SEARCH ON FOR MISSING TRENT MAN

About Our Friends

By STEF A. LONG

They were wanting Henry Stubbs to help establish a lost corner. Gus says, "Well, I guess I'll have to go, they always send me for everything." "Yes," Henry says. "The police are called on to find cats, lost dogs and now they want me to find a lost corner. Some ladies even call upon the police to bring their chicken's necks, but they forget to ask us back to help eat the chicken. But then, the police are willing to help keep the peace in any way possible. If finding the lost articles will keep down a row we are perhaps acting in our capacity."

Wonder if they could help a fellow find where his summer wages have gone? ... Ralph Wynne says he is through with Duncan and Jones. ... He's going to do his own fishing. ... People are beginning to doubt his ability in that line. ... P. P. Sheppard getting fixed up at the barber shop. ... J. C. McAfee going by ... T. G. Caudie catching up with his work. ... R. N. Clark being kept up by his daughters. ... He wonders if it will be any worse when they grow up. ...

Miss Blanche Van Horn explaining in detail all about the gadgets on the gas furnace equipment. ... After she has finished she says she doesn't understand a thing about them. ... Now that is a pretty good saleswoman. ... One who can explain in detail without understanding it herself. ... What could she do it she really knew what she was talking about? ... But after all who ever understood a woman? ... Henry Drumwright showing the new overalls and glowing over how warm they are. ... Now there is another good salesman, if you ask us. ... All the dry goods window trimmers being very careful with their fall dress displays. ... Likely wear her new ones next year. ...

With the passing of Mrs. R. P. Davis, pioneer woman of Cisco, the stage is gradually changed and the old actors in the drama of life leave the stage to new stars and new scenes. ...

Mr. and Mrs. Davis. ... Mr. Davis has already gone to his reward. ... were central figures in the social and business life of Cisco during its formative period and their influence have been stamped upon the religious life as well as the social and business period of these years now past. ... They helped make Cisco and we are to carry on for awhile. ... We owe it to these and others to make it a better place, when we too have passed on, than we found it. Their children remain with us to carry on with our heritage. ...

CISCO SCOUTS LEAVE HEAT AS WRAPS DONNED

Crandall and Gail Jones, Cisco scouts who have joined the Breckenridge troop of boy scouts for a trip to Yellowstone park, Salt Lake City and intermediate points, say they have passed over Raton Pass and have left the Texas heat wave behind, donning wraps to keep out the chill, while they make for Pike's Peak, the first stop of any note. They say they are all fine and the old bus, "Old Buckaroo" is running smoothly. ... Mail stops will be Pueblo, Colorado; Denver, Colorado; Cheyenne, Wyoming; then Yellowstone Park. On the return trip mail stops will be Salt Lake City, Utah; and Denver, Colorado. ... Mail should be addressed to the chamber of commerce in each place, except at Yellowstone Park, where the mail should be sent in care of the United States Park Service. ... The Scouts are on a two-week's trip, the main objective of which will be Yellowstone Park, although the itinerary includes stops at many places of interest.

U. S. Tells American Consul to Take Action

'Puddler Jim' Back to Mills

Backward, far backward, turned time in its flight for Senator James J. Davis when he returned to Sharon, Pa., scene of his toiler days, to speak at a city celebration. Davis recalled the days of his youth by donning the "puddler's" garb he wore when he worked in Sharon mills. Here he is, in overalls, with sweat towel wrapped turban fashion about the senatorial head.

ELDERS VISIT BROTHER AND SEE COUNTRY

J. J. Elder and Wych Elder, of Rock Hill, S. C., are in Cisco visiting their brother W. D. Elder, whom they had not seen for a number of years.

These gentlemen drove through the country in their car, bringing their wives they said so that they might have a pleasant vacation trip while visiting their brother. They are both business men in their town. J. J. Elder being in the dry goods and grocery business and Wych Elder, a grocerman.

