Folic acid finding

BAR HARBOR, Maine — Fortifying flour and other grains with the vitamin folic acid could cut the rate of birth defects in half at virtually no cost, researchers said Tuesday. Many women are not getting enough of the vitamin to prevent birth defects even with well-balanced diets, and fortifying the food supply is the surest way of getting it to them, the researchers said. "This is the most important medical finding of the latter part of the 20th century," said Dr. Godfrey Oakley, director of the birth-defects division at the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention in Atlanta. "It's like the Salk vaccine — it's that magnitude of importance."

Chamber: Aircraft-maintenance takeoff adds jobs Council lays foundation for retail area

By Darren J. Waggoner
Staff writer

City Council members Tuesday laid the foundation for retail development along a sparsely populated road in northwest Midland by approving two separate, but similar, zoning changes.

Both issues involved rezoning large Agricultural-Estate tracts to One-Family Dwellings with small parcels designated for retail use.

On the northwest corner of Mockingbird Lane and Garfield Street, a group of landowners sought to rezone 125 acres from an AE District to allow houses of about 11,000 square feet — with the stipulation that a nine acre parcel be designated for retail use.

Council members approved the change — an amended version of a zoning change request that was defeated in May — after the landown-

Midland Chamber of Commerce officials announced the expansion of two local aviation maintenance facilities that they said will create about 50 new jobs within a year.

Chamber officials have targeted aircraft maintenance as a key economic development program due to the availability of hangars and the dry climate.

The chamber said Aircraft Maintenance Inc. (AMI), a corporate aircraft maintenance operation located at Midland International Airport, plans to expand to larger commercial aircraft after taking on a new investor — Edward Oshobu, who will serve as chief executive officer.

"As the industry continues growing we expect to be here and available to meet the challenge," Oshobu said.

Kansas City survives two rivers' crests

By Drummond Ayres Jr.
N.Y. Times News Service

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — The Missouri and Kansas rivers, rising in muddy concert to record crests, worked their watery worst Tuesday on the levees and flood walls of this city and neighboring Kansas City, Kan. But except for a few minor leaks, the protective berms and barriers held off the double-barreled onslaught.

At least for the moment. "We just might have won," said Larry Black, a water-flow specialist here for the National Weather Service, looking over river readings that documented the cresting.

"We could still get another surge or two if it rains, and you never know when one of those soggy levees is going to give way," he added. "But at first reading, it looks like we just might have won."

If so, the victory will go down as one of the few people have achieved in the summer-long battle across nine Midwestern states with the great deluge of '93.

House passes $3 billion flood relief package

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House approved $3 billion Tuesday for Midwestern flood relief after putting aside a five-day fight over how to pay for it. President Clinton said he will ask for $1.1 billion more.

"It could get worse," Clinton told governors from six flood states on a day the Missouri and Kansas rivers were still rising. "There are still a lot of problems out there," the president later told a meeting of Democrats. "A lot of things could still go wrong. The front needs to break up so the south at least can get some rain or we're going to have some agricultural disasters there."

The governors and the president helped pressure the House to put aside procedural arguments that had delayed the bill since last Thursday. It finally passed, 400-27, and was sent to the Senate where speedy action was anticipated.

Norwest buys Midland First City's Lubbock-based holding company

Staff report

First United Group, the Lubbock-based bank holding company that purchased Midland First City Bank earlier this year has been sold to Norwest Corp.

However, the transaction will not affect the Midland bank's plans to acquire its charter and become Midland National Bank, said Bill Franklin, president and CEO of the Midland bank.

"We have hitched our wagon to a star,"

Franklin said. "Norwest is as good a company as one would ever want to become associated with — in terms of size, stability, philosophy and commitment to the local community."

Franklin said the bank was now part of a large, successful, diversified banking company, and would have the advantage of a wider range of services and banking products and state-of-the-art technology.

"Our focus will continue to be energy lending and banking as our 90-year heritage would indicate."

Year-round schools grade high

The Accu-Weather® forecast for noon today.

Mostly sun, mid-90s on tap

Staff report

Today's forecast calls for mostly sunny skies with a high in the mid-90s and southeast winds at 5-15 mph. Tonight should be mostly fair with a low in the lower 70s, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Thursday should be mostly sunny with a high in the mid- to upper 90s. After an overnight low of 70, Tuesday's high reached 99, compared to the record high for that date of 106 set in 1954. The record low was 61 set in 1933.

STATE

Temperatures soaring toward 100 degrees dominated Texas Tuesday. South Texas enjoyed fair weather with temperatures in the 90s and 100s. A few thunderstorms scattered over the Gulf of Mexico edged close to the coast, but no rain was reported at coastal stations.

Wednesday's forecast calls for some morning clouds, with another sunny, hot day. Highs will be in the 90s and lower 100s.

Skies were clear over most of North Texas Tuesday as an upper-level, high-pressure system continued to dominate the area. Some cloudiness lingered over the southeastern portion of the region.

By mid-afternoon, temperatures had risen into the middle and upper 90s, with a few locations managing to break the century mark. Mineral Wells reported the highest temperature of 102 degrees. High humidity caused heat indices to rise as high as 113 degrees at Waco.

North Texas' forecast for today calls for clear skies with highs in the upper 90s to nearly 100 and lows from 71 to 75 degrees.

Mostly sunny skies were the rule across West Texas Tuesday afternoon. Temperatures were slightly lower in the lower Panhandle as a weak cold front pushed south.

Mid-afternoon temperatures were in the upper 80s to near 90 in the Panhandle with mid-90s to near 100 across the southern sections.

West Texas' forecast today calls for partly cloudy skies across the region. Highs are expected in the 80s in the mountains and near 104 in the Big Bend area, with 90s elsewhere. Lows will be in the 60s and 70s.

NATION

Thunderstorms doused the Midwest on Tuesday, bringing more water to the region's raging rivers. In the South, the weather was scorching hot.

Heat advisories were issued for parts of Kentucky, West Virginia, Mississippi, South Carolina and Alabama.

Atlanta reached 99 degrees during the afternoon, breaking the 37-year-old record for the date by 1 degree.

While the South baked, temperatures were unseasonably low in the interior West. Low temperature records for the day were set in Alamosa, Colo., (33 degrees) and Ely, Nev., (34 degrees).

Rainshowers and thunderstorms extended Tuesday over parts of New England, eastern New York state, the Gulf Coast, the Mississippi and Missouri valleys, North Dakota and eastern Montana.

A severe thunderstorm watch was issued for eastern Minnesota, western Wisconsin and Lake Superior.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

TAKEOFF: Aviation maintenance firms to expand sulted in the retention of 13 local jobs and the return of 10 employees who had been laid off. The company expects to increase operations in the next nine months, creating about 35 more jobs.

Midland-based AMI is an 8-year-old company founded by Sid Green, who has operated businesses in Midland for 30 years.

A second aviation maintenance company, ExRO Aviation, has leased hangars and is now in operation at Midland International Airport, according to the chamber. ExRO provides maintenance on a Boeing 747, which has been at the airport since mid-April.

"We plan to have about 40 aircraft within a year — including DC-9s and 747s," said Mike Chinn, founder of ExRO.

"We will be providing storage and maintenance for commercial aircraft."

ExRO has seven employees and anticipates substantial growth, with employment estimated at 20 within a year.

"We have, by choice, selected Midland, Texas, as the site of our corporate office," he said. "The city of Midland offers a unique combination of resources that we believe have quickly become essential to our growth — a centralized location for our worldwide customers, a relatively dry, arid climate that is conducive to the nature of our work."

ExRO is an independent, FAA-certified and -licensed maintenance operation for aircraft such as the Boeing 747. The company is the first independent maintenance operation in the United States for wide-body jet aircraft.

cate," Franklin said. "We intend to aggressively pursue energy business in our traditional markets. The acquisition is good for our community, the Permian Basin, our customers and this bank. We have hitched our wagon to a star and it's time for us to shine."

Once chartered as Midland National Bank, the Midland bank is expected to become Norwest's prime facility for energy lending.

Norwest is a national financial corporation that was honored this year by Bank Management magazine with its Bank of the Year Award and was rated No. 1 for its exceptional performance among the largest 100 bank-holding companies.

It has assets of $47.8 billion in banking, mortgage, insurance and financial services in 2,116 locations throughout the United States and 10 Canadian provinces.

Norwest employs 30,000 people and is often referred to as a "supercommunity bank" for its penchant for preserving local management and its commitment to customers and their communities.

During 1992, Norwest had $518 million in earnings and a 1.28 percent return on assets and a 19.1 percent return on equity.

COUNCIL: City approves zoning change

ers agreed to reduce the floor space request, build a 50-foot landscape easement and trim the retail space by five acres.

Opponents, led by attorney Susan Richardson, argued that council approval would "condemn the integrity of their rural neighborhoods."

"Our folks care about their neighborhoods, they want to preserve its character," she said.

"No question retailers would have an adverse effect; it's incompatible with the nature of the area."

Many residents claimed the proposal violated the city's master plan of development — which outlines the path of housing and zoning expansion.

But Mayor J.D. Faircloth said the city is not bound to that plan.

Dallas Smith — an owner of part of the land — said the inclusion of a retail zone would make residential development more marketable.

"Our first interest is to get the sewage and drainage in place before any actual development," he said. "Retail is something we're looking at for the future."

Council members passed the measure 4-1 with District 1 councilor Pat Schneider, who represents the area, voting against the measure. At-large councilor Bill Morrow abstained.

The Moss Partnership — owners of 192 acres on the northeast corner of Midkiff Road and Mockingbird Lane — also requested a zoning change from an Agricultural-Estate District to a One-Family Dwelling District with a retail tract of 7.5 acres.

Council members approved the measure 3-2-1, with Schneider and at-large councilor Jose Cuevas voting against the measure. Morrow abstained.

"Like the residents of the area, I am concerned about possible traffic problems that this could present," Mrs. Schneider said. "Like them, I was OK with the houses but I questioned the need for retail in the area."

Both measures require a second council reading.

GRADE: Year-round schools gain popularity

the National Association for Year-Round Education, said Carlisle parents voted to go year-round to improve academic achievement.

Since then, Carlisle pupil and teacher attendance has improved, as have standardized test scores. "This was a high-performing school to begin with and we've been able to improve even on that," he said.

Pat Pringle, TEA's acting associate commissioner for field services, said 45 districts across Texas, involving 65,000 students, used some form of year-round education in 1992-'93. About 50 districts are involved in 1993-'94, but he could not estimate the number of students.

Joey Lozano, a spokesman for the Texas Education Agency, said none of the districts has every one of its campuses on the schedule. Districts move toward year-round education as a way to alleviate overcrowding, delay construction of new buildings and better use their existing facilities, Lozano said.

Year-round schedules can be on a single track, where all pupils are in school and on break at the same time; or multitrack, where students are on staggered schedules and only a portion of the population is in school at once.

Proponents say the frequent breaks help students retain more of what they learn. Authorities acknowledge that the proof, at this point, is merely anecdotal.

It appears that students who are limited in their English proficiency or whose academic skills are less polished fare better without the long summer break, Lozano said.

Pringle added that the short vacations provide opportunities for educational enrichment classes and remediation. Helping students throughout the year seems to work better than waiting until a summer break, when they've fallen so far behind that "they might not ever catch up."

In the Fort Worth Independent School District, eight campuses started year-round education for the first time Monday. They joined W.J. Turner Elementary School and two special-needs campuses that started the calendar last year.

Turner Principal Cynthia Davis said her campus went year-round for continuity of learning by English as a Second Language pupils, a more stable free lunch program and the enrichment available during the mini-vacations.

Ms. Davis said she was involved with the implementation of the program at the new schools, whose administrators and parents wanted the schedule for different reasons. But all seek the improved attendance, morale and discipline the schedule seems to provide, she said.

All-year schooling is a site-based decision that requires community support. Additionally, the district allows children to transfer to or from a year-round school, she said.

"There certainly is no push for everyone to be on the same calendar either way," Ms. Davis said.

John Cole, president of the Texas Federation of Teachers, said the union representing 20,000 educators is concerned that simply reorganizing the school year does not address the greater problem of why students aren't learning.

"Year-round education is an approach to education reform. By itself it is not an education reform. But it could be, depending on how it's done," Cole said.

He added that year-round education costs about 25 percent more than traditional schooling aid to flood victims and to cover crop losses. The remainder would go for jobs; repair of housing, highways and flood-control works; loans; and a variety of other relief. The bill also increases the farm disaster payment for losses beyond 75 percent of the crop.

The money for crop losses also could be used to compensate victims of drought in the Southeast as well as hail and other weather disasters elsewhere.

In the House, no one objected to the spending, only to whether Congress should first find a way to cover the cost with offsetting cuts elsewhere.

Last Thursday, the House narrowly refused to consider the bill before those offsets were agreed upon. On Tuesday, swayed by pressure from the governors, Clinton and angry victims, it voted 224-205 to go ahead and act on the bill.

"When you have unforeseen emergencies and circumstances that demand immediate action, you don't stop everything and go through a budget process," said House Majority Leader Richard Gephardt, D-Mo. "Not today, not when people are out of their houses. Not when people are unemployed and night putting up sandbags to save their lives."

Rep. Leslie L. Byrne, D-Va., one of 15 who voted Tuesday to go ahead with the bill after blocking it last week, said, "I couldn't let those people in the Midwest hang by a thread any longer."

Republicans also argued against an unrelated Democratic amendment, introduced in a manner to pass without debate, dealing with a jobs and education program for the hard-core unemployed in Los Angeles and other cities. In a separate vote, the House refused Tuesday to eliminate the provision.

Republicans characterized the amendment as a special favor to Rep. Maxine Waters, D-Calif., in exchange for support from the Congressional Black Caucus for President Clinton's deficit reduction plan.

Rep. Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., the House Minority Whip, argued for a debate without restrictions.

"Let's vote on things like the extra money for Los Angeles to take care of one politician, which is being put on the flood relief bill on the back of the Midwest," he said.

CRESTS: Kansas City survives onslaught and continues to be — just about the worst ever experienced in this part of the country, causing at least 43 deaths, driving more than 50,000 people from their homes and damaging or destroying at least $12 billion worth of crops, buildings and personal property.

Other Missouri cities, like St. Louis, Jefferson City and Ste. Genevieve, still face major flooding threats. And farms and villages in many parts of Kansas, Iowa and Illinois are still under water.

Still, Kansas City seems to have escaped for the moment, and that was all that mattered to Charlie Sutura, owner of Sutura's Restaurant, as he looked out the door of his establishment this afternoon at the convergence of the Missouri and Kansas.

The water was within inches of the top of the levee. But for the first time in days, it was not getting any higher.

"The police told us we'd better head for higher ground," Sutura said. "But I think the worst is over. I believe the worst is over. I'm a born optimist. I'll stick and trust that levee and use the rest of the day to get ready for tomorrow. Got some painting to do that I've been putting off. You get a break, you take it."

Disaster officials warned that while the two rivers that merge here appeared to have peaked, the river levels would not start dropping for at least another day.

Officials added that passing summer thunderstorms might cause a quick surge or two on either or both of the rivers over the next several days.

"When you're dealing with a river crest, you just take it one day at a time," said George Hanley, the chief spokesman in Kansas City for the United States Army Corps of Engineers. "A big crest doesn't drain off in an afternoon. It kind of rises, levels off for a while, then begins to fall."

According to Hanley, the crest readings this afternoon were "jumping around an inch here and there" but generally stood at 55 feet on the Kansas and 48 feet on the Missouri.

As the Kansas emptied into the Missouri, the higher crest dropped several feet quickly and stayed within the Missouri levees. Flood experts had wondered whether that would happen. It did, apparently, because the Missouri is a considerably wider river than the Kansas and thus was able to swallow the higher water.

The previous high for both rivers was about 46 feet, set back in 1951.

The levees on the Kansas can take a flood of up to 57 feet. Those on the Missouri can take a flood of up to 52 feet.

Delores Johnson, a teacher from Kansas City, Kan., stood Tuesday afternoon on the bank where the two rivers were coming together. As she gazed at what looked like a huge, boiling cauldron of mud and sticks, her hand went slowly to her mouth, agape with awe.

"I've lived here all my life and never in my days have I seen it this high," she said, shaking her head. "But at least it's still within its banks. And back in 1951 I saw some cows floating in it."

Kansas City seems to have gotten a break this time. There are some signs that the flood waters are receding in the upper Midwest, and skies are beginning to clear at long last. But the flooding and misery are far from ended.

St. Louis, across the state on the Mississippi, still faces what may be the greatest challenge.

Sometime next weekend, the double-barreled crest that formed here Tuesday and is headed down the Missouri will reach St. Louis. There, it will join forces with the Mississippi, also at a record crest level.

Serbs assault key mountain near Sarajevo

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — Bosnian Serbs opened a new assault Tuesday on a mountain on Sarajevo's outskirts, pushing for control of the western end of the city as their leaders discussed peace in Geneva.

Bosnian radio called Tuesday's attack the Serbs' biggest push for Zuc mountain. If it fell, Serbs could sweep across the western end of Sarajevo, but the radio said defense lines were holding.

The Serb infantry assault on Zuc followed a two-hour artillery barrage. It wasn't clear if they gained ground, said U.N. spokesman Cmdr. Barry Frewer.

Sniper fire engulfed the city center, while shelling intensified in western Sarajevo, with French U.N. peacekeepers coming under fire when the city's television building was hit by at least seven Serb artillery shells.

No injuries were reported and the U.N. Protection Force was investigating whether the French, who were setting up base by the concrete building, were deliberately targeted.

French peacekeepers came under Serb attack Sunday, prompting angry U.N. commanders to warn of retaliation if it happened again.

If Serbs overrun mountain stronghold, they could sweep across western end of Sarajevo with little resistance, analysts say.

In Paris, the French Foreign Ministry asked the United Nations and NATO on Tuesday to speed up plans to provide air cover for U.N. ground forces. A statement demanded that the U.N. Security Council put into immediate effect its resolution providing such cover and that the Atlantic alliance, which offered planes, get them flying.

Bosnian radio said 24 people were killed and 71 injured across Bosnia since Monday, including four dead and 27 wounded in Sarajevo.

In Geneva, leaders of all three warring Bosnian factions held a rare joint meeting. Bosnian Serb leader Radovan Karadzic, who has insisted the Muslims accept an ethnic partition of Bosnia, warned: "This is the last chance for an honest peace.

"If that is not achieved, I foresee more fighting, more bloodshed and possible spreading of the war," Karadzic said.

Bosnian Serb and Croat leaders, whose troops control almost all of Bosnia, want the country divided into three ethnic mini-states.

The Muslim-led government still wants some kind of federation. It fears that Serb and Croat areas would join with neighboring Serbia and Croatia, leaving Muslims with small landlocked pockets.

Karadzic has made clear the Serbs, who control 70 percent of Bosnia, will crush the Muslims if they reject partition.

Besides the assault on Mount Zuc, Bosnian radio reported Serb shelling around Brcko in the north and said two children were killed and a woman injured in shelling of the Muslim enclave of Gorazde, south of Sarajevo.

Serb forces around Brcko are pushing to widen a corridor linking their holdings in east and west.

The radio also claimed the Serbs launched a "chemical assault" in Sarajevo. U.N. officials haven't confirmed use of chemical arms.

Bomb attacks rock two Italian cities; several die

MILAN, Italy (AP) — A bomb blast ripped through downtown Milan on Tuesday, killing at least five people and wounded seven. A short time later, suspected car bombs jolted the ancient heart of Rome, injuring eight.

Authorities blamed the Milan explosion, which hit about 11:15 p.m. (5:30 p.m.) Tuesday, on a car bomb.

The blast in Milan occurred near Piazza Cavour, about a half-mile from La Scala opera house. Police blocked off the area to the public to allow ambulances and fire-fighting equipment to get through.

State TV said the victims of the Milan blast included three firefighters and a policeman, apparently called to the scene by a telephone warning that a blast would soon go off. A man sleeping in a park also was killed.

None of the seven other wounded were seriously hurt.

Milan's chief prosecutor Francesco Saverio Borelli called the Milan blast a "symbolic act" to intimidate investigators working on Italy's anti-corruption scandal. The investigation is based in the city.

The Rome blasts came about an hour later.

One heavily damaged St. John Lateran Basilica, which is the pope's church in his capacity as Bishop of Rome. The other struck near the ancient forum and the Michelangelo-designed Campidoglio square, the seat of city government.

Blasted cars were found near the scene of the explosions.

Japanese parties form coalition, seek leader

TOKYO (NYT) — The end of the Liberal Democratic Party's 38-year, one-party rule became a foregone conclusion on July 27 as seven non-LDP parties agreed on a broad framework to form a coalition government.

The focus of political attention has now shifted to whom the non-LDP force will choose as the nation's next prime minister.

Political sources said that moves to promote Morihiro Hosokawa, head of the Japan New Party, as a candidate are gaining support among a five-party alliance consisting of the Social Democratic Party of Japan, the Shinseitō-Japan Renewal Party, Komeito (the Clean Government Party), the Democratic Socialist Party and the United Social Democratic Party.

The alliance had wooed the New Japan Party and the Shinto Sakigake (new party harbinger), two conservative swing-vote parties, to form a non-LDP coalition government after the LDP lost a majority in the Diet's powerful Lower House in the July 18 general election.

The LDP's last hope for clinging to power was dashed when the Shinto Sakigake clearly came out in favor of the proposed opposition coalition government July 27. The party's leader, Masayoshi Takemura, a renegade from the LDP, said his party can work with the non-LDP coalition.

The leaders of the seven parties hope to hold their first meeting on July 28 to put finishing touches on the coalition agreement, including the selection of a joint candidate for prime minister, sources in the parties said. A special Diet session is expected to be convened next week to choose the nation's next government leader.

The coalition, which will likely take office in early August, will be the first non-LDP government since 1955 when the Liberal and Democratic parties merged to form the LDP.

The broad agreement for the creation of a coalition government was concluded July 27 at a meeting of the secretaries-general of the seven parties. At the gathering, the secretaries-general in the five-party coalition expressed support for policy proposals put forward by the New Japan Party and the Shinto Sakigake as a precondition for forming a coalition. The proposals focused heavily on political reform.

Somali military strategy stays, U.S. envoys say

MOGADISHU, Somalia (AP) — American envoys said Tuesday that the United Nations would not change a much-criticized military strategy that has killed dozens of Somalis and disrupted aid operations.

Political and economic programs, however, will be stepped up alongside firm military action to regain control of southern Mogadishu, U.S. special envoy David Shinn said.

"The military option is very much there," said Shinn, senior coordinator on Somalia at the State Department. "Strong resolve still has to be used and it will be used."

Shinn spoke at the end of a 10-day trip to Somalia and neighboring nations intended to reassess U.S. policy toward the 27-nation coalition.

At a news conference in the Kenyan capital, Nairobi, the U.N. special envoy to Somalia denied that international criticism over the bloodshed in Mogadishu has temporarily halted attempts to capture Aidid.

U.N. troops have failed to bring in the warlord because they were not able to do so without endangering civilians or troops, retired U.S. Adm. Jonathan Howe said.

The tactics of the peacekeeping force came under fire recently after the United Nations began to hunt down warlord Mohamed Farrah Aidid, blamed for June 5 ambushes that killed 24 Pakistani peacekeepers. U.S.-led attacks on Aidid's power bases in Mogadishu have killed dozens of civilians and disrupted relief work, leading Italy and other countries to accuse the United Nations and the United States of losing sight of their humanitarian mission in Somalia.

Some 4,000 American troops and air power dominate multinational forces in Mogadishu.

Shinn told reporters the U.S. government supported U.N. efforts to bring Aidid to trial. Major changes in U.S. policy in the Horn of Africa were unlikely, he said.

The United States remained eager to see political reconciliation and development programs stepped up as the military crushed attacks and lawlessness, he said.

