TAX-TIME WOES

Well, it's that time of the year -- income taxes are due and many people are burning the old midnight oil, trying to serape together those elusive deductions before the deadline on Tuesday, April 15. Pity poor Willard Haynes—he not only does his own taxes, but those of other people as well. From the looks of things, he isn't gaining much ground. Our investment tip for the year? How about a company that makes adding machine paper? [Pilot Photo by Eddie Bradley]

Agency Gets State Approval

By Eddie Bradley

Frances Iles, who is one of the partners in the A.I.M. Home Health Agency Inc. says that they are currently as happy as can be over the latest developments in getting approval to carry on their business.

"Officially, we have been approved by the Texas Health Facilities Commission in Austin to be a certified home health care agency," she reports.

In basic terms, what this means is that the local company will be able to receive Medicare payments for the work they do, a vital necessity, since most of those who benefit from their services are on Medicare.

All the eggs aren't in the basket yet, as there is one last section of red tape to be overcome before the certification process is complete.

So far, the group has been given verbal approval but must still wait about 60 days to receive their license from the state and a Medicare Provider Number from the HEW-Medicare regional office in Dallas.

All the categories of home health care that had been requested were recently given approval after a hearing in Austin. These categories were skilled nursing, home health aid, physical therapist, speech therapist and medical social services.

In order to gain certification, the local agency has had to undergo a long and expensive process of proving that their existed a genuine need for their service. On May 15, they will pass the first anniversary of incorporation, but still won't have their license papers in hand.

In 1974, the state legislature passed the law requiring the granting of a Certificate of Need for any such agency

Mayor Casterline, Councilmen Sworn In

By Beverly Wilken

Fulton Mayor L.E. Casterline and City Councilmen Pat Loflin, Jim Metzger, Dominga Benavidez, Katherine McLester and Ray Patterson were sworn in by City Secretary Cynthia Tilden during an April 8 meeting of the Fulton City Council.

The mayor and the council were incumbents in the recent city election held on April 5.

After the election votes were canvassed and approved, the Fulton budget was discussed. Revenue for the period of April, 1979, through December, 1979, totalled $8,285. The estimated revenue for January, 1980, through Septembe, 1980, is $8,950 and the same amount for disbursements.

The Council adopted a resolution to employ Allena Jones as the Fulton Tax Assessor-Collector for 1980. A one per cent tax rate was put into effect earlier this year in Fulton.

A resolution was also adopted to request a survey by the Texas Traffic Survey Department of Highway 35 and Cactus Street. The department recores a count on the amount of traffic through the location to see if a stop light is warranted for that particular area.

"We really need it (the stop light), because the traffic is getting worse and worse all the time," said Mayor Casterline.

Council members and concerned citizens attending the meeting agreed with the mayor, and the resolution was passed.

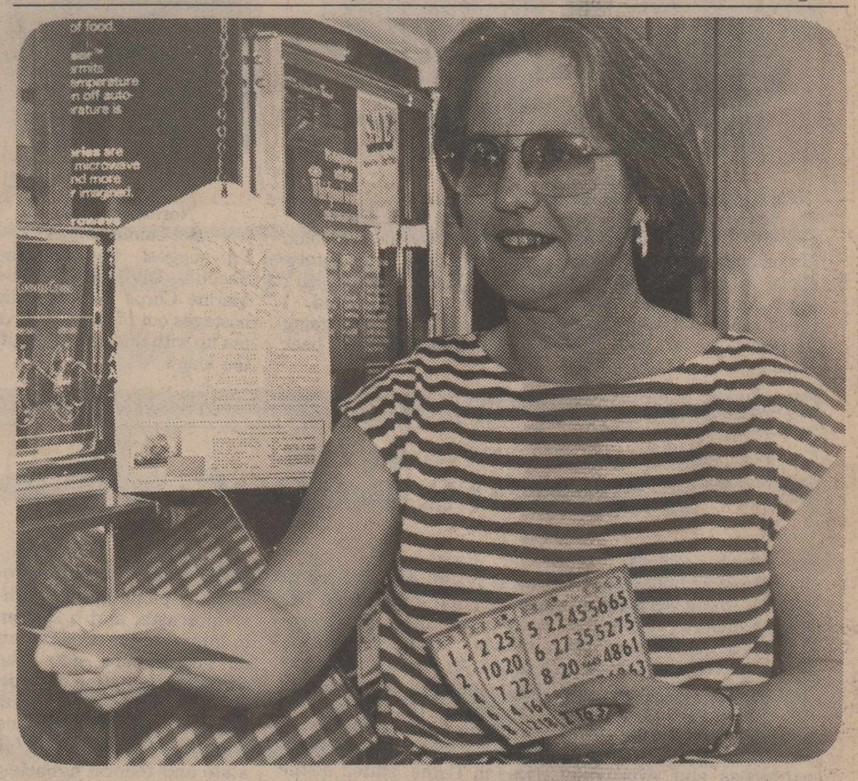

A request had been made in the past for a survey of that intersection, but the traffic count was not sufficient to have a stop light installed there.

Attorney Allen Lee informed the council that the city would not have to pass a zoning ordinance in regards to annexation.

The first step, said Lee, would be for the majority of property owners to request the annexation.

The council decided to

Area Residents Turn Space Into Gardens

By Beverly Wilken

Gardeners all over Texas are looking at their backyards as a potential site to help fight inflation during 1980.

"Vegetable gardening is sweeping Texas as well as the rest of the country," says Dr. Sam Cotner, horticulturist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System. "Not since 1974 has there been such an interest in converting backyard areas into productive vegetable gardens.

"Although the grocery bill is probably not the ideal place to cut costs because many things have increased at a higher rate than food, it's the one place where many Texas families feel they can actually do something about the high cost of living," notes Cotner.

Chester Barre, who is the Rockport-Fulton High School Principal, has been gardening for 48 years. Since he grew up on a farm, he helped his mother each year with the gardening.

Mr. Barre said this years winter garden was excellent, and his spring garden is just now beginning to show results. Each year he rips everything out of the garden to start fresh with a new crop. He grows most vegetables, and celery, which is not grown very often in this area. Celery is a little more difficult to grow because it must be shielded to bleach the stalks, which Mr. Barre does with cardboard wrapped around the stalk, and the soil must be kept very wet.

Soil makes a big difference, said Mr. Barre, and the soil in the Rockport area is extremely sandy. Another big problem in this area is nematodes (worms).

Mr. Barre's 30 x 40 foot garden is in his front yard, and occasionally he plants flowers along with the vegetables for his wife.

Another area gardener, Raymond Owens, Commissioner of Precinct 3, has been gardening for eight years. Mr. Owens said he follows the Agricultural Department Circular instructions on what and how to plant in this type of soil. He is convinced that this areas sandy soil will grow anything with fertilizer. He has grown one pound tomatoes and had one cauliflower that weighed three pounds and seven ounces.

"The main thing is to follow the directions that the Agricultural Department outlines," said Mr. Owens. "Anyone can pick up one of the circulars at the courthouse."

Lois Atwood, a Science teacher at Rockport-Fulton Junior High, has "always had a garden". She raises tomatoes, peppers, beans,

Drug Education Booklet Available In Rockport

"A Reason For Tears," a booklet on drug abuse sponsored by local merchants, is available to school and church groups and civic organizations in the area.

Aimed at education of adults -- parents, teachers and those who work with young people -- the booklet is a joint project of the Rockport police department and Aransas County sheriff's office.

It will be distributed to school teachers and Sunday School teachers, says Police Chief James Craigmile, and is available on request by interested civic organizations.

Some 3000 copies of the booklet were printed, with half going to Craigmile and the other half to Sheriff Bob Hewes for distribution.

The booklet contains information different types of drugs, their effects on the user and hints on how to detect if your child is using some type of drug.

The booklet is available without charge.

Notable Notes

Arbor Day Tribute

The Home and Garden Club will hold a tree planting ceremony on April 25 at the Rockport Ski Basin, at 10:45 a.m. The tree will be planted in the memory of Mr. Emory Spencer. The public is invited.

Social Security Help

A representative of the Social Security Administration will be at Aransas County Courthouse, Rockport, at 9 a.m. Thursday, April 17. The representative will answer questions and help claimants file applications for regular Social Security benefit payments and for Supplimental Security Income benefits.

Nine Rockport Residents To Receive Safe Driving Awards

Nine Rockport residents, employees of the State Department of Highways and Public Transportation office here, will be honored for their safe driving records on Friday, April 18, in Refugio.

Marvin E. Brunson holds the longest safety record among Rockport area employees, with 25 years of accident-free driving.

Others from Rockport who will receive the Safe Drivers' Award will be Mervin J. Bright, 14 years; Kenneth G. Keller, nine years; Brady B. Traweek, eight years; Graden N. McVay and Isabel J. Samora, seven years each; Dionicio Benavidez, six years; and John M. Jacobs and Encarnacion Tamez, five years each.

The award presentations made in Refugio will be for some 55 employees of the highway department's Goliad, Sinton, Rockport and Refugio offices.

The longest safety record among these employees is Lucio C. Rodriguez of Sinton who has been driving without accident for 31 years.

Employees of other offices in the highway department's 10-county District 16 will receive safe-driving awards in other banquets during the coming week.

On Tuesday, April 15, 73 employees in the Corpus Christi area will be honored, and 39 employees of the deartment's Robstown, Alice and Kingsville offices will receive recognition on Wednesday, April 16.

On Thursday, April 17, awards will be presented in Karnes City for 54 departmental employees of the Beeville, George West and Karnes City offices.

If You Failed To Get Census Questionnaire

Aransas County residents who did not receive their 1980 Census questionnaires can call this number -- 1-800-292-7829 -- toll-free.

An employee at the Census office in San Antonio will take your name and address and mail you a questionnaire to fill out.