Rock Hill is in the piedmont section of the state and is an industrial town of about 15,000 people with a payroll of $65,000 per week. They are wondering when Cisco and other Texas towns will go industrial in order to manufacture the cotton, wool, peanuts and other native crops in the state. Instead of shipping them north and east to be shipped back as high priced articles.

Here's a Capital Landon Pose

Personification of confidence as he faced a bitter, strenuous presidential campaign was Gov. Alfred M. Landon, pictured in this debonair, happy-go-lucky stance as he smiled down jauntily from the steps of the Topeka statehouse. And his monarch-of-all-he-surveys attitude seemed to be justified, as sentiment for his chosen son and his running mate, Frank Knox has been running high in Kansas, as the flags and huge banner, ornamenting the capitol pillars, indicate.

SEEKER OF "DIXIE BELLE" BRIDE GETS 13,000 PROPOSALS BEFORE TWO APPLICANTS COMPARE NOTES

OAKLAND, Cal., Aug. 14. (UP) — Samuel Frank, who gained nationwide notoriety over night, when he telegraphed Gov. James Allred of Texas to help him find a Dixie belle for a bride, has run afoul of the law.

In his appeal to Allred, Frank held out as an inducement that if the Dixie belle who met all his stipulations, could be found in time, he would marry her in a public ceremony at the Texas Centennial.

Allred played the part of Cupid by broadcasting the appeal to newspapers all over the country, and until the moment of arrest, Frank asserted he had received 13,000 letters of proposal. They filled four suitcases and two 40-pound cardboard cartons.

The requirements which Frank set for his Dixie bride were almost as numerous and complicated as the enticements which he held out to his own behalf.

He admitted that he was old-fashioned. He professed to have been a member of the Denver City Council, an athletic director in a Denver high school, a Baptist minister at Fort Worth and Denver, and said he was 6 feet tall and weighed 174 pounds.

Frank was also frank as regards his qualifications that might not be considered as enticements.

Smokes Cornob Pipe

"My worst habit is smoking a cornob pipe, but I don't want a wife who smokes or drinks," he stipulated.

To offset the cornob pipe, however, he announced in his appeal that he was a war veteran and was getting veterans' compensation and a bonus.

He asked a prospect to answer questions like these:

Was she single, divorced, or a widow?

If divorced, was her divorce a Biblical one?

What church did she belong to? Did she "dip" snuff? Did she believe in baptism by immersion? Did she drink or participate in wild parties?

Curious About Rouge

He also wanted to know what sort of disposition the prospect had, if she danced, what sort of amusement she like, and whether she objected to marrying a widower with two children (professing to have two himself). He also asked for details on the amount of rouge and lipstick she used, and finally requested a picture.

During the period that Frank was receiving hundreds upon hundreds of replies from prospects all over the country, he took the public a little into his confidence about some of the details.

Nearly all of the Dixie belles, for whom he had expressed a preference in his appeal to Allred, showed enough of real Southern chivalry to enclose postage stamps for a reply, he said.

The California prospects were notably shy, however, in repaying postage.

However, among the 13,000 who replied was Mrs. Louise Kennedy of Berkeley, who had read Allred's plea for Frank. She wrote him—then went to see him personally in this city.

Woman Loses Confidence

She was much to his liking as a prospect that he borrowed $10 from her as he said that his two children were ill at Los Angeles.

As the weeks passed, his borrowings, according to Mrs. Kennedy's story to the police, increased to $135.

Then Mrs. Kennedy suspected something. She visited his apartment, without formal notice.

He was not there, but another woman—one of the 13,000 who had replied to his appeal—was. They started talking. They compared notes. Each discovered that the other was a "prospect."

The other woman went home. Mrs. Kennedy went to the police.

Petitioners pointed out that the two lines have rates on interstate business to New Orleans from Dallas. For "worth and other points which are lower than those now applied from the three Texas ports.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 14. (UP) — Attorneys for Dr. Franklin Thorpe announced today they would go into court today and stral legal action that may reopen the case between him and his divorced wife over custody of their daughter, Marilyn.

