COOLIDGE AGAINST OWNERSHIP

LADIES INVADE LOCAL RING IN BUTTE BEHALF

Twenty-Three of Them Tell Why He Should Be Next Governor

MEET AT CLUB ROOM

Permanent Organization Of Butte Club to be Formed Next Month

Twenty-three women got very much into politics last night at the Wichita club when exactly that number gathered to laud the merits and qualifications of Dr. George C. Butte, the republican candidate for governor.

Dr. Butte's ears should have burned exactly twenty three times, by reason of the many nice things said about him.

As it was, the meeting was enthusiastic. If its impetus is carried on it should mean a strong continuation of propaganda in this city for the republican aspirant. As for instance Mrs. C. W. Cain said "If each of us could get ten members for this Butte for governor club it would mean a ——."

Some of 'Em Tat.

The age old adherence to tatting found its demise in the enthusiasm of the meeting for two enthusiasts for the former law dean who brought their needles with them forgot the stitches when the popularity of Mr. Butte reached its zenith.

The temporary organization of the women's "Butte for Governor" club was not completed at the meeting Thursday night due to the fact that the nominating committee was not yet ready to report. The permanent organization will probably be made Oct. 6, the day when Dr. George C. Butte, candidate for governor, speaks here, Miss Maude Thomas, chairman, announced at the opening of the meeting.

Forget party principles and work for the good of Texas was the theme of the speeches made by the women at the meeting. Brief talks were made by Mesdames Mamie Dale Brown, A. C. Henson and Frank Ramsey of Iowa Park; Mesdames J. W. Akin, Orville Bullington, V. W. Cain, and Margaret Bacon of Wichita Falls.

23 Turn Out.

Twenty-three women were present at the meeting, and 23 have signed as members of the "Butte for Governor" club of Wichita Falls and Iowa Park, it was announced.

"I am glad you women are forgetting the party principles and are voting for the man for the place," Mrs. Mamie Dale Brown of Iowa Park said in her short talk to the assembly. "Woman has come into her own and she is being looked to for the good she can do in the political world, and now is her opportunity to show what she can do by voting for Dr. Butte," and the speaker eulogized the candidate for governor.

"The supreme court has come to the rescue of the democratic party and has shown that it is not wrong for a democrat to vote against his party in a time like this, and that it is not a moral wrong to vote a republican ticket."

Following Mrs. Brown, Mrs. Orville Bullington spoke. "This is a case of doing the right or wrong thing, and we have the opportunity in the voting for governor this year to do the right or wrong thing. Dr. Butte is a good, conscientious, and intelligent man. I believe in forgetting sentiment in a time like this and doing the right thing."

Wants No Mudslinging

Mrs. Bullington spoke against mudslinging, and suggested that the women in politics refrain from doing it.

"I feel that it is the duty of the women of Wichita Falls to get busy and work for Dr. Butte for governor of Texas," Mrs. V. W. Cain said enthusiastically at the meeting. "If each woman here would get 10 members for the club, we could see great things accomplished. I am a democrat and have always been a democrat, but I do not believe the Fergusons are democrats. In this case it is neither democrats nor republican, it is for the good of one state, Texas."

Mrs. A. C. Henson of Iowa Park, a republican, spoke for the good of the cause, and expressed the hope that the women would work in the interest of Dr. Butte. Mrs. Margaretta Bacon and Mrs. Frank Ramsey of Iowa Park both spoke for Dr. Butte and asked that party principles be left out and that the candidate best suited for the position be voted for.

Millionaire Kids Working Too Hard Prisoners Complain of Leopold-Loeb

JOLIET, Ill., Sept. 25.—"Those millionaire kids work too hard."

This is the complaint which other denim-clad convicts make of Nathan Leopold and Richard Loeb, who are finishing their second week of the life sentences for killing Bobby Franks, according to Warden John L. Whitman.

"They have been ideal prisoners," Whitman said. "The only complaint we've heard is that those millionaire kids work too hard."

Forman Leopold, Nathan's oldest brother, visited the boys. He brought a lunch which the youths ate lustily—talking to their visitors when they could find time between gulps.

According to the penitentiary guards both Leopold and Loeb are beginning to realize their situation. Despair is just beginning to be apparent, Loeb they say, is standing up somewhat better than Leopold, but both are shaking under prison routine.

"That gong at 6 o'clock every morning is what jars the life out of me," Loeb said.

THE OLD WOMAN HAD LONG HAIR; PAINTERS WIN

Great Argument Finally Settled at Austin Over Statue Of Liberty

By The Associated Press.

AUSTIN, Texas, Sept. 25.—An argument of long standing in capitol circles has at last been settled. The question as to whether the Texas statue of liberty which surmounts the dome of the state house possesses bobbed hair or flowing tresses ensnarled state painters and carpenters for some time. The painters hotly contended that the "old woman," as the statue is called, had hair of full length, while the carpenters and other employes have declared with equal fervor that the crowning glory of the monument is bobbed.

No Rouge Since '99

Not since the administration of Governor Sayers, 1899 to 1903, has the statue been painted, it is said. Consequently state painters have not been "up to see" Miss Liberty in over two decades, and as it is impossible to tell much about her coiffure from the ground, the argument had gone on awaiting ultimate decision until recently when acquaintance between the brush wielders and the "old woman" was resumed.

The statue has at last been painted. The painters have won the argument. Miss Liberty has flowing tresses, unbobbed.

Two coats of white paint were applied to the statue, which is 13 feet high and 312 feet from the ground, according to C. T. Clark, head state painter. The state board of control ordered both the statue and the dome painted after numerous complaints about the "ugly white color" of the dome, as it is called.

Once Painted White

The dome was painted white two years ago, Mr. Clark said, this having been the first time since Governor Sayers' administration that painters had been upon the dome. The color of the dome caused many complaints and efforts were made at

Pittsburg Eliminated; Solons Rest

By The Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 25.—The Giants eliminated Pittsburgh from the national league race today and now need to win only two of three remaining games with Philadelphia to clinch the pennant.

There are no games scheduled in the American league, where Washington maintains a two game lead over the Yankees and to clinch the pennant need to win three of the final four with Boston, even if New York cleans up its four with the fast traveling Athletics.

Brooklyn did not play today and the Giants increased their lead to one and one half contests over the Robins who, even by taking their two remaining games with Boston, can win the flag only if the Giants lose their three with the Phillies. McGraw's team can tie Brooklyn by winning one out of the three.

Mr. Griffith is attorney general of Kansas and the republican nominee for re-election. He instituted, in behalf of the state, the suit now pending to oust the klan from Kansas.

TEXAS COMPANY WILL PURCHASE STORAGE CRUDE

Bulletin Posted Yesterday Announces New Change In Major Purchaser's Policy

TO BUY TOTAL OUTPUT

Change Will Have Big Effect on Future Activity Here

The Texas Company will purchase 100 per cent of the production of wells with which it is connected in north and north central Texas, according to notice posted at the local offices of the company yesterday, and will purchase at current posted prices such oil as they have in storage for account of customer, this latter at the option of the customer.

The bulletin announcing the above change in The Texas Company policy in the purchase and the storing of crude oil obtained from their pipeline subsidiary's connections was posted late yesterday afternoon, but is retroactive to 7 a. m., yesterday morning. In announcing the optional purchase of storage oil the bulletin states that "This company will absorb storage charges in all cases where sale is consummated by October 10, 1924. In cases where oil owners elect to continue the storage arrangement on oil heretofore stored, our usual charges and other conditions will apply."

This bulletin will without doubt have a far-reaching effect on oil operations in this district, it is all probability to prove the needed inspiration for a real revival of activities.

Far-reaching

In the first place the offer to buy all storage oil will turn a large amount of money toward operators that has hitherto been only prospective. Just how much this will amount to cannot be determined, and is probably not known outside the Houston offices of the Texas Company, so many "spot" sales having been made by the operators among themselves that a check on oil run by the Texas Pipeline Company would not be at all secure as to the amount they have in storage. But this money will run into a nice figure and will aid the industry in this section.

In the second place the new policy provides the driller a new market for his oil, the Texas Company and all companies which follow its footsteps having refused to pay for oils from wells completed since early in the summer, in the case of The Texas Company those that have been started since May 10, last. Just what the company's policy will be toward new connections is not made known in the bulletin, but the implication is given that these will not be frowned upon.

Purchase Pro-ration

Purchase pro-ration by the Texas Company dates in north Texas back to June 1, in north central Texas back to July 15, bulletins on both those dates announcing the purchase of only fifty per cent of the production of wells. As early as May 10 The Texas Company, issued letters to customers stating that they would not pay for oil from wells started after that date.

On August 25 last, a bulletin was posted stating that 100 per cent of "old" production would be purchased. This was followed last week by a twenty-five cent cut in crude prices, and yesterday's bulletin, posted as yesterday morning, 7 a. m.

The Texas Company runs around 33,000 barrels of crude every day through the pipelines of its subsidiary carrier Company; of this about 28,000 barrels is carried to the account of customers, some if it carried by virtue of the company's position as a common carrier and some to the customers account with The Texas Company. Some estimates place the daily storage by the Texas company since the inauguration of their storage policy as around 12,000 barrels a day, but there is no method of confirming this figure.

Bulletin No.

Producers having oil in the Texas lines have from time to time sold at "spot" prices large quantities of this oil, so that no estimate for practical purposes can be made on just what the Texas company storage now amounts to.

The bulletin of the Texas company follows:

Houston, Texas, September 25, 1924.

Effective this date and until further notice The Texas company will purchase on its usual terms one hundred per cent of current production to which we are connected in north Texas and north central Texas and which heretofore has been run to storage only. Oil owners have the option of selling to this company at its prices currently posted from and after this date all or any part of their oil now stored by this company and this company will absorb storage charges in all cases where sale is consummated by October 10, 1924. In cases where oil owners elect to continue the storage arrangement on oil heretofore stored, our usual charges and other conditions will apply.

Fireman Shot In Altercation With Alleged Officer

H. D. Jobe, central station fireman, is in the general hospital with a bullet crease across his head. At an early hour this morning police were questioning L. C. Salisbury, Clay county resident, in connection with a shooting which took place near the Wichita-Clay county line late last night. Jobe is not thought to be seriously hurt, although it had not been determined whether his skull had been fractured by the shot or not.

Salisbury Brought In.

Salisbury was arrested at his farm home about seven miles northeast of Wichita Falls at an early hour this morning. He was taken in custody by Motorcycle Officers Griffin and Bantley after he had been identified by Ida Lee Smith, Jobe's companion, as the man who had struck her, and then struck Jobe. Jobe was shot. Salisbury and Miss Smith both contend, when the gun was accidentally discharged as he hit Jobe.

Claims a Commission.

The man now under arrest claims to carry a deputy constable's commission under Constable Pryor of Precinct 3, Clay county. He produced no badge or papers last night, however, to establish this, and the Clay county officer had not been reached by police at an early hour this morning.

Salisbury's story is to the effect that while patroling a branch from the Henrietta road, leading toward Petrolia, he found the car and ordered the occupants to submit to arrest. Jobe, he alleges, resisted as did the girl. He avers that he struck the girl and Jobe both, the shooting resulting the latter time.

Jobe Brought In.

The injured man was brought to town by Miss Smith, taken to the office of Dr. Duane Meredith and later removed to the hospital. It was found that the bullet had cut a furrow across the bridge of his nose, and had ranged upward through the forehead, laying the skin apart and possibly injuring the skull.

Assistant County Attorney Wayne Somerville, Night Chief Will Allen and other officers were questioning Salisbury and the Smith girl at 2 o'clock this morning in an effort to definitely determine more details of the case.

DECLARES U. S. SHOULD NOT BE RAIL OPERATOR

Speaks at 150th Anniversary Of the First Continental Congress

FOR THE CONSTITUTION

Hint of Attack on La Follette Seen in His Philadelphia Address

By The Associated Press.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 26.—Proposals for government ownership of railroads and other public utilities were denounced here tonight by President Coolidge as "uneconomic" and "encroachment upon our rights."

