Area man killed when struck by moving train

By DEBORAH BRIDGES
Staff Writer

Pampa police today are investigating the death of a 20 - year - old man found on the north tracks of the Santa Fe Railroad a half - block east of the Pampa school district bus barn and north of the Halliburton Services building.

The man was identified by a spokesman for Carmichael - Whatley Funeral Directors as Randy Eugene Kincaid, 20, of White Deer.

A check of the White Deer address by city police revealed the man had left the town about five months ago.

Susan Metcalf, a spokesman for Santa Fe, said the body was spotted at 9:30 a.m. Sunday by a crew on a local train involved in switching tracks.

Police Chief J. J. Ryzman said his department was notified of the body at 9:45 a.m. Sunday. Officers found the badly mangled body of a 20 - year - old male lying across the tracks. Ryzman said police theorize the man was possibly trying to "jump" a westbound train when he was struck by the train. The accident is believed to have happened sometime during the night, he said.

"He wasn't a Pampa resident, but he had resided in this area for the past four or five months," Ryzman said. The victim has an aunt in Dallas, he said, who had not been notified of her nephew's death at press time today.

The train involved in the accident has not yet been located, the police chief said. "We're working closely on it with Santa Fe officials," he added.

Metcalf said today that the city police are "running some sort of tests that might have contributed to the man being run over."

Ryzman clarified the Metcalf's statement, saying the department was following "normal procedures" by running several tests on the victim's body, such as a blood alcohol test.

The victim was lying across the south rail of the westbound mainline tracks north of Halliburton's equipment yard, about 75 feet from where police said the train first struck the man. The body was crushed by the train, but the head remained fairly intact.

A billfold found near the point of impact held the indentification and the White Deer address.

A Santa Fe brakeman at the scene said his train was the first train through the area after daylight Sunday. He said apparently the train which hit the victim was one of the many which come through the area during the night.

The train which spotted the body stopped the caboose about 50 feet west of the body, witnesses said.

Metcalf said both of Kincaid's parents were dead, and the only living relatives known at this time were the aunt in Richardson and a brother believed to be living in Mississippi. Kincaid was born March 2, 1961, she said.

Justice of the Peace Nat Lunsford acted as coroner at the scene. No autopsy was requested, police said today.

The body was taken to Carmichael - Whatley Funeral Directors, where services are pending.

Dallas sisters killed in crash with cattle truck in Panhandle

PANHANDLE — Two sisters from the Dallas area died Sunday morning after the small car they were driving broadsided a loaded cattle truck in the U. S. 60 and Texas 207 intersection in Panhandle.

The women were identified by Panhandle authorities as Bonnie Shappard, 25, of Sunnyvale and Peggy Ann Metcalf, 24, of Garland. The two sisters had been in Borger visiting Mrs. Metcalf's two children and were returning to their homes when the crash happened, police said.

The driver of the truck was identified as Pampa resident, Jim Slaven, age not known. Slaven was taken to Northwest Texas Hospital in Amarillo, where he was listed in satisfactory condition early today. Police said Slaven was kept overnight for observation and will probably be released from the hospital today.

The fatal accident occurred at 9:07 a.m. Sunday at the intersection of U. S. 60 and Texas 207. Witnesses at the scene told investigating officer Ronald Spears of the Panhandle Police Department that the southbound blue Mazda, driven by Mrs. Shappard, apparently ran through the flashing red light at the intersection, hitting the westbound cattle truck, driven by Slaven.

Spears said Slaven apparently saw the car and attempted to avoid the crash. However, the semi - tractor trailer rig was unable to swerve out of the way of the auto, which struck it in the side. The impact of the collision caused the truck to turn on its side, killing 25 head of cattle, he said. Other cattle injured in the wreck had to be destroyed, police said.

The paramedic team of the Panhandle Fire Department and Carson County Sheriff's deputies were called to the scene to assist in removing the victims from the mangled Mazda. Mrs. Shappard was pronounced dead at the scene. However, Mrs. Metcalf did not die until shortly after she was rushed to the Northwest Texas Hospital Emergency Receiving Center, police said.

Police said Slaven was driving the truck for his father, a Miami cattle owner. They said the truck driver was rushed from the scene, and at press time today, had not spoken with the injured man to get further details.

The bodies of the two women were taken to Smith Funeral Home in Panhandle. A spokesman for the funeral home said the bodies will be sent to Restland Funeral Home of Dallas, where services are pending.

Health officers in Pampa today to probe hepatitis outbreak

Robert Kennedy, the chief sanitarian of the Texas Department of Health in Canyon said today that more than four cases of infectious hepatitis have been confirmed in Pampa and that four health workers are in Pampa today inspecting food establishments and interviewing those who have contracted the illness.

"What we're trying to do is find out how wide spread it is," Kennedy said.

"We have gathered the names and addresses of those who have it and are trying to chase them down to see if there is a common source," he said.

"There is a long - standing amount of the disease in any area at any time. We have not found any single place that would be subject to having spread it or caused it to get worse," Kennedy said.

He said he could not recommend that the public refrain from eating at any Pampa food establishment.

"At this point, we do not have anything at all to prove up," he said. "We have not implicated anybody or any place with having passed it on."

Kennedy said the outbreak could not be termed "epidemic."

"Confirmed cases are in the low range. I don't have the exact number because our people are already in Pampa. It is more than four but still in that low range," he said.

Kennedy said hepatitis can be transmitted in foods, primarily produce such as lettuce which may or may not be washed properly, and from people to other people.

"This happens usually within the family — that kind of very close contact," Kennedy said.

"Hand washing is always one of the things we stress the most as an excellent hygienic practice," he said.

Kennedy said the outbreak has been difficult for health officers to work with.

"By the time they are showing symptoms, they are past the point where they can pass the disease on," he said.

A Pampa physician confirmed that there are more than four cases in Pampa, "but it is no reason for panic."

"Those who have had very close contact with someone who has hepatitis should contact their physician. It's up to the doctor to say yes or no on whether they should get the shots," the physician said.

The gamma globulin shots last three to six weeks, the duration of the incubation period, the physician said.

Hearing set on Christian school injunction

The hearing to receive an injunction to close down the Pampa Christian Academy has been set for Oct. 19 in Austin, according to Nathan Martin, regional administrator for the Texas Department of Human Resources.

Pastor Jerry West of the Pampa Baptist Temple and head administrator for the Pampa Christian Academy responded.

"I don't really think it is much for me to worry about right now. They seem to think they have got all the answers. Let them do what they want to do," West said.

"This is no new thing. I was notified of this last January. It is something going on all over the United States. It has nothing to do with anything except they (the government) want to run the churches," he said.

"Their eventual goal is to license the whole church. We have no intentions of taking a license. We have no intentions of closing down," West said.

"The Constitution of the United States says, 'Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion or prohibiting the free exercise thereof.' That is in the first amendment of the Bill of Rights, Article I. It was printed Dec. 15, 1791. The Constitution of the U.S.S.R. says, 'There shall be a separation of church and state. There shall be a separation of church and education.' The whole purpose is to separate God from education.

"That is what the Department of Human Resources wishes to do, and we are not going to let it happen," West explained.

The assistant pastor, Jim Means, is to be arraigned Oct. 6 on charges of assault in connection with bruises on a 13 - month - old child while in the care of the Pampa Christian Accademy.

West said, "That can easily be proven in court that Jim didn't put any bruises on the child. We have enough information that if it goes to court we can prove that he didn't do it."

West said Means was being represented by Dr. David Gibbs of the Christian Law Association in Cleveland, Ohio.

Grandview files motion to dismiss

A motion to dismiss the two - year civil suit between Grandview - Hopkins Independent School District and the Pampa city and school taxing entities has been filed in the District Court of Appeals in Amarillo.

Pampa City Attorney Don Lane said today he had received a letter from the Court of Appeals clerk's office saying the Grandview - Hopkins Independent School District had filed a motion to dismiss the case.

Lane said no action would be taken in the motion for 10 days from the date it was filed. He said the letter is dated Oct. 1, but he does not know what date the motion was filed.

The three Gray County taxing entities have been battling the formation of the 1980 Gray County Tax Appraisal Board through the legal process since October 1979. Grandview - Hopkins alleged the five member board specified in the State Property Tax Code would not give the small taxing body adequate representation on the board. The City of Pampa and Pampa Independent School District contended the five - member board was fair, since the two entities comprised 80 percent of the tax dollars brought in to the combined county appraisal district.

A recent attempt by Grandview - Hopkins and three other Gray County taxing entities, Gray County, Lefors and Alanreed Independent School District, to use the three - quarters rule to form a 10 - member board died at midnight Sept. 30 without the support of at least three other of the county taxing entities.

Since the move was unsuccessful, the process for electing a five - member board automatically went into effect.

All nine county taxing entities have until Oct. 15 to submit nominees for the board to County Clerk Wanda Carter.

Today, Carter said only one nominee, Lloyd Hunt of McLean, had been submitted to her office.

Reagan steps up AWACS fight

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan stepped up his fight today for congressional approval of his planned $8.5 billion Saudi arms deal, but with sentiment running against the proposal the Republican-controlled Senate Foreign Relations Committee delayed a preliminary vote.

While Reagan tried to drum up support at a White House luncheon, the committee decided not to vote before Congress starts a week-long recess on Wednesday, meaning that a vote could not come before Oct. 14 at the earliest.

The arms package, which includes five AWACS radar planes, faces near-certain rejection.

City to enforce 1933 excavation ordinance

City officials will begin enforcing a 1933 city ordinance concerning digging on public property, including alleys, streets and parks, City Building Inspector Steve Vaughn said today.

"It's been the policy in the past that a person who cuts one of our water mains or sewer lines, we come fix the line and they fill it in," Vaughn said.

Providing this service has caused a strain on the water department's money and personnel, he said.

Vaughn said Ordinance 148 states that someone planning to dig on public property must come to the city hall permit office, obtain a permit and post a $5,000 liability bond.

"We're perfectly willing to send someone out to spot the lines for them. It will save us and the taxpayers money if they don't cut a line," he commented.

The person must also replace the hole they made with dry dirt or sand or what is comparable to that taken out of the hole, Vaughn said. If the job is not done properly, the person will be asked to do it again, or the city will complete the job and send a bill, he added.

"We want to take the burden of the cost of this digging from the taxpayers," Vaughn said. "That's the keypoint in this violation, as far as we're concerned."

Farm Bureau associate speaks on fire prevention

Culley Leslie, Assistant Safety Director of the Texas Farm Bureau in Waco, arrived in Pampa today and will be giving demonstrations in fire prevention throughout the week to students and civic clubs here.

Sponsoring the programs is the Fire Prevention and Safety Committee of the Pampa Chamber of Commerce. J. D. Ray, assistant fire chief, J. J. Ryzman, police chief, and L. D. Godfrey, safety engineer for Celanese are the co - chairman of the Fire Prevention Committee.

CULLEY LESLIE

Leslie attended Texas State Technical Institute in Waco, receiving his associate degree in Occupational Safety and Health. While at the school he served as president of the Occupational Safety and Health Club and the Student Senate.

Since his employment with the Farm Bureau, Leslie has been presenting safety programs on fire, auto and tractor safety in addition to teaching classes in defensive driving, cardiopulmonary resuscitation and first aid. He has also developed an elementary program on fire prevention and safety.

