lee had defeated Odessa Permian for the second time in 1983, one disappointed Mojo fan was heard to say, "If I was a Rebel, I think I would be a little paranoid heading into next season. They're going to pay for this."

But the truth is that Lee will not enter the 1984 season with a feeling of paranoia. It's impossible to be paranoid if someone is really after you.

And you can bet that there won't be a team on Lee's schedule that doesn't want a piece of Rebel hide to put over the mantel.

That's the inheritance the Rebels face from 1983's 13-3 squad — the most successful team in Lee's history. The team that boosted Midland into the state finals for the first time ever. The first team to ever defeat old Mojo twice in one season. It was a lickin' good year.

But this is 1984 and there is a crowd of would-be Rebel smashers on the horizon, just fighting for a position in line to get in a punch. There are also 55 seniors gone from last year's Lee squad and it will be a bunch of new faces who the other teams will be punching at.

The price of football success? You become a marked and hunted animal.

SO IN a nutshell, that is the task of new Lee head football coach Jack Tayrien as he enters the 1984 season. Marked and hunted by a state of football powers. And he realizes it.

"Everyone will want to beat us this year and we have a pretty young team. The season we had last year has a lot of carryover value, but with our schedule this year, our team is going to have to grow up in a hurry," says Tayrien.

"In our non-conference schedule, we catch Temple and El Paso Eastwood, both were in the playoffs last year. We open district with San Angelo, Cooper and Permian. We lost to San Angelo and Cooper last year and you know Permian wants another crack at us. Our kids will have to face the music fast. The only way that schedule could be any worse is to toss in Russia or Red China."

But before tears are shed for the Rebels, it must be noted that Lee is not without some guns of its own. It won't be an easy task to get a taste of that Lee hide.

You can start with a backfield that could have the possibilities of blowing the hindges off the Memorial Stadium scoreboard.

Returning at running backs are Walter Jones and Tyrone Thurman. Jones gained 1,142 yards rushing last season, averaging 7.2 yards every time he touched the ball. He scored 76 points and was the second Lee back in history to gain more than 1,000 yards rushing in a single season. He also caught passes for 35 more yards.

Add in Thurman and you have 640 additional yards to work with and 91 more passing yards. Thurman also returned punts last year and that accounts for more trouble for opponents. Thurman averaged 5.5 yards per carry and 14.2 yards per punt return.

Midland High's pass-happy days of 1983 have not altogether departed from the expected offensive attack of 1984. There is simply too much returning talent in the aerial corps to ignore.

First you have the deep threat of senior wide receiver-turned-flanker Allan Foret, who was the runaway leader in District 4-5A passing stats a year ago. As a junior, Foret used his sprinter's speed to run down 41 passes for 665 yards (16.2 yards per catch) and six touchdowns.

Next you have the hands and size of senior Darrell Davis — 220 pounds of roving power at tight end — to give the inside pass coverage something to think about. Davis caught 22 passes for 250 yards (11.4) and five touchdowns.

Finally, there is the added quickness of senior Darren Thorpe who, in a limited back-up role behind Foret and Todd Shiplett (lost through graduation) made three catches for 69 yards (23.0).

The Bulldogs will be running out of the Veer this year and Foret, at flanker, is expected to get a bit more running action than last year. But, the new offense isn't based on Foret's running ability.

"In our Veer attack, the flanker is not involved that much," said new MHS head coach Doug McCutchen. "We have three or four plays designed for the flanker but it's not a major part. The veer wasn't designed with Foret in mind but when you have a player like him, it makes it all that much better."

THE KEY to a smooth-running offense is always the quarterback and this year junior Matt Marcum has won the battle for the starting berth over senior letterman Jeff Alsup.

Marcum, promoted from the junior varsity, looked impressive in Midland High's scrimmage against Lubbock Coronado Friday night.

Surprisingly, it was his execution in the running game against Coronado that was most impressive, an area where the Bulldogs have a lot of questions because of inexperienced players.

A lot of answers were found in the scrimmage. In fact, the Bulldog running backs accounted for 316 yards and two touchdowns against Coronado while the receivers had an off night with only 116 yards and one TD.

It wasn't Marcum's fault that the passing yardage was down, the receivers are still berating themselves for several tough catches they let go — the kind that hit them in the hands and they couldn't hold onto.

Though the running game had a great scrimmage, it is still unproven in a real game. Halfback Keith Byrd is the only senior in the starting backfield with Jake Madrid, a junior, and Marcum. Junior Mark Johnson and senior Mike Stanton also looked good against Coronado but are also starters in the defensive backfield and may miss a lot of offensive action.

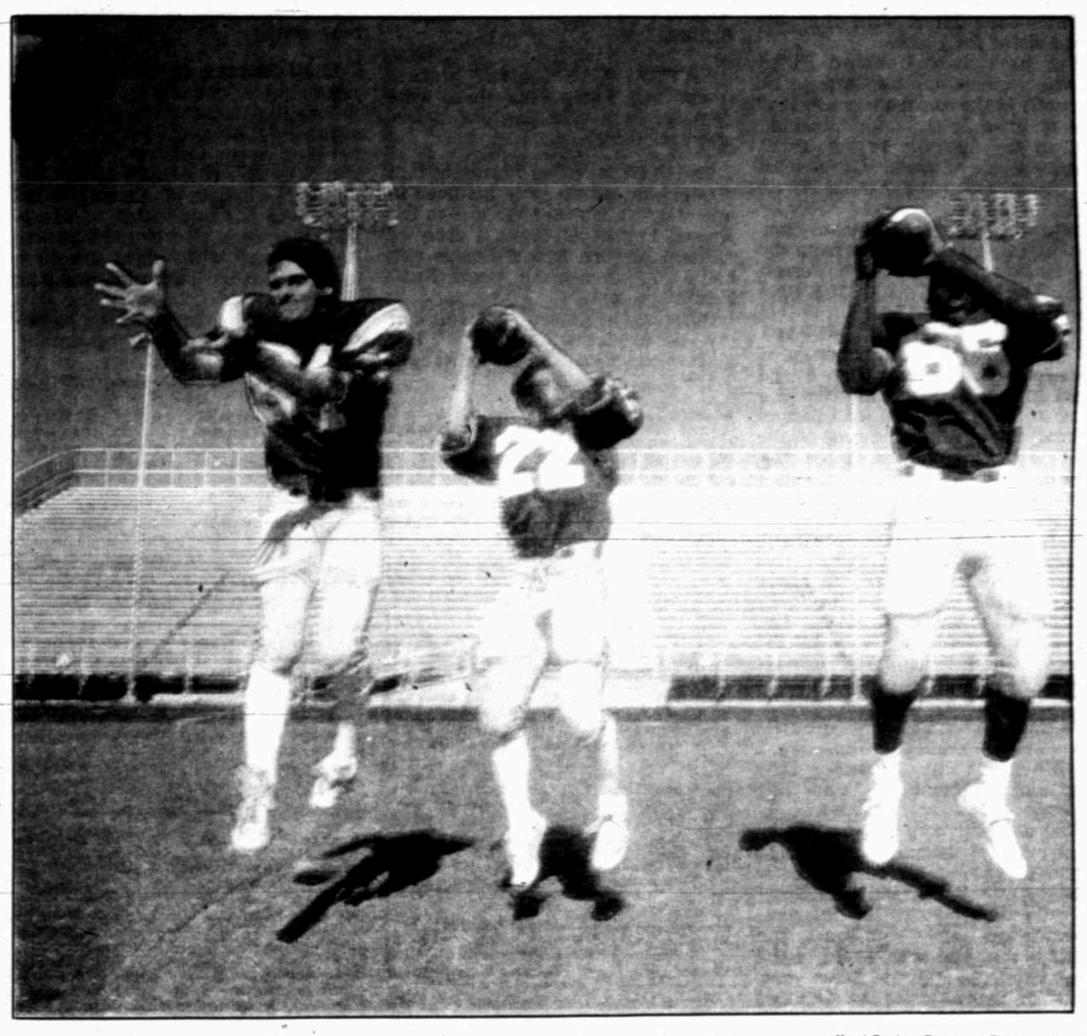

"Our running back situation right now is probably our weakest part because all the backs are inexperienced. We have two juniors, Jake Madrid and Mark Johnson and Keith Byrd is a senior and will be running some. Marcum is also a junior but we don't feel this is necessarily a weakness it's just they're inexperienced. As soon as they get some experience, they'll be all right."

NO MATTER how well the passing and running game improves, they won't be able to go anywhere without the front line to open holes. And, that's one area that McCutchen is happy with.

"We feel like our line is very strong and capable of doing a good job for us this year," said McCutchen. "We have some size and quickness. We're mainly a run-orienated team but we'll be doing a lot of passing."

In the size category, the Bulldogs have stacked the right side of the line with 226-pound Brad "Meat Cleaver" Edgar at tackle and 200-pound Steve Mizzles at guard. Greg Hatcher, 180 pounds has mobility at center as does John Cox, 190, and Todd Smith, 185 at left guard and tackle. At 215 pounds, Davis will provide added size to whichever side of the line he lines up on.

Cubs claim 8-4 win over Dodgers

Season concludes with four-game winning streak

By TED BATTLES

Beaumont won the Texas League pennant, but only because the Midland Cubs ran out of time.

Midland closed the season with a four-game winning streak by coming from behind again to beat the San Antonio Dodgers, 8-4, before 1,134 Fan Appreciation Night fans at Cubs Stadium Saturday.

The way the Cubs were going at the finish, there is no telling what might have happened if the race still had another month to go. Well, maybe that's stretching the imagination, but leaving the fans wanting more is a nice way to finish.

Despite the Cubs' finish, West champion Beaumont will be meeting East champion Jackson in the Texas League playoffs which begin Monday.

Larry Hrynko, 3-8, pitched a route-going 11-hitter as the Cubs, playing catchup most of the game, erupted for four runs in the seventh to win it. The key play was a squeeze bunt by Paul Noce that brought home Mike Brumley with the go-ahead run. Brumley had tripled with one out.

Noce dumped his bunt in front of the plate and Brumley outlegged pitcher Terry Felton's hurried throw to the plate.

Noce then stole second and third and raced home on a wild pitch as Darrin Jackson struck out.

Jeff Jones walked and Gary Varsho singled. That finished starter Terry Felton. That brought in Bill Scudder and brought up Dan Norman who beat out a grounder to short and when the throw to first was wild, Varsho followed Jones across the plate for an 8-4 Midland lead.

GOING INTO the final series, the battle for the Midland team home run title had been decided. Norman had a 20-15 lead over Jones, who was voted the Cubs' Most Popular Player by the fans and awarded a watch before the game.

When Jones homered in the fourth behind a Jackson single, it was his fifth tatter in five games and tied him with Jackson for the team lead and it looked like Midland would have co-home run leaders for the first time since Jerry Tabb and Wayne Tyrone led the league with 29 each back in the mid 1970s.

The Cubs trailed 4-2 in the sixth when Norman came up with Varsho on base and drilled a two-run homer down the left field line to tie it and set the stage for that four-run seventh.

Jones, however, while missing out on the triple crown, did wind up with the only .300 average on the team and the rbi title.

ALTHOUGH HRYNKO gave up 11 hits, he kept them well scattered. Cecil Espy and Ralph Bryant split six of the between them, which didn't leave many for the other Dodgers. However, Gilberto Reyes hit a solo homer in the foufth. The Dodgers scored another in the third when Bryant hit his first of two doubles and came around on an error and infield out. Bryant scored again in the sixth after doubling when Dan Cataline singled. In the third, Espy singled, stole second and rode home on Stud Pederson's single.

Hrynko, a pitcher Midland signed out of the Cleveland organization during the season, didn't walk a batter.

Guessing game to start at Cubs? Stadium

Now that the season is over, the guessing game can begin in earnest. Will the baseball field in Hogan Park continue to be known as Cubs Stadium or will it become something like The Halo?

As the Cubs wallowed in the muck and mire of the Texas League standings through the 1984 season, the most popular game in town became speculation over the future, or lack of future, of the Cubs in Midland.

Of course, there had been rumors before the season even started that this final year of the working agreement with the Chicago Cubs also might be the final year in Midland.

BERNARD LANKFORD, co-owner of the Midland Cubs with Max Christensen, claims it's a little early to be jumping at conclusions. "We are looking at our options. It's too early to say what we will do. We have been talking to other organizations that have expressed interest in Midland, but have made no decisions."

Lankford, who has become increasingly active in the day-to-day operation of the club since General Manager Bill Schammel resigned to enter the travel business, adds, "Before we do anything, we are going to try to find out what the fans want. Do they want a winner? Do they want a competitive club? Do they want the Cubs back?"

Toward that end, free programs were distributed at one of last week's home games against San Antonio and a survey form sheet was included.

MIDLAND'S RELATIONSHIP with the Chicago Cubs began in 1972 when the franchise was moved here from San Antonio, bringing professional baseball to Midland for the first time since 1959.

Chicago has been a good tenant in many respects, but outside of a Texas League co-champion in 1975, the pennant cupboard is bare. The club has been competitive and produced its share of major leaguers over the years, however.

This year the team got off to a slow start, but quickly lost its momentum. The team was never in either the first half or second half chase.

It's a paradoxical situation in that interest in the Chicago Cubs has never been greater than this year. The parent club is the most exciting in baseball and Cub fever was fanned by the daily telecasts of Chicago games into the Midland area over WGN. Chicago, not only is playing a crowd-pleasing brand of baseball in a park that was made for the game, but the team that hasn't won a pennant since 1945 is the sentimental favorite of an entire nation of underdog lovers.

But the abandoning of the WGN signal within Midland's city limits was not without its effect. As one fan put it, "If Chicago isn't on TV so we can see the kids who played here, I don't suppose it matters much who the farm team is here."

In the third year under new ownership, Chicago Cubs baseball has been revived and revitalized. Ordinarily, perhaps, a minor league city would eagerly jump at the opportunity to grab the coattails of a "going" organization like Chicago.

The drawback is that in order to snap Chicago out of the National League doldrums, GM Dallas Green had to gut the farm system to make it happen.

As farm director Brandy Davis noted, "We've had to depend on signing free agents, players released by other clubs, and the ability of our scouts to find talent in the Latin leagues. We don't have enough draft picks for a one or two year restocking of the farm system."

FOR MUCH of the season, Midland's record was the second worst in all of professional baseball. The only team with a worse record was Quad Cities, Chicago's Midwest League A club, one of the teams that will be feeding Midland next year.

Chicago would like to stay here. There's no better playing facility at the AA level. For development of future Cub pitchers, there is no better proving ground. If a young pitcher can get batters out in Cubs Stadium, where the wind blows unrelenting to left and center, the Winds of Wrigley should prove no problem.

By the same token, other organizations would like to have their prospects play in a facility like Cubs Stadium. The interest has always been there in the event Midland desired a change.

Oakland made a strong pitch a couple of years back when the National League club was up for sale. The feeling then was, "Let's wait and see what happens?"

It's no secret that the California Angels would like to get back in the Texas League after being exiled to the Eastern League, where early-season weather and rainouts are a problem.

The Angels' Texas League franchise was in El Paso for several years and had the kind of talent that produced envy around the rest of the league...Frank Tanana, Carney Lansford, Jerry Remy, Ken Landreaux, Mickey Hatcher, Mark Clear, Tom Brunansky, Daryl Sconiers, Willie Aikens, Rance Mulliniks, Floyd Rayford...

Lankford admits several clubs have shown an interest in Midland, "But I don't want to discuss the identities until we have studied the situation and come to some conclusions."

Midland's 12-year association with Chicago is the second oldest partnership in the Texas League. Only Arkansas-St. Louis, at 19 years, has lasted longer, but there's trouble in Little Rock that could rupture that relationship.

When Midland came into the Texas League, the Dodgers were in El Paso; Milwaukee was in San Antonio; the Padres were in Alexandria, the Giants were in Amarillo; the Mets were at Memphis; the Angels were in Shreveport and Cardinals in Little Rock.

Change, it seems, is a way of life in the minor leagues. For the first time, Midland is seriously contemplating the possibilities.

Dorland eliminated in nationals; 24 teams still alive

By BRUCE CASTLEBERRY
Sports Writer

Nearly half of the field was eliminated from competition Saturday at the Amateur Softball Association women's Class A national Slow Pitch tournament at Hogan Park, including Midland's Dorland Rinky Dinks.

Thirty-eight games were played Saturday, with 22 of them being the last go-round for two-time losers. The double-elimination tournament continues today with mostly winner's bracket games. The Labor Day holiday Monday features the tournament's conclusion with the title game slated for 1 p.m.

For host team Dorland Rinky Dinks, a tremendous season ended abruptly in the tournament. Dorland was stunned by Cayce of Columbia, S.C. in the opening round, 11-10, despite a pair of grand slam homers by Oklahoma State All-American Pam Harper.

Saturday, defensive miscues combined with power slugging from the Bill Hulse Sportettes of St. Petersburg, Fla. resulted in an 18-8 Dorland loss and elimination.

Dorland took early leads of 1-0 and 5-4 before the Sportettes regained the edge with two in the last of the third inning. Dorland knotted the score at 6-6 in the fifth, with Harper scoring one of her three runs on the night after two errors against the Sportettes.

But then the Rinky Dinks started to fall apart, and as the pressure mounted so did the St. Pete runs. Four base hits and and three errors allowed the Sportettes to score seven times. The miseries continued in the sixth, as Hulse added five more error-aided scores. In all the usually sound Dorland defense committed five errors.

WELL OVER 1,000 people crammed the renovated Hogan Park facilities for the tourney's first weekend action of the Labor Day holiday.

One observer was very impressed with the Midland's inaugural national tourney effort, and he should know. W.W. "Bill" Kethan of Jacksonville is easily the foremost authority on softball in Texas, and probably in the world. He is the senior commissioner in Texas, having been involved with the ASA as a former president in the state since its inception 43 years ago. Now, Kethan is a the top dog in the International Softball Federation.

"Midland always does a good job," Kethan said Saturday. "Especially in slow pitch. It's really new to our country." The ISF has 58 countries under its jurisdiction.

According to Kethan, softball internationally is a very different ball game. "International rules are different. In the international sphere, it's all fast pitch. The U.S. is the only country with slow pitch."

And as a result, the American teams don't always finish on top of the heap.

"We just recently finished a men's world championship in Midland, Michigan in which 22 nations participated. New Zealand won it, Canada was second and the U.S. was third."

World tournaments are held every other year for women. The last one was this year in Taiwan; the next is scheduled for 1986 in Auckland, New Zealand.

Kethan's association with softball has made him a true international ambassador of sport. He has visited 80 countries on softball matters. "It keeps me busy. Travel doesn't agree with me like it used to," laughed Kethan.

SATURDAY'S GAMES were a mixed bag. For purists, there were gems of both offensive and defensive varieties.

The Scamps of San Francisco (not a television series) were involved in one slugfest, a wild 15-11 loss to the Armed Forces All-Stars, a crew of military players. Armed Forces also had a 15-13 loss to the Alcorn Ruff-Neks of Victoria.

Other games weren't so even, but the run production was there. The biggest explosion came from Ranger Lounge of Minot, N.D., who blasted the Oregon representative 21-9. Another Northwestern squad, the Seattle A's, pounded out 20 hits in routing Pete Trucking of Lorain, Oh., 19-1. A late-night bash between Houston Chance and Mansfield, La. State Farm saw 37 hits lashed out before Chance prevailed 15-13.

The shut-down corps saw action several times, which only dramatized the talent of the 46 teams assembled here for the tourney. The original idea behind slow pitch softball was to give everyone a chance to hit. Tournaments such as these aren't weekend backyard affairs however.

Shutouts came in bunches. Half a dozen were already on the books before 10 p.m. Saturday, including a stunning 1-0, extra inning affair between Arena Cafe of Lynn, Mass. and SOS/Tri-Arc of Salt Lake City. Lynda McGuiness of Arena pitched a sensational two-hitter to disappoint Arena pitcher Louanne Bowles, who went eight scoreless innings before surrendering the deciding score.

Play resumes today with games beginning at 9 a.m. and continuing throughout the day.

Andretti claims ERW 200 pole

LEXINGTON, Ohio (AP) — Mario Andretti, getting an assist from an afternoon downpour Saturday, will start Sunday's Escort Radar Warning 200 Indy car race from a familiar spot — the pole position.

Andretti, who now has put his sleek red Lola T-800 race car on the pole in seven of 11 CART-PPG Indy car races this season, actually won the top starting spot in the 28-car field in time trials Friday.

The 44-year-old driver wheeled his car — co-owned by actor Paul Newman and American Lola distributor Carl Haas — around the 2.4-mile, 15-turn Mid-Ohio Sports Car Course circuit in 1 minute, 22.215 seconds, an average speed of 105.090 mph.

Andretti, who probably didn't need the help, since his fast Friday lap was more than two seconds (and 2½ mph) faster than second-place qualifier Rick Mears, was able to nail down the top starting spot for the 200-mile event without even driving onto the track.

The Indy cars do run road courses in the rain, but treaded rain tires slow them considerably.

Qualifying Saturday was divided into two 45-minute sessions. The first group, comprised of cars in the lower half of the provisional lineup, ran during a light drizzle, allowing several of the competitors to improve their positions.

However, the rain became a steady downpour just before the faster cars were scheduled to take to the track. Most of the faster qualifiers, including Andretti and Mears, passed the session.

The biggest improvement was by Dick Ferguson, whose 1983 Eagle was 29th from the top Friday. He moved up to 22rd, gaining 14 seconds and 13 mph despite the wet track Saturday.

Ed Pimm, who qualified ninth Friday at 1:25.050 (101.587), was disqualified when his Pontiac-powered Eagle was found to have a rear wing higher than the legal limit following his Saturday qualifying effort.

CART rules specify that all previous qualifying times for the same event are forfeited when a car is found to be in violation of a technical rule.

REBELS

MIX IN fullback Randy Ellis, who saw little playing time last year since Lee's Isaac Garnett busted all Lee rushing records with 1,994 yards, and you have the looks of atomic warfare. Ellis gained 117 yards and scored 12 points last year as a reserve, but he averaged nine yards per carry.

It's the rest of the offense that will be raw. Talent is there, but experience isn't. For instance, quarterbacks Dirk Bergoon and Tuey Rankin have not thrown a varsity pass. Bergoon, as a running back last year, didn't pass and gained only 10 yards. Rankin was a JV player. Both have talent, but it is untested. Bergoon will start and his biggest job is to get the ball to those speedy backs.

Lee's receiving corps is also young with juniors Dexter Traylor, Gary Powell, Anthony Dickens and David Almand ready for the test. A senior crew will be cast in the offensive line and will be as large as last year, except at center where Paul Stiles (187) and Wade Wiesepape (173) will work.

The guards, Craig Kamradt (200) and Darrell Robertson (197), have good size and Kamradt has experience. Kamradt's toe will also be important to the Reb offense since he scored 78 points last year with field goal and extra point duties. Tackles Ariel Elliott (190) and Cleveland Toliver (190) should give the Rebels something to mold into what could be a good offensive line if they learn in a hurry.

Defensively, experience is almost non-existant. Again talent is on hand and there is some depth, but only one has had a great deal of playing time and none were true starters last year.

SAFETY EARL Davis (170) has proven himself under playoff pressure by replacing All-State veteran Andre Mayfield in the third playoff game because of an injury. Davis had a lot of playing time, but wasn't a starter until the last three games of the season.

The rest of the secondary is young, but eager. Cornerbacks Chris Embrey (165), and Kevin Witt (160) and halfbacks Tracy Mayfield (168) and Harold Woods (160) could turn into a solid unit.

The defensive strength may be at linebacker despite the losses of All-State Michael Johnson, Billy Cornelius, Scott Hicks and Reggie Ellis. No less than six Rebels want those three linebacking openings. They are Brad Pearce (205), Donnie Rivas (173), Jay Roach (170), Terry Powell (176), Puhl Webb (174) and Todd Mitchell (175). All will probably play a great deal.

At defensive end, Tony Brown (182), Mark Webb (181) and Mike Rittenberry (185) are also newcomers. John Wurster, the largest of the Rebels at 250 pounds, had playing time last year and will give the tackle slot an anchor as will Waylon Jenkins (215). Unlike last year, as many as five juniors could be on the field for the Lee defense while three or four juniors could be on the Lee offense.

Tayrien listed 53 players on his varsity roster, but hadn't made any final decisions on who he would carry at mid-week.

Lee opens the season at Memorial Stadium Friday at 8 p.m. against Lubbock Coronado, a team the Rebels defeated 38-7 last year. The Rebs can expect a big turnout for that game since over 2,000 season tickets have been sold, breaking the old record of just under 1,600.

Football is here again, but Lee fans haven't gotten over last year yet. But for the Lee football team, last year better be the distant past.

Rebel Report Card

Quarterbacks: C — Passing could be a problem area, but when was the last time a Lee team ever threw more than three times a game anyway.

Running Backs: A-Plus — If there is a better backfield in West Texas, it would have to be reviewed under any new SALT talks.

Receivers: C — Young and untested.

Offensive Line: B — Good talent, but a tad inexperienced. Could be an A before season's end.

Defensive Line: B-Plus — Some experience, adequate size, but short of last year's A-Plus.

Linebackers: A-Minus — Depth is the word here. Now if at least three of them become headhunters...

Secondary: A-Minus — Davis alone would make this unit worth a B-Plus.

Overall: B-Plus — It takes an A-Minus at least to make the playoffs. The Rebels aren't there yet, but they could be.

Prediction: 7-3. Another playoff berth if they can win two of their first three district games.

1984 Schedule: Sept. 7 Lubbock Coronado, Sept. 14 Temple, Sept. 21 at El Paso Eastwood, Sept. 28 at San Angelo, Oct. 5 Abilene Cooper, Oct. 12 at Odessa Permian, Oct. 19 at Big Spring, Oct. 26 Abilene High, Nov. 2 Odessa High, Nov. 9 at Midland High. All games at 8 p.m. except Eastwood game, which is 7:30 p.m. MST.

BULLDOGS

"The Veer offense is a finesse offense and we will try to use speed and quickness from our line blocking to make a hole for the backs," said McCutchen. "The main thing we want is the offensive linemen to get some kind of block on the defensive players and then we'll maneuver off that block."

ON DEFENSE, McCutchen has scrapped the eight-man line for the 4-3 defense and he feels experience is one of the unit's strongest, if not somewhat negated, aspects.

"Several of the players have played defense and I think the biggest problem they have is playing new positions," said McCutchen. "They play, but at different positions last year and are still learning our new system.

"I think we feel real good about defense at linebacker and defensive tackle," continued McCutchen. "Our ends are the inexperienced part of the defense. In the secondary, we're pleased with what we have back there but they are inexperienced under the new system. When they get a little playing time under their belts, they'll do okay."

On the front line, the Bulldogs are anchored by Edgar and Mizzles while Hatcher and Brent Barton, 175-pound junior, are playing defensive end. The linebackers have senior starter Tommy Hudson, 200 pounds, back at strong side and have added Davis in the middle and junior William Hernandez, 165 pounds, at weak side. Davis, a starter last year on offense, played limited defense while Hernandez is up from the JV ranks.

"We feel real good about the defensive tackles, Edgar and Mizzles and they are a very important part of our defense," said McCutchen. "We try to let the tackles free up the linebackers so they can get up there and make the tackles. If everybody follows their techniques, the linebackers should make most of the tackles."

The defensive secondary is utilizing players from the offensive backfield with Stanton, 165 pounds, Madrid, 165, Johnson, 160, and Tim Hickey (a back-up quarterback), senior, 145, in starting roles. Foret and Byrd, who played in the secondary last year, are also expected to see a lot of pass coverage action this year.

WITH A small list of players to draw from — made smaller this year since Midland High will be playing a sophomore schedule for the first time since 1982 — the Bulldogs will have to stay healthy. Depth, in everybody's words on the MHS coaching staff, is the biggest weakness.

"We have about 103 players," said McCutchen about a team whose numbers are up slightly from last year. "We're pleased with that number right now but by the same token we have to have a lot more. Heck, Lee has that many sophomores alone out for football."

And, that lack of numbers makes injuries very crucial. There aren't that many who can come in and play.

Bulldog Report Card

Quarterbacks: C — Young and untested but only have to throw the ball in the general area of highly-talented receivers.

Running Backs: C — Again, young and untested. No break-away speed or exceptional quickness but strong in numbers.

Receivers: A-Plus — Sprinter's speed, quickness and size. Only question isn't will they catch the ball but who?

Offensive Line: B-Minus — Some experience, size and strength but still learning new system.

Defensive Line: B — Tackle positions solidly anchored but players are going both ways and fatigue may enter picture.

Linebackers: B-Plus — For the most part inexperienced but with a lot of hard hitting potential.

Secondary: C — With new system and inexperience at two positions, how quickly they figure it out will determine improved mark.

Overall: C-Plus — With new system and some experienced players at new positions, a playoff berth seems too much to ask. Big key will be how well running attack can add to the dangerous pass.

Prediction: 6-4. Could overcome inexperience if injuries can be negated. Lack of numbers biggest weakness. Even one injury could be critical. Big Spring instead of Permian in the opening game of the 4-5A season gives MHS a better shot at getting things together. Desire to win a must.

Miners scare Aggies, 20-17

Tying field goal hits post

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — Texas-El Paso Coach Bill Yung knew after the third series of Saturday's game in sweltering Kyle Field that his downtrodden Miners would play well against the highly favored Texas Aggies.

But he didn't know that it would come down to a 36-yard field goal attempt by freshman Hugo Castellanos that bounced tantalizingly off the goal post with 1:39 to play, giving the Aggies a 20-17 season-opening victory Saturday.

"After the third series, they could have killed us," Yung said after his team narrowly averted a major upset victory. "That was really the key to the game to me. It was hot, but they came back to make a game of it."

The Miners, who have not won more than two games in a season since 1974, picked apart the Aggie defense.

"I felt all along that we could pass the ball against these guys," Yung said. "It's not because of their defense but we just believe that we can pass the ball."

The Aggies were heavy favorites in the game but Miner offensive tackle Tony Russo came away unimpressed with the Aggie defense.

"They didn't show me that they are the cream of the crop," Russo said. "They won some battles and so did we. I think we deserved to win this game, they didn't."

Texas A&M Coach Jackie Sherrill lamented the Aggies mistakes that included three lost fumbles and three interceptions.

"We played well in the second half but all of a sudden we made some mistakes and we put our defense's backs to the wall," Sherrill said.

A&M quarterback Kevin Murray completed two first half touchdown passes but it took Alan Smith's 27-yard field goal with 10:20 left in the game to provide the winning points.

But the Miners kept coming back and could have tied it in the waning minutes with Castellanos' kick.

The Aggies took a 17-6 lead ealy in the third quarter on Smith's 24-yard field goal before the Miners, 2-10 last season charged back aided by a series of A&M turnovers.

Texas-El Paso's Hugo Castellanos kicked his third field goal, a 32-yarder, following a fumble recovery by Robert Murray. Moments later, Murray threw an interception to Luther Johnson, setting up a 19-yard touchdown pass from Sammy Garza to Larry Linne.

Garza then went to Linne again for a two-point conversion and a 17-17 tie with 2:15 to go in the third quarter.

Murray's two first half passes, a seven-yarder to halfback Rod Bernstine in the first quarter and an eight-yarder to Jeff Nelson in the second quarter, lifted the Aggies to a 14-6 lead at the end of the sluggish first half.

The Miners, 2-10 last season, drove to a 42-yard field goal by Castellanos on the first drive of the game, keyed by the passing of quarterback Sammy Garza.

Garza hit pass completions of 11, 17 and 16 yards to set up the score.

A&M's first touchdown followed a fumble by Garza and a recovery by A&M's O'Neal Gilbert at the UTEP 42. James Flowers intercepted a Garza pass at the Aggie 30 and Murray hit Jimmy Teal with a 41-yard bomb prior to Nelson's eight-yard TD catch.

University of Texas-El Paso tailback Toney George (1) drags Texas A&M defensive back Wayne Asberry for extra yardage during the second quarter of their game Saturday at Kyle Field. The extra effort wasn't quite enough as the Aggies held off the Miners, 20-17.

Houston golfer Randy Sonnier watches his first tee shot during Saturday's semifinal round of the U.S. Amateur Championship at Oak Tree Golf Club in Edmond, Okla.

Verplank, Randolph gain berth in Amateur finals

EDMOND, Okla. (AP) — Collegians Scott Verplank of Oklahoma State and Sam Randolph of Southern California won their semifinal matches Saturday and will meet Sunday in the 36-hole championship of the U.S. Amateur golf tournament.

Verplank sizzled through the front nine in 33 to go 4-up on Randy Sonnier but had to hold off the 35-year-old Houston airline pilot down the stretch, 1 up.

Verplank needed to nail a six-foot putt on the 18th hole after Sonnier missed a 10-footer that would have sent the match to extra holes at the windy Oak Tree Golf Club.

"There's a lot of people who would have given up after nine holes, but Randy's not that kind of guy," Verplank said. "He played a great back nine ... It got tight there."

Verplank, who says he has taken on the 7,015-yard, par-71 layout 20 to 30 times, called his front nine "the best nine holes I've ever played out here."

Verplank won the first three holes and wound up winning eight to Sonnier's seven. The players halved three holes.

The U.S. Golf Association has rated Oak Tree the toughest course in the country, and Verplank said wind gusting at more than 20 mph Saturday "makes the course ... a lot tougher."

Randolph won seven of the first nine holes as Jerry Haas of Belleville, Ill., of Wake Forest ballooned to 45 at the turn. Randolph took the semifinal round, 7 and 5, for the biggest victory margin in the tournament.

Sutton's 68 good for one-shot lead

ENDICOTT, N.Y. (AP) — Steady Hal Sutton shot a 3-under-par 68 Saturday and took a one-shot lead in the $300,000 B.C. Open.

His 54-hole total of 7-under 206 was good for a stroke edge over second-round leader Fred Couples, who matched par-71 on the tricky, 6,966-yard municipal course.

Lindy Miller, playing in only his sixth tour event after losing his card last year, also shot 68 to hold sole possession of third at 208.

Russ Cochran, first-round co-leader Mike Donald, Tommy Valentine, Larry Mize, Dan Halldorson and Wayne Levi, who briefly held the lead halfway through the third round, were bunched in fourth place at 4-under 209, three shots behind Sutton.

Brett Upper shot the best round of the day — 4-under 67 — and was alone at 210, while 1977 B.C. Open champion Gil Morgan and Mark Lye were five shots behind Sutton at

The day's results created an unusual final threesome for Sunday — a showdown between two of the brightest young stars in pro golf, with Miller as an unknown factor.

Sutton, 26, the 1983 titlist of the Tournament Players Championship event and the PGA Championship, was the tour's top money-winner with $426,668 last year — his second.

The 24-year-old Couples won this year's TPC and ranks fourth on the money list this year with $313,701 to Sutton's $182,067 for 26th.

The B.C. Open purse is $54,-000, more than seven times as much as Miller has won all year.

Sutton is sixth in the PGA in the "greens-in-regulation" statistic, and his accuracy came to the fore in his three-birdie, 15-par round.

He birdied the fourth hole and had made up the two strokes on Couples by the turn. Then he went into overdrive with birdies on Nos. 10 and 12 and cruised home.

Levi kept pace for the first 10 holes as he and Sutton played catch-up, but he fell back with two bogeys, including one on No. 18.

Couples played smoothly at 1-under through the first seven holes but then bogeyed Nos. 8 and 9. He birdied the 12th hole on the back nine but then added another stroke with a bogey on No. 15 and had to birdie the last hole to break out of the tie with Miller.

Miller started in spectacular fashion but also needed the 20-foot birdie putt he sank on No. 18 to give himself some breathing room.

Earlier in the round, he started off with a bogey-5 on the par-4, 388-yard first hole, followed with birdies on Nos. 3, 6, 7, 8 and 10 before two bogeys cost him out of the lead.

Five tied at Rail Classic top

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — Vicki Fergon took advantage of 20-mph winds Saturday to notch an eagle and join four other tour veterans posting 4-under-par 68s for the first-round lead in the $150,000 LPGA Rail Charity Classic.

Fergon joined Becky Pearson, Vicki Alvarez, Therese Hession and Cindy Hill for the lead in the 54-hole tournament. Jane Crafter was one shot back and 12 other players were bunched at 70.

Fergon eagled the par-5 sixth hole on the strength of a wind-aided 280-yard drive. She left her approach shot 15 feet from the hole and sank the putt.

"The wind was worse than the heat," Pearson said of temperatures that neared 100 degrees. "There was a tricky crosswind out there and it was hard to read."

Hession, Hill, and Fergon all teed off on the 6,253-yard, par-72 Rail Golf Club layout early in the morning and avoided the hot temperatures.

Fergon credited a new putter for her low round.

"I really got some confidence back. I made a couple of real long putts and some 10-to 12-footers and I started hitting my irons well too," she said.

Hill, 36, is playing full time on the tour after recovering from a string of injuries that have interrupted her play for the past four years.

"When you take that much time off you lose some of your competitive edge and some of your confidence," she said. "I feel great now. I think I hit the ball the best today that I've hit it all year."

Barber leads Senior Golf Classic

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Miller Barber shot a 5-under-par 66 Saturday to take the first-round lead in the $175,000 Citizens' Union Senior Golf Classic at the Marriott Resort's Griffin Gate course.

Barber, who has won three tournaments this year along with defending champion Don January, said back pains nearly forced him to withdraw from the tournament.

"I played well, considering my back problem and a couple of mental lapses, but I'm very pleased with a 66," Barber said.

Barber had six birdies and dropped a 12-foot putt for an eagle on the par-5 12th hole.

Barber is the second leading money winner in the history of the Senior Tour, having won more than $640,000.

