Mrs. C. R. Terry, Long-Time Teacher Here Dies Sunday

Mrs. C. R. Terry, an expression teacher here for a number of years and also a teacher in the public schools, died Sunday, January 31, after only a few hours critical illness. She had been in ill health for several months, however.

Many of her students of earlier days remember her as Miss Bert Carter, and recall her activities with the youth and young people of the town through her classes.

She was born at Belton June 13, 1877, and at the time of her death was 76 years, 7 months and 18 days of age. She came here many years ago with her parents, the late Mr. and Mrs. Wylie Carter.

She and Mr. Terry were married in April 1926 here, and had continued to make this their home.

Mrs. Terry was an active member of the First Baptist Church.

Funeral services were held at that church Monday afternoon at 2: p. m. with Rev. Chester O'Brien, pastor officiating. Pall bearers were nephews and cousins, Mike Carter, Pink Carter, Floyd Carter, Elmer Carter, Sam Carter and Ellis Carter.

Burial was in the Wellington cemetery under the direction of the Kelso Funeral Home.

Mrs. Terry is survived by her husband; a brother and two sisters, Richard Carter of Hattiesburg, Mississippi; Mrs. Melvin Howe of Fort Sumner, N. M. and Mrs. Glen Williams of Mountain Air, N. M.

Joe Terry of Wellington is a Nephew.

"The Hidden Heart" is a new feature film made by the church, for the church. It pertains to a family such as many church members, and its problems, the pastor said.

The nature-animal picture belongs to Dan Henard. Both are highly recommended and the public is invited, Rev. Michael said.

The rally will inaugurate 6 days of mission emphasis. Milk Production Program Set Up By County Farm Group

A group of Collingsworth farmers by general agreement set up a milk production program due to bring additional pay checks to those participating. This action was taken at the meeting called Friday night January 29, by the Dairy committee of the Wellington Chamber of Commerce.

Meeting with the group were V. L. Sparkman, manager and Grady Post, fieldman of the Quint County Co-op, Mangum, Oklahoma, which manufacturers Gold Star Products. This is the milk processing plant that has agreed to take all the whole milk that can be produced here.

Thirteen farmers with a total of 93 milk cows said Friday night they will go into the program. These include Jimmy Wayne Cook, Denzil Peoples, Mr. Castra, J. D. Morris Mr. Sechrist, Buddy Morrison, Mr. Morgan, Ben Ratliff, J. L. Souder Jr., Mr. Baker, Henry Langford and Herbert Knoll.

Arthur Belew, who has been hauling milk to Amarillo, agreed to operate the milk route, picking up cans daily from participating farmers.

It will be about two weeks before he has the route in operation, and all persons interested in selling milk have been urged to get in touch with him, in person or by phone.

Quint County Co-op will pay the current price of 75c per pound for the butterfat percentage on whole milk, which on an average runs around five per cent, according to the committee members. There will be deducted from the milk check 50 cents per hundred pounds for transportation charge from farm to plant.

A gallon of milk, it was explained will weigh around eight and a half pounds, or approximately 13 gallons to the hundred (Continued on Page Twelve)

Under ASC Program

Deep Plowing Most Popular Soil Practice With County Land Owners

Deep breaking is by far the most popular of the soil building and conserving practices under this year's ASC program, Fred Squyres, work unit conservationist of the Soil Conservation Service said this week. So far, 167 applications for this practice have been placed. Terracing ranks second, with 46 application.

Under this year's ASC program, application is made through that office, then if a practice is approved by the county ASC committee, it is referred to the Soil Conservation Service for checking as to feasibility and practicability. Approval by the SCS is the "go-ahead" to the farmer or rancher to begin work on that particular practice.

These are the soil conservation practices on which the farmer will receive payment under the ASC program, Mr. Squyres pointed out.

Of the 167 deep breaking applications, 101 have been serviced or checked by the ASC.

The other practices include terraces, 46 applications, 27 serviced, averaging 5 miles of terraces per farm.

Grass, 28 applications, 22 ser-

Poll Tax Payments Fall Short for Election Year

Collingsworth County fell far short of its usual number of poll tax payments for an election year.

Only 1846 poll taxes were paid and 22 exemptions issued, Miss Louise Fucher, deputy tax assessor-collector said.

This is approximately 800 less than two years ago, an election year, and around 800 less than last year when no elections were held.

The tax office remained open until 10:00 p. m. Saturday, but during the last hour and a half, there was very little business.

The figure for this year does not include overers, who can vote without exemptions.

C-C Industrial Committee To Make Survey of County

The newly-named industrial planning committee of the Wellington Chamber of Commerce this week began mapping a plan of action that will survey the county's industrial potentialities and seek to promote home-grown industry.

Heading the committee is Jimmie Lee, vice-president of the Chamber of Commerce.

Members are Sandy Parsons Jr., Bura Handley, D. C. McKinney, Cameron Beam, Paul Spillman and Dr. Tom Hunter. Of this group, Mr. Parsons, Mr. McKinney, Mr. Lee, and also Judge R. L. Templeton attended the first annual West Texas Industrial Conference in Abilene Thursday, January 28.

Mr. Lee Tuesday outlined the committee's plans, but he had no encouragement for those who would anticipate investment of eastern capital in industry here within the immediate future. He had equally no encouragement for promoters who would try to take money out of the community for contact with eastern capital.