Leslie is a member of the Home and Farmstead Committe of the National Institute for Farm Safety, Inc. He is also affiliated with the Texas Safety Association, the National Safety Council, National Fire Protection Association and the American Society of Safety Engineers.

Pampa students and members of various civic clubs will have an opportunity to learn more about fire prevention in the home, in the schools, and in the community by visual aids and demonstrations given by Leslie and the Pampa Fire Department during Fire Prevention Week, which began Sunday.

During this week, the Pampa Fire Department will be furnishing films for use in the classroom and conducting fire drills in each elementary school. The firefighters will also give fire fighting demonstrations. Fire sirens will be sounded at noon today to indicate the beginning of Fire Prevention Week.

New postal regulation announced

Interim Postmaster Don McDowell reminded Pampa residents who have both a post office box and a residential address to be certain their mail is addressed to where they want it delivered.

A recent change in postal regulations, effective Oct. 1, stipulates that the mail carriers must deliver the mail to the exact address on the envelope, McDowell said.

He said Pampa residents will have 30 days to get their mailing address correct for periodicals and other mail, before the Pampa Post Office will begins strictly enforcing the new regulation.

Resurrected body kills theories

DALLAS (AP) — Two decades of theories about at least one aspect of the assassination of President John F. Kennedy apparently have been disproved with a finding "beyond any doubt" that Lee Harvey Oswald was buried in the grave marked with his name.

"There is no reason to ever disturb that body again. Ever," said Dr. Linda Norton, the head of a pathology team that announced Sunday that the exhumed body was indeed Oswald, identified by the Warren Commission as the man who killed Kennedy on Nov. 22, 1963.

"We both individually and as a team have concluded beyond any doubt, and I mean beyond any doubt, that the individual buried under the name Lee Harvey Oswald in Rose Hill cemetery is Lee Harvey Oswald," she said.

British author and assassination theorist Michael Eddowes, who agreed to pay for the exhumation, had contended the body in Oswald's grave was that of a Russian imposter who replaced Oswald when he defected to the Soviet Union in 1959.

Eddowes, who wrote "The Oswald Files," said Sunday he was "surprised, but in no way disappointed" at the findings.

Oswald's widow, Marina Oswald Porter, said she was relieved and "pleased with the results of the autopsy."

Mrs. Porter, who stayed at a discreet distance as the body was exhumed at Fort Worth's Rose Hill Burial Park Sunday morning, said she was "glad the issues have been resolved."

She said she hoped to resume a "normal life" as Marina Porter.

Oswald was shot to death two days after the Kennedy shooting by nightclub owner Jack Ruby. Since then there have been several books propounding the idea that more than one person was involved in the assassination and several theories about Oswald, including Eddowes'.

"We hope this puts the matter to rest," said Ms. Norton, a former Dallas County medical examiner who now practices in Birmingham, Ala. "We hope the Porters can go about living a normal life without any more speculation."

Years of court battles and bitter family quarreling ended Sunday morning at 7 a.m., as gravediggers worked quickly to exhume Oswald's body at Mrs. Porter's insistence.

The final hurdle was removed when Oswald's brother, Robert, removed his legal opposition to the exhumation. A temporary restraining order issued by a federal judge at Robert Oswald's request expired at midnight Saturday, prompting negotiations between attorneys for Mrs. Porter and her brother-in-law.

Officials said moisture had deteriorated the coffin, which partially collapsed onto the body as the vault was opened.

The casket was reinforced with cardboard and wood, covered with a sheet and taken by hearse to Baylor University Medical Center in Dallas. The body was examined by Ms. Norton, Dr. Vincent DiMaio, Bexar County medical examiner, Dr. James A. Cottone, who specializes in dentistry, and Dr. Irvin Sopher, a West Virginia state medical examiner who has written several books on forensic dentistry.

The team took X-rays and made dental impressions to compare the teeth with Oswald's Marine Corps records.

Report 63 Iranian leftists killed

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Government firing squads executed 129 leftist opponents of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's Moslem fundamentalist regime in 24 hours, Iranian officials and newspapers reported today.

The latest volley of executions followed the election Friday of Hojatoleslam Ali Khamenei as Iran's third elected president since the downfall of Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi's monarchy in 1979.

A spokesman for Tehran's Evin Prison told The Associated Press in Beirut that 61 leftists were executed in Evin's courtyards and two were killed elsewhere in the country at dawn today on charges of street violence and armed insurgency against the Islamic republic.

The spokesman, who declined to be identified in the telephone interview, said all 63 of the dead belonged to the Islamic-Marxist Mujahedeen Khalq, the leading underground opposition group, and its junior partner, Peykar, a Marxist-Leninist organization.

The Tehran newspaper Kayhan earlier reported 66 leftists, mostly from the Mujahedeen Khalq, were executed in several Iranian cities on Sunday, including 30 killed in the central city of Isfahan.

The latest executions brought to 1,195 the total of secular leftist activists put to death since they mounted a campaign of assassinations and bombings against the government following Khomeini's firing of moderate ex-President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr on June 22, according to official tabulations and news media announcements.

Tehran authorities say more than 300 Khomeini supporters lost their lives in opposition violence, including Bani-Sadr's successor Mohammad Ali Rajai, who was killed in a firebombing on Aug. 30, 37 days after his election.

The government claimed a record turnout at the polls in last Friday's election to choose Rajai's successor despite a violent campaign by opposition guerrillas to scare voters away.

Nearly complete figures announced by the Interior Ministry gave the presidency to the 42-year-old Khamenei, the secretary-general of the ruling Islamic Republican Party.

Senate panel opening MX hearings

WASHINGTON (AP) — Facing stiff questioning in Congress, the Reagan administration says its plan to deploy MX missiles in stronger silos and build a new bomber is essential to counter a "considerable danger" of nuclear attack in the next few years.

The Senate Armed Services Committee was opening hearings today on President Reagan's proposal to deploy 100 MX missiles, reinforce vacant Titan silos for at least 36 of them and build 100 B-1 bombers while working on a plane with "Stealth" equipment to foil Soviet radar.

Sen. John Warner, R-Va., chairman of the subcommittee on nuclear forces and a former Navy secretary, said he would press Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger to justify the use of fixed silos and explain "whether we can afford two new bomber programs at the same time."

In interviews Sunday, Weinberger called the plan a "vast strengthening" of U.S. military might, while his predecessor at the Pentagon, Harold Brown, dismissed it as "better than nothing."

"Because of the failure to keep strategic forces modernized and because of the length of time it takes to bring new systems on, there will be a period in the middle of this decade when we will be vulnerable and will have a period of considerable danger," Weinberger said on CBS' "Face the Nation."

"That is why it is absolutely essential to start now with the modernization and strengthening of these strategic forces," he said.

Brown, interviewed on the ABC program "Issues and Answers," said, "It's better than nothing....It will produce a greater symmetry between the United States and the Soviets. That doesn't make me very comfortable. I don't worry about a U.S. first strike, because it isn't going to happen. I do worry about a Soviet first strike."

Former President Carter had scrapped plans for the B-1 and advocated shuttling 200 MX missiles among 2,400 shelters in the West to conceal their whereabouts, a "shell-game" system intended to force the Soviets to saturate the area with 4,000 nuclear warheads to wipe out all the MXs.

Sen. John Tower, chairman of the Armed Services Committee, appearing on the NBC program "Meet the Press," derided Reagan's MX plan Sunday as "silo stuffing." The Texas Republican said it faces an "uncertain" fate in Congress.

Yokum also served as president and one of the key founders of Singles Together, a similar organization for single adults in Amarillo.

The organization is being formed to provide single adults with social activities as an alternative to the bar and lounge scene.

Preliminary plans call for activities such as trips to the dinner theater, concerts, skiing trips and informal activities, such as picnics, bicycle rides and hayrides.

Future plans are being made for another Singles Forum to deal with topics such as taxes for the single person and budget and credit information.

Court refuses to revive Silkwood charges

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today refused to revive charges that the FBI and the Kerr-McGee Corp. undercut Karen Silkwood's nuclear plant union-organizing drive.

The justices, without comment, let stand a ruling dismissing the conspiracy and cover-up allegations filed after Ms. Silkwood's death in 1974.

The case acted on today was a part of an earlier suit filed by heirs and survivors of Ms. Silkwood, who died in a car crash on the way to a meeting with a labor leader and a New York Times reporter.

She reportedly was trying to deliver evidence of missing plutonium and falsification of safety tests at the Kerr-McGee nuclear facility in Cimarron, Okla.

At the time of her death on Nov. 13, 1974, Ms. Silkwood was 28 years old and a local leader in the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers Union.

One part of the suit, alleging that Kerr-McGee was responsible for injuries due to Ms. Silkwood's exposure to radiation, resulted in a $10.5 million judgment for her estate. That award, issued against the company in 1979, is now pending before the 10th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

The suit also claimed that, beginning in 1972, Ms. Silkwood and other Kerr-McGee employees were blocked by the company in their efforts to organize a labor union.

The activities allegedly included wiretapping, surveillance and harassment.

The suit said that after Ms. Silkwood's death, several FBI agents joined the conspiracy to help cover up the company's past activities.

That second part of the case, which also seeks money damages, never went to trial.

A federal trial judge in 1978 threw out charges that Kerr-McGee and some of its officials conspired against the union activities. Those charges were filed under a fairly limited section of the the Civil Rights Act of 1871.

The section involved is known as the Ku Klux Klan Act, and was originally passed by Congress as one of a number of measures to protect blacks.

The trial judge said that to show a deprivation of rights guaranteed by the act, a suit would have to show discrimination against a whole class of persons, not just against the activities of certain individuals.

The trial judge's ruling was upheld by the 10th Circuit court last Dec. 3.

The appeals court also upheld the trial court's decision to throw out the cover-up claim, based on the Constitution, against the FBI agents.

In opposing the Supreme Court appeal, the company accused the Silkwood representatives of trying to "piece together an outlandish conspiracy."

BODY REMOVED. Workmen at Rose Hill Cemetery in Fort Worth, Texas, begin digging Sunday morning to remove the body of Lee Harvey Oswald. Some 18 years of speculation and court battles ended after pathologists identified the body in the grave as that of the accused presidential assassin. Oswald's body was returned later Sunday, in a new casket, to the same plot.

Space Hall of Fame inducts seven

ALAMOGORDO, N.M. (AP) — The pilot who broke the sound barrier in 1947 told a crowd at the International Space Hall of Fame that the U.S. Air Force deserves the credit for his success.

"They taught me to be a fighter, test and research pilot," said Charles Yeager, of Cedar Ridge, Calif. He said, however, that to be famous, one doesn't have to be good — only survive.

Yeager, one of seven inducted Saturday into the space hall, said he would "love to fly a (space) shuttle, but I had my fun in other aircraft."

Yeager broke the sound barrier aboard the Bell X-1 in 1947 at a level of flight speed of more than 670 mph at Edwards Air Base, Calif. He eventually achieved a speed of more than 1,000 miles mph and an altitude of more than 70,000 feet in the X-1.

He retired from the Air Force in 1975 as a brigadier general.

Others inducted into the Hall of Fame in ceremonies Saturday who were not present to receive their awards were astronauts Alan Shepard, who retired as a rear admiral in the U.S. Navy and lives in Deer Park, Texas; Scott Carpenter, who retired from the U.S. Navy as a commander and lives in Canoga Park, Calif.; Gordon Cooper, who retired as a U.S. Air Force colonel and lives in Glendale, Calif.; and Walter Schirra, who retired as a U.S. Navy captain and now lives in Inglewood, Calif.

