PUBLIC EXTRAVAGANCE

Eleven billion dollars a year in taxes is now spent by our country.

The man who can get the most money out of the state or federal government for himself or his locality is too often considered the smartest politician.

There is a premium placed on public extravagance in state and municipal affairs, and we are told the people do it themselves, but this is a poor alibi for public officials. Incompetent people get bigger pay for less work in city, county and state jobs than is generally paid for same work in private employment.

The cost of federal government has gone down since the World War, but the cost of state and municipal government has risen from $2,227,000,000 in 1913, to $7,400,000,000 in 1925. The increase of public extravagance is shown on every hand by demands for everything of the finest and most luxurious quality.

If local taxes are to be reduced, we must inject more business and less politics in management of government affairs.

WE USE THE TELEPHONE

At the end of March, 1927, total money invested in telephone plant and equipment in our country was $3,370,000,000. The industry paid annual taxes of $70,637,000.

This huge investment represents about 18,000,000 telephones, practically all of which can be joined together for nationwide service. Its securities are owned by 844,000 people, made up of 443,300 owners of common stock, 155,700 owners of preferred stock, and 245,000 owners of bonds. Eliminating duplications where the same person owns more than one kind of security or the securities of more than one company, it is estimated that the telephone industry is owned by over 700,000 individuals, of whom 74,586 are employees of the telephone companies.

America leads the world in many activities but its telephone system is so far ahead there are no comparisons.

A map drawn nearly 100 years ago by Stephen F. Austin, one of the prized possessions of the University of Texas library. The map, much faded and yellow with age, was drawn in 1829. It pictures the country when Texas had scarcely a dozen settlements of white persons with a total population of not more than 12,000. Many annotations are made on the map, Austin's handwriting and a history of the first settlement is written in one corner.

CREDIT DEPENDS UPON INSURANCE

"It is a common saying, yet a true one, that 'money talks,'" says T. Alfred Fleming, of the National Board of Fire Underwriters. "Yet in the market places there is one voice which speaks in a more commanding tone. It is the voice of credit. Ninety-seven per cent of the commerce of the world today is carried on on credit, and only three per cent on cash."

"There are four elements to properly establish credit—Character, Capacity, Capital and Coverage. Individual and corporate characters are inherently good or bad and are not always to be depended upon. The capacity of men differs with their education, training and personal attainments. Capital or collateral is always subject to the changes of fortune."

"For its integrity capital is dependent upon protection against disaster in any of its familiar forms; therefore, commercial credit never is wisely extended unless it is based upon its fourth essential, which is coverage or fire insurance."

"Fire insurance, therefore, is supplying the bulwark of our great credit and commercial system, and upon it depends the permanence of our modern material civilization."

TOAST THE COW

Friends may come and friends may go, but the faithful cow remains steadfast in her health-promoting service to mankind. Old Bossy is not always appreciated as much as she deserves to be. But man pays silent and eloquent tribute to her—even if not in vociferous cheering—by the manner in which he drinks the milk, and eats the butter and ice cream and other delicious products of the dairy.

The American people are great consumers of dairy products. They like their milk—and they consume immense quantities of it, to the conservation of their health and strength. Americans like butter—and they consume vast quantities. And as for ice cream, there are several dozen—perhaps even greater numbers—of boys and girls in the United States who have a decided fondness for ice cream. A great many men also like it. And here and there may be found a woman who is not averse to a dish of ice cream. It may not be generally known that the American people eat about 350,000,000 gallons of ice cream annually.

The dairy industry is extensive and important here in California. The annual production runs into tens of millions of dollars. Demand for milk, butter, ice cream, cheese and other milk products is steadily maintained. The people just must have milk in some form.—Van Neys, Cal. News.

WHERE THERE IS A WILL, THERE IS A WAY

(By E. V. S., London Special Correspondent)

This does not apply to all people in different walks of life. There are people passing up and down the highway every day who are confronted with poverty and misfortune—those against whom the hand of Fate seems to have no mercy, who, if they had had the opportunities of some men, might have become a genius in the business world. But opportunity failed to knock at their door of life. Perhaps, for a score of good reasons, they have been compelled to grope their way through life under the dismal mask of failure, seclusion and despondency. The maxim that says, "Where there is a will there is a way," certainly does not apply to them, simply because there are also in the world such things as inexpediency. Because it may be expedient for me to undertake a given project is no reason, perhaps, for my friend to do so.