New-look Cowboys open against Rams

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — The new-look Dallas Cowboys, with a host of young players on their roster and a quarterback starting for the first time, will attempt to win their 18th National Football League season-opening game in the past 20 years Monday night when they face the Los Angeles Rams.

The nationally televised (ABC) game marks the beginning of the 15th year of Monday Night Football.

The Cowboys, who have a 10-0 record in NFL season-openers on the road, will be trying to snap a three-game losing streak in games that count. They were beaten by Washington and San Francisco in the final two regular-season games of 1983, then lost 24-17 to the Rams in the National Football Conference wild-card playoff game.

The Cowboys were 3-1 in the preseason while the Rams were 2-2.

Dallas is without several key players from recent years. Among those gone are wide receiver Drew Pearson, offensive tackle Pat Donovan, tight end Billy Joe DuPree and defensive end Harvey Martin, all of whom retired after the 1983 season.

The current roster includes 12 rookies as well as wide receiver Kirk Phillips, a free agent from Tulsa who spent the entire 1983 campaign on the injured reserve list.

Ironically, Pearson also was a free agent from Tulsa who had a superb 12-year NFL career.

Dallas Coach Tom Landry, whose team has qualified for the playoffs nine straight times and in 17 of the past 18 years, announced last Tuesday that Gary Hogeboom would replace Danny White as the Cowboys' starting quarterback.

It will be the first NFL start for Hogeboom, who is beginning his fifth pro season. Hogeboom was used sparingly last season, completing 11 of 17 passes for 151 yards.

White, who became Dallas' quarterback in 1980 following the retirement of Roger Staubach, led the Cowboys to the NFC championship game three straight years before the club lost to the Rams in the wild-card game last December.

In another development this past week, Dallas defensive tackle Randy White ended his holdout and will be in the starting lineup against the Rams, who have made it into the playoffs nine times in the past 11 years.

Randy White should help shore up a defense that had only three quarterback sacks in four preseason games.

"He is one of the premier players in the NFL, there's no doubt about it," Los Angeles Coach John Robinson said when asked about Randy White. "He changes their defense and the way you attack them.

"If he'd like to take one more week off, I'd be glad to buy him a round-trip ticket to Tahiti, returning Sept. 4."

When asked about the Dallas quarterback situation, Robinson said, "I don't think it's as important to us as it is to them. They're both excellent quarterbacks."

Two of the NFL's top running backs will be in action — Tony Dorsett of Dallas, who gained 1,321 yards last season, and Eric Dickerson of Los Angeles, who picked up 1,808 yards in a league-record 390 carries as a rookie a year ago.

"There's no love lost between us," Dickerson said when asked about the Cowboys. "We're ready and we'll be especially ready for the Cowboys."

Moon out to prove he can play in NFL

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Oiler quarterback Warren Moon will try to prove he can play in the National Football League and the Los Angeles Raiders will try to disprove the myth about the difficulty defending a Super Bowl title when the two teams open the regular season Sunday.

Kickoff is at 3 p.m. CDT in the Astrodome.

Moon, the $6 million man from the Canadian Football League, has survived all previous milestones in his rookie season in the NFL but he's still anxious to get the regular season underway.

"The adrenalin will be flowing a little more because it is the first regular season game," said Moon, who led Edmonton to five CFL titles before signing with the Oilers. "I'm pretty familiar with the offense, that's been my main concern. But as long as I know where everyone is supposed to be, then I'm all right."

Los Angeles Coach Tom Flores recalls the Raiders' 1980 Super Bowl season and the lacklustre 7-9 1981 season that followed.

He doesn't expect it to happen again.

"We intend to go out and have a good season and destroy the myth that occurs around the world as to how it's almost impossible to repeat," Flores said.

Although the Raiders finished with preseason schedule with a 1-3 record, Flores doesn't think the Raiders are gearing themselves for another 1981 lapse.

"I don't think we can be overconfident, we've won only one preseason game and that was by a narrow margin," Flores said. "But in some ways we are stronger than last year."

The game will match the best with the worst of 1983. While the Raiders were posting a 12-4 regular season record and advancing to a 38-9 victory over Washington in the Super Bowl, the Oilers were rolling to a 2-14 season, tying Tampa Bay for the worst record in the NFL.

The Oilers are hoping to rebound behind a youthful offensive line, Moon and a hearlthy Earl Campbell, recovering from arthoscopic knee surgery in May.

And Moon is ready to get his NFL career started.

"There is no better test than to go against the world champions," Moon said. "I came down here to test myself agains the best. They are a physical team, they don't do a lot of fancy things. They are the best but they can be beaten."

Moon will have a versatile group of receivers last by Tim Smith, who led all NFL wide receivers with 83 catches last season, rejuvenated veterans Steve Bryant and Mike Holston and sixth round draft choice Eric Mullins.

Jim Plunkett, a 14-year veteran, apparently will orchestrate the Raider offense that also includes Marcus Allen, the Super Bowl XVIII's most valuable player and Kenny King.

Plunkett isn't concerned by the Raiders slow start in preseason games.

Navratilova, Lloyd still on U.S. Open collision course

NEW YORK (AP) — Martina Navratilova and Chris Evert Lloyd continued their collision course Saturday, easily advancing into the fourth round of the $2.55 million U.S. Open Tennis Championships.

Czechoslovakia's Ivan Lendl, who has lost in the men's singles final in each of the last two years, also cruised past his third-round opponent, but several seeds were ousted on the hardcourts at the National Tennis Center in Flushing Meadow.

Eighth-seeded Aaron Krickstein, the 17-year-old who reached the fourth round here a year ago, was eliminated in a night match by Greg Holmes, the 1983 NCAA champion, 6-1, 4-6, 6-2, 7-6, and Tim Mayotte of Springfield, Mass., upset 10th-seeded Eliot Teltscher 6-4, 6-3, 6-4 in men's play, while West Germany's Sylvia Hanika knocked out No. 7 Zina Garrison 6-3, 6-2 and Austria's Petra Huber ousted No. 16 Andrea Temesvari of Hungary 6-1, 6-4 in the women's singles.

Other seeded men to advance to the fourth round included No. 4 Mats Wilander of Sweden, No. 5 Andres Gomez of Ecuador, No. 12 Vitas Gerulaitis, No. 14 Anders Jarryd of Sweden and No. 15 Pat Cash of Australia.

Third-seeded Hana Mandlikova of Czechoslovakia won her third-round match, as did No. 14 Carling Bassett of Canada, No. 12 Bonnie Gadusek and two other unseeded players — Petra Delhees Jauch of Switzerland and Lori McNeil of Houston.

Fourth-round pairings in the bottom half of the men's draw has Lendl against Jarryd, Gerulaitis against Gomez, Wilander against Mayotte and Cash against Holmes. In the women's draw, it will be Lloyd against Gadusek, Huber against Hanika, Mandlikova against McNeil and Bassett against Jauch.

Navratilova crushed South Africa's Jennifer Mundel 6-0, 6-0 and Lloyd cruised past Bettina Bunge of West Germany 6-1, 6-3.

Mandlikova defeated Anne White 6-1, 6-1; Bassett topped Mima Jausovec of Yugoslavia 7-6, 6-0; Jauch downed Melissa Gurney 7-5, 6-1 and McNeil stopped Anne Minter of Australia 6-4, 3-6, 6-2.

Lendl had no trouble with Jimmy Brown, brushing back the Brentwood, Tenn., youngster 6-1, 6-2, 6-4. Wilander fought off Bill Scanlon 7-6, 7-5, 6-3; Gomez toppled Jay Lapidus 6-3, 7-5, 3-6, 6-3; Gerulaitis outlasted qualifier Ken Flach of St. Louis 6-4, 6-2, 4-6, 6-7, 6-1; Jarryd dropped Australian Brad Drewett 6-2, 6-3, 6-3 and Cash eliminated qualifier Todd Nelson of San Diego 6-3, 6-3, 6-2.

After a devastating 35-minute appearance, raising her 1984 match record to 55-1 and her consecutive winning streak to 51 matches, Navratilova said: "I feel I can get a lot better."

Mundel was outclassed in every phase of the game, winning 16 points in the first set and only four in the second.

"She wasn't pressing me on her serves, so I was able to do what I wanted," admitted Navratilova, who is seeking her second straight U.S. Open title and her sixth consecutive Grand Slam singles victory.

Lloyd, a six-time U.S. Open champion, took one hour to dispatch Bunge, who has yet to return to the form she displayed before an ear operation last year.

"It'a a little bit windy out there — very windy, very, very windy," Lloyd said. "I don't think that she's a good wind player because she hits with so much spin — topspin and slices. It's easier if you hit more of a flat ball. So I just played the wind better."

Brown, 19, played a baseline game against Lendl, who probably is the best baseliner in the game today. The Czech's powerful serve and ferocious forehand were too much for Brown, who is ranked 107th in the world.

Gerulaitis, on the other hand, had to scramble to get past his third-round foe.

"It was pretty easy until 3-2 in the third (set) and I just kind of ran out of steam," Gerulaitis said. "I didn't have too much time for breakfast this morning and I just went flat.

"They brought me a fruit cup on the court and I felt better. It was a little late for the tie-breaker, but I felt OK by then.

"I played two bad points and went to the fifth set. You cannot dwell on what you have done wrong. You hang in there for the next set."

Ranked 14th in the world on the Atari-ATP computer, Gerulaitis is having his best U.S. Open since he reached the semifinals in 1981.

"I think that I played one of the best matches I've ever played," said Mayotte, a semifinalist at Wimbledon in 1982 and a quarterfinalist there last year. "I always knew that I had the physical potential, but I needed the work on my concentration."

It was the second straight time Mayotte has beaten Teltscher after losing their first four meetings.

Wilander came into the U.S. Open after winning the ATP Championships in Cincinnati for the second straight year, a victory he says helped him mentally.

"I play more relaxed now and felt more pressure at the beginning of the year because of last year (when he won nine tournaments)," the Swede said. "Now, when I go out to my matches, I am very relaxed and feel no pressure."

Bosco's 50-yard pass to Haysbert stuns No. 3 Pitt

PITTSBURGH — Robbie Bosco, the latest in a long line of Brigham Young's prolific passers, rifled a 50-yard touchdown pass to Adam Haysbert with 1:37 left in the game Saturday as the Cougars rallied from an 11-point deficit to shock third-ranked Pittsburgh 20-14.

Pitt, expected to contend for the national college football championship, turned a pair of third-quarter interceptions into touchdowns to take a 14-3 lead, but BYU came back behind Bosco to win its 12th consecutive game over two seasons.

Bosco, a junior making his first start after playing behind All-American Steve Young in 1983, completed 25 of 43 passes for 325 yards against a Pitt defense that was nationally ranked a season ago.

BYU, playing its first-ever game in the Northeast, cut Pitt's lead to 14-9 when Lakei Heimuli ran 12 yards with 4:53 to go in the third quarter. The score came just two plays after Mark Allen's interception of a John Congemi pass gave the Cougars a first down at the Pitt 21.

BYU, after forcing a Pitt punt, drove from its 17 to the Panther 6 but elected to go for a field goal on a fourth-and-goal. Lee Johnson's 23-yard kick cut Pitt's lead to 14-12 with 9:15 to play. Bosco throws of 35 yards to Glen Kozlowski and 22 yards to Richard Orr keyed the winning drive.

The Cougars needed just five plays to cover the 74 yards on the game-winning drive, with Haysbert beating cornerback Keith Tinsley for the TD, one of nine receptions for 141 yards.

BYU led 3-0 at the half on Johnson's 37-yard field goal early in the second quarter. Pitt later drove the Cougar 2, but Marc Bailey was stopped a yard short of the goal on a fourth-and-two play on the final play of the half.

Bill Callahan's 78-yard return of a Bosco pass with just over three minutes gone in the second half gave Pitt a 7-3 lead.Pitt then made it 14-3 less than three minutes later after Tinsley's 20-yard interception return to the BYU 20. A 14-yard Congemi to Chuck Scales pass set up Bailey's 1-yard run with 8:31 left in the period.

Miami 32, Florida 20

TAMPA, Fla. — Bernie Kosar took Miami 72 yards in 29 seconds and lobbed a 12-yard touchdown pass to Eddie Brown with seven seconds left and Tolbert Bain returned an interception 59 yards on the final play as defending national champion Miami pulled out an incredible 32-20 victory over 17th-ranked Florida.

The 10th-ranked Hurricanes, who upset No. 1-ranked Auburn 20-18 six nights earlier, were 41 seconds away from having the nation's longest winning streak snapped at 12 games when Florida took a 20-19 lead on a five-yard scoring pass from freshman walk-on quarterback Kerwin Bell to Frankie Neal.

But Kosar, whose pinpoint 11-of-12 passing in the second period also brought Miami from behind, was not to be denied.

The 6-foot-5 sophomore, who tied a school record with 25 completions in 33 attempts and passed for 309 yards, went to work after Darryl Oliver's 16-yard kickoff return to the Miami 28.

First, he hit tight end Willie Smith with a 36-yarder. Next came a 17-yard bullet to split end Eddie Brown and a four-yarder to Oliver, who went out of bounds at the Florida 15 with 17 seconds remaining.

After Oliver ran for three yards, apparently setting up a field goal try, Kosar found Brown in the left rear corner of the end zone behind defensive back Vernell Brown for the winning touchdown and a 13-game winning streak — 2-0 under new head Coach Jimmy Johnson.

Florida had time for one play after the kickoff and Bain, a freshman defensive back, picked off Bell's desperation pass and was en route to the end zone when the final gun went off.

Florida was the last team to beat Miami — 28-3 in the 1983 opener — and the Gators, opening their season six days after head Coach Charley Pell announced his resignation effective at the end of the year as the result of a 20-month NCAA probe, almost captured what would have been an emotional victory.

But the setback just added more tears to a stunning week in which the Gators not only had their coach announce his resignation, but lost quarterback Dale Dorminey, the projected starter, for the season with a knee injury last Tuesday.

College Football

Boston College 44, W. Carolina 24

NEWTON, Mass. — Doug Flutie tied a Boston College career record while passing for four touchdowns and the 19th ranked Eagles rolled to a 44-24 victory over Division 1-AA power Western Carolina.

With the touchdown passes, Flutie tied Frank Harris' career-record 44 set from 1968 through 1971.

Flutie, who has led Boston College to post-season bowl appearances for the last two years, began his senior year by hitting on 22 of 31 passes for 330 yards before he retired with the Eagles in front 41-13 midway through the third period.

Flutie put Boston College in front to stay with a 13-yard scoring pass to sophomore Kelvin Martin at the 10-minute mark of the opening period. That capped an 84-yard march.

Florida State 48, East Carolina 17

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. — Eric Thomas passed for two touchdowns and Darrin Holloman ran for two more as 20th-ranked Florida State ripped mistake-prone East Carolina 48-17.

In the season opener for both Southern independents, Florida State scored its fifth victory over the Pirates in as many years.

A crowd of 54,211, the fifth-largest for Florida State's Doak Campbell Stadium, watched the Seminoles pile up 504 yards total offense, including 113 rushing yards on 17 carries by tailback Greg Allen.

Thomas, a junior quarterback, completed 12 of 19 passes for 177 yards.

He passed for touchdowns of 17 yards to Hassan Jones and 31 yards to Jessie Hester in a 21-point second quarter as the Seminoles spurted to a 31-3 halftime lead.

Clemson 40, Appalachian State 7

CLEMSON, S.C. — Fourth-ranked Clemson, behind a pair of touchdown passes from quarterback Mike Eppley, overcame a slow start and powered past Appalachian State, 40-7.

Clemson, which broke the game open in the second half, sealed the Mountaineer's fate when Eppley hit his second scoring pass — a 5-yard shot to tight end K.D. Dunn — that made the score 26-0.

Eppley, the Atlantic Coast Conference's leading passer with 1,410 yards last season, saw only limited action the rest of the way and finished the game with 131 yards. He completed 13 of 17 attempts.

Davis' home run helps push A's past Tigers, 7-5

Associated Press

OAKLAND, Calif. — Mike Davis clubbed a three-run homer to wrap up a six-run, first-inning rally which carried the Oakland A's to a 7-5 victory over the Detroit Tigers Saturday.

The Tigers, who lost a fourth straight game, cut Oakland's lead to 6-5 by scoring three runs in the second and two in the sixth off A's' starter Curt Young, 7-3.

Dwayne Murphy hit his 28th homer in the bottom of the sixth off Detroit reliever Bill Scherrer for the game's final run.

Tigers starter Juan Berenguer, 7-9, failed to finish the first, leaving after Davis' seventh homer of the season. Berenguer walked two batters and struck out one before Dave Kingman doubled for the game's first run, which raised Kingman's RBI total to 109.

Bruce Bochte's sacrifice fly drove in the second run and Donnie Hill doubled home another. Davis homered after Jim Essian walked.

Blue Jays 12, Twins 4

TORONTO — Lloyd Moseby's three-run homer capped a seven-run fourth inning as the Toronto Blue Jays crushed Minnesota 12-4, handing the slumping Twins their fourth straight loss.

Dennis Lamp, making his second start of the season, went 5 2-3 innings in evening his record at 7-7. Lamp struck out seven and walked one. Roy Lee Jackson finished up for his ninth save.

Trailing 1-0 in the fourth inning, the Blue Jays pounded Mike Smithson, 13-11, for seven runs on five hits. Rance Mulliniks' RBI single tied the game and two outs later Damaso Garcia's two-run single put the Blue Jays up for good.

Dave Collins followed with an RBI single, then Moseby drove his 18th homer of the season.

The Twins chased Lamp with three runs in the sixth. Lamp walked Tim Teufel with the bases loaded for one run and pinch-hitter Darrell Brown followed with a two-run single to knock out Lamp and make the score 7-4.

The Blue Jays added five runs in the seventh inning on Jesse Barfield's RBI single, pinch-hitter Cliff Johnson's three-run double and Ernie Whitt's run-scoring single.

American League

Red Sox 4, Indians 1

CLEVELAND — Mike Easler keyed a four-run sixth inning with a three-run homer to back Bob Ojeda's six-hitter as the Boston Red Sox defeated the Cleveland Indians 4-1.

Easler's clout snapped a 1-1 tie as Boston gained its fourth straight victory and seventh in eight games.

Ojeda, 10-10, was removed from the 15-day disabled list earlier in the day. The left-hander had been sidelined with a sore left elbow, but bounced back to toss his seventh complete game, striking out eight and walking four.

Bert Blyleven, 15-6, suffered his first loss after five consecutive victories. Blyleven surrendered nine hits while pitching his eighth complete game.

Carmen Castillo led off the third inning with a single, took second on Chris Bando's groundout and gave Cleveland a 1-0 lead when he scored on Mike Fischlin's single.

Blyleven allowed only one baserunner to reach second base until the sixth.

Jackie Gutierrez led off the inning with a single, but was erased on a Wade Boggs fielder's choice grounder. With two outs, Jim Rice singled Boggs to third.

Boggs scored the tying run when Tony Armas beat out a slow roller to shortstop. Easler then pulled a high fly ball into the right field seats for his 22nd home run of the season.

Rangers 8, Brewers 4

ARLINGTON — Buddy Bell hit a two-run homer and a two-run triple to lead the Texas Rangers to a 8-4 victory over the Milwaukee Brewers.

The victory, the Rangers fourth in five games, snapped Dave Stewart's personal four-game losing streak. Stewart, 5-12, had last won on June 19.

He pitched six innings, walking three and striking out five. Dave Schmidt pitched the final 1⅓ innings to earn his 12th save. Mike Caldwell, 6-13, took the loss.

The Brewers took a 2-0 lead in the first inning on Ben Oglivie's two-run single.

Bell's homer gave Texas a 3-2 lead in the third. Billy Sample doubled and scored on Gary Ward's single. Bell then hit his eighth homer of the year.

Bell's triple keyed a three-run fifth-inning rally. Curtis Wilkerson led off with a single and advanced to third on Ward's double. Bell then tripled, giving him eight RBI in his last two games.

White Sox 6, Royals 1

CHICAGO — Roy Smalley' two-run home run capped a four-run third inning to lead LaMarr Hoyt and the Chicago White Sox to a 6-1 victory over the Kansas City Royals.

Hoyt, 11-15, the 1983 Cy Young winner, snapped a personal four-game losing streak. He had a three-hit shutout working before the Royals scored in the eighth inning.

The loss kept the Royals from going over the .500 mark and pulling within a game of American League West leader Minnesota, which lost to Toronto 12-4.

The victory was only the second in the last seven games for the White Sox, who moved within 5½ games of the division lead.

Hoyt gave up a looping double over third base to Jorge Orta in the second inning, then retired 11 in a row before Don Slaught doubled over first base in the fifth inning.

Matthews' double leads Cubs to victory over Braves

Associated Press

ATLANTA — Gary Matthews' ninth-inning double snapped a 1-1 tie and sparked a three-run rally that led the Chicago Cubs to a 4-1 victory over the Atlanta Braves Saturday.

It was the sixth victory in seven games for the National League East-leading Cubs.

Matthews also drove in the Cubs' first run in the third with a single.

Ryne Sandberg led off the ninth against reliever Craig McMurtry, 8-14, with an infield single and went to second on second baseman Jerry Royster's throwing error. Matthews followed with his double, driving in Sandberg.

After Leon Durham was intentionally walked, Jody Davis added a single to score pinch-runner Henry Cotto. Tom Veryzer's single scored Durham.

Rich Bordi, 5-1, worked the eighth inning and the rally gained him the victory. Lee Smith pitched the ninth for his 27th save.

Both starting pitchers turned in outstanding efforts. Dennis Eckersley, making his first lifetime appearance against the Braves, allowed six hits, walked one and fanned three in seven innings.

Rick Camp went eight innings for the Braves, allowing three hits, three walks and four strikeouts.

Atlanta tied the game at 1-1 in the fourth when Claudell Washington singled, stole second and scored on Randy Johnson's double to right-center.

Mets 7-10, Padres 4-6

NEW YORK — Hubie Brooks' three-run double keyed a five-run fourth inning that lifted the New York Mets to a 10-6 victory over the San Diego Padres and a sweep of a twi-night doubleheader.

The Mets, who closed to within five games of the Chicago Cubs, won the opener 7-4 behind the six-hit pitching of Dwight Gooden, whose 10 strikeouts boosted his National League lead to 224.

Giants 7, Phillies 2

PHILADELPHIA — Scot Thompson and Fran Mullins each drove in two runs, one each during a five-run third inning, in the San Francisco Giants' 7-2 victory over the Philadelphia Phillies.

Atlee Hammaker, taken off the disabled list earlier in the day, worked five innings to gain his second triumph without a loss. Hammaker allowed four hits, struck out two and walked two.

Mark Grant pitched four one-hit relief innings and picked up his first save.

The Giants tallied five times in the third inning, chasing Philadelphia starter Charles Hudson, 8-10. Hammaker walked and scored on Dan Gladden's double. Gladden moved to third on an infield out and scored on Chili Davis' single.

Dodgers 4, Expos 3

MONTREAL — Pinch-hitter Mike Marshall blooped an eighth-inning single that scored Rafael Landestoy from second base with the go-ahead run and helped the Los Angeles Dodgers to a 4-3 triumph over the Montreal Expos.

Mike Scioscia opened the eighth with a walk against starter Charlie Lea, 15-9, and Landestoy ran for him.

Landestoy moved to second on a sacrifice bunt and Marshall, batting for Dave Anderson, stroked his single over the head of second baseman Doug Flynn.

Fernando Valenzuela, 11-15, scattered ten hits while pitching into the ninth.

Astros 8, Cardinals 4

ST. LOUIS — Pinch-hitter Kevin Bass rapped an RBI triple to cap a three-run rally in the sixth inning, leading the Houston Astros to an 8-4 triumph over the St. Louis Cardinals.

The triumph by Houston overshadowed rookie Tom Nieto's inside-the-park home run for St. Louis with two teammates on base. Mark Ross, 1-0, gained his first major league victory with relief from Dave Smith as Kurt Kepshire, 4-4, absorbed the loss.

Trailing 4-2 after five innings, Houston erupted against Kepshire after Jose Cruz singled to start the sixth and was forced at second base on Jerry Mumphrey's grounder.

Mumphrey reached third on Enos Cabell's single. One out later, Craig Reynolds stroked an RBI single and a wild pitch by Kepshire gave the Astros a 4-4 tie ahead of Bass' triple.

Reds 7, Pirates 5

CINCINNATI — Pinch-hitter Tony Perez slammed a two-run home run in the 11th inning to give the Cincinnati Reds a 7-5 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates.

The Reds, trailing 5-4, tied the game when Brad Gulden walked, advanced on a passed ball and a groundout and scored on Nick Esasky's sacrifice fly off Pittsburgh reliever Don Robinson, 3-6. Ron Oester's two-out single set the stage for Perez, who hit his second homer of the season and the 331st of his career.

Perez batted for Ted Power, 8-5, the Reds' sixth pitcher, who surrendered a run in the top of the 11th on Marvell Wynne's triple and a single by Lee Lacy.

Lacy, who had three hits, also batted in a run during the Pirates' four-run second inning.

SWTS beats Wichita State, 38-31

Associated Press

WICHITA, Kan. — Eric Cobble rushed for 117 yards on 17 carries, including one touchdown, and David Longhofer threw for 125 yards to lead Southwest Texas State past Wichita State 38-31 in a non-conference football opener Saturday.

Cobble's 12-yard scoring run in the third quarter and a 2-yard plunge by Longhofer early in the fourth gave the Bobcats a 31-17 lead with just over 12 minutes remaining.

Longhofer, who completed nine of 11 passes, shared time in the quarterback spot with sophomore starter Rene Maldonado, who passed for 68 yards.

After the Shockers broke a 19-minute scoring drought with a 61-yard touchdown pass from Brian McDonald to Albert Hundley, Southwest Texas' Dwayne Orr dived 1 yard to make it 38-24.

McDonald added an 8-yard scoring strike to Hundley with 47 seconds left in the game. He completed 18 of 37 passes for 313 yards and three touchdowns to lead Wichita State.

The crowd of 27,481 at Cessna Stadium was the sixth largest for Wichita State, which is trying to save its NCAA Division 1A standing.

N. Illinois 40, W. Texas St. 33

DEKALB, Ill. (AP) — Quarterback Darryl Taylor threw four touchdown passes, including a 69-yard, game-winning bomb with 10 seconds left, to lead Northern Illinois to a 40-33 non-conference football victory Saturday over West Texas State.

Taylor hit Carl Aikens for the winning score after the two had connected on a 67-yard scoring play earlier in the contest.

West Texas State pulled ahead 33-32 with 25 seconds left on a 1-yard run by quarterback Tod Mayfield. Mayfield also threw for one touchdown and rushed for two more. The Buffalos' other points came on a 53-yard field goal by Dennis Steinbock and a safety.

Taylor completed 12 of 23 passes for 238 yards in the game, while Aikens had four receptions for 158 yards. Taylor's other touchdown passes went to Curt Pardridge and Steve Quinlan.

Texas Football

The Huskies also scored on a 6-yard touchdown run by Joel Kinkade, and a 25-yard field goal by Darren Monnett.

The game was the season opener for both teams.

Tigers 13, Cardinals 7

BEAUMONT — Freshman quarterback Sean Cook's 20-yard touchdown p ass to sophomore split end Donald Narcisse with 10:42 left in the fourth quarter led Texas Southern to a 13-7 victory over Lamar University in the season opener for both schools.

Narcisse's leaping catch in the end zone capped an eight-play, 46-yard drive and Eric Gauthia's extra-point kick erased a 7-6 lead that Lamar held for most of the game. The 5-10, 160-pound Narcisse caught three passes in the winning drive totaling 37 yards.

Senior running back Rodney Shelton, who carried 23 times for 181 yards, got the Tigers' other touchdown in the first quarter with 3 minutes left on a three-yard run, but Gauthia's extra-point attempt was wide. TSU quarterback Johnny Cole completed two passes in the 10-play, 79-yard drive for 41 yards.

The Cardinal's only points came with 9:23 left in the first quarter as sophomore quarterback Dennis Haskin, who carried 23 times for 112 yards, had a 12-yard touchdown run.

Sul Ross 20, W. New Mexico 14

SILVER CITY, N.M. — Junior quarterback Gilbert Morales hit wide receiver Maurice Stephens with two scoring passes as the Lobos downed Western New Mexico 20-14 in a non-conference football game.

David Creek added two field goals as Sul Ross extended last season's winning streak to seven games.

North Texas 7, Angelo State 3

DENTON — Scott Toman hit Sid Moore with a three-yard pass in the first half to lead North Texas State to a 7-3 victory over Angelo State Saturday.

North Texas' defense held strong in the second half in allowing the Rams only three points.

In the closing seconds, Angelo State tried to score and the game ended with the Rams on the North Texas State 14-yard line.

The Eagle offense was lifeless in the second half, picking up only 92 yards.

North Texas State will be off next week before opening Southland Conference play in Beaumont against Lamar Sept. 15.

Angelo State will be at home next week, hosting Northwestern Louisiana State.

Oauchita 30, McMurry 3

ABILENE — Oauchita Baptist's Dwayne Stanley rushed for 88 yards and two touchdowns as he led the Tigers to a 30-3 victory over McMurry College in a non-conference game.

McMurry took a 3-0 lead in the first quarter and Oauchita came back to lead 7-3 at halftime.

But Oauchita, taking advantage of six McMurry turnovers, scored the only points in the second half as it rolled up 271 yards and 23 more points.

Stanley carried 21 times and scored touchdowns on plunges of one and six yards.

McMurry's quarterback, Clyde McKenzie, set a school record by throwing 47 times, completing 21 for 211 yards. McMurry had 229 total yards.

Stephen F. Austin 17, Delta St. 10

NACOGDOCHES — Todd Whitten threw a 20-yard touchdown pass to James Noble in the third quarter to help Stephen F. Austin to a 17-10 football victory Saturday over Delta State.

The first half ended in a scoreless tie, broken by Whitten's pass. Rick Wilson kicked the extra point for a 7-0 score.

With 4:08 to go in the third quarter, Dewayne Herrington scored on a 1-yarder for Delta State. Mike Harlow kicked the extra point to tie the game at 7-7.

With 14:57 to go in the fourth quarter, Mike Harlow kicked a 26-yard field goal and Delta State led 10-7. Then with 12:11 to go, Whitten threw a 16-yard touchdown pass to Noble. The kick by Rick Wilson was good, giving Austin a 14-10 lead.

Klein resigns Rangers' GM post

ARLINGTON (AP) — Joe Klein, the Texas Rangers general manager, resigned his post Saturday to pursue "other opportunities," team officials announced at a press conference.

Klein, who didn't attend the press conference, will be replaced by Tom Grieve, now the farm director for the American League baseball team, team president Mike Stone announced.

Published reports had said that Stone and Klein were not getting along and that in the last two weeks Klein "had lost all his power."

But Stone said Saturday that Klein's resignation had nothing to do with conflicts between him, Klein, majority owner Eddie Chiles or other team officials.

"There was no conflict in personalities between me and Klein," Stone said. "I got along with Joe and Joe remains a friend of mine."

He would only say that "Joe had expressed to me some unhappiness in his role."

Chiles, reached by telephone at his home, said he had heard about Klein's resignation earlier Saturday but added he was "mildly surprised" by the news.

"Well, I guess I've lived long enough that nothing surprises me too much. In baseball, people come and go and some get fired. It's a process that goes on in any industry, as well as in baseball," Chiles said.

He said he was "unable" to give a reason for Klein's resignation.

Stone, who said the resignation was to be announced Monday but was moved to Saturday because of published reports, declined to say what "other opportunities" Klein may be pursuing.

The Associated Press could not reach Klein for comment.

Stone said "Joe has given the R

Up and coming

Everyone knows who's in control of the White House right now and it's a pretty sure bet that Walter Mondale and Geraldine Ferraro will continue to mold the future of the Democratic Party, even if they're unsuccessful in this year's presidential contest. Those Democratic notables will, of course, have help from Gary hart, Jesse Jackson and others.

But after getting past the main item of business at the Republican National Convention in Dallas last month, the big question for GOP stalwarts was who would be the driving force for that party in 1988. There are plenty of potential stars in the GOP's corner right now. Party bigwigs aren't complaining, though. That isn't a reason for bickering; Republicans understandably are more than content to let the Democrats play catch-up in the leadership arena for awhile.

At the convention, the man who drew considerable notice was exactly the one you'd expect — Vice President George Bush. Anyone with any degree of political savvy would expectedly give Bush great odds to inherent party leadership from Ronald Reagan four years down the road.

During the past four years Bush has performed admirably as vice president. He has been a loyal deputy to President Reagan but has gone far and above that role, giving the vice presidential position more meaning than it has enjoyed in the recent past.

When Bush accepted the Number 2 position four years ago, he was widely viewed as the choice of moderate Republicans and even now observers say he will have to do some bridge-building to party hard-liners to attract their support. He did some of that at the Dallas convention and undoubtedly will assert a more conservative posture in the next four years regardless.

He was the acknowledged heir-apparent to party leadership in 1988 at the convention, as well he should have been, and barring any unforeseen disruptions stands in excellent position to move to the top spot following the Reagan administration.

But there are plenty of other notables waiting in the Republican Party's wings: Howard Baker, who is retiring from the Senate and Republican Party leadership there, and who remains an attractive Southern Republican; Rep. Jack Kemp, the New York congressman whose philosophy embraces the New Right; Sen. Bob Dole and his wife, Elizabeth, who is Reagan's Secretary of Transportation. Sen. Dole likes to joke about his wife being more of a 1988 contender than himself, but in reality both are strong possibilities for a race four years down the road.

And those aren't the only names being tossed around for 1988. Lewis Lehrman, who just lost the 1982 gubernatorial race to Mario Cuomo, is labeled an attractive dark horse for '88 and the names of Delaware Gov. Pierre du Pont and California Gov. George Deukmejian keep coming up.

So there is ample evidence that 1988 won't bring a void of talent to the Republican Party. It gave the Republicans plenty to talk about at their Dallas convention, a convention that otherwise would have been an open it up and close it down gathering.

But the Republicans aren't complaining about their profusion of talent. It's an enviable position for a political party.

Another View:
Official vengeance

A new burden of official cruelty appears to have been imposed on the Sakharovs. Yelena Bonner, the wife of Andrei Sakharov and a distinguished human rights figure in her own right, evidently was recently convicted in a one-day secret trial on charges of slandering the Soviet state. Her "offense" was to have considered a tactic — entering the American Embassy in Moscow — to stay out of the clutches of the Soviet police while her husband conducted a hunger strike designed in turn to help her go abroad for medical care of her choice. For this act of personal desperation, which in the event she never committed, she has reportedly been sentenced to five years of internal exile.

The sentence is, conceivably, less severe than the three-year prison term that other dissidents have gotten. We say "conceivably" because the conditions of her exile are not known — in particular, whether she will be allowed to be with her husband. Certainly she will no longer be able to travel between the closed city of Gorky, the site of Andrei Sakharov's banishment, and Moscow, an open city (foreigners are allowed there) where she has been his link with the outside world. The family's deepening isolation, by the way, makes it plain why she may have contemplated ducking into the American Embassy in the first place.

Even as the authorities lower a personal Iron Curtain around the Sakharovs, they have undertaken a propaganda operation to cut their losses in world opinion. A familiar Soviet police agent provided Western media with a videotape presuming to show that Andrei Sakharov is well. But the Kremlin's tapes have no more credibility than its official words. Previously there was great anxiety about Mr. Sakharov's health, and there still is. Only by allowing family members or friends or unofficial witnesses to meet with the Sakharovs can the anxiety be dispelled.

It needs to be asked: just who is bringing the name of the Soviet state into disrepute? The Soviet government says it is Yelena Bonner. But any halfway reasonable and independent person is bound to conclude it is the Soviet government. It has made an outcast of a man any decent leadership would celebrate, and now, having evidently failed to break his will, it further punishes him by making a "criminal" of a noble woman who with her husband represents their country's finest values. It has made itself an object of worldwide contempt for training the resources of a powerful police state on two individuals who may be alone in Gorky or wherever they are, but who will not be forgotten.

Demos stuffing 'gap' with money

WASHINGTON — Labor Day, the traditional start of a presidential race, has been overrun by events this year. The candidates of both parties are already going full speed toward Election Day.

Jack Anderson

A crucial element in Walter Mondale's hopes for a come-from-behind victory over a confident President Reagan is the Democrats' ambitious effort to identify, register and motivate 8 million to 10 million voters in the next two months. This will require massive amounts of money, and in this, as in most other aspects of the campaign, the Republicans are comfortably ahead.

The Democratic fund-raising effort got underway in earnest on July 19, the day Mondale accepted the nomination in San Francisco. That morning, in the Sauternes III Room of the Meridien Hotel, Mondale's lieutenants brought together about 200 party fat cats for a closed-door presentation of their plans for a "Democratic Victory Fund."

There was a brief video presentation that stressed the importance of getting out the vote, followed by an eight-minute pep talk by the candidate himself. While Mondale spoke to the money men, the press was told that he was taking some "private time at the Meridien."

Briefing memos handed out at the Meridien meeting described the Victory Fund as "a combined fund-raising effort of the Democratic National Committee, state Democratic parties and the Democratic Congressional and Senate Democratic Campaign committees in cooperation with Mondale-Ferraro."

Tim Finchem, Mondale's finance director and head of the Victory Fund, told the conferees that the minimum goal is to raise $27 million, with a hoped-for target of $42 million.

Here's a breakdown of the collection campaign:

— Direct mail: "We will mail solicitations several times per month to the nearly 500,000 identified donors" already listed by the Democratic National Committee. This is expected to raise "a minimum of $4 million and perhaps as much as $6 million."

Finchem told my associate Tony Capaccio the direct-mail campaign has already had some early successes. An appeal sent out over New York Gov. Mario Cuomo's signature after his convention keynote speech, for example, brought in $600,000, Finchem said.

