Ford Jabs Carter On Soviet Troops

Blame-Shifting Accusation Leveled

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former President Gerald R. Ford assailed President Carter on Saturday for implying that a Soviet combat unit recently discovered in Cuba may have been there while Ford was president.

Ford said that during his presidency he was given no evidence of such troops in Cuba and declared, "I do not believe our intelligence was so bad as to completely miss such a major development."

The former Republican president accused Carter of trying to shift the blame for his not having discovered the Soviet unit of 2,000 to 3,000 combat troops, including 40 tanks and some artillery pieces, until only recently.

"Resent Innuendo"

"I resent the political innuendo, particularly when the White House has asked repeatedly for my help on foreign policy matters when they were in trouble during the past 2½ years," Ford said in remarks Saturday night in Atlanta. Exerpts from the speech before the National Home Furnishings Association convention in Atlanta were made available in Washington.

Meantime, Carter says the strategic arms limitation treaty should be ratified by the Senate "on its own merits" despite the presence of Soviet troops in Cuba. To link the treaty "with some action or inaction of the Soviets ... would not be in the best interest of the American people," Carter said.

The president made the comment in an interview Friday with out-of-town editors and broadcasters. The White House released a transcript of the interview Saturday.

Carter's national security adviser, Zbigniew Brzezinski, meeting with the same editors, said it is "fundamentally prejudicial" and "escapist" to link the SALT II treaty to Soviet behavior elsewhere.

"I think those who are saying, 'Let's hold out on SALT II,' I think they are chickening out, frankly," Brzezinski added.

And Senate Majority leader Robert C. Byrd declared Saturday the stategic arms limitation treaty should not be "held hostage" to the issue of Soviet combat troops in Cuba.

However, the West Virginia Democrat acknowledged that if the U.S.-Soviet treaty were to be voted on "in today's environment, it would have a rough time" and would fall short of the two-thirds majority needed for Senate ratification.

Later Debate Planned

Byrd told a news conference he plans to start the floor debate on SALT II on Nov. 1 — later than originally expected — and hopes that by then, "the dust should have settled" on the Cuban controversy.

Carter said Wednesday that U.S. intelligence only recently confirmed that the military force was in Cuba but that "elements of the unit appear to have been there since at least 1976."

Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance told a news conference "this force has been in Cuba since at least the mid-1970s" with elements on the island "since the early 1970s — and possibly before that."

"I strongly doubt the accuracy of this allegation," declared Ford.

Last week, former Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger, who served under both Ford and former President Richard M. Nixon, also disputed the Carter administration claims.

"Had we known, we would have taken an extremely dim view of the situation, since we consistently opposed Soviet activities in Cuba," Kissinger said.

Ford said during his presidency, from August, 1974 to January, 1977, the United States conducted regular surveillance flights over Cuba, but that Carter apparently stopped those flights. "If this is true, this would explain the administration's confusion as to what has happened in the past 2½ years," Ford said.

Ford appeared particularly incensed at what he called the Carter administration's attempts to "shift the responsibility to the previous administration" because of help he said he has given Carter on foreign policy issues.

Helped On Canal

Last December, Carter praised Ford for helping him get the Senate to ratify the Panama Canal treaties.

"I think you all know how helpful it is for me to have President Ford come back and talk with me and counsel with me. He's been very supportive and has given me outstanding advice," Carter said at the time.

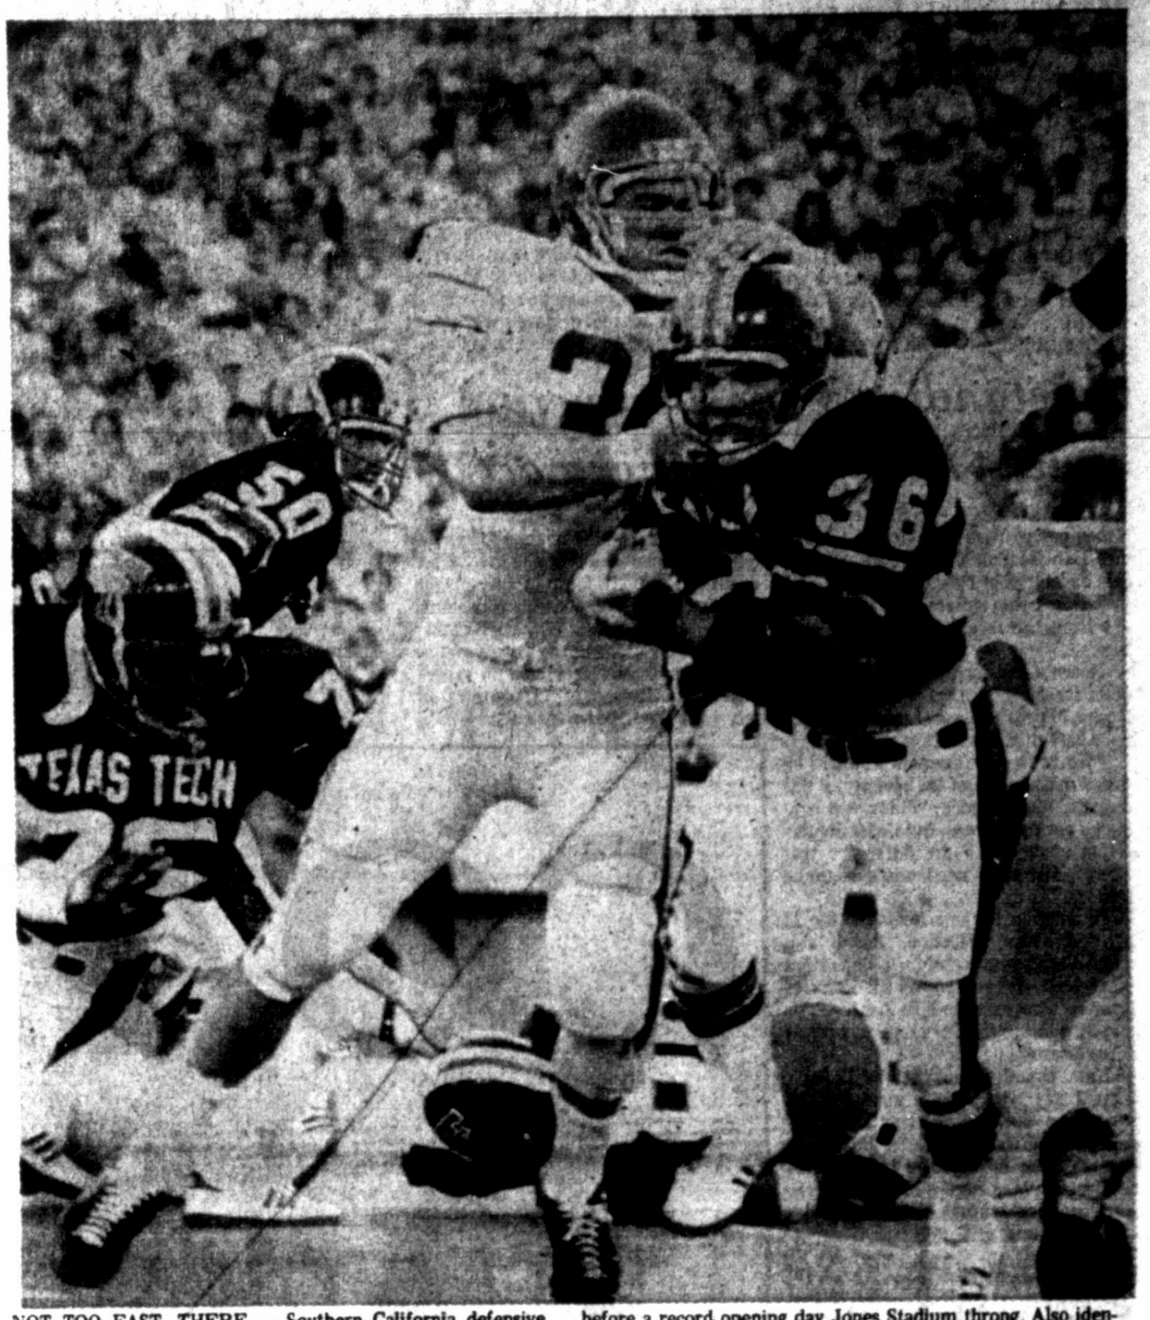

Ford said the failure of the Carter administration to detect the Soviet unit raised questions about the performance of U.S. intelligence.

Vance has denied that there were any intelligence failures, saying the information was "fragmentary and difficult to put together. ...

"Sometimes the fragments all fall into place and you can arrive at a conclusion. This is what happened," Vance told reporters last week.

Carter said the U.S.-Soviet arms accord is needed whether the troops are there or not.

The president had said Friday the United States should use "firm diplomacy" to deal with the presence of a Russian combat brigade in Cuba, and said the status quo was not acceptable.

Inflation No Curb On Booze Sale

(EDITOR'S NOTE: "Look here," an Odessa liquor merchant told a recent visitor, producing a gold-plated ceramic decanter of straight bourbon whiskey. It was a replica of Elvis Presley and contained a music box rigged with one of the late singer's hits. "It's called Elvis Gold and it goes on sale Dec. 1 for $250 to $300. And I'm already sold out. Now, you tell me this isn't a screwy business!")

By MIKE COCHRAN
Associated Press Writer

TEMPORARILY marooned once on a Bahamian isle, a Lubbock man known fondly as Warbucks found himself in distressingly short supply of his favorite bourbon.

Collaring a young native, Warbucks dispatched him on something akin to a mercy mission. Within the hour he was back, cherished bottle in hand.

"Thank you, my good man, and what do I owe you?" the South Plainsman inquired grandly.

"That'll be $50," replied the courier.

"These natives ain't so dumb," Warbucks told a companion as he fished out a bill. "They're the only people getting what this —is worth!"

If nothing else, the story illustrates the esteem with which some regard their chosen beverage and the lengths they'll go to acquire it.

"When people have a vice, it doesn't make any difference what the price is," reports Tom Miller, who operates a liquor store on the neon "Strip" south of Lubbock.

Miller's observations tend to support the findings of an Associated Press study of liquor sales, prices and activities in the face of mounting inflation.

Those findings include:

—Continuing demand for high-priced, "quality" beverages such as Chivas Regal Scotch, Jack Daniels bourbon, Smirnoff vodka, Bacardi rum and Beefeater gin.

—General confusion over the state's local option liquor laws.

A typical Texan, if there is such a thing, consumed 1.8 gallons of "hard" liquor, quaffed 31.7 gallons of beer and sipped a gallon of wine last year.

Those are the per capita figures as compiled rather loosely by the Alcoholic Beverage Commission, the ABC, the state's respected regulatory watchdog.

It is unknown precisely how much Texans spent quenching their assorted thirsts, but the state collected $165 million in fiscal 1978 in taxes on alcohol.

"We had forecast $200 million this year but we might not make it," said Mike McKinney, the ABC's chief of staff in Austin. "But we'll surely be in excess

Ambulance Service Political Football

By KIM COBB and SYLVIA TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

EMERGENCY MEDICAL Services has been a political football in Lubbock County since discussions of beefing up the area's traditional ambulance service began more than six years ago.

Even today, the question of who should fund the ambulance service produced three different answers from city, county and hospital district officials.

At the moment the Lubbock County Hospital District seems prepared to kick the debt-ridden football to the city, with the city just as prepared to lateral it right back.

However, the resistance of city officials to funding any part of the EMS seems firmly lodged in events that began more than six years ago when the ambulance service was conceived.

Ambulance service provided in 1972 by funeral homes and private ambulance services produced somewhat of a crisis for city officials.

Those responding to emergency calls had very little first aid training and were known to "fight" over victims at an accident scene.

One untrained ambulance attendant reportedly pulled a wreck victim from a car and promptly dropped the person on his head. The victim died at the scene.

"We had to do something about tightening our licensing and making sure people doing first aid runs had some first aid experience and adequate equipment," Councilwoman Carolyn Jordan recalled.

After considering operating an ambulance service out of the city fire department, the City Council decided to contract with Aid Ambulance to provide emergency care.

But that was considered only a method to "buy time," and then Mayor Morris Turner asked West Texas Health Sys-

Mississippi Brunette Wins Miss America

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Miss Mississippi, Cheryl Prewitt, a brunette who was told 11 years ago that she would never walk again, was crowned Miss American 1980 Saturday night.

Miss Prewitt, 22, of Ackerman, Miss., is a recent graduate of Mississippi State University who hopes to earn her doctorate in music and then perform professionally.

Miss Prewitt raised her hands to her eyes and cried when master of ceremonies Bert Parks announced her name before a huge nationwide television audience and more than 22,000 people in Convention Hall on the Boardwalk.

"Thank you, thank you," said the 5-7, 110-pound beauty before Miss America 1979, Kylene Barker of Virginia, crowned her as the 52nd Miss America.

First runner-up in the pageant was Miss Ohio, Tana Kay Carli of Lakewood, followed by Miss Kansas, Michelle Elaine Whitson of Mission; Miss Missouri, Susan Wilson of Fredericktown; and Miss Florida, Marti Phillips of Tampa.

Miss Prewitt was badly hurt in an automobile accident at age 11 that crushed her left leg and left her with 100 stitches. Dcotors told her then that she would never walk again.

But she said she walked by "a miracle of God." She said she saw her shortened left leg "grow two inches instantaneously" at a revival meeting several years later.

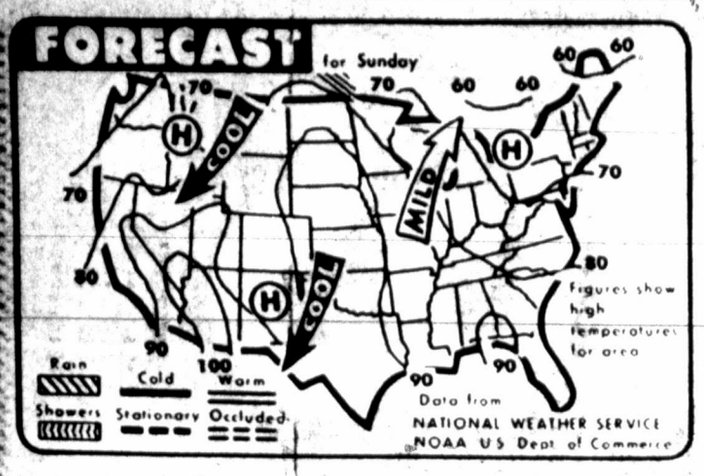

"I am proud that people don't notice that I was once a cripple," she told reporters earlier this week.

She is the third Mississippi woman to win the title. The last was Lynda Lee Mead of Natchez in 1960.

In the talent competition, Miss Prewitt performed an entertaining piano and vocal rendition of the popular song, "Don't Cry Out Loud."

SEDCO Says Mexicans Ignored Advice

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — Mexican officials repeatedly ignored advice from American personnel on how to control an offshore oil well that later ran wild, creating the world's largest oil spill, officials of a Dallas-based oil drilling company said Saturday.

Stephen Mahood, vice president of SEDCO Inc., testified before two congressional committees looking into causes and effects of the runaway oil.

SEDCO leased an offshore drilling rig to a private Mexican contractor which had been hired by the Mexican national oil company, PEMEX, to drill the Ixtoc I offshore well 50 miles off the Yucatan Peninsula.

On June 2, Mahood said, the drill malfunctioned and a SEDCO official recommended certain actions that Mexican supervisers ignored. The technical advice involved trying to maintain pressure in the drilling hole.

But "The decision was made by PEMEX ... to remove the drill bit and pipe from the hole ... We advised strongly against this procedure of removing the drill bit and pipe (but) Pemex elected to go ahead with this procedure."

The American company, founded by Texas Gov. Bill Clements, also recommended that Mexican officials fill the hole with salt water to help control it, but again Mahood said the advice was not followed.

Early on June 3, as the Mexicans were raising the drill bit, the pressure increased and when the bit was near the surface of the ocean it became jammed and operators could not move it up or down, Mahood said. He said when the operators tried to activate a blowout prevention ram at the floor of the ocean it was not able to slice through the heavy steel drill bit collar, and the well blew.

When the $20 million rig blew out and ignited, all men aboard including the seven SEDCO advisers abandoned it, Mahood testified before the House Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee and the water resources subcommittee.

The two panels opened two days of hearings into the spill Saturday. Coast Guard officials battling the crude as it has stained Texas beaches the past month have said the worst is over for Texas.

Texas Attorney General Mark White, a Democrat, said he was surprised that the Republican governor's former company officials gave "operating advice" since earlier reports indicated the American firm merely provided equipment and had no part in decision making.

White also questioned the decision to sink the rig, which he said deprived everyone of evidence needed to fully investigate the accident.

"I'm very concerned that it took place," White said of the sinking.

Spencer Taylor, president of SEDCO's drilling division, said the company had no choice to sink the rig. "If it had moved into a port or an inland waterway and collapsed, we would have had an extreme problem," Taylor said.

Bus Mishap Jury Picks Slated Monday

COLORADO CITY, Texas (UPI) — Jury selection will begin Monday in the long-delayed trial of a Snyder man who was driving an oilfield service truck which collided Dec. 8, 1978, with a bus carrying members of the McCaulley High School basketball teams.

William Clarence Dixon, 22, faces three counts of involuntary manslaughter. Five students died in the crash and 22 other persons, including Dixon, were injured.

District Judge Weldon Kirk, who has ordered all parties in the trial not to talk to the media, has granted three postponements in the trial, and the last was termed indefinite. It was not until late Friday that the judge announced the opening of the trial Monday.

Kirk had refused earlier to move the trial from Roby, 11 miles from the crash sight, but finally moved it to Colorado City when the prosecution removed its opposition to the defense's change of venue request. The defense had contended that Dixon could not get a fair trial close to the scene of the crash.

The crash occurred on U.S. 180 at FM 611 near Roby in West Texas. It involved Dixon's 10-wheel oilfield service truck and the McCaulley High School bus carrying boys and girls to a basketball tournament at Hermleigh.

Sixteen civil suits were filed against Dixon and Cardinal Surveys Co. of Odessa. Several of them have been settled out of court, with relatives of the dead or injured receiving up to a total of $300,000.

The civil suits alleged that Cardinal was negligent in allowing Dixon to drive the truck. It was revealed later that Dixon had been convicted of 13 traffic violations since 1975, and that seven of them came in 1977.

Cool Nights Of Autumn May Not Be Far

Autumn isn't here yet, as temperatures today near 90 will reflect, but it is on its way. Overnight temperatures are slowly creeping lower and lower into the 60s and may dip into the 50s this week.

During daylight hours today and Monday, Lubbock area residents will receive partly sunny skies and temperatures in the upper 80s because of a mass of cool, dry air which pushed its way into the state Saturday.

Clear to partly cloudy skies and warm temperatures also are forecast for much of the rest of the state, according to the National Weather Service.

Scattered afternoon and nighttime thunderstorms may be expected in portions of South Texas and the Panhandle.

Scattered showers in the state Saturday were reported over a wide area bounded by Abilene, San Angelo, Kerrville and Austin.

Storm clouds over the Panhandle Saturday night were expected to sprinkle small amounts, from less than .01 to near three-fourths of an inch of rain, but no precipitation is forecast today for the Panhandle or the South Plains.

Outstanding Loans Reduction Sought For Disaster Farmers

WASHINGTON — U.S. Rep. Kent Hance has written Secretary of Agriculture Bob Bergland to request a 20 per cent reduction of outstanding loans held by farmers who suffered the most damage from the recent hailstorm in West Texas.

Hance asked for the special consideration for those farmers who suffered at least a 70 per cent loss of crops expected to be harvested this fall.

"We have some farmers who will be wiped out because of the severity of this disaster," said Hance. "Many will simply go out of business, but hopefully this action could make the difference that many farmers need to continue farming."

In addition to the request for the 20 per cent loan reduction, Hance also asked Bergland to consider a deferment of at least three years on all loans to farmers who sustained 50 per cent or greater damage to their crops as a result of the disaster.

Nine counties thus far in Hance's West Texas 19th Congressional District have been declared disaster areas because of the more than $200 million in damage done by a major hailstorm in late August. Major crops of cotton, corn, soybeans and sugar beets were destroyed in most of the disaster-designated counties.

In order to qualify under Hance's request a farmer would have to meet three qualifications: (1) farm in one of the Farmers Home Administration declared disaster area counties; (2) have no other farming operations in any county not so declared a disaster area; and (3) experience crop damage of 70 per cent or more on crops to be harvested this fall.

Consumer Pinch Not Expected In Strike

SALINAS, Calif. (AP) — Hundreds of farm workers stayed off the job for a fourth day Saturday in a wildcat strike against Salinas Valley growers, but officials said consumers would feel no immediate effects from the walkout.

Negotiations between the United Farm Workers pickers and 17 growers resumed Saturday in an effort to resolve the dispute, seen as an attempt to spur acceptance of a contract patterned after one reached already with Sun Harvest, California's largest lettuce producer.

It could not be determined how many of the 17 growers had been struck, but Jim McVicar, a spokesman for the California Council of Growers, said pickers for at least six of the growers either left the fields after a few hours or did not report for work Saturday.

"But there's normally not much picking going on on Saturday, and there wouldn't be a normal full force workday," said McVicar, who noted the work stoppage has involved more than 1,000 pickers recently.

"We're hopeful that negotiations can continue now so that a settlement can be reached as soon as possible," said McVicar.

Judgment, Not Censorship, Said Used In Schools

By LISA PAIKOWSKI
Avalanche-Journal Staff

In 1979, 34 years after it was published, J.D. Salinger's controversial novel, "The Catcher in the Rye," still is banned in schools and school libraries across the country.

But in Lubbock, while Salinger's story of rebellious young Holden Caulfield is not taught in the public schools classrooms, it still can be found on many school library shelves.

Although Lubbock school librarians and the district's language arts consultant do screen books for use in individual schools, the Lubbock school district has not had an official book banning policy nor has the school board ever had to ban books, say some of its past and present administrators.

Book banning, which many criticize as censorship and a loss of First Amendment freedoms, is the subject of controversy in almost a dozen court cases in various states. One of those cases, involving a Long Island, N.Y., school board ban on 11 books, is expected to reach the Supreme Court which has never ruled on book banning in a school district.

Nat Williams, superintendent for Lubbock public schools from 1951 to 1979, says he does not recall a formal banning action by school officials during his 28 years as top administrator.

Jay Gordon, current assistant superintendent for instruction, says he can remember no such ban either. He adds that he does not recall ever taking the matter of a questionable book before the school board and he questions the legal right of school officials to ban books.

But, as Williams notes, books in the district are screened — for reasons ranging from cost to objectionable content — and that raises the question of censorship. As Monterey High School librarian Gwen Stephen says, "When you (a librarian) choose not to buy a book, you are censoring. We try not to censor... we try to be fairly liberal. But we try to use judgment."

The district has no official censorship policy for any of its departments — a fact that language arts consultant Wayne Dickey finds significant. Still, Dickey reviews and approves the books taught by language arts teachers and he can turn down a request by a teacher to employ a book for group class instruction.

He does not see his review of books as censorship, however. "I am against any policy of censorship in terms of language arts," Dickey stressed.

He said that a censorship policy is a written policy, which the district does not have, and he prefers that anyone with an objection be able to appeal personally to an administrator rather than to a written policy.

Dickey considers each request for books to be taught in class in terms of the school, the school's surrounding community and the grade level. "I like the fact that every book is considered on an individual basis in each situation that comes to my attention."

Dickey said that "The Catcher in the Rye" is not approved for teaching in any Lubbock classrooms because it traditionally was not taught before he reached his present postion and he has continued that tradition.

Dickey said the only other book he would not approve for teaching in all classes is "Soul on Ice" by Eldridge Cleaverbecause of some explicit passages in the book. He has received no teacher request to teach the autobiography, however.

The consultant said he has turned down few requests by teachers and "the reasons (for the denial) have to be firmly educational and-or instructional."

His disapproval of a book as a teaching material does not preclude its use as resource for students working on research papers, though. "I don't feel that all research topics should be cleared by me," Dickey said.

Similarly, books considered for purchase in the school libraries are reviewed by librarians for use in each individual library.

"Our book selection policy includes selection according to the age, needs and abilities of the students at each school," said Carol Bramlett, library services consultant for the schools.

She defends her librarians' right to review books and said that some in her profession "feel that nothing should be questioned. I don't think we can go that far."

Parents have objected to the use of various books in the schools throughout the years, but even in the few incidents encountered by school personnel, the books in question are not always retired from use.

Gordon said he can remember no complaints by parents for the last four or five years. He recalls a question about several modern novels at one time, including "To Kill a Mockingbird" by Harper Lee, but "none were banned."

"If a book was just an absolute flagrant violation of good taste, schools should not be so weak not to raise a question about the propriety of a book at a certain grade level in certain curriculums," Gordon said. He added that he "would not hesitate at all from withdrawing pornographic material" from the schools.

Catherine Pendleton, retired librarian at Estacado High School, said she remembers two parent complaints during her 12 years at the school.

She said that a parent objected to some language in the book "Joy in the Morning" by Betty Smith, but the volume was not removed from the shelves.

The parent of a sophomore did not like the "modern teenage language" of the autobiography "Easy Walking" by Jonathan Lewis Nasau. The book was placed in another section of the library, usually used by older students, and removed from the biography section that the younger students were required to utilize in their studies.

Mrs. Pendleton said sometimes "you have to accept the language if the book is exceptionally well done as literature. She said, however, that though she "does not like to censor... I'm going to be sensible."

Jane Darnell, librarian at Thompson Junior High, also said that language must sometimes be discounted just to get the students to read. She said that the school is in an area of "non-readers" and she will allow some questionable language "if I can get them to read."

According to the National Education Association and the American Library Association, the most-banned books in the country are, "The Catcher in the Rye," Kurt Vonnegut's "Slaughterhouse Five" and John Steinbeck's "Of Mice and Men."

All but the Vonnegut book ("I don't particularly think it's a good book"; "the language") are on the shelves of the city's five high schools.

While Dickey disapproves of censorship, he seems to view book banning as a greater affront because it leaves no room for change or individual consideration.

"There has been no book burning or witch hunts over books since I've been here," said Dickey. "A lot of people think we live in a conservative town. But we have had fewer problems and more instructional and academic freedom than a lot of other towns of the same size or larger."

Food-Borne Disease Reports Increase In Lubbock

By NANCY ALLEN
Avalanche-Journal Staff

A normally healthy person who feels queasy after eating a meal at a restaurant or at home probably won't suspect food poisoning, but in Lubbock this may well be the cause of gastric distress.

According to Health Department Director Dr. Marjorie Orr, Lubbock's instance of food-borne disease, such as salmonella and shigella, and hepatitis, is "too high for the level of affluence and education in the community. I was very surprised when I came here to find this much (food-borne disease) reported," she said.

During the first six months of 1979, health department officials in Lubbock recorded 18 cases of salmonella and 32 of shigella. Some 33 cases of hepatitis types A and B have been reported in Lubbock since Jan. 1, two and a half times the state average, according to Dr. Orr.

All cases were confirmed by state health department laboratories in Austin.

A health department map of the city, marked with colored pins at addresses where the diseases have been reported, shows the instances are not confined to any one area of Lubbock. "It looks like somebody shot it with a shotgun," commented Dr. Orr.

Reported instances of the diseases, however, represent only a tip of an iceberg, say health department officials here and in Austin.

Comparing this year's statistics with those of previous years in Lubbock is impossible. Dr. Orr explained, because prior to her arrival in February 1978, records were incomplete.

Other cities throughout the state apparently are not much better, according to Mary Carson Coe of the state health department in Austin. "Under-reporting (of food-borne diseases) is a big problem. There's no way of telling for sure how much is out there," she said.

State health officials depend on local health departments for statistics, while city and county health departments count on local doctors and hospitals to keep them current on outbreaks of food-borne disease.

"We have urged doctors and hospitals to report the diseases to us when they see it," said Dr. Orr. "Reporting is picking up."

Food-borne, or enteric, diseases are caused by bacteria, or a virus in the case of hepatitis, which are transmitted to humans through the food chain.

They affect a person's digestive tract — the stomach and bowel — causing nausea, vomiting, diarrhea, headache and fever. Depending on a person's resistance to disease, he or she may experience mild to violent symptoms, even death.

No deaths resulting from salmonella or shigella have been reported in Lubbock this year. However, an 81-year old man died of salmonella in 1978, according to Dr. Orr, and the home death of a two-year-old child also may be attributable to the disease.

Small children, elderly persons and the chronically ill are hardest hit by food-borne diseases. Dr. Orr suspects the diseases may even contribute to Lubbock's high infant mortality rate, citing the example of a case of salmonella in an infant which was traced to her 17-year old brother, a carrier of the disease.

Because autopsies rarely are performed on infants, health department officials don't know the exact effect of enteric disease on the infant death rate.

Even in otherwise healthy young, and middle-aged adults, economic consequences resulting from food poisoning can be staggering.

Dr. Orr pointed to a case involving a generally healthy 40-year old Lubbock man who was hospitalized for two weeks in critical condition with salmonella. He survived his bout with the disease, but his economic losses were severe. Health department statistics place his combined medical expenses and economic loss at more than $45,000.

Because the bacteria or virus causing salmonella, shigella or hepatitis can stem from many sources, and affect each person exposed to it differently, pinpointing the source of even a severe case of food poisoning usually is not possible, explained Dr. Orr.

Dr. Orr places the blame for food-borne diseases on poor sanitation and careless preparation in private and commercial kitchens.

Insects and rodents often carry the diseases and can transmit them to kitchen surfaces or food, so every kitchen must be free of the pests, explained Dr. Orr.

Anyone can be a carrier of the diseases, she continued, and no one who is either infected or a carrier should be involved with food preparation.

Kitchen surfaces, utensils and dishes should be sanitized before each new use to avoid spreading the germs.

Dr. Orr stressed hot foods should be kept hot — above 140 degrees — and cold foods should be refrigerated or packed in ice. Food should not be allowed to sit at room temperature, she said.

Foods to be extra careful of, Dr. Orr said are fresh produce, which must be thoroughly washed before cooking or eating; chicken which must be completely cooked to destroy germs that might be present in the raw meat, and salads containing mayonaise which must be kept chilled.

She said food-borne diseases usually are more prevalent during summer, but there has been little fluctuation in the rate this year.

Dr. Orr attributed poor sanitation in homes to "both negligence and ignorance."

"Sometimes people really don't know what they should be doing to prevent disease," she said. "Others, if they are not prompted to keep their standards up, will just let them slip."

Since Jan. 1, six full-time sanitarians have been on the health department staff, an increase of three since a year ago.

Inspections also have been stepped up to at least every three months and more often for establishments "with too many demerits," Dr. Orr said.

Acknowledging the sanitation staff is "still in the growing process," Dr. Orr said she expects "improvements" in Lubbock's instances of food poisoning in a year.

"We'll see a decrease, but I don't want to say how much because we don't have that good a handle on it now."

Whatever the change, Dr. Orr stressed, sanitation is an ongoing effort. "You don't just clean it up once and it's gone," she said.

Social Security . . . Out West

By BILL WEST
S.S. Field Representative

A woman from Denver City writes:

Q. My mother gets SSI payments. I know she's supposed to report any changes in her income to social security. But, do all kinds of income have to be reported?

A. Under SSI, income includes anything a person receives — even items that do not have to be reported for income tax purposes. Some examples are wages received as an employee; net earnings from self-employment; food, shelter and clothing; annuities and pension; railroad retirement benefits; unemployment insurance; rents and interest; support and alimony payment; strike pay and other union benefits; and gifts and inheritances.

Q. I get monthly SSI checks because I'm disabled. A friend has offered me a part-time job doing paperwork for him. It won't pay much. Do I have to report it to social security?

A. You must notify social security immediately if you begin working while you are receiving disability benefits under either social security or SSI.

A recently married Lubbock youth asked:

Q. I recently started working for a local farmer. Is my work covered by social security?

A. Wages from farm work are covered by social security if you receive at least $150 in cash pay from your employer during a year or you are employed on 20 or more days during a year for cash pay figured on a time basis (by the hour, day, week), regardless of the amount of pay. You will get a quarter of coverage for each $260 of your coverage earnings in 1979, up to a maximum of four quarters for a year.

Q. My wife and I will be 65 later this year. How soon should we apply for our social security benefits?

A. You should apply for retirement benefits about 2-3 months before you plan to retire. That way, your claim can be processed in time for your payments to start when you stop working. In addition, you will have full protection under Medicare by applying before the month you are 65.

Q. Our daughter recently became eligible for Medicare because she has permanent kidney failure. We know Medicare will cover her dialysis and other major services. What services are not covered?

A. Some of the services Medicare does not cover are ambulance or other transportation costs to a facility for routine outpatient maintenance dialysis; dialysis aides services to assist in home dialysis, except under certain conditions; in-patient hospital and skilled nursing facility costs when the stay is solely for maintenance dialysis; and lodging costs when an outpatient dialysis facility is not near your home. For detailed information, ask for a copy of "Medicare coverage of kidney dialysis and kidney transplant services — A supplemental to Your Medicare Handbook" at an social security office.

Q. I just got a notice from Medicare telling me that my medical insurance claim couldn't be processed because the doctor bill submitted wasn't itemized. What exactly should be on an itemized bill?

A. An itemized bill must show a complete description of each service or supply you received; the date, place, and charge for the service or supply; the name of the doctor or supplier who provided it; and your name and complete health insurance number exactly as they're shown on your Medicare card. Whenever you are sending in a bill with your medical insurance claim, make sure it includes all this information. If it doesn't, ask the doctor or supplier to fill in what is missing.

Unruly Tongue Plagues Bill Clements

By BILL KIDD
A-J Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — As Bill Clements said when he began his campaign, he's not a professional politician.

Lately, he's seemed determined to underscore that fact, and it's probably with some relief that GOP party officials watched his departure to Russia — where any slips may get lost in the translation, and at least aren't likely to offend any registered voters.

Sometimes, Clements appears to have a political death wish, galloping into dangerous areas with wild abandon.

Heaven forbid (let us add hastily) that a politician be discouraged from speaking his or her mind. Too often public officials resort to weasel-wording and obfuscation which results in them being on record only as being for virtue and against sin, within the bounds of reason.

His latest faux pas came at Texas A&M, in what apparently was meant as a light-hearted remark about the effect of decompression on fetuses. And when you can embarrass a roomful of Aggies ... well, let's just let that pass.

At worst, that gaffe is simply a matter of not understanding what may or may not be amusing to folks (some Aggies don't get amused at jokes about them, for example).

And while Clements is likely to take some roasting from displeased feminists, it will probably go into the realm of political anecdotes along with the never-to-be-forgotten Rubber Chicken Episode.

But the governor also has made another slip, and one not so easily dismissed as an off-the-cuff remark that just popped out before careful consideration.

Analysis

Clements infuriated a number of coastal resident, and some non-coastal residents, on his first trip to view the Mexican oil slick, by dismissing the matter as "much to do about nothing," and by saying it would be ridiculous for Texas to sue Mexico over the matter.

Attorney General Mark White was quick to point out that a decision to sue or to not sue wasn't Clements' to make.

Nor did it take long for there to be a number of comments, from office holders and others, regarding whether the fact that SEDCO, Clements' drilling firm, had supplied the drilling rig for the Mexican well was a factor in Clements' reluctance.

Clements has been quoting as calling that a "cheap shot," and, with no evidence to show that there was any fault on the part of the rig, his anger is understandable.

White has since added to that developing feud by being "shocked" that the remains of the rig were towed out to the Gulf and sunk in mile-deep-plus water, contending the lack of that physical evidence will make it more difficult to determine what caused the blow-out.

Clements has, since his first visit, revised his estimate of the problems being caused by the oil, calling it an "unprecedented" disaster for the area and urged that disaster relief be provided to economically damaged businesses.

Ann White has added to the governor's unhappiness by overruling a number of appropriations "vetoes," which White says weren't vetoes, because they were in "riders" to the general appropriations bill.

That reversal of position on the seriousness of the oil spill isn't the first time Clements has issued a statement which he later might have regretted.

During the legislative session, he was forced to back up on his statement that he'd veto any legislation to raise home loan mortgage rates, an action for which he received considerable criticism at the time.

Despite that, Clements was holding up very well in the opinion of Texans, as shown in statewide polls, at least until the oil spill arrived.

Clements' desire to downplay the effects of the spill may be due to his efforts to negotiate directly with Mexican officials on border problems (having lost in his attempt to get U.S. border governors to cooperate with that attempt).

And it may be that Texans are willing to overlook his initial casualness about the nasty stuff washing up on the beaches, if he can implement his campaign promises.

But that effort isn't likely to be helped by any future verbal blunders — and any politician, professional or otherwise, doesn't run well with a foot in the mouth.

Board Rules Against Special Services

AUSTIN (AP) — The State Board of Education Saturday decided that a Dallas-area school district does not have to provide special services for a girl suffering from a spinal disease that prevents her from going to the bathroom like normal children.

The decision, with two opposing votes, overturned a hearing officer's finding that the Irving Independent School District should provide the service for the 3-year-old girl so she can attend an early childhood program.

"This is not a health service. It's a medical service," board member W.H. Fetter of La Marque said in opposing the hearing officer's recommendation.

The girl, identified only as Amber T., has spinal bifida, a disease that has resulted in a nervous condition preventing voluntary urination. The girlrequires a procedure —manual draining with a tube — to prevent the urine from causing kidney infection.

The school district maintained the process is a medical treatment and should not be performed by school personnel. District officials said the girl's condition does not include an educational handicap that can be dealt with through special education.

But the girl's family claimed the procedure is not a medical treatment and is performed by babysitters and the girl's siblings. The procedure is needed every three to four hours.

The hearing officer found that the procedure would not require unauthorized practice of medicine. The recommendation stated that the process "is properly characterized as a 'school health service.'"

But board member Mary Ann Leveridge of East Bernard disagreed and moved to reject the recommendation.

"I do not feel (the procedure) is a related health service," she said, adding that the procedure carries a "possibility of severe infection."

Fetter agreed with Mrs. Leveridge and said, "If something went wrong who do you think would be responsible?"

But Dr. Virginia Curry of Arlington disagreed. She said schools already deal with health problems that involve legal responsibility.

She said the specific nature of the girl's problem may have clouded school officials' decision. She asked fellow board members to look at the problem as if the school were being asked to "wipe the little girl's nose."

"I would like this treated much more naturally," she said.

Wayne Windle, who joined Dr. Curry in voting against the Leveridge motion, said evidence showed that the girl will probably be able to perform the procedure on herself within three years.

The board also rejected a request for a rehearing of a case involving an autistic Garland girl. Sue and Robert Brock had asked that the Garland Independent School District pay for full-time, residential care for the girl at a private facility. They believe the girl cannot get adequate care in the school's special education program.

Autism is a psychological condition in which the person afflicted ignores his or her surroundings.

In August the board rejected a hearing officer's finding in favor of the Brocks. The board ordered that the girl should receive day care at a Garland special education class.

Board Of Education Hires Firm To Develop School Skill Tests

AUSTIN (AP) — A Princeton, N.J., firm Saturday was hired by the State Board of Education to develop basic skill tests that will be given to 450,000 Texas fifth and ninth graders next spring.

The board approved a $118,446 contract with Educational Testing Service. The New Jersey firm will immediately begin development of the state's first mandatory public school exam program, according to a board release issued after a meeting here Saturday.

The Texas Assessment of Basic Skills will test fifth and ninth graders in reading, mathematics and writing. Third graders will be added to the program in 1980-81.

The development procedure will include an October field-testing of the exams among 8,000 students. The results of those tests will be used to develop the tests to be given in the spring, the release said.

Ninth graders who do not score well on the tests may re-take the exams throughout high school. The repeat exams will be used to help teachers work with individual students.

Individual test scores will be available only to the student, parent and school officials. Cumulative student performance, measured by school and district, will be reported to the public each year by the board of trustees.

Board Chairman Joe Butler Kelly of Houston said, "The whole testing program is designed to help the student and the school improve achievement."

SAT Scores Continue In Downward Spiral

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Scholastic Aptitude Test scores of America's high school seniors fell slightly this year, continuing a downward spiral that began a decade ago, the College Board said Saturday.

The average SAT-verbal score dropped two points to 427 and the SAT-math score dropped one point to 467.

The multiple-choice test taken by 1 million college-bound seniors is scored on a scale of 200 to 800. Ten years ago the average verbal score was 463 and math 493. Originally, 500 was supposed to be average.

Although the test is designed to rate students, not schools, the national decline has been viewed in many quarters as evidence that something is amiss in American education.

Robert G. Cameron, a College Board official, said the latest decline is "disappointing in light of what many schools have been doing to improve education."

But he added, "since there are many causes for the decline, schools cannot expect to reverse the trend quickly or single-handedly."

A 1977 College Board study concluded that a variety of factors, including television, changes in the family, relaxed standards, and the tubulence of Vietnam and Watergate, were to blame for the drop in SAT scores since 1970. The increasing numbers of minority students taking the SAT figured in a drop before 1970, but since then the decline has affected students across the board, the study said.

The test has been involved in a controversy recently over whether coaching increases students' scores.

The College Board maintains that drills and cramming are not likely to raise students' scores very much, because the test measures skills developed over a long time. But a recent Federal Trade Commission study indicated coaching schools may help some students.

—Seventeen percent were minorities, a record number.

—They chose business as their most popular field of study in college, knocking health and medicine to second place for the first time. "This switch is primarily due to women, whose interest in business has more than doubled since 1973," it said.

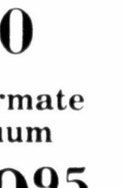

—The college-bound seniors reported a median family income of $20,800, up 8 percent.

—Their parents are expected to pay a median of $1,190 toward college costs, according to the board's College Scholarship Service.

Past Prime Minister Opens Tech Cultural Events

Texas Tech University Center Cultural Events will open the 1979-80 season Sept. 18 with Sir Harold Wilson, former prime minister of Great Britain, as guest lecturer in the Artist and Speakers Series.

Wilson will discuss Euro-communism at 8:15 p.m. in the University Center Theater located on campus.

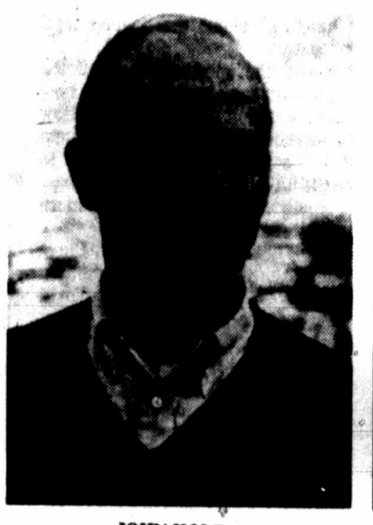

The British statesman leads off the year's list of speakers that includes James Fixx, author of "The Complete Book of Running"; John Holt, educator and author of "How Children Fail, How Children Learn"; and Edward Villella, principal dancer with the New York City Ballet for many years.

A special two-day program on the pros and cons of the utilization of nuclear energy will feature two nationally know nuclear scientists, Dr. Norman Rasmussen of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and Daniel Ford, executive director of the Union of Concerned Scientists.

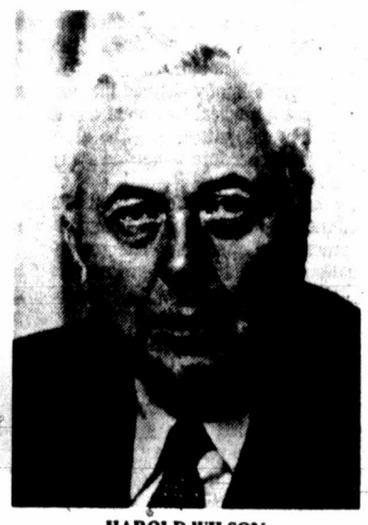

Wilson, who was prime minister of Great Britain and leader of the Labour Party from 1964 to 1976, participated in numerous meetings with heads of government in Europe, the USSR, North America, the Caribbean and Africa.

He made several trips in connection with the Rhodesian situation and in 1969 visited Addis Ababa for talks on the problems of the Nigerian Civil War.

During his years as prime minister, Wilson dealt with resumption of negotiations for Britain's entry into the Common Market, Britain's reappraisal of her military's responsibility overseas, the Rhodesian crisis and the issues concerning the balance of payments.

Hale Center Solon Appointed To State Aircraft Agency

A-J Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Rep. Pete Laney of Hale Center, a private pilot, has been picked to serve as chairman of the newly created State Aircraft Pooling Board for the next two years.

Laney, who also chairs the House Administration Committee, was appointed by Speaker Bill Clayton to be a member of the pooling board. Laney also carried the legislation during the 66th legislative session creating the agency.

Travis County prosecutors had recommended that the state increase supervision of the aircraft it owns and leases, to prevent abusive travel plans by state officials and employees.

Laney says it is his recommendation that the state quit leasing aircraft, and only purchase planes in the future. The state now has two dozen aircraft which it either leases or owns.

The most pressing problem for the new agency is the request by State Agriculture Commissioner Reagan Brown that his office be allowed to purchase a plane the department is now leasing. Gov. Bill Clements vetoed funds by the Legislature allowing Brown to make that purchase.

Under Laney's legislation, all aircraft either owned or leased by the state, will be allocated to agency officials through the Pooling Board staff.

DC Mayor Asking Extra Budget Development Time

WASHINGTON (AP) — District of Columbia Mayor Marion Barry has asked the City Council for an additional two weeks in which to present it with his Fiscal 1981 budget request.

Barry reportedly wants the extra time to see how Congress handles the District's $1.4 billion budget request for Fiscal 1980, which begins Oct. 1. When Congress went into recess during the month of August, it had failed to take any final action on the Fiscal 1980 budget, but is expected to do so shortly.

Soviet Combat Unit Puts Kink In Salt II Plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — The discovery of a secret Soviet combat unit in Cuba has produced an emotional explosion in the Senate and thrown prospects of ratifying the SALT II treaty into serious doubt.

President Carter appealed for calm Friday and warned of the dangers of exaggerating the situation. But he also aimed a clear message at the Soviet Union that its relations with the United States are in jeopardy if the matter is not resolved.

In an interview Friday with visiting editors, Carter also said the treaty should be ratified by the Senate "on its own merits" despite the presence of the troops.

To link the treaty, "with some action or inaction of the Soviets ... would not be in the best interests of the American people," the president said in the interview, a transcript of which was released Saturday by the White House.

The furor over the disclosure that the Soviets have a fully equipped combat brigade of 2,000 to 3,000 men in Cuba has left supporters of the strategic arms limitation treaty a little bewildered.

"The treaty had been doing just fine," a Senate aide remarked last week. "It had been clipping down the track at a good rate of speed. A lot of things we thought might prove to be obstacles were dealt with.

"But this disclosure about a Russian brigade in Cuba has shunted the entire issue onto a side track and it is just sitting there, chugging away, not going anywhere. I'm just not sure how we can get it going again."

Hearings on the pact will continue before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee and the Senate Democratic leadership remains committed to bringing it to the floor for debate this year.

But Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, says he has not found a single senator who believes the pact can be ratified by the necessary 67 votes as long as the Soviet troops remain in Cuba, 90 miles from U.S. shores.

Thus SALT II has been stymied by a set of circumstances that could not have been forecast when Senate hearings began on July 10.

Although Senate Democratic leader Robert C. Byrd still plans to bring the treaty to the floor this year, he said Saturday he would delay the debate from mid-October to early November, explaining that "the dust should have settled" on the Cuba issue by then.

Byrd wants to conclude the SALT debate by Thanksgiving Day, but the possibility remains that debate will continue into the politically charged currents of the presidential election campaign in 1980.

The issue of Cuban troops began when Sen. Richard Stone, D-Fla., used his membership on the Foreign Relations Committee to ask administration officials this summer whether the United States had insisted that the Soviet Union live up to the accords which ended the Cuban missile crisis in 1962.

In particular, he wanted to know whether Soviet submarines with nuclear missiles had paid port calls in Cuba, whether a large Soviet naval facility was being built there and whether the Soviets had secretly introduced a combat brigade.

Stone said that the will of the United States to enforce the SALT II treaty would be thrown into doubt if it could be shown that America had not objected to Soviet violations of the 1962 accords in Cuba.

Stone persisted in his inquiry, he said, when Secretary of State Cyrus Vance disclosed that President Carter raised the possibility of increased Soviet military activity in Cuba at his Vienna summit meeting with Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev.

In a letter to Stone on July 27, Vance said no evidence of such activity had been uncovered. But Stone said the fact the president had raised the matter with Brezhnev at all was "the tipoff" something was in the wind.

Pharmacy Dean Named Food And Drug Head

WASHINGTON (AP) — Jere Edwin Goyan, an innovative pharmacy school dean who helped reshape the way pharmacists are trained, was named Saturday to be commissioner of the Food and Drug Administration.

JERE GOYAN

Goyan, 49, dean of the School of Pharmacy at the University of California, San Francisco, will be the first FDA commissioner from a pharmaceutical background and the second in a row who is not a medical doctor. He holds a doctorate in pharmaceutical chemistry.

The announcement by Health, Education and Welfare Secretary Patricia Roberts Harris was her first major appointment since she moved to HEW a month ago in President Carter's Cabinet shuffle.

She said that since the FDA "has such an immediate effect on the lifestyle of every American, the head of this agency must have both scientific ability and an understanding of human needs.

"Dr. Goyan's scientific experience, administrative skills and strong social commitment will serve him well as he tackles the challenges now faced by the FDA."

Goyan will preside over an agency with 7,500 employees and a $300 million budget. It plays a key role in policing the quality of America's food and drugs, and often is in the thick of controversies over such issues as its attempt to ban saccharin.

Donald Kennedy, who resigned as commissioner June 30 to become provost of Stanford University, said Goyan has been "a pioneer in the national development of new concepts in pharmacy education."

Goyan explained that in 1967 the University of California and several other schools "started a program in which we try to educate pharmacy students about what drugs do to people."

"Up to then, most of the students' experience was using drugs on animals in the lab," he said. "Our students took part in patient care in hospitals and learned first-hand."

Now this "clerkship experience" covers the entire senior year at the pharmacy school, and most other schools have followed suit.

"We basically feel that the more people that take part in caring for the patient — including the patient herself — the better off the patient is," said Goyan, who is a member of the Institute of Medicine at the National Academy of Sciences, and an adviser to HEW's National Institutes of Health.

American Seeks Release From Cuban Jail

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Lawrence Lunt, a peaceful American cattle rancher whose patriotism got him entangled with the CIA, may be just days from freedom after 14 years in a Havana jail cell.

Lunt, described as looking "strained and nervous" but still keeping his faith less than half way through a 30-year sentence, has had his hopes raised and dashed time and again in recent years.

Several times, Castro flirted with proposals for swapping Lunt for communist prisoners held by Western countries, but the negotiations always broke down. Yet in the last 18 months, the Cuban leader has been more definite.

He has promised repeatedly — via diplomatic channels, a congressional delegation and American reporters — that he'd free Lunt and three other jailed Americans if President Carter released four Puerto Rican nationalists.

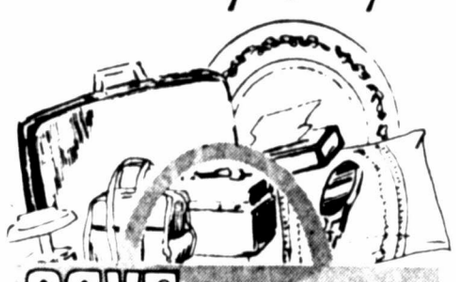

Last week, Carter took him up on the offer, commuting the sentences of the four Puerto Ricans who shot up the House of Representatives and President Harry Truman's residence in the 1950s.

The four nationalists will be freed from federal prisons at 10 a.m. Monday.

Now Carter, congressmen and relatives of the jailed Americans are calling on Castro to keep his word. Formally, the Cuban government has only said it will study the case after the Puerto Ricans are out of jail.

The possible release of Lunt strangely comes at a time of heightening tensions between United States and Cuba over the presence of Soviet troops on the Caribbean island.

Area Government Association Plans To Settle Minority Issue

A general assembly conference of the South Plains Association of Governments will make a final decision Tuesday on the controversial addition of eight minority members to the SPAG board of directors.

The assembly, composed of the elected officials from each representative government in the 15-county SPAG area, will meet at 6:30 p.m. in Room 107 of the Lubbock Memorial Civic Center. The conference precedes a 7 p.m. meeting of the newly-elected SPAG board.

If the assembly gives the go-ahead to a bylaw change, the minority members will be added to the 28-member SPAG board, qualifying the SPAG region to be designated as an Economic Development District. Such designation would bring a substantial amount of federal funding into this area for economic upgrowth.

Despite strong opposition to the change from Lubbock County Judge Rod Shaw,the majority of board members voted at an Aug. 24 meeting to approve the bylaw change.

Shaw has emphasized in the past that he is not against minority representation, but said he did not want to see someone other than elected officials serving on the board.

Opposition to Shaw's feelings sparked ire among Mexican-American and black organizations in the Lubbock area. The Conference of Organizations, representing 25 to 30 minority groups here, was formed to combat the problem, and the conference is planning a rally today at Mackenzie Park to push for unity between the community and the minority groups and lend support to the economic district specification, including the SPAG board expansion.

Conference spokesman Eliseo Solis said L.W. Curfman of the Economic Development Administration office in Lubbock will speak at the rally to point out the benefits to the community of the development district designation. The rally begins at 1 p.m. at the East Broadway entrance to the park.

Tuesday also will be the first work day for newly-elected SPAG executive director Jerry Casstevens, who has been serving as deputy executive director of the East Texas Council of Governments in Kilgore.

Casstevens is a native Lubbockite who attended Lubbock public schools and received a bachelor's degree from Texas Tech University.

Casstevens will take over for acting executive director Glenda Robinson.

Following the general assembly meeting Tuesday, William Harrison, Washington undersecretary for government affairs, will speak at a 7:30 p.m. dinner at the main banquet room of the Civic Center.

Also during Tuesday's activities, the SPAG board of directors will meet at 1:30 p.m. at the SPAG conference room to review area projects' application for federal funding.

Marshall Pharr Appointed Manager

Berl Springer, president and chief operating officer of Southwestern Public Service Company, has announced the appointment of Marshall Pharr as manager of governmental relations for the electric company.

Pharr has been serving as an administrative assistant to U. S. Rep. Kent Hance for the past year. He is a native of Lubbock and a graduate of Texas Tech University where he earned a bachelor of business administration degree in 1955.

Before joining Hance, Pharr served as the city manager of Plainview for fifteen years. Prior to that he was the city manager at Andrews and an administrative intern for the city of Lubbock. He served in the United States Navy from 1955 to 1957 and was a member of the U.S. Naval Reserve for 21 years.

Fair Events To Include Area Band Competition

Approximately four dozen bands from throughout West Texas and eastern New Mexico are expected to compete in the "parade of bands" to be conducted in conjunction with the 62nd annual Panhandle South Plains Fair here Sept. 22-29.

The big parade is scheduled to get underway in downtown Lubbock at 10 a.m. on Sept. 24.

A total of $2,250 in cash prizs is being offered in Classes B, A, AA, AAA and AAAA. Premiums include $150 for first place, $125 for second, $100 for third and $75 for fourth in all five classifications.

The "outstanding band" of the parade will be awarded a traveling trophy. The traveling trophy will be permanently awarded to the school winning it three out of five years. Judges will be Charles Traylor of Abilene Christian University, Harris Brinson of Angelo State University and Dan Gibbs of Monahans.