Then is where expediency, fitness, qualification, efficiency, training and experience comes in. I might have every requisite that would reasonably insure success even at the beginning and my friend be lacking in all of them. In my case it would be expedient that I make the undertaking, but in my friend's it might be hazardous, inexpedient and altogether impracticable. With me I might reach success, but with him, failure would be his doom.

There are individuals who have been successful both in a financial and intellectual way, who have been stars in their profession, who through no fault of theirs have sunk in the sands of time to never rise again. Hardships, adversities and the hand of Fate may have each played their part in the game of life and won. Won from them the respect of all humankind, which has caused them to err, to be afraid to trust their own being, and also the being of their fellowman. They have sunk so low in the walk of life that you dare not try to help them, lest if you do, they will not play the game fair with you. Probably they were cheated and robbed by some one of their fellowmen at a mile-post of their career. Some of them being so honest, charitable and God-fearing that they believed in the other maxim, "That truth crushed to earth shall rise again." Ah, my friends, this is a good maxim, and there is no one who can successfully contradict the truth of it. But in many instances the truth does not rise soon enough to do the down-trodden individual any good.

At the time of life when a man has friends, and when he is able to retain them, when he has their love, respect and confidence, when he can go to the bank and get financial aid in any laudable undertaking on the name which he has built up by his honesty, integrity and reliability, is the time of life when an individual should make his start, and then be on his guard to ever retain the fathoms of faith and respect that have been shown him by the ones who believed in him enough to lend him the hand of assistance.

It is true that individuals have missed their calling. Some it seems are endowed with natural gifts of talent to fill a specific place or position, and it would be indeed odd to think of them as filling another station in life. Some never find their talent; they may have forty-nine jobs in forty-nine years, and they may have a lot more ere they die, for their bosses always find them out and know that they do just enough to get by. Some may have the will and never find the way, probably because of lowly birth or circumstances which are beyond their power to counter-balance and control.

According to some profound thinkers, a person is either a great success or an absolute failure in the vocations of life. They do not believe in any betwixts and between. But we have many of them here, many who have the will power to de-throne and conquer any obstacle that might come into their path, yet who are just not able to find the way.

Instead of pinning faith on inadequate maxims, let us be of good cheer, however remembering that the misfortunes hardest to bear are those which never come. The world has outlined much and will outline a great deal more, and men have continued to be happy in it. In the scales of our destinies, brawn will never weigh so much as brain. Our healing is not in the storm or in the whirlwind, but will be revealed by the still small voice that speaks to the conscience and the heart, prompting us to a wider and wiser humanity.

Mrs. Burleson, mother of Mrs. M. R. Watters, died at her home in Sonora last week. Mrs. Watters was at her bedside when the hand of death stilled forever her body and struggles here below. Mrs. Burleson was formerly a resident of Red Creek, near London, and had many friends here who were sorry to hear of her passing.

A Cummins Massey purchased from Lloyd Watson his entire cotton crop the past week.

T. J. Lange and Uncle Dan Gephart were in Junction on business last Friday.

There was church Friday, Staurday, Sunday and Sunday nights under the auspices of the Christian Church at the London Community hall.

Edgar Ivy has purchased a truck and is now making better time in hauling his cotton to the gin.

W. J. Docura bought from D. M. Stewart two head of cows and calves the past week. He will now have butter to mix with his sorghum molasses, which makes a very relishing dish on cold, bleak wintry days.

Mrs. Alzada Pearl has been visiting with her brothers, W. B. and D. G. Adams of Cedar Hill.

Reuben Lange left the past week for San Antonio where he will enter a business college.

Fred Mogford is working for John Vance while John is driving his truck almost daily hauling cotton to the railroad.

Eggs are getting to be a very scarce article at the stores here of late. The price for good fresh eggs is now thirty cents per dozen.