— Large gifts: "Individuals, corporations and labor unions are able to make large contributions to the Victory Fund. ... The large gifts program will identify potential major donors and actively solicit the largest possible contributions that he or she is capable of making. This program is expected to raise a minimum of $5 million and as much as $8 million in contributions of $10,000 or more."

— Events: Finchem's briefing paper said: "Events will provide the foundation of the 1984 Democratic Victory Fund. Walter Mondale, Geraldine Ferraro and the highest level of elected officials will travel throughout the country to attend fund-raisers in their honor. We are planning to have more than 60 fund-raisers occurring — for the most part — in September and October. Our events are targeted to raise over $15 million with a minimum of $10 million."

Not surprisingly, Ms. Ferraro's financial disclosure problems took some of the bloom off this rosy appraisal. In fact, while Finchem rated Ms. Ferraro "a terrific draw" for fund-raisers, some money men close to Mondale tried to start a "dump Ferraro" move. It got nowhere: Mondale made clear that he was determined to keep her on the ticket.

— Home parties: "We hope to sponsor nearly 20,000 home parties on a night in early October," Finchem's briefing paper said. These "America for Mondale-Ferraro" parties will have a goal of raising $500 each from friends and neighbors — or a total of $10 million.

More realistically, the home parties are expected to raise $4 million, perhaps as much as $8 million. During the presidential primary campaign, thousands of such parties raised $1.4 million for Mondale.

The high hopes Finchem has for the home parties were laid out in an Aug. 8 memo to the DNC staff, when he touted the concept as having "the potential of being the largest grass-roots fund-raising event in American political history."

Finchem asked each national committee staff member to recruit 10 hosts or hostesses for home parties. "Please have this list, with names and phone numbers, to me by Labor Day," he wrote, adding that the staffers should "include in every piece of mail that goes from your office a card to recruit additional hosts."

Furthermore, Finchem wrote, "we must mention 'America for Mondale-Ferraro' in every conversation, because a home party is such a manageable contribution for any good Democrat to make toward putting Democrats back in the White House. ... I cannot stress how important this fund-raising effort is."

A trial run on the night of Mondale's acceptance speech was a modest success, Finchem said. Some 500 home parties around the country that night raised $120,000 — or about half the amount per party the Democrats hope to get from the October night of nights.

The home fund-raising technique may pose some logistical problems for the Democrats. Under contracts Finchem has proposed to the 50 state Democratic Party organizations, the Victory Fund would give 95 cents of every dollar raised to the states for local get-out-the-vote drives.

But first the October party hosts are expected to send the proceeds to Victory Fund headquarters in Washington, to be logged into campaign finance records. Some fund-raising experts wonder if the Democrats will have an organization efficient enough to get the money back to state Democratic organizations in time for their get-out-the-vote efforts.

EDWIN FEULNER
Book puts danger in perspective

It's commonly believed that man-made chemicals are among society's deadliest killers.

Promoting this notion is an army of anti-technology flacks, hucksters, self-styled experts, and even a few sincere scientist caught up in the politics of it all.

Edwin Feulner

In her new book, The Apocalyptics: Politics, Science, and the Big Cancer Lie (Simon and Schuster, 1984), Edith Efron, author of The News Twisters and TV Guide media critic, says the pseudo-scientific hucksterring is enough to "leave even the most educted layman incapable of differentiating between serious science and ideology in a white smock." She's right.

The merchants of fear have attempted to play on our understandable fear of cancer, probably the most dreaded of all diseases, by overloading our circuits with claims of imminent doom, packaged neatly between the covers of scientific-sounding research papers whose conclusions are written even before the the first test-tube is filled.

Yet, on an age-adjusted basis, cancer is declining in the United States, even as the use of industrial chemicals has risen sharply.

That's what the evidence says — not that we're committing mass suicide by using spray paint on our patio furniture and eating food grown with pesticides.

How about workplace cancer? During the Carter-Mondale administration, then-Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare Joseph Califano went before the tv cameras with an undocumented claim that 40 percent or more of all cancer deaths may be attributable to exposure to workplace chemicals. The serious scientific community rejected his foolish claim immediately, but not before another seed of fear had been planted. Numerous studies over many years, both in the United States and other industrialized nations, indicated that exposure to industrial chemicals probably accounts for no more than 5 percent of all cancers.

In fact, the data show that working in the chemical industry is safer than working in most other industries, according to the National Safety Council.

A long-term study of 8,181 people who were on Dow Chemical Company's Michigan payroll on March 1, 1954, for example, showed that during the next thirty years the group had 20-percent fewer deaths and 5-percent fewer cancer deaths than the general population. Some of this, compnay officials agree, is probably due to the "healthy worker effect," where some people are screened out in the hiring process.

"But it must also be true," says Dr. Perry Gehring, director of health and environmental science for Dow Chemical U.S.A., "that if the Chicken Littles of the world are to be believed and if working with these so-called toxic time bombs is as hazardous as they say, then Dow employees should be dropping like flies and our mortality rate should be sky high."

Efron's new book panned in The Washington Post for being too strident (though the reviewer acknowledged the scientific validity of everything she said), sets the record straight. I can't imagine it being on Ralph Nader's Christmas-giving list, but anyone who really wants to know how the merchants of doom have tried to snooker us into believing death is just a molecule away should read it cover-to-cover.

ART BUCHWALD
America's getting greater!

The following conversation was overheard in a Dallas bar at 2 o'clock in the morning during the recent Republican convention.

Art Buchwald

"You know what makes America great?"

"What?"

"It's being able to turn on your TV set and listen to a politician tell you how great America really is."

"I'll tell you what makes America great. It's winning a gold medal at the Olympics and thanking President Reagan, even if he didn't have a darn thing to do with it."

"Nah, that's not what makes America great. What makes America great is the American family."

"Whose family?"

"Your family."

"I'm divorced. I'm supporting two families."

"That's my point. Only in America are we rich enough to support more than one family at a time."

"It wasn't my idea. It was the judge's."

"Right, that's because we have justice for all."

"I wouldn't say that. He took her side against mine. What kind of justice is that?"

"The greatness of our country is that no matter how rich or how poor you can always appeal an injustice."

"You tried to hire a lawyer lately?"

"Forget your personal problems. I'll tell you what makes America great. It's living in a Christian country."

"I'm not a Christian."

"Well then, it's living in a Judeo-Christian country."

"I'm not Judeo. I'm Voodeo."

"That's exactly what I said. What makes America great is living in a Judeo-Christian-Voodeo country — where you can practice the faith of your choice whether in a school, a church or at an airport."

"How about this? What makes America great is that you can be outraged at Miss America posing in the nude for Penthouse magazine, but nobody can stop me from buying it at the newsstand, just to see what all the fuss is about."

"I just thought of one. What's great about America is we can get our clothes whiter than any country in the world."

"And according to Cliff Robertson, AT&T is working twice as hard to gain our trust."

"I'll tell you what is great. Our children, who will be the future leaders of America."

"Not to mention our women. They're really great."

"And getting greater all the time."

"You better believe it."

"Let's not forget the minorities who want their share of the greatness of America."

"No one would forget them in an election year."

"At the same time we do have faults."

"That in itself is the great thing about America. We recognize our faults and have the ability to correct them without endangering our national security."

"Or shortchanging the people on the bottom of the ladder."

"I'll tell you another thing that's great about America. The Dallas Cowboys."

"What's so great about the Dallas Cowboys?"

"They're America's team."

"I hate the Dallas Cowboys."

"That's what I mean. You can either love them or hate them, and as long as you don't live in Dallas no one is going to arrest you."

"Well, it's been great talking to you."

"It's been great talking to you — but not nearly as great as talking about America."

Patriotism reviving like cactus flower after rain

Modisett

What with the recent Olympic Games in Los Angeles and both the Democratic and Republican conventions, there has been ample evidence of a refreshing resurgence of patriotism in this country. All of a sudden everyone's favorite colors seem to be red, white and blue, and flag-waving is back in style.

Well, it's about time.

What this country's people are going through is magnificent. It's a reawakening of the American spirit and now maybe I won't feel so out of place to get goose bumps when I see Old Glory waving in the hot Permian Basin breeze.

Patriotism is a fickle state of emotionalism. It kind of lies there under the facade you hold forth to the world until some little stimuli touches it. And it bursts forward like a cactus flower after a late spring rain.

The funniest things can be the sparks that draw it forth: Football games (Who doesn't feel at least a little patriotic watching the Dallas Cowboys take on the Washington Redskins?). Movies (Remember that feeling you got the first time you saw "Rocky?"). Fairs (Walking down a carnival midway at 9:30 p.m. you'll not feel the least bit out of place carrying the little American flag you won at the penny toss booth). Music (Who can refrain from assuming an "America: Love her or leave her" attitude when the high school band strikes up a good ol' John Philip Sousa march?).

But the emotional burst of patriotism is quick to fade and once the movie has ended, once the saxophone squeals the last note in the march, once the guy wearing the Uncle Sam costume is out of sight, you realize that you are just another person leading a life that's made up of a lot of unpatriotic days and very few of the ones that sparkle in the brilliance of Old Glory.

Come on, admit it. There are times that you have taken your patriotism lightly. There have even been times when you've mocked and ridiculed those who were doing their best despite all odds — including jokers like you — to be loyal, faithful Americans. Things like holding their right hand over their heart when the flag passes. Or actually joining in as the Pledge of Allegiance is recited or "The Star Spangled Banner" is sung.

That's hokey, right? Well...

What's wrong with feeling good about your homeland? What's wrong with saying "I love America" and really meaning it? Isn't it the country that has given you the most cherished of all rights — the one to live your life as a free person? To go where you want, when you want and with whom you want?

Is it wrong to feel a strong sense of pride when your nation's fastest runners, highest jumpers, best swimmers and most graceful skaters put the best from other nations in the shade?

Oh, there have been some spoiled brats in the past few years who've tried to tell us so. Their problem is that they have nothing to compare America to, so they assume that all the other nations in the world are just like us. Tragic error.

And patriotism ebbs and flows. Fortunately this country is now being washed by a tidal wave of patriotism. All those who think patriotism is hokey shouldn't be too worried. It won't last; it never does.

But there is one reassuring thought. Patriotism will lie there, just under the surface of our consciousness, until it's needed again. Then the late spring rains will come and all the flowers will burst into bloom again, painting the landscape in brilliant expanses of red, white and blue!

Victims not always related to 'other guy'

By CYNTHIA GRUBB

Cynthia Grubb, president of the Midland-Ector Counties Chapter of Mothers Against Drunk Drivers, moved to the Tall City five years ago from Lubbock. She became involved with the MADD organization after being in an automobile crash 18 months ago that involved a drunk driver. That driver was never charged with DWI.

"Lynda Graham wishes the drunk driver who ran over her 2½-year-old daughter had been sentenced to watch and listen while the child was held down, screaming, as doctors peeled dead skin from her body three times a day...Instead, the judge gave the woman probation and a fine.

Two years later, in 1983, Kelly Graham (the victim) had impaired use of an arm, treadmark scars that never will disappear and psychological scars that have not healed — she cannot fall asleep in her own bed and she is afraid of cars, freeways, uniforms, sirens and loud noises. The woman who ran over Kelly was a neighbor, a social drinker who had had too much. Kelly was sitting in the front yard when the woman drove over the curb and over the left side of the child's body as the horrified father watched."

There are some people who believe that drunk driving is not their problem. But the fact is even if you don't drink and drive, you still risk becoming a victim of someone who does. It's easy to think that tragedies of this sort happen "to the other guy," but national statistics show someone is killed in an alcohol-related crash every 23 minutes — and that "someone" could just as easily be you or your loved one.

To understand the magnitude of the problem, we have to honestly examine our attitudes toward drinking. It's a fact that drinking alcoholic beverages is "generally acceptable" in the United States today as a "way of life." While it is true alcohol affects different people differently, the way it works is predictable and preventable. Alcohol acts as a general anesthetic, slowing the activity of the brain and spinal cord. Medically, alcohol is a drug that depresses the central nervous system.

Alcohol reduces reflex time and coordination, affects your judgment, vision, attitude and makes a person less alert — all of which are needed when a person is driving.

There are two types of drinkers who contribute to the intoxicated driving problem, as far as safety is concerned — problem drinkers and social drinkers. Problem drinkers are usually so wrapped up in their "problems" they do not recognize or consider the safety of others. Then there are the "social drinkers" who do not think they are dangerous.

Some of the attitudes of social drinkers are, "I'm more alert when I've had a couple of drinks" or "Let me drive, I haven't had an accident yet," or the classic statement, "I can handle it." The truth is, in the face of a tragic fatality that could occur because of the lax attitude of "the social drinker," how many of the above statements would a six-year-old child want to hear if that same drinker killed the child's parent because of negligence?

Changing our attitudes toward drinking and driving is a very critical part to the solution of the intoxicated driving problem because, to a large degree, attitude dictates behavior. Unfortunately, many of these lax attitudes are passed down to our children, and the cycle continues.

So many of the youth groups that I have personally spoken with during this past year have continually made the comment, "My mother and dad tell us not to drink and drive, but they do it all the time." Consequently, each new generation gets the message that it is acceptable to drink and drive. As a society, it is a situation we've allowed to get out of hand. Now it is a situation we have to collectively respond to together to get the drunk driver off the road.

The jurors that are selected for a DWI trial certainly have their own attitudes about drinking and driving, and there are a good many of those jurors who are still unsure that drinking and driving is a crime. As a nation and as a community, jurors pass tougher sentences on thieves who rob for material possessions, than on a drunk driver who robs a person of his life. Isn't life more precious than "gold"?

Another attitude which hinders the DWI resolution is the attitude toward probation. Probation is a sentence which is handed down the most often by prosecutors, judges and jurors. Probation is made to seem like a very harsh sentence because there are 14 items the accused has to abide by. The defense attorneys in drunk driving cases make certain they repeat "FOURTEEN ITEMS" enough times so the jurors will believe that probation is tough enough.

The truth is probation is a means of saying, "Sorry you got caught because you broke one law. Now let's see if you can remember not to break these 14." With as many probationers as there are, how can a probation officer keep a check on them 24 hours a day?

As a community, we need to take a strong look at what probation really is. To get the drunk driver off the road, all the previous mentioned attitudes have to be changed. Drunk driving is everyone's problem, not just the problem of its victims whose lives have already been taken, or those lives that are already crippled, or those lives who are still in comas because of a drunk driver. Get involved with fighting this problem BEFORE one of your loved ones joins the 26,000 persons who are killed annually by intoxicated drivers.

The point is that you can help get the drunk driver off the road. Together and responsibly we can make a difference.

Smith should accept decision of voters

It comes as no surprise that Sheriff Dallas Smith has announced at a news conference that he is considering running for re-election as a write-in candidate for that office after losing the Republican Primary earlier this year by a decisive margin of 60 percent to 40 percent. Mr. Smith's own political party rejected his candidacy by an overwhelming majority. I suggest that he should accept this decision of the voters as an adult and either support the candidate his party selected, or silently fade away.

Mr. Smith's ardent supporters have deluded him to believe that his defeat was the result of unfounded rumors. For him to believe he can win a write-in vote is folly. If his actual intent is to try to help to defeat his Republican Primary adversary, he might indeed accomplish this, but what solace would this be to his ego?

Mr. Smith's intentions weren't too subtle, when immediately after his primary defeat he demoted two officers in his department and assailed his Republican opponent with innuendos in reference to a nickname he evidently felt bore sinister connotations. Such adolescent actions would hardly attract a write-in vote.

Surely Mr. Smith must have forgotten similar antics that occurred the week prior to his election to office in the 1976 General Election. At that time, Mr. Smith bitterly assailed this as "character assassination." To refresh his memory, Mr. Smith might refer to political ads in the October 28th and 29th Midland Reporter-Telegram of that year.

In response to Mr. Smith's mentor, David Hancock, I personally am confident that "...strong law enforcement leadership in the city..." will not cease with the exit of Dallas Smith

Midland man wasn't too busy to help

This is to thank the young man that helped me on Aug. 14 around 5 p.m. on Neely Street.

Everyone else was too busy to stop and help, but not him. He was busy, too, mowing his yard after work, but he stopped long enough to take me after gas, bring me back and get the old truck started again.

I didn't know there were any like him left. Thanks again.

Schools story was editorial, not news

I don't understand why the article headlined "Many Private Schools in Texas Unregulated" which appeared Sunday, Aug. 19, was treated as being a news item rather than an editorial.

The statement "Parents, and not the state, are responsible for assuring the quality of education their child receives...", is not newsworthy. I do not know any Midlanders anxious to completely turn over all responsibility (and therefore authority) for the care or education of their children to a state bureaucracy.

And the statement that "...most parents...assume Big Brother is looking out for their child's welfare," while incredible, is unfortunately consistent with the article's implication that parents ought to rise up in one accord and demand that our state government become authoritarian and fully regulate and control education. Even though increased central government involvement correlates with a decrease rather than increase in SAT scores and functional literacy, this article implies that more regulation would be a giant step toward an improvement in quality.

The writer refers to the high court of Nebraska's upholding of laws requiring regulation of private schools, so the writer must also be familiar with the parents and church leadership of a private church school in Nebraska who were arrested and jailed for refusing to comply with regulations on religious grounds.

I believe this article to be out of step with Midlanders, who realize that to rely on "Big Brother" without losing precious personal freedoms is to practice "double think." Let's keep the state out of the business of regulating private schools and keep editorials off the front page of our local paper.

Readers' views on: Lancaster House

Museum's trustees will regret decision

Time is running out on the Lancaster House. Despite overwhelming public support to save the house and a great many donations from the private sector, no large benefactor has stepped forward to insure that the house will remain standing. The board of trustees of the Museum of the Southwest has been surprised at the widespread support for saving the house, but to date have not softened on their stance to start demolition.

This lack of foresight by the board of trustees will cause irreparable damage to the West End Neighborhood, the City of Midland and in the end to the Museum of the Southwest. Most people consider museums to be the caretakers of our heritage. It seems absolutely ludicrous that an organization intent on keeping credibility as a museum would even suggest demolition of a house so enriched with the cultural history of Midland. A house, I might add, that has been entrusted to their care. This lack of responsibility and very little initiative is why the museum feels the house must come down.

Lancaster House is not suitable to use as gallery space, but there are a number of beneficial and self-supporting uses for the house. The truth is that the Turner Mansion is also not completely suitable for gallery space. The Museum of the Southwest will never be completely satisfied as long as they remain in the Turner Mansion, and eventually will end up in a new building at some other location in town as a result of a significant donation from a large benefactor. This has probably not been done before due to the deep-rooted connection of the Turner name to other prominent and influential names in Midland. It will be a sad day when the Museum of the Southwest moves out of the Turner Mansion and leaves only a vacant lot where the Lancaster House formerly stood in glory.

To grow and prosper as the board of trustees visualize, a museum needs not only strong financial support, but the broad base support of the community. With the credibility the museum loses by tearing down the Lancaster House, the museum will be lucky to retain their stagnant status. Growth will be out of the question, leaving the Lancaster lot vacant for a long time to come.

If and when the museum plans to use the leveled property they must get it re-zoned from its current single-family residence status. The people of Midland will remember the demise of the Lancaster House and not allow rezoning without a fight.

I believe the board of trustees is using poor judgement even to the point of damaging the future of their museum. If you doubt that these leaders of the community are capable of such a lack of foresight, just look at the events of the last month. Why would they start their landscaping project just one month prior to Septemberfest? On Sept. 8, they will have one of two things. They will have either a mud hole or a dust bowl. This shows a complete lack of concern for the visiting artists and for Los Manos who sponsors the celebration. The landscaping itself was poorly conceived and engineered to the point of blocking off drainage patterns that had been in effect since the streets were curbed!

The resultant lake on "K" Street following the first rain, necessitated destroying a major portion of the landscaping. Major changes will be required before the area can be relandscaped. If the board of trustees were running their own business with the same thoroughness that they run the Museum of the Southwest, they would no longer be leaders in the community. Why would they even consider tearing down an asset on a property on which they can't rebuild, rather than selling it to an individual?

Can we allow a Midland landmark that could be functional part of the community to be hastily removed based on the questionable judgement of such a small number of individuals?

Will architect's work be lost forever?

In June, when I saw glimpses of Lancaster House, in London, the location of the Economic Summit on the newscasts, I thought how ironic it was that plans had been made in Midland to tear down our own Lancaster House.

Many people have written about Naomi Lancaster's unparalleled contribution to the artistic and cultural life of Midland, and how she made her home and time available to so many people, so many causes. Others have written about the excellent uses which Mrs. Lancaster and the Penn family planned for this charming, well-constructed house, for which Midland has a great need.

My concern is that Lancaster House is a fine and important example of architect Joe Black's work. Mr. Black was a skillful architect and gifted artist, and as an outstanding example of his work, Lancaster House merits preservation.

Younger residents of Midland may not know that the house at 901 Cuthbert Street, and now owned by Arlen Degars, was designed by Mr. Black and won a national design award, first place for small houses, in 1929. The Episcopal Church of the Holy Trinity on West Illinois is a Joe Black design; the additions by Frank Welch continue in the same style and spirit. The former Unitarian Church on North "A" with its fish-shaped floor plan was a Joe Black design. When the Midland Air Terminal building, also by Joe Black, was built, Midlanders were justly proud of its elegant design.

Some time soon, architectural historians will study Midland's domestic and public buildings, and the work of its architects and builders. How sad it will be that many structures will be recorded only in photographs and memories! What will we say if we are asked, "Where is Lancaster House?" Will we, in sorrow, only be able to point to an expanse of grass?

Small pledges could help maintain house

My wife, Jann, and my son, Mark, join me in wishing to express a desire to pledge to the Lancaster House on a yearly basis, if needed. We would like to encourage other families to do the same.

We are not wealthy people, but should pledges of this type be helpful, we would be happy as a family to do this and I feel sure other families would and could do the same. Many small family gifts could add up to big dollars.

The only restriction we would request would be that our small funds be used for the Lancaster House only and not for the Museum of the Southwest because through the years we felt when we gave to the museum at Septemberfest, etc., that Lancaster House was a part of the museum and when you helped support one, you helped the other.

We are still shocked that the Museum of the Southwest Board of Directors would ever consider destroying such a cultural and historical building. This town has too many people who remember dear Mrs. Lancaster and who would want to preserve her home as a historic building as well as a center for some type of cultural activity for the community.

Lancasters helped Midland to grow

The case of the Lancaster House is a very important subject in Midland. I do not feel it should be torn down after all the Lancaters have done for Midland.

The Lancasters helped Midland to grow and become the city it now is. Lynn Lancaster helped Midland to grow physically. Naomi Lancaster was more involved in the arts. Mrs. Lancaster was a forerunner of almost all recreation in Midland. She helped establish the Midland Community Theatre and the Midland Council of Garden Clubs. She also helped the Museum of the Southwest grow.

In 1970, Mrs. Lancaster was getting old. She had heard of the Museum of the Southwest's expansion plans. She decided to donate her house to them. Mrs. Lancaster wanted her house to be useful and wanted her doors to always remain open to the public.

I hope the museum board members realize her dream and change their minds. Besides, the house adds a touch of nostalgia to Midland.

Labor Day opportunity to salute American workers

By William Randolph Hearst Jr.
Editor-in-Chief, The Hearst Newspapers

Hearst

NEW YORK — Tomorrow's Labor Day is a truly national holiday, a day all Americans should salute a labor force of men and women who have contributed so much to the nation's healthy economy. We also should be thankful it provides a three-day weekend for millions who otherwise would not enjoy such a luxury.

The Labor Day idea was first put forth more than 100 years ago. In 1882 a group of American workers known as the Knights of Labor suggested that the first Monday of September be set aside as a respite from work. The idea did not catch on immediately. After all, those were the days when it was taken for granted that factory workers would stay on the job for 12 or more hours after the morning whistle blew, and many worked seven days a week.

But when it did catch on, it spread like wildfire. Oregon in 1887 was the first state to declare September's first Monday as Labor Day. In due time all the other states joined with considerable enthusiasm. As a matter of fact, it is now an international holiday, as our Canadian neighbors to the north celebrate it also. And as everyone knows, the labor movement has made tremendous gains during this past century.

This year the Labor Day weekend marks the transition period between the first stage of the presidential campaign, and the second and final stage. It may be hard to believe, but Election Day is only two short months away.

The first stage included the two conventions, and considerable sparring about issues such as taxes and deficits. After Labor Day the sparring will be over and the real fighting will begin. The Reagan-Bush team will attempt to maintain the rather substantial lead the polls say it has. On the Democratic side the Mondale-Ferraro campaigners will attempt to close that gap. As the battle is joined look for more details in this report in the next two months.

Just this past week we were told by the Labor Department that business productivity jumped 4.7 percent in the second quarter of 1984. That is the biggest percentage growth since the second quarter of last year.

We have had a reviving economy for nearly two years after about 18 months of recession. This dramatic upturn is due to the cooperative efforts of labor, management and a thrift-minded government.

We have known for some time that one of the reasons for Japan's economic progress was its pioneering in getting these three groups — employees, employers and government — to work together for a common cause. They are allies, not adversaries, and therein lies a lesson we in the United States seem to have learned. John Chamberlain summed it up well in a recent column for The Hearst Newspapers. He wrote:

"There is a new attitude abroad in the land as workers and their bosses, with apprehensive looks over their shoulders at the Japanese, have begun to treat their efforts as a cooperative venture."

So on Labor Day let us salute the contributions of America's working men and women. And those interested in the place of women in government might recall that a woman by the name of Frances Perkins headed the United States Department of Labor from 1933 to 1945.

So have a relaxed weekend and if you must move around — drive carefully.

Local Jaycees will vote to change bylaws

By RHONDA RIGENHAGEN
Staff Writer

"It is for man to establish the reign of liberty in the midst of the world of the given. To gain the supreme victory, it is necessary for one thing, that by and through their natural differentiation men and women unequivocally affirm their brotherhood."

— Simone de Beauvoir.

Within four to six weeks, Midland Jaycees will affirm their brotherhood — or is that siblinghood? — with women when they vote to admit female members.

"There really isn't any question, those bylaws are going to be changed" to say "person" where references now read "man," according to Jaycee President Glenn Jennings. "That effectively opens the membership to men and women."

The decision comes as a result of similar action taken at the national level. The Supreme Court ruled in July that states with public accommodation laws could force the Jaycees to admit women. The U.S. Jaycees, after spending close to $1 million fighting the crusade, voted Aug. 16 to amend its constitution to include women, Jennings said.

The Texas chapter opened its membership the same day, and some women have already been accepted into the organization.

About 30 states, Texas not among them, prohibit sex discrimination in places of public accommodation. That includes such places as restaurants and, the court ruled, the Jaycees.

"Jaycees has historically been a man's organization," Jennings noted, "and many, many men felt our Constitution guarantees freedom of association. But the Midland Jaycees need to conform, so we have formed a committee which will report at the next board meeting Sept. 10."

After board approval, members will receive notice of intent to change the laws. Two weeks later the proposal will be put to a vote at a general meeting. "It's not going to be fought and everybody in our chapter realizes we have to make these changes," Jennings said.

Local chapters are not required to admit women, he added, but "are on real shaky ground if they don't go along with it." If sued, they would not be supported by the state or national organizations and could have their charters revoked, he added.

"I have talked to a number of women who said they were interested (in joining the local organization). I expect, I hope we do have some women joining our chapter. I think the chapter will benefit."

"Our intent as a leadership training organization has not changed," stated the president of the Texas Jaycees, which has 200 local chapters. Nationwide, the organization

All laborers under certain amount of stress in jobs

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

"Our job is kind of equated with playing chess with pieces of dynamite. One bad move and they can blow up in your face."

That statement, made by Federal Aviation Administration area supervisor Ed Stevens, doesn't reflect a common situation for the majority of today's workforce, but it may have crossed a couple of minds when called into the boss' office on a Friday afternoon.

While the worst employment situations for many are limited to misplaced files, discarded but pertinent information, abusive phone calls, erroneous addition and cold coffee, stress plays a role in everyone's life.

That's why most employees won't go to work Monday.

Thanks to good ol' Uncle Sam, they instead are allowed a day of rest to stay at home and wrestle with the leaky plumbing system, ripped window screens and other mundane household chores put off all summer.

They also have the options of listening to the kids gripe about their new teachers, arguing about Southwest Conference football polls or gathering by the pool for one last swimming party and keg of beer (until next weekend).

Or they can hit the highways to see relatives, wince into the sun's reflection on the melting asphalt and anxiously scan ahead for highway patrolmen and weaving drivers.

It's Labor Day, folks, and it's one last chance to soak in relaxation on the day of the week we usually sweat out.

FOR SOME it's a chance to be free of nagging projects and coworkers. A chance at rising late on a Monday morning and pulling on a T-shirt and a pair of shorts. A day of rest from the tedious schedule to which everyone so strictly and unselfishly adheres.

Surgeons are under tremendous pressure — one slip of the scalpel and that's all she wrote. But so are lawyers, bankers, high tech corporation presidents, publishers, city officials, city officials trying to make Midland-Odessa work better together, cable television company repairmen, fast-food restaurant managers, animal control officers, FDIC liquidators, Amway distributors and strike negotiators.

Air traffic controllers have long been known to have one of the most stressful occupations. But they also have $30,000 beginning salaries plus 10 to 15 percent hikes for working holidays (like Monday), nights and weekends.

Salaries not withstanding, the constant radio contact with pilots only the controllers can understand would wear on anyone's nerves. Especially when one plane is waiting on the runway, one is taxiing off the runway and another one is coming in. And another one lines up while one takes off and another one holds. And another one is spotted on the radar, flanked by two others going different ways.

Cody Bell/Reporter-Telegram

Mark Gardner, air traffic control specialist at Midland Regional Air Terminal, is one of many Midlanders with stressful jobs.

"THIS IS LIGHT," Stevens said last week when he and another radio controller were working about five planes each. "There'll be times when we're working 10 to 15 planes each."

At Midland Regional Airport, the air traffic controllers are running 350 to 425 operations (take-offs and landings) per day. But when the Permian Basin Oil Show begins in October, air traffic doubles.

There are a lot of numbers, code names, flight data and altitude statistics that the air traffic controllers must keep in their heads at all times. Because of the pressure, they try to take breaks every 1½ to 2 hours. But at least now, with their new tower which is accessible by elevator, they don't have to run up and down 113 steps for a snack.

"We offer to blow it up every day," Stevens said with a smile, glancing toward the old tower when asked what its future holds.

It would be a good way to eliminate stress, anyway.

STOCKBROKERS, those three-piece suited men and sophisticated dressed-for-success women who stand on the crowded floor aggressively making their bids must have a stressful life. Or painful feet. Or both.

But Bobby Crues, a broker with Eppler Guerin & Turner, Inc. said the men and women working the New York Stock Exchange are used to a life like that.

"It takes years and years of apprenticeship before you ever get there," he said. "Most of them have to start as teen-agers and work as pages. Those people that live up there are paced for it. They live a totally different life."

In Midland, it's a little slower.

"The phone is the major tool in this business," Crues said. And the phone, no matter how therapeutic, cannot be yanked out and hurled across the room in frustration with an inexperienced, overly-cautious or fickle client.

"Part of it is hand-holding," Crues admitted, adding education plays a big part in some of his dealings with clients new to the stock market. "You just be patient."

Perhaps one of the most frustrating aspects of being a broker is dealing with laymen who think they know more than the professional whom they are paying.

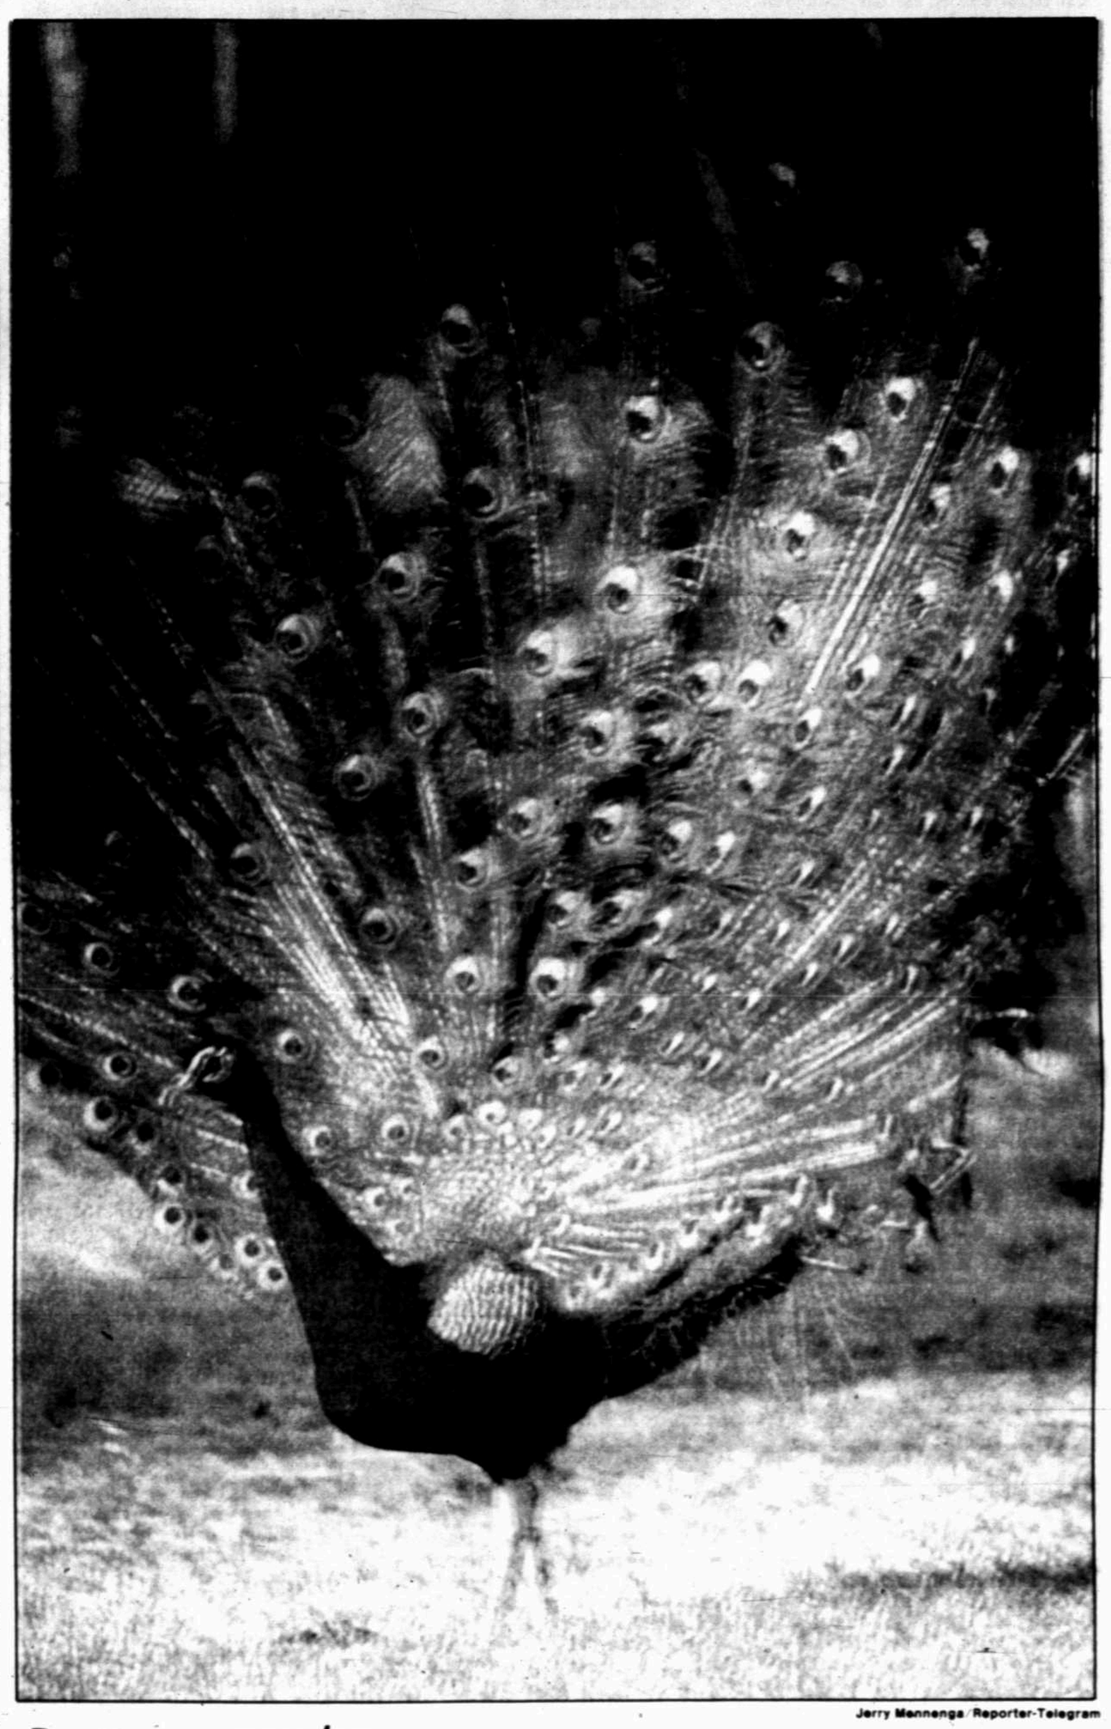

BUT THE MOST stressful time is when the market shuts down due to panic and dramatic declines in prices following extreme national or world events.

The one that immediately comes to mind is the assassination of John F. Kennedy.

"The number one thing on people's minds is to sell," Crues said.

Competition in the business is fierce, he said. Most educate themselves with a splattering of finance, economics and marketing. "And a little psychology doesn't hurt either," he said, laughing.