Earlier Tuesday, U.S.-led forces mounted high-profile weapons searches near U.N. headquarters. As American helicopters roared overhead and hundreds of homes were searched, Shinn met in a villa nearby with local leaders, including officials from Aidid's Somali National Alliance.

Hussein Dimbil, a spokesman for Aidid's organization, said his group asked Shinn to lobby for talks to end fighting in the section of southern Mogadishu they control.

Routine contacts between the U.N. alliance and Aidid's followers ended after the June 5 ambushes. Eleven more peacekeepers have died and more than 110 have been wounded in almost daily attacks since then.

The U.S. ambassador in Somalia, Robert Gosende, said Aidid's arrest and trial were a prerequisite to any meaningful peace negotiations.

Georgia, Abkhazia sign new cease-fire agreement

TBILISI, Georgia (AP) — Georgia and the separatist region of Abkhazia signed a cease-fire agreement Tuesday aimed at ending their bloody conflict, news reports said.

The cease-fire was to begin at midday Wednesday. It bans the use of aircraft, artillery, and sea vessels in the conflict zone as well as prohibiting the introduction of new troops or ammunition into Abkhazia, the ITAR-Tass news agency said.

Previous peace accords have collapsed, with the warring sides blaming each other for the renewal of fighting. About 2,000 people have been killed in the nearly year-long war.

Abkhazia is a former resort area in northwestern Georgia between the Black Sea and the Caucasus Mountains.

Georgia has battled separatists there since last August, when Georgian leader Eduard Shevardnadze sent troops into its western province after Abkhazia declared its sovereignty.

Shevardnadze agreed to approve a cease-fire last week when it appeared uncertain whether his troops could hold onto Sukhumi, the capital of Abkhazia that has been largely destroyed. ITAR-Tass earlier quoted Georgian officials as saying fighting continued around Sukhumi, reporting unspecified casualties.

Russia, which mediated the cease-fire negotiations, had put pressure on both parties to agree to end the fighting.

The signing "went without a hitch," said Ramin Chelidze, the head of the Georgian parliament's press service, in the capital Tbilisi.

The agreement was signed by Russian Foreign Minister Andrei Kozyrev; Vakhtan Goguaдзе, speaker of the Georgian parliament; and Sokrat Dzindzholia, deputy chairman of the Abkhazian parliament.

A temporary control group composed of Georgian, Abkhazian and Russian observers is to monitor the cease-fire as of Thursday. All troop movements must be approved by the three parties and the construction of military facilities is not allowed, ITAR-Tass said.

The Georgian, Abkhazian and Russian observers will join a United Nations observation team which is expected to arrive in the region by Aug. 5.

The agreement calls for the withdrawal of all armed units — both Georgian and Abkhazian — once the international observers arrive, ITAR-Tass said.

Georgian lawmakers last week severely criticized the peace plan, but later gave Shevardnadze carte blanche to approve it.

Several thousand police patrolled the streets of Tbilisi on Tuesday to prevent any protests against the signing of the agreement. Still, about 150 people demonstrated in the city center before they were dispersed peacefully.

It was unclear whether a proposed clause letting Abkhazia restore its "legal institutions of power in Abkhazia" was included in the agreement.

Many Georgian lawmakers had opposed the clause.

Enemies accuse Yeltsin of ruble irresponsibility

MOSCOW (AP) — President Boris Yeltsin's opponents accused him Tuesday of trying to evade responsibility for a nationwide currency panic, as Russians jammed banks to exchange old rubles for new Russian bills.

Central Bank Chairman Viktor Gerashchenko joined the finger-pointing, telling The Associated Press that Yeltsin knew of the bank's plans to invalidate old bank notes "in general terms" before the weekend decree.

But it remained unclear whether Russians would blame Yeltsin for the ruble fiasco — and if so, how much damage it would do to his free-market reforms.

Starting Monday, billions of pre-1993 rubles became invalid under a Central Bank order that stunned Russian consumers out of their political apathy and caused deep infighting in the Yeltsin administration.

The order struck hardest at ordinary workers who are paid in cash and make most of their purchases in cash.

"This only hurts the middle class," said Natalya, a red-haired woman in her mid-50s who clutched a black purse to her side as she was viciously jostled by a crowd outside a bank on Tverskaya Street.

Ticket offices also were jammed with shoving, cursing crowds who lined up to buy train tickets for old rubles, hoping they would later be able to turn in the unused stubs for new currency.

Israel attacks Lebanon again; refugees flee

JERUSALEM (NYT) — Israel stepped up its bombardment of Lebanon Tuesday in the third day of massive air and artillery assaults which officials said were designed not only to halt guerrilla rocket attacks but to create civil chaos for the Beirut government.

Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin said the strategy was to flood Beirut with refugees in an effort to force Lebanon, and its main backer, Syria, to compel a halt to the Katyusha rocket attacks by guerrillas on northern Israel.

At least 335,000 residents of southern Lebanon have fled north since the start of the Israeli operation Sunday, the United Nations said. Israeli army sources estimated the number was closer to 200,000.

The Israeli blitz "will force (the) population there to express its views, whether by mouth or foot, to the Lebanese government and its overseers," said Rabin, referring to Syria and its 40,000 troops in Lebanon.

Since Sunday, pro-Iranian and Syrian-backed guerrillas have lobbed more than 120 rockets into northern Israel and its self-declared "security zone" inside the Lebanese border, killing two Israelis and wounding at least 26. The rocket attacks continued Tuesday.

China blasts U.S. response to Olympic bid

BEIJING (AP) — China on Tuesday condemned the U.S. House for opposing Beijing's bid for the 2000 Summer Olympics, saying the U.S. representatives' vote "gravely violates the Olympic principles and spirit."

The House voted 287-99 on Monday for the non-binding resolution that decried China's human rights record. China's Communist government continues to imprison people for their political beliefs and four years ago unleashed the military to crush the Tiananmen Square pro-democracy movement.

A statement issued by the Chinese Olympic Committee described the vote as an "overbearing act" by a small group of Americans and a "gross interference" in the affairs of the International Olympic Committee.

China's government has spared no effort to win the bid, believing that hosting the Games will boost its prestige.

China is thought to rank behind Sydney, Australia, among the top contenders for the 2000 games.

Rebel forces in Nicaragua to fight again

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — Rebels who attacked the northern city of Esteli vowed Tuesday to defy a government order to disarm and said they would keep fighting until they get land promised to them by authorities.

About 150 members of the Revolutionary Workers' and Peasants' Front, made up mostly of disaffected former government soldiers, moved into Esteli and robbed three banks of some $4 million last week. About 50 people died in 24 hours of fighting between the rebels and soldiers.

On Monday, Antonio Lacayo, Minister of the Presidency, warned the rebels to lay down their arms within five days or face harsh consequences.

"We will not put down our weapons and we will continue fighting until the government meets the demobilization agreements," the group said in a statement made public in Esteli, 60 miles north of Managua.

An estimated 70,000 government soldiers were demobilized after the leftist Sandinista government was defeated by President Violeta Chamorro in 1990. About 22,000 American-backed Contra rebels, who had fought the Sandinistas for eight years, also demobilized.

Both groups were promised land and other help after the war, but the Chamorro government, which is nearly bankrupt, generally has been unable to fulfill the promises.

Gifts to education could spark others

The billionaire Walter Annenberg is donating $365 million, through his family foundation, to three universities and the prep school he attended — the largest one-time donation to private education in the nation's history. He also issued a timely challenge: "I'm interested in sending word to others who have sizable foundations that now is the time to stop talking and act."

History suggests that those who follow his generous example are likely to give to private institutions. But future donors might also remember the needs of public institutions.

Annenberg will give $25 million to Harvard, $120 million each to the University of Southern California and the University of Pennsylvania and $100 million to the Peddie School, the prep school where he says he spent his happiest days. These donations continue a pattern of large private gifts, mostly to private colleges and universities, that have appeared to escalate over the past decade. This laudable largess, however, could be spread more widely. About 80 percent of undergraduates attend public colleges and universities. States have cut their budgets for higher education, and state tuitions have gone up. Private colleges receive about 14 percent of their income from gifts, grants and investments; public colleges, about 4 percent.

In Midland, of course, numerous local recipients of Abell-Hanger Foundation scholarships were announced recently, giving many students the chance to attend Midland College who otherwise might not be able to attend.

Last year Henry and Betty Rowan gave $100 million to the former Glassboro State College in Glassboro, N.J. — the largest cash gift ever made to a public university. Rowan graduated from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. He made his gift to Glassboro, since renamed Rowan College of New Jersey, because his manufacturing business has thrived in the area.

More support is clearly needed for all forms of higher education. Annenberg's gifts — like the Abell-Hanger scholarships in Midland — are a welcome spur.

America's policy on gays requires input from many

President Clinton is probably right that the "Don't ask, don't tell" policy on gays in the military won't please anybody.

Under the new guidelines, gays may serve in the U.S. military without having to lie about their sexual orientation if they keep quiet about it, practice in secret and don't get caught.

It's a considerable compromise from Clinton's campaign promise for an outright end to the military's ban on gays. ... And this is one campaign promise Clinton was right in breaking.

The issue of gays in the military, and of the rights of gays in society as a whole, is a gigantic social concern with wide-ranging repercussions. Our nation is obviously not of a single mind about the outcome. The proper forum for such social change is public discourse, congressional debate and, if necessary, judicial action.

One man alone should not dictate a decision on this issue for the whole country. Clinton did well to see that.

Hearings reinforce capability of Ginsburg for court justice

Ruth Bader Ginsburg deserves confirmation as a justice of the U.S. Supreme Court. There was little doubt about Judge Ginsburg's abilities at the moment of her nomination and that has not changed in the some two months since.

Extensive probing into her background and writings, as well as just-concluded hearings by the Senate Judiciary Committee, have only reinforced a widespread opinion that Judge Ginsburg is quite capable of serving on the high court. It was something of a pleasure for senators and public alike to go through a Supreme Court confirmation hearing with almost no contention.

One assumes from all that is known of her that Judge Ginsburg, as Justice Ginsburg, would be a moderate liberal, as such things are delineated in the public perception of where Supreme Court justices stand and how they are likely to vote.

Whether or not that assumption would turn out to be correct is one of those things even the presidents who choose them cannot be sure of about Supreme Court nominees. The best present measure of Judge Ginsburg in this respect is that both the most-dedicated liberals and most-dedicated conservatives are uneasy about her. That alone should be comforting to the majority middle.

In any case, she is the choice of a Democratic president. It would be surprising if she were not more liberally inclined than the choices Republican presidents have been making for the past quarter century. The Democrats, and President Clinton, are entitled to that. They won the election. ...

Caseless ammunition worries some

WASHINGTON — The country that brought us the "terrorist special" handgun seven years ago is at it again, this time with a high-tech bullet that some believe could spell serious trouble.

About six months ago, the Voere company of Austria began marketing to the public a new rifle technology that critics believe could derail an important investigative tool used by police in criminal probes. It's called caseless ammunition. And while it has been available to the military for decades, the Voere company is the first to develop a commercial rifle that can fire the specialized cartridge.

Unlike standard ammunition, these cartridges would leave no shell casing behind after being fired. Gun-control advocates believe this could make life increasingly difficult for police investigators, who often depend on spent shells left behind at crime scenes to trace weapons used by criminals.

To those who market rifles in the United States and have watched sales plummet in recent years, the Voere rifle and its caseless ammo may be the wave of the future. Because it's safer for the shooter and far more accurate than other systems, Voere officials believe their product will eventually replace traditional ammunition in the same way that compact discs displaced vinyl records.

"In my opinion, with the addition of a high-tech design, (the Voere rifle) could do for the long-gun market what (the Glock plastic pistol) did for the handgun market," reads a review in a recent issue of American Firearms Industry magazine.

But the new rifle is also likely to spark the kind of fiery debate between gun-control advocates and the firearms industry that erupted in 1986 when the Austrian-made Glock 17 was introduced as the first handgun manufactured mostly of plastic, sparking fears that it might escape the notice of metal detectors. That year, we were the first to report that Libyan dictator Moammar Gadhafi was attempting to buy 100 of these pistols for possible terrorist means.

Also in 1986, we reported on a Pentagon security expert, who decided to test the new Glock pistol by carrying it through airport security. By stripping the gun down and disguising its few metal parts in his hand-held luggage, this official was able to slip by security at Washington National Airport twice without detection. Security measures were promptly strengthened as a result.

Experts believe that in the near future the high price tag of the Voere rifle will prevent it from catching on as quickly as the Glock. But gun-control advocates are already voicing complaints. "As with plastic handguns, caseless ammo may be an example of technology outpacing common sense," read a recent report by the Washington-based Violence Policy Center.

"At this point, the only reason a criminal would buy this is for the specific purpose of eliminating some evidence," said Rex Davis, former head of the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms.

Robert Fancher, a spokesman for the American company that imports the Voere products, calls such criticism a "bunch of crap." Regardless of the type of ammunition, Fancher says that police can still gather evidence from markings left on the actual bullet.

Girls join Hooters, then begin hooting

It takes a lot to rattle me, but I recently had the shock of my life. I found out Hooters of America, an Atlanta-based bar-restaurant chain that serves a lot of cold beer and chicken wings, just could be a sexist organization.

Let me begin at the beginning.

Several former Hooters' waitresses have filed sexual harassment suits against the company. In case you didn't know, waitresses at Hooters wear these skimpy little outfits that consist of tight-fitting T-shirts and orange, snugly fitting short shorts.

The former waitresses alleged that these outfits encouraged male co-workers and employees to grab them, comment on their breasts, inquire about their bra sizes and ask them for sex.

There might be those asking, "Well, when the former waitresses first saw those skimpy outfits and were told they would have to wear them, why didn't they realize then that doing so might encourage male sexual aggression and go elsewhere for employment?"

It doesn't work that way is why, and, furthermore, you're sexist for even asking such a thing.

And there's more:

There even has been the suggestion the very name "Hooters" is sexist because it is a reference to female breasts.

A Hooters' official (a man, wouldn't you know it) denied that allegation, however, and said the name refers to an owl, which Hooters uses as a logo.

This thing just gets more shocking as you go. Hooters' logo owl has big, round eyes. Some have further suggested those big round eyes are yet one more reference to women's breasts. The smelling salts, if you please.

Well, I can just hear those naysayers who had the audacity to question the former waitresses earlier in this column, now saying, "Wait just a darn minute here. Owls do go, 'hoot,' and owls do have big, round eyes."

Jerks. They've all said at one time or another, "Look at the hooters on her!" and if Hooters had wanted to be more sensitive, what the company should have done was give the owl in its logo small, beady eyes, like all those sex-crazed lounge lizards that bother its waitresses in those skimpy outfits.

But I've got a personal stake here which is the cause of my horrible reaction to all of this.

I have performed services for Hooters of America in return for payment. I have written three articles for Hooters' quarterly magazine. They have sent me three checks.

I haven't written anything about sexual haarrassment, skimpy outfits or women's breasts, however. I have written about how to have fun (non-sexual), country music and how I arrived at the titles of my books.

But that doesn't change the fact I do have a slight connection with a company that would dress its waitresses as it does, name its company for a slang term for a part of the female anatomy and dare feature a logo with an owl with big, round eyes.

How blind could I be? I went into a Hooters once myself for a beer and some chicken wings. I saw those outfits.

I didn't grab a waitress, comment on her breasts, ask her bra size, or ask her for sex. I asked for another beer, I seem to recall, but that doesn't let me off the hook.

All the time I've spent trying to become more politically correct, especially in the area of women's rights, goes right out the window with this one.

How can I ever forgive myself? How can I ever be forgiven?

I left with but one choice, of course. I fear and now announce that I will sever my relationship with Hooters of America until it can prove to me and the rest of the country it is not a sexist organization.

What? No, that wasn't me winking my eye. Owls wink. I rest my case.

WILLIAM SAFIRE

Foundation of English language is eroding

No one cares about fussy things like "like" any more," my friend in advertising exclaimed, a bit touchy. I had challenged the grammar of a line she had written for a client: "Nobody knows, like Domino's, how you like pizza at home."

"Of course people care," I insisted, remembering how purists boiled up in anger over the aggressively colloquial 1954 commercial declaring that "Winston Tastes Good, Like a Cigarette should." But that was a generation of purists ago. My friend in advertising turned out to be right about modern language. The Domino's ad appeared on national television hundreds of times last winter and elicited no outrage, no controversy, not one complaint.

Why? In a time of ever-longer schooling, why does American English usage seem to be degenerating? Because we are seeing, right before our ears, the triumph of Spoken English over Written English. Indeed it is a triumph so complete that defending formal forms risks looking prissy.

For much of America's history, written English established the national norm. Letters, books, newspapers, periodicals, telegrams — these were the methods of general communication. And people did more than communicate with written language. They flaunted their verbal virtuosity with big words and starchy grammar. Spelling counted. To be caught in "accommodate" or "harrass" was to look unlettered, uncouth.

Spoken language, on the other hand, has no spelling, and as for grammar, the principal rule is simple: "Does it sound right?" By phone and phonograph, the tongue tide soon spread, eventually reaching full flood with the advent of talkies, radio, tape and television. These days, like it or not, there's no point in singling out the Domino's commercial; everyone seems to misuse "like," if only to sound right. A cable TV ad for Showtime promises that "We entertain you like no one can." An Op-Ed writer declares in The Times, "Like I was saying, New York is the greatest city in the world." Writers uncertain of when to use "like" (to introduce a noun not followed by a verb) regularly duck behind clumsy evasions like "such as."

"Like" is just one example. Casual spoken usage infects formal usage in many ways — like the split infinitive. English teachers can't credibly urge that it be used with discrimination, not when their students' Star Trekged ears discern no fault in "to boldly go where no one (originally 'no man') has gone before." English teachers find it ever harder to convey the subjunctive mood in a climate so casual that a Federal agency head tells a reporter: "It is not a 100 percent ideal situation. I wish it was."

And the comma splice, a refusal to come to a full stop, is daily seen but not heard, even in advice to writers in Editor & Publisher: "Don't blame the reporter, blame the editor."

The triumph of informal speech shows in the increasingly conversational tone of newspapers. Contractions, which they once didn't permit in headlines, have become commonplace. Stories now routinely provide pronouncers like "Srebrenica (pronounced sreh-breh-NEET-sah)." More and more, print journalists look to the oral tradition of storytelling, and debate among themselves if it's permissible to adapt quotations so they sound, in print, more "natural."

The triumph of the spoken word also shows in the proliferation of obscenity. Americans probably don't talk any dirtier than they used to; it just seems that way. In writing, curses and dirty words have to be deliberate. In speech, they pop up naturally. The more voice, one might say, the more vice — and the more vitality. The dominance of spoken English brings with it a healthy spontaneity. Language is as language does, and its vitality bubbles up in speech long before writers fix it in stone.

Hundreds of Democrats ask Clinton to put NAFTA on hold

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton was asked Tuesday by 110 congressional Democrats to put on hold the North American Free Trade Agreement until Congress has dealt with another hot potato: health care reform.

"The debate over NAFTA will be difficult and divisive. It will detract from our efforts to build a broad coalition of support for health care reform," the 103 House members and seven senators said in letters to Clinton.

House Majority Whip David Bonior, who drafted the letter, said Tuesday at a Capitol news conference that the free trade debate will be divisive and cannot be allowed to impede health care reform. "If we fail to act on health care reform, over the next two years one out of every four Americans — 63 million people — will lose their health care coverage for some period," the Michigan Democrat said.

"We cannot afford to delay. We cannot afford to get tangled in side issues," said Bonior, a leading opponent of the trade pact.

The calls for postponement were rejected by the White House.

"NAFTA and health care are proceeding on separate tracks," White House press secretary Dee Dee Myers said. "There's been no change in our timetable on NAFTA. The president still feels

They urge president to consider health reform first saying broad coalition is needed for success, NAFTA would divert strength.

we can conclude it by the end of this year."

The administration wants to implement the continental trade agreement in January. The treaty would phase out tariffs and other barriers to the free movement of goods, services and investment over a 15-year period.

Myers said the administration is awaiting completion of the congressional budget talks before deciding when to forward the health care and free trade legislation to Congress.

First Lady Hillary Rodham Clinton, who heads the administration's health care reform effort, has said she would like the health reform package sent to Congress in September.

Discussion of the trade pact came as the administration was preparing to enter the latest round of talks over NAFTA's side agreements on protection of labor, the environment and to guard against import surges.

U.S. Trade Representative Mickey Kantor will meet with his Mexican and Canadian counterparts in Washington later this week to try and reach conclusion on the side talks.

"We've made some progress but we still have some differences of opinion," Kantor said at an Agriculture Department briefing. "I am hopeful we will be able to reach agreement in very short time."

Also Tuesday, the House Government Operations Committee held a hearing to examine how the trade agreement would affect U.S. government procurement.

"We may not be able to decide who General Motors employs to build its cars, but we can decide who our government employs to build our highways," said committee chairman John Conyers, D-Mich.

Noting that federal procurement laws encourage government agencies to purchase U.S. goods and services, Conyers said NAFTA could open up the $65 billion federal civilian procurement market to Mexican and Canadian producers.

NAACP office is destroyed by liquid firebomb

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — A firebomb hurled through a window destroyed the NAACP's Sacramento office Tuesday, the second attack in a week on one of the civil rights groups' facilities.

The single-story building was empty when someone threw a "flammable-liquid-type device" through the window around 2 a.m., said fire Capt. Craig Watrous. No one was hurt, and no arrests were immediately made.

Last Friday, a pipe bomb went off at an NAACP office in Tacoma, Wash., causing minor damage.

Racism was believed to be behind the attacks, the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People said.

"Racism exists and it's alive and well," Clyde Rainwater, the Sacramento group's first vice-president, told reporters outside the charred office.

The fire, which took four hours to extinguish, destroyed most of the local chapter's records, as well as furniture and computers.

The FBI was looking into possible civil rights violations, said agency spokesman Tom Griffin.

The Fire Department and the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms were also investigating, Watrous said.

No racist graffiti or hate letters were found at the office, he said.

The two attacks came shortly after the FBI said it foiled a plot by white supremacists in Los Angeles to bomb a black church and kill several prominent black people in an effort to launch a race war.

"We see these acts as part of an emerging trend of attempts by the right-wing elements in our society to thwart the very positive reawakening of activism within the civil rights movement," NAACP executive director Benjamin Chavis said in phone interview from Jackson, Miss.

HUD seeks more money to deal with loan defaults

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Clinton administration asked Congress on Tuesday for more money to deal with a mushrooming number of low-income homes the government is inheriting because of defaults on federally backed mortgages.

The legislation also would make it easier for poor people to work without risking increases in the rent they pay for public housing.

It was introduced Tuesday as a stopgap measure to help the Department of Housing and Urban Development handle its booming inventory of foreclosed properties. HUD estimates that 27 percent of mortgages backed by the Federal Housing Administration's multifamily insurance program are at risk of default, creating up to $12 billion in federal losses.

Without the bill, HUD officials estimated, the number of properties in HUD's possession will grow from 33,000 apartments to 78,000 in a year.

"We must be more than landlords of declining property," said HUD Secretary Henry Cisneros. "We must be community builders. This is what you'll see over the intervening months and years for the new HUD. We're aware we've got to do more than put (on) Band-Aids when the patient may have cancer."

HUD officials declined to estimate how much the legislation might cost or what share of it would be new spending. Some initiatives, such as a $265 million anti-crime program and $2 billion loan guarantee program for economic development, would be carried out with funds from this year's budget.

The bill would allow the Resolution Trust Corporation to market HUD-owned properties, and would make it easier for HUD to impose civil penalties for defaults.

Rules governing public housing rents also would be adjusted, to soften a requirement that residents pay 30 percent of their adjusted income for rent.