Cotton is being gathered and ginned at a very rapid rate and it is bringing a tolerable fair price on the market due to acreage reduction and destruction by insects. If we would defeat ourselves and quit claiming superiority because we happen to grow more bales of cotton than any State in the world, and reduce our cotton acreage we would have made a move that the next generation would O. K. Too much variety may not always be best, but the farmer of today expects more than rancid bacon and corn dodger. It's not pleasant to think of a great State like Texas having to import butter for the tables of its people, and worse than that, to think of thousands of tables without butter. But this is a fact. Think about it, until the bank that we need in London for convenience, will hasten itself along so much the faster.

Texas Yam Crop Leads

Texas is fast becoming a leader in the most important farm crops. The Department of Agriculture announces that it is now leading all others in the production of sweet potatoes, the yield for the last season being 12,500,000 bushels. Georgia and North Carolina come next with 9,000,000 each. Potatoes have been selling at around $1.50 a bushel and at that price they bring much money into the State. The sweet potato drying or curing house has done much to stimulate yam production. With proper curing the crop can be held until it can be marketed to the best advantage. Until such plants were built the crop had to be rushed to the market and was often sold at ruinous prices. As with other crops, orderly marketing is essential to success. Texas could produce enough potatoes to feed the world if it could only solve the problem of securing markets.

The Mohair Industry

The Angora goat is playing a big part in the enrichment of Texas. Texas leads all other states in the number of goats and the production of mohair. They have an estimated value of $22,000,000. Twelve counties of the Edwards plateau in Texas have more goats and produce more mohair than any like area in the world. Where there is plenty of underbrush goats thrive on little grass and other feed. They require less attention than any other animal. They are grown mostly on large ranches where the land is cheap, but there is hardly a farm in Texas that could not profitably care for a few. The Angora is an aristocratic looking animal and a real ornament to any place, as well as a steady profit maker.

Extensive Onion Growing

Texans are inclined to think of the Laredo and Carrizo Springs sections of the State as the only area adapted to extensive onion growing, although they know from long experience that onions will grow pretty much anywhere in the State. Frank Timmins, an Ellis county farmer, has harvested a crop from 45 acres that will bring him approximately $5,500, grown at a total expense of $1,500. He sold the crop from ten acres for $1,078 in June, but, as every one else had onions to sell at that time, he placed the rest on cold storage in Dallas to hold for a better market. Another example of making money where conditions are favorable for orderly marketing, and Mr. Timmins has taken the means to make them favorable.

Sectional Business Organizations

Texans are learning that the State is too large and sectional interests are too varied for one or even a few organizations to unite in doing the things that will be best for all. Not long ago the chamber of commerce secretaries in some eleven counties around Brownwood formed "Heart of Texas" organization more closely watch the interests of that immediate territory. A Central Texas organization of business interests has the following towns represented: Cooldge, Groesbeck, Kosse, ca, Hillsboro, Rosebud, Itasca, Walnut Spring, Hubbard, Ian, Valley Mill, Merit, McGregor, Moody, West, Mart, is safe to say that Waco. It attention is paid by close places to the work of these organizations every place in the territory will profit.

Pampa Creamery Business

The Pampa creamery began business in February, beginning with 100 gallons of whole milk a day. The purchases have grown to 300 gallons a day and although the plant has a capacity of 500 gallons of ice cream and 750 gallons of pasteurized milk a day, the rapid increase of interest in milk production on the part of the farmers has caused the creamery to expand its plant and facilities. This is in line with what is being done wherever creameries are established in Texas.

Something of a Hen Ranch A North Texas poultryman has announced that he is preparing to establish near Wichita Falls the "world's largest poultry ranch." He expects to begin on an eighty-acre tract of land, with a capacity of 100,000 laying hens to be developed from an initial flock of 25,000. He will put in the first 100,000 egg unit of a hatchery. The increasing interest in poultry raising in that section has induced the Kraft Cheese Company of Wichita Falls to add a plant in which their milk will be reduced to a powder for chicken food. Thus it is seen that one good industry in a place brings another.