City manager likes challenge of job

James Brown

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

"We have 95,000 stockholders and they all live in town. They're not reticent to tell us when we screw up."

It's one of the many James Brown Laws of City Government, an unwritten stack of maxims devised by Midland's city manager over the course of his 21 years in that position.

Brown has run the city since he took over in early 1963. He had stepped into the position of assistant city manager in October 1962 and the city manager then retired. It was Brown's first look at city government, coming from the private sector.

"I've been both places," he can say confidently. "We do as well or better than most companies. I believe that we control our expenditures and look after our responsibilities as well or better than the private sector."

Brown had graduated from the University of Michigan with degrees in business, and moved to Midland where he became involved in the oil business with his father-in-law. Fourteen years into the job, "the oil business hit the doldrums." His father-in-law died and the business closed. Brown tried real estate and then a friend recommended him for the city job.

"I like the challenge of the job," he said. "It's ever changing. Every day is almost a new ballgame."

He can describe the job in a series of maxims:

GARY OTT

It's hard to know who to root for in Iran vs. Iraq

There's a war going on between Iran and Iraq and for the life of me I can't decide which team to pull for.

I say "team" because I view war much like a baseball game. I study the two participants, determine who I want to win and then hoot and holler for them during the CBS Nightly News, starring Dan Rather as Howard Cosell.

The problem with the Iran-Iraq confrontation, however, is that after careful consideration I still can't decide who I want to win.

Face it, neither has much going for it.

Let's examine the situation:

First Iran. Say what you want about the virtues of forgiveness, but I still hold a grudge against the little thugs for taking 52 Americans hostage and then having the audacity to rub our noses in the dirt once they decided to released them. Making matters worse, that was 444 days later. Then again, I suppose we should be thankful for small miracles. At least the hostages were alive.

The point is, I couldn't pull for the Iranians if they were the only participants in your basic Tiddly-Winks Olympics. The foul taste just won't go away.

Fine, you might be saying. Root for Iraq.

Can't. So far as I can tell it's closely identified with Russia and despite my limousine liberal leanings, I can't bring myself to have much sympathy for the Soviet's repressive regime. Granted, I didn't find the humor in Reagan's recent joke about bombing Russia (call me a sour puss), but still, I'm not overly fond of its aged hierarchy, either.

So where does that leave us?

I'll tell you where. Trouble, that's where.

We've got us a full-fledged war going on and nobody to wave the flag for. A newspaper headline screams, "Iranian pilot defects to Iraq" and we don't know if we should celebrate with another long-neck or curse a lot and worry about the future of mankind.

They tell me oil is mixed up in this somehow. Great, if I owned a few hundred shares of Exxon I might have a better idea of who's wearing the white hat in this fancy little get-together.

But I don't. And I'm still confused.

Another thing that bothers me (Do I sound like Andy Rooney?) about this particular war is its location. The desert. Have you any idea what's in the desert? Sand, that's what. The same kind of coarse white stuff that used to get in your swimming trunks when you were at the beach.

Who needs the itchy irritation? Or, for that matter, who needs this war?

Certainly not America. We've got all we can say grace over just protecting our shores from the evil forces brewing in places like Grenada.

So let's pass on this one. Just sit it out all together. The camels and religious fanatics can get along just fine without us, or our F-16s (or whatever it is we're always shipping off to some obscure country).

OK, OK, you're right. That's a very shortsighted view. We should be concerned about what happens in other regions of the world, especially the Middle East, because in the end it all comes back to haunt us.

Which gets us back to the baseball game.

Best I can figure, it's the bottom of the ninth and Iraq leads 7-6. Iran has runners on second and third with two outs. And here's the pitch ...

STRESS

While each stockbroker finds his or her own way to cope with stress, some methods are probably universal

"I was born biting my fingernails," Crues said.

Paramedics, who must deal with saving lives on a 24-hour basis, must also be concerned about their own.

It is not unusual for the ambulance to arrive before police at the scene of a domestic disturbance involving a weapon.

"You're kind of torn about your own safety," said Dean Williams, Midland Deputy Fire Chief. "You're looking for the gun or knife and you're seeing the victim there needing immediate help. You run two thoughts through your head."

As a former paramedic and head of the Midland County Emergency Medical Service, Williams knows first hand the stress his men deal with on a daily basis.

"STATISTICS SHOW in larger cities, paramedic burnout is a big problem," he said. "We try to have enough (personnel) so that you can rotate them between the fire department and the EMS. If we can put them back on the firetruck for a few days, it seems to eliminate it a little."

That makes sense — take a break and fight a fire.

Williams laughed. By wearing two hats, he said, the employees don't get bored with one job.

On a serious note, Williams said the department's exercise program has helped alleviate much of the stress involved with either job. But some feelings and emotions must be talked out.

"I think everyone remembers losing their first patient," he said. His was a 21-year-old man who died in a borrow ditch following a traffic accident.

"I had a boy almost that age," he said. "When you can associate with it, it really bothers you."

Another fatality he remembers too vividly was that of an 8- or 9-year-old girl, mowed down while walking in a school crossing zone.

"She was there crying and she didn't seem to be that hurt," he said. "But obviously, she had bad internal injuries. We took her to the hospital and she died that afternoon.

"From then on, I said I was going to approach each one of them as if they were all critical," he said.

DOCTORS AND NURSES play a big role in helping paramedics understand that the loss of a life was not their fault, Williams said. Having reassurance that they proceeded properly is sometimes the only way one can cope with the tragedy.

"The stress comes from wondering if you did the right thing," Williams said.

There is a final stressful situation which everyone has either gone through or put someone else through.

Having a new baby, who happens to be one month old today, is no easy task, according to Beth Jordan. Especially when she's continuing her 16-year career at Henry Engineering and is married to William David Jordan, a Lee High School sophomore football and junior varsity basketball coach.

This isn't a good time of the year to have a coach for a husband.

"I don't have one," she said, laughing. "But that means no cooking so it's not all bad."

Having gone through the pregnancy with daughter Brittany, now 4, Mrs. Jordan thought baby Bonnie would be easier. She, of course, was wrong.

"I HAD THE easiest pregnancy," she admitted. "I wasn't sick and I needed the money, so I kept working."

Her last day of work was a Friday and she became the mother of two the next Thursday.

"We'd had all this planned with almost four years between them so I don't think it'll be that bad," she said. But there was a little of the normal sibling jealousy.

"At first it bothered Brittany having someone come in and get all the attention. But now she's mother's helper."

That out of the way, Mrs. Jordan can proceed with her own plans, such as going back to work at the end of September and hiring a housekeeper to look after the children.

While the feedings are time- and sleep-consuming now, Mrs. Jordan said she hopes that that, too, will change in the coming month.

"I hope by the time I go back to work, she's sleeping most of the night."

Students give teacher her vitality

By RHONDA RIGENHAGEN
Staff Writer

It has been said the light that burns twice as bright shines half as long. But Lena Mae Wyatt, who will be 93 come Valentine's Day, seems to have been burning the candle at both ends all her life.

She began teaching more than 70 years ago and still tutors several students, some of them children of former pupils. "I have no plans to quit," she said.

"I just praise the Lord all the time that as old as I am my eyesight and my mind are good enough to do it." As if to demonstrate her vision and reflexes were still satisfactory, she chose that moment to flick a swatter and adroitly kill a fly that had landed on the table.

Looking much younger than her 92 years, she reminds one — both in appearance and mental astuteness — of Agatha Christie's famed amateur detective Jane Marple. Slender, white-haired and spectacled, she could be anyone's grandmother.

A resident of Trinity Towers, Mrs. Wyatt is self-sufficient in her own apartment, where she teaches mathematics primarily to high school students. She credits her pupils with keeping her healthy and exuberant. "They're just tonic to me. I really enjoy it."

Lena Mae Wyatt

After earning a teaching certificate at Hardin-Simmons University in 1912, she taught for five years before marrying her husband, A.W. Wyatt, also an educator. "I was 24½ — at that time that meant you were an old maid. I just kept putting it off and putting it off because I was having such a good time."

Together with another teacher, they operated a school in New Mexico. After moving to Midland 50 years ago, during World War I, Mrs. Wyatt began working as a substitute teacher.

"They called me and told me it was my public duty to substitute for them. I taught all the time because of the shortage of teachers. I sometimes had to work six months at a time" for $5 a day.

"I never did have any trouble with discipline when I did substitute teaching. There were always a few who knew me, and boy did they get quiet," she reminisced.

"She has the unique ability to instill into the pupil's mind a desire to want to learn," Mrs. Wyatt's daughter commented. "That's the quality of a great teacher."

One might think new math would have posed a problem for someone from the old school, but Mrs. Wyatt said she just picked up a book and learned it on her own. "If you have any sense, it's no trouble whatever to get into it."

She continued working as a substitute for 25 years. "You're not supposed to, but I think I taught until I was 75," until she decided it was curtailing her social life. "I believe in living while you're alive," she said assertively.

Now — in addition to being secretary of the Over 90 Club, frequenting the symphony and participating in activities at Trinity Towers — she tutors students of all ages. "I taught one grandmother who was 55 years old, and she wanted to go back to school and take college algebra. She made an A all the way straight through and made the highest score possible on the final exam.

"The children ask why they can do things with me they can't do in school. It's because I know they can do it."

Children today don't comprehend the basics of mathematics as well as they did when she first entered the field of education, Mrs. Wyatt said.

"I worry all the time how test scores are just going down and down. We need more good math teachers. The companies get them. There's very few that teach. I tell you, a good teacher is a prize."

Judge won't stop water release

AUSTIN (AP) — State District Judge Harley Clark has refused to halt the release of water from Lake Texana to relieve drought conditions affecting a coastal bay and estuary system.

The Lavaca-Navidad River Authority notified the Texas Water Commission that the releases began at 5 p.m. Friday.

Although Clark refused to grant the river authority's request to halt the release, he said he would hear arguments Thursday on another request to block it.

Larry Soward, chief hearing examiner for the Water Commission, told the Austin American-Statesman that by Thursday, most or all of the water in question should be released.

The Water Commission on Wednesday ordered the release of 10,000 acre-feet of Lake Texana water over the next five to seven days.

The reservoir holds an estimated 165,000 acre-feet. An acre-foot is 325,851 gallons.

JAYCEES

boasts 270,000 members and 7,000 chapters.

When asked if they would like to merge with the Jaycees, the Texas Jaycee Women voted to remain a separate entity. "The Midland Jaycee Women will continue to exist as an auxiliary organization," Jennings said.

"This is the most significant thing to happen to the Jaycees in many, many years," he added. "I don't think it's going to have a big effect on the Jaycees. I think it's just going to make us more effective."

BROWN

— "You're dealing with people all the time and I like people. You always wonder what you can do with your life and what good you can do for people."

— "There is no organization in this community that is your life as much as this city. From the time you get up in the morning until you go to bed at night, your life is affected by the city." He outlines the encounters, starting with flushing the toilet and hoping the water and sewer system works, to traveling city streets, going through city traffic lights, walking on city sidewalks. "Look at all the opportunities you have for us to mess up. We're not perfect."

— "My predecessor said once you've worked in the city you'll never be happy with it. You'll always see things that need to be done. I go out to dinner at night and see something that needs to be fixed."

"I have an open-door policy. Sometimes when you're sitting at the top of the heap things don't filter that far up."

As city manager, Brown has found himself "in on almost everything. There's very little that transpires in the community without your knowing about it." He's talked to others who have left city government for private business and their single complaint about the new job has been: "It was just too slow."

The boom of the late 1970s and early 1980s kept city employees "at a dog trot." Now, with the economic slowdown, the city staff has had time to sit down and do some planning, he said. "Our goal is to see if we can do it better and do it cheaper," Brown said, pulling out another maxim.

But he also knows that, unlike the private sector, the city government must provide certain services that are money-losers. "What business for profit would take on a parks system," Brown said. "Or a police department? These don't make money."

Several years ago, Brown discovered that the government could run without his every day direction when he was diagnosed as having cancer. But he also found out at the same time how the employees could pull together to support him and keep the city going.

He had a lump removed from his neck on a Friday morning and that afternoon was told it was cancerous. He told the staff on Monday. The City Council told him not to worry about the time he would miss while at M.D. Anderson Hospital in Houston.

"I was a little down and I needed that. I've always been religious and I turned the problem over to the Lord," Brown said with a smile.

When he returned from the hospital, he was warned not to work more than four or five hours a day, but he plugged onward to eight. "I was so terribly weak. I would go to the YMCA every day and lift weights, trying to build up my arms where they gave me intraveneous drugs."

The city stayed on an even keel. "Fred Poe (deputy city manager) kept it going. Things didn't slip a minute."

With plans to retire in January 1985, Brown can look back on his career and begin to see things which stand out. He recalls sitting in his office on the third floor at City Hall and thinking up the idea to use Dumpsters in the residential areas. He started it on a trial basis and other neighborhoods began clamoring for theirs. Once initiated throughout the city, "the system paid for itself in four years time."

Then there's the initial construction of City Hall and its recent two-floor addition, the Midland Regional Airport upgrading, new Central Fire Station, new water treatment plant. "You never reach the end. It's one project after another."

But he's never been able to see a project to completion without at least one complaint from someone. To Brown, that's a part of the job.

"I think we do things pretty well — not perfect," he said, pulling out another Brown's Law of City Government. "Sometimes we have goofed up and we try to rectify the problem. We always have room for improvement."

People of our community who make a difference.

Edwin Magruder, Jr.

Midland is fortunate to have a tradition of good clean city government, according to past mayor Edwin Magruder, Jr. This tradition is carried on by Midlanders who are generous with their time, resources, and expertise. Mr. Magruder is one of those dedicated citizens who has conscientiously served Midland in a number of elected offices.

Mr. Magruder believes, "Local government should provide a healthy economic climate, as well as a clean family-oriented environment." Mr. Magruder has helped Midland achieve both of these goals.

Mr. Magruder's first civic task was with the Planning and Zoning Commission. He diligently served on that commission for six years, during the boom time of the fifties. During that time, proper zoning not only helped maintain a good environment for families, but also provided for business expansion in Midland.

Following his time on the Planning and Zoning Commission, Mr. Magruder served as a city councilman from 1963 to 1967 and as mayor from 1968 to 1972. Mr. Magruder was looking to Midland's future and recognized the need to find new water supplies for the city. He helped negotiate an agreement with the Colorado River Municipal Water District. This agreement established Midland as a customer and future member of the water district.

Mr. Magruder also worked to attract new and diversified industries to Midland. Mr. Magruder points out that the industries can profit from the managerial skills of Midlanders and Midland's economy can benefit from diversification.

Mr. Magruder is also concerned about the health needs of our growing community. In 1977 he was elected to the first board of directors of the Midland County Hospital District. He worked to assure Midlanders that they would have an up to date medical acute care facility. Mr. Magruder served on that board through April 1983.

In addition to serving in these elected offices and on the Planning and Zoning Commission, Mr. Magruder has served on the board of the YMCA and the Museum of the Southwest and as president of the Buffalo Trail Council. He has also been active in the Chamber of Commerce, Casa De Amigas, and the Salvation Army.

He is truly dedicated to making Midland a wonderful place for families, because his most rewarding experience has been working with his wife to raise their three daughters.

Foresight, planning, and performance are why Edwin Magruder, Jr. makes a difference in Midland.

The difference is performance.

Guest speaker for the session in Ranchland Hills Country Club will be Ernest Angelo Jr., reporting on the Republican National Convention for which he served as arrangements chairman.

Imhoff served as a city councilman from 1975 to 1978 in Forest Park, Ohio. He also served as vice mayor, chairman of the Law Committee, chairman of the Juvenile Court Special Committee, president of the Community Improvement Corporation and a member of the City Planning and Housing Commission.

He is vice president of human resource development at Elcor Corporation and has more than 20 years experience as a human resource executive in manufacturing, chemicals, retailing and banking. Previous experience included executive positions with the J.L. Hudson Company, General Electric Company, Diamond Shamrock Corporation and the Federal Reserve Bank of Cleveland.

Tractor thefts can be stopped

Kiker

With tractor thefts a major problem in rural areas today, farmers can take certain steps to hinder thieves. These include removing the rotar, shutting off the fuel line, locking the tractor in gear, chaining the wheels and keeping a close watch on the machine or hiding it.

The mid-year cattle inventory startled many analysts, but the July report of cattle on feed was encouraging. The inventory showed total cattle and calf numbers down by only 1 percent, a conservative estimate in the wake of drought conditions over much of the nation during the first part of 1984. At the same time, the July report shows a 5 percent drop in feedlot placements during the second quarter of the year. Fed cattle prices should display some gradual strength in the near future and feeder prices also should move upward due to tighter supplies.

Firewood cut now will be dry by the time cold weather rolls around. Dry firewood produces more heat and burns faster than freshly cut wood. Stack wood off the ground, in an open area to allow air cirrculation and cover to keep it dry. When buying firewood, know the difference between a standard cord of wood and a "face" cord. A standard cord is a stack 4 feet wide by 4 feet high and 8 feet long. A face cord is a stack 4 feet high and 8 feet long, but the pieces are only 18 to 24 inches long, making it only one-third to one-half standard cord.

LETTER FROM COLLEGE

Classes start Tuesday; Howdy Week designated

By H.A. TUCK

Classes start Tuesday for Midland College's 16th fall semester, with almost 3,000 students already signed up for credit courses at the end of registration Thursday.

All college offices will be closed Monday on Labor Day.

Late registration also begins Tuesday for persons who wish to sign up for classes. The process is handled in the Office of Student Services in the Administration Building between 8 a.m.-8 p.m. Tuesday through Thursday and 8 a.m.-5 p.m. on Friday.

Those planning to take a full-time course load of up to five classes must register not later than Tuesday, Sept. 11. Last day to sign up for one to three classes is Thursday, Sept. 19.

By the time late registration concludes, about 3,400 students are expected to be attending classes this fall.

• • •

The first week is designated as "Howdy Week" to greet new students and acquaint them with MC's tradition for friendliness.

Ten mystery people — students, faculty or staff — will be waiting for the sixth student who says "howdy" to them. That student gets a prize-winning letter.

In the Student Center on Tuesday, there will be an Ice Cream Breaker with free ice cream from 11 a.m. until 1 p.m. and an ice cream eating contest at 11:30 a.m. and 12:30 p.m.

On Wednesday, students can enjoy free lemonade, plus a "Lemon Trivia" game.

The Howdy Week activities close on Thursday at 7 p.m. with a student-faculty hamburger social, plus a performance by the MC Roadrunner Band, playing their well-known style of country and western music.

Howdy Week activities are planned by the Student Activities Office, with a lot of help from the Student Senate and Rodeo Club.

A native Midlander, Pickett taught at MC for several years before going to New York City. He now lives in Georgetown, Texas. We hope you can stop by during the reception Saturday.

Gallery hours are 8 a.m.-10 p.m. Monday through Thursday, 8 a.m.-5 p.m. on Friday, 10 a.m.-5 p.m. on Saturday and 1-5 p.m. on Sunday.

When some of the younger Automotive Technology students arrive for class Tuesday, they are going to be excited about a new acquistion...a new 1984 red Pontiac Fiero. But it's only to be looked at and worked on, not driven.

The auto was donated to MC by Friendly Pontiac. It was one of several new cars damaged when a train derailed near El Paso. Those which were mechanically sound, but couldn't be repaired easily, have been donated to a number of Texas community colleges.

• • •

If you enjoy singing or playing a musical instrument, there are quite a number of performing groups at MC that would like to enlist your talents. These groups include both traditional students and community residents.

You can take your choice of any of these and register the first night of rehearsal. The Day Chorale has its first meeting at 11 a.m. Wednesday, while the Evening Chorale begins practice at 7 p.m. on Thursday. The College Community Band is to meet on Tuesdays at 7 p.m. starting Sept. 11. The College Community Orchestra will rehearse at 4 p.m. on Sundays, starting Sept. 9. The College Community Jazz Ensemble starts its practice at 8 p.m. Sunday, Sept. 9.

For more information, you can call the Fine Arts Division at 684-7851, extension 202.

UTPB to offer class on musical

West Texans who enjoy music, theater or both, may have a special treat in store this fall when the University of Texas of the Permian Basin offers a course called Music 319. Students who sign up for the class will receive three college credits, an in-depth study of the American musical theater, a better understanding of the role music has played in history and three days and two nights of roaming the theaters on Broadway in New York.

Students taking the course on American Musical Theater will be given insights into the lives and personalities of George and Ira Gershwin, George M. Cohen, Stephen Sondheim and other pioneers of early 20th century music, as well as learning about the music and lyrics of Oklahoma, My Fair Lady and other historical Broadway classics.

Classes begin Sept. 10 and will meet from 5:40-7 p.m. each Monday. On Oct. 25 the students will fly to New York and stay at the Milford Plaza Hotel. They will be given tickets to two Broadway shows of their choice: "Chorus Line," "Dream Girls," "My One and Only," "Cats" or 25 other shows.

Cost of the trip will be $599, based on double occupancy, and includes air fare, hotel accomodations and show tickets. It does not include tuition.

Deadline for registration is Sept. 17. Further information is available from Dr. Engebretson at 367-2361.

MC enrollment up over last year

When classes at Midland College resume Tueaday, there will 4percent more students than at the same time last year.

Late registration opens Tuesday with a Sept. 11 deadline for students who wish to take up to five courses. Those who wish to sign up for three classes or less may do so until Sept. 19.

The Office of Student Services, located in the administration building, will be open for late registration from 8 a.m.-8 p.m. Tuesday through Thursday and from 8 a.m.-5 p.m. Friday. All college offices will be closed Monday for Labor Day.

MC hosting health care program

For workers in the critical care health field, Midland College is hosting a 30-hour review session scheduled for 4-10 p.m. Nov. 12-16.

The program teaches critical care concepts to prospective and new critical care staff as well as augmenting and updating the knowledge of practicing critical care staff. It serves both as an in-depth review of critical care nursing concepts and a review for nurses wishing to sit for the Critical Care Registered Nurse (CCRN) certifying exam offered by the American Association of Critical Care Nurses (AACN).

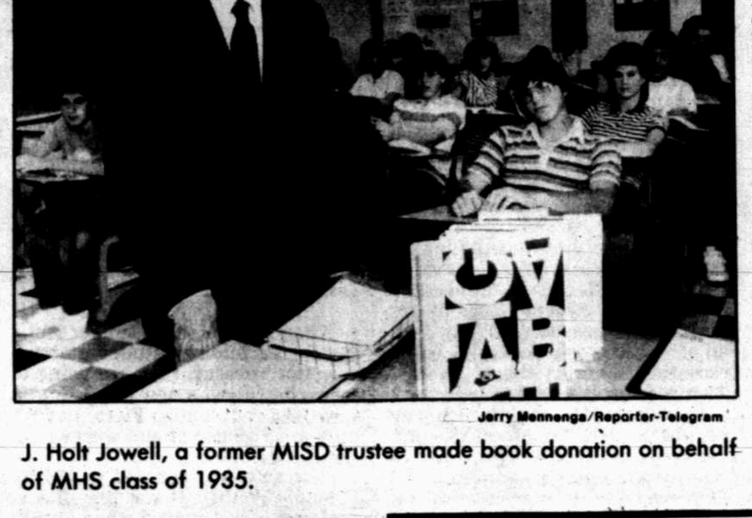

The AACN-CCRN program uses the nursing process approach and stresses pathophysiology and therapeutics. Systems covered over the five days are: respiratory, hematologic, neurologic, psychosocial, gastrointestinal, renal, endocrine and cardiovascular.

AACN's Core Curriculum will be used extensively during the program. Students are asked to bring a copy of the Curriculum.

Fee for the program is $175 which includes handouts, post-program study questions and refreshments. Students are expected to bring a bag supper.

Further information may be obtained by calling Dr. Eileen Piwetz at MC, 684-7851, ext. 273.

MHS class of 1923 contributes Saxon math books to school

Jerry Mennenga/Reporter-Telegram

J. Holt Jowell, a former MISD trustee made book donation on behalf of MHS class of 1935.

The Midland High School Class of 1923 recently contributed 65 Saxon Algebra textbooks to the Midland Independent School District. J. Holt Jowell, a former member of the MISD Board of Trustees, made the presentation on behalf of the 35-member class. Other members of the class living in Midland include Charlie Ethridge Armstrong, Eual Holman Donovan, Myrtle Whitmire Gollady, Evelyn Scarbrough Linebery and Johnny Roberts Lovelady.

Though not state-adopted, the Saxon book has been hailed as revolutionary by many educators and editorialists. The book guides students through mathematical concepts step by step while continuing to review what has already been covered so that students don't forget what they've learned. The books were first used on an experimental basis in 20 Oklahoma schools in 1981. Students in those schools reportedly excelled beyond expectation. This year thousands of schools, including Lee and Midland Freshman schools, will use the Saxon books.

UTPB senior to study at 'think tank'

Tim Moore of Midland, a senior political science major at the University of Texas of the Permian Basin, has been appointed a fellow of The Center for the Study of the Presidency. The Washington, D.C. "think tank" is devoted to the study and analysis of the policies and administrations of those men who have held the nation's highest office.

Moore, 22, is a graduate of Lee High School and attended Midland College for two years before enrolling at UTPB. As a fellow of The Center for the Study of the Presidency, he will be asked to write a paper on the topic, "Priorities and Strategies for 1985-1989." His studies in political science will serve as a pre-law foundation in preparation for attending law school upon graduation.

"I'm still up in the air about the exact direction my paper will take," Moore said. "A lot depends on whether the Democrats or the Republicans get the White House." The paper will be presented next April during a national meeting in the Capital. Moore said he expects to spend a great deal of time researching both Walter Mondale and Ronald Reagan as the elections draw nearer. "I'll be getting a lot of help from faculty members both at UTPB and Midland College," he said.

Moore is one of 24 students from colleges and universities across America to receive fellowships from the Center for the Study of the Presidency. The prestigious appointment follows a history of achievement for him. At MC he was president of the Student Activities Club, and at UTPB he is on the Persident's Honor Roll, Political Science Honor Society, has recieved the UTPB Merit Award and is president of the Political Science Association. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Victor E. Moore of Midland.

LOWERING CHOLESTEROL

For years, we have been hearing about the importance of reducing our intake of choesterol. A new government study has now confirmed it. If you change your diet, you may actually reduce your risk of heart attack. Those with abnormaly high blood-cholesterol levels can cut thier heart-attack risk in half by following a special diet combined with drug treatment. In the ten-year study of 3806 men aged 35 to 59 (all with abnormally high cholestrol levels),researchers gave half the subjects a cholestrol-lowering drug called cholestyramine. All followed low-cholesterol diets. the reults: For every 1% drop in cholestrol, there was a 2% fall in the risk of coronary heart disease.

Although the young West Texas wine industry shows great promise, it may have to face some sour grapes from fans of European wines, according to the founder and president of the International Wine Academy, Alan Young.

"They're forever going to be compared to wines of Europe," he said. The comparisons could have an impact on this area because "Midland is going to become a very important center for Texas wine," because of its proximity to West Texas vineyards.

Because Europeans are different than Texans, Young thinks the comparison between their two products is unfair.

"We are as different in our taste perceptions as we are in our facial appearances or pulse beat," he said. "If we were not, there would be only one restaurant menu and wine list.

"It's like the Superbowl. I saw the Superbowl the last time I was here," said Young, an Australian. "I saw the same game as 100 million people. Fifty million people were disappointed at how it came out, but they saw the same game as the other 50 million."

Young is the author of four books, "An Encounter with Wine," "Alan Young's Wine Guide," "Sensory Evaluation of Wine" and "Australian Wines and Wineries."

Please see TEXAS, Page 2E

TEXAS

He also conducted "Wine of the Week" programs for ABC Radio Perth and Melbourne in Australia. He has taught specialist wine courses for over 15 years.

Young was in Midland recently to conduct a seminar on "The Sensory Evaluation of Wine."

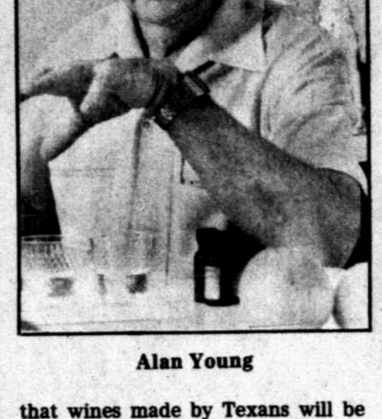

One of the main goals of Young's seminars is to teach "the idea that, because our senses are subjective, one person's opinion is as good as the next one's and there can be no objective judgement at all.

"There is no such thing as 'common taste;' we are all very different and if we train our senses ... we can become better appreciators of food and beverages, regardless of our cultural and family background."

For example, at seminars Young has conducted in Singapore, he said persons from that city's major ethnic groups interpreted the smell of bell peppers as that of a dish their people were most familiar with. Malays identified it as salted vegetables, Chinese as ground peppers and Indians as curry.

Young, since he was raised as a tea drinker, said he likes the "furry" taste of tannin, found in both strong tea and grape skins. On the other hand, he noted, Americans are raised to enjoy coffee, so they can stand tastes that Young finds terribly bitter.

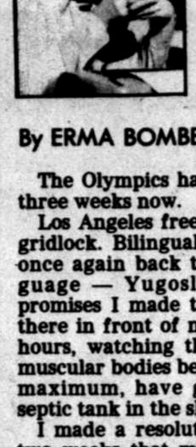

Because of such cultural differences, Young said it is inevitable that wines made by Texans will be different — but not necessarily better or worse — than those made by Europeans. He said many of the Texas wines he's tasted show great promise.

Alan Young

However, the Midland seminar had the smallest attendance of any he's given, Young said, which surprised him.

"The elevation of wine knowledge is going to be a prerequisite for Midland to play its rightful part."

AT WIT'S END

Olympians had 'right stuff'

By ERMA BOMBECK

The Olympics have been over for three weeks now.

Los Angeles freeways are back to gridlock. Bilingual cab drivers are once again back to their first language — Yugoslavian. And the promises I made to myself as I sat there in front of my TV set for 180 hours, watching those young, taut, muscular bodies being pushed to the maximum, have gone to that big septic tank in the sky.

I made a resolution during those two weeks that my entire life was going to change. I was going to challenge my body to do things it never thought were possible. Discipline was going to become a way of life. Pain would make me stronger and strengthen my character.

I made a schedule.

First, I was going to take all my hand-washables that I had stashed away for the last eight years (and which equal my body weight) and eventually build up to lifting them over my head and holding them there for 30 seconds.

Then I was going to run the 26 miles to the shopping center each day, stripped down to a pair of satin shorts, a sleeveless T-shirt and two major charge cards.

I geared the entire house toward fitness. In each door frame I put two hanging rings so that every time I went through them, I could hang in an iron cross. The clothes hamper had a hoop over it. I kept a stack of the kids' favorite albums and each day I planned to step inside of a circle, spin around until I nearly screwed my body into the ground and throw the album for as many yards as I could toss it.

The fact that none of this has worked out for me is not important. What is crucial here is that up until now I could never figure out why there were four years between each Olympiad. Naive little fool that I am, I thought it took the host country that long to build all the facilities needed for the events.

No, no. It takes four years to find a swim team that has the courage to get into a bathing suit with legs that go all the way up to the armpits.

How easy do you think it is to unearth six girls who can balance themselves on a 4-inch bar and hold in their stomachs at the same time?

I'm talking raw courage here. Oh sure, a lot of us have the right stuff. It's just in the wrong places.

Erma Bombeck is a columnist for News America Syndicate.

Plates prove popular

CHICAGO (AP) — More young adults are becoming plate collectors and the total number of collectors of all age groups has been rising greatly, according to a survey by Plate World magazine.

In 1983 in the United States alone, the number increased 7.1 percent, to bring the total to more than 6 million, reports the publication, which has polled its readership annually since 1979.

Right treatment of wines pays off in time

Copley News Service

The owner of the cellar hordes his cache of wine, waiting for the proper moment to open a bottle.

Finally, he decides his 50th birthday, or some such, is the proper time for an unveiling. Friends are invited, crystal is hauled out and the wine is opened with a flourish.

It is well past its prime — essentially undrinkable.

Probably as many "great" bottles of wine are ruined by mistreatment as are permitted to reach peak maturity. Good storage means cool, constant temperatures, little light and no vibration.

Moreover, the bottles should reside on their sides, so the wine keeps the cork moist and springy. Corks in bottles that stand upright in time dry out, shrink and let air inside the bottle, spoiling the wine.

Have you heard...?

By MARILYN McKNIGHT HARRISON

Ann and Russ Estes have returned from an 18-day automobile trip, which was highlighted by the 42nd amniversary reunion of Russ' World War II 320th Bomb Group held in Milwaukee, Wis.

Although this was the seventh reunion of the group, it marked the first for Russ, who was a lead pilot in the 442nd Squadron and part of the group which flew the B-26 Marauder. Russ had not seen any of the men since they flew together in Italy 42 years ago, but scrapbooks, photos and films recaptured memories of the time they spent together and helped them to get reacquainted.

In addition to nonstop visiting and reminiscing, the four-day reunion featured a memorial breakfast, a tour of Milwaukee, a dinner dance with Forties music by the Air Force Band and a bus trip to the nationally known Oshkosh Fly-In. Of particular interest to the men was a talk by Gen. Richard Goetze on "The Air Force Today." Departing with a feeling of having made lasting friendships, the Esteses already are anticipating next year's reunion in San Diego.

Following the reunion, they visited points of interest in Wisconsin and Minnesota, including the mining country in the northern part of the state and a Del Rio high school friend of Ann in Spicer before heading for the Badlands and Black Hills of South Dakota. They also visited in Lingle, Wyo., with one of Russ' service friends who was unable to attend the reunion.

En route home, they stopped off in Colorado at Estes Park, the ski areas of Dillon, Silverthorne and Vail, and lastly, the Royal Gorge. The couple traveled almost 5,000 miles and reported cool, comfortable weather almost the entire trip.

HATTIE MAE AND ROY JETER celebrated their 40th wedding anniversary with a cruise to Nassau in the Bahamas. They sailed Aug. 12, their anniversary date, on the Sunward II and enjoyed three relaxing days of sea and sun.

FOR GAYLE DODSON, her recent trip to England was like a dream come true. Accompanied by her husband, Doc; daughters, Kelly and Jamie, and her mother, Mrs. D.K. McMullan of San Angelo, she got to visit her pen pal of 33 years, Lesley Knight.

This wasn't the first meeting for the two women, who began corresponding in 1951 through "Playmate" magazine. They visited briefly in 1967 in London when Gayle and Doc were on a European tour. However, this time the two families got to spend nine days together and fulfilled Gayle's dream of visiting Lesley and her family in their home. They hope to be reunited in the not too distant future, but the next time on West Texas soil.

The Knight family, which includes husband Jack and teenage children, Tim and Rachel, lives in Sunderland, a seaport in Northeast England. The North Sea is only a five-minute walk from their house, and Gayle says it was one of the most exciting and beautiful sights of their trip.

The Knights entertained their guests with visits to the surrounding cities of Durham, Newcastle, York and Whitehaven in the gorgeous Lake District of England, and with a day's excursion by train to Edinburgh, Scotland. In Sunderland, Gayle particularly enjoyed a visit to Washington Old Hall, were George Washington's ancestors lived and which she describes as a great tribute to America. Gayle also enjoyed meeting members of Lesley's family, including her mother, sister and brother.

Prior to their Sunderland visit, the Dodson family spent two days in London, seeing the many places of interest.

THE FLOWERS FLOWN in from Hawaii for the wedding of former Midlander Sam Scott and Leanne Brooks this summer were spectacular, according to Sam's mother, Laura (Mrs. Tom) Scott. Thanks to the bride's mother, Carole Brooks, who lives in Honolulu, Rice Memorial Chapel in Houston was beautifully decorated with the colorful native flowers. Garlands of vanda orchids, which festooned the pews, were made into leis for the couple's mothers and grandmothers after the ceremony. The altar arrangement was fashioned of red Kahili ginger and bird of paradise blossoms with ti leaves. The bride carried a bouquet of white orchids, and her attendants wore leis of sweetly scented pikake in their hair.

The bride chose to wear Laura's wedding gown, which has an interesting history. During Laura's childhood in the World War II years, her grandmother presented her a war bond for the express purpose of buying a wedding dress. Many years later, Laura carried out her grandmother's wishes and was thrilled to see the dress worn again in her son's wedding.

The Rev. Derrill Manley of Lubbock, former associate rector at Episcopal Church of the Holy Trinity, was the officiating clergyman. Among the wedding guests were Derrill's wife, Cindy, and their children, and from Midland, Sarah and Russell Neisig and Wilda and Maurice Bullock.

Among the pre-nuptial festivities was a miscellaneous shower in Midland at the home of Joan (Mrs. Dick) Cramer. Co-hostesses were Mrs. Iris Englet, Heidi (Mrs. George) Goebel, Annette (Mrs. Bill) Mayne, and Fan (Mrs. Jimmy) Mowles.

After honeymooning in the Virgin Islands, the couple is at home in Houston. Leanne is studying toward her PhD in cellular studies at the UT-Houston Medical School, and Sam is working in real estate development. Both are 1983 graduates of Rice University.

FORMER RESIDENTS, Santa and Jesse Morales of Brownsville, were honored at a dinner party during a recent visit to Midland. Approximately 30 guests, including the honorees' children, Mary Jane and Adan Salgado of Midland, and Geralda Morales of Brownsville, enjoyed the festive evening at the home of Oralia and Jesse Corrales.

The couple resided here for 20 years. During that time, Jesse was employed with the Midland Police Department, as an investigator for the District Attorney's office, and as a private investigator and owner of Southwestern Security Services. He currently has offices both in Midland and Brownsville. Santa was active with the Headstart program, Christmas in April, Midland Action Centers, St. Jude Program, MHMR services and various other organizations while living in Midland.

