Anderson to make inquiry

By SCOTT FITZGERALD
Staff Writer

A continuing probe into alleged election fraud in Reeves County has prompted challenger John R. Anderson to begin his own inquiry. Anderson's actions come despite officials in Reeves County contending the issue concerns a Justice of the Peace race rather than the District 69 House seat contest.

Reeves County grand jurors will reconvene on Dec. 6 to hear additional testimony from 25 to 30 persons concerning harassment of absentee voters who applied for ballots beginning in the May primary election.

Representative Larry Don Shaw, winner of the Nov. 4 election, said he would welcome an Anderson investigation and blasted print media accounts of the situation.

Investigator Jack Brewer of the Reeves County District attorney's office and County Clerk Catherine Ashely reported FBI and state investigations are focusing on a Justice of the Peace race in a Reeves County precinct.

District Attorney Jack McGowen has indicated that he initiated the investigation because election margins were sufficient to avoid the grand jury findings from affecting the outcome of any particular race.

An investigation will allow Reeves officials to consider a recent history of possible voter fraud, it has been reported.

McGowen said suspicion concerning election fraud in Reeves County has existed prior to the November general election.

Challenger John R. Anderson said Wednesday he would contest the House Representative race he

Getting a lift

It was time for a little help, for six-year old Heather Herren. She was one of 65 participants in the Northside Community Center's third annual walk-a-thon Sunday afternoon. Her father, Steve, gave her a boost along the way. She finished six of the 11 miles along the walk; in all, 33 walkers completed the entire course in an effort to raise funds for the Center's operation. Engineer may study surges in water bills

By SPENCER SANDOW
Staff Writer

A study should be performed to determine how many residents' water bills increased by 50 percent and how many by at least 100 percent this summer, the citizens' water bill committee decided Monday.

The committee, which meets Monday nights, voted to recommend the city council authorize computer systems engineer consultant Tom Bates of Midland to perform the study.

Bates was present at the meeting, as were three representatives of Neptune water meter manufacturing company: regional sales manager Armand Caruso, George D. Willis, and Donald Kullmann.

Kullmann, whom Caruso said designed the water meters, also heads the American Waterworks Commission committee that sets standards regarding water meters. Caruso called the man "the guru" of water meters.

The committee voted to use the months of May, June and October, 1986, to determine a customer's average water bill.

It voted last week to recommend the council authorize a partial water bill refund to those with an unusually high bill who requested such a refund. The refund should be credited to a customer's bill, it decided.

Kullmann told committee members the company was concerned about the Big Spring situation and the allegation that Neptune meters could be at fault in some cases. Neptune supplies 95 percent of the city's water meters, committee chairman Sam Robertson said.

Big Spring purchases 100 meters a month, so a large-scale problem would indicate difficiencies system-wide instead of simply a faulty batch of meters, Kullmann said. He added that all meters sent to the company for testing have tested correctly.

Kullmann said the company has never encountered water bill complaints in such numbers and he had no idea what could have happened to make the meters falsely record extraordinarily high water amounts, if that was the case.

He acknowledged that meters would register air as if it were water, if a mixture of air and water flowed through the pipes. The shape of the pipes would dictate whether trapped air would flow through all at once or little by litle, he said.

Neptune representative Armand Caruso pointed out that a faulty toilet which runs continuously can double a monthly water bill.

Computer expert Tom Bates said water bills are very seldom estimated. However, when estimates are made, the figures are entered directly into the computer at the office manually, and not into the hand held computer by the meter readers.

Bates said records from the past 13 months are available in estimating the bills. In response to a question by the committee, he explained that power outages have

El Paso, N. Mex. feud over water rights

Six-year-old battle continues

By DORALISA PILARTE
Associated Press Writer

LAS CRUCES, New Mexico (AP) — In the long tradition of fighting over water in the American West, the state of New Mexico and neighboring El Paso, Texas, are butting heads in another battle in their six-year-old war for water rights.

El Paso wants to drill 21 wells in the Hueco Basin, the underground body of water that straddles the Texas-New Mexico state line, plus another 266 in the Lower Rio Grande, or Mesilla, Basin.

New Mexicans opposing the request — including three counties, the state Land Office, the Elephant Butte Irrigation District, two water companies in the town of Chaparral, Stahman Farms and several individuals — have been dubbed "no-droppers" for their battle cry that "not one drop" of New Mexico water will go to El Paso.