U.S. to give Ukraine $175 million for weapons dismantling

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States agreed to provide Ukraine with $175 million in aid to help dismantle its nuclear arsenal after being assured that the former Soviet republic has already begun to disarm some SS-19 strategic missiles, a senior Defense Department official said Tuesday.

The missiles are part of the huge nuclear weapons cache left on Ukrainian territory following the breakup of the Soviet Union. Their dismantlement is seen as a "practical activity" that will allow the congressionally approved aid to begin moving, said the official, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

The Ukrainians "just started work on a few" of the missiles at a region called Pervomaysk within the last several weeks, said the official.

Although the question of whether the missiles' multiple nuclear warheads will go back to Russia has not yet been decided, the official described the move as a step forward.

Washington prefers the warheads be sent back to Russia, but approves their temporary storage in Ukraine as an "interim solution" until such matters can be worked out, the official said.

"It's a practical activity, it's getting started. . . . It's better they are stored than aimed at us," the official said.

Questions remain as to whether dismantled multiple nuclear warheads will go back to Russia or remain on Ukrainian soil.

The $175 million is to be used to purchase U.S. equipment that will be used in the dismantlement process, the official said.

However, all transfer of equipment would be halted or prospect of the approval of additional funds would dry up should the dismantlement work stop, the official said.

The development came during nearly three hours of meetings between Defense Secretary Les As-pin and Ukrainian Defense Minister Konstantin Morozov at the Pentagon, said the official.

Earlier in the day, the two men signed an agreement Tuesday for future defense contacts.

Aspin, at a Pentagon ceremony, said the document calling for a greater exchange between the two nations on military matters, will "promote confidence and enhance understanding." Morozov said it "creates a basis for deeper and wider relations between our two countries."

gistics, command and control structures and medical services.

Ukraine inherited enough missiles, warheads and bombers when the Soviet Union folded to make it the world's third largest nuclear power. However, it did not get the codes and controls that would enable it to use them.

Democrats urge Clinton to abandon plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some nervous Democrats urged President Clinton on Tuesday to abandon his deficit-reduction plan and write a new one with a smaller tax increase and more spending cuts.

Clinton and his allies reacted immediately, saying any such delay could mean major trouble for the economy.

"You delay it a couple of months, you are going to have less deficit reduction, higher interest rates, more fragility, uncertainty in the economy, more consumer confidence going down," Clinton told reporters at the White House. "I'd be deeply concerned about the (reaction from the) financial markets," Treasury Secretary Lloyd Bentsen said in an interview.

Added White House Budget Director Leon Panetta: "The economy needs the plan now, and the danger of backing off . . . is that it becomes an excuse for inaction. And we've had enough excuses for 12 years."

Sen. David Boren, D-Okla., who voted for a version of the president's plan when it passed the Senate by one vote last month, said "I remain to be convinced" on the compromise now being written. He urged Clinton to call together senior Democrats and Republicans to produce a new plan.

Former independent presidential candidate Ross Perot also said it was time to start over. He was quoted by The Wall Street Journal as saying Clinton's package "just doesn't do the job. Let's back off and try again."

Rep. Charles Stenholm, D-Texas, who speaks for about four dozen conservative Democrats, called on Clinton to dump the 4.3-cent-a-gallon gasoline tax — the only provision in the plan that would be felt by most middle-income families.

"We would make up the revenue by increasing the spending cuts," Stenholm said after the White House meeting. He mentioned, for example, that a major saving could be realized if most government spending were allowed to grow by 1 percent less than now projected over the next five years.

"We think perhaps we could live with a 5.2 percent increase (rather than 6.2 percent) and I think the overwhelming majority" of citizens would support such a restraint, Stenholm said.

Boy's death

CORPUS CHRISTI — Investigators searched Tuesday for medical records of a woman who told authorities that she killed her 4-year-old son because he had a dragon inside of him. Authorities said the woman's 5-year-old daughter reported that her mother drowned the boy and then told her that he wasn't real — he was a robot. The woman's 3-year-old girl also was at the drowning scene. But investigators believe the 5-year-old was the only witness who saw Adam Shook die, Nueces County sheriff's investigator Lt. Mike Lowrance said Tuesday. /68

Council presents grant outline

■ City announces preliminary plans for City Development Block Grant for public, non-public services.

By Katherine Poteet
Staff writer

Midland City Council members presented a preliminary outline for distribution of the $1.3 million City Development Block Grant money and answered questions concerning the amounts at a public hearing Tuesday at the Southeast Community Senior Center.

Approximately 60 people attended the meeting, the second public hearing conducted by the City Council on the distribution of CDBG funds, which are designated by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development. The money serves low-to-moderate income areas and was decided by 1990 census figures.

"We went through the amounts requested at the last public hearing," council member Juluis Brooks said. "Some got what they requested and some did not. However, we want to assure you that this is not a final deal. We want your input before the final decision is made."

■ Under public services, the council tentatively allotted $50,000 to Community and Senior Services of Midland for its Southeast Senior Nutrition Program. The northeast branch of the YMCA received $25,000 for its Senior Wellness Program and $20,000 for its youth programs. The YMCA and the city both were allotted $20,000 for Prime Time After School Care and a Lot Clearing Program, respectively.

The council rejected from its preliminary list requests by the Midland Project Self Sufficiency Program, the Permian Basin Center for Battered Women and Their Children, Salvation Army, Midland College Business and Economic Development Center and Casa de Amigos.

United Way sets fund-raising goal at $2.6 million

By Darren J. Waggoner
Staff writer

United Way of Midland officials Tuesday announced plans to raise $2.6 million — to be dispersed among 16 local agencies — by the time the fall fund-raising campaign ends in November.

The non-profit agency kicked off the pilot campaign with the theme "Back to the Future" during a luncheon at the Midland Hilton. Nearly 300 people representing 28 companies involved in the pilot campaign attended the event.

Last year, volunteers fell about $200,000 behind the original goal of $2,755,000, which led officials to seek slightly less this year. Officials estimated nearly 36,000 Midland residents receive help from United Way agencies.

Campaign chairman Tom Sikes, vice president of Eastland Exploration, said he believes a more focused campaign will help the agency meet the new goal.

"We are making changes in two broad areas — non-campaign and campaign," he said. "... we will try to do a better job of communicating to people what United Way is and does. Most people just see United Way in the fall with its hands out, because its services are indirect to agencies."

Tuesday's program included the unveiling of the new campaign video featuring three agency success stories: the Midland Rape Crisis Center, the Palmer Drug Abuse Program and the Boys & Girls Club.

United Way officials claim a $1 donation will provide two hot meals to a homeless person at the Salvation Army, while a $15 pledge will provide a week's worth of hot meals to a senior citizen from Meals on Wheels through Community and Senior Services.

Port Aransas crawls with palm-size pets during nighttime crab races

By Ellen Bernstein
Associated Press Writer

PORT ARANSAS — Mario Andretti cracked under pressure.

The hermit crab, whose name befits his swift scuttle, burrowed in his seashell. He made an appearance only after Mutt, a competing crab, placed his pincers on the finish line.

"Aw-riiight Mutt!" yelled owner Bill Sahm, cheering from the sidelines of the sand-topped speedway in Bobby Ray's bar. "Mario got a flat," a spectator groaned.

On Wednesday nights, this Port Aransas hangout is crawling with hermit crab owners and their palm-size pets.

Here the crabs are for racing, not eating. But if the crowd wants steamed crabs, owner Bobby Ray will douse a crab with water when it plays dead at the starting circle. Steam rises because the racing crabs are warmed by a heat lamp. A spritz usually revives a shy crab.

The owners bring the crabs in brandy snifters, to-go cartons or palm tree-lined aquariums. But the crabs' real homes — and novelties — are their colorful seashells.

The hermit crab or land crab, not to be confused with the native marine hermit crab, is a Caribbean import. The eight-legged pets are available at souvenir shops in Port Aransas.

In the Caribbean, hermit crab racing is a gambler's sport. Betting is illegal in Texas, so Ray holds tournaments. The winner takes the pot of $3 entry fees.

Scouts take off in record number today for 1993 jamboree

By Ed Todd
Staff writer

A record 100 West Texas boys from the 18-county Buffalo Trail Council of Boy Scouts of America are leaving today for a week's tour of Washington, D.C., historic sites and to attend the seven-day 1993 National Scout Jamboree in Virginia from Aug. 4 through Aug. 10.

The scouts, who form three troops, will be the largest number of boys from the 5,000-member, Midland-headquartered Buffalo Trail Council to participate in the jamboree, says Bob Templeton, a Midland Scout leader who is chairman of the council's jamboree project and is a member of National Scout Jamboree staff.

The Buffalo Trail Council stretches from the plains of Snyder in West Central Texas to the mountains of Fort Davis in far West Texas and includes the Midland-Ode-sa area.

The West Texas Scouts at the jamboree will be among 30,000 Scouts from throughout the nation and abroad.

"This is the biggest scouting event worldwide both in numbers and in participation," Templeton said.

The jamboree, like the tour of the nation's historic capital, will be a "pinnacle experience" for the scouts, he said.

"They will have the experience of a lifetime that will take them through their adulthood," Templeton said. "There are lots of things in scouting that are big-time experiences," such as the "high-adventure" represented by the Philmont National Boy Scout Ranch in New Mexico and the cumulative work on the scouting's highest rank, Eagle Scout. "And this (jamboree) is the biggest" event.

"If there are two things that we (in scouting) do extraordinarily well, it's Philmont and the jamboree," Templeton said.

The mountain backpacking treks at Philmont are the pinnacle of high adventure, he said.

The 100 Scouts from the Buffalo Trail Council will be accompanied to the jamboree by 13 adult leaders — four adults for each of the three troops and a tour coordinator.

The 30,000 scouts and 5,000 adult leaders at the jamboree will be pitching hundreds of tents and campsites on the grounds of Fort A.P. Hill, a 7,000-acre U.S. Army fort in Virginia where paratroopers are trained.

BOYS: Scouts leave today for jamboree

At the jamboree, scouts will have the opportunity to participate in rappelling, rifle shooting, archery, pioneering physics, bicycling, kayak handling, snorkeling, rafting, fishing, scuba-diving and arts and science projects.

In addition, the scouts will be working on merit badges from more than 100 fields, such as first aid, archery, rifle and shotgun shooting, space exploration, geology, woodcarving, backpacking, Indian lore, soil-and-water conservation and cinematography (which film producer Steven Spielberg, an Eagle Scout, introduced to scouting at the 1989 jamboree).

"Some are static exhibits," Templeton said. "Some are can-do things."

In addition to meeting fellow scouts from across the nation, participants will work and visit with youths from India, Sweden, Ireland, Israel, Denmark, the Netherlands, China, The Philippines, Jamaica and Central and South America.

For the scouts, the jamboree "opens up their horizons and gives them a better appreciation of what the world is all about, to learn about different cultures, and to learn to be tolerant," Templeton said. "These boys are coming together."

Midland Scoutmaster David Pearce is coordinating the Washington, D.C., tour for the West Texas Scouts.

"This is a once-in-a-lifetime trip," Pearce said. "These gentlemen are going to be able to see the history of America there in Washington, D.C., and they are going to think about that for the rest of their lives."

For 16-year-old Midland scout Victor Leggett, going to the jamboree is an "incredible" feeling.

"From what I've heard from other people who went to the jamboree, it was a blast," Victor said. "I feel like I'm on top of the world."

Before the jamboree, the West Texas Scouts will be touring Washington historic sites and museums and visit with lawmakers.

On the tour agenda are the Smithsonian Institute and its Air and Space Museum, the National Zoo, the Library of Congress, Arlington National Cemetery, the Lincoln Memorial, the Vietnam Memorial, Mount Vernon, the White House, Supreme Court and the halls of Congress.

For the boys who range in age from 12 through 17, participating in the jamboree "represents the icing on the cake" in the scouting experience, Templeton said.

Many of the scouts took on odd jobs, such as mowing lawns, chopping firewood, and selling fertilizer and candy to earn the $1,400's worth of "nickels and dimes" to attend the jamboree and to make the tour," Templeton said.

"We know this is not cheap," Templeton said. "It is probably the most expensive thing we do in scouting."

Jamboree scholarships were available.

"You've got to have the money," Templeton said. "Most of these boys have earned their own money. Part of it is learning the work ethic."

The Midland-headquartered Buffalo Trail Council is sending three troops to the jamboree, while Amarillo, Lubbock, San Angelo and Wichita Falls, are sending one troop each. Abilene is sending three-quarters of a troop. Each troop is made up of 36 boys, in addition to four adult leaders.

Particularly since 1985, the Buffalo Trail Council leadership has increased its enthusiasm and support in encouraging more Boy Scouts to sign up for the jamboree, Templeton said.

In recent jamborees, Templeton noted that the boys and the adult leaders who returned from the event were filled with enthusiasm and "had a wonderful, great time in meeting people from all over the nation and the world."

The Buffalo Trail Council sent one troop to the jamboree in 1985 and two troops to the event in 1989. Jamborees are every four years.

The first one was in 1937. "Some people play golf, and I do scouting," Templeton said.

"Sometime we call ourselves Scout zealots," Templeton said. "Quite obviously, there is a virtuous reason why we are in scouting. We want to help the boys develop character and to become good citizens tomorrow and to be our future."

GOAL: United Way kicks off pilot campaign

(From 1B)

William Howard talked about his experience with Big Brothers/Big Sisters.

"I moved to Midland about 10 years ago after my wife died of cancer and decided to get a little brother," he said. "Richard was shy and introverted and a bit like me. I didn't have a lot to offer him but I knew I could do something for him."

Today, Howard and his 18-year-old "little brother" remain close friends.

"That young man taught me a lot about self-esteem and he recently told me that I really changed his life as well," he said.

Other United Way agencies that will be supported by money raised in the 1993-'94 campaign include: American Red Cross; Boy Scouts of America, Buffalo Trail Council; Camp Fire Boys and Girls; Casa de Amigos; Centers for Children and Families; Community & Senior Services; Freewill Foster Home; Midland Need to Read, Inc.; Permian Basin Center for Battered Women and Their Children; Permian Basin Girl Scouts; Salvation Army Corps and Day Care and the YMCA.

Pilot companies include Bank One; Chevron U.S.A.; city of Midland; Compressor Systems; Conoco; Cotton, Bledsoe, Tighe & Dawson; Dawson Geophysical Co.; Dillard's; Energas; Henry Petroleum; Johnson, Miller & Co.;

KPMG Peat Marwick; Langston Realtors; Memorial Hospital and Medical Center; Midland American Bank; NationsBank; OXY, U.S.A.; Parker & Parsley Petroleum; J.C. Penney; Physicians and Surgeons Hospital; Rehabilitation Hospital of Midland-Odessa; Stubbeman, McRae, Sealy, Laughlin and Browder; TU Electric; Texaco; Texas Commerce Bank; Tom Brown, Inc. and Texas Instruments and United Way agencies.

The amount of money they raise will be announced at the general campaign kickoff to be held Sept. 22 at the Midland Center. Then general campaign lasts through November.

FUNDS: City allots grant money

(From 1B)

$350,000, went to the city of Midland for its street paving program. The city and Midland Neighborhood Housing services received $275,000 for housing rehabilitation. The city of Midland also received $105,000 for Reyes-Mashburn-Nelms Park; $90,000 for the east Midland swimming pool; $45,000 for a demolition project; $34,000 for Target Area Code Enforcement; $30,000 for a Housing Emergency Repairs Program; $25,000 for Homeownership Incentive Program; and $20,000 for Sparks Park.

The council denied requests by the Salvation Army and a request by the Midland Economic Development Co.

Mayor J.D. Faircloth said the council changed how it made its decisions concerning CDBG funds because of HUD guidelines.

"HUD wants us to spend money where we will see concrete improvements made," he said. "It is difficult to see concrete results in some projects. And, if we spread ourselves too thin, it is hard to see progress. Obviously, the need is always greater than the funds, and we will not be able to fund some services."

Bill Burford, president of the board of directors for the Permian Basin Center for Battered Women and Their Children, and Lael Cordes-Pitts, executive director for Casa de Amigos, asked the council to reconsider their funding requests, which were both turned down. The battered women's center had requested $93,000 and Casa de Amigos had requested $24,120.

Questions were raised as to whether or not Martin Luther King Park would be included on the list.

Brooks said the park was included in the lump sum of $105,000 listed for Reyes-Mashburn-Nelms Park.

James Fuller asked if the public would be able to see what amount would go to Martin Luther King Park and if it would be sufficient to finish such projects as the amphitheater.

Council member Jose Cuevas said the council had not yet decided on specific amounts for each park; that the decision would be based on the needs of the parks.

"I want to know what will be done to put the park (MLK) on the fast track, like Bluebird Park," Fuller said. "There are projects there that haven't been completed in five years. The message is being sent to people that this park is always going to be on the back burner."

George Logan, director of community services of the city of Midland, said the reason Bluebird Park was finished quickly was because much of its funding came from private donations.

Woman needs help meeting sister's heart transplant medical expenses

Staff report

A Midland woman in need of a heart transplant and the money to pay for it will be flown to Dallas today in anticipation of locating a donor and having the funds to provide or it, according to her sister.

Marie Dodd has been waiting for a heart for a number of months. She was admitted to Memorial Hospital and Medical Center where she is in critical condition, her sister Shirley Stegall said late Tuesday night.

A Care Flite helicopter will transport Ms. Dodd to Baylor Medical Center at 11 a.m. today. She is No. 1 on the list of recipients for a heart transplant, Ms. Stegall said.

"She's got to have it or she's not going to make it... she has suffered complications and she is fighting to breathe," Ms. Stegall said.

Ms. Dodd suffered congestive heart failure.

She has no medical insurance and the bills have been piling up, her sister said.

Ms. Stegall also said that her sister had been taken off the list of potential heart recipients because the family was not able to raise enough money to pay for the transplant. She said her sister was only recently put back on the list.

Ms. Stegall is asking for the help of the community to help meet the medical expenses. A Marie Dodd Heart Transplant Fund has been set up at Midland American Bank. Donations can be sent there or to the Stegall home at 3326 Neely, Midland, 79707.

Keep Midland Beautiful receives honors

Staff report

Keep Midland Beautiful has received first place honors for its activities that were held during the month of April.

Keep America Beautiful was the sponsoring organization, and the award will be presented at the annual Keep America Beautiful convention in Washington D.C. in December.

Some of the activities that helped the local group capture top honors were the GLAD Bag A Thon, the Great Texas Trash Off, Southeast Midland Clean-up, Recycling Realities Video Conference, Environmental Games and the various school programs. Every elementary school in Midland Independent School District participated by designing litter bags and posters, performing plays and skits, conducting campus clean-ups and learning more about their environment.

Cindy Botes, executive director of Keep Midland Beautiful, credited the local group's win with "the great dedication and volunteer spirit of all Midlanders."

Keep America Beautiful affiliates, such as Keep Midland Beautiful, are encouraged to participate in April's month-long event by organizing cleanup events, beautification projects and provide education about solid waste reduction and recycling.

In Midland

Over 1,000 new homes were built since 1988 — worth more than $114 million!

Who's buying all these houses? Folks who have put down roots and decided to stay — and others who have moved here in the last five years. They think Midland's a great place to live and raise a family. And strong housing starts are a good indicator that people are confident in Midland's future. So are we!

Prices climb

A rebound in oil futures prices gathered speed Tuesday on the New York Mercantile Exchange as more traders latched onto the rallying market.

West Texas Intermediate for September delivery rose 35 cents to $18.42 a barrel. The September contract has risen 79 cents in the last three trading days.

Local crude purchasers raised their posted price 25 cents to $16.75 a barrel.

September natural gas contracts sank 1.4 cents to $2.11 per 1,000 cubic feet.

Crude futures have been mainly on the upswing since July 19, when the spot delivery price touched a three-year low of $16.75 a barrel.

The rally was interrupted last week by prospects for an OPEC emergency meeting to deal with the price drop but the meeting was indefinitely postponed, apparently due to conflicts within the cartel.

In New York, the British pound was worth $1.4885, cheaper than $1.5015 on Monday.

Employment costs

WASHINGTON — Americans' wages, salaries and benefits rose a modest 3.6 percent in the year ended June 30, a pace unchanged from a year earlier and the latest evidence that inflation was being kept in check.

The Labor Department said Tuesday its Employment Cost Index, considered one of the best gauges of wage inflation pressures, also was little changed from the 3.5 percent increase it posted during the 12 months ended last March.

Stocks slip

NEW YORK — Sharp losses in steel stocks following an unfavorable trade commission ruling weighed down the stock market on Tuesday.

The Dow Jones Industrial average fell 2.24 points to 3,565.46.

Declining issues outnumbered advances by about 11 to 9 on the New York Stock Exchange.

IBM posts record $8 billion loss

■ Computer giant begins slashing 85,000 jobs, more than 25 percent of its work force.

Associated Press

NEW YORK — IBM reported an $8 billion quarterly loss Tuesday, its worst ever, reflecting the expense of slashing its once-sacrosanct staff and finishing a massive corporate restructuring.

Most of the loss comes from the cost of paying 85,000 employees — slightly more than 25 percent of its current work force — to depart the world's largest computer manufacturer by the end of next year.

International Business Machines Corp. officials earlier projected about 25,000 employees would leave.

The company's board of directors cut the quarterly dividend from 54 cents to 25 cents. In the first quarter, the dividend was cut from $1.21.

In addition, Louis V. Gerstner, in his broadest assessment of IBM's trouble since becoming chairman and chief executive officer 3½ months ago, said he would not name a president and did not want to be bogged down by a tradition of committees and presentations.

"I'm not spending a lot of time on structure and the process of IBM," Gerstner said. "I'm spending a lot of time on customers, employees, technology and the economics of IBM."

He defended his decision to deal with all of IBM's potential restructuring charges in one quarter.

"We've got to try to get behind us this Chinese water torture we've been going through quarter after quarter, year after year," Gerstner said. "We've got to get our problems behind us."

Investors applauded. IBM stock rose $3.25 to $45.62½ on volume of 6.25 million shares, the most active on the New York Stock Exchange.

"It's clear that Gerstner is trying by the December quarter to stabilize IBM and to put the company back to work between now and then," said Mark Stahlman, an industry consultant in New York. "He had to try to drop as many shoes as once to jump-start the company."

Declining revenue from mainframe computer sales worsened losses and forced IBM to lay off workers this spring, the first layoffs in its 79-year history. In addition, IBM's board replaced Chief Executive John Akers with Gerstner, the first outsider brought in for that job.

IBM expects to lower its work force to 225,000 by the end of 1994, down from about 302,000 at the start of 1993. Although 85,000 people are leaving, the company plans some hiring, bringing the net workforce reduction to 77,000. The company's work force peaked at 406,000 in 1985.

Gerstner said the company does not anticipate further charges and cost-cutting moves.

New rebound of oil futures gains speed

Associated Press

A rebound in oil futures prices gathered speed Tuesday on the New York Mercantile Exchange as more traders latched onto the rallying market.

Light sweet crude oil for September delivery rose 35 cents to $18.42 a barrel. The September contract has risen 79 cents in the last three trading days.

August heating oil surged 1.27 cents to 51.64 cents a gallon; August unleaded gasoline rose 0.88 cent to 52.94 cents a gallon; September natural gas sank 1.4 cents to $2.11 per 1,000 cubic feet.

Soybean futures extended their recent losses on the Chicago Board of Trade.

Wheat, corn and oat futures finished mostly higher.

September wheat rose 5 cents to $3.21½ a bushel; September corn rose 1 cent to $2.44½ a bushel; September oats rose ¼ cent to $1.47½ a bushel; August soybeans sank 8 cents to $7.02½ a bushel.

Precious metals gave back some of Monday's strong gains on New York's Commodity Exchange.

August gold fell $1.90 to $391.20 a troy ounce; July silver fell 1.5 cents to $5.067 a troy ounce.