The slowness with which such a group must move and the great amount of groundwork that must be laid before there are visible results was emphasized.

It was also pointed out this group does not work counter to the Chamber of Commerce agricultural development program, but will go hand in hand with it.

The initial step will be a survey of the county, due to start within a short time. This survey will cover such things as the Wellington trade area, housing and civic clubs, water resources, vital statistics, hospital and medical facilities, banks and bank deposits, transportation, the labor market, city ordinances as they might effect an industrial plant, utilities, state and federal agencies, diversification.

"We are going to work in our own back yard and get the information as to what we need and what we have," Mr. Lee said. "We are going after industry, and we are going to promote home industry first."

"We will make this survey, which will give us definite facts of what natural resources we have. Then we can make a definite plan of action to promote home grown industries," he continued.

The committee is going on the belief that if Wellington area citizens go to work and try to promote home grown industry even on a small scale, the capital will take notice. Financing can and should start home.

"The first essential is this: we got to have 100 per cent co-operation of the citizenship if we get one of these industries," Lee declared.

At the Abilene meeting Thursday, the Wellington group joined others from over West Texas in hearing what communities and the area in general can do about securing industry. The conference was sponsored by the West Texas Chamber of Commerce.

Among the outstanding speeches before the group "Industrial Development in West Texas—A Challenge" by Fred H. Huszars, executive vice-president and general manager, West Texas Chamber of Commerce.

Patrolmen to Issue Tickets

April 1 Deadline For Car Inspection Stickers

Captain J. W. Blackwell, commanding officer of District No. 5 of the Texas Highway Patrol, with headquarters at Amarillo, announced today that Highway Patrolmen would begin issuing tickets to persons who operate an auto on the streets and highways after April 15 with out a current inspection sticker.

The Patrol Captain said that the men in his command have all received orders to that effect as the result of a directive issued at Austin by Homer Garrison, Jr., Director of the Texas Department of Public Safety. Blackwell said that Garrison's order was made following definite instructions from the State Public Safety Commission that enforcement of the modified motor vehicle inspection law which was enacted by the last Legislature would definitely begin following the April 15 inspection deadline.

Captain Blackwell also pointed out that local and county police officers are empowered to enforce the inspection law.

According to the Patrol commander only about 10 per cent of the cars in the Collingsworth County area have been inspected to date. This means, he said, that car owners who have not yet had their vehicles checked will run the risk of being caught in a last minute "log jam" at the inspection stations if they delay longer in complying with the law.

"Our Patrolmen will continue to issue warnings to motorists whose cars do not bear a current inspection sticker through April 15," Captain Blackwell said in a prepared statement for the press and radio. "After that date, offenders will face court action."

Clyde Cason, student in Hardin Simmons University, Abilene, was here last week end to visit his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Cason, Sr.

Jerry Drummond and Fred Alexander, students in Abilene Christian College, spent last week end here with the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Alexander.

EDITORIAL COMMENT — THE WELLINGTON LEADER

A New Source of Income on an Investment at Hand

The decision of a group of county farmers to support a whole milk production program proposed by the Chamber of Commerce Dairy committee is a step in the right direction, and one of several that could help the farm economy of the county.

It is seldom that an enterprise can be started with so little cost to those who benefit. It lives up to the earlier statement of the committee: "A man with one cow and a milk bucket can take part."

Actually, most of the men who have said they plan to participate, own and are now milking several cows. Their whole investment under the new setup will have to be only the necessary milk pails for transporting the milk. The milk processing plant at Mangum that is to take the whole milk is most anxious to see this work succeed. They have the capacity for handling all the county can produce.

Until the milk route through the county actually gets under way, it isn't known just how much milk will be produced in the county. The project is certain to grow. Production of whole grade C milk generally pays off better than selling cream, unless the farmer markets his skim milk, unthe hog or chicken route, and it is considerably less trouble.

A number of farmers who are not going into the plan now say they will when they see how it is going to work out. In the foreseeable future, the quality and quantity of milk cows should increase.

A good many of the farmers who are going into the program have milked cows before and know you don't get rich doing it. They also know the accuracy of the old saw: "It's not that milking cows is hard, but it's so darn regular." But on the other hand, they know the value of a dependable pay check coming in on an investment that they probably already have on the farm.

Grade C whole milk production is something that more and more farmers could look into.

But it is just one of several that the county can develop. The arrival of baby chicks points up that poultry is another field of production that can be pushed here, and indications are that a number are thinking seriously along that line.

Key to Community Prosperity

The prosperity of any community depends upon the money that comes into it from outside its own territory. The grain and the livestock we raise in Nance county must have a market for we raise more of these things than it takes to supply the local needs.

An industrial town thrives when the products of its factories find a market in the outside world, for it is the income from these sales which provides the payrolls that are the community's prosperity. No community can get rich from the people taking in each other's washing.

We wonder if you realize the full importance of the community's Farmers Co-op Creamery in the local economic picture. The annual report of this institution shows what total sales or sold outside this community, amounted to over a million and a half dollars in the past year. Their annual payroll amounts to around $90,000 per year, money that bolsters the local economy. And the wide area served by their cream buying trucks has its effect in extending the town's trade area.

We wonder if you realize what a wide area is served by the local sale pavilion where weekly sales also extend the community's trade territory and enhance its market.