Census Bureau officials remind residents that there's still time to return the Census questionnaires and be counted.

Households that have not returned their completed census questionnaires by April 11 will be contacted by census enumerators who will begin personnally contacting the households beginning about April 16.

Cancer Crusade Starts

Plans for the 1980 Cancer Crusade, set to start Tuesday, April 15, in Aransas County were firmed up at a noon meeting of the county unit of the American Cancer Society Thursday, April 10.

W.C. Underwood is chairman of the 1980 Crusade effort and will work with volunteers and members of the local cancer society to help raise funds.

In addition to raising funds to help with research in the fight against cancer, the Crusade also is an opportunity to acquaint people with latest developments in cancer research and cure.

In addition to cancer research, the Cancer Society also provides service and rehabilitation programs within the community and works to make people more aware of how they can protect themselves against cancer.

Speaking Out

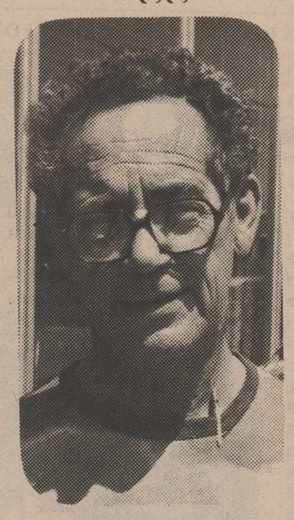

Do you think the United States should take any futher actions against Iran at this time? If so, what would you suggest?

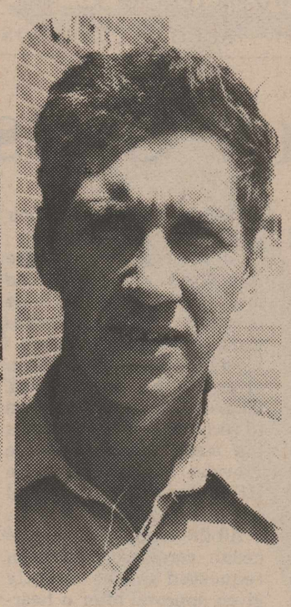

John Hicklin, Copano Ridge
The actions taken to date are probably substantial, they just should have been done about four months ago. If these don't produce results, then further sanctions should immediately be put into effect.

Joe Mills, North Carolina
Whatever was done should have been done immediately. The economic blockage isn't doing that much good. I don't think we are ever going to get the hostages back alive.

Normond Wise, Del Camino Motel
I'd suggest we sent the Second Division of the Marine Corps in to get the hostages out of there. We've put up with this hostage stuff too long.

Austin Franklin, N. Burton
I think we ought to go over there and take our people away from them.

Agnes Reasor, N. Doughty
I think that turning on the screws to our allies and getting them to join our boycott is the best solution.

Frances Iles, Dana Drive
If our hostages are harmed, there should be military retaliation. The economic sanctions were necessary.

Robert Martin, Blue Heron Drive
They should mine the waterway to stop imports and exports to Iran. Then take whatever other actions are necessary to get the hostages out.

Steven Williams, Crescent Court Drive
The story changes every day. They shouldn't tell the public there is hope if there really isn't. I thought more positive actions should have been taken at the beginning.

Senate Report

By State Senator A.R. "Babe" Schwartz

Be prepared!

In order to save your life, or the lives of your family or friends if a hurricane hits the lower Texas Gulf Coast this summer, you need accurate hurricane preparedness and evacuation information pinpointed to your residential area.

A conference in Galveston County during the second week in April could well provide guidelines for all Texas coastal counties in developing workable emergency disaster operations procedures.

The hope that many lives may be saved in our coastal area is based on the ability to provide early warning to residents of specific localities on when they should leave before their own escape routes are flooded.

Information on actual and predicted heavy rainfall in a specific watershed or drainage area, which will affect downstream areas within a predictable number of hours, will be used to warn people to start action on property protection and-or evacuation before the water begins to creep up into their yards and homes.

This grass-roots approach to keeping people totally informed on what to expect and what to do and how soon, is the object of the planned April conference.

As chairman of the Texas Coastal and Marine Council, I asked Galveston County Judge Ray Holbrook to co-sponsor a meeting with me, for all of the mayors of Galveston County's cities, towns, and villages.

In that preliminary planning and discussion meeting, held March 19 in the Galveston County Courthouse—with a majority of the county's mayors present—it was agreed that any successful survival plan depends upon a single coordination source with pre-established lines of communication among and between all affected governmental agencies, which would guarantee delivery and understanding of all emergency information.

Frank Cox, Director of Disaster Emergency Services in Texas, stated at the March 19 meeting that his office sent an extensive flood warning message to all endangered areas of the coast at 3 p.m. on the Tuesday of the beginning of Claudette's disastrous rains. The message was generally ignored or filed without preparedness warnings or action, by governmental agencies, including state agencies which took no effective action to ready themselves or warn and protect the public.

In the March meeting, we proposed five or six basic issues which must be agreed upon when the mayors, law enforcement agencies, civil defense directors, state agency representatives and others involved in disaster emergency preparedness and operations, meet at the Nessler Civic Center in Texas City in April.

The first key issue is to agree to employ a full-time emergency preparedness and operations director, to be chosen by the mayors through a selection process which they will devise. Galveston County has agreed to fund the first year's salary for the person selected.

Existing contingency plans in some of our cities will be an essential part of the county-wide emergency coordination effort. The cities and towns which do not have such plans will be aided in devising their own plans, with assistance from officials of the cities which do, and the new county coordinator.

Among the issues to be discussed in the April meeting are how to demand and obtain accurate regionally-pinpointed weather forecasts, and a system to guarantee that each unit of government gets the correct information promptly. We must know what demands can be made and what we can get from all state and federal agencies, such as the Texas Highway Department, the Department of Public Safety, the Texas Water Resources Board, and others.

Decisions as to shelter opening responsibility and provisions must be identified in advance and also guaranteed, and the mayors need uniform policy on evacuation decision-making, and coordination of that effort.

The county coordinator must then assimilate all of that information into a projected plan to be ready for the 1980 hurricane season which begins June 1. It's no small job, but a single life saved is worth any necessary effort.

Hurricane preparedness and survival information already published may be obtained by writing to me at P.O. Box 12068, Austin, Texas, 78711.

State Of The Region

Coastal Bend Council of Governments

An increasing number of children are adrift, unwanted by parents, finding no place to belong. On the other hand, an increasing number of parenting programs are being held and well-attended.

These are among the facts you hear as you sit in meetings of the Juvenile Social Adjustment Committee, advisory to the CBCOG. Refugio County Sheriff Chato Bauer is chairman of the committee, in which both law enforcement officers and social workers are looking for ways that a unified approach might help them find answers:

The committee is starting its quest by hearing from various professional who work with juveniles as to what they are encountering and where they see opportunities to improve the situation.

One of those to whom committee members have listened is Jerry Kizerian, director of Family Counseling Services.

He says parenting is to be learned, as are other skills.

The child learns his first social skills, how to relate to others, in the family, then the neighborhood and the school.

The child needs to receive consistent signals: "These are the limits beyond which you cannot go. Within these limits, you can make your own decisions." There are early clues to indicate signals are not getting through clearly.

But Kizerian says that parents who will not or do not recognize them are taken by surprise when the child reaches the teens and they think that "suddenly" they cannot control him.

Clark Miller, committee member and director of the Nueces County Juvenile Department, calls the unwanted children "throw-away children." But he takes a historic and optomistic view.

He considers this a transitional period we will find our way through. Before World War II, children were valuable in a family, working on the farm or in the home and store.

Then began the period of liberation, women's lib, men's lib, and children's lib. A period of affluence set in.

For the first time, middle income families could take skiing trips or sail around tropic isles. Children were holding them back from taking advantage of all the opportunities suddenly opened up by liberation and affluence.

The growing interest in parenting programs he finds to be the most encouraging sign. He thinks that as the society works through these new relationships, with the value of the child something other than in terms of farm work and the parents more accustomed to personal choice in their lives and finding personal and family values, designs will be found for strong family units.

Young people will give more analytical thought to whether or not they want children.

In the meantime, while history is at work, the committee looks at ways to help the individuals who make up the family in transition, and the throw-away children.

Watching Washington

The word "aquaculture" may sound like Greek, but someday it's going to be a household word.

Aquaculture—or aquiculture—actually has a Latin, not Greet root. It means, literally, farming the produce of the oceans.

The Chinese have harvested the sea's bounty for at least 4,500 years; we've practiced the ancient art for a century in this country.

Commercial aquaculture production, though, began making waves here around 1960; since then, production has grown from some two million pounds of fish to over 100 million pounds.

Production of rainbow trout by private growers increased from just over a million pounds in 1954 to over 30 million pounds in 1972. Almost all the trout we eat in this country are produced by aquaculture, as well as 40 percent of our oysters and half of our catfish and crawfish.

Yet aquaculture farming is far below its potential in the United States, supplying only about three percent of our domestic fish consumption needs. Worldwide, aquaculture accounts for almost 10 percent of fish production. And in some countries, aquaculture supplies as much as 40 percent of domestic needs.

The U.S. today imports more than half of the fish we consume, adding substantially to this country's foreign trade deficit. Fishery product imports cost our economy $2.6 billion in 1979 alone.

Clearly, it's high time we spur aquaculture growth. We need more projects like the one at Texas A&M University, where researchers successfully breed shrimp in captivity using the thermal effluent from a power plant in Corpus Christi. And the ideal growing conditions of the Laguna Madre, along the coast of south Texas, could supplement the commercial shrimp catch through the Gulf of Mexico.

Since 1976, I've been promoting comprehensive aquaculture legislation. I was the first member of Congress to propose such legislation, in fact. Recently, the Senate Agriculture Committee approved a bill that I am co-sponsoring. The Senate will vote on it sometime during the next few weeks, and I expect it to get the President's signature within a few months.