State Engineer Steve Reynolds was to convene a hearing at 9:30 a.m. (MST) today to hear both sides. The hearing, scheduled for three days each week through Dec. 25, is at the state Department of Agriculture on the New Mexico State University campus.

Only 21 of El Paso's requests for water wells will be considered at the hearing. The rest will be heard at another meeting scheduled for October 1987, said Reynolds.

But the hearing today is significant because some key issues common to all the requests will be resolved.

Among those issues are determining El Paso's need for water; the effect of pumping in the New Mexican side of the Hueco Basin; and interpreting a 1983 state law that allows water exports as long as it's not detrimental to New Mexico citizens or contrary to water conservation efforts in that state, said Reynolds.

His decision is subject to appeal before the state district court in Dona Ana County, he added. The issue could then go to the New Mexico Court of Appeals and ultimately the U.S. Supreme Court, Reynolds said.

El Paso, whose 1980 population of 425,259 had increased to 489,812 by last July, now gets most of its water from the Rio Grande, wells near the New Mexico state line and pumping the Texas side of the Hueco Basin, said John Hickerson, general manager of El Paso Water Utilities.

"But we have been depleting the ground water sources in the Hueco Bolson and have been experiencing an increase in the mineral contents of that water," said Hickerson.

El Paso wants to pump about 10,000 acre-feet of water annually from the New Mexico Hueco Basin starting in 1999. An acre-foot is a unit of water measurement one acre in area and one foot deep.

"In the 1960s, Texas has laws similar to those of New Mexico," said Hickerson. "But the courts ruled it violated interstate commerce and now the town of Altus, Okla., is using Texas water. Our contention is we should have access to the water near El Paso in New Mexico if it's economical ..."

The lengthy water fight, which Hickerson said has cost El Paso about $3 million so far, began in September 1980, when El Paso filed suit challenging New Mexico's ban on importing ground water.

Reportedly dead president seen in film footage

By EDWIN Q. WHITE

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — President Kim Il Sung of North Korea, who had been reported slain or ousted in a coup, made an appearance today in Pyongyang, greeting the Mongolian premier and receiving the cheers of thousands lining a motorcade route.

The 74-year-old Kim, shown in North Korean television footage broadcast in Japan and China, smiled and embraced Zhambyn Batmunkh in an airport welcoming that included a review of honor guards and greetings from dancing children.

Kim looked a little unsteady as he walked with Batmunkh to review the honor guard, but he seemed fit. The (North) Korean Central News Agency released a photograph of Kim and Batmunkh shaking hands.

An Asian diplomat in the North Korean capital, contacted by telephone from Peking, told The Associated Press that he had seen Kim at the airport and "he is in absolutely good health."

"Everything is all right in this country, the situation is absolutely normal ...," the diplomat said, speaking on condition of anonymity. "There seems to be nothing correct about these reports (of an assassination or power seizure)...."

On Sunday, the defense minister in Seoul said broadcasts from North Korean loudspeakers along the demilitarized zone said Kim, who has led his Communist nation of 19 million since its creation in 1948, had been shot to death.

South Korean Defense Minister Lee Ki-Baek told the National Assembly in Seoul on Monday that "judging from all such circumstances, it is believed that Kim has died or a serious internal power struggle is going on there."

A South Korean opposition legislator, Kim Bong-ho, said Lee's report was based on "dubious intelligence reports" and "not only caused unrest among the people,

Forsan hears good financial report

By EDDIE CURRAN
Staff Writer

FORSAN — The School Board Monday unanimously approved the audit for the 1985-86 school year as presented by Steve Herm of the Stanton accounting firm of Stallings & Herm.

"You're real fortunate. The school district is in good shape...you have an excellent financial fund balance," Herm said.

The Board tabled a proposed modification of the Gifted and Talented Program that would have eliminated good grades as a criteria for qualification. Superintendent J.F. Poynor said Forsan sent 59 students to Lubbock for a two-week gifted program at Texas Tech last summer at a cost of $600 per student.

He said a score in the 95th percentile or higher on the California Achievement Test is the state's criteria for gifted and talented. He said in the past Forsan has included students with all A's, though they aren't necesserily gifted.

Poynor suggested that the Board could save money by eliminating A students from the program if they don't qualify by state criteria. He said the school rewards A students with a trip to Six Flags at the end of the year.