Palestine Bridge Opening

Fifteen thousand people is a big crowd, but that is the number that it is estimated attended the opening of the bridge across the Trinity river near Palestine. The spanning of a river in a way to connect two pieces of good road is an event of enough importance to justify an immense crowd since Texas people have become long-distance travelers. It used to be that it was almost impossible to get a bridge built across a stream between two counties because each county was afraid the bridge might enable some of its people to get over into the adjoining county too conveniently for trading or visiting. One county cared not a whit what kind of roads or bridges a neighboring county might have. It's different now. Texans have a neighborly feeling toward all parts of the State.

Weatherford Melons

Weatherford people have formed what almost amounts to a habit in sending huge watermelons to famous people throughout the country. Some of these melons weigh nearly 100 pounds. They are sent out in a way to attract attention along the way and to receive an ovation when they arrive at their destination. So far, the express wagons carrying these monster Parker county melons have not stopped at this writer's front door.

Improving Water Supply

The corporation that furnished Texarkana with water has found that the city has grown enough to justify the expenditure of an additional $500,000 for supplying the people with water. A reservoir is to be constructed that will hold a billion gallons of water and mains are to be extended to various sections of the city. Texarkana is among the most prosperous cities of the State.

RAILROAD CONSUMPTION AND EARNINGS

In a normal year the railroads of our country disburse half a million dollars every hour for wages and supplies. They consume one-third of the coal, one-third of the steel, one-fourth of the lumber, one-fifth of the copper and nearly one-half of the fuel oil produced in this country by the labor of 17 million of our population.

Some people still have the mistaken idea that railroad dividends are guaranteed by the government. The truth is that the government, by establishing a fair level of freight charges, assures to the railroads as a whole, but to no individual railroad, the opportunity of earning five and three-quarters per cent on the value, not of their stocks and bonds, but on the value of their property as appraised by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

A few railroads earn the five and three-quarters per cent but a much larger proportion do not. A very few earn over six per cent but they must divide their excess income fifty-fifty with the government.

Forty-four of our largest railroads reduced wastage loss from wrecks and personal injuries from $200,000,000 in 1920, to $90,000,000 in 1926. Last year there were 82 per cent fewer collisions than in 1917.

Complete records of the Rio Grande Valley from 1797 to 1927, or a period of 130 years, are to be found in the archives in the office of the secretary of the Matamoros City Council in Matamoros, Mexico, said C. E. Castaneda, librarian of the Latin American collection at the University of Texas. Mr. Castaneda, who has recently returned from several weeks spent in the Lower Rio Grande Valley, said that the records constitute a rich mine of information in regard to early Texas history with accounts of the border troubles from 1836 to 1845, or the period immediately before the Mexican war, and of the cotton trade of the Confederacy. There are over 200,000 pieces of material in this collection, said Mr. Castaneda. The archives of the city of Matamoros were recently enriched by the transfer to that city of the records of the Mexican towns of Camargo and Reynosa.

Bridges

When America was new the people usually crossed streams over logs that they used to span the waters. They swam their horses. Or if the stream was too wide they often built rafts which were propelled with long poles. Some of the old ferries are still in operation. At White's Ferry, on the Potomac, the ferry followed a heavy rope tied across the stream and got its power principally from the current of the river. Now the same old ferry that was useful in the battles around Leesburg in the Civil War is propelled by the engine of an old Ford car, carried in a row-boat alongside the ferry. This method has been adopted on many wide streams.

Another early method of bridge building was to place logs endways across the stream and then cover them crossways with other logs. The old corduroy roads were made in the same way.

Perhaps the most unique of all forms of bridge building was the covered bridge. The theory of covered bridges was to give them protection against the weather and also to keep out the rain and snow. One by one these bridges are being replaced by steel and concrete structures. These picturesque old bridges have grown into a class with such other antiquities as covered wagons, hitching posts and scores of other interesting relics of bygone days. The dynamite specialists are having big "parties" in carrying out the orders of state and local officials in removing the abutments and frames of the old covered bridges. One of the most famous bridges of the South was the old covered bridge across the Chattahoochee River at Fort Gaines, Georgia. Two hundred pounds of dynamite swept its five piers clear of the stream. The interesting thing about blasting is that the skilled engineers in explosives know just how to place it so that the wreckage will land in any exact spot that they pick out for it. This prevents filling up the streams with debris.