Reason Makes the Man!

Man's damnation and his salvation is his reason. His logic is what gets him into trouble and out of trouble. Man could go through this life with as little concern as does the cocking bird or the catfish or the June bug but for his reason. Had man no reason, he would not worry over things that have not happened nor over things that have happened; he would be concerned only with what is happening.

Could the turkey reason he could not enjoy the short time he has to live for thinking of Thanksgiving Day. Perhaps the turkey instinctively knows about Thanksgiving Day, but he does not worry about it; it may be the instinctive knowledge that some man is going to chop his neck that makes the turkey timid with regard to man. All animals fear men more or less, and that is where they show sense. But this is a digression.

It is a man's reason, his logic, the very thing that makes him miserable, that enables him to climb. He figures things out for himself. Man is different from the lower animals in that he is a free agent. The lower animals are not so privileged. They are compelled by some irresistible pressure to do what they do. We can call that instinct, but he has the added gift of reason.

Man is intended to think and ponder, to stew and fuss, and to have his logic get him into difficulty. By means of his reason man perverts natural laws, and by means of his reason he discovers such perversions and quits them. By means of his reason he deliberately goes into evil way, and by means of his reason he sees the folly of evil and decides to be good.

There would be no hell for a man were it not for his reason, neither would there be any heaven for him. Hell is his reward for using his reason in the wrong way. Heaven is his reward for using his reason in the right way. He is expected to choose, and to choose that which is altogether lovely; but not at first. The divine Creator has no illusions about man. Man is expected to make an ass of himself before he makes an angel of himself. A ready-made angel would be no good. What could a ready-made angel understand of the force of human weaknesses, of trials, of tribulations, of temptations? A ready-made angel would be a smug, self-satisfied, opinionated thing with a trite mentality, like some of these ready-made Christians that you and I sometimes have the misfortune to meet.

Hail to man's reason, regardless of the mess it gets him into, for it will make a man of him yet.

UNDER THE DOME AT AUSTIN

By GORDON K. SHEARER
 United Press Staff Correspondent

AUSTIN, Aug. 13 (UP)—Parole officials are preparing a program for the Southwest Parole Conference at Galveston in September with difference. There is one topic considered important, but they are hesitant about broaching it. This is the problem of men prisoners after a term of sex repression. W. W. Halcomb, supervisor for the state parole boards, admits that in a reaction from sex starvation many released men fall into companionship with women of loose morals and get into influences that hamper their efforts to reform.

A frank discussion of the situation would be welcomed by parole students, if anyone has the courage to tackle the topic in the conference.

Halcomb is noticeably proud of the record being made by the volunteer parole board in Texas. He believes they have solved one of the hardest problems that formerly faced released prisoners. If ex-convicts applied for positions and revealed their prison record, they didn't get the jobs. If they concealed records, they were discharged for not telling. Under the volunteer parole board system, board members make the first contact with possible employers and give the ex-convict's history.

In money, Halcomb says, the system has saved the state hundreds of thousands of dollars. Albert Stevens, head of the San Antonio board, estimated the saving in that county's paroled men at $100,000.

The cost of keeping the prisoner is only a small part of the saving. A typical case is that of an ex-convict employed so that he no longer remained a charge on the state, but was able to take off relief his mother and sister.

Possibility of avoiding a special session of the "lame duck" legislature was seen here as Old Age Assistance officials thought they would have funds to operate until January.

The new legislature will meet in regular session on Jan. 12, 1937. It will then be possible to make a transfer of money from the funds which have cash on hand to carry on pensions until new pension taxation can be devised and take effect.