The measure will help coordinate various federal agencies and departments involved in aquculture. That's very important, since several government departments—Agriculture, Commerce, and Interior—are now dabbling in aquaculture and each goes its own way with no central guidance or coordination.

This bill will allow aquaculture farmers a firm base for future efforts to develop the sea's resources.

With this legislation, we'll be ready to tap the potential this exciting field offers. If we can breed better cattle, we can use aquaculture techniques to breed tastier, larger super-species of fish. And we won't have to worry about whether we have a growing market for this improved crop.

Per capita U.S. consumption of fish, for example, has increased by some two pounds since 1969—after almost no change since 1909. The world commercial fish harvest has gone from some 21 million tons in 1950 to approximately 70 million tons in 1970.

Aquaculture methods produce large amounts of protein—the element in shortest supply to the diets of people all over the world. Just imagine what aquaculture farming could do for our balance of trade. It could turn us from an importer to an exporter of seafood.

Besides being profitable, aquaculture is a sound ecological policy as well. Since 1970, the world commercial fish harvest has remained constant; there is great concern that some fish are caught at or above the level of their maximum sustainable yield.

Controlled aquaculture farming will take some of the pressure off the over-fished regions of the sea.

Someday you'll see shrimp farmers standing on old off-shore oil platforms. Or you'll find them next to farm ponds deep in the heart of Texas.

I am pleased that after four years of working for aquaculture legislation, it's on its way to being approved. Finally the law will flow with the current.

From The Wheelhouse

By Perry Carter

Monday, April 7, 1980, members of the San Antonio legal community were joined by Texas and United States members of the bar association congregated to pay tribute to Judge John H. Wood Jr., a federal judge slain last May by an unknown assassin near his Northside San Antonio home.

As his widow, Kathryn, and members of his family listened, friends and colleagues eulogized Judge Wood as a vigorous, dedicated, fair judge.

Deputy Attorney General Charles B. Rebfrew, a former federal judge told the gathering, "I pledge to continue the tireless efforts to bring his assassins to justice and see that they get their just deserts." No arrests have been made in the May ambush.

The pioneer spirit runs deep in the Wood family. Judge Wood was born in Rockport, Aransas County, Texas, on March 31, 1916, and had lived in San Antonio for 56 years.

He was descended from one of Texas' oldest and most distinguished pioneer families, dating back to 1916.

His great-great grandfather, Colonel John H. Wood, was a San Jacinto veteran of the Texas Revolution, participated in the War of 1848 and the Civil War, and was co-founder of the Texas cities of St. Mary's and Rockport.

The city of Woodsboro was named for the Wood family, who are listed as one of the founders of the cattle industry in Texas.

This strong, independent spirit passed along for generations, marked this outstanding Texan for greatness.

A succession of distinguished lawyers and federal judges together with Congressman Tom Loeffler and Senator John Tower spoke of this uncommon man with great reverence, as a man who "gave his life for the rest of us."

U.S. Circuit Court Judge Ruggero Aldisert of Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, who chaired a federal judicial committee which included Wood, said "The assassination was not just a local tragedy, but a loss to the national judicial system."

Judge John H. Wood Jr. was the first federal judge to have a federal courthouse renamed in his honor.

In addition to the renaming of the courthouse, his colleagues have established a "John H. Wood Jr. Memorial Fellowship Fund" to help with the educational needs of future lawyers.

Also, a quarterly journal has been established in the judge's name to keep the federal judiciary informed on matters of national concern.

This memorial ceremony to Judge John H. Wood Jr., a great American, was a lasting inspiration to every person who attended.

The spirit which made Texas and this nation great still stirs in the hearts of men and women throughout this country.

This nation needs more citizens like Judge Wood to openly exhibit the spirit of courage, truth and a refusal to compromise integrity.

Editor's note: Following are representative questions answered daily at VA offices. Full information is available at any VA office.

Q. I am currently receiving VA dependency and indemnity compensation as a widow. I plan to enter a program of education soon. Will the education assistance I receive affect the DIC benefits I now receive?

A. No. Education benefits will not affect the payment of DIC to asurviving eligible spouse.

Q. How do I apply for VA educational benefits to attend college?

A. Complete VA Form 22-1990 with a certified copy of your DD Form 214 at the nearest VA regional office. You may submit this application as much as 120 days before classes begin but not less than 30 days before classes begin.

Q. What is the new interest rate on Veterans Administration guaranteed home loans?

A. The maximum rate for VA as well as FHA loans is 13 percent as of February 28, 1980. Because the rate goes up and down with changes in the "money market," you should check with a lender or local VA office at the time you plan to buy.

EMS Report

Aransas County paramedics responded to 29 emergency calls during the week that began Monday, March 31.

This was four more calls than the 25 projected for the week.

The emergency service's two ambulances logged a total of 1761 miles during the week. Average response time per call was four minutes, 20 seconds.

Wyatt Supports Veteran Memorial

U.S. Representative Joe Wyatt has become a co-sponsor of a resolution to authorize erection of a memorial to the veterans of the Vietnam War in Washington, D.C.

"There will be no political message attached to this memorial," said Wyatt. "It will be a place for all of us, no matter how we felt about the war, to remember those who gave lives, limbs and years at this country's asking."

The resolution authorizes the establishment of the Vietnam Veterans Memorial Fund Inc., a non-profit organization to raise private money to erect the memorial.

Land for the memorial will be donated by the government just off the Capitol Mall, in Constitution Gardens.

The design concept calls for a landscaped area which will integrate sculpture symbolizing the experience of Americans who served in Vietnam.

As a special tribute the names of all 57,661 Americans who died in Vietnam will be inscribed. The design also calls for a carillon or other system of bells and chimes.

"This memorial has received tremendous support since it was introduced by Senator Charles Mathias (R-Md). Its 109 current co-sponsors include a broad range of the political spectrum from Senator Barry Goldwater (R-Az) to Senator George McGovern (D-SD). I think this memorial can symbolize a national commitment to reconcile our differences over that war and move positively, as one nation, toward the future," said Wyatt.

The resolution in the House, H.J. Res. 431, is sponsored by Congressman John Paul Hammerschmidt (D-Ark).

Who Will Be NBA Champ? Who Cares?

By Eddie Bradley

This is a strange time of the year for sports. Track, golf and tennis are in full swing. Baseball is popping up everywhere and basketball is STILL going on.

Quickly now. Can you name me five teams that are in the professional basektball playoffs? Can you tell me how many teams there are in the playoffs right now?

If the Houston Rockets win their current best-of-a-million series, how many more series would they have ti win in order to finally be the NBA champs?

The reason I'm asking you these questions is because I don't know any of the answers myself. And what's more, I really don't care.

To me, college basketball is exciting and draws my interest even if neither team is from this part of the country. But the professional game just doesn't create that much interest and I have tried to analyze the reason.

In almost all sports but basketball, the pro game usually has as much or more appeal as does the college version, but the TV network executives are the first to admit that college ball slam dunks the pros in every head-to-head competition on the air.

How come? Well one reason I immediately think of is that a pro game looks for all the world like schoolyard basketball with a thyroid problem.

As usual, most of this is caused by the bureaucracy. They have a 24-second clock, rules against zone defenses, continuation scoring (whatever that is), three-to-make-two (which is pretty good odds in any game) and blatantly liberalized officiating that wouldn't be allowed in any junior high game in the country.

The whole purpose seems to be to make the game more 'exciting' and to make sure that all teams reach the 100-point level in all games. Couple this with the fact that the current crop of professional players are probably 12 to 18 inches taller than the fellows down at the YMCA from whom James Naismith invented the game, and the problem is really compounded.

You want to know what I think the NBA ought to do? Well I'm gonna tell you anyway!

They should raise the basket by two feet, eliminate the 24-second clock, let them actually play defense and have the officials call it like it's written in the book.

Let's not give Dr. J five steps to perform his slam dunk; let's foul Dave Crowens out in the first quarter if he doesn't learn to play basketball instead of rugby; let's find out if Moses Malone is really more valuable to the Rockets than Calvin Murphy; let's see some strategy and team play instead of a giant game of hully-gully.

I can see it now. The team owners realize finally that their game is turning into a mess of a one-on-one behemoth ball. They shorten the season and have less travel so that the players be more rested and each game will take on more importance.

With higher baskets the premium falls on ball handlers, passers and shooters rather than on those who can shatter the most backboards. Only those teams who win at least five games more than they lose are allowed into the playoffs.

Once again the regular season has meaning, the integrity of the game is restored. Skill, finesse and thinking play more part under the basket than punching out the other guy does.

Basketball at the professional level finally gets back to a plateau of skill and teamwork not seen since the days of Cousy and Russell with the Celtics.

We will all come to care about the Spurs and Rockets like we do the Cowboys and Oilers. Yes, I can see it all now . . .

Nah!

ARTIST OF MONTH

Edith Painton of Rockport adjusts one of her paintings on display at Rockport Art Supply on Bronte Street. Ms. Painton is Rockport Art Supply's Artist of the Month for April. She has been painting seriously "just since I got down here [to Rockport]" -- about 10 years ago. [Pilot Photo by Pat Blair]

Home Ownership Choices Outlined

"April 13 through 19 is Private Property Week, and area Realtors are doing their best to insure homebuyers that their Realtor has the ability to explain buying options available to them," said Juanita Wagley, Chairman of Private Property Week for the Rockport Area Board of Realtors.

"Finding the type of ownership that is best for a particular homebuyer is very important in the real estate business. As Realtors, we strive to help our clients evaluate the best type of ownership for them," said Ms. Wagley.