We wonder if you realize the investments which local business firms have made to provide stocks of merchandise ready to supply your demands. A needed part for a piece of farm or home equipment sometimes must be had at once. The merchant who anticipates these needs and has them available in cases of emergency is rendering a service which should be appreciated but is easy to take for granted.

All these businesses pay taxes and make contributions without which there are many community services and advantages that would not be available. When you patronize home industry you are helping guarantee that these advantages are going to continue to be available.

Safety vs Time

We know that time is one of the most precious things that the Creator allowed us, along with our lives.

Yet, how seldom do we automobile drivers realize how closely time is tied us with our lives?

The Texas Safety Association says: To write a safety rule we use one minute, and one hour it takes to hold a safety meeting. We can use an entire week to plan a safety program, then it takes at least a month to put it into operation.

A whole year is consumed to win a safety award, and, believe it or not, it takes an entire lifetime to make a safe driver. But, drivers, it only takes one second to destroy it all with an accident.

How wisely do you spend your time when you are behind the wheel of your car?

The Buck Creek Philosopher

Editor's note. The Buck Creek Philosopher on his Johnson grass farm on Buck Creek apparently needs a cup of coffee himself to steady his nerves, his letter this week indicates.

Dear editor:

I notice everybody nearly these days is talking about the high price of coffee, restaurants raise the price of a cup of coffee, grocery stores raise the price on the shelf as the wholesalers raise the price in the warehouses because the importer raised the price because he claims the grower raised the price.

According to the growers down in Brazil, they didn't raise the price, the market just went up because there's a shortage of coffee due to a freeze last spring which killed off a lot of coffee beans.

I don't know anything about the weather in Brazil last spring, all I know is that it's been cold out here recently, but I think I know why the price of coffee is so high. It's not the weather.

It's high because the demand for it has mounted, and the reason it has mounted is that the shape the world's in these days just naturally promotes more coffee-drinking.

With Russia growin more threatening every day, with the world's supply of atom bombs growin and tempers flarin, with half a dozen major nations not sure they can hang on much longer, and with Congress in session, no wonder the world's tremblin hands need a cup of coffee. In fact, just the amount of coffee some people spill tryin to steady the cup between the counter and their lips accounts for a big portion of the increased demands on the coffee supply.

I notice one congressman has suggested a "coffee-less day" once a week to cut down on the demand, and it might work, but I believe a "tax-less day" set aside once a week by Congress might accomplish the same end.

And if you think the fact Congress is in session and turn over some new tax measures has any bearin on the increased demands for more coffee throughout the country, just watch the demand leap up when the Texas Legislature gets in session. The minute the Governor said he would call a special session to raise the teacher's pay, most grocery stores throughout the state doubled their order for coffee and most cafes sent out rush orders for more cups and saucers. Everybody knows the teachers need a raise, but everybody knows also if they get it the money has to come from somewhere and most people know what that means, so naturally the Brazilian coffee-growers are rubbin their hands in anticipation.

In a time of crisis, I guess coffee-growin beats cotton or corn or wheat or rice or cattle ten to one. In fact, if my Johnson grass farm out here would only grow coffee, and somebody would arrange to keep Congress and the Texas Legislature both in session all time, my worries would be over.

Yours faithfully,
J. A.

Crossroads Report

Dear Mr. Ike:

From the news that swamps us laymen about the national political situation these days, it appears that a lot of the begwige in both parties are harassing you about almost every move you make. It must be discouraging to be assailed from all sides, and probably makes you feel a little insufficient, like a short worm with two birds.

This condition is likely due to the fact that the purportedly human race, and in particular the political subdivision of it, is built so that nobody is completely satisfied unless he is getting more than his share. This makes it rough on a man who favors cutting the cake in slices that are somewhere near the same size.

You may be interested to know that at a recent coffee-conference with a couple of truck drivers, a farmer and a car salesman, we decided that a President who is able to keep both the Democrats and the Republicans in a frustrated sweat must be working for the people.

Early Law Tried to be Diplomatic

Texans Took An Early Interest in Education

By C. T. ROBERTS
Supt., Wellington Schools
Elisha M. Pease's gubernatorial platform called on the legislature to set apart $2,000,000 in United States Bonds to be loaned for the building of railroads, the interest to be used as a special school fund. His overwhelming majority insured action. On January 31, 1854 the first public school law was enacted.

There were many conflicting groups and the law tried to be diplomatic with all. The law provided for an annual distribution on a per capita scholastic basis, of the interest on the "Special Fund." Every county was to be divided into a suitable number of school districts, each of which would elect trustees to set up and supervise the system. Each district was to provide a school building, but no method of financing the building was stipulated.

The law provided for payment by the state of the entire tuition for children of paupers. This provision won the support of the insistent groups who believed that only orphans and the children of indigent parents should be offered free instruction.

The last paragraph of the law permitted the trustees of any district to convert the primary department of any college or academy "into a common school for such district." This resulted in a "common school" being conducted under the aegis of the State at every university, college, academy, and in Texas, regardless of their sponsors. Most existing schools conducted by religious bodies, local groups and individuals would have been initiated on any other basis. A large number of academies came into existence as a result of the 1854 law.

Many different views of education were prevalent in Texas in its infancy.

1. Christian educators, the earliest on the scene, began to establish local universities, colleges, and academies. Many people believed in schools conducted by the churches but endowed and paid for by the state. This policy was tried but resulted in tragic consequences, and had to be abandoned because of sectarian rivalry.