DEAR ABBY

Pageant judges view beauty as skin deep

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I recently participated in the Miss Teen USA Pageant for our state. There were 70 of us — some were striking, some were cute, but there was one who was exceptionally beautiful. She also had a beautiful personality. Everyone simply fell in love with her. She was vivacious, friendly and totally giving. We all picked her as the sure winner.

Abby, she didn't even place! She was disqualified because of something she couldn't help. She wears a wig. When she was a child all her hair fell out (due to an illness), and it never grew back again.

I heard that the judges were all for her until they found out she wore a wig. I think this is grossly unfair. It looked so natural, none of us girls knew it until after the pageant was over.

One of the judges told her later that the contestants could not have anything "artificial" such as padded bras, wigs, etc. I can understand that, Abby. But this girl wasn't trying to put something over on anyone. She wore a wig because she had no hair.

What do you think? — RUNNER-UP

DEAR RUNNER-UP: I think it's unfortunate and very sad that this young woman was disqualified for reasons beyond her control. If the candidates are not told in advance that nothing artificial may be used, they should be. And how about false eyelashes, capped teeth and silicone implants?

DEAR ABBY: I recently met a wonderful guy and fell for him like I haven't fallen for a very long time. Yes, the feeling is mutual. He told me so. We've been dating steadily. I don't date anybody but him, and I'm sure he doesn't date anybody but me. Now for the problem — he's Greek. I'm not.

My friends tell me I'm wasting my time — that Greek guys always marry Greek. They date all kinds of girls, but when it comes to marriage, they marry Greek.

Abby, do you think I'm wasting my time? — IN LOVE IN FLORIDA

DEAR IN LOVE: The only person who can answer that question for you is the Greek guy in your life. Ask him.

DEAR ABBY: I read the letter from the home economist concerning the baking time of your pecan pie. I agree that 350 degrees is 350 degrees regardless of whether the temperature is attained from a gas oven or an electric oven. However, the discrepancy lies in the type of fuel being used in the oven.

Gas ovens require oxygen to burn and, therefore, pull more air and moisture from the ingredients being baked.

Electricity requires no oxygen to heat; therefore, it takes longer for a liquid food to set.

I am also a home economist, and when I give my friends a recipe for a casserole, etc. that does not have much moisture, I always suggest that if they are using a gas oven, they should check the casserole several times during baking, and add more liquid if necessary — or cover the casserole to reduce evaporation loss. — MRS. Voter turnout at low level

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Although Americans seem to be more active and politically aware than citizens of other modern democracies, they're not following it up at the ballot box.

G. Bingham Powell Jr., a University of Rochester political scientist, found in a study that the average voter turnout in other democracies is 77 percent of the eligible population.

But in the United States, turnout was 62 percent in the 1960s and 54 percent in the 1970s. That ranked Americans 20th out of 21 nations studied.

Powell says Americans' low level of voting participation contrasted sharply with their high levels of political interest, discussion and campaign activity in comparison to citizens in Western Europe.

He attributed the difference in behavior primarily to the more difficult American registration laws and to the weakness of American political parties.

Little windows can create big questions. They are often oddly sized and placed and may not "match" other windows in the room. They may also be short on light and ventilation. Consider completely hiding a little window. Match the treatment to the color of the wall and window frame or, if the window is in a more or less convenient location, it can be disguised. Try to build it up to conventional single window size by hanging opaque fabric panels well out on the walls beside it. Hang cafe curtains from the sill and top with a cornice or valance on the wall above. Lastly, you may try giving that little window such daring treatment that it appears that the whole room was designed around it.

At WINDOW DECOR, window coverings are our focus of business. If you are wondering what to do about odd little windows (or big ones), let our staff maximize their potential. From 8-4:30, Mon.-Fri. our showroom at M W. Industrial Loop has lots to offer the designer in you. Call 685-0875 to arrange for a free in-home consultation. We also offer an installation service.

PLANTS IN THE HOME

Geraniums need frequent cleaning

By ELVIN MCDONALD

Here in California where I am gardening this summer, geraniums grow everywhere: Bedding or zonal types are in pots, planters, ground beds and appear as escapes in the wild despite desert dryness.

The Martha or Lady Washingtons, hybrids of Pelargonium domesticum, make shrubby mounds, to 4 feet tall and as wide in beds as well as bushel-size planters. Individual florets on these rival those of hybrid azaleas in showiness.

Perhaps most amazing, at least to a Snow Belter, are the ivyleaf geraniums, colorful hybrids of pelargonium peltatum, which spill everywhere from hanging containers. Along the freeways as well as in residential areas they cover steep embankments, offering welcome relief from acres of ice plant and succulent daisies.

While there may be nighttime and early morning fog in some areas, all these geraniums receive an abundance of sun. Temperatures range from cool to hot. They are essentailly disease-free because humidity is low.

If you are trying to grow geraniums where summer brings mugginess — moisture-saturated air — leaf and flower blight can be troublesome regardless of the temperatures.

When disease strikes other plants, roses for example, we spray or dust with a fungicide. Where geraniums are concerned, cleanliness is the brightest hope.

Keeping a geranium clean means the minute a leaf begins to turn yellow, pick it off. As individual florets within a flower cluster wilt, remove them. Promptly cut or break off gone-by flower heads, taking care not to leave any petals lying on leaf surfaces.

A clean geranium is likely to be a healthy one.

It is also a good idea not to fertilize geraniums heavily, especially not with a fertilizer high in nitrogen. Rank growth is more vulnerable to disease and produces fewer flowers.

Keeping geraniums clean may sound tedious but it can also be therapeutic. This kind of gardening can be done when you are fully dressed, perhaps as you wait for your mate before going out.

Essentially the same cultural guidelines hold for geranium house plants. Direct sun for several hours daily is necessary to produce bloom.

I get excellent results in the south-facing windows of my New York apartment, as well as in a fluorescent-lighted shelf over which four 40-watt tubes (two Cool White, two Warm White) are burned 16 hours out of every 24.

Where space is limited, indoors or out, miniature and dwarf geraniums are perfect. Individual plants are small enough to grow in thumb pots, but for best results, plant each in a 5- or 6-inch squatty pot (one wider than it is tall). The reason is that if a geranium — any geranium — becomes too dry between waterings, the blossom-buds never develop.

If fragrance is important to you, grow a collection of scented-leaf geraniums. Besides the usual lemon, apple and rose, there are a host of others: apricot, lime, orange, strawberry and pungent, to name but a few.

Husbands help with work

Hearst News Service

Working wives are burning out, blowing up and battling away in a largely unsuccessful attempt to convince their husbands to help with domestic chores.

Today, 66 percent of all women with chidren work outside the home, according to an article on getting husbands to help in the September issue of Redbook. But most of these women also are stuck with the same household responsibilities that kept their non-working mothers busy.

"Everyone's in favor of equality, but not too many men are doing anything about it," says Dr. Robert E. Gould, professor of psychiatry at New York Medical College. "If Supermom has to keep on doing everything, she's going to burn out."

Husbands come equipped with a standard list of excuses. The favorites are:

"There's something else I really have to do."

"In a minute."

"I don't know where it is."

"I don't know how."

"But I already helped yesterday."

"Don't waste time trying to change your husband," says Laurie J. Bilik of Bilik Associates, a behavorial science consultant firm. "Change something you know you can change, yourself and the way you communicate."

Bilik's strategy starts with the wife giving up control of the house.

"This is the first step, and the most important," Bilik says. "It may sound easy, but it's not."

Giving up control means abandoning your own standards of cleanliness for your husband's. If he wants to do the dishes only once a week, let him.

Don't play martyr. When help is offered, accept it.

Try a new vocabulary — neither so aggressive it arouses hostility nor so timid it gets ignored. Warren Farrell, author of "The Liberated Man," advises, "Sit down with your husband. Be calm. Pull out all the old humanistic buzz words. Say, 'I feel bad about the housework. My problem is, I don't have enough time.'"

Praise your husband when he helps, don't criticize him. Don't treat him as if he were dumb, but give him the information he needs. Minnesota housewife Lynn Neson says you can't just tell a husband to clean the kitchen floor when it gets dirty.

"His shoes will be sticking to the linoleum," she says, "and he'll still be wondering if it's time. You have to say to him, 'I find I have to mop the floor every two days to keep it clean.'"

Every wife must decide how much it means to her to have her husband help.

"There are lots of ways to get people to do things they don't want to do," says Kenneth Kaye, author of "Family Rules." "You can pay them, threaten them, cajole them, trick them. But you don't want the short-term benefits to harm your long-term relationship."

There are other ways a working wife can make life easier for herself. She can use part of her salary to pay for help. She can reassess her own standards, eliminate some of the duties she has assumed, and tell her family they will have to expect less of her.

Then there are the children. Letty Cottin Pogrebin reports in "Family Politics" that "on average, wives do 70 percent of the housework, while husbands and children each do about 15 percent."

Cards target single women

CLEVELAND (AP) — If it seems there are more single women than before, there's a reason. There are.

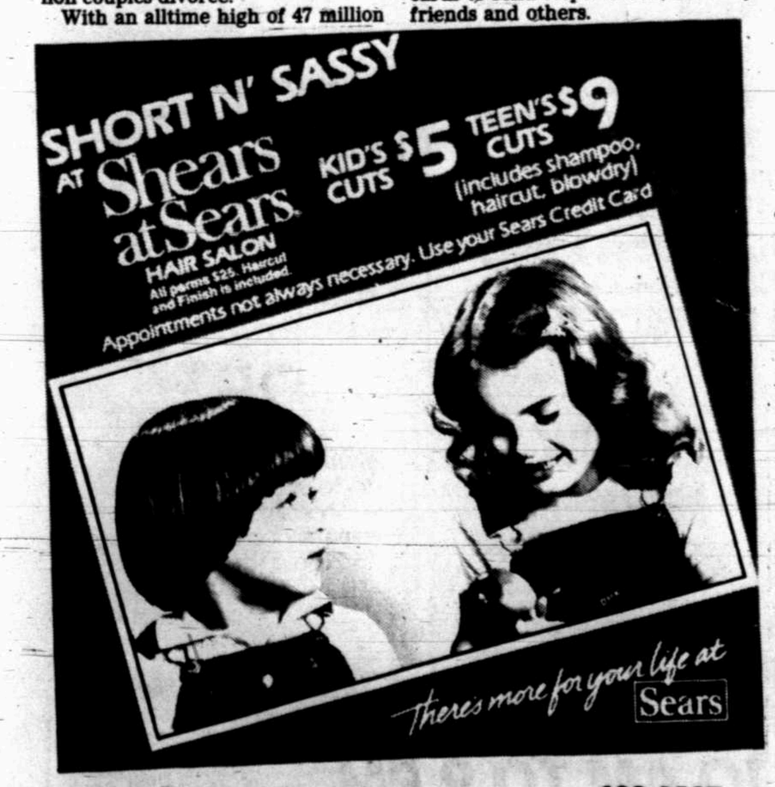

Every day, 1,300 new stepfamilies are created and every year, 2.4 million couples divorce.

With an alltime high of 47 million women working, the greeting card companies are beginning to take notice. New cards are being created as women — 80 percent of greeting-card buyers — look for suitable cards to send stepchildren, far-away friends and others.

More couples to receive pension money

Associated Press

Within the next 20 years more than 4 in 5 married couples will be getting a pension from at least one spouse's job. Today, only about 1 in 2 couples receives these pension benefits.

Parasite problems plague worldwide population

NEW YORK (AP) — Many of the world's people suffer from parasitic illnesses, according to a prominent health organization.

Roundworms affect about 900 million people, while malaria is the most deadly parasite, killing 1.2 million people every year. Many people suffer from more than one parasite living in the body at the same time, the organization says.

It adds that while these illnesses are most common in the undeveloped world, no country is parasite free.

Group seeks more education

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — A large group of 35- to 54-year-olds is seeking more education to cope with midlife changes, but higher educational institutions aren't meeting the group's needs, says a specialist in adult and continuing education.

Speaking recently at the University of Rochester's Graduate School of Education and Human Development, Dr. Margaret Hazlewood of Washington said:

"There's a market for adult and continuing education, but to recruit and retain adult students, higher education needs to retrain faculty, become more flexible, and to reach out to those who have been overlooked."

For example, she said, faculty must become "coaches, planners, brokers, linkers, counselors, rather than talkers. We need to prescribe less and to foster more self-direciton."

NEIL SOLOMON, M.D.

Arthritis exercises important

Dear Dr. Solomon: I have a moderate case of arthritis and I have been trying to follow an exercise routine as suggested by my doctor. But in the morning I'm so stiff that I can hardly bend over to tie my shoelaces, and at night I'm so tired that I can hardly move. What would you suggest? — Mr. B.E., Bridgeport, Conn.

Dear Mr. E.: You seem to have answered your own question. If morning and evening hours are not conducive to exercise, what about the middle of the day? If you are not employed, there should be no problem about this, but even if you are employed, you can take a walk during your lunch hour or even do some exercises at your desk or wherever you work. Some exercise can even be done while the person sits in a chair.

In addition, even if you feel tired at the end of the day you may find that you would enjoy swimming because of the buoyancy of the water. You can also swim as leisurely or vigorously as your condition warrants.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My mother was given a diuretic about three months ago, and since then she has fallen three times. She never had this problem before she started taking the medicine. Can these two things be connected in some way? And would you recommend that she stop taking her medication? — Hillary, Oil City, Penna.

Dear Hillary: Diuretic medication may be a contributing factor to falls, although other causes must also be considered. In any event, your mother should bring these events to the attention of her physician.

I would never recommend that any patient discontinue medication that has been prescribed by a physician without first discussing it with him or her. If the medication is responsible for your mother's falling, a change in dosage may be all that is required to eliminate this hazard.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I have been married for 20 years and have never experienced an orgasm. Do other women have this problem? — Denni, Duluth, Minn.

Dear Denni: If it is any consolation, you are not alone. According to one survey, only 30 percent of women achieve orgasm as the result of intercourse alone.

Neil Solomon, M.D., is a columnist for Los Angeles Times Syndicate. If you have a medical question, write Dr. Solomon at 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon will not give personal replies, but will answer as many questions as possible in his column.

DR. KURIANSKY

Mastectomy can be frightening

By Dr. Judith Kuriansky

Q. I just read in your column about the young woman who had a tube and ovary removed and had anxieties about her sexuality.

Please tell her to never fear. When I was 25 I lost a tube and ovary (along with a huge tumor) and not only have I enjoyed a great sexual relationship with my husband (and still do at age 70), but I also carried six pregnancies to full term. — A happy Iowa mother, wife and grandmother, Rock Island, Iowa

DEAR HAPPY MOM: Bless you for your support of others, and cheers on your joy for life. Your words of encouragement reach out to this woman too:

Q. I have a lump in my left breast. I'm going to the hospital for a biopsy and if it proves to be malignant I may have to have a mastectomy. I'm only 45 and I'm terrified.

I've talked it over with my husband and he says that the important thing is to have me with him for a long time to come, that he won't love me any less. He says he loves my body but cares even more about me as a person. I wonder if he's just trying to reassure me and if he would really feel that way if I had a breast removed.

We have always enjoyed a good sex life together, but now I imagine he won't find me attractive anymore. Also, I have a son and daughter who are teen-agers and I haven't told them yet. Should I? I'm so scared.

A. Of course you're scared. Anyone who has a potentially cancerous tumor has a right to be. Don't feel guilty about that — it's perfectly normal.

People react to fear in different ways. Some gather all the facts they can about their condition and the medical possibilities, controlling — or even denying — their feelings in the process. Others become so overwhelmed that they let their feelings run wild, even to the point of not being able to function in daily life.

The best approach is a mixture of these two: Get as much information as possible about your options (breast removal is not the only choice) and fully express your feelings.

Also talk with other couples in similar situations (contact the American Cancer Society or your hospital's social work department). Such sharing is exceptionally helpful.

You are a family. Go through this together and it will be easier for everyone.

Judith Kuriansky is a columnist for King Features Syndicate.

NEW ORLEANS

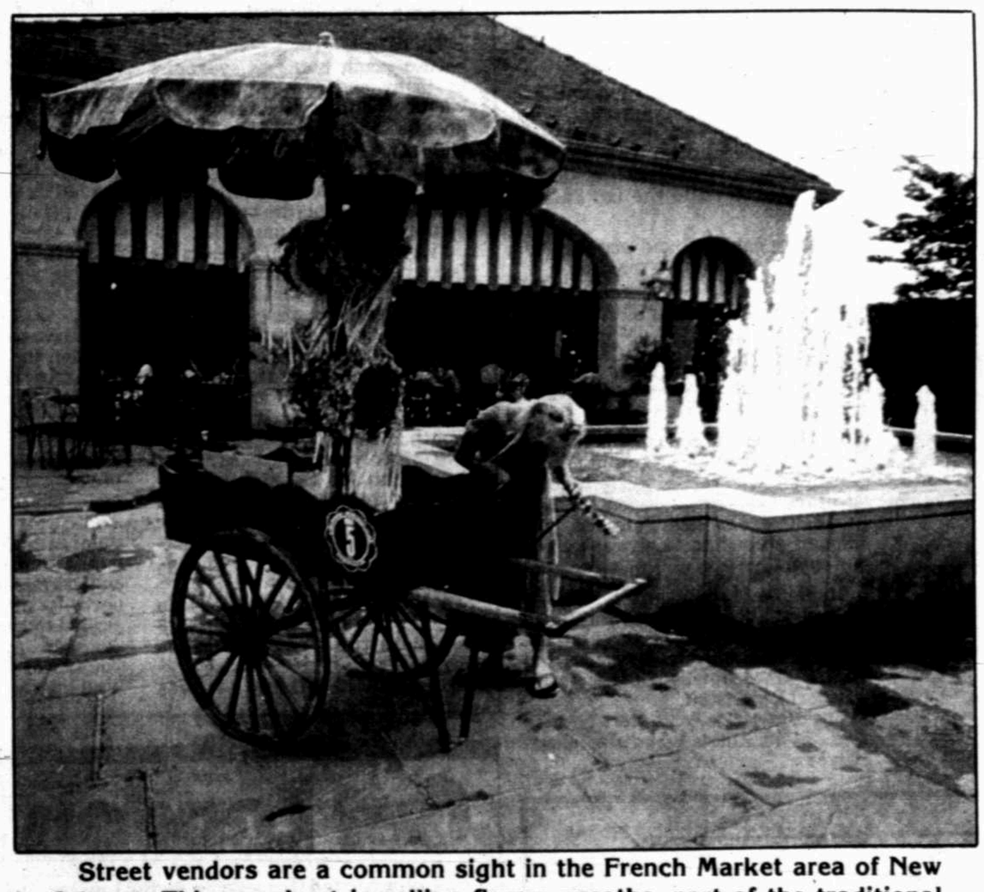

Text By Hallye Jordan

Colorful umbrellas provide shade for those at an outdoor cafe in the Italian Pavillion which is part of the international pavillions display at The 1984 World Exposition.

The alligators and the world's largest ferris wheel may not be for the faint of heart, but both attractions add to the pastel-colored fantasy of this year's World's Fair.

Street vendors are a common sight in the French Market area of New Orleans. This merchant is selling flower wreaths, part of the traditional Mardi Gras costume.

NEW ORLEANS, La. — If you're trying to get by this summer with a cheap family vacation, don't take the kids to the World's Fair.

On the other hand, if you want to become educated to some degree, excessively drink expensive cups of cold beer, eat tons of crawfish and red beans and rice and have some adult fun at a party within a party city, go.

The kids can be easily entertained. And so can you.

The 1984 World Exposition, in a warehouse district on the banks of the Mississippi River, has been transformed into a colorful fantasy world within the long-established city of sin. The jazz bands and parades are similar to those found in the French Quarter. And the crowds — rowdy, rambunctious and ready for fun — are the same ones that drift onto Bourbon Street when the bars along Fulton Street Mall within the World's Fair close at 2 a.m.

Children — and probably some older males — are mesmerized by the mermaids which flank the gates (now with flowing locks covering ample breasts after some public uproar) on their way to the Watergarden. There, kids can partake in refreshingly wet rides and games.

The youngsters — and some playful adults — may opt to take a leisurely stroll through the Kiddie Wash, complete with cleansing sprays, brushes and rinses similar but softer than those used on the family Ford.

If you can stand the line, the Aquacade synchronized swimming and diving show is worth it. If you find yourself waiting for 45 minutes before realizing you didn't make the cut for the 3,500-seat arena, don't worry — there's too much else to see and do. Gather about $4.50 and go for another fruity flavor of potent daiquiris. You can always boast about the number of different ones you had when you get back home (if you remember.)

Now don't be misled — just because you're in New Orleans doesn't mean you can't become more knowledgeable about the countries which have blended together in this pastel-colored but chaotic fair.

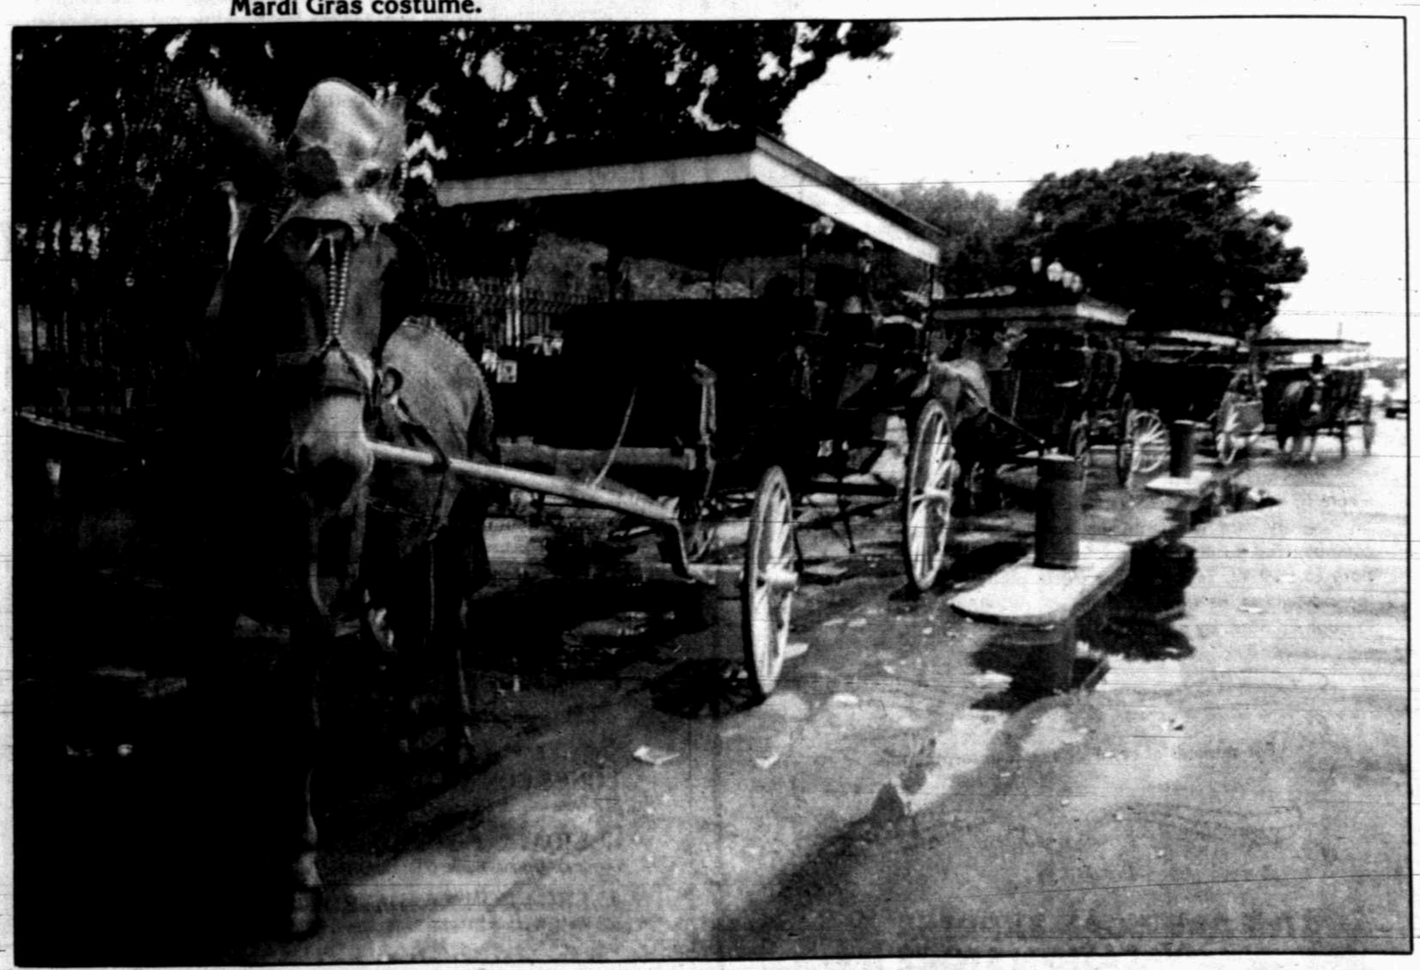

The international pavilions are entertaining and educating with computers and robots answering questions and video games galore on the theme of the fair, "Fresh Water: A Source of Life."

Several pavilions offer breathtaking films such as the three-dimensional exploration of America's rivers, waterfalls, lakes and glaciers in the United States Pavilion (which also features the space shuttle orbiter Enterprise), and a dizzy helicopter ride on a six-story high, 81-foot wide screen in the Canada Pavilion that wraps our northern neighbor around us.

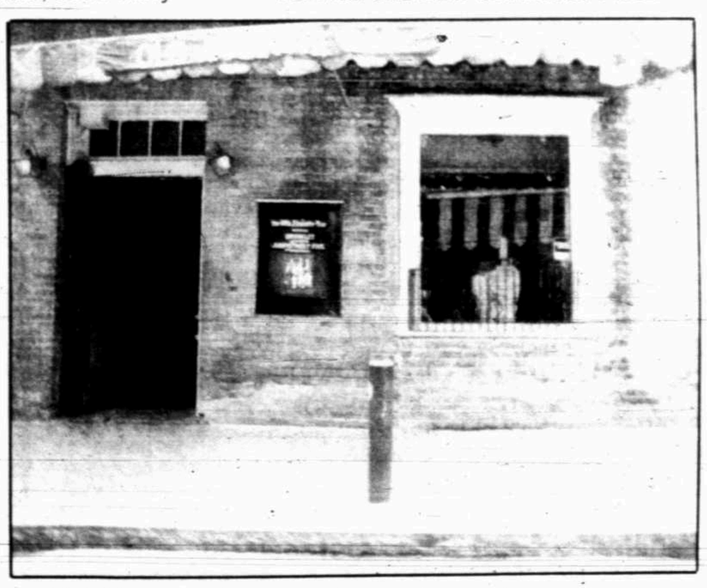

The IMAX films, using frames 10 times the size of conventional 35 mm films projected on the tall screen, are the largest film frames in motion picture history. Their realism, pioneered by the Canadians, also is known for making viewers airsick.

The Louisiana Journey is another preferred pavilion. In it, visitors give their feet a rest when they board boats for a canal trip through swamps, bayous and fog. Under moss-laden cypress trees, fairgoers are tranquilly transported from an early Cajun home around the bend to an antebellum plantation home before plunging into the middle of the renowned Mardi Gras festival.

PLEASE SEE NEW ORLEANS, PAGE 2F

Horse carriages await passengers in the Jackson Square of the French Quarter where the century old means of transportation is still in use daily.

Old Absinthe Bar, complete with weathered awnings and hitching posts, is typical of nostalgic bar fronts that line Bourbon Street in the French Quarter.

Fair fun

Whimsical Wonderwall at the 1984 World Exposition houses a variety of food kiosks and shops.

New Orleans

The journey, along with other exhibits, pavilions, entertainment, eateries and souvenir shops, is housed in the Great Hall — one building for sure that won't be scrapped after the fair is dismantled. The 15-acre, $93 million structure will turn into the New Orleans Convention Center after fair festivities are finished.

Winding in and out of parades of Mardi Gras floats and the ever-present World's Fair penguin mascot Seymour D. Fair (get it?), the Krewe of Joe's Jungle Marching Club, originated in 1977 and featured annually at Mardi Gras, marches along in unruly unison, handing out blue plastic flowers to women who will kiss them, or so the tradition goes.

From creole gumbo to Chicago deep dish pizza to po-boy sandwiches, the cuisine corners any taste bud's desire. There are Belgian waffles smothered with powdered sugar, ice cream, syrup or fresh fruit; delis featuring corned beef on rye, hot pastrami, lox, bagels and cream cheese; potato pancakes with applesauce; and smoked barbecue.

India Delhi foods include Tandoori chicken and chicken curry. Other eateries offer Cajun sausages, jambalaya, stuffed eggplant, shrimp and oysters in pasta and hogshead cheese. For those who won't make it to Cafe du Monde in Jackson Square, New Orleans style coffee and beignets are available.

Also on the menu are meatpies, cappuccino and expresso, smoked turkey legs and fried catfish. Traditional offerings include spicy fried chicken, corn on the cob, nachos, hot dogs, hamburgers, fresh fruit, chocolates, pralines and ice cream.

There are even gourmet box lunches featuring homemade croissants, cheese, pate, quiche and wine, not to be outdone by oysters on the half shell, Dutch pastries with fresh fruit or liqueur toppings or the alligator sauce piquante.

Prices can range anywhere from $2.50 for a plate of red beans and rice, to $3.50 for concession stand beer. At ethnic restaurants, the average price for a meal and a couple of drinks is $17.50.

Souvenirs, as can be expected, are expensive — and don't forget, Louisiana sales tax was hiked to 9 percent to help defray costs of the fair. Think what your electricity bill would be if you were paying for the ceiling fans that hum in miles and miles of open-air archways and walkways.

And rides such as the 19-story Ferris wheel, billed the world's largest, and the gondola cable car ride across the Mississippi are extra, too.

Although most of the pavilions are free, there are exceptions that, nonetheless, shouldn't be excluded from your agenda. The Vatican Pavilion, with its scientific study of the Shroud of Turin, is an example. For $5, you can see works by El Greco and Matisse and the Tapestry of the Crucifixion by Raphael, which was displayed for more than 100 years above the main altar in the Sistine Chapel.

Among the treasures is the 42-inch high Eucharistic Congress Monstrance, made of gold, silver and precious jewels donated from people of all faiths throughout the South. On display for the first time in 20 years, the Monstrance was made for the VIII National Eucharistic Congress held in New Orleans in 1938. With 817 diamonds and 90 precious stones, the Monstrance includes personal jewelry such as a wedding ring and the chalice of a deceased priest.

The stateliness of the bleached white Vatican especially stands out in its surroundings: Fulton Street Mall, a two block area joined to Festival Park by the famed Wonderwall.

The Wonderwall, a barrage of Byzantine influenced pastels and more than two million lights, links the two together. Along the Wonderwall, in the day or night, jugglers and strolling musicians can be found.

Fulton Street Mall is the home of Reunion Hall, created by Pete Fountain who makes frequent appearances. Non-stop live music, a large dance floor, eight bars, brunches, dinners and late night breakfasts make this a favorite attraction. Other great late-night stops include the Australian bar and restaurant Sheila's, easily spotted by the 13-foot, 4,000-pound kangaroo in front.

Festival Park has the Miller Beer Garden, with its German Oom-pah-pah bands that perform before a usually drunk crowd which fills the 1,000-seat indoor hall, climbs onto benches to stand and sway and flows into 500 seats in the outdoor courtyard.

The courtyard, however, empties when the band breaks into the "chicken song," as everyone rushes in to join in the silly dance. Another New Orleans bring-'em-to-their-feet favorite in which the audience loves to participate with hardy, intoxicated gusto is "Who Dat?" ("Who dat gonna beat de Saints? Who dat? Who dat?" repeated over and over and over).

If shouting, chugging apple schnapps and sloshing beer is not considered fun, you might try Ned's Lookout Lounge, located above the beer garden in the historic, turn-of-the-century Federal Fibre Mills Building.

Although its 60-foot wide balcony is considered to be one of the best places to watch the magnificent nightly firework displays shot from a barge on the Mississippi (preparations begin at 3 p.m.), there are better places from which to watch for those intuitive enough to seek them out.

To gaze at $9,000 of dazzling fireworks blow up in the sky and shatter into millions of colored fragments, eliciting oohs and aahs heard all over the fairgrounds, one should have the best possible vantage point, right? One should also have the best possible beverage on which to sip.

This is a very special secret, so read closely and feel privileged.

In the back corner of the Honduras, Belize and Dominican Republic Pavilion is paradise.

The pavilion, a late entry, was left out of the guide books but, nonetheless, is historic in that it is the first cooperative pavilion ever authorized by the world's fairs.

Behind all of the bamboo and lush tropical plants is a thatched hut. It's difficult to find, but well worth the effort.

Underneath the thatched hut is a miracle worker named Gus, who serves up stiff drinks made with Ron Bermudez Dominican Rum or Port Royal beer, the only two alcoholic beverages served in the Las Palmas bar.

While a calypso band marches by, heard but unseen, a maximum of maybe 10 people can sit on stools on two sides of the gleaming wooden bar and enjoy the cheapest bargains at the fair.

We're talking $1.50 nachos and 75-cent bowls of peanuts. And we're talking great rum punches.

Gus's secret: splash of soda, 2 ounces of Tom Collins, 3 ounces of pineapple (or orange) juice, 1 ounce of orange liqueur, 2 ounces of dark rum, 1 ounce of light rum and "just enough grenadine to give it a pinking color."

If you're smart, you'll hit Las Palmas at about 9:30 p.m., get Gus to mix you about two or three of the drinks in his tall plastic glasses and find a place outside on the International Riverfront.

The fireworks don't start until 10 p.m. — but that's when Gus closes bar.

French Quarter known for habitual food, fun

By LAWRENCE BUDD
Staff Writer

NEW ORLEANS — Tourists to the left of me, Cajuns to the right of me, Frenchmen in back of me and nothing but a string of delightful clubs, restaurants and shops in front of me. It could only be the French Quarter.

A very long way from the Permian Basin a few weeks back, it was.

From the first plate of crawdads at a restaurant called "Desire," it became apparent this was a town, and more specifically a street, that took its party times seriously — 24 hours a day, weekdays and holidays included.

The Quarter is a part of this city, elder than its country, that is known for its food and fun. And its drinking habits.

The focal point for the festivities is Bourbon St., a seeminly endless string of pubs and clubs where the fun never ends and the people are a sight in themselves.

It's been a while since pirates like Jean Lafitte padded the pavements, but entering this street, with its neon lights, curious store fronts and enticing aromas instills in visitors that same kind of plundering spirit.

Assuming money is no object; there is something for everyone on Bourbon St. Quiet bars and eateries are there for those who seek the sedate side of life. There are more than equal shares of loud clubs where the tunes at times loses the battle with the drone of the crowd. And there are those establishments politely referred to as "reserved for adult entertainment."

Hurricanes are the popular choice at the cavernous Pat O'Brien's packed to the gills this particular night with young people of all ages. A tropical drink that masks the alcoholic backlash, this tall offering is a favorite with tourists (until the morning after).

Bloody Mary's are another popular mixture, with an ongoing competition pitting the merits of each bartender's version against the alternative next door. One club with no name readily apparent requests those who partake to pen a review of what they bill as "The Best Bloody Mary in Town."

Mimosa punch is another tasty favorite. A treat I enjoyed the morning after at "Breakfast at Brennan's" is the milk punch — a little nourishment and a tinge of the hair of the dog that bit me.

This brings us to the second trademark — that creole cuisine.

Brennan's breakfasts are ordeals in delight. Turtle soup to start out, and the Eggs Hussarde were a high-class equivalent of the the Egg McMuffin. The alcoholic trend continued into dessert, with Bananas Foster cooked in some sort of liqueur.

Arnaud's matched its reputation. There's something about eating that rich French food while a jazz band across the room entertains other diners. It made the bisque even better and the Crabmeat Imperial luscious. Another alcohol-aided dessert topped off this meal.

A last dining trademark was the waiters' distracting, but amusing, habit of brushing bread crumbs left over from assaults on the hard rolls with a small piece of metal resembling a nail file.

And the music was superb. The Preservation Hall Band is without parallel when it comes to that cool form of jazz. Although the building (erected in 1750), the musicians and the music are aged, the aesthetic feel the players exude for the tune makes each offering a unique experience.

Again, the variety is impressive. On opposite corners, street strollers can find rock-n-roll, Dixieland jazz, even country music playing — as Satchmo used to sing — "'Til the Saints Come Marching In."

Just off historic Jackson Square, standing beneath a plaque marking the place William Faulkner finished his first book, I wished it was more than a visit.

Major airlines switch to plastic liquor bottles

By CARL LARSEN
Copley News Service

Those miniature glass liquor bottles taken home as souvenirs by many air travelers soon will become collector's items as airlines switch to lighter plastic containers.

The rather simple idea, which saves fuel for the carriers, should start to pay off on the bottom line by the end of this quarter.

"We're converting to them as fast as the manufacturers make them available," said Douglas A. Pirkle, senior buyer for Pacific Southwest Airlines. PSA began serving vodka and bourbon in plastic bottles to its passengers this month. Scotch and whisky brands will change to plastic next month.

Similarly, United Airlines spokesman Joe Hopkins said the nation's largest carrier also now is switching to the lighter plastic containers. Vodka, the most popular liquor, is the first to change on United.

A spokeswoman for American Airlines said the carrier hopes to complete the switch within a year.

How much will the airlines save by the move?

Pirkle said that once all brands offered to passengers make the switch, PSA can expect to pocket $28,500 from fuel savings. Each PSA Super 80 aircraft is loaded with 356 of the miniatures before starting its daily flight schedule.