The panel will judge the bands on playing (50 percent), marching (30 percent) and appearance (20 percent).

Eleven shows, plus a host of free attractions on the outdoor stage, have been scheduled in Fair Park Coliseum.

Scheduled to perform are:

The Charley Pride show at 5 p.m. and 8 p.m. on Sept. 23; the Statler Brothers show, with Barbara Mandrell, 5 p.m. and 8 p.m. Sept. 24; the Eddie Rabbit show, with Janie Fricke, 8 p.m. only Sept. 25; the Dave and Sugar show, with John Conlee, 8 p.m. only Sept. 26; "The Golden Years of Country Music," to be presented by South Plains College, 7 p.m. only Sept. 27; the Tom T. Hall show, with Charly McClain, 8 p.m. only Sept. 28; and the Tammy Wynette show, with Rex Allen Jr. and George "Goober" Lindsey, 5 p.m. and 8 p.m. Sept. 29.

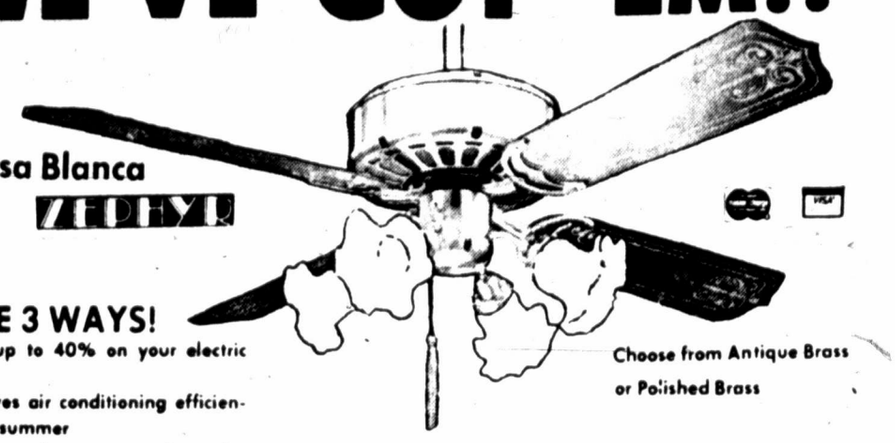

All seats are reserved and tickets are $4, $5 and $6 except for the SPC show, which are $2 and $3. Tickets may be purchased at the fair offices, Dunlap's, Sear and Hemphill-Wells stores in South Plains Mall, Luskey's Western Wear and Ed's Wagon Wheel.

Man Dies In Clothing Dispute

An argument over possession of clothing apparently resulted Saturday in the city's 25th homicide.

Police say the man showed no signs of life. Justice of the Peace L.J. Blalack pronounced the man dead at 1:36 a.m. Saturday.

Later Saturday, a 25-year-old Lubbock man was arrested and taken to county jail in connection with Jones' death. Another 23-year-old man is being held in jail as a witness to the shooting.

Witnesses told police that Jones and the 25-year-old man were arguing over possession of some clothing when the younger man pulled a nickle-plated pistol and shot Jones once in the head.

Police said they have not recovered the weapon.

Student Party Draws Police Riot Squad

KALAMAZOO, Mich. (AP) — A 22-year-old Western Michigan University senior said Saturday it was police who caused a student party to turn into a disturbance in which 22 people were arrested.

"They brought out the riot squad and just went after them (the students)," said David Gangwer, who lives in the house where the party was held. "The crowd never would have gotten unruly if the cops hadn't gone after them."

The problem began when Kalamazoo police received complaints of noise and an unruly crowd in an area of student housing near the university campus Friday night, Patrolman Wesley Mosher said.

Police arrived at about 9:30 and ordered the crowd of 600 to 1,000 persons in the street to disperse, Mosher said. The order was repeated 30 minutes later but no one left, he said.

About 11:30 p.m., police called for support from the Kalamazoo County Sheriff's Department, the state police, Kalamazoo Township police and university officers, Police Chief John Ross said.

The reinforcements were greeted by a barrage of rocks, bottles, cans and even whole trash bags of garbage, Mosher said, and the arrests began.

Police Lt. Scott Dolfman said one person was arrested for inciting to riot and 21 others were arrested for unlawful assembly. One of the 21 also was charged with resisting arrest, Dolfman said.

Police used tear gas to disperse the crowd about 1:30 a.m.

Gangwer said that "people were spilling into the streets," but contended roads were not blocked and the students were only milling around and talking. He said the stereo at the party was turned off about 11 p.m.

According to Gangwer, only two of the four beer kegs at the party were tapped. "We were afraid to tap the other two," he said.

An off-duty Deaprtment of Public safety trooper was assaulted and robbed Saturday afternoon in front of the apartment complex where he lives.

Richard "Yankee" Addenbrooke, 31, of 2222 Fifth St., apartment 213, was carrying laundry from a laundromat on Fourth Street when three black males assaulted him with what may have been razor blades. The men reportedly took a small gun and $20 from Addenbrooke.

Lubbock police took Addenbrooke to St. Mary's Hospital to be treated for several cuts to his face, stomach and arms. He was released from the hospital.

A 25-year-old Lubbock man was arrested for drunk driving Saturday after police said he drove a 1963 pickup truck into an officer directing traffic away from a spirited group of Texas Tech University students and onlookers gathered at Broadway Street and University Avenue. The students had gathered for an unofficial pep rally to urge Texas Tech to victory in Saturday's game against University of Southern California.

Reports indicate that police officer Andy F. Nazario received numerous bruises about 1:41 a.m. Saturday when the man disregarded directions to turn and drove into Nazario.

Nazario was standing at the intersection of 13th Street and Avenue X detouring traffic traveling east and west when he was struck by the truck. He was not hospitalized.

About 20 minutes after Nazario was hit, a 22-year-old Texas Tech University student was arrested for aggravated assault and failure to obey a lawful order when he drove his late model car into Nazario's replacement.

Reports indicate the Texas Tech student was driving north on Avenue X when he brushed the officer with the front of his car. When the officer asked the youth for his driver's license, the student handed the officer a piece of blank paper. The student asked the police officer why he had been standing in the middle of the street and why the officer had hit his car.

The officer asked the student several times to move his car to the side of the road, and when the student refused, he was arrested and taken to the Lubbock County Jail.

In other activity, money, drugs, stamps and cameras totaling more than $14,200 were reported stolen some time between 9 p.m. Friday and 7:35 a.m. Saturday from the Day Drug store at 4404 19th St., police reports indicate.

Three bank bags and three paper sacks containing $12,000 in cash and checks, and $300 in half-dollar coins, as well as four books of Texas Tech University football tickets were reported taken from the store's safe.

Four bottles of tranquilizers valued at $400, postage stamps valued at $100, a $500 slide projector and three cameras valued at $900, also were taken.

Reports indicate that entry to the store was gained through a hole cut in a metal door on the west side of the building. Police said there were no signs of forced entry.

Prime Rate Hike Brings More Recession Fears

WASHINGTON (AP) — Early indications from the recession of 1979 point toward the possibility that Americans can escape with comparatively little damage, but the steady rise in interest rates is causing fear that the worst is yet to come.

Lyle E. Gramley, a member of President Carter's Council of Economic Advisers, said Friday it's "quite possible" the recession is already half over and that the economy could show some slight growth in the fourth quarter of this year after declining during the previous two quarters.

But Gramley is assuming there will not be any additional serious damage caused by the rapid increase in interest rates that has occurred since Paul A. Volcker took over as chairman of the Federal Reserve Board a month ago.

A number of major banks raised their prime lending rate on Friday to an all-time high of 12¾ percent in response to pressure from the Federal Reserve. The Fed has been pushing up interest rates on its own, and two weeks ago raised its discount rate to 10½ percent, also a record.

Further increases are not ruled out by financial analaysts. Rising interest rates can dampen economic growth since they raise the cost of borrowing to both business and consumers, including homebuyers.

Even more worrisome from the standpoint of the Federal Reserve, however, has been the rapid growth in the nation's money supply, which Volcker said is helping to fuel inflation. He made clear to Congress last week he wants the board to keep pushing interest rates up until money growth is brought under control.

"The Federal Reserve intends to continue its efforts to restrain the growth of money and credit," he said. He said he didn't know whether this would push interest rates higher, but indicated such a consideration is secondary to the problem of inflation, which has been running at a 13 percent annual rate for most of the year.

Volcker said in his testimony he thinks the current recession, if indeed there is a recession, will be mild.

A recession is commonly defined as two consecutive quarters of decline in economic output, as measured by the gross national product. GNP declined at an annual rate of 2.4 percent in the second quarter, which would be the first quarter of the recession.

Gramley said he expects the dip in the third quarter GNP will be less than the second quarter drop and that the fourth quarter would be "close to zero," meaning it is "quite possible" the recession could last only two quarters.

Actress' Body Found In Auto's Back Seat

PARIS (AP) — The blanket-covered body of American actress Jean Seberg was found in the back seat of her automobile Saturday, ten days after she disappeared from her Paris apartment, police reported.

They said the cause of death has not been determined and an autopsy will be performed today. A police spokesman said the body was in a state of decomposition, meaning the 40-year-old actress had been dead for several days. He gave no indication police suspected foul play.

Miss Seberg was married four times. She married Algerian actor Ahmed Hasmi a few months ago and he went to the police station after being informed the body had been found. He refused to make any comment when he left the station.

Her earlier marriages were to lawyer Francois Moreuil, writer Romain Gary and film producer Dennis Berry.

Police had revealed Saturday morning that the actress disappeared from her apartment on Avenue de Longchamp in the 16th district Aug. 30.

They said the body was found in her white Renault that was parked on Rue de General Appert, also in the 16th district.

In the report on her disappearance, police said Miss Seberg had been seen leaving her apartment alone in the middle of the night wearing a blanket and without any luggage.

Investigators said they believed the car had been moved sometime Saturday to the street where it was found because it would be very unlikely the body could have gone unnoticed on such a public thoroughfare for more than a week. They speculated that someone moved the auto after the actress' disappearance was announced.

Police sources said Miss Seberg had undergone treatment in psychiatric institutions on a number of occasions and police had been searching for her in hospitals and clinics.

In a recent interview with a French newspaper, she claimed the FBI had tried to discredit her because of her association with the Black Panther Party in the late 1960s.

JEAN SEBERG

She said she had obtained a document showing the FBI had planted a story that she was pregnant with the child of a Black Panther member and several newspapers and magazines printed the story.

Miss Seberg told the newspaper that she read an article based on the alleged FBI story in Zermatt, Switzerland, in 1970 when she was seven months pregnant and the shock was so severe she had to be taken by helicopter to a hospital in Geneva where the baby was born prematurely. The child, a girl, died two days later.

Miss Seberg gained instant fame at the age of 17 when she was chosen by Otto Preminger over 18,000 other contestants to play Joan of Arc in the movie "St. Joan."

She played in more than 20 films, spanning the years from the mid 1950s to 1976, and one of her major performances was in Preminger's "Bonjour Tristess."

Born in Marshalltown, Iowa, Nov. 13, 1938, she performed in school plays and was the lead actress in an Iowa University production of "The Yellowjacket."

Miss Seberg began her professional career acting in summer theaters at Plymouth, Mass., and Cape May, N.J.

Among other movies she appeared in were "The Little Mouse that Roared," "Breathless," "In the French Style," "Lilith," "Pendulum," "Airport," "Paint Your Wagon," "Macho Callahan" and "Dead of Summer."

New Hampshire Seen As Crucial Testing Arena For Governor

CONCORD, N.H. (AP) — California Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. brings his unofficial presidential crusade to New Hampshire today, and veteran state politicians warn "if he bombs here, it could be the end of his campaign."

"Because of all the attention Jerry Brown has drawn to his visit he's put it a crucial test," says Patricia McMahon, director of the state Democratic Party.

Brown has not formally entered the 1980 presidential nomination race but has authorized a committee to be formed to explore that possibility. And expectation is rising that he will announce his candidacy soon.

Skepticism over the outcome of the governor's scheduled 12-hour visit is tempered by Brown's past campaigning successes.

Bucks For Booze Little Affected By Tight Money

of $190 million."

Spiritly speaking, the year 1979 represents a milestone of sorts. Texas collected its two billionth dollar in liquor tax revenues dating back to 1935, birthdate of the Liquor Control Board, forerunner of the ABC.

A staggering number of those dollars are traceable to 1971, when former Gov. John Connally shoved a controversial liquor-by-the-drink law through the legislature.

Connally, a nondrinker, was not necessarily championing tippling but tourism, which he said went hand-in-hand.

In the fiscal year ending Aug. 31, 1978, Texans spent $625 million on mixed drinks with 10 percent, or $62.5 million, filtering back as tax dollars.

At that, more than half the state is still "dry" by local option and only two-thirds of the population lives in areas where alcoholic beverages are sold.

Explaining Texas's liquor laws to Texans is not a simple task and clarifying them for outsiders is close to impossible.

In Lubbock, for example, one can purchase the drink of his choice in town but must drive to the Strip to find a package store for a bottle or six-pack.

Even more confounding is the Dallas-Fort Worth "Metroplex," a patchwork of wet, dry, semi-wet and semi-dry precincts that touches all bases.

A half hour's drive between the two cities takes one through a maze of on-and off-premises establishments, combinations of both and several totally dry areas.

Crossing the Trinity River between downtown Dallas, wet, and Oak Cliff, dry, is almost reminiscent of the "brown bag" days of yesteryear.

One could, however, argue that even a dry area is partially wet, since private clubs allow members to purchase mixed drinks at prices similar to open saloons.

But such clubs don't actually "sell" drinks, explained the ABC's McKinney. "They sell service. It's the members' liquor they pour."

That's an interesting distinction, one usually lost on the consumer who pays an average of $1.50 for private or public highballs.

One thing the ABC does not regulate is retail prices, which 'most everybody agrees is as it should be. But that does open the door to provocative price differences.

Ponder this:

A fifth of J&B Scotch was priced one recent weekday at $9.39, $9.71 and $10.38 in three side-by-side Lubbock stores. The same brand sold for $8.49 in a Houston store and as much as $9.99 in Dallas and $9.95 in Brownsville.

The random sampling showed Jack Daniels "black" ranging from $7.98 at Houston to $9.80 in Lubbock, $9.79 in Fort Worth, $9.50 in Abilene, $8.45 in Austin and $8.15 in Amarillo.

A gin drinker could buy Beefeater for $6.89 in Houston, $7.38 in Stamford, $7.59 in Longview, $7.69 in El Paso and $9.29 in Lubbock.

Cost conscious Lubbock shoppers found the same bottle selling 50 yards down the Strip for $7.69 — a saving of $1.60.

Six years ago, a random AP sampling of two popular Lubbock stores showed identical prices for 10 brands of bourbon and Scotch. Officials at those two stores and six others on the Strip entered "no contest" pleas in 1977 to government price-fixing charges.

Texans, being notorious beer drinkers, sloshed down 355 million gallons of suds in fiscal 1978, with Schlitz, Coors, Budweiser and Miller Lite the top sellers.

On the survey day, a West texas liquor chain commanded $6.99 for a case of Coors in Impact, $7.69 in Lubbock and $8.20 in Odessa. A San Antonio liquor store operator charged $9.00 a case and insisted his prices were competitive.

The same beer brought $8.33 in Stamford, $7.90 in Abilene, $7.89 in Fort Worth, $8.05 in Austin $7.48 in Houston, $7.89 in Dallas, $7.56 in El Paso, $8.10 in Longivew, $8.20 in Corpus Christi, $8.40 in Brownsville and $7.80 in Amarillo.

The only store owner to disclose his wholesale cost, the price he pays the distributor, was a West Texan who said Coors charges him $6.65 per case.

"If he charges my competitor any more or less, he'd lose his license in an istant," he said.

While the ABC has nothing to do with liquor or beer pricing, there are regulations prohibiting wholesalers from charging different customers different prices.

But the quantity buyers, the larger chains, do receive discounts that may or may not be passed along to the consumer.

"The liquor industry is no more devious or un-American than McDonald's hamburgers," says Dave Terk of Odessa, whose distributorship serves a vast area of West Texas.

"But the people who engaged in the business in the 1920s left a legacy we haven't completely overcome. The liquor industry is kind of like sex — it makes good copy.

"People have an uncommon interest in it."

Many of those same people, he said, are brand conscious and brand loyal, often equating cost to quality and spurning more reasonably priced products.

"There are hundreds of brands on the market that sell as much as 25 percent less than the highest-priced brands, but consumers are looking them over and spending like there's no tomorrow," he said.

"I don't know where it's going to end, just how high their loyalty will follow the spiraling prices. Economists could probably give a reason for it, but I can't."

Terk conceded that liquor prices in West Texas are higher than in more densely populated cities and regions.

"Nobody comes into West Texas," he explained. "There's no Oklahoma-Texas football game, no Astrodome, no big convention business to speak of. But it costs just as much to open your store if you're turning $2,000 or $10,000 a week."

Terk said in effect that reducing prices 10 percent normally would not attract enough new or transient customers to offset the loss.

"All you're going to do is reduce prices for your own customers," he said.

Conversely, it would be economically logical to slash and advertise prices to attract conventioneers or sports fans pouring into Dallas, Austin or Houston on revelrous weekends.

"And the secret to advertising is spreading the cost over a number of units," Terk said. "It costs just as much to run a newspaper ad for one liquor store as 20 liquor stores."

Such logic explains in part the heavily advertised weekend specials offered by the major retail chains in metropolitan Texas — Sigel's and Centennial in Dallas, Majestic in Fort Worth, Bert Wheeler's in Houston and Feldman's in the Rio Grande Valley, to name a few.

But even the big boys looked with envy on Impact, the 47-acre hamlet surrounded by Abilene that for 16 years ruled as the OPEC of the West Texas beverage set.

In its first full year of operation, 1963, Impact beer and liquor revenues totaled $2.5 million, mostly from indignant residents of Abilene, a city dry since the turn of the century.

Two liquor stores and a beer mart served thousands of customers weekly, often commanding prices 13 to 45 percent higher than more competitive markets.

But alas, Abilene itself voted wet last year in a controversial election, the outcome of which see-sawed back and forth in a legal snarl and landed in the state Supreme Court.

The high tribunal eventually ruled in favor of the wet faction.

Now, a single store, Pinkie's, remains at Impact and bumper-to-bumper traffic into the tiny oasis is only a fading memory of what used to be.

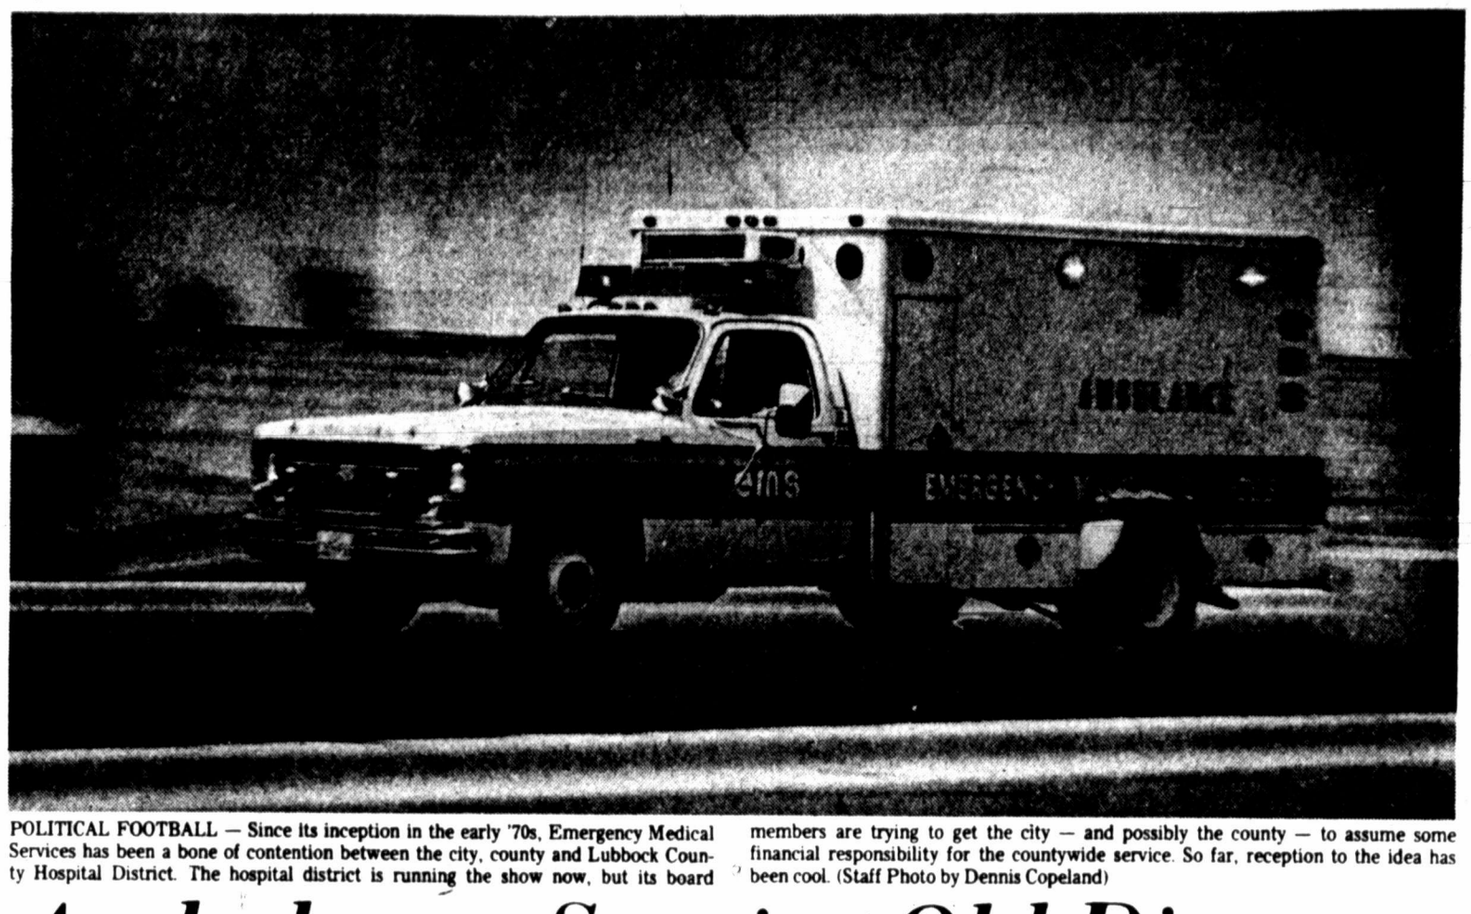

Abilene drys say they may yet fire up for another election but certainly not before the fall school term is in full swing. Unlike in most American cities, the collegiate population at Abilene's three universities is considered largely anti-liquor.

All are denominational schools — Baptist, Methodist and Church of Christ.

A successful anti-booze vote presumably would restore Impact to its previous glory. But either way, the borough has benefited mightily from its champagne days.

"You should have seen this place before we made improvements," said Mayor Dallas Perkins. "They called this a 'blighted area.'

POLITICAL FOOTBALL — Since its inception in the early '70s, Emergency Medical Services has been a bone of contention between the city, county and Lubbock County Hospital District. The hospital district is running the show now, but its board members are trying to get the city — and possibly the county — to assume some financial responsibility for the countywide service. So far, reception to the idea has been cool. (Staff Photo by Dennis Copeland)

Ambulance Service Old Dispute

tems, a predecessor to South Plains Health Systems, to investigate a "first class community emergency ambulance service" and federal funds to pay for such a service.

The health agency did just that and proposed a countywide ambulance system that would cost more than one-half million dollars.

During the time the health agency was studying the problem, the city continued grappling with the problem on its own. City officials upped the previous subsidy of $2,400 a month to $2,900 a month and awarded Aid a two-year contract.

A liaison committee, including city, county and hospital district officials, was formed to study the health system's EMS proposal in terms of community need and available funding.

City officials on the committee soon grew disenchanted with what they termed an overly-sophisticated, overly-expensive system proposed by the health agency.

"The hospital district began pushing for wanting EMS," Mrs. Jordan said. "In the liaison committee, we (the city) would go through what it was we were trying to accomplish.

"We felt it would be nice if we could have it (EMS), but we felt we were coming pretty darn close with the operation we had," Mrs. Jordan continued.

Included in the health agency's proposal was an application for a substantial federal grant to help fund the system. However, to get the grant the EMS system had to meet federal specifications for equipment, communications and training of personnel.

However, Mrs. Jordan said Aid equipment was comparable to but less expensive than that required by the government.

Stuart Haggard, later hired as director of EMS, "kept trying to push through the grant" while working with West Texas Health Systems, Mrs. Jordan said.

"Stuart kept saying we couldn't get the money without doing it his way, but we felt we had comparable service," she said.

City officials were pushing for Aid vehicles that were "not as pretty but considerably less expensive" than those required by the government, Mrs. Jordan said. Proponents of the less expensive system suggested purchasing a truck bed and building a body to fit it.

"Our question was, what was wrong with them?" Mrs. Jordan asked. "It was a neat, neat system and cheap — clever and cheap, but they didn't meet somebody's standards."

Bill Tinney, chairman of the health agency, was and is a staunch supporter of a complete EMS system meeting federal guidelines. He explained his support of the costly system by saying, "Some of these things can't be explained economically."

"We don't have the capability of measuring economically the worth of saving a life," Tinney stressed.

Mrs. Jordan called the agency's EMS proposal "symptomatic of everything at the hospital district — always the most expensive." And attempts to whittle down the proposal were usually met on an emotional basis, she said.

"Every time we did (try to reduce the proposal) they said, 'Oh gosh, a human life,'" Mrs. Jordan said.

To break the impasse, Lubbock County commissioners voted to use $250,000 in revenue sharing funds to purchase 10 modular ambulances.

Both hospital district and county officials endorsed a split of the initial cost among themselves and the city, with the county's purchase of the ambulances counting for its third.

However, the City Council rejected a more expensive EMS plan and said the city would contribute no more than the $34,800 a year it was paying Aid as a subsidy.

In March 1975, county commissioners said their participation in an EMS system was contingent on the equal participation of all three governments and a special three digit emergency phone number.

However, only two months later the commissioners voted to assume the financial responsibility for the initial capital operating expense of the EMS system through the end of 1977, when the hospital district would begin funding EMS operations.

City Manager Larry Cunningham recalls the change in attitude as "abrupt" and "out of the blue."

"When they agreed to pick up the tab and do it, it was as big a surprise to us as anyone," Mrs. Jordan said.

Those involved in EMS negotiations could only speculate as to the reason for the sudden about face, but Commissioner Alton Brazell solved the mystery.

He said then hospital district executive director Harold Coston approached him and Commissioner Arch Lamb informally and asked if the commissioners would use revenue sharing funds for the initial cost, then turn it over to the hospital district.

Coston reportedly told Brazell the hospital would be strong enough to absorb the costs of EMS operations by the time the county pulled out and apparently hospital district board members shared that feeling.

Board member J.P. Ellington is quoted as saying, "I feel the hospital district can be financially able at the end of two years because we'll have the hospital going."

However, at the same May 1975 board meeting, E.K. Hufstedler expressed doubts about the district's ability to assume the cost of running EMS.

"I don't want to obligate the hospital district for EMS after two years," the board member said. "We don't know what we can afford."

The commissioners' plan was approved by the hospital board, though.

Other theories about why the hospital district and county were so determined to begin an EMS system in Lubbock County abound.

One theory is the hospital district board and county commissioners became concerned that Health Sciences Center Hospital would not be able to fill its beds without receiving patients from EMS. And various local hospitals were pushing the county to pay for indigent care, prompting some observers to say that the county was supporting EMS so that indigents would be directed to Health Sciences.

Looking at long-range financing, Brazell said the county knew it couldn't afford to support more than one-third of the cost of EMS. And the county was more than glad to go along when Coston claimed the hospital district could support the program on its own.

Despite Coston's predictions that the hospital would be financially sound by now, Health Sciences Center Hospital is badly in debt.

"Harold (Coston) had a lot of concepts on funding and finances that were never put into effect in the hospital," Brazell said. Coston favored strong admissions policies, which may have alienated the medical school, Brazell said, but would have shored up finances.

Brazell stressed that Coston really believed the teaching hospital's collection rate should and could be as high as local private hospitals; he was counting on it.

EMS has been a victim of the collection policies at Health Sciences, Brazell continued, but added that the commissioners weren't mistaken in letting the hospital district run the show.

"If we hadn't made that move, we probably wouldn't have one (EMS)," Brazell said.

Former hospital district board member Tinney defended the move to EMS, saying he didn't think it was a premature decision.

"We didn't anticipate anything but optimum management," Tinney said, adding that there was no way of knowing the hospital's collections would be so under par.

And Tinney speculated that board members probably were counting on the city and county to pick up part of the tab later on when they approved the hospital district-financed plan in the first place.

City Officials Remain Firm In Refusal To Pay More Of Ambulance Cost

Suggestions that the city assume part of the cost of operating Emergency Medical Services have been about as popular as the Lubbock Property Owners Association at a city employees picnic.

Both Mayor Dirk West and Councilwoman Carolyn Jordan say they can imagine no circumstances under which the city might help fund EMS operations or assume responsibility for operating the ambulance service.

But that hasn't stopped the Lubbock County Hospital District board from viewing the city as a possible financial savior for the debt-ridden ambulance service.

Although board members have not formally approached either the city or county for financial help, recent board discussions have gravitated to getting the city to help fund EMS.

Instead of directly approaching city officials, the hospital board decided to leave the matter in the hands of a Blue Ribbon Committee named by County Commissioners to study the financial problems of the hospital district.

If the city and county refuse to help out financially, the hospital district must either find alternative funding or transfer the service to a private ambulance firm.

"If the Blue Ribbon Committee is coming down here, they can save their gas," West said. "The hospital district created this monster, now don't be trying to give it away."

The mayor added that his attitude is summed up by a "cowboy" song titled, "It's Your Baby and You Can Rock It."

Mrs. Jordan was equally emphatic: the hospital district wants to "embarrass the city into picking up the tab for their mismanagement."

The hospital district's decision to assume control of EMS six years ago "certainly has a bearing on my attitude," she said.

"They wanted to do it. They fought us for it. They took it.

"Now it's going down the tube and they want us to rescue it," she said. "I don't see we should rescue it when we predicted this was going to happen (in liaison committee discussions).

"The handwriting was on the wall. There was no effort to control costs and no good plan in terms of collections," Mrs. Jordan added.

"Some decisions have been made in the past and the people who made the mistakes are going to have to take the responsibility. They made a commitment and they have to live up to it," she said.

Of charges that the city should help fund EMS because most ambulance runs are inside the Lubbock city limits, Mrs. Jordan and West note city taxpayers pay 88 percent of the hospital district's taxes.

"I think the citizens of Lubbock are paying their share," Mrs. Jordan said, adding city taxpayers would be forced to pay twice for ambulance service if city tax money were used to supplement hospital district taxes.

In response to hospital board member Don McInturff's comment that the city "can either put up or shut up," West said McInturff should "shut up."

"When some uninformed member of the board says the city is not involved, he needs to understand the city is involved to the tune of 88 percent of the total income," West said.

"The citizens of Lubbock are paying hospital district taxes and I'm afraid they'd be hard to convince now they need to have city taxes dumped into the same pot.

"The city has put up, or you wouldn't even have a hospital district," he added.

Mrs. Jordan said the hospital district should make a more concerted effort to make collections for ambulance runs before asking for a city contribution.

"Until they pay, I don't think they should come back and expect taxpayers to pick up the tab," she said.

"You don't go into a clothes store, buy a new suit and say send the bill to the city."

West said turning the service over to a private ambulance firm from Oregon "appears to be the only sensible route to go."

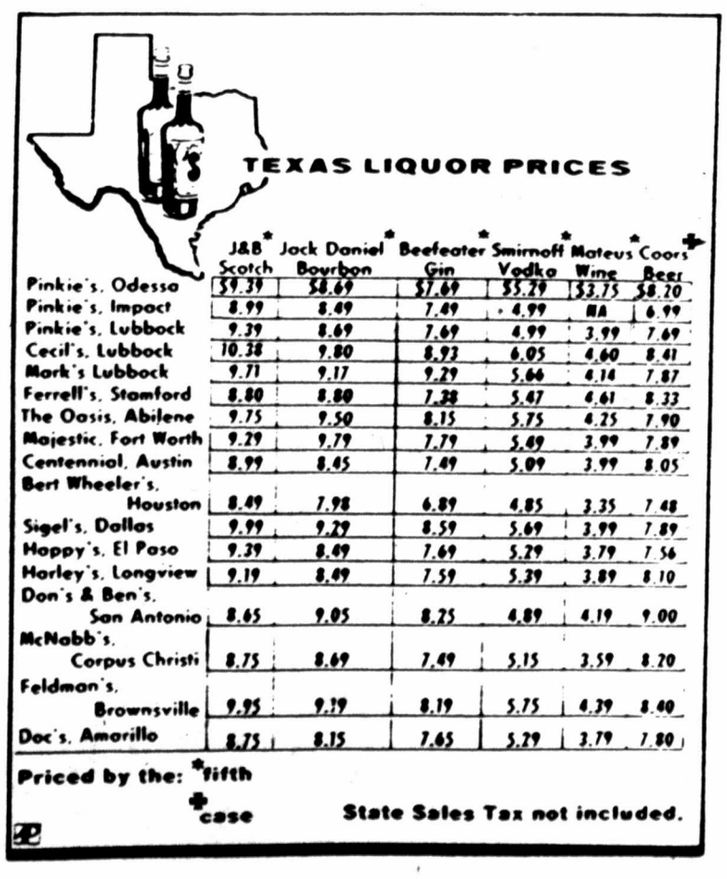

As for financial assistance from the county, Commissioner Alton Brazell said he "wouldn't be adverse" to sharing the cost equally with the city and hospital district.

However, Brazell said he wouldn't "second guess" how other commissioners would feel about such a funding arrangement.

But if the county agreed to pay one-third of the cost, Brazell said, he would probably insist EMS be given the right to non-emergency transfers.

The profitable transfer service now is provided by Aid Ambulance and Brazell said EMS is suffering as a result.

Only minutes after the Texas Tech-USC football game ended Saturday night, Lubbock's police station was deluged with calls from car owners claiming their cars had been stolen.

The police desk sergeant first soothed owners' fears, then advised them that their vehicles had been impounded for illegal parking.

Four Lubbock wrecker services worked Saturday impounding vehicles. Thirty-five cars were impounded. Ten had been parked on private property.

Car owners were able to get their missing vehicles back by paying between $20 and $30, depending on the wrecker service that towed the car away.

Hijack Trio Surrenders

By The Associated Press

Three Lebanese gunmen who hijacked an Italian airliner to dramatize efforts to locate their missing religious leader flew to Tehran Saturday and surrendered to the Islamic government of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, authorities in Rome said.

A spokesman for Italy's Alitalia airlines said the three, identified as members of Lebanon's Shiite Moslem community, gave themselves up after receiving assurances from officials in Iran — a predominantly Shiite nation — that a statement on the reason for their action would be read on national radio and television.

The gunmen seized the Alitalia DC-8 jet Friday morning after the Tehran-to-Rome flight made a scheduled stop in Beirut, Lebanon. They released most of the 175 passengers shortly after arrival in Rome and allowed the remaining 35 to disembark before leaving for Tehran — after 12½ hours of negotiations with Italian authorities.

A few hours after their surrender, Tehran Radio, monitored in Rome and London, began broadcasting the hijackers' statement denouncing Libyan leader Moammar Khadafy. They blamed Khadafy for the disappearance of Imam Musa Sadr, last seen during a visit to Libya in August, 1978.

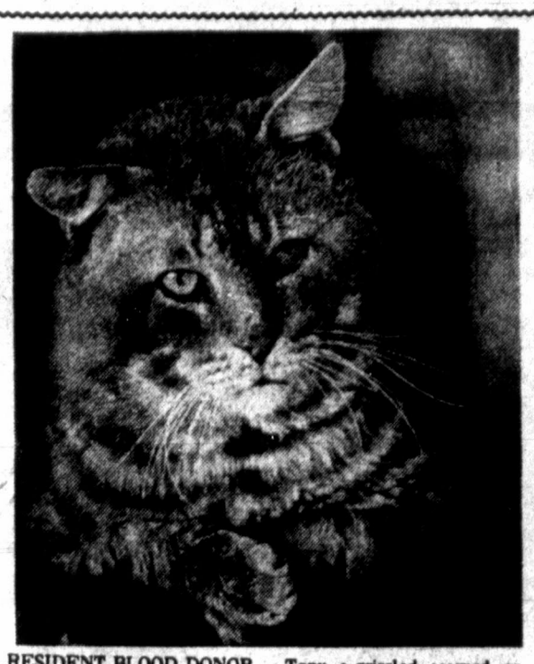

Clements Delegation Arrives In Moscow

MOSCOW (AP) — A 37-member delegation headed by Texas Gov. Bill Clements arrived Saturday to tour Soviet farms and food-processing plants.

After sightseeing in Moscow, the group of Texas food and agricultural leaders planned to fly Tuesday to Krasnodar in southern Russia to visit a collective farm there.

Later in the week the delegation will tour food-processing operations in the city of Rostov-on-Don.

Life Just 'Cat's Meow' To Blood Donor

RESIDENT BLOOD DONOR — Tony, a grizzled, scarred, aging alley cat, has become the resident blood donor at a downtown San Antonio animal clinic. (AP Laserphoto)

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Tony's grizzled face is scarred and lopsided, a reminder of countless back alley brawls with other street bums. All but three of his teeth have been broken off; he walks with a limp from when he was hit by a car.

And like the other down-and-out transients of downtown San Antonio, Tony donates blood to earn his food.

It's only catfood. But then what else would you give to a gray tomcat?

Tony is the resident blood donor at a downtown animal clinic, where veterinarians figure the wily old street fighter has given a 10th life to at least a half-dozen felines hospitalized for surgery.

"I guess you would say Tony's blood is as tough as he is. He's been exposed to everything that could go wrong with a cat," said Stanley Hood, the clinic's veterinary assistant. "It also helps that he's just an old mixed breed alley cat. We can give his blood to just about any cat."

Tony, now fat, spoiled and content after several years as resident blood donor, is always on emergency call. And it's a tough life — sunning near the clinic's front window, catnapping on the receptionist's desk or lounging in his favorite waiting room chair.

But life hasn't always been that easy for Tony.

A kind-hearted attorney picked up the battered, scrawny stray on a downtown street and brought him to Dr. B.C. Hickey's clinic in 1972. He left money and instructions for the staff to nurse Tony back to health and find him a home.

Tony then weighed a mere five pounds and was infested with worms and mites. He had numerous bites and cuts, a twisted toe and a bum leg from a losing encounter with an automobile.

"He was in pitiful shape. We figured he'd used up all but one of his nine lives," said Hood. "Nobody would take him because he was in such bad shape. We kind of found a place in our hearts for him. We took to him and he took to us."

Tony quickly became the clinic mascot. He had the run of the clinic and was a favorite with pet owners.

That was that, everybody figured, until the veternarians needed an emergency blood donor about five years ago to save a patient from feline leukemia.

"The only way to save the cat was to find some good blood to give it. While we were trying to think what to do, Tony walked up," recalled Hood.

The transfusion was successful and the patient survived. Since then, Tony, believed to be about 14 years old, has donated blood about 15 times.

But does Tony ever grow nostalgic for the rugged hobo life on the streets?

Energy Board Hears Nuke Complaints

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Energy Advisory Council, looking for reaction to its suggestions on nuclear energy, Saturday heard complaints from both sides of the emotional issue.

Representatives of the nuclear industry in Texas spoke against a council recommendation for a uranium production tax that could bring $200 million into the state during the coming decade.

The council also heard witnesses who called for an end to uranium mining and nuclear energy in the state.

The hearing was the second of four scheduled by the council. The members will reconvene in Houston Monday and the final hearing is set for Tuesday in Dallas.

Mike Pendergast of U.S. Steel told the council that the proposed severance tax would make it difficult for Texas producers to compete with other producers.

"A 5 percent tax would transfer Texas from a state without a severance tax to the state with the highest tax in the nation," he said. U.S. Steel is involved in uranium mining in South Texas.

The council has stated that all major producing states do impose such a tax. The 5 percent figure was used as an example.

Pendergast said the Texas uranium mining industry already pours much money into public coffers. He said the industry is responsible for 70 percent of the ad valorem taxes collected in Live Oak County.

"We have been of significant benefit to the local economies in South Texas. We brought 300 jobs to an area which frankly had very little economic activity before," he said. "I am opposed to a tax which would harm the Texas industry."

Council member Dr. Linn Draper then asked, "Is there any tax that would not harm the Texas industry?"

Pendergast replied, "I don't think we need any new taxes."

Wallace Mays of Corpus Christi, a chemical engineer who operates a South Texas mineral corporation, also complained about the proposed tax. He said the industry provides over 10 percent of the jobs in George West, Karnes City and Hebbronville in South Texas.

Mays also responded to the anti-nuclear activists who mounted a small demonstration in the hearing room.

"I see a trend in this country to move us back to the dark ages by using emotions to solve technical issues," he said.

Priscilla Ebersole, a birth control counselor, said she has detected a fear of child-bearing among persons concerned about nuclear energy.

"It's not an unrealistic fear," she said. "It is unacceptable to me to have high-or low-level waste dump sites in my state.

"What kind of world are we living in where families are afraid to leave descendants?" she added.

But Dr. Joe Ledbetter, a University of Texas civil engineering professor, said concerns about the safety of nuclear energy are unwarranted.

Suit Seeks To Deny Police Funds For 'Sting' Operations

DALLAS (AP) — A man caught in a "sting" operation and accused of trying to sell stolen goods to officers disguised as "fences" has filed suit in federal court saying he was induced to commit a crime.

Delfred Harper's lawsuit against the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration says the LEAA provided money for the Dallas Police Department's "Operation Sting" and the operation induced him to commit crimes he "otherwise would not have committed."

Harper filed suit Friday is seeking $500,000 in damages and a court order prohibiting future LEAA funding for such set-ups. Police say the phony fence operation is a good way to catch thieves trying to sell "hot" merchandise.

But Harper says the program offers "substantial financial compensation to innocent persons."

Friends Of Buddy Holly Gather For Tribute

By WILLIAM D. KERNS
A-J Entertainment Editor

The whispers of discontent were always there, usually lurking in the shadows. Some wondered why a Buddy Holly Memorial Concert was merited at all, others questioned the billing of the "original" Crickets while still more wondered why the Crickets would not be on stage longer. Texas Tech University's student newspaper editorialized that Lubbock was honoring the legend and not the man. But last Friday, as Holly fans swarmed into Lubbock from 39 states and three countries (Canada, England and Scotland) and as celebrities made themselves available to the press and the public, those whispers were drowned out by the sheer, non-stop bedlam which rose in intensity by the hour.

To commemorate Buddy Holly, a friend who died on Feb. 3, 1959, at the age of 22, a homecoming was held and everyone attended. Buddy's mother and widow and brothers — and their families — were there. Former Crickets Niki Sullivan and Tommy Alsup were there, as were the Crickets who performed: Joe B. Mauldin, Jerry Allison and Sonny Curtis. Record producer Snuff Garrett flew in from California to meet old friends. John Goldrosen, who authored the definitive Holly biography, was also present.

And the press, too, was well represented by everyone from United Press International to a photographer shooting for Playboy magazine.

Waylon Jennings, the lone-wolf country singer who gave up his seat on the plane which carried Holly to his death, also made an emotional appearance at a private reception held Friday afternoon at the Civic Center's Terrace Suite. While motor driven cameras whirred, Jennings hugged and reminisced with the Holley family and old friends from his DJ days at KLLL-Radio. Reporters were hard pressed to get questions in. No surprise. After all, Jennings has treated interviews like shark infested waters for the past five years, steering clear.

B NEWS
Lubbock Avalanche-Journal
Sunday, Sept. 9, 1979

So imagine the surprise of the few reporters who stuck around when it was learned Jennings would offer an interview backstage at the Civic Center exhibition hall shortly before the concert was due to begin. Already, the emotional level was running high. But if anyone doubted the sincerity of the memorial project, those doubts were smashed as Jennings walked in front of the press, answering questions and explaining, "This is a special show. Buddy was a friend of mine. So I just told them (the promoters) I'd do anything to help out. . .They're saying this is going to be an annual affair, and I just told them I'd help at any time in any way I can."

Perhaps Jim Clark, the burly Santa Fe resident who aided in contracting renowned artist Grant Speed to sculpt an 8-foot-6 bronze statue of Buddy Holly, put it best when he said, "This thing — this concert and the statue and the tribute and all — is working because it's all friends involved. Everybody knows and trusts everybody else, and nobody is saying, 'See my lawyer.' Everybody cares."

Speed arrived at the reception with his brother, Rainey. A rather dignified Utah resident, the sculptor explained he'd just finished a statue of Charles Goodnight for Mesa Petroleum in Amarillo. Obviously enamored with Goodnight, the artist, who brought with him a clay model of the proposed Holly statue, also revealed himself quite familiar with the Lubbock-born rock'n'roller. "Oh yes," he recalled, "I was quite aware of Buddy before I was contacted about this. I was a few years older than him, but he was real big when I was in college.

"In fact, my oldest daughter is named Peggy Sue."

He went on to explain that it was only by coincidence that his daughter bore the same name as one of Buddy Holly's most popular songs, but the irony nevertheless remained. "Anyway," he continued, "a good friend of mine, Bill Sego, was also a good friend of the Holley family, and so I really just kept up with Buddy through him."

Asked what sort of preliminary work has gone into the statue thus far, Speed said, "I was working from 19 different pictures of Buddy when I made this clay model. Snuff Garrett sent me some, and so did (promoter) Larry Corbin. And I got a beautiful group of pictures from Mr. and Mrs. Holley (Buddy's parents). I spoke with Mrs. Holley by phone and she tried to tell me all she could about Buddy's hair and pants and shoes, the clothes he wore. And when I got into town, I visited their home and took pictures of Buddy's guitar.

"And I also took about 30 to 40 picture of Travis Holley, Buddy's brother, since he has pretty much the same bone structure as Buddy. Because in sculpture, you've got to express the bone structure there or the whole piece just falls apart."

Grant Speed's affection for his craft becomes obvious through his stressing of the importance of detail. He'll begin building the armatures — perhaps wire for the miniatures and pipe for the actual statue — soon at his Utah home, sculpting to "get a feeling from within" before having it cast at nearby Wasatch Bronze, which he called "the best little foundry around; they really care about the quality." So does Speed, who insisted, "I do not want to create a documentary, a lifeless statue. I want it to be expressive, full of feeling."

For this reason, he will not work only on the statue. "I have other projects, other commitments," he said. "And for a reason. That way I can work on a model and leave it, get away from it for a while. That way, when I come back to it, I'll be better able to catch any mistakes. I think one usually ends up sorry when he works straight through on such a project; you don't notice the flaws because you're so completely immersed in it and involved."

Even so, Speed is positive the statue will be ready in time to be moved to Lubbock and unveiled at the Civic Center on Sept. 7, 1980. And the 250 miniatures of the statue, being sold as collectors' items at $1,000 apiece to finance the heroic-sized artwork, should be ready for shipping before Christmas. Clark said, "We've gotten great support for this. Billboard and Rolling Stone (magazines) are both giving us free full-page ads to help us make this work. And really, $1,000 isn't much money to a collector, especially for a Grant Speed (artwork) which is easily worth twice that much."

William Griggs, president of the Buddy Holly Memorial Society, indicated he would still like to see a Holly Museum of some sort built. He said, "I'd like to see a museum where people could walk through and learn about Holly. Maybe it could be part of the Texas Tech Museum. I think that would be better, less cold, than a

"I know there are a lot of people wishing it was some exotic blob from outer space," DiIulio said. "I am simply glad to find out what it really is."

Waltz Across Texas Planned By Teacher

AMARILLO (AP) — It may take him two weeks to do it, but dancing teacher David Waddle plans to waltz across Texas, just like the country song by Ernest Tubbs suggests.

However, Waddle, a 26-year-old country music dance instructor at Amarillo College, won't dance across the entire width of Texas — just across the Panhandle.

He said Saturday he plans to start at 9 a.m. Monday at the state line near Clovis, N.M. From there, Waddle says he'll waltz east along Texas 86.

His destination is Hollis, Okla., 203 miles away. Waddle plans to waltz with several partners during the trip, which he estimates could take anywhere from ten to 18 days to complete.

Inflation, Recession Proving Tough Duo To Solve

NEW YORK (AP) — Economic reports this past week underscore the dilemma faced by government policymakers in dealing with the it, the textbook cure for recession was more liberal government spending, tax cuts and efforts to provide funding to fuel an economic recovery.

But the phenonemon of rising prices at the same time the economy is slowing has created a problem with no proven or painless solution.

The Labor Department reported this past week that unemployment rose to 6 percent last month — its highest level in more than a year — providing further evidence of a broad economic slowdown and probably a recession.

But at the same time, the Federal Reserve which is the chief government monetary authority, moved in the opposite direction of a traditional cure for recession. It put additional pressure on money markets, forcing up interest rates to new highs.

Banks across the nation increased their prime lending rates to 12 1/2 or 12 3/4 percent as the government agencies increased their costs of funds.

The tactic is aimed at reducing inflation from its double-digit level by slowing the growth of money supply and credit competing for goods and services.

The risk is that, in fighting inflation, the government would worsen the economic slowdown. Tight credit may slow business operations, reduce consumer buying and ultimately result in fewer jobs.

The increase in unemployment to 6 percent in August from 5.7 percent the previous month didn't come as much of a surprise because of signs that a economic slowdown has been underway since last spring.

The administration predicts the jobless rate will rise to 6.9 percent next year — an increase of about 1.2 million unemployed Americans from current levels. However, a less optimistic internal government report predicts the jobless rate may hit 8.2 percent in the fall of 1980 — 2.5 million more unemployed people than now.

The balancing act between measures to combat inflation and efforts to avoid a severe recession is to a large extent a matter of guesswork. And arguments over relief measures for a recession — Like a tax cut — are already bumping up against the high interest rate moves which may aggravate a downturn.

Paul Volcker, who was recently appointed chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, is a chief proponent of the argument that inflation fighting should be the government's chief priority even if the medicine is distasteful.

He warned a Congressional committee this past week that "There is much more danger — in terms of aggravating the inflationary momentum" in prematurely moving to provide economic stimulus to counter an anticipated recession than in dealing "with the clear and present fact of inflation."

But some private economists argue that the politics of economics in an election year will make that stand a difficult one to defend, particularly if unemployment continues to rise as a result of a deepening recession.

"A tax cut in 1980 is virtually inevitable," argues Michael K. Evans, an economist at a Washington-based forecasting company bearing his name. "Indeed to the list of 'sure things' that commonly encompasses only death and taxes we can now add a third. Tax cuts in recession years which also happen to be election years."

Evans suggests as "the best answer to our current economic problems" a $40 billion tax cut, equally divided between cuts in personal income taxes and reductions in business and investment taxes. The latter are designed to be incentives to save and invest.

Evans assumes in his forecasts steadily increasing unemployment to a peak of 8.5 percent in mid-1980. A tax reduction would guarantee that there would be no lessening of inflation in 1980, he admits but argues that increased savings and investmet could lower inflation by about a half percentage point in 1981 and a bit more after that.

In other business developments this past week:

•The price of gold climbed to new records this past week continuing its strong trend of recent weeks. Gold at one point went as high as $341.75 an ounce in Zurich during hectic trading Thursday but closed that day at $335. It finished the week at $330 an ounce in Zurich.

That was still more than double the $176 an ounce price of gold at the start of the year. Dealers say uncertainty about world economies, and fears that inflation will cheapen the value of currencies, are partly responsible for the big demand for gold.

•Wholesale prices in August jumped 1.2 percent bringing their increase over the past 12 months to 11.1 percent. The government report showed that wholesale food prices rose by 1.2 percent after four months of either little change or actual declines. And the prices of gasoline and heating oil continued their dramatic upward spiral at a rate of about 6 percent last month.

•The stock market had its biggest one-day loss since Dec. 18 as the Dow Jones industrial average skidded 15.02 points on Tuesday in what analysts said was due to worries over rising interest rates. The market recovered some of that loss later but still registered a net loss of more than 13 points for the week and closed at 874.15.

End Not Near For Rising Interest Rates

NEW YORK (AP) — Wall Street is holding out little hope for any early break in the spiral that has pushed interest rates to record levels lately.

If anything, most analysts acknowledge, the signs point to some further increases before the rising trend has run its course.

Banks are paying better than 11 percent interest these days to investors who buy three-month commercial paper, a form of unsecured loan, from them.

"When banks are willing to pay this kind of rate for funds, it is a clear signal that they expect interest rates to remain at higher levels for at least the next 90 days," the Value Line Investment Survey observed.

Since Paul Volcker took over as chairman of the Federal Reserve Board at mid-summer, declaring a hard-line approach to fighting inflation, the Fed has pushed rates sharply and steadily higher.

This past Friday, some leading banks raised their prime lending rates, which were already at a record 12¼ percent, to 12½. Many others went a step further, increasing the basic charge on blue-chip loans a half percentage point to 12¾.

Faced with this situation, the stock market turned in an erratic performance in the past week.

After the Labor Day holiday on Monday, the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials fell sharply Tuesday and early Wednesday, but later steadied, finishing the week with a net loss of 13.48 at 874.15.

The New York Stock Exchange composite index dropped 1.01 to 61.39, but the American Stock Exchange market value index rose 4.98 to 222.59.

Not so long ago, the relationship of interest rates and the stock market was regarded as pretty clear-cut.

When rates declined, it was good news for the market; when they rose it was bad because businesses' borrowing costs were increased, and yields of competing investments like bonds were enhanced.

Now, however, some important new variables, among them inflation and the dollar, have been added to the equation. They have helped create a situation where investors aren't sure whether to view rising interest rates as bearish or bullish.

Volcker's avowed intention in pushing for higher rates is to slow the growth of the money supply, and thus deprive inflation of the fuel on which it runs. If higher rates were sooner or later to achieve that end, it would presumably be very favorable for the stock market.

But if they act to worsen the developing recession, as many fear they might, the result could be a weaker stock market.

Still another complicating factor is the dollar, and the periodic beatings it has taken in foreign-exchange markets in recent years. To defend it, the reasoning goes, you raise interest rates, thereby sending currency traders the message that you are in fact determined to curb inflation.

If the dollar keeps on declining, it makes inflation worse, in a vicious-circle effect, because it then takes more dollars to buy imports — notably oil.

In Volcker's initial credit-tightening moves, "the dollar was almost certainly his immediate target," said Arnold Moskowitz, economist at the brokerage firm of Dean Witter Reynolds Inc.

•Volcker's Fed has demonstrated a willingness to respond to outsized monetary growth by raising interest rates to support the dollar regardless of domestic economic and political consequences.

Interest In Oil Stocks Slows Market's Retreat

By J. L. HUTCHESON
Schneider, Bernet & Hickman, Inc.

Interest in some of the oil stocks helped the market halt it's recent retreat and finish the week on a firmer note. Trading volume declined somewhat toward the end of the week from Wednesday's high level following the fifteen point decline posted on Tuesday.

J.L. HUTCHESON

Some oil stocks were spurred by news of an oil find in Canada's Beaufort Sea made by Dome Petroleum Ltd. which reported that test results of one of their wells indicated a find of important commercial significance. Other petroleum companies with interest in the area responded favorably to the report.