2. Most early cities and towns wrote into their charters provision for the establishment of schools. Among these were San Antonio (1837), Austin (1839), Goliad (1838), and Gonzales (1839), but none of them established a municipal school.

3. Private teachers and local groups eager to build their communities promoted many schools.

4. The Masonic Order was the most aggressive factor of all in establishing local schools, and in working for a general state system of schools.

5. Thousands of Germans settled in south and middle Texas from 1832 onward. Having been educated in the state schools and universities of the Fatherland, they eagerly supported the movement for public schools, and were among the first to provide instruction facilities for their children.

6. By far the largest proportion of Anglo-Americans who came to Texas adhered to the doctrine that education is entirely a family prerogative; intervention by the state they considered an affront to personal dignity, and admissible only as charity. They stoutly opposed school taxes to pay tuition for the indigent and orphaned.

Another group, not so large in numbers, was eager for a genuine system of public schools, state supported and state controlled.

8. Many of the poorer immigrants were indifferent to the education of their children.

9. Finally there were those who were wholly opposed to utilizing the State's wealth for the support of school.

Towns and cities were authorized to levy taxes for support of free schools and each governor insisted a state school system be established, but nothing was done until 1854.

Deck's DIDACTICS

—By Deskins Wells

In addition to the new interest in milk cows, quite a number of people are planning on putting in litters of laying hens and there is a healthy number who are planning on putting in peach orchards of the new and improved varieties that find a ready market. A considerable portion of the land in this county is ideal for growing peaches, and this could become a very valuable money crop.

Next week is Boy Scout week over the nation and the local Scouts will observe it with a program at the Rotary Club and another at the Baptist Church. Scouting was started in Wellington about 1914 and there has been one or more troops here practically all of the time since that time. Some of the early day scoutmasters were Toxie Pittman, Leon Dial, J. Claude Wells and later Price Dukeminier and on up to the time of Sandy Parsons and Jake Leach. Great credit is due all of the men who have devoted their time so unselfishly to Scout work. They have done much to make better citizens. The youth who keeps himself physically strong, mentally awake and morally straight is developing those qualities the future citizen will need if he is to uphold the democratic life.

Clyde Warwick in the Canyon News:

While the battle was on to give the tidelands oil back to Texas, it was asserted by no less an authority than the great Democratic leader, Sam Rayburn, that Texas would never receive anything from the strip of land under discussion.

When the sale of public land was put on in Texas last week, oil royalty under that part of the tidelands offered for sale brought the sum of $32,000,000. That is not hay in any person's language.

Well, brother Warwick, I see by the papers that Sam Rayburn has an opponent this year, and as far as I am concerned I had just as soon see him elected; but that is most unlikely. Sam Rayburn serves about one half the number of people of the average congressional district; but he has been most successful in keeping his tight knit little district from being changed although it should have been done in 1930, in 1940 and in 1950. If the hopeful Mr. McRae should dethrone the veteran of Bonham, it would be something of a political miracle—something like Jim Wells or Duvall Counties voting about even for a couple of rival candidates.

Jim Wood went down to Roaring Springs last week and had the $6 treatment; but he received something extra for his money. He asked about rain and was told that it would rain between 2 and 3 inches by February 12. Information like that should be worth $10. It won't be long to wait, and if it comes true Calvin Hurst and I are going to take off the next day even if we have to travel by row boat.

Have built a hot bed in my back yard and you never saw such flowers and vegetables as are growing in my imagination. By June they will all have withered and died, but just think of what excellent prospects I will have for next fall and winter—tender leaf lettuce on the table and many flowers right in December and January. If I had spent the same amount of money with florists that I have wasted trying to raise flowers, they would be a lot better off and so would I but the difference is like a housewife who takes a friend a pan of rolls and says: I baked these myself.

Duad Scott wrote the following long before the matrimonial troubles of James Roosevelt got in the papers, which is evidence that he was not talking about Mr. Roosevelt.

I get a lot of entertainment these days, reading about the matrimonial maneuverings of some of our more prominent citizens. It appears that indulging in a multiplicity of marriages and divorces is a somewhat expensive type of sport, and pretty well out of the financial reach of all except a lucky few who can afford such high-priced pastimes, but the rest of us can enjoy the play-by-play and keep up with the box score at the modest cost of a daily newspaper.

In some respects, this is about as interesting and less costly than playing the game. At least we are not likely to get plastered with a judgement for $50,000 as one well-advertised citizen did recently when a jury decided that he had alienated the affections of a lady who happened to be on somebody else's string at the time. Affections which run up into this price range are fascinating to read about, but I expect they are too rich for the blood of an ordinary individual who is accustomed to a variety of tender regard which does not have any market value.

Hedley Squeezes By Rockettes in Tight Game Here

By DON SCOTT

Wellington's Rockettes met the Hedley girls basketball team on the Wellington court last Friday night, and dropped the game by a 4-point margin in an overtime period. The Wellington girls stayed in the lead all through the first three quarters, but in the last period the Hedley sextet rallied and tied it up 50-50 as time ran out. An overtime period simply brought more of the same and the Rockettes went down in defeat, 52-56.

In the first quarter of play, Pritchard led the Rockettes in scoring by sinking 13 points of 23, while McAlister made 8 and Crawford chalked up 2. For the Hedley girls, Sargent made all of the 11 points that were racked up by her team. The period ended 23-11, Rockettes leading.