Speaking at exercises commorating the 150th anniversary of the meeting of the first continental congress, Mr. Coolidge also renewed his assault on suggestions to limit the power of the supreme court and urged that the people resist encroachment upon their rights and liberties guaranteed by the constitution.

Leave it to People

"If we wish to maintain what our fathers here established," he declared, "we shall do well to leave the people in the ownership of their property, in control of their government and under the protection of the constitution.

"It is difficult," the president said, referring to government ownership of railroads "to reconcile the American ideal of a sovereign people capable to owning and managing their own government with inability to own and manage their own business."

Furthermore, he declared, it would mean a loss in public revenue estimated at $800,000,000 a year with a resultant increase in the tax on the farmer of 3 to 4 per cent.

Discusses History

Mr. Coolidge devoted most of his address to discussion of history of this country, and the birth of the constitution after the organization of the first continental congress.

Referring to the deliberations of this congress, the president asserted that if "we could better understand what they said and did to establish our free institutions, we should less likely be misled by the misrepresentations and distorted arguments of the hour, and be far better equipped to maintain them."

He drew a lesson from the declaration of the congress showing "the superiority of moderation and candor over violence and deceit in seeking a solution of the difficult public question."

On the Constitution

The constitution, Mr. Coolidge pointed out, "is a device for maintaining in perpetuity the rights of the people, with the ultimate extinction of all privileged class."

Mr. Coolidge was interrupted by applause frequently in the discussion of the constitution and defense of the supreme court of the United States.

Immediately on the conclusion of the exercises the president and Mrs. Coolidge set out again for the return trip. Again they were escorted by the first city troop of Philadelphia, an organization that performed similar service for George Washington and most succeeding presidents.

The president left on the return trip to Washington at 8:55 p. m. standard time.

Piracy On High Seas With Death Possible, Charged

Say Man Boarded French Freighter and Took 36,000 Whiskey Cases

NOT TO BE GOAT

Max Phaff of New York Declares He Will Make Some Revelations

By The Associated Press

BREST, France, Sept. 25. — The case of Max Jerome Phaff, New York, charged with piracy on the high seas, is likely to develop some sensational revelations concerning the wholesale smuggling of liquor into the United States, it was learned today when the defendant arrived here to stand trial.

The defendant, who faces death on the gallows if found guilty, declares he is unwilling to "be made the goat" and says he will implicate men "higher up" in America as well as reputed reliable firms in Great Britain.

The charge against Phaff, who is a German-American, grew out of the boarding of the French freight steamship Mulhouse off the Canadian coast last July by alleged pirates who held up the crew at the points of pistols and robbed the cargo of nearly 36,000 cases of whiskey.

CONFESSES TO ATTACK

30 Year Old Man Is Arrested In Chicago for Gary Crime

By The Associated Press.

GARY, Ind., Sept. 25.—The body of Annie Tomicik, who was kidnapped Monday, was found buried in the sand dunes here today when the police were led there by Peter Vergolini, 30 years old.

The child had been attacked, strangled and stripped of her clothing, according to the Gary police. Her hands had been bound to her sides.

Vergolini, an employe of the American Sheet & Tin Plate company, was arrested in Chicago last night and brought back to Gary. After an all-night grilling he confessed, according to the police.

He came from Italy four years ago.

Vergolini, according to the police, asked the child to go for a ride in his automobile and then drove to the scrub woods where the attack took place. After the killing and burial, Vergolini went to a moving picture show in Gary and afterward to Chicago.

Witnesses saw the child enter Vergolini's automobile and for two days he had been the object of a police search.

PINK ELECTORS ARE BARRED

Decision in California Says Party Convention Must Control

By The Associated Press.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 25.—Thirteen presidential electors, named by petitions of California voters and committed to support the candidacy of Robert M. LaFollette stood barred today from the ballot at the general election in November as the result of a 4 to 3 decision of the state supreme court yesterday.

The decision was based upon the finding that a presidential elector is merely agent of a political party, operating solely through a political convention as sort of messenger and therefore can not be placed upon the ballot by initiative petition, but only through the agency of a party convention.

Iowa G.O.P. Is Given Bump By An Independent

Luther Brewer of Cedar Rapids is Gunning for Senator Brookhart

MEANS A SPLIT

Coolidge the Issue in Corn State Election, Observers Declare

By The Associated Press.

DES MOINES, Iowa., Sept. 25.—With varying degrees of surprise Iowa political leaders today say ushered in the latest angle of this state's already uncertain political status—the announcement of Luther A. Brewer, former publisher of the Cedar Rapids (Iowa) Republican, that he would enter the race for the United States senate on an independent ticket.

For years identified with the "regular" republican party, Brewer's candidacy was construed as opposition to Senator Smith W. Brookhart, who won the republican nomination at the June primary. Apparently Brewer did not have the sanction of the republican state central committee as that body yesterday declared it "would be inadvisable to bring out an independent candidate against Senator Brookhart."

In announcing his candidacy Brewer said his chief object was to give Iowa republicans a chance to vite for a man who was not afraid to endorse President Coolidge. It was believed this was aimed at Senator Brookhart, who thus far refused to endorse the president.

HOW TO KILL THE WEEVIL

Commissioner of Agriculture Says Much of Science Is Theory

By The Associated Press.

AUSTIN, Texas, Sept. 25.—Advice on how to kill the boll weevil was given today by George B. Terrell, commissioner of agriculture.

"Many volumes have been written about the life and habits of the boll weevil by scientists and 'near scientists'—some of it true and much of it mere theory," said Mr. Terrell.

Doesn't Believe Theory

"I am not much of a believer in theories until they have become demonstrated facts. It has been demonstrated that the boll weevil is very destructive to cotton, and many theories have been advanced to exterminate him or to curtail his ravages. Many extensive experiments have been made to kill the weevil or to lessen his tribe.

"It has been demonstrated that the weevil feeds almost entirely upon the cotton plant. This being true, he can be poisoned to some extent, and this his been done with varying degrees of success and failure.

Plow Under Stalks

"Instead of selling all your cotton and buying poison to feed the weevil, just plow under the green cotton stalks when you have picked the cotton and destroy the feeding ground of the weevil and starve him to death, before he goes into hibernation. This plan will get the most of the weevils and leave very few to live through the winter to make the new crop to destroy the cotton next year.

"This is a simple common plan and I am glad that thousands of farmers are already doing this, and that practical men are preaching this doctrine. It not only destroys the most of the weevils but the green crop puts humus in the soil, makes it hold moisture better and insures a better crop next season."

the last session of the legislature to get an appropriation for the repainting of the dome.

But no sooner had the painters started on the dome than another dispute arose, this time over the color. Those of artistic talents insisted that the brownish tint being applied did nto harmonize with the reddish gray of the granite building. The painters were stopped while the artists argued. One woman suggested that if a bit of green be mixed with the brown it would give the proper color. Finally the argument was settled after many trials, and the painters went back to work with a slightly different shade.

200 Gallons Needed

Another argument that threatened to stop the work was an injunction suit brought by Austin painters against the board of control. The painters contended the work should have been done by contract instead of by the day, which they declared was contrary to the law. This case is pending.

It has been estimated that some 200 gallons of paint will be necessary to give the dome its one coat. Only two gallons were required for the painting of the statue. The head state painter for the board of control estimates that it will take seven men working on the dome five or six weeks to apply the one coat.

It is estimated that the cost of painting the dome alone will be $3,500.

The painters are about 300 feet above the ground. To insure safety each scaffold has been supplied with four ropes holding the painter's seat. Two blocks, one above and thbe other below, support him in mid-air and allow him to change his position as he works his way around the dome.

Attorney In Ma's Case Urges She Resign The Race

Judge I. W. Stephens Suggests that Would be Patriotic Thing to Do

DECISION TO JUDGE

There Will be no Written Opinion is Judge Calhoun's Statement

By The Associated Press.

AUSTIN, Sept. 25. — A demand that Mrs. Miriam A. Ferguson resign as democratic nominee for governor and let the state executive committee appoint a man in her place was made by Judge I. W. Stephens, attorney for the plaintiff, in the closing arguments of the Ferguson injunction suit today.

Judge Stephens said this was the most patriotic thing Mrs. Ferguson could do. Mrs. Ferguson was not in the court room at the time, having departed at 11 a. m. to catch a train for her home.

The case was submitted to Judge George C. Calhoun shortly before noon after three and a half days of argument. He said he would announce his decision at 10 a. m. next Monday, intimating there would be no written opinion.

Two Decisions in Point.

Court rulings of Missouri and Massachusetts may finally decide the case. In a case known as the Hostetter case, the Missouri court held that women had the right to hold public office. This is relied on as one of the leading authorities for the defendant. In an apparently contrary holding a Massachusetts case called Robinson's case, held that a woman did not have legal right to hold public executive office. The plaintiff relies on this as his leading precedent.

Judge Stephens told the court that the Missouri case was decided after that state had passed a special enabling act removing the bar against women. There are no Texas decisions directly in point, so the lawyers have had to ransack the decisions of other states and of the supreme court of the United States.

The burden of Judge Stephens' argument was that the world "governor" as used in the state constitution should be interpreted in the light of its meaning at the time the constitution was written, that it meant a male ruler, that at common law women could not hold office and this provision necessarily was absorbed into the constitution by its makers. Texas has never removed this disability from women and there is no law in this state which says that a woman can be governor, though other states have made such specific provision by special laws.

Cases Are Cited.

Cases cited from other states by the defense arose under laws which specifically gave women the right to hold office, Judge Stephens said. The Fergusons are taking the governorship over as partners, he averred.

"In financial matters especially, husbands and wives are partners under the laws of this state," he continued. "And hence Mr. and Mrs. Ferguson are proceeding to take charge of the governorship in a partnership capacity.

"A man has been solemnly impeached and removed from office by decree of the legislature, yet if the Ferguson program is carried out this decree is to be destroyed and you will trample under foot the edict of the highest court in the state. It is a ridiculous picture, this thing of a man found guilty of an offense for which even a governor can not pardon him, to be subordinated to a woman in the mansion and while she acts as governor he is to hang around and carry water to her."

The scriptures were freely quoted by Judge Stephens, especially in reply to scriptural references by Judge Ocie Speer, attorney for Mrs. Ferguson. When Judge Speer quoted the Bible he overlooked St. Paul, Judge Stephens pointed out, especially St. Paul's admonition to the women to tend to home affairs.

"Try to Take Everything"

"We have given them the right to vote, but we did not expect they'd come in and take over everything.

"The real question here is one of the intention of the framers of the constitution as disclosed by their language, and of course, it was never their intention that any such situation could come about as they are now seeking to impose on Texas. Other states have passed laws letting the women in, but Texas is going to sweep them in on politics."

The argument of the defense that the constitution relegated election contests to the legislature does not apply, Judge Stephens contended, because this is not a proceeding to determine qualifications of candidates at the November election, but to determine whether an ineligible person may go on the ballot at all, as in the Maddox case in which the supreme court held Mr. Ferguson's name could not go on the ballot.

Mrs. Ferguson, who has remained near her attorneys throughout the three and a half days of argument, left the court room with her daughter at 11 o'clock to catch a train. It was understood she was returning to her home in Temple.

Few Women Present.

Although the case tests the right of the first woman nominee for governor to go on the ballot, there were very few women present at any time. Three women friends of the Ferguson family were present at various times, but beyond this not more than half a dozen women attended.

Replying to the charge of Mrs. Ferguson's attorneys that the granting of the injunction would wreck the democratic party and deny it a governor, Judge Stephens said he would rather wreck the democratic party than destroy the solemn and sacred document known as the constitution of Texas."

"I voted for Mrs. Ferguson," said Judge Stephens. "I swallowed a bitter pill. We were confronted with the necessity of choosing between two evils. But I am now trying to see that our constitution is vindicated.