The late Virgil Grissom, America's second man into space, was inducted posthumously. He flew the Mercury capsule "Liberty Bell 7" for a flight of 15 minutes and 37 seconds. He later served aboard the Gemini III mission and was killed during a Jan. 27, 1967, ground fire in the Apollo 1 program.

Andreas Anton Frederick Schumacher, an 18th century Danish rocket pioneer, also was inducted into the Hall of Fame, and his award was accepted by Maj. Eric Lyngbye of the Royal Danish Air Force.

Schumacher developed a complete rocket system after the bombardment of Copenhagen in 1897. He also founded the Danish Rockets Corps., which was the first rocket unit on the European continent.

Dr. Maxine Faget, instrumental in the Mercury space program, told the 6th annual induction ceremony that the space shuttle has taken the world into the age of spaceships.

Religious leader is seeking the lost Ark of Covenant

FRANKSTON, Texas (AP) — Religious leader Tom Crotser may not look like Indiana Jones of the smash hit movie "Raiders of the Lost Ark," but his mission to find sacred religidus documents is the same.

Crotser, founder of the Holy Ground Mission in back-woods East Texas, said last week that he knows the exact location of the sacred Ark of the Covenant and will leave Oct. 20 on a quest to the Middle East to recover it. The former Disciples of Christ minister said he will undertake the archaelological work to prepare for Jesus' return to Earth in 1988.

"I just happen to be in God's plan and God's purpose and God's time, the man who knows where the Ark of the Covenant is located," Crotser said.

The soft-spoken leader of the primitive religious commune said he already has found Noah's Ark and the location of the Tower of Babel. He said his new, divinely-ordained goal is to find the Ark of the Covenant, which has been missing since the Babylonian capture of the Jews in 586 B.C.

Religious scholars said Moses built the sacred, gold-plated chest about 1200 B.C. to hold the stone tablets on which God wrote the Ten Commandments.

Crotser said he studied the Bible and ancient manuscripts to get directions to a sealed cave in Syria or Jordan — he will not say which. He said he is sure he will find the ark exactly where the prophet Jeremiah hid it at the time of the Babylonian attack.

Crotser, a Denton native, said he hopes that recovery of the Ark will help to fulfill prophecy and clear the way for the return of Christ, which the religious leader predicts will be in October 1988.

He said he is not using the movie's version of a swashbuckling expedition as a pattern for his proposed journey. Instead, God chose him to restore biblical artifacts to prepare for the second coming of Christ, he said.

Crotser, who heads up a 50-member community in Frankston and missions in three other sites, said he will not remove the ark from the cave, but will bring back some artifact to prove that he found it.

Vision tests for students

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Approximately 250,000 children entering Texas schools for the first time will have their vision checked this year, and if history repeats itself some 25,000 will be referred for more extensive eye tests.

The tests are required by the Children's Vision Screening Act of 1979, which is administered by the Texas Department of Health.

In the first year of the program, reports Dr. Malcolm Mazow of Houston, more than 100,000 children were screened in 246 of the 254 Texas counties, and more than 10,000 students were referred for further testing.

The aim of the legislation is to detect early eye problems while they are treatable.

A health department advisory committee is studying ways to lower the screening age to include child care facilities.

"One of the primary objectives of testing young children is detection of amblyopia — 'lazy eye blindness,'" said Donald Tausch, coordinator of the department's Vision Screening Program. "If it is caught earlier, a child has a better chance to overcome it."

In amblyopia, he said, the "lazy eye" is not used by a child, which often results in a non-functioning eye.

Texas political money tied up by Clements, Bentsen

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — It's big money time in Texas politics as would-be candidates try to get their campaigns financed before making public announcements.

But a lot of the big money in both parties is being tied up by the campaigns of Republican Gov. Bill Clements and Democrat U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen.

Other candidates say they have to plead just to get promises.

"It's no doubt the two races are getting the most money," said GOP State Chairman Chet Upham, Mineral Wells, "and I'm sure that some are giving both to Clements and Bentsen. They appeal to the same type businessman."

"There are a lot of the same people who give to Bentsen who also give to Clements, and vice versa," said a top Democratic campaigner, who did not want his name used. "Bentsen has always had bipartisan support, and Clements got Democratic support in 1978."

Clements and Bentsen have announced for re-election next year.

Land Commissioner Bob Armstrong says he will announce as a Democratic canidate for governor shortly, "barring a lightning stroke."

And there are recurring rumors that former Gov. Dolph Briscoe will make his decision on a race the latter part of October or early November. Sen. Peyton McKnight, D-Tyler, and former Attorney General John Hill are still to be heard from.

In the U.S. Senate race, Bentsen apparently will be opposed either by U.S. Rep Jim Collins, R-Dallas, or state Sen. Walter Mengden, R-Houston.

Collins has been campaigning, but there were recent reports that his problems in getting campaign backing might force a change of mind.

"Bentsen and Clements are getting the top-dollar contributions, the $20,000 kind," said Armstrong., "but then Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby is getting some of that too ... If I make the race it will be something that will have to grow. I want to appeal to the young and successful people. I want to get the $1,000 and $2,000 donations instead of the $20,000 kind."

Those close to the campaigns say there's no doubt the extensiveness and advance start of the Clements and Bentsen campaigns will make things hard for other candidates.

"You've got to face it," says a Republican campaigner who did want to be named, "most of the big money in the Senate race, even from Republicans, is going to Bentsen ... And I don't see how anyone could get President Reagan to come to Texas to campaign against Bentsen, what with the relations they have had."

Receptionist stabbed to death

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A body found Friday night near an unpaved road in Northwest Travis County has been identified as that of a 71-year-old Austin woman who was a receptionist for a job-placement center for handicapped people.

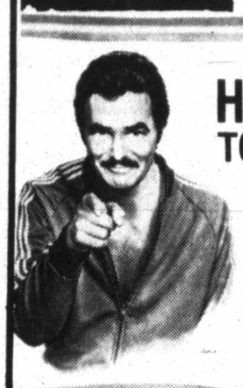

Police said Christine Glines had been raped and stabbed to death.

Her car was found burning miles away in downtown Austin, six blocks from her apartment.

"Whoever murdered her brought the car back into town and set it on fire," said Curtis Weeks, sheriff's public information officer. "I guess they were trying to destroy evidence."

Weeks said an autopsy was performed Saturday, but that the medical examiner's report would not be finished until today.

Turnaround in Army

Things are looking up for the U.S. Army, and its chief of staff, Gen. Edward C. Meyer, must be credited for much of the improvement.

A year ago, the general reported to Congress that he commanded a "hollow army" — a force beset with shortages of personnel and lack of training, weapons and maintenance.

Last year, six out of 10 Army divisions in the United States were unfit for combat because of shortages and inexperience. Today, nine out of 10 are combat - ready because Meyer brought 6,000 of his top sergeants from Europe to whip divisions here into shape.

Recent figures show the Army is filling 98 percnt of its recruiting quota, bringing in 96,000 men and women. Sixty - nine percent of the recruits now are high school graduates, compared to the former to the former 40 percent.

A year ago, U.S. soldiers scored low in international competitions. Recently, Army helicopter crews outpointed the Poles, West Germans and Russians in precision flying and navigation tests.

Last May, American tank crews placed third in competetion against 20 teams from eight nations.

The remarkable turnaround in the Army is good news for the entire nation.

Defense without bankruptcy

It appears that the Reagan administration is now seriously considering ways and means to cut planned increases in the budget in order to bring federal spending under some semblance of control. It is safe to assume that the administration wants to make whatever cuts are to be made without jeopardizing the military strength of the United States. If possible the Reagan team would assuredly like to get more defense even from a defense budget that has been cut slightly.

Fortunately, a lot of people have been giving the matter a great deal of thought in the last few months. What might be called a "third force" in military thinking has emerged and has begun to find its voice.

For the past decade or so, the debate about military spending has been pretty much the province of the "hawks" and the "doves." To oversimplify the matter, one group has generally said (with a few exceptions and with occasional rhetoric about economy and efficiency) "give the Pentagon whatever it wants, and maybe more." Another group (again with some exceptions) has been inclined to oppose almost all military spending requests, especially those for new weapons systems. The reactions of both sides to almost any given proposal have been fairly predictable.

A new school of thought has emerged recently, however, and it deserves a hearing. These military reformers range across ideological lines, from liberal Sen. Gary Hart (D - Colo) to conservative Rep. Newt Gingrich (R - Ga); from the conservative Heritage Foundation to the tough - minded liberal magazine Washington Monthly. Two recent books, The Defense Industry by Jacques Gansler and National Defense by James Fallows have expounded what appear to be constructive insights into our military dilemma.

In brief, this school of thought holds that (1) the U.S. military has become too dependent on complex, hard - to - repair technology that is not really suitable for combat, (2) relationships between the Pentagon and the defense industry have become too cozy, leading to unnecessarily high costs and a certain wandering away from primary objectives, and (3) we need to move away from dependency on massive systems with overwhelming firepower and toward larger numbers of flexible, lower - cost weapons.

We can't commend all the ideas of this group of reformers; for example most of them have a certain fixation on conscription, and some lack in - depth military experience, leading them to rather superficial judgments. But most of their ideas are contructive, reflecting a genuine concern for national security rather than knee - jerk hostility to any military spending.

What the "third force" thinkers and the General Accounting office in several reports have demonstrated is that it is possible to institute reforms — in procurement practices, strategy and institutional arrangements — that may not only save money, but give us a better defense capability than we now have.

It will take work to sort out the good ideas from the bad and put them into practice. The most important factor, however, is the willingness to entertain the notion that a stronger military does not always require more spending. If that premise can be entertained, real progress is possible.

Some drafty statistics

Would - be slavemasters, determined to find an excuse to conscript the youth of America into service of the state, keep harping on the "low quality" and educational deficiencies of the volunteer armed forces. Sorry fellows, it just won't wash.

Department of Defense statistics for fiscal year 1980 show that 89 percent of the enlisteds, 93 percent of the warrant officers and virtually all commissioned officers in the current armed forces are high school graduates.

National Center for Education statistics reveal that only about 86 percent of the general population over age 18 is made up high school graduates. Eliminating the officers and warrant officers, the enlisted ranks alone have 88.8 percent high school graduates.

While the number of persons with some college training has dropped to about 40 percent of the military, including the officer corps, the general population figures show only 31.9 percent over age 25 had attended college.

They have a point though, about the non - conscripted military force failing to be a representative cross - section of the population: perhaps the volunteer armed forces are just a cut above average?

Shall government manage economy?

By OSCAR COOLEY

Capitalism in the United States faces a crisis, in the view of Louis Harris, head of the Harris Survey. If, by a year hence, inflation is not below 10 percent, the prime interest rate down to 11 or 12 percent, capital investment up sharply, industry thriving, and Reagan's budget well on its way to a balance, watch out. The patience of the people will be ending and they will be looking for "a very different role for government."

This moves one to ask, just what is the role of government?

Government is the servant of all the people. It should not have favorites but should offer its services to all alike. Just as a private firm's purpose is to serve its owners, so government should serve all the people, they being its equal "owners."