On the Chicago Mercantile Exchange, August live cattle rose 0.20 cent to 74.87 cents a pound.

S&L panel seeks system overhaul

WASHINGTON (AP) — A national commission on the savings and loan debacle is recommending a radical overhaul of the financial system that would restrict deposit insurance to money-market style accounts invested in safe securities.

Deposit insurance didn't cause the debacle, but it allowed it to spiral out of control, the commission said Tuesday in a long-delayed report.

"In the S&L crisis, deposit insurance was the gasoline that suffered a series of matches," said commission member Robert E. Litan, a fellow at the Brookings Institution.

The three principal causes were the interest-rate spike from 1979 to 1982, deregulation that allowed S&Ls to make risky investments unrelated to home mortgages and the relaxation of capital rules which permitted S&Ls owners to operate institutions with little or none of their own money at stake.

Fraud, the commission said, accounted for only 10 percent to 15 percent of the nearly $200 billion debacle.

Air fare trial sides to portray American's chief differently

By Kathryn Jones

N.Y. Times News Service

GALVESTON — Robert L. Crandall, the chairman of American Airlines' parent, AMR Corp., is not a defendant in the air fare antitrust case being heard in U.S. District Court in Galveston. Nonetheless Crandall and his outspoken, fiercely competitive style are on trial.

The star witness in American Airlines' defense of charges that it engaged in predatory pricing, Crandall will take the stand Wednesday to try to refute the contention by Continental Airlines and Northwest Airlines that American last year set fares so low that it would lose money, but so would the weaker competitors, who might be forced out of business.

Lawyers for Continental and Northwest have tried in two weeks of making their case to link Crandall to meetings, memos and conversations about the fare cuts, portraying him as a ruthless competitor who aggressively sought ways to crush rivals. They have also suggested that Crandall's staff, trying to please him, produced figures to show that American's so-called "value pricing" fare plan would make money instead of losing hundreds of millions of dollars.

So Crandall's testimony — and the way he comes across to the jury of nine men and three women — has been much anticipated.

"They're trying to portray him as a bad guy and a bully," said Anne McNamara, AMR's general counsel. "A jury has to see he's a very decent man with a sense of humor. He's got strong opinions and he expresses them well."

Some American Airlines executives say that they expect that David Boies, Continental's lead attorney, and Joseph D. Jamail, the feisty Houston lawyer representing Northwest, to try to draw out Crandall's combative side whenever possible.

"The critical question is why did he lose all that money," Boies said, anticipating Crandall's appearance. "Is he predatory or just dumb?"

U.S. District Judge Samuel B. Kent, who is presiding, has kept lawyers on a short leash and on Monday issued special rules to limit the number of people who could sit or stand in the courtroom during Crandall's testimony, saying he wanted to avoid a "circus atmosphere."

Crandall's testimony is expected to focus on why American adopted the value pricing plan in April 1992, which reduced coach fares by 38 percent, and a month later slashed some leisure fares in half after Northwest announced a two-for-one sale. Witnesses for Northwest and Continental have testified that American Airlines knew beforehand that value pricing was a sure money loser.

BUSINESS SCENE

Kingsway Center welcomes The Sleep Shop

By Mella McEwen

Just opened in Kingsway Center is THE SLEEP SHOP.

A grand opening and ribbon cutting is scheduled from 10 a.m. Friday.

The new store brings to five the number of stores for the Lubbock-based company, which also has stores in Lubbock, Amarillo, Odesa and Waco.

Scott Oman, president of the 13-year-old company, said The Sleep Shop carries name brand bedding such as Sealy and Serta, as well as day beds, brass beds, electric beds, lift chairs, recliners and sleepers and the Soma tube-type waterbeds.

Some bedspreads, pillows and sheets also are stocked.

The store offers free delivery and set-up within a reasonable distance, Oman said, and it handles its own financing.

Also new to the Midland business scene is HEAD TO TOE hair and nail salon, located at 4706 N. Midkiff Rd., near Albertson's and Crafts Etc.

The salon employs three hair stylists and two nail technicians and will carry Redken and Matrix hair products.

In addition, Nights in White Satin lingerie and clothing store, which is also owned by the Head to Toe owner, has relocated to the same space.

A grand opening including drawings and giveaways will be Thursday through Saturday.

3-D SOLUTIONS INC. has opened at 550 W. Texas Ave., Suite 1150.

Jim Daniels, vice president, said that 3-D Solutions designs, collects, processes and interprets 3-D seismic data in the Permian Basin.

While the company has a couple of prospects in South Texas, Daniels said the company concentrates on West Texas and southeastern New Mexico.

The company was started, he said, due to what he called incredible demand for 3-D seismic. "We're real excited about the potential," he added.

The company has a two-person office in Midland and a two-person office in Houston.

The Magpegasus Federal Credit Union of Midland has been awarded a five-star rating by Bauer Financial Reports Inc.

The rating has been given to Magpegasus in five consecutive semi-annual periods. It is based on Dec. 31, 1992, financial data as filed with federal regulators.

The five-star rating, given the safest credit unions in the country, indicates that the credit union's deposits are federally insured up to $100,000 per account, that its regulatory capital exceeds 8 percent of assets, that there are no excessive delinquent loans or repossessed assets and that the credit union was profitable for the six month period ended Dec. 31, 1992.

Bauer is a Coral Gables, Fla.-based bank research and rating firm.

MILDRED'S FLOWERS of Midland has received the "AFS President's Award" from the American Floral Services Inc.

The award is given to the top AFS florists in North America based on wire order volume. It was presented to Mildred's owner Mildred Riddle-Farris.

Mildred's has been with AFS since 1971 and is part of a nationwide network of over 22,000 AFS florists serving more than 27,000 towns in the U.S. and Canada and international affiliates who deliver flowers in 150 countries around the world.

Graham asks for hearing, stay of execution

AUSTIN (AP) — Death row inmate Gary Graham on Tuesday asked a state judge for a hearing before the Texas Board of Pardons and Paroles and a temporary stay of execution.

State District Judge Pete Lowry took the matter under advisement and said he would announce a decision next week.

Graham is scheduled to die by injection Aug. 17 for the 1981 robbery and slaying of an Arizona man.

Graham, who has proclaimed his innocence, is suing the Texas Board of Pardons and Paroles, alleging the agency denied his right to a clemency hearing.

Civil rights attorney Jim Harrington, who is representing Graham, told Lowry that Graham deserved a hearing because of "testimony that has come to light subsequent to trial." Under state law, new evidence can only be submitted within 30 days after sentencing.

But JoAnne Bernal, an assistant attorney general, said Graham's case already has been reviewed on numerous occasions and that the court did not have the authority "to tell the board how to run its clemency proceedings."

Graham, who has proclaimed his innocence, is suing the Texas Board of Pardons and Paroles, alleging the agency denied his right to a clemency hearing.

Graham has twice asked the board for a hearing. In April, the board denied his request 12-5, Harrington said. Board members voted 10-7 against recommending that Graham be given a reprieve.

"All he needs to do is change one or two votes and he has a reprieve," Harrington told Lowry, arguing the judge should consider the close vote and force the board to provide Graham with a hearing.

The board never took action on Graham's second request for a clemency hearing, which came in June, because the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals granted him a 30-day reprieve.

Graham contends he deserves a hearing because his attorney was incompetent and did not locate four witnesses who recently have come forward with an alibi for him.

"We believe there has to be a basic fairness in our system," Harrington said. "That process should be there to hear a claim of innocence."

But two of the witnesses were found to not be believable, Robert Owen, Graham's attorney since 1990, testified Tuesday.

In another development, the Congressional Black Caucus said it will hold a hearing Saturday in Austin to examine Graham's case.

Officials: Child watched mother drown brother, 4

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — Investigators searched Tuesday for medical records of a woman who told authorities that she killed her 4-year-old son because he had a dragon inside of him.

Authorities said the woman's 5-year-old daughter reported that her mother drowned the boy and then told her that he wasn't real — he was a robot.

The woman's 3-year-old girl also was at the drowning scene. But investigators believe the 5-year-old was the only witness who saw Adam Shook die, Nueces County sheriff's investigator Lt. Mike Lowrance said Tuesday.

Lowrance said charges against the 37-year-old mother, Elaine Shook, were still pending.

"The only reason she's given us is that God talked to her and He told her to do it," Lowrance said.

Mrs. Shook remained under guard Tuesday at the psychiatric unit at Memorial Medical Center. Authorities revealed Monday that she had previous psychiatric problems and had not been taking prescribed medication when the drowning occurred.

Lowrance said investigators had yet to gather all her medical records.

"She made several references to killing the dragon, that she was getting rid of the dragon," he said.

Mrs. Shook was arrested Sunday morning after fishermen discovered Adam's body carefully arranged in the back of a pickup, surrounded by family memorabilia.

Clad in a T-shirt and underwear, Mrs. Shook approached a fisherman at Oso Creek and told him, "I've just killed my son," authorities said.

The body was wrapped in a sheet with two teddy bears, one of them holding a little red heart stating: "I love you."

Next to the boy was a portrait of his parents and a New World translation of the Bible. Nearby, investigators found a scrap wood altar and a second sort of memorial made of blankets, a pillow and a refrigerator shelf, topped with a wreath of shrubbery.

Roberts recovers..

AUSTIN — Alfredo Roberts underwent successful surgery for a foot fracture on Tuesday. The Dallas Cowboys tight end was expected to be out for at least two months. Roberts suffered the injury in practice Monday against the Los Angeles Raiders.

..Wacasey hurt

AUSTIN — The Dallas Cowboys tight end situation got even darker Tuesday when second-stringer Fallon Wacasey suffered a separated shoulder during practice against the Los Angeles Raiders. Wacasey, a free agent from Tulsa, had replaced Alfredo Roberts who underwent surgery for a broken right foot received in Monday's scrimmage against the Raiders. Roberts will be lost at least two months. No one's sure how long Wacasey, who originally was a sixth-round draft pick of the Cowboys two years ago, will be out. The injury left free agent Jason Burleson of Texas and Todd Young of Penn State as the only other tight ends on the squad.

North, South tie

FORT WORTH — Kyle Bryant's 55-yard field goal and Michael Ross' 92-yard kickoff return were the South's only good plays, but they were enough to carry the squad to a 10-10 tie with the North Tuesday night. It was only the sixth tie in the 59-year history of the Texas High School Coaches Association's all-star game, and the second in four years. The South offense took over for the last time on their 47 with 2:34 left. Quarterback Tony Darden of San Antonio Holmes scrambled for a first down with 1:33 to play, but they punted after a penalty, two incomplete passes and a sack. The North took over on its 23 with 11 seconds left and had time for only one play — a screen to Dion Marion, who was tackled at the 40. Bryant's game-tying kick with 6:03 to play was a low-line drive that just cleared the crossbar, but easily broke the game record of 46 yards set in 1982 by Kerrville Tivy's John Teltschik. Bryant of A&M Consolidated, is a Texas A&M signee. His kick was the only score in the sluggish second half that included two roughing the punter calls and an interception by defensive most valuable player the North's Carl Thomas of Fort Bend Kempner. Receiver Jeff Venghaus of Spring was the North star, catching three passes from McKinney's Mitch Alvarado in the first quarter and three more from San Angelo Central's Ben Montgomery in the second. Midland Lee's Ryan Tucker, who is headed for Texas Christian University this fall, caught one pass for seven yards in the game.

Angels explode again

■ After beating Shreveport 24-6 on Monday, Midland roars back with an 18-2 victory over the Captains on Tuesday.

By Terry Williamson
Sports editor

If you touch a Midland Angel these days, you may be branded for life. Things are sizzlin' at Angels Stadium. The Angels put gargantuan numbers on the board again Tuesday night, beating Shreveport 18-2, one night after busting the Captains 24-6. If the math is correct that's 42 runs and 43 hits in two nights for the rampaging Angels, who have now won a season high six games in a row and they are 7-1 on the current homestand after wobbling from a road trip through Jackson and Shreveport where they had a meager 1-8 mark with few hits and fewer runs. Ironically, Shreveport came into the game having won 22 of its last 33 games and eight of its last 10. But the Captains have to be a little shell-shocked after the first two games of this five-game set. Why are the Angels on such a binge? You may have a hard time finding an answer to that question, but Midland right fielder Jeff Kipila, who had a two-run homer and four RBI Tuesday, hopes things don't change in a hurry. "You never expect to put those kind of numbers up against a team like Shreveport. I just don't know the reason why this is happening, but I sure hope it doesn't end," said Kipila. "I will say that I'm never surprised by anything we do because we work really hard at hitting the ball." Shreveport pitching, ranked second in the Texas League in ERA coming into the series, helped a lot

Tuesday. Captains' starter Chris Hancock, 6-5, walked the first four Angels he faced and Midland was off to the races, scoring in every inning but the fifth. P.J. Forbes had his 10th homer of the year, a solo shot in the fourth and drove in three runs. Orlando Palmeiro had three hits, including a triple, and three RBI. Catcher Jorge Fabregas had a three-run double in the five-run second inning. Brian Grebeck and Ty Boykin, at the top of the Midland order, each scored three times as did No. 8 hitter Orlando Munoz. It just never seems to stop and Midland starter Shad Williams, 6-7, was glad. Williams was just 1-5 with a 7.92 ERA at home this year and 4-2, 2.95 on the road. All he had to do was throw strikes and he did. Williams went seven innings and allowed only five hits and two runs, one unearned. His only real mistake was a long gone ball by Adell Davenport in the fifth. Midland is now in second place and just three games

1993 DALLAS COWBOYS TRAINING CAMP

AUSTIN — The Garrett clan has a big stake in the training camp of the world champion Dallas Cowboys. First there's Jim Garrett, the Cowboys scout who charts plays and travels the country uncovering talent for the world champions. Then there are his sons, quarterback Jason, and running back Judd who are trying to impress the coaches and find a place on the roster.

"It is unique isn't it," said the elder Garrett, who joined the Cowboys as a scout in 1987. "It makes you proud to see us all out there on the practice field." Jason and Judd are two of eight children. The others are Jim, Jane, Jennifer, Janine, Jill, and John, a wide receiver who went to training camp with the Cowboys in 1988 and

American wins trip to state

Midland American fell into the losers' bracket after its first game in the Junior League sectional tournament. They're nothing but winners now. The team came blazing out of the elimination round to win six games in a row for the sectional championship, culminating with 3-1 and 3-2 wins over Abilene Tuesday at Simon Field. Now it's on to Waco to go against three other teams in the double elimination state tournament. Midland's first game is Saturday at 10:00 a.m. against an as yet unknown opponent. Fifteen-year-olds Lance Watters and Mark Holly pitched complete game wins Tuesday to avenge Midland's first-round game 6-3 loss to Abilene. The Americans scored three runs in the first inning of both games. Watters and Holly each threw eight strike outs. "When you lose the first game it's scary because you have to win every game," Midland coach Craig Holly said. "Lance put us in the (championship) and Mark finished it for us." Holly pitched out of jams in both of the last two innings of the second game. He got a strike out with runners at second and third to end the sixth. In the seventh Abilene rallied for a run to cut Midland's lead to 3-2, but Holly struck out Darin Jensen to end the game. "I was hoping my curve ball would get over for a strike, we'd set 'em down and go to Waco," said Mark Holly, who Houston Oilers' linebacker Lamar Lathon grabs running back Spencer Tillman by the face mask in one of three fights during Oilers' training camp Tuesday.

Oilers' defense displays its teeth in training camp

■ Buddy Ryan's defensive philosophy is rubbing the Oilers offense wrong.

By Michael Lutz
AP Sports Writer

SAN ANTONIO — Was it just another camp fight or was it the Buddy Ryan system bursting forth at the Houston Oilers training camp Tuesday when tempers flared between linebacker Lamar Lathon and running back Spencer Tillman?

Tillman, who was flattened by linebacker Wilber Marshall on Monday, reacted quickly when he was shoved down by Lathon at Tuesday's morning workout on the Trinity University campus. Players on offense and defense were laughing as they left the field and Lathon and Tillman shook hands on it. But Lathon said a more serious message is being played out by the defense, which is responding to Ryan's instructions to play more aggressively. He suggested there could be more fights as the team struggles for cohesion.

Bass' homer lifts 'Stros past Reds

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Kevin Bass' three-run homer powered Houston past Cincinnati 6-5 Tuesday night.

Tom Browning (7-6) was the loser, going only 2 1/3 innings and giving up six runs on eight hits.

Winner Brian Williams (4-3) allowed five runs and seven hits in 5 2/3 innings. Doug Jones got the final three outs for his 21st save.

NL Roundup

Expos 8, Pirates 6
PITTSBURGH — Pinch-hitter Lou Frazier singled in the tie-breaking run in a two-run eighth inning as Montreal beat Pittsburgh after blowing a four-run lead.

Trailing 6-5, the Expos tied the score against Joel Johnston (0-1) on consecutive doubles by Larry Walker and Moises Alou. After an intentional walk and a fly out, Frazier grounded a single up the middle for his ninth pinch hit in 26 at bats (.346).

Tim Scott (3-1) got the win with two scoreless innings of relief, and John Wetteland finished for his 22nd save in 26 opportunities.

Mets 4, Marlins 3
NEW YORK — Jeff Kent's second home run of the game leading off the seventh inning gave New York a over Florida. Kent, who has 12 home runs, also hit a three-run in the fourth inning off loser Pat Rapp (1-3).

Rapp pitched 7 2/3 innings, allowing four runs on six hits.

Dwight Gooden (10-10) pitched seven innings for the victory, giving up three runs and five hits. John Franco got the last four outs for his seventh save.

Padres 8, Cubs 0
CHICAGO — Andy Benes pitched a five-hitter and Tony Gwynn had five hits and drove in three runs, leading San Diego to a victory over Chicago.

It was the second shutout and fourth complete game of the season for Benes (11-7), who struck out eight and walked none.

Phillies 10, Cardinals 7
PHILADELPHIA — John Kruk went 5-for-5 and drove in three runs as Philadelphia started its key series against St. Louis by beating the Cardinals.

Dave Hollins added a two-run homer as the Phillies expanded their lead over the Cardinals to five games in the NL East.

Reliever Roger Mason (2-7) earned the victory with 2 2/3 innings.

Braves 10, Rockies 5
DENVER — Fred McGriff hit two home runs, including an inside-the-park shot, and drove in four runs as Atlanta beat Colorado.

The Braves are 9-0 against the Rockies this season, averaging 8.1 runs a game.

John Smoltz (9-8) pitched four-hit ball over eight innings for the victory as the Braves won for the seventh time in eight games since McGriff's arrival.

Rogers shuts down Kansas City, 1-0

Associated Press

KANSAS CITY — Rafael Palmeiro's 21st home run in the seventh inning ended Kevin Appier's no-hit bid Tuesday night and gave the Texas Rangers a 1-0 victory over the Kansas City Royals.

Palmeiro's home run on a 1-0 pitch was the only hit Appier (11-5) allowed in pitching his third complete game of the season. He had allowed only one walk and retired 16 straight Royals before the drive into the Royals' bullpen.

The homer made a winner of Kenny Rogers (8-6), who allowed nine hits before getting last-out relief help from Tom Henke, who earned his 22nd save.

Appier was perfect until he walked Dan Peltier on a 3-1 count with one out in the sixth. Peltier, however, was thrown out stealing on the next pitch.

Appier fanned two Rangers in each of the first three innings and finished with a career-high 11 strikeouts, at least one in every inning.

Until the homer, the only thing close to a hit for Texas was a line drive to third baseman Phil Hiatt by Dean Palmer with one out in the second.

The Royals' best threat came in the second when Gary Gaetti led off with a double, the first of his three hits, and Kevin McReynolds singled an out later, Gaetti stopping at third. Rogers, however, struck out Hiatt and got Chico Lind to bounce to short, ending the inning.

Brewers 3, Red Sox 2
MILWAUKEE — Jaime Navarro pitched five-hit ball for eight-plus innings for his first victory since June 16 and Robin Yount hit his 25th career homer, leading Milwaukee past Boston.

Navarro (6-8), who had lost five straight decisions and allowed 21 runs in his three previous starts, retired 12 straight in one stretch in pitching the Brewers to a third straight victory for only the second time this season.

Jesse Orosco relieved after Scott Fletcher's leadoff single in the ninth. He balked Fletcher to second, threw a wild pitch that moved him to third and yielded an RBI grounder by Billy Hatcher before picking up his second save.

Milwaukee, which ended Boston's 10-game winning streak Monday, beat Red Sox right-hander Danny Darwin for the first time in three tries this season.

Blue Jays 6, Orioles 5
TORONTO — Pat Borders beat out an infield single in the eighth inning, apping a three-run rally that lifted Toronto to a victory over Baltimore.

Paul Molitor chased Rick Sutcliffe with a one-out infield single and Joe Carter singled off Mark Williamson. John Olerud greeted Jim Poole (1-1) with a single to load the bases, bringing Greg Olson on for the Orioles.

Olson fanned Tony Fernandez for the second out, but Ed Sprague lined a two-run double to tie it.

Borders followed with a sharp grounder to shortstop. Cal Ripken went to his left and made a diving stab, but his throw was too late to get the slow-footed Borders, who slid head first into the bag as Olerud scored.

Duane Ward (2-2), who blew his fifth save in 31 chances by yielding Ripken's three-run homer in the eighth, worked 1 1/3 innings for the win, striking out Mark McLemore to end it with a runner on third.

The Blue Jays have won three straight and five of six. Toronto led 3-2 entering the eighth, but McLemore singled with one out, Harold Baines singled an out later and Ripken greeted Ward with his 15th home run of the season.

Paul Molitor hit his 13th home run after Roberto Alomar's one-out double in the first inning, marking the seventh straight start that Sutcliffe allowed at least one straight, but for just the second time in eight decisions on the road this season. The Flint, Mich., native allowed two runs on seven hits. He walked two and struck out three.

Abbott's only other victory in six career starts at Tiger Stadium came in his first attempt, a 6-3 decision over Doyle Alexander on June 17, 1989.

Steve Farr worked the ninth for his 21st save.

Bill Gullickson (6-6), who gave up eight runs on 10 hits in 4 1/3 innings in his previous start against Kansas City, was tagged again, this time for four runs on four hits in just 1 2/3 innings. He also walked three.

White Sox 7, Indians 4
CHICAGO — Frank Thomas went 4-for-4 with two home runs and five RBIs and Jack McDowell became the first 16-game winner in baseball, leading Chicago to a win over Cleveland.

Thomas is 11-for-18 (.611) with four homers and nine RBIs in his last five games. Chicago trailed 4-2 entering the seventh, but Ozzie Guillen reached on a fielder's choice, Steve Sax had a bunt single and Craig Grebeck hit an RBI double, knocking Jeff Mutis (2-4) out of the game.

Thomas, who had hit his 25th homer an inning earlier, then greeted Jeremy Hernandez with a three-run homer to center.

McDowell (16-6) won his fourth straight start. He pitched seven innings and gave up four runs on 10 hits, walking two and striking out five.

OILERS: System creates friction

From 1C

"He (Ryan) wants us in practice to wrap up and make the tackle, not just run by him and say you have him," Lathon said. "It makes for better practice habits and puts you in better focus for practice."

Ryan, starting his first season as Oilers defensive coordinator, is introducing the Oilers to the 46 defense with its aggressive style of blitzes and bump-and-run tactics.

The defensive methods don't always make the offense happy, but Lathon said he's not concerned.

"For the most part, the offense doesn't like to practice against this defense," Lathon said. "Our thing right now is we feel we're the baddest squad on the field and we're going out every day and try to prove it."

The Oilers ranked high in team defense last season but they've faded in the second half of their final playoff games the past two seasons. Ryan is preaching victories instead of statistics.

"If those guys (offense) have thin skins and they don't understand aggression and they don't understand coming out here and getting some of their frustrations out, then they're in the wrong business," Lathon said.