The second quarter followed much the same pattern, except with less scoring on the Wellington side. Hedley's Bailey and Moore tossed for 4 each and Sargent put 3 on the board for a total of 11, repeating their first quarter performance. However, the fast-stepping Hedley defense held the Rockettes to 10 points for this frame, with Pritchard and Crawford making 4 apiece and McAlister 2. The half ended at 33-22 with the Rockettes still leading comfortably.

Hedley took the third quarter also, as they scored 16 points to the Rockettes 10. Bailey led the Hedley team with 8, while Moore was next with 7 and Sargent made 1. McAlister and Crawford accounted for 4 apiece, and Pritchard made 2.

The fourth quarter started off with the tally at 38-43, Rockettes still leading, but Hedley tied it up three times during the period. They added 12 points to their score, as Sargent was high with 7, Bailey rung up 3 and Moore 2. The Rockettes Pritchard tossed for 5 while McAlister put up the other 2 and it was 50-50 when the regular time ran out.

Overtime was set at two minutes and both teams put on a good performance. McAlister counted 2 for Wellington but Hedley's Moore sank 4 and Sargent dropped 2 in the basket to wind it up on the high end of a 56-52 score.

Mr. and Mrs. Tiffin Young were in Amarillo for the week end with their daughter and family, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Fike and Trina.

Floyd Keller of Amarillo spent the week end here with his sister, Mrs. J. D. Aaron and family.

Thirteen-Point Victory

ROCKETTES TAKE GAME FROM LaCASA TEAM IN LIVELY CONTEST

By DON SCOTT

The Wellington Rockettes downed the La Casa sextet last Wednesday night here in the Wellington gym by a score of 43-30. Miss West, coach of the Rockettes, put part of her B-team in at the start of the second quarter and from there on out some of the players were B-team. High scorers for the team were Cecilia Cartwright and Nell Hurst, tied each with 9 points.

In the first quarter the scoring was divided up between Crawford Pritchard and McAlister, with Crawford racking up 3, Pritchard 3, McAlister 2. For the La Casa team, Groton was top in points with 3 while Gist made their only other point in that quarter.

The second quarter was more lively with the Rockettes still holding the lead by a score of 18-15. Nell Hurst led the Wellington 1. Gist paced the La Casa team, twirled chalked up 2 and Jerman twirled 9 while the other two points were made by Groton.

The third quarter put Jerman in the high scorer spot again with 3, while McAlister and Cartwright tallied 2 apiece and Hurst chalked up 1. Crabb set the pace for La Casa in this quarter when she made 6 of the 8 points scored for that team. Gist was the other scorer. This period ended in a score of 23-26.

In the last quarter 17 points were scored by the Rockettes to bring their total to 43, while the La Casa team pointed 7 times and the quarter ended in a score of 40-43. Pritchard, scoring 5, and Cartwright 5, were the high point girls in this period while McAlister accounted for 4, Jerman 2, and Hurst 1.

SCOTT TRUCK & TRACTOR COMPANY

International Harvester Dealership

FOR SALE OR TRADE

An opportunity in another line of work, which I have long wanted to follow, is available to me now. If I am to take advantage of it, the responsibilities and assets of the International Harvester dealership here at Wellington must be placed in other hands.

We have a clean stock of parts and machines, only a few hundred dollars of used equipment, and a modest investment in tools, furniture and fixtures. Our biggest asset, which will not cost the buyer a dollar, is hundreds of satisfied users of Farmal equipment in this area.

Buyer must meet the approval of the International Harvester Company, and must satisfy us that he will continue to give Farmal and International equipment users in this territory at least as good service as we have tried to give for the past 20 years.

To such a buyer, the investment required would be considerably less than in the usual business of this kind, as we would give a liberal discount on net cost of parts and machines inventory, and other assets will be priced at a depreciated figure.

Experienced personnel, now employed, could handle all the details of operation of business for a buyer who was not now familiar with it.

Good farm land, either in this area or elsewhere, would be considered in trade. We would take or pay difference.

Mrs. W. O. Richards Teacher at Fresno

County's First School Described
By the Woman Who Taught It

With the spotlight turned on the observance of the 100th anniversary of Free Public Schools in Texas, those familiar with schools of Collingsworth County recall the beginnings of education here.

And the remarkable thing is that the first teacher the county ever had, Mrs. W. O. Richards, still lives here.

It was a three months school, at Fresno in June, July and August, 1889, before there was a Collingsworth County and before there was a Wellington. But the handful of families scattered over "the Flats" southeast of town provided thirteen pupils for that first school.

In an interview some years ago Mrs. Richards recalled the circumstances surrounding the first school. R. H. Cocke Sr. and W. R. Seale had come out to the new country from Denton to File on land. P. W. Myers had come from the same place a little earlier and he suggested to Mr. Cocke that the latter's daughter, "Miss Emma" then about 15 might come out and teach school.

Those few people who resided in the area built the little new school house, painted white, and agreed on the salary, and Judge Myers wrote Miss Cocke to come here and begin her work.

In April, 1889, Miss Emma, with her father and Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Stall and their two children, Gus Stall and the late Mrs. R. F. Curry, arrived from Denton, making the trip in about 15 days in covered wagons.

"This was such a pretty place that April, Mrs. Richards recalled. "The prairie was so green it looked as if a beautiful emerald rug had been laid all over the valley. The skies were cerulean blue, the whole face of the earth looked so sweet and clean and inviting to travel weary and dust laden home-seekers who were eager to begin the new life on the Frontier of Texas."