Most services are desired in greater or less degree by individuals and can be measured out, allotting to each the services he willingly offers to pay for. In short, most services can be sold for prices, being rendered to those who want them enough to pay the price and denied to others. Such services are best rendered by private firms, competing with one another for the person's trade. Government need not and should not concern itself with such services. They are "priceable." (That word may not be in your dictionary, but it is self - defining.)

On the other hand, certain services are wanted by everyone and cannot, practically speaking, be rationed out to people — that is, performed for one but not for another — but have to be offered to all as a group. These are not priceable. Among such is the service of the police. They are to keep order, enforcing the laws and preventing individuals from attacking one another, stealing one another's property, or disturbing the peace of the community.

The essence of good police service is that it has no favorites but protects everyone alike. It takes no sides in a conflict, but suppresses the conflict. Police protection cannot be sold for a price; it is non - priceable. Hence, it is a basic function of the state. It can be dispensed with only when all people become perfectly peaceable, and it does not seem that this will be soon.

Similar but on a larger scale is national defense, or the protection of citizens, considered as a community, from aggression by other states or groups. This, too, is a service that all citizens want and which cannot be sold to some, denied to others. It is a non - priceable service.

Priceability seems the logical criterion for state functions. Services which are not priced or priceable but which are universally required or desired by all the people within a given jurisdiction are proper state services. They are the peculiar role of government. All other services are best left to the people to perform or get for themselves, to the extent that each wants and is willing to pay the bill, through the private sector, that is, through private firms competing with one another for the consumer's trade.

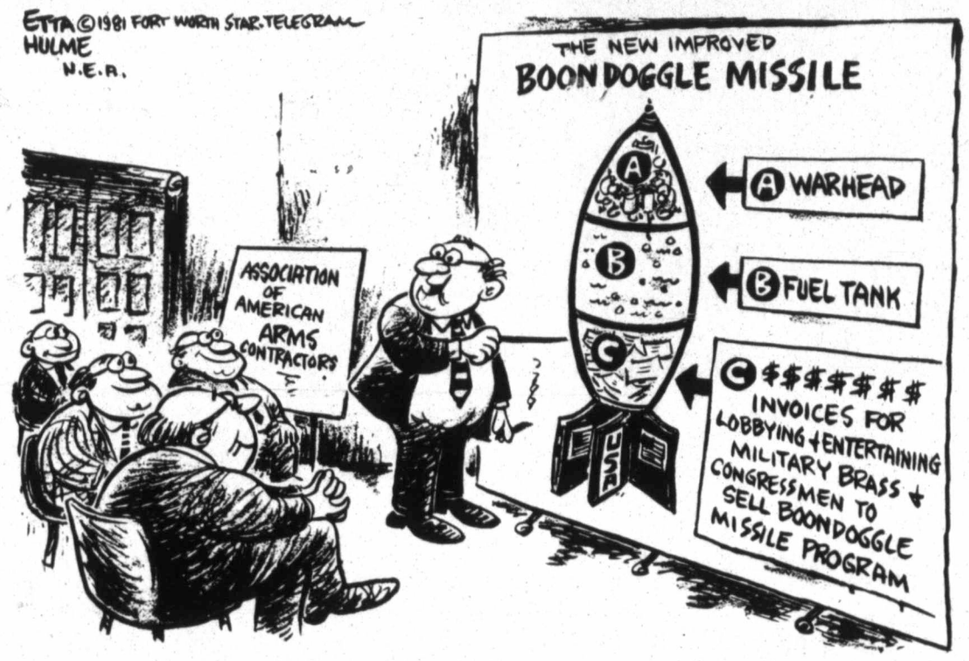

In the light of this reasoning, is it the role of the U.S. government to carry the mails? Obviously not. This is a service desired by persons and firms to different degrees. It is easily priceable. This is just as true of letters as of bundles of freight, which we entrust to private trucks and freight cars.

In fact, the government renders many services that are priceable.

Some of them are monopolies (the Postal Service, for example). One suspects they have to be, in order to keep private competitors from taking over the business, being more efficient.

Why, then, has government grown like a weed in recent years, performing more and more functions? And why does Louis Harris suggest that our government is on the verge of a vast expansion into what has been the private sector? Is it the role of government to produce and distribute goods on a national scale? To perform services that can be and are readily sold for mutually agreed prices?

If the critical times force us to raise and consider these questions seriously, they may be welcomed.

"Now here's the new improvement — we've discovered some pretty volatile material to load in Section C."

Really high finance

By DON GRAFF

The timing may be a bit discomfiting, but no one can say it comes as a surprise.

In the midst of its hard - sell campaign to convince the public, particularly that portion of it that hangs out around Wall Street, that its policies will regenerate the economy and stabilize federal finances, the administration has had to ask Congress for an increase in the national debt limit.

Beginning Sept. 30 to more than $1 trillion, a "dreaded financial milestone" in the words of the Wall Street Journal that everyone has seen coming for a long time.

It is a step that this administration of all recent administations would certainly rather not take, but there is no way out. Even if the Reagan budget trims and tax cuts deliver fully as promised, it will be 1984 before federal accounts show a surplus. Meanwhile, fed by continuing deficits and interest accrual, the debt goes on accumulating. The total was $980.5 billion as of Sept. 3 with a legal limit of $985 billion. Scarcely enough room left there to cover the bureaucracy's office supplies and miscellaneous requirements for the rest of the month.

So the Reagan administration has the dubious historical distinction of presiding over the erection of a milestone. You have to go a long way back to find a comparable one — to the Wilson adminstration and 1917 when, under the pressure of World War I expenditures, the debt first topped $1 billion.

Of course, those were much different dollars, which suggests another way of looking at the debt. Applying a little historical perspective to that trillion - dollar figure, it is somewhat less formidable. In terms of purchasing power now as compared to then, it works out to less than $500 million in 1971 dollars. Or about $300 billion in 1961 dollars.

That's discounting for inflation.

Now doesn't that make you feel better?

REAGANESE SPOKEN THERE

Are you in gee with the administration's formating of public policy for the out years?

If you understand that you could well be working now, or at least be a good candidate for a job, in Reagan Washington. The administration is already putting its distinctive stamp on the language as it is sometimes incomprehensibly spoken in the highest official circles.

As researched and defined recently in the Wall Street Journal, "in gee" as used by movers and shakers in today's Washington means they are in agreement. "Out years" means long term and "to format" stands in for to plan to develop. No problem once you have a phrase book, and Berlitz may be out with one shortly.

Actually, the Reagan phrase - makers are only following precedent. Every administration in recent memory has done the same. Reasonably long memories may recall "thrust," which the Kennedy people applied to everything from the subject matter of a cocktail party conversation to the development — pardon, formating — of nuclear strategy.

The Johnson years bequeathed us, among other things, "nitty - gritty," but the reall productive administration linguistically speaking was the Nixon. Remember "tilt," as in policies favoring one side or the other in a foreign spat? Not to mention "inoperative," as in "we made a mistake in what was said earlier but would prefer not to say it now in so many words," and that long - run hit playing in Peoria? "Misspeak" also showed up somewhere along there and was carried over to enjoy a bit of a vogue in Carter Washington.

Well, English is a living language and to live is to grow. Although from some points of view, such as those of English departments, additions of this nature my better be described as growths on the language.

But who knows? We can always hope that in the out years an administration may come along the thrust of whose linguistic contributions is toward formating a style of official commnication that will be comprehensible to ordinary folk in Peoria and everywhere else.

In gee?

By PAUL HARVEY

Strange thing, that wart....

Dr. Karl Menninger, in his book "Sparks," expresses fascination with circumstantial evidence linking anxiety to head colds.

He does not presume to explain it.

There are phenomena which medical science has to accept without explanation.

Another example is warts.

There's a scientist at Cornell University who thinks "warts are wonderful."

Professor Lewis Thomas, a pathologist, waxes almost poetic in describing the "splendor of the complexity of their architecture."

Under a microscope, he says, "the purposeful cellular arrangement sits there in a turreted mount of dense, impenetrable horn, impregnable."

And yet "you can think them away."

I said he said, "you can think them away."

This special quality of warts, Professor Thomas considers more amazing than cloning or acupuncture and even less explanable. "One of the great mystifications of science."

This will not be news to your grandmoher. She knew two generations ago that a wart could be rubbed with a gold wedding ring and made to disappear overnight.

Before specialists — when dermatologists were just called "doc" — the GP's tutored by sir William Osler learned to paint warts with gentian violet and assure the patient the wart would be gone in a week. They never saw it fail.

Several medical researchers, good clinical investigators with proper controls, have been fascinated by the wart.

One researcher took 14 patients with seemingly intractable generalized warts on both sides of the body. Under hypnosis it was suggested that the warts on one side of the body would begin to go away.

Within weeks they did. Results were definitive, indisputable. In nine of the 14 patients, all or nearly all of the warts had vanished on the suggested side — while on the control side there were just as many as ever.

Dr. Thomas suspects the unconscious mind needs carefully phrased specific instructions in order to cut off the blood supply to one wart while leaving another intact.

He believes that whatever the rejection process, it is not a haphazard, disordered occurrence. Whatever is responsible for wart rejection has the accuracy and precision of a surgeon.

This research raises some unanswered questions concerning human organ transplants. Are the intruding organs rejected by some mental process?

Is immunology something we might accomplish mentally?

After all, a mental process that can reject a wart selectively is both potent and technically advanced beyond our understanding. There is something in each of us that's smarter than we are.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Monday, Oct. 5, the 278th day of 1981. There are 87 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Oct. 5, 1502, Christopher Columbus discovered Costa Rica.

On this date:

In 1793, Christianity was abolished in France.

In 1796, Spain declared war on Britain.

In 1918, the allies announced that Germany's Hindenberg Line was broken in World War I.

And in 1970, Egypt's only political party named Anwar Sadat to succeed the late President Gamal Abdel Nasser.

Ten years ago: South Vietnam's Vice President Ky charged that presidential elections in that nation had been rigged.

Five years ago: It was announced that radioactive fallout from a nuclear test in China had been detected in the eastern United States.

One year ago: West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt's Socialist-Liberal coalition scored a decisive victory in parliamentary elections.

Today's birthday: Theatrical director Joshua Logan is 73 years old.

Thought for today: Art is a lie that enables us to realize the truth. — Pablo Picasso, Spanish artist (1881-1973).

Give and take

The average U.S. family, which made $18,800 a year, paid $1,935 in federal income taxes in 1979, down from $2,455 tax on the same income in 1970. But the Social Security tax on these earnings, shot up from $375 in 1970 to $1,150, the Conference Board finds.

Take care of valuable household items

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

It sometimes happens that an individual discovers an old family belonging is really a masterpiece worth a small fortune.

It also happens that the value of a good piece of furniture or art object is greatly reduced by improper refinishing.

According to several experts, the latter state of affairs is more likely to come to their attention than the former.

John Stair, head of restoration service at Sotheby Parke Bernet, says "I have seen furniture worth $5,000 made into furniture worth $2,500 because somebody did the wrong thing."

In separate interviews, Stair, Mary Kerr of Cooper - Hewitt Museum of Design, and Larry Majewski of the Institute of Fine Arts in New York, offered advice regarding the acquisition and care of old furniture and art objects.

It is possible to get a buy at an auction, yard sale or dealer. But to evaluate whether the purchase is a "find" or not, it is necessary to figure the cost of putting it in order, Stair said.

The first problem is getting an authoritative estimate on what it will cost to restore the piece, preferably before the commitment is made to buy it.