"I don't really don't care how my teammates react to that. I think everybody's mind-set is to leave it on the field. So if people don't understand that, it's no big deal to me."

Tillman declined comment on the specific incident, but said he didn't care for the atmosphere being created by the Buddy system.

"I think it promotes more disunity than anything else," Tillman said. "But above and beyond that, today's incident, I don't have a comment on it."

Lathon says playing against the Oilers defense will help the offense get more respect around the league.

Quarterback Warren Moon said he sees new resolve on the defense.

is now a scout for the Tampa Bay Buccaneers.

Jason signed with Dallas in 1992 and was on the team last year, earning a Super Bowl ring although he never played in a game. Judd was on the Cowboys injured reserve in 1990 and played for London of the World League for two years.

"It's fun to be with my brother at this camp," Judd said. "It helped that he was here last year and knows the offense. It helped me prepare for this camp."

Judd was the most impressive running back in the Cowboys Blue-White scrimmage, gaining 107 yards on 21 carries and scoring a touchdown.

Jason hit 10 of 12 passes for 136 yards and a touchdown.

"Judd's a tough runner and doesn't make many mistakes," Jason said. "But it's real tough for free agents to make it at running back in the NFL."

The elder Garrett has to put aside his fatherly pride when it comes to judging his sons on the field. He is also their agent.

"I just seem to follow wherever my brother goes," Judd said. "I followed him to Princeton and I followed him to the Cowboys. I'd like to follow him in getting a Super Bowl ring."

four hits in the game.

Said the coach: "Mark had one day's rest. He threw 114 pitches and then did what he did tonight."

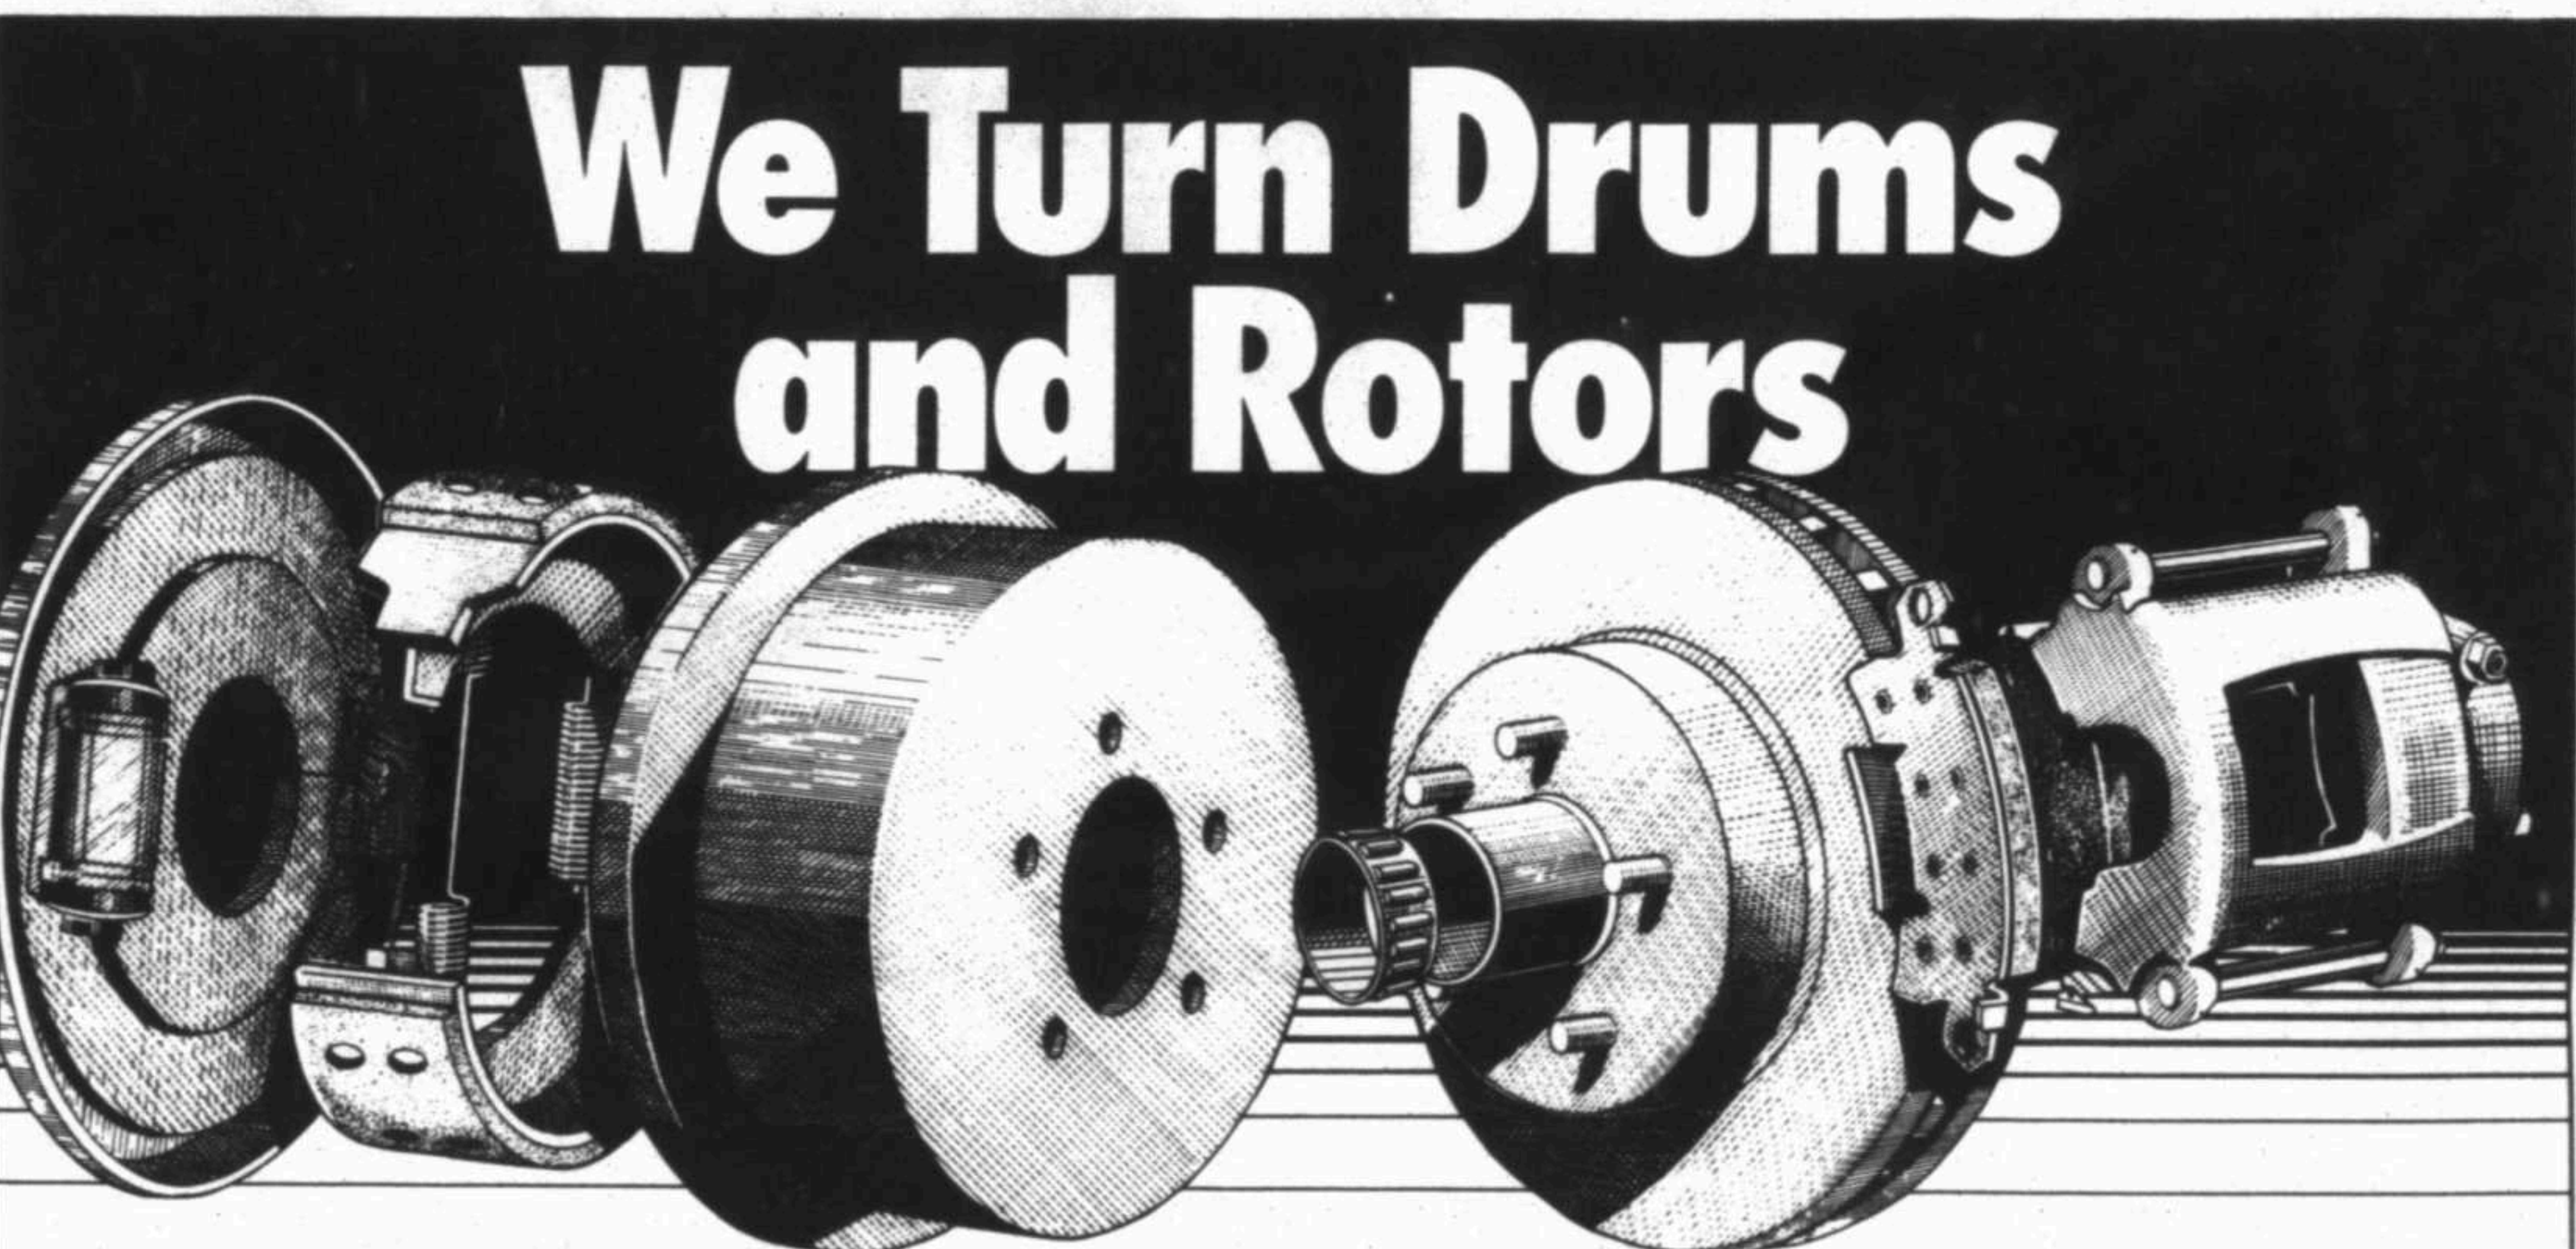

Midland's runs in the second game came when Watters single home Russell Dunlavy who had singled with one out. Benny Acosta's hit to left field was mishandled scoring Watters and Bo Garrison.

In the first game, Watters allowed six hits. The Americans broke out in front when Mark Holly reached on an error on the short stop and Jeff Perez singled. Holly scored on Cary Patteson's single and Phillip Attnip had two RBIs with another single.

Reggie Regala's RBI single in the third scored James Rose for Abilene's only run in the first game.

Midland's opponent in Waco will be determined later. The championship game in Waco is Tuesday.

DISTRIBUTORSHIPS
LOOKING FOR PART TIME JOB? HAVE WE GOT A DEAL FOR YOU

The Midland Reporter-Telegram has several distributorships which are available now.

Often Asked ???? Is it worthwhile for adults also?

Yes! Our current distributor force is already 90% adult and 10% youth.

Morning newspaper routes are attractive for:

● ADULTS who have F/T jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job.

● MOTHERS who can't justify a small job and daycare, because as a distributor, you do not need daycare!

● STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!

● SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added income, or just want to work with people, neighbors and friends.

How much money can I make as a distributor?

Depending on the size of distributorship from $300 to $700 monthly! Some make even more!

How long does it take?

The actual delivery takes 1-2 hours Monday-Saturday, and 2-3 hours on Sunday, again depending on the size of the distributorship.

Also, a few hours a month are needed to collect from subscribers. Many distributors choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in subscribers' papers.

Collecting in person will be necessary though!

When do papers have to be delivered by?

6 a.m. Monday-Friday and 7 a.m. on Saturday, Sunday and holidays.

Do I ever get a day off?

The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, distributors do take days off by finding a friend or a family member to substitute a for them!

RESERVE YOUR DISTRIBUTORSHIP NOW!

Carbo-Caffeine Lift?

If you are depressed, you are more likely to eat sweets, starches and caffeine. Probably as a self-medication to try to cheer yourself up, says Norman Rosenthal, a psychiatrist at the National Institute of Mental Health.

In a new study of 218 people, a surprising number of people with depression said they used coffee and carbohydrates to improve their concentration and pep them up, he says.

In fact, both depressed and normal persons reported using sugary and starchy foods to overcome sluggishness and poor concentration.

Does it work? Much research claims it works on certain depressed individuals. For example, Dr. Rosenthal found that sugary cookies, indeed, did energize people who have a type of winter depression known as SAD (seasonal affective disorder). But the same cookies made normal people drowsy. "We think there's a difference in brain chemistry," he explains.

So either lots of people are mistaken about a carbo lift, or lots of scientists are wrong. On the other hand, a caffeine lift, according to research, is true for most people, depressed or normal.

Coffee and pregnancy

Is caffeine off the hook as a cause of reproductive problems — miscarriages, birth defects, low-birth weight, infertility? Recent reports, including one at the National Institutes of Health, suggest there's little to worry about.

But Michael Bracken, M.D., Yale University School of Medicine, who recently reviewed the matter, says there is still reason for concern. There's virtually no evidence a pregnant woman need worry about caffeine-induced birth defects, he says. And there's no "compelling evidence" caffeine causes miscarriages or infertility.

On the other hand, the strongest reproductive caffeine hazard is curtailment of fetal growth. Research suggests that too much caffeine contributes to slower-growing fetuses and low-weight babies, he says.

Also the jury is still out on whether drinking caffeine harms sperm, promoting male infertility. Certainly, much more research needs to be done to find out, says Dr. Bracken.

His advice: If you are pregnant, avoid caffeine or restrict intake to under 300 milligrams a day — less than three cups of coffee.

Male menopause?

Is there a "male menopause"? Evidence shows many men undergo physical, psychological and hormonal changes in midlife, reports the August 1993 Reader's Digest.

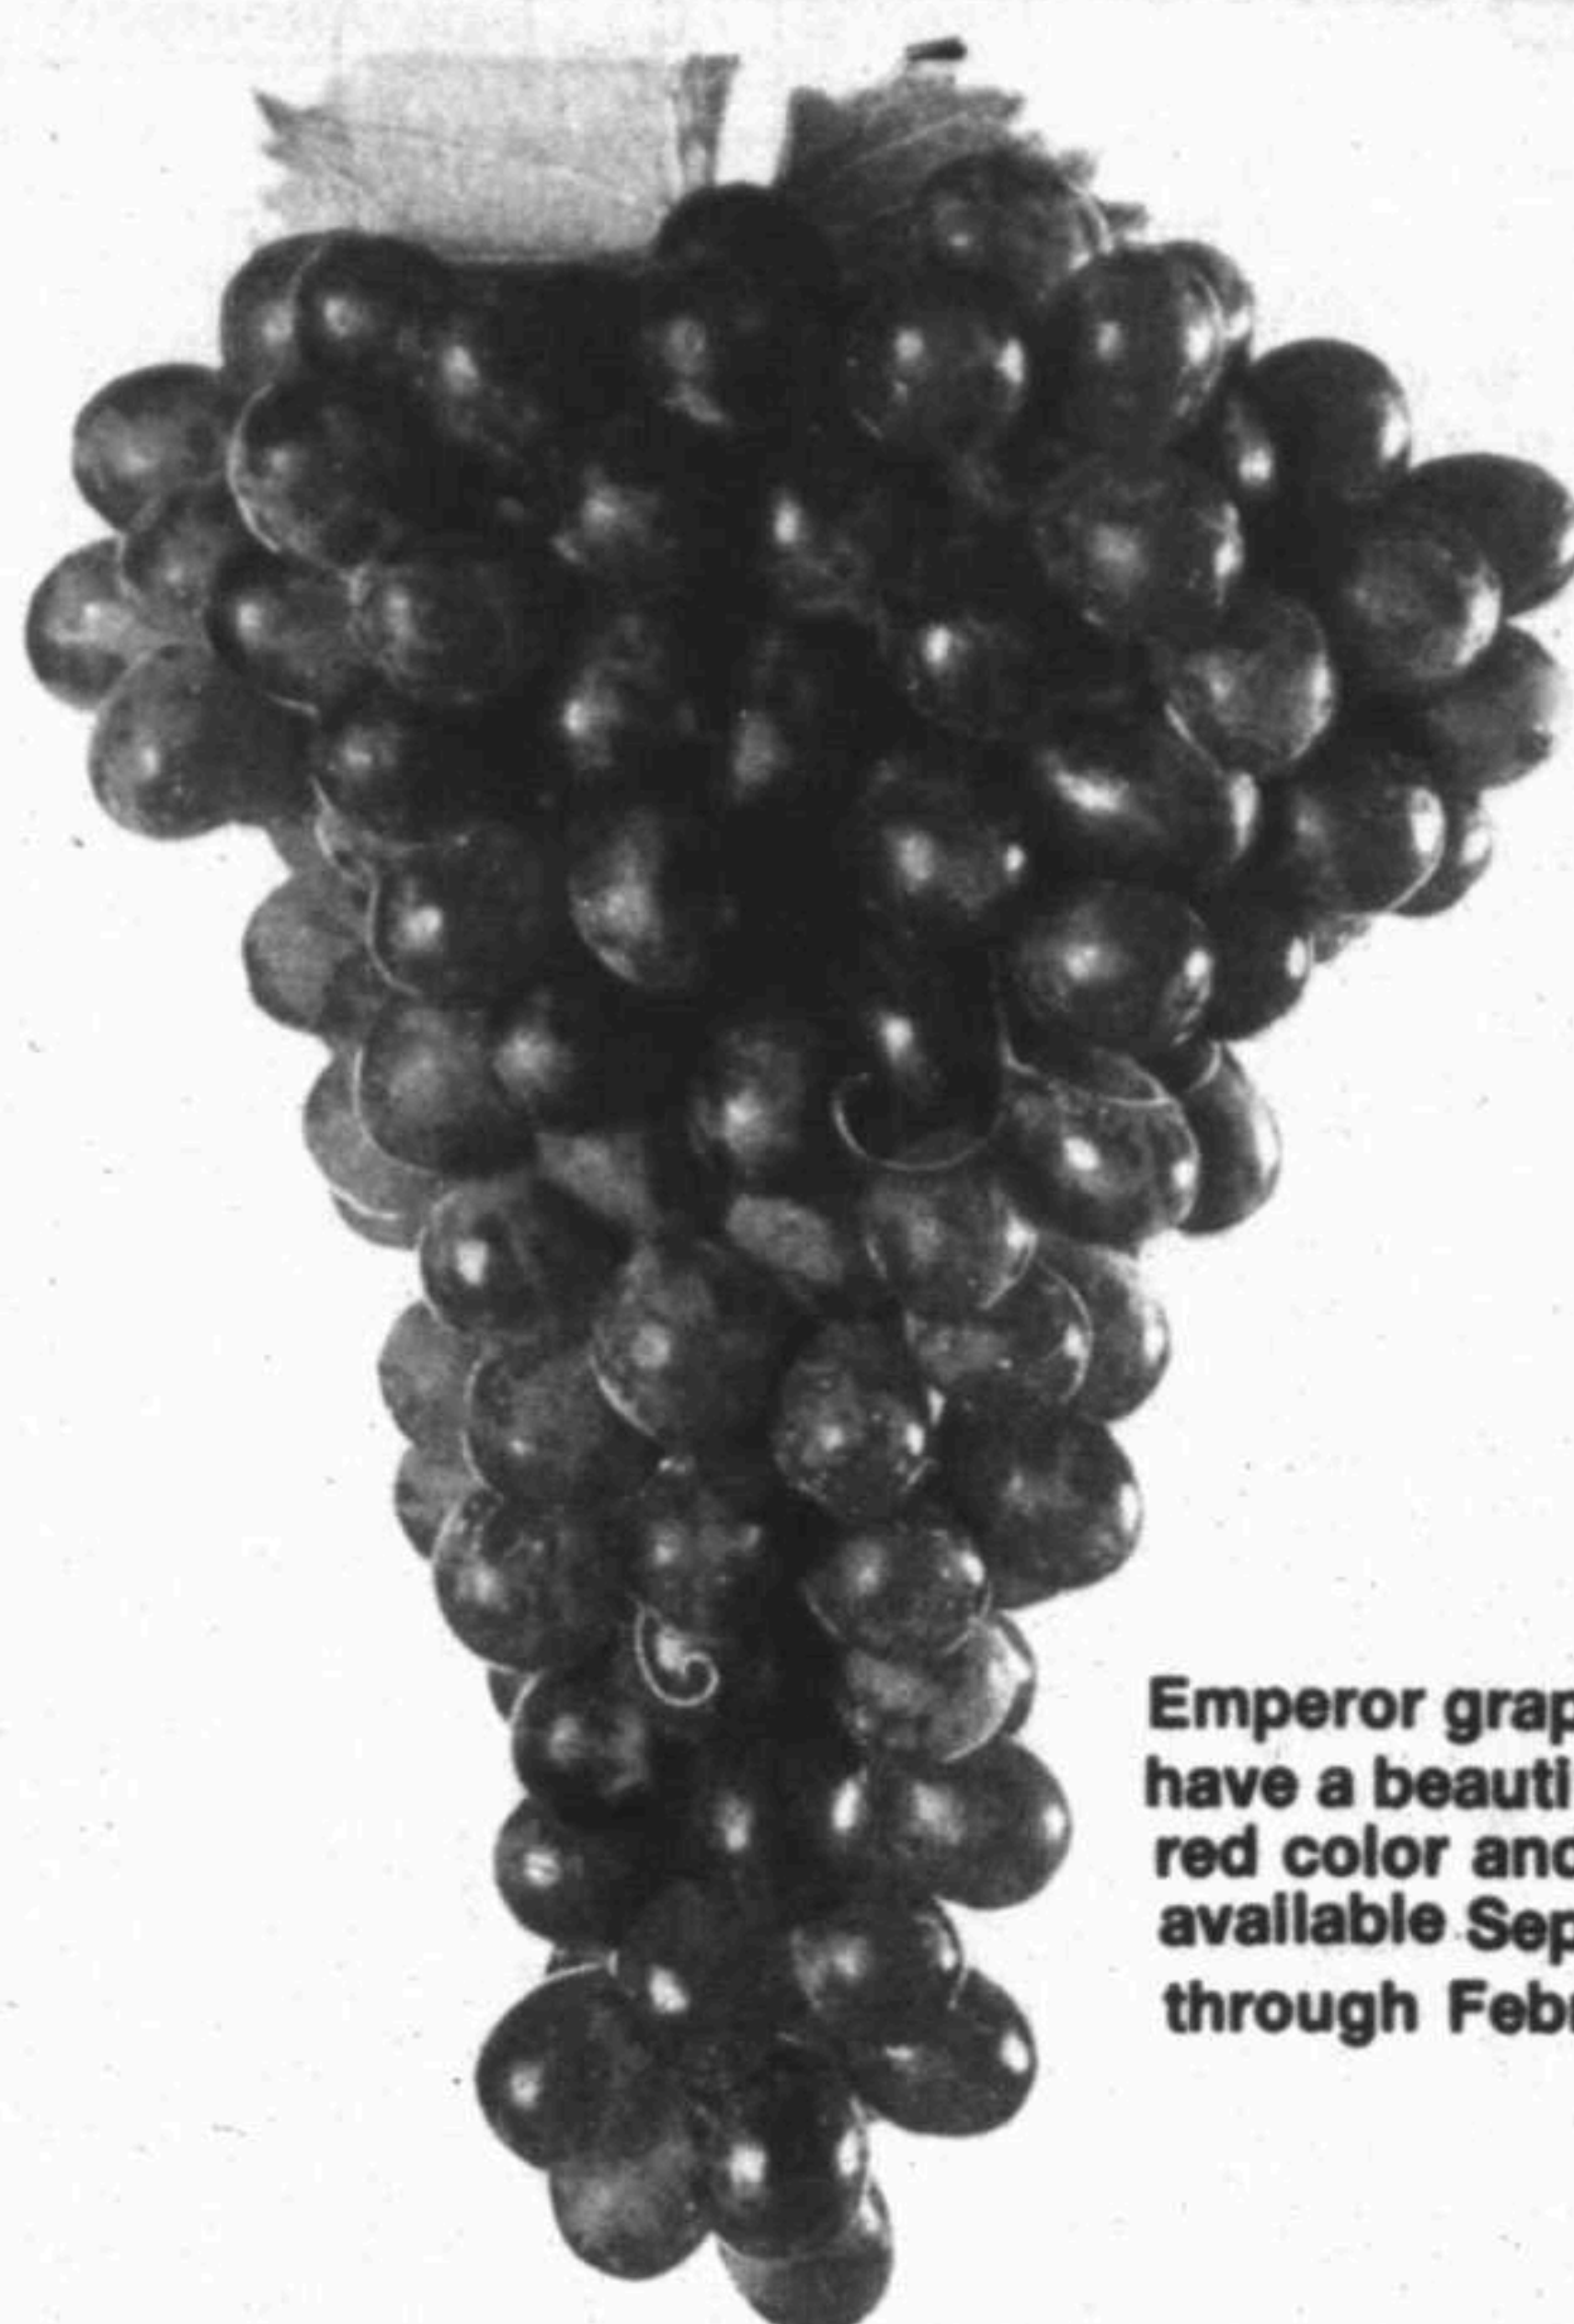

Sometime in his 40s, 50s or 60s, a man may notice a decrease in muscle mass and strength accompanied by lethargy, depression, irritability, mood swings and loss of a sense of well-being. He may also notice the first faltering of potency or a slackening of sexual desire.