Miss Emma, as friends through the years have affectionally called her, lived with Judge and Mrs. Myers. He was also postmaster of the Fresno post office, located in his home. Mail was brought in from Childress.

And so the first school bell ever rung in Collingsworth County was in June, 1889. The Fresno school house stood in the same location until the district was consolidated with Wellington many years later and the building torn down.

"There isn't a single thing about that three-months school term that I don't remember," Mrs.

BIRDS IN THE TREE?—At first glance, it looks like this winter-bare tree is sporting a flock of shivering birds. But another look reveals that the creatures aren't birds at all, just a group of youngsters in Brooklyn, N. Y., playing in the snow.

Richards said many years later. "I can close my eyes and see every one of my 13 pupils just as they looked then. I remember where each one of them sat in the room and exactly how they looked. They were good pupils and smart, too. They never did give me any trouble and although some of them were not more than one year younger than I, they always seemed to have the greatest respect and admiration for their teacher and tried so hard to please me."

The thirteen were Ida, Bessie, Herman and Ed Myers; Will Lillie, Bessie and Tom Elliott, Gertie and Carey Dysart, Lela Atteberry and Larkin and Clara Forbis.

They were scattered from the first to the eighth grades.

Two of the group still lives here: Lela Atteberry is Mrs. A. V. Cocke and Gertie Dysart is Mrs. Jim Loter. Carey Dysart lives at Mobeetie. Two of the boys, Herman Myers and Larkin Forbis were both killed by horses in later years. Ida Myers was married to Grundy Karnes, who many years later died in South America; Bessie Myers became Mrs. Charlie Wall and is now deceased; Ed Myers lives in Arizona; Will Elliott became a lawyer at Stratford; Lillie Elliott married Herbrey Wyatt and is dead and her sister, Bessie, died as a young girl. Tom Elliott lives at Altus. Clara Forbis married James McCune and lives in California.

One of the things about the first school that remains clearly in Mrs. Richards memory is the day they saw the Indians. People of Collingsworth still had a healthy fear of Indians. Although there is no record of Indian hostility after the white people began settling here, their day was not too far removed from the famous and disastrous Indian raids in North Texas.

Judge Myers had told Mrs. Richards the Indians were in this section on a hunting trip from the Reservation at Fort Sill, and he cautioned her to dismiss school if she saw them coming so the children could get home.

"We were out in the school yard playing at recess one afternoon and I happened to look up and see the Indians, riding in single file about three miles away. I called the children into the house and told them we were going to dismiss school early so they could go home as the Indians were in the vicinity. I told them not to be afraid, but they should have given such advice to me. The children were elated at the prospect of seeing the Indians and I was the only one who was afraid."

When she reached the Myers home, there sat the Indians, squatting in a wide circle, happily eating watermelons that had been given them.

School ended in August 1889, and Miss Emma returned to Denton County—to enroll in school.

"I was somewhat a curiosity to the other pupils at Denton then. I remember overhearing one of my classmates make the remark that I was smart in my studies, and another replied, "Well, she ought to be smart. That little old gal has taught school." Mrs. Richards recalls.

"I really had not very much preparation for school teaching when I came out here to teach in the Flats. I had gone nowhere except to a country school at Gribble Springs, which was a community in Denton County named for the Gribble family that now lives out here."

She returned with her family to stay in 1890, when the entire family moved out.

By that time, the county had been organized, and Wellington was beginning to grow rapidly. The previous year she could name all the people in the vicinity around Wellington. Now they were moving in fast.

It was a period of growth and development.

Later Mrs. Richards taught in Wellington for two years, 1893-94 and 1894-95.

"We had a big school then, with at least a hundred pupils. I taught with W. D. Collins during my first term in the Wellington school, and with Milas Glenn during my second term. We felt like we had a real school then, with two teachers, store-bought desks and everything," she recalls.

These are only a few of the earliest memories of the early Collingsworth. Few people have had a greater appreciation of the significance of those early happenings than Mrs. Richards. The whole history of the growth of a community that is typical of the development of the most of the southwest is stored in her mind.

Now she lives quietly with her son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Dick Richards, and her daughter, Miss Effie Lee Richards. Both daughters followed her in the teaching profession. Miss Richards also taught in Wellington and the other daughter, Mrs. Ray Wall, has taught a number of years in Galveston.

"I start where the last man left off"

—Thomas A. Edison

Edison, to explain his incessant and tireless reading of scientific journals, technical papers, patents and books, said that he read to avoid useless repetition of old experiments. "I start where the last man left off."

What Edison knew, and perhaps said in an unquoted moment, is that thousands of men would be needed to "start where he left off."

"Just wait a little while," prophesied Edison, "and we'll make electric light so cheap that only the wealthy can afford to burn candles." Edison lived to see lamps that gave four times as much light and cost one-fifth as much to buy. And electric lighting has progressed far beyond that.

He recognized that an invention does not end a search. It begins a search.

The lamp was a beginning in forcing not only its own evolution but the evolution of meters, fuses, sockets, wiring, power distribution systems, transformers and generating stations.

He lived to see the company that was formed to carry on development of electric light and power evolve into one of the world's most important industrial research centers. Today General Electric laboratories employ several thousand men and women who are seeking new things on widely different fronts.