"When the primary law was first suggested, my friend A. J. Hood of Weatherford predicted that the primary would ruin the party. I believe his prophecy has come true. And if this law suit does nothing more than bring about a wrecking of the primary, if it does away with the necessity of ever again making the choice that confronted us in the last primary, I say our work will not have been in vain."

When Judge Stephens said he had voted for Mrs. Ferguson there was applause in the court room which brought a call for order from Judge Calhoun, with the remark that "this is not a political convention."

Judge Calhoun said there probably would be no written opinion as he did not have time to write one. That he expects to study the authorities at length and indicated by a remark made to counsel that there seemed to be some dispute over what other cases hold.

Famous Colonel's Boy In Same Line Illustrious Father Trod

By The Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 25.—When Theodore Roosevelt today accepted at Rochester the gubernational nomination of the republican party, family history was repeating itself once more.

Theodore Junior, advanced from one step into another of his late father's footprints. He pushed a little farther along the trail to political fortune. Theodore senior had blazed a generation ago.

"Teddy the first" emerged from the Spanish war a hero, a colonel and a politican with a big following. "Teddy the second," attended the world war, won three medals, emerged a colonel and discovered that he, too, had won political popularity.

Also Navy Assistant

The elder Theodore served as assistant secretary of state the navy. The younger Theodore will resign the same post to enter the campaign for the governorship.

The father served as governor of New York state before he became vice president and then through the death of President McKinley, moved into the White House. His son is just reaching toward that running in the ladder of political fame which is marked "executive mansion, Albany."

Theodore Roosevelt of this generation was born at Oyster Bay, 37 years ago. He was educated in New York, received an AB in three years at Harvard and entered the carpet business. Then he became a Wall street broker and two years later became third partner in a firm, as manager of the New York office. He married Miss Eleanor Butler Alexander in 1910.

Injured In War

When the United States entered the world war, Roosevelt entered training at Plattsburgh. He went to France as a major, was gassed, wounded and was decorated, returned home a Lieutenant Colonel and abandoned brokerage for politics. He was elected to the New York assembly. For more than a year he sat at Albany. He was known as a listener rather than a talker. Only one bill of that session bore his name,—a measure designated to allow $300 income tax exemption for each child instead of $200.

In 1921 President Harding named him assistant to Edwin Denby then secretary of the navy.

First Woman Candidate For Office Selected By Convention

By The Associated Press.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Sept. 25.—Theodore Roosevelt, of Oyster Bay, assistant secretary of the navy, and son of the late president, was named by the republican state convention here today as the party's candidate for governor. His nomination came on the first ballot when he polled 565 of the 990 votes in the convention; sixty nine in excess of the necessary majority. The nomination was made unanimous and by acclamation on the motion of former Governor Benjamin B. O'Dell, manager of the pre-convention campaign of Supreme Court Justice Arthur S. Tompkins of New York and seconded by two representatives of the other candidates, District Attorney Guy B. Moore of Buffalo and Col. Wm. Hayward of New York.

"The republican party has done me a very great honor and I am deeply gratified. Our platform is sound, constructive republicanism. I stand on it four square.

"President Coolidge has given the country an unequaled administration; we in this state will bend every effort to back up Calvin Coolidge."

Later Col. Roosevelt was given a tremendous ovation when he appeared on the convention platform just before final adjournment.

Mrs. Florence S. Knapp, the nominee for secretary of state is the first woman to be a candidate for state office in New York on the republican ticket.

The Carpenters Company In Observance of Meeting Of First Congress

COOLIDGE IS SPEAKER

President Made a Member Of Historic Society Founded 200 Years Ago

By The Associated Press.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 25.—Representatives of the thirteen original states joined with citizens of Philadelphia today in celebrating the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the meeting of the first continental congress and the two hundredth anniversary of the founding of the Carpenters company, in whose historic hall the congress met. Tonight President Coolidge was the central figure in the commemorating of the events of one hundred and fifty years ago, making the principal address at patriotic exercises held in the academy of music.

During the day, Carpenters hall was the center of ceremonies in honor of the two memorial events in American history. Resplendent in dress uniforms of by gone days, historic military commands of some of the original thirteen colonies marched past the structure in a parade down Chestnut street.

At Independence Hall

Nestled in between sky scrapers at the head of its own narrow alley, the dainty bit of revolutionary architecture was later the scene of a re-enactment of the session in which Patrick Henry called upon the delegates to lay aside the distinction of their several colonies and become known as the Americans."

President Coolidge represented by United States Senator George Wharton Pepper, was formerly made an honorary member of the quaint organization. George Kessler of the Carpenters company in presenting the certificate of membership, emphasized that it was the first time an outsider had been admitted to the roster of the company.

The setting of the congress was portrayed with utmost attention to detail, those taking the parts of the delegates sitting in revolutionary costume by the mellow light of tallow candles and the interior of the building providing the original setting As the prayer of "the Rector of Christ Church" of a century and a half before was repeated, one of the Pennsylvania delegates wearing his hat as became a good quaker, rose while the others knelt. Radio microphones on the presiding officers' desk and the table of the congress furnished the only modern touch. The episode closed when "George Washington" was pointed out as the Virginian who had offered to equip a thousand men at his own expense and march to the relief of Boston.

BIBLE THOUGHT AND PRAYER

NO RESPECTOR OF PERSONS—Of a truth I perceive that God is no respector of persons; but in every nation he that feareth Him, and worketh righteousness, is accepted with him.—Acts 10:34,35.

ISN'T HE TOO YOUNG.

Owen D. Young and General Charles G. Dawes are responsible for the reparations plan which is going to stabilize Europe and bring prosperity to the world. Those who are on the inside know that Owen D. Young is the real author of the plan and that he speaks for the bankers of America. General Dawes is the republican nominee for vice-president.

Owen D. Young will hold the post of attorney general only long enough to set up the machinery of the transfer bureau. Then S. Parker Gilbert Jr., will go to Germany, to Berlin as agent general for reparations and will be the real financial master of Europe. S. Parker Gilbert will be thirty-two years old on October 13. He is a New Yorker, a college man.

At twenty-five he was a member of the war loan staff in the city of Washington. At twentw-seven he was assistant secretary of the treasury. At twenty-eight he was promoted to be under secretary, second in command under A. W. Mellon. At thirty he resigned to resume the practice of law with such a career behind him, according to Washington correspondents, as might be the envy of a statesman of seventy.

When Dan Moody announced as a candidate for the office of attorney general of Texas many prominent lawyers of the state regretted that Moody was too young, that his hair wasn't white and his mustache snagged. Moody waded in however, and in the run-off rolled up a majority of 251,000. He received almost a half million votes. He will be in the vicinity of thirty-two when he is called to the high office of attorney general.

If the wise ones at Washington had banished S. Gilbert Parker Jr., when he made his appearance in Washington a few short years ago perhaps an ancient fossil with his future behind him and the grave just under his nose would be the successor of Owen D. Young as agent general of the long reparations plan and the financial master of Europe.

Never sneer at youth. There are thousands of old boys who are very dignified and pompous who are in the rut where they started decades ago. Speaking of youngsters who arrived before they were thirty, never overlook Alex Gregg of Texas who is Mellon's right hand man and the most amazing tax expert in America.

IS THIS AMERICA?

Senator Robert M. La Follette and Senator Burton K. Wheeler were given a big lift toward the White House the other day. A committee of the Steubeu Society journeyed to Washington to assure the Wisconsin senator of the support of some six million citizens of German blood. Senator La Follette accepted the votes of the six million.

William Meuser, a civil engineer of New York city, is the president of the society and made the extraordinary transfer of six million votes from the old parties to the presidential nominee of the new party. This is a free country. A full fledged citizen is his own master. He votes as he sees fit.

There are political leaders, organized laborites and others who appear to be laboring under the hallucination that they carry millions of votes in their vest pockets. Their ego is superb. A vest pocket is a very ordinary affair. It is made to carry one vote and there are thousands of Americans who do not cast their own ballots. They think they do but they don't.

Americans of German blood can not be transferred en bloc by the president or executive committee of the Steuben or any other society. It is true that Senator La Follette voted against the declaration of war with Germany. It is true that Senator La Follette is an habitual wet, but it is not true that the gentleman from New York who is a civil engineer can transfer six million votes to La Follette by the making of a little speech.

All who read and think are aware that the American Federation of Labor declared for La Follette and Wheeler. Well, just the other day the state Federation of Labor of New Jersey by an overwhelming majority refused to endorse the progressive presidential ticket and when a motion was made that Coolidge and Dawes be given an endorsement there were jeers from two thousand throats and the delegate who offered the motion hastily recalled it.

This is America.

WHAT TODAY MEANS TO YOU

By MARY BLAKE

LIBRA

Today's planetary aspects are decidedly propitious, and favor all sorts of honest endeavor, and indicate domestic felicity and personal contentment. This is an excellent opportunity for aggressively tackling some of the difficulties that have hitherto been neglected, provided that they are not of a speculative or hazardous nature. It is also a good occasion for marriage, as the signs portend "an enduring and durable honeymoon." The vibrations indicate that a proposal will today not be rejected.

A child born today will enjoy normal health, given vigilance, care and wholesome environment. Its character will be clean and upstanding; its disposition serious rather than jovial; its mentality quite normal. The child will cause its parents very few worries, but, in order to avoid it taking too grave a view of life, in order to counteract the tendency of taciturnity and too much self-introspection, it must be induced, in its early childhood, to mingle freely with other children of similar age, and to participate in their amusements and recreations.

If today is your birthday, you are full of good, practical ideas, possess unflagging perseverance, but are often persuaded, to your own detriment, to stray from the straight and narrow way you have mapped out for yourself by a lack of will power.

To will is to win. Every great achievement is the fruition of will power, another name for winning power.

Unless your will is strong, your record will be weak. Unless you get your will right, unless you get it functioning properly, you cannot rise to the fullest measure of your opportunities, nor to full justice to yourself.

Will power is synonymous with driving power, with forcefulness, with aggressiveness. Whatever may befall, the will must never be vanquished. The world may beat and break storm against you and may defeat your plans; it must never be allowed to crush your will.

Will is to the man what gasoline is to a motor. It is the motive power without which, unless you are going down hill, no wheel can be turned, no goal can be reached.

Irrigation

By A. M. McPHERSON

WATER

Making Irrigation Water Penetrate Hard Soils.

On Wednesday's inspection trip through the irrigation project a land owner said that on certain soils he found that it was difficult to apply enough water to wet the ground between the rows and wanted to know what could be done to remedy the situation.

On heavier types of soil on the project this problem will often be encountered. There are a number of remedies.

Plowing under a green manure crop will be of assistance. The stems and leaves of the plants will form passage ways which will allow the water to penetrate with greater ease. The decay of the vegetable matter will form humus which of itself has a decided tendency to loosen hard soils.

Plowing under straw or barnyard manure acts in the same way as turning under a growing crop. Commercial fertilizers may or may not help. If such fertilizers contain sodium they will generally make matters worse. Chilean nitrate and other fertilizers of the same nature should not be used on hard soils where irrigation is practiced. Fertilizers containing lime will assist in loosening up many hard soils.

Finely ground raw limestone or slacked burned lime will act on most types of hard clay soils causing them to become loose and friable. Using raw limestone unless it is finely ground, 60 mesh or finer, is simply a waste of good money.

The continued use of the irrigation water from Lake Kemp will of itself cause many of the hard soils here to become loose and easily penetrated by water. Lake Kemp water contains considerable lime which is very beneficial to hard soils.

POETRY FOR THE PEOPLE

The Sunshine Trail

Don't be sad or melancholy;
Smile at every one you meet;
At the strangers in the trolley,
At the girls along the street.
They of course may be offended,
And may have you put in jail,
But when prison days are ended
Take once more the sunshine trail.