What causes this lapse in potency? The culprit may be diabetes, hypertension, smoking high cholesterol or the side effects of certain prescription drugs. Chronic alcohol use and smoking can also be treacherous. And experts agree an important factor in maintaining potency is a secure, trusting relationship with an understanding partner.

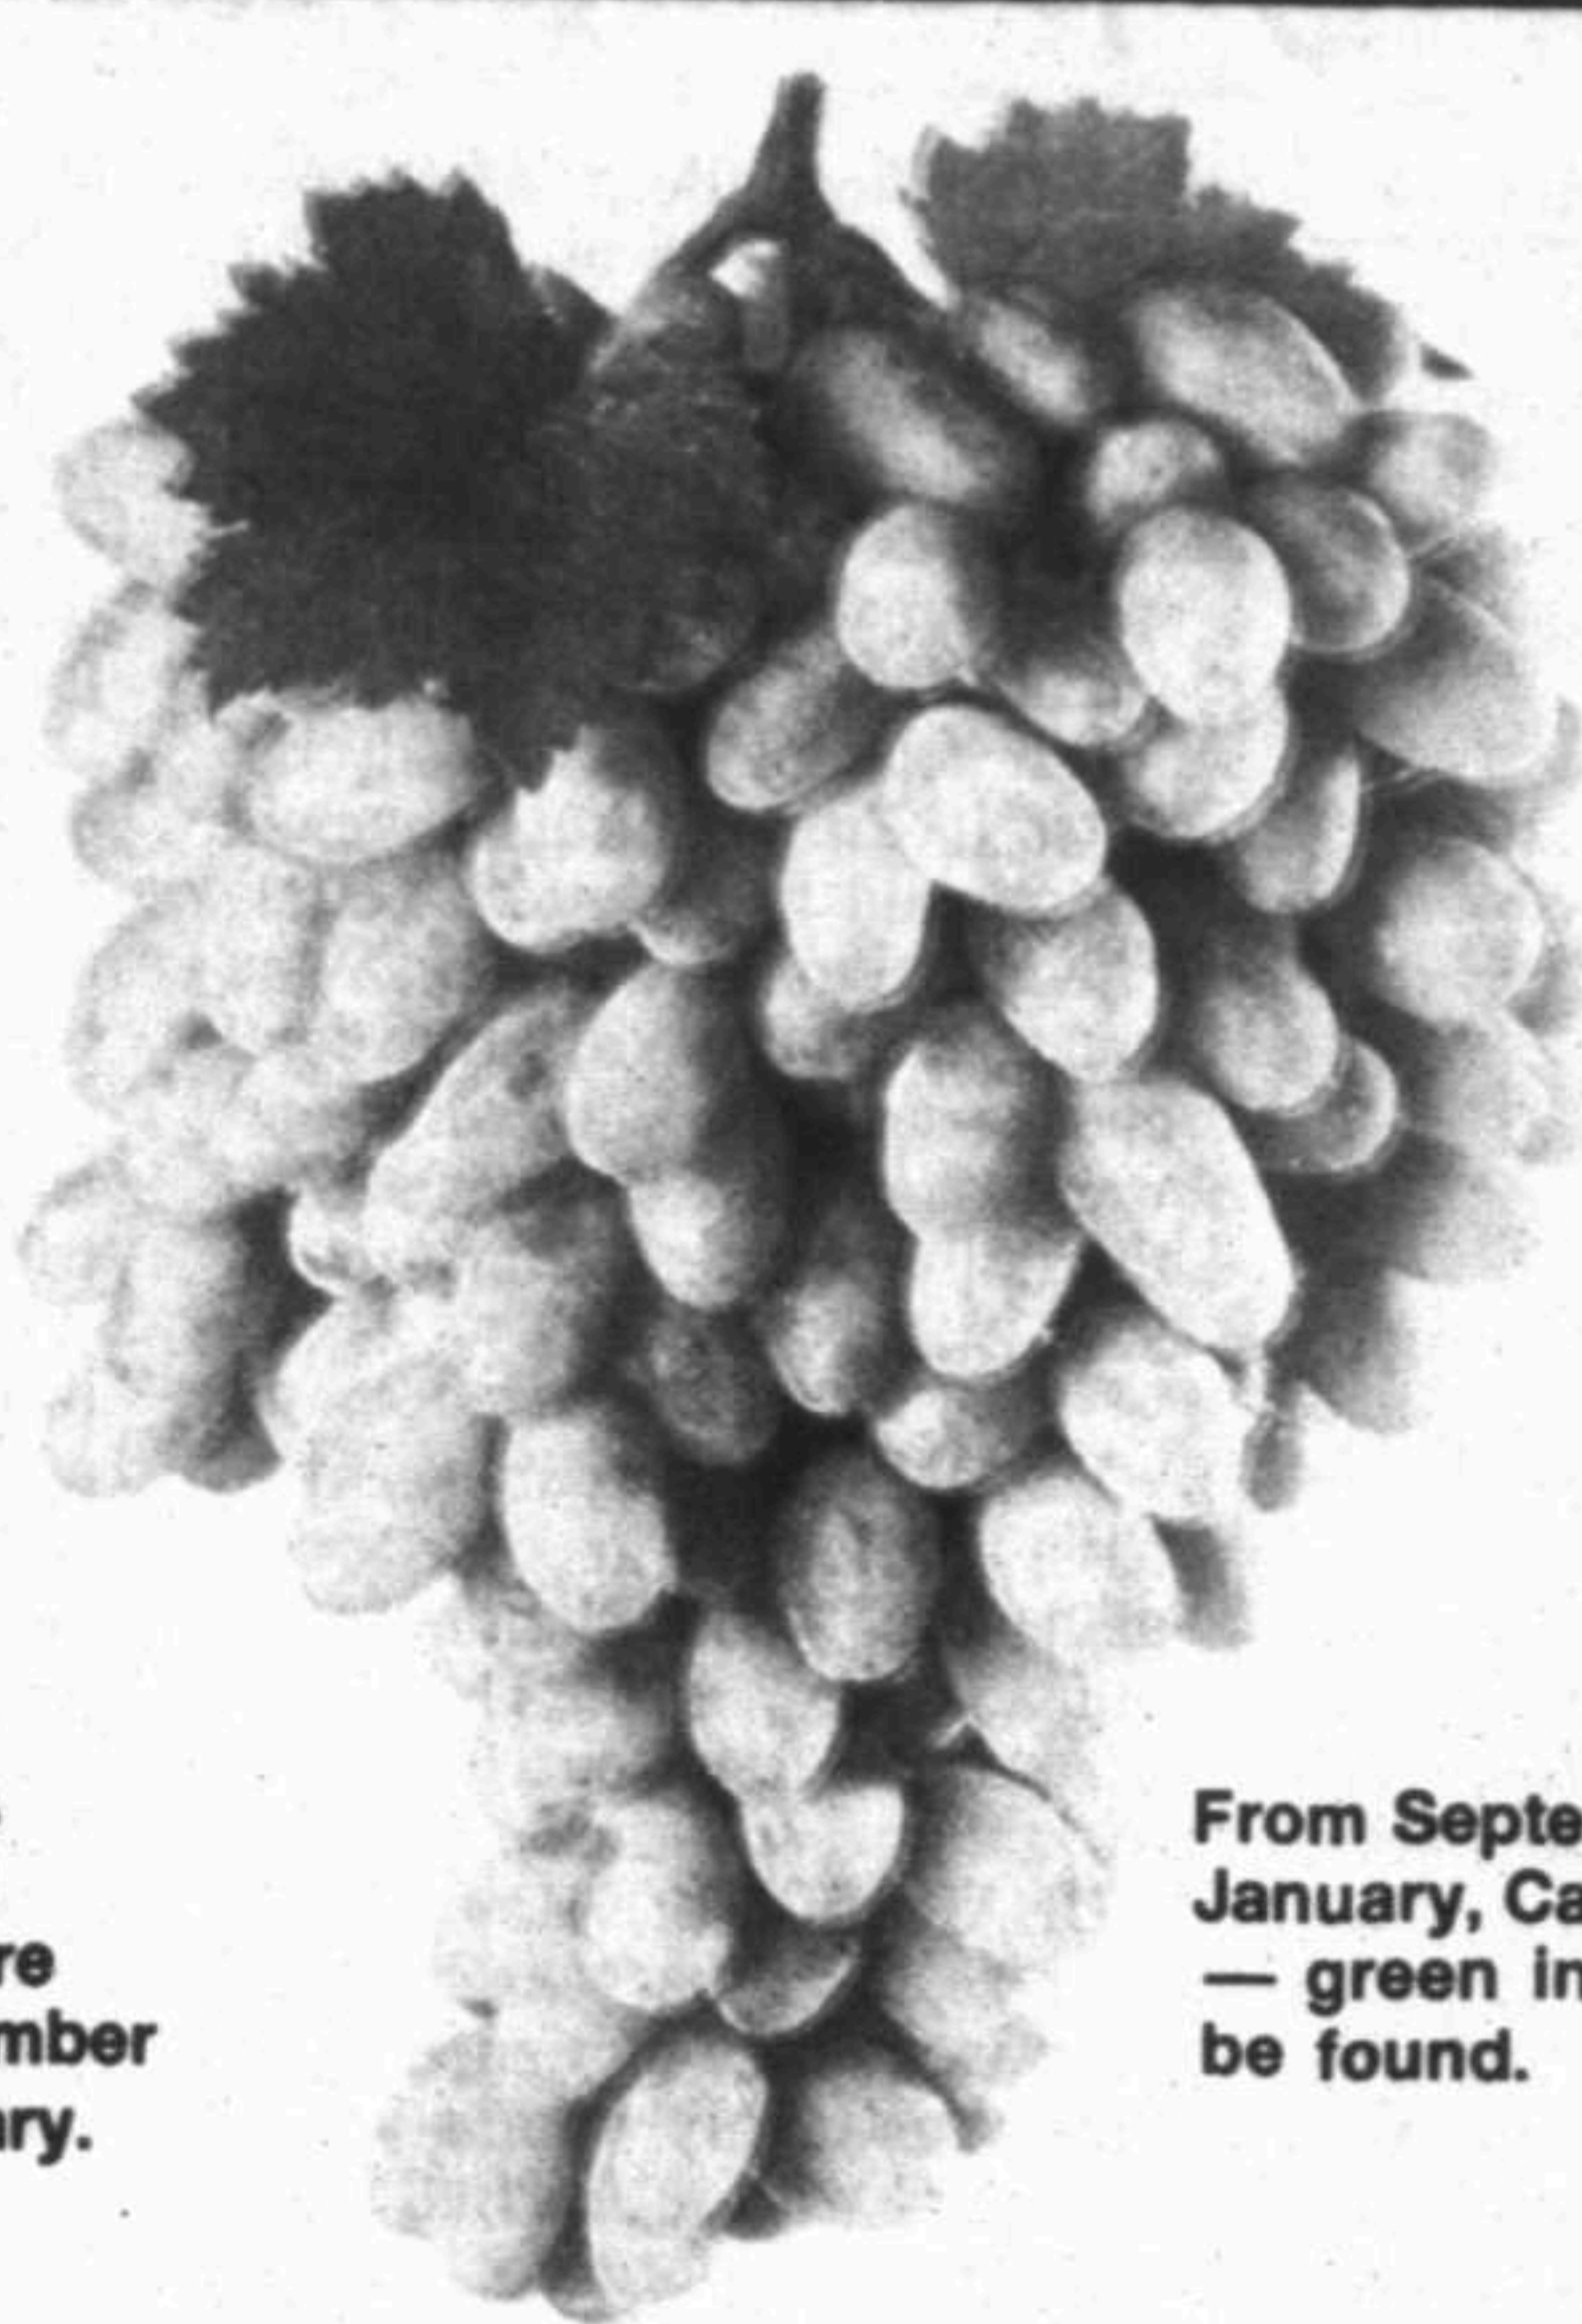

Sound footing

If you run or jog regularly, the August 1993 Reader's Digest recommends you pay attention to your shoes — especially if you ever get painful "shin splints." You may be suffering from medial tibial stress syndrome (MTSS). It is caused by repetitive stress to muscles, bones or tendons at the inner side of the lower leg, often sparked by running on hard or uneven surfaces with worn shoes.

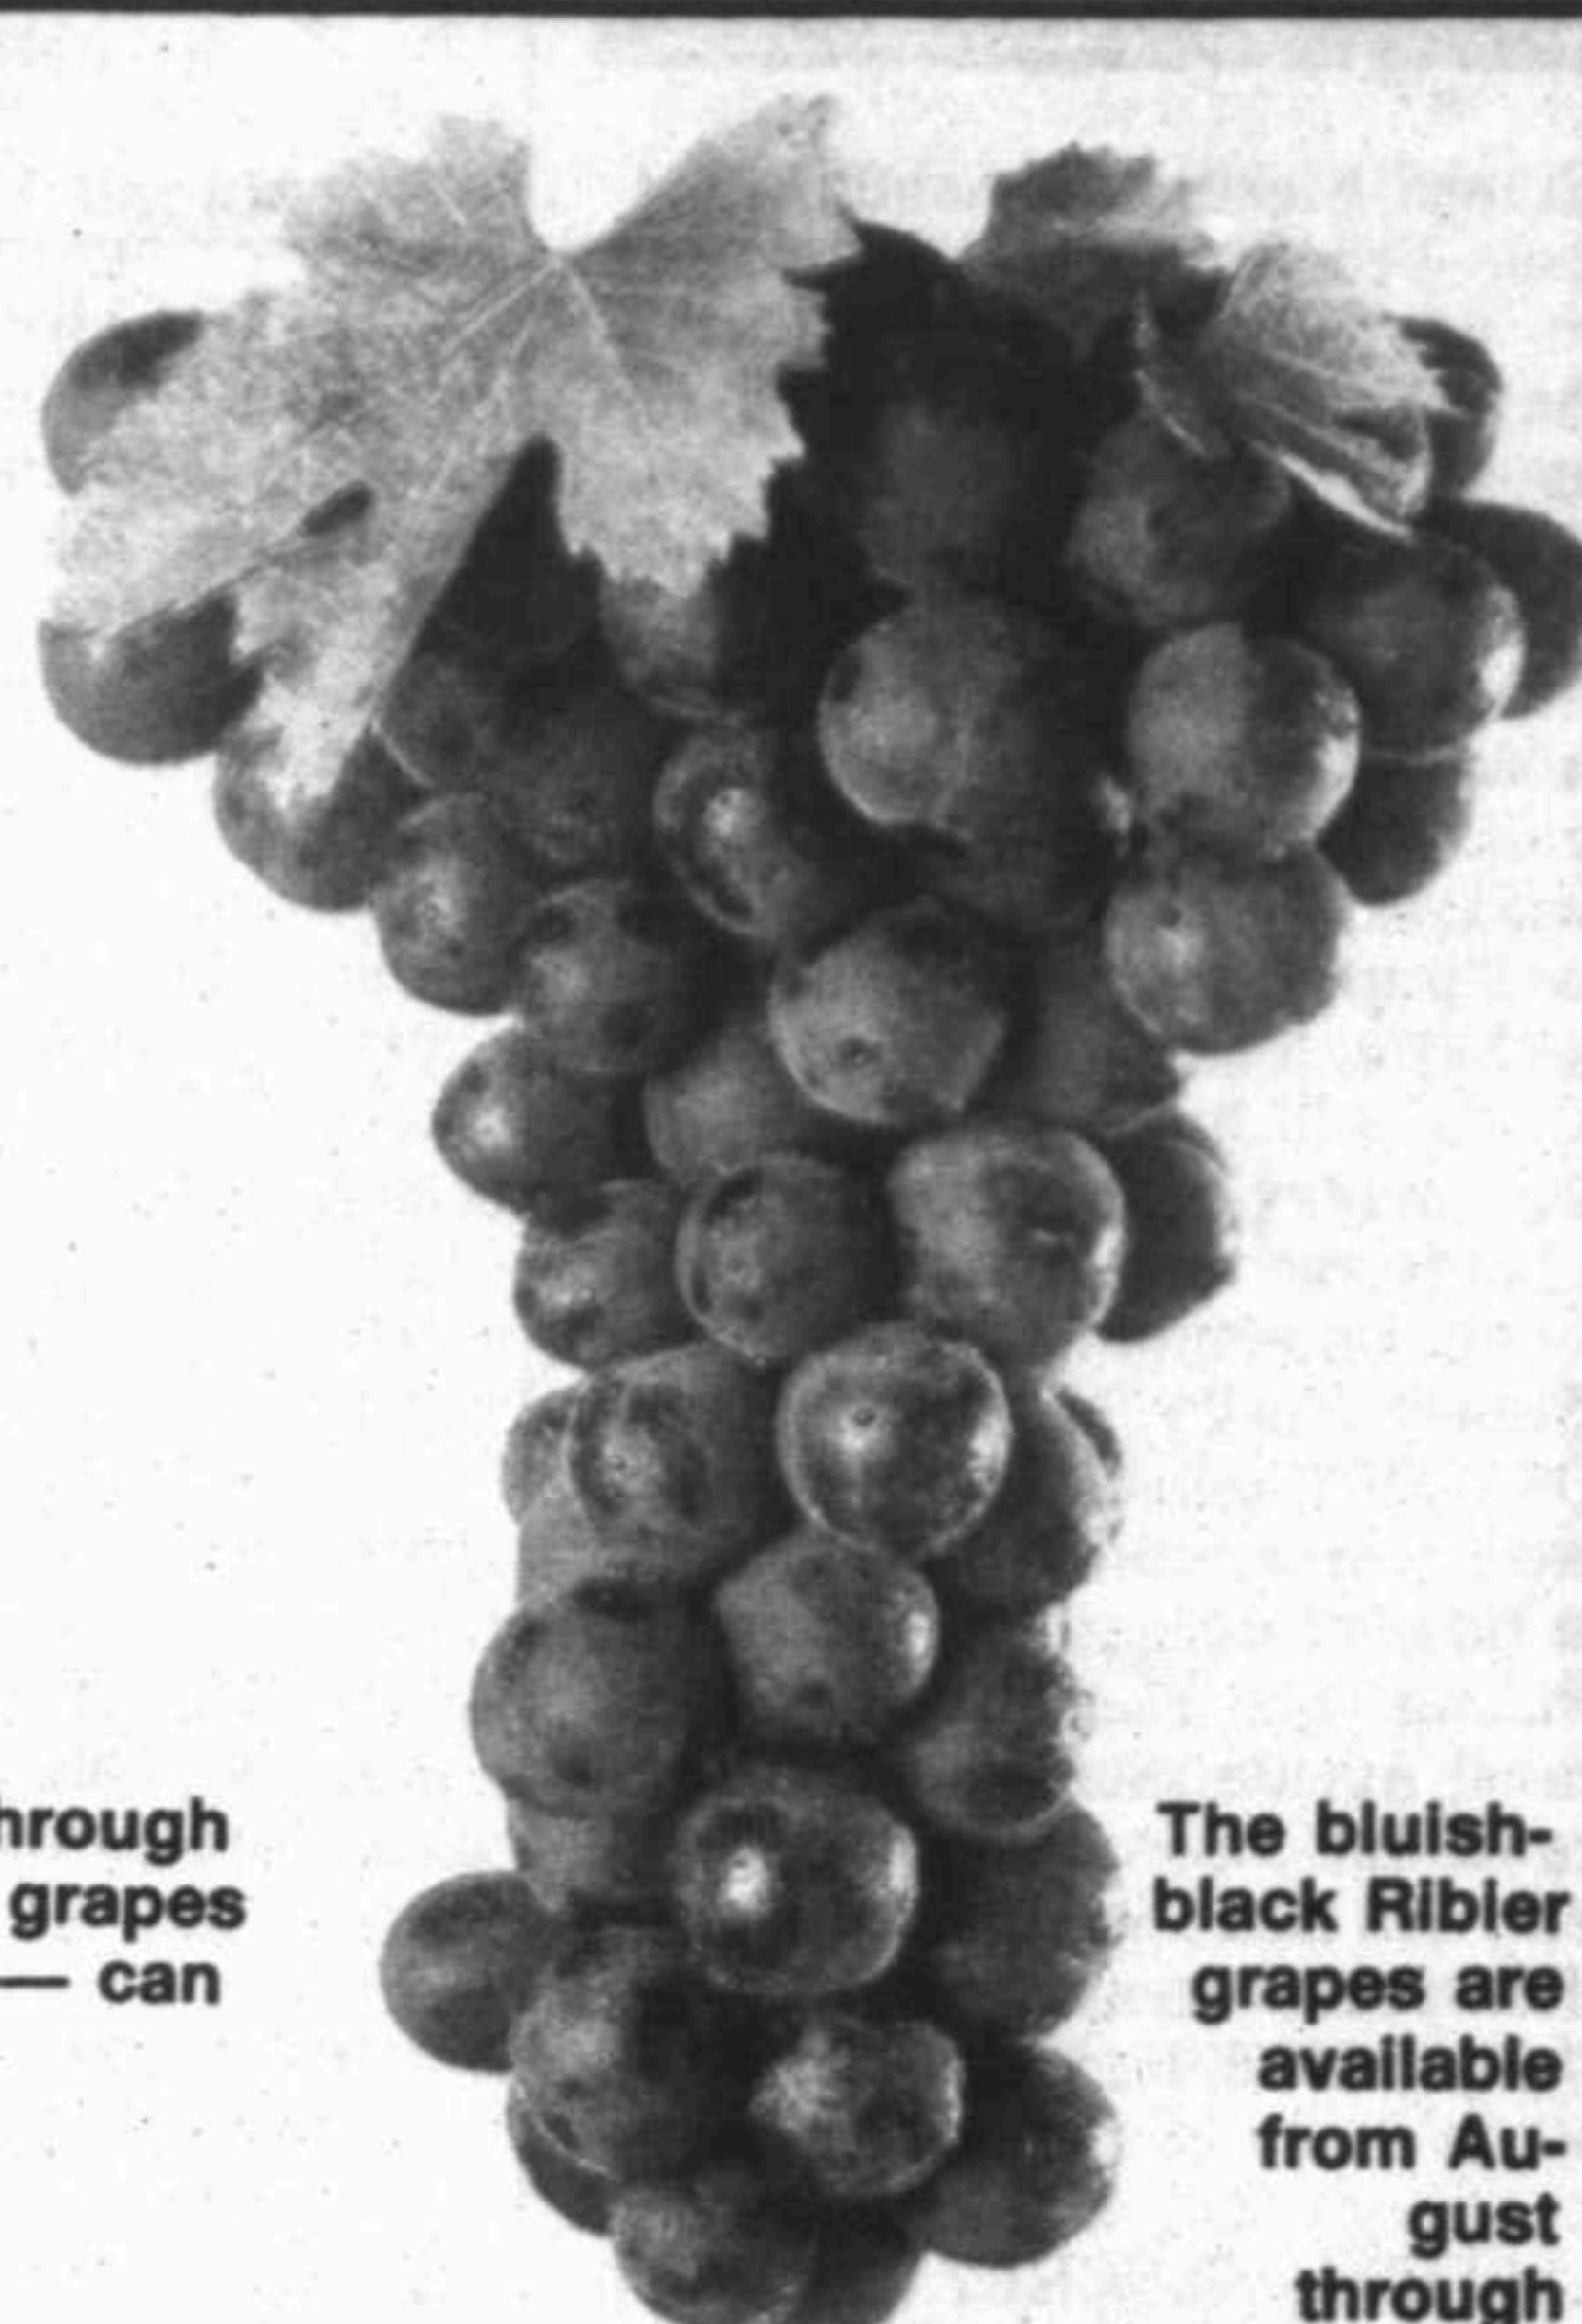

Athletic footwear loses much of its shock-absorbing capacity with wear, causing temporary discomfort with exercise and, in severe cases, MTSS as well. That's why running shoes should be replaced after clocking about 500 miles or yearly, whichever comes first. A useful tip: Alternate use of pairs of running shoes. This will ensure that your feet and legs are not subjected to the same stress every day.