The need for qualified opinions is one reason why Sotheby Restoration was set up, said Stair. The service provides one - stop access to cabinetmakers, gilders, furniture polishers and specialists in lacquer, metalwork and needlework.

An expert also will travel to shops and auction houses in the New York area to evaluate the cost of putting a piece back into good order before the purchase has been made.

Once it has been decided to buy and restore a piece, the next step is to find someone to do the work. This is especially difficult for consumers with only one or two pieces that need work.

"Many restoration firms do most of their work for a few dealers. Naturally, they do those jobs first and then fill in with other jobs," said Stair. Since good workers have more jobs than they can handle, an individual with a small repair often will have to wait a long time to get it done.

One method of finding experts is to "go to the best antique dealers in town and ask them who they deal with," said Stair.

For the best job, don't leave it all to the restorer. Ask to see some finished work. There are degrees of shininess in furniture, for example, and by looking at some finished pieces, the customer and expert can discuss what sort of finish is desired and come to an understanding before the work is undertaken.

In some cases, the best person to repair an antique may be oneself, said Ms. Kerr, who is in charge of programs at the Cooper - Hewitt Museum in New York. Each year the museum offers a variety of repair clinics providing instruction in a particular field.

"Registrants bring in an item of their own to work on under the guidance of the teacher," she said. In many cases, they are able to make the needed repair besides learning how to care for their belongings.

Each clinic concentrates on a different area. Subjects already covered or planned for the near future include furniture, porcelain, pictures and books. The clinics teach students to distinguish between what they can repair themselves and when to consult an expert, she added.

Ms. Kerr has seen examples of possessions whose value has been reduced by such improper treatment as painting or cutting down furniture or dyeing the worn, threadbare portion of a rug. Actions of this sort may give a temporary cosmetic improvement, but they render the piece less valuable, or even valueless, she added.

Majewski, a teacher of art restoration, advises seeking help from a local museum curator to identify an object and determine a proper course of repair.

An individual also can do some research by looking through art books until something that looks familiar crops up, he said.

Helpful hints for fire prevention

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1981 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR READERS: It's Fire Prevention Week again, and I have had so many requests to repeat my column on fire prevention that it has become a tradition. So here it is, with updated figures:

Last year, 7,800 Americans died, and nearly 130,000 civilians, plus 100,000 firemen, were seriously injured in 3,000,000 fires.

The total fire loss last year in property alone was $5½ billion in the U.S.

The chief causes of fires, in order of the toll taken, were:

1. Smoking
2. Electrical wiring
3. Heating and cooking equipment
4. Children playing with matches
5. Open flames and sparks
6. Flammable liquids
7. Suspected arson
8. Chimneys and flues
9. Lightning
10. Spontaneous ignition

Now for some tips that could save your life:

Be sure your cigarette is out. Matches, too. Never leave matches and lighters within the reach of children.

Don't run cords under rugs or over radiators where they may get damaged. Replace a cord if it is frayed.

Never leave small children or invalids alone in the house — not even for a few minutes.

Have your wiring and electrical installations done by a professional.

Store oily rags and paints in a cool place in tightly sealed metal containers.

Never use flammable liquids for dry-cleaning indoors.

Never smoke in bed.

Have a fire drill in your home to be sure everyone knows what to do in case of fire. Designate a specific meeting place outside so you will all know who's outside of the house.

Remember: Fire extinguishers put out 97 percent of all fires on which they were used, and most large fires start as small fires. So, invest in a compact, easy-to-use fire extinguisher. Keep it handy in your kitchen, or be prudent and buy one for your cottage, car, boat and the back bedroom.

Buy and install a smoke detector and then properly maintain it. It must be cleaned often with the vacuum cleaner hose so that it is dust-free. It is estimated that 6,000 lives could have been saved last year had a smoke detector been in service when the fire happened.

Now, in case of fire:

If you suspect fire, alert the rest of the household. But first feel the top of the door. If it's hot, don't open it. Escape through the window.

If you can't open the window, break it with a chair. Cover the rough edges with a blanket, sit on the window ledge with one leg hanging outside and one inside, and wait for help.

The phone number of your fire department should be taped on every telephone. If it isn't, don't fumble around trying to find it. Get out and call from a neighbor's house.

If you live in an apartment building, use the stairway. Don't take a chance on the elevator. If it fails, you're trapped!

Once out, stay out. No treasure is worth risking your life.

It took less than three minutes to read this column. Was it worth it? I hope so.

ABBY

P.S. If you are in a hotel and suspect there is a fire, call the fire department yourself. Then alert the hotel telephone operator. Believe it or not, most hotels will not call the fire department until their staff verifies whether or not there really is a fire and have tried to put it out themselves. Should a guest call to report a fire, the hotel will almost always send a bellhop, security guard or anyone else who's not busy to investigate. Hotels are reluctant to "disturb" their guests. Fire engines in the street are quite embarrassing and tend to draw crowds. The hotel may be a little upset with you, but really . . . who gives a damn? The fire department will be glad you called; you may have saved many lives.

CHICKEN MARSALA

It's hard to find an easy-to-make dish with few ingredients that's as good as this one.

4-pound roasting chicken
16 packaged pitted prunes
1 cup dry Marsala wine

Prepare a claypot (about 3½-quart capacity) according to manufacturer's directions. Insert the prunes in the body cavity of the chicken. Tie the chicken wings close to the body: tie together the ends of the drumsticks. Place chicken, breast side up, in the bottom of the claypot. Pour the Marsala over the chicken and cover with the claypot top. Place in a cold oven. Turn oven control to 475 degrees and bake until chicken is very brown and tender — 1½ hours. Remove prunes from chicken and reserve; remove chicken to a hot serving platter and keep hot in a low oven. Pour liquid in claypot into a small saucepan and skim off fat; add prunes to saucepan; heat; serve with the chicken. Makes 4 large servings.

What new type of exercise is just as beneficial as running or biking, can be done by anyone, anywhere and is both fun and easy? It's rebound exercise—accomplished by bouncing on a mini-trampoline.

An interesting study, conducted by Dr. James White (University of California at San Diego) on a group of seventy women, compared the effects of daily treadmill running, stationery bicycling, jumping on a mini-trampoline and no exercise program at all. While all the exercises showed equivalent results, rebounding came out ahead because none of the jumpers suffered the calf or leg injuries experienced by the runners and bikers. Most importantly, a 12-month follow up showed that over half of the jumpers had continued bouncing regularly compared to only 31 percent of the joggers and 5 percent of the bicycle riders. Diet Center recognizes the value of rebound exercise and recommends bouncing at least ten minutes daily to attain and maintain your good health!

Immigration reform border governors topic

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — President Reagan's proposed immigration reform policy is expected to be the most controversial topic among governors from four American and six Mexican states meeting here today and Tuesday.

They are here for the second Border Governors Conference to exchange ideas and recommend policy on a variety of issues affecting the U.S.-Mexican border. The historic first meeting of the governors was last June in neighboring Ciudad Juarez, Mexico.

Most of the recommendations and resolutions to be churned out already have been approved by the 10 governors and are to be formally accepted and signed during the meeting.

But representatives of the American governors say there could be fireworks in private discussions concerning immigration and undocumented alien workers.

"It's going to be the main issue," said Jim West, press secretary for Gov. Bruce Babbitt of Arizona. "That's going to impact every other aspect of what's being talked about. If no agreement can be reached on (that issue), it may all go out the window."

Reagan has proposed a guest worker program that would allow thousands of Mexican workers to enter the United States to hold temporary jobs. He also has proposed "legalization" opportunities for illegal aliens who have been living in the United States and fines for employers who knowingly hire illegal aliens.

West said Babbitt "has some problems with nearly every area" of the Reagan plan and will oppose it in discussions Tuesday.

Gov. Bill Clements of Texas, who initially opposed the Reagan plan but now says he supports it in concept, is not satisfied with all of the details. Some officials have said Clements is expected to bring immigration proposals of his own.

"Gov. Clements has been very interested in that issue and may come in with something," said Rich Juarez, California Gov. Jerry Brown's spokesman on the conference. "They may be very heavy on that one."

New Mexico Gov. Bruce King has said he will try to convince the other three governors to take a unified position on the Reagan plan. His state's Border Commission has recommended that he oppose the plan.

The governors' discussion of immigration problems will be behind closed doors as will their talks on technical exchanges and mutual border problems.

Rick Montoya of Clement's Department of Regional Development said drug trafficking and recovery of stolen property also are expected to be discussed although those issues are not on the public agenda.

King's director of the Department of Finance and Administration, Kay Marr, said she also expected the governors to discuss a wide range of social programs and natural resource management plans because of the anticipated booming growth of the border region.

"It's supposed to be pretty free-flowing," Juarez said.

The Mexican governors attending are Oscar Ornelas of Chihuahua, Samuel Ocana Garcia of Sonora, Emilio Martinez Manautou of Tamaulipas, Alfonso Martinez Dominguez of Nuevo Leon, Roberto de la Madrid of Baja California and interim Gov. Francisco Madero of Coahuila. Madero recently replaced Oscar Flores Tapia, who resigned pending a government investigation.

The state heads will be joined in the closed sessions by a few aides and federal officials from both sides of the border.

The governors will meet Monday in public to hear from committees that have worked on border issues since last year's meeting.

They will report on agriculture, cultural exchange, ecology and pollution, energy and commerce, twin plants and industrial development and tourism.

Committees from both sides of the border worked on reports until they were mutually acceptable by all.

"Getting representatives of four states to agree to anything and then getting the six Mexican states to agree to them is a big job," said Augie Garcia, Babbitt's committee representative.

"You have to go through a lot of sorting out. The fact that we can reach an accord on a list of things tells you something about the process."

California's Juarez said the acceptance of the committee recommendations by the governors is virtually assured in advance.

"There are no real problems with any of them," Juarez said. "There may be some issues that pop up that are controversial. But we had Cabinet-level people working on these and they weren't going to let anything in that they thought would be controversial."

Montoya of Texas said the proposals were being kept under wraps until the conference began because "it wouldn't be fair to the committee chairmen to release them."

But other state officials said most call for formation of permanent committees to coordinate efforts by both countries.

On the ecology question, for example, the recommendation is for establishment of a binational committee to coordinate pollution control measures and research on both sides of the border, Juarez said.

Another example is the agriculture committee, which recommended formation of a permanent committee to foster agricultural trade between the countries, as well as coordinate exchanges of information of technology and natural resources.

The permanent committees, if started, could help replace the Southwest Border Regional Commission, which coordinated efforts to improve relations with Mexico and resolve border problems. The commission is to be eliminated in federal budget cuts.

Federal officials have agreed to give some of the commission's leftover funds to the states to keep border development offices operating until states can take over. The American governors have agreed to form a non-profit corporation called the Southwest Border Regional Conference, under which their efforts would be coordinated.

"The federal officials have recognized that if we're going to really address border problems, it's going to have to be more than federal officials talking to federal officials," Juarez said. "It has to be more than ad hoc state involvement."

Man arrested in trooper's shooting death

EDINBURGH, Texas (AP) — Two dozen officers from various law enforcement agencies surrounded a house near this lower Rio Grande Valley town Sunday and arrested a 34-year-old man wanted in the slaying of a Texas highway patrolman, authorities said.