There are great things doing in the world—and one wonders how many years it will be before the present-day marvels in steel and concrete will become old-fashioned and blown out of the streams. Perhaps they, too, will follow in the wake of other engineering enterprises that have gone the same way as the dodo birds.

SELECTING SEED

A very simple method of improving any field crop is by better seed selection. The way most farmers select seed corn is to wait till shortly before planting time, then they select the best ears they can find in a day of husking. Now these ears may make good seed corn and they may not. Most of these ears are large, because they have had a better chance to grow than the rest of the corn, due to the lack near neighboring stalks and therefore they received more air, sunlight, moisture and plant food than the others.

A better method of seed selection is to keep separate, from the bulk of corn, all large ears, which have had no better chance to make than the neighbor ears. Such ears are superior as seed corn than the average ears of the same size found by the first method of selection. Every farmer, when gathering corn from the field, can easily fasten a box to the side of his wagon for the collecting of these superior ears. Then by selecting from this lot those ears, which have all the qualities of a good ear, he will have a superior seed corn after the germination test has been made.

However, the good corn breeder goes one step further. He tests the progeny of each ear in a separate patch several hundred yards apart from all other corn, but this is not recommended to the average farmer. But all farmers can give each ear, he wishes to plant, a germination test. He may use the flat box, rag doll, or any other test convenient to him. This can be done some time before planting, or earlier. A few seeds of each ear should be laid out in a marked square. The square should be numbered to correspond with the ear, so that the germinated seed squares can be identified. Only those ears which have a 100 per cent rigorous germination should be kept for seed; all other ears should not be planted. Many ears may have the appearance of a good seed ear, but may have poor germinating vitality, which will result in poor stand and weak stalks.

A simple way of making the germinating test is to take a flat box, fill in wet saw dust or sand a few inches in depth; lay off in small squares large enough to place 10 or 12 seeds, then cover and keep damp. In a week or so look for results. The warmer the faster will be the germination. This same method should be used for milo and all similar grain crops in selecting seed.

PREVENTING ACCIDENTS PARAMOUNT IMPORTANCE

If universally adopted, compulsory automobile liability insurance would cost the American public in the neighborhood of a billion dollars a year. And wherein would conditions be improved?

In accidents where a pedestrian is wholly or partially at fault, he could recover no damages. Statistics show that the pedestrian is wholly at fault in about one-third of the accidents.

When such insurance is furnished by the state, it applies only to accidents on state highways. Such a policy would give far from complete coverage.

If we had uniform and universal insurance, farmers in isolated regions where accidents are rare, would have to pay out millions of dollars in insurance premiums because of accidents in highly congested districts. This would hardly seem fair. About 60 per cent of motorists in cities already carry liability insurance.

Court procedure is a long and tedious affair now. With compulsory automobile insurance, as with other insurance, claims would not be against the motorist, but against the insurance company. It is inevitable that claims would be larger both in number and size, and size of judgments would be very likely to increase.

It would seem that stringent licensing of drivers, safely constructed highways and enforcement of uniform regulations would do more to prevent accidents than would compulsory liability insurance.

HANKINS-KING

The wedding of Miss Lois Hankins to Mr. Brown King was solemnized at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John M. Hankins, Tuesday morning at nine o'clock, in the presence of the two families.

The home was tastefully decorated with vases of gladioli and white wreaths.

Rev. J. S. Newman, pastor of the Church of Christ, performed the simple and impressive ring ceremony.

The bride wore a lovely gown of royal blue georgette, velvet trimmed and carried an arm bouquet of delicately tinted carnations and fern. Her traveling costume was a sport frock of brown transparent velvet jacket and brown silk skirt with accessories to match.

After the ceremony cake and fruit punch was served to the guests. Following this Mr. and Mrs. King left for Houston and Galveston for a short trip after which they will live in San Angelo.

The out of town relatives were the aunts of the bride from San Antonio, Mesdames A. R. Jones, Q. D. Durrett, Eugene Schnabel, and the grandmother of the bride, Mrs. Sarah Corkill, also of San Antonio, and Mrs. Julia Dixon, sister of the groom.