Board members Terry Wooten and Morrison Donaghe said they disagreed with not classifying A students as gifted. Poynor explained that some gifted students are bored by a normal curriculum and make C's, and that many A students aren't gifted but are hard workers.

The Board postponed a decision until the next Board meeting.

In other business, the Board:

- Re-appointed Stallings and Herm as the auditors for 1987-88.
- Didn't take action on refunding the bond issue after Poynor said the bond had been paid for this year and the Board could wait until next year before considering refunding.
- Voted unanimously to sell its 1976 Dodge van. Pyonor said it was an excess vehicle. He added the Board pays $500 insurance on the van annually.
- Accepted the appointments for the textbook committee that includes Poynor and 14 teachers in the elementary, middle and high schools.

little affect on modern computers, and such a happening is seldom a problem.

Committee member Don Proctor said that when members last week questioned the way meters are read, they didn't mean to imply that meter readers are dishonest, only to suggest the possibility of "goofing off."

Caruso said that in the future, water meters will be read and automatically recorded by computer, eliminating the possibility of human error.

Robertson said he believes the cause of the high water bills isn't likely to be found, and the committee should concentrate on what is to be done to resolve the situation.

"We need to try to bring a positive attitude back to the general public" regarding the city government, he said.

but also hurt the government's credibility at home and abroad." He said the Cabinet should resign.

Lee said he would act "more discreetly and wisely" in the future, but that he thought it was important to make the report because it had a bearing on national security.

He also said that as of mid-morning — at the time of the North Korean announcement on Kim's airport appearance — the DMZ loudspeakers were blaring solemn music and saying, "The nation's great star has fallen." Two hours later, Lee said, the loudspeakers broadcast a report that Kim had delegated power to his 44-year-old son, Kim Jong Il.

The South Koreans did not say what the loudspeakers were broadcasting later.

lost by over 700 votes to incumbent Larry Don Shaw if Reeves County grand jurors issued indictments.

The Borden County rancher said he would travel to Pecos sometime this week to begin his own inquiries.

Shaw said: "I would like to see him (Anderson) contest the race."

"I'd welcome an investigation into the race and I welcome Anderson to take any course available to him as provided by the law," said Shaw.

The incumbent criticized local print media for what he considers irresponsibility of "insinuating" that he and his campaign workers engaged in election fraud in Reeves County.

Shaw said he and his staff were never involved in fraudulent activity whatsoever in Reeves County.

The 33-year-old Knott native was especially critical of headlines on particular news stories written about the on-going investigations.

"My desire would be to find out whether any fraud occurred or not," Shaw said.

The affects of the local print media's coverage of the alleged fraud has "made accusations and innuendos towards a lot of persons" and has lowered the Shaw family's image in the community, he said.

The incumbent said he is attending to his scheduled duties and has not altered his initial perceptions on the House race outcome.

Two injured in separate mishaps

A Big Spring Man is in stable condition and another was treated and released from Scenic Mountain Medical Center after two separate accidents.

John Wesley Wilson, 42, 2606 Barksdale, was admitted to the hospital after an accident at 6:45 a.m. Monday at Simler and Armstrong.

He was injured when, riding his bicycle, he collided with a blue GMC pickup driven by Cecil Crenshaw, 55, 447 Armstrong.

Crenshaw was driving south on Simler SPELLING at 6:45 a.m. Monday. He attempted to turn left onto Armstrong when he collided with Wilson, who was traveling north on Simler, police reports said.

Crenshaw was not injured.

Clayton Merle Coffman, 35, of Coahoma, was treated and released from the hospital after an accident at 1:53 a.m. today at the South Service Road of Interstate-20 and the Refinery Road bridge.

Passenger Rickie Charles Hogue, 34, 1608 Nolan St., was injured but refused medical treatment, reports indicated.

Coffman was driving his 1975 white Toyota Corrola east on the service road. A witness told police he was traveling at a high speed, and that he failed to stop at a stop sign, police reports stated. The vehicle collided with a guard rail.

Coffman was arrested on suspicion of driving while intoxicated and ticketed for failure to stop at a stop sign.

Another passenger, Joyce Lockhart, Route 1 Box 24A, no age listed, was arrested for giving a false report to a police officer. She was transferred to the county jail and released on $1,000 bond.

Spouses ask for help

WASHINGTON — Five Americans asked U.S. and Soviet authorities to help them meet with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev when they visit that nation in an effort to get permission for their spouses to emigrate.