Participation in the Federal Social Security plan is more likely to force a special session than Old Age financing. An attorney who has studied the print says any act to make the unemployment insurance features applicable to Texas will have to be in effect by Dec. 31, 1936. The same attorney is doubtful if Texas can pass such an act that will be valid without a constitutional amendment. A constitutional amendment cannot be submitted except at a regular session.

Governor filing of anti-trust vacation at home. "It will seem like a vacation, just to be home," Allred said as he looked back on his recent strenuous campaign for re-nomination.

The governor expects to take his rest by remaining away from his office in the state capitol. Horseback rides, fishing trips and excursions into the hilly country about Austin will be his recreation.

Governor filing of anti-trust suits against major oil concerns has directed attention to the $17,500,000 penalty suit brought by Governor Allred against major oil companies when he was attorney general of Texas. Curiously, enough the state anti-trust suit was thrown out of District Court because of a Federal law—the National Recovery Act. District Judge J. D. More decided that NRA suspended state regulation.

The case was appealed. The Third Court of Civil Appeals sustained Judge Moore's action in dismissing the suit, but not because of NRA. The appellate court decided and the oil lawyers were right in another contention—that the entire state anti-trust law was unconstitutional. As a matter of duty, but with little hope of winning, Attorney General William McCraw appealed to the State Supreme Court. The case rests there.

A board to handle state school lands may be set up by the next legislature. Such boards already exist to handle University of Texas Lands, prison lands and river bed lands upon which the state has made participating oil contracts.

Marilyn 'For' Both Her Parents

Playing no favorites in the court battle raging over her custody, chubby Marilyn Thorne, 4, told the trial judge that she liked both her mama and her papa, screen actress Mary Astor and Dr. Franklyn Thorne, shown with her in the nursery of Miss Astor's Toluca Lake, Calif., home. Shortly after this apparently friendly family meeting, Dr. Thorne swore to an affidavit that his former wife had perpetrated a fraud upon Superior Court in Los Angeles. He declared she had concealed the fact that he had obtained letters of guardianship 15 months ago, and that the current hearing therefore is "of no force, avail, or effect."

'Drummer Boy of Shiloh' Is 85

Famed as the "drummer boy of Shiloh," Brig. Gen. John Lincoln Clem, U. S. A., retired, who enlisted in the Civil War at 10, is observing his 85th birthday in San Antonio, Tex. Shown here as he appeared then and in recent years, "Johnny" drummed and fought at Shiloh and Chickamauga, and was later wounded and held prisoner.

drafted. Now state school land is leased by the State Land Commissioner. The University leasing board consists of two University Regents and the land commissioner. The Land Commissioner is a constitutional officer, but the extent of his duties is left to the legislature to fix by statute.

Sadness was in Governor Allred's voice as he announced the approaching death of a dear friend. A tree surgeon had pronounced the fate of the largest elm tree on the grounds of the governor's mansion. Age of the tree is not known but it has grown so that it towers above the roof of the house. An examination of its condition was ordered when its leaves began to wither. The surgeon report it past saving. It had become a shell with most of the interior rotted out.

GLASS JUG SETS FIRE
 WOODLAND, Cal. (UP)—Official investigation of the burning of a truck here developed that it was due to a glass jug of water left lying on a sack in the truck. The sun, shining through the glass jug, set fire to the sack.

PRODUCERS OPTIMISTIC
 SALT LAKE CITY (UP)—Utah silver producers predict 1936 will be the biggest financial year for American silver producers since 1923. They based their prediction on the figures for the first five months of this year, which show more silver produced in the United States than for the full year of either 1932 or 1933.

STORIES IN STAMPS

By I. S. Klein

CUBA'S BUILDER

CUBA was trying to free itself of Spanish rule, when, in 1875, Jose Miguel Gomez, son of a wealthy planter, took up its cause. For 20 years, he participated in Cuban politics. Then, in 1895, came the final war for freedom, and young Gomez rose quickly to the rank of major general. So active was he that in one day he engaged in 17 minor battles.