HONORING BRIDE-ELECT

Honoring Miss Lois Hankins, bride-elect of the month, the members of her music class and their mothers gave a miscellaneous shower Monday afternoon at the Hodges Hotel. The guests were met by the bride's sister, Miss Elix Hankins.

To the strains of Lohengrin's wedding march the honoree was ushered in by a small consort of her pupils and seated beneath a lovely varied-colored parasol. The members of her class then danced about her singing a very appropriate song, "To the Bride-to-be, so early in the fall." At the end of the dance the parasol showered many lovely gifts upon the bride-to-be. Miss Hankins was assisted in unwrapping the many gifts by her pupils. After the gifts had all been viewed Miss Clara Fritz read a short biographical sketch of the honoree's life. Following this Mrs. Guy Wynne sang "For You."

The guests were ushered into the dining room where punch was served to nearly seventy guests. Presiding at one punch bowl was a miniature bride and groom.

The honoree and her sister, Miss Elix Hankins, and the mother of the honoree were presented with lovely flower corsages.

ENTERTAINED AT BRIDGE

A delightful bridge party was staged at Hill Terrace Ranch Friday afternoon when Mrs. Guy Wynne entertained for Mrs. Media Rainey of Texarkana, and Miss Bula Brown of Dallas, house guests of the Conde Hardemans. Great bowls and baskets of bright zinnias made gay the big living room where four tables were set for the game. The high score prize, a rose and silver corsage, went to Mrs. W. Riley and Miss Brown was aided with a sandwood fan. An attractive salad course and tea and individual card suit shapes was grace of Mrs. Jack who had just returned from her honeymoon spent in Mexico. The party was greeted by the safe return of Lohengrin, played places of cheer of hope, and by friends who stood welcoming the bride.

'GLEANERS' ENTERTAINMENT

(Delayed)
On Saturday evening, August 20, Miss Pairalee Linn was the charming hostess to "The Gleaners" and a number of invited guests. After a series of games and contests ice cream and cake were served to the following:

Nevada Blackburn, Elsie Besant, Lois Goodwin, Marjorie McDonald, Lucille Motley, Ruth Sandherr, Katherine Johnson, Ruby Davis, Buzz Motley, Law Johnson, Harold Miskin, Lemuel Jones, Adolph of Abilene, Marvin La Rue Newby, Herbert and Warren Bailey.

ing, great care should be exercised to keep the fire a safe distance of forty or fifty feet away from the pecan trees. Burning of brush should be done in the winter and not in the summer. In the event that there is a demand for wood in the section where the foreign trees are being removed from the pecan grove, the sale of the wood will frequently pay for the entire expense undergone in the thinning procedure.

Bearing Surface Increase

After the trees have been properly spaced, you will note that the spindling, upright growing trees will widen out their branches and have a large sweep of limbs on all sides, thus increasing the bearing surface of the tree several times over what it would have had in the event that it had been continuously crowded by other trees. By following up this practice of removing foreign timber from the grove and thinning the pecan trees themselves to their proper distance, the yields from year to year will increase as the trees develop larger tops and the grove that may have formerly produced a minimum crop of nuts each year will then yield a maximum crop. It is not uncommon to get 100 per cent increase in yield of nuts from the grove as a result of thinning.

After the first steps toward pecan orchard development have been taken, many of the trees can be top-worked to an advantage, thus converting those trees that once bore pecans worth 10 cents a pound into trees bearing improved pecans that will sell readily on the market at 30 to 40 cents per pound.

LAMBERT-McCOLLUM

The wedding of Miss Mabel Lambert and Mr. Bill McCollum of London, Texas, was solemnized Monday afternoon at the home of Rev. J. S. Newman, pastor of the Church of Christ. Rev. Newman performed the ceremony.

REVIVAL MEETING

On the third Sunday, September 18, Rev. Judge Frank Morris and party from Dallas will begin a revival meeting in Junction. Judge Morris is one of the most successful evangelists in the South, a great preacher and a fine character.

Rev. Morris is a Methodist in faith, but he holds union meetings almost exclusively, and if the churches of Junction desire such a meeting it will please Brother Morris to make this a union meeting.

All the singers of the community are urged to co-operate in making good music for this campaign.

Let's all pray for God to reach Kimble County in this revival.