Ms. Wagley described types of home ownership, such as single family detached ownership. This continues to be the American dream of the majority of people. Owners of single family homes may deduct the cost of real estate and mortgage interest on their federal income tax returns. There is a feeling of permanence, the freedom from other tenants and landlords, and the security of fixed costs, since mortgage payments remain the same, are all offered through single family home ownership. There is also a feeling of privacy, and fewer restrictions. Yard areas further enhance the idea of having a "home of your own." An owner is free to have pets, and play a musical instrument during the night if he chooses. There is also more storage space.

Condominium ownership is ownership in fee simple. by an individual, of a single unit in a multi-unit structure. The owner also has ownership of an undivided interest in the land and other elements that are held in common with the other unit owners of a building.

In a condominium, individuals take title to their units and vote on a proportional basis or on a unit basis. They are taxed separately on their units, and can finance the purchase of their unit with a mortgage. Condo owners may also deduct the cost of interest and real estate taxes on their income tax returns.

Multi-family dwellings, such as townhouses, row houses, and apartments, are another source of housing. Townhouses have common side walls connecting them, whether one or two story, or grouped in a block pattern. Both townhouses and row houses cost less to heat and cool because of the common walls. Apartments and townhouses allow more housing units to be built on a site.

"Any of these types of home ownership will increase in value," added Ms. Wagley, "so it is an investment in the future."

Blair's Corner

By Pat Blair

Some believe they were the origin of the mermaid legends -- although there is nothing feminine or even attractive about a manatee.

Except, perhaps, to another manatee.

They're also known as "sea cows," and the great mammals with their flippered bodies and homely heads weren't exactly unknown in these parts once upon a time.

The last living one was seen in this area in the late 1950s, when an area resident by the name of R.R. Rice said one reared its massive head out of the water in front of Rice's boat while he was fishing near Mud Island.

A few years later, in 1965 when earthmoving equipment was clearing space for a shopping center out at Holiday Beach, two ribs of another of the great sea creatures -- long dead -- were uncovered.

Manatee, by the way, unlike most mammals, have no bone marrow. Their bones are heavy, nearly as solid as ivory.

Back 150 or so years ago, the Spaniards saw manatee in the Rio Grande River and were frightened by the huge beasts.

And even more exotic, maybe, than the manatee -- certainly more out-of-place -- were the camels that roamed the area around Lamar a few decades later.

It started when Jefferson Davis, then secretary of war for the United States, was looking for a way to transport men and material efficiently in the waterless southwest.

Davis' idea was to import camels...which he did. But then the events began that led, eventually, to the Civil War and attention was diverted away fromt he camel experiment.

The camels themselves, many of them, were turned loose, to eke out an existence as best they could.

Nine of them found their way to Lamar, and were reported to have been bought by a resident of the community.

He put them in a pasture with his mules, the story goes. But the next morning, a number of the mules were found hung up along the barbed wire fence, caught while trying to escape from what, to a mule, must have been a pretty frightening creature.

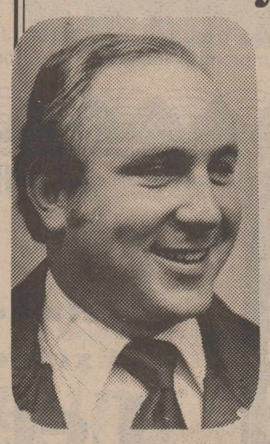

The wilder mules were gone, "scattered all over the surrounding country" and presumably weren't too easy to round up.

The last note on the camels is that they were driven away from Lamar on March 20, 1868.

The relics of an experiment gone wrong...

What vegetable looks like a morning glory, is native to Nroth America, enjoys hot weather, and is one of the most nutritionally complete foods known? The answer in Ipomoea Batatas—commonly known as the sweet potato.

This vegetable can be boiled, baked, browned, fried and candied. It can be used to make biscuits, bread, muffins, croquettes, pies, custards, cookies or cakes.

It was the most important, single food in bringing Americans through such trying periods as the American Revolution, the War Between the States, and Reconstruction. During such periods, it was said to be "the indispensable vegetable."

Because Ipomoea Batatas does grow similar to a morning glory, it needs plenty of room and is probably not adapted for small garden culture. This delicacy has been grown successfully in hanging baskets and bushel containers, but vines must be trimmed periodically to keep them in bounds.

Trimming makes the plant branch and become thicker, which produces a more decorative hanging basket or container plant.

These plants are hot weather lovers. Not only are they "lovers," but they also are "needers" and will be damaged or killed by the lightest frost.

The crop must be dug before the soil temperature goes below 45 degrees Fahrenheit.

Because this vegetable is so sensitive to cold and does take a long season to mature its crop, plants are usually transplanted into the garden in early April (May in the Hill Country), and harvest occurs from mid-October to late November.

Most gardeners do not have facilities to grow such transplants or slips and rely on local nurseries or plant farms for a source.

Variety selection is, as with most vegetables, a very important consideration with Ipomoea Batatas. The original variety, Puerto Rico, was replaced by Centennial in the early 1960s because of yields and adaptability.

Centennial has recently been replaced by the higher-yielding, nematode-resistant variety named Jewel.

Texas ranks about fourth in production of this vegetable delicacy, mainly because of a small weevil insect. This weevil is either transported in with infested plants or, in the case of much of South Texas, is native.

The weevil lays eggs in the roots when ground cracks occur around the enlarging system. Then, when our root vegetalbe delicacy is harvested, we have meat and potatoes both!

Some of us don't appreciate this combination. Unfortunately, an answer to the problem has not been found. Gardeners who use a lot of organic matter or mulches around the vines keep ground cracks filled and thus have fewer problems with weevil infestations.

After harvest, Ipomoea Batatas should be "cured" by exposure to a temperature of 85 degrees F for a week.

Curing causes healing of surfaces wounded by harvesting. Then all the gardener has to do is store the roots in a temperature below 60 degrees F but not lower than 55 degrees F and start eating.

Don't wash after harvest and periodically check stored produce for rots. Be sure that you don't refrigerate any of the harvested delights since they are very sensitive to cold.

So, as you can see, Ipomoea Batatas is an interesting vegetable. It's nothing new to home gardeners -- some call this vegetable treat sweet potato or yam.

If you want to try your luck with this tropical vegetable, plant slips or transplants as soon as possible and get ready for some good eating.

Bev's Beat

By Beverly Wilken

My sister-in-law is going to be so mad at me. Last night I brought my four year old nephew home with me to spend the weekend with us, and her last words were, "Okay, if you promise not to buy him anything."

I think I'm in trouble.

Since Kathi and Mikey, the four year old wonder arrived at the International Airport in Corpus Christi from England two weeks ago, we have done nothing but buy the child anything his little heart desires. (And his little heart desires everything his little eyes see.)

"Aunt Be-uv," he says. (That gets me right there.)

"Aunt Be-uv, will you buy me that cowboy gun and hold-ster?"

My heart melts.

"Yes, darling. I'll buy that for you."

"Aunt Be-uv, can I have this, too?"

"Yes, darling." (My constant reply.)

Mikey and I have so much fun shopping...it's just too bad that no one else in the family understands us.

"Beverly!" shrieked my sister-in-law. "I can't believe you keep doing this! Please don't buy him anything else!"

"I can't help it. He looks at me with those big blue eyes and..."

"And you're spoiling my child!" she insisted.

"I'll do better," I assured her, stuffing the latest of Mikey's treasures into a large box marked "Mikey's Stuff."

"I don't mean to be a stick-in-the-mud," sighed Kathi, "but look at this. You've filled two huge boxes with everything from stuffed animals to a hoola-hoop."

'It's just so hard to say no..."

"But do you realize how difficult you're making it for me? Every time we walk into a store, he throws a big tantrum if I don't buy him everything in sight."

"Well, just a minute!" I interrupted. "Mother buys him things too, and..."

"But SHE knows when to stop," said my sister-in-law gently.

"Are you trying to tell me...I mean, you're not saying I'm..."

She nodded.

"I...I hadn't realized it had come to this. I...I just had...no idea it had gone this far," I sighed, shaking my head and steadying myself on the chair.

"Yes, Bev. Just admit it. You're a..."

I covered my ears.

"You are a Spend-On-Mikey-A-Holic."

I didn't want to hear it, but I knew it was true.

"Aunt Be-uv, will you buy me somethin' at the store?"

"Yes, dar...." I bit my lip. "Well, Mikey, we just bought you that new baseball and bat."

"But, I wanna football, Aunt Be-uv," he pleaded, his little eyes brimming with tears.

My heart dropped. Don't do this to me, I thought. I'm a weak person.

"Mikey, listen. Do you know what your mother is going to do to me if I buy you one more thing?"

"Spank you?" he asked, his eyes wide.

"Well, no, not exactly."

"Make you pick up all your toys and take a nap?"

I shook my head. "She's going to tell your Uncle Jimmy to take my checkbook away from me."

Mikey looked puzzled. "Is that badder than a spankin'?" he asked.

I nodded.

"You don't hafta buy me anything, Aunt Be-uv. I love you," he said, throwing his arms around my neck.

That does it. I can't take it anymore.

I scooped my little nephew up in my arms and ran into the house.

"Kathi, is it all right if Mikey spends the weekend with us?" I asked, out of breath.

"Well, I don't know..." she began, looking at my mother.

"Pleeeeze, Mom!" begged Mikey.

"Well, I guess so. If you promise not to buy him anything, Bev."

I smiled. "Don't worry. We'll be fine."

My mother and my sister-in-law exchanged worried looks. I think they sensed I was headed for trouble.

After we'd hit the last five and dime and the last toy shop in town, we headed home for the evening. Mikey was asleep in the front seat. His new Stretch Armstrong, Spider Man and Big Bird dolls in his arms. His new fire engine, race car set, and Talking Telephone scattered around him; his hobby horse, Big Wheels and Bozo the Clown punching bag stuffed in the back seat. I was satisfied for now, but I knew I'd have to pay the price when I returned Mikey to his mother on Sunday evening.