"We believe we can present our case in such a way as to resolve the issue of dividd spouses once and for all, and to remove forever this impediment to normal relations between our two nations," Michael Lavigne of Berkeley, Calif., said in a statement read on behalf of the group.

Leaders of the Divided Spouses Coalition met Monday in Washington with officials of the State Department and Soviet consular officials, and requested that the Soviets arrange a meeting with Gorbachev next month when some of them plan to visit Moscow.

Bomb bouquet refused

SAN FRANCISCO — A man in a white tuxedo and derby wearing a phony beard and moustache delivered flowers containing a bomb that injured two women in an office, but a suburban couple refused a similar delivery, police said.

The man "acted like he was a florist" and paid $20 for the $5 fare to the couple's El Cerrito home, said cab driver Peter Chandler. Before attempting to deliver the flowers, he asked Chandler to take a picture of him.

Chandler said he took two pictures and returned the camera to the man.

The couple were the parents of one woman injured Monday afternoon in the General Services Administration office, and the man was a friend of their daughter and her estranged husband, according to a published report.

The bomb-laden bouquet of dried flowers was brought to the downtown GSA office by a man wearing a white tuxedo jacket, a white derby, eyeliner, and a beard and moustache that appeared fake, witnesses told police.

Market probe probable

WASHINGTON — Huge stock market profits rolled up by Ivan Boesky through inside tips are likely to generate enough political pressure for congressional investigations, industry experts say.

The inquiry could expand into a look at new freewheeling financial techniques, such as the use of junk bonds, to capitalize on the merger mania that swept Wall Street in the early 1980s and now simmers at a reduced level.

Boesky, Wall Street's master arbitrageur who parlayed advance knowledge of mergers into a fortune, could be a witness as congressional committees early next year open hearings into the growing scandal.

Just how far any resulting legislation gets could depend on what else surfaces as the Securities and Exchange Commission pushes forward with an investigation into Wall Street tipsters and their networks.

U.S. Secretary of State George Shultz addresses a conference on U.S.-Soviet relations at the University of Chicago Monday. After his speech, Shultz said the U.S. must stand unequivocally against terrorism and not "get into the business of trading something of genuine importance for hostages."

Shultz

Says anti-terrorist stance must remain

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz says the United States must reassert its anti-terrorism doctrine amid the public debate over a U.S. arms shipment to Iran.

Shultz told a University of Chicago audience Monday night that there is wide agreement within the Reagan administration to probe for pro-Western tendencies in the Iranian government.

But Shultz said of U.S. policy on terrorism, "We have to be unequivocally against it."

His remarks came as a published poll said that most Americans did not believe President Reagan's explanation last week of recent U.S. arms shipments to Iran and contacts with Tehran regarding American hostages in Lebanon.

Shultz, speaking to reporters after his speech, said the United States must work tirelessly for the return of six Americans missing in Lebanon, but the doctrine of not trading with terrorists should be reaffirmed.

"It's a mistake for governments to get in the business of trading something of genuine importance for hostages," Shultz said. "Why? Not because you don't want to get the hostages back. Not really because you care that much about a little do-re-me. But because if you do that, all you do is encouraging the taking of more hostages. You put more Americans at risk.

"So that's the theory. I think it's a perfectly good theory, and it's a good practice. And we intend to stick to it."

Shultz had his most extensive discussion with reporters to date of the once-secret White House operation in which weapons were provided to the Iranians.

Apparently referring to his own partial exclusion from the operation, which was carried out largely by the White House's National Security Council, Shultz said a secret operation prevents taking advantage of "checks and balances" and "expertise" within the U.S. government.

Georges Besse killed

PARIS — Police today said they suspected two women, believed to be left-wing terrorists, shot and killed the president of the state-run Renault automobile company as he returned home from the company's headquarters in suburban Boulogne-Billancourt.

After interrogating witnesses all night at the scene of the Monday shooting on Boulevard Edgar Quinet near the Montparnasse railway station, police said they suspected Georges Besse was shot by one woman, who was protected by another.

There was no immediate claim of responsibility for the killing, which occurred about 8 p.m. just one door down from Besse's home in Paris' 14th district.

But a police spokesman said "it is undoubtedly Direct Action," the extreme left French terrorist organization, who carried out the attack.

Syria linked to bombing

BERLIN — A Palestinian accused in a West Berlin bombing said he obtained the explosives from the Syrian Embassy in East Berlin, according to his pre-trial testimony presented in court today.