Most analysts feel that the broad and sharp tumble on Tuesday was a technical correction from the recent summer rally and not the beginning of a new down phase. Floor borkers revealed that there was definitely some profit taking, but that people were moving money into other stocks and not converting to cash. Most investors feel that the correction would have lasted longer if it had not been for news of the oil find.

The Federal Reserve said that in the week end Aug. 29 the basic money supply, M1, rose $600 million and the broader measure, M21, spurted $1.7 billion. In response to the continued rise in the money supply over the past few weeks, the Fed announced last week that they were raising the discount rate, the amount the Fed charges member banks for money which is borrowed. Late this week, Morgan Guaranty raised their prime rate to 12 3/4 percent along with several other banks citing the increased cost of obtaining money from the Fed as the reason.

The recent summer rally has encouraged some investment officers to commit part of their long-hoarded reserves to stocks but others have continued to remain aloof.

Some portfolio managers feel that the recession needs to take hold and slow inflation, which has not yet cocurred. They feel that the stock market hasn't reacted yet to the advent of a recession which could bring on a decline in corporate profits. Most Wall Street forecasts are for continued ernings growth.

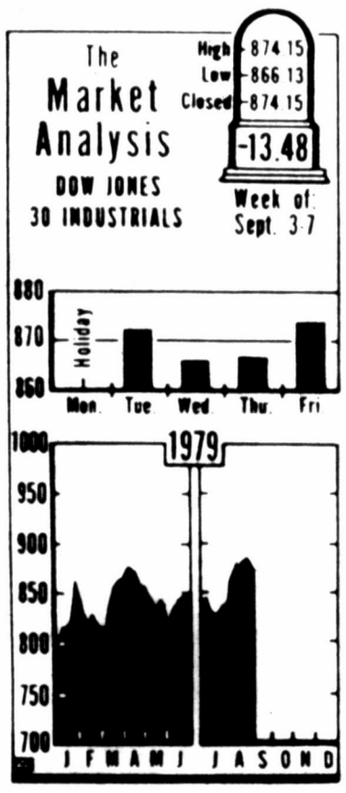

Many individuals who handle money for pension funds and other institutions feel that the length and severity of a coming recession can't be judged and that the potential risks to the market of an expected decline in economic activity and profits should not be underestimated.

Of the many investment officers surveyed, nearly all feel that when interest rates do top out and inflationary pressures begin to subside it will probably signal the start of a longterm bull market. Some believe that this could occur as early as the first half of 1980.

Airline Buys First DC-10s Since Chicago Air Crash

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP) — The McDonnell Douglas Corp. has received the first new order for DC-10s since the Federal Aviation Administration grounded the wide-bodied jet in the wake of the nation's worst air crash.

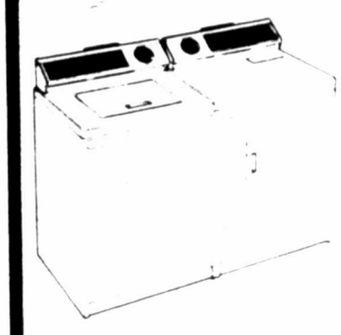

Aeromexico, the national airline of Mexico, announced Friday that it was buying two DC-10s and six smaller DC-9s for a total purchase price of more than $190 million.

Last May, an American Airlines DC-10 crashed at O'Hare International Airport in Chicago, killing 273 people. The planes were grounded on June 6 for 38 days while the planes were inspected.

BOY, 13, CHARGED WITH MURDER

PITTSBURGH (AP) — A 13-year-old boy was charged Saturday with killing a 9-year-old girl whose body was found covered with rocks under a bridge near her home. Raymond Snow Jr. of Millvale was charged as an adult with criminal homicide, said a spokesman for Allegheny County Deputy Coroner George Phillips. Snow, who lived several houses away from the victim, Alexis Heffler, was sent to a juvenile detention center to await a preliminary hearing Sept. 14, the spokesman said.

statue." But even Griggs said he was wildly enthusiastic about "the 180-degree turnaround by the city of Lubbock. He, like thousands of others, admitted to being overwhelmed by the turnout and inherent excitement.

It should be noted there was also no animosity shown between the Holly Society members and Cricket drummer Jerry Allison, who had created a minor controversy a week beforehand with his straightforward comments about overbearing fans and former Cricket Niki Sullivan. The latter told The A-J, "I was surprised to read that story but, no, I'm not angry. I know Jerry must have just been tired or upset that day."

Allison greeted both Sullivan and Griggs warmly at the reception, but the Holly Society president still stressed, "These guys (the Crickets) should realize that the fans are the ones who support them and put them there. They can't forget that."

John Goldrosen, author of the biography "The Buddy Holly Story," was also extremely excited about the acclaim being shown Buddy Holly by his hometown. In fact, his only anger seemed directed at his publisher. It seems a new printing of the book saw 8,000 copies released in July, but not many made it to Lubbock in time for the weekend of the Holly Tribute. He said, "All I've seen are three copies at Varsity Book Store. There may be more, but I don't know about them." Collectors, though, may want to rush out Monday morning on the slight chance the books haven't been sold, since Goldrosen autographed all three copies before leaving the store.

Goldrosen is now planning another rock'n'roll biography, but refrains from giving out details until he confirms the cooperation of the unnamed musician's family.

Waylon Jennings has gone on to superstar status in the field of country music, but he still has trouble escaping the shadow of sharing Holly's final days. But he didn't even try to duck the issue at the pre-concert interview. "I came back to Lubbock tonight to do this concert," he said, "because I always loved that kind of music. Buddy had a great influence on a lot of musicians; heck, there wouldn't have been a Beatles if it wasn't for Buddy. And you can hear his influences in my music today. . .I was really never one of the Crickets. I was young. (He gives his age now as "42 — with a bullet.") I didn't have time to become one of the Crickets; I wasn't with him that long."

However, Jennings revealed plans to make an album with Crickets Allison, Mauldin and Curtis in the near future.

Coming face to face with Maria Elena Holley-Diaz, Buddy's widow (now remarried and living in Irving), was a sentimental moment for Jennings. It marked the first time he had seen her in more than 20 years. "Yeah," he confirmed, "today was the first time I'd seen Maria since Buddy and I left on that last tour." Trying to treat the subject lightly, he joked, "She talks a little better now. Back then, I can remember when Buddy produced a record I cut; she listened to it and told me, 'Waylon, you give me goosebumples.'"

Buddy's music has survived, Jennings said, because of its uniqueness. "Heck, 'Slippin And Slidin' was a Chipmunks song; that's the kind of material he's use. . .I think Buddy's music has survived because it was original. At the time, no one sounded like him. Everyone wanted to sound like Elvis. Buddy's music had a happy sound, a different rhythm. J.I. (Allison) was always doing different things with the drums."

Jennings, who lives in Nashville now but says "once you're a Texan, you ain't nothin' else," graciously put up with gushing Holly fans and inane questions, as well. But when asked whether Elvis Presley would have become as famous if Holly had lived, Jennings masterfully came up with a parallel to his present-day viewpoints. "Man, Presley was different. He and Buddy were never in competition.

"That's what I hate about all this 'awards' stuff today. They're trying to put singers in competition with each other. I'm not in competition with anybody. I don't want to be Number One in nothin'. I'll help anyone I can. . .Music is a happy thing, a soulful thing. It ought not to be fought over."

When this writer brought up Jennings' history of avoiding reporters, the singer said simply, "The press wouldn't print what I said. I'd say one thing and they'd say something else." He added a bit later, "I can't say I like music critics too much; I really don't think they've got the right to judge the music itself. They judge the songs. . .One of my friends said once, 'Waylon, it'd be stupid if they just judged your appearance' and I said 'not half as stupid as judging my music.'

"See, I can have a concert where the whole thing is low energy. I've walked through some shows. And they can nail me on that. But when they write about the songs themselves, they're getting out of line. . .Most of my gripes have been with critics in big cities, though. (New York Times music critic John) Rockwell has taken a few shots at me — and I've taken a few shots back."

But don't start thinking "outlaw," as Jennings insisted, "I am no outlaw. That's just something the record companies dreamed up for publicity purposes. I'm Waylon Jennings. I'll play whatever I like, whatever fits. I played blues songs when I was feeling unhappy, and I also sang 'MacArthur Park.' I don't write all my songs. I like to interpret songs. I'm a songwriter's fan.

"I'm a good old boy doing the best I can, better looking than Buck Owens and taller than Merle Haggard."

One gushing Holly Society member from Canada interrupted the press questioning to urge Jennings to "quit smoking so much, honey," to which Jennings quipped, "Lady, I'd smoke a pickle if it wasn't so wet and soft and hard to light." But on this particular night, it was inevitable that Jennings would be asked for the "real story" behind his giving up a seat on that plane in early February 1959 — especially since Jennings himself said too many reporters kept making up facts.

Jennings said, "The 'real story' is this: We (Holly, Jennings and Tommy Alsup) were going to fly out. J.P. Richardson came over and asked for my seat; he said he had the flu and couldn't get enough rest on the bus. I said that if it was OK with Buddy, it was OK with me. That was it. Then Richie Valens asked Tommy if he could go with J.P. And Tommy said OK.

"We never learned anything (about the plane crash and the deaths of Holly, Richardson and Valens) until the next day."

But he never forgot, either, and his performance Friday night at the Civic center exhibition hall was packed with emotion — both when playing rockers with the Crickets and his own hits with the Wavlors.

And the celebration to Buddy Holly's memory didn't end with the concert. Showplace Six assistant manager Barbara Cox said Saturday, "We came within 50 seats of selling out" the Friday midnight screening of the 1978 movie called "The Buddy Holly Story." She indicated the movie was being "moved into our largest auditorium" to accomodate the expected crowd for the Saturday midnight screening. And at noon Saturday, hundreds of members of the Buddy Holly memorial Society gathered at City of Lubbock Cemetery for a memorial service at the site of Buddy Holly's grave.

Non-members were somewhat surprised by the extent of grief displayed at the grave site. Sue Frederick was there, visiting from Tacoma, Wash., and said between sobs, "I've been a Holly fan for 20 years. This is my fifth time here. Each time it gets worse. He was a close personal friend of each and every one of us. And we feel his loss with a personal, private feeling of our own. It's a loss we'll never stop feeling."

Indeed, the tears flowed as if the late rock'n'roller had died only yesterday. In truth, it was over 20 years ago, but the Buddy Holly Memorial Tribute served its purpose: to celebrate the memory of a friend and make certain that the man, as well as the music, was not forgotten.

PUT YOUR BRICK TO THE TEST

A home is no better than the brick it has around it. And, no matter how much or how little you spend for a new home, you could end up being disappointed owner of cheap, ugly, made brick ... brick made so soft that it could eventually fall, crumble or melt away from the side of your home.

Acme refuses to produce such shoddy made brick. We believe you deserve to know the difference. To find out more about brick, send us the test and we'll mail you the results.

Please mail the test and a self addressed, stamped business envelope to Acme Brick Company, Marketing Services, 2821 W. 7th Street, Fort Worth, Texas 76107. You will receive a free copy of "Brick Facts For The Homebuyer - How To Test Your Brick For Quality."

For the past 20 years, the Carrabelle Police Department has operated from a 3-foot-square telephone booth. There's even a white dome on top of it with the word "POLICE" in bold tan letters.

"We're right proud of our little station," says John Berda, who runs the drug store in this fishing village of 1,044 people in Florida's Panhandle, about 50 miles southwest of Tallahassee. "I think it's the smallest police station in the world."

And it may well be.

The three-man police department stores its files and a breathalyzer machine for testing drunken drivers in a room at City Hall that it shares with the public health nurse.

Prisoners are hauled off to the Franklin County jail at Apalachicola.

"You couldn't very well lock someone up in it (the phone booth) if he misbehaved, but luckily we don't have too much misbehaving," Berda said.

Some folks say they'd like to see the town repaint the booth and fix a broken window pane so it could become a tourist attraction. But even with its chipped red and black paint, it lures picture-takers from around the country.

"A guy from Tennessee went over to the gas station one night and asked for help loading up the phone booth. He wanted to take it back to Tennessee as an antique," said Police Chief Marvin Braswell.

"I came down and run him off. I told him he was going to be in a lot of trouble if he didn't get out of here."

Democrats Evading Carter Re-Election

WASHINGTON (AP) — Most Democratic senators running for re-election in 1980 are trying to steer clear of any problems Jimmy Carter might have in winning his party's presidential nomination.

The most common response, echoing language used by Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, is, "I expect the president to be renominated and re-elected."

Or: "I will support the Democratic nominee."

Or: "It's too early to think about 1980."

"I'm not engaging in presidential politics," said Sen. Frank Church, who faces a tough re-election campaign in Idaho. "My own platter is full right now."

A survey of the 22 Democratic senators expected to run for re-election next year showed three flatly opposed to a second term for Carter, four voicing strong support for Carter if not outright endorsement, and the remainder noncommittal. Two other Democrats, Sens. Abraham Ribicoff of Connecticut and Adlai Stevenson of Illinois, are not running for re-election.

Of the senators who remain noncommittal, some said they would support Carter against a challenge from Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. of California, but none were prepared to say they would support him against Kennedy.

Draft Kennedy groups are active in nearly 20 states, despite the senator's insistence that he is not a candidate. Those who hope the Massachusetts senator will change his mind were encouraged Friday by Kennedy's statement that his wife and mother have dropped their opposition to his candidacy.

Possibly as significant as the change in that attitude was Kennedy's willingness to acknowledge that he discussed a presidential race with his family during the August congressional recess.

Gravel is adamantly opposed to the Carter administration's plan to designate more than 100 million acres of Alaska as wilderness.

Asked what Gravel's position was on the 1980 presidential race, an aide said, "He plans to vote against Carter."

Durkin opposes Carter's energy policies and has said he might enter the New Hampshire presidential primary as a protest candidate.

McGovern, a leader of the party's liberal wing, declared several weeks ago that Democrats ought to look for an alternative to Carter in 1980. McGovern, who was the Democratic presidential candidate in 1972, said he thought Kennedy would be the strongest candidate.

Sens. Thomas Eagleton of Missouri and Herman Talmadge of Carter's home state of Georgia were the only senators to offer unqualified endorsements of a second term for the president.

Two others leaning strongly to Carter are Sens. Ernest F. Hollings of South Carolina and Wendell H. Ford of Kentucky.

Hollings said he plans to support Carter in 1980, but hedged when asked about the possibility of a Kennedy challenge.

"We'll see what happens when next year gets here," he said.

"I think just like Kennedy does, that Carter will be in the race and be re-elected," he said, adding that "I think Carter would be easier to run with in South Carolina."

An aide to Ford said the senator considers his own re-election "his main priority in 1980." He added that Ford believes Carter would run much stronger in Kentucky than would Kennedy.

Sen. John Glenn of Ohio said he expects Carter to be renominated. Glenn expressed concern that a challenge to Carter would split the party and hurt other candidates.

An aide to Sen. Gaylord Nelson of Wisconsin said Nelson supports Carter but the aide said he didn't know what the senator would do if Kennedy entered the race.

Among the senators who said it was too early to comment were Warren Magnuson of Washington and Richard Stone of Florida.

"I'm a loyal Democrat," said Stone "and I'll support the nominee of the party and I'd rather not make further statements about preference at this time."

Sens. Birch Bayh of Indiana, Gary Hart of Colorado, Patrick Leahy of Vermont and Daniel Inouye of Hawaii said they expect Carter to be renominated and re-elected. But they indicated they'd stay neutral if Carter were challenged, especially by Kennedy.

Rail Car Fire Causes Evacuation

NEW YORK (AP) — An unused railroad car burst into flames in an underground storage area of Grand Central Terminal Saturday, sending a heavy cloud of smoke through the station and forcing its evacuation.

Three persons were treated for smoke inhalation at a hospital and released, and the blaze was brought under control about 90 minutes after it began. There was no estimate of the number of people evacuated.

Train service was temporarily cut off after the fire broke out at about 1:30 p.m. on the lower level of the bustling terminal in the heart of midtown Manhattan. Restricted service was resumed two hours later on upper level tracks.

Smoke, which filled the upper reaches of the main terminal, spread outside and could be seen as far as 10 blocks away.

The smoke passed through terminal air ducts, spreading into the lobby of nearby buildings such as the Biltmore Hotel and the Pan Am building, which have entrances into Grand Central. Those buildings were not evacuated.

Hubert Gormley, deputy assistant fire chief, said the blaze, which was not termed suspicious, involved five old train cars on two tracks which serve as a storage yard on the lower level. Thee was no immediate estimate of damage. The cause of the fire was not known.

"All you could see was smoke and flames," said Conrail signalman Dominic Serrante, who went down to the area where 50 firefighters were battling the blaze.

Another Conrail employee, who went to the storage area said: "The train is burning like you can forget about it."

A trainman on the Hudson line, who had just pulled his train onto an upper level track above the blaze, said, "I could hardly see. We asked them (the passengers on his train) to quickly leave the train and walk straight onto the street. They behaved beautifully."

An assistant manager at the nearby Roosevelt Hotel said smoke was visible coming from the station. "You can see smoke coming from the air vents ... you can see smoke coming from the Pan Am building.

The area near the huge terminal also was full of smoke.

"We just saw the smoke and said 'wouldn't it be funny if that were at Grand Central Station,' and it was," said Kelly Spencer, 16, who with her friend Elizabeth Osterndorf, 18, were enroute to the terminal to to catch a train to Brewster, N.Y.

Governor Sends Apology Letter 'To All Texans'

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Arizona Gov. Bruce Babbitt said Saturday he hoped he did not offend anyone when he remarked last week the Alamo was a symbol to Mexicans of "overbearing gringo neighbors" who "plundered" Mexico's territory.

"As one who has married a Texan and who has lived in Texas, I share your pride in Texas history," Babbitt said in a letter mailed during the weekend to Texas newspapers and addressed "To all Texans."

"It was not my intention to offend anyone," the letter said.

Babbitt's remarks about the Alamo, made during a Wednesday luncheon speech in San Antonio, sent Texas officials scrambling to defend the historic battle with Mexico and prompted some, including the Daughters of the Republic of Texas, to suggest Babbitt should brush up on his history.

That group volunteered to give Babbitt a tour of the Alamo, and Babbitt's aide, Athia Hardt said the governor considering taking them up on it during his next visit to Texas. "He would like that very much," she said.

Babbitt's letter said, 'To understand Mexico we must be aware of how Mexicans view our common history, of how events like the Alamo are written in Mexican history books and taught in Mexican schools.

"I share the pride of all Americans in the heroic deeds of Travis, Bowie and Crockett and their followers," the governor wrote. "But I also believe that we honor our history best if we appreciate how those events are viewed by others, in this case by Mexicans."

The statement said if the United States is to deal successfully "on matters of energy, trade and immigration, it is imperative that we strive to comprehend Mexico as seen by Mexicans."

In the speech before two Mexican-American groups in Texas that caused the flap, Babbitt called the Alamo "a symbol of the problem in our relationship with Mexico...a sacred symbol to Texans and an extension of the American ideal. But to Mexico, it's a symbol of territory lost, a nation plundered by overbearing gringo neighbors."

Those remarks prompted applause from Mexican-American leaders but an eruption of criticism from officials such as Rep. Henry B. Gonzalez, D-Texas, who said Babbitt's "symbolism is all mixed up, and his history and his statements are thoroughly confused and ignorant and unjust to a very great struggle, which involves more than he implies is the North American gringo traducing Mexico's territory."

Picket Lines Greet Students In Michigan, 14 Other States

By The Associated Press

Almost 900,000 students — about half of them in Michigan — will find their teachers walking picket lines Monday as school strikes continue to disrupt the start of the fall term in 15 states.

With classes scheduled to begin for about 213,000 students in Detroit, 12,000 teachers vowed to "withhold our srvices" and join 31,070 others already on strike in other parts of the country, some for as long as two weeks.

Contract disputes involving 11,000 teachers had already led to walkouts in 29 other Michigan school districts, affecting 216,000 students.

"We have voted not to accept this contract and will withhold our services Monday," said Mary Ellen Riordan, president of the Detroit Federation of Teachers, after members of the federation rejected a contract proposal Friday providing a 23 percent pay raise over three years.

The Detroit teachers, whose salaries presently range from from $12,884 to $24,132, wanted a 31 percent increase with a provision for a cost of living increase.

In other states at the week's end, 3,000 teachers were off the job in New Jersey, 2,600 in Indiana, 2,330 in Washington, 2,300 in Pennsylvania, 2,000 in Louisiana, 1,600 in Ohio, 1,800 in Illinois, 1,100 in Oregon, 750 in Oklahoma, 700 in Alaska, 690 in California, 470 in Connecticut, 340 in Rhode Island and 140 in New York.

About 400 of the 750 teachers in Oklahoma City, who have been on strike for two weeks, rallied Saturday at the State Fairgrounds and circulated a petition calling for a grand jury investigation of the school board for allegedly meeting illegally behind closed doors.

A caravan of 200 cars, led by a band on a flatbed truck, circled the school board headquarters then drove back to the fairgrounds.

In Detroit, Ms. Riordan said the union was willing to meet with the board, but no negotiations were scheduled.

Elsewhere, 13 teachers in Daly City, Calif., were arrested Friday for trespassing when they tried to meet with two high school principals, and contempt of court citations were delivered to union leaders in Southington, Conn.

Police took the 13 California teachers into custody on citizens' arrests by the principals at two Pacifica high schools. The teachers were released on their own recognizance.

Tom Fitzpatrick of the striking American Federation of Teachers Local 1481 said the teachers had gone to the schools to try to convince the principals to plead their case before school officials.

In Southington, Conn., contempt of court citations were delivered to Donald Demers, president of the Southington Education Association, and four union leaders. Teachers picketed the city's 13 public schools Friday despite an injunction by Superior Court Judge John Daly ordering them back to work.

In Louisiana, Jefferson Parish teachers turned down a proposal to link $3 million in requested teacher raises with a sales tax increase referendum. Two-thirds of the teachers in the suburban New Orleans district struck Aug. 24 over pay provisions in the second year of a two-year contract. More than half of the system's 64,000 students have stayed away from classes.

In the halls of higher learning, more than 300 teachers at Rhode Island Junior College struck Friday at six campuses. Classes for 11,000 students at the University of Rhode Island have been canceled until a three-day strike by teachers there is resolved.

'Prince Of Courtroom' Wants Image Of Him More Serious

By MIKE COCHRAN

FORT WORTH (AP) — They call him bold and brilliant, a master of illusion, the crown prince of courtroom intimidation and cross-examination.

He once killed a juror, they joke, boring him to death.

"He's a menace to society," says a prosecutor. "A charming little jerk," contends a judge.

They call him a showman and a comedian, crafty and cunning and almost always on stage. But they call him mostly when they're in deep trouble.

At 52, Richard "Racehorse" Haynes is no longer the heir apparent to the courtroom kingdom of that grand old legal lion, Percy Foreman.

Haynes, his legions contend, has ascended to the thrown.

"His dashing courtroom style and impressive track record against long odds have already classed him with champion defense lawyers such as Percy Foreman, F. Lee Bailey and Edward Bennett Williams," says the Wall Street Journal.

"And in a branch of the profession that rests heavily on notoriety, Mr. Haynes has recently pulled lengths ahead of his famous colleagues, and is believed by many to be America's premier criminal defender."

Balderdash, says Haynes.

"Several years ago Time Magazine named me as one of the top six criminal lawyers. They did considerable disservice to thousands of top lawyers who were not mentioned."

That is the same Haynes who once suggested on national television he considered himself the best criminal attorney in Texas.

"It is my belief that I am," he told Dan Rather. "I wonder why you restrict it to Texas."

That is the same Haynes who told The AP two years ago: "I guess the bottom line is who you yourself would hire if you were in trouble. If I were in trouble I'd hire me — if I could get interested in my case and afford my fee."

It is one of life's marvelous ironies that, having reached the pinnacle, Haynes seems not at all content with his image or his celebrated lifestyle.

"It's not that he wants to change his image, but he does want people to see the other side of his personality," said Steve Sumner, a member of the team defending Davis on a murder solicitation charge.

"He's been portrayed as a free-wheeling Texas lawyer who wears $500 suits and anteater boots and races expensive cars and motorcycles and yachts.

"There is a serious side to Haynes, and that (flashy) portrayal is a little unfair."

Likewise, Haynes' fondness for good Scotch, cold beer and ribald stories is not a closely guarded secret. And it is that image he seeks to change.

His three-year involvement in the Davis affair has made him a folk hero in Texas which, he admits, "is an an ego trip for me ... I'm a human being in that regard.

"But I certainly wouldn't want to be guilty of any personal conduct or stories that would cause any youngsters to believe that their lifestyles ought to embrace any vicious habits or conduct just to be like a folk hero.

Although Haynes is now openly disenchanted with the media, he seldom discouraged — in fact nurtured — the image of a witty, rich, handsome, daring, eloquent and cooly arrogant attorney.

"There's nobody I couldn't defend," he said once. "If I'd been Mr. Nixon's lawyer, the man would still be in office today."

That's probably true — if Haynes had defended the president, he might still be cross-examining the witnesses and surely would have exposed "deep throat" as "crooked throat."

"Racehorse's forte is cross-examination," said Mike Gibson, another member of the Davis defense team. "But he's the consumate trial lawyer, contantly thinking of the case.

"He is the hardest working 'name' lawyer in the country."

During Davis' murder trial in 1977, Haynes cross-examined one of three accusing eyewitnesses for 11 days. Long after the jury acquitted his wealthy client, chief prosecutor Joe Shannon said: "You can't help but like the guy. He emotes and he's likeable and it's contageous.

"He'll fudge; he'll stick his toe across the line. It's not cheating — but he'll seek every possible advantage. You've got to stand there and stomp on his toe.

"But if I were in trouble, I would employ him — if I could afford him."

Two of the lawyer's Houston colleagues, Ray Bass and Mike Ramsey, insist he bored the juror to death.

"Can you imagine," Ramsey asked, "the last thing you hear in this mortal world being Haynes asking for the 14th time what time it was?"

With his Ben Franklin glasses perched low on his nose, and puffing on his trademark curved stem pipe, Haynes said last week: "I do get criticized for being picky about what time things happen. A half hour difference between one witness and another can be extremely significant."

Responding to criticism of his time-consuming tactics, Haynes pointed out that civil and corporate lawsuits often run for years.

"Just because it involves lots of money, nobody gets upset or complains about it ... but when it involves the life or liberty of a human being and goes more than two weeks, then you start to hear that it takes too much time.

"I happen to think that the life and liberty of a human being is more important than the property and the money that the corporations fight over in the courtroom.

"I make no apology."

Stubborn Tech Falls To USC

Mighty Trojans Prove Worthy Of Top Ranking

By NORVAL POLLARD
Executive Sports Editor

There was that fourth down and less-than-a-yard gamble at the Southern California 43 in the fourth quarter that didn't pay off, it killed what could have been a game-tying drive.

And then there was Roger Jones' interception late in the third quarter that was nullified by a roughing-the-passer penalty. Instead of Texas Tech having a first down at USC's 32-yard line, the infraction allowed the Trojans to maintain possession at the Red Raider 39-yard marker.

But as important as those two plays were in Tech's season-opening loss to the top-ranked Trojans Saturday night, there was an even more critical element involved in the 21-7 setback — mainly the Trojans themselves.

Southern Cal head coach John Robinson found out early that the Red Raiders did not intend to yield the big play to the defending national champions.

So the Trojan used a grind-up-the-yards, wear-down-the-opponent philosophy to whittle an early lead and maintain control of the tempo of the contest late in the third quarter and late in the fourth when the Red Raiders seemingly had grabbed momentum and were beating USC off the line of scrimmage.

And the Trojans had to chip away without the services of All-American tailback Charles White, their biggest offensive gun. White left the game early in the second quarter with a bruised shoulder and never returned. He finished with only 39 yards on 10 carries.

With White out, starting fullback Marcus Allen and reserve tailback Michael Hayes picked up the slack. Allen scored USC's first touchdown on a one-yard burst and finished the night with 105 yards on 20 carries.

The contest's key action came in the final two periods. USC held a 7-0 lead at halftime, thanks to Allen's fore-mentioned scoring plunge and Eric Hipps' extra point.

The Trojans wasted little time upping that margin to 14-0. USC took the second half kickoff at their 20-yard line and in six plays covered 80 yards in front of the largest opening-day crowd in Tech history, 52,991.

That score came on a 19-yard pitch from quarterback Paul McDonald to reserve split end Dan Garcia. Garcia ran a fly route and made a great diving catch in the end zone for the six points. Tech cornerback Willie Stephens was with Garcia step for step, it was just a great play on Garcia's part.

Hipp's extra point made it 14-0 and the Red Raiders had their backs pressed firmly to the wall.

But instead of running and hiding, Tech came back stronger than a West Texas wind. The running of quarterback Ron Reeves and fullback James Hadnot, who finished the game with 94 yards on 24 tries, slowly moved the Raider offense. The Red Raiders started at their 20 and picked up first downs at their 32 and 43 before Reeves unloaded a 48-yard bomb to flanker Edwin Newsome.

Newsome was wide open but couldn't outrun USC defenders to the end zone. He was pulled down from behind at Southern Cal's nine-yard line by strong safety Dennis Smith.

Reeves kept the football on first down and moved around the left side for eight yards. Two plays later he cracked the goal line plane and the Red Raiders were on the socorebaoard. Bill Adams' conversion made it 14-7 and suddenly Tech had new life.

The Raider defense, led by linebackers Johnny Quinney, Jeff McKinney and Jeff Copeland, stumped the Southern Cal attack on the following set of downs. McDonald faced a first-and-10 situation from his own 46 when Jones stepped in front of a pass intended for Hayes at midfield and returned it to the USC 32.

Tech had definitely taken away USC's early momentum but it was still Southern Cal's ball following the roughing-the-passer walkoff. l move no closer than Tech's 39. David Pryor punted the ball out of bounds at the Tech two and that is where Reeves and his teammates took over with 2:29 remaining in the third period.

Again, the Red Raiders moved slowly. Hadnot broke loose around right end for 10 yards and a first down on a third-and-one call. Two plays later, on second and three from the Tech 28, Hadnot blasted over right tackle for seven more yards and another first down.j

Reeves picked up 13 yards on an option keeper to give the Raiders a first down at their 45. That is where the drive began to bog down.

Tech faced a fourth and less than two feet at the USC 43. The Raiders started a man in motion to the left and Reeves pitched the ball to Hadnot going in that direction. The Trojans had excellent play recognition on the snap of the ball and quickly flowed toward the play. Outside linebacker Larry McGrew bulled past Tech's wall of blockers and dropped Hadnot in his tracks.

Hadnot suffered a three-yard loss and USC took over the football.

"We were just trying to win it," said Texas Tech head coach Rex Dockery. "Sometimes it works and sometimes it doesn't. If the tight end doesn't miss his block we make it.

"We had hurt them with the pitch earlier and we thought it would work again."

The final blow came with 1:32 left to play. McDonald hit reserve flanker Vic Rakhshani for one yard and a touchdown on third and goal. The score defi-

Hayes Comes On Strong

By JIM FERGUSON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

About the closest Larry Hayes had expected to come to any sweat Saturday night was if one of the starters hit him with a wet jersey after the game.

No closer.

Hayes had expected to play the part of the reserve running back against Texas Tech. That means he'd spend most of his time walking up and down the sideline clapping his hands until they were swollen, drinking Gatorade until he hurt, and staring at the beauties in the stands until his eyes fell out.

But a strange thing happened to Hayes on his way to the water bucket — Heisman Trophy candidate Charles White suffered a deep bruise in his right shoulder, sidelining him for the rest of the night.

"When I saw Charlie come out I got a little nervous," admitted Hayes, who eventually wound up with 84 yards on 19 carries. "But I knew what I had to do and I think I did it."

The funny thing is, it was the first time in Hayes' four-year tenure at the University of Southern California that he'd ever carried the ball.

"Considering that," said USC head coach John Robinson, "I thought he did a very fine job."

"You know," continued Hayes, "I thought Charlie would got most of the way and I might get to spell him. I hated to see Charlie get hurt and I'm glad it's not serious. I'd really felt bad if that had happened."

From the time White went out of the game in the second period, it was obvious Hayes would be going the rest of the distance. That's because, according to White himself, there was no way he was going back into the hard-hitting ball game.

"It's too early in the season to take a chance on getting hurt any more seriously," said White. "So there was no way I was going to play again. No need on taking any chances, you know."

So does the performance put Hayes instead of White in the running for the Heisman? "I don't know about that," smiled White. "We'll have to see."

Hayes echoed the same White's sentiments: "I doubt it," said Hayes.

Rex Dockery Says Raiders 'Trying To Win' On Tech's Crucial Fourth Down Decision

By CHUCK McDONALD
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

The fourth quarter had just gotten underway and the Red Raiders were rolling down the field like a steamroller coming down a hill.

The capacity crowd of 52,991 at Jones Stadium was in hysterics — the Raiders trailed the mighty Trojans of USC by only a touchdown (14-7).

It was third-and-one at the USC 43 and James Hadnot carried the ball over right tackle. BOOM! Tech's big fullback was stopped in his tracks by the Trojan defense. That made it fourth-and-one, and the crowd made it's feelings known.

"GO, GO, GO," came the deafening roar.

And Tech's Rex Dockery elected to do just that. The Raiders lined up in the power formation, it looked like a quarterback sneak or maybe another Hadnot dive, but unexpectedly quarterback Ron Reeves pitched back to Hadnot who tried to skirt around the end.

USC linebacker Larry McGrew knifed through the line and dropped Hadnot for a three-yard loss. A deathly hush fell over the stadium — that was the ballgame.

Afterwards, Dockery was questioned about his play selection. Why didn't he go up the middle?

"We were just trying to win," said the dejected coach. "We'd hurt them with that play earlier . . . I just made the wrong call."

Indeed, only seven plays earlier, Hadnot had taken an identical pitch and skirted for ten yards and a big first down.

"The tight end made his block the other time we ran that play," added Dockery. "He just missed his block and they made a super defensive play.

"Sometimes it works and sometimes it doesn't."

It was a gutsy call on Dockery's part — and it nearly worked.

"I thought it was a good call," said USC's McGrew. "It surprised us, but our line was able to string it out until I could get up there."

And while there were plenty of fans who thought that might have been the deciding play in the game, it probably wasn't so. At least USC coach John Robinson didn't think so. After all, the Trojans did score a third touchdown to make the final score 21-7.

"I don't believe any one play decides a ballgame," he said. "Even if they (Tech) did make that first down, they still had a long way to go for a touchdown."

Dockery said it was the USC defense, and poor field position that made the biggest difference.

"The USC defense was really quick and tough," he said. "Everybody underestimates their defense, except the people that play them. I think that their defense is probably the key to their success."

Dockery also pointed to the work of Trojan punter David Pryor who left the ball on the Tech two-yard line on two different occasions.

And the Raiders were also hurt by penalties. Tech had an interception by Roger Jones called back in the third quarter due to a roughing-the-passer penalty.

"That (the penalty) hurt us," said Dockery. "We had the momentum, and we were only down by one touchdown — that could've been a big break for us, if it hadn't been called back."

Jones had intercepted the ball at midfield and returned it all the way to the USC 32.

Although the Raider offense moved well in the second half, they were almost helpless in the first period.

"I think that was just because it was the first game of the season," said Dockery. "Ron (Reeves) played well except for a couple of early passes. And our defense played exceptionally.

"I was pleased with the effort of our players," he said. "But we wanted to win."

Tech quarterback Reeves echoed his coaches words.

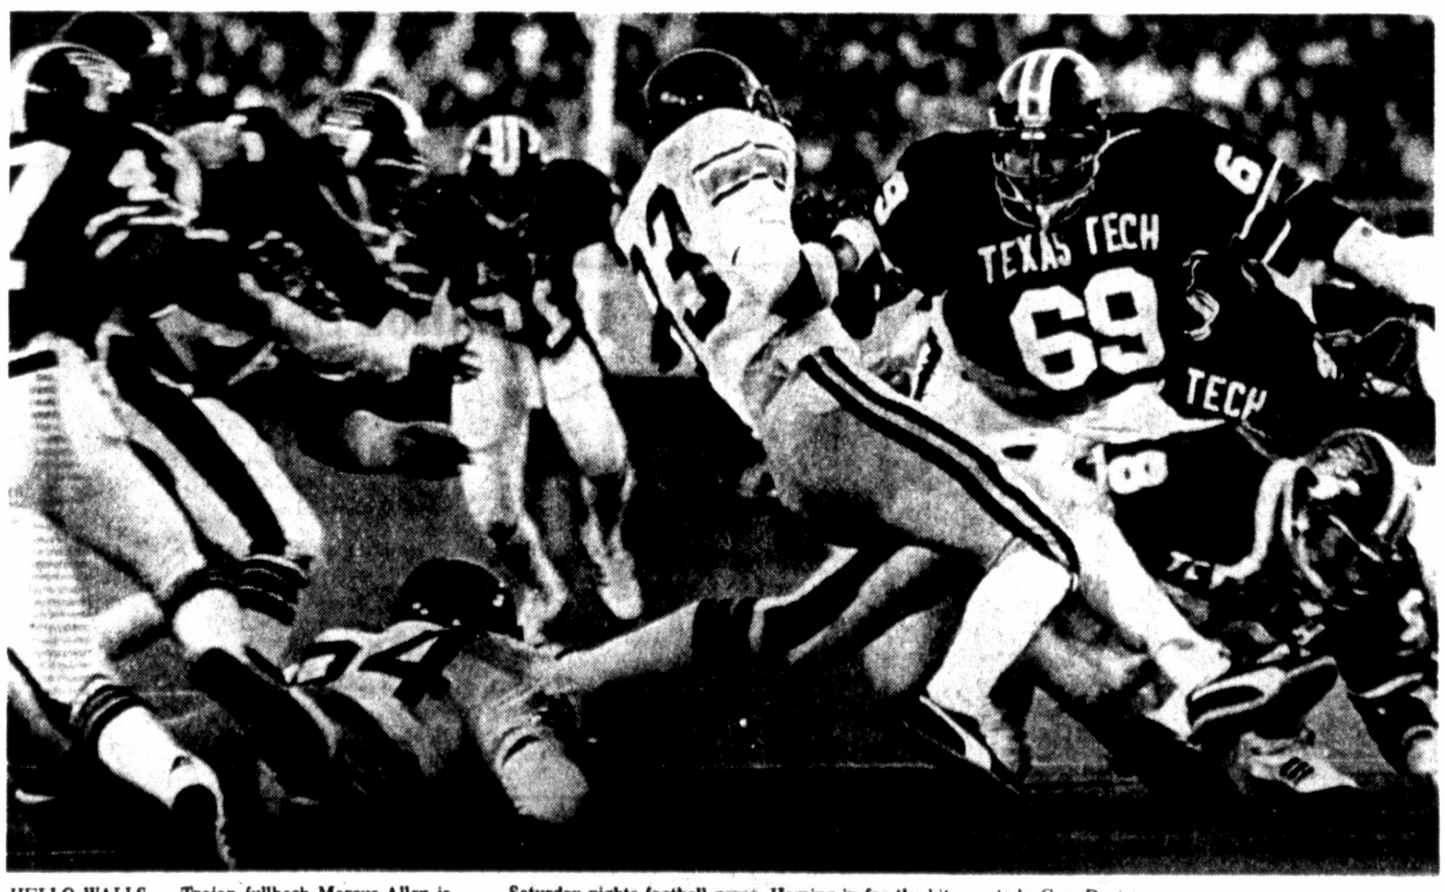

"It's no fun to lose," he said. "It doesn't matter who you are playing."

But Reeves did see some bright spots.

"We proved that we can move the ball," he said. "So this game won't hurt us. We're surely not going to quit now."

When the final gun sounded, the Raiders had lost to the nation's No. 1 team by only 14 points. To some that might represent a moral victory. But a loss is a loss, and Tech's Dockery was understandably upset.

"I just don't believe in moral victories," he said.

Lobos Devour Chaps

By DON HENRY
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

ALPINE — Lubbock Christian College's young Chaparrals learned another lesson about the game of football: out-of-town trips can be as disastrous as playing at home.

Sul Ross State, which was able to win but two games last season, swamped the Chaparrals 47-0 here Saturday night, and everyone except its starters and punter saw plenty of action.

It was the second loss in eight days for the Chaparrals, who had started their football history with a 35-6 loss to McMurry at Lubbock.

It was a case of the Lobos overwhelming their visitors from the opening kickoff, and there was little LCC could do about it.

Even before the visitors from the Plains could grow accustomed to seeing mountains on all sides of the playing field, Sul Ross had climbed on top. It scored two of the first three times it had the ball and then turned the work over to the reserves.

The Lobos had to punt but twice — both in the last half — and the starters came out midway in the second period.

Starting quarterback Willie Rodriguez was the leading rusher with 80 yards but 15 other Lobos carried the ball.

The opening drive, with Bravenec and Rodriguez accounting for all the yardage, Rodriguez picked up 38 yards and Bravenec 33 in the surge, with Rodriguez getting the last three on a slant off right tackle.

So by the time the Chaparrals touched the ball, they were down 7-0.

In the middle of the second quarter, with the same duo handling most of the offensive assignments, the Lobos went to work again. This time, the ground-consuming, time-killing drive went 71 yards but needed 15 plays.

After the first drive had been strictly a ground affair, the second scoring march required four passes, three of them complete.

Freshmen Lead SMU By Rice

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Freshman sensation Eric Dickerson scored three times and gained 123 yards to ignite the once pass-oriented Southern Methodist Mustangs to a runaway 35-17 victory over the Rice Owls Saturday in a Southwest Conference football opener.

Dickerson, considered Texas' No. 1 high school player last year, burst for 18 yards the first time he touched the ball and scored SMU's first two touchdowns on runs of 11 and 2 yards.

Craig James, another highly sought back recruited with Dickerson, added a 10-yard run for a touchdown that gave SMU a 21-17 lead in the third quarter after a surprising running game gave Rice an early 17-7 edge.

Rice quarterback Randy Hertel ran for 6 yards and passed 2 yards to Robert Hubble for a touchdown and Wes Hansen kicked a 46-yard field goal as the Owls opened their 10-point advantage over SMU, which went into the game a three-touchdown favorite.

But linebacker Byron Hunt intercepted Hertel at the 23 and rambled in for the touchdown on the first play of the fourth quarter to break the game open.

That gave SMU a 28-17 lead and only minutes later Dickerson broke two tackles and ran through a host of Owls en route to a 43-yard gain around left end to the 8. He darted around right end on the next play for his third touchdown.

BYU Upsets A&M

HOUSTON (AP) — Brigham Young quarterback Marc Wilson hit tight end Clay Brown with a three-yard touchdown pass and then passed two yards to Edgar Lacey on a two-point conversion with 52 seconds to play to rally the Cougars to an 18-17 upset of 14th-ranked Texas A&M Saturday.

The Aggies had taken a 17-10 lead into the final 2:43 of the game when BYU's Tim Halverson blocked a punt by David Appleby from the end zone and BYU got the ball at the Aggie 19.

Wilson, recovering from a ruptured appendix operation then went to work, completing a nine-yard pass to Lacey before the Aggies were penalized seven yards to the Aggie 2 for pass interference.

Lacey lost one yard on the next play, and Wilson then completed the touchdown pass to Brown.

A&M quarterback Mark Mosley and fullback David Brothers scored touchdowns, and Hardy kicked a 37-yard field goal to stake the Aggies to the early lead.

Brothers leaped one yard for a touchdown on A&M's second series of the game after A&M cornerback Leandrew Brown set up the drive with a fumble recovery at the Brigham Young 35.

The Cougars scored their first touchdown early in the third quarter on a 21-yard pass from Wilson to Dan Plater who sneaked behind the Aggie secondary unnoticed.

Baylor Smacks Lamar

WACO, Texas (AP) — Baylor, stung by an 80-yard touchdown run by freshman Floyd Dorsey on his first college carry, retaliated with 14 second-quarter points to defeat upstart Lamar, 20-7, Saturday night.

Mike Singletary, Baylor's All-Southwest Conference linebacker, made six consecutive tackles on a first-half series, knocked down a pass in the Baylor end zone, pressured Lamar quarterback Larry Haynes into throwing an interception, and stopped Haynes for no gain on third and one at the Baylor five-yard line.

Baylor Coach Grant Teaff inserted his second-team defense with Lamar backed up to its 20-yard line, but Dorsey broke over the right side, cut toward the left sideline and outran Baylor defenders to score with 2:23 remaining in the first quarter.

Baylor responded with a 92-yard touchdown drive two possessions later, which was climaxed by a five-yard touchdown run by freshman Mike Lively, also on his first college rushing attempt.

OSU Whips NTSU 25-7

STILLWATER, Okla. (AP) — An arm and a leg made the difference Saturday as Oklahoma State's Harold Bailey and Colin Ankerson teamed up to kick North Texas State, 25-7, in the home football opener here.

Bailey's favorite receiver was freshman Mark Cromer, who made his debut as an Oklahoma State Cowboy by catching five passes for 88 yards.

Trojan Reserve Filled Some Mighty Big Shoes

"Charlie's going to be number one when he comes back."

According to Robinson, it takes people like Hayes to win a national championship. Which incidently, the Trojans are gunning for the second straight year.

"You've got to have the good backups that can step in and play when a starter gets hurt if you hope to win it," said Robinson. "They were really pleasant surprises."

But White wasn't the only All-America that went to the sidelines with assistance. Also going down was mammoth offensive lineman Anthony Munoz. The 6-7, 280-pounder suffered strained ligaments in his left knee.

"If anyone would have told me that we'd lose White, Munoz and (defensive back Ronnie) Lott all in the same game, I'd know we'd be in deep trouble," said Robinson. "You just don't lose those kind of players without it hurting. And it hurt us."

It was the second straight season the underdog Raiders had given the top-ranked Trojans a run of their money on opening day.

"Texas Tech has an outstanding team," explained Robinson. "That has a lot to do with the closeness of the games. They come out and get after it."

Linebacker Larry McGrew, who stopped a potential Tech scoring drive when he halted running back James Hadnot on a crucial fourth-down and one play at the start of the fourth period, commented: "Tech has a fine team. But what gives us a lot of problems is that we don't have a lot of time to spend working on their tendencies. Both teams are usually pretty equal on the first night, too. Neither one has had a lot of time to practice."

ble to move and in the middle of the second quarter, Sul Ross went to work again.

With the 14-point lead, Sul Ross coach Joe George began using his reserves, and one of them, Webb Berry, got the score on a four-yard blast up the middle to cap the six-play, 46-yard stroll.

On the next possession, the Lobos went 67 steps in four plays, with a 54-yard pass from second-team quarterback Larry Hill to wide receiver Ray DeSpain starting the surge.

Mark Gibson, an alternate fullback, went the final four yards. However, the extra point try, by second team kicker William Lee went wide, leaving the Lobos in charge 27-0 at halftime.

Sul Ross contained the Chaparrals so well that they had but 19 total yards offense in the first half; Sul Ross had 287 at the mid-break.

The reserves picked up in the second half and scored on two straight possessions, as Rhonnie Lester scored both times. In the final quarter, fullback Kevin Mackey got the last TD.

So solid was the domination by the Lobos that LCC did not cross midfield until the first play of the fourth quarter. Sul Ross was in command 40-0 at that point.

The Lobos dominated both lines of scrimmage and held LCC to minus 13 yards rushing. Sul Ross amassed 482 yards total offense.

Trojans Too Much For Raiders

nitely put the game out of reach for Tech.

The touchdwn hurt but it was USC's time-consuming drive that closed the coffin on the Raiders. McDonald and the USC offense took possession with 8:39 showing on the clock and in 15 plays the Trojans ate up 7:07 and the Red Raiders only had two more chances with the football.

Fullback Marcus Allen put the Trojans on the scoreboard with 9:21 remaining in the second quarter when he piled through the heart of the Tech defense for one yard and the only touchdown of the first half. Eric Hipp tacked on the point after touchdown to give USC a 7-0 advantage.

Allen's touchdown capped a 51-yard, seven-play drive. The Red Raider defense had been able to contain USC's running attack up until the scoring drive. Allen picked up eight yards and a first down at the Tech 27-yard line and two players later broke several tackles at the line of scrimmage and dashed 19 yards to give the Trojans a first-and-goal situation at the Red Raider one-yard line.

Michael Hayes replaced White and scampered for 14 yards and a first down at the Tech 40-yard line. It appeared that Southern Cal had finally put their offensive game plan together, but a pair of McDonald incompletions brought the USC drive to a dead end.

Bad luck struck the Red Raiders when Tech defensive tackle Jim Verden got a little too anxious on his pass rush and buried USC punter David Pryor at the Tech 37. The roughing the punter penalty gave the Trojans new life. McDonald and company regained possession of the football at the Red Raider 22.

Allen went 10 yards off right tackle to the 12 and another first down. The Facing third and five from the seven McDonald rolled left to pass. Tech linebacker Jeff Copeland put a tremendous rush on McDonald and ran him out of bounds.j

The Red Raiders put their best offensive threat together following the missed field goal.

Hadnot picked up two yards on a dive and Reeves was stopped for no gain on an option keeper. On third down and eight, Reeves dropped deep and hit flanker Eddie Newsome with a 19-yard bullet to give Tech a first down at their 41.

Hadnot continued to run hard and picked up five, nine and two yards in three consecutive carries to move the Red Raiders into Southern Cal territory.

McEnroe, Tracy Austin Set For Finals

NEW YORK (AP) — Twenty-year-old John McEnroe pounded defending champion Jimmy Connors 6-3, 6-3, 7-5 Saturday to gain the final of the U.S. Open Tennis Championships.

He will meet Vitas Gerulaitis in Sunday's all-New Yorker final.

Earlier, 16-year-old Tracy Austin defeated second-seeded Martina Navratilova 7-5, 7-5 to gain the final against four-time defending champion Chris Evert Lloyd.

Gerulaitis struggled by Roscoe Tanner 3-6, 2-6, 7-6, 6-3, 6-3.

Connors, 27, will be absent from the final for the first time in six years. He won the title in 1974, '76 and '78, and was a finalist in '75 and '77.

Neither McEnroe nor Gerulaitis has been very popular with the home crowds, who seem always to side with their opponents. In McEnroe's second-round victory over Ilie Nastase, the court clown and bad boy for years, the crowd cheered for Nastase. So great was the spectators' ire when Nastase was penalized that they halted play for 15 minutes with their loud, angry protests.

The sell-out crowd seemed to favor Connors toward the McEnroe Saturday. Gerulaitis has had similar problems in his own backyard.

"For sure somebody's going to have to get some cheers," Gerulaitis said of Sunday's contest. "It would really be sad if no one applauded. If that happens after the first set, we're going to pack up and finish the match at my house."

Gerulaitis owns an estate on nearby King's Point, N.Y.

It is the first U.S. Open final for both men.

The fourth-seeded Gerulaitis seemed lost in the first two sets against Tanner, the man who had driven top-seeded Bjorn Borg out of the running with a four-set quarterfinal victory.

But the 25-year-old Gerulaitis, who is one of the fastest players in the game, picked up speed in the third set. Tanner's legendary big serve sagged badly, and Gerulaitis was making mincemeat of Tanner's second serve.

Gerulaitis' own serve became a force, and in the fourth set, Tanner won only three points against it.

The blond New Yorker won it on the first match point when Tanner's backhand cross-court was wide.

When Lloyd meets Austin today, she will be trying for an unprecedented fifth consecutive U.S. women's title.

Tanner, who also was trying to gain his first entry to the U.S. Open final, appeared on his way to an easy ride there. But after breaking Gerulaitis in the opening game of the third set, he let down. He double-faulted at break point in the next game. Tanner said that was the turning point. Thereafter, Gerulaitis' serve went to work. He won the seventh game at love with two aces.

They changed ends after that game, and rather than sit in his designated chair by the umpire, Gerulaitis toweled off sitting on the base of one of the sideline judges' seats. He repeated that tactic at most of the remaining changeovers. Tanner seemed mildly irritated by it at times.

Games went with service for the remainder of the set, Tanner forcing a tiebreaker with an ace at 15 in the 12th game.

The tiebreaker was a servers' battle. Tanner had one ace and one clean service winner. But Gerulaitis had three service winners and won the tiebreaker 7-5 when Tanner overhit his service return.

"You win a tiebreaker, and it's like a gift of a set," said Tanner. "That can be a very big momentum-changer."

The momentum changed so drastically that in the fourth set Gerulaitis won two of his four service games at love. Tanner managed one point against serve in another, and two in the other for a total of three in the set. Gerulaitis broke serve in the third game after one deuce and again in the ninth game at 15. He whipped a forehand down the line on set point.

"And it's not a bad U.S. Open," he said when his bid had ended. "Losing in the semifinals is not something to go home and kill myself about ... You can always learn something."

Despite beating Miss Navratilova, Miss Austin was not pleased with her game.

"My concentration was somewhere else," Miss Austin said after her victory. "I played really well, but I was thinking about everything else."

At which point Miss Navratilova interjected with some advice for her final against Lloyd: "Don't concentrate."

Mrs. Lloyd holds a 5-2 career edge over Austin. They are 2-2 this year. In their last meeting, Lloyd won in three sets in New Jersey two weeks ago.

Austin recalled that match, and what she has to do differently to win. "I've got to concentrate more and hit my groundstrokes really deep," she said.

Missouri Survives Scare 45-15

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP) — Gerry Ellis scored two touchdowns, Phil Bradley ran 63 yards for another and Eric Wright rambled 72 yards with an interception as No. 12 Missouri, inept throughout the first half, erupted for 45 points after the intermission and crushed San Diego State Saturday, 45-15.

The Tigers' vaunted offense managed only one first down — and that by a penalty — in the first half as the underdog Aztecs took a 13-0 lead on a 63-yard Mark Halda touchdown pass play and two Ed Corral field goals.

In the third quarter, Bradley engineered a 13-play, 81-yard scoring drive capped by Ellis' 1-yard run.

Wright's second interception of the day moments later gave the Tigers the ball on their own 48 and one play later Ellis took a swing pass from Bradley and raced 48 yards down the sideline. Jeff Brockhaus' extra point gave Missouri a 14-13 lead with 2:39 left in the quarter.

Bill Whitaker, who along with Wright tied a Missouri record with three interceptions, picked off a Halda pass early in the fourth period which Brockhaus converted into a 47-yard field goal with 12:47 remaining.

In the final seven minutes, the game collapsed for the Aztecs as the Tigers scored touchdowns on Bradley's 63-yard run, a 14-yard dash by Terry Hill, Van Darkow's recovery of a kickoff in the San Diego State end zone and Wright's 72-yard interception return.

Halda, the nation's third leading passer last year, gave the Aztecs a 7-0 lead with 10:39 left in the first period when he combined with Steve Stapler on a 63-yard touchdown pass play.

The Aztecs faced a third-and-25 from the Missouri 44 with about one minute left in the half. But an illegal procedure penalty and a "non-contact" foul brought the Aztecs to the Missouri 22 and one play later Corral's 36-yard field goal capped the first half.

Washington Huskies Steele By Wyoming 38-2

SEATTLE (AP) — Joe Steele became the greatest rusher in University of Washington football history and scored three touchdowns Saturday to lead the Huskies to a 38-2 rout over Wyoming in a college football opener.