The thought made my heart sink. I knew I'd have to face up to what I had done. I knew I'd have to take my punishment like a big person. She's going to tell my husband, and...

I wonder if she'd settle for making me pick up all my toys and take a nap...

Expansion In '80 Association Theme

Expansion in 1980 is the theme of the Coastal Bend Association of Municipal Inspectors and the Southern Building Code Congress International, whose vice president, Mike Henry, is Rockport's city inspector.

The Coastal Bend Association (CBA) is a non-political, non-profit organization made up of code inspectors, contractors and others in the building industry throughout the Coastal Bend area.

Purpose of the CBA is to promote efficient code administration, safe building construction and standard codes for all areas of the Coastal Bend.

The organization presently consists of 63 members representing 13 Coastal Bend cities including Corpus Christi, Portland, Aransas Pass, Ingleside and Gregory.

Annual membership fees in the organization are $5 for active members and $10 for associate members.

Those eligible for active membership in the organization include building and assistant building officials, field inspectors, fire department inspectors, plumbing or other municipal inspectors and any state or county employee whose job is to enforce building, housing, zoning or fire regulations.

Associate membership is open to any organization, association, institute, corporation, partnership, company, manufacturer, architect, engineer, builder, contractor, planner or "other related group."

BIBLE BLISS IS A PARADOX

Bliss is happiness or supreme delight. Jesus promised, "Blessed are the poor in spirit." [Matt 5:3] Not spiritually poor, but poor in spirit! One whose dependance is on God and His Commandments. The Happy Man is free as a 'bird', but birds are only free to act like birds. So it is with the Christian, he is free to act like a Christian - and that brings happiness - Jesus guarantees it.

JV TRACK TEAM

Girls Finish Third In Track

The RFHS Lady Pirates finished third out of 16 teams at the Cuero track meet, which was held on Thursday, April 3.

Darlene Dilworth won the triple jump event with a leap of 35 feet, seven-and-one-quarter inches.

The relay team of Belinda Cross, Dilworth, Julie Huff and Alma Dickerson finished second in both the 440-yard relay (50.83 seconds) and the 880-yard relay (1:48 minutes).

Dilworth was third in the long jump (16 feet, 11 inches) as was Dickerson in the 100-meter dash (12:09 seconds).

Fourth-place finishers included Cross in the triple jump (34 feet, one-and-three-quarter inches) and Julie Adams in the high jump (four feet, 10 inches).

Capturing fifth places for the team were Huff in the shot put (32 feet, on-quarter inch) and Lory Broadhurst in the mile run (5:59 minutes).

In outdistancing 13 other teams, the girls racked up 71 points to bring home the third-place finish.

Pirates Compete In Cuero Meet

The Pirate boys took part in the Cuero track meet on Thursday, April 3, and found themselves up against some of the best teams in the area.

The varsity finished ninth out of 20 teams, most of which were from Austin, San Antonio and Houston. Schools from classes 4-A, 3-A and 2-A were represented.

For the varsity, Bubba Scott placed third in both the shot put and discus throw.

Raul Castro was sixth in the mile run.

The JV team, which finished in seventh place, was paced by David Ramirez, who won the mile run (4:51.75 miutes) and was fourth in the 880-yard run.

Joe Barrera finished fifth in the discus throw.

Coach Ron Richardson said that the varsity did well against such outstanding talent and that many freshmen looked good while competing on the JV team against older boys.

The team was short some people due to injuries, but still looked good overall.

Fishing Report

[Key Allegro Marina--The fishing has only been fair for the last week. There have been a few three and one-half pound to four pound trout caught under the lights.

[Kleines Rattlesmake Point Fishing Camp]--The fishing has been very good; mostly reds, trout and flounder. Mark Haese from San Antonio caught over 100 trout and reds on live bait in just four hours at the camp. Another fisherman brought in eight reds and four trout one afternoon.

[Causeway Pier]--A lot of trout and drum have been caught off the pier during the week.

[Palm Harbor Marina]--The fishing has been good, mostly trout and some reds. The marina still has plenty of live bait!

Val Verde County Historic Park Opens

AUSTIN -- One of the most extensive interpretation programs ever attempted by the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department is underway at Seminole Canyon State Historic Park, which is now open to the public.

The park, located near Comstock in Val Verde County, contains one of the most important prehistoric rock shelters in North America. Artifacts from the region reflect activities of primitive cultures dating back as far as 11,000 years.

The interpretive exhibits entitled "Man in the Lower Pecos" will include six dioramas, highlighted by a striking 12- by 15-foot mural depicting early tribesmen driving a herd of bison over a sheer cliff. Excavations at one of the prehistoric sites now in the park were begun in the 1930s.

Scientists have long been concerned about protecting the cultural resources in Val Verde County, but little had been accomplished to preserve the sites until the Parks and Wildlife Department acquired the park in 1973 from private landowners.

A conservation study of the park's fragile cave rock art, funded by the department, is attempting to protect the pictographs from further deterioration and vandalism.

The visitor center houses 3,000 square feet of displays, presenting the periods of early man, archaic and railroad/ranching. The first section entitled "The Hunters" is complete. The remainder of the exhibit will be installed in sections later in 1980.

Park facilities include 31 campsites and 15 picnic sites. Guided tours will be conducted to Fate Bell Shelter where the 4,000-year-old rock art may be seen. Only those in good physical condition and able to climb steep embankments will be able to hike the interpretive trail to the shelter.

Standard park entry fees apply at Seminole Canyon. There is a $2 per vehicle entry fee and a $3 per day fee for campsite use. As with all the state parks, campsites may be reserved by telephone.

The park is located just a few miles north of Amistad Reservoir nine miles west of Comstock on U.S. Highway 90. For reservations, write Seminole Canyon State Historical Park, P.O. Box 806, Comstock, TX 78837, or call (512) 292-4464.

Hats Aplenty

Here are some of the ladies we caught at the Key Allegro Women's Club meeting. Part of the program included the April Hat Competition, with Connie Garcia as judge. Jacqueline Veatch was the program chairman. From the left are Mary Louise Smith, Mrs. Veatch, Sami Milam [with the dove] and Pat Barnett.

Like My Hat?

Dorothy Lyons, left, and Marguerite Luce were all decked out at the recent Key Allegro Women's Club April meeting. Everyone wore a hat, in fact, no one was seated unless they had a hat of some kind.

What A Beauty

Billie Borden wore a radiantly beautiful hat to the Key Allegro Women's Club meeting this week. It was made up of very large flowers and really looked nice. Don't you agree?

[Pilot Photo by Eddie Bradley]

Very Interesting

Millie Koutnik certainly had one of the most interesting hats at the Key Allegro Women's Club meeting recently. Hers was made of spaghetti and noodles! The program included a display of hats that are in Betty Paul's collection.

Student News

George Stallsworth of Rockport is among some 522 students in the College of Natural Sciences, University of Texas in Austin, named to the 1979 Fall Semester honor roll.

To be eligible for the natural sciences honor roll, students must earn at least 52 grade points during the semester, passing all courses for which they are enrolled.

Total grade points are calculated by multiplying the number of semester hours by the value of each grade ("A" equals four points.)

Molly Jackson's Choir Wins Contest

Molly Jackson, a 1974 graduate of Rockport-Fulton High School won sweepstakes with her girls' choir in Spring, Texas.

This is Ms. Jackson's first year as a teacher at Strock Junior High in the Klein School District.

She is a Corpus Christi State University graduate in the field of Music Education.

Nursing Home News

The Aransas Pass Nursing and Convalescent Center had an exciting Easter week.

Sandra Lee was out to visit several times during the week. Mary Spears was out to visit and help with Bible Study classes. Wednesday morning, Delma Rodgers was out to read and visit with the residents.

On Wednesday evening, the Woman's Club of Ingleside brought Easter baskets of cookies for all of the residents. Ginger Muse, the Center Dietary Supervisor passed them out on Saturday evening.

Wednesday afternoon, Father James Hamilton held Mass in celebration of Holy Week. Brother Mark Lemke held Bible study.

Thursday afternoon, the Friendship Club of Mobile Inn Trailer Park of Fulton played games with the residents.

Friday morning paint class was conducted by Lyla and Frankie.

Saturday, the Alpha Delta Mu Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi of Portland brought Easter baskets that they made themselves for the residents. The baskets were given to the residents on Easter morning.

Nan Bailey of "Flowers by Nan" brought a beautiful flower arrangement for the residents in celebration of Easter.

Sunday morning chruch services were held by Reverend Al Bankert.

The residents of the Aransas Pass Nursing and Convalescent Center would like to thank everyone for their thoughtfulness and all they do for them.

TO THE KINGDOM, POWER, GLORY FOREVER-Corinthians 15:12-20

How many of you would like to put many things of your past behind you and say: Away with sin and sorrow. Away with suffering and death. Bring on the alleluias, lilies and Easter greetings each and every day.

How great life would be if we really could do in life what was proposed in our Easter celebrations.

We cannot do this in life nor can we separate Easter from Lent. For our Easter joy stands out most strikingly against the backdrop of Jesus' suffering, crucifixion and death. The call of Jesus on Easter Sunday is to follow Him through the Lent of our lives to His kingdom, power and glory forever. His call rests on the fact that He has arisen.

Our faith rests on the fact that Jesus triumphed over our ultimate enemy, death, and that as the Risen Lord He keeps all His promises to us as His followers who still live in the midst of suffering and death.

St. Paul points out that if Christ has not been raised then our faith is futile and we are still in our sins and we are of all men most to be pitied. What use then would it be to follow Him, says St. Paul, if He did not arise? The risks, sacrifices and prayers of His followers would be worthless.