If your neighbor looks downhearted,
Slap him roughly on the back,
Say the dog days have departed
And good times are coming back.
And should he get mad and beat you,
Do not let your spirits fail
Or discouragement defeat you;
Keep along the sunshine trail.

Do not ever grouch or grumble,
Greet all trouble with a smile,
Tell the cop who takes a tumble
On the street, to laugh it off.
Then, when fund you have to borrow
To put up the needful bail,
Let the man who lends 'em sorrow;
You keep on the sunshine trail.

When you find your friends repining
For a rotune that is gone,
Bid them seek the silver lining
That comes just before the dawn.
Tell them it's no use to worry,
And regret will naught avail,
Then—if I were you—I'd hurry
To resume that sunshine trail.

Dr. Frank Crane's Daily Editorial

A PRINCESS IN SQUALOR

At the inquest of Sylvia Pearson, aged 62, wife of Edward Pearson, an old-age pensioner living in Mayfair, London, west, the other day, the story came out that Mrs. Pearson had been really a Russian Princess who died under conditions of appalling squalor.

Mrs. Edith Kent, the landlady, said that the couple had lodged with her for 15 years. The man was 84 years of age. Mrs. Pearson had been very poor but was known as the Princess Orloff. Mrs. Kent added that when she gave the couple food the woman would open the door just far enough to take it in. The man had not been out of the house for 12 years. The princess was found dead in her bed one morning and had not had her clothes off in 10 years.

A policeman said that he found letters in the room addressed to H. S. H. Princess Orloff. The coroner said the woman appeared to have been a Russian aristocrat who had been living in circumstances too horrible to describe.

Such instances as this would not be so striking if it were not for the fact that the person had been in better circumstances. For, "The sorrow's crown of sorrow is remembering happier days."

In fact all of the misery and tragedy to which the human race is subjected affects us mostly by contrast. The drunkard in his cups would not be so miserable were it not for the fact that he once had an opportunity to live the normal and respectable life among his fellows.

Thackeray describes a Frenchman, whom he met in Paris, who had always been satisfied and optimistic until upon one occasion, he strove to acquire a fortune and failed; after that he was always a wretched and disappointed man.

Perhaps death is only terrible because of its contrast to life, just as our existing life is only tragic compared with what it might have been.

Always hopes have their shadows, and it remains true that "Of all sad words of tongue or pen, the saddest are these, 'It might have been.'"

GLEANINGS FROM THE BOOK OF LIFE

BY CLARK KINNAIRD

GOVERNMENT: ONE VIEW

Henry David Thoreau, writing in 1849, said:

"Is American government—what is it but a tradition, though a recent one, endeavoring to transmit itself unimpaired to posterity, but each instant losing some of its integrity?

"It has not the vitality and force of a single living man; for a single man can bend it to his will.

"It is a sort of wooden gun to the people themselves.

"But it is not the less necessary for this; for the people must have some complicated machinery or other, and hear its din to satisfy that idea of government which they have."

Governments, Thoreau contended, thus show how successfully men can be imposed on, even impose on themselves, for their own advantage.

"It is excellent, we must all allow," he says. "Yet this government never of itself furthered any enterprise, but by the alacrity with which it got out of its way.

"It does not keep the country free. It does not settle the west. (He was writing in 1849, remember).

"It does not educate.

"The character inherent in the American people has done all that has been accomplished; and it would have done somewhat more, if the government had not sometimes got in its way.

"For government is an expedient by which men would fain succeed in letting one another alone; and, as has been said, when it is most expedient the governed are most let alone by it."

Do you believe that the above words hold true today?

After all, Thoreau contended, the practical reason why, when the power is once in the hands of the people, majority are permitted, and for a long period continue, to rule, is not because they are most likely to be right, nor because that seems fairest to the minority, but because they are physically the strongest.

But, he declared, "a government in which the majority rule in all cases cannot be based on justice, even as far as men understand it."

UNCOMMON SENSE

Too often the professional athlete cultivates brawn at the expense of brains, with the result that he is unable to stand up under success.

Most prize-fighters are old men at 40—not because of the gruelling training they undergo, but because of the gruelling indulgences they allow themselves, on the money they have not learned how to use.

This is not an editorial for prize-fighters, nor is it intended to lead youth to believe that prize-fighting, if indulged in moderately and with intelligence is of a useful calling.

It is important however, for every boy who reads about prize fights and admires muscular prowess, to understand that muscle without intelligence is of less than no value.

Recently Walter Johnson, pitcher of the Washington baseball team had his forty-second birthday.

Johnson was in the American national game as a star when very few of the men now playing in it had started playing.

Today he is one of the foremost American pitchers, and is apparently good for ten or fifteen years more.

This is because he has had as much control of himself as he has had of the ball, which has been his means of livelihood.

Johnson began life with a good education, and he never forgot the lessons that he learned.

He is temperate in his habits. He reads at night instead of roistering about with his fellow players.

And he continually thinks about what he is doing—whether he is pitching a ball or eating a dinner.

It would of course be better for him—as it would be for any other man—had he chosen a profession in which he would be more fit at 50 than at 40, and at 60 than at 50.

But at least he has proved that even a professional athlete can have a long and successful career if he takes care of himself, and uses his head as well as his muscles in his business.

And it is to be remembered furthermore that dissipation and indulgence will use up the brain almost as quickly as they do the sinews, and that only by constantly keeping the machine in repair, from head to feet, can any one expect to keep well and improving from his first day almost to his last.

As for prize fighters, their business is necessarily so brutal, that little intelligence is expected of them. It is hardly a cause for regret that they go out of the game so soon.

HOW IT STARTED

"CALCULATE"

In this word we have a description of an era in the history of mathematics. It was the era of the ancient, when the greatest minds of the time worked out their arithmetical problems with pebbles and boards.

"Calculate" goes back to the Latin "calcis," meaning limestone. And what may limestone have to do with arithmetical reckoning?

It is from the fact that in the pebble and abacus days of mathematics the ancients gave to the small discs with which they worked out their problems the name of "calculus" (a pebble) that we today describe mathematical operation with the word "calculate."

SUB ROSA

A VISITOR.

By MIMI.

I had a visitor and I enjoyed him so much that I want to tell you about his visit.

He hails from Nashville, Tennessee, and is the rector of a small church in that town—I went to school in Nashville, and attended his church while I was there.

He happened to be visiting out here on Long Island where I am now, so friends drove him over to call on me.

It did my heart good to listen to his talk—he has such a clear, keen, fine mind and a wonderful sense of humor.

"Here is a little joke I tell to the married folks sometimes," he said in his soft southern drawl—

"A black-hand wrote a married man a note and said, "If you don't put one thousand dollars under the rock marked on this paper, we will steal your wife."

The man, after reading the note, wrote back—"I haven't got the money, but your proposition interests me."

He began talking about people attending church and he said they excused themselves from coming with the explanation that Sunday was the only day of recreation they had.

"I tell my congregation," he continued "That they like to get thanks when they do something nice for someone—that they like to be told their favors and kindnesses are appreciated—and so does God."

I had never thought of church going in this manner—but that is what we do when we attend church—we go to His House and thank Him for all the good He has given us.

If You're Looking for a Wife Who Will Hold You to Your Highest Principles, Go to New England—If You Want a Hustler, Go to the Middle West—Seek Your Pal From the Far West—But If You Must Be Jolted, Go South.

A man writes me:

"Will you settle a bet by telling what section of the United States produces the best wives? My friend says that New England women make the best wives. I contend that Western women do. What do you think?"

That's a hard question to settle, because women have no geographical limitations. There are pretty girls and ugly girls; clever girls and dull ones; girls in whom mouths butter wouldn't melt and girls with tempers; clever girls and fluffy girls; girls who are domestic angels and girls who will never learn how to boil water, in every state and county and city and hamlet in this broad land of ours. And some of them will make good wives and some of them won't, irrespective of where they were born and brought up.

Undoubtedly, however, heredity and environment are the determining factors in forming character, and habits, and modes of thought, and the girls of the different sections of the country are as different as different varieties of roses, and each makes its own peculiar appeal to man's taste.

Take the New England girl, for instance. She is pretty in a demure kind of way. She is a bit of a highbrow and prefers Ibsen to the six best sellers, and symphony concerts to ragtime.

Outwardly she is cold and calm, but no woman loves with a more consuming passion, or is more fiercely jealous, and she has the fascination that the smouldering volcano-under-ice stuff always has.

The New England girl will make you a splendid wife, too. She will be faithful and true, a neat, methodical and thrifty housekeeper and a splendid mother. She will do her full duty, and, what is more, she will see that you do yours. She will keep you jacked up to your highest level and compelled to the straight and narrow way. Living with her will be like living with the still, small voice of conscience that perpetually reminds you of your faults and weaknesses and shortcomings. It will strengthen your moral fiber and make a nobler and better man of you, but it is not a particularly soothing experience.

Therefore, the New England girl makes an admirable wife for the man who is worthy of her, but she is not the wife for the philanderer who needs a wife who can turn her blind side to her husband's gallantry; nor for a vain man, who needs to be flattered; nor for a grouchy, who wants to take his pleasures in this world instead of waiting, after the true New England fashion, until you get to heaven before you relax and enjoy things.

The man who wants a wife who will be a real helpmate to him find best seek her in the Middle West.

That is the region where the feminine hustler reaches her highest perfection. The Middle West woman is the daughter of pioneers and she is a pioneer herself. Even as her parents conquered the wilderness, so is she determined to conquer the inner circles of society and wealth that lie just beyond where she was born.

She is a good looker, with a skin as clean and fresh as a rose, and eyes as clear and limpid as the waters of Lake Michigan. And she's strong and husky beneath her slim 120 lines.

There isn't a particle of coquetry about her. She loves a man more after she marries him than she does before, because he is the head of the firm then, the firm that she means to push on to success, and to do that she devotes every thought of her head, every impulse of her heart, every energy of her body.

If you want a wife who will boost you up the ladder, who will work and scrimp and save until she helps you pile up a fortune, and who can then take off her apron and roll down her sleeves and come out of the kitchen into the parlor and hold her own with the best, pick out a Middle West girl.

But being the husband of one is no job for a lazy man or a slacker. When a woman is a live wire herself she simply scorches a quitter to death with her contempt.

If you want a pal for a wife, seek her in the Far West.

Out there they grow women as big as men, almost, and almost as strong, gloriously handsome creatures with big hearts, broad minds and open hands. They will rush you about in their automobiles, tire you out in mountain climbing, beat you at pitching a camp or shooting birds on the wing, or they will run against you for office and get elected. There's no clinging vine about them. They are sturdy oaks, standing proudly erect, and they make the wives that a man can talk to as he would to another man. Neither do they have to be cajoled or cuddled and kept wrapped up in pink cotton like dolls babies.

But, on the other hand, they expect a square deal from their husbands. No man, in the slang of the day, can get anything over on a girl of the Far West. She's been born free, and she scorns to stoop to feminine wiles to get her rights. She's not up to any of the pretty little devices by which women ordinarily work men, and so she is no wife for the man who thinks that in marriage there should be two souls with but a single thought, and that he should be it.

For the man whose ideal wife is a combination toy and slave, the Western girl is anathema, but she's the one best bet for the man who wants a chum for a wife.

For the vain man, there is no wife equal to the Southern girl.

The Southern girl is the only female extant who understands, in all its subtlety, the gentle art of spreading the salve and who practices it with a hand that never tires. From the time a Southern girl is born she is taught that the chief business of a woman is to please and placate men, and keep their fur rubbed the right way.

Tidewater, now, if you are one of those who like to be jollied along, and to be regarded as an oracle in the family circle, and to listen to the song of your own praises, marry a Southern girl. There may be tit-for-tat when there will be holes in your stockings and the butcher bills run riot, and you could wish things different around the house, but you will live in an atmosphere of adulation that will make you purr like a cat by the fire.