Department of Public Safety spokesman David Wells said Leonel Torres Herrera tried to flee the home after it was surrounded by officers, who were acting on a tip.

A DPS officer fired a warning shot and Herrera dropped to the ground and surrendered, Wells said.

Wells said about 25 officers from the DPS, Edinburgh Police Department, Hidalgo County Sheriff's Department and Texas Rangers took part in the arrest.

Herrera had been named in a murder warrant charging him with the shooting death of Trooper David Irvine Rucker, 37, who had stopped the suspect on a routine traffic violation Tuesday night.

Rucker's body was discovered by a passing motorist on Texas Highway 00 near Los Fresnos. He had been shot once in the head, Wells said.

Herrera also is suspected in the wounding of Los Fresnos police officer Enrique Carrisalez minutes after Rucker was shot.

Carrisalez remained in critical condition Sunday at Valley Baptist Medical Center in Harlingen, a hospital spokeswoman said.

Bentsen recalls his early years in Washington

By CHARLES RICHARDS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — In the Russell Senate Office Building, on a wall of the most expansive room of the complex of facilities provided for Texas' junior senator, is a picture of a bald, scowling Sam Rayburn, the late Speaker of the House.

"That's the only one like it, you know," Sen. Lloyd Bentsen said during a recent interview as he threw an affectionate glance at the photograph.

"He didn't like it and gave it to me," the 60-year-old Texas Democrat smiled. On the picture, Rayburn scrawled, "To my friend, Lloyd Bentsen, who likes ugly things."

Rayburn was from Bonham and represented Texas' fourth district from 1913 to 1961 and was Speaker from 1940 until 1961 except when Republicans were in control.

Bentsen, who at 25 had been Texas' youngest county judge, was elected to the U.S. House of Representatives two years later, in 1948, and was the nation's youngest congressman for the next four years. But Rayburn took an interest in him, making things not as difficult as they might have been.

"As I look back on it, it was a very enriching experience, because I remember B.A. and I used to have — we had a farm house in Maryland — and we used to have out there for dinner the chief justice, Fred Vinson; Sam Rayburn; Lyndon Johnson; Stuart Symington; and some others," Bentsen said.

"For a couple that young, it was a pretty heady experience," he added. He was married to the former Beryl Ann — or "B.A." Longino of Lufkin.

After serving three 2-year terms in the House, Bentsen was ready to head back to Texas.

"I think what stood out the most, about those six years, was that as a member of the House you didn't accomplish much. Frustrating? It was extremely frustrating. Because in those days you had to stay so long to accomplish much," he recalled. Power and influence came through seniority, and Bentsen was on the bottom of the ladder.

Plus, when he decided to quit, he had a wife and three kids and was having trouble making it on the $12,500 annual salary.

"I wanted some time to be in on the rearing of our children, plus I felt I wanted to go back and try business," Bentsen added.

"I remember, Sam Rayburn called me in and said, 'Lloyd, I hear you're not going to run for reelection.' And I said that's right. He said, 'That is very foolish.' I said why, and he said, 'Lloyd, you've been here three terms, you're now only 33, you're from a safe district, why in another 25 years, you can be speaker.' And I thought, 25 years? That seemed like forever."

From 1954, when he left the nation's capital, until 1970 when he returned, he made a fortune for himself in Houston. He became president of Lincoln Consolidated, an insurance company, then he formed a financial holding company, one of a succession of ventures that spiraled him to the millionaire ranks.

"I've always enjoyed putting things together, putting deals together," Bentsen said.

In Houston, a member of his church planned to retire, but his company pension was set up in such a way that he couldn't qualify for a pension until he'd been there 25 years, and the company fired him a few months before he could qualify.

"He and his wife were such a wonderful couple. I think the shock of that led to his early death, and I resolved that if I ever got a chance I was going to try to correct that sort of thing," Bentsen remembers.

Bentsen defeated George Bush in the 1970 General Election and returned to Washington as a U.S. senator. He pushed through ERISA, the Employee Retirement Income Security Act that was passed in 1974, generally considered one of the most complicated laws ever written.

"You take a great satisfaction about putting something like that together, particularly when it has failed to pass the Finance Committee year after year," he said.

The Joint Economic Committee — a partisan and divisive committee of 10 senators and 10 representatives, also split evenly among Republicans and Democrats — had scarcely agreed on anything. Then Bentsen took over as chairman and steered the panel to consecutive unanimous decisions on four annual and semi-annual reports about the economy.

Bentsen occasionally likes to start the day with an early tennis match. In the 1940s, he was a high school basketball and baseball player at Sharyland, between Mission and McAllen.

"We were so small we didn't even have a football team. I didn't win any honors. I was just enthusiastic, and a competitor. I'd rather play sandlot baseball than go see the World Series, because I'm a participant."

Further, "I'd drive 100 miles to meet an interesting person, but I wouldn't drive 10 miles to see a building."

President Harry Truman was one of the more interesting he met when he first came to Congress in 1948. As a Missouri senator, Truman occupied the very same offices Bentsen now has.

"When I first came to Washington, there was some reception, and someone asked me, 'Congressman, what did you do before you got here?' and I said, 'Oh, I was just a county judge.' I had just been sworn in. Someone put his hand on my shoulder from behind me and said, 'Now, don't run down these county judges. I was one once.' And I turned around and said, 'Mr. President!' It was Harry Truman."

Iwo Jima statue at Harlington

HARLINGEN — A convoy of Texas trucks will transport the original sculpture of the famous flag - raising by U.S. Marines on Iwo Jima in World War II from its creator's studio in Newport, R.I. to the Marine Military Academy (MMA) in Harlingen. The convoy, comprising trucks from eight member companies of the Texas Motor Transportation Association, will begin the five - day move on Oct. 6, 1981.

Dr. Feix DeWeldon, who created the six - story, 130 - ton sculpture, has donated it to MMA, the world's only college - preparatory school offering military leadership training based on the customs and traditions of the U.S. Marine Corps. The well - known bronze statue of the Iwo Jima flag - raising at Arlington National Cemetery in Washington, D.C. was cast from this original plaster and concrete work, which currently is in crated pieces in Dr. DeWeldon's Newport studio.

The 2,200 - mile movement of the 78 crates will involve nine flatbed trailer rigs and a low boy trailer unit that will transport a crane.

Ralph Griffith, vice - president operations of C & H Transportation Co., Dallas, and Jim Shillingburg, vice - president administration of TMTA, are coordinating the movement of the statue pieces with Marine Military Academy officials and Dr. DeWeldon. The transportation is being provided at no cost to the academy.

Companies which are providing equipment and drivers for the operation are: C & H Transportation Co., Dallas; Gulf Oil Corporation, Houston; W.G. Luce Trucks, Tilden; Merchants, Inc., Abilene; Forzen Food Express, Dallas; A.L. McAlister Trucking Co., Wichita Falls; Quality Service Tank Lines, San Antonio; and Allied Van Lines, Omaha, Nebraska. The firms are selecting drivers for the project on the basis of safety records and experience.

A crane to be used in the loading of the trucks in Newport and the unloading and erection of the statue in Harlingen is being provided by Mobile Crane Service, Pharr.

The convoy is scheduled to arrive Oct. 9 in Dallas where ceremonies welcoming it to Texas will be conducted. The convoy will reach its Rio Grande Valley destination on Oct. 10.

Astro-Graph

October 6, 1981

This coming year you are likely to get more opportunities and breaks than you have in the past. Take nothing for granted or you may fail to act on situations which could be fruitful.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) For the sake of expediency you may make promises to a family member today which you may not be able to fulfill later. Both will be disappointed. Find out more of what lies ahead for you in the year following your birthday by sending for your copy of Astro-Graph. Mail $1 for each to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Exaggerations or boasts you make today will have a hollow ring. No one is likely to believe them but yourself. Tell it like it is.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) A well-meaning acquaintance may give you tips today on ways to make or save money. The intent will be worthy, but the information faulty.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Allow yourself time and space to maneuver in today. Things which usually come easy for you could have some unexpected complications.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Treat serious matters with the respect they deserve today. Don't let them become oppressive, but also don't take them for granted.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Try to be realistic today where your hopes and wishes are concerned. If you prime yourself for something too optimistically you could be let down.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Don't rely too heavily on Lady Luck today where your ambitions are concerned. She may be betting her chips on one who opposes you.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) This is one of those days when you are apt to focus on the smaller picture and obscure the larger view. Try to keep perspectives in proportion.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You could experience temptations today to try your luck in areas where the odds are stacked against you. Heed common sense, not hunches.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Normally you're a pretty shrewd horsetrader, but today you might make an agreement which benefits the other party far more than you.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Duties and responsibilities should not be rationalized away today. What you put off now may further complicate what you have to do later.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Temporarily postpone the purchase of luxury items if they don't fit comfortably into your budget. They'll still be there when your purse is fatter.

Cardinals upset Cowboys, 20-17, on late field goal

ST. LOUIS (AP) — To Roy Green, the double-duty wide receiver and defensive back of the St. Louis Cardinals, the plight of the Dallas Cowboys was clear.

"I was thinking in the final four minutes they're going to know how we felt," said Green after watching Neil O'Donoghue's 37-yard field goal saddle Dallas with a 20-17 upset loss Sunday. "We knew that if we went out and executed, we could do it."

St. Louis, in addition to knocking the Cowboys from the ranks of the National Football League's unbeaten, managed to extract revenge.

"Every time we played them, we'd be in the game," said defensive end Curtis Greer in reference to the seven straight setbacks St. Louis had suffered against Dallas. "There were times we just came up short. It was really a moment of relief."

The Cards, usually on the wrong side of the field during the closing minutes against their National Conference East rival, this time gained the upper hand.

A punt by the Cowboys' Danny White sailed out of bounds at the St. Louis 7 with 4½ minutes left only to have a 15-yard penalty rescue the Cards from a hole. Two pass completions by Jim Hart, three runs by Ottis Anderson and two more dashes by Wayne Morris then ate up most of the remaining time before O'Donoghue appeared.

"I felt pretty cool," said O'Donoghue, a 6-foot-6 kicker whose field goal with 23 seconds remaining came one play after Anderson rambled 9 yards to the Dallas 20 on third down.

"It was one of those situations where you feel you're going to get the opportunity," said O'Donoghue. "You've got to make the most of it. I just went out there and hit it through."

Ahead of O'Donoghue's winning kick, it had been an afternoon of give and take for St. Louis in quest of its first victory over the Cowboys since 1977.

James Jones fumbled the opening kickoff, enabling Morris of the Cards to sprint 9 yards to the end zone on the game's first play. But Dallas, after ignited by Tony Dorsett's 36-yard run, tied 7-7 on a 7-yard Dorsett gallop.

O'Donoghue then booted a 19-yard field goal late in the first quarter that held up for a lead until Rafael Septien's 26-yarder manufactured a 10-10 halftime stalemate.

Randy Love's recovery of Stump Mitchell's fumbled punt return later preceded Hart's 30-yard touchdown pass to Green. Dallas retaliated by rolling 78 yards but needed an exchange of interceptions to set up White's 11-yard scoring peg to Dorsett.

"I'd say we played to our ability," said Coach Jim Hanifan following only the second St. Louis victory in five games.

Oilers rally past Bengals, 17-10

HOUSTON (AP) — Carl Roaches left the Astrodome Sunday night to celebrate his wedding anniversary, while the rest of the Oilers cheered another event worth remembering — the return of Earl Campbell.