Steele, a 6-foot-four, 210-pound tailback from Seattle, erased Husky career rushing mark set 28 years ago by the fabled Hugh McElhenny, who was on hand to witness Steele's record-breaking performance.

Steele carried the ball 19 times for 106 yards, giving him 2,503 yards in his four-year career. McElhenny's record, set from 1949 through 1951, was 2,499 yards.

Steele rushed five, two and 23 yards for Washington's first three touchdowns. He broke McElhenny's record on his 19th carry of the day early in the second half after he scored on a 23-yard run at 1:37 of the third quarter to put Washington in front 24-0.

He then was removed from the game after he received a rousing ovation from the rain-soaked crowd of 41,927.

The game was played in intermittent rain but there was only one turnover, a fumble by Wyoming halfback Jeff Brown in the second quarter that led to Washington's second-touchdown of the first half to put the Huskies in front 17-0.

Wyoming's points came on a safety at 3:59 of the fourth period when Cowboy special team member Bob Leiteit tackled Washington punt returner Paul Skansi in the end zone.

Wyoming placekicker Reamy Goodwin missed on three field goal attempts, from 39 and 45 yards out in the second quarter and from 50 yards in the third.

Washington cornerback Mark Lee recovered Brown's fumble on the Husky 38 and the Huskies went 62 yards in eight plays to take a 17-0 lead on Steele's two-yard touchdown run with 1:25 to play in the first half.

Purdue Smashes Wisconsin 41-20

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. (UPI) — Junior quarterback Mark Herrmann threw four touchdown passes Saturday, two each to Raymond Smith and Dave Young, to lead eighth-ranked Purdue to a 41-20 rout of Wisconsin in their Big Ten season opener.

Herrmann, who hopes to take the Boilermakers into the Rose Bowl, opened his bid for national honors by completing 20 of 26 passes for 291 yards and no interceptions. His four scoring strikes were just one short of the conference record shared by Iowa's Fred Riddle and Mitch Anderson of Northwestern.

Crimson Tide Rolls 30-6

ATLANTA (AP) — E.J. Junior's 59-yard touchdown run with an intercepted pass late in the first period brought Alabama to life and college football's defending national champions wore down Georgia Tech with a methodical ball-control attack en route to a 30-6 victory Saturday in the opening game for both teams.

Second-ranked Alabama's Wishbone offense finally scored when Major Ogilvie circled left end from a yard out with 11 seconds left in the first half, capping a 66-yard drive directed by second-string quarterback Don Jacobs.

The Crimson Tide wrapped it up on their first possession of the second half when Steadman Shealy — the No. 1 quarterback — took them on a 54-yard march with Steve Whitman smashing across from the 13 for a 19-0 lead.

Meanwhile, Alabama's defense — which had been something of a preseason question mark — let Georgia Tech have the ball for only seven minutes, 20 seconds of the first half and limited the Yellow Jackets to one first down and 41 total yards in that stretch.

Outside of a few drive-stalling penalties in the early going and a couple of botched conversion attempts, the Crimson Tide did little wrong in providing Coach Bear Bryant with his 285th career triumph — 29 short of Amos Alonzo Stagg's all-time college record.

Shealy, a slippery senior who sat out the entire second period, needed just 3:34 to orchestrate an 11-play, 91-yard strike which he climaxed by scoring on an 11-yard scamper. In the drive which began after Alabama stopped Georgia Tech on fourth down at the Crimson Tide 9-yard line, Shealy carried five times for 39 yards and completed all three passes he attempted for 37 more.

Alan McElroy's 31-yard field goal with 2:01 remaining in the game ended the Alabama scoring as one of the nation's top rivalries resumed after a 15-year lapse. Georgia Tech's only points came on a 36-yard pass from sophomore quarterback Mike Kelley to Leon Chadwick with 12 seconds left.

Two penalties and an interception by Georgia Tech's Lawrence Lowe at the loser's 4-yard line halted one early Alabama threat and the crowd of 57,621 roared its enthusiasm when Kelley tied a school record for the longest punt with an 80-yard quick-kick to the Alabama 12.

Alabama's first possession of the second quarter died when McElroy missed a 42-yard field goal, but the Tide rolled 66 yards on its next series to take a 12-0 lead just before halftime.

The drive included a 16-yard run by impressive sophomore Mark Nix, a 13-yard pass from Jacobs to Tim Travis and an 18-yard dash by Ogilvie.

Shealy kept the momentum going with a 15-yard run on Alabama's first play of the third period, triggering a 54-yard drive in seven plays.

Georgia Tech's only serious threat before its late touchdown featured Kelley's passing and moved the Yellow Jackets from their 21 to the Alabama 9, where the Tide held midway through the third period.

Alabama replied with a 91-yard march, with Shealy passing 17 yards and 12 yards to Keith Pugh and then covering the last 26 yards himself on two keepers.

Tarheels Stomp Neighbor 28-0

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Amos Lawrence ran for 134 yards and two touchdowns and North Carolina's defense throttled South Carolina as the Tar Heels shutout the Gamecocks 28-0 Saturday in the first game of the football season for both teams.

Coach Dick Crum's Tar Heels palyed consistently on offense and defense and kept South Carolina on its own end of the field for most of the game, which was played before a sell-out crowd of 49,500 at Kenan Stadium.

After a scoreless first period, Lawrence scored on a 29-yard run with 9:31 remaining in the first half. He took a hand-off from quarterback Matt Kupec, started left and cut back beyond the line of scrimmage to go in untouched. The six play drive covered 40 yards.

Later in the half Kupec began mixing passes to Doug Paschal with the runs of Lawrence to take command of the game.

Lawrence's second score capped a 63-yard drive when he swept in from the five-yard line with just 1:06 remaining in the half. Lawrence ran for 26 yards to start the march, and the Paschal ran for 18 and caught passes of eight and six yards before Lawrence's touchdown run.

Maryland Terps Edge Tough Villanova 24-20

The underdog Wildcats, who converted three second-quarter Maryland mistakes to score 17 points, took a 20-17 lead on Chuck Bushbeck's second field goal of the game, a 34-yarder, with 6:39 left to play.

A 28-yard punt return by Sam Johnson, whose 34-yarder set up Maryland's first TD, put the Terps in position for their winning drive which started on the Villanova 46.

Mike Tice completed a 14-yard pass to Eric Sievers and a 25-yarder to Mike Lewis on a third-down play before Wysocki scored from three yards out. The tailback, who gained 161 yards on 32 carries, scored earlier on runs of 10 and five yards.

Villanova took a 17-10 halftime lead, scoring on a 17-yard pass from Pat O'Brien to Willie Sydnor, a one-yard run by Spencer Prescott and Bushbeck's 45-yard field goal.

A fumble recovery by defensive end Tom Jensen, an interception by linebacker Anthony Griggs and a fumble recovery on a kickoff by linebacker Tommy Fitzpatrick set up the Villanova scores for a 17-7 lead. Maryland cut the halftime margin on a 28-yard field goal by Dale Castro one second before intermission.

Clemson Bops Furman 21-0

CLEMSON, S.C. (AP) — Tailback Lester Brown played little more than a quarter of Saturday's game, but rushed for 101 yards and two touchdowns to lead Clemson to a 21-0 victory over Furman.

It was the first regular season victory ever for Clemson head coach Danny Ford, who had guided the Tigers to a 17-15 decision over Ohio State in his coaching debut at last year's Gator Bowl game.

Brown, a senior wo gained ore than 1,000 yards for the Tigers last year, broke loose on scoring runs of 19 and 44 yards before leaving the game early in the second quarter because of dehydration.

The non-conference victory, played in 80-degree weather, extended Clemson's two-season winning streak to 11 games, longest in the nation for a major college football team.

With his two touchdowns, Brown extended a streak of his own. He has now scored touchdowns in 10 straight regular season games. A year ago Brown was second in the nation with 17 touchdowns.

Clemson got its final score of the day on an 81-yard pass play from quarterback Billy Lott to flanker Perry Tuttle early in the fourth quarter.

Temple Buries West Virginia

MORGANTOWN, W.Va. (AP) — Brian Broomell threw for two touchdowns and 212 yards Saturday as Temple blew open a tight game with 24 points in the third quarter en route to a 38-16 rout of West Virginia.

Mark Bright ran for two other touchdowns as the Owls, 1-0, converted four West Virginia turnovers into scores and handed the Mountaineers, 0-1, their 15th loss in their last 18 games.

With Temple leading 7-3, Broomell threw a 14-yard scoring pass to wide receiver Gerald Lucear on the fifth play of the second half to give the Owls a 14-3 lead. The touchdown followed a fumble by West Virginia's Dane Conwell on the second-half kickoff.

A 45-yard pass from Broomell to Lucear set up the Owl's first touchdown, a 10-yard run by Bright early in the second quarter that followed a fumble by West Virginia's Eldridge Dixon.

Another fumble by the Mountaineers' Robert Alexander set up Bright's second touchdown, an eight-yard run midway through the third quarter that gave Temple a 21-3 lead.

Trio Sparkles In Panther Win

FORT STOCKTON (Special) -Fullback Brad Johnson, halfback Billy Ray Gordon and quarterback Robbie Robertson each scored a touchdown Friday night to lead the Fort Stockton Panthers to a 20-0 blanking of the Canutillo Eagles in the 1979 season opener for both squads.

Johnson broke a scoreless tie with less than three minutes to play in the second quarter when he crossed the goal line from 1 yard out. The point after touchdown attempt was no good.

The Panthers increased their lead to 12-0 in the third quarter when Gordon capped an 85-yard drive with a 19-yard run. Again the PAT was no good.

Michigan Starts '79 Season With Bang

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — Michigan quarterback B.J. Dickey ran for two touchdowns and passed for another as the Wolverines overwhelmed Northwestern 49-7 in the season's first football game for both Big Ten foes Saturday.

Michigan tailback Butch Woolfolk had a pair of touchdowns on runs of one and three yards respectively, while Wolverine freshman wide receiver Anthony Carter also scored a pair of touchdowns — one on a 78-yard punt return.

Michigan dominated the entire game and led 35-0 at the half. The Wolverines had mostly reserves on the field and led 49-0 when Northwestern tailback Dave Mishler dove over from the one-yard line early in the fourth quarter for the Wildcats' only score.

On Michigan's first possession, Dickey marched the Wolverines 46 yards in five plays — including a 15-yard pass to Doug Marsh — and completed the drive himself by darting inside right end for the touchdown.

With 3:30 left in the first period, Dickey capped a nine-play, 81-yard Michigan drive by drilling a nine-yard pass to tight end Norm Betts in the end zone.

Carter scored on a 12-yard pass from backup quarterback John Wangler in the third quarter.

Midway through the second period, Michigan needed only two plays to strike 57 yards for its fourth touchdown. Dickey hit wide receiver Ralph Clayton for 22 yards to the Northwestern 35-yard line. Then Dickey, a 5-11, 188-pound junior from Ottawa, Ohio, faked a pitchback and rolled right down the sideline for the touchdown.

Bryan Virgil, a senior placekicker from Buchanan, made good on all seven Michigan conversion attempts. Virgil also punted twice for a 41-yard average.

Wangler, who is considered a better passer than Dickey, went to the air quickly in the third quarter, hitting Marsh for gains of 20 and 11 yards during a 10-play, 78-yard drive that culminated with Woolfolk's second touchdown.

On the Wolverines' final touchdown drive, late in the third quarter, Wangler hit fullback Lawrence Reid for 18 and Marsh for six before finding Carter streaking across the end zone for a 12-yard touchdown.

The Wolverines got off 67 offensive plays for 487 net yards, while Northwestern managed only 189 net yards in 50 snaps. Michigan rolled up 25 first downs to 13 for the Wildcats.

Buckeyes Whip Syracuse 31-8

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Sophomore quarterback Art Schlichter passed for one touchdown and accounted for 172 total yards Saturday in Ohio State's 31-8 college football opener over Syracuse, making Earle Bruce a winner in his first game as Woody Hayes' successor.

Schlichter, atoning for a five-interception performance in an opening loss to Penn State last year, threw an 11-yard scoring strike to end Ron Barwig, completed eight of 16 passes for 81 yards and ran 15 times for 91 more.

The Buckeyes, playing before their 64th straight home sellout, more than 86,000, breezed into a 21-0 halftime lead and were never threatened by the Orangemen, a two-touchdown underdog.

After Schlichter passed to Barwig, fullback Paul Campbell ran three yards and tailback Calvin Murray two yards for Ohio State touchdowns in the first half.

Vlade Janakievski booted a 22-yard field goal in the third quarter and reserve tailback Jim Gayle bolted 29 yards for a touchdown in the final quarter for the Buckeyes, playing without Hayes for the first time in 29 seasons. Hayes was fired after slugging a Clemson player in the Gator Bowl in December.

Syracuse's lone touchdown came on quarterback Bill Hurley's three-yard run late in the third quarter. The drive was aided by two costly Ohio State penalties.

Ohio State started poorly, Schlichter fumbling away the ball at the Syracuse 14-yard line and blunting the Buckeyes' drive with the opening kickoff. Linebacker Mike Zunic recovered for the Orangemen.

However, Schlichter came right back and led the Big Ten Conference team on scoring drives four of its next five possessions.

Meanwhile, an Ohio State defense that surrendered a school record 216 points in Hayes' final season, overpowered a veteran Syracuse offense.

The Orangemen either punted or lost the ball on a fumble in all five of their first half possessions.

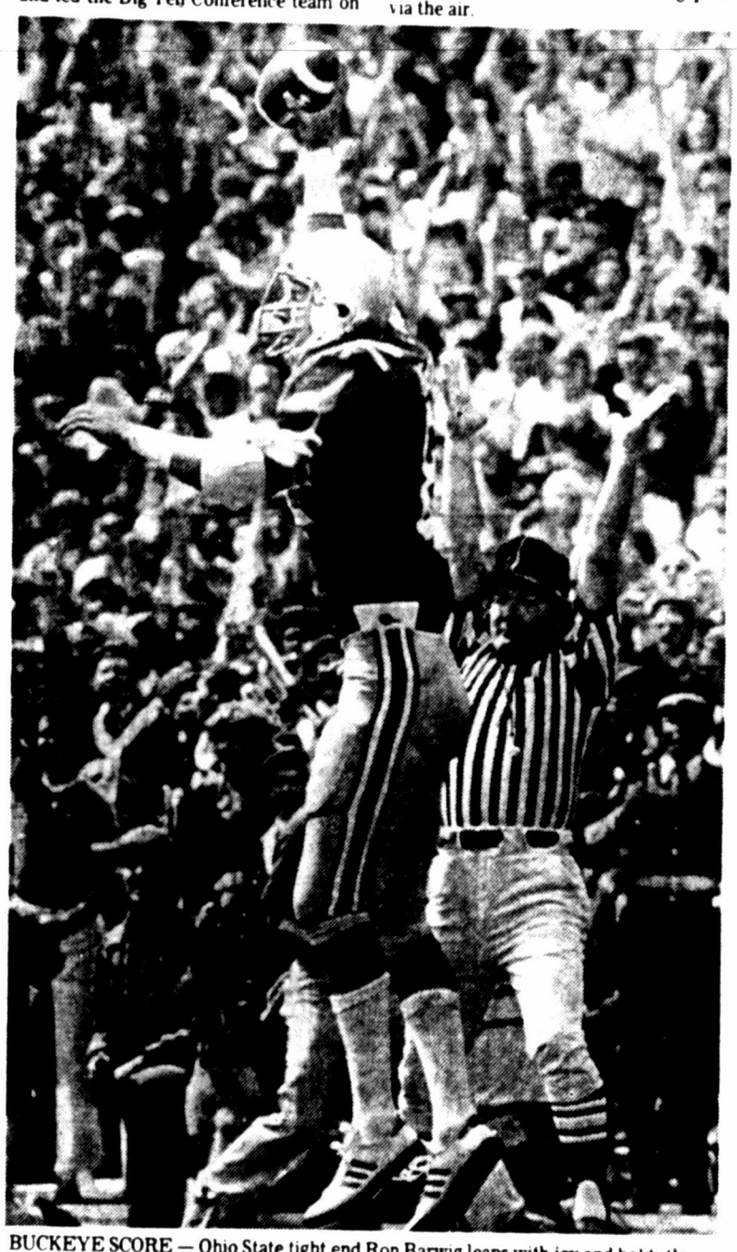

Linemen Luther Henson and Gary Dulin, linebackers Keith Ferguson and freshman Mark Marek combined with the Buckeye's veteran secondary to shut off Syracuse.

Hurley, granted a fifth year of eligibility because of a 1978 injury, completed 10 of 20 passes for 158 yards. However, he failed to produce a scoring pass via the air.

Spartans Lash Illinois 33-16

EAST LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Swedish sidewinder Morten Andersen kicked four field goals and Bert Vaughn threw for two touchdowns Saturday as Michigan State swamped Illinois 33-16 in a Big Ten football opener.

Andersen's three-pointers included a 52-yard strike on the last play of the first half which gave the heavily favored Spartans their first lead of the game, 13-10.

Vaughn, starting for only the second time, threw a 32-yard touchdown pass to Samson Howard late in the first half and hit Mark Jones for a score from 29 yards out in the final quarter.

Tailback Mike Holmes scored both Illini touchdowns, one on a 75-yard scamper in the second quarter and the other on a 2-yard plunge in the fourth.

Andersen, who attended high school in Indianapolis on a foreign exchange program, had a 45-yard field goal in the first quarter, a 22-yarder in the third and a 19-yarder in the fourth.

Indiana Nips Iowa 30-26

Johnson's score was his third of the day and capped a four-touchdown second half outburst that brought Indiana back from a 26-3 halftime deficit, spoiling the debut of Iowa Coach Hayden Fry.

The come-from-behind victory also soured an outstanding performance by Iowa tailback Dennis Mosley, who tied a school record by scoring four touchdowns and rushed for 142 yards.

Indiana struck for the winning touchdown after Steve Straub missed a 22-yard field goal attempt tha would hae tied the score with 2:41 left. Iowa had to punt after the miss and on Indiana's first play, Clifford dumped a short pass to Johnson in the left flat and he raced untouched down the sideline for the winning score.

Rebels Suffer 26-0 Loss To Midland

MIDLAND (Special) — The Midland Bulldogs, playing on home turf their first outing, shot down the Tascosa Rebels 26-0 in a non-district game.

The Bulldogs first score came in the first quarter when quarterback Mike Feldt broke loose for a 38-yard TD run. The extra point by Bobby Stovall was good to make the score 7-0.

In the second quarter, Bulldog tight end Bill Young grabbed a Feldt pass and went over from 8 yards out.

Giants Knock Astros Out Of First, 2-1

By The Associated Press

John LeMaster's two-run, inside-the-park homer in the eighth inning gave the San Francisco Giants a 2-1 victory over Houston and knocked the Astros out of first place in the National League's West Division.

The loss, coupled with Cincinnati's 4-1 victory over the Los Angeles Dodgers, put the Reds in the West lead by one-half game.

Houston starter Joe Niekro, who walked Larry Herndon to start the eighth inning, was lifted for Joe Sambito with one out.

The reliever struck out pinch-hitter Willie McCovey but LeMaster followed with a line drive down the left field line. Jose Cruz fell just as he reached the ball, which rolled to the wall, allowing both runners to score.

Cesar Cedeno's fifth-inning single drove in the Houston run.

Pitcher Doc Medich notched his eighth win, Jim Sundberg collected four hits and Pat Putnam slammed a solo homer to lift the Texas Rangers to a 6-2 victory over the Minnesota Twins.

Reds 4, Dodgers 1

Cincinnati scored four unearned runs in the fifth inning on a pair of Los Angeles errors and RBI singles by Dave Concepcion and George Foster as the Reds defeated the Dodgers 4-1.

Mets 3, Pirates 2

John Stearns singled home Lee Mazzilli from third base in the 15th inning to give the New York Mets a 3-2 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Mazzilli led off the 15th with a double against Jim Rooker, 3-7, the sixth of seven Pittsburgh pitchers. Mazzilli advanced to third on an infield out and held as pinch-hitter Kelvin Chapman popped out for the second out.

Expos 7, Cardinals 2

Tony Perez drove in three runs with a sacrifice fly and a two-run double and Bill Lee hurled a nine-hitter as the Montreal Expos defeated the St. Louis Cardinals 7-2 and moved to within one game of Pittsburgh in the National League East.

Orioles 3, Red Sox 2

Ken Singleton smacked four hits and drove in a run as Mike Flanagan became the major league's first 21-game winner with relief help as the Baltimore Orioles edged the Boston Red Sox 3-2.

Phillies 9, Cubs 8

Greg Luzinski's tie-breaking single in the eighth inning scored Pete Rose from second base and gave the Philadelphia Phillies an uphill 9-8 victory over the Chicago Cubs.

Rose singled with one out, took second as Mike Schmidt grounded out and scored on Luzinski's single off loser Bruce Sutter, 4-5. Rawley Eastwick, 3-4, was the winner.

Yankees 5, Tigers 1

Reggie Jackson and Bobby Murcer each rapped run-scoring doubles to help Ron Guidry post his 10th straight victory as the New York Yankees shaded the Detroit Tigers 5-4.

Jackson doubled home the Yankees' first run in the opening inning off Tiger starter Jack Morris, 13-7.

AFC Title Playoff Rematch Set Today

"You've got to go through Pittsburgh to get to Pasadena. No way you can get there without going through Pittsburgh," said Phillips, whose team plays the Steelers in their home opener here today.

Last season, the Oilers earned a wild-card playoff spot after finishing second to Pittsburgh in the Central Division of the American Football Conference.

But Houston's road to Super Bowl XIII stopped here with a 34-5 loss to Pittsburgh in the AFC title game, played in steady, freezing rain that contributed to a record playoff total of 12 fumbles by both sides.

Before that game, Phillips and Oiler quarterback Dan Pastorini gave a cowboy hat to Steeler quarterback Terry Bradshaw as a token of friendship.

Bradshaw responded by completing 11 of 19 passes despite the harsh conditions. Will Phillips bring him a gift this weekend?

"The heck with Bradshaw. The last time I brought him a hat he treated me bad," Phillips said by phone this week from Houston.

"No," he added with a chuckle. "I'll probably bring him something. He's a good kid. I'll tell you they've got some good boys. I'd be real proud to have a lot of their players on our football team."

Last week, Pittsburgh and Houston opened their seasons with comeback road victories.

The Steelers, who played without five injured starters, earned the victory against an inspired, contending Patriot team. And Coach Chuck Noll was especially pleased.

Noll has a 13-4 career coaching record against Houston, but the Oilers and Steelers have split their regular season games the past two years.

Last season, the Oilers won 24-17 in Pittsburgh, and the Steelers followed with a 13-3 victory in the Astrodome.

The Oilers are the only AFC Central Division team ever to win at Three Rivers Stadium. They did it in 1974 and again last year.

In three games against Pittsburgh, Campbell has rushed for 192 yards on 50 carries for a 3.8-yard average. In 13 games against Houston, Steeler fullback Franco Harris has rushed for 951 yards on 230 carries for a 4.1-yard average.

Dallas, 49'ers Vary Objectives

By ERIC PREWITT
AP Sports Writer

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys, whose goal is to reach the Super Bowl a third straight time, go up against the San Francisco 49'ers, a team thinking more about first downs, on weekend No. 2 of the National Football League season.

It's probably the best time to run into a team like Dallas, Coach Bill Walsh of the 49'ers noted, as he prepared for today's home opener.

"Later in the season is when the better teams generally are at their strongest and win more than their share," Walsh said. "Every year in the NFL, you see upsets that stun people. We're not going to take ourselves out of that category."

Against Dallas, the 49'ers will be using O.J. Simpson, second-leading rusher in NFL history, for the first time this season. But the Cowboys' Tony Dorsett also is ready to play behind much more highly-regarded blockers than Simpson's.

Coach Tom Landry's Cowboys have one victory behind them but barely avoided being upset last weekend. They beat the St. Louis Cardinals 22-21 when Rafael Septien's field goal attempt with 1:16 remaining glanced off an upright and through for three points.

The 49'ers, a 2-14 team last season under two since-departed head coaches, were within a few seconds of winning for Walsh last week. But a controversial late touchdown by Minnesota's Ahmad Rashad made the Vikings 28-22 winners.

"I just didn't involve myself in that," Walsh said, of the follow-up controversy over whether Rashad fumbled before crossing the goal line. "As soon as I got a good night's sleep — and, believe it or not, it was that night — I put all my thoughts on Dallas."

Walsh's thoughts are on such problems as defending against quarterback Roger Staubach, who opened the season with a 269-yard passing day, and running backs Dorsett, Robert Newhouse and rookie Ron Springs. Dorsett has recovered from a broken toe; Newhouse is coming off of a 108-yard rushing performance against St. Louis, but suffered a sprained ankle.

"There is a chance we'll move Springs to fullback," Landry said of the former Ohio State player who ran for 30 yards and threw a 30-yard touchdown pass in his first NFL game.

Staubach didn't throw for any touchdowns last week but two of his 20 completions were for more than 40 yards. San Francisco quarterback Steve DeBerg completed 29 passes, but 19 were to running backs.

"We'd like to throw long, but we'll probably continue to throw 15 to 20 passes a game to our running backs and we make no apologies," Walsh said. "We're seeking to make first downs."

Vermeil Not After Revenge

The Falcons beat the Eagles 14-13 in the first round of last year's NFL playoffs, scoring twice in the final period to erase a 13-0 deficit. Some Eagles haven't forgotton.

"Revenge is the worst thing a team or a coaching staff can think about," said Vermeil. "The worst thing you can do is think about last year."

Vermeil said revenge is the poorest motivation possible.

"It's artificial," added the Eagles coach.

"We're better this year and what I want is sincere motivation, the desire to do better. We should play as hard in practice as we do against Atlanta. You play hard against everybody," Vermeil said.

Bennett said there will be a lot of similarities in the atmosphere in Philadelphia that his team faced in its 40-34 overtime triumph over New Orleans.

"Playing at New Orleans was an excellent prep for Philadelphia," Bennett said. "We'll have to deal with a boisterous crowd and a team trying to settle a score ... We expect to have our hands full."

The Eagles, who scored 23 points in the second period of their opener with the New York Giants and held on for 23-17 triumph, are expecting a defensive struggle. Vermeil does not want to get into a scoring duel with the explosive Atlanta team.

The Eagles plan to go with Ron Jaworski at quarterback, throwing to wide receivers Harold Carmichael and Charley Smith, plus the backs. Wilbert Montgomery is Vermeil's bread-and-butter running back, aided by Billy Campfield. Larry Barnes should open at fullback, but Leroy Harris, a late acquisition from Miami, is ready to back up Barnes.

The Eagles' defense is keyed by linebackers Bill Bergey, John Bunting, Reggie Wilkes and Frank LeMaster, and defensive end Carl Hairston.

Old Roomates Head Battle Today

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — It's not an unfamiliar sight for a running back named O.J. to adorn the top of the National Football League rushing list.

And after one week O.J. is on top again, only this time it's St. Louis Cardinals rookie Ottis "O.J." Anderson and not the O.J. that's gained more yardage running through airports than on the football field the last couple of seasons.

Anderson was simply spectacular in his debut in St. Louis' 22-21 loss to Dallas last week. The Miami, Fla., rookie gained 193 yards on 21 carries, including a 76-yard touchdown burst.

The only drawback in opening in such grand style is what do you do for an encore. Anderson will get a chance to provide the answer Sunday in Giants Stadium when the Cardinals face the New York Giants, who dropped a 23-17 decision to Philadelphia in their season premiere.

Giants Coach Ray Perkins knows all about Anderson. The Giants scouted the 6-foot-1, 210-pound halfback heavily but decided to pass on him in favor of making a future investment in quarterback Phil Simms.

"Anderson is already making a good head start for rookie of the year," Perkins said. "He has the ability to be a reat runnng back, not just a good one."

And ironically, watching films of Anderson brought his running mate the Giants attention. Ken Johnson, New York's 11th round pick who was Anderson's blocking back, roommate and best friend in college, is now the Giants starting fullback.

The Cardinals offense, however, is a lot more than just the O.J. Anderson Show. Receiver Mel Gray usually reserves his most prolific performances for the Giants while quarterback Jim Hart has been a long-time New York nemesis.

"We've got to stop Hart, Gray and Anderson," Perkins said.

AAAA Powers Take Beating

By The Associated Press

Terry Orr crashed over for two touchdowns and quarterback Larry Dycus threw for two others as top-ranked Class 4A Abilene Cooper thrashed Brownwood, the No. 1 Class 3A squad, 50-14, in a bout between schoolboy heavyweights Friday night.

Orr scored on runs of two and five yards and Dycus connected on touchdown aerials of 58 and 30 yards. Brownwood, which trailed 29-0 at the half, managed only two fourth-quarter consolation touchdowns.

Michael Brown dashed for 184 yards and two touchdowns to lead fifth-ranked Lake Highlands to a 19-7 victory over No. 4 Dallas White in the only clash Thursday night between top-ranked 4A teams.

Unranked San Antonio Roosevelt walloped ninth-rated San Antonio Jay 54-21. Emmett Johnson rambled for four touchdowns — including an 85-yard scoring run — and collected 207 yards on the ground.

Plainview, rated No. 8, fell to Lubbock Estacado, ranked seventh in Class 3A, 13-7.

Seventh-ranked Houston Kashmere — relying on Kenneth Clay's two touchdown passes — overcame six lost fumbles to salvage a 14-8 win over unheralded Houston Wheatley.

In other Class 4A action No. 3 Seguin edged Austin Travis, 16-14 and 10th-ranked Plano defeated South Garland 14-7. Houston Stratford, No. 6, did not play.

Tony Brooks and Dino Kammer each rushed for touchdowns as tenth-rated Paris eked out a 15-14 upset victory over McKinney.

Tuloso-Midway, ranked No. 8, lost to Corpus Christi Carroll 25-20 and No. 9 Synder was shutout by Midland Lee 13-0.

Third-ranked Jasper beat Henderson, 27-7. Bay City, rated No. 4, edged surprising Houston St. Thomas, 7-0. No. 6 Kerrville bombed Lampasas, 43-0 and seventh-rated Beaumont Hebert downed Port Arthur Lincoln 25-6.

No Respect For Reds' Collins

CINCINNATI (AP) — If you think Rodney Dangerfield doesn't get much respect, listen to Dave Collins, hitting .327 for the pennant-contending Cincinnati Reds.

"When I was traded to the Reds a couple of years ago, (Reds' President) Dick Wagner told me to call Sparky Anderson and introduce myself," Collins recalled this week.

"So I called him and said 'Sparky, this is Dave Collins. How you doing?'"

"Oh hi, Douggie, good to talk to you," Anderson said, according to Collins.

"The papers in Cincinnati called me Doug for a while, too. I couldn't believe it," Collins said.

It should be ending because Collins, with the highest average of the heavy-hitting Reds, has started the last 48 games and played regularly since early June.

But the identity crisis, which Collins said he hopes he has shaken, is still there. A San Francisco writer on deadline Wednesday yelled in the press box, "What's Collins' first name? Doug?"

"Last year, they could know me as Doug," he said. In 1978, Collins batted 102 times and hit only .216. "This year, I'm Dave Collins and I know who I am. I'm not a superstar. I just do my job the best I can."

Collins, a Rapid City, S.D., native who coaches basketball in Anaheim, Calif., in the off-season, had unsuccessful flings with California and Seattle in the American League. In his one starting season with the Mariners in 1977, he hit only .239.

"I started out terrible. By the end of May I was hitting something like .130. I just didn't hit well in the (King) Dome.

"I feel like now I'm just coming into my own. I've always believed my day would come. Though it came this year under unfortunate circumstances, I'm still glad it came," he said.

Collins entered the starting lineup mainly because of injuries to slugging outfielders George Foster and Ken Griffey. Collins has taken the right field slot now for Griffey, out for the year after knee surgery.

He credits his success with playing every day, taking two ounces off his bat weight this year (Anderson told him he could spray the ball better with a heavy bat), and hypnotism.

"They (the news media) were blowing that up," Collins said of the hypnotism, which he began undergoing in the off-season under the guidance of a California acquaintance. "It's helped me get some confidence, some peace of mind, but I'm a good hitter.

"People say to me, 'You must be getting a lot of breaks.' Well, you have to have some breaks to hit .330, but you have to be a good hitter too. There's no switch hitter in either league hitting more than .320 except me.

"I feel I'm going to hit .300 the rest of my career. Pete Rose said to me a couple weeks ago, 'If you played every day, you could have won the batting title this year.' That made me feel good inside."

Cleveland Fans Get Best of Outfielder

CLEVELAND (AP) — Cleveland Indians' hard-hitting outfielder Bobby Bonds bemoans, "This is my most miserable year in baseball, a year I will try to forget as soon as possible."

The 33-year-old, 11-year veteran of six major league teams claims Cleveland fans have declared war on him and are winning.

"They want to prove a point — that they hate me. They've proven it," Bonds said after Friday night's come-from-behind 9-8 victory over the Toronto Blue Jays.

Manager Dave Garcia removed Bonds in the eighth inning because of abuse directed at the right fielder from the stands.

"This is by far my toughest year in baseball. I've been called everything but white," said Bonds, who is black. "I'd like to go into the stands after them, but I know I won't."

Bonds says he does not want to play outfield again this season, but probably will. "I wish we could play every game on the road, but that would be unfair to the rest of the guys," he added.

He has yet to sign a contract with the Indians for 1980.

Bonds, hitting .279, says his batting has been affected by a cyst on the inside of the bridge of his nose next to his left eye. And he says the heckling he gets in the outfield "bothers me mentally."

Bonds added: "I've been trying to hard not to do anything wrong and it's causing me to do a lot of things wrong. I'm playing lousy."

And as Bonds poured out his feelings of rejection, he added: "I said I was willing to accept ridicule. Now they hate me. They've said virtually everything they can say.

"Nobody likes to be a hated individual. I happen to be one. I hear kids say the things they've learned from their parents, who have the audacity to teach kids stupid mistakes. It doesn't take a genius to act like a moron, it takes a moron."

Claude Edges Tigers, 10-8

CLAUDE (Special) — The Claude Mustangs began their season on the right foot Friday, but just barely, by nosing the Groom Tigers 10 to 8 on a 4th quarter field goal.

The Mustangs scored first on a 73 yard touchdown pass from quarterback Lee Brown to fleet receiver Nat McElroy. Mike Weatherly added the extra point.

Groom roared back when fullback Dwayne Weller took the 2nd half kickoff and raced 70 yards for a score. Weller, who rushed for 59 yards from scrimmage as well, also scored the two-point conversion to give the Tigers a temporary lead.

Mike Weatherly chipped in a 27 yard field goal in the final stanza to win the game that Claude dominated. The home team recorded 239 total yards to Groom's 95.

Oregon Spoils Fairbanks' Debut

BOULDER, Colo. (AP) — Junior quarterback Reggie Ogburn ran for 108 yards and passed for 168 more, leading a versatile Oregon offense to a 33-19 upset of Colorado in a college football opener Saturday.

The loss spoiled the Colorado debut of Coach Chuck Fairbanks, who returned to the college ranks after six years with the New England Patriots.

Ogburn, a junior college transfer who was playing in his first game for the Ducks, fired a 28-yard touchdown pass to split end Rick Ward in the second quarter to give Oregon a 16-9 lead.

White Pelican Project Seeks To Paint, Protect

AUSTIN (Special) — It's not easy being a pelican.

After being parodied for centuries in verse and cartoon because of their prodigious lower beak, now they are bing sprayed yellow and adorned with green wig streamers.

Actually, only 50 white pelicans have been subjected to this treatment, and it's being done for the birds' welfare.

Texas Parks and Wildlife Department biologists marked the fledgling birds to start a five-year study designed to track the movements of the state's only resident nesting colony of white pelicans.

The colony nests each spring on South Bird Island about 12 miles south of Corpus Cristi, within both the Padre Island National Seashore and a National Audubon Society bird sanctuary.

The colony is the only one in North America utilizing coastal saltwater habitat for nesting, according to biologist John Smith of Rockport.

Smith said only about 200 breeding pairs of white pelicans nest on South Bird Island, and their fall and winter movements have been a mystery in the past because they mingle with populations which nest in the Northern U.S. and spend the summer on the Texas Gulf Coast.

Cooperating with the department in the marking and banding study are the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, Padre Island National Seashore, the National Audubon Society, Corpus Christi State Unviersity and the Welder Wildlife Foundation.

Persons sighting any of the yellow-dyed pelicans are asked to contact William C. Brownlee, Texas Parks and Wildlife Department, 4200 Smith School Road, Austin, Texas 78744. The information needed includes date of sighting, number of color-marked birds observed, location, presence and condition of green wing-streamers, activity and health of marked birds, number of other pelicans seen with marked birds, and the observer's name and address.

Bass, Crappie Highlight Fish Availability List

Buffalo Springs Lake — Martha Nix hauled in a 9-pound channel catfish near the dam as proof that the channels are still biting. Barnie Greenfield at the bait-concession store recommends the rocky area near the dam for anglers looking for channels. Greenfield said, "I'd cast about 15 or 20 yards from the shore with stink bait or live minnows. The bait should go deep to about a foot from the bottom." Bass weighing up to 2 1/2-pounds are being caught. Crappie action has been slow, although a few crappie of good size have been caught. Perch are going for worms in all areas of the lake. The lake is in good condition.

Oak Creek Lake — Fishing for all species has been generally slow, prompting Ike Pate at Sportsman's Lodge to predict that the lake may be ready for a full "turn over." Fish attractor reefs composed of old auto tires will be placed in the lake today. Pate said, "The reefs will be marked for easy identification, and will give newcomers and people who can't fish often enough to know the lake more fishing and less hunting time." The TP&WD, the City of Sweetwater, the Sweetwater Bass Club, and several individuals have worked on the reef project.

White River Lake — Ricky Tarbet of Lubbock, along with Allen, Terry and George Luedtke of Paducah used plastic worms to bring in six bass weighing over 22-pounds. Crappie action seems to be picking up with some of the fish weighing as much as one pound. The best crappie action is presently near the Sand Creek arm of the lake. Charles King at the marina had a report of a 3 1/2 pound walleye being caught. The walleye angler used a Hellbender plug running deep near the dam. Channel cat reports are remaining constant with several large catches. The lake is in excellent condition.

Lake Whitney — Striper fishing is still good, with active black bass and crappie reports on most areas of the lake. The lake level is four feet below normal and the water temperature is 76 degrees.

STAUBACH'S ARM SORE

DALLAS (AP) — Quarterback Roger Staubach of the Dallas Cowboys did not throw in practice Friday because of a sore elbow, the National Football League club announced.

Staubach will not throw again until warmup before the Cowboys' game with San Francisco Sunday, a spokesman said.

He will continue to practice and is scheduled to play against the 49ers. The spokesman said the soreness was due to tendinitis, also called tennis elbow.

Hunted Doves Plentiful

Hunters during the first week of dove season reported that mourning doves were plentiful on the plains around Lubbock, but the birds were scattered. The mixed situation is the result of a good supply of water holes and green plants.

Weldon Fromm, TP&WD regional law enforcement supervisor stationed in Lubbock, noted that dove hunting is good east of the Caprock where grain is ripe. Fromm said the birds will be concentrated in pockets near ripe sunflowers and possibly in low wheatstubble.

Charlie Rivers, president of Farmer's Exchange, found excellent hunting the first day of the season a few miles northeast of Post. Rivers and four other hunters limited out in 15 minutes. However, it took two hours to limit out the following Monday in the same area. Half of the bagged birds were considered to be small in size, while half of the downed birds were termed big.

Evaluating future hunting prospects, Rivers said, "I think it's going to be a very good quail season. We heard quail chirping from every direction."

McEnroe Upset With Selection

NEW YORK (AP) — John McEnroe and Peter Fleming won the men's doubles title Friday at the U.S. Open tennis championships, then criticized Davis Cup Captain Tony Trabert for not selecting them to compete against Argentina next week.

Earlier this week, Trabert picked the team of Bob Lutz and Stan Smith to represent the United States in doubles. McEnroe and Fleming beat Lutz and Smith in the Open final 6-2, 6-4.

"Smith and Lutz were a great doubles team, but I don't think they're a great doubles team anymore. They're as old as my parents," said McEnroe, who was named along with Vitas Gerulaitis to play singles against Argentina's Guillermo Vilas and Jose Luis Clerc. Smith and Lutz are both 32, while McEnroe is 20 and Fleming 24.

"I'm not going to go to Tony Trabert and beg him to let me play," said Fleming. "The guy never once has gotten in touch with me, not even to phone me up. I think he owes me the courtesy of explaining his way out of it."

One reason Trabert chose Smith and Lutz is that they have never lost a Davis Cup doubles match together.

Grooming, Poise Keys To Job Interview

By JACQUE HUTCHINS
Family News Staff

A job interview can turn a reasonably sane person into a paranoid schizophrenic within minutes. Suddenly you're being tortured with no means of escape.

But not to worry. There are some do's and don'ts for women to follow to ensure a successful job interview.

Zelma Ball, co-owner of Professional Placement Service of Lubbock, said the key is to be well-groomed and to have a pleasant look on your face — it doesn't have to be a big smile. Sam R. Harper, Texas Employment Commission (TEC) counselor, agreed with this, and added that an employer has in mind what kind of person he wants — what that person should look like.

"The employer gets his first impression of you from your appearance. You have got to sell yourself, especially in the first few minutes of the interview," said Miss Ball, "because it is during this time that the employer makes up his mind." She added that selling yourself makes the difference in job salary. If an employer is impressed enough he will meet your demands.

You do not have to be expensively dressed to make a good impression. "You shouldn't wear a $500 dress to an interview if the job pays only $600. You don't want to be flashy," said Miss Ball.

Remember also to take yourself seriously and be confident but not too confident. As Harper said, "You can be too right and seem to know all the answers. You don't want to over-sell yourself."

Not only does the job interview cause anxiety, but knowing which job is right for you can be a headache. Harper can counsel you on job preparation. He offers vocational and proficiency testing as well as an interest checklist. Harper said that through these tests a person can better determine what she is geared for and if she has any talent in a certain field.

He also explained that sometimes people need to "brush up" and that CETA training courses and the Lubbock Adult Learning Center are available.

A booklet called, "Merchandising Your Job Talents" is available through TEC. This booklet tells how to prepare a resume and letter of application, as well as how to plan your time. It explains what to do on a job interview and after the interview. As the booklet explains, job hunting can be haphazard, disorganized and frustrating. A systematic approach should be put into effect. Any and every source should be used.

Not only are there counselors to help but there are many books written on the subject available at the library. H. Anthony Medley offers in his book, "Sweaty Palms," different checklists to follow. He also tells you how to handle offensive questions, the perils of selling sex appeal, how to dress, and laws concerning discrimination. These areas of concern often cause anxiety for the woman entering the job market.

Job hunting requires careful planning — it is important not to give up after your plan goes into effect. According to Harper, desire and willingness to stick with it are what matter most.

LIVING QUIETLY — Avalanche-Journal photographer Dennis Copeland snapped Nettie Featherston as she is today, living quietly with her son and her dog, Nancy, in a modest Lubbock neighborhood. When Copeland and Family News staff writer Jeanne Lively visited her, Mrs. Featherston did not remember Dorothea Lange's visit (the picture is one taken by the Depression photographer), but her son remembered the two nickels Miss Lange gave him, a rare treat for a boy in the 30's.

Nettie Featherston Recalls Depression

In June 1938, Dorothea Lange, a photographer on assignment for the Farm Security Administration to document the effects of the Great Depression on the people of the U.S., spotted the slight figure of a woman standing in a field completely denuded of everything except sand.

Hand on forehead in a gesture that appeared nothing less than one of despair, eyes squinting in the bright summer sunshine, Nettie Featherston faced into the West Texas wind that was buffeting her. Attired as she was in a rough cotton dress, she could have appeared merely typical of all who'd suffered from the terrible drought and depression that had hit the High Plains during the 30's. However, the gifted and sensitive photographer — who later would become famous for her documentary photos — saw more. Certainly, the woman must be gritty and determined, but Miss Lange captured, in her photograph, the fact that despite unspeakable hardship, Nettie was indomitable.

Although Dorothea Lange died in 1965, the photographs she took during the 30's still exist and are a part of a collection taken by FSA photographers. It is housed in the Library of Congress; and the entire collection of 170,000 photos taken throughout the U.S. in the 30's is available to anyone who wants to document the Depression — which is why many of the photographs have been so widely published.

For over 41 years since the original photos were made of the "High Plains Woman," her identity was unknown. However, when the Nebraska State Historical Society and the University of Nebraska decided to try to locate the persons photographed in the series and find out what had happened to them, a project member contacted the Childress Index for help in identifying the unknown woman, since Miss Lange was known to have worked in the area in June 1938. After two of the original photos were published, Mrs. C.L. (Nettie) Featherston was at long-last identified and located living in Lubbock.

BY JEANNE LIVELY
Family News Staff

When interviewed recently, Mrs. Featherston said she was born in Elmore City, Ok. Eyes sparkling, she said, "I had my birthday June 20 and guess how old I was? — 81!"

She explained, "My mother lived to be 95, but I don't know whether I'll live that long or not — I don't think I will."

Nettie says she and her husband married young. "We didn't have much to begin with," she said simply, "but we had no idea just what hard times were ahead for us. But being human and in love, I think we'd gotten married anyway, though."

Nettie says things were never too good for her and her husband, although they always worked hard. "The Depression made things worse for us, however," she remembers, "and we couldn't find jobs, no matter how little we told people we'd work for. By the time the Depression came, we had three kids to feed, too. Sometimes we had to live in a tent. And we began to have to move to find work.

"But maybe the worst time we had of all was when we were living in Heldon (Healdton?), and I got sick. I didn't go to see the doctor until I had to, because of money. Anyway, the doctor told me it wasn't good for my health to be living in an oilfield town, and not with the severe weather in Oklahoma. He told me I needed to go West."

Mrs. Featherston says that although they had no car, they were determined to move because her husband was worried about her. "My brother and his family had a car, though. Because he didn't have work at the time, he decided he and his family needed to move. So he told us we could go with them in their car. The only trouble was they had three kids (including a baby) and with our three, that made 10 people in the car. I don't blame my brother for wanting to take a mattress for his wife and baby to sleep on, but that made us even more crowded. Of course, we took everything we could — didn't have much to take.

"I guess we might have gone to California like many other folks did, but we didn't have much money left by the time we got to Carey (east of Childress). In fact, we hardly had money enough to pay for a tourist camp that night. When we saw how tired the kids were though, we decided we had to stop.

"Then, something happened to change our plans. While we were waiting at the curb to get the room for the night, a farmer came up and asked if we wanted to pull bolls for him. We really wanted a job, but what really sold us was that the man said we could stay in a house he had. The man told us the house didn't have any beds (or any other furniture for that matter), but we were welcome to sleep on the blackeyed peas stored in the building. We didn't waste any time telling the man we wanted to work for him and appreciated getting a place to live.

Mrs. Featherston says they probably wouldn't have stayed in Carey, except they really didn't know where else to go to find work and had no money to move on. "Everyone was in the same shape though," she said, "and since that's the way it was, maybe it was easier to bear. I remember us not having food sometimes.

"Of course, we had food and money in the fall when we had jobs pulling bolls, but some of the time we had to ask for credit to carry us through to another fall. There was one man, Tom Arnold (deceased now), who had a store and was good to us. He'd let us have food on credit, and we'd always pay him back in the fall."

Mrs. Featherston says that eventually the family had had to meet the commodity truck to get food and clothing provided by the government. "I'd always look for warm sweaters and coats for all of us on the truck, but most of the time there'd only be summer things when you needed something warm in the winter.

"When my husband became ill and disabled, we moved to Lubbock. But the kids were grown then. My husband died in 1976."

Somewhat apologetically, Mrs. Featherston says she doesn't remember the photographer taking her photograph on that day 41 years ago. However, Mrs. Featherston's son, Kenneth, with whom she lives, recalls Miss Lange's visit very well. "She gave me two nickels," he said, "and in those days I'd hardly ever seen any money. But I recall being so proud of the nickels that I carried them in an empty tobacco sack that tied with a string, until the time came when we had to spend them."

Today, Mrs. Featherston lives quietly. Although she has medical problems, she is alert. Kenneth says he and his mother are particularly grateful to the nurse (provided by the Visiting Nurse Service) who comes by. Since Kenneth also has a health problem, he says they're also appreciative of Meals On Wheels and the kindness of neighbors, especially when he has to be away at the hospital. "And my mother has two fine doctors who take care of her — they're wonderful!"

About the hardships she and her family endured in the 30's, Mrs. Featherston said, "I try not to think about those bad times now, if I can help it. One thing I've always tried to do is to live each day as it comes and that's always helped me.

"If you want me to tell you what really kept us going back then, it was — faith. I always knew God would get us through somehow. But I hope we never have another Depression."

RE-DISCOVERED — Nettie Featherston became the object of a search to discover what had happened to the people taken in the photographic series on the Depression and housed in the Library of Congress. She was only recently discovered to be living, simply and quietly, in a modest frame home in Lubbock. Avalanche-Journal photographer Dennis Copeland took this picture of Mrs. Featherston outside the home she shares with her son and their little dog.

"WOMAN OF THE PLAINS" was the title of this picture of Nettie Featherston taken by Dorothea Lange to document the effects of the Depression on the lives of the American people. It has become a classic of the American scene.

A FULL SERVICE BANK

In My Corner

By FRANCES LOWE

IT CAME TO US THAT this is the time of year when many women, with the kids in school and the house to themselves, might be thinking about going out and finding a job. So we thought we would dedicate this issue of Family News to helping her get started; as we have observed here before, she needs all the help she can get.

Someone may remark that working women already get a great deal of attention. How about the woman who stays at home, or, better yet, supports the volunteer activities in the community?

I would be the last person in the world to disparage the volunteer worker; on the contrary I am convinced that most, if not all, of the important work being done in the world is being done without pay.

One of my concerns is that, with the high cost of living and the attendant return of many women to the work force, volunteerism has fallen upon hard times. From the woman who stops by the new neighbors with a homemade cake and a word of welcome, to the one who spends an afternoon a week at a nursing home, the volunteer brings comfort into our lives, caring into our institutions, and culture into our communities.

Now, more and more, the volunteer has gone to work, just when the need for her services (most volunteers are women, but the picture is changing) is greatest.

WE CANNOT HIRE enough people, even if we could pay them, to do these kinds of jobs. We would not want to. The hired worker simply does not usually bring to the task the compassion, warmth and caring that the volunteer does.

One possibility, a vast, largely untapped national resource, is our growing number of older and retired persons.

We tend to think of the elderly as infirm, pitiful, more in need of being taken care of than capable of caring for someone else. This simply isn't so. The vast majority of older people in this country are living in their own homes, taking care of themselves, healthy, alert and self-sufficient. Many of them welcome the opportunity to be of service, to have tasks to which they need to go regularly, to find useful outlets for their experience and skills.

We make the mistake of thinking of them, if we think of them at all, in terms of what we could be doing for them, providing for them. The better gift might be a recognition of what they can give.

Efforts are being made to utilize this important resource. (The RSVP program is a terrific example.) Older people are adopting children in hospitals and institutions, teaching courses, helping others, sharing.

Such programs are vital because the numbers of volunteers of other ages are dwindling, in spite of efforts, even on the national level, to recognize their contributions. While it is good to applaud volunteer work, it would be better for us to recognize it as real work, not busy work, and for both the volunteer and the paid person who works with her, to take the work as seriously as if it were paid for. Neither people nor jobs are of value only in terms of money.

The woman who does not work outside the home, but who finds time to help a learning disabled child, visit in a nursing home, organize a committee to better the community, go door-to-door collecting for the Heart Fund, is as valuable to the community as the woman who clerks in a department store or sits behind a typewriter, and should be a source of pride, both to herself and to her community.

MEANWHILE, it is hard for me to imagine anyone in Lubbock who cannot find worthwile work to do. The rewards are enormous, both for the volunteer and for the community. I could not begin to list all the opportunities, but here are a few:

All local hospitals need volunteers, some of them desperately. The volunteers are often the only people on the staff with time to visit, to talk with and comfort the patients and their families, and they free professionals for other tasks which only professionals can do.

Local clinics (Sick Baby, Well Baby, Presbyterian) also need volunteer help, especially people with training.

Local schools use, or could use, the volunteer in any number of ways. Talk to your principal, the PTA, the special education teacher, the school nurse.

Nursing homes welcome, with open arms, people to brighten the lives of the residents — with special programs, parties, classes, visits, by adopting an old person to befriend.

Meals On Wheels is an important and helpful organization which needs drivers. In fact, if you have a car available to use you are especially in demand (the high cost of gasoline has also cut into the volunteer effort).

All the helping institutions, the Lubock State School, Buckner's, Boys' Ranch, Big Brothers/Big Sisters, Campfire and Scouts, RSVP, CONTACT, the Rape Crisis Center — I could not begin to list them all — have worthwhile work for people with many kinds of talents.

Wherever your skills and interests lie, you can find something to do where you will be important and appreciated, and make other people feel the same way.

Many Options Available For Job Hunters

By JEANNE LIVELY
Family News Staff

If you are unemployed and want help in finding a job:

•Run, don't walk, to the nearest office of the Texas Employment Commission. While you're there, ask about State Merit Examinations. Services are all free. The Lubbock office is located at 1602 16th St., 763-6416.

•Check the yellow pages of your telephone directory for the names of private employment agencies. A fee is charged when agency finds applicant a suitable job. Some employers pay fee.

•Career Planning and Placement Service is located in Room 152 Administration Building, Texas Tech. Non-diploma positions (both on and off campus) are listed on announcement board just outside office. Information and a wealth of employment services area available in the office for degreed persons.

•If you decide to go the resume route, secure an up-to-date guide on the proper form. Remember that anti-discrimination laws passed in recent years now forbid a prospective employer to ask certain information. Should you include such information, some personnel offices will mark it out before seeing you.

•Use your initiative. As an example, if you decide you'd like to be a secretary at an electronics firm, check under that heading in the yellow pages for the names of various firms. Call and ask for the personnel department. Even if a company isn't running an ad, there may be job openings.

•U.S. Civil Service Commission, office of personnel management, Dallas, no longer provides a toll-free job number. Instead, write the Commission at 1100 Commerce St., 6th Fl., Dallas, Texas 75202.

•Talk to friends, use whatever contacts you have but remember diplomacy goes a long way.

DEAR ABBY

DEAR ABBY: Why is it that if a mother is a tramp, her kids have all kinds of respect for her, but if she's a good Christian mother they couldn't care less. I've seen it often.

In my case, we have a daughter in college who attended summer school. All the years she was growing up, her father was "too busy" to attend a PTA meeting or any of her school activities. He was in her grade school only once, never in her junior high, and in her senior high school (field house) once — for her graduation.

On the other hand, I've done all the things a "good mother" should do. I attended PTA, was a Brownie leader, made costumes, took her to all the school activities, baked cookies for classroom parties, etc., yet she shows more respect for her father than she does for me.

Although her weekends were free, she didn't come home for Mother's Day until late Sunday afternoon. She had written earlier that she was bringing me a gift. I don't care about the gift, it's just the way things turned out that hurts me. She came home empty-handed, saying, "I'm sorry, I didn't have time to buy you anything."

I said, "That's all right, Honey, having you home is all the gift I want."

Then she said, "Well, that's good, because that's all you're going to get."

Father's Day weekend she arrived on Saturday, bringing her Dad a beautiful dress shirt and matching tie!