Grape ideas to a healthy diet

By Elizabeth Edwin
Lifestyle editor

What's in "an apple a day?" That's a good question, according to the National Cancer Institute, the researchers there say, "Not enough."

While an apple a day is certainly helpful in terms of a healthy diet, the institute's public information program — 5 a Day for Better Health — concludes that Americans should eat at least five servings of fruits and vegetables each day in order to reduce the risk of cancer, heart disease, high blood pressure and diabetes, and to help control weight.

In addition to more fruits and vegetables, it also is important to include more whole grain products and eat less fat. Currently, two-thirds of health-related deaths in America are linked to the typical American diet, which is too high in fat and too low in fiber, fruits and vegetables.

While eating five fruits and vegetables a day may sound impossible, it really isn't as hard as it sounds. The folk at the California Table Grape Commission (CTGC) believe that many people simply don't understand what constitutes a serving. A serving can be one medium piece of fruit (or a 1½ cups fresh grapes, the commission pointed out), ½ cup of chopped fruit or vegetables, ¼ cup dried fruit or ¼ cup juice (with no sugar added) or 1 cup raw leafy vegetable. Chances are that many people may come closer than they think already on some days to eating the required amounts.

A way to lower the fat intake is to eat more foods from the plant kingdom and less from the animal (meat, poultry, fish and dairy products). Vegetables, fruits and grains are low in fat or contain no fat, while animal products are moderate to high in fat content, especially in saturated fat.

It also helps to incorporate fruits and vegetables into main dishes. The CTGC offers Grape Stuffed Cabbage Leaves as a suggestion.

"Each cabbage leaf is stuffed with a mixture of grapes, carrots, celery, onion, Mozzarella cheese and wild or brown rice, and topped with a savory mixture of tomatoes, grapes and minced garlic. One stuffed leaf is considered a serving — and it provides a Please see GRAPES/2D

On May 27, a manager of a bank branch in Redmond, Wash., was taken to the emergency room of the local hospital. He had not slept more than an hour on each of the previous 10 nights and had been acting so irrationally — preaching about visions of rapture and the true meaning of the Bible, screaming at his family — that he had been locked out of his office.

The cause of all this anguish turned out to be not some illegal substance bought on a dark street corner, or even the overuse of a prescription drug. It was an herbal dietary supplement that had been recommended to him by a friend at his health club.

The physician on duty was able to identify the cause of the man's bizarre behavior: ephedrine poisoning. Within three days, he was almost back to normal.

The bank manager had been taking the herbal formulation for about six weeks. For the first month, he felt no ill effects. But neither had he seen any of the promised weight loss or any improvement in his energy level. He decided to give the supplement, Lite and Rite Formula No. 1, another shot. Within two weeks he felt an increase in his energy level.

It was all downhill after that. The primary ingredient in Lite and Rite Formula No. 1 is an herb that is sometimes called ephedra, sometimes ma huang, sometimes pseudoephedrine. No matter the name, the chemical is ephedrine, a drug that can block allergic reactions, prevent shock and circulatory collapse, relieve bronchial constriction, restart the heart if it stops beating and provide quick energy. In other words, a potent drug, whether synthetic or natural.

In its natural form, ephedra has been used for 5,000 years to treat asthma. As with most drugs, the dosage determines whether it is harmless, therapeutic or lethal.

Dr. Robin R. Capwell, the physician in Redmond who treated the bank manager, said the drug is "chemically Please see HERB/3D

Freezing organs, chilling bodies not science fiction

By Lauran Neergaard

ATLANTA (AP) — Imagine surgeons draining every drop of blood from a patient, pumping the body full of "anti-freeze," then lowering the temperature until the heart stops — all to try to save a life.

Or having a frozen organ bank, where doctors could order from a huge supply of kidneys, livers and other spare body parts for transplants, thus eliminating the long — sometimes deadly — waiting period patients often endure today. It may sound like science fiction, but cryobiologists say these scenarios may someday become reality.

"We're not here because we're turned on by ice crystals," said Dr. Kelvin Brockbank of CryoLife Inc., which preserves heart valves by freezing them. "We're finding ways to get people fresh tissue and organs."

The science of freezing living tissue is popular in movies, like "Forever Young" with Mel Gibson, as a form of immortality — truly a fiction, cryobiologists say with a cringe.

But new medical uses of hypothermia Please see FREEZE/3D

Professor Richard B. Borgens, director of Purdue University's Center of Paralysis Research in West Lafayette, Ind., holds an oscillating field stimulator that has been implanted in paralyzed dogs to help regenerate damaged spinal-cord nerves. Borgens is looking at an X-ray of a dog's spine where the implanted device can be seen. The device has been licensed by an Indiana orthopedic manufacturer which hopes to develop a prototype for possible use in people.

Electric nerve stimulation may aid spinal cord repair

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Some humans paralyzed by accidents or disease might one day be helped by a small electrical device that has helped several crippled dogs walk again.

Battery-powered devices the size of a lipstick case were implanted in dogs paralyzed by spinal illness. The units passed a very weak electric current across the damaged part of the spinal cord, promoting regeneration of damaged nerve tissue, said Dr. James P. Toombs of Purdue University.

Damage to the spinal cord often is permanent because scars formed during the healing of injured nerve tissue typically block normal function. "The whole idea of electrical stimulation is to see if you can't reawaken the ability of that tissue to heal," said Toombs, director of the Purdue veterinary school's Center for Paralysis Research.

"The notion of using electrical stimulation comes from studies that show that development of the nervous system in the embryo is directed by weak electrical currents that are naturally occurring," he said.

Support group for headache sufferers encouraged

Staff report

The American Council for Headache Education (ACHE) has undertaken a new and exciting program to encourage the development of regional and community chapters across the U.S.

"ACHE support groups are designed to provide the headache sufferers and their families encouragement, moral support, and a means to better cope with their headaches. By working through the professional members of the American Association for the Study of Headache (AASH), the support groups will help to improve the already-established liaison between AASH health care professionals and headache sufferers," announced Fred D. Sheftell, M.D., chairman of the ACHE Support Group Committee.

"While ACHE support groups do not offer cures or recommend any particular form of treatment, they can be a valuable forum for patient empowerment, education and active involvement in the search for better therapies and treatment, and recognition from state legislators and the insurance industry," said Dr. Joel R. Saper, M.D., F.A.C.P., president of ACHE.

"As both a support group leader and a patient with migraine, I participated in the group experience as well. It is a wonderful feeling to know that you are not alone. The bonding comes naturally, for we all share the bottom line — we have debilitating headaches which have dramatically impacted the quality of our lives as individuals," said Marcia Seawell, president of the Rocky Mountain Headache Association.

"Combating the loneliness and isolation the typical headache sufferer feels is one of the most compelling reasons for forming or joining a support group," said Bill Ragsdale of the Florida Headache Foundation. "The feeling of being alone can be a daily experience for the headache patient whose debilitating pain is not understood or not taken seriously."

When headache sufferers contact the toll-free ACHE hotline — 1-800-255-ACHE) — they will receive ACHE membership information and will be put in touch with an already-established support group in their area or given information on how to start one.

As an additional benefit, members of ACHE receive the quarterly newsletter, "Headache," a list of American Association for the Study of Headache doctors in their area who are familiar with the illness, and ACHE educational brochures.

In addition to individual membership, ACHE welcomes support by other organizations, corporations and foundations.

The American Council for Headache Education is a nonprofit alliance between headache health professionals and headache sufferers, committed to the advancement of the understanding, treatment and management of headache; raising the awareness in our society and the health care field about headache, as well as replacing harmful myths with carefully researched facts.

DEAR ABBY

Love with a married man is mostly pain, little gain

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Five or six years ago, you printed two letters in the same column dealing with the hopelessness of being in love with a married man. Will you please print them again? I carried them in my wallet, but my purse was stolen.

NEEDS REINFORCEMENT

DEAR NEEDS: Wise is the woman who admits that she needs reinforcement; here they are:

DEAR ABBY: This is probably just like a million other letters you've received from women who have had affairs with married men. But this one contains a piece of advice that hasn't been emphasized nearly enough.

Last year I started seeing an absolutely fantastic guy from work. I knew he was married, but we played it cool and thought we could handle it. It was terrific while it lasted, but it had to come to an end. (The old story: We got too serious. He didn't want to hurt his wife and kids. Then he got "noble" and told me he couldn't allow me to invest any more time in a man who couldn't marry me.)

I'm not blaming anybody but myself. I'm a mature woman and should have known better. The moral to this story is: If you must have an affair, don't choose someone you will see at work every day. When it's over, the daily contact is torture. — STILL HURTING

DEAR STILL: You seem to have overlooked another "moral" or two: "Thou shalt not commit adultery" and "Thou shalt not steal." Read on:

DEAR ABBY: May I give your readers the benefit of my very valuable experience? I address this to any woman who is "in love" with a married man: Never expect to see him on Sundays or holidays.

Never call him at home. Don't ever expect him to take you out in public, but be prepared to entertain him at your place. He may bring a bottle of wine or the steaks occasionally, but in actual dollars and cents, you will spend more on him than he'll spend on you.

Never depend on him in times of personal crisis.

Don't believe him when he tells you his wife is a shrew, cold, homely, too fat (or too thin) and hasn't slept with him for 10 years.

Don't ever expect his wife to divorce him — even if she catches him. She knows you are not his first and won't be his last. Also, she is not about to give up her social status, financial security and retirement income because of you.

However, her discovery will probably terminate his affair with you, so be prepared to get some new clothes, circulate, and find another married man whose wife is a shrew, cold, homely, too fat (or too thin) and hasn't slept with him for 10 years. Sign me ... HIS WIFE

DEAR ABBY: Do you think married women dress to please their husbands? — MAZOOK IN S.F.

DEAR MAZOOK: If they do, they are wearing last year's clothes.

Convenient meatloaf just isn't like mom's

By Linda Anderson

Most of the new products written about in this column come under the definition of "convenience foods," mainly because most of the new foods introduced in supermarkets are convenience foods. And food manufacturers introduce hundreds of these new products each year.

However, sometimes I yearn for something with an old-fashioned appeal. That's probably why I bought a box of Dinty Moore American Classics Meat Loaf and Gravy (with, of course, mashed potatoes). My mom makes the world's best meatloaf, and when I was a kid it was one of my favorites.

American Classics are a line of microwaveable dinners that are packaged like frozen entrees but aren't. You can find them in the supermarket on the same aisle as canned entrees — but they aren't canned either.

A single-serving, 10-ounce package of the meat loaf and gravy cost $1.67, which is about the same as some frozen entrees cost, and less than others.

Since they aren't frozen, they take only a couple of minutes to heat in the microwave.

Label advertising uses memories as a selling tool: "Remember when dinner was called supper?" (Still is a my house) "And lunch was called dinner." (Nah, never) "And your Mom was the best cook in town." (Still is.)

"Her secret? Honest American food." (That and the fact that many moms didn't have to go to work at an office, and had time to cook "honest American food" for their families.) "Tasty, satisfying dishes enjoyed throughout the land."

"Now they've inspired Dinty Moore American Classics microwave meals. From the same folks who make the nation's favorite beef stews." (Actually, my mom does that too.)

"Try all the Dinty Moore American Classics microwave meals. All in single servings you can microwave in two minutes."

"Welcome home. To Dinty Moore American Classics microwave meals."

After all that verbiage, I figured the meat loaf and gravy would taste really good.

I was wrong.

In her worst nightmares, my mother would never make a meat loaf that tasted like that — totally processed and completely artificial.

I would like to report that one of these new products that I keep testing really do taste like their advertising says they do, and maybe some day I will.

So far that hasn't happened.

Price listed is from a local supermarket. Prices at other locations may vary.

Health problems should wear visible ID

By Jean Carper
Associated Press

If you have a heart condition, suffer from diabetes, or have a particular allergy problem, you might consider wearing a Medic-Alert or similar ID bracelet, card or tag that lists your health problems.

People who suffer traumatic injuries in a car accident or fall are often unable to tell doctors about their health problems or medications at the time. Or just being in an emergency situation can make people forgetful. Many of these IDs also provide a telephone number physicians can call to obtain a patient's health records.

FREEZE: Fiction becoming reality are in sight thanks to the development of biological antifreezes, according to the 400 members of the International Society of Cryobiology, which met here last week.

Doctors already freeze heart valves and bone marrow — fairly simple organs — for later use and cool patients by 20 degrees to slow body functions during open-heart surgery.

But they can't freeze large organs without killing them. Even the fairly mild cold used during heart surgery thickens blood dangerously.

Using cold to produce a state of suspended animation in patients could give surgeons valuable time. Vital cells die after only an hour on a heart-lung machine, for example.

It also may allow blood — which often blocks the surgeon's view — to be drained from a patient during surgery.

In a recent experiment, Dr. Mike Taylor of Allegheny General Hospital in Pennsylvania pumped the blood out of 11 dogs, replaced it with a clear preservative and chilled the dogs to 45 degrees — so cold their hearts and brains stopped. The preservative — sugars and body chemicals — kept oxygen flowing to the cells and protected them from the cold.

Several hours later, he warmed them up, returned their blood and woke them up. Three died of complications several days later, but eight have survived for four months with no side effects.

He said trauma surgeons are already asking about the procedure. If it works as well on hemorrhaging dogs, he expects clinical trials on trauma patients soon.

"There's no doubt it's radical," he said. "But you've got to get the blood out of the way without hurting cells ... to succeed in some surgeries."

"There's a slightly gruesome aspect to it all. But it could be very helpful," said Dr. David Pegg, director of a tissue bank in Cambridge, England.

Scientists also predict an organ bank — where large organs would be frozen, stored and thawed whenever a doctor scheduled a transplant — could be about 10 years away.

Key is perfecting the biological antifreezes. Preservatives used now to freeze heart valves and bone marrow aren't strong enough to prevent ice crystals from destroying the blood vessels that feed larger organs.

"It's the same way antifreeze works in your car radiator," Pegg said. "It reduces the amount of ice that's formed and lowers the freezing temperature."

An organ bank would help alleviate the chronic shortage for transplants. Because organs begin deteriorating as soon as someone's heart and brain cease functioning, doctors now have only a few hours to transplant after someone dies.

The time constraint also means doctors can't stop to ensure a good tissue match, meaning some transplants fail and other patients have to take massive anti-rejection drugs.

"More time — increasing that window — is the key," Brockbank said.

HERB: Dietary supplements should have warning labels almost identical to amphetamine." In low, infrequent doses it is a stimulant and appetite suppressant. In higher or more frequent doses, Capwell said, it may cause irritability, purposeless activities, poor judgment and impulsiveness.

"With little or no sleep," he said, "the brain starts making mistakes, but the person may still feel fine. Later, even on moderate but regular doses, the big problems start. Grandiose ideas, wild plans. Rage. Then overt psychosis with delusions of power and omnipotence, and visions or voices."

Lite and Rite is not listed with directory assistance in Port Angeles, Wash. No one answered when phone calls were placed to the company at the number provided by the Washington state attorney general's office, which is investigating the company on an unrelated matter.

The dietary-supplement industry blames the Food and Drug Administration's regulations for the lack of labeling on many products.

If warning labels are included, the agency can more easily find justification to categorize the supplement as a drug and remove it from the market because it has not been fully tested for safety and efficacy. If no claims are made, and if there are no warning labels, the manufacturer can claim the dietary supplement is a food. That means it requires no testing before it is marketed and that there are no quality controls.

THE FDA would like to have more authority to reduce the number of cases like the bank manager's. It is seeking legislation that would let it remove from the market dietary supplements that make unapproved health claims, though the industry insists that self-regulation is sufficient.

There are dozens of dietary supplements on the market that contain ephedrine in both large and small amounts. The uses are varied: relief of sinus and hay-fever congestion, weight loss, energy boosting.

Some products containing ephedrine give information on their use as well as warnings not to exceed recommended dosage and not to take the product if you suffer from heart disease, high blood pressure or thyroid disease, if you are pregnant or nursing or if you are taking medication for high blood pressure or depression.

But there are liquid, pill and dried-herb forms of pure ma huang with no label information about their use or potential side effects.

Many people who take ma huang are privy to an extensive underground of information about herbal remedies, much of it from books, much of it passed on by health food store employees. For these people, informative labeling may not be needed.

"Drug addicts know all about where to get legal speed like ephedrine, or ma huang," Capwell said. "In some ways, they're smarter than the rest of us. At least they know what they are buying, and why, and are quite familiar with the side effects."

PEOPLE LIKE the bank manager had no idea. Nothing supplied with the compound he was taking indicated that it might be hazardous to a normal healthy person.

On a bottle of ma huang from Herbs Etc., a Santa Fe, N.M., company that makes liquid herb compounds, there were neither claims nor warnings. The label simply said to keep it out of reach of children.

"We don't have a choice," said Daniel Gagnan, president of Herbs Etc. "I can't put a warning on the label," Gagnan said. "If you make a claim, the FDA will seize it."

Asked whether his company had some responsibility for warning people about the side effects of ma huang, Gagnan said: "I feel this is a lynch-mob type of question. I have no more responsibility than a prune manufacturer," a reference to the fact prunes have laxative properties and so could also be considered drugs.

Frank Lampe, editor of the Natural Foods Merchandiser, an industry magazine, said: "There are companies in the industry that do not inform their customers. It is totally irresponsible to have a product on the market without a warning label."

The dietary-supplement industry is up in arms over the agency's efforts to increase its sway over supplements. It prefers self-regulation, a process that those outside the industry say has not worked so far. And there are even a few inside who agree.

"The industry says it is regulating itself," said Mark Ordan, an owner and the president of Fresh Fields, a chain of 12 natural-foods supermarkets with stores in the Baltimore-Washington area and Chicago. But he does not think it is doing so effectively. He has removed a number of dietary supplements from his markets because, he said, "on many of the items, the labeling is misleading." He gave as examples weight-loss products and energy-enhancing products that contain stimulants.

DEVICE: Regeneration of nerve tissue possible

(From 1D)

"Will it, alone, be responsible for curing all cases of paralysis? No, but it could really make a difference in terms of people getting function back," Toombs said Tuesday from his office at Purdue in West Lafayette.

The findings by a team from the paralysis center are to be published in the August issue of the Journal of Restorative Neurology.

The research is somewhat controversial because scientists don't know what causes the healing, said Dr. Wise Young, a spinal cord injury researcher and professor of neurosurgery at New York University Medical Center.

"It's exciting," he said. "I don't think the answer is in yet about whether it will work in humans. But I support the research."

Toombs and a team of Purdue researchers worked with 24 dogs during 1988-91. The animals had completely paralyzed back legs caused by intervertebral disc rupture, in which the spinal cord is damaged by the pressure of fluid from a ruptured disc.

Accidents and injury, not disc problems, are responsible for most human paralysis.

Eleven of the dogs were used as a control group. Of the 13 who were given the device, seven were able to walk again six months later.

A new study to be conducted next month with 30 dogs will use a more sophisticated electrical unit.

The researchers hope to then get approval from the Food and Drug Administration for human tests at three to six major university hospitals.

Your Horoscope

By Jeane Dixon

WEDNESDAY, JULY 28, 1993

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Your fortunes change for the better. The financial future looks brighter than ever! A close relationship moves in a more promising direction. Be less critical. Hidden facts begin to surface in late fall. Your career surges ahead. Curb an urge to be a "showboat." Adopting a lower profile will help you land a leadership position once 1994 gets under way. Welcome an opportunity to perfect your parenting skills.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: Sen. Bill Bradley, actress Georgia Engel, singer Rudy Vallee, former first lady Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A banker, credit agency or employer is willing to invest in you. You are able to obtain special favors and get promises in writing. Flexibility is the answer to a partnership stalemate.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): It pays to get your ducks — duties, schedule and calls — in a row. Then, instead of being run by events, you will be leading the parade. Dress conservatively for a formal function.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A sense of urgency makes timely decisions and communications vital. Weighing the costs now will prevent regrets later on. Stay upbeat if discussing problems with teen-agers.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A purchase or offer that looks like a peach of a deal may be a lemon; closely inspect the goods. A period of reflection gives you a handle on a tricky situation.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Your reach extends to new people and places in a positive way. A financial account, personal or joint, needs a checkup now and then to ensure it is in good health.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): "Busy" is your byword today — you hit the ground running. Look to work duties, VIPs or influential friends to provide the fuel to fire up your dreams.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): At work, step out of the shadows and reveal your creative genius. Guard against pushing yourself too hard mentally or physically. An evening of fun will provide a needed change of pace.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A new romance could cause conflict at work. Influential people seek your advice, knowing that you will not lead them astray. Exciting employment opportunities arise.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): This morning's events will give you cause for reflection. You can find more efficient ways to accomplish your goals. Focus on saving time and money.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Money may be a bit of an obsession now. Work on boosting your productivity and the funds will follow. Being patient with those in authority will give you an edge at promotion time.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Your timing is excellent today. You sense when to apply pressure and when to pull back. Seek a better balance in your work relationships. Investigate higher education opportunities.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Your timing is excellent today. You sense when to apply pressure and when to pull back. Seek a better balance in your work relationships. Investigate higher education opportunities.