When he became president in 1908, he reorganized the army, improved the ports, built new roads and bridges, extended the railroads, and modernized the school system. Gomez retired from politics for a few years, but when he returned in 1920 to regain the presidency, he was defeated. He retired again to the United States, where he died in 1921, aged 65. Today, his son, Miguel Mariano Gomez, is president of Cuba. In the elder Gomez' honor, Cuba issued a set of two stamps recently.

Callahan Pioneers Hold First Reunion

BAIRD, Aug. 14. — (Spl.) — Final arrangements were completed today to entertain an anticipated crowd of between 1,500 and 2,000 visitors at the first annual gathering of Callahan county pioneers to be held at the McCoy ranch Friday. The Callahan County Pioneers association organized recently with J. S. Hart as president.

In addition to a basket dinner, barbecue will be served all visitors attending. Barbecuing of eight calves and 12 sheep and goats will begin tonight, and a plentiful supply will be available tomorrow.

Opening the days' program will be musical concerts by the Clyde and Baird high school bands at 11 o'clock, with the history of Callahan county by Mrs. L. L. Blackburn, a vice-president of the organization, to follow. Old time songs, fiddler's festival and square dances will occupy the afternoon program.

The McCoy ranch where the celebration is to be held was founded in 1874 by Claire Merchant, who later made his home in Abilene, and Jasper McCoy, both of whom have died. However, many members of their families, including Mrs. W. R. Ely of Abilene, will attend the celebration. Her mother, Mrs. Jasper McCoy, who still resides at the ranch, will be hostess for the day.

Among the old-timers expected to be present are E. E. Solomon of Breckenridge and I. N. Jackson of Abilene, both former county judges; Will H. Jobe of Sweetwater and J. H. Burnam of Stanton.

Officers of the Pioneers' association other than J. S. Hart and Mrs. Blackburn are Judge B. L. Russell, first vice-president, and Miss Eliza Gilliland, secretary-treasurer. Mrs. Gilliland will register all old-timers who came to the county prior to 1890, and will distribute badges.

Remember Loss Woods for sheriff. Vote for him Saturday, August 22. Mr. Woods was high man with a nice plurality in the first primary.

4-H Club Notes From the County

Mr. L. R. Higginbottom, Kokomo Boys' 4-H Club sponsor, believes that if tumble weeds will keep in a trench silo in West Texas, that "Iron Weeds" and cockle burrs will keep in a trench silo in Eastland county. Just to prove what he believes, Mr. Higginbottom is constructing on his farm in the Kokomo community a small trench silo to be filled with "Iron Weeds" and cockle burrs this week. Mr. Higginbottom states, "I do not have any feed stuff to put in my silo, and I believe that even though I am going to fill my silo with weeds, that it will feel much better in my cows' stomachs this winter, than the cold north wind."

Mr. F. E. Walker is helping his son, Jack, who is a member of the Alameda Boys' 4-H Club, construct a small trench silo on their place in the Alameda community. Jack recently purchased a registered Jersey heifer, and he expects to use the silage from his trench silo to help hold his heifer's milk production up after she calves in December.

Joe Don Meroney, member of the Ranger Boys' 4-H Club, recently bought a registered Jersey heifer from the Montgomery Dairy of Ranger. Joe Don expects to exhibit his heifer along with the other 4-H Club boys at the Eastland County Fair in September and the Cisco Livestock Show in October.

Exams Given to Old Age Pension Workers

Orville S. Carpenter, executive director of the Texas Old Age Assistance Commission, announced today the institution of a merit system of employment for all employees of the Commission. The purpose of this is to adopt and maintain the highest possible standards of efficiency for our personnel, he said.

"The first step in this program is the holding of examinations for people now employed by the Commission. No new appointments will be made, and the examinations will not be given to anyone except present employees," Carpenter stated.

First examinations will be for investigators, already working for the Commission, and will start August 15, in Houston.