Roaches presented his wife with a 96-yard kickoff return for a touchdown in the third quarter that rallied the Oilers to a 17-10 victory over Cincinnati.

Campbell, who had not gained 100 yards since the season opener against Los Angeles, presented 44,350 fans with 182 yards rushing on 37 carries as the Oilers settled back into the I-formation that launched Campbell to three NFL rushing titles.

"I feel like the offensive line knew what they had to do and I was going to have a chance to run the ball like I like," Campbell said.

"I did get a little tired. I asked Kenny (Stabler) to throw a pass. He did and then came back to me three straight times."

Campbell's tireless efforts accounted for all but nine of Houston's 191-yard rushing total and his 37 carries were on short of his team record.

While Campbell was Houston's bread and butter, Roaches was its dessert with his exciting kickoff and punt returns.

Roaches was stopped short of a touchdown with an 88-yard kickoff return against Cleveland this season and he didn't intend for that to happen again.

"Today was my anniversary and I felt like I could break it at anytime against anyone. It was kind of a special 'hello' to my wife. I hope she enjoyed it," he said.

In addition to his kickoff return, Roaches put the Oilers into good field position throughout the game with four punt returns for 93 yards.

There was no doubt from the beginning that Campbell and only Campbell would run at the Bengals. Cincinnati knew it and still couldn't stop him.

After Cincinnati took a 3-0 lead on Jim Breech's 45-yard field goal, the Oilers came back in the second quarter with a 51-yard touchdown drive.

Campbell gained 49 yards in the drive and scored on a two-yard run, trotting into the end zone for a 7-3 halftime lead.

Cincinnati's Ken Anderson filled the air with 52 passes and put the Bengals ahead 10-7 in the third quarter on a 13-yard touchdown pass to tight end Dan Ross, who split two Oiler defenders at the goal line.

But on the ensuing kickoff, Roaches broke to his right, skittered down the sidelines and escaped the grasp of Mike Fuller, his final obstacle, at the goal line. The Oilers added a 48-yard field goal by Tony Fritsch with 4:48 to play.

Anderson, who finished with 30 completions for 290 yards, had the Bengals thinking about overtime in the final minute when he drove the offense to Houston's 12 yard line before missing four straight passes, the last with 52 seconds to play.

The victory moved Houston to a tie with Cincinnati for the AFC Central Division lead, each with 3-2 records.

"It was just one of those things, we didn't make the big plays," said Anderson, whose final pass fell incomplete off the fingertips of Cris Collinsworth.

"Collinsworth was my man all the way on that play. It was just one of those passes that was a few inches too long. We had great pass protection all day and things just developed to where I threw the ball over 50 times," he said.

While the Oilers pointed to their best offensive production of the season, Bengals coach Forrest Gregg pointed to missed scoring opportunities.

"We dropped six points on a pass and we lost six more points on two missed field goals," Gregg said. "Our kick coverage was bad and Houston won by getting the ball to Earl Campbell. He's a good football player and we just couldn't stop him."

Weaver stops Tillis in WBA title bout

ROSEMONT, Ill. (AP) — Mike Weaver still has the ostentatious belt of a heavyweight champion wrapped around his svelte waist. It is awkward, but it still fits well.

Weaver successfully defended his World Boxing Association title with a unanimous 15-round decision Saturday night over James "Quick" Tillis after Marvin Hagler had defended his undisputed middleweight crown by stopping Mustafa Hamsho at 2:09 in the 11th round of their scheduled 15-round match.

Tillis, a 24-year-old who had never before lost in 20 previous bouts, might have been wearing the belt had he not decided to run rather than gun, and so was a lopsided loser.

Indeed, it appeared that going the distance against the champion was a goal in itself for Tillis who insisted, "I thought I was outpunching Weaver three or four to one. I guess the judges weren't seeing too good."

Weaver, making his first ring appearance in nearly a year, admitted, "The layoff definitely hurt me. I was very rusty. My determination put me through."

And Weaver, who did a lot of missing with his punches, said "Tillis is a very good defensive fighter, tougher than I thought he was."

USC's Allen sets rushing record

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

Marcus Allen has brought some new numbers to college football, and they continue to add up to what is becoming a record-setting season.

Southern California's rambling man became the first runner ever to record four consecutive 200-yard games when he rushed for 233 yards and three touchdowns Saturday in leading the No.1-ranked Trojans to a 56-22 rout of Oregon State.

Allen, a 202-pound senior, carried 35 times for 233 yards and scored on runs of 30, 8 and 13 yards before sitting out the fourth quarter. With 925 yards in four games, he broke the mark of 905 set by Oklahoma's Greg Pruitt in 1971.

The next target is the 1971 record of five 200-yard games by Cornell's Ed Marinaro. And since there appears to be no stopping Allen, the single-season rushing mark of 1,948 yards by Pitt's Tony Dorsett in 1976 would seem to be in serious jeopardy.

"He deserves it because he's one of the most popular leaders I've ever been around," said USC Coach John Robinson. "He's on his way to becoming one of the greatest runners in college football."

The Trojans roared to a 42-17 halftime lead. Besides Allen's three touchdowns, John Mazur passed 8 yards to Jeff Simmons and 14 to Malcolm Moore and Bob McClanahan ran 5 yards for a TD.

Meanwhile, four members of The Associated Press Top Twenty were knocked off — seventh-ranked Ohio State, No.9 Mississippi State, 12th-ranked Washington and No.19 Arkansas — while fifth-ranked Oklahoma and No.20 Iowa State battled to a 7-7 standoff.

Florida State outslugged Ohio State 36-27 in a wild passing duel, Missouri beat Mississippi State 14-3, Arizona State trimmed Washington 26-7 and Texas Christian stunned Arkansas 28-24.

Meanwhile, runner-up Penn State blanked Temple 30-0, fourth-ranked Pitt whipped South Carolina 42-28 behind Dan Marino's six touchdown passes, No.6 North Carolina downed Georgia Tech 28-7, eighth-ranked Michigan beat Indiana 38-17 and No.10 Brigham Young held off Utah State 32-26 Friday night despite the absence of record-breaking quarterback Jim McMahon with a knee injury.

In the Second Ten, No.11 Alabama drubbed Mississippi 38-7, No.14 Clemson turned back Kentucky 21-3, No.16 UCLA beat Colorado 27-7, No.17 Miami crushed Vanderbilt 48-16 and No.18 Iowa swamped Northwestern 64-0. Third-ranked Texas, No.13 Georgia and No.15 Southern Methodist were off.

Baseball playoffs begin Tuesday

By TOM CANAVAN
Associated Press Writer

Forget about the records, the split season, the strike and the fact that two of baseball's best teams won't even be there. It's time for the game to get interesting again — the playoffs are here.

The best-of-five divisional playoffs open Tuesday in the home city of the second-half winners. The Kansas City Royals host the Oakland A's in the American League West, while the Houston Astros entertain the Los Angeles Dodgers in the National League West.

The series in the East start Wednesday with the Philadelphia Phillies traveling to Montreal to play the Expos and the New York Yankees meeting the Brewers at Milwaukee.

The final three games of each series will be played in the cities of the first-half division winners with the possible exception of the Oakland-Kansas City series.

The Royals finished the second season just a half-game ahead of Oakland and the A's could repeat as division winners today if Kansas City drops a doubleheader to the Indians in Cleveland. Oakland would then host games two through five.

The Royals, who finished the season with an overall record of 49-53, will start right-hander Dennis Leonard, 13-11, against the A's Mike Norris, 12-9.

The best opening game pitching matchup will probably be in Houston, where the Dodgers will send out rookie sensation Fernando Valenzuela, 13-7, against Nolan Ryan, 11-5, who no-hit the Dodgers nine days ago.

Valenzuela, the portly Mexican left-hander who dropped his last three decisions, said he wasn't nervous about the game.

The Astros suffered a serious loss Friday night when pitcher Don Sutton broke his kneecap in a freak accident while attempting to bunt in a game at Los Angeles.

Philadelphia will send three-time Cy Young award winner Steve Carlton, 13-4, against Steve Rogers, 12-8, in the NL East opener as the Phillies go after a second straight world championship.

The Expos, who lost the NL East title on the last weekend in each of the last two years, say they're ready.

The biggest problem both the Phillies and Expos may face is the weather in Montreal, where temperatures reached a high in the low 50s Sunday.

The Yankees, who finished the second half of the season under .500 at 25-26, will send Ron Guidry, 11-5, against the Brewers' Moose Haas, 11-7, in the opener of the AL East series.

News in brief

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A scarcity of rain and the general resourcefulness of alligators teamed up to diminish the harvest of the giant reptiles in Louisiana's first statewide hunt in 18 years, officials say.

When the season started Aug. 31, officials had hoped to pass out some 25,000 permits. The season ended Wednesday after 15,600 tags were passed out and the actual catch should total about 1,000 less than that, said Marguerite Ponder of the state Department of Wildlife and Fisheries.

"Alligators don't nest when it's very dry, so we cut our quota down so we wouldn't take so many out of the marsh," she said.

There was also a smaller than expected harvest in the upland swamp and bayou reaches.

BALTIMORE (AP) — Four teen-agers have been charged with murder in the slaying ok a 72-year-old doctor who practiced medicine for 48 years in the inner city.

Police said they were working on the theory that Dr. George Franklin Phillips was killed Sept. 21 in a robbery attempt, even though none of his property was stolen.

Police spokesman Dennis Hill identified the youths as Donald Braxton, 16, Kevin Smith, 17, Dean W. Wright, 16, and Walter Vaughn, 18, all of Baltimore. Smith was charged with murder; the other three were charged with murder, felony handgun violations and attempted armed robbery, Hill said.

The four were denied bond Sunday and were being held pending a bail review hearing today before a judge, Hill said.

COCOA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — At least 16 people have been attacked by sharks in Florida waters this year and two people have died, but experts believe there is no one cause for the rash of attacks.

"My gut feeling is that the number of attacks this year is high. But I'd be hard-pressed to say there was a reason other than randomness," said Dr. Samuel Gruber, a marine biologist at the University of Miami. "There is no way of saying what is usual, because accurate records of attacks haven't been kept."

In one of two deaths this year, a young woman disappeared Aug. 10 after a shark attacked while she and three friends were swimming to shore following a boating accident. The other fatal attack was Sept. 15, when a 26-year-old man attempted to swim across a Tampa Bay channel at night on a dare.

Names in the news

ALAMOGORDO, N.M. (AP) — The first man to travel faster than his voice says he would like to fly the space shuttle, "but I had my fun in other aircraft."

Charles Yeager of Cedar Ridge, Calif., who retired from the Air Force in 1975 as a brigadier general, and six others were inducted this weekend into the International Space Hall of Fame.

He gave credit for his accomplishment to the Air Force, saying "they taught me to be a fighter, test and research pilot."

Yeager broke the sound barrier in the Bell X-1 at more than 670 mph. He eventually achieved a speed of more than 1,000 mph and an altitude of more than 70,000 feet in the X-1.

Others inducted, but not present, were: astronauts Alan Shepard, who retired as a Navy rear admiral and lives in Deer Park, Texas; Scott Carpenter, who retired from the Navy as a commander and lives in Canoga Park, Calif.; Gordon Cooper, who retired as an Air Force colonel and lives in Glendale, Calif.; and Walter Schirra, who retired as a Navy captain and now lives in Inglewood, Calif.