I ask you, Abby, why is it that when I have done so much for her, and her father did so little, she treats him so much better than she treats me?

HURT

DEAR HURT: Perhaps it's because you've always been around and she has taken you for granted. On the other hand, because her father gave so little of himself, and she saw him so seldom, she still considers him a special treat and is thrilled by his presence. I'm not justifying her attitude, only attempting to analyze it.

• • •

DEAR ABBY: I am puzzled over a common social dilemma that many single women face.

Last weekend at a party I met a guy who was nice to talk to, but not to go out with. Later in the evening he asked if I'd like to go out with him some time. Then he asked for my phone number. I wasn't particularly interested in seeing him again but was at a loss for a gracious way of declining. What would you have done? By the way, I have a steady boyfriend and am not interested in dating others, but I thought it presumptuous to mention my boyfriend since I was asked only for a date — not a lifetime commitment.

SINGLE IN SCARSDALE

DEAR SINGLE: I would have told him that I had a steady boyfriend, but if he'd give me HIS number I'd fix him up with one of my uncommitted girlfriends. (P.S. One girl's leftovers could be another girl's banquet.)

• • •

DEAR ABBY: The letter from the woman who was discouraged because she would be 37 when she finished high school amused me.

My mother was born in 1890. She went only as far as the eighth grade because there was no high school where she lived. In 1944 she enrolled in a special high school program for adults, and got her diploma in 1945. In 1952 she graduated from the University of Washington.

She learned to read Latin, Italian, French, Spanish, Portuguese, German and Chinese.

Two years ago, at 86, she wrote an article about the making of 16th century Chinese pottery. It was published in "Forklore," a British magazine.

EDMUND WEST, TACOMA, WASH.

Quick, Easy Recipes Aid Working Women

By BEVERLY O'BRIANT
Family News Staff

One of the greatest dilemmas facing a busy working woman is setting aside time for cooking. A hectic schedule may cut short the amount of time available for meal preparation. Exhausted from a long day, the last thing a working mother may want to hear is the demands of hungry children. A few quick but delicious recipes and a little organization could be the answer to last-minute meals.

According to Joy Parnell, a local home economist, a well-designed, well-organized kitchen and an organized cook are vital to easy, nutritious meal preparation.

The eating options a person faces are convenience foods, carry-out, "preparation-from-scratch" and dining out. Finding the right proportions of each is the solution to fitting nutrition and a busy schedule together, said Miss Parnell.

Some of her suggestions for making meals quicker and still pleasant are eating more raw fruit and vegetables; glamorizing sandwiches; eat "brunch" on weekends and stop trying to run "a short-order house." She also pointed out a busy working mother should get help from family members in cooking meals; dress up vegetables to brighten the meal; prepare large quantities of a food and freeze the remaining amounts in serving size portions; and cook soups, stews and casseroles that can be frozen and quickly heated up.

Miss Parnell explained that sandwiches are a strong part of today's eating habits. She suggests being more creative in their making; "sometimes making it a salad in disguise." A sandwich that uses only meat and bread is not very interesting, or particularly nutritious compared to other sandwiches.

A wide variety of greens (lettuce, alfalfa sprouts, etc.) brighten a sandwich. A combination of ingredients in a sandwich is best according to Miss Parnell. Different kinds of cheese, different kinds of meat or a combination of meat and cheese could be used. A popular sandwich combination these days, she said, is bacon, avocado and lettuce sandwich.

In addition to Miss Parnell's suggestions, a nationally syndicated writer with Women's News Service, adds these tips: cook a quantity of bacon at a time, freeze or refrigerate slices flat, then just place precooked slices on broiler pain and heat; serve dinner buffet-style for the family; prepare a week's lunches at one time and freeze for later use; instead of multicourse meals, consider serving a superb main dish and a beverage; and streamline holiday dinners by buying the turkey stuffed and cooked and using several convenience foods.

CALICO EGG CASSEROLE

4 eggs
4 tbsps. chopped onion
¾ tsp. salt
¼ to ½ tsp. hot pepper sauce
3 tbsps. water
¼ cup butter
1 cup diced fresh tomatoes
1 cup diced cooked potatoes
1 cup diced zucchini
(or green pepper)

Beat eggs, onion, salt, hot pepper sauce and water. Melt butter in large skillet; stirfry vegetables 2 minutes. Pour egg mixture over vegetables. Cook on moderate heat and avoid constant stirring. As mixture begins to set at bottom and side, gently lift cooked portions with spatula allowing uncooked portion to run to bottom. Cook until eggs are thickened throughout but still moist — 3 to 5 minutes.

COTTAGE EGGS

10-12 slices bacon
1/3 cup green onions or
2 tbsps. chives
9 eggs, beaten
1 cup cottage cheese

Cut bacon into 2-inch strips and fry until done, remove from skillet; pour off all but 2 tablespoons of bacon drippings. Saute onion or chives in skillet until tender. Blend cheese into eggs; pour mixture into skillet and cook like scrambled eggs. When almost done, add bacon and continue cooking. Do not overcook, when done, this mixture has a very moist appearance. Serves 6-8

Recipes offered by Miss Parnell are Beef Piccata and Mexican Beef and Chip Casserole. The former is perfect for last minute entertaining, she explained, and results in an excellent gourmet dish.

BEEF PICCATA

1 lb. beef cutlets
Salt
Flour
½ cup butter
½ cup chicken broth
1½ tbsps. lemon juice
1 lemon, sliced thin
¼ cup finely chopped parsley

The cutlets should be made from top round beef (there is little gristle in that section) and run through the tenderizer or pounded until thin. Sprinkle with salt and flour. Saute in butter until brown. Mix broth and lemon juice and pour over meat. Simmer, uncovered, until almost done. Add lemon slices and parsley. Simmer until done and serve with rice or rice dressing.

MEXICAN BEEF AND CHIP CASSEROLE

1 lb. ground beef
1 small onion, chopped
1 clove minced garlic
1 can (10 oz.) cream of mushroom soup
1 can (7 oz.) chopped green chilies
1 pkg. (9 oz.) tortilla chips
1 can (10 oz.) enchilada sauce, mild
2 cups shredded Monterey Jack cheese

To prepare and serve from electric frypan, cook beef slightly and add onion and garlic and finish browning beef. Add soup and chilies, stir and cook a minute or two. Top with chips, enchilada sauce and cheese. Cover and heat gently till heated through and cheese melts. Or prepare by layering food in a 9x13-inch casserole dish.

One of Miss Parnell's suggestions for brightening up an otherwise dull meal is the use of color and variety in side dishes or vegetables. She provided the recipes for Continental Vegetables and Dilly Peas, to illustrate new combinations of common ingredients for an entirely different taste.

CONTINENTAL VEGETABLES

1 pkg. (10 oz.) frozen vegetables
1 tbsp. chopped pimiento
¼ cup French or Italian dressing
Salt

Cook vegetables according to package directions, omitting salt. Drain vegetables and stir in remaining ingredients. Serve hot or cold.

DILLY PEAS

1 pkg. (10 oz.) frozen green peas
4 tbsps. butter
¼ tsp. salt
⅛ tsp. black pepper
4 tbsps. finely chopped dill pickle

FRUIT MOUSSE

1 pkg. (3 oz.) strawberry gelatin
½ cup boiling orange juice
1 heaping cup crushed ice
1 cup heavy cream

Blend gelatin in juice 20 seconds. Increase speed; add ice and cream. Blend 20 seconds. Pour into dessert dishes and refrigerate. Serves 4 to 6. For breakfast drink, blend ingredients, pour into glass.

TURKEY A LA KING

1 pkg. (10 oz.) frozen mixed vegetables
1 cup chopped onion
2 tbsps. butter
1 can (15 oz.) macaroni & cheese
2 cups diced turkey
1 can (4 oz.) mushrooms
½ tsp. salt
⅛ tsp. pepper
Dash of red pepper sauce

CHECK GASOLINE

When buying a new car, don't let price alone determine your choice. Also check gasoline efficiency ratings, advises Claudia Kerbel, a consumer information specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

Local Expert Emphasizes Importance Of Day Care Center Selection

By CONNIE CHAPMAN
Family News Staff

Families considering day care for their child or children ought to shop for these services as carefully as they would for a car or a house, and with much the same procedure, according to Boone Taylor, head of this region's day care licensing office of the Texas Department of Human Resources.

One of the considerations of many women who return to work or decide to go to work for the first time is how to obtain adequate care for their children. Even if a woman has waited until her children are in school, she may be faced with the question of how to handle after-school care. While there are many more options today than even ten years ago, both the quality and the quantity of day care could be improved, experts agree.

How can a family set about deciding what is the most appropriate day care for their children? "Shop around," is Taylor's suggestion. "If you are going to buy a house or a car, you look at several before you buy. Why not do the same for a child care situation?"

Often, Taylor admits, people are in a situation where time does not permit them to do this kind of careful shopping. But he strongly recommends that parents take the time and make the effort to visit several potential facilities before settling on the right one for their child or children.

One of the major ways his department can help a family is by providing a list of available licensed centers and group day care homes.

Looking for such a license should be the first item in checking out a facility. To secure this license, a facility must meet certain standards. "These are minimum standards established by the State and parents may want to find a facility where more than these minimum standards are carried out in any of several areas," Taylor said.

Facilities are presented licensed under specifications of the Texas Child Care Licensing Act of 1975.

Areas covered in this licensing law include personnel, buildings and environment, fire and safety, physical health, food service and nutrition, and administration and activities.

Taylor suggested that families take a hard look at their own ideas of child rearing and attempt to find a facility which has a philosophy and practice compatible with their own.

The department makes a distinction among a variety of categories of child care and the licensing law deals separately with each and for each has its own set of standards.

A day care center is defined as any facility which takes more than 12 children under age 14 for less than 24 hours per day. Group day care homes are those facilities which provide care for less than 24 hours per day for seven to 12 children under age 14. Both of these categories are licensed by the department.

Yet another category, registered family homes, must also be registered, but not licensed, by the department. A home in this category cares for no more than six children on a regular basis. Additionally, the home may also care for up to six more children during after school hours if these children are brothers and sisters of those already in the care of that home and care provider.

What is involved when the department licenses a facility? Licensing representatives make visits, most unannounced, to a facility to determine that it does meet the standards set up by the state. An initial license is granted to an institution for a period of six months. If all inspections are successfully passed during that time, a regular two-year license is issued. Following all inspections, owners and operators are told about any areas in the check-list which need improvement. In cases of serious violations, the department does have the power to suspend or revoke a license.

To the parent, a license from the department on the wall of the day care facility means that the department will check up on the performance of that center. It also means that the parent, if he or she has a specific complaint about a facility in any of the areas mentioned above, can make a complaint to the department and have the situation investigated.

Experts agree that parent involvement is the key to satisfaction with day care centers. Parents are urged to visit prior to enrolling a child, as has been mentioned. Many centers try to keep the parents informed about programs and policies through meetings, newsletters or bulletin boards easily seen as parents leave or pick up the child. Communication between the day care personnel and the parents is crucial to a teamwork approach to child development.

SEE YOU LATER, MOM — Carol Adams, left, leaves daughter Shanna, age two, with day care staff worker Louise Sowell. Day care should be a happy experience for the child and parents should look for a facility which has a philosophy of child rearing consistent with that of the family. (Staff Photos by Paul Moseley)

LEARNING BY DOING — Day care centers feature many learning experiences for pre-school children like those in this class for three-year-olds at the Melonie Park Baptist Church center. Day care centers are licensed by the state through the Department of Human Resources which sees that centers meet certain health and safety requirements.

Class Helps Develop Fashion Identity

By JACQUE HUTCHINS
Family News Staff

Are you tired of trying to turn yourself into Cheryl Tiegs? Maybe you don't have to, or, more important, maybe you don't really want to.

There are, however, ways to help the woman who wants to develop her own distinct style.

Debbi Clark, television spokeswoman for Hemphill Wells, will instruct the Personal Style Courses which begins Sept. 24.

Miss Clark said the classes, which are four two-hour sessions, are not designed to turn out fashion models, but rather to help a woman discover her assets and figure challenges.

The sessions will cover color coordination, choosing the basic wardrobe, mixing and matching separates, selecting the right accessories and creating individual signature looks.

"The first session will be devoted to helping the woman find her own individual style. We'll talk about trends — what works for each," said Miss Clark.

After establishing each woman's own style, the classes will be devoted to learning how to dress appropriately, concentrating on color for the purpose of wardrobe selection.

Miss Clark explained the color key system was developed in 1931 to help determine what color group a person falls into.

"There are two color key groups. A person falls in one or the other. Her hair, eyes and complexion coloring determine which color key group she falls under," she said.

Miss Clark added that certain colors may make a person look "washed out" or too harsh. These colors are the wrong color key for that person.

Participants needn't expect to rush out and purchase an entire new wardrobe. Miss Clark says the sessions will be devoted to building a basic wardrobe from what you have, and how to update last year's clothes.

According to Miss Clark, a woman can really "learn to dress," to know what styles, colors and accessories to use.

With this in mind, four fashion identities will be covered — classic, romantic, country casual and avant-garde.

The Personal Style Course is $35, which includes the workbook and all materials. Morning and evening classes will be offered Mondays, Tuesdays and Thursdays at the Hemphill Wells mall store.

Interested persons may call Jan Brooks, 763-3411, Extension 304. Enrollment will be limited.

TWEED FOR FALL — Tweed is an important look for fall and is styled in this multi-gored wool fleece full back coat. It is trimmed with a tweed knit collar and has a matching detachable scarf. The coat is available in beige or rust.

DEBBI CLARK

EXECUTIVE WOMAN — The executive woman is as in command of her fashion image as she is the daily challenges of her career. She prefers clothes that are current but classic, feminine as well as tailored. Here, she answers the morning's calls in a superb camel hair jacket, vest and shirt. The soft gray jacket features hacking pockets and tops a herringbone tweed skirt that buttons up the front. A striped cotton shirt is worn under the tiny gray and cream check waist length vest.

Calling All Homemakers

By SYD MOORE, A.S.I.D

Which would you rather do, make your decorating conform to the family's lifestyle or change that way of living to meet the new limitations you've built into your home?

Given those alternatives, few would opt for restructuring their lives to meet a decorating plan. But it happens there's a big difference between admiring a room picture in a magazine and trying to shoehorn your family into it. Good decorating is suitably making the home suit the people who live there.

A practical example of this is found in the little desk designed into a kitchen so the wife can do her telephoning, bill paying and letter writing. Those same things might be done seated on the living room sofa or working at the coffee table. Which approach is more suitable? In one case, the design has been made to the family members lifestyles needs; in the other, the individual must conform to what is available.

½ tsp. salt
1 large egg
½ cup milk
¼ cup butter, melted
1 cup blueberries

Stir together flours, baking powder, salt and sugar. Beat egg and milk to blend; add to flour mixture with butter, stir only until dry ingredients are moistened. Fold in blueberries. Spoon into buttered muffin-pan cups, filling them about two-thirds full. Bake in a preheated 375-degree oven until a cake tester inserted in center comes out free of batter — 25 to 30 minutes. Loosen edges and serve hot with butter. Makes 12.

Doctor Encourages Women To Enter Medical, Science Professions

By JEANNE LIVELY
Family News Staff

Woman are discouraged in subtle ways from aiming for medical or scientific careers. But, according to Dr. Maysie J. Hughes, professor of physiology at Texas Tech University School of Medicine, things are looking up.

"I feel very fortunate," Dr. Hughes said, "to work in a department that has been non-selective in regards to sex in choosing both faculty members and post-graduates. In fact, we have four women post-graduates joining our department this fall.

"I had something to do with choosing these applicants, and may be teased for being a 'chauvinist,' but the background and experience of the females selected was superior to many of the men."

Dr. Hughes also has served on the selection committee for student admissions at the Medical School. "At no time was any distinction ever made on the basis of sex," she said, "and I think this speaks well of our school. But the unfortunate thing was that we had so few women applicants.

"Some of the women who did not gain admission felt they would have been better prepared if they had made plans earlier to become doctors, rather than studying to be lab technicians or nurses."

The physiologist admits there are many reasons why women do not prepare for careers in science and medicine. She recently attended a conference to explore the reasons and discuss what could be done to improve the situation.

As these professional women spoke of their own backgrounds and experiences, several things became very apparent — that early conditioning and family attitudes play major roles in determining women's career choices.

Dr. Hughes said participants in the conference reviewed a number of grade school texts currently in use. "Girls were always pictured playing with dolls, playing nurse, bieng a school teacher," she said, "while men were depicted as being doctors, scientists, driving a truck or going hiking. It was also apparent that in the texts girls were assigned the role of 'assistant.'

"When I was teaching the fourth grade, I once told my class, 'Everyone should be able to do everything. Every one of you little girls should be able to saw and hammer a nail, and every one of you little boys should be able to darn a sock and cook an egg.'

"Well, you never heard such howls in your life. All the children had been conditioned to think that girls could not use a hammer and that boys could not sew on a button."

In discussing her own background, Dr. Hughes says her parents treated her, not as a boy or girl, but as a child. "But," she said, "I came face-to-face with reality one day when I was riding up and down the sidewalk in front of our house on a scooter. I was wearing a pair of coveralls — girls did not wear slacks in those days — and a dignified dowager-type woman stopped me and said, 'Little girl, you should be ashamed of yourself wearing those boys' pants. You go home and put on a dress!'"

Dr. Hughes' father was employed in a bank, her mother had taught school but was also a great homemaker and cook. One of her grandmothers had also been a teacher, and her gradnfather, also interested in science, stimulated her interest in the subject.

Family vacations in the country increased her interest in nature. Recalling those times, Dr. Hughes said, "My brother and I picked up unusual rocks from the creekbeds, picked wildflowers and had a butterfly collection.

"I suppose I would describe my childhood as very normal, except perhaps that my parents believed in letting my brother and me do things that interested us, no matter what their own preferences were."

Because both her mother and grandmother had been teachers, it was assumed Dr. Hughes would prepare for a teaching career. "But," she said, "my parents did as they'd always done and let me decide. At the time, I had several iterests in mind — archaeologist, artist, or writer."

I majored in English. Since my minors were in pyschology and philosophy, I ended up with a lot of science credits.

"After receiving my A.B., I taught school, worked in laboratories, got married and had a child. But one day, when I was working as a lab technician in a school of medicine, I realized that it was stupid of me to be working in somebody else's laboratory. People I was working for were intelligent, but I thought I had as many ideas as they did and could do just as well. I decided then to try for a Ph.D., and received it 20 years after my A.B.!"

Dr. Hughes commented that generally women are found working primarily in certain areas in science and medicine. "You will find more women practicing in pediatrics and family practice than doing surgery or working in orthopedics. In the basic sciencies, there are more women in micorobiology and biochemistry than in physiology, and it is difficult to understand why this is true.

"But attitudes are changing toward women scientists and physicians, and I look forward to the time when many more women will prepare themselves for careers in these exciting fields."

Editor Applauds Working Women

By REBECCA MOREHOUSE

NEW YORK (WNS) — Women are turning this country around, says publisher Peter Diamandis. "For a while I was afraid the whole country was going to sleep in front of television sets," he said. "Now, there's a new dynamism, a great surge of energy, and it's coming from women.

"Women have suddenly realized they can do what they want to do," he went on. "They've moved out of the home. It's the big sociological trend of the last 10 years — bigger than Watergate — bigger than anything. Fifty-two percent of women are in the work force today."

Diamandis is the publisher of SELF, the new Conde Nast magazine for women. As a longtime admirer of women, he applauds their new-found freedom. As a husband, he is somewhat troubled. His wife Joan, a copywriter, wants to go back to work after years at home raising their six children, ages 10 to 21.

"With the children growing up, she wants to work part time and ultimately full time," he said. "I have mixed emotions about it, but I think enough of her to go through whatever trauma it would cause me. I've been living in a classic marriage situation, and I'm spoiled rotten. I like her to be home when I get there.

"She's had her hands full, and I can't see her lying around a swimming pool. Being a mother is a full-time job. I'll be honest. My wife raised my children. I have to give her 75 percent in the child-rearing department. She made it possible for me to focus on what I was doing."

Inflation has made it necessary for women to work, he said. "And the feminist movement made it socially acceptable." Years ago, if a woman worked there was something wrong with her husband. "Today, if your wife doesn't work there's something wrong with her."

He does not see men and women as being essentially alike. "They bring different things to the party," he said. "Men are superior physically, but I've met thousands of women who can beat me down from a mental standpoint. Conde Nast is dominated by women — our top editors are women — they've been running this company for years."

A walk through the stark-white, stylish offices of SELF reveals Diamandis to be the only male in sight. In his corner office on Madison Avenue he has the quintessential Madison Avenue look, the pin-stripe suit, crisp white shirt, perfect necktie. But he is handsomer by far than most Mad-Ave types: 6-foot-2, lean, and devastating.

SELF is the first new magazine launched in 40 years by Conde Nast, which publishes Vogue, Glamour, Mademoiselle, House and Garden, and Brides. Conde Nast is owned by Newhouse Communications.

"We started SELF in January, and I haven't seen a new magazine take off like this in 15 years," he said. "We're giving our readers articles on fitness — physical, mental, emotional and cultural. We're talking about personal and psychological fitness as consistent best-sellers.

"We asked our early readers what they wanted to see more and less of. They wanted to see more on diet and nutrition, physical fitness, emotional awareness, and skin. They didn't want celebrities and competitive sports. We've been celebritied to death and the coverage of pro sports is overwhelming."

He is a former publisher of Mademoiselle, New York, and New West magazines, and a graduate of Bucknell University.

"I am Greek, which gives me the right to philosophize," he said. "My father was born in Greece and came here as an orphan immigrant. My mother was Irish-English, born on the lower East Side (of New York)."

He spent a year on SELF before the magazine was published.

"I've interviewed 400 women in this office. They're jogging, running, taking classes. I get out of breath just listening. Intelligent women are telling us they're playing catch-up football. They're tired of being nobody. They want to run something.

"I married my college sweetheart, the senior queen. She worked for four years after we were married. When our first child came, she thought she should stay home. It was a mutual decision. We've had differences of opinion but never a serious argument. When she goes back to work, I'll say 'Terrific. Can I take you to lunch next Tuesday?'"

2 tsps. salt
1 tsp. pepper

New Store Introduces Fashion Alternative

By LYNN HOHERTZ
Family News Staff

Looking for a fairly inexpensive way to expand your wardrobe?

Whether you are a housewife/mother contending with increasing grocery and electricity bills or a career woman who needs an extensive wardrobe, Encore At Ellwood Station, a consignment store, may be a solution to the clothing dilemma.

Consignment stores have been extremely popular in larger cities such as Dallas and Austin for a number of years. However, here it is a novel concept. "I feel the time is right," (for Lubbock women) said Patty Lott, proprietor of the store at 2611 Boston Ave.

Not everyone can afford to rush out and buy an entire wardrobe each season and even the most stylish of clotheshorses are becoming more cost-conscious.

Mrs. Lott refers to the fashions at her shop as "gently worn." "Clothing is so expensive," she said, "and I think the stigma of wearing previously worn clothing is gone."

Mrs. Lott believes Encore can be a clearing house for women who want to enhance their wardrobes. She and her daughter Katherine Garth, store manager, plan to be selective and carry only the top end of previously owned fashions. "Our ultimate goal is to achieve designer status in consignment merchandise," she said. This will enable local women to buy fashions by designers like Bill Blass and Halston at a fraction of the cost.

In addition to designer fashions and women's apparel, Encore carries children's and teen's clothing. The store will also feature "vintage clothing" (clothing which is 20 to 30 years old and in great demand today especially among younger women). Shoes and various accessories are available too.

When clothes are consigned, the owner receives 50 percent of the selling price. If the garment is not sold within the first month, it is marked down. It will be marked down again after the second month. If it has not sold after 90 days, the owner may reclaim it or designate a favorite charity.

For the consigner's protection only clothing proper for the season will be selected.

Encore is open from 10 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Monday through Saturday. The store will consign merchandise from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday (unless special arrangements are made).

Customers are encouraged to bring their fashions to the store. However, items can be picked up at a customer's home.

All garments must be cleaned, pressed and placed on hangers. They must be free of any tears of worn places. Skirt lengths should be a minumum of 27 inches.

Encore also offers women a unique way to get "mad money" in exchange for clothing they are tired of. Many women may wish to purchase a dress to be worn once for a special occasion and then reconsign it.

"We are not in direct competition with fine department stores," Mrs. Lott emphasized. "We want women to continue buying new clothes so we will have consigners."

In addition to clothing, Encore specializes in articles such as handpainted china, dolls, afghans and tropical plants. This store is also the only outlet in the area to carry San Marino Preserving Kitchen, a line of gourmet foods.

SHRIMP AND RICE

1 tbsp. olive oil
1 medium onion, cut in thin strips
1 medium green pepper, seeded and cut in thin strips
2 cloves garlic, minced
16-oz. can tomatoes, well-drained and liquid saved
8-oz. bottle clam juice
⅛ tsp. powdered saffron threads
1 cup converted rice
1 lb. (about 40 to the count) small shrimp (cooked, shelled, deveined and at room temperature)
10-oz. pkg. tiny frozen green peas, thawed and at room temperature

In a 12-inch skillet gently cook chorizo in olive oil until sausage exudes its fat; add onion, green pepper and garlic; cook gently, stirring often, until vegetables are wilted and chorizo is lightly browned. Break up drained tomatoes and add. To the saved tomato liquid add the clam juice and saffron; add to skillet with the rice and stir well. Bring to a boil. Cover tightly and simmer until rice is cooked — about 20 minutes. Stir in shrimp and peas. Let stand off heat, tightly covered, until all liquid is absorbed — About 5 minutes. Makes 4 hearty main-dish servings.

FREEDOM FIRST

"There are two men in my life who are very special to me. One is black and the other Italian. They spoil me and I love it. I don't want to put myself in the position where there is just one person — I want to be free." — American singer Dionne Warwick, touring Europe.

Sociologist Examines 'Midlife Question'

NEW YORK (Special) — "The best of times" and "the worst of times." Charles Dickens' words characterizing an era are applicable as well to the period of a woman's life described in Lillian B. Rubin's new book, "Women of a Certain Age: The Midlife Search for Self," scheduled to be released this month by Harper & Row. This groundbreaking book by a sociologist-therapist examines the hopes, fears and options of women who face the midlife question. "What am I going to do with the rest of my life?"

There are 25 million of these women, ranging in age from 35 to 54. No matter how long she has been married or divorced, how many children she has raised, whether or not she works outside the home, every middle-aged woman must confront the best-of-times worst-of-times paradox. Her child-rearing years are over or their end is in plain view. Now what?

"Until recently," Dr. Rubin writes, "Midlife seemed little more than a way station between youth and old age, not worthy of much thought or discussion. Then, suddenly, it became a crisis — a moment of high drama when we supposedly struggle with the recognition of our own impending mortality, when life's unfinished tasks loom large and painfully in our consciousness. In fact, it's neither way station nor crisis, but a stage in the life cycle like any other — a time of life with its own dilemmas, its own tasks, its own pleasures, its own pains."

Dr. Rubin (who coped with her own midlife crisis at 39 by enrolling as a college freshman and emerging, eight years later, with a Ph.D. in sociology) interviewed 160 women in depth during the course of her research for "Women of a Certain Age."

"Almost all of the women I spoke with responded to the departure of their children, whether actual or impending, with a decided sense of relief," writes Dr. Rubin, demolishing the myth of the "empty nest syndrome."

Instead, she found, it is the husband who is often crushed by the breakdown of the family unit. A father's contribution to child raising is likely to be more financial than emotional, more interested than involved. One day he realizes that the chidren have gone before he ever had a chance to know them.

The mother, on the other hand, has participated in the lives of her children from diapers to weddings, and has felt the loosening of apron strings at every stage. For her, the children's departure comes none too soon. "I've had as much as I ever need or want of being tied down with children," Dr. Rubin was told by one woman eager to get on with the rest of her life. "Freedom? I'm just itching for it. I'm looking forward, finally, to having a life of my own again," affirmed another.

Beyond the "empty nest syndrome" fallacy, Dr. Rubin investigates the new sexual dynamic of the wife as lover instead of wife and mother.

Tracing the role of sex through the various stages of marriage, she discovered that women judge midlife sex to be the best. The women she talked with reported a decrease in the frequency of sexual interaction but a dramatic increase in its quality. Freedom from worry about squeaking beds, curious youngsters, familiarity with a spouse's preferences, and foolproof (or nearly so) precautions against pregnancy combine with the midlife woman's newly discovered sexual agressiveness to make sex, in the words of one woman, "better and better. I'm enjoying sex more than I ever did in my life before — maybe more than I ever thought I could."

Despite improvements, Dr. Rubin notes, all is not perfect in the marriage bed. The very agressiveness which allows a woman to initiate and more fully enjoy sexual proceedings can alarm her husband, turning sex play into a power play. He may resent her budding outside interests in a new job or back at school, and fail to respond to her rising sexual needs and desires. "No matter what facet of sexual interaction we examine," comments Dr. Rubin, "women still are largely reflectors of their men's needs and wishes — responding to male initiatives and imperatives, subduring their own."

Lillian Rubin points out that the changes facing middle-aged women are rife with paradox. Seeking a return to the working world, well-educated, professionally trained women have even less of a chance of landing meaningful jobs than do their working-class counterparts. There is also a problem of self-definition as it applies to both homemakers and career women. Asked to define themselve — who and what they were — those who saw themselves as "just a housewife" seemed virtually paralyzed about future job or educational possibilities. "Although half the women I talked to hold paid jobs outside the home, not one — including those who work at high-level professional jobs — described herself in relation to her work," Dr. Rubin emphasized.

Manufacture Of Small Appliances Consumes More Energy Than Use

Small electric appliances, while not consuming much energy themselves, often require a tremendous amount of energy in their manufacture. The energy required to produce, sell, service, and ultimately dispose of appliances should be a major concern of consumer.

For example, making an electric can opener requires 17 times as much energy as the can opener uses in a year.

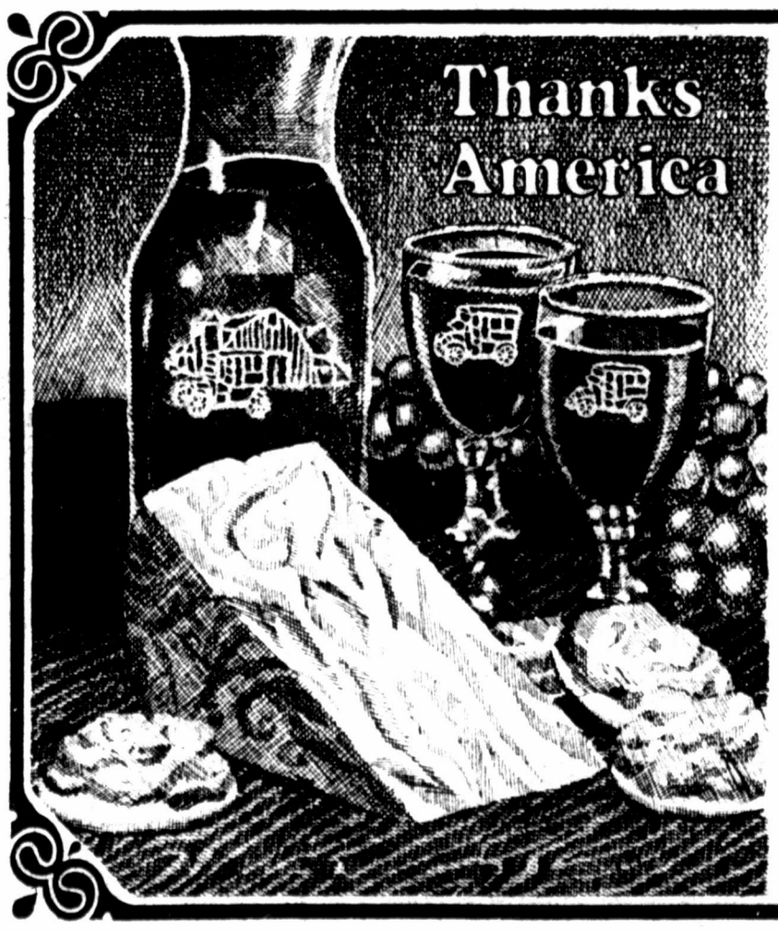

People often buy expensive, complicated appliances, use them a few times and then let them sit on the shelves.

However, the worst culprit of non-use seems to be gift appliances. In a recent study, homemakers reported they "seldom or never" used 233 gift appliances. Only 76 self-purchased appliances were in the same category.

Perhaps better use could be made of the energy if consumers learned to trade unwanted or unused appliances — and discontinued buying new gadgets for others.

For more information or a free publication about energy used and appliances, please contact Mrs. Jane W. Cohen, Extension Agent — Home Energy, Texas Agricultural Extension Service, 4232 Boston Ave., Lubbock, Tx. 79413, or telephone 792-4780. Educational programs conducted by the Texas Agricultural Extenstion Service serve people of all ages, regardless of socio-economic level, race, color, sex, religion, or national origin.

ALL MY CHILDREN: Frank invited Betsy to Donna's party after Nancy turned him down. Eddie took sexual advantage of a drunken Brooke, but she later told him to scram. Charles and Mona laughed that Phoebe's been acting the saint while she's secretly playing around with Langley. Phoebe had a fit when Paul announced he's divorcing Ann, who had flashing memories of him in the sanitarium while plotting an escape. Myra cried after overhearing Nina talking to her mother's portrait and Palmer warned Myra never to mention his wife to Nina. Kelly claimed she's suffering from narcolepsy but Myrtle and Joe knew better. Tom's surgery was successful. Brooke told Mark she's pregnant. Kelly had nightmares that Linc ditched her after Eddie squealed that she's a speed freak.

ANOTHER WORLD: Eileen moved back with Rita and steered clear of Joey after admitting to Morgan that she had lost her virginity to Phil. Clarice tipped off Jamie that Blaine planned an abortion. He rushed to Blaine's side. Kirk's company is in financial straits and he urged Iris to persuade Mac to sell Cory Publishing. Kirk's detective, Murdock, discovered that Janice had once been kept by a guy named Howard. Murdock continued tracking down dirt on Sylvie also. Frank wasn't enthused that Janice wanted him to write an article about the plight of Vietnamese children. Mike thought Karen was bonkers when she insisted that Ted was alive. Iris feared that Viven would return to the farm after Viv's mother died. Larry decided to enter the police academy. Sally taunted Eileen about knowing about Eileen and Phil. Paul learned he can get an annulment if Rita knew she was barren when they married.

AS THE WORLD TURNS: Hester stood in the garage shadows as Grant borrowed Lisa's car. Grant was injured in an accident and suspected that Bennett had tampered with the brakes. Jay warned Matt not to get hung up on Melinda who is still married to Beau. Ian admitted to Barbara that he used her to get closer to Dana. Alex departed on business after he and Val returned from their honeymoon. Val reported a missing ruby stickpin, but Tom remembered spotting one of the wedding caterer's assistants, Sheila, guiltily hanging around Kate's room. Ellen's in a funk about Dan and Dee doesn't want to return to an out-of-town school. Marcia admitted to Jeff that Doug's lost interest in her and is bait for another woman.

DAYS OF OUR LIVES: Doug fell for Lee's sympathy act and offered financial support after he inherited Byron's estate; Julie refused to see Hope. Bill dined with Maggie during Mickey's absence. Linda hired an investigative firm to tail Stephanie. Julie promised to keep mum about Stephanie being Brooke unless Stephanie hurts Bob. Steve paid court to both Mary and Lee until he learned Lee is poor as a churchmouse. Alex flirted with Maggie. Amanda had pregnancy problems after learning that her baby will legally belong to Greg even if it's Chris' child. Jordan helped Julie psychologically at Linda's urging. Mary asked Bob to hire Steve. Don became a city councilman. Chris rehired Mike at Anderson's thanks to Margo.

THE DOCTORS: Greta nixed Billy's marriage proposal and he skipped town. The cult moved to Lisa's hospital room while Steve and Carolee tried to convince Lisa to leave the group. Foul Wind put a curse on Steve indicating that if Foul Wind lost "a child" so would Steve and Carolee. Kim rubbed it in to Missy that Luke doesn't have a choice about Kim becoming a club partner since Evan would take him to court.

EDGE OF NIGHT: It was revealed that Tobias is really Mickey who assured Paige he didn't want to kill her. But, Mickey slashed Tobias and arranged with gang member Zack to set up Steve and Paige for a hit. Sarah and Raven slapped each other around over Elliott, then Sarah warned Logan that his wife is cheating on him. Nola went on a bender after overhearing Owen tell producer Eddie that she's washed up. But, Owen finally consented to direct the horror flick with Nola as star. Logan asked Draper to arrange Logan's adoption of Jamie.

GENERAL HOSPITAL: Laura warned Amy not to get interested in Luke. Joe, Jeff and Steve headed for Mexico where Carol is hospitalized. Mitch told Tracy he couldn't live with her since the mob might hound him about Ted's death. Tracy spotted Mitch coming on to Susan. Amy blabbed to Scotty that Laura got a job at the disco. Alan found Amy admiring his house, then consoled her after learning her father had died. Monica and her unborn baby's condition improved. Dorrie told Howard it is over between them and packed her bags. Lesley investigated whether Mrs. Kakorian had a history of heart trouble.

GUIDING LIGHT: Rita's old flame Greg Fairbanks arrived and sexually tempted her. Lucille reminded Brandon that he dropped her after she agreed to raise Amanda, who is actually Alan's daughter, although Alan doesn't know it. Amanda snared Ben in a Washington motel, but assured him it's a no-strings relationship. The French patient's bullet wounds healed. Alan and Hope grew closer to each other on the islands. Ross handled Jackie's legal affairs and showed a physical interest in her, and in Amanda. Floyd was a bit jealous that Mark seems smitten with Lainie. Rita realized she has sexual problems with Ed. Lucille refused to tell Ben and Amanda why she visited Brandon, but approved of their joint trip together.

LOVE OF LIFE: Steve noticed that Vanessa had the blahs after a trip with Bruce. She realized Steve is interested in her. Kim told Tony that he fathered a child that she gave to a priest in order to get the baby out of Vietnam. Wes agreed to marry Gina if he can ditch her once the baby's born. Bambi was upset by Tony's strange behavior but Paul consoled her. Mia kept Betsy's message from Ben.

ONE LIFE TO LIVE: Brad's filthy hands covered Karen with lust, but she didn't report the rape because of Jenny. Samantha and Mick got along famously, but Tina decided she wants a piece of Mick's action. Karen drowned her sorrows at the River Rat, then injured a stranger's lecherous paws. Katrina guessed that Karen was raped and Brad hustled to keep Katrina quiet. Dorian had Gretel take over Pat's TV show since Pat's ill. Maggie teased Adam that she had a scheme to reunite him and Pat, but Maggie intended to snatch Adam for herself. Ed convinced Edwina not to write a yellow story on Karen, who refused to confide in anyone, especially Will.

RYAN'S HOPE: Jill and Frank overheard Rae and Seneca discuss their schemes to keep Jill and Frank apart. Roger flared at Dee for interfering in Nancy and Pat's relationship. Pat got drunk over Nancy and Adam. After lots of sexual romping, Joe introduced Siobhan to a godfather-type pal. Mr. Novotny. Jill cancelled her San Francisco trip, now that she and Frank are reunited, but Rae swore vengeance.

SEARCH FOR TOMORROW: Travis went running to Italy after David told him something mysterious about Renata. John overheard Stephanie chew out Ted for not keeping Todd away from Wendy. Janet refused John's request to call a board meeting about Ted gambling with stockholder' money on oil deals. Tony (Antonio) led David to a village where David found Renata's birth records. Helene plotted to take advantage of Carolyn's blindness. Lee urged Sunny to have more fun in her life and that he can provide it.

THE YOUNG AND THE RESTLESS: Laurie accused Luke of trying to kill Lance by sending him to revolutionary Santo Domingo. Derek thought Suzanne is drinking heavily and ran to tell Jill he'll always love Jill. Kay finally "appeared" in front of Brock and admitted she's pretending to be dead to uncover Suzanne's schemes. Nikki fretted that Greg doesn't want to start a family immediately once they're married. Leslie returned and Laurie realized she's concerned for Lance's welfare.

Health Department Provides Prenatal Clinic For Local Residents

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the seventh in a series on pregnancy.

By BEVERLY O'BRIANT
Family News Staff

According to a report by the American Council of Life Insurance and the Health Institute, the average cost of having a baby is about $2,200 (conservative figures).

Of that figure, the hospital bill is the highest cost. "Your bill, based on an average hospital stay of 3.3 days and including labor room, delivery room, and pharmacy and laboratory charges will be about $900. Add $500 for other medical costs including surgical charges, anesthesia, and pediatrician's care.

Many couples have some form of maternity coverage under group medical expense plans where one or both work.

However, that statement does not cover all pregnancies. It may be all a woman can do to get together enough money for delivery, making prenatal care out of the question.

According to a publication by Jeannette Watson, of the Texas Department of Community Affairs, childbirth expenses alone jumped 40 percent in five years — to $2,194 in 1976. She continues, "Three-fourths of mothers 17 and younger have no health insurance at all, and even more are not covered for maternity expenses, thus increasing the probability that these mothers will not get adequate prenatal and medical care. Infants born to teenage mothers are more subject to death, birth defects and low birth weight than babies born to older mothers, and the teenage mothers themselves are more at risk for illness and injury."

Because of the great need, and the knowledge that Lubbock has a high rate of infant mortality, a search was carried out to discover what avenues ARE available to a teenage and/or low-income mother.

The fees charged by obstetricians for prenatal care vary greatly. The charge ranges from $450 to $1,000 — a charge that must be paid before the delivery. Hospitals demand a deposit ranging from $250 to $500 prior to the delivery, and that amount normally does not cover the birth cost.

One way any pregnant woman in Lubbock may get proper care at a relatively affordable cost is to utilize the Lubbock City Health Department prenatal clinic. The clinic, which has been in operation for about 20 year, is funded by the city and is entirely free to any pregnant woman living in Lubbock who wishes to go there. The prenatal clinic is open from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday-Friday, although clinic hours vary according to the doctors' schedules.

The seven-member clinic staff and a number of volunteer doctors take care of about 500 visits a month and about 100 new patients each month. The doctors represent West Texas Hospital, the Women's Clinic, the Pavillon, Health Sciences Center Hospital and the Texas Tech University School of Medicine.

A patient in the clinic is given a complete checkup upon entry in the program including a pap smear, tuberculosis test, standard innoculations, venereal disease check, diabetes and Rh type.

According to Wanda Vaughn, director of nurses in the clinic, the patients "get everything here that they would in private practice and more." She pointed out that in addition to prenatal care, the patients have access to public health nurses who can go out to check on the family. The staff at the clinic are concerned "not only with the physical well-being but the mental well-being of the woman as well."

The patients come by appointment only. Most women come to the clinic 10-20 times during their pregnancy. After the 36th week of pregnancy, the clinic sends the woman's records to the hospital she wishes to use. A deposit must be paid. The women don't see the doctor during each visit; the doctor examines them during the first visit to the clinic, but a trained nurse may conduct other examinations.

The greatest difficulty the clinic faces is the inaccessibility of the building. There is no bus service to the clinic, and the closest bus stop is about a mile away. Luckily, Mrs. Vaughn pointed out, the clinic has very little problem with "no-shows" once the woman is in the system.

Because the prenatal clinic sees so many women, the city is looking at expanding the education and counseling program, explained Mrs. Vaughn. The program would include counseling, prenatal care, nutrition information, referrals, family planning, a discussion of the "normal" discomforts of pregnancy and fetus development.

One of the things the staff at the clinic tries to do is "help the fetus become real to them (the mother) soon," said Mrs. Vaughn. The mother is allowed to listen to the baby with the fetalscope and fathers are encouraged to come with the mother. "The mother needs so much support, we try to teach the father to support the mother," she added.

"There is no need for a woman not to get prenatal care in the city," said Mrs. Vaughn. "If (the woman) works with us, there is no reason for lack of care. There are very few times we can't guide the woman to help."

Health Sciences Center Hospital is the community hospital designed to handle indigent and high-risk cases. Its many new and innovative facilities can be compared with other maternity wards in local hospitals.

The maternity ward at HSCH has five private rooms; the rest of the rooms are semi-private. There are two labor and delivery rooms, one equipped with anesthesia for cesaerean section deliveries. Since HSCH is a teaching hospital, many techniques are new and not quite so well-established as those in other local hospitals.

An unique feature of the hospital is its birthing room. In this room, there is a home environment. Labor, delivery, and recovery take place in the same room. The family is allowed to stay in the room, so that it is like a home birth with the safety of a hospital. Two such rooms are planned by the hospital.

The room is just like a bedroom, with seating, tables and regular furnishings. The use of the birthing room may save the cost of a private room; nursery fees and other expenses.

The concept focuses on a family-centered birth, in which the father can even deliver the baby with the supervision and approval of the doctor. With permission, the mother and baby may go home within four to six hours after delivery.

Some of the innovations of HSCH include fetal monitoring to determine dangerous stresses in the infant or mother; a strong belief in having the father present during labor; sibling visits and rooming-in of the newborns.

According to information from the hospital, 50-75 percent of all deliveries at HSCH are high-risk pregnancies. Therefore, one of the most innovative and most expensive features of the maternity ward is the neonatal intensive care unit.

There are 10 isolettes in the minimum care section of the neonatal unit. In the minimum care neonatal unit, the attention is turned toward feeding and growth. The babies are premature but have no serious problems.

In the 20-isolette maximum care unit, the babies may have respiratory problems, heart problems, surgery or physical condition subject to immediate change. The smallest baby ever in the neonatal unit weighed one pound six ounces and was 26 weeks premature; its physical development was immature but it was growing and improving. The program is very expensive, however, costing as much as $50,000 to $100,000 per infant.

The key word in the services provided by HSCH is flexibility. As long as children have no disease, they are allowed to visit their mother and sibling in the room. Breastfeeding and child care is taught to new mothers by the nurses. Meals are kept until the patients is ready for them. With the "rooming in" concept, the baby may stay with the mother as long as she desires.

The best advice to expectant mothers with limited resources and no insurance coverage may come from referrals from agencies. Such agencies as Planned Parenthood, Family Planning, South Plains Health Providers, South Plains Community Action and the Texas Department of Health offer help to many or refer clients to other groups more able to serve them.

SUDDEN BIRTH

LACEY GREEN, England (WNS) — Male regulars at a local pub named The Whip are broadminded about women customers at the bar, but said they'd like to curb the age limit after Emma Williams selected it as the place to be born. Her 40-year-old father Richard owns The Whip and had started counting the receipts when his pregnant wife Brenda, 33, announced he should drive her to the maternity hospital. The notice was too short. "Suddenly I had to drop the money to deliver my baby," he said. "It was all over so quickly that I didn't have time to feel nervous."

Registration Begins Monday At YMCA

The Young Men's Christian Association, 1601 24th St., will begin registration for its fall classes Monday. Registration must be completed in person with the YMCA Registrar between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m. Monday through Friday. If the class requires a membership and/or a fee, it must be paid at the time of enrollment.

Among the classes offered which do not require a membership to participate are:

Activities: Tri-Hi-Y, Hi-Y, youth and government, bowling league, pool and ping-pong tournaments, open swims, lifesaving classes, basketball leagues, running races, CPR clinics, blood pressure testing, karate, disco dance, ski fitness, healthy back classes, cardiovascular clinics, church athletic leagues, and scuba diving.

Many of the Y's activities are free to members such as fitness classes, gymnastics, open swim and use of the gymnasium and weightlifting room. Other classes that only require membership to attend are: fitness testing for men and women, cardiovascular clinics, blood pressure screening, CPR clinics, running races, businessmen's basketball, racquetball and handball games, co-ed volleyball, water babies, lifesaving, family swim, fitness swims, open co-ed swims, scrubbing for boys ages 9-15 and youth bowling.

Several of the programs offered are new or cover a wide range of interests. Among them are:

Activities — an introduction to fitness which emphasizes fun while learning the importance of exercise in weight control, fitness and cardiorespiratory efficiency. The course involves goal setting, discovery activities, values clarification discussions, behavior modification and group dynamics. The 10-week class meets Monday and Wednesday from 6-7 p.m. beginning Oct. 8. A minimum of 10 people are needed to start a class.

Y's Way to a Healthy Back — a new program designed to prevent back pain caused by stressful conditions and weak muscles. The class begins with a brief evaluation of postural muscle strength and flexibility. The class learns and practices a basic group of exercises, learning one new exercise during each class meeting which must be done at home or work daily. The exercises are learned quickly and can be executed in a suit or loose fitting dress. Each participant will receive a manual and cassette tape to aid in home exercise. The group will meet Monday and Wednesday from 5:45-6:30 p.m. beginning Sept. 17 and Nov. 6. A minimum of six is needed to start the class.

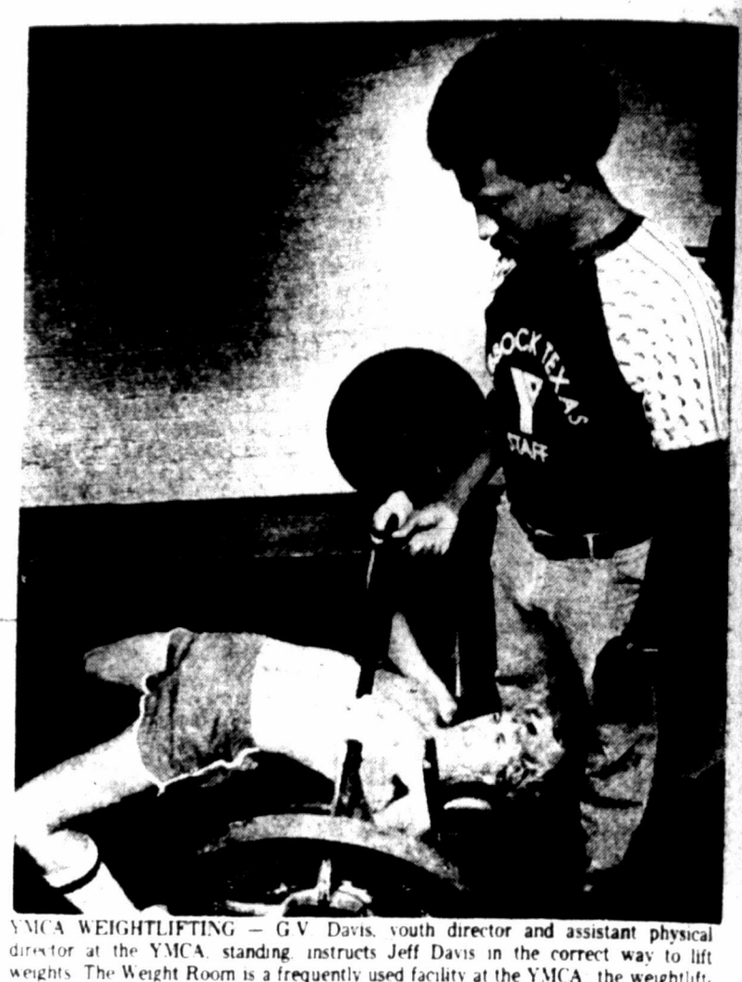

Ski Fitness — is designed to get the body in shape for the ski season. Proper muscle stretching and strengthening, cardiovascular-type exercises and weight training will be done. Handouts on special exercises will also be provided. The six-week course starts Nov. 12 and will meet Monday and Wednesday from 7-8 p.m. Six members are needed to start the class.

Disco Dance — The six-week sessions will meet from 8:30-9:30 p.m. Mondays. Classes will start Sept. 17 and Oct. 19.

Karate — Tae Kwan Do karate will be taught at the YMCA this year. Classes will be held from 6:30-7:45 p.m. Monday and Wednesday. Belt achievement may be accomplished over a period of months.

Racquetball and handball lessons — to teach the basics of the game. Sign up for beginning, intermediate, or advanced level. The course will be offered weeknights and Saturday morning. When signing up for the class, designate level and best time and day for you to take lessons. Class members will be contacted when a class can be formed.

Family Fun and Fitness Team — will be held on Friday nights from 7-7:30 p.m. Activities are designed for parents and children to participate in together. A co-ed exercise class will be held for parents and body movement for children from 7:30-8 p.m. The pool will be open for family swim from 7:8:45 p.m. Children must be at least one year old through age 12 to participate in the gym portion of the program.

Economic Factors Affect Career Decision

By FRANCES LOWE
Family News Editor

Although money is not the only reason for a woman's return to work, it is the reason most frequently given. In these days of rampant inflation, many families are having trouble making ends meet without the additional income that a working wife can contribute.

The actual amount of her contribution will depend on a number of factors which she may not consider.

William Gustafson, who teaches family financial management in the School of Home Economics at Texas Tech University, suggests that if a wife is thinking of going to work, she and her husband should sit down and discuss the factors involved, both the sharing of responsibility at home and the financial implications of the change.

If you have a skill or profession which is in demand, you should be able to get an accurate estimate of local pay scales. If you are unskilled, you will need to do some research to discover what jobs are open to you and what they are likely to pay. In such cases, education or training may be a real investment in terms of future earnings, especially if you see a particular expense several years in the future, such as education for your children.

Once you have arrived at a probable salary, do not conclude that you are going to have that much money to spend. "I even have trouble getting my students to understand the difference between net and gross," Gustafson noted. Deductions may run to as much as one-fifth to one-quarter of your pay.

You also need to consider how your income tax situation will be affected. It is possible that your additional income may move the family into a higher tax bracket. Figure out the tax as many ways as possible, with all possible deductions (some of your job-related expenses, such as child care and uniforms will be deductable, and it is best to know which ones ahead of time, so that you can keep records).

When you apply for a job, find out about company benefits, Gustafson advises. If your health insurance will be paid by your employer, instead of by your husband, it can mean a real savings.

Next, try to estimate the job-related expenses you will be incurring. Special equipment, such as uniforms, will come readily to mind, but even if special clothes are not required you may need a more elaborate wardrobe than you have been accustomed to. You must also consider transportation, which Gustafson pointed out can be considerable, especially if you would need to buy a new car.

Child care is an important expense, Gustafson noted. The cost will depend on how many children you have, their ages, whether you plan to send them to a nursery or hire a babysitter at home, how many hours a day they will need to be cared for, how they will be transported.

Other expenses may be difficult to estimate until you are actually working, because they vary with your family and lifestyle. These are the things that you now do for yourself that you will have to pay somebody else to do. If you have been making all your own and your children's clothing, it will obviously cost more to buy them. You may also find yourself paying to have your hair done, the lawn mowed, minor repairs to the home, car washing, housecleaning, etc.

Chances are that, at least when you first return to work you will be eating more meals out, and buying more packaged and prepared foods than before.

Families vary in the way they handle the wife's income, Gustafson said, and there are no reliable statistics regarding which way is most successful.

Many, perhaps most, families throw both incomes into a common pot and share household expenses without regard to who pays for what. Others, however, prefer a clear delineation of financial responsibility, sometimes in writing. Sometimes a third checking account, for household expenses, is opened. Or the couple may contribute to household expense in proportion to their incomes.

In some families, either the husband or wife is financial officer, paying the bills and keeping track of expenses. In others, it is a shared chore; they sit down once a month and go over the bills and discuss how they should be paid.

Curiously, who handles the money is related more closely to the philosophy of the family toward savings than to any other factor, Gustafson noted.