It is seventy-five years since Edison lit the first successful carbon lamp. He will be remembered for inventions that changed the world. But let him be remembered, too, for inspiring so many men to start where he left off.

Texas Schools Reflect Century of Progress

The century of phenomenal progress will be celebrated by the Texas public schools during 1954, their centennial birthday year. The 100th birthday of the public school system falls on January 31, but due observance is scheduled to last all year because here is much to celebrate.

Today's Texas public schools are a far cry from their humble beginning back in 1854, when the per capita payment was 62 cents and the permanent school fund was started with an initial endowment of $2,000,000. The per capita payment now has grown to $68 and the permanent fund to $249,016,781.

In the same state where youngsters were to be considered lucky if they were given three or four months of schooling a year, a minimum foundation program now guarantees every child a minimum of nine months of school each year. Despite these vast improvements, Texans have not yet achieved the goal outlined by their forefathers. The Texas Education Agency, the Texas State Teachers Association, the Texas Congress of Parents and Teachers and other participating groups hope the centennial celebration will renew the interest of the general public in its schools and lead to additional improvements.

It was on January 23, 1854, that a group of Texans converged on Austin for a mass meeting. "We will not only be the Empire State in point of territory," they solemnly resolved, "but in the number and excellence of our institutions of learning."

It was a bold boast from a young state—one which had been admitted to the Union less than nine years before. But just eight days later, the Common School Law was enacted. It established the free public school system of Texas.

"It was the first mile of a long road—still under construction—that leads to happiness and prosperity," Executive Secretary Charles H. Tennyson of the Texas State Teachers Association said recently. "It is a well-traveled road, with traffic increasing at an astounding rate. There are 72,000 more children traveling on it now for instance, than there were a year ago."

Six periods of peak interest in schools have been selected by the State Board of Education for statewide observance of the centennial, but local groups will decide for themselves if these are of the greatest interest locally.

The six periods are: January 31, official birthday; March 1-7, Public Schools Week; May-June, end of school year; September, beginning of new school year; October, State Fair time; and December, statewide Citizens Advisory Conference on Education.

Different communities will observe different dates, significant to the public schools, in different ways during the centennial year. But they will all be trying to accomplish the same purpose: to acquaint the public with school problems and to urge the public to help in working out solutions that will give 1,600,000 youngsters in our public schools a better education.

Draft Boards to Review Cases of Some 4-F Men

Austin, — State draft boards have been requested to review the cases of some 4-F men examined by the armed forces prior to May, 1952.

Only men within the ages of draft liability will be affected, Brigadier General Paul L. Wakefield, state Selective Service director, said.

The action was authorized in an official operations bulletin from national Selective Service headquarters. The bulletin points out that acceptability of some 4-F men may be affected by several significant revisions of armed forces physical standards.

Attention of local boards was also called to several types of defects which have been erroneously considered as constituting cause for rejection.

Local boards were given a list of 20 to 25 defects and conditions to look for in the review.

General Wakefield said state draft headquarters was unable to estimate how many 4-F men would be affected by this review of 4-F cases.

Letters From The PEOPLE

Dear Editor,

I noticed in your last weeks Wellington Leader that you are beginning to wonder about the Farm Parity deal and my impression was that you are waiting for more developments. I am on the same fence. So far, all I have been able to see in the Flexible Parity deal is: No price protection when we have a large crop and need protection, and lots of protection when we have a crop failure and nothing to sell. We are getting lots of advice to produce cheaper and more economical because our prices are too high for the world market. While we are being told to produce cheaper, Official Washington is trying to get a fifteen thousand dollars raise annually for Congressmen and Senators.

I think those birds are pricing themselves out of the world market also. We need some kind of a flexible pay check there too and pay them according to productions. When they produce to much political hot air, cut their pay check and when they get down to common sense and produce good legislation, raise their pay. Otherwise the public may get tired of the racket and throw the whole works in the waste basket, as we are being told they may do the whole farm program if the expense gets to heavy taxpayers.

Here is just one little reason why farm products must be high or no go. In 1951 it became necessary for me to buy 6 twenty eight inch discs for a disc plow, they cost me thirteen dollars each. A few weeks ago I asked for the price of 6 new ones to replace those I bought in 1951. They were priced to me at $30.42 each. I didn't buy or bite which ever may be the proper word.

Real Estate Transactions

The following transfers of real estate were recorded last week in the office of David Robinson, county clerk.

V. L. Stewart and L. D. Stewart, administrators of the estates of T. J. Stewart Sr. and Mary O. Stewart, to R. E. Hightower 99.04 acres out of section 34A, block 15; and that portion of the southwest fourth of the southeast fourth of section 2 TS 3N, Range 27 WIM, Harmon County, Oklahoma.

Veterans Land Board of Texas to Wister E. Harrison, 156, acres out of the southwest fourth of section 66, block 14.

tain conditions, Odis B. Bradley, Chairman of the County Agricultural and Conservation Committee, said today.

All such applications will receive careful consideration, the Chairman explained, but to be eligible for the allotment, the owner or operator in such case must meet the following conditions: He must depend upon his farm operations for a livelihood, he must not have any other farm which already has a cotton allotment, and he must not have on file in the County ASC Office a similar application for a cotton allotment on any other farm in the County which he owns or operates.

Applications for such "new" cotton acreage allotments must be filed in the County ASC Office not later than February 5, 1954, Mr. Bradley said.