"In the future all vacancies will be filled from rolls of persons who have been found eligible by examination, but the Commission does not contemplate the addition of any new employees at this time," the executive director explained.

"Social security work demands well trained and conscientious employees," Carpenter said, "and an efficiency rating of all workers will be maintained."

He added that civil service exams will be given other employees of the commission as soon as those held for investigators are completed.

The examination procedure was in consultation with Professor J. Alton Burdine of the University of Texas department of government. Professor Burdine has just completed a year's service as special representative of the United States Employment Service in the application of the merit system to public employment offices in Texas.

Examinations will be under the direction of Claudius B. Hodges, research division chief. Hodges will conduct the first exam Saturday, August 15, in Houston for investigators of the Sixth District, which is composed of Harris and twelve surrounding counties.

Carpenter said that an examination schedule for investigators in the other nineteen districts would be announced sometime next week.

OLD MATCHES CALLED BEST

Rich and Reckless

BEGIN HERE TODAY

MOLLY MILFORD, rich and popular, has received proposals of marriage from three suitors, but BRENT STUART, whom she loves, has not asked her to marry him.

DONNA, Molly's stepmother, is only a few years older than Molly. Donna is anxious for her stepdaughter to marry. Bored with a succession of parties, all alike, Molly agreed to take her to "The Red Poppy," a questionable night club. He refuses. Molly is determined to go anyway, and sets out for "The Red Poppy" with WICK ROSE, another admirer.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER II

GLITTERING signs winked familiarly at Molly as she rolled along in Wick's smart car. They made the mental visions she had conjured up seem unreal. In the darkness, she smiled a little. Brent was probably right when he called her a child. It had been silly to inveigle Wick into this adventure.

He had been nice to humor her, but "The Red Poppy" doubtless wouldn't measure up. Tomorrow she would have a headache and wish she had stayed at home.

Tomorrow she would be a good girl and try to feel grateful for her easy, protected life. She would golf dutifully with Dad, lunch with Brent if he asked her, shop with Donna for the Florida trip she was planning. Donna was restless, too, lately.

"None of us is really living," Molly was thinking. "We are only being whirled about by events, tossed around in a rosy cloud that hasn't any reality."

Wick's car had long since left familiar surroundings. Out here in the countryside, the wind had an eerie sound. It seemed spooky even with Wick beside her.

"A perfect place for a holdup," Wick spoke shortly.

"I've a funny feeling along my spine," Molly whispered. "As though dozens of people must have passed along this same road tonight."

"And some of them," Wick retorted, "aren't the kind of folks I'd like to meet along here."

"Don't worry. I left my jewelry at home."

"You don't read the newspapers. Holdups can be most unpleasant. Particularly if you've left your money and rings at home. Sometimes you get a nasty bump on the head or maybe a playful dig with a knife. But luck's with us so far. That bright glow over there is the famous 'Red Poppy.'"

As they came nearer, yellow squares of light from a long, low, clubby type building began to prick the darkness with color. Wick drove around the side where they found a motley assemblage of automobiles. Some were rather swank, Molly noticed. Others looked as though they were on their last legs.

There was nothing unusual about the place except the dense woodland around it and a sense of isolation. A queer place, if you wanted crowds. But maybe more thrilling things awaited inside. Frances had said this place was terrific. It must have points, to be revealed later.

"Here's our cheerful choice," Wick muttered. He helped Molly from the car. "Not too late to turn back," he added.

"When I wake up behind bars, I'll say, 'Wick and Brent wanted me to be a good girl and I wouldn't.' Anyway, what could happen?"

And once he turned, and his eyes met hers steadily for a moment.

"Plenty... police." "Police!" Molly spoke with the disdain of one who has known only the friendly protection of the guardians of the peace.

They were inside now, and a tall, suave-looking man came toward them, smiling. Molly felt his gaze rest on her for a moment with sudden, sharp interest.

"He knows I'm not a regular customer," she hazarded mentally, "and suspects I'm all set for something exciting."