Bigger savings are contemplated by British Airways, a leader in the move to plastic. It said plastic bottles will substantially save fuel on its wide-body aircraft. A case of the old glass bottles weighs 36 pounds compared to the 19½ pounds for plastic.

Although they appear to be smaller, the plastic bottles hold 50 milliliters as do the thick glass bottles. The price from liquor wholesalers to PSA is the same, said Pirkle.

"Airlines have been putting pressure on the manufacturers to make the change," Pirkle said.

The liquor industry experimented a few years ago with large-size plastic bottles, but that ended after it was found that the porosity of containers allowed alcohol to evaporate, said Duncan Cameron of the Distilled Spirits Council of the United States in Washington, D.C.

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — "The Golden Age of British Photography, 1839-1900" will open at the Philadelphia Museum of Art Oct. 27.

The museum says the exhibition "reveals not only the sensibility of Victorian Britain but also the incredible inventiveness of the scientists and artists who embraced the new wonder which was photography itself.

"A survey of some of the most significant breakthroughs represented in the exhibition shows the development of photography from its rather cumbersome beginnings to the dawning of the 'snapshot era.'"

LONES TRAVEL

While touring Italy, many people visit Florence to see Michelangelo's "David" on their way to Venice after Rome. However, they often become so captivated by the city of Botticelli and the Medici that the stopover becomes a week of sightseeing. If Venice is the perfect union of art and unique natural setting, and Rome the union of art and religion, then Florence is art and money. Its great bankers, especially the Medici family, financed Florence's great architecture, paintings and sculpture. Florence is the home of the Uffizi, now the most important art gallery in Italy. The monumental "David" is the centerpiece of the Galleria dell' Accademia. The Pitti Place features major works by Raphael, Rubens and Titian and others too numerous to name.

Italy has so much to offer the traveller, you may not know where to begin. At LONES TRAVEL SERVICE, our staff can arrange an itinerary that will highlight the sights you want to see. Our computerized facility, located in the Permain Bldg. on the street floor at 319 W. Texas, makes travel plans hassle-free. Experience the adventures of Italy - call us at 682-8645. Hours: 8-5, Mon. through Fri., Sat. by appointment.

For students of art, Florence is unsurpassable.

Be prepared for worldly travels, says advisor

From Staff Reports

When planning a trip abroad remember international travel means special considerations and requirements, according to Paige Miller of Samsonite Traveler Advisory Service. Travel isn't glamorous when the traveler is confused and ill-prepared.

Miller offers these tips to help first-time international travelers:

— Be sure to have all the necessary travel documents. If unsure consult a travel agent for advice on obtaining these documents. As a general rule, don't leave the United States without a passport, although a few countries don't require them for entry. After applying for a passport, allow four to six weeks to receive it. Find out if the destination country requires a visa for entry. With a valid passport a traveler can apply for a visa through that country's embassy or consulate. Allow two weeks if applying by mail, Miller advised.

— Some countries require inoculations before allowing foreigners to enter. Find out what, if any, shots are necessary. If the travel agent isn't sure, call the World Health Organization. Get shots a few weeks before departure to allow plenty of time to recover from any side effects. Bring a record from the doctor as proof of innoculation.

— When packing keep these documents handy in a carry-on or tote bag. Never pack them in checked luggage. "Treat your documents like money," Miller said. "Selling stolen passports is big business in some countries. European hotel clerks may request your passport when you check in, but will return it within a few hours."

— Paying with foreign money can be a confusing and costly experience. Become familiar with the currency and its comparable worth in U.S. dollars. Otherwise being short-changed or spending more of that "colorful money" than necessary is easy. Miller suggested using a pocket calculator when paying cash.

— Before departing from the states, buy travelers checks and exchange about $50 to have cash for cabs and tips. Cash checks at a bank because the rate of exchage is more favorable than at a hotel. Don't cash more than needed, even if it means more than one trip to the bank, because money can be lost when converting foreign currency back to U.S. dollars.

— American appliances may not be compatible with foreign elecrical wiring. Most overseas countries use 220 volts instead of 110. If electric an hairdryer or razor is necessary, the traveler should buy a converter and a set of plugs.

— Do not leave home without an adequate supply of necesary medications, especially prescription drugs, because they may be difficult to obtain in a foreign country, Miller said. And bring a spare pair of glasses if possible. Keep all drugs in original packaging or suspicions at Customs inspections may be aroused.

— International airlines have less carry-on space and stricter baggage limitations, so pack carefully. Pack travel documents, valuables, medications and breakable items in one tote bag to carry on board. Don't plan on checking more than one piece of luggage; use a large suitcase and don't pack more than necessary. Consult travel agent or call the airline for answers to questions about weight restrictions.

— According to Miller, "customs officers can be unnerving if you don't know what to expect. Don't be alarmed if you are questioned brusquely and asked to open your bags for inspection. It's probably a random check. On your return, you must declare all items bought outside the U.S. and in duty-free shops.

Tips alert drivers to avoid drowsiness

CHICAGO — Feeling drowsy, particularly on long drives during the evening, can be dangerous. It's easy to nod off just for a second, says the National Safety Council, and find yourself heading for a crash.

Here are some tips from the Council to help keep you awake when traveling:

— Drink coffee and caffeinated soft drinks. If you're hungry have a small snack, not a full-course meal which would only make you sleepy.

— Tune in to an interesting talk show or some up-beat music. Avoid soft instrumental music which can make you drowsy.

— Carry on a conversation with a passenger.

— Don't sit for too long a time. Stop the car and stretch your legs every two or three hours.

STOP OVERPAYING YOUR TAXES

What happened to the money earned during your first two hours and thirty minutes of work today? The average American taxpayer spends the first 150 minutes of each work day paying federal, state, and local taxes. Many of these taxpayers are overpaying their taxes needlessly because they have not been able to keep up with the rapidly changing tax laws. In a test program last year, H&R Block, the nation's largest preparation firm, found over $2,000,000 in overpaid taxes for new clients in just one midwestern state.

How can you stop overpaying your taxes? By learning more about what is taking over one-third of your income. Learn about all the various tax deductions, credits, and adjustments that you may have been missing on your tax return. Learn from an expert about the benefits of owning rental property and using those write-offs to lower your taxes. Learn how to find all the employment-related expenses you are presently paying for but not deducting; find out how an IRA may cut your tax by deducting the taxes you have already paid; and learn how income averaging may save you hundreds of dollars in taxes. All these things may be learned the easy way by enrolling in the H&R Block Income Tax course starting SEPT 6th.

This comprehensive 12-week course covers all of these topics plus many more ways to save on your taxes. You learn about income averaging, energy credits, child and dependent care credit, travel expense deductions to your second job or for charitable works, and many more money-saving benefits hidden from the average uneducated taxpayer. The course is taught using the latest programmed learning manuals and, more importantly, by actually preparing income tax returns. It will even teach you how to get back some of your overpaid taxes from last year.

For more information on how you can learn to stop overpaying your taxes, call 684-6741 or stop by the H&R Block office at 114 ANDREWS HWY. to discuss the course and to review the teaching material.

The Midland YMCA daily recieves a flood of employees who come by on their lunch hour to lift weights, exercise and attend health classes, as a part of the growing concern for fitness by local businesses. Fitness programs: the oil industry's newest boom

By RON GILMORE
Business-Oil Writer

A new phenomena is reforming the way businesses look at employee benefits. The 'fitness boom' has arrived, and by all indications, is likely to stay.

With inereasing medical costs (a rise of 800 percent since 1979) and the correlating high insurance premiums they must pay for their employees coverage, it is small wonder that companies are looking for new ways to cut costs.

The answer for many appears to be a new concept, the wellness program. A wellness program is geared to maintaining the health of an employee rather than just curing sickness when it occurs. This means providing a system for the worker to be able to exercise, attend health classes, obtain regular checkups and other health-related measures.

WHILE MANY BUSINESSES continue to stick to the 'band-aid' approach to employee health, many, particularly oil companies — long famous for 'taking care of their own' — are initiating health programs for their employees.

Mesa Petroleum Co. is one such company. The Amarillo-based business has built an activities center for its employees in Amarillo. There, workers may jog, work out on weights and attend health seminars.

Bert Knitter, the center's director is aware of the center's and the wellness program's usefulness.

"The sum is a total of all the parts," he said. "If the parts start dropping off, then the machine doesn't work. Just look at the facts. Employees who exercise have less absenteeism and fewer medical claims."

While the center may benefit Mesa's Amarillo-based employees, in Midland there is no such creature. Instead, Mesa offers the employees memberships at the YMCA.

Roland Wong, Associate Director of the Midland YMCA is highly supportive of corporate wellness programs in Midland, a leading area for heart disease and cancer in Texas.

"Texans are such a beef and potato culture," said Wong. "Diet is a contributing factor in bad employee health, along with Midland's white-collar lifestyles — intensity of work, long luncheons and smoking to suppress work pressure."

THE PROGRAMS ARE not entirely for the employee's benefits,however. Companies are lowering insurance costs, and increasing employee output, while reducing absenteeism.

"You can compare bad employee health to 'computer down time'," said Knitter. "When the computer is down, there is no production. When workers are sick, we have 'employee down time'."

Mesa's Amarillo facility opened in 1974.

"We started the wellness program before it became fashionable," said Mary Collins, Division Administrative Coordinator for Mesa's Permian Basin offices.

Fashionable or not, other oil companies are quickly realizing the benefits of starting a wellness program. Conoco Inc. has had its program in the planning stages for over two years and will open its own fitness center for Houston employees the first week in December.

" We are currently in the process of screening 1700 employees for physical fitness," said Bob Ealey, director of the center.

Screening employees is the first step for all wellness programs. It usually consists of various tests — blood pressure, urinalysis, body fat measurements — to determine what the individual health needs are for each employee. A program is then set up for the employee to follow.

Conoco's facility will be used by approximately 1200 employees per week. While there is no health program yet in practice for employees outside of Houston, Conoco does have a recreational center in its Ponca City office.

Exxon Corp. also is getting involved with health programs. In Midland, increased medical checkups, athletic competition and health publications are part of the program.

"We provide complete physical check-ups once a year for employees over the age of 50 and every three years if over 30," said Rick Langly, Senior Employee Relations Specialist for Exxon.

Look out IBM, Apple; Here comes Amiga

By SUSAN CHIRA
New York Times News Service

SANTA CLARA, Calif. — In the obscure headquarters here of a two-year-old corporation lies a prototype of a computer that has sparked a pitched battle between the two largest competitors for the home computer market, Commodore and Atari.

The computer and its sophisticated graphics chips, the product of the Amiga Corp., won attention and praise from analysts and competitors many times Amiga's size when the machine was first shown at a Chicago trade show in June. The Amiga computer has been heralded by some as a serious challenger to the popular Apple Macintosh or the International Business Machines Corporation's PCjr.

In mid-August, Commodore announced that it had bought Amiga. But Atari, now run by Commodore's ex-chief, says the chips are rightfully Atari's as a result of a previous agreement, and has sued Amiga for fraud.

The reason for the furor over the Amiga computer, analysts say, is a graphics capability — including full-color display, cartoon-like animation and fairly high speed — that some say is more advanced than the Macintosh, which has no color capability. Graphics have become a critical selling point because they expand the range of applications and users. A better graphics display may entice engineers, advertising designers or architects, for example, and is a proven drawing card in attracting home computer users.

MOREOVER, COMMODORE has predicted that it could sell the machine for under $1,000, compared with the $2,500 price tag on a Macintosh.

"I've been wanting to do this machine for six years," said Jay Miner, the 52-year-old co-founder of Amiga and former Atari engineer who headed the design team on the computer. Although neither he nor David Morse, 41, Amiga's president and other co-founder, would disclose the terms of their deal with Commodore, the two men have certainly become two of Silicon Valley's newest millionaires.

"I've always wanted to do a machine with the graphics of a good flight simulator," Miner said. "Its ability to do high-speed animation still excites me the most. It opens up all sorts of educational opportunities."

Many challenges and questions remain — whether the Amiga can be produced at the projected price, when it will appear on the market, and what kind of software it will have and whether it will be compatible with Apple's or IBM's.

BUT THERE IS no debate over the excellence of Amiga's graphics, which engineers displayed the other day in a back office whose walls were covered with scrawled equations.

First the screen filled with red, yellow and blue triangles that twisted and turned, creating patches of shaded colors. Next a pie chart of aqua, purple, fuschia, green, yellow and white sprang onto the screen. Then there was a futuristic street scene, complete with a figure walking a dog and a fire hydrant that constantly changed shapes. Finally a red-and-white-striped ball began to bounce, the sound changing and echoing as it bounced to different heights.

The computer's developers say that it has been designed with the color television industry standard, so that its displays will read clearly on a television screen. Its resolution is about twice that of the IBM PC.

Analysts, while cautioning that many computer prototypes never make it to market, generally agreed that the Amiga computer seemed worth all the fuss.

"What I have seen of the machine leads me to think it is exciting enough that the entire industry is going to have to take notice," said Barbara Isgur, an analyst with Paine Webber.

"IT'S JUST EXCEPTIONAL," said Tim P. Barajin, an analyst with Creative Strategies International, based in San Jose. "It's a Mac with color graphics built in."

The company was born in September 1982 when its two founders began three months of research — Morse, a former vice president of marketing and sales for the Tonka Corp., into what consumers wanted most from computers, and Miner into the limits of available technology.

They found that consumers wanted a machine that was easy to use and had a wide range of applications, Morse said, and they decided that good graphics would satisfy both counts.

In January 1983, Morse said, they began hiring engineers — from Apple, Hewlett-Packard, Tandem, Ford Aerospace and other companies — to design the machine. By all accounts, it was a typical Silicon Valley start-up — long hours, obsession with the developing machine, and a race against deadlines and funding limits.

Morse recalled that the office became lined with mattresses as engineers worked to prepare the prototype for the spring computer show. And Miner remembered cost-cutting measures — renting rather than buying some equipment, hiring staff by the day rather than permanently. "It went from lean to leaner," he said.

But after the Chicago show, Amiga engineers were no longer unknown. "All of a sudden, " Morse said, "a lot of people knew about Amiga." Although he would not say so, citing the pending lawsuit, industry analysts said those people presumably included Commodore.

Atari's suit, according to Leonard Schreiber, Atari's general counsel, contends that Amiga signed an agreement in March to develop chips for Atari. Atari then advanced the company $500,000. In late June, Schreiber said, Amiga returned the money, saying that the chips would not work. The suit was filed on Aug. 14, just before the announcement that Commodore would buy Amiga.

Reckoning with roadblocks to recovery

SOME HAVE ALLEGED that the major oil companies would reap a tremendous windfall in the event of decontrol of natural gas, but the record does not support the allegations.

While major oil companies do account for a bulk of old gas sales, they also sell much of the higher-priced "new" gas, which, according to analyses of President Reagan's decontrol proposal is expected to decline in price. So what a company may gain in increases on old gas could be lost on the new gas decreases. The American Petroleum Institute says major producers would probably benefit little, if any, relative to all producers.

•••

IT'S TIME TO REMOVE WINDFALL PROFITS TAX on domestic production. There may have been some "windfall" in the seventies, when domestic prices rode the coat tails of foreign imports, but that is not the case any more.

In fact, all indicators, seem to suggest that there should be absolutely zero tax on the process of finding and producing domestic crude, because of the intense competition in the domestic industry.

No country has had more holes punched in it in the search for oil than the U.S. While Saudia Arabia had 555 wells producing an average of 11,400 barrels per day in 1982, the U.S. had 609,000 producing an average of 14.2 barrels per day.

American independents, who find most of the domestic oil must work under two sets of penalties. First they are penalized because few have the capital to drill foreign or offshore wells, and are confined to the highly competitive on shore areas. Second, they are penalized when they find oil, because it has been declared a windfall.

The truth of the matter is there is no logical or valid reason the windfall profits tax should be continued. It only continues now because politicians are reluctant to ever let go of a tax that can be a continuing source of revenues for social schemes.

••••

THERE IS AN ABUNDANCE OF NATURAL GAS. That seems to be a revelation that is just now setting in the thinking of some, but not necessarily Congress.

In 1983, additions to natural gas reserves exceeded production by 6 percent. That was the third year in a row that domestic reserve additions have exceeded production by 6 percent, and the same condition is expected to prevail for 1984 and 1985, before supply and demand are balanced.

This knowledge points up a need to better utilize our natural gas resource by developing new markets for natural gas. One such market may be as a fuel in transportation—in automobiles and trucks.

To demonstrate the viability of natural gas as a transportation fuel, the American Gas Association has recently sponsored a number of projects including fleet demonstrations and a cross country race of natural gas-powered vehicles.

••••

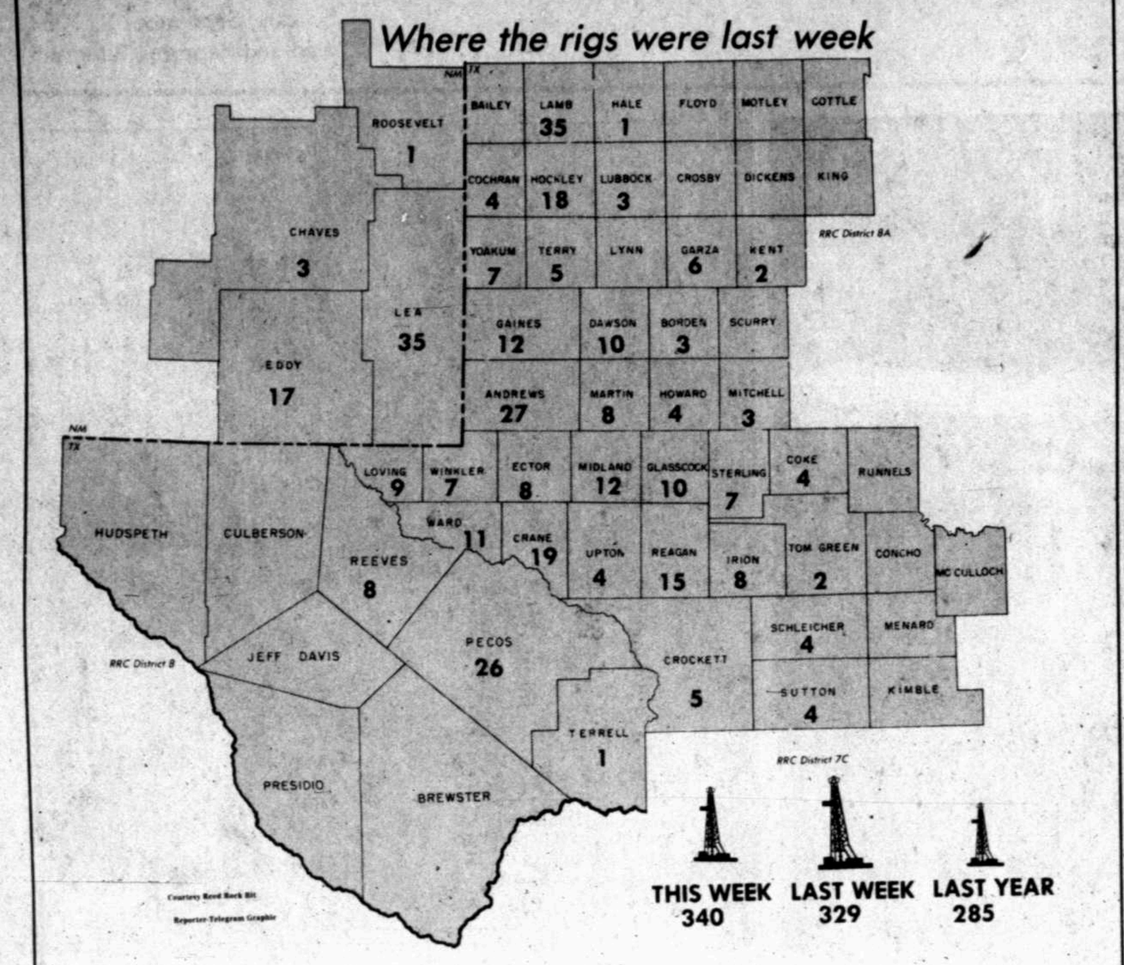

CONTINUING TANKER ATTACKS in the Persian Gulf underscore the fragile energy supply lines to the free world and emphasize again—before we have another energy crisis—that the U.S. must move even more aggressively toward energy independence. Instead of the government devising more artifical barriers to domestic exploration, such as windfall taxes, control and recontrol of markets, it should be looking for ways to remove obstacles that undermine and restrict the petroleum industry.

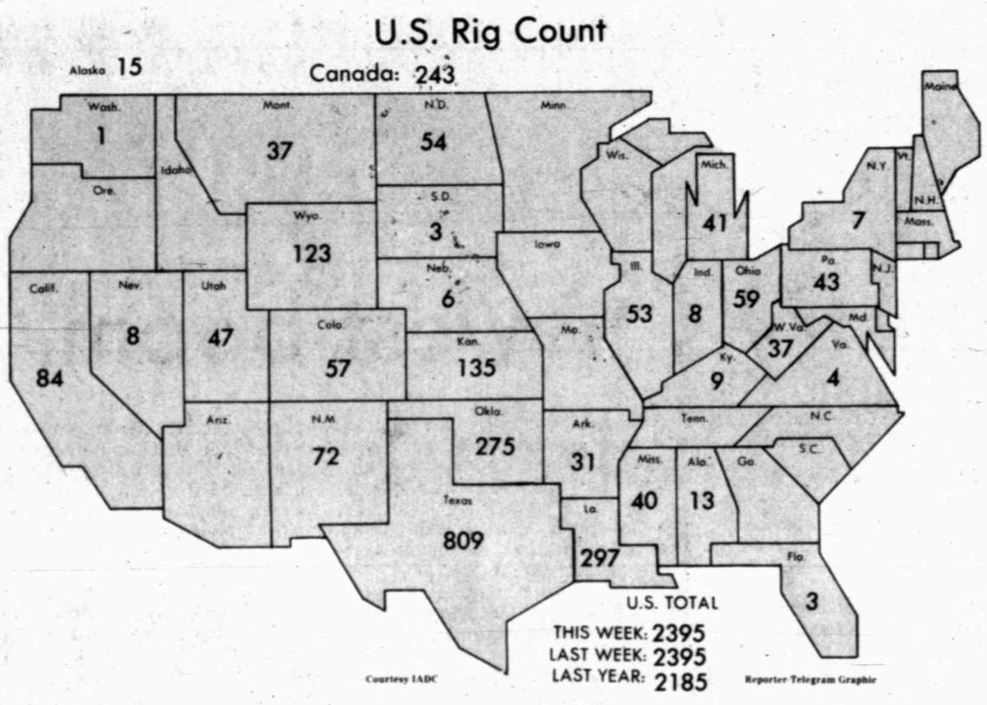

One of the most subtle jobs of barrier erection in recent years has come in the form of riders on legislation providing funding for the Department of Interior. The riders, which prohibit the use of federal money for leasing of many tracts where large oil and gas reserves might be found, have thus far put 736,000 offshore acres off limits for leasing.

Such a move is a clear contradiction to good sense, at a time when the U.S. is importing more than 5 million barrels of oil per day, about the same amount we were importing before the 1973 embargo.

These nonsense restrictions also come at a time when the nation's proved oil and gas reserves are 30 percent less than in 1970 and are still dropping. Dismal projections indicate that if the U.S. is to maintain current levels of domestic oil production in the year 2,000—16 years from now—75 percent of that oil is yet to be found.

Basin rig count increases

The Permian Basin rig count increased from the previous week and also from this time last year. This week's total was 340 rigs up from 329 last week and 329 one year ago.

Lea County, New Mexico was high rig count area with 35 units. Dawson and Winkler counties both gained four new rigs with Mitchell, Ward and Ector losing four. Andrews, Crane and Lea had three new rigs while Borden County was down one rig.

The National rig count stayed the same as last week's at 2395, up 210 rigs from this time last year. Oklahoma dropped by 25 rigs from last week's 300. Texas stayed at 810 rigs, while Louisiana gained two rigs. Kansas had four less rigs this week, while Wyoming gained four new rigs.

The company also sponsors employee softball, basketball and baseball, and offers free dental check-ups every six months.

While the improvement of employee health is a genuine concern among oil companies, the savings in medical costs and insurance payments is a more tangible benefit.

ONE WAY COMPANIES are cutting down on cost is by establishing 'in-house' insurance programs. The oil company still uses the services of a major insurance company, but takes on part of the risk, making premiums lower. Both Mesa and Northern Natural Gas have in-house insurance programs. "It does keep costs down," said Collins, of Mesa.

With the replacement of an executive estimated as high as $600,000 the need for health awareness is well-substantiated.

"It is growing in intensity," said Elaine Gwaltney, Director of Public Information for Blue Cross Shield Insurance Co. "But strikingly enough, there has been little research on wellness programs."

Financial reward for the oil company that initiates a wellness program is not immediate.

"The earliest return is about three years from the few studies I have seen," said Gwaltney. "Three to five years is probably average."

Patience is one thing that those involved with the wellness programs stress.

"Alot of the companies jump on the bandwagon, but fail to lay the proper groundwork and it collapses," said Knitter of Mesa Petroleum. Knitter described how acceptance of wellness programs is slow by the people who were employeed prior to the programs inception, thus incurring a 'lag time'.

"It is the new employees that will readily accept the program," he said.

THE PHENOMENA of wellness programs has caught on in such epidemic proportions, that it was inevitable that a business should open up catering to just that need. And it has.

The Institute for Preventative Medicine is one such organization. Started with funds from the Sid Richardson Foundation, it opened its Houston office in 1981."We have met a request by the business community to evaluate the cost benefits of wellness programs," said Dr. Allen Herd, the organization's medical director. "We are encountering more and more genuine concern over employee health," said Herd.

The Institute, while primarily involved with research, screens employees for businesses who wish either to send their employees to the Insitute for a health program or initiate thier own.

"We currently have six oil companies currently involved in programs and almost all of the companies are self-insured."

"The companies have been coming to us faster than we can contact them," said Helen Roe, the Institute's Corporate Health Director.

Ms. Roe is positive of the direction that wellness programs will take in the coming years.

"Every company will have them," she said, "it's the wave of thefuture."

AMIGA

Morse would not comment on the suit.

The Amiga machine is based on the same 32-bit microprocessor chip, the Motorola 68000, as the Macintosh. If manufactured as planned, it would have the same memory and perform slightly faster than the Macintosh.

These similarities, in addition to the Amiga's projected lower price and flashier graphics, are prompting some analysts to see it as potent competition for Apple machines.

"Apple has set the target for everyone to try and shoot at," said Ulric Weil, an analyst with Morgan Stanley. "Commodore has a window of opportunity to come in at a lower price" before a Macintosh with more memory and software appears.

Although Morse said that he believed the Amiga machine could be finished in a few weeks, analysts said they did not believe that it could be ready to market before spring 1985.

Pioneer sells gas

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) — Pioneer Corp. has signed a definitive agreement to sell its intrastate natural gas Westar Transmission division to Cabot Corp. of Boston for $315 million in cash and petroleum products, the companies announced.

The Westar unit includes about 3,000 miles of transmission lines and 770 miles of gathering lines.

Conoco Inc. urges voices to be heard

HOUSTON — Calling on both major political parties to address energy issues, the president of Conoco Inc.'s worldwide petroleum operations has urged Houston business men to make known their concerns about energy to campaigning politicians.

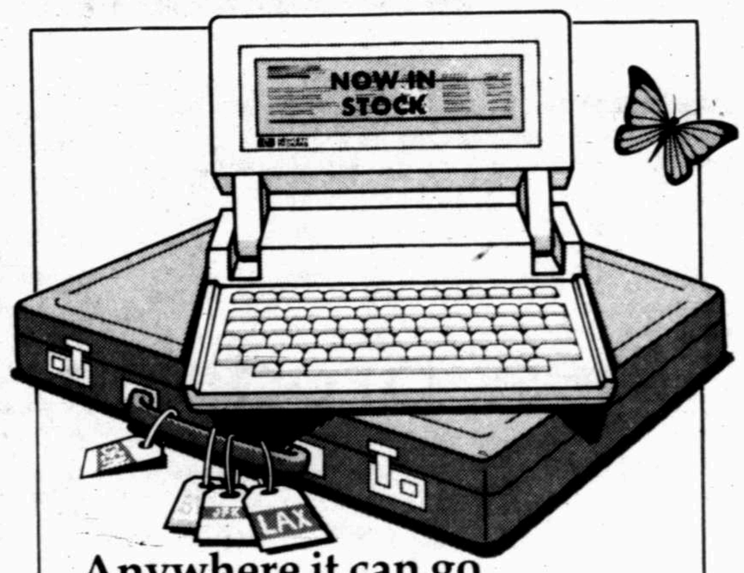

"We have the opportunity to make our voices heard, as the political candidates come calling for support," said Conoco's Constantine S. "Dino" Nicandros. "This city's future and that of the country depend a great deal on it." Conoco is a subsidiary of the Du Pont Company.

Nicandros spoke bluntly to the Houston Rotary Club, saying that the era of decreased dependence on oil imports already has passsed. He said Americans must support energy exploration in order to avoid the trap of dependency.

The Congress, he said, is restricting exploration through moratoria in the waters of the Outer Continental Shelf, where estimtes say half of all U.S. undiscovered oil remains.

"At the beginning of this year, the U.S. government had leased only 30 million acres — about 3 percent — of this land. The United Kingdom government has leased over twice this number of offshore acres, and Canada has leased 30 times more," he said.

"Despite the talk today of an oil glut, what we really have is an industry operating at 85 percent of capacity — a capacity that is being

Employee-owned firms creating more jobs

By ELIZABETH M. FOWLER
N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — When a company runs into serious financial problems, one of its options is to sell out to its employees on the chance that they and the community can work things out together.

The theory is that workers who own stock in a company — and are presumably worried about losing their jobs if the company collapses — will work harder and for lower wages to increase productivity.

A year ago, the Conference Board, the company-supported research organization, published a report giving case histories of a half-dozen companies that had been turned over to their employees in the last decade.

Those were years of high inflation, restricted growth and severe recession. Now that the economy has recovered and entered a period of strong growth without appreciable inflation, the question arises: What has become of those six companies and the jobs they tried to keep alive?

According to a recent spot-check, two of the companies are prospering, one has moved into the black, and one is struggling. Two others have passed on to new owners.

According to Corey Rosen, executive director of the National Center for Employee Ownership, based in Arlington, Va., the employee-owned companies have done well in creating jobs.

"We did a study," Rosen said. "We looked at the buyouts broadly and we found that they created many new jobs." In fact, the study found that "employee-owned firms generally have an impressive record of job creation, with an average annual employment gain three times that of comparable conventional firms."

Rosen cited, in particular, the turnaround at the Weirton Steel Co., a maker of specialty steel products in Weirton, W. Va. "Weirton Steel has brought back 1,000 workers," he said. "The company is quite proud of that. It now employs 8,200 workers compared with 7,200 at the time the employees took over."

While the Weirton takeover occurred only nine months ago, earnings figures for the first and second quarters show improvement. The company reported income of $22.8 million in the second quarter, up from $9.7 million in the first quarter. Figures from a year earlier were unavailable.

At the Republic Hose Manufacturing Co., a small concern in Youngstown, Ohio, employment has risen to 150 people from 50 in 1979, when the employees bought the company, according to Rosen. Republic makes high-pressure hose for use in trucks, farm implements and drilling equipment. Republic declined to release complete earnings figures, but it said sales for the current year would be between $8 million and $10 million. Sales last year were about $5 million, a company spokesman said.

Hyatt-Clark Industries of Clark, N.J., now employs about 1,550 workers, compared with 800 when the employee buyout went into effect in 1981. Hyatt, once part of General Motors, had a long history of making bearings.

Earnings figures for the company are not released, a spokesman said, but added that the company lost money in its first fiscal year. The second year and the current year, however, were said to be profitable.

India hopes to put solar energy to variety of uses

Tarun Basu
Deutsche Presse-Agentur

NEW DELHI, India (DPA) — In the cold and remote Leh district of Kashmir, an entire village inhabited mostly by Tibetan refugees is powered by solar energy.

In two luxury hotels in the Indian capital, solar energy is used to heat water for the swimming pool and the rooms.

The government plans to use solar energy for oil prospecting as India seeks a wide range of applications in using the sun's rays not only for domestic cooking but for running small railway stations to powering street lights.

India, faced with a growing energy demand like the rest of the world, has started finding uses for solar energy.

The government has increased its outlay on solar energy for 1985-90 by about 15 times over the previous five years.

It has also offered subsidies to manufacturers of solar equipment — often to the tune of half the cost price — besides offering loans and liberal tax concessions.

As a result, a whole range of private companies have gone in for the manufacture of solar appliances to cash in on an anticipated boom. And they are not doing too badly.

A private company in western India announced a seven-fold jump in its sale of solar equipment in three years. Most of them sell domestic cookers, which are cheaper than conventional gas burners, and solar hot water systems are also catching up among the urban middle class.

Even some banks have started giving loans to customers for the purchase of these cookers.

The government's Department of Non-Conventional Energy Resources is trying to impress upon potential investors that solar power works out cheaper in the long run because it has no recurring operating or running costs.

"The initial cost of solar power is fairly high but not when you take into account the running costs and investments in power plants and transmission lines that are otherwise required," explains Maheshwar Dayal, department secretary.

During the past three years, several government-sponsored demonstration systems have been installed at hospitals, breweries, bakeries, textile mills, water distillation plants, pilgrim centers and hostels.

The systems have proven to work well, and because of this more users are now willing to utilize them for a variety of applications.

A $12.5 million project for large scale application of photovoltaic systems, which catch the sun's rays and convert into electricity, has been drawn up.

These are to be used mainly in rural areas for pumping, irrigation, lighting and even operation of community television sets.

Virginia mining company fined for fatal accident

ROANOKE, Va. (AP) — The state's largest coal-producing company has been fined $47,500 for five safety violations which federal investigators say led to the worst Virginia mine disaster in more than 25 years.

Investigators for the federal Mine Safety and Health Administration said Clinchfield Coal Co.'s failure to erect a curtain at an entry cross-cut in its McClure No. 1 mine allowed unsafe levels of methane to build, triggering a June 1983 explosion which killed seven miners.

"Basically, when they made the breakthrough (the cross-cut) they did not adequately change the ventilation procedures," said agency administrator Joe Lamonica.

A cross-cut is where two sections of mine are joined together by an opening. The ventilation in one section of a mine can be altered if a cross-cut with another section is not closed off.

The fine is $2,500 less than maximum $50,000 fine the agency could have imposed for the five violations.

Failure to construct the curtain in the Dickenson County mine brought

The company was cited for four other safety violations and was fined $10,000 for each citation. The violations were: failure to ventilate properly a set of entries involved in the explosion, failure to follow ventilation and dust control policies set by the agency, inadequate pre-shift examination of the section where the explosion occurred, and failure of an on-shift examination to reveal problems in the section.

An agency report issued in April said a lack of communication was responsible for the violations.

"It was evident ... that the higher levels of mine management had discussed procedures for maintaining the separation between air currents," the report said.

"It is also evident that the higher levels of mine management failed to ensure that the cut-through procedures were established, fully understood and followed by the persons responsible for carrying them out," the report said.

Earlier this summer, federal prosecuters decided not to bring criminal charges against Clinchfield.

TRC shows drilling activity up

Drilling and completion records just released by the Texas Railroad Commission shows that new holes drilled and completions are up considerably above the same nine month period in 1983, but drilling applications declined slightly.

For the month of July 3,545 permits to drill, deepen, plug back, service or amend were filed with the Commission, bringing to 22,527 for the period ending July 31, but applications for the same period in 1983 were 23,339 ft.

There were, however, 14,024 completions to date in 1984 as compared to 12,572 completions in 1983. Total completions in the month of July were 1,944. There were 17,389 new holes drilled to date, as compared to 14,836 for the same period last year.

Now, before you take to the air there are a few checkpoints which Hank's Flite Center can help you move through. The first checkpoint is ground school. Ground schools have changed in the last few years. Though many schools have been made shorter, Hank will offer one more thirty-six hour school September 8th, 9th, 15th, and 16th at the Odessa Executel. Hank feels that the extra classroom time helps prepare a person to be a safer pilot. It just makes sense. The better informed a person is the better he will be able to respond at critical times. Whether you are seeking a private license or trying to prepare for a flight review, Hank's ground school can help make your dream come true. Give him a call at 563-1192 to register for the next class.

The Federal Avaition Administration's written examination is checkpoint number two. Hank's Flite Center is the only one in the area that is authorized to give these examinations. Hank will administer tests on a individual basis or will be glad to set up a testing time for groups of ten or more. Just give him a call to make an appointment.

Now, you're ready for checkpoint number three, a medical examination. A number of doctor's in our area have been authorized by the FAA to give these physicals. Hank will be glad to give you a list of those doctors.

At this point, you will realize it's time to get off the ground with your flight instruction. Once again, Hank's Flite Center is the logical place to go. Hank's is the oldest flight school in the Permian Basin and can offer you years of experience. He offers complete training for commercial, instrument, flight instructor, multi-engine and air transport pilots. Low wing aircraft are used for this outstanding in-flight training program.

The final checkpoint is the flight test. Quality flight instruction at Hank's Flight Center will make this checkpoint a lot easier to pass. Then, next thing you know, you'll be taking to the air with a pilot's license in your pocket.

Give Hank a call today at 563-1192 and let him help make your dreams come true. Or, go by the center at Air Terminal and see the full line of pilot supplies which Hank also offers. Oh, by the way, until you actually get your pilot's license you may want to take advantage of the charter service at Hank's Flite Center. They think of everything!