Under the 1954 cotton marketing quota program, approved by growers in a national referendum last December, all cotton farmers are subject to the quotas, which operate through acreage allotments. Farmers who comply with their cotton allotments may market free all the cotton they grow. Cotton grown by farmers who do not comply with their allotments will be subject to a penalty on each pound of "excess" cotton.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Douglas and sons, Kenneth and Wendell of Borger were business visitors here Saturday.

COUNTY SCHOOLS TAKE PART IN "SAVE THE CHILDREN WEEK"

Collingsworth schools will take part in the state-wide Save-The-Children "Bundle Week" drive to collect used clothing for needy children, it was announced today by Superintendent B. W. Beaird. The drive, which is part of the Twelfth Annual Children's Clothing Crusade, will take place here on March 22nd and will last for 5 days.

Three million pounds of wearable clothing have been set as the national goal. Last year in the Eleventh National Children's Clothing Crusade, nearly 5 million pupils collected 2,900,000 pounds of clothing, approximately five million garments.

"We cannot stress too much the desperate need for clothing that exists among children in this country and overseas," Superintendent B. W. Beaird said. "I am sure the citizens of Collingsworth County will want to lend a helping hand. Bundle Week provides a practical and effective means of clothing collection, and at the same time, teaches youth in our schools to share with the less fortunate. Participation in the National Children's Clothing Crusade will help foster a sense of brotherhood and lay a foundation for international good-will."

Clothing collected by the Federation is used to aid needy children and families in Korea, in war-depleted countries of Europe and the Middle East, and in disadvantaged rural areas of the United States.

More than nine million Korean men, women and children are homeless refugees in their own country. At the request of United States Government authorities, the Save The Children Federation continues to send warm clothing and shoes to these victims of Communist aggression.

In many countries of Europe the scars of war have not yet been healed. Save the Children Federation representatives in Europe report that clothing needs are particularly acute in many areas of Italy, and in Greece, where villagers who fled from Communist aggression have returned to their native homes only to find them in ruins.

In the United States clothing is distributed in low-income rural areas of eight Southern and Mid-western States and on the Navajo and Papago Indian Reservations. If it were not for the Bundle Week collections, thousands of these rural children would not be able to attend school because of the lack of adequate clothing.

Superintendent B. W. Beaird said that wearable clothing of all types, in babies', children's and adult sizes; blankets, sheets and other bedding; and low-heeled shoes are especially needed.

"I hope we will give a bit of ourselves with these gifts, by cleaning and mending the garments so they will express our good wishes for the children who receive them," he added.

A large number of shipping bags have been ordered from the Federation, and leaflets will be given to all children in the school system to take home during the week, stating the purpose of the drive and asking the cooperation of parents.

This work is checking to see if the practice a farmer wishes to carry out is practical for his farming set-up, it was pointed out, and the SCS has not yet been able to begin checking for performance.

The Collingsworth SCS personnel is carrying one of the heaviest work loads in the 11 county area, and some additional assistance is being received by two SCS personnel from Chidress, Bill Brooks, soil scientist and Leon Wilcox, engineer. This is in addition to the three members of the service here, Mr. Squires, Lynn Courtney and Luther Geiger.

Collingsworth also is doing for more deep breaking of land than any other county of the district, the 167 applications here comparing to the 4 to 12 applications for other counties.

Farmers asking approval on this practice average about 30 acres per farm for the amount on which government payment will be made. There is an additional acreage which may be equally large on which landowners are paying the entire cost themselves, it was pointed out.

Milk Production-

pounds.

Mr. Sparkman, in explaining the operation of the plan Friday, said that all milk is weighed on an electric weight scale at the plant and a sample of the test is saved. The weight is stamped on a card.

Among the instructions given producers by Mr. Sparkman were. All milk must be strained, but there is no other processing necessary on the part of the producer. This is to remove sediment, which is a problem.

All cans or pails must be cleaned after each using with a non-soap cleaner, or detergent. This is due to the fact that soap will not completely remove all the fatty residue from the pail and the bacteria count will be higher, with resulting lower test.

In summer, milk should be cooled by wet sacks or in some other manner.

The producer must furnish his own cans.

Many producers furnish only one or two cans of milk to the truck each day.

In explaining the operation of his plant, Mr. Sparkman reminded that lots of milk and ice cream are sold here.

The Quint County Co-op, which was organized in 1939 with a capital of $4,000 to serve Greer, Harmon, Beckham, Jackson and Kiowa Counties, now has a modern plant with a production capacity of 60,000 pounds of cheddar cheese a day, in addition to a milk dryer and other equipment.

"The producer starts selling us milk. Then at the end of the fiscal year, July 31, dividends on profits are made after an audit, until a producer gets $20, and he is given a share in the company. All over the $20 goes into preferred stock drawing three per cent interest," Mr. Sparkman said.

"One hundred thousand dollars in cash dividends have been paid since 1946. Earnings, however, have been slim the last few years, as the markets are down. The plant was expanded during the war to handle large volume of milk, and the volume is not there. Sales last year were over $821,000. This was down somewhat from the year before. More products were sold but the price was less.

There are now 1530 members and about 500 active patrons.

"We serve those five counties in Oklahoma, and to Wellington, Vinson and Shamrock. We collect milk from the five counties, but not here, and we want to collect milk from the people we sell to," Mr. Sparkman said.

Mr. and Mrs. Freddy Potest of Odessa were guests in the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. G. T. Stephens over the week end.