Virgil Grissom, America's second man into space, was inducted posthumously. He and two other astronauts died in a launchpad fire in the Apollo 1 capsule in January 1967.

A 19th century Danish rocket pioneer, Andreas Anton Frederick Schumacher, also was inducted. He developed a rocket system after the bombardment of Copenhagen in 1897.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — It's not usual for a seasoned politician like a Senate majority leader to get shaky about elections, but Howard Baker says he gets nervous when people talk about one particular congressional race.

Baker says he gets "butterflies" just thinking about his daughter, Cissy, running for election to the House of Representatives.

Miss Baker, 26, quit her job this summer as a reporter for Cable News Network in Washington, D.C., and filed qualifying papers with the Federal Election Commission to run for the GOP nomination from Tennessee's 4th Congressional District.

"I asked her recently what I could do, and she said, 'For openers, you can stay out of my district.'" the Tennessee Republican said Saturday to a group of conventioneers.

Baker said he would help "if she'll let me. But I don't think she'll let me."

NEW YORK (AP) — New York Philharmonic conductor Zubin Mehta is blasting President Reagan's decision to slash money for the performing arts.

"In eight years (as governor of California), he came to one concert" of the Los Angeles Philharmonic, Mehta says in an interview in the current issue of People magazine.

"Culture in some parts of this country is considered almost a luxury of the elite," he said. "It is so wrong to think that 'Don Giovanni' will exist until the last flame goes out of this earth."

Despite the criticism, Mehta's wife, Nancy, has been named to a presidential task force on arts and the humanities.

Become a Sherwin-Williams Assistant Store Manager Now!

Your high school education and ideally some college and retail sales business experience, with emphasis on accounting and credit, could have prepared you to take advantage of a retail management opportunity in the exciting paints and home decorating field. Your schedule is flexible to include Saturday and evening work.

Working closely with your store manager, and following an on-the-job training program, you would:

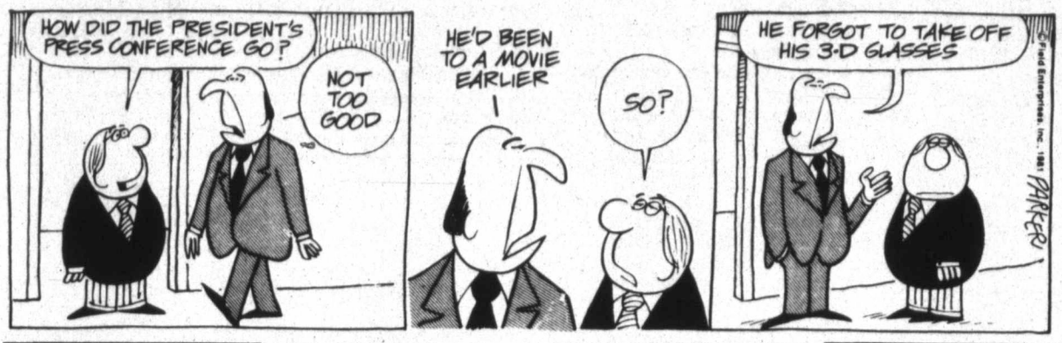

- Assume delegated credit, accounting responsibilities involved in a Store operation.
- Develop increased store-wide sales through the use of approved selling techniques.
- Manage the Store in the absence of the Manager.

Your resume or letter should show a good track record of aggressive effort and achievement in your educational and work experience. Send us the details and your compensation requirements.

Crude oil thefts reported rampant

By MACK SISK
Associated Press Writer

FLORESVILLE, Texas (AP) — It used to be a hanging offense to steal cattle on the rolling plains of Texas, but today a rustler can make off with thousands of dollars worth of oil with little chance of being caught or punished.

For one thing, there is no way to put a brand on Texas crude, which sits invitingly in unlocked storage tanks on remote ranches often with hardly anyone watching over it or suspicious it is being taken.

Also, state regulatory officials and police agencies admit expansion of the Texas petroleum industry has outstripped their ability to adequately protect it from being stolen, particularly by those charged with getting the crude to market.

Some estimate that 10 percent of all the state's oil being sold to refineries is "hot oil."

Other officials do not believe thievery is that widespread, but agree there is no way of knowing how many millions of dollars worth is being purloined, much of it in water trucks which drive onto leases to pick up salt water pumped from the wells along with crude.

Petroleum industry officials point out that companies and their millions of stockholders are the losers as well as the landowners and state and federal taxpayers.

Oil theft has become rampant across the fast-developing, far-flung and loosely operated Texas petroleum industry. The elite corps of 91 Texas Rangers — who boasted in early 20th century oil boom days "one riot, one Ranger" — admit they have neither the manpower nor expertise to stop it.

The Texas Railroad Commission, which regulates the oil and gas industry, has about 120 field investigators, the same number it has had the past decade.

That's one reason that ranchers like Jimmy Van Winkle of Wilson County — just southeast of San Antonio — spent $30,000 to hire Pinkerton detectives and attorneys last year when he suspected his oil was being heisted by sophisticated thieves.

Last May, 24 producers in 11 counties across the Austin Chalk field in South Central Texas began their own police force at Giddings.

And the North Texas Oil and Gas Association at Wichita Falls is funding special prosecutors to jail the thieves, something that has not happened very often in the past, according to Tom Haywood, executive vice president.

The stealing of equipment, as well as oil, has prompted several Texas petroleum associations to install a "hot line" at Wichita Falls to receive theft reports.

A study last year estimated anywhere from $10 million to $50 million worth of equipment and oil were stolen in Texas each year, but Haywood said those figures were far off.

"That estimate is a year old," he said. "Since that time, the number of calls coming on the hotline have made it clear that the theft of crude oil was an unknown theft in the industry. While I cannot now put a dollar figure on it, it is much, much more than anyone would have imagined six months ago.

"Our awareness of it has come forward and now we're beginning to realize that many, many millions of dollars worth is being stolen," Haywood said.

One railroad commission official, who asked not to be identified, said with the temptation of $35-a-barrel oil there is no reason to believe the same kind of thefts are not taking place throughout the nation's oil industry.

"I think you could go into Oklahoma, Louisiana, Kansas and New Mexico and see the same thing going on," the official said. "We've tried to get the Rangers to help us on some of these things and told the landowners to contact the sheriff's departments and the Rangers. It's just really hard to get anything concrete, any evidence enough to bring them in.

"You usually don't miss a few barrels. You've just got to gauge every tank every day or twice a day, something like that. We're keeping up with the paper work, but as far as the field problems, we're doing the best we can."

In the final analysis the landowners and oil companies have to take care of their own interests because state officials do not have the manpower, he said. The commission's district office in San Antonio has six field men for 43 counties.

Van Winkle, 36, who carries a rifle in his van and a pistol in his boot after allegedly receiving threats, said he never suspected any oil was being stolen until some potential buyers from Maryland suggested his four wells were producing more than the 80 barrels he claimed.

Van Winkle now is suing for $360,000 worth of oil, half of his production, which he alleges was stolen over a three-year period.

He claims water trucks are siphoning oil from unsealed tanks, pipelines are being comingled beneath the ground, and that some people simply drive up and help themselves.

He said the FBI, local law enforcement authorities, railroad commission and Texas Rangers offered him insufficient help.

"If it happened to us, while we were raising cain, you know it's happening to people who don't even bother to question what's going on," Van Winkle said. "I've learned the oil industry fighting these crooks."

Van Winkle exhibited royalty check stubs to show that his production and royalty payments doubled last year, from 80 barrels a day and about $9,000 a month to 160 to 200 barrels a day and more than $20,000 a month, after he pressured an oil company to fire a gauger and got a service company kicked off his property.

His neighbor, Floresville rancher Rusty Feuge, said his automobile was run off the road by mysterious vehicles appearing while he tried to tail trucks he suspected of carrying stolen oil. Eventually one water truck was caught dumping 70 barrels of pure crude in an open pit two counties away, he said.

"A lot of people are getting oil wells for the first time," Feuge said. "A lot of them are elderly. In this area you have a lot of old farmers with small plots. You get a guy that's got an 80- to 100-acre plot of land and put him on a deal where you give him $300 or $400 a month, and he's an old retired farmer who's got $200 Social Security coming, and ...he's really not going to argue with you" if he gets ripped off.

Don Chamberlain, a former policeman who heads the Giddings Oil Field Security Association says investigators with a knowledge of the oil industry and arrest powers, like special cattle theft rangers, are needed.

"You've got several different ways you can lose oil to people that have legitimate fronts," Chamberlain said.

Chamberlain suggested the thefts could be curtailed somewhat by restricting movement of oil to the daylight hours. "Right now they haul oil at all times of the day or night."

Van Winkle and Feuge said they have never seen a seal put on a tank in Wilson County, and none of the producers in their area leave the landowner any paperwork to account for oil taken from the property.

Willis Steed, director of regulatory enforcement for the Railroad Commission in Austin, confirmed none of the suggestions were part of his agency's requirements, although a standard oil lease should require trip slips and seals.

Gene Wright, chairman of the theft control task force for the Texas Independent Producers and Royalty Owners Association in Dallas, said landowners must band together, question suspicious people seen entering oil leases and take down license numbers.

Some politics is play-acting

JUMPCUT BY REMINISCENCE

WASHINGTON (AP) — For political play-acting, it's hard to top a debate like the one on the trillion-dollar debt ceiling Congress has just passed. Everybody knows it has to pass in the end, so it becomes a vehicle for proposals that don't stand a chance but look good on paper.

The Congress that is authorizing more borrowing can bemoan deficit spending. The president who asked for the increase can say he detests the whole idea but had to do it because of the deficits he inherited.

That's been going on for years.

Whether Republican or Democratic, presidents have to propose increases in the debt ceiling before the federal debt bumps up against the old one. Otherwise, the government couldn't borrow money.

But for the latest increase, the government would have had no borrowing authority after last Wednesday, and the Treasury would have run out of money altogether as of today. Obviously, Congress wasn't going to let that happen.

So the limit was raised, for the 20th time in little more than a decade. It now stands at $1.079 trillion, $94 billion above the old limit.

But first, Democrats made the political record. They proposed an assortment of politically embarrassing amendments. None passed, but they didn't expect any would. When it came time to pass the increase, they made sure that Republican votes provided the majority.

When the White House belonged to the Democrats, Republican members of Congress did exactly the same thing. Then they campaigned against Democrats for voting to increase the debt limit.

While the administration had to have the increase, Reagan called it a warning that should underline the need for approval of his budget cuts, so the debt won't keep going up.

While Republicans complained about deficits, Democrats forced them to vote against some politically attractive amendments to the measure raising the deficit limit. One would have tied the increase to improvement of school lunch menus. Another would have instructed Reagan to press the Federal Reserve Board for policy changes to lower interest rates. A third would have reduced the tax deduction for business entertainment to produce an extra $700 million in revenues and would have earmarked the proceeds for school lunch programs.

There were proposals to postpone Reagan's income tax cuts until deficits come down, or until interest rates drop. Another would have increased taxes on the oil industry and put the proceeds into the financially fragile Social Security fund.

Each was debated and dutifully voted down. But not forgotten.

There's a campaign coming, and Democrats soon will be citing some of those votes as evidence that Republicans are more interested in three-martini lunches than in feeding schoolchildren, more concerned with breaks for the oil industry than with pensions for the elderly.