Zubiate's Restoration restores furniture to its original beauty

Richard Zubiate, owner of Zubiate's Restoration is a meticulous craftsman. When Richard opened his business in Midland 2 years ago, one of his goals was to bring old world craftsmanship to the area. Recognizing the sentimental value of some furniture, he saw a real need for someone to be able to restore worn and broken pieces to their original beauty.

Restoration involves more than just stripping and refinishing furniture; although, that is often part of the task. Moreover, patching holes with whatever material is available does not qualify as restoration. It's so much more than that.

If a leg is missing from Grandpa's favorite chair, restoration involves carefully carving and staining another leg to match the remaining three, not just using the most similar style available. After all, shouldn't the chair look just like it did when Grandpa leaned back in it and whittled whistles for the kids.

If a piece of wood is missing from the dresser or chest of drawers where Aunt Mary always hid the Christmas gifts she made by hand, restoration means matching the wood and carefully fitting the new piece in place.

On the otherhand, what if Grandma's big dining table, the one that the whole family gathered around for Christmas dinner years ago, has been stained or scarred? Then, restoration involves light sanding or bleaching to restore the original beauty. Unnecessarily replacing the entire table top just isn't the same.

Remember when everyone would take a rush or cane bottom chair to the front porch, where they would reflect on the day's events and watch the sunset. Restoration means weaving new pieces of cane, rush, or rotan in the same pattern as the old material which rotted out of those chairs.

If a beautiful inlayed wood design on a buffet, which you feel in love with at an antique auction, is loose, restoration means cleaning and re-gluing each piece in its original place. Always using the original material when possible and meticulously matching the original design.

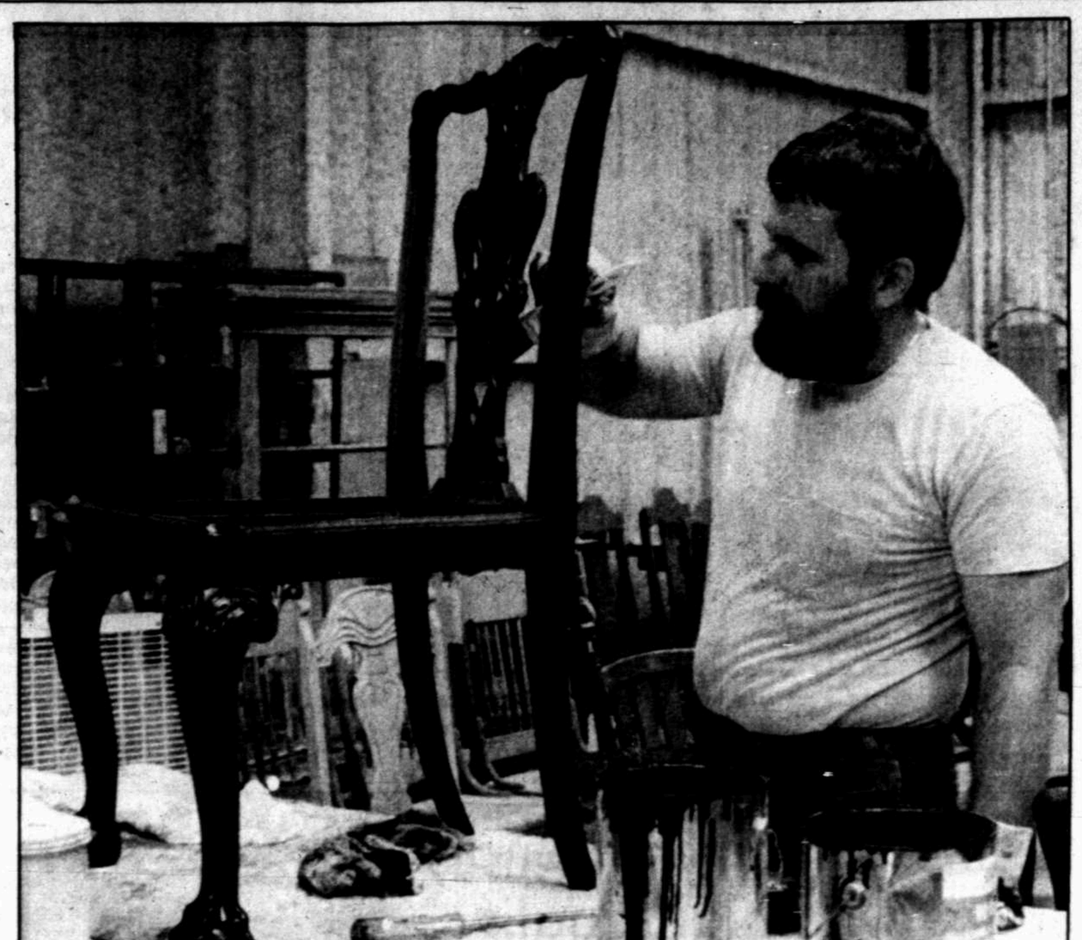

Richard Zubiate knows the meaning of restoration and is dedicated to that task. Along with the equipment, he has the craftsmen who can make furniture look like it did originally. Lilo Dominguez and Leo Sanchez are both skilled woodworkers and expert weavers. Gary Chizmar has many skills and is an expert at carving animals in doors and other objects. Mr. Zubiate is also an expert craftsman and has an extensive knowledge of wood types and furniture design. As part of the service, Mr. Zubiate researches the origin and history of the furniture he restores.

Often, the need is not just for repair, but also for additional pieces. If you have two chairs of a certain style and need two more, Zubiate's Restoration can help you. By using one chair as a pattern, they can make as many more as you need.

Richard Zubiate understands the sentimental value of older furniture. He also understands that people highly value their more contemporary furniture, which sometimes needs repair. Thus, Zubiate's Restoration is prepared to restore the contemporary along with the antique.

Maybe, you are a do-it-yourselfer that likes to refinish furniture, but find that stripping the furniture is a big chore. You can have it stripped at Zubiate's Restoration. You can also save a lot of money by having mirrors resilvered there. As Mr. Zubiate points out, resilvering is not nearly as expensive as replacing beveled mirrors.

If you have some furniture that needs to be restored, call Mr. Zubiate today at 682-5773 or go by 1611 E. Taylor. He is diligent in his work and enjoys pleasing his customers. His motto may very well be, "Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with all your might."

Gary Chizmar, of Zubiate's Restoration, pays careful attention to each detail as he refinishes this ornate chair. This attention to detail is characteristic of all their work.

Ed Stewart of Midland Building Specialties installs a storm door which will provide this home with added insulation and protection. Midland Building Specialties also offers high quality replacement doors and windows. For a free estimate give them a call at 683-2184 or 563-3013.

Replacement doors and windows add insulation

Do you have old wooden window frames that just won't open and close as easily as they should? Or, how about, doors that drag and let in heat and dust? If you do, it's time to look into replacing them and the friendly experts at Midland Building Specialties are the people to consult.

They can replace those old wooden window frames with aluminum frames. The benefits of such a change are numerous. Aluminum replacement windows will not swell and stick like their old wooden counterparts. Furthermore, when a window is properly installed it will help to seal out that West Texas dust.

Likewise, plain old wooden doors just can not compare to the aluminum and Stanley steel replacement doors which are available at Midland Building Specialties. These doors are available in a number of styles and colors and can eliminate the drafts and loss of air that you find with wooden doors. In turn, this can really save you money on your cooling and heating costs.

Because the proper replacement windows and doors can add insulation to your home, they qualify for an energy tax credit. Be sure to ask Midland Building Specialties manager, Ken VanHoozer, about this when you are selecting your doors and windows.

In addition, Midland Building Specialties can put an end to the annoying task of painting your home every 3 years. You have long been aware of Midland Building Specialties' quality service and window and door product lines. Now, they offer beautiful maintenance-free siding for your home.

They carry Revere steel siding which is well known for adding extra insulation, being incredibly durable, and offering a wide variety of colors as well as a life time guarantee. Likewise, the Mastic vinyl siding which they offer is a great value. Mastic siding is guaranteed to never crack, bend, rust or scratch. It provides an easily cleaned, paint-free exterior in a number of colors. The extra insulation it gives is also something to consider. The experts at Midland Building Specialties are also prepared to blow in extra insulation if your home needs it.

Before you paint your home again or purchase siding from a company you don't know, call Midland Building Specialties. Since they are a local company, they are commited to providing their customers with outstanding service now and for years to come. They will be glad to give you a free estimate. Ken Vanhoozer feels confident that his company can offer you the best prices around, not to mention the best service.

Consider also the many benefits of having Midland Building Specialties dress up your patio with a patio cover or screen room by Howmet Corporation. They also offer carport covers which can help keep your car looking new.

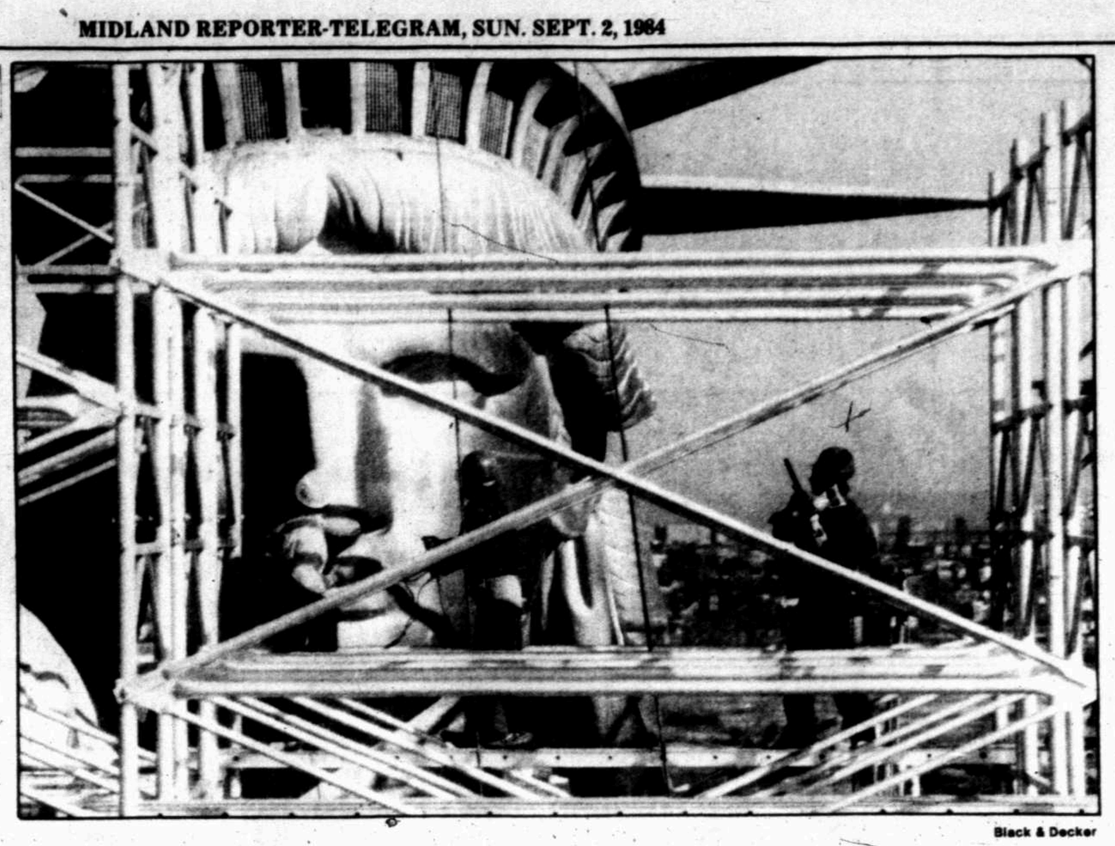

In addition to all of this, Midland Building Specialties is a retailer for beautiful Levolor Riviera Mini blinds, Interior Aspenwood Wall Planking and a number of commercial type doors and windows by Republic Steel.

Midland Building Specialties is a division of Mid-West Glass Company which has served the Midland area since 1942. Next time you consider an additional investment in your home and you want a name you can trust in, call Midland Building Specialties. You will find competitive prices for very high quality materials and workmanship. Free estimates and job references are available. Stop in at 900 West Front or give them a call at 683-2184 or 563-3013.

Largest food company unknown

CHICAGO (AP) — That lamp you just turned off — Beatrice. The peanut butter you spread across the bread — Beatrice. The suitcase you packed — Beatrice. The bowl of food you set down for the cat — what else? — Beatrice.

If you watched the Summer Olympics, and about 180 million people saw some of the 16-day television coverage, you know Beatrice Companies Inc.

What you may not have known is how much you actually knew about them all along.

When the year began, Beatrice already was a major diversified food and consumer-products concern whose brand names include Samsonite luggage, La Choy foods and Tropicana drinks, to name just a few.

Then this summer it acquired Esmark Inc., so that Beatrice now also owns Avis Inc., the auto-rental concern; International Playtex, the personal-products company; and Swift-Hunt-Wesson, a major food-products company.

The result: Beatrice is the nation's largest food and consumer products company, with annual sales totaling $13.5 billion.

To make the point that consumers have actually known Beatrice for many years, the Chicago-based concern unleashed a $23 million advertising wave on TV and print outlets, most of it displayed during the Winter and Summer Olympics and supplemented by a $7 million campaign involving coupons and other promotions.

What made Beatrice unusual among the other sponsors, suppliers and licensees on the Olympic bandwagon was that this round of commercials did not so much try to sell products as to establish a corporate identity.

"We found going into this campaign, almost all of our brand names had greater awareness than the name 'Beatrice,'" said Pat Kane, director of Beatrice advertising in Chicago. "The idea here was to borrow some of that equity so that the whole becomes greater than the sum of its parts.

"That way," he continued, "we could take this new awareness of Beatrice and turn it back into new products."

The scotch you poured during an Olympic break, the blinds you lowered to cut glare on the TV set, the sausage you sliced for the guests, the rented car they drove over in ...

"Beatrice," said the voice-over ending each commercial as a child, a homemaker, a fisherman, even a cat looked on approvingly. "You've known us all along."

But at least one commentator, tongue planted firmly in cheek, expressed surprise.

"It seems," David Gritten of the Los Angeles Herald Examiner wrote recently, "...that this conglomerate called Beatrice has quietly been taking over half the free world while we've all had our minds on smaller things like the economy and the threat of nuclear war."

The company does not own half the free world. But from a single creamery founded in 1894 in Beatrice, Neb., by an out-of-work butter and egg businessman, Beatrice now markets more than 9,000 products under more than 100 major brand names through more than 100 companies.

Beatrice hardly built its empire in secrecy. From its humble beginnings, the company grew slowly as an innovative, if single-minded, dairy producer and marketer. Still known as Beatrice Foods Co., it began diversifying in 1964, adding mobile homes, gas barbecues and plumbing supplies and kept on acquiring.

Beatrice jumped into the headlines in February as the rumored target of a takeover by Nestle SA, the Swiss-based conglomerate that is one of its major competitors.

Instead, two months later Beatrice bought Esmark, a $2.8 billion acquisition that represented the largest leveraged buyout of a company outside the oil industry.

A leveraged buyout is an acquisition made mostly with borrowed funds that later are repaid with the target company's operating revenue or via the sale of assets, and there are rumors Beatrice will divest some of its operations to help pay back the debt.

Flight delays riles airlines private pilots

WASHINGTON (AP) — A battle for the skies between the country's commercial airlines and hundreds of thousands of private pilots is heating up, with both sides saying the other is largely to blame for airport congestion and flight delays.

Chief executives from 20 airlines on Thursday accused the Federal Aviation Administration of ignoring the impact of private pilots on airway congestion. At the same time, they said, the agency is preparing to impose restrictions on the number of flights by commercial carriers during peak travel times at busy airports.

"While threatening far-reaching disruptions to the public service provided by scheduled airlines, (the FAA) virtually ignores the other operators making use of the air traffic control system," the airline executives wrote to the agency.

The Air Transport Association, which represents the carriers, says if the FAA wants to ease the traffic load on air traffic controllers it should shift general aviation traffic to less congested times and routes before forcing changes in scheduled flights.

The suggestion causes private pilots to bristle.

"These are public resources, public facilities," says John Baker, president of the Aircraft Owners and Pilots Association, referring to the nation's public airfields. He compared the airlines' arguments to motorists being forced off the highways so commuter buses could have easier access.

Baker, whose organization represents more than 265,000 pilots and owners of small planes, says general aviation is not to blame for commercial flight delays and attributes the problem to "greedy scheduling" by the air carriers.

The FAA has argued that most of the delay problem stems from airlines bunching too many flights during peak travel periods and through certain airports. It said scheduling changes are needed at airports in Denver, Atlanta, Chicago, Newark and New York City, where three-fourths of the delays occur.

While some airline executives, including Eastern Airlines president Frank Borman, acknowledge that competitive scheduling has contributed significantly to the delay problem, they argue that there are many other factors involved as well.

For example, argued the executives, air traffic controllers manning the FAA's 20 centers are often overburdened with not only scheduled airline traffic, but also thousands of small aircraft which fly unrestricted under FAA direction.

Steady economy sought

NEW YORK (AP) — As they mark the traditional "Business New Year" at Labor Day, Wall Streeters will be hoping for brisk — but not TOO brisk — economic activity in the months ahead.

The seemingly upside-down "bad news is good news" reasoning that has drawn so much attention lately in the financial world still prevails as summer vacationers return to work.

This school of thought holds that an economy proceeding at too rapid a pace is likely to derail, and conversely that a slow but steady expansion has a better chance of lasting a long time.

Evidence has begun to appear in the past few weeks that the economy is indeed cooling off. That belief was regarded as the driving force behind the stock market's powerful rally in early August.

"After six quarters of torrid growth, the U.S. business expansion finally is showing signs of slowing," said Allen Sinai at Shearson Lehman-American Express in a recent commentary.

To underscore that belief, the government's index of leading economic indicators dropped in June and July. That marked the first consecutive declines for the index, which is designed to detect future economic trends, since the 1981-82 recession.

Sinai says economic growth in the third quarter, which ends Sept. 30, is likely to come in at an annual rate of 3 percent to 5 percent — a respectable showing, but well below the numbers posted in the first half of the year.

Economists at Smith Barney, Harris Upham & Co. estimate a rate of 4 percent to 5 percent for the quarter.

As one might expect, the signs of slowing have prompted talk among some observers of a possible new recession in 1985. But the optimists argue that even with a slowing in consumer spending, business outlays for plants and equipment can keep the economy moving ahead for some time to come.

"Capital spending has been the strongest portion of the U.S. economy over the last year," observed Richard Rippe, economist at Dean Witter Reynolds Inc.

"We expect this sector to continue to advance at a rapid pace, although somewhat more slowly than in recent quarters, through 1985."

Just about everyone agrees that there are several major perils and question marks in the business and financial outlook — the unbalanced federal budget, the troubled banking system, and the heavy debt burden on developing countries, to name three of the most prominent.

Interest rates remain stubbornly high, and the stock market, even with its recent revival, has not yet mustered the strength to regain last year's heights.

Yet the main worry on investors' minds — with their memories of all the turmoil and trouble of the 1970s and early 1980s — seems to be that things as they now stand are simply too good to last.

"As summer draws to a close, the U.S. economy and financial markets are performing better than at any time in the last 20 years," Sinai said.

"Real economic growth is being sustained at an above-potential pace, although it is moderating. Gains in employment remain strong.

"Inflation rates remain quite low, despite the boom in the real domestic economy. Aftertax corporate profits for 1983-84 will show the biggest back-to-back increases since the Korean War."

What's more, Sinai concluded, "The economy and financial markets are amazingly free of excesses, frictions or the imbalances that usually foreshadow trouble."

Lily Tomlin, alter ego of Edith Ann and Ernestine, is shaping up three new characters: Edie, Marge and Lynn.

Woman of many faces

By JANE ARDMORE
King Features Syndicate

Lily Tomlin — a master of comic characters. You're talking with her and suddenly she's become Ernestine, the telephone operator from "Laugh-In" and from the one-woman show "Appearing Nitely," which earned her a special Tony Award in 1977.

Well, Ms. Tomlin is working on a new one-woman show she hopes to take to New York this fall, at the latest next spring.

"Since time keeps passing," she says, "and they (her characters, who have become stars in their own right) don't stand still, Ernestine has been going through some transformation. Her whole career was based on the telephone company's omnipotence.

"Well, Ernestine nowdays is fit to be tied," says Ms. Tomlin. "She never had to be. In fact, she used to say how nasty I was, always holding her back. She can't be held back any more. AT&T is out vying for customers since the divestiture. 'Thank you,' the words stick in her craw. 'Every Tom, Dick, and Harry can open a company. Pa Bell, door bell. I might as well work for Taco Bell.' "

Ms. Tomlin flings up her slender hands, then shakes her straight dark hair and is immediately transformed into 5-year-old Edith Ann. "I want her to do nothing but laugh on her next outing. I'd like to have her come out periodically, laughing that self-delighted young sound. It's hard to get your voice to that pitch." But she gets it. Ms. Tomlin leans back in her gauzy white blouse and for the moment is Edith Ann.

And Tess, the bag woman who always has evidence. When she used to go to mythic authorities and tell them there was something wrong with the world, that it was cracked, they didn't believe her. "She's even more involved now," explains Ms. Tomlin, "with getting her overview of the history of humanity. She studies at the library."

AND MS. TOMLIN is shaping up three other characters: Edie, Marge and Lynn, who represent the continuum from radical to conservative and whom she invented to reflect those changing political experiences.

Obviously, Ms. Tomlin's material has shifted somewhat from her first all-woman show at the Biltmore Theater. She says, "I'd just come off television and was thought of as a concert act. I had to do one-nighters before huge audiences in amphitheaters when my real taste was to play legitimate theater, like 1,000 seats, in a city, night after night. I decided to go to New York and play a limited run."

All Ms. Tomlin asked was not to be publicly humiliated. What happened? She was a big hit. "Then everyone said we had to extend the show. I said I couldn't. They said, 'You have to,' and we extended for five weeks, which sold out like in half an hour.

"When they said we had to extend again, I said, 'If we announce a national tour, they'll know I mean it.' I was naive and silly. When I make a success next time, I'll be happy to stay all year. I love to play New York. I love to have a theater to go to every night."

Once upon a time there was a stigma attached to being a funny lady/female comedian. "Yes," she agrees. "They depended on self-deprecation. Most of the people doing stand-up comedy when I was a youngster didn't appeal to me. It was an offensive and demeaning type of comedy. To be funny, women put themselves down as ugly, fat or stupid. That was the trip they played. I found that divisive rather than unifying.

"Real comedy to me is unifying, like real drama. I never did think of comedy and drama being separate. The stand-up persona was never my style. If I thought of something to do, I thought of a character in which to do it.

BETWEEN THE LINES

Q. I think Mel Gibson is a fine actor and absolutely gorgeous. Please tell me everything possible about him.

Vicki Walchak
Davenport, Iowa

A. He's 28 and actually an American by birth — he was born in Peekskill, N.Y., the sixth of 11 children of a railroad worker and his wife. When he was 12, his father was injured at work and received a large insurance settlement. With the money, he moved his family to Australia.

Gibson went to Catholic school in Sydney and then to the prestigious National Institute of Dramatic Arts, the result of his sister having sent in an application in his name. (She'd also sent in the $5 fee, so he'd felt obligated to show up for the audition.)

Right after graduation, he was cast in the low-budget cult favorite, "Mad Max" (he looked the part of a rough warrior, apparently, having been in a barroom brawl the previous night). That led to the sequels, "The Road Warrior" and "Mad Max 3" which he starts shooting in Australia next week.

Other films you may have seen him in: "Tim," "Gallipoli," "The Year of Living Dangerously" and "The Bounty." Next up: "The River," in which he co-stars with Sissy Spacek as a Tennessee farmer, due at Christmas, and "Mrs. Soffel," co-starring Diane Keaton, due next February.

Mel Gibson

You'll be interested to know that, despite his extreme good looks, he's considered quiet and shy and a devoted family man. He and wife Robyn have four kids: a new son, 2-year-old twin sons and a 4-year-old daughter.

Q. Can you please update me on Olympic Gold medalist Scott Hamilton?

Janice Burton
Moline, Ill.

A. He's skating, typically. The Denver-based Hamilton has been busy around the country with skating exhibitions since coming back with the gold from Sarajevo. Then he took a couple of weeks off to rest.

This month, though, he starts a tour with the Ice Capades, as part of a multi-year contract he signed after returning. He should be on the road, in major cities, through May.

Q. I must be Laura Branigan's biggest fan. Can you tell me about her movie plans and whether she'll have another single from the "Self Control" album.

T.J. Culhane
Waterbury, Conn.

A. She's finished a movie called "Mugsy's Girls," which an associate describes as a "female 'Animal House,' set in a sorority with Ruth Gordon as the housemother." It was due for release in August. After that, she was supposed to start a dramatic part in the suspense thriller "Sea Trial" this month, but shooting has been pushed back, at least for a few months.

On the musical front: She's been on the road since July and plans to finish in September in Lake Tahoe. She just taped an appearance on a special called "The Gift of Songs" scheduled to air at Christmas, and she does have a new single from "Self Control" called "The Lucky One."

Laura Branigan

You should see the video for it, which she shot last month, any minute.

Cheryl Tiegs

Q. I think Cheryl Tiegs is the most beautiful girl in the world. Is she still modeling? Where does she live? Is she seeing anyone?

Joseph Fleshe
Clarks Summit, Pa.

A. She's still modeling, but not as much as she used to — a few magazines, a few spots for Cover Girl. Recently, she's been spending most of her time working on her fashion lines for Sears, including a new, higher-priced line, Tiegs II, due this fall.

She lives in New York and used to spend a lot of time at the end of Long Island, in Montauk, when she was married to photographer Peter Beard (they're in the process of getting a divorce). She is now seen around town a lot with Tony Peck, Gregory Peck's son.

Q. Is Willie Nelson the singer of a song I heard on a TV special called "Crazy, Crazy for Loving You"? Also, what's he currently doing?

Lillian Allshouse
Brauns Mills, N.J.

A. That, indeed, was Willie. And he's doing what he usually does — he's on the road performing. After his famous Fourth of July picnic in Texas, he hit the road for South Dakota, Canada, Wyoming, Montana, Iowa, Michigan, Wisconsin, New Orleans, Illinois, Indiana and Minnesota.

The next four weeks, he'll be in upstate New York; Pennsylvania; Foxboro, Mass., (the town council wouldn't let the Jacksons in, but they will let Willie, dueting that night with old friend Waylon Jennings); Kansas City, Little Rock and Memphis. Then, after a short layover, he might do a stint at a Broadway theater in New York.

But that's not all. He has a movie duet out in a few weeks, "Songwriter," "a surreal bio of Willie's life," according to co-star and pal Kris Kristofferson, "but then Willie's life is surreal to begin with." He has another, "The Red-Headed Stranger," based on his song, perennially set to go into production.

He also has a new album out,

Willie Nelson

"City of New Orleans," and should have a new single with Julio Iglesias, "As Time Goes By." However, their record company pulled it back right after release, reportedly fearing it would conflict with another Iglesias duet — this one with Diana Ross. It's still tentatively set for release.

LILY

SHE CONTINUES, "And today, although women are still limited in our culture, still women have evolved somewhat. Certainly they are no more limited in the comedy of our time than in the culture of our time. Where there were not many women comedians in the business when I started, there are many more now doing comedy with high quality and perception."

She, for example, is playing one of the most demanding and oddest characters she has ever done — Edwina Cutwater, opposite Steve Martin in an upcoming movie, "All of Me."

Edwina is a woman with incredible wealth and an incurable heart problem. She has bought everything she ever wanted except health, and now that she is about to die, she is determined to have her soul transmigrated into her stableman's daughter so that she can live the life she never had.

"She's an eccentric, true," muses Ms. Tomlin, fluttering her hands like Edwina,"but you have sympathy for her too."

"She's never had any fun or sex either and doesn't approve of people who do, but she's also the kind of person who never takes her pills with a simple glass of water. She hides them in Beluga caviar and washes them down with Dom Perignon Champagne."

EDWINA'S PLAN goes awry — her soul slips into Steve Martin's body by mistake, so she continues to live and speak through him. "I control the right side of his body," she explains, "he controls the left. We affect one another. The movie is about male and female, and real unconditional love because here are two people sharing one body. It is absolute intimacy. Very funny, but very touching as well.

"It's a wonderful performance for Steve," Ms. Tomlin says. "It's also all-out hilarious farce for which you have a rationale. It was a fun picture to make. Very pleasant. Diretor Carl Reiner is very easygoing, and Steve is kind and witty, I felt very affectionate towards him. He's not a demonstrative man and I didn't want to make him uncomfortable, but I felt almost maternal."

It is Ms. Tomlin's feeling that holds the magic — the tenderness and caring which are the other side of the comic and make her work universal.

Not that Mary Jean Tomlin grew up with any such illusions of grandeur. Back in Detroit, the child of working-class parents she loved television and her favorites included Lucille Ball, Imogene Coca, Bea Lillie, Jean Carroll and Phyllis Diller. "I had quite an embracing range of taste even at age 10," she recalls.

Ms. Tomlin never dreamed of being a comedian. What she did dream of was being something that would give her status, freedom and independence. At Wayne State University she majored in pre-med with the idea of becoming a doctor. What catapulted her into comedy was an accidental humiliation.

She explains, "I was in zoology class with a friend who was quite imperious in her manner. Beautiful and imperious." Ms. Tomlin raises her eyebrows. "'I'm going over to the university theater and read for 'The Mad Woman of Chaillot,' she said. 'You ought to go too. They are casting a lot of small parts.' Small parts! The way she said it!

"I DID GO over...terribly nervous. There were dozens of students, drama students intent on getting roles. I was so petrified that every time they asked me to read I'd say, 'Later.' Finally, they just called me up and asked me to do a walk-on. I said 'Fabulous'...to get the part without having to go through the fire.

"I got to be one of the mad women who has to go to the cellar. I had to come down these stairs and improvise on the way." She was so funny that every night the drama students would all come out front to see what she'd do. She felt perfectly at home on stage. She sensed that this suited her, and the thought occurred that maybe she might be able to make a living doing this.

Ms. Tomlin continues, "Shortly after, I heard about a revue the drama students were going to do and I went over and got in the company, but then I got petrified again because everyone else could dance and sing and had a history of performing."

They gave her a part in several skits, but she was so nervous that every day when she came back, they'd given her parts to someone else. "Finally I was down to one part, in a skit with the star of the show, a friend of mine, a very close friend, of whom I was terrified. She was tall and glamorous and wore electric blue French-cut tights." Ms. Tomlin slides down in her chair, stretches her legs full length and becomes a siren.

"Now I was sort of in a nerdy mode. As they'd taken away my roles, I'd gotten smaller and a little nerdier every day. Now I had this one bit left: I was playing a presenter at the Academy Awards. It was my last vestige of opportunity. And my friend, the star, was leaning against the piano seductively like this..." She flings back her hair. "I sort of mumbled my lines and couldn't get anything out."

"What did you say?" she said, and Ms. Tomlin went to pieces. Exploded. It was the final humiliation and as she did her bit she adlibbed wildly, gained confidence as she went along, and was fantastic. The rest of the cast went crazy. They didn't give her back her parts, but when the student producer needed five more minutes for the show, she did her take-off on a Grosse Pointe lady (this was a Detroit kid and Grosse Pointe was the posh suburb she'd never seen).

THE CHARACTER SHE improvised became the Tasteful Lady. "I talked about my social work and charities," explains Ms. Tomlin. "My life was tasteful, my social work was tasteful, someone in total control. And then I would sort of get up from the chair in an ungainly way and the woman was human.

"I did that piece in the variety show. I also did Imogene Coca's strip tease with the overcoat, and became a little celebrated in Detroit for about a minute."

Throughout childhood she had taken tap and ballet. All the kids did — it was part of the recreational activity at the nearest park. She'd always put on shows and danced, but it was part of neighborhood activity and no one even dreamed of doing it for real.

Ms. Tomlin did not finish college. Instead, she started working in coffee houses around Detroit, with her younger brother, Richard. "He's one of the funniest people who ever walked," says Ms. Tomlin, "but had no theatrical ambitions whatsoever. (He's now a builder.) I pressed him into service and one time got him to go to the Village with me — we heard they were looking for English performers.

"When we got to the desk I registered as 'Lily and Richard Tomlin' because it sounded so British, and through that I met someone who eventually introduced me when I was getting an Off-Broadway part and that's how 'Lily' stuck.

"Meanwhile, Richard was always walking out on me. We'd be standing in the wings and he'd decide he didn't want to really go on and I had to adapt the material to a single."

IN 1965, SHE took her talent to The Improvisation, Upstairs at the Downstairs and at Cafe Au Go Go in New York. It was at the Upstairs that she first ran into Joan Rivers.

"This was 15 years ago, late '60's, and Joan used to play in the Downstairs as a single on weekends. She didn't wish to play during the week, so they hired the great singer, Mabel Mercer. I, who was with the revue Upstairs, opened for Mabel Downstairs."

Today, because of television, Joan Rivers might seem to have crossed the line in terms of what a woman stand-up comedian can do in use of language and subject. Actually, female headliners who worked Las Vegas did that strong kind of nightclub routine, reminds Ms. Tomlin. The difference is the medium.

And the difference is the wider world in which women are now living...the women's movement, something with which Ms. Tomlin, like Jane Fonda, Marlo Thomas and Carol Burnett, has been deeply involved.

In Ms. Tomlin's new show, Edie, Marge and Lynn will show the kind of influence the women's movement had on them in the '70s, and all the other characters will move along as they have.

These characters are very real people to Ms. Tomlin: Tess, the bag lady; Crystal, the hang-gliding quadriplegic; Bobbi-Jeanine, the piano bar entertainer; Glenna, the flower child; Boogie Woman, the joyful soul sister; Miss Sweeney, who was her second grade teacher.

WHEN YOU DON'T see Lily Tomlin on film, she's "gestating and woofing around," working on new characters. Since "9 to 5" and "The Incredible Shrinking Woman," she has done two television specials: "Lily Sold Out" (about going to Las Vegas) which won an Emmy, and "Lily for President" (about saving the world from war).

She is constantly on tour and always working on her own material, often with the help of writer/director Jane Wagner. "I do indeed depend on other people for material. Jane has written for me for years. I invent characters, but I would never have been able to do the things I've done without the help of others."

Exhibit reflects artists' interpretation of history, culture

The critically acclaimed exhibit "Masterpieces of the American West: Selections from the Anschutz Collection" went on display Saturday at the Museum of the Southwest, 1705 W. Missouri Ave. The show will remain through Oct. 28.

Masterpieces offers a survey reflecting more than 150 years of Western history and culture as interpreted and recorded by artists. The exhibit includes major works by Frederic Remington, George Catlin, Helen Frankenthaler, Jackson Pollack, Stuart Davis and Georgia O'Keeffe.

Masterpieces has not been exhibited in Texas since 1978 and the museum show is the only stop it will make in Texas for the next three years. The Atlantic Richfield Foundation and the Midcontinent Production and Southwestern Exploration Divisions, Exxon USA, worked to bring Masterpieces to the museum. Their co-sponsorship includes covering the cost of shipping, insurance, promotion, as well as providing public educational programs and docent training materials.

It's 'summertime and the living isn't easy'

By DOREEN T. HANSBURY
King Features Syndicate

Why am I happy to bid goodbye to the summer I spent all winter anticipating? But, there it is — I'm glad to see the leaves falling.

I'm tired of stepping on wet bathing suits in the bathroom. I'm tired of smelly sneakers under the beds, the coffee table, couch and piano.

I don't want to eat another hamburger, and if anyone mentions potato salad in my presence, I promise to go on a hunger strike.

I've wearied of pulling perpetual weeds in the lawn and gardens, watering, hoeing and raking.

I'm fed up with humidity, thunderstorms, and a half inch of sand in the bottom of the washer. I don't like sewing labels on everything from jeans to socks, fuzzy photos of our trip to Natureland, or melon rinds in the garbage.

I'm muscle bound from lugging baskets of vegetables from the garden to the kitchen, and I've discovered dullsville is slicing, dicing, grating, packaging and freezing. I'm bored with canning products of a vegetable patch planted so enthusiastically last spring.

I don't want another unexpected phone call at 4:30 in the afternoon from a casual acquaintance of 15 years ago, starting with, "We were driving through and just had to look you up" and ending with my meekly saying, "Why not stay with us? We have plenty of room."

I'm tickled with fall because I'm tired of laundry by the ton, glasses in the sink and trying to think of a different cool meal.

If the refrigerator had produced ice cubes as fast as the garden produced zucchini, August would have been simpler. Whoever said, "Summertime and the livin' is easy" just wasn't paying attention.

My friend Agnes pulled into the driveway one day, saying, "I've had it," and slammed the car door. I put down the bushel of tomatoes I was ready to can and took her out to the patio for a glass of lemonade. She echoed my thoughts when she snapped, "I'm fed up with summer! It has too many unexpecteds."

Agnes, who is organized enough to straighten out a pea patch and iron her bras, admitted summer had thrown a wet sneaker into her lifestyle. She listed her gripes.

— Her son had to be driven to Johnny's house for a swim party. Johnny lives 15 miles away.

— Eighteen of her children's friends showed up for dinner. She had tuna salad for four.

— When she had removed everything from the kitchen cupboards to re-paint them, her daughter arrived in tears. She'd been sent home from camp with a bad case of poison ivy.

Agnes knew she wasn't coping very well when she tearfully admitted her husband suggested separate vacations.

Olivia joined us, bringing her own lemonade, with a fresh sprig of homegrown mint. I was sure she would have a good word for the season past. (Olivia loves nothing better than having green things growing around her.)

Not so.

Poor Olivia was in a tizzy about buzzing flies, marching ants and flying things that bite. She had moved her houseful of plants outdoors and every one had been chewed, mutilated, or otherwise attacked by flying or crawling insects. She moaned, she spent the entire summer swatting and spraying. I noticed her perfume had undertones of Black Flag.