Ahmed Nawaf Hasi, in the statement to police, said he was given the explosives by a man identified by another defendant as a Syrian intelligence officer.

The statement was read into the court record by presiding Judge Hans-Joachim Heinze on the second day of the trial in West Berlin.

Hasi, 35, and co-defendant Farouk Salameh, 39, are charged with attempted murder and arms violations in the March 29 bombing of West Berlin's German-Arab Friendship Association. Nine people were injured in the blast.

Hasi said in his statement he was told to use the cover name "Fahdi" when picking up the explosives in East Berlin.

"At the Syrian Embassy I introduced myself as Fahdi and was brought to Abu Ahmed," the statement said.

Hasenfus won't appeal

MANAGUA, Nicaragua — The defense attorney for Eugene Hasenfus says he will not appeal the American mercenary's 30-year prison sentence for aiding anti-Sandinista rebels because "I have no case to appeal."

"His sentence was a planned thing," attorney Enrique Sotelo Borgen added when asked Monday about if he planned to take Hasenfus' case back to court. "I think there's no other way out."

Hasenfus, 45, of Marinette, Wis., was convicted Saturday of terrorism and violating the maintenance of Nicaragua's order and public security and sentenced to the maximum prison term.

Immigration law effect seen

By LARRY MARGASAK
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The new immigration law has not caused widespread firings of Hispanics, a survey shows, but a New York councilman says there's already a "chilling effect" on hiring anyone with a foreign appearance.

A random check by The Associated Press shows dismissals of Hispanics have only occurred in isolated instances — Houston and Dallas, for instance — even though the law has sewn confusion about penalties for employers who knowingly hire illegal aliens.

In Houston, a counselor for Hispanics, Maria Allen, said clients told her one company informed workers it "was the law now to speak English. Another company has been telling them that it is now illegal to hire undocumented workers."

But, in a typical survey finding, the counselor at Houston International University — an immigrant-aid institute — could not confirm the accusations, and one firm specifically denied them.

In the Bronx, New York, city councilman Fernando Ferrer said he believes the new law has had a "chilling effect" on hiring Hispanics, commenting, "You see it in the coffee shops, you see it everywhere in this city."

Rene Martinez of Dallas would probably agree. The 18-year-old, who fled El Salvador in 1983 with his 16-year-old brother and his mother, a maid, has been unable to find work.

"I feel bad because I'm not working and because I had the idea of not having my mother work," he said. "You can't make ends meet."

The immigration bill has two cornerstones: amnesty for illegal aliens who arrived before 1982 and lived in this country continously since then and penalties against employers who knowingly hire illegal aliens.

For the next six months, the Immigration and Naturalization Service is to conduct a public information campaign on the sanctions program, during which no enforcement actions can be taken.

After the six months, a one-year period would follow in which first offenders would only receive warnings. But the full effect of the program would allow civil fines ranging up to $10,000 per illegal alien and a criminal penalty of six years in prison.

Most important, the law only applies to new hires, not those working before the bill became law. Some workers may have been victimized by employers' early confusion on this point.

In related news Monday, Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, said he plans to introduce an amendment to the new immigration law calling for creation of a telephone system to verify the validity of new, "tamperproof" Social Security cards.

Gramm said the system would serve as an insurance policy for employers.

"As of now we really have no effective means to try to help employers who are trying to comply with the law and not hire illegal aliens," Gramm said at a news conference.

Salvador Nelson, 22, born in El Salvador and also living in Dallas, said he was fired from his construction job because he didn't have the proper documents.

"With this new law, they told us we couldn't work here and that was the reason. They left me without no money, without food," he said.

At New Orleans' Schwegmann's supermarket chain, one of the area's largest employers of immigrants who cannot speak English, personnel officer Lee Janies said he doubted hiring policies would change.

He said the chain, which gives all applicants a polygraph, already requires non-citizens to prove they may work in this country.

"They have to have their green (permanent residency) card," he said. "If they state that they're American citizens, we pretty much accept it ... You can pretty much check from the rest of the application — where they've gone to school and all."

In the same city Gloribel Rubio, head of Ecumenical Immigration Services, said about a dozen people told her they were fired because they lacked green cards or working papers.

"We tried to tell our clients at least they still have time, but they said, 'Our employers, they don't believe so.' I told one client to have his employer explain the law. But they don't call. They don't like to bother."