The proprietor signaled to a waiter, who piloted them to a table.

Molly curved her mouth downward to signify to Wick her disappointment. Wick had been stuffy, deliberately building up an atmosphere which was about to collapse. There was absolutely nothing here to thrill or excite one.

The big room had the usual polished dance floor. A large revolving mirrored disc in the center of the ceiling bathed the dancing area in a flood of shifting rainbow squares. Mirror panels were set in the walls between other panels decorated with vivid red poppies.

The crowd had not yet come to life. People were sitting at tables indifferently, looking at a quite ordinary show with bored eyes. Perhaps after a while that girl with hair like green straw would be crying in her cup and that ugly man with her would flourish a knife—as Brent's edition would have it.

The music had begun. Loudly, brassy and insistently, but the tune was familiar. Nothing daring or sinister in that! "It's a dumb sort of place," who had sauntered by their table. The new man was young and very handsome, Molly marked. His dark hair grew nicely on a poetic kind of head. He was evidently a person of importance, judging by the interest of the group. All three looked pleased and excited. The proprietor was standing deferentially, talking in a low tone, while the young man regarded him coolly, almost with distaste. Molly decided. Once he smiled, and she saw a flash of white teeth. And once he turned, and his eyes met hers steadily for a moment.

She flushed a little. There were lots of staring people in this place. And she was quite as mannerless, looking at others around her as though they were a new species.

A SIGNIFICANT conversation was taking place between the dark-haired young man and the others at his table. "What's the reason for getting me into these clothes the minute I get to town?" the young man asked in a low, level tone.

"The same reason that brought you to town, that paid your train fare from Chicago, Nelse." Thornton Black, who was known as "Steve" to a small group of "special friends," spoke quietly.

"Cut the preliminaries. What wedding reception am I to crash tonight?"

"You're wrong this time... you start your job right here. What do you think, Nelse? The girl walked in tonight. Looks like everything's playing into our hands. You could have knocked me over with a feather when she came through that door. You see, Nelse, you're graduating from petty jewel robbery."

The young man took out a cigarette and lit it coolly. "You're not talking to me, Steve. The word kidnapping isn't in my vocabulary, but G-Man is."

"Got a white liver, Nelse? Well, we've a cure for that. It's pretty strong medicine and you might have to spend a stretch inside some big house after you take it."

Nelson Ferguson's eyes narrowed. "Somebody else might be keeping me living. A lot of the boys have left it recently."

"Those boys didn't have your brains," Bill Patrick put in. "Tell me which one of your absent friends could have engineered that Dawson deal except you and pulled three straight bank jobs without leaving a clue. Or made the police of four cities sit up and take notice for nothing. You've got to hand it to yourself. Those boys weren't as smart as you. That's why we sent for you. That's why we're willing to take a small slice if you pull the job."

"What job?" Nelse sat down.

"Know who that girl is I pointed out to you?" Black asked.

"No."

"They call her the Golden Girl."

4-H Club Sunday

For County, Aug. 16

The following letter addressed to 4-H club members in Eastland county is self explanatory concerning 4-H Day to be designated at Eastland, August 16:

Sunday, August 16, will be known as 4-H Club Sunday in Eastland county. There has never been known in the history of 4-H Club work in Eastland county a Sunday being set aside during the year and designated as a 4-H Club Sunday.

We invite you and your parents to be present at his 4-H Club Sunday at the First Presbyterian church of Eastland at 10:45 a. m. Rev. Charles W. Estes will use as a subject for his sermon, "History of Agriculture."

All 4-H Club boys and girls meet directly north of the Presbyterian church where formations will be made and the group will go into the church together and sit in a reserved section.

You and your parents are asked to bring a basket lunch which will be spread at the Eastland park immediately following the services at the church.

The afternoon program will consist of a band concert by the Eastland High school band, group singing by the 4-H Club boys and girls, and an inspirational talk made by Mr. C. E. Bowles, from A & M College.