The reality of our faith is grounded on the Easter proclamation: "That in fact Christ has been raised from the dead." We proclaim this reality in our Easter celebrations knowing that Jesus' resurrection is the answer to all our human questions and fears that we face in our world.

That Jesus has arisen means for us as Christians that no matter what roads we travel or troubles we face Jesus directs us as the living Lord to His kingdom, power and glory forever.

Did not Jesus announce this to His disciples who were feeling hopeless and insecure? He told them that He would provide the power to begin anew. Did He not announce it to the women who came to the tomb with their loneliness and bereavement that life is found in Him? The Christian knows that every need that we may have is touched by God's reaffirming word...He Is Arisen!

This is the call of Jesus as we follow Him. He Lives! Come follow Him as He leads each one of us to His kingdom, power and glory forever.

eggplant, squash, and okra and uses no special guidelines for planting. The only fertilizer she uses is natural --- the chickens in her yard.

Three different successful area gardeners, and three very different methods of planting and caring for their crops.

If you plan on having a vegetable garden this year, the horticulturist offers more guidelines for an "inflation fighting garden."

Determine which vegetables you want to grow in your garden. Plant only those crops which your family likes most and which you feel will be relatively high priced at the grocery store.

Locate your garden where it receives plenty of sunlight, is well-drained, and is free from competition with existing trees and shrubs.

Make a garden plan. Note where crops will be planted and how much space each needs. Plant taller-growing crops on the north side of the garden. Group remaining vegetables according to their maturity rate.

Plant only recommended varieties. Check with successful gardeners, local nurseries and garden centers, and your county Extension office on varieties best suited for your particular area.

Do a good job in preparing your garden soil before planting. Work the soil to a depth of 8 to 10 inches--the deeper the better. Add liberal amounts of organic matter such as compost, grass clippings, hay or similar material.

Use healthy, vigorous, disease-free transplants where possible. Check at local nurseries and garden centers or grow your own.

Follow recommended cultural practices. Keep your garden weed-free and try to keep an even supply of moisture. Add fertilizer if needed during the growing season, and use a mulch to control weeds and conserve moisture.

Inspect your garden closely for insects and disease. Your "shadow" in the garden will prevent many petential problems before they start. If you do have problems such as diseases and insects, use recommended chemicals according to label directions.

Harvest your garden vegetables at their peak of quality. Do not let crops such as squash, green beans, and okra overmature on the plant or yields will drop.

Finally, keep a record of your garden activities during 1980. A record of varieties planted, amount and type of fertilizer used, and planting and harvesting dates will go a long way toward insuring a successful "inflation fighting garden," believes Cotner.

before a license would be granted. At that time, all existing agencies, says Mrs. Iles, were licensed without such proof.

Since 1974, the Rockport group is the only one that has been able to make it through the bureaucracic process to show that a need exists for their services. Iles says that they are the only new agency to be certified since the law was passed.

Another unique thing about the organization, which is named after Kathleen Akin, Iles and Moya Garcia of Austin, Mrs. Akin's daughter, is that they are one of the few independently-owned home nursing agencies in Texas.

Mrs. Iles says that most of the others are part of chains that are owned and operated by large corporations.

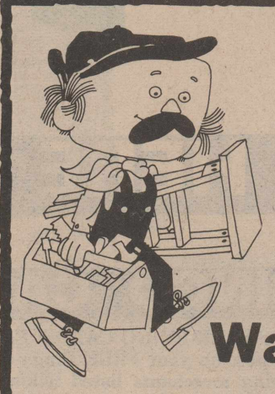

When they finally get all the paperwork over with, the local agency, which is approved for both Aransas and San Patricio Counties, will be able to provide in-home health care to help prevent long hospital stays and to permit some people to remain in their own home, rather than be in a nursing home.

The A.I.M. agency is currently providing skilled nursing and home health aid; they have a physical therapist on the staff but can't pay him until the official documents are received.

Mrs. Iles also said that several qualified registered nurses and a speech therapist have applied to be on staff, but they are holding up further action until the state license and federal Medicare number are received.

Aransas County School District Receives Payment From LULAC After Settlement

The Aransas County Independent School District recently received a check from LULAC in the amount of $2,868.72.

The amount represents full payment, says School Superintendent Joe Randow, of a settlement due the county school district following a race discrimination lawsuit brought against the school district by LULAC in 1977.

The suit was dismissed by the United States District Court, Southern District of Texas, in Corpus Christi on June 24, 1977, and on August 10, 1978, the court ordered payment of $2,595.42 to cover attorneys' fees and other non-reimbursable expenses.

The school district subsequently asked for an additional $273.30 in court costs, bringing the total received from LULAC to the $2,868.72 figure.

The suit grew out of the failure of the Aransas County School District to hire Jose L. Lopez in May, 1973.

According to the court record of the case, Lopez applied for the position of counselor "at the secondary level" but did not have the counselor's certificate required by the school district for this position.

In 1974, Lopez, Corpus Christi attorney Tony Bonilla and the League of United Latin American Citizens (LULAC) filed suit against the school district alleging violations of the U.S. Constitution and various civil rights statutes.

On June 24, 1977, the late District Court Judge John H. Wood Jr. dismissed the last of the plaintiffs' claims "with prejudice for failure to prosecute" and awarded the school district $2,595.42 in attorneys' fees.

When judgment was appealed, Judge Wood concluded that the plaintiffs' claims were "frivolous, unreasonable or groundless from the time this cause was filed through the time (it) was dismissed on June 24, 1977."

The award in attorneys' fees was affirmed in this conclusion.

The judgment was appealed to the U.S. Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals and was upheld in a decision rendered on September 14, 1979.

Concklin, candidate for the United States House of Representatives, 14th District, and James E. (Buster) Brown, candidate for the Texas State Senate, 17th District.

Shrimp Gumbo Supper

Plans for the Shrimp Gumbo Supper and Political Stump Night have been set for Saturday, April 19, at the Paws and Taws Building, from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. Local and Statewide candidates will be speaking at the event, sponsored by the Aransas County Democratic Women. The public is invited.

12 Citizens Comprise Advisory Committee

Twelve area residents have been named to an advisory committee that will help in a preliminary study on the need for sanitary sewer service in parts of Aransas County.

Appointment of this citizens advisory committee is required under the Step 1 grant awarded to the Aransas County Conservation and Reclamation District.

The grant, provided through the Environmental Protection Agency, is to help provide funds for a study of the need and feasibility of sanitary sewer facilities to serve the northern portion of the Live Oak Peninsula.

The planning area for this study does not include Rockport or the land within Rockport's extraterritorial jurisdiction. The City of Rockport is conducting a separate Step 1 study to determine the need for increasing the capacity of its present sanitary sewer facilities.

Citizens appointed to the advisory committee -- whose purpose is to provide recommendations and suggestions on the proposed project -- include three each from the areas of private citizens, public interest groups, public officials and organizations with "substantial" economic interest in the project.

Representatives of private citizens are Robert Albin, nominated by the Rockport Chamber of Commerce and engaged in the pest control business; Juan Lara, a Union Carbide employee nominated by the Property Owners Association; and Glen Shean, retired.

Public interest groups are represented on the committee by Dorothy Moeller, local chapter of the American Association of Retired Persons; Ronald E. Tynes, Rotary Club; and Leslie Casterline, the Commercial Fishermen.

Public officials on the committee are C.M. (Ray) Patterson, Fulton City Councilman; Judge S.E. Hodges of Fulton, justice of the peace; and Mike Henry of Fulton, the local licensed plumbing inspector.

Representatives of organizations with economic interest in the project are Buck Bailey, Juanita Wagley and Gordon Stanley, all of Rockport and all owners of substantial amounts of property in the planning area.

Mick Ladner, public participation coordinator for the water board project, said Rockport could not be included in the board's planning area because the county could not plan for incorporated areas.

He said Fulton is included in the county planning area because it was not incorporated at the time the application was made to the EPA for grant funds.

The Step 1 grant pays only for costs incurred in the initial study to determine the need and feasibility of the project. Federal money pays 75 percent of these costs with the remainder to be borne by the county.

Design and construction of the proposed facilities would have to be funded through later grants for which application must be made after the Step 1 study is completed.

April 14-19 Is Texas Library Week

April 14-19 is Library Week in Texas. The Aransas County Public Library board and library staff invites all citizens and visitors of Aransas County to visit the library, located on the corner of Mimosa and Church Street.

In conjunction with library week, there will be an exhibit of paintings by Jeremy Strait, Joe Tilvis and Jeff Maxwell, young students of local water color artist Chris Ely.

Library board members will host the event, and refreshments will be served, Monday through Friday, from noon to 6 p.m.

Library week has been designated "Fine Free" week. No fines will be charged, regardless of the length of time books are overdue. Anyone having overdue books is urged to return them. There is a book depository, located at the entrance, for the convience of patrons.

Mrs. A.C. Hamon, librarian, will be attending the Texas Library Conference in Dallas April 15-18.

The staff encourages everyone to visit the local library and take advantage of the services available.

Groceries Lead To Cookbook For Woman

By Pat Blair

It all started back when Barbara Wells used to tell customers in her grocery store how to fix the fish or shrimp they bought.

Later someone suggested Barbara ought to mimeograph some of her recipes and keep them handy to give to customers.

And from there it was just one step to a full-scale cookbook, "Oceans of Cooking," now in its fifth printing and soon to go into a sixth.

Meanwhile, Barbara is working on another book, this one on wildlife with emphasis on wildlife in the Aransas County area, and working as an agent with Rockport Realty.

Barbara, husband David and their sons came to Holiday Beach about nine years ago, to get away from the hustle and bustle of Houston where they owned a furniture store.

Barbara remembers the area "was pretty primitive then." She and David opened a grocery store and her husband "has always had a shrimping boat," she said.