TODAY'S CHILDREN will keep things lively both at home and in public. They have a quick sense of humor and often use wit to get what they want. Although these Leos have excellent minds, they may not be intellectuals. In fact, they are known for their "street smarts." Building a financial fortune and having a loving home life are equally important to them. Nesters by nature, they want a home and children of their own.

 When your opponents try to push you around in the auction, you must teach them a lesson. The way to do that is extract the maximum penalty.

Since the hand might belong to North-South, North doubled five clubs for takeout, showing the major suits—a development that did not thrill South. South was prepared to play five hearts undoubled, but not doubled—hence the retreat to six diamonds when West wielded the ax.

East-West could have scored 920 for bidding six clubs, though they were certainly not getting there had South passed. Even with a diamond lead declarer need only win, cash the ace and king of hearts, come to hand with the ace of trumps and discard a diamond on the queen of hearts.

Thus, four down or more from six diamonds doubled would yield a profit.

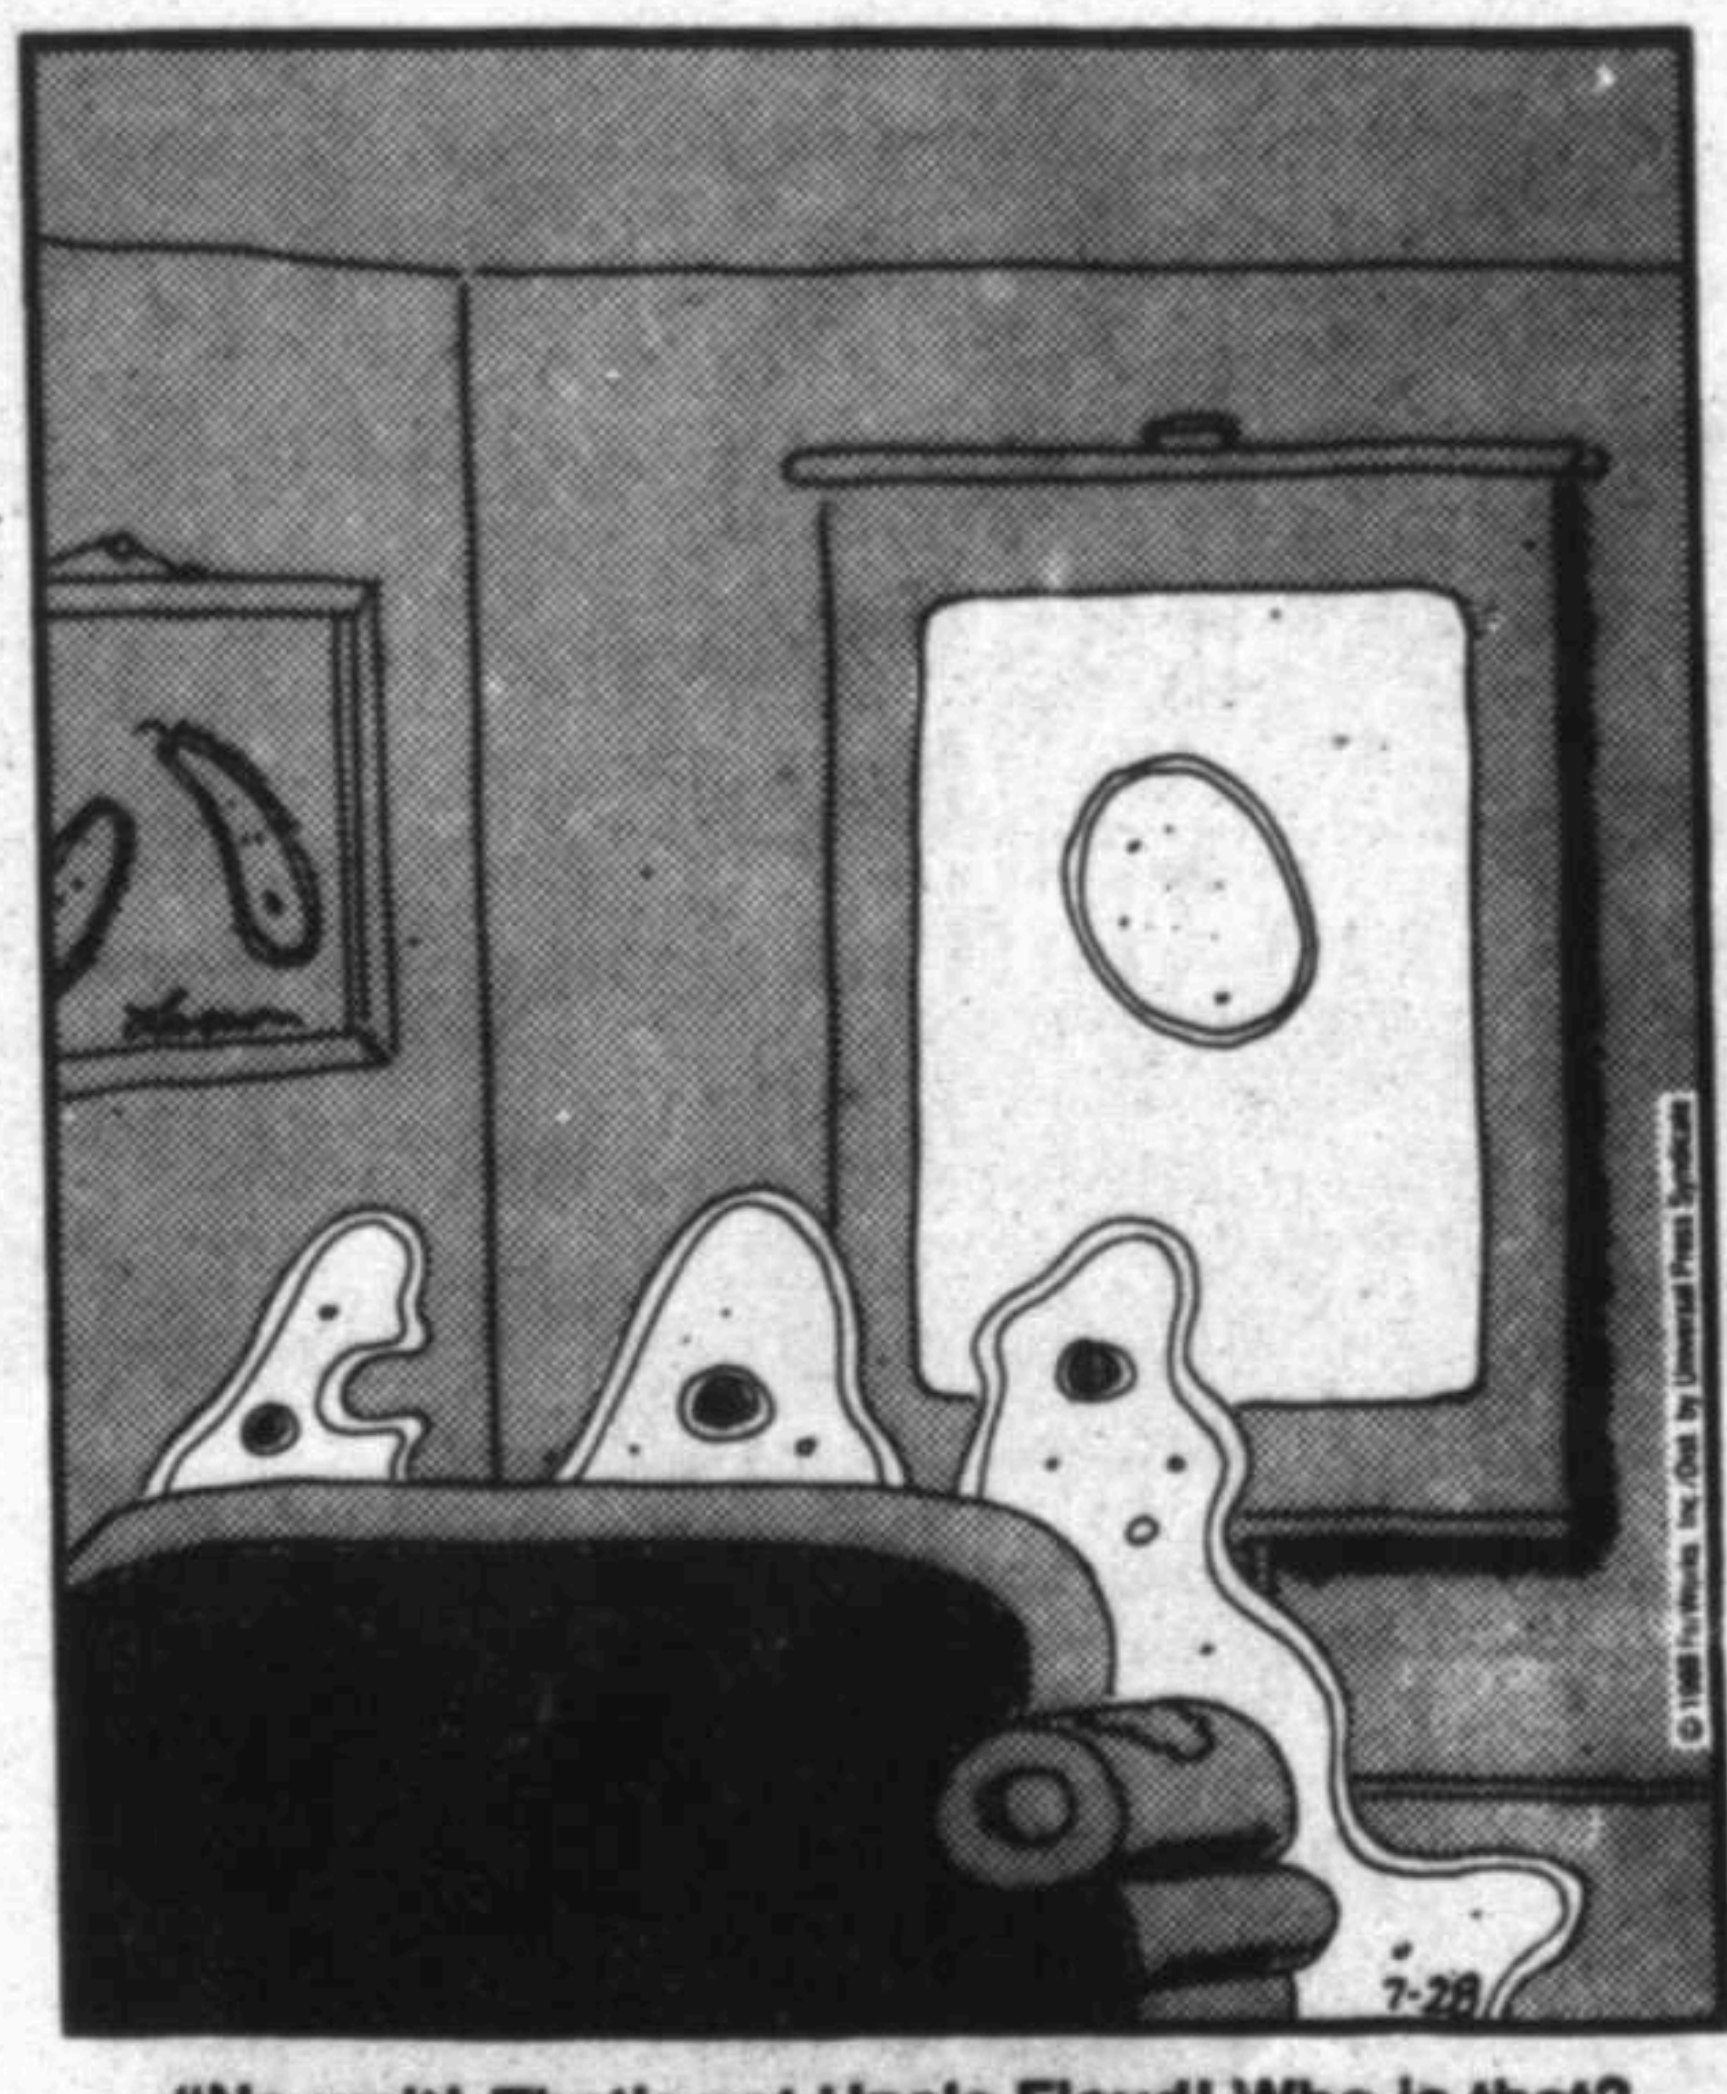

Sitting East-West were Chicagoans Peter Nagy and Howard Weinstein. On the ace of spades lead declarer falsecarded with the eight, leaving West in doubt as to who held the singleton spade. The shift was to the diamond ace and East followed with the nine, a suit preference for spades. West reverted to a spade, ruffed by East who returned a heart.

West took two heart tricks, then put declarer on lead with a trump. At the end, declarer had to lead a club away from K x allowing the defenders to take two tricks in the suit for a penalty of 1,700. Ouch!

Princess Diana to introduce son Harry to royal duties on day-trip

LONDON — Princess Diana wants to introduce her youngest son, Prince Harry, to royal duties with a day-trip to Germany.

Diana told a hospice patient on Tuesday she wanted to take Harry, 8, to review one of the British regiments of which she is honorary colonel-in-chief.

"Harry likes the uniforms and all things military," she said. Diana did not say when she hoped to make the trip but promised neither Harry nor his brother, William, 11, will be rushed into public life.

"They are not going to be pressurized into doing royal duties too much," she said. "They are going to be broken in gently." Diana's estranged husband, Prince Charles, is heir to the British throne. William is second in line.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Dennis Weaver was at the reins for a cable TV special that featured a gathering of legendary country music stars.

"A Tribute to the Singing Cowboy," made for the Nashville Network, features appearances by Gene Autry, Roy Rogers and Dale Evans.

"It was great to be part of such a historic event," said Weaver, known for his TV roles in "Gunsmoke" and "McCloud."

The program scheduled for broadcast Monday mixes vintage film clips, nostalgic anecdotes and performances.

Guests include actors Buddy Ebsen and Lee Horsley and singers Clint Black, Emmylou Harris and Dwight Yoakam.

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — TV preacher Jim Bakker, convicted of bilking millions of dollars from his followers, won't get out of prison early, the U.S. Parole Commission ruled Tuesday.

"This was his last available remedy, so at this point in time, he will be serving his sentence to expiration," said Mark Sakaley, a spokesman for the U.S. Justice Department.

Two of the commission's examiners had recommended earlier this year that Bakker be released in December, but the proposal was rejected during a meeting in Washington. Tuesday's decision came following an appeal of that rejection.

Bakker, 53, is scheduled for release in October 1994, said his attorney, Jim Toms. "When you lose your liberty, every day is precious," Bakker said in a statement Toms read.

Bakker was convicted here in 1989 of defrauding contributors to the PTL ministry he founded. He was first sentenced to 45 years in prison, but the sentence was later reduced to eight years.

LOS ANGELES — Actress Kelly LeBrock and martial-arts screen star Steven Seagal are parents again.

The couple's third child, daughter Arissa Seagal, weighed 7 pounds at birth Saturday at an undisclosed Los Angeles hospital, publicist Paul Bloch said Tuesday.

"They are home now and they are doing real good, real healthy," Bloch said.

LeBrock, star of "The Woman in Red" and "Weird Science," married Seagal in 1987. He is the star of such films as "Under Siege" and "Above the Law." They also have a daughter, Annalisa, 6, and a son, Dominick, 3.

LOS ANGELES — Ed McMahon, the former "Tonight Show" sidekick known for his many endorsements, is suing a veterans' group to halt its use of his name.

McMahon wants to sever ties with the non-profit Veterans Wish Foundation because it is the target of a federal lawsuit alleging financial wrongdoing.

"Ed hasn't made an independent investigation, but he feels he doesn't want to be associated with anything that even has a hint of impropriety," said Allan Browne, who represents McMahon.

The lawsuit filed Monday seeks unspecified damages. Calls made to the group, also known as American Veterans Assistance Corp., weren't immediately returned.

The organization, which purported to grant last wishes to dying veterans, got limited permission to use McMahon's name in 1991. The group mentioned the Marine Corps veteran in fund-raising materials and named a homeless shelter in his honor.

Last year, government agencies sued the group for alleged fund-raising and financial improprieties, saying executives diverted money meant for veterans.

The lawsuit says McMahon asked the company to take his name off the shelter and all advertising materials, but that he continued to be listed as a "national spokesman" on some promotional materials.

This may not have been the best of years for Melvin M. Belli, the flamboyant trial lawyer long known as "the king of torts." He is embroiled in battle with his five former partners, from whom he has split, and with his fourth wife, who took him to court when he fell $200,000 in arrears in their divorce settlement.

However, the feisty Belli sees no reason to be down or out and certainly, he said the other day, no reason not to celebrate his birthday in a big way. He turns 86 on Thursday.

President seeks more money to crack down on illegal immigrants

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton asked Congress for more money and new legal tools Tuesday to crack down on illegal immigration and the crime organizations and terrorists who exploit weaknesses in U.S. defenses against illegal aliens.

Prompted by hundreds of Chinese boat people and an immigrant sheik linked to the World Trade Center bombers, Clinton said, "We cannot tolerate those who traffic in human cargo, nor can we allow our people to be endangered by those who would enter our country to terrorize Americans."

Worked out with representatives of both parties on Capitol Hill, Clinton's plan received bipartisan support from members of Congress who attended the White House announcement.

The plan would not shut the nation's borders but would continue welcoming legal immigrants and legitimate refugees while keeping out those with no right to be here.

"To treat terrorists and smugglers as immigrants dishonors the tradition of the immigrants who have made our nation great, and it unfairly taints the millions of immigrants who live here honorably and are a vital part of every segment of our society," Clinton said.

The plan, spearheaded by Vice President Al Gore, has two elements:

—New legislation would allow expedited exclusion of undocumented aliens "who do not have credible claims for political asylum," the use of racketeering laws against gangs that organize illegal immigration by sea or by land and increased penalties for alien smuggling.

—An additional $172.5 million for next year's proposed budget to add up to 600 Border Patrol agents, enhance the State Department's "lookout" system that lists foreign criminals and suspected terrorists who should be kept out, expand pre-inspection at foreign airports of U.S.-bound passengers and hire more officers to handle the expedited exclusion hearings.

The White House said $87 million of the additional cost would be defrayed by an increase in immigration inspection and other fees and a surcharge on machine-readable visa applications. There was no mention of where the rest of the money would come from.

Administration officials had no estimate of total spending on immigration. The Immigration and Naturalization Service has a $1.6 billion budget, but the State and Treasury departments and the federal courts also spend money on immigration.

The expedited exclusions would affect asylum claims by 30,000 people caught each year at entry points with fraudulent or no documents, said the officials who spoke on condition of anonymity. It would not affect the estimated 300,000 who succeed in entering the country illegally or the 80,000-90,000 who request asylum without having been caught, they said.

Expedited exclusions would be designed to take no more than five days instead of the 18 months common now, the officials said. The appli-

Critics file lawsuit against Clinton's recently drafted military gay policy

WASHINGTON (HNS) — Civil liberties lawyers filed suit Tuesday challenging President Clinton's directive giving gays limited rights in the military. The lawyers called it a "policy based on prejudice."

The lawsuit was filed in U.S. District Court here by the American Civil Liberties Union and the Lambda Legal Defense and Education Fund on behalf of seven gay men and lesbians on active duty, in the reserves or in National Guard units.

The lawyers said at a news conference that Clinton's new policy is unconstitutional because it condones unequal treatment of gays and heterosexuals and violates the First Amendment right of free speech.

Justice Department and Pentagon spokesmen declined to comment on the suit, saying they had not seen it.

William Rubenstein, director of the ACLU's Lesbian and Gay Rights Project, in outlining the case, said, "What the Constitution assures us is that ... we won't be judged according to the color of our skin, gender or sexual orientation. What we're attempting to vindicate here is the (Constitution's) simple and central promise, that individuals be judged according to their ability to do the job."

The directive imposes an "impermissible burden" on gay men and lesbians in the service, has a "chilling effect" on free speech, and violates homosexuals' "right of free association," the suit alleged.

Clinton announced the policy July 19. Dubbed "don't ask, don't tell, don't pursue," it prevents commanders from rooting out gays and lesbians as long as they keep their sexual preferences secret and do not engage in homosexual conduct — which includes holding hands with someone of the same gender as well as homosexual sex.

"The regulations require that (homosexual) people take a vow of chastity," said Kevin Cathcart, Lambda's executive director. "We believe this is a test no one will be able to meet."

Rubenstein and Cathcart said a court ruling in their favor would not only nullify the Clinton directive but would also end the previous policy of trying to exclude gays completely from the military.

Meanwhile, the House Armed Services Committee adopted a Senate committee proposal Tuesday that would give commanders more leeway to discharge homosexuals than the Clinton policy would. It includes a congressional finding that says, "The presence in the armed forces of persons who demonstrate a propensity or intent to engage in homosexual acts would create an unacceptable risk to the high standards of morale, good order and discipline."

Official research conclusively links Agent Orange to cancer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government expanded its list of diseases officially linked to Agent Orange on Tuesday, but the controversy about health effects of the Vietnam-era defoliant was far from over. Experts said further study may connect still other cancers to the herbicide.

A study by the National Academy of Sciences said there now was conclusive evidence linking Agent Orange exposure to five diseases — three types of cancer and two other types of disorders.

The government already compensates Vietnam veterans for two of the cancers, soft-tissue sarcoma and non-Hodgkin's lymphoma, and one of the other disorders, a skin disease called chloracne.

As a result of the academy study, Veterans Affairs Secretary Jesse Brown said two other disorders will be added to the Agent Orange compensation list. They are Hodgkin's disease, a type of cancer, and a metabolic disorder called porphyria cutanea tarda.

Some Vietnam veterans hailed the move as evidence that their long concerns about exposure to Agent Orange are being taken seriously.

Members of the National Academy of Sciences committee said that additional research may connect still other cancers to the Agent Orange.

Dr. Harold Fallon, chairman of the committee and dean of the school of medicine at the University of Alabama, Birmingham, said that in addition to the five diseases clearly linked to Agent Orange, there are three cancers that should be "a high priority to investigate."

"There was limited evidence for these three cancers in some studies, but it was not conclusive," Fallon said at a news conference.

The three disorders suspected of linkage to Agent Orange are cancers of the respiratory system (lungs, larynx or trachea), prostate cancer, and multiple myeloma, another type of cancer.

To reach its conclusion, the academy of science committee reviewed thousands of toxicology reports and some 230 human disease studies related to herbicides, Agent Orange and to dioxin, a toxic contaminant in the defoliant. Most of the reports were on measurable chemical exposures in industry.

Fallon said one of the biggest problems in studying a link between Agent Orange and disease is determining the extent of herbicide exposure of U.S. troops who served in various parts of Vietnam. About three million Americans were in the conflict and could, in theory, have been exposed to Agent Orange.

With proper research into military records and into distribution of Agent Orange, the 16-member academy of science committee said, scientists should be able to reconstruct a history of troop exposure to the chemical and draw conclusions about links to disease.

Whatever the future findings, Vietnam veterans said the new study gives fresh encouragement that old complaints about the health effects of Agent Orange are finally being confirmed.