So there you are, and you can take your choice: but a good American girl from any section is good enough for any man.

DOROTHY DIX.

THE CHAMPION

BY RING LARDNER

It was Midge's first professional engagement in the manly art. Also it was the first time in weeks that he had earned twelve dollars.

On the way to Duane's he had to pass Niemann's. He pulled his cap over his eyes and increased his pace until he had gone by. Inside Niemann's stood a trusting bartender, who for ten days had staked Midge to drinks and allowed him to ravage the lunch on a promise to come in and settle the moment he was paid for the "spellin."

Midge strode into Duane's and aroused the napping bartender by slapping a silver dollar on the festive board.

"Gimme a shot," said Midge.

The shooting continued until the wind-up at the Star was over and part of the fight crowd joined Midge in front of Duane's bar. A youth in the early twenties, standing next to young Kelly, finally summoned enough courage to address him.

"Wasn't you in the first bout?" he ventured.

"Yeh," Midge replied.

"My name's Hersch," said the other. Midge received the startling information in silence.

"I don't want to butt in," continued Mr. Hersch, "but I'd like to buy you a drink."

"All right," said Midge, "but don't overstrain yourself."

Mr. Hersch laughed uproariously and beckoned to the bartender.

"You certainly gave that wop a trimmin' tonight," said the buyer of the drink, when they had been served. "I thought you'd kill him."

"I would if I hadn't let up," Midge replied. "I'll kill 'em all."

"You got the wallop all right," the other said admiringly.

"Have I got the wallop?" said Midge. "Say, I can kick like a mule. Did you notice them muscles in my shoulders?"

"Notice 'em? I couldn't help from noticin' 'em," said Hersch. "I says to the fella settin' alongside o' me, I says: 'Look at them shoulders! No wonder he can hit.' I says to him."

"Just let me land and it's good-bye, baby," said Midge. "I'll kill 'em all."

The oral manslaughter continued until Duane's closed for the night. At parting, Midge and his new friend shook hands and arranged for a meeting the following evening.

For nearly a week the two were together almost constantly. It was Hersch's pleasant role to listen to Midge's modest revelations concerning himself, and to buy every time Midge's glass was empty. But there came an evening when Hersch regretfully announced that he must go home to supper.

"I got a date for eight bells," he confided. "I could stick 'till then, only I must clean up and put on the Sunday clo'es, 'cause she's the prettiest little thing in Milwaukee."

"Can't you fix it for two?" asked Midge.

"I don't know who to get," Hersch replied. "Wait, though. I got a sister and if she ain't busy, it'll be O. K. She's no bum for looks herself."

So it came about that Midge and Emma Hersch and Emma's brother, and the prettiest little thing in Milwaukee foregathered at Wolf's and danced half the night away. And Midge and Emma danced every dance together, for though every little step seemed to induce a new thirst of its own, Lou Hersch stayed too sober to dance with his own sister.

The next day, penniless at last in spite of his phenomenal ability to make someone else settle, Midge Kelly sought out Doc Hammond, matchmaker for the Star, and asked to be booked for the next show.

"I could put you on with Tracy for the next bout," said Doc.

"What's they in it?" asked Midge.

"Twenty if you can," Doc told him.

"Have a heart," protested Midge. "Didn't I look good the other night?"

"You looked all right. But you aren't Freddie Welsh yet by a considerable margin."

"I ain't scared of Freddie Welsh or none of 'em," said Midge.

"Well, we don't pay our boxers by the size of their chests," Doc said. "I'm offerin' you this Tracy bout. Take it or leave it."

"All right; I'm on," said Midge, and he passed a pleasant afternoon at Duane's on the strength of his booking.

Young Tracy's manager came to Midge the night before the show.

"How do you feel about this go?" he asked.

"Me?" said Midge. "I feel all right. What do you mean, how do I feel?"

"I mean," said Tracy's manager, "that we're mighty anxious to win, 'cause the boy's got a chance in Philly if he cops this one."

"What's your proposition?" asked Midge.

"Fifty bucks," said Tracy's manager.

"What do you think I am, a crook? Me lay down for fifty bucks. Not me!"

"Seventy-five, then," said Tracy's manager.

The market closed on eighty and the details were agreed on in short order. And the next night Midge was stopped in the second round by a terrific slap on the forearm.

This time Midge passed up both Niemann's and Duane's having a sizable account at each place, and sought his refreshment at Stein's farther down the street.

When the profits of his deal with Tracy were gone, he learned, by first-hand information from Doc Hammond and the matchmakers at the other "clubs," that he was no longer desired for even the cheapest of preliminaries. There was no danger of his starving or dying of thirst while Emma and Lou Hersch lived. But he made up his mind, four months after his debut by young Tracy, that Milwaukee was not the ideal place for him to live.

"I can lick the best of 'em," he reasoned, "but there ain't no more chance for me here. I can maybe go east and get on somewheres. And besides—"

But just after Midge had purchased a ticket to Chicago with the money he had "borrowed" from Emma Hersch "to buy shoes" a heavy hand was laid on his shoulders and he turned to face two strangers.

"Where are you goin' Kelly?" inquired the owner of he heavy hand.

"Nowheres," said Midge. "What the hell do you care?"

The other stranger spoke:

"Kelly, I'm employed by Emma Hersch's to see that you do right by her. And we want you to stay here until you've done it."

"You won't get nothin' but the worst of it, monkeying with me," said Midge.

Nevertheless, he did not depart for Chicago that night. Two days later, Emma Hersch became Mrs. Kelly, and the gift of the groom, when once they were alone, was a crushing blow on the bride's pale cheek.

Next morning, Midge left Milwaukee as he had entered it—by fast freight.

"They's no use kiddin' ourself any more," said Tommy Haley. "He might get down to thirty-seven in a pinch, but if he done below that a mouse could step him. He's a welter, that's what he is and he knows it as well as I do. He's growed like a weed in the last six mont's. I told him, I says: 'If you don't quit growin' they won't be nobody for you to box, only Willard and them'."

He says 'Well, I wouldn't run away from Willard if I weighed twenty pounds more'."

"He must hate himself," said Tommy's brother.

"I never seen a good one that didn't," said Tommy. "And Midge is a good one; don't make no mistake about that. I wisht we could of got Welsh before the kid growed so big. But it's too late now. I won't make no holler, though, if we can match him up with the Dutchman."

"Who do you mean?"

"Young Goetz, the welter champ. We mightn't not get so much dough for the bout itself, but it 'd roll in afterward. What a drawin' card we'd be, 'cause the people pays their money to see the fella with the wallop, and that's Midge. And we'd keep the title just as long as Midge could make the weight."

"Can't you land no match with Goetz?"

"Sure, 'cause he needs the money. But I've went careful with the kid so far and look at the results I got! So what's the use of takin' a chance? The kid's comin' every minute and Goetz is goin' back faster'n big Johnson did. I think we could lick him now; I'd bet my life on it. But six mont's from now they won't be no risk. He'll of licked himself before that time. Then all as we'll have to do is sign up with him and wait for the referee to stop it. But Midge is so crazy to get at him now that I can't hardly hold him back."

The brothers Haley were lunching in a Boston hotel. Dan had come down from Holyoke to visit with Tommy and to watch the latter's protege go twelve rounds, or less, with Bud Cross. The bout promised little in the way of a contest, for Midge had twice stepped the Baltimore youth and Bud's reputation for gameness was all that had earned him the date. The fans were willing to pay the price to see Midge's hay-making left, but they wanted to see it used on an opponent who would not jump out of the ring the first time he felt its crushing force. But Cross was such an opponent, and his willingness to stop boxing gloves with his eyes, ears, nose and throat had long enabled him to escape the horrors of honest labor. A game boy was Bud, and he showed it in his battered, swollen, discolored face.

"I should think," said Dan Haley, "the kid'd do whatever you tell him after all you done for him."

"Well," said Tommy, "he's took my dope pretty straight so far, but he's so sure of himself that he can't see no reason for waitin'. He'll do what I say, though; he'd be a sucker not to."

"You got a contrac' with him?"

"No I don't need no contrac'. He knows it was me that drug him out o' the gutter and he ain't goin' to turn me down now, when he's got the dough and bound to get more. Where'd he of been at if I hadn't listened to him when he first come to me? That's pretty near two years ago now, but it seems like last week. I was sittin' in the 'Hoot' across from the Pleasant Club in Philly, waitin' for McCann to count the dough and come over, when this little bum blowed in and tried to stand the house off for a drink. They told him bothin' doin' and to beat it out o' there, and then he seen me and come over to where I was sittin' and sat me wasn't I a boxin' man and I told him who I was. Then he sat me for money to buy a shave and I told him to set down and I'd buy it for him.

"Then we got talkin' things over and he told me his name and told me about fightin' a couple o' prelims out to Milwaukee. So I says, 'Well, boy, I don't know how good or how rotten you are, but you don't never get nowheres trainin' on that stuff.' So he says he'd cut it out if he could get on in a bout and I says I would give him a chance if he played square with me and didn't touch no more to drink. So we shook hands and I took him up to the hotel with me and give him a bath and the next day I bought him some clo'es. And I staked him to eats and sleeps for over six weeks. He had a hard time breakin' away from the polish, but finally I thought he was fit and I give him his chanct. He went on with Smiley Sayer and stopped him so quick that Smiley thought sure he was poisoned.

"Well you know what he's did since. The only beatin' in his record was by Tracy in Milwaukee before I got hold of him, and he's licked Tracy three times in the last year.

"I've wave him all the best of it in a money way and he's got seven thousand bucks in cold storage. How's that for a kid that was in the gutter two years ago? And he'd have still more yet if he wasn't so nuts over clo'es and got to stop at the good hotels and so forth."

"Where's his home at?"

"Well, he ain't really got no home. He came from Chicago and his mother canned him out o' the house for bein' no good. She give him a raw deal, I guess, and he says he won't have nothin' to do with her cuhost the comin' to him first. She's got a pile o'money he says so he ain't worrying about her."

The gentlemen under discussion entered the cafe and swaggered to Tommy's table, while the whole room turned to look.

Midge was the picture of health despite a slightly colored eye and an ear that seemed to have no opening. But perhaps it was not his healthiness that drew all eyes. His diamond horse-shoe tie pin, his purple cross-striped shirt, his orange shoes and his light blue suit fairly screamed for attention.

"Where you been?" he asked Tommy. "I been lookin' all over for you."

"Set down," said his manager.

"No time," said Midge. "I'm goin' down to the w'arf and see 'em unload the fish."

"Shake hands with my brother Dan," said Tommy.

Midge shook with the Holyoke Haley.

"If you're Tommy's brother, you're O. K. with me," says Midge, and the brothers beamed with pleasure.

Cowboy In Bronze Will Be Placed On Grounds Of Capitol, Artist's Gift

Sculptured by Madame Constance Whitney Warren, It is Said to be Worth Over $25,000 for Reproduction Alone.

By The Associated Press.

AUSTIN, Texas, Sept. 25.—A cowboy statue in bronze, modeled by Madame Constance Whitney Warren, American sculptress in Paris, has been presented to the state of Texas by the artist and is to be located upon the state capitol grounds at Austin as soon as arrangements for shipping the huge monument can be made, according to announcement here today by Gov. Pat M. Neff, who has officially accepted the gift on the part of the people of Texas.

Worth Over $25,000

Aside from its artistic worth, which would be inestimable if the tremendous sensation created when the statue was exhibited at the Paris Salon means anything, the cost of reproduction alone would amount to $25,000, according to the Texas governor.

The gift of this remarkable work of art, which portrays a Texas cowboy upon a bucking bronco, came to Texas instead of one of a number of other western states bidding for it, as a result of Governor Neff's trip to New York this summer during the national democratic convention. The governor met friends in New York who were acquaintances of Madame Constance Whitney Warren, and secured the gift of the statue to the state while in New York.