The Wells bought their land in Holiday Beach "sight unseen" and built a beach cottage. "We moved in right after Celia," Barbara said.

Then came the grocery store...and the customers... and the book...

"I cooked and fed the world for three years" trying out recipes for the cookbook, Barbara recalled. "I made some terrible things...It got to the point where I almost couldn't stand to look at a fish."

She recalls she didn't know how to type, either, when she started work on the book -- "but I do now."

Illustrated by Chris Ely of Fulton and Chuck Baker of Rockport, the book was first printed by a firm in Aransas Pass.

"No one in Rockport would mess with me," Barbara said. She paid for the printing herself -- she had an offer from a publishing company that wanted to buy the book outright from her, but she refused, preferring to keep control of her creation.

She has never kept count of how many books have sold, but she figures she's sold about 25,000 copies just in the Aransas County-Port Aransas-Aransas Pass area.

Barbara herself delivers the books to buyers in this area -- the bookstores, seafood places and gift shops which then offer the books to individual customers.

She also has a salesman who delivers copies of the book to similar businesses in Houston-Galveston and on into Louisiana, Alabama, Mississippi and Florida -- where it seems to be just as popular as it is in Texas.

Previously sold for $5.95, the book recently went up in price to $6.95, Barbara said, explaining, "I just couldn't keep the price down."

How many recipes are in the book? Barbara has never counted -- but she knows there are a lot, and a lot more she could put in if she could afford the printing fees. She had to cut 80 pages from the book on the first printing, she said -- and she's never been able to add them back.

But if there are a lot of recipes, there is also a lot of seafood in this area, she said. "In Aransas County, you could live off the land -- every day, you could catch fish, catch something."

And with all the experience she has...you better believe Barbara will know how to cook 'em!

Gwen Gonyea Named Director

The Board of Directors of the Aransas County Council on Aging has announced the appointment of Mrs. Gwen Gonyea as Council Director.

Mrs. Gonyea has been in the Rockport area for four years, after searching for "just the right place to retire."

She is an artist, has taught art for several years, and was in the newspaper and sales fields in Seattle, Washington for many years. She has two children who live in California.

The Council on Aging Board will meet Monday, April 14, at United Savings, with Reverend John Bradshaw, President, presiding. The meeting is planned to orient Mrs. Gonyea to the organization and operation of the Council.

CLINIC GETS NEW SIGNS

New signs were installed at both entrances to the Enterprise Medical Clinic last week. Shown inspecting the work are Joe Williams, left, of Islander Interiors, who designed the signs and Arlo Hansen, who cut the wooden letters out by hand, painted them and nailed them in place. The labors of these men, likle those of so many involved in the Enterprise project, were voluntary.

The good thing about the seasons is that all we have to do is wait. We may not like the weather we have now, but something different will come soon. We experience a great variety of weather in a dozen months.

It's a great consolation to have this mighty spectacle of spring and autumn, sun and rain, day and night continually unfold around us.

It's the dependable rhythm of nature, the ebb and flow of seasons, the beauty of earth and sky, which gives our lives a firm ground tone.

But Christianity is not a nature religion. It finds the revelation of God not in nature alone but even more in human personality — our own, as the children of God, and supremely in Jesus as the Son of God.

That is why it is necessary for us to become an important part of His Church.

We can get in the mood to understand the presence of God when we experience the quietness of the woodlands or hear waves breaking against the cliffs, or look heavenward at the billowing clouds. But it is not enough to get in a mood. We must join in the communion and fellowship of other believers in order to obtain our purpose and faith.

Come, let us go into the House of the Lord . . .

Wishing For Spring

Scout Troop 281 Recruiting For Camp

Boy Scout Troop 281 has begun their 1980 recruiting drive for summer camp.

Boys age 11, or finishing the fifth grade this year, are eligible to attend Camp Karankawa this summer.

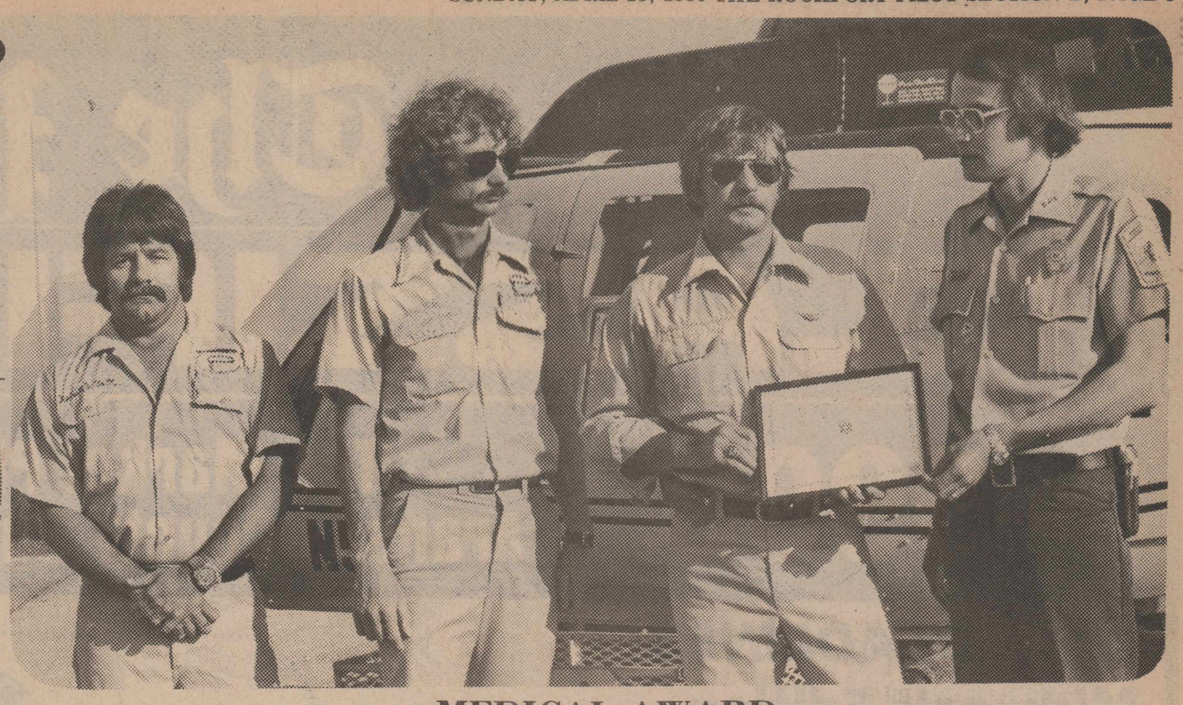

Camp Karankawa is situated on 118 acres three miles southwest of Mathis, on Lake Corpus Christi. The camp is registered with the State and National Association of Camping Service. Some people say the camp facilities at Lake Corpus Christi are rated number one in Texas. Karankawa has received Superior ratings from the national association.

Under the direction of able and experienced leaders, the scouts participate in sailing, swimming, rowing, canoeing, archery, fishing, riflery, leatherwork, wood carving, macrame, bead-work and learn many other basics of outdoor living. Cooking, fire building, compass, mapping, rope work, and hiking are only a few of the skills.

A wide variety of merit badges are offered as a part of the summer program. This includes lifesaving, lifeguarding, first aid and emergency preparedness.

Boys who will be finishing the fifth grade this year, or who are 11 years of age my join the scouting program at any time in preparation for summer camp. They need not wait until school is out.

Troop 281 meets every Monday from 7 p.m. to 8:30 p.m. at the Boy Scout Hut on Live Oak Street. Anyone interested is invited to attend.

Party Line

By Betty Paul

Mrs. W.C. Calhoun is at home now after a short stay in Spohn Hospital with a bout of pneumonia.

An Easter Party was held in the home of the Gene Garcias Wednesday for the third grade class at the Rockport Elementary School. A magic show was the big attraction even though a good lunch and an egg hunt was provided for the young guests.

Mrs. Elizondo, daughter Laura and son Carlos from Saltillo, Mexico, are visiting Mr. and Mrs. Gene Garcia and family.

The Jack Rasts have bought a new home in San Antonio but will continue to keep their home here in Rockport.

Mrs. Alvino Valenzula entertained Mrs. Gilley's first grade class at her home with an Easter egg hunt. Prizes were awarded. Twenty youngsters were entertained and enjoyed the good refreshments.

Jerry Beattie, owner and manager of Village Inn Motel is back in Spohn Hospital in the post-coronary wing and in for more tests. His son and daughter-in-law, Charlotte and Terry from Dallas, are in Rockport for Easter and to help Jerry's morale.

Alvino Valenzuela went to Corpus to attend his first rock concert. His reaction to Ted Nugent was "the music is too loud." He couldn't hear anything all the way back to Rockport. Ah, youth!

Mrs. Rollin Hill have visitors this week from Houston. They are Mr. and Mrs. R.M. Kinzey and their three children, Bryan, Trevor and Alyson all from Houston.

Mr. and Mrs. Bill McLain have a houseful of visitors. Paula McLain from Houston, Mr. and Mrs. Earl McLain from Lemon Grove, Mr. and Mrs. Billie Gilley Sr. from Blooming Grove, Mr. and Mrs. Billie Gilley and children from Corpus, Mr. and Mrs. Bill Hill and their children from Lemon Grove.

Wyatt Tours With Armed Services

U.S. Representative Joe Wyatt is among the members of a Congressional delegation representing the House Armed Services Committee now touring the Middle East.

"There is no question that the Middle East is one of the most tense parts of the world today, " said Wyatt. "I think that before the Congress can be expected to make a well-informed decision on U.S. military presence in the area, if there is to be any, we must have the chance to see the area first hand and talk with its leaders."

The delegation plans to visit Saudi Arabia, Somalia, Oman, Kuwait, Pakistan and Turkey. Discussions with civilian and military leaders in the countries have been scheduled.