We know this will be one of the greatest meetings ever held in Eastland county, for that reason we urge you and your parents to come together for this inspirational gathering.

HUGH P. BARNHART
Asst. County Agent
CORNELIA FAYE STEWART
Asst. Home Dem. Agent

Several of the 4-H Club boys in the county have asked me to help them buy a registered Jersey heifer. I want to determine definitely how many boys want heifers before I buy these heifers. If you are interested in buying a registered Jersey heifer, please meet me at the County agents office on Saturday August 15th at 2 p. m.

W. H. Bohannon, member Carbon Boy's 4-H Club, has his chickens up, getting them ready for the Texas Centennial Poultry Show next month.

James E. Dunn, Alameda 4-H Club boy working hard getting his registered Jersey heifer in condition for the Eastland County Fair and the Texas Centennial show. James states, "I am working hard for that first place in these two shows."

Marlin Sneed, Ranger 4-H Club member has dug a trench silo and filled it with dry corn stalks. Marlin states, "Our little barn was full of dry corn stalks, so I dug me a trench 8 feet long and 4 feet wide, and three feet deep and stored my surplus corn stalks in it."

Cecil Gaudle, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Gaudle of the Flatwood community is digging a trench silo this week, which will hold about one and a half tons of feed. Cecil expects to fill this silo so that he will have silage to feed his registered Jersey heifer, which he purchased recently. Cecil is a member of the Flatwood Boys' 4-H Club.

August 15 has been set as the last day which cotton sales certificates can be received at the county agent's office, for the payment of the differences of the average ten spot cotton markets on middling, 7-8 inch staples, and twelve cents. So far as known now no extension of time will be granted for accepting these sales certificates. It will be impossible for any cotton producer, who has not already turned in these sales certificates, or does not have them in the county agent's office by 5 o'clock Saturday, August 15th, to qualify for a cotton price adjustment payment.

Up until the present time $12,402.18 has been distributed to cotton producers of Eastland county, with a number of applications still to be paid.

Motorized Units and Highway Posts Give Red Cross First Aid to Injured

The Red Cross has forged a new link in its chain of highway first aid stations established to bring immediate emergency care to roadside victims. Thirty-two Delaware state highway maintenance trucks comprise the first unit of the Red Cross motorized highway patrol, organized to complement the organization's emergency highway first aid stations. It is planned to equip and give aid training to the crews of several thousand trucks of state highway and public utility groups, since these vehicles are constantly on duty on the nation's traffic arteries. Numerous groups in a number of states are now prepared to launch similar highway patrols under Red Cross jurisdiction, and the highway police of eight states have finished Red Cross first aid training and will soon augment these mobile units. National Safety Council figures show that last year motor accidents claimed 37,000 lives. This appalling total would have been less if more of the victims had received emergency treatment at the scene of accident while the doctor was on the way.

The Red Cross has already established 900 highway emergency first aid stations on through routes in rural areas, and an additional 8,500 will soon be in operation. The well-meaning but helpless bystander at the scene of accident will be replaced by the first aider, trained to splint fractures, stop bleeding and treat for shock. The American Red Cross dedicates its first aid posts and mobile units to the motorist of today and tomorrow who may be injured at a point where medical attention can not be immediately secured.

Sunday Services At Methodist Church

"The Road to Happiness" is to be the subject of the sermon for next Sunday morning at the Methodist church. The pastor, Rev. Wm. H. Cole, says that there are certain definite conditions for attaining the happiness and that every person may experience the joy of having attained a worthwhile place and a useful life.

Sunday evening the subject of the sermon will be "How God Speaks to Us Through Others." God uses many means to speak to each individual. Happy is the man who hears God speak to him through these several ways.

Both morning and evening services last only fifty minutes. "The Good Old Summer Time" brings some fine blessings and one of them is the opportunity to develop the inner life.