Writes to Neff

In presenting the statue to the state of Texas, the sculptress wrote the following letter to the Texas governor:

"I am sending you herewith the deed of gift for my statue of the cowboy, and I am getting the statue ready to be shipped as rapidly as possible. I am highly pleased and honored that you and the citizens of the state of Texas have so kindly accepted it."

The deed of gift signed by the sculptress in Paris accompanied the letter to the Texas governor, and an instrument accepting the gift on the part of the people of Texas has been prepared by Governor Neff.

Coming Via Galveston

The statue is expected to arrive in Texas by way of Galveston. Madame Warren is of an old New York family of artistic temperament, and it is said that she has always been interested in the far west where her father lived in his youth as a mining man. Her work as a sculptress in portraying animals in action, especially horses, has been declared remarkable by art critics. She received honorable mention at the Paris Salon by the French jury for her cowboy statue, pictures of which have been presented in all Paris theaters and principal newspapers.

U.S. May Act To Bar Drama From Broadway Stage

"What Price Glory" Said To Violate National Defense Laws

OFFICERS COMPLAIN

Bullard and Pluckett Say Producer Should Close Up His Theatre

By The Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 25.—Federal action against the Broadway success "What Price Glory" as a violation of the national defense act was talked of by the United States district attorney's office tonight.

General Robert L. Bullard, commander of the second corps area, U. S. army, and Admiral Charles F. Plunkett, commandant of the Brooklyn navy yard were declared to have demanded that immediate steps be taken against producers of the play.

According to members of the federal attorney's staff, the general and the admiral complained that the drama, with its profanity besprinkled portrayal of life with the marines abroad during the world war "curtails enlistments and in that way violates the national defense act."

This was the latest development in Mayor Hylan's move to institute police censorship of all New York theaters, aimed at eliminating "nudity, obscienty and indecency" from the local stage. It was indicated that the demands of Admiral Plunkett and General Bullard solved the mystery surrounding the motive of the Hylan move.

That Major General Bullard and Admiral Plunkett had placed the matter in the hands of federal authorities was revealed by J. M. Wolff, assistant United States district attorney.

"If we proceed against "What Price Glory" we will do so under section 125 of the national defense act which in substance prohibits any one wearing the uniform of the army, navy or marines but an enlisted man or an officer in the service" Wolff said.

There is an exception which permits the uniform to be worn upon the stage provided there is nothing done in connection with it which might tend to bring discredit upon those branches of the service.

Wichita Falls In Class A on Water Purity By State

Municipal Analysis by Health Department Places City First

MANY TURNED DOWN

B and A Classifications Are Assigned to Many Smaller Communities

By The Associated Press.

Classification of all municipal water supplies in the state into grades A, B and C, has been announced by Dr. Malone Duggan, state health officer.

Grade A has been assigned to Wichita Falls:

Grade A represents those water supplies that are reasonably safe for drinking purposes at all times. It also indicates that monthly reports are submitted by these towns to the state board of health, giving data concerning daily operation of the water plant and the method of laboratory control, according to Dr. Duggan's announcement.

B Not So Good

Grade B represents towns whose water supplies do not come up fully to the state board of health regulations, but suggested improvements are being made.

Grade C indicates that the public water supply in the listed towns has been found unfit for drinking purposes except when boiled or otherwise treated.

The demand upon the state board of health for analysis of water specimens has become so great that Dr. Duggan has found it necessary to adopt certain standards to be observed by cities shipping water, he said. A standard shipping case has been adopted. It can be constructed at a nominal cost, the plans for construction being furnished by the state board of health upon request, according to Dr. Duggan's announcement.

KARNAK

Bring Relief to Texas Man When Everything Else Fails

The ravaging effects of indigestion on the system and the quick and thorough way in which Andre's marvelous new medicine, Karnak, overcomes this health-wrecking trouble and restores the system to a condition of healthy vitality and vigor is forcefully demonstrated by the case of Mr. J. W. Beavers, well known citizen of Elgin, Texas:

"My digestion was so bad that food seemed to do me more harm than good," states Mr. Beavers. "Even at that I could eat but little on account of my poor appetite, and I lost weight and strength and got in a badly run-down condition. My sleep was very restless, also, and though I took all kin. of treatments during the past three years none of them seemed to help me.

"Well sir, Karnak gave me a splendid appetite, built me up in weight and strength and set me in a general healthy condition. It's certainly a great medicine, and I would be doing it an injustice not to say so."

Karnak is sold in Wichita Falls by the Ben F. Smith Drug Co., and in Burkburnett by the Burkburnett Pharmacy.—Adv.

Southern Loop Champs Squeeze Out Panthers 2 to 1

Merz Outchunks Ralph Head In Spectacular Duel

Phelan Triples and Scores On Sacrifice Fly By Sears

PROTHRO WINS GAME

Bischoff Cuts Away Another Chick Marker With Hard Catch

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Sept. 24.—Memphis, Southern association champions, drew first blood in the 1924 series for the championship of the south, by defeating Fort Worth, Texas league pennant winners, 2 to 1, in the first game of the Dixie series played to a decision.

It was a game of thrills with Otto Merz, veteran hurler, pitted against Ralph Head, former major leaguer. Merz held the hard hitting Texans to five hits, scattered through nine many innings. Head allowed nine, but likewise they were scattered.

Cats Take Lead.

The Panthers started the game with a lead, putting over their tally in the initial round, and held the advantage until the sixth when Memphis shoved across the run that tied the score. The deciding run came in the eighth when "Doc" Prothro came home from second—which he held by virtue of a long drive to left, when Carr Smith smashed a clean single to center.

Phelan, who drove out two of the five hits Merz allowed, one a triple and the other a double, scored the Fort Worth run on the throw-in of Sear's long fly to center which followed Phelan's smash to the left field wall. Memphis scored in the sixth, Prothro crossing the plate with this run on Smith's fly to center.

Much Fast Fielding.

Spectacular fielding plays were numerous. In the sixth, La Motte, Memphis shortstop stretched himself to his full length, and brought down Phelan's drive that looked certain for a hit, and in another George Bischoff put an end to the Memphis hope for a run outracing Yaran's high foul to the dugout. The catch brought the stands to their feet.

A fast double play—Kraft to Tavener to Kraft, the first of the series, retired Memphis in the third.

Annual All-City Golf Competition Will Be Staged

Hale, Mobley and Strachan To Arrange Details Today

FIRST BIG TOURNEY

Qualifying Rounds to Begin Saturday of Next Week

Plans for the staging of the first all-Wichita Falls golf tournament which will bring into competition players from both the Country and Municipal clubs are to be worked out today. Jack Hale and George Mobley will represent the Municipal club with Bill Strachan, Country club professional, on the tournament committee.

It is understood that qualifying rounds will get under way Saturday of next week and run through to Wednesday night. There are to be three, possibly four flights, and each golfer will play from scratch. It is the plan of golfers to make this tourney an annual affair, and suitable prizes and trophies will be arranged for.

Suggestion has been made that the tourney be held on a home-and-home basis, that is, one year on one club course and the next on the other. A coin will be flipped to decide the course the meet will be staged on this year and from there on out the tourney is to alternate between the two club courses unless by agreement of both clubs other arrangements are made.

Trophies will be given to victors and runners-up in each flight with possibly the prize for the first flight being put up for annual competition, going to the individual winning it three years.

Enthusiasm and competitive spirit between golfers of both clubs is beginning to reach a high pitch, and expectations are that the tournament this year will prove a huge success.

Details will be announced just as soon as the trounament committee irons out all rough spots and arrives at a final conclusion of rules and regulations.

Football Tickets On Sale Today

Tickets to the Decatur college-Wichita Falls high school football game Saturday afternoon will be on sale today at Tipton's drug store and Central drug store, according to Coach McCallum.

The Coyotes are rounding into fairly good form for this contest and high school followers look for a very hard fought battle. Thursday's practice session was devoted to skull practice, signal drill, and defensive work against forward pass attacks. All the plays were gone over and studied thoroughly for the purpose of making sure there will be no mix-up on signals Saturday.

Neither the high school nor Decatur was in position last night to designate starting lineups.

WILL MAX REPEAT?

—By Feg Murray

With the National amateur golf championship well underway the good golf fan—and his name is Legion—is doping out the chances of Max Marston's retaining his title. In the first place, the tournament is played at the Merion Cricket club near Philadelphia, which is Marston's own course. That will help him, undoubtedly. Then, too, Max is playing a fine game this year. He always does, for that matter, and his winning the championship last year at Flossmoor was the ultimate reward for years of perseverance, good golf and a "never give up" spirit. Last year Marston beat Jones, Wellss, Ouimet and Sweetser, a performance as remarkable as Sweetser's triumph the year before. Max didn't give up when he was playing Jones, even though the young Open champion was shooting four better than par.

Nevertheless the odds are at least 25 to 1 that Marston does not win this year. No amateur champion has won twice in succession since Jerome Travers led the field in 1912 and 1913. It was easier to win in those days, too, as the entry list was not nearly so large as now. Marston's fellow townsman Bill Tilden, has no trouble in keeping his title year after year. Perhaps, like Tilden, Max will meet a Johnson in the finals this year.

Ancient Rivals To Meet Again For Golf Honors

Jones Faces Ouimet In Semi-Finals of Tourney At Ardmore, Pa.

MARSTON VS. VON ELM

Winners of Two Matches To Fight it Out For Championship

Special to The Record News.

ARDMORE, Pa., Sept. 25.—Two former title holders, the present amateur king, and a former sectional champion, who has been long a contender for golfing honors, were left in the national amateur tournament for the semi-finals tomorrow.

The third round today, one former American champion, the present inter-collegiate title holder and two former sectional champions, were eliminated.

Jones Is Winner

Bobby Jones, of Atlanta, former open champion, today defeated Rudolph Knepper, former Trans-Mississippi champion by 6 and 4.

The semi-finals tomorrow will see Jones playing one of his closest friends, Francis Ouimet, former open and amateur champion, who today defeated his fellow Bostonian, also a former amateur, and a close friend—Jess E. Guilford. The score was 4 and 3.

Max Marston today defeated the intercollegiate champion, Dexter Cummins of Yale, and Chicago. At Marston's request, the score was officially recorded as 2 to 1, although experts thought he won the last hole.

Tomorrow Marston will play George Von Elm of Los Angeles, former Trans-Mississippi champion, who today, by 7 and 6, eliminated E. H. Driggs, former New York state title holder.

Golf

As Champions Play It

How do you manage to get such long drives?

Answered by
Bill Strachan
Wichita Falls Golf Club Professional.

Hitting the ball correctly and with great speed allows the player to get everything into his shot and with no lost movement. Independent movements of the hands and arms, swinging from the shoulders, plus the foot and knee movement that turns the body, give one the speed that is required to drive a long ball, instead of the body moving the arms and legs, as is so common among poor players.

BRASSCOS SWEEP SERIES.

Ulrich Holds Baltimore to Five Hits, And Wins Final, 7-2.

WATERBURY, Conn., Sept. 24.—Dutch Ulrich held the Baltimore International league champions to five hits in the final game of the series today, Waterbury winning 7 to 2, and making a clean sweep of the entire series.

Thomas, who opposed Ulrich on the mound, was hit hard, many extra base hits contributing to Waterbury's score. The International league champions scored but three runs in the entire series to 17 for their Eastern league rivals.

RALEY SAYS HOWDY TO TWILIGHT PLAYERS

Judge Raley, versatile gent who took care of the Wichita Falls Twilight baseball league averages the past season, dropped a line Thursday to the sports editor of the Record-News saying "howdy to the gang." Judge was well liked by Twilight league players. He was a hard worker, and will be missed next year. Raley is in Lubbock and connected with the Lubbock building and loan association.