THOUGHTS ON LEARNING

Career Woman Needs Support Of Family

By BEVERLY O'BRIANT
Family News Staff

When a wife and or mother returns to work, the change in the family structure may be drastic. The woman is no longer available at all hours to run errands, be home for repairmen, or supply most of the needs of a family.

One of the greatest complaints coming from a family in which the woman works, according to Margaret Elbow, director of Family Services Association, is the lack of attention the rest of the family supposedly gets from the woman. The working woman's biggest complaint is usually that the family is unwilling to help her around the house, which is usually one of the main reasons the mother doesn't have time to spend with her family.

Mrs. Elbow believes that the problems come directly from a lack of communication. Couple that with the woman's unwillingness to ask for help, and a lot of tension in the family can result.

An example of a successful transition from non-working mother to working mother was given by Mrs. Elbow. A woman she knew had never worked. She had three children and decided that she would go to work so that they could have some extra things, such as piano lessons, a few more clothes, etc.

The parents worked out the arrangement between them, then talked to the children about the idea as a couple. The children were told that "Mom" was doing this for the family and as such, it was a family project.

The parents also explained that the fact that she was going to work was not a "put-down of the husband's ability" but a way of getting things they needed. The family worked together as a team, and the children were assigned specific responsibilities. The process made life easier for everybody.

According to Mrs. Elbow, "preparation for a mother going back to work is important, but it has to be ongoing." A mother with young children who intends to return to the work force should teach the children to accept her absence. By taking time out for herself, leaving the children with a babysitter for a while, the children learn that "mother can go away, but she comes back."

Children should be taught responsibility at an early age also, said Mrs. Elbow. By allowing small children to do things, the children develop self-confidence and are conditioned to accept responsibility when it is necessary. "It is amazing how good kids feel about helping," she said.

Children whom Mrs. Elbow has counseled explained that the hardest thing about their mother working was coming home from school and not finding her there. The loneliness can overwhelm children and the time before the mother returns is usually when most siblings get into trouble and fight. Mrs. Elbow's suggestion for the problem is a simple phone call home at a specific time or permission for the children to call the mother at work. When that is not possible, after-school activities may help.

People are naturally resistant to change, said Mrs. Elbow, and families are no exception. However, it is the woman's attitude toward working that really makes the difference in whether the family adjusts well to the situation.

If the woman wants to work and feels comfortable with the situation, the rest of the family is more likely to accept it. If the woman feels guilty about her life outside the home, she may feel too guilty to ask for help.

Roles have a strong place in this situation. Because the woman may have been taught that "housework is woman's work," she may feel guilty about asking her husband to help with the chores, said Mrs. Elbow. She may be angry about the lack of help, but not ask her husband for assistance.

Some men are eager to help with housework, reasoning that "both of us work and both have responsibilities at home," explained Mrs. Elbow. Older women may find that their husband's attitude is different and that, having assumed the total responsibility for many years, they may find the pattern firmly established and difficult to change.

A few of the answers to these problems could include putting some structure into the household chores and using behavior modification. Mrs. Elbow suggests making up a list of duties and letting each family member choose what responsibilities he would not mind assuming. A policy of "everybody has a job to do, do the work then play" is advised. To combat both problems, lack of attention and getting the work done, a policy of finishing chores, then do something as a family, may help.

The controversy of working mothers appears to be settled with a study of preschoolers cited by Mrs. Elbow. According to the study, whether the mother worked or not had little effect on the adjustment of the child. The important thing was that the mother feel good about what she was doing.

Self-Assessment Reveals Job Skills

By FRANCES LOWE
Family News Editor

To the woman facing the pressing need to look for work for the first time, or after a long absence from the job market, the prospect can be terrifying.

Women find themselves in this situation in increasing numbers, however, whether because of divorce or the death of a spouse or to meet the demands of inflation.

June Read, of the Department of Home and Family Life at Texas Tech University, offers some pointers for the woman who suddenly finds herself on her own, facing the frightening prospect of having to support herself and, perhaps, her children.

First of all, she recommended that you sit down and carefully assess your financial situation. "Figure out how much you need to live on; then choose a slightly higher figure," she said. The figure should be realistic, but is likely to be higher than your first estimate.

Then, Miss Read said, take a "blue sky" look at yourself. With pencil and paper in hand, ask yourself, "If I could do anything in the world I wanted, what would it be?"

What sorts of things do you enjoy? What are you good at? Is there something you have always wanted to do? Is there an old talent or skill that you have neglected? Now is the time to at least consider any and all possibilities.

Then assess yourself slightly more realistically to discover where your skills and talents lie.

Do you enjoy working with people, or do you like to be alone? Are you good under pressure, or does it make you go to pieces? Do you like detail or prefer broad, general occupations? Are you good with your hands, or better at working with ideas, or perhaps a terrific speaker? Do you welcome responsibility or shun it? Do you function well under pressure, or come apart at the seams?

Answers to these questions will give you a good idea of what your own interests are and what sort of work is most likely to suit you.

Then, assess your abilities and training in more specific terms. List all your skills, from knitting (which might be useful in occupations demanding detailed hand work) to running office machines. Include your volunteer and extra-curricular activities, which should have given you valuable experience. If you have successfully planned a fund raising campaign, or gone door-to-door asking for money, or planned a new club project, you have gained valuable skills.

This self-assessment will also help you project a positive image when you speak to the personnel officer or counselor. Once you are in that office, Miss Read says, be as positive and optomistic and self-assured as you can possibly be. Don't take the attitude of "there's nothing I can do"; rather, project, through your words and your poise, "I am a capable person, ready to tackle anything."

Over-sell yourself. Make the most of your talents and capabilities, even more than you may think they are really worth. Overestimate your skills rather than underestimating them, she advises.

If you are an older woman, you have many qualities that will be valuable to an employer, which younger job-seekers may lack: punctuality, reliability, dedication, willingness to learn, diplomacy, steadiness.

When you go for your interview, Miss Read pointed out, look as professional as possible. Do not dress for the job, but for the interview. If you are looking for a job as a cocktail waitress, don't dress as one, wear, instead, a business suit. You want to give the impression of professionalism, maturity, seriousness.

You also need to assess your home life before going out to work, Miss Read commented. Make plans ahead of time for housework, for child care, for the running of the home. The better organized you are at home, the more confident you will be that things are going smoothly there, so that you can pay attention to your job.

Expert Offers Tips On Life Insurance

COLLEGE STATION (Special) — Examine your life insurance policy — but keep a few points in mind, advises Linda McCormack, a family resource management specialist.

1. The whole point of buying life insurance is to provide financial security in case of unexpected death. Yet, the typical cash value of a whole-life policy pays much, much smaller death benefits than a term policy costing the same.

2. The "cash surrender values" of the whole-life policy don't earn enough to even overcome inflation. They earn an average 3½ percent rate of return after 20 years. The average rate of interest on non-dividend-paying policies is a meager 2¼ percent.

3. If you die while insured by a whole-life policy, those cash values disappear. The company will pay your beneficiary only the face amount of the policy — with no extra cash values awarded.

4. The insurance agent is paid far more commission dollars by his company for selling whole-life insurance than the cheaper term policies.

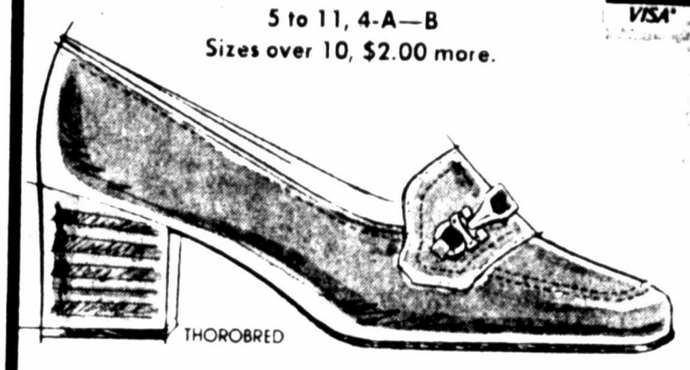

5. Your whole-life insurance agent may promise you all sorts of continuing services when he sells you the policy, but he won't tell you that the average agent lasts only six months in the business. This "servicing" is likely to be "self-servicing" — encouraging you to buy ever-increasing amounts of whole-life insurance rather than objectively considering financial alternatives.

6. Term insurance is available up to age 100 from some companies that specialize in this insurance.

7. Mutual insurance companies pay a so-called dividend, which is simply an overcharge of your premium which raises the cost of the average policy by as much as 30 percent. You could take this same money — your dividend — and invest it yourself and get a far better return.

Real To Reel

By William D. Kerns

She has sung for the king of Norway and the president of the United States. She's been nominated for more than one Grammy Award, and has enjoyed record sales in the "platinum" (one million units) range. She's played Carnegie Hall and smaller auditoriums, and now enjoys a more limited performing schedule. And oh yes, she's not Linda or Emmi Lou or Carly or Barbra, and her medium is not pop-rock. Her name is Evie — and she sings what is rather vaguely labeled "Christian music."

Mind you, those who shy away from the secular radio stations and Christian music publications have probably never heard of Evie Tornquist. Yet her musical accomplishments have reaped international acclaim. That may lie in part with her very likeable easy listening style; her songs have the same beat, the same flow as the pop and middle of the road tunes one hears on today's AM bands. There is an air of light innocence rather than heavy message.

But though the words may vary, the message of each song is always the same. Recalling a time when some religious figures fought pop and rock music, it seems even more ironic to find a young woman merging popular music and religion so effectively.

Tickets are already selling well for Miss Tornquist's Sept. 17 appearance at the Civic Center exhibition hall and, in a telephone interview a few days back, the young vocalist addressed the theory of being able to win more converts for the Lord through a softer approach like music. "I really can't say exactly that that is true," she said. "I would guess it is possible for some people to be more apt to listen to a song than to someone preaching from behind a pulpit. But the way I see it, God's gonna get you one way or the other. For example, there's so much Christian television programming these days that a person can hear the word of God just by watching TV.

EVIE TORNQUIST
Booked at Civic Center on Sept. 17

"But I not only use my music for the Lord, I try to use my whole life on an everyday, 24-hours-a-day basis. I want to live the message, not just sing it. Whether I'm on a stage or weeding my lawn or shopping at the market. I have to realize that most of the people at my concerts are already Christians — though some have yet to fully realize what it takes to be a Christian. You know, there are some who feel 'I'm an American, so of course I'm a Christian' or 'I go to church, so I must be a Christian.'

"But the true relationship is not whether you're a church member or a singer in the choir. It's a one-to-one level with the Lord and oneself, a private thing that you can't inherit. It's a personal realization. So my only desire is to constantly, on a daily basis, check myself in my own standing with the Lord. And if my music is heard by someone who is yet to believe — I like to call them pre-Christians — well, hopefully it will affect them in a positive way."

Now 23, Evie Tornquist began performing professionally at the age of 15. She insists she has no desire to sing anything other than Christian songs, since "that's the plan God has for my life." She answers the now antique question of what led her to this career with recollections of her childhood in Scandinavia: of church work, of choir practice, being raised in a Christian home and "singing Christian songs all my life."

Even so, one must wonder whether she feels she missed anything. Singing for the Lord is noble and no doubt fulfilling, but was there ever a time when Evie was 17 or 18 and confused? A time when she perhaps wondered what a teenager did if not required to sing and rehearse and make records? Speaking from her mother's home in Rahway, N.J., the vocalist would not go into much detail. "It sounds particularly harsh," she said, "but reports of children working can sound a lot worse that they really are. I mean, I've been very busy, yes. And the early years were extremely hectic.

"But I've always thought it important to have fun and be normal. You have to be true to yourself. Now I'm a married woman. My husband and I enjoy life, and I no longer tax myself with lots of singing engagements. ...My tours are more concentrated in time blocks rather than sheer numbers. I usually perform just three months of the year."

Her husband plays an active part of her career, playing on her albums and writing some of her songs. Hundreds of others are submitted by other composers, so many that "I can't possibly go over all of them myself, so I have friends at the record company sift through the songs to find those that might fit my style." And when she's not singing Christian songs, she listens to a variety of other music — or none at all.

"I like listening to Christian music by other artists; it encourages me in my own faith. But I don't just have one style of music that I listen to. I don't have favorites, but I suppose I'd have to admit that my husband and I lean more towards the 'country' side of life. ...And yet the record player is not always going. Music is not a hobby, and we do like to rest our ears a bit."

Understandable. Yet millions of fans keep listening to Evie Tornquist's records, and thousands line up to buy tickets for her concerts. She's a multi-award winner, and it is difficult to shove such success into the shadows. Still, all the acclaim never ceases to amaze her. As she put it, "I've been honest with you in this interview, and I want to continue to do so. So I have to say that I am daily surprised by all the awards and things. And I don't want to sound over-idealistic or strange or mightier-than-thou, but I just don't think much about these honors.

"I mean, I appreciate the recognition by my friends in the music business. It's all great, and I'm thankful for it. But this (awards) is really rather useless. Because awards aren't really what makes a difference in life. To be used by God is most important."

Those same priorities are expressed, with even more feeling and compassion, in her music.

Evie Tornquist will appear in concert at 8 p.m. Sept. 17 at the Civic Center exhibition hall. Tickets are now on sale in three price ranges at the Lubbock Baptist Student Union, the Good News Bookstore, the Baptist Bookstore and the Shirt Tale at South Plains Mall.

I received a letter recently from a person griping about the raw language in "North Dallas Forty," a reader who feels I must be totally without morals because I liked the film. And though I rarely give unsigned letters much thought, I felt now would be as good a time as any to say that there are indeed good family movies on the screen these days. The Mann Theater has two of the year's best (and two of my own favorite) films in "A Little Romance" and "Breaking Away." Both are PG movies of the most inoffensive note.

The Village has Disney's "Freaky Friday," a G-rated entertainment which keeps the adults laughing along with the kids. And who in possession of an imagination could dislike "The Muppet Movie?"

But, as mentioned so many times before in this column, the rating system may not be without its faults — but it serves a purpose. Anyone who finds raw language or violence totally worthless and offensive on screen should know enough to stay away from R-rated movies in the first place. The R is not just a symbol; it serves as a guide. Use it. But that does not mean that R-rated movies like "North Dallas Forty" or "Manhattan" or "Alien" or "The Deer Hunter," to name a few, are without great quality and entertainment value.

End of conversation...

September offers a lot more than a Buddy Holly Memorial Concert and the great country acts at the South Plains Fair. For example, this is the month many arts organizations put their season tickets on sale — and season tickets spell big discounts for some very promising entertainment in this area. The Lubbock Symphony Orchestra, the Texas Tech University Theater and the Tech Artists' Series are all promoting their seasonal events. We've got more detailed information on all three on the following pages.

OK kids, it's confirmed. It's true. The contract has been returned. Everything is in order. Start saving your allowance money, because rock band Kiss is coming back to Lubbock. And you couldn't ask for a more appropriate booking date. This make-up-laden band will perform their theatrical rock at 8 p.m. at the Lubbock Coliseum — on Halloween night.

I can see it now. A sellout crowd of 10,000, most of them still dressed in the costumes they wore to trick-or-treat in a couple hours beforehand. And just how many youngsters will be walking the streets on Oct. 31 dressed like their favorite musicians? A scary thought...

New Bolshoi Ballet Misses Mark

By GLENNE CURRIE
UPI Lively Arts Editor

NEW YORK — They really should scrap the Bolshoi Ballet's new "Romeo and Juliet." The old version was, oh, so much better.

It's as if the Soviets retired the Mona Lisa and replaced it with a piece of schlock social realism.

When the Bolshoi first burst onto the western world two decades ago, Leonid Lavrovsky's lavish "Romeo and Juliet," especially when danced by the incomparable Galina Ulanova, was the main star in its firmament.

Now Yuri Grigorovich, the Bolshoi's artistic director and principal choreographer (who seems bent on imposing his own ideas on the entire repertory) has disemboweled and emasculated "Romeo and Juliet," though still using the marvelous Prokofiev score. His version, first seen at the Bolshoi in July this year — to groans from some Moscow dancers and critics — had its American premiere Aug. 15 at the New York State Theater.

Gone are the spectacle, the magnificent sets and unforgettable costumes, the lovely pas de deux of Lavrovsky's "Romeo and Juliet."

Instead Grigorovich presents 3 1/4 hours of dance with no sets, no extras, insipid choreography for the star-crossed lovers, dim lighting and scrims, and a total lack of dramatic shape or feeling of period and place.

His "Romeo and Juliet" gives no credit to Lavrovsky, leaving the door open for a revival of the older version, which can't come too soon.

That Grigorovich should essay a "Romeo and Juliet" in purely classical dance terms is admirable.

That he should in the process dehumanize Romeo and Juliet, leaving them blurred, romantic figures with indifferent choreography, is deplorable. And that as the tragedy builds to a climax, with Juliet suppposedly dead by her own hand, he should interject three long divertissements and thus ruin all dramatic values, is plain ridiculous. Till then the story has moved along at a good pace, despite a couple of unnecessary scenes.

Grigorovich, falling victim to the temptation that all Shakespearean directors and choreographers should avoid, has lavished all his invention on Tybalt and Mercutio.

Fortunately the Bolshoi's great male dancers come to the rescue. What you remember is not Lavrovsky's Juliet in her shift melting in Romeo's arms but the stag leaps and leaping spread-eagles of Alexander Godunov's Tybalt, and the staggering double scissors leaps of Mikhail Tsivin as Mercutio, and his impossible turning gargouillades.

Prima ballerina Natalia Bessmertnova as Juliet and particularly Alexander Bogatyrev as Romeo were defeated by the choreography, bored with their parts and embarrassed by eight blonde-wigged maidens (Angels? Muses? Wilis strayed from some Veronese "Giselle?") who appear at the most inopportune moments, such as the balcony and bedroom scenes.

A second viewing the following night only reinforced impressions of the new ballet. But the acting was better, and the dancing just as good.

Young Nadezhda Pavlova, the Bolshoi's rising star, gave a fine interpretation of Juliet, who is depicted by Grigorovich more as a young sophisticate than Shakespeare's childwoman. Vyacheslav Gordeyev was a more lively Romeo and Leonid Koslov provided some subtlety as well as wonderful dancing as Tybalt, making him a complex hot-tempered character rather than a caricature.

Pavlova was seen earlier in a repeat of Grigorovich's "Spartacus" on Aug. 11, and both she and her Spartacus, Gordeyev, seemed even better than the great opening night pairing of Bessmertnova and Godunov.

Pavlova's Phrygia has more flesh and blood and the young dancer's beautiful line — till now known here only in photographs — is star quality. Gordeyev's grizzled Spartacus and characterization were a visual improvement over Godunov and his flowing blond mane.

There are many irritating things about "Spartacus" — principally the black vs. white depiction of Romans and slaves — but there are beautiful passages. Among the best are the two pas de deux for Spartacus and Phrygia, and the brief charming dance of the shepherdesses.

An impossible dream: to see Nadezhda Pavlova dance The Royal Ballet's repertory.

The Bolshoi is in residence at the State Theater Aug. 1-26, then heads for Chicago for a week and two weeks in Los Angeles.

Listening In

Albert Lee, "Hiding" (A&M) — Lee's dextrous guitar work has highlighted albums by Emmylou Harris as well as his own project, Head, Hands and Feet. Lee has picked with the best of them, recently completing a concert tour with Eric Clapton. This, his first album as a solo, displays the strong country influence that has infested Lee's work. He is one of the finer guitar players in the rock-country vein, as he proves overwhelmingly with this album.

Lee's selection ranges from the fast-paced opening track "Country Boy" to the inclusion of Dire Straits' "Setting Me Up," a version which writer Mark Knopfler considers superior to his own.

"Hiding" is a cleverly illustrated venture into the mixing of country and rock, this time from an English musician's point of view.

Gruppo Sportivo, "Mistakes" (Sire) — Who ever heard of a Dutch band with an Italian name? These people have.

Gruppo Sportivo is a witty six-member group from Holland whose offbeat sense of humor is reminiscent of defunct British new wavers Deaf School. The group blends often bizarre, cynical humor with quick, intuitive musical arrangements. Much of its humor is derived from a songwriter who goes simply by Van DeFruits, while guitarist vocalist Hans Vandenburg supplies much of the comedy along with female vocalists Josee Van Iersel and Meike Touw.

But simply because Gruppo Sportivo deals humrously with topical items, that doesn't mean the band is limited to them. A couple of nice, unpretentious songs appear in the visage of "Mission A Paris" and "Dreamin'."

The group's primary fault is its lack of direction. The band can deal with serious and comedic music, but it hasn't seemed to learn balance, or, at least, a proper combination of the two.

Chicago Radio Boasts Unique Ideas At WFMT

By SHARON RUTENBERG
United Press International

CHICAGO — Radio's first "superstation" was already unique.

WFMT-FM in Chicago, one of a handful of financially successful classical music outlets, rejects advertising jingles that might offend its Beethoven listeners. It varies the length of its newscasts depending on the amount of news.

Now it has gone national, bouncing its signal off a satellite so it can be heard on cable systems in 49 states.

"We are the first radio station that is being sent by a satellite across the country for distribution to cable systems," said station President Raymond Nordstrand.

The signal is be beamed to the Satcom I satellite, orbiting 22,300 miles above the equator, and transmitted to cable systems "at a price of a penny a subscriber a month" by United Video Inc. of Tulsa, Okla. There are already four television "superstations" available to viewers in all states except Hawaii.

"They chose us because of the uniqueness of our programming ... classical music and with high audio standards we have that does not exist in other communities," Nordstrand said.

The station will not be paid for providing its broadcasts to the cable systems, but will benefit from "a larger audience which may ultimately mean more advertising revenue for us," he said.

The station was already carried by more than 30 cable systems in six Midwest states with more than one third of a million subscribers.

More than 80 percent of the station's music is classical. The remaining programs are comprised of drama, poetry, prose, discussion, folk music, live concerts. It originates Chicago Symphony Orchestra, Chicago Lyric Opera and Milwaukee Symphony Orchestra broadcasts heard on more than 300 stations across the country.

It is not uncommon to hear a WFMT newscaster announce: "There is no news of sufficient importance — here is the weather."

Although it might lose some ad revenues, WFMT has chosen to reject advertising jingles.

"It would be an intrusion and an insult to give them a jingle after they've just heard a symphony," Norstrandsid.

The station, owned by the non-proit Educational Television Association, was established in 1951. It owns Chicago Magazine, which has a circulation of more than 200,000 — the largest of any city monthly in the country. The magazine, which provides a good share of the station's profits, grew out of a program guide started 10 years ago.

Recession Delivering Body Blow To Publishers

By FLOYD NORRIS
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK — The recession is delivering a body blow to book publishers, who find consumers are reacting to higher prices by reducing purchases.

The decline in sales is causing deep concern in the normally lucrative publishing industry, which is looking for ways to lower costs and even is trying selective price cuts to stimulate sales.

"It seemed to have been a relatively recession-proof business," said Alexander C. Hoffman, the chairman of the Association of American Publishers. "In 1973-74, the industry didn't even feel it."

But as the economy has slowed this year, publishers have seen their sales slide.

Hoffman said an AAP survey of 97 publishing houses indicates sales during the first five months this year — both for hardcover books and mass-market paperbacks — were down, possibly by more than 10 percent, from the same period of 1978.

"Books have traditionally done very well during periods of recession," said C. Royce Smith, the executive director of the American Booksellers Association. "But not this time." He estimates sales in bookstores were down by about 10 percent in the second quarter.

Some persons in the publishing industry contend book sellers were hurt by the last recession. But they say that trend went virtually unnoticed at the time because book prices were rising so fast that total sales figures rose even though fewer books were sold.

But there is agreement that this time the pinch is being felt.

Some think gasoline problems have contributed, others say consumers are rebelling at price increases, and some retailers say publishers haven't delivered any "blockbuster" best-sellers that draw customers.

Booksellers don't like to describe their wares as too expensive. "In the late 1940s, a mass market paperback was a quarter and a movie was a quarter," says Smith. "Now books are somewhere between $1.50 and $3 and movies are $3 to $5."

But the big gain in book prices has come since 1974, when the cost of paper began to escalate. "Our cover prices have gone up at twice the rate of the consumer price index over the last few years," says Oscar Dystel, the chairman of Bantam Books, a major paperback publisher.

In a letter to booksellers, Dystel said the result of the price hikes is that "a paperback is more and more being looked upon as a discretionary purchase, one that can either be deferred or dispensed with, when money is tight."

Price competition has seldom been a major factor in book publishing. "Publishers tend to price on manufacturing costs," says John P. Dessaner, the head of a firm bearing his name which specializes in compiling publishing statistics.

Thus the industry noticed when Bantam test marketed the paperback version of a hardcover bestseller, "The Far Pavilions" by M.M. Kaye, at three different prices. It finally brought out the book at $2.95, with subsequent printings to be at $3.50, which Dystel claims would normally have been the price. Bantam says sales are doing well.

Such tactics have yet to be emulated by other publishers but Hoffman, who is also a Doubleday vice president, said studies are going on to find ways to reduce the cost of distributing books. Those systems tend to vary from publisher to publisher.

America's gasoline problems seem to have affected sales in several ways. Traffic at many suburban shopping centers was down when fears of gasoline supply shortages were prevalent, and sales of bookstores in those centers declined as well.

Gasoline lines are largely gone, but higher prices are here to stay. J. Kendrick Noble Jr., who follows the publishing industry for the Wall Street firm of Paine Webber, Jackson & Curtis, says money young adults and teenagers nce used o buy paperbacks may now be going for gasoline. The same factor, he says, may help to account for declining sales of phonograph records.

Smith, the director of the American Booksellers Association, thinks the gas shortage may have changed vacation habits, with more people visiting cities instead of resort areas and beaches "where there's not much else to do except read a book."

It is an article of faith among booksellers that big hit books are needed to draw people into bookstores. "There's a paucity of big titles," complains Floyd Hall, the president of B. Dalton Booksellers, which claims to be the largest chain of bookstores in the country.

"We depend on these big books to get people into the stores," where they will impulsively buy other titles as well, he added.

The biggest novel this summer is William Styron's "Sophie's Choice," a book that includes graphic descriptions of conditions at the Auschwitz death camps. "The subject is very grim," said Smith.

"Sophie's Choice" is selling well below the level of such previous hits as James Michener's "Chesapeake," although there is disagreement whether that is a cause or a symptom of the industry's current problems.

Another factor hurting sales may be the growth in some areas of stores specializing in used paperbacks, with readers able to trade in their old books. No one has compiled statistics on sales in those stores, but one magazine article on the subject brought 2,000 inquiries from persons interested in starting such stores.

The problems in the publishing industry are largely limited to those sections aimed at the general public, including mass market paberbacks and trade paperbacks and hardcover books. Mass market books are distributed through magazine dealers to such outlets as drug stores and airports, as well as in bookstores. Trade books are general interest books sold through bookstores.

There are numerous other areas, some of which are doing well. Textbook sales are reported fairly strong, as are sales of professional books, those aimed at persons in specific fields. The picture in juvenile books in mixed, with institutional sales apparently strong but sales to individuals weak.

Profit in publishing has never been a sure thing, since there is no scientific way to predict which books will sell and which won't. But most publishers do quite well.

The AAP says 36 companies responding to its survey reported earning an average of 30.9 percent on invested capital during 1978. Most publishers are either privately held or subsidiaries of larger companies, making company-by-company comparisons difficult.

Last year was a good one for publishers, a fact that makes this year's sales decline less severe than it might otherwise seem. And the entire indutry seems to be forever hopeful that the next season will produce the big sellers everyone wants.

"We're not concerned about it," said B. Dalton's Hall, after saying sales of mass market paperbacks are down about 12 percent in his stores.

"We think the industry is in good shape," he said. "We think there are some very exciting titles coming out this fall."

Youth Orchestra Plans Auditions

Sponsored by the Lubbock Parks & Recreation Department, the Lubbock Youth Chamber Orchestra will begins its third season this month with a goal of involving 18 to 30 talented string players from area junior and senior high schools.

Auditions will be held from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday, and again from 1 to 5 p.m. Sept. 16 at the Garden & Arts Center. The orchestra will rehearse from 9 a.m. to noon on Saturdays at the center.

Prospective members will be auditioned only after being recommended by orchestra directors, private music teachers or other qualified sources. Both regular and alternate players will be selected. The focus of the program is centered on enlarging the musical backgrounds of the participant by reinforcing and enriching their present school experiences, and expanding community awareness of the performing arts through musical presentations.

Inquiries regarding the program should be directed to Richard Meek, Parks & Recreation Department, Box 2000, Lubbock, Texas 79457.

Art Talk: By La Wanda Murfee

Pastel, sticks of chalky color, comes in every hue imaginable. Pastels, as we know it today, is a fairly new medium, dating back to the time of the Impressionists in France during the last century. Even so, as far back as Leonardo da Vinci, artists drew with black, white and red crayons.

Pastel is dry pigment mixed with a binder formed into sticks. Of all the mediums, pastel is probably the best suited for figure painting for, with the model before the artist, action and attitude can be successfully stated quickly.

Pastel requires no prepared surface for application. Any semi-rough surface will accept and hold the substance, whether applied lightly or with pressure. However, 100 per cent rag paper is the most desirable. The advantages of working with the medium are numerous: there is no paper or canvas to stretch, no drying time, no investment in brushes and tubes of paint. The cost of each stick is nominal. Pastels do not dry up as does oil and watercolor sold in tubes. Palette, jars and rags are unnecessary. With a few pieces of color and some paper you are ready to start a painting. No consideration has to be given to odor or consistency of the medium. It is never sticky, never too wet or too dry, nor is it too shiney or too dull.

Within minutes, using pastels as a drawing and painting tool, the painter can render a colorful study. Other subjects are equally as easily painted as the figure; nothing can equal the spontaneity and brilliance of a quickly executed pastel painting.

Although the same theory of color mixing is applicable to all paints, to mix pastels, one color must be laid on top of another color as the painting progresses. A warm tone over a cool one will dull both of them and perhaps change the value. Pressure on the stick determines the opacity of the color spot. Smooth blended color is preferred by some; others perfect a quick stroke leaving no edges and interesting texture. The medium lends itself perfectly to vignetting, leaving unfinished and untouched areas. Few pastel paintings are painted to the border of the paper. In determining color masses, (large areas that are one value or color) nothing goes on as quickly as pastel.

On the other side there are some disadvantages. The medium will smear at the slightest touch. It is somewhat difficult to remove from a surface if the application is heavy. Colors will dull if too much fixative is sprayed over a finished piece. The final painting must be preserved under glass and should be carefully handled.

Furthermore few galleries or museums will accept pastels, although they are very permanent when handled properly.

Symphony Begins 1979-80 Season Ticket Drive

Beginning with a telethon to be aired at 6:30 p.m. Tuesday on Channel 11, the Lubbock Symphony Orchestra will begin its season ticket sales for its 1979-80 season. The telethon, to be hosted by Karen McCay and Dirk Benedict, will offer several guest celebrity appearances, as well as a 90-minute performance by the symphony.

Contributions will be accepted along with requests for season tickets. The telethon phone number will be 747-2700, with KCBD-TV picking up the first $1.80 on each long distance phone call. However, this year the telethon is being opened up for public attendance, too. Free tickets can be picked up prior to the telethon at First Federal Plaza, Hemphill-Wells at South Plains Mall, KCBD-TV or Dunlaps.

These free tickets also include eligibility for the drawing for a pair of free season tickets.

This season's guest artists include pianist Paul Schenly on October 8-9, baritone Donald Gramm on November 19-20, violinist Mitchell Stern on February 18-19, 1980, and guitarists Romeros Quartet on March 10-11. Lively pianist Mac Frampton will host the annual Pops Nite affair on April 21 and 22.

Winner of the prestigious Avery Fisher Prize, Schenly has soloed with the New York Philharmonic, Chicago Symphony, Cleveland Orchestra, Houston Symphony, Utah Sympho ny, Atlanta Symphony and Miami Symphony. After one recent performance, the New York Times printed: "A superbly conceived and superbly executed performance." Consistently re-engaged, Schenly is a favorite of many of the world's leading conductors, and he has appeared with James Levine, Erich Leinsdorf, Edo de-Waart, Matislav Rostrpovich, Lorin Maazel, Zubin Mehta and AAron Copland.

Bass-baritone Donald Gramm is one of opera's most versatile singing actors. He has enjoyed a distinguished career not only on the operatic stage, but also as a recitalist of note and as a frequent soloist with America's major symphonies.

Violinist Mitchell Stern made his debut with the Philadelphia Orchestra in 1975 at the age of 20. He triumped with the formidable Waltron Concerto, originally written for Jascha Heifetz. The next day, the Philadelphia Inquirer critic wrote: "Mitchell Stern won a standing tribute for his overpowering display of technique...and scored in both the interpretive and technical aspects of his playing."

The Romeros Quartet -- Celedonio Romeros and his three sons Celin, Pepe and Angel — are Spanish artists who have come to be known as "the royal family of the guitar." They left their native Spain in 1958 to settle in the United States. Such is their artistry that they soon earned acclaim as concert artists. Since 1961, they have enjoyed annual sellout coast-to-coast tours.

When they appeared with the Boston Symphony, the music critic for the Christian Science Monitor wrote, "By the concert's end, the listeners having long since become collective members of the Romeros family, refused to let father and sons go, and gave them two standing ovations to coax out encores."

Mac Frampton may be the first winner of the Van Cliburn Piano Competition (1969) to go on to combine rock and pop influences with classical traditions. He has proven to be very popular during past Lubbock appearances.

Country Style

By Russ Parsons

In his 30 years in the music business, Lubbock's Curly Lawler has seen it all, and he'll tell you about every bit of it.

Now 52 years old, recovering from recent surgery and gradually losing his sight, Lawler is a picture of health when he starts talking about, well anything.

An East Texan by birth, he moved to Lubbock in 1948 to attend Texas Tech. He already knew how to fiddle. "I started playing on my own when I was about 10 years old or so. I guess I learned how to read music before I ever got out of high school because I remember I learned most of my fiddle parts out of a book named '200 Breakdowns Jigs and Reels.' See, at that time we didn't have tapes and various recordings you could learn from."

Although he was on the GI Bill at Tech, he (like most college students), found the need for spare cash. So he started playing at dances.

"The easiest way to make money was to play. The pay was pretty good. I'd get $5 or $10 a night, all the way up to $15 sometimes. I hadn't been here very long before I met Tommy Hancock and his band. They were in a '37 Ford and were having trouble. I had a mechanical background so I stopped by to help them. They had a bass in there with them and I found out they were playing somewhere around here, so I went to work with them.

"We had quite a time finding places to play in those days. There weren't a lot of bands here but they were in pretty solid. There weren't really that many places to play and they were rough. When we played we were bouncers too. I guess when we took the job we assumed an obligation that if a fight broke out we had to stop the music and, if possible, get off the bandstand and help out.

"I think the way they've got it now, part of the precinct wet and part dry, I think that cleaned up the clubs. You still hear a lot about violence, but I don't believe we have as much of that kind, per se, as we used to. Certainly not the bad kind. Boy, some of those fights were really radical. Of course most of those clubs were undesirable places anyway. The police wouldn't go in unless they were called."

In his time in Lubbock, Lawler saw it all. He played (on and offstage) with Bob Wills and Hank Thompson and most of the other bands that came through town. He did publicity tours with singing cowboy Smiley Burnette. He witnessed the breakthrough of the rockabilly age with Buddy Holly's Lubbock debuts and he's played with Lubbock's new wave country bands — Joe Ely and the Maines Brothers.

"I'll tell you, frankly Buddy Holly wasn't too well received here, as you can imagine," Lawler says. "Initially he was just like (Elvis) Presley, they say a person's never well received at home or something like that. The Glassarama (a club owned at the time by Hancock) was the only place that would let them sit in. Tommy was always broadminded.

"I knew Waylon Jennings too. He got his first job with Hancock, but I wasn't playing with them at the time. I knew Waylon because he and 'Sky' Corbin used to always bring their T-Bird in for me to work on. I've played some with the Maines Brothers now and then too. I played with their dads and uncles, I've still got my vest with the old 'MB' on it. Of course they were just little babies, just small children back then.

"I don't have any trouble relating to those young people at all. I played with Joe when he was just establishing his style."

If you sense a certain broadminded approach to music, that's intended. While many old-time country pickers (and fans) look at the cross-over trend as musical sacrilege, Lawler welcomes it. "Along about the '60s there came a change in music that I was acutely aware of. At the time I wondered if it was bad but I know now that it wasn't.

"It was simply this: people accepted mediocrity.

"The old way was that just a handful of the excellent crowd could play for money. This changed in the '60s. It allowed people who weren't really so accomplished to come forward and be accepted. It was good because it kept a lot of people who have made it now from being scared off. It took the snobbery out of music."

Lawler is a strong populist when it comes to the art of music. He said, "This whole music scene as I see it now is a gigantic melting pot doggone it. I'll give you some illustrations. Just about every country band there is has a lead guitar man that has played some rock, or still plays with a rock flavor. Noticed that? It's not like it used to be. It used to be that when a lead guitar man started picking you'd know what it was going to sound like. Now that's changing. There's a blending, a merging in, a wedding in this melting pot. It's breaking down various types of music right and left.

"I don't think I ever said in my life 'I don't like this or that type of music.' If it's well done, it should be appreciated by anybody who calls himself any kind of musician. You can't label. If you draw yourself inward you're going to be little. We're all limited really, we're finite, we're little. But why put a noose around our neck and pull? That's what we're doing when we start stereotyping.

"I'd like to see this merging in, this blending continue until it comes to a beautiful climax of some kind. I don't think anything bad can come out of it. It will slow down, but it will stabilize somewhere more or less.

Now Lawler waits for the progressive cataracts in his left eye to blind him. His right eye is already useless. But still he takes it philosophically.

"As Hancock says, 'Big Dog, if you go blind you'll be able to handle that alright won't you?' That sounds a little brutal but you have to know Hancock. I said of course I will. I always have, with a little help.

"But I sure would hate to have to."

REDFORD LIKES PRIVACY

In spite of his superstar status gained from such pictures as "Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid," "All the President's Men" and "Jeremiah Johnson," Robert Redford is still very much a private man. "I don't like working a lot and I don't really respect the profession of being an actor. I have no need to be a star. All through my career people have been telling me, 'in three years you're going to be the biggest star in Hollywood.' I've got all these plaques naming me the star of tomorrow. But I never did believe it."

Jamar To Speak At Writers' Meet

Dorothy Jamar, academic publications assistant at Wayland Baptist College, will speak on "Getting The Most From Writers' Conferences" at the meeting of the South Plains Writers Association slated for 7:30 p.m. Monday at the Garden & Arts Center.

Mrs. Jamar is editor of the Hale County History Quarterly, a member of the Panhandle Pen Women of Amarillo, and a contributor to various religious and academic periodicals.

A question and answer period will conclude the program. The public is invited to attend at no charge.

MAD MANMEL BROOKS

Mel Brooks is often referred to as "the mad man of the '70's." Mel's wit shows up even in arguments with his wife, actess Anne BAncroft. In the middle of a heated verbal conflict, Brooks made a remark about Anne's body. "My body!" screamed Bancroft. "Don't you know my body's my instrument?" "Oh, yeah?" said Mel. "Then let's hear you play 'Begin the Beguine.'"

Zanuck, Brown Return To Fox

NEW YORK (Special) — Richard D. Zanuck and David Brown have concluded their contract negotiations with 20th Century-Fox Pictures, and will return to the studio in August of 1980, it was announced jointly by Dennis C. Stanfill, chairman of the board and president and chief executive officer, and Sandy Lieberson, newly appointed president of 20th Century Fox Productions.

"We are delighted that Dick Zanuck and David Brown have chosen to return to Fox. They have been distinguished filmmakers and leaders in our industry. We look forward to a long and happy relationship," said Stanfill.

Richard Zanuck and David Brown stated, "Returning to 20th Century-Fox is one of the most gratifying experience of our careers. It is there we started and it is there we are determined to make films of the highest quality and boxoffice acceptance. We are especially pleased to resume our relationship with Dennis Stanfill and to begin what we know will be a rewarding relationship with Sandy Lieberson."

During their seven year association with Universal, The Zanuck/Brown Company produced 10 motion pictures, among them "Jaws," "The Sting," "Sugarland Express," "MacArthur," "Jaws 2" and "The Eiger Sanction."

Presently they are filming Peter Benchley's "The Island." Later this year production will begin on The National Lampoon's "Jaws 3, People O."

A future long-term project will be "The Continuation of Gone With The Wind" which will be a Zanuck/Brown Company co-production with MGM and Universal.

Before joining Universal Pictures in 1972, when the Zanuck/Brown Company was formed, both men were top production executive at Warner Bros.

Prior to that Zanuck was president of 20th Century-Fox Film Corporation and David Brown was executive vice president.

At Fox they were responsible for such motion pictures as "The Sound of Music," "Patton," "M*A*S*H," "Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid' and "The French Connection."

Hurricane Betsy caused an estimated $1 billion damage in 1965 — the highest damage figure for a hurricane on record.

Niven Joins Cast Of 'Rough Cut'

NEW YORK (Special) — David Niven has been signed for a co-starring role in Paramount Pictures' "Rough Cut," joining the previously announced Burt Reynolds and Lesley-Anne Down in the production to be directed by Don Siegel.

An Academy Award winner for best actor for his performance in "Separate Tables," Niven's most recent credit for Paramount was last year's all-star Agatha Christie whodunit, "Death on the Nile." The actor, who has enjoyed a tremendous success as a best-selling author with his pair of autobiographies "The Moon's A Balloon" and "Bring on the Empty Horses," completed a starring role in "A Nightingale Sang in Berkeley Square" just prior to his new assignment in "Rough Cut."

With a screenplay by Larry Gelbart, based on Derek Lambert's novel "A Touch of the Lion's Paw," "Rough Cut" is a sophisticated thriller about a master jewel thief who emerges from retirement to execute a seemingly impossible burglary.

Filming began in London on July 19th.

"Rough Cut" will be distributed in the U.S. and Canada by Paramount Pictures Corporation.

AC-DC To Rock Auditorium

AC-DC will headline a rock concert 8 p.m. Friday at the Municipal Auditorium. The opening band is Molly Hatchet. Tickets are now on sale at Al's Music Machine, B&B Records and both Flipside Records locations.

The release of AC-DC's fifth Atlantic U.S. LP, "Highway To Hell," marks several significant changes in the band's career. With producer Robert John Lange (City Boy, Boomtown Rats, Outlaws, Graham Parker, Thin Lizzy) at the controls for the first time, AC-DC moved to London's Round-house Studios for the sessions (their first studio experience outside of Australia).

In addition, Lange has brought a new depth to the group's sound, without abandoning the raw energy that has always been central to AC-DC. The blend of the Young brothers' guitars and the increased use of back-up vocal harmonies are two masterstrokes. Overall, the album possesses a higher sophistication; the variety of sound is greater than ever before.

Underlying the production are tunes like "Highway To Hell," "Girls Got Rhythm" and "Touch Too Much."

Still, as anyone who has seen AC-DC live will attest, the group's true milieu is not the studio, but the stage. In the beginning, there were the Young brothers — Angus and Malcolm — who formed AC-DC in the early '70s in Australia. They built a sizeable following on the continent's pub circuit. After two years of steady touring across Australia, and the signing of a worldwide recording pact with Atlantic, AC-DC arrived in the United Kingdom as virtual unknowns in the spring of 1976.

Their first London engagement, in a small pub called the Red Cow, resembled a fast-moving fire. By the second set, the place was filled to overflowing, as patrons lit up the London switchboards with calls to their friends. During a subsequent residency at the Marquee Club, they set a new attendance record almost every week. They next toured Europe, getting similar responses in each country. At the end of 1976, as their debut U.S. release, "High Voltage," was hitting the streets, AC-DC was back in England, playing an SRO date at the famed Hammersmith Odeon.

In December 1976, the band returned to Australia for another extensive tour before entering the studio to record "Let There Be Rock," released in America in the spring of 1977. AC-DC rocked the European continent once more, and finally visited America, making a hot 1977 summer even hotter with their blistering performances, featuring the wild antics of Angus Young ("I like to work up an audience and leave it with something to remember," says Angus). The band — Angus and Malcolm, Bon Scott (vocals), Phil Rudd (drums), and Cliff Williams (bass) — returned to America in the fall of that year, by which time the album was receiving substantial FM airplay.

"Powerage," their third U.S. album, was released in the spring of 1978. The 1978 World Tour, after opening in the U.K., moved briskly through America from June to October. "If You Want Blood, You've Got It," the eagerly-awaited live album, was recorded during the World Tour and included such AC-DC favorites as "The Jack," "Whole Lotta Rosie," "Problem Child" and "Rock'N'Roll Damnation."

HOT STUFF — AC-DC will provide the hard rock sounds when it headlines a concert at 8 p.m. Friday at the Municipal Auditorium. Rock band Molly Hatchet will open the show. Tickets are currently on sale at Al's Music Machine, B&B Records and both Flipside Records locations.

Video Cassette Program Set By Library

"Life Goes To The Movies," a five part video cassette documentary, will be presented at 7 p.m. each Tuesday through Oct. 9 in the Community Room of the Lubbock City-County Library.

There is no admission charge.

"The Golden Age Of Hollywood" will air Tuesday, tracing the nation's growth of optimism after the depression years. Hollywood became a dream factory during this period, with musicals emphasizing fantasy, glamor and escape.

"The War Years" will air Sept. 18. It highlights such classic films as "Gone With The Wind," "Stagecoach" and "The Wizard Of Oz."

During the late '40s and 1950s Hollywood returned to mature themes like alcoholism, prejudice, mental illness and drugs. "The Post War Years," slated to be shown Sept. 25, explores these subjects — as well as the introduction of monster films like "Creature From The Black Lagoon."

"The Fifties" will air Oct. 2, capsuling an era in which the gaining popularity of television caused theater audiences to be cut by half. But a new generation of stars like Paul Newman and Marlon Brando appeared in more romantic adult roles.

The final episode, called "The Movies Today," will be screened Oct. 9. It takes an extended look at Marilyn Monroe, from pin-up notoriety through stardom. The new morality of the 1960s and its impact on such films as "The Graduate," "The Godfather" and "The Boys In The Band" will also be discussed.

New Books In Review

THE WHITE ALBUM. By Joan Didion. Simon & Schuster. 223 Pages. $9.95

Joan Didion's "The White Album" is like most albums — an uneven collection of remembrances, some more riveting, more vivid than others. Some are blurry and if you don't actually know the references, it means nothing.

But much of Ms. Didion's book means something. She begins, "We tell ourselves stories in order to live." And her book is a collection of those stories that kept her alive — not always happily — over the past 10 to 15 years.

Much of her memory is clouded by the stuff of bad dreams, the children dripping down stolen cars on the captive cripple's ranch, the freeway sniper who feels 'real bad' about picking off a family of five, the lost children...."

Her mind set at an uncommon angle, she continues through her time in short distinct passages of thought. Often her views are acute — particularly her perception of Hawaii, her vision of Hollywood and the moment of the Tate murders. At these times she is sharp, cynical and yet touched by a worrisome sadness.

"The White Album" starts off slowly. You need time to get accustomed to Miss Didion's tangled progressions, a trip through a maze without a right wall to assure an exit. Her pace is clipped.

There always is a feeling she wants to tell us more, but that she is confined by her time, her place, her purpose. The stories that let her live are not fairy tales, but disconcerting vignettes that beg for more substance to convince us that such tales can insure survival.

— M.R. AIG, AP

NIGHT SHIFT. By Stephen King. Doubleday. 336 Pages. $8.95.

"Night Shift" is a collection of 20 stories by Stephen King, the author of such best-selling books as "The Shining."

Unfortunately, the bulk of the stories in this volume are rather poor things and of the 20 only a half dozen can be recommended. As for the rest, well, they deal with vampires, ghoulies, ghosties and other things that go bump in the night and they should be riveting but they aren't. This may be because they do not do what the author says in his foreword that a good horror story ought to do: "It must tell a tale that holds the reader or the listener spellbound for a little while, lost in a world that never was, never could be."

These don't.

The stories that do succeed are more bizarre than horror-oriented and that, perhaps, is why they succeed where the others fail.

Best of the lot is a gem titled "Quitters, Inc." This is a most absorbing tale about an organization that guarantees to make smokers quit smoking. And it has a foolproof system for doing what it says it can do. King demonstrates an excellent inventiveness in "Quitters, Inc." that flickers in some of his other stories but never shines so brightly as it does here.

Other good tales include "The Ledge," a fine entertainment, even for people who can't stand heights, "The Last Rung on the Ladder," a touching tale about youth, the loss of innocence, and the perils of growing up, and "The Woman in the Room," a well-told story about what it is like to grow old and sicken as your children look on helplessly.

— PHIL THOMAS, AP

PATTERN OF PEOPLE. By Elizabeth Goudge, arranged by Muriel Grainger. Coward, McCann & Geoghegan. 189 Pages. $9.95

Open any book by Elizabeth Goudge, Muriel Grainger writes in her foreword to this collection of 16 short stories and selections from novels, "and you are immediately in the company of unforgettable characters — lovable, fascinating, sometimes eccentric, occasionally wayward — but real people."

Often, what she says is quite true. Miss Goudge does have an extraordinary talent for using words to paint character portraits that glow with life. Take Isaac Peabody, for example, in the selection titled "The Man Who Loved Clocks." Here is a man who "could feel upon a variety of subjects, and perhaps it was the intensity of his feeling that had furrowed his forehead, lined his brown parchment face and whitened the straggling beard that hid his receding chin. His eyes were very blue beneath their shaggy eyebrows and chronic indigestion had crimsoned the tip of his button nose."

This is one of Miss Goudge's better portraits and it is usually when she is dealing with adults that her verbal drawings come off best. Unfortunately, when she is dealing with children, and that happens a number of times in this collection, she tends to the sentimental, and the children come off rather flawed — just a bit too sugary to be believable.

As for the selections themselves, they are uneven. Some are excellent, others better left undiscussed. Best perhaps is "Island Holiday," a marvelous snippet that gleams with love of nature and people and has no bad spots whatsoever.

— PHIL THOMAS, AP

A GAME OF SECRETS. By Thomas Wiseman. (Delacorte Press, $9.95)

This is the latest, and perhaps the best, thriller based on the most sensational spy case of our time.

Author Wiseman sets it in Washington during the administration of President Truman. He does it very well. Characters in the book include Truman and his military chief aide, Adm. William Leahy.

The plot centers on the activities of British intelligence and diplomatic officials who are Russian spies. Just like in real life Washington of the Truman era was host to Donald MacLean, Guy Burgess and "Third Man" H.A.R. (Kim) Philby, Kremlin men all.

Working from this fact, Wiseman weaves fiction that brilliantly sketches Washington and the type of women and men who people it. The plot involves the hunt for the British spy and what happens to an American intelligence leader picked by Truman to keep an eye on all the cloaks and daggers. Can the good man defeat both the preventive war proponents of the then young CIA and the Russian spooks, too?

The tale is suspenseful, well detailed, simply told. Wiseman may be an American John Le Carre.

— RICHARD H. GROWALD, UPI

COLD IS THE SEA. By Edward L. Beach. Holt, Rinehart & Winston. 348 Pages. $9.95

How interesting an experience it is to read a book on a topic by an author who wrote a similar book on the same topic long ago. But now the topic — in this case submarines — has been modified.

Edward L. Beach authored "Run Silent, Run Deep" which became widely known and was subsequently reintroduced through the screen as a film.

Now comes "Cold Is The Sea," a novel set in the undersea world of atomic submarines and their sometimes sinister peaceful operations.

The plot focuses on the newest American atomic submarine, the Manta, being sent on a top secret mission under the Arctic polar ice cap. While there it is disabled, apparently when struck by a Soviet submarine. A rescue operation is mounted and the rescue sub meets hostile action while trying to bring the damaged sub to safety.

The acts of the Soviet submarine indicate that the collision with the Manta was not accidental and the probability of a battle becomes inevitable. However, the Soviets have a mysterious defense capability that neutralizes the explosive power of the American submarine's electric torpedoes.

To explain the plot further would be a disservice to the reader because there is a lot of suspense and surprise before the climax.

Perhaps the most intriguing aspect of this book, however, is how it doesn't quite fit the mood of today's thriller and gives the reader something like a time-capsule experience.

That's not a negative view. It's just a description of what this book seems to have accomplished: recasting an old plot in a modern setting and doing it well.

The difference from today's thrillers is reflected best in the subplots. There are no sex scenes, James Bond-types, etc. Instead, there are dedicated but anxious wives waiting at home, battles with bureaucratic military higher-ups, unquestioning loyalty to military orders, and so forth.

Rock-It

By Doug Pullen

It could be any business. Sales are down. Profits are down. Blame it on the economy. But the record business doesn't always discipline itself along those lines. The business has been growing at a rapid pace during the last eight years, becoming a $4 billion industry in the process.

But this year has seen the first reversal of that trend. Excess printings and late shipping last year of several good-selling albums led to this year's stockpiling of albums — albums which many retailers could not sell, so they were returned to the record companies for credit. These losses, coupled with more extravagant spending and an overall lack of product from major artists has led to the record industry's recent sales spiral, a decline which only recently began to taper off and actually reverse itself.

Record company executives are denying that the business has succumbed to the pressures of recent economic trends, opting instead to explain the profit and sales drops with the fact that the record business simply isn't going to continue its annual growth of several percentage points.

An oncoming onslaught of product from major artists may work to reverse the negative sales and profits trends and put the record business back in its comfortable driver's seat. Groups like Fleetwood Mac, The Rolling Stones, The Eagles, The Bee Gees and ZZ Top all will release new albums during the next few months, as will top solo artists such as Bruce Springsteen, Bob Seger, Stevie Wonder and Willie Nelson.

No one seems to be able to explain the sudden bombardment of major product, one which began not too long ago with the release of albums by Led Zeppelin and Chic. Many of the recording projects have taken the artists, Fleetwood Mac especially, a great deal of time to prepare. Studio time for such projects gets exorbitant, and can lead to multi-year, big budget projects such as the Fleetwood Mac album.

"Tusk" is the name of the new two-record Fleetwood Mac album. The album's budget has topped the million dollar mark, due in part to the extensive time the group has spent recording the album. A main factor in the gargantuan budget is the fact that "Tusk" will be a digital album. Digital recording is a process considered more accurate than the customary analog type recording. Ry Cooder's "Bop Till You Drop" LP (like the Mac album, a Warner Bros. release) was rock's first digital release and Cooder couldn't stop singing praises for the process' overall clarity.

FLEETWOOD MAC
New "Tusk" LP priced at $17.98

Despite whatever quality "Tusk" may offer, there is a word-of-mouth movement afoot to boycott the album because of its $17.98 list price. But, as anyone who follows such things closely knows, boycotts have never materialized enough in such matters to be effective. So expect another multi-million seller from Fleetwood Mac.

Record companies have found other ways to decrease their catalog or at least sell off stock that's not moving quickly. Some labels, MCA among them, are going to what they call mid-line series, where older or slowly moving stock is changed in retail price from $7.98 to $4.98 or $5.98, thus allowing these records to be sold competitively with out-of-print and overstock records.

Some record companies are cutting back their budgets, particularly in promotional areas so that unnecessary spending and extravagance won't send bucks flying in the wrong direction. Some labels are rumored to be slowing down on the number of acts they are signing while some labels may spend less money in artist development.