Agatha doesn't often complain, but she sighed and admitted summer had been a bore. She still hasn't learned to sit still for summer. She was raised on the farm that developed into our "Shady Acres" community. Summer for Agatha once had been cooking for extra hands, canning produce, working a kitchen garden half a mile square, and helping bring in hay if it looked like rain.

"Just can't seem to wind down the routine of summer days," she fretted.

A sudden chilly breeze made everyone feel better. We opted for coffee in the kitchen.

But I must confess, I felt a little sad at last weekend's barbecue. The hamburgers were pink on the inside, broiled to perfection on the outside; the chicken was golden and tasty; the potato salad had just enough onion, not too much vinegar, and the family looked tanned and healthy.

Just for a minute, I felt a lump in my throat, realizing that this was the last barbecue of summer. My eyes almost misted for a moment.

Then I remembered next week the kids would be in school.

The Planets, a five-member rock 'n' roll band, will perform at Spinnakers Run, Midkiff Street at Wadley Avenue, at 9:30 p.m. Wednesday. Tickets are priced at $3 in advance and $4 at the door. Originally from Albuquerque, N.M., the Planets now live in Austin. The group is opening for B.B. King at the Paolo Soleri Amphitherter, Santa Fe, N.M., Sept. 9.

Lead guitarist Fernando Von Arb, left, and vocalist Marc Storace will be onstage Saturday at Ector County Coliseum. Along with drummer Jeff Klaven and bass guitarist Mark Kohler, they are known as the Swiss rock group Krokus. The group's "Headhunter" album is gold and has sold over two million copies worldwide. The latest album, "The Blitz," was released Aug. 16 on Arista Records. Krokus is opening for Sammy Hagar.

Twin Cities Speedway to be site of demolition derby

Twin Cities Speedway is the site of a series of three demolition derbies being sponsored by the Midland Suburban Lions Club.

The first derby, held in August, had 71 cars pre-entered, including five female drivers. The second is slated for 8:30 p.m. Saturday. The third will be held at 2:30 p.m. Oct. 7.

Prize money for the derby will be paid out to the first five places with first place receiving $1,000, second place $500, third place $400, fourth place $300 and fifth place $200. A prize of $100 will be awarded to the car which was towed the farthest distance.

In all, $2,500 will be awarded.

In addition to prize money, six 6-foot trophies and nine big trophies will be given away. One of the 6-foot trophies will go to the woman staying longest in the derby and another one will be awarded for the best looking, painted and lettered car. Yet another 6-foot trophy will be given for the most cars entered from any civic group, club or fraternal organization. And the Marlboro staff will be giving away cigarettes and souvenirs.

Admission to the derby for spectators is $6 for adults, $1 for children ages 6 to 11 and children under 6 are admitted free. Twin Cities Speedway is located 15 miles west of Midland on Highway 80.

Under the established rules, no vehicle can remain stationary longer than five minutes. The demolition derby is scheduled to continue until one car is left running.

Entry fee for a car in the derby is $25 per car. A metal buyer will be on hand to buy the wrecked cars. Those interested in selling their derby cars at the end of the show need to bring the car titles.

In addition to the derby, a spectator drag will be held. In this event, those spectators who want to participate enter the car they drove to the track.

For more information call J.A. "Monty" Coldwell, a member of the Midland Suburban Lions Club, at 683-8541.

'Oxford Blues' as realistic as fairy tale

By DAVID LEE FORREST

Forrest

Although the main character in "Oxford Blues," Nick Di Angelo, is no Prince Charming, his story is about as realistic as the average fairy tale.

Nick, played by Rob Lowe, is a Las Vegas parking lot attendant who has a crush on a young blue-blooded British woman named Lady Victoria, played by Amanda Pays. Lady Victoria constantly graces the covers of magazines such as "People" and "Rolling Stone" (for no apparent reason other than she's pretty and rich).

Nick has never even come remotely close to meeting her, but he reads the articles in "People" and tells his friends that he "knows everything about her."

Because Lady Victoria is going to be attending Oxford University in the fall, Nick's most cherished dream is to also attend Oxford so that he can meet the noblewoman and make her fall madly in love with him.

In fact, women are so attracted to Nick that they descend on him out of the blue to make passes at him. One lady is so smitten with Nick that, after spending only one night with him, she gives him $500 and her expensive sportscar.

Nick does some judicious gambling with that $500 and in no time wins $14,000, which he uses to move to England to spend a year at Oxford University.

Incidentally, this young, uncultured parking lot attendant who lives in the Nevada desert also just happens to be an expert rower who immediately wins a place on the Oxford sculling team after his arrival there.

The audience has all of the above mishmash thrown at it in just the first 15 minutes of the movie.

After setting up this ludicrious, throughly unbelievable plot at breakneck speed, "Oxford Blues" does settle down a bit when Nick arrives at the college. The film doesn't really get much better, mind you, it just slows down.

Nick swaggers so arrogantly through Oxford's hallowed halls that one wants to take a wooden ruler, whack him solidly across the knuckles with it and send him back to Las Vegas.

He is not a sympathetic character, to say the least.

The point of the movie, obviously, is to have Nick become a better person under the influence of Oxford's genteel environment — to become less obnoxious, less selfish and more respectable — which, of course, he does to a certain extent.

However, his character change is so sudden, so poorly set up and comes so late in the story that it is only slightly more believable than the film's opening.

Although Lowe grossly overplays Nick, it is impossible to blame this dismal character entirely on him. Richard Boris, who wrote and directed "Oxford Blues," doesn't seem to go out of his way to help Lowe.

Boris never shows any scenes of Nick evolving. One day, he's a jerk; the next, he's a mature man.

The movie does have some redeeming touches. Many of its flashes of humor are funny. Nick's sarcastic American jokes provide an interesting contrast to the other characters' dry British wit.

The sculling sequences are also nicely done and the unique Oxford setting is interesting to see, although Nick apparently spends virtually no time attending classes there.

Judging from the noisy enthusiasm of a group of girls in the audience squealed, "I think he's just darling!" as Lowe's name rolled by in the credits.

The film's plot is so dumb, however, that even a teen heartthrob and some humor can't help "Oxford Blues" turn its Las Vegas frog into an Oxford prince.

"Oxford Blues," rated PG-13, is now showing at Midland Park Mall Cinemas.

David Lee Forrest is film critic for the Reporter-Telegram.

Films to benefit Lancaster House

The Lancaster House Committee And The Ritz Theatre, 203 N. Main St., are presenting special showings of "Annie" and "The Last Starfighter" to benefit the Museum of the Southwest for the Lancaster House.

Final showing will be today at 11 a.m. Ticket price, which includes both shows, is $4. They may be purchased in advance by calling 682-1939 or 682-8911. Tickets will be sold at showtime.

Concerts will be at bank plaza

The Midland Arts Assembly and RepublicBank First National of Midland are sponsoring a series of noon concerts at the bank's plaza downtown.

The first concert will be held Wednesday. Soprano Jane Ward and her accompanist from the Musicians Club will perform from noon to 12:15 p.m. Next up will be belly dancer H. Scherazade from 12:15 to 12:30 p.m. followed by singer Rochelle Rabouin from 12:35 to 1 p.m.

On Sept. 19, Jane Clancy Debenport will sing light opera accompanied by Midge Anderson from noon to 12:20 p.m. Both are from the Musicians Club. Then, from 12:20 to 1 p.m. the Permian Basin Chapter of the Society for the Preservation of Barber Shop Quartets in America will perform.

On Sept. 26, from noon to 12:20 p.m. Elaine Berman, of the Musicians Club, will sing followed by the United Spiritual Gospel Singers from 12:20 to 12:45 p.m. From 12:45 to 1 p.m. is unscheduled at this time, however, it is likely the Groovie Grannies will be the closing act.

No Midland Arts Assembly concert is planned for Sept. 12 because the Midland—Odessa Symphony is having its "Pops in the Plaza" concert that day at the bank's plaza.

All performances are free.

Some critic will always rave

By DAVID ELLIOTT
Copley News Service

HOLLYWOOD — I once lived near a little theater that provided a dependable chuckle, even when the film inside wasn't funny. Nearly always, the marquee said CRITICS RAVE.

If the theater owner had a global clipping service, he could have backed up his claim. For nearly every movie there's a reviewer or two, somewhere, who "raves." Even Ross Hunter's "Lost Horizon," hooted down from Cairo to Vancouver, no doubt found its advocate (perhaps the earnest culture vulture for the Shangri-la Reader?). You can't fool all the people all the time, but you can nearly always make some critics happy.

Collectively, movie reviewing is a riot of yes, no, maybe. No wonder people get confused. If Pauline and Vincent say amen to "Make Mine Mink IV," Roger and Sheila nix it, and Gene and Andy waffle between, whom should you believe?

Me, of course. Each critic will say the same. Discernment and style make a critic good, but only ego can make a critic: the bedrock faith that one's opinion matters and can survive assault. Without that, judgment becomes Jell-O. Still, why should anyone else be convinced? And the critic needs to convince — not that he is "right," but that he is worth reading.

This is not a "philosophy of film." Pick up the carving knife of auteurism here, lay on the rolling pin of Marxist analysis there, but in the critical kitchen there is no theory or system fully adequate to movies (and, even more, the whole film experience. It's that experience Pauline Kael meant when she called criticism an art, not a science.)

The only way to "get" a critic is to read him over a long time: as long as he doesn't bore you. But at least one quick fix is the parlor game Name Your Favorites. A critic is most valuable in what he likes. There are so many poor movies that demolition becomes an easy habit, and a dreary one unless eclipsed by the positive passion aroused by good films.

In choosing a dozen favorites, I've left out "Citizen Kane," "Seven Samurai," "2001," "Olympia," "The Rules of the Game" and others that would surely make a best films list (that's another game). What follows, alphabetically, are movies no less regarded but a bit more personally cherished. And their variety indicates why we (or at least I) keep going to movies.

"Atlantic City" (1980). Louis Malle's adaptation of John Guare's exquisite screenplay is about losers trying to reach inside the silk lining of success.

"The Emigrants" (1971). The most honest film about the past, a quiet rebuke to all the bombastic historical epics, Jan Troell's great work tells about a Swedish farm family's migration to America.

"Jules and Jim" (1961). Francois Truffaut's finest film tells how an over-wired femme fatale makes a passionate mess of the lives of two friends.

"Kind Hearts and Coronets" (1949). If Oscar Wilde had written films, this heartless, hilarious black comedy could be the result. In the clockwork story, prim Dennis Price lifts himself to a dukedom by trimming the family tree with shotgun, explosives, poison, etc. Eight victims, male and female, are played by Alec Guinness in a frolic of virtuosity. This tiered joke keeps ascending, and the wit ("I shot an arrow into the air, she fell to earth in Berkeley Square") saves it from unsavoriness.

"La Dolce Vita" (1960). Fellini's big show about the Via Veneto set was a scandal, and gave me dizzy teen's ideas about sex and sophistication. Now the scandal is gone and I have better ideas. But this great, ungainly epic still has the alluring ferment of urban life. Rome is the film's heroine, and seems to brood tenderly over its jaded citizens.

"The Lady from Shanghai" (1948). Orson Welles took a junk script, platinum-blonded Rita Hayworth, and directed like a house on fire. It's a splurging parody of the '40s thrillers that catch sleazy fever in the tropics, then come north for the reckoning.

Modern novel wide subject range

By JOHN W. DEATS

One thing to be said for the modern novel is that its range of subject matter, mood, and style is very wide. We have romantic, historic, naturalistic, sociological, theological, psychological, artistic, scientific, and even sports novels, and to be sure there are other categories which could be mentioned. Their moods range from frantic to serene; emotional to detached. The style of Norman Mailer is quite different from that of James Michener or Alistair Maclean. In short, the reader is offered an abundance of literature from which to choose, and what one considers ridiculous, others may consider sublime.

Two recent novels help illustrate the great diversity of the novel form. Jim Dodge's extraordinarily entertaining FUP, a short jewel of only 94 pages, is one of those very off-beat books which will give its readers much food for thought. The author's style is homespun philosophical, as he weaves a tale of two humans and a duck: Granddaddy Jake, 99, his 289 lb. grandson Tiny, and the hen mallard duckling, Fup. The trio live on a ranch in the coastal hills of northern California. The story begins in 1890, and the plot revolves on how cantankerous Jake, soft-spoken Tiny, and wilfull Fup become a close-knit family. Enjoy the story for its humor, warmth, and charm.

Perhaps 180 degrees removed from FUP is a translation from the Czech, THE UNBERABLE LIGHTNESS OF BEING, by Milan Kundera. In a review of this book in the April 29 issue of The New York Times, E.L. Doctorow suggests that it falls in with some other "disclaimed fiction in which the author deliberately broke the mimetic spell of his text and insisted that the reader should not take his story to heart or believe in the existence of his characters." Also, "the author by his candor became the only character the reader could believe in." The book seems to deal with the totalitarianism of the spirit at large in Czechoslovakia, through the telling of the strange love of the two central characters. Kundera's "lightness of being", says Doctorow, is exemplified by the main character, Sabina, who "lives by betrayal, abandoning family, lovers and, finally, country," a life uncommitted to the real world. Heady stuff, indeed, although another reviewer, Robert Lawrence of Best Sellers magazine, found the book a complete bore and criticized that "the emphasis on free love, on divorce, on low humor, keeps the narrative from dealing with either high ideals or philosophical concepts."

Louis L'Amour's highly publicized THE WALKING DRUM is a classic illustration of an author out of his element. Set in the 12th century, a young hero leaves his native Brittany after the estate is burned and his mother is murdered. Young Kerbouchard sets out to find his father, a pirate, travels through Moorish Spain and Byzantium and encounters beautiful women along the way. One reviewer was provoked to say that L'Amour "evokes no sense of atmosphere with his banal prose and insipid male and stereotypical female characters." Another shows that there is much redundancy, that the writing is often turgid, and that the story often stops while details are explained. L'Amour, you should know better.

Yet another historical novel, PIECE OF CAKE, is a Book-of-the-Month Club Dual Main Selection. Author Derek Robinson shows great mastery in portraying the air war over Great Britain as a squadron of Hornet fighter planes matures during the year between the Polish blitzkrieg and the Battle of Britain. This is a war novel with a difference. While the description of air battles is extremely realistic, it is far from a celebration of war. Most of the pilots enter the fray looking for honor, but finding horror in machines that are now antiquated and outnumbered by the enemy's. Robinson vividly portrays his characters, both good and bad, so that the reader becomes involved in their lives and deaths. His writing style is blunt, precise, and often witty, and he effectively deals with some of war's ironies as with its brutal realities.

Powell does better on air than in print

"The Other Side of the Story," by Jody Powell; Morrow; 314 pages; $15.95.

A Review

By HERB KLEIN
Copley News Service

Recently I was talking with an astute television comedian, Fred Travolina, who among other things does an excellent job of imitating presidents.

What was President Carter's problem with the media? I asked.

He was overexposed, Travolina shot back. He went on television twice.

That, of course, is an exaggeration. But it illustrates a problem his very capable former press secretary, Jody Powell, faces even today.

Like some of us, Powell had a difficult product to sell.

Powell since has become a mildly successful newspaper columnist and has done even better as a lecturer and a significant TV commentator with such shows as David Brinkley's Sunday report. He is capable, without question. But, somehow with all of this, Powell still felt the need to write a book, "The Other Side of the Story."

Powell has promoted the book well on radio and television, but somehow he comes off better on the air than in print.

"The Other Side of the Story" is controversial, as one might expect, because Powell takes on by name some of the superstars of the media. He documents well and, to this White House veteran, his criticism often seems justified. The media, too often, are wrong.

Powell's mistake is that in "The Other Side of the Story" he is defensive to the point of eroding his credibility. The writing and content are below his capability.

The author spends three chapters defending his Georgia friend and colleague, Hamilton Jordan. In one chapter on the so-called amaretto and cream story, Powell admits he was wrong in detailing his answer to a bar controversy with a 33-page document, but he compounds the mistake with a full chapter of defense for Jordan's bar conduct.

Powell's conclusion suggests an eye-for-an-eye approach between the press and government would be beneficial. For every watchdog restriction Powell sees placed on politicians he would place similar discipline on the press. He forgets that journalists are not elected.

He feels President Carter still suffers unjustifiably from poor media appreciation. He somehow misses the fact that in this age of presidential television the public generally judges a president on personal instinct, not on journalistic reviews.

Cussler writes another action-packed novel

"Deep Six," by Clive Cussler. Simon & Schuster. 432 Pages. $17.95.

A Review

By CAROL DEEGAN
The Associated Press

Clive Cussler, author of "Raise the Titanic!" and "Night Probe," has done it again. He's written a novel that is alive with action and adventure.

Cussler's new book, "Deep Six," concerns a plot by an unscrupulous businessman, Lee Tong, and his aged grandmother, Min Koro Bougainville, to kidnap the president of the United States. Once this has been accomplished, the next step will be to have a device implanted in the president's brain that will allow the Russians to control his actions through the use of mind intervention.

Does this sound impossible? It's about as impossible as making the presidential yacht, and everyone on board, disappear while on a cruise on the Potomac River. And that's just what Lee Tong manages to do.

The hero of "Deep Six" is Dirk Pitt, who has been featured in other Cussler novels. Pitt is special projects director for the National Underwater and Marine Agency. Pitt's specialty is shipwrecks, but he is also a master sleuth and troubleshooter, who is able to work with speed and cunning. Nothing stops Pitt; he seems indestructable. But the reader is never bored as Pitt works his way from one life-threatening predicament to the next.

The novel opens with a report that a group of seamen has been found dead on a ship in the waters off Alaska. They appear to be the victims of a deadly nerve agent, and the agent must be found before it kills any marine or human life that might come in contact with it. Pitt is called upon for help.

Once the agent is found, Pitt sets out to find those responsible. One thing leads to another and another, finally pitting the hero against those forces determined to destroy the United States government. All of this might sound silly in the hands of a less-skillful author, but Cussler makes it believable.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

Monday, September 3, 1984

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Actresses Eileen Brennan, Valerie Perrine and Kitty Carlisle, Oakland A's manager Steve Boros, cartoonist Mort Walker ("Beetle Bailey," "Hi and Lois"), basketball coach Dick Motta, actress Irene Pappas, golf's Dave Eichelberger and baseball great Eddie Stanky were born on this date. Greater fame and recognition are possible now. Just remember that there are no shortcuts to financial success. Only hard work and dedication will take you where your want to go. Romance is on the upswing. Do not let your perfectionist ways work against you. Loved one needs encouragement, not criticism. Let family members in on your plans; they can help.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Happy holiday! A family picnic or reunion puts you in a nostalgic mood. Open new lines of communication with a member of a different generation. If driving, observe all traffic regulations.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You enjoy spending this last summer holiday with close friends or relatives. Share any cooking chores so that no one person is burdened with the extra expense and work. Romance picks up.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Younger people will be eager to join you on a special outing. Discuss who will pay for what before leaving home. Creative work becomes more exciting when you team up with mate.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Invite that special someone to spend the day with you, relaxing outdoors. Your family's cooperation helps you increase the value of your property. Show your appreciation for any sacrifices loved one makes.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A good day to stay home. If you must travel, rely on public transportation whenever possible. A financial situation requires prompt attention. Keep spending within reasonable limits and build savings.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A company picnic or a special outing with friends makes this a great day. You obtain valuable information from a casual conversation. The financial outlook is bright. Choose your confidants with care.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Romance is very much on your mind. If you want things to happen, you will have to take the first step. Ask loved one to join you for a backyard picnic.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Spending the holiday with a small group holds great appeal. Go ahead and try something new. Your best relationship is with your mate. Make a special effort to keep romance from growing stale.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Home is the best place to be today, especially if you invite in a few close relatives or friends. Singles find this a particularly happy time for affairs of the heart.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Not a good time to ask for favors. Spend the holiday relaxing with family and friends. A phone call from a loved one reassures you. Make new financial plans.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb.18): Happy holiday! Now is the perfect time to start a project that will add to the beauty and value of your home. Family members are willing to pitch in and help. Offer encouragement.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Spending time with your one-and-only will make this a holiday to remember. Marital ties are strengthened by a heart-to-heart talk. Do what you can to increase your financial security.

He stood tall and his bearing was regal, as befits the most powerful card in the pack. Yet their was something about his demeanor that showed his pride had been hurt.

"Just awful," he muttered. "In no other country in the world have I been treated in such a manner. To be discarded like an old shoe! He'll get a letter from my lawyer, I assure you.

"I was dealt to that chap with the walrus mustache—unpleasant fellow. I must admit he bid his hand sensibly, but what he did to me in the play . . .

"West led a low spade and declarer perforce won the king. Now it would seem a lead up to the queen of clubs, or even a diamond finesse, would be a sensible way to play the hand. But no! Old walrus-face had to go and be clever. He cashed the king and ace of diamonds and continued with the jack. And on this trick he discarded me—just as if I were a lowly deuce!

"East won the queen of diamonds and could do no better than return a spade to his partner's queen. That brought about this position:

"West made his best return of a club. It's better to be lucky than good, and my declarer guessed everything perfectly. He played low from the table and captured East's eight with the nine. Then he continued with a low club to the queen and East's king. Poor East had either to give dummy the lead with a diamond or a spade, or else lead a heart. Even if West held the queen of hearts, declarer could assure himself of an entry to the board simply by playing low. As it was, he made an overtrick because East had the queen.

People perpetuate cover-ups

By RACHEL COPE GOLDFARB
King Features Syndicate

You probably think that Watergate was the end of the Great American Cover-Up, right? I submit, for the record, that cover-ups of equal, but personal, magnitude continue on a daily basis and we, the people, perpetuate them.

Take our clothes, for example. Every overweight person knows that clinging knits will reveal truths that are better left hidden from the public. Short sleeves, short skirts and short shorts also bare some ugly facts.

Being physically over- or under-endowed can be compensated for with the help of reputable lingerie conglomerates. Magazine articles, TV talk shows, books and fashion consultants are all available to teach us about vests, blousons, layered looks, hemlines, warm and cool colors and accessories to cover up or embellish the truth.

The cosmetics we buy can disguise blemishes, lengthen chins, shorten noses, put sparkle on teeth and add sheen to hair. We camouflage laugh lines, eradicate frown lines and add lines to accentuate our eyes.

We mask our natural aromas and sprinkle ourselves with chemical/herbal/floral liquids so we won't be smell-less. We pat a youthful blush on our cheeks and a smear of mystery on our eyelids. If we want more fun, we lighten our hair; less trouble, we perm it. What does anyone really look like?

Machines can be placed in our most offensive rooms to supplement the exhaust fans and zap those odors right out of existence.

Those less fortunate Americans without live-in help occasionally find themselves with company on the way and a full day's cleaning to do.That is why modern builders and homeowners place such a high premium on closet space. Snow-shoveling clutter into closets has become a last-minute concealment measure that a growing number of busy people employ.

Children's closets are sometimes as large as their living space and are utilized to capacity. Guest-room closets rarely leave room for more than three wire hangers for the guests.

Kitchen camouflage earns millions of dollars for thousands of anxious salespeople. Plastic canisters are made to hold every item or substance from 10 pounds of flour to a half-gallon of ice cream.

Behind finely detailed wooden doors hide cleaning fluids, exotic spices, mouse poison, canned soup, African violet potting soil and peanut butter.

Some standards in our language like, "Nice seeing you," "Let's have lunch sometime" or "Aren't they cute children?" have turned into cover-ups. They may mean "I'm glad that's over," "I'm really in an awful hurry" and "Can't those kids be controlled?"

Never dull moment in first-grade class

By MARIE BAKER
King Features Syndicate

It is 8:20 a.m. School doors have opened and it's note-reading time in my first-grade classroom.

Note 1. Carrie Ann's mom has sent a bottle of pink medicine with instructions for doses at 10 a.m. and 2 p.m.

Note 2. Gloria's doctor says that her diabetes tests are negative so she doesn't need extra trips to the restroom.

Note 3. Harry's mother says she will see her lawyer if I let him get bruised any more at recess.

Note 4. Lisa A's mother would like for her to be standing by the principal's office at 1 p.m. so she can get her to the dentist on time.

Note 5. Sarah's mom would like the 50 cents back from her picture money that Sarah arrived home without.

8:30 a.m.: Pledge-to-the-flag time. Ray and Carl Alan have their left and right hands mixed up, Susan has just fallen sideways out of her chair and George looks peaked.

8:40 a.m.: First reading group time. George vomited milk and bits of toast all over his reader. I am shaking treated sawdust from a brown paper bag over the book and sending Mike for the janitor. The rest of us are moving from the table to the rug to sit Indian-style for the rest of our reading circle. George is resting comfortably in the nurse's room.

9 a.m.: Raymond says the cast on his broken arm is itching "something terrible," so I am sending him to the nurse also.

10 a.m.: I ask our visitor her name. She is writing things in a notebook. Mrs. X explains that although her child is in kindergarten this year, she is spending time in all the first-grade rooms to select her child's first-grade teacher for next year.

10:10 a.m.: Pete just broke his pencil so he could go to the pencil sharpener again.

10:20 a.m.: Hilda threw her mistake papers that need correcting in the wastepaper basket. Juanita salvaged the papers and is smoothing them out on my desk.

10:30 a.m.: The school secretary announces over the intercom that the art teacher is ill and won't be in today.

10:40 a.m.: Buzzz. It's a fire drill. "Line up quickly, children, and follow me."

10:50 a.m.: Lisa B. tells me outside the building that she slammed the classroom door hard on her left hand. I think she has broken her little finger. "Jerry, when we get back inside, please take Lisa B. to the office so they can call her mother."

11 a.m.: Wash-up-for-lunch time.

11:10 a.m.: Lisa C. has just spilled her tray with vegetable soup and Mary Jane has skidded in it and fallen down with her entire tray.

11:20 a.m.: Bill whispers in my ear that Joe just pretended to put his extra milk ticket in the can on the counter and then sneaked back to the room to fasten the ticket on the board so he could use it again.

11:30 a.m.: Noon recess time. It has just started raining. The children are coming in. I'll let them play with clay or draw pictures. They can have a choice.

12:00: Library time.

12:10 p.m.: Mrs. Lucy, the librarian, says Raymond talked so much in the library that he can't take his book home. I agree with her. She also suggests that Ivan look a little harder for the book he forgot to return.

12:30 p.m.: Tommy spit on Jasper because he switched places in line coming back from the library. I gave Jasper some tissue, asked Tommy to apologize. He did.

12:40 p.m.: A messenger from the office is asking us to bring our chairs to the magic show in the gym at 2 p.m. What a lovely surprise.

1 p.m.: Science lesson. After I pushed the projector back to the storage room, four children tell me that Ruth opened my desk drawer and helped herself to a handful of reward stickers.

1:10 p.m.: Jonathan is carrying out the same tiger kitten that has jumped through the same window three times.

1:20 p.m.: Show and tell. John's father has let him bring a real slingshot for show and tell and I am sending him to the principal to show and tell him about it.

1:30 p.m.: Afternoon recess time. Lowell told Ronald to tie his shoe laces. I told Lowell that he should get busy and learn how to tie his own shoe strings at home. A big delivery truck drove into the parking lot. I blew the whistle to get the children out of the way.

2 p.m.: Magic show time. Before we leave the room I remind the children to behave in the gym and stay down in their chairs so the people behind them will be able to see.

2:10 p.m.: The trained myna bird is loose and flying into the audience — straight to Carl Alan and lands on his shoulders. All eyes are on Carl Alan, who gently grabs him and carries him back to the magician. Everyone claps for Carl Alan.

2:20 p.m.: Mark has bitten Tommy on the arm. When I ask Mark, "Why?" he says, "I dunno." I will put spray on Tommy's arm and tell Mark to bring me a note from his mother asking why he would do such a thing.

2:30 p.m.: End of show. "What's that, Henry? You say that Rusty is flushing all the toilets? Please go tell him I said to stop it."

3 p.m.: Hurrah. The first bus is on time. "Good-by everyone. Have a good evening."

3:10 p.m.: Clean-up time. The late bus riders are washing the blackboards, polishing the sink, picking up pencils, erasers, math counters and wadded scraps of paper from a late cut-and-paste project.

3:20 p.m.: From a seat at my desk, I see Alicia running back into the room waving a paper. "Here's a story I wrote just for you."

3:21 p.m.: I read it aloud for both of us to enjoy.

"My 2 kitten dide,
And I gave 2 away,
and 1 ran way,
That one was the mom
I cride and cride but i know whar she is
She is in Haven."

3:22 p.m.: "I am sincerely grateful, Alicia, for such a happy gift to the end of this busy day." And, with a flip and a smile, the room is empty again.

General cookbook may be best buy

By SANDRA SCOTT KLINK
King Features Syndicate

Specialty cookbooks are taking over the world of food. Anyone with any craving, no matter how esoteric, can probably locate a cookbook bulging with suggestions for satisfying it.

Sometimes a good general cookbook with an interesting twist or theme can be the best buy. A book that will inspire the reader with suggestions for everything — soup to nuts. Often these books are put together by someone with a flair for the unusual or interesting, classic.

The recipes in these books are usually chosen because of their quality, not because they contain a special ingredient.

A variation on this approach, 'Fearless Cooking for Company" by Michele Evans (Times Books, $17.95), focuses on cooking for others, but most of the recipes will fit any occasion, and everything is there... I don't think she has skipped a nationality.

Indeed, they are eclectic. They range from very basic stuff like how to boil a lobster, cook a beef tenderloin or prepare asparagus to recipes for unusual Caribbean specialties. A predilection for fish and seafood (particularly sardines) is quite apparent here.

• • •

The popular nouvelle cuisine is the focus of Michele Urvater and David Lederman's paperback, "Cooking the Nouvelle Cuisine in America" (Workman, $9.95). This too, covers all aspects of a meal and it has all of the requisites of this cooking style.

The approach is fresh, imaginative and unpretentious. Some rather unlikely combinations work out beautifully, and the techniques are explained in a straightforward and informative way.

• • •

Focusing on frugality is "The Frugal Gourmet" by Jeff Smith (Morrow, $13.95). By frugal, Smith means making the best of what you have, not necessarily being sparing. And gourmet does not mean complicated or snobbish.

A few liberties have been taken with some of the dishes in order to make them easy to prepare, but no sacrifices seem to have been made. The book is quite a hodgepodge, covering everything from how to devise a smoker or cook a Polish meal or prepare Buffalo Chicken Wings.

• • •

"The Country Gourmet Cookbook" by Sherrill and Gil Roth (Workman, $8.95 in paperback) is the product of an urban couple transplanted to the country. The book reflects the pleasure the authors take in both worlds: They are obviously practiced, sophisticated cooks and they love their garden, canning, baking bread, making yogurt.

Particularly helpful are the little boxes containing tips on what to order for your garden, what to buy and when to buy it, things to be thinking about for the months ahead, seasonal guidelines, little asides and ideas. They're fun and informative.

From it, an inspired soup:

SPINACH SOUP

1½ to 2 pounds fresh spinach
2 tablespoons unsalted butter
3 tablespoons minced shallots
1 large clove garlic, minced
1 tablespoon fresh lemon juice
3 cups yogurt, at room temperature
¼ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon freshly ground pepper
1 cup heavy cream, at room temperature
½ cup freshly grated Parmesan cheese
4 lemon slices for garnish

Thoroughly wash the spinach to get rid of any sand, then remove the stems.

Place the spinach leaves in a large pot, cover, and over low heat steam in the water clinging to the leaves, until they are wilted.

Immediately drain the spinach and refresh it with cold, running water. Squeeze the spinach, in small handfuls, to remove the liquid.

Melt the butter in a 2-quart saucepan over medium-low heat and saute the shallots and garlic until they become soft.

In a food processor, blender or food mill puree the shallots and garlic combined with the spinach, lemon juice and 1 cup of the yogurt.

Place the ingredients back in the saucepan and add salt and pepper. Bring to a simmer over medium-low heat and whisk in the remaining yogurt and heavy cream.

When it returns to a full simmer, serve immediately. Sprinkle each serving with 2 tablespoons of the Parmesan cheese and garnish with a slice of lemon in the center.

A main dish from "Cooking the Nouvelle Cuisine in America":

VEAL IN CIDER

24 shallots in skins
¼ pound snow peas
3 8-inch cucumbers
2 pounds boned veal shoulder
2 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons peanut or vegetable oil
1 cup imported hard cider, plus 2 tablespoons Bouquet garni (2 sprigs parsley, ¼ teaspoon thyme, and 4 black peppercorns tied in cheesecloth)
¼ cup heavy cream
Salt
Freshly ground pepper

Peel shallots and leave them whole.

Wash, trim and remove the strings from the snow peas. Set aside.

Peel the cucumbers and slice them in two, lengthwise. Spoon out the seeds and slice them in two, lengthwise again, then cut them into ¾-inch cross pieces.

Cut the veal into approximately equal 2 by 2 inch pieces. Melt the butter and oil in a sauce pan approximately 3 inches high and 9 inches in diameter. When the butter is very hot, begin searing the meat on all sides. Do this over high heat so that the meat takes on a brown crispy exterior.

This is a messy process as the fat will splatter, but if you don't sear the meat at a high heat, it will stew and turn gray. About half way through the searing process, you'll have to add another tablespoon of oil. Do not turn the heat up so high that the fat smokes and takes on a burnt taste. As the meat browns, remove it to a bowl.

When all the meat is seared, lower the heat and add the shallots, stirring them for a few seconds.

Deglaze the pan by slowly adding the cider. With a flat wooden spoon or spatula, scrape all the browned particles into the cider. Season with 1 teaspoon salt.

Add the veal and bouquet garni to the pan. Cover the pan with a buttered round of brown paper, which you can cut from an ordinary paper bag, and a heavy lid. The paper helps keep the meat moist. Simmer on gentle heat for 1¼ to 1½ hours, or until the veal is very tender.

Remove the cover and brown paper. Lay the cucumbers and snow peas on top of meat, replace the cover and steam them for 4 minutes, or until just cooked but still crunchy.

With a slotted spoon, remove the meat and vegetables to a wide sieve placed over a deep bowl to catch the juices. Discard the bouquet garni. Degrease the remaining liquid.

Add 2 tablespoons cider and the heavy cream and juices which have dripped into the bowl to the pan and reduce until only ¾ cup remains. Season with ½ teaspoon salt and ¼ teaspoon pepper.

Arbitration way to settle without going to court

By JEFF GUTTERMAN
King Features Syndicate

Arbitration is a legal process in which two or more people agree to permit a third person to decide a dispute between them. Auto Line is the Better Business Bureau's arbitration program established in 1978 to settle disputes between consumers and certain automobile manufacturers which have pledged in advance to arbitrate complaints about their products and repairs if mediation efforts fail.

Though typical of other arbitration programs, Auto Line is specifically for customers of General Motors, Nissan-Datsun and Volkswagen, which includes Porsche and Audi. So successful has Auto Line been, these manufacturers have, since last October, written Auto Line into their new car warranties and, as permitted by federal law, these warranties require the car owners to use the Auto Line process before seeking remedies in court.

If its informal mediation efforts fail, the BBB will ask both parties to sign a contract which permits a community volunteer, acceptable to both manufacturer and consumer, to conduct a fact-finding hearing and make a decision in the matter. If the consumer accepts the decision, the manufacturer must do as the arbitrator directs.

The BBB will attempt to mediate your claim for you before resorting to arbitration. If unable to negotiate a settlement to your liking, it will have you sign papers to initiate arbitration.

Following this, copies of arbitrators' names, their professions and a brief overview of their backgrounds will be sent both to you and to the auto manufacturer. You will be asked to list, in order of preference, the arbitrators you wish to hear your case.

When the BBB sends you its list, consider it carefully. Study the list of people and find reasons why you think they might make a decision for or against you.

Do their backgrounds suggest that they may be able to relate to your situation? Do you think that they will compromise or make a clear-cut decision? How will they act as a group?

The two arbitrating parties have the option of bringing witnesses and/or specialists to the hearing. And you, the consumer, may also be represented by an attorney, but the BBB should be alerted so as to notify the auto manufacturer.

The actual arbitration begins with each side having one minute to state its case. Statements over, the time limit is removed and positions are explained for as long as need be, supplying information from any source they wish.

If you're looking to win your case, prepare well. Read everything you can find regarding your complaint. Gather related information from state and federal agencies. Look for stories on television news magazines and send for transcripts.

Because the arbitrators may be hearing about the subject of your complaints for the first time, prepare them too. The price of this is not reimbursable.

Included are the costs of phone calls to agencies around the country, postage to send for information, stationery to organize the data and photocopies of everything for as many people as attend the arbitration; any information supplied to the arbitrator should also be made available to the auto manufacturer. I spent approximately $125 to prepare myself properly.

The folder that I took into my hearing was divided into seven sections.

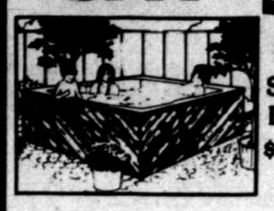

Under my first index tab I made a tabulation sheet. For each repair I showed the date, time from the last service, mileage, place where it was fixed, problem, number of days the service department had the car and cost.

Next came the receipts, in chronological order, for all of the major repairs. The third folder contained all the paper and magazine articles that I could find on my car's problem. The fourth contained updates on the car's problem and the fifth, newsletters and comments on the problem by state and federal agency officials. The sixth tab introduced technical data and in the last came pertinent information gathered from a "60 Minutes" program.

In addition to the general folder described above, I also kept a separate binder with all receipts from my normal maintenance repairs for the automobile. If you haven't retained copies of your receipts, check with your mechanic to see if he maintained your car according to normal maintenance requirements.

Have the latter notarized. If your mechanic cannot help you, look for old check stubs and photocopy them. Keep this information with you at the hearing but do not present any of it unless it's asked for. Consider it backup material.