Elmer McMullen Has Shade Better Of Pat Corbett in 12-Round Scrap

Joe Denton Knocks Out Rube Murray in First Round—Moko Beats Lee—Riley Bests Jack Denton

By BLONDY CROSS

Elmer McMullen, Dodge City, Kan., welterweight, had a shade the better of the going in Thursday night's legion 12-round main event with Pat Corbett of Holdenville, Okla. Corbett was too clever for McMullen to harm materially, but the Kansas battler bored in practically the entire route and socked away. The early portion of the scrap was just about even-stephen with the exception of the fourth round when Corbett peppered McMullen merrily with straight lefts and short rights. Through the fifth and sixth canton Pat scored more but lacked the weight McMullen put into his punches. The rounds were good draws.

McMullen Bores In

McMullen forced Corbett around the ring, ever on the offensive, in the seventh and eighth with hard right and left hooks, earning the rounds by a fair margin. Neither battler showed much in the way of viciousness during the ninth, but tugged most the route at close quarters. The round was a draw. McMullen forced Corbett back in the tenth, and won the round by a shade. The eleventh was even, but McMullen garnered the final session nicely, cleanly outslugging Corbett, but not putting him in very serious trouble.

Joe a Fast Worker

Joe Denton, Amarillo welter and the most popular boxer of the year as far as Wichita Falls fandom is concerned, took care of Rube Murray, Altus scrapper, in short order. Joseph stepped out at the gong, met Murray nearly in his own corner, and with a flurry of rights and lefts, dropped Ruben for seven counts. Murray was practically out on his feet when Joe stepped in again and beat the Oklahoman down for more than the fatal ten. The bout had been scheduled for 10 rounds.

Lee Game Boy

George Lee of Holdenville, showed great gobs of gameness in his eight-round embroglio with Moko Carpentr of Waco. Carpenter punched Lee in the final chukker until George was all but down and completely out, but Lee stayed up after one knockdown and took everything Moko could produce. Lee was in such a bad way that after the first half minute of the round he failed to start a punch for the also very weary Moko.

The first round was even with Carpenter having possibly an edge. Carp socked Lee to the midriff a number of times in the second, gathering in this round. Lee came back wickedly in the third and sent Carpenter to the canvas three times. Carp came up on the first knockdown without a count. The second and third times he took the count of nine, gathering his wits.

Carpenter pulled the comeback stunt in the fourth and earned an edge. Both maulers were all in during the fifth, and neither landed a solid blow. The round was a hugging contest.

Carp Outlasts George

The sixth saw Carpenter take the lead again. He knocked Lee down once, and won the round by a wide margin. The seventh saw neither boxer get away with anything. Lee stung Carp in the first few seconds of the eighth. Moko's knees sagged, and he went down. Lee in his excitement hit Carpenter while he was down, thereby really forfeiting the bout. However, the blow merely glanced off Moko's back, and was accidental, anyhow. Moko came up, tore into Lee, dropped the Holdenville boy for the count of six, and after George got up, mauled him around the ring with Lee retaliating not in the least. Lee was badly beaten.

Jimmy Riley, Altus youngster took three rounds of a four-round tilt with Jack Denton. Denton was the aggressor, but was bested on the exchanges. Riley grabbed the first round by a shade, and won the second after he sent Denton to the floor without a count. Denton was by far the aggressor in the third, stung Riley several times, but took much punishment in return. The round was a draw. Riley was better in the fourth, and clearly outpunched Jack.

The writer of this article after refereeing the curtain raiser and the Carpenter-Lee bout was vociferously hooted and hissed because he gave the decision to Carpenter, and was then ordered from the ring by Promoter Don Wofford. He still contends his decision was right, but recognizes so far as those who booed and hissed him are concerned that they still are entitled to the great American 'privilege of differing with him if they want to.

Sports Survey by Norman Brown

Speaking of one-man pitching staffs, Cleveland has one this year. At least one man, young Joe Shaute, has kept the team from fighting with Connie Mack for the cellar honors.

* * *

The 1924 season will be marked down as a tragic one for Ty Cobb. This peppery leader rally believed last spring that this was his year. He had a right to that belief. He had finished second in 1923 despite the illness of Rigney, lack of a good second baseman and frequent lapses of his pitchers.

Last spring Rigney reported a new man physically. The pitchers loomed up in good shape. His second basing problem seemed cleared when Derrill Pratt apparently obtained a new lease on life.

The Tigers started the season with a bang. Pratt went great at second. Cobb got the pitching he expected.

Then things began to happen. Pratt's legs gave out. Cobb made two shifts at second in a vain effort to strengthen that position. First Burke, a rookie, was tried out. Then O'Rourke, whose baseball life has been a hectic one for a dozen years, was purchased from minor league club. Neither filled the bill.

Cobb was carrying on with this gap in his team when fate struck him another blow.

In Blue, brilliant first sacker, was put out of the game for weeks through injury. And the best man Cobb had for Blue's job was Pratt.

As for his pitchers—

Herman Pillette, a sensation in 1923, went bad with a lame arm.

George Dauss, old reliable George, suffered a like ailment.

And then the batting strength of the Jungaleers was weakened when Harry Heilmann went into a prolonged slump.

Truly, the year has held little to cheer up the Georgia leader—unless it be his own record of 200 safe hits. It was the ninth campaign he had slammed out 200 or more and carried him a year beyond the mark set by Willie Keeler and tied in 1922 by Cobb.

* * *

Now, 'tis said, Jim Jeffries is to appear in comic roles in the movies. That's a far cry from the role of evangelist, which the former heavyweight champion was once hooked to fill.

* * *

Many fans about the American league circuit are wondering at the failure of the Cleveland Indians to land somewhere in the A. L. melee. One glance at the league standings tells the story. While ranking with the Tigers and Browns in batting the Indians are seventh in fielding and one gets tired reading down the list of pitchers in the averages before finding a Cleveland hurler.

* * *

As the baseball eyes are turned to the coming world's series there comes word that George Tyler, one of the triumvirate of Boston pitchers who hurled Stalling's Miracle team to the world's championship in 1914, is itching to come back as a big league pitcher. He has been hurling for a Boston twilight league outfit this season. George may be serious but it is a vain hope.

Bill Lange, former big leaguer, and now known also as the uncle of Long George Kelly of the Giants, is daring Dan Cupid to slip the third strike over on him. According to reports from the Pacific coast, Lange has just taken his third wife. He was divorced by his first wife in 1913 and his second in 1919.

Lange won fame as centerfielder for the Chicago Cubs. Of late years he has been an "ivory hunter" for the big leagues.

Carey Hits for Circuit In Ninth With Two On Cushions

NEW YORK, Sept. 25.—The New York Giants vanquished Pittsburgh for the third successive time today and advanced another step toward their fourth straight pennant on the wreck of Pirate hopes. A crowd of 25,000 saw the fighting Giants batter out a 5 to 4 victory and crush beyond recall the last lingering chance of Pittsburgh in the National league race.

The Pirates, however, went down with colors flying in the ninth inning when with two out they rallied and pulled up to within a run of the champions on Carey's home run drive, which scored Schmidt and Moore ahead of him.

St. Louis Routs Grechger in First, but Is Helpless Before Betts

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 25.—The Phillies closed their home season today by defeating St. Louis 5 to 3. The visitors knocked Grechger out of the box in the first inning, but were helpless against the hurling of young Betts, who held them to four hits during the balance of the contest and twice fanned the side. Betts, who held down the Cards until the eighth inning when Leach started a rally by lifting a homer out of the park. Two more runs crossed the plate before relief pitchers Stuart and Fowler could retire the side.

JACK-LUIS SCRAP BEST

Tilt Between Champ and Argentine Greatest of September Fights.

Among the famous fights in history that have taken place in September—and there have been many—two stand out above all others. The Corbett-Sullivan battle at New Orleans in 1892 and the Dempsey-Firpo fight at the Polo grounds a year ago far overshadow any other fistic encounters ever held in the month of September. True, the historic Gans-Nelson fight at Reno on September 3, 1906, which was finally held on a fool after forty rounds, was one of the most memorable battles of ring history, but the heavyweights have the edge over any other division.

The first battle marked the passing of the championship from the "Boston Strong Boy" to Corbett, the young bank clerk, and started a new style of fighting—the dancing, jabby hit and get-away type—which was so popular while Gentleman Jim held the title. The Dempsey-Firpo fight is too well remembered to need any comment—it was one fight in a thousand for pure, unadulterated thrills—there were twenty rounds of action crowded into less than two.

Other famous fights that were held in the month of September were Dempsey versus Miske, September 6, 1920; Ketchell vs. Papke, September 8, 1908; the Nelson-Britt; Gans Britt; and Nelson-Gans fight, all held on September 9, in 1905, 1907, 1908 respectively; the Villa-Buff Fehr September 14, 1922; the Carpentier-Siki upset, September 24, 1922; and the historic Cribb-Molineaux bare knuckle fight, September 28, 1811—and don't forget Wills and Firpo, 1924.

Billy Whiskers

By FRANCES TREGO MONTGOMERY.

Yesterday Billy butted a man who had been unkind to him. The man had to be helped out of the barrel into which he fell.

In the meantime Toodles and Billy trotted out of the yard and over to the studio.

"I know the way there," said Toodles, "and he better get out of here before Snub, the nickname the man goes by in the studio on account of his exceedingly short, wide snub nose, gets out of the barrel and comes after us. He has a nasty, quick temper and will hurt you in some way when he is angry even if you haven't done anything. And now you have not only hurt his dignity but have butted him besides, he is likely to club you, throw stones at you, or kick you dreadfully hard."

"Oh, no; he won't kick me or do any of those other things to me. I never allow anyone to abuse me. I haven't taken care of myself all these years to be abused now. I'll teach him to respect the feelings of a goat and a pony, too, for if ever I catch him hurting you I'll butt him harder than I did this time.

"Do you see that long, two-story white building ahead of us?" asked Toodles. "That is where we are going. It is the Emmaneun Studio and is the largest ground-floor studio space in the world, I have heard. Have you ever been in a moving-picture studio where the films are made?"

"No, I never have," admitted Billy.

"Well, then you have some interesting things ahead of you, for of all busy, exciting places where one never knows what is going to turn up next, give me a moving picture studio! I will tell you about them as we walk along.

"In the first place you can't tell anything about it from the outside. What we see is only a blank wall on one corner of a city block. The building extends around the outside of a big open square. Inside this two-story building are all kinds of workrooms. There are carpenter shops where they build anything from a bridge to an imitation stone wall the director may need to put on his scene. Then there are rooms upon rooms filled with furniture of all kinds, so that when they are setting up a kitchen scene all they have to do is to go to the storeroom and pull out the kitchen table, chairs, china, and so on, or if it is to be a living room scene, go into another room where beautiful furniture is stored, and so on and so on. But the most interesting places are the big galleries where the pictures are taken. These are from fifty to three hundred feet long, with ceilings two stories high, while hanging from these ceilings or running along on little railroads are long lines of electric lights of all colors, used to throw any strength of light they want on the scene below or on the actors and actresses."

(We will hear more about the moving picture studio from Toodles tomorrow.)

Color Cut-Out

"I've brought a present for your little cousin," called Betty, Cut-out's friend, Nancy, as she came running up a big, round red ball. The baby's little hands reached for it, but the ball was too big to hold, so she gave the ball a push that sent it rolling off the porch.

Betty laughed. "She throws all her toys. It's a good thing they're unbreakable. She can bang her doll all she wants to, and the funny little duck in the kind that can't be hurt either."

"When's your aunt going away?" asked Nancy.

"Tomorrow," sighed Betty, "and I'll miss them just something awful."

The duck is yellow and the doll has a pink dress. The baby's little dress is white.

One Mother Says:

My little boy had a habit of wandering from home, and I was often frightened and lost valuable time searching the neighborhood, until I devised the scheme of fastening a whistle to his belt, and making him agree to answer my whistle with his whenever he heard it. Many children have this wandering habit and outgrow it later on if tactfully handled. My son never wanders out of the neighborhood, and so as long as he is within call I do not nag at him.