Whatever the outcome of these moves, one can be sure there will be heated competition for the consumer's dollars this fall. The number of established and major name artists releasing product over the next three months is concentrated as never before. Many of these releases will retail for an average of $8.98, a higher price but something consumers have failed to let influence much of their record and tape buying.

Things are looking better for the record business. The grim prospect of low sales that has characterized most of the year (even Supertramp's best-selling "Breakfast in America" has sold only 3 million copies in comparison with Fleetwood Mac's 15 million plus sales for its "Rumours" LP) is gone — bigger profits and stealthier sales are the predicted outcome.

Fleetwood Mac, "Tusk" (shipping Oct. 15, $17.98 retail); The Rolling Stones, "Another Fine Mess" (tentative title, October or November release); Foreigner, "Head Games," imminent release; Blondie, "Eat to the Beat" (September 14 release); Neil Young, "Rust Never Sleeps" movie soundtrack (includes material from Young's 1978 concert tour); The Eagles, "The Long Run" (no release date); Styx, "Cornerstone" (Sept. 25 release); ZZ Top, "Deguello."

Other acts with upcoming releases include Bruce Springsteen (this month), Bob Seger, Bob Welch, Waylon Jennings, Willie Nelson, Jethro Tull, Meat Loaf, Aerosmith, Parliament, Boz Scaggs, The Who's "Quadrophenia" soundtrack, Hall and Oates, The Jefferson Starship, "John Denver Meets the Muppets," Gentle Giant, Golden Earring, Firefall, Dan Fogelberg, The Grateful Dead, The Village People, Neil Diamond, Steve Martin, Gloria Gaynor, Lee Ritenour, Al Stewart, Barbra Streisand, Cheap Trick ("Dream Police"), Bell and James, Toto, Santana and John Mayall.

Theater Selling Tickets

The Texas Tech University Theater will begin selling season tickets Sept. 17 for its 1979-80 season of eight plays and two dance concerts. The "bonus season ticket" offers choice reserved seats to all six University Theater and four Lab Theater shows, while the "regular season ticket" is good only for the University Theater attractions.

Both offer a substantial discount in price over the purchase of individual tickets to each production.

Tickets may be purchased by phone at 742-3601, mail or in person at the University Theater box office. Box office hours are 8 a.m. to noon and 1 to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Plays to be staged at University Theater include William Shakespeare's "Twelfth Night," a comic romp of mistaken identities and clownish pranks. It will be offered Oct. 12-17. Eugene O'Neill's "Long Day's Journey Into Night," an intense drama of family struggles, will run Nov. 16-20. Duerrenmatt's "The Visit," a drama about a town driven to contemplate murder by its own greed for money, will be staged Feb. 22-27, 1980. And Jason Miller's Pulitzer Prize-winning play "That Championship Season," involving the 20-year reunion of a championship basketball team, will be staged April 10-15.

University Theater will produce two dance concerts jointly with the dance division of the department of Health, Physical Education and Recreation. "An Odyssey Of Movement, Music And Light," choreographed by Diana Moore, will be offered Oct. 26-28. And Peggy Willis' choreography of "Dracula: The Ballet" will be performed on the University Theater stage March 7-9.

The 1979-80 season also include four productions at the campus' intimate Lab Theater. "Harvey," the comic success about a gentleman and his obsession with a 6-foot rabbit will be staged Oct. 19-24. "Of Mice And Men," a contemporary play based on John Steinbeck's novel about the friendship between two roving ranchhands, will be offered Dec. 7-12.

"When You Comin' Back, Red Ryder?" will be staged Feb. 29 through March 5. It is a drama concerning a group of strangers victimized by a criminal in an all-night diner. And the season will end with the April 18-23 production of "The Seagull," Chekhov's character study of broken dreams and vanquished hopes.

'Gypsy' Tickets Now On Sale

Lubbock Theatre Centre will open its 79-80 season with the musical "Gypsy," to be staged at 8:15 p.m. Sept. 20-22, 24-25 and 27-29 at the LTC Playhouse. Tickets are now on sale, with students receiving discount prices. Direction is by John Packard. Call the LTC box office for reservations and ticket prices.

History Of The Play

The origin of this musical is, of course, the real life experience of Gypsy Rose Lee when she was a child named Rose Louis Hovick and, with her sister, June, (who also became famous, later, as June Havoc) was being pushed by an indomitable mother into being a child vaudeville performer. This was in the 1920 to 1932 era.

In the fall of 1957 Gypsy Rose Lee published a book of memoirs of these early days of her life, called simply "Gypsy." Before the book appeared, one of its chapters was published in May of that year in Harper's Magazine, where it caught the eye of Broadway producer David Merrick, who immediately saw its possibilities in terms of a musical show. He made a bid for the rights just in time. Another producer had the same idea just a few days later.

Miss Lee was already toying with an offer for no less than $200,000 for the motion picture rights, but she decided to resist that offer to allow a stage version first, wisely (and correctly) foreseeing that a film version could always come subsequently.

(Miss Lee's book, originally published by Harper & Bros., subsequently in a paper-back by Dell, was warmly greeted by literary critics and the reading public. Her sister June, not to be outdone, started writing her memoirs, covering some of the same ground, with respect to the days when the two sisters both were driven by their jungle mother on their tireless vaudeville trouping, but then diverging into her personal story chronicling what happened after she ran away to escape the monster-mother's slavery. Her book, entitled "Early Havoc," was published by Simon and Schuster just under two years after "Gypsy" ws published, and a week after the musical "Gypsy" opened in New York).

David Merrick in 1957 saw the projected musical as a vehicle for the ever-popular, brazen-voiced Ethel Merman (star of first power from the time of "Girl Crazy" through "Anything Goes," "Panama Hattie," "DuBarry Was a Lady," Annie Get Your Gun," "Call Me Madam," "Happy Hunting" and other big musicals.

When approached, Miss Merman was enthusiastic. "I'll shoot anyone else who gets the part," she said. But she has promised another producer, Leland Hayward, to let him produce her next show. There was no obstacle here, however, Merrick had the "property," Hayward had the star, they formed a partnership and produced the show together, Merrick taking first billing.

To write the show they called in the trio who had just previously scored a smash with "Bells Are Ringing," Betty Comden and Adolph Green, co-authors of the book and lyrics, Jule Styne, composer of the music. But Comden and Green had some other involvements that caused them to withdraw. Styne stayed to do the tunes, and the word-writing team who had scored with "West Side Story," Arthur Laurents and Stephen Sondheim, were commissioned to write, respectively, the libretto and the lyrics. With them came along another major contributor to "West Side Story," Jerome Robbins, as director and choreographer.

The arrangement of these details and the writing of the show took 15 months. The long, difficult days of auditioning hundreds of applicants for the show's large cast got underway in January, 1959. Rehearsals began in early March, and the show's pre-Broadway tryouts began with an engagement in Philadelphia on April 13.

Any show starring Merman was always assured popularity, but "Gypsy" was immediately acclaimed one of her biggest successes. The news from Philadelphia was what a really big whopping hit was bound for Broadway. This prophecy was more than fulfilled when the show opened in New York on May 21, 1959, and became an overwhelming smash. For 22 months, through March 25, 1961, the show drew thronging audiences, for a score of 702 performances. Several hundred more performances could have been tallied, except that Miss Merman was beginning to tire, and the producers decided to make available what zest she still had for her role to audiences in other cities.

The original company toured for some eight months, and a second company toured other cities for seven months.

As Gypsy Rose Lee had foreseen, a film sale indeed followed the success of "Gypsy" on the stage. In this film Natalie Wood played the title role and Rosalind Russell played the Merman role of Gypsy's ruthless, resourceful mother.

'GYPSY' REHEARSALS UNDERWAY — Lubbock Theater Centre will stage the musical "Gypsy" at 8:15 p.m. Sept. 20-22, 24-25 and 27-29. Included in the cast are Teri Eoff (top) as Louise and Janis Geddes (bottom) as Rose. Direction is by John Packard. Call the LTC box office for ticket prices and reservations. New Music Series Set

The Leading Edge Music Series will connect the Texas Tech community and Lubbock with the musicians (and artists in closely related fields) breaking new ground in composition, performance, perception and entertainment. The purpose of the series is to import internationally-known artists with fresh, innovative and original approaches to art in order that West Texans can experience firsthand the nature of their work.

The series is sponsored by Texas Tech University Center Programs, the Texas Tech Department of Music, and Phi Mu Alpha Sinfonia.

The first event of the 1979-1980 schedule of the Leading Edge Music Series will feature visiting artist Jerry Hunt, a composer, performer, instrument builder based in Dallas. Hunt is known for the humor and imagination of his work in the electronic arts of sound, video and circuit and instrument design.

A 35-year-old Texas native, Hunt served as artist-in-residence at the Video Research Center in Dallas from 1971-1977. His work there was supported by the Rockfeller Foundation. During the period of 1967-1973 he directed the electronic music program at Southern Methodist University. From 1962-1969, as a solo pianist, he performed the works of the American and European avant garde and introduced with lecture-recitals the new works of Stockhausen, Boulez, Kagel, Cage and others.

Hunt's electronically generated sounds and images have have broadcast nationally over PBS as part of the Video Visionaries series. His work has been featured at the International Carnival of Experimental Sound in London, in Edinburgh, Scotland, in West Berlin, in Toronto and Montreal as well as in the major universities and metropolitan art centers in the U.S.A.

In addition to his composition and performance activities, Hunt is currently a consultant to Texas Instruments, Mostek, Canadian Broadcasting Corporation and Astec International and the director of musical instrument development at Modular Sound in Dallas.

Hunt will present a lecture-concert of his current music and ideas at 8:15 p.m. Tuesday at the Tech University Center Theatre. He will conduct a workshop for composers and performers from 1:30 to 3:30 p.m. Both events are open to the public at no charge.

The warm-up action will be provided by composer Ron Pellegrino's live laser graphics and pianist Natalie Wham composing music in real-time (improvisational music).

McGovern, Bulifant Cast In 'Airplane'

NEW YORK (Special) — Maureen McGovern and Joyce Bulifant have been signed for supporting roles in "Airplane!" (tentative title), a Howard W. Koch production for Paramount Pictures.

Marking the first acting role in Miss McGovern's career, the popular young vocalist will play the key role of a singing nun. In her only other film appearance, Miss McGovern sang the Oscar-winning "We May Never Love Like This Again" in "Towering Inferno." Coincidentally, Miss McGovern is heard every week singing "Different Worlds," the theme from "Angie," the ABC television series which stars Robert Hays, who also heads the cast of "Airplane!" along with Julie Hagerty.

A frequent guest on television game shows and in television movies, Miss Bulifant is making her first appearance in a motion picture since Walt Disney's "The Happiest Millionaire" in 1967. In "Airplane!" she will portray a mother accompanying her sick child aboard an imperiled jet.

A comedy spoof of airline dramas, "Airplane!" has been written by executive producers Jim Abrahams and Jerry and David Zucker. Jon Davison is producing with Abrahams N. Zuckers directing.

PASSING THROUGH

All Join Forces To Assist Band

By MARILYN HOLMES
A-J Correspondent

It was a humid day, heavy with gloom, despair and more news of dissension created by self interested splinter groups and individuals. Had the whole country forgotten the ideals of unity that had once sparked its very existence?

The day ended with a visit to the Carlsbad Cavemen Football Stadium. Accompanying the band members who had gathered there was an excitement that brightened the mood. Despair was transcended. Enthusiasm prevailed.

This news was far more important than crime, inflation and strike threats.

Several hundred community members had turned out, paying their one dollar admission fee to help support a group of 200 high school students. The youngsters were to be featured in pregame and halftime activities at the opening of the 1979 Denver Bronco football season.

Precision marching and musical skills were demonstrated in the preview dress rehearsal by the drill team and band members who had donated hours of their time over the summer to prepare for the upcoming Denver trip.

They were upholding a tradition of excellence established by previous Cavemen bands that in recent years appeared in such prestigious events as the Presidential Inauguration at Washington, D.C., and at the Rose and Orange bowls.

Their reputation was not earned overnight. It took the willingness of leaders, sponsors, boosters and the youngsters to work together to form a cohesive unit.

The spirit of cooperation and goodwill was illustrated by a banner strung across the stadium that wished the youngsters good luck in Denver.

But the ideals of unity might have best been demonstrated by a group of guys seated in the stands. They were the loudest and most enthusiastic cheerleaders in the audience.

These fellows were the ones traditionally on the field, for whom the pomp and ceremony were usually performed.

But in this case, the varsity football team had turned out to cheer, rather than to be cheered — to give the Carlsbad Cavemen Marching Band a roaring sendoff in a gesture of mutual encouragement.

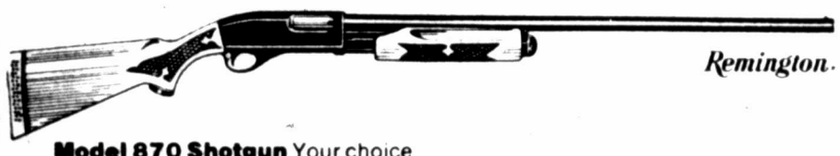

Miraculously, the day was no longer gloomy.

A Real Fan ... For Three Quarters

NOWHERE IN THE far-reaching canyons of imagination can the modern-day football fan be scrutinized with anything clearer than puzzled perspective.

Subjectivity may be the only common denominator amidst a throng whose cheers change fickley to boos in the split instant required for a sweaty hand to drop a lathered ball. What's he doin' in there anyhow? I knew he'd fumble. He can't hold onto the ball, even when it ain't rainin' this hard.

Fans are more easily understood than appreciated. After all, when us plays them, us is supposed to win, simply because us is ours.

• • •

PEOPLE SEE THEIR favorite teams in much the same light used to view their own family. Other kids make Cs and Ds because they ain't any brighter than that. Our kids make Cs and Ds because they don't apply themselves. Notre Dame? Sure. We'll beat them mullets. They ain't nuthin'. Shoot. I hear their president is a preacher of some sort...

Fans come with two complete sets of personalities. One is worn everywhere but to and from football games. It nearly always fits right and it generally goes well with their particular craft. The other ... well, it usually is too mottled and uncoordinated for proper description. A good example — nay, a perfect stereotype — is a friend of mine.

To avoid embarrassment, I'll just call him Rex Bridges. Not only the innocent warrant protection, I read somewhere, probably by Chaucer or maybe David Bass.

• • •

REX MAKES A dern good living, peddling houses door-to-door. If you don't like the line he's presently carrying, he'll build you one, complete with heat pump and mortgage, and set it anywhere you think you'd like to be going to and coming from on a daily basis.

In his neighborhood, Rex is popular with parent and child alike. Totally unflappable, he reacts as calmly to a soccer ball through the window as he does to cigar ash on the drive. Undefeated by crabgrass and cutworms, he toils at his foliage with the demeanor of a guy just elected.

Kids think he's generous, guys find him interesting, women believe him charming and his own wife just wishes they only knew.

She, you see, has oft times seen him from That Other Side.

• • •

AT EVERY HOME Tech game since 1951 — and this may be some sort of record — she has walked through the turnstiles, Rex at her side. On more than half of those occasions, upon tooting of game's final horn, she has walked out alone, fighting the crowd and the traffic while loaded down with the seat cushion, blanket, thermos, flask and binoculars that Rex stormed off and left behind.

Once at the car, she finds Rex, pouting and sulking and impatiently revving the engine. By way of conversation, he says only I hope you left my stuff. I won't be using it ever again. Then he shuts up tightly.

Back home, he will scotch and pout for a couple hours, then spread his gloom around the neighborhood.

"I don't know why we can't beat Texas," he laments, loudly. "Pete Cawthon always beat Montezuma. Dee Weaver was hell on Hardin-Simmons. Our program is going down instead of up and I'm going home right now and burn my tickets."

• • •

THE WORST YEAR Rex ever had was one of Tech's best ever. It was 1965, the season in which the Raiders won eight games out of ten, scoring six of the victories during the final two minutes.

On each winning occasion at Jones Stadium, Rex already had gone to the car when the dramatic touchdown was chalked. That included, of course, the classical Tom Wilson-to-Jerrry Shipley-to-Donny Anderson heart-stopper against the Aggies. Can you imagine, a generation from now, the poor kids with the only granpappy in town who MISSED that play?

Tech out of town was no better. By midway through the fourth quarter, Rex's radio either had been turned off or stuffed into the disposal. The ol' A-J that year supplied Rex with lots of Sunday morning surprises.

• • •

THE PARADOX THAT is Rex Bridges gives way rather abruptly to something of an exploding contrast. Interest rates could climb Mt. Everest and a bungalow might cost more than your average Hilton and Rex's upper lip would remain stiff as a washwoman's back.

"You'll never find a better time to buy a house than today," he would chirp, adding, "unless you can't get around to it until tomorrow. In that case, tomorrow would be better anyways."

That's the same Rex who huffs gateward the moment the opposition catches a pass in the fourth quarter.

The difference, then, has to be objectivity. Many are those who love their work. Few, outside of maybe Errol Flynn, become emotionally involved in it as though it were football.

Come August, Rex gets excited. Football is not far away and, never mind what the experts say, those Raiders are gonna win it all. Not just the conference, but the whole world. Man. He can hardly wait.

Then comes the opener, then comes the fourth quarter and, swhish. There goes Rex, to the car.

• • •

ONCE REX ALMOST changed. Ribbed hard and often throughout the 1966 season by those who never forget his missing the super play against the Aggies the year before, he went into 1967 with a brand-new attitude. He would stick 'em out. He dern near made it, too.

Then came the A&M game again and, with it, all the ghosts from the haunting moments of yore. I'll sit this one all the way out, he thought, even if I have to drape this blanket over my head for the last five or ten minutes.

He about had it made. Tech was ahead in the second half. But it was only 17-14, and Rex was fidgeting. Minutes ticked and he was biting his nails. The blanket ... he reached for the blanket and chewed on it.

Fear suddenly mated with reality. The Aggies scored, took a four-point lead. Rex screamed in pain, leaped to his feet and sprinted to his car, half a parking lot away.

Once there, he lit a cigaret with shaking hand and went to work on his composure. Daringly, he reached for the knob on the radio. I should have taken this thing a step at a time, he thought. I should first just hear a fourth quarter.

"... Kenny Baker scores and Tech takes the lead!," boomed the announcer. "With 30 seconds remaining, it's Tech 24, A&M 21 ..."

Visions of 1965 dancing through his mind, Rex jumped from the car. He could just about make it. No needling this time. I'll be in there when it ends. I have to be.

And he was.

Just as he topped the ramp and came onto the concourse in view of the field he saw the scoreboard click off the final second.

He also saw Aggie quarterback Edd Hargett breeze untouched into the end zone.

Prostitution Statute Ruled Discriminatory

JUNEAU, Alaska (AP) — Alaska's prostitution law is discriminatory because it defines prostitution in terms of women, the state Supreme Court has ruled.

The court said in an Aug. 24 ruling the law discriminated against women by defining prostitution as "the giving or receiving of the body by a female for sexual intercourse for hire."

Wolfforth Firm Prospers

By GERRY BURTON
Avalanche-Journal Staff

WOLFFORTH — The idea was born in 1938 on a soggy football practice field as Texas Tech University's Red Raiders worked out in mud and rain for an appearance in the Cotton Bowl.

Extra weight of caked mud was just a hindrance then, but, when Elmer Tarbox went on to basketball season, he discovered he performed better because of the weighty workouts.

It took almost two decades for Elmer's Weights to hit the market, geared for exercising specific muscles for a specific purpose, but they came to stay.

This fall, the Wolfforth-based enterprise moved into the foreign market, winning a steady Canadian outlet plus orders from Japan, Italy and Sweden.

And, a new chain store contract is expected to stabilize the seasonal peak of a $20,000 monthly wage and 50 employees for the entire year.

F BUSINESS

Lubbock Avalanche-Journal
Sunday, Sept. 9, 1979

The August fall shipment was so heavy that the Wolfforth postmaster, Dave Sears, took his equipment to the building and called in Lubbock mail trucks to help handle it.

Elmer's Weights Inc. was a family business at first — using the front-room fireplace for melting lead and mother's sewing maching to bind the product all together.

Gradually, weight production outgrew the Tarbox home with excess business farmed out into other homes as the company moved from Big Spring to Lubbock to Wolfforth.

The original product, designed for athletes, was made up of tiny lead bars sewed into leather bands to tie around ankles for building up the exact muscles an athlete would use as he worked at his contest.

Tarbox traveled the trade fair circuit to introduce his product, selling only through athletic team suppliers at first, then working into the sporting goods and chain store markets.

For 17 years, Elmer's Weights had the market to itself. Then, with the end of the patent, competitors entered the picture with plastic replicas.

To compete, Elmer's began producing a cheaper plastic line, but still found the original leather a going product. Today, company president Max Tarbox said, the firm has three lines — leather, canvas and plastic.

Also, it has added over the years weights for other parts of the body, designed for arm, leg, wrist and chest muscles.

The newest innovation is a set for women complete with pamphlet for home exercise programs.

Tarbox, who took over company reins a year ago, grew up with the business — helping assemble and pack early shipments and even making some trade shows in the Southwest with his father.

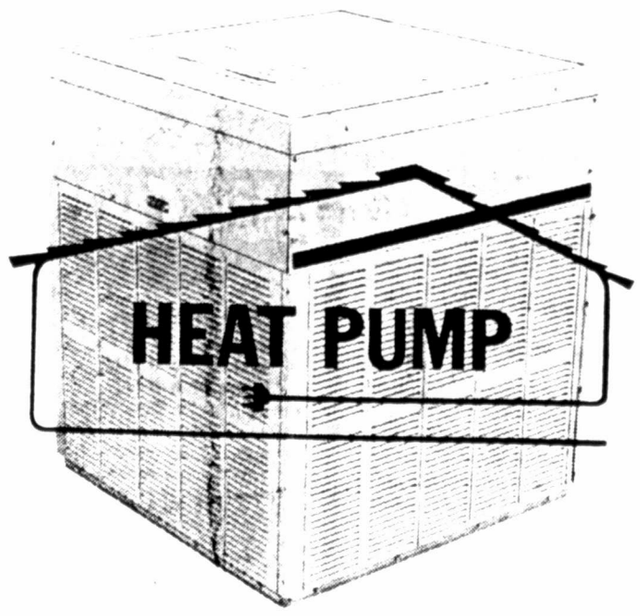

"Weights you wear" are a growing exercise habit around the country, spreading the new concept of muscle development into all sports.

House's Design Provides Easy Care, Nice Look

By HIAWATHA ESTES

Adept design and basic shape account for the practicality, easy care and handsome look of this Spanish/Mediterranean exterior.

The crisp roof line has been achieved due to the rectangular shape of the house. This shaped plan is also the most economical to construct. Note how false beams project out from the roof gables and how the garage roof extends out over the walk leading to the entry. Sloping walls provide a separation for the planter, planter shelves and entry porch.

Furnace and laundry facilities are in an offset at the rear of the garage. The water heater is also in the garage. This eliminates the necessity of providing expensive space in the house for these items and there is no chance of water damage if the water heater or washer should leak.

The central hall entry is the crossroad for the house as traffic to all areas converges here. Although there are three possible entries to the kitchen, the cabinets have been located in such a manner they do not form any awkward corners. Note the exceptionally wide eating space in the kitchen.

From the entry, one can look through the living room and out through the sliding glass doors to the patio and rear garden. This area is also accessible through sliding glass doors in the family room. These large glass areas visually enlarge both of these rooms. A built-in desk plus storage closet open to the hall off the family room.

Complete working drawings for plan 41167 can be purchased for only $19.95 for the first set and $10 for each additional set ordered at the same time. This plan will be available at these special prices until January 9, 1980. Please allow at least three weeks for delivery. A large reproduction rendering of the exterior is available for $4. Also available are six home plan books illustrating nearly 1,000 plans — a $13 value — for only $9.95 plus $1 for postage and handling. Send all orders to: Hiawatha Estes, P.O. Box 404-J., Northridge, Calif. 91328.

Amarillo Man Operates Delivery Service Here

Topdog, a bonded, radio-dispatched errand and delivery service, has opened a unique business in the Lubbock and South Plains area under the ownership of Dusky Woods, previously of Amarillo.

The variety of services offered by the firm provides a fascinating introduction to an entrepreneurship which thrives on ingenuity. The following, according to Woods, is only a partial list of services now available to South Plains residents:

"Pickup and delivery; secure your mail; fetch a part; get a gift; move furniture; deliver a meal; get your groceries; pay a bill; bring your car; vacation plant and pet care; pick up your cleaning; change a tire; carry a message; pick up supplies; return a book; bring a magazine; move appliances; turn on your lights; start your car; and even sing happy birthday!"

Woods, who participated in a similar business in Amarillo, has set high standards for the Lubbock company's personnel and stresses quality performance in all its operations. Each staff member must be polite and neat in appearance, he said.

His previous jobs have ranged from moving an oil field compressor 250 miles to small package deliveries within city limits.

Topdog, which might well be labeled "Business Inc.," operates on the philosophy that no job is too large or small. It serves both small and large businesses with deliveries and miscellaneous errands when regular employes are needed for other matters.

The firm's adventurous moments, which could form the basis for a serial, once included the transportation of a chemical with a low flashpoint which airlines and bus companies turned down.

Free estimates are provided by the company, which offers regular delivery of standard packages for $3, and a "hot shot" delivery for $5. Woods explains that the regular delivery is worked in for efficiency along with other deliveries, and the hot shot is an immediate, top priority delivery.

Tahoka Bank Honors Hegi

The First National Bank of Tahoka will honor its chairman of the Board, F. B. "Pete" Hegi, with a reception this afternoon at the bank.

F.B. HEGI

The veteran banker completed 50 years with the bank on Sept. 1. He recalls that bank employes often worked 18 hours a day in earlier years.

Hegi is a native of Petersburg. He moved to the Tahoka bank in 1929 as a bookkeeper. Positions have included teller, cashier, vice president, president and director, and finally, chairman of the board.

The First National Bank of Tahoka, which had assets of $774,000 in 1929, now reports $36.5 million.

Interest rates on loans haven't changed very much, according to Hegi. When he came to the First National, the interest rate was 10 percent, about what the bank charges now.

Hegi is a former vice president and treasurer of the South Plains Bankers Association. He is a member of the Rotary Club, a former Lions Club president and a member of the Methodist Church.

Concrete Firm Opens In City

"We cover a 300-mile radius of Lubbock, but will also do work on larger projects anywhere," he added.

The company was formed by Herman Holman and David Tinkle. Holman is a long time resident of West Texas, and has been in the concrete finishing business and also in a concrete pumping business.

Tinkle moved to Lubbock in January, 1979, from St. Paul, Minn. He has 15 years experience in redi-mix and concrete pumping operations. The office is located at 4305 56th St. and can be reached by phone at 745-7763.

NavyReviewing Aptitude Tests

CHICAGO (UPI) — Navy officials say they are conducting a nationwide review of military aptitude test results to determine whether recruiters engaged in illegal tutoring of enlistees.

The announcement followed disclosures that 17 Chicago area Navy recruiters may have coached recruits for the armed services aptitude battery test in violation of military rules.

Results of the test determine which recruits are admitted into the service and what kind of training they will receive.

Your home is making you richer everyday... and that should worry you a lot

A quick glance through the real estate section of your local paper will confirm the happy fact: your home is worth a lot more than you paid for it.

So what's the problem? The problem, in a word, is inflation and the fact that a sudden disaster right now could cost you dearly if your insurance has not kept up with the rapid increase in the value of your home. Getting richer every day is great, except for one thing: the more you gain, the more you have to lose.

But cheer up! We can help. Just ask us about Ætna's three "inflation fighters": The Ætna Aestimator, Inflation Guard and Automatic Upgrading. We've got it all to help you protect what you've gained.

'Bedroom Town' Expanding

More and more workers joining the Lubbock influx seem to agree with him.

By GERRY BURTON
Avalanche-Journal Staff

WOLFFORTH — According to its mayor, F. M. Jack, Wolfforth is a "bedroom town," overnight resting place for a working force from its big-city neighbor now only two miles away as city limits go.

And the Lubbock escape force is growing.

To accommodate the increasing numbers, Wolfforth recently enlarged its borders to take in 67 acres for two new housing developments which will put 200 more homes in the "bedroom town."

The Lubbock influx cuts down considerably on the neighborliness common to most small West Texas towns. A lot of residents, Jack noted, never see the neighbors who come home at night from a Lubbock job, then head back for Lubbock the next morning.

It doesn't affect at all, he added, the services offered the 1,500 "and growing" populace.

A future, but not immediate, need will be water.

The current water supply, he explained, can handle the new additions — 50 houses in Frenship Heights South and 150 in American Park Addition.

Development beyond current plans will, Jack hopes, be taken care of with assistance from Lubbock.

Other services will grow with expansion as it has since the community was incorporated in 1951.

Growth accelerated about the time Jack came to Wolfforth in 1962 and "really got going", a few years ago.

Business expansion has kept pace with residential growth. A large number of new firms have built in Wolfforth over the past decade and a $1.25 million gin is scheduled for the near future.

Jack is particularly proud of emergency services.

Call for an ambulance in Wolfforth, he said, and 20 phones ring. Response time is less than three minutes, with about a dozen emergency medical technicians available for ambulance service.

Emergency medical service is a volunteer effort, part of a fire department with 20 volunteer firemen trained at city expense.

Firemen are on call all the time, but EMTs are on call a week at a time to pass the volunteer job around. The firemen answer the phone anyway, just in case they are needed.

Wolfforth owns three fire trucks and foots the bill for volunteers attending the Texas A&M University fire school as well as the annual training session in Lubbock.

A tax base of 30 percent with a $1.50 per $100 valuation provides enough funds to upgrade existing city services and add others as need develops.

NEW HEAD

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Carlton E. Overland has been named acting director of the Elvehjem Museum of Art. Overland has been a staff member at the museum since 1970. Eric S. McCready, director of the Elvehjem since 1975, resigned recently to become director of the University Art Museum at the University of Texas at Austin.

HY GARDENER HAS THE ANSWER:

Glad You Asked That!

A: They have. No less than 11 single salutes to the late actor are available now. Most were released before Wayne's death. Some only a matter of days before the Duke died of cancer on June 12th. "Super Cowboy" (recorded by Wayne Jerred), a humorous take-off on Wayne's life was recorded in 1978. A copy was sent to Wayne, himself, reports "Cashbox" (the bible of the record industry). And the actor sent the singer a note of thanks — saying he enjoyed listening to it.

Q: From what I read, Twiggy and her American actor husband, Michael Whitney, seem to be very happyily married. Especially now that they have a baby. But what are these rumors that crop up about Whitney's strange sex life before Twiggy? — Melinda C., Denver.

A: "It's about time I put the record straight," the good-looking actor told writer Ivan Waterman, "because so many evil things have been said about me. It started in California," he revealed, "over this guy who had a big thing about me. He had blow-up pictures of me on his walls — and you can guess the rest about his leanings. Then he began spreading kinky things about me — the kind of stuff that was so sick."

"To top it off," says Twiggy, "I was supposed to be having an affair with Elton John!"

"I thought this guy was a friend," shrugged Michael, "but he really became bitter. He can no longer hurt us."

Q: In China, because of overpopulation, is it true that newly married couples are legally limited as to the number of children they can have? — The O'Briens, Jersey City, N. J.

A: It's not really a legal limit. Couples are "advised." Those marrying in January, for example, were given a "birth quota." One child in 1981. And a second in 1985. If these recommendations are not followed, their rice ration can be cut — pay increases can be denied, etc. Incidentally, though they get birth control pills free of charge, Chinese women believe "the Pill" makes them fat and many are reluctant to take them.

Q: Didn't singer Dionne Warwick secretly marry her ex-husband again — for the third time? — Millie J., Pasadena, California.

A: No. Though she has twice married actor Bill Elliot and twice divorced him — Dionne insists she's not the marrying kind. "I'm a gay divorcee," she says, "and loving every minute of it. There are two men in my life who are very special to me," she reveals. "One is black and the other is Italian. They spoil me rotten," she purrs, "and I love every minute of it."

Q: Now that he's made "Rocky" and "Rocky II," hasn't Sylvester Stallone had it with that role? — Michael Leigh, Columbus, Ohio.

A: Not yet. Stallone's now planning a "Rocky III" — which he insists will be the last. He says it's going to be made within 18 months — because he's getting too old for the rigors of the role. I made 'Rocky' when I was 29," says Sly. "I'll be 33 soon. My endurance is beginning to drop!"

Q: These days there seem to be so many performers who become stars "overnight." Either with a hit record or an appearance on a show like Johnny Carson's, etc. Didn't it used to take a lot longer years ago? — Mrs. Frances R., Topeka, Kans.

A: Yes. As veteran actress Lillian Gish recently recalled, in the days of D. W. Griffith, it took 10 years to make an "instant star."

"Do you think putting your name up in lights makes you a star?" she remembered Griffith asking. "It hasn't anything to do with it ... If you want to be a star, you have to be the first in the studio, the last to leave it. You have to get the best stories, the best directors, the best cameramen, the best of everything. And YOU have to be the best you can. You have to do that for at least 10 years. Then, when you're a household word in every family of the world, you're finally a star."

For Our "Chuzpah of the Year" Award: To the UN ambassador (Salah Omar al-Ali) from oil-rich Iraq. He wants the United States to do something special to supply UN diplomats with gasoline. And thus spare them and their chauffeurs the inconvenience of waiting in New York City's gas lines!

On this day in history:

In 1776, the second Continental Congress officially changed the American nation's name from "United Colonies" to "United States."

In 1971, more than 1,000 convicts took over the state prison at Attica, N.Y., and held 35 convicts hostage. Four days later, 28 convicts and nine hostages were killed as state police re-took the prison.

A thought for the day: Massachusetts Gov. Calvin Coolidge, who later became the 31st president, said, "I love Vermont because of her hills and valleys, her scenery and invigorating climate, but most of all because of her indomitable people."

TODAY'S EDITORIAL:

And Still No Free Lunches

It's always there, just a step behind. A turn in the wrong direction and it will be even or in front.

The shadow in this case is double digit inflation and the growing complications of an energy shortage, plus a lack of political leadership at home and abroad.

In brief, the U.S. wage earner, consumer and businessman—often one and the same—are marking an anniversary of sorts this Fall, 25 years of steady, relentless inflation.

IT WAS IN 1954 that prices last dropped enough for anyone to notice. Five percent to be exact.

But, in the intervening quarter century the cost of living has soared by 166 percent. The dollar which was worth 100 cents in the mid-50s is now worth only 38 cents and is shrinking at a phenomenal pace. Most goods and services which cost about $10 ten years ago now cost $27. And no end is in sight.

Prices which have been picking up momentum since the hectic sixties show no sign of abating. In the past 10 years alone, price boosts have averaged 7 percent, three times the average in the 1950s. As U.S. News and World Report noted recently, "rarely before in American history have prices gone up so fast for so long..."

THE RATE OF inflation has affected practically everything the American public uses, across the board.

As a result, not only has the Average American's pocketbook been affected drastically, but life styles, hopes, savings and spending habits, mores and morals have been changed. The theme of today's "one time around" philosophy is to live it up today for there may be no tomorrows, and if there are, they will cost more.

Ironically, in the midst of 25 years of the worst inflationary binge in the country's recent history, most people have managed to stay ahead of their shadow, as it were. Real per capita income, the amount left after taxes and inflation, rose 82 percent from $3,909 in 1954 to $7,117 in the January-March quarter of 1979, USN&WR says.

But, the frightening aspect of it all, the magazine points out, is that real per capita income gains over the past five years have slowed to an average of 1.7 percent a year since 1973, compared with a 2.5 percent average for the previous 20 years.

In other words, even though Americans are making more and more, in reality they are rapidly losing the long-range battle to stay ahead. Compounding the felony is the fact that it is in the area of basic necessities that the rate of price increases has been the most vicious.

A QUICK LOOK at what some things cost 25 years ago as compared to today tells the story.

In 1954, the median price of a new home was $12,300. Today, the average is $62,400 to $74,000, a rise of more than 400 percent.

In 1954, a stay in a hospital cost about $15 a day. Today, it is $133 on the average, a 796 percent boost.

The 5 1/4 percent mortgage prevalent in 1954 today is almost 11 percent and may go higher.

The price of a gallon of gasoline has tripled. Hamburger by the pound has quadrupled. And even mailing a letter to gripe, first class, costs five times more.

ALL OF THIS has hit those on fixed incomes and pensions especially hard. Millions of other households are "making it" only because at least two members of the family are working.

Apartment living, communal arrangements, "live-ins" and other unusual set-ups, in some cases to take advantage of "two, or more, can live cheaper than one" have surfaced.

Millions of others find it convenient to live on the cuff, using credit cards to open accounts and delay bill-paying to the last possible minute.

AND WHAT IS someone, anyone, doing about it all?

If one is to judge by what has happened the past 25 years, not much. There have been brief respites, but for the most part, the climb has been steady.

In the recession of 1974-75, partially brought on by the first Arab Oil Embargo, mandatory wage and price controls failed, as usual. Voluntary guidelines under first a Republican President and more lately a Democratic one, also are a shambles.

The real problem has not changed. It is unbridled spending by a Federal Bureaucracy and Big Brother type government which is seeking to be everything to everybody—guaranteeing citizens the good life, with or without work, no matter the cost. In exchange, the citizens vote in the people who give them back their money.

It would be nice to contemplate a halt to it all. But, if anything the past 25 years has taught us, it is that it is the people themselves who refuse to put restraints on their life styles and those who govern them. The other lesson is that there not only ain't no free lunch, there ain't no Santa Claus either. Sooner or later, both must be paid for.

ART BUCHWALD:

Only Real VIPs Rate More Than One 'Bug'

WASHINGTON—One of the parts of the Andy Young saga that hasn't been delved into is who bugged his conversation with the PLO UN observer.

As part of the counter-espionage game, intelligence organizations, including the CIA, have denied their people had anything to do with it.

But we all know there were probably four or five bugs in the Kuwaiti UN ambassador's apartment where the meeting took place.

The bugging of UN ambassadors is standard operating procedure for spooks operating in the New York area.

As a matter of fact, the real status of a UN member country is determined by how much trouble foreign agents will take to install the sophisticated listening equipment.

THERE IS even a pecking order for UN nations based on who is interested in what their ambassadors have to say.

The major powers such as the USSR, U.S., People's Republic of China, Japan, France and Great Britain rate at least five bugs. The other Western and Eastern bloc countries four.

Third World powers with oil, three bugs. Third World powers without oil could be entitled to one, or no bugs, depending how much trouble their governments are causing their neighbors.

There are exceptions, such as Cuba. Although it is a small power it is entitled to five bugs. Pakistan had only been allotted two bugs until it was revealed that she was developing an atom bomb.

The placement of these bugs in UN ambassadors' apartments is subject to negotiation between the various intelligence services.

MOST AGENCIES prefer to plant their bugs in an ambassador's bedroom on the theory that he might say more there than he would in his living room or dining room.

But if you put too many bugs in the bedroom, it's very hard to pick up conversations and the quality of the voices becomes weakened.

So trade-offs are made. The Soviets, for example, will agree to allow the CIA to bug the Indian ambassador's bedroom, and the CIA in return will give the KGB bugging rights to the French ambassador's mattress.

Because the price of sophisticated equipment has become so expensive, many spook organizations have bugging exchanges.

Zambia, who can only afford to bug one embassy at a time, will turn over its Ethiopian tape to Tanzania, and Tanzania will then give Zambia the one tape it has on Nigeria.

SOME INTELLIGENCE agents trade their bugging conversations of embassies as if they were baseball cards.

They'll let out word that they have an intimate conversation between the ambassador of Saudi Arabia and the head of a large oil company.

They might trade it for a dialogue between the UN West German ambassador and the foreign minister of Turkey.

A hot tape compromising a UN ambassador with a girl he met at Studio 54 could be worth a dozen tapes disclosing where Poland stands on the SALT II Treaty.

The entire UN intelligence community was badly shaken by the Andy Young incident. The original suspicion was that the Israelis had leaked the PLO conversation, but the Israeli service proved their bug had been planted in the Kuwaiti ambassador's bathroom behind one of the gold faucets.

SINCE THE Kuwaiti ambassador's wife was running her bath at the time, the Israelis said they had come up with nothing.

Egypt's bug, according to her agents, was in the ambassador's clothes closet, and the Japanese had theirs in the kitchen TV set.

By eliminating all the different hiding places, it looked as if the CIA was the one that did the damage.

But the CIA UN station boss indignantly denied it, and told the other agents, "Everybody knows that by law we're not allowed to bug anybody in our own country."

Writer Takes Umbrage At Chauvinist Stance In Note

Editor, Avalanche-Journal:

Please note that on Page 1 of your Sunday, Aug. 26, edition notice is given of your new "Family Weekly" section.

The wording in this notice is blatantly sexually discriminatory and offensive to intelligent and discriminating readers of your publication.

I refer to the statement "for the male readers there's sports, recreation and politics. And for the women, it's beauty, fashion, home and family news." Let me assure you that in spite of the fact that many of your readers such as myself happen to be women, we are still interested in sports, recreation and politics.

Please do your best to insure that such demeaning language does not appear in your newspaper again. It is a disservice to yourself and your readers.

Sarah L. Morris, 3526 91st St.

Editor, Avalanche-Journal:

In February, 1979 I visited a special class for deaf and hard of hearing students at the Maedgen Elementary School in Lubbock. The experience I had that day was the greatest thrill in my 38 years as an educator (public, private, or military).

Although the students in the class were handicapped due to hearing difficulties, I felt that there was the greatest transfer of knowledge that I have ever seen in a classroom.

The effectiveness of the program can not be attributed to any one individual, but to the entire school staff. During the short visit to the school, the principal, the principal's secretary, five other teachers, several other students and the custodian visited the classroom to show their concern and support for the teacher and students.

I consider the residents of Lubbock to be extremely fortunate to have such a dedicated group of educators.

Resignation Of Young Seen Sparking Old Ethnic Feud

Editor, Avalanche-Journal:

Isn't it ironic that two of the most vocal minorities are at serious odds?

The Andrew Young news releases of late have brought out in the open a racial rivalry that has been bubbling below the surface for years in the "urban centers".

No doubt the Israelites (and their ethnic brothers in the U.S.) had a hand in the "resignation" of Mr. Young as UN Ambassador, but it is evident to even casual observers that Mr. Young was the major contributor to his own downfall.

Now the blacks are contending that the Jews eliminated their 'main man', and the Jews are saying that Mr. Young was selling the Israelites down the river. It appears that both statements are correct.

Reader Says Carter Has Played Into Soviet Hands

Editor, Avalanche-Journal:

The SALT II treaty symbolizes President Carter's foreign policy of unilateral disarmament and surrender to Soviet Russia's massive military build-up.

America's Air Force has been decreased from 935 bombers to 414, its naval combat ships from 300 to 169, scrapped its missile defense against Soviet Intercontinental Ballistic missiles. Soviets are 6-1 ahead in missile explosive power and have 47-1 advantage in combat ships and submarines.

In SALT II, Soviet Backfire bombers, able to strike any American target aren't counted. President Carter has scrapped the B1 bomber and the Neutron bomb.

America sells the Soviet enemy ball-bearing grinding machines used in guidance systems of Soviet ICBMs which can reach within 600 feet of a target, sells the Soviet enemy computers that can detect U.S. Trident submarines.

President Carter helped force out the anti-Communist Shah of Iran, protector of the Persian Gulf, losing a vital listening post on Russia's border. President Carter watched silently as the Soviets conquered Angola, Ethiopia, Yemen, Afghanistan, etc. The Soviet holds half the world in its bloody embrace, has a military force in Cuba and is targeting South and Central America.

Fight For Free Enterprise Concern To All, He Says

Editor, Avalanche-Journal:

A quotation from the book, A Time For Truth, by William E. Simon, has been brought to my attention:

"The Republican Party which declares itself philosophically committed to freedom but allows an economic dictatorship to emerge in the United States without stirring up the fiercest donnybrook in the American history has asked for the oblivion to which it is presently being consigned."

The bad effects of this "economic dictatorship" will also be felt by conservative Democrats and Independents.

All who believe in free enterprise must work to evict the liberal socialists along with their big-spending, big-government ideas and replace them with conservatives who may be able to restore the free-enterprise system that this country enjoyed during the first 150 years of its existence.

Thank you for your numerous editorials and columns in support of free enterprise.

Plea Made To Halt Litter Problem In Coronado Area

Editor, Avalanche-Journal:

Are weeds in our city the most ugly sight, or is it the battlefield of litter on private business parking lots in the 4600 block of 34th Street and the parking lot of Coronado High School?

On any Saturday and Sunday morning these lots look like a battlefield, littered with beer cans and bottles, not to mention broken windows and damage to buildings.

The license plate numbers tell us who is responsible. Parents should be aware that they are responsible and liable for what these children are doing. Littering, parking and trespassing on posted property is illegal.

Drinking in public is still illegal in Lubbock is it not? Most of this group are under the legal drinking age. We owners have called and pleaded with the Lubbock police several times to no avail and now are pleading with the parents of these children.

The Coronado teachers would also welcome help along these lines. Does the Police department need police cars to patrol and carry on their personal business, or maybe garbage trucks to pick up beer cans and bottles from 34th street?

VIRGINIA PAYETTE:

Deck Is Stacked

DALLAS—Okay, kids... if you're poor, black, or poor AND black, this news flash is for you.

You're not going to like it. You don't, just between you and me, have to believe it, either. But it's the latest sample of "enlightened social thinking" so brace yourselves.

According to a recent report from the Carnegie Council on Children, if you have the bad luck to be born into a poor family, you might as well forget about making it big in the upper brackets some day.

Give up your paper route; skip the remedial reading classes, too. That stuff about the kid from Hell's Kitchen who grew up to be rich and famous is only for the movies.

IN REAL life, the deck is stacked against you the minute the fates discover you live on the wrong side of the tracks, cross-town from the big houses on the hill.

Or so says Richard H. de Lone, a specialist in social and economic problems, in an essay called "Small Futures: Children, Inequalities and the Limits of Liberal Reform."

His argument is that, because of the inequality of income distribution in our system, the rich just get richer and the poor get food stamps.

Underprivileged students, although they may be as bright and as talented as their rich classmates, "have less chance of succeeding" because of their background.

"The most important factors in determining a child's future," he says, "are class, race and sex. Being born rich or poor does not guarantee that a child will stay that way as an adult, but it does make it more likely."

MR. DE LONE would have you believe that because a youngster's parents are poor it is "impossible for him ever to enjoy truly equal opportunity."

Well, maybe that's true. Nobody will deny that the good things of life come easier to those whose fathers have money, power and memberships in all the right clubs.

It's also true that there are teachers who would rather have rich kids in their classes and who can't be bothered to give extra time or attention to the ones who come to school in hand-me-downs. But not always.

And if Mr. de Lone ever read Fortune Magazine he would know that, while Henry Ford did indeed inherit his job, many of the famous 500 corporations are run by men who began life with nothing but brains and ambition.

And by using both, they're now pulling down six- and seven-figure salaries.

THEY MAY be, as Mr. de Lone says, that 20 percent who "through individual effort and achievement" manage to attain more social status than their fathers did. But the fact remains that they did it, and if one out of five can, why not two, or even three?

His answer to that is statistics. Given the same intelligence and talents, he says, children whose families are in the top 10th of income distribution are "27 times as likely to achieve upper income status as those from the bottom 10th."

That way, the wealthy would pay more and the poor would get a government payoff. (Isn't that the way the system is running right now?)

HE ALSO wants full employment, target economic and investment development, and strong affirmative-action programs.

The billions we're spending—on special education, social programs for the poor, etc.—aren't doing poor kids any good, he says. And neither are government aid, child welfare, and special handling for juvenile law-breakers.

We have assigned the job of reforming our social structure to children, and Mr. de Lone thinks that won't work either, because there's no such thing as "more equality of opportunity unless there is more equality to begin with."

But at least we're trying. And the fact that we haven't yet produced the Perfect Society doesn't mean that poor kids should automatically assume they're licked before they start.

L.M. BOYD:

...Pass It On

YOU KNOW that mud that umpires rub on five dozen baseballs before each major league game? It comes from one supplier only—Burns Bintliff and his family in southern New Jersey. The mud there doesn't stick to the stitches of the ball. If it did, the pitched ball would dip and dive like a knuckler.

Q. Seemed a few generations ago that every dog in the country was called Rover, but I don't know why...?

A. They were named after the first animal film star who played the hero in the 1905 movie "Rescued by Rover."

A. American history. That subject in which the most get an "F" is English, regret to report.

Gliders Still Piercing Air With Magnificence

Silently the craft soared through the air, unnoticed save for the few enthusiasts keeping careful watch. The gliders were a far cry from those of World War II, but still they pierce the air with magnificence.

The quarters in the glider are tight yet comfortable. After being tucked into the cockpit, we prepare to takeoff. The plane pulls forward, the tow rope tightens and the glide begins to race down the runway.

Soon the crafts are aloft. The plane gently climbs to 3,000 feet and searches for thermals (heat reflected from the ground) to give the glider lift.

It is a comfortable feeling knowing there is a motorized plane out there pulling you. It almost seems safe.

Suddenly there is a heart-piercing thud, at least it seemed that way, and we were released from the tow plane. The glider swung free and we were on our own. The quiet "whoosh" of the passing wind was the only noise.

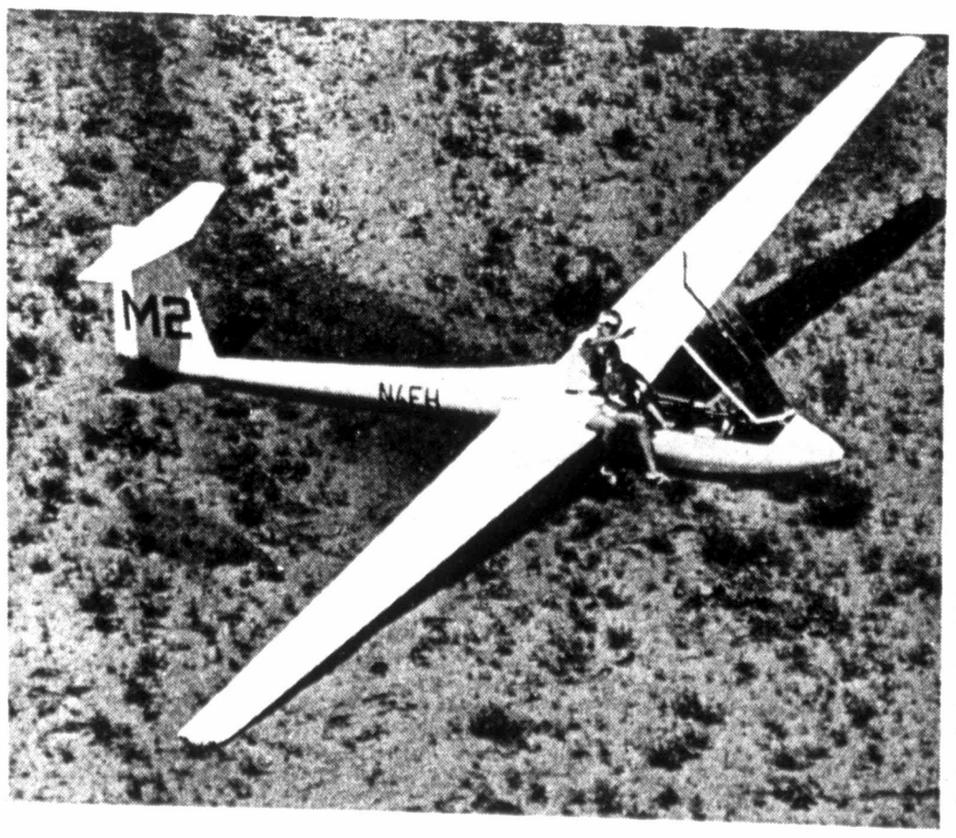

It seemed as though we were literally floating on a cloud. As the glider was manuevered in search of thermals we bobbed through the air as if we were on a gentle roller coaster. It almost gives one a feeling of invincibility. Flying like a bird, it is almost too good to believe.

But our winds of fortune had by this time changed. Slowly we began to descind and accept the fact of our vulnerability. We were high enough to angle into the airport, others that day were not so lucky.

The landing was as smooth as on any commercial flight I have ever taken. Soon the wing tip is dragging the ground and it is all over. Our free flight on the winds had lasted only a few minutes, yet it seemed longer.

I did it, I rode in a glider. There is no doubt in my mind. Yet I still can not get out of my head the pounding thought that a plane without a motor can not fly. I keep expecting it to fall from the sky. But watching the beauty and grace with which these men fly them is a sight to behold. A magnificent sight everyone should experience.

Step 2: Now find the corresponding number for the month you were born. If your month is February, and your year numbers were preceded by a B, your month numbers would be 8 for Physical, 3 for Emotional and 31 for Intellectual. Enter your own numbers in the figure chart for Step 2.

Step 3: In the figure chart, enter your day of birth three times, one each for Physical (P), Emotional (E) and Intellectual (I). (If you were born on April 3, for instance, place a 3 in each column.)

Add the three columns to derive your permanent biorhythm numbers for your Physical, Emotional and Intellectual cycles. Now you can refer to today's rhythms.

These numbers are yours permanently. Check them each day for your biorhythm reading.

Positive Thinking

By Norman Vincent Peale

Thrilling human stories are about us on every hand. And some of them are surprising indeed. Take this one for example.

It was moving day for the Jones family. Rev. Jones, a minister, was leaving Illinois for a new parish in New York. The moving van arrived and the driver asked briskly, "Got everything ready to go?"

"Yes, everything's ready."

"Well, there is one thing that has to be done before we roll with these goods."

"If you mean paying you in advance," Rev. Jones replied, "I can do that if you want."

"No, not that," said the van driver. "Now I don't know if you're a praying man or not," he explained (unaware that he was talking to a minister), "but these household goods we're moving are part of your family life — so before we move them a thousand miles I'm going to ask you to pray with me that we may bring them safely to your new residence and that God may bless your new home. So call your wife and kids and let's have a prayer."

Ever hear a moving man talk like that? This minister hadn't. And he was frankly astonished. He called his family. They and the van driver prayed together. And when the same man delivered the goods to their destination he again prayed for God's blessing upon the new home. "Thanks, Fred," said Rev. Jones. And he added, "You must be a very religious man."

"I've been one of the worst men anywhere," Fred answered. "But by the grace of God I'm on the way to being a better guy." Prompted, he told Rev. Jones his story.

Reared in an atmosphere of quarreling and bitterness Fred grew up cynical and rebellious. At 18 he quit school without finishing his last year in senior high. He left home and drifted from one small job to another. He took to gambling, drinking, chasing women.

After a while he got married. His wife bore him three children, but he treated her abominably. "She was a good woman," he says. "But I abused her and swore at her and cursed the kids and chased them out of the house and made life miserable for everybody.

Then he got into some brawl and landed in jail. His wife had had all she could take. She left him. But even that didn't bring him to his senses. He kept on in the same old way.

In time he met another woman who saw something in him and again he got married. By this wife he had two children. But he treated her as badly as the first one. After several years of unhappiness she finally gave up. "Fred, I can't live this kind of life any longer. I do love you. I know you could be a good man if you just would. I've prayed and prayed for you. But nothing changes. I'm going to leave you."