"Our trip is particularly timely considering the President's recent statement that the Indian Ocean area is in the United States' strategic interest, and in light of the on-going negotiations concerning U.S. access to bases," said Wyatt.

"South Asia and the Indian Ocean area have taken on renewed importance since the events in Iran and Afghanistan," said Melvin Price, Chairman of the House Armed Services Committee.

"There are now 31 ships with over 20,00 U.S. military personnel in the Indian Ocean as evidence of this commitment -- a commitment that is likely to last into the forseeable future." Price added the delegation hopes to talk with personnel on U.S. ships in the Indian Ocean task force.

Along with Wyatt, the delegation includes Representatives Samuel Stratton of New York, Richard Ichord of Missouri, Lucien Nedzi of Michigan, Richard White of Texas, Patricia Schroeder of Colorado, Antonio Borja Won Pat of Guam, Bob Stump of Arizona, Beverly Byron of Maryland, Bob Wilson of California, Marjorie Holt of Maryland and Paul Trible of Virginia.

Senior Citizens To Participate In 1980 Senior Mayfair

Senior citizens' groups and companies and agencies serving the elderly are invited to participate in the 1980 Senior Mayfair set for May 6 and 7 in Corpus Christi.

With the theme "This, Our Century," the fair -- in in the Memorial Coliseum -- will depict the remarkable changes which occurred within this century, during the lifetimes of today's older generation.

Booths are available to senior citizens associations and to businesses and agencies that serve them.

Booths are to be decorated in the spirit of the "Our Century" theme and will be judged in one of several competitions.

Other competitions will be for outstanding senior citizens and in such skills as quilting, scrapbooks, needlecraft, ceramics and artwork.

Senior citizens are also invited to contribute their talents in song, poetry reading, square dance, skits or other forms.

Josephine Dobson is chairman of the fair which is sponsored by the City of Corpus Christi Senior Community Services.

This is the second year the fair has been a regional event, with cooperation from the Coastal Bend Council of Government's Area Agency on Aging.

The fair is open to the public, promising something for "guests of all ages" says Ms. Dobson.

NUCLEAR AID

The United States and Egypt announced on June 14, 1974, as part of a sweeping declaration of friendship and cooperation, the United States had agreed to provide Egypt with nuclear technology to be used for peaceful purposes.

Pet Talks

By Dr. Hap Lutz

Dr. Lutz is a graduate of Baltimore City College and Texas A&M University. He specializes in small and exotic animal practice. He was an instructor of small animal diseases and surgery in the Veterinary School at Texas A&M and was in private practice in Waco for 25 years.

WHAT I HAVE ALWAYS WANTED TO KNOW ABOUT MY PET BUT WAS AFRAID TO ASK:

Dear Dr. Lutz: I have an eight-year-old Chihuahua dog whose toenails have grown so long they are curling. Some of them have made a complete circle. She seems to be licking on her feet a lot. Is this normal for the breed? If not, what should be done about her nails? -- Alphonse

Dear Alphonse: Most dogs that are kept in the house most of the time, as the toy breeds are, do not have the opportunity to wear their toenails down. As a result, the nail continues to grow, and they grow in a curvature.

When this happens, it spreads the toes, thus adversely affecting the dog's gait. This also presents the danger of the toenail being caught in a rug and torn accidentally, which can cause great pain.

Cutting the toenails regularly is recommended. I would suggest you have a veterinarian cut them, at least for the first time.

The reason for this is that dogs have a quick above the nail bed which is highly sensitive. If you cut into this, it will cause extreme pain. Once a dog has been hurt in this toenail clipping procedure, he will usually resent having his nails cut the rest of his life.

When your veterinarian cuts the dog's nails for the first time, ask him to show you how much of the nail can be taken off. He will be glad to do this.

Also, it does take a special canine toenail clipper to do this procedure.

Allowing the nails to grow excessively long will predispose a dog to arthritis later in life.

Dear Dr. Lutz: My dog is six years old. I named her Puddles because when she was a puppy, she made many puddles on the floor. My mother won't let her stay in my room at night because she says Puddles' breath is bad; it stinks. What can I do about Puddles' breath? -- Jean, age 10.

Dear Jean: Most cases of bad breath are caused by an accumulation of tartar on the teeth. If this tartar formation is allowed to accumulate, it will cause the gums to recede, exposing the roots of the teeth. This results in an inflammation of the gums, referred to as gingiritis.

This, in turn, can cause one or more loose or decayed teeth. These may need to be extracted.

Have your mother take you and your dog to your veterinarian. If the bad breath is due to tartar formation, he can remove the tartar. When Puddles is under sedation, if there are any decayed or abscessed teeth, he can remove them without pain.

Then maybe your mother will allow Puddles to stay in your room at night.

If you have any questions concerning the health and care of your pet, send your inquiries to "Pet Talks", Rockport Pilot, Box 608, Rockport, Texas 78382. Your questions will be answered in the Pilot Weekender.

The sad, quiet, big-eyed little lady sat in the psychiatrist's office. The good doctor questioned her gently as to why her family wanted her locked up.
"Now, tell me," he said, "just what is your trouble?"
"It's just that . . . just that I'm so fond of pancakes, doctor."
"Is that all? Why, I'm fond of pancakes myself."
"Oh, doctor, really?" she thrilled, clasping her hands together with joy. "You must come over to our house . . I've got trunks and trunks full of them!"

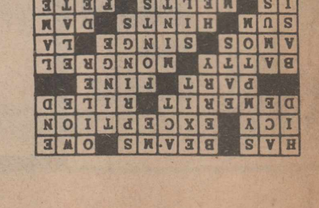

"Excuse me sir, did you happen to have seen a policeman anywhere about here?'
"I'm sorry, but I haven't seen a sign of one,"
"All right, hurry up and give me your watch and pocketbook then."

Caller: "Madam, I'm the piano-tuner."
Pianist: "I didn't send for a tuner."
Caller: "I know it, lady; your neighbors did."

Smith: "Shall we have a friendly game of cards?"
Brown: "No, let's play bridge."

Mrs. Mather was going away after a long visit.
"Do you remember what time my train leaves tomorrow?" she asked her son-in-law.
"Sixteen hours, seventeen minutes, and thirty seconds from now, dear Mama."

Dentist: "I'm sorry, but I'm all out of gas."
Girl in Chair: "Ye Gods! Do dentists pull that old stuff, too?"

Tourist: "Good river for fish?"
Fisherman: "It must be. I can't persuade any to come out."

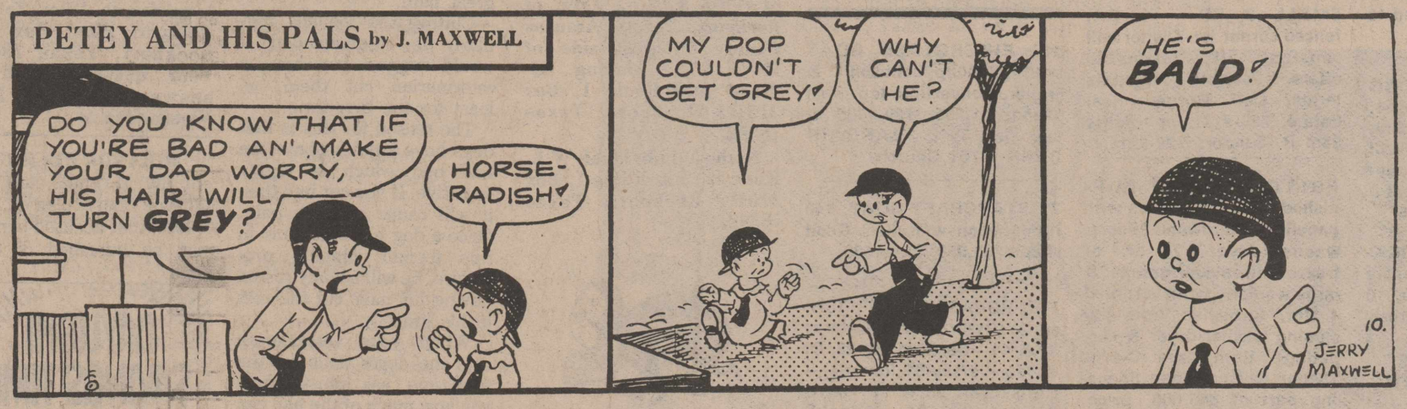

"How did Oscar lose the fingers on his right hand?"
"Put them in the horse's mouth to see how many teeth he had."
"And then what happened?"
"The horse closed his mouth to how many fingers Oscar had.

"How far is it to the next filling station?" the driver asked a farmer.
'Nigh onto two miles as the crow flies.'
"Well; how far is it if the damned crow has to walk and roll a flat tire?"

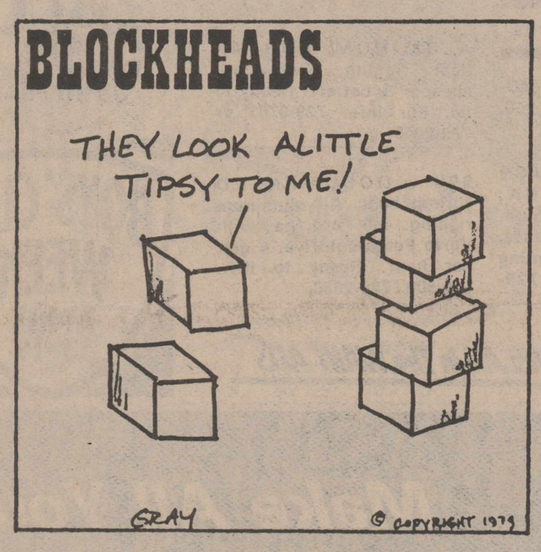

The octopus stalks its prey until it can drop down on it from above and encompass it with its eight arms.