MAY BE REPUDIATION

Case of Bernard Grant in Chicago Does Not Look Bright.

CHICAGO, Sept. 25.—Walter Krauser, reported yesterday to have repudiated his statement that Bernard Grant, under promises with him to hang for the killing of a policeman, was innocent, was silent today at the county jail. He has not as yet directly disclaimed his statement, in which he said Grant had nothing to do with the holdup and shooting. Otto Christensen, one of the three alleged murderers of Joseph Lazar, denied that he penned the statement which Krauser signed.

Meantime letters of individuals in cities throughout the country continue to come to Grant's attorney containing petitions for clemency for Grant and protesting against the death penalty.

By The Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 25.—Stock prices moved irregularly lower in today's market under a large volume of profit taking sale.

As recently, little attention was paid to the trade news.

Bullish demonstrations in the public utility and motor shares which combined furnished 18 of the 30 new 1924 high records established during the session, featured the day's trading.

Most of the standard industrials lost ground. United States Steel common dropped ½ to 108¾. Baldwin sagged nearly a point to 123¾ and American Can showed a loss of 1¾ at 139¾.

Railroad shares offered better resistance to pressure than the industrials. Peoria and Eastern was one of the outstanding strong spots, rising more than three points to 30¼, the highest price since 1923.

Independent steel stocks yielded readily to selling pressure, Bethlehem Steel dropping more than two points to 43 and Republic, Gulf States and Crucible falling about a point each.

Call money ruled unchanged at 2 per cent. Time money and commercial paper rates held steady with business dull.

Foreign exchange rates fluctuated within narrow and irregular limits.

By The Associated Press.

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 25.—The cotton market experienced a big bulge in today's active trading. Decreasing crop issues due to heavy and constant rains in the eastern belt and to smaller ginnings than expected for October 1, issued during the day by the government were the main stimulating influences. October was further strengthened by very small tenders in both Americas markets on contracts for that month, the first notice day for which was today. October at the highest was 127 points up from the opening low and 105 points above the closing levels of yesterday.

The market opened easier owing to variable Liverpool cables and near the start October, December and January traded 13 to 24 points below the previous close on the big bulge near mid-session. October traded up to 23.42, December to 23.50 and January to 23.50, or 104 to 122 points above the early low. After a moderate recession of about 25 points the market firmed up again in the afternoon and all months made new highs with October, December and January 167 to 197 points above the early lows. The close was near the top showing net gains for the day of 84 to 90 points, October leading.

The weather map showed rather heavy rains in the eastern belt but fair in the west. The official forecast called for continued rainy weather in the eastern belt and somewhat unsettled weather elsewhere. Fears that the crop was deteriorating rapidly and an impression that the next government report would show a low condition and a smaller indicated crop based on rather lower pars than looked for caused shorts to cover freely stop loss orders more or less were uncovered in numbers on the scale up.

The advance encouraged both trade and outside speculative buying.

CHICAGO, Sept. 25.—Big export business totalling 25,000,000 bushels of wheat and 2,500,000 bushels had much to do with bringing about higher prices for wheat today. Wheat closed firm ¾ to 1⅜ cents higher, December 1.36 to 1.36¼ and May 1.40¼ to 1.41⅜, with corn varying from 1 cent decline to ⅜ cent gain, and oats showing ⅛ to ⅜ cents advance. In provisions the outcome ranged from 10 cents setback to a rise of 2 cents.

Favorable weather for the corn crop was largely responsible for the wavering of the corn market until wheat strength became the dominating factor. Oats sympathized more with wheat than with corn.

Provisions were easier with hogs.

Wichitans Find Air Mail Saves Time To Frisco

Several Take Advantage Of Faster Service to Points On West Coast

NO HELP IN EAST

Train Service to New York Just as Fast for Sending Important Letters

A number of Wichita Falls business men are taking advantage of the United States air mail service in sending and receiving important papers between here and the west coast.

Observations at the local post office have revealed, according to officials there, that about a full day's time can be saved in transmission of mail to and from Wichita Falls and San Francisco. Letters sent by train from here to Cheyenne, Wyo., arrive just in time to catch west bound mail planes and therefore make the last 1,000 mile jump to the coast in about 24 hours less time than the fastest mail trains.

Two Days to Frisco.

Mails leaving here at 1:30 in the afternoon over the Denver are in San Francisco the evening of the second day. Returning mails make about the same speed.

From here to points east, nothing can be saved by sending letters via air mail rout from Chicago, due to the fact that excellent train service is maintained from here to the east. A letter leaving here on the Katy at 4 o'clock Monday afternoon is in New York at 2 o'clock Wednesday afternoon, traveling the entire distance by train. As air mail schedules are arranged, time would be lost by sending it that way.

Letters frequently arrive here from San Francisco marked via air mail to Cheyenne, and lately several business houses are directing outgoing mail that way.

U. S. FILES BIG SUIT

Seeks $29,703 From Former Holders of Big Three Oil Stock

Alleging that the company had failed in 1918 and again in 1920 to pay the full amounts due as income tax, the United States has filed suit for $29,-205.31 against 224 former stockholders of the Big Three Oil corporation. The concern was a joint stock association doing business here during the boom days.

The company was dissolved in 1920 and all the assets distributed among the various stockholders. Many of them live in this city, some in Electra, Burkburnett and Iowa Park and others in widely scattered portions of the state. W. C. Edwards, former secretary who is now in Houston, was named as principal defendant.

The case was filed here by Henry Zweifel, U. S. district attorney, for the northern district of Texas, with Commissioner Lantz.

BIG EARED NUISANCE ABATED

Donkey That Drew Fire From Sleepers Now Safe in City Pound.

The Lamar avenue nuisance has been abated.

With the majesty of the law invoked to bring relief, the unwitting disturber has circumvented legal proceedings and has in reality abated itself by wandering into the folds of the city pound. Escape therefrom is difficult without coin of the realm, and the genus donkey is understood to be financially embarrassed at present.

It all started early in the week when residents of the vicinity of Lamar and Seventh presented a petition to the city council, alleging that one borro disturbed their early morning slumbers by its braying. The matter was referred to the city attorney for action.

Learning of this the owner of the big-eared brute put the case in the hands of an attorney also.

Then the city pound man horned in, locked up the trouble and the owner doesn't want to pay the $1.50 necessary to get it out.

Thus has peace once more been restored.

A large assortment of pocket knives, cartridges and other articles were taken from the store.

A sentence of 90 days in the county jail was imposed Thursday on Estelle Phillips, negress, when she entered a plea of guilty before Judge Guy Rogers of the county court at law on charges of theft. She was arrested several days ago by the city police department for stealing several articles of clothing from another negro woman.

All the patients able to be moved were brought out doors to watch the exhibition of acrobatics.

Bullington Tells Demos No Debate On Jim Is Needed

Fireworks, However, Are Promised at American Legion Arena Tonight

HATCHITT REPLIES

Sends Another Letter To Bullington on Receipt Of His Refusal

Fireworks with a strictly democratic tinge will be set off tonight at the Wichita County Democratic club rally to be held in the American Legion arena.

Orville Bullington, local republican leader has declined a challenge from the democrats to meet Judge B. Y. Cummings in joint debate on political question of the day and accordingly the democratic club must forego the entertainment that a debate between the two eminent attorneys would be sure o provide.

Writes to Hatchitt

In a letter to J. B. Hatchitt, president of the democratic club, Mr. Bullington set forth his reason for refusing to accept the challenge. Among other things he says: "democrats and republicans alike are supporting Geo. C. Butte, the people of Texas will not be diverted from the real issue to go on rabbit chasing expeditions concerning issues which the state has no concern."

Tribute to Butte.

A glowing tribute to Dr. Buttte is followed by a scathing denunciation of the Ferguson political record, after which Mr. Bullington says: "since every voter in Texas knows or ought to know Jim Ferguson's record (political) therefore there is nothing to discuss."

The letter ends with "we have had enough strife. Let's put the welfare of Texas first and elect George Butte governor."

Receiving Mr. Bullington's letter last night refusing to accept his debate challenge, Mr. Hatchitt sent him the following:

Mr. Orville Bullington, City

Dear Sir:

I am just handed your letter of today in reply to mine of yesterday inviting you to join a democrat in an open discussion of our respective party issues and candidates. For some reason in your reply, you attempted to limit the scope of the proposed debate to that of platforms only. My letter specifically named the subjects to be discussed as that of "our local and state issues and candidates."

If you found this reduction necessary to supply a needed grace for your refusal I must be content. But if by chance your declination stands on a misapprehension of the subjects to be covered I am glad indeed to set you right and to renew the invitation. Furthermore, if you would only engage in a debate concerning the respective merits of the democratic and republican nominees for governor signs I am authorized to so tender the issue.

I must respectfully dissent from the opinion you express that state and national issues and candidates are to be considered separately. If this be true you and I might both vote the socialist slate for state officers and then redeem our political integrity by marking our ballots for our respective national tickets. The argument you make would seem to depend for its soundness entirely on the old doctrine of state sovereignty which your party destroyed years ago by force of arms. It could only be persuasive if that fine, old southern theory of government still prevailed.

Butte is a republican state and nationally. Practical politics recognizes no Dr. Jerkyls and Mr. Hydes. And, if I might digress, public discussions are always hurtful to such roles.

A vote for Professor Butte not only commends his candidacy but it speaks approval of the doctrines and practices of his party. Any Texas democrat who would thus reproach his party will find it hard in the days to come to account to his conscience for having so given aid and comfort to the organization which has stood throughout the years against every interest of his state and its consistently robbed us by its tariff exactions. The republican party has sections to favor the rich and powerful; it has steadfastly promoted the social and political equality of the races; and found ed on the idea that every power of government should emanate from Washington. It has fastened on the nation a system of federal officialdom whose tyranny is more outrageous than any ever suffered by a Russian peasant.

I must express happy surprise that the colored republican after having been shackled to your party all the years since his freedom, should now exhibit the intelligent patriotism you indicate. The negro will eventually learn that the southern white man is his best and only friend, and that the republican party's exploitation of his vote has produced most of his misery.

Please let me know as soon as you can if you will now join the proposed debate since the issues have been more aptly stated.

Your very truly,

J. B. HATCHETT,
Chairman, Wichita County Democratic club.

The signet ring of Cleopatra was an amethyst.

HOUSTON ENTERS PROTEST

State Health Has Given It Only A Class B Rating

By The Associated Press.

HOUSTON, Sept. 25.—Protest was registered today by Water Commissioner J. H. B. House to the report of Dr. Malone Duggan of the state health department, who included Houston in Class B so far as the water supply is concerned.

This rating is unwarranted and unjust, Mr. House declared. Many Texas cities that secure their water supply from rivers and lakes are listed as Class A, while Houston, which draws its supply entirely from artesian wells, falls a class below.

KLANKRAFT IS PRAISED

The Wizard At Kansas City Says Ideals Means Much

KANSAS CITY, Sept. 25.—Klankraft proclaimed and lived by a million people would destroy sectarianism and unite the Protestant Christians in America within a couple of decades, Dr. H. W. Evans, imperial wizard of the ku klux klan, declared here today in his address on "the klan spiritual" before the final sessions of the second imperial klonvokation of the order.

"The millions enrolled and enrolling in the klan, if they get the vision and they will, are as certain to abolish sectarian bitterness in this country as it is certain that light dispels darkness," Dr Evans continued.

Dr. Evans asserted that while at present the klan apparently is for America, as a few of its principles are applicable in the United States only, the "majority of its principles could be and will be, applied throughout the world."

Referring to "the gigantic klan possibilities," Dr. Evans declared that "partyism in politics has long hindered our national progress." He asserted that the klan's educational program is already modifying this "deplorable condition" and "the signs are that before many years pass the real citizens of our great country, no matter where he resides, will regard himself as an American first and a democrat, republican or something else second.

"Klancraft applied will produce full ordered Americanism."