Fred knew from the quiet way she said this that she meant it. And now he was aware that he was growing older. There came over him a dreadful sense of what a terrible failure he was making of his life. He charged out into the back yard to be alone. He sat with his head in his hands, so miserable that he could hardly think. Then he remembered he had somewhere heard about people whose lives had been changed. So he found himself praying, "Dear God, dear God, I've had it. I don't want to be like this any more. Please change me, God."

A strange peace came over him. After a few minutes he returned to the house and hesitantly told his wife about his prayer. Her eyes filled with tears and she said, "Well, Fred, I'll wait to see if this is just a passing thing or if it's real."

Strangely enough, it was real. And that was how the big turning point came for Fred. I heard him tell this amazing story the other night at a meeting under the auspices of an organization known as Faith at Work. It was the kind of meeting at which individuals stand up and bear witness to what God has done in their lives.

One of those present was Rev. Jones and that was how it happened that Fred came and gave his story. As he concluded speaking his lovely wife stood beside him and a happier-looking couple I have seldom seen.

Fred is a good example of how a person can start living a better life and keep on living it. He discovered the truth of a statement of Jeremiah: "When you seek Me with all your heart, I will be found by you, says the Lord." Fred's new life began when he got so fed up with what he was that he really prayed with all his heart for something better. And he got his answer. And some answer it was. A good man at moving furniture, Fred also is equally good at moving people's minds and hearts.

Supreme Court Asked To Review Decision On Retirement Homes

WASHINGTON (Special) — The Baptist Joint Committee on Public Affairs has asked the U.S. Supreme Court to review a California court decision that the United Methodist Church may be held liable in lawsuits fled gainst a Methodist-related group of bankrupt retirement homes.

The Baptist agency, in a legal brief submitted to the high court Aug. 31, accused the California Court of Appeals of endangering "religious denominations as they now exist" by allowing 162 former residents of Pacific Homes to sue not only the retirement facilities themselves but their sponsoring denomination as well. The suits total $366 million.

United Methodist Church theologians and historians testified in the California court that their church policy is connectional, rather than strictly hierarchical. But the court of appeals ruled in March that the UMC is a hierarchical church.

Nearly a year earlier, a lower California court ruled that the UMC is no more than a spiritual confederation and nota jural entity that could be sued under California state law. That court warned that allowing the retirement home residents to sue the church "would effectively destroy Methodism in this country" and "would have a chilling effect on all churches and religious movements by inhibiting the free association of persons of similar religious beleifs."

The Baptist Joint Commission brief, written by research director John W. Baker, argued that the diversity of church policy among denominations requires courts to refrain from placing them in categories of "hierarchical" or "independent". Various shades between the two extremes, including "quasi-hierarchical," "connectional" and "cooperating congregational" churches must be acknowledged, the argument continued.

The brief also maintained that the California Court of Appeals disregarded state law which holds that in matters of church polity or discipline, "the state and its courts have no legitimate concern or jurisdiction."

The Baptist brief underscored the point by declaring that "because ecclesiology is based on theological beliefs and understandings, the state is not a competent definer or interpreter of the nature and pattern of religious intra-organizational relationships."

Without question, however, the issue in the California case which most concerns denominational officials of all faiths has to do with the legal obligations of agencies and institutions bearing their name. The Baptist Joint Comittee brief declares that the California decision, if allowed to stand, "would unconstitutionally mandate the demise of religious denominations as they now exist."

The Baptist agency also stated that it finds "offensive" the notion that because various churches and institutions share the same name, any one of them may be legly accountable for the others. Noting that most Baptist churche have chosen to cooperate for missionary, evangelistic and social purposes, the brief warns that the California court position would even make local congregations liable for the actions of any other local church.

The high court will take the Baptist brief under advisement along with those of other groups urging the justices to accept the case for full argument and decision.

Black rolls 5-1. How should he play?

"I don't see any point to all this theory," a reader writes. "I play by the seat of my pants and there are very few players who can beat me!"

All I can say is that the seat of his pants must be a lot better educated than is mine. Sure, if you play by intuition, or guesswork, or anything else you would like to call it, you rate to be right at least half the time. But if you follow the odds, you should get the best out of every possibility. Consider this position.

There are those who might say that it makes no difference what Black does — it is simply a matter of what White is going to roll next. For his 5, Black must take a man off his 5-point. The question is how to play the 1: By moving a man from the 5-point to the 4-point, or by dropping a man from the 3-point of the 2-point.

Playing a man to the 2-point has one big advantage — no matter what Black rolls at his next turn, he will not have to leave a blot. But that assumes that Black will not get hit. The more immediate problem is where Black should leave the blot this turn!

If Black leaves the blot on his 5-point, he can be hit by any 4 (11 possibilities out of 36) or by 3-1 (2 out of 36). In other words, White stands to hit the blot with any one of 13 rolls, but will miss with 23.

If Black uses the 1 to advance his blot to the 4-point, he can be hit only by a 3. In simple terms, there are then only 11 combinations that will hit while 25 miss. Thus Black can improve his chances of not getting hit by advancing to the 4-point.

TIP: When you have to leave a direct shot (that is, a blot that is 6 points or fewer away from an opponent's man), the closer you are to that man, the better your chances of not getting hit.

UMC Leaders Rap Dismissal

NEW YORK (Special) — A United Methodist minister who heads the Southern Christian Leadership Conference (SCLC) said here in late August the civil rights organization unconditionally supports "the human rights of all Palestinians, including the right of self-determination in regard to their own homeland."

The Rev. Joseph Lowery was among SCLC officers who met with the Palestine Liberation Organization and the Israeli delegates to the United Nations in the wake of the resignation of Andrew Young as U.S. ambassador to the U.N. At the meeting, Rev. Lowery told reporters he also urged the PLO to give "consideration to recognition of the nationhood of Israel." Earlier in the month, several United Methodists were among more than a score of officials in non-governmental organizations signing a message to President Carter saying they were "shocked and saddened" by Young's resignation and calling his departure a "deep loss" to both the U.S. and the international organization.

Technology On Trial In United States

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the first in a series of 15 articles exploring "Connections: Technology and Change." In this article, historian John G. Burke of the University of California, Los Angeles, discusses our ambivalence toward technology today and raises some of the questions that will be answered in subsequent articles. This series was written for COURSES BY NEWSPAPER, a program developed by University Extension, University of California, San Diego, and funded by a grant from the National Endowment for the Humanities. A related 10-part television series, "Connections," co-produced by the BBC and Time-Life Films, will be shown over PBS stations beginning Sept. 30. By JOHN G. BURKE

Smog! Water pollution! Excessive noise! Urban filth! Shoody products! Lethal food additives! Radioactive wastes! Genetic manipulation! Dehumanization!

These are the results, critics charge, of our blind faith in technological progress. Rebuttals calling attentions to our high standard of living, improved health, longer life spans, better working conditions and increased educational opportunities do not still the critics' voices.

The most ominous assertion is that technology is now completely out of human control. Technology, the prosecution says, has become an independent entity, a thing apart from humans who gave it birth. We have become cogs in a huge system of production and consumption, a machine having no human purpose. Certainly, modern technology gives most of us a means of livelihood, food, shelter, and leisure to watch TV. But the price we pay for these material satisfactions, it is said, is our freedom.

Technology, critics declare, not only shapes and directs every aspect of our lives, but threatens the very existence of the human species. Our increasing love affair with rationality and efficiency — that is, science and engineering — is responsible for creating this technology monstrosity. We are thus caught in a web of our own making.

One possible escape route may be open, declare the anti-technologist, but only if we act quickly and forcefully. Repudiate modern science and high technology. Return to a simpler way of life.

Even if these prophets of doom are exaggerating or are mistaken, there are many signs, such as pollution, which indicate that something has gone wrong. We are constantly surprised by technology's shortcomings. Dangerously defective tires nullify the safety advantages of mandatory seat belts. Cancer-producing food additives are banned, and later their replacements are found to be just as lethal.

Technology resembles the Hydra, the awesome nine-headed beast finally slain by Hercules, which grew two heads from the root of each he struck off.

Will we succeed in overcoming our problems as Hercules did his? Do humans have enough resilience to maintain freedom and choice in spite of burgeoning technology?

Questions

According to Burke, which of the following is NOT a principal "Agency of technological innovation?"

(a) science
(b) government
(c) economic activity
(d) spirit of adventure

According to Burke, technological change

(a) is taking place much more rapidly than every before
(b) can be attributed exclusively to scientific research
(c) has a much greater social impact than ever before
(d) has often been stimulated by war

Assertions and predictions about technology usually are based on several assumptions that are difficult if not impossible to prove. One is that technological change is taking place more rapidly than in the past. Another is that technological change has a much greater social impact than ever before. A third is that scientific research and development are exclusively responsible for present technological innovations.

A useful way of assessing our present situation, of judging whether it is indeed unique, is to look at technological development in an historical context and in its relation to contemporary problems.

EFFECTS OF TECHNOLOGY

Three of the more important effects of technological advance are the increasing complexity of our civilization, the changes in our culture and institutions, and the impact of innovations on work. The complexity of our technological society, indeed, is one of the reasons critics give either for our loss of control or for their charge that the system is manipulated for the benefit of a scientific-technological elite. One frequently cited example is the 1965 New York blackout, which plunged the city into darkness for hours before power was restored, and the cause of which stumped experts for days.

Is complexity a novel feature of modern technology?

Similarly, societal and institutional changes are apparently occurring with astonishing rapidity. A century ago, for example, any proposal for a U.S. Department of Energy would have appeared ludicrous. But now, as we worry about an energy shortage, it has become a necessity.

Have advancing technologies always had the effect of altering cultures? Has the pace of change quickened?

Only when we look to the past do we realize fully how very different our methods of producing goods are from those of our forebears. Technology has unquestionably affected the work process. However, the important question is whether our labor has become more individually rewarding and more socially beneficial.

Yet, effects do not occur without preconditions. One is our physical environment, which is necessary to life and crucial in the development of technology. The exploitation and misuse of the environment is one of our most urgent problems.

How have past cultures or those in other parts of the world come to terms with nature or arrived at a compromise between the environment and technological progress? Does high technology inevitably entail environmental deterioration?

Another apparent precondition of technological advance is the size, distribution, and migration of populations. Some critics maintain that the size of our population and its increasing concentration in urban areas are primarily responsible for environmental pollution. Others declare that without technological progress the growing populations in developing nations will perish. Yet historically, the links between technological progress and population growth are puzzling.

What advice, if any, should we give to developing nations? Or, to ourselves?

Societal values constitute a third precondition of technological innovation. For example, gunpowder, invented in China, was not used there for firearms. When it appeared in Western Europe, however, military engineers immediately grasped its military potentialities.

Why do some cultures accept technological innovations that others reject?

SOURCES OF TECHNOLOGICAL CHANCE

Given these preconditions, however, what stimulates technological progress, and who or which institutions accomplish innovation?

Humanitarian concerns, the spirit of adventure, or the wish to transform idleness to active leisure, have produced some innovations. But the principal agencies of technological innovation are economic activity, science, engineering, war, and government, although some economists would maintain that all of these ultimately can be lumped under economic activity.

The desire to satisfy material needs, individual or social, has always been a major source of innovation. In western cultures, luxuries have become necessities with resulting economic growth. Indeed, some critics blame the "growth ethic" for both environmental deterioration and for the purported decline in the quality of life.

To what extent is this ethic the cause of our difficulties?

From small beginnings in the seventeenth century, scientific research activity has now grown to substantial size. On the one hand, the rational and objective approach of scientists provokes criticism; on the other, the discoveries, which give rise to technological innovation, cause worry.

How has science grown? What is its interaction with technology? How do scientists perceive themselves? And, inasmuch as science receives the credit or blame for innovation, what is the engineers' role, and to what extent should their activities cause concern?

War has always encouraged technological innovation, not just in the development of new weapons, but also in stimulating new industries and methods that have profoundly affected society. Military needs were the chief stimulus for the development of aircraft, space ships, and computers.

Similarly, governments have encouraged innovations through the patent system, agricultural experiment stations, and agencies that aid industry.

To what degree does this activity, both military and civilian, contribute to our present problems?

The subjects described above and questions raised comprise the main body of this series of articles. The final three articles will consider both the past and the future prospect. They will investigate the nature of inventive activity, the relation of technology to ethical principles, and the merits and shortcomings of current attempts to direct the course of technological development for human purposes.

Serious public consideration of these issues and participation in the on-going debates is necessary. For it is only through our collective wisdom that the problems concerning technological advance and its effects can be resolved.

Tips Given On How To Protect Valuables

By SGT. SIDNEY LYLE
Odessa Police Department

Here are some ideas which may help you retain ownership of your cash and other valuables while staying at a hotel or motel during the season of vacations and the fall festivals.

Consider your baggage, and use good luggage which has something better than the filmsy locking devices found on most suitcases. Don't carry all your valuables and jewelry with you on a trip — leave them in a safety deposit box where they belong. If you must take jewelry with you, deposit it in the hotel safe and get a receipt.

Don't walk away leaving your luggage unattended in the lobby. If you are not ready to take your luggage with you when you leave, have the hotel store it for you. It's best that you do not carry large sums of money with you, but if you must — deposit most of it in the hotel vault and draw it out as you need it. Remember, you are better off with money orders.

If your car is parked by the attendant, give him only the ignition key. You keep the key to the glove compartment and trunk. This gives you extra storage space with at least a little security. While in your room, keep the door bolted. It's not a bad idea to prop the back of a chair under the door knob. Entry will be prevented even if the intruder has a key.

One more thing. If your hotel door has a through-the-door viewer, look through it to be sure it works. If you can't see out, then that is a pretty good indication that someone has turned it around so they can see in.

CAB Requests Fare Hike Date From TWA

WASHINGTON (AP) — Trans World Airlines has until Sept. 21 to tell the Civil Aeronautics Board what day this month it raised its fares.

The CAB authorized airlines to raise fares up to 9.5 percent last week but said each airline would have to file for permission to charge the higher prices. The board said Thursday that TWA filed for approval Wednesday — but may have started charging the higher rate the previous Saturday.

Shari Introduces More Interesting Tag Games

By SHARI LEWIS

Like everything else, old games are only old if you have been playing them for a long time.

A few weeks ago, I did a Kids-Only Club column on the many different games of Tag, as we used to play them on summer afternoons in the Bronx, and it brought an absolute snowfall of letters.

Since you like Tag, too, here are some other tag games that you might enjoy as well:

Japanese Tag is a funny one. The person who gets tagged becomes "It." "It" must put his or her hand on the spot where he or she was tagged-and keep it there! So what you try to do in Japanese Tag is tag the person on, say, the ankle. Then "It" will have to run around holding that ankle while trying to tag somebody else.

Wood Tag means that you're safe only when you're touching or standing on wood (a box, tree, stoop, sign, and so on).

Shadow Tag is the game where "It" has to step on other kids' shadows. (Of course, Shadow Tag always causes lots of arguments. I mean, how on earth can you prove that you stepped on somebody's shadow?)

TODAY'S BRAIN TWISTER: No, no, don't touch that pencil! Just look at the circles in the picture. Would you have to follow the right arrow or the left arrow in order to take the right path to escape through the one open end?

Field Day To Address Hybrid Cotton Studies

Development of hybrid cotton is "of great interest" to anyone interested in agriculture, particularly on the High Plains where about 4 million acres are planted to the crop, officials said.

The field day is scheduled from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. at the Texas A&M University Agricultural Research and Extension Center, north of the Lubbock International Airport on Farm-to-Market 1294.

The development of a practical hybrid cottonseed program would be a major breakthrough for cotton breeders, according to Dr. Levon L. Ray, TAES cotton breeder. Ray will present his research findings at the cotton breeding stop.

Hybrid cotton should increase yields by 10 to 20 percent, Ray said, "while making it possible to increase the level of insect and disease resistance and provide more desirable fiber combinations."

Some cotton hybrids have been developed but have not been fully tested, Ray said. The outcome of this year's field tests will give a good reading on the potential and future of hybrid cotton, he said.

Addition stops on the field tour will include soil fertility, weed research, water use efficiency, and grain sorghum breeding. Grape vineyard tours and soybean research will be among the added attractions.

The field day is a cooperative presentation of the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station, High Plains Research Foundation, U.S. Department of Agriculture, Texas Agricultural Extension Service, and the National Weather Service Agricultural Meterorology Office.

Professional staffs of these organizations, state and federal agencies will answer questions and discuss topics of interest with farmers, home owners and gardeners.

Analysts Note Possible First With Porjected Bean Harvest

By RODERICK TURNBULL
Kansas City Board of Trade

KANSAS CITY — Market analysts are finding it worthy of note that the acres harvested for soybeans this year may be larger than for any other crop in the United States.

This would be a first for this country. It is seen in comment after comment.

The indicated area for harvest of soybeans is expected to total 70.6 million acres; for corn harvested for grain 69.5 million acres and all wheat 62.3 million acres. Only 20 years ago, the acres harvested in soybeans totaled just 22,631,000 and the yield was 533 million bushels. In times past, the corn and wheat acreages have been even larger than they are this year.

This is an interesting fact in itself, but more important to the analysts is the indication that the world will want all these soybeans from the bigger acreage at some sort of a reasonable price.

Not only is the United States producing more soybeans, with consequent increases in the output of soybean oil and meal (assuming the crop grows to maturity and is harvested), but so also is the world boosting the production of other high protein meals and vegetable oils. Here again, demand apparently is adequate, at some price, to take it all, with, of course, certain amounts in carry-over.

An obvious fact indicated by the 70-million soybean acreage for harvest is that every change in the average yield of 1 bushel means a change in the total yield of 70 million bushels. The carry-over on Sept. 1 this year has been estimated to be around 150 million bushels. A 2-bushel change in the final average yield per acre either up or down this fall would almost equal the estimated carry-over.

The first crop report of the year on soybeans on Aug. 10, estimated the total yield at 2,129,254,000 and the per acre average at 30.3 bushels.

The U.S. along with the rest of the world, has increased its acreage of oilseed crops other than soybeans. The total acreage of soybeans, cotton, flaxseed, peanuts and sunflowers, is estimated at 93.5 million which would be an increase of 13 percent from 1978.

The biggest increase percentagewise is in sunflowers, where the 1979 acreage at 5.3 million acres is almost double that of 1978. The sunflowers are concentrated in Minnesota, North Dakota, South Dakota and Texas, with North Dakota alone accounting for 65 percent of this year's plantings.

Sunflowers are an important oilseed crop in several nations of the world, notably the Soviet Union. But now, in effect, sunflowers are becoming competitors of soybeans in the United States. However, it is estimated that three-fourths of the sunflower seed produced in the U.S. this year will be exported.

World oilseed production this year is estimated at 174.2 million metric tons with soybeans accounting for just a little over half the total. In addition to soybeans, the major oilseed crops include cottonseed, peanuts, sunflower seeds and rapeseed. But among others which help swell the total are sesame seed, safflower seed, flaxseed, castor beans, copra and palm kernels.

Soybeans are the world's dominant oilseed crop and the U.S. is the major producer and exporter of this community. But with all the other oilseed crops from which protein meals and vegetable oil are made, it is obvious the soybeans have competition on world markets.

The major soybean exporters are the United States, Brazil and Argentina. Because of the emergence of South American production of soybeans in recent years, the major disappearance of American beans through the export market has been shifted to the first half of the marketing year.

The Brazilian and Argentine soybean harvests are in the months called spring in the United States. Almost all the South American soybeans from the 1979 crop already have been exported. Recently, Brazilian crushers are reported to have purchased beans from the U.S. and rapeseed from Canada to keep their plants busy and to fill orders. One USDA authority has commented that almost the only supplier of soybeans on the world market in the latter part of 1978 and through March 1979, was the United States. But from April on until recently the availability of South American soybeans significantly reduced U.S. export levels.

The USDA also comments that beginning this fall, the U.S. again will be about the only major producer with soybeans to sell until Brazilian and Argentine crops appear on the world markets next spring.

Both Argentina and Brazil hope to produce more soybeans next spring. It will be recalled that the last two years, Brazil's early prospects for bigger yields were dashed by dry weather which prevailed in the late part of the growing season.

Meanwhile, although the available data indicates increasing production of soybeans, and other oilseed crops, around the world (including the United States), signs also point to increased utilization, both of oil and the protein meals, the products of the oilseed crops.

Analysts continue to emphasize increasing pork and poultry production which, of course, requires more feed grains and more protein meals. The major customers for the U.S. are Western Europe, Japan and Eastern Europe. The United States, itself, also is a big consumer of the soybean products.

The USDA is estimating total utilization of soybeans in 1979-80 which will be around 1.95 billion bushels and that compares with the estimate of 1.9 billion bushels in the current 1978-79 year which ends August 31.

U.S. soybean farmers, the grain trade and importers around the world will breathe easier when the 1979 crop actually is in the bin.

Exchanges Aid Families With Opposite Lifestyles

FORREST, Ill. (UPI) — The freedom, the open air, meeting new people and exchanging experiences.

Those are the things Connie and Bob Ratzel say they enjoyed most about their visit to the David and Linda Miller farm north of Forrest.

The Ratzels, both social workers from Chicago, and their three small children met the Millers and their three small children as part of a family-to-family visit program to promote better understanding between rural and urban families.

"The kids really like it. We mention we're going to a farm and they say 'Oh, boy!'," said Connie Ratzel. "I love the freedom of not having to worry about trucks and motorcycles when the children are playing."

It was the third consecutive year the Ratzels have participated in the program but only the first time for the Millers. Both families said they planned to participate next year and were looking forward to the Millers' return visit to the Ratzel home in Chicago.

"The biggest advantage of this program is the return visit," said David Miller, who grew up on a farm and now raises 750 acres of corn and soybeans. "A large number of urban people have rural roots, but very few rural people have urban roots."

"It's not a one-sided program. A lot of farmers think that city people are going to get smart when they spend a weekend on the farm. They don't realize it can work both ways."

Linda Miller agreed, saying the reciprocal visit by the farmers to the cities would help dispel the stereotyped opinions many rural people have about city folk.

The program, now in its fifth year, is sponsored by the Illinois Farm Bureau and radio stations WGN in Chicago and KMOX in St. Louis.

The Ratzel children — Maria, 4, Jonathan, 3, and Kristen, 2 — hit it off immediately with the Miller children — Libby, 6, Amanda, 5, and Seth, 18 months — their parents said. However, the children's only reaction to questions about how they enjoyed the weekend was a lot of head nodding.

Farm life was not a completely new experience for either Bob or Connie Ratzel. Both have rural backgrounds, but they said visiting the Millers gave them an opportunity to re-experience a pleasant part of their past.

For the Millers, the exchange program was an opportunity to meet new people and make new friends — something that is sometimes difficult for farmers and small town residents, they said.

"One thing about small towns, there aren't that many people around," echoed Linda Miller, who grew up in a western Chicago suburb. "We like to meet new people."

During the weekend visit, the Millers took the Ratzels to visit other farms in the area. They also attended an auction and the children went swimming in a nearby lake.

In between times, when it was raining, there was a lot of talking.

"We talked more than anything else about their lifestyle," said Bob Ratzel. "Now we're anxious for them to see how we spend our days and what the people in our neighborhood are like."

In all, about 80 city families from Chicago and St. Louis were hosted by Illinois farm families. Farm and city families were matched according to age of children, family interests and travel convenience.

Conservationists Defend Soil Erosion Research

WASHINGTON (UPI) — In response to criticism of new Agriculture Department research on soil erosion, officials reviewed data and techniques used in the research and defended their conclusions.

Officials in the department's Soil Conservation Service also warned the debate over measuring soil erosion overshadowed important new findings reinforcing the belief crops should not be planted on poor land.

The basic figure at issue was the study's conclusion that an average acre of soil in the United States is losing 4.8 tons of soil a year from surface erosion by water.

Conservationists and conservation district officials feared the figure would mislead Americans into thinking that a grave soil erosion problem has gone away. They suggested the Agriculture Department made mistakes in obtaining and analyzing data.

The 4.8-ton average was about half as large as an earlier estimate and one ton less than the average loss reported by the Soil Conservation Service a decade ago.

The figure concerned conservationists because it is so close to the annual soil loss figure regarded as permissible for many soil types: 4 tons per acre, at which new soil can be created nearly as fast as soil is lost.

The Soil Conservation Service took the offensive in an issue briefing paper published recently.

In the paper, the agency said, "SCS has checked and rechecked its data, collected by its field technicians at more than 200,000 sample points during the summer of 1977."

The agency said officials are "convinced the data are reliable and will guide conservationists in carrying the fight against erosion to those areas that need it most."

Although strongly defending its figures, the agency cautioned that government policies should not be based on the 4.8-ton soil loss average.

That would make as much sense as for a clothing manufacturer to make all his suits fit an average-sized customer or for a pilot to base his coast-to-coast flight altitude on the average national elevation above sea level," the issue briefing paper said.

In addition, the agency said complete data, not averages, indicate soil erosion continues to be a major problem and more effective targeted programs are necessary to correct the problem.

For example, average annual cropland loss averages range from a high of 10.6 tons per acre in the Appalachian states to a low of 1.3 tons per acre in the Pacific Coast states.

In the corn belt, the average loss was 8.1 tons per acre, about twice the 4-ton permissible rate.

Annual soil losses on Class I Soil, the best suited for growing crops, averaged 3 tons per acre. On Class III land, average annual soil erosion losses were 6.9 tons per acre. Losses averaged 14.9 tons per acre on Class VI land.

Class VIII soil is considered the worst suited for crops. The agency advised that land in classes VI, VII and VIII should not be cropped at all.

The conclusions came from a 49-state National Resource Inventories begun in 1977 to provide new data to modernize the nation's 45-year-old soil and water conservation program. The last comparable survey was made in 1967.

A second phase of the study — dealing with gully, stream and roadbank erosion — and a third phase on sedimentation will be released later.

Soil erosion rates were measured by soil erodibility, rainfall, slope length, slope steepness, plant cover and conservation practices used on land.

Critics challenged the use of the techniques in the West where water comes from snowfall. They charged that irrigated land should have been removed from averages and the inclusion of pastures kept erosion averages artificially low.

Ray Dideriksen, director of the study, said, "Even when we take all the objections of our critics into consideration, the difference in the erosion figures is very small."

Officials said they did not want arguments over the soil erosion data to overshadow conclusions that annual soil loss from wind erosion in the Great Plains averages 5.3 tons per acre and that 892 million acres of agricultural and forest land need conservation treatment.

In addition, the study found that irrigated acreage increased from 47 million acres to 62 million acres in the decade ending in 1977. Land available for grazing has increased 34 million acres over the decade to 541 million acres.

PLAINS AGRICULTURE

By DUANE HOWELL

SUPPLY-DEMAND FUNDAMENTALS, based on current conditions, suggest that lower cotton prices might occur in coming months, according to Cotton Inc. economists.

But if price weakness develops, they add, it probably would be short-lived.

Lawrence Shaw, associate director for supply economics, says world cotton production in 1979-80 appears likely, at this time, to reach 64.5 million bales, up 4.6 million from last year. This includes Cotton Inc.'s projection for a U.S. crop of 14 million bales, up 3.1 million bales from the 1978 output.

World cotton consumption is projected by Cotton Inc. at 62.4 million bales, a slight increase from the 62.2 million bales used in 1978-79.

COTTON CONSUMPTION CONTINUED STRONG in the United States, Western Europe and the Far East when the new cotton marketing year began Aug. 1, Shaw says. However, he adds, an economic recession, "which appears to have begun in the United States this past spring, portends lower levels of textile activity and fiber use in the near future."

With consumption increasing only moderately and production rising by nearly 5 million bales, Shaw adds, world stocks on hand likely are to increase substantially this marketing year, or by some 2 million bales, all in the United States.

"Higher world stocks will put cotton prices under pressure," the Cotton Inc. economist adds. "Over the past five years, prospective changes in stocks have been the key factor influencing cotton prices."

Cotton prices could encounter significant downside pressure if the impact of the recession on the textile industry worsens from current assessments, he points out.

HOWEVER, "A SHARP DECLINE IN COTTON prices, should it occur, would have a short life," Shaw says. "Several factors suggest that the supply-demand balance for cotton would shift rapidly from oversupply to shortage."

The economist cites these factors:

— The increase in world stocks underway is small relative to consumption — an estimated 38 percent of use at the beginning of the next marketing year on Aug. 1, 1980, compared with 52 percent in the 1974 crop year. A limited buildup of cotton supplies can be worked off quickly.

— Both total fiber consumption and cotton's share of fiber use are expected to be greater in the 1980-81 marketing year as the United States pulls out of a recession and as polyester producers face higher costs stemming from rising oil prices.

THE UNITED STATES HAS BECOME an increasingly important factor in the world cotton market, Shaw points out.

Russia, this country's major competitor, has not been a willing seller of cotton in recent months, he observes.

"If prices fall during harvest, many U. S. producers may be better off deferring the sale of their 1979 crop — relying on the government loan to cover immediate cash needs," Shaw says.

"With U. S. cotton supplies the key to both the availability of cotton in world markets and world prices in the coming months, U. S. producers will have more control over their destiny this season than they have had in years," he adds.

FmHA Offers Assistance For Farmers

PLAINVIEW (Special) — Emergency loans for farmers, ranchers, or aquaculture operators are available through county offices of the Farmers Home Administration (FmHA), Karson L. Bivins, FmHA county supervisor, said.

Bivins asked that those who need farm credit as a result of intermittent hail storms make their needs known at the Farmers Home Administration office in Plainview.

Applications for assistance in disaster stricken counties will be accepted by Farmers Home until May 8, 1980, for physical losses and August 11, 1980, for production losses.

FmHA loans covering actual physical and production losses may be used to replace installations, equipment, or buildings, (including homes) lost through this disaster.

Funds may be used to buy feed, seed, fertilizer, livestock, or to meet interest and depreciation payments on current real estate and chattel debts. Other loans, beyond actual, can be made for annual operating expenses or to make major adjustments in a farming or ranching operation.

"Funds can be used for essential operating and living costs," Bivins said.

"Loan covering actual losses are made at an interest rate of 3 and 5 percent and are scheduled for repayment as rapidly as feasible, consistent with the applicant's reasonable ability to pay. Loans beyond actual losses have various maturities, depending upon the purpose of the loan."

The interest rate for short-term loans for farm operating purposes is 9½ percent. Long-term loans are being made at an interest rate of 9 percent.

To be eligible for an emergency loan, an applicant must have suffered losses from the disaster and be unable to get credit from other sources.

Emergency loans can be used to help the farmer restore damaged farm operations and additional loans based upon the emergency designation can be used to reorganize the farm for greater efficiency and better production, Bivins said.

Your home is making you richer everyday... and that should worry you a lot

A quick glance through the real estate section of your local paper will confirm the happy fact: your home is worth a lot more than you paid for it.

So what's the problem? The problem, in a word, is inflation and the fact that a sudden disaster right now could cost you dearly if your insurance has not kept up with the rapid increase in the value of your home. ENVIRONMENT UNCHANGED—In many ways, the environment of The Geysers, located 80 miles north of San Francisco, has changed little since an early explorer found steam rising from the hillsides there more than 120 years ago. Wildlife still abounds in the lush, mountainous terrain surrounding this area of geothermal dry steam, which Aminoil USA is developing, along with a number of other companies. Steam still issues from natural vents, but many other plumes mark the sites of wells that tap the deep steam reserves of the area. Beginning early next year, Aminoil will provide 2.7 million pounds of Geysers steam per hour to power the world's largest geothermal generating plant.

Production Offsets Major Disruptions

World production averaged 61.892 million barrels a day during first half 1979, compared with the previous first half record of 58.736 million barrels a day set last year.

Biggest snag to non-Communist flow was the early year cutoff of production from revolution-torn Iran, second biggest producer in the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

Still, average non-Communist flow reached 47.8 million barrels a day during the first half of the year and had climbed to 49 million barrels a day by the end of the period.

The six-month average was 5.8 percent higher than the average for the same period last year.

Helping to compensate for the loss from Iran, which still hasn't returned to pre-revolution output levels, was Saudi Arabia, OPEC's biggest producer. Saudi production averaged nearly 9 million barrels a day during the first half, 500,000 barrels a day more than the nation's self-imposed ceiling.

Production also surged among several other OPEC countries in response to the supply gap caused by loss of Iranian oil and to buyer anticipation of OPEC midyear price hikes.

Communist production averaged more than 14 million barrels a day during the first half, a 3.8 percent increase from the same period a year earlier. The Soviet Union, largest producer in the world, boosted first half average output to 11.575 million barrels a day—2.7 percent more than a year earlier. The average includes an estimated 220,000 barrels a day of natural gas liquids.

The U.S. slipped again to third place among global producers as Saudi Arabia pushed production to more than its ceiling and assumed the No. 2 position. Average first half U.S. output was 8.68 million barrels a day, according to an industry estimate, 0.4 percent more than the same period in 1978.

Big questions loom for second half production by some major producers. Soviet output, while increasing, is falling below target levels. And in many countries, production prospects depend on answers to political questions.

Nigeria, for example, has nationalized British Petroleum's interest, making a short-term production decline likely. The country may be reversing its pattern of producing as much crude as possible in order to bolster its political sway.

Even bigger questions arise in regard to Iran, where the revolutionary government faces opposition in producing regions.

It is uncertain how long Saudi Arabia will produce in excess of its normal self-imposed limit.

Nevertheless, in some parts of the world producers continuing to extract as much crude as they can will add to the output total. Areas where second half increases can be expected include the North Sea and Mexico.

Tenneco Signs Oil Agreement

HOUSTON (Special) -Occidental Petroleum Corp. and Tenneco Inc. have announced the formation of a partnership to pursue the production of shale oil from Occidental's federal oil shale tract in Colorado, using Occidental's modified in-situ process.

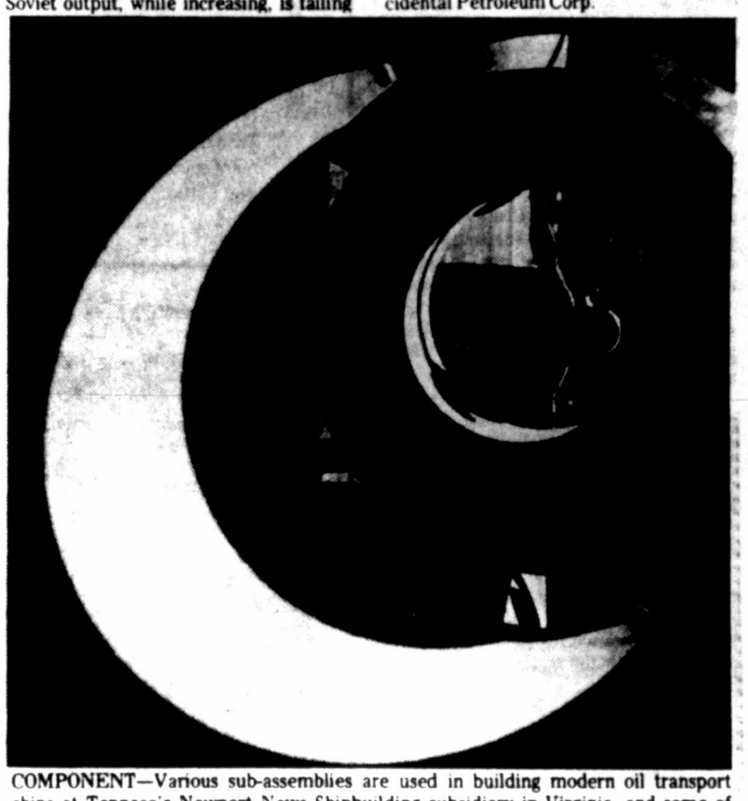

Tenneco agreed to expend $110 million in the development of the C-b Tract, beginning from the effective date of the partnership, and will have 50 percent interest in the tract. Part of the investment will be for the purchase of assets previously acquired by Occidental.

The agreement calls for joint development of shale oil on a commercial basis with Occidental as operator and Tenneco as a full and equal partner.

After expenditure of the $110 million by Tenneco, each partner will share equally the cost of all future work, as well as share equally in all production.

Development of the C-b Tract has already begun, with excavation work in progress on three mine shafts. The tract is about 70 miles north of Grand Junction, Colo.

The agreement has been approved by the boards of both Tenneco Inc. and Occidental Petroleum Corp.

COMPONENT—Various sub-assemblies are used in building modern oil transport ships at Tenneco's Newport News Shipbuilding subsidiary in Virginia, and some of the pre-built sections—as in this case—have unusual shapes that make them interesting subjects for a photographer. When completed, this tanker will contribute to a transportation system which delivers fuel to industrial markets.

Railroad Commission Approves Purchase Of Pipeline Facilities

AUSTIN (Special) -The Railroad Commission has given its approval to the sale and purchase of two pipeline segments and related facilities involving United Texas Transmission Co., General Crude Oil Co. and Dow Chemical Co.

The action of Chairman John H. Poerner and Commissioner Mark Wallace in approving the sale and purchase fulfills a statutory responsibility of the commission to examine gas utility transactions of more than $100,000 in light of the public interest.

In one of the cases presented to the commission at a recent conference, Gas Utilities Division Examiner Jo Campbell reported that United Texas purchased a pipeline and related facilities from General Crude for $812,000. The properties are located in Hallettsville, Lavaca County.

According to the records of the sale, Campbell reported, United Texas paid a price below estimated costs if United had constructed the pipeline itself.

In the second case, United Texas sold a pipeline segment and related facilities it owned in Brazoria County to Dow Chemical Co. for the sum of $800,000. Campbell noted that United Texas recognized a gain of $666,291 from the sale.

In both cases, Campbell concluded the transactions represented fair and reasonable prices and were consistent with the public interest.

In other Railroad Commission matters, Wallace has been designated as the commission's representative on the Texas Energy and Natural Resources Advisory Council, according to Poerner.

The advisory council was created by the 66th Legislature to succeed the Texas Energy Advisory Council and the Natural Resources Council. Wallace has been serving as the Railroad Commission representative on both councils that are being replaced by the Texas Energy and Natural Resources Advisory Council.

Functions of the new council include:

—Developing projects and programs to insure proper protection and development of Texas' natural resources.

Legislation limits the membership of the new council to 21 members including: the governor, lieutenant governor, House speaker, attorney general, a member from the Railroad Commission, a member from the Public Utility Commission, chairmen of the Texas Air Control Board, Texas Water Development Board and Parks and Wildlife Commission, commissioners of agriculture and the General Land Office, comptroller of public accounts, director of the Bureau of Economic Geology at the University of Texas at Austin, two senators appointed by the lieutenant governor, two members of the Texas House appointed by the speaker, and four citizens appointed by the governor.

The Railroad Commission also announced its approval of the sale of low-volume gas production from state-owned tracts in West Texas to an interstate customer.

The approval came in the form of granting an exception to Commission Rule 69 which requires RRC authorization before out-of-state sales of natural gas can be made from Texas public lands. The exception has been sought by Midland producer William E. Hendon Jr., operator of three shut-in wells on three 160-acre state-owned tracts in Andrews County.

Under Texas statute, the commission must make a determination that gas produced on state lands is not needed in Texas before it can be sold to interstate customers. Hendon, in his application, maintained that he would be denied an opportunity to produce the gas unless an exception to Rule 69 was granted.

Poerner and Wallace signed the order granting the exception during the weekly conference on Oil and Gas Division matters. Commissioner James E. Jim Nugent abstained.

Hendon had sought an exception to the rule in order to sell gas from the tracts to Northern Natural Gas Co., Omaha, Neb.

Oil and Gas Division Hearings Examiner Roger Schultz noted in his findings of fact in the proceeding that Northern Natural was the only party to offer to buy the low-volume, low-Btu gas.

Schultz reported that Northern Natural has agreed to lay six miles of pipeline at a cost of nearly $1 million to connect Hendon's wells to its system and to pay $2 per million Btu for the gas. He noted that the nearest intrastate pipeline, Pioneer Natural Gas Co., was 10 miles from the wells and that Pioneer was not interested in building a pipeline or buying the gas because "it was low daily volume, low Btu content and inadequate reserves."

Schultz said gas reserves underlying the three tracts is estimated at approximately 2.4 billion cubic feet. The three wells are capable of producing between 100 and 300 Mcfd (thousand cubic feet per day), he reported.

Commenting on the Hendon application, Commissioner Wallace said he did not like the statute pertaining to the sale of gas from state-owned land.

"I feel like this man should be able to produce to some seller and for that reason I am going to sign the order," said Wallace.

"... I believe if he has the right to produce he has the right to sell," he added.

Mexican Plan For Industry Progressing

TULSA, Okla. (Special) -Roughly half way into President Lopez-Portillo's six-year plan for development of Mexico's oil, gas, and petrochemical industries, Petroleos Mexicanos is hitting its stride.

Initiated in late 1976, the plan, according to the Oil & Gas Journal, calls for:

—Increasing production to 2.25 million barrels per day from 894,000 barrels per day.

—Doubling refining capacity to 1.5 million barrels per day.

—Tripling petrochemical output.

Refineries at Salina Cruz and Cadereyta are coming on stream at 170,000 barrels a day each. They will bring the country's total primary crude processing capacity to nearly 1 million barrels a day. Plans are to increase capacity of these two new refineries to 235,000 barrels a day at an early date.

At La Cangrejera, a petrochemical complex keyed to a 500,000-ton-per-year ethylene plant is nearing completion. It will more than double Mexico's 1977 petrochemical capacity and make the country self-sufficient in many basic petrochemicals. Construction will start soon at another petrochemical center at Morelos, Veracruz.

And Mexico has the oil and gas resources to supply its industrial needs. It claimed proved oil reserves as of Jan. 1, 1979, of 25.6 billion barrels, and proved gas reserves of 59 trillion cubic feet.

The biggest single contribution to Mexico's oil reserves growth in 1978 came from a complex of skinny pays in an oil producing area which drillers passed off as noncommercial for many years—Chicontepec. Pemex claims Chicontepec oil reserves of 10.96 billion barrels. That represents 42 percent of Mexico's oil total.

Elsewhere, results in the Gulf of Campeche are a good example of how the Pemex exploration program is reaping rewards. So far, a dozen big structures have proven productive, and many more remain to be tested.

Having completed the 36, 24, and 20-inch pipelines from the Campeche fields 105 miles to the oil port of Dos Bocas, Pemex is ready to begin producing four wells—one each in Nohoch and Abkatun fields and two in Akal.

These first four wells have a combined capacity of about 30,000 barrels per day.

Last year saw the installation of the first fixed platform in the Gulf of Campeche. It is the first of 10 being used to develop Nohoch and Akal fields. Other discoveries in the gulf, including the blowout discovery for Ixtoc field, rank this area in importance with the prolific Chiapas-Tabasco region onshore. They reinforce the probability that the 1982 national production goal of 2.25 million barrels of oil a day will be reached as early as 1980.

Mexico's ability to process associated gas and separate gas liquids also continues to increase as new processing units are brought on stream.

In Cactus, two new 250-million-cubic-feet gas sweetening plants, each with a 26,400-ton-per-year sulphur plant, were added in 1978 to the existing six operating units. This brought sweetening capacity to 1.4 billion cubic feet per day at the site.

Two new 150-million-cubic-feet cryogenic plants also started production near the end of 1978. They boosted liquids recovery capacity by more than 20 percent and made Mexico self-sufficient in gas liquids for the first time. Some surplus propane is expected to be available for export. Acutal gas liquids production increased nearly 12 percent for the year.

Four more units are in various stages of construction at Cactus, two rated at 9,000 barrels per day each and two at 82,000 barrels per day.

American troops were sent to China in 1900 to quell the Boxer Rebellion.

THE ROUSTABOUT

THE NATIONAL ASSOCIATION of Manufacturers (NAM) reports that a survey of its membership indicates 90 percent of the nation's industrial energy users oppose President Carter's proposed windfall profits tax on oil, and that 86 percent believe it would discourage production.

That consensus came from companies employing fewer than 1,000 persons each, and is representative of the entire industrial sector, according to NAM. Manufacturing firms are credited with using more than a third of all energy consumed in the United States.

Of the companies responding to the NAM survey, 91 percent believed a relaxation of environmental standards is necessary to produce adequate energy availability. Ninety-six percent said there should be an encouragement of further nuclear power development, and 88 percent indicated they would not object to a nuclear power plant located in their county.

The manufacturers association said that more than 90 percent of the respondents were in favor of immediate decontrol of prices of crude oil, natural gas and all petroleum products, with 95 percent saying that over the long term the free market would be just as effective as the proposed Energy Security Corporation in encouraging additional energy availability.

Approximately 27 percent of the companies surveyed expect to encounter problems in getting fuel to run their industrial operations this winter. Availability was cited as the main obstacle.

THE MANUFACTURING COMPANIES were in near unanimous agreement that the President's energy program will increase their manufacturing costs. Only three percent thought otherwise.

A majority—58 percent—would prefer a tax on consumption as opposed to the windfall profits tax on production.

Some 65 percent of the companies participating in the survey use gas as their main fuel, while 23 percent use oil, two percent use coal and 10 percent rely on other fuels.

NAM member companies account for some three-fourths of the total industrial output of the U.S. and employ 15 million people.

THE TEXAS INDEPENDENT Producers & Royalty Owners Association (TIPRO) has instructed its officers and staff to work for a number of exemptions from the windfall profits tax if it is approved.

TIPRO supports proposals to exempt the first 3,000 barrels per day of oil production for all producers and royalty owners.

"Such an exemption will remove the burden of the tax from about 90 percent of producers, but will remove only about 15 percent of the total, current domestic production from under the tax," TIPRO said in a resolution issued to its membership.

The association would like an exemption for newly discovered oil. "Such an exemption should cover all new wells, including new development wells that had no production prior to Jan. 1, 1979, or from an offshore property leased after Jan. 1, 1979," the organization said.

TIPRO WANTS a stripper oil exemption for any property where the average daily production has been 10 barrels or less per day for one year.

Enhanced recovery of oil should also receive special status, according to the organization. This would include all oil produced by special secondary or tertiary treatment and recovery processes, such as waterflood, the injection of steam or chemicals, and other approved methods.

A marginal oil exemption would cover certain categories of deep wells (2,000 feet or more) with relatively low production levels (20 barrels per day or more depending on the depth, and high water ratios of nine to one or more).

Official Says Drill Bit Caused Accident

BELL RIVER, La. (AP) — An accident that killed two men when a derrick on a oil barge collapsed apparently was caused by a drill bit that jammed, says an official of the company that owned the rig.

R.V. Pierce, vice president for Whelles Drilling Co., said Thursday a crew was pulling a pipe out of a hole when a drill bit jammed. The rotation of the drill pulled down the 140-derrick tower of the rig Wednesday, he said.

Company Gives Dump Solution

OGDEN, Utah (UPI) — The company that manages Weber County's dump has come up with a possible solution to the problem of excess garbage — feed it to worms who in turn will convert it into fertilizer.

In an experiment to find out whether the plan will work, Teledyne National has unleashed 1,450 red worms to munch the garbage at the county's landfill. The company shipped in 58 cartons of the trash-eating creatures from a worm farm in Ontario, Calif.

If they perform as expected, each worm will eat its weight in garbage every 24 hours. The end product is worm manure, known as "castings."

Calvin Hubble, who manages the landfill, said the worms were placed in trenches, and garbage was spread over the worms. The worms should eat their way up through the trash, leaving their castings behind.

The castings will be collected and sifted, to filter out the metal, plastic and glass that the worms can't eat. The castings will then be sold as fetilizer, Hubble said.

He said the fertilizer would be relatively expensive, so it could not be used in large-scale farming. But the company does hope to earn enough money from the fertilizer to make the worm project worthwhile.

Hubble said the worms should survive the winter by burrowing deep into the garbage to keep warm. By spring, he said he expects the initial worm herd will have multiplied to about 2,000.

Senate Rejects 'Freebie' Bill

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate, always one to guard its perquisites, has rejected a proposal to cut down on the number of "freebies" to the John F. Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts.

The free tickets given to the White House and center Chairman Roger Stevens, at a cost estimate varying from $175,000 to $235,000, are currently used by members of Congress, the Cabinet and White House staff.

A proposal by Sen. Pete Domenici, R-N.M., which would have limited free tickets to President Carter, his immediate family and guests, was trounced 65-23 Thursday.

It was offered as an amendment to a bill authorizing $4.2 million for the National Park Service to help maintain the center. The bill was approved by voice vote.

BIBLE CAUSES DOWNFALL

HONDO (AP) — The Bible was the downfall of one South Texas man. Hondo police found the Bible, which had been stolen in a burglary, in the car of a man they arrested. He was taken into custody at the scene of another church burglary.

'Custodian Of History' Will Not Deal With Just Anybody

LA COSTA, Calif. (UPI) — Just because you have the $70,000 asking price for one of only three original, signed copies of the Emancipation Proclamation doesn't mean Leon Becker will wrap it to go.

Becker, one of the world's premier dealers of historical memorabilia, is fussy about placing the better items from his collection in the proper home.

"I'm not going to sell to anyone just because they can walk in and pay for something. I interview everyone before selling them an item and ask them why they want it," says Becker.

Six years ago Becker chose to turn his hobby, called philography, into a vocation and he converted the items he'd collected over a lifetime into the inventory of a store he called Memorabilia Ltd. He calls himself a "custodian of history."

On display in the museumlike establishment, located in the posh north San Diego County community of La Costa, Calif., are more than 300 genuine articles tinged with fame, including historical documents, letters, pictures and signatures of pre-eminent figures throughout world history.

The pieces, collectively called "historical art," touch on the lives and times of presidents, statesmen, royalty, entertainers and scientists.

Becker treats the collection with reverence befitting its subjects' accomplishments.

"I'll only sell certain pieces to certain people who can appreciate and provide the proper environment the personality could have flourished in," Becker said.

The Congress was held in mid-May and attracted 79 entries from 11 countries. Australian Master Max Fuller came in first with 8 points out of 9. Next were Michael Yeo, England, and S.O. Von Seelen, Denmark, 7 points each, followed by British Ladies Champion Sheila Jackson, 6.

TO ERR . . . IS HUMAN

In even a major chess tournament, not all the games are well-played. Many are decided by pure blunders. Sometimes both sides make mistakes but the one who makes the last one loses. Most of these blunders occur in the final hour of play. Time trouble is the main cause of this deciding factor. No matter how painful it is for the player who commits such a blunder, the observer feels a sort of inner satisfaction.

Let us consider a classic example played in Oslo two years ago. WHITE (A. Moen of Norway) had his King on KB7, Rooks on QB1 and KR4, pawns on QR4 and QR3 (5 pieces). BLACK (Dr. H. Lehmann of Germany) had his King on Q4, Rooks on KN5 and KN3 and a pawn on QB5 (4 pieces).

The time control was passed, but White still continued fast and played 1.RxP??

Berlin International Chessmaster Lehmann lost himself in deep thought. The unbelieving spectators stood by with their mouths agape. Lehmann saw only 1. . . . RxRB5; 2.RxR,KxR; 3.KxR, and after 10 minutes offered his opponent a draw, which was quickly accepted with both hands!

All it would have taken would be KxR and White would have resigned. Strange but true!

• • •

the COIN Box

By NORMAN DAVIS

The highest denomination currency ever made by the Bureau of Engraving and Printing is the $100,000 Gold Certificate.

That's a remarkable declaration. A $100,000 note could never be paid for a private debt. These notes were issued strictly for use among the 12 Federal Reserve Banks.

Below the portrait is "The United States of America. One Hundred Thousand Dollars in Gold. Payable to Bearer on Demand as Authorized by Law." At lower right of the portrait is "Washington, D.C."; below is the series: these notes are Series of 1934.

You could say the collector value is zero. These notes never were released to the public, and are illegal to hold.

Only 42,000 notes were printed. They were delivered on Jan. 9, 1935.

The Treasury Department evidently destroyed 13,894 of them by 1964.

"Back in '65, apparently, all of them (remaining) were turned in to the Treasury for destruction," according to a treasury report. Nancy Goodman, of the Chicago Federal Reserve Bank, told "The Coin Box."

However, she added, it was learned later that the Treasury redeemed 28,094 that year, but presented four to the Smithsonian Institution.

Miss Goodman said the latest treasury report shows twelve of the notes still outstanding in Federal Reserve Banks. "As far as I know, we don't have one here," she said.

It's clear that you and I won't ever have one of these notes in our collections.

But at least we can be aware of them and learn about them — and we can always dream!

Next week: "Some World News" — maybe these coins belong in your collection.

The BETTER HALF

BY BARNES

Featuring HARRIET & STANLEY PARKER

"The food here may not be first class, but I'd say the waitresses are very gourmet."

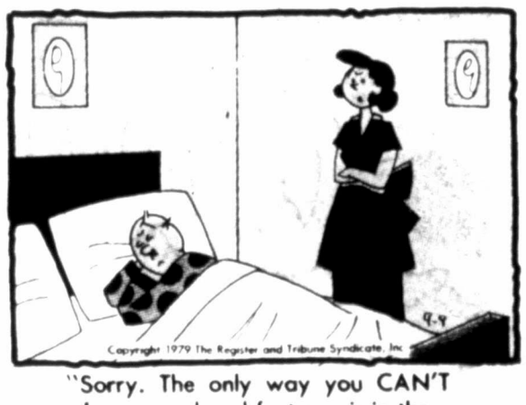

"Is that stuff supposed to cure me or are you preparing me for a post mortem?"

"He says he's a devotee of urban blight, whatever that's supposed to mean."

• "I call this my 'Ecology Special.' It sounds much better than leftovers."

"Sorry. The only way you CAN'T have your breakfast egg is in the afternoon."

IN THE DAYS OF KING ARTHUR

by Hal Foster

Our Story: THE SUN IS SETTING AS GALAN AND HIS RAGGED COMPANION RETURN TO THE CASTLE; HE TO SERVE AS PAGE IN THE DINING HALL, SHE TO WORK IN THE SCULLERY.

BUT FIRST GALAN TALKS TO THE COOK, AND LATER SERVES ROAST GROUSE TO LADY ENID, MUCH TO HER DELIGHT, NOW HE MUST TELL HER ALL ABOUT THE HUNT.

WITH ALL THE ENTHUSIASM OF YOUTH, HE TELLS OF THE KEEN SPORT AND THE BEAUTY OF THE WINTER FOREST. GALAN IS SO ELOQUENT THAT LADY ENID PLANS A HUNT FOR THE NEXT DAY.

BUT THE SNOW COVERS MANY A PITFALL. THE LADY'S MOUNT FINDS ONE, SHE IS THROWN AND THE HORSE SUFFERS A BROKEN LEG! AND ON FURTHER INSPECTION, SO HAS LADY ENID.

AN AWESOME RESPONSIBILITY NOW RESTS ON THE SHOULDERS OF A VERY YOUNG PAGE. GALAN MUST PUT THE POOR HORSE OUT OF ITS MISERY. HE THEN PUTS THEIR CLOAKS AND THE SADDLE BLANKETS OVER LADY ENID.

AFTER MAKING A WINDBREAK OF BOUGHS, GALAN MOUNTS HIS OWN HORSE AND RETRACES HIS TRAIL BACK TO THE CASTLE, SPURRED ON BY THE DISTANT HOWLING OF THE EVER-HUNGRY WOLVES.

BY GOOD FORTUNE, HE MEETS LORD VANOC RETURNING TO THE CASTLE, AND HE IS SENT GALLOPING BACK ON GALAN'S TRACKS.

THE WOLVES ARE GROWING BOLDER. THE DEAD HORSE IS LOSING ITS WARMTH. THE BLANKETS ARE BECOMING WET AND LADY ENID'S LEG IS PAINFUL. THE HOURS PASS SLOWLY...