The survey indicated that Hispanic groups are clearly nervous.

"There are definitely rumblings in (Hispanic) neighborhoods" about job losses, said Amin David, president of a Hispanic rights group, Los Amigos of Orange County, Calif. "There's no question that employers are very edgy and concerned."

Execution stay given

LAKE CITY, Fla. — Suspected serial killer Theodore Bundy came within seven hours of execution today for the brutal murder of a 12-year-old girl, and some residents of her hometown were angry at the indefinite stay.

The 11th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Atlanta issued the stay at 12:40 a.m., ruling there wasn't time before Bundy's scheduled 7 a.m. electrocution to fully review his latest appeal. A state and a federal judge and the state Supreme Court all had refused Monday to block the execution.

Bundy, 39, showed little reaction to the stay, said Vernon Bradford, spokesman for the Florida Department of Corrections at Florida State Prison near Starke. "He didn't have much to say," Bradford said.

The decision brought mixed reaction in this northern Florida city where Kimberly Diane Leach was abducted Feb. 9, 1978. Her body was found about two months later in an abandoned pig sty near the Suwannee River.

"They should fry him," said hotel clerk Bert Myres, 19, a lifelong resident. "There are going to be a lot of angry people."

Citizen sees flood's silver-lining

To the editor:

During the Community under God rally Aug. 8-11, several hundred people gathered and prayed that God, 1, cleanse the city of its sins; 2, bring healing to the community; and 3, lavish us with prosperity.

A few weeks later we were receiving rains so heavy that Big Spring began to flood. And things haven't been the same since.

How powerful and effective prayer is bears serious consideration.

Glenn Clark, a 20th century Christian mystic, said that he "profoundly believes that if 70 people who actually, positively and unswervingly believed in the power of prayer, would come together, they could solve all of the problems of America."

Has the coordinated effort of prayer brought us greater opportunity to work out some of the problems of our community? As I see it, the answer is yes.

Of course, no one specifically prayed for a flood, but Howard Bredeson said the first night of the rally that receiving the things we pray for can sometimes be a tricky business. He stated that before the things that we prayed for can get to us, we sometimes have to encounter things that seem contrary to our best interests.

The flood definitely seemed contrary to our best interest at first. But look at the things that have happened since. For one thing, virtually everyone in this community has had a chance to prove and better their character. The persons inflicted by the flood have had an opportunity to test their trust and faith. Others had a golden opportunity to prove or improve their generosity and willingness to help.

It wasn't all meant to be trials and tribulations, though. Look at the prosperity generated from the flood itself. Carpenters, painters, carpet layers, masons and retailers who supply the necessary materials have all been able to find more work and sales since the flood. Furthermore, $600,000 has been granted to the city to help finance the building of a new dam and for the repairs on Goliad Street.

In addition, we have now the proposed expansion at the Big Spring Federal Prison Camp, the widening of Highway 87, the realistic possibility of a billion-dollar atom smashing unit, and other business and industrial prospects.

This may all sound like farfetched speculation or consideration, but through the practice of prayer I have experienced both its power and effectiveness. Thus, let us continue to come together as a community and utilize the power and effectiveness of prayer in a clear, courageous, constructive, and conscious way, and a rich harvest of blessings will be ous.

Halloween issue given low billing

To the editor:

You people who want to write letters to the city officials, why don't you write about something that matters.

As far as I know, Halloween is man's creation and doesn't mean anything. You people who want to get mad, get mad about what counts.

This city counts more than any holiday — except Christmas, Easter and the sabbath — and they are not counted like they should be.

This city is going down the drain, and it'he people's fault when they cry about things that don't matter.

We need this city to grow and have more work.

I can't believe that 24 thousand people let a handful run their lives or the city.

The handful running this city is working for you. If you don't like their work, fire them. That is how it is in the working world — government or ditchdigger.

Here you are crying about Halloween.

How do you think the people feel — those who have moved out of the city because there was no work for them here?

There are houses all over town for sale, and the people are selling them for less than they are worth just to get them off their backs.

Now that is something to cry about.

Businessman clarifies statements

To the editor:

A couple of days ago I was invited to do an interview with the local media by Johnny Rutherford, representing the industrial foundation.

I appreciated the opportunity to announce a positive step for one of our local industries — Cameo Energy Homes. This community needs to focus on the many positives we have in West Texas and I am proud to be a part of a progressive company located in Big Spring and West Texas.

Unfortunately, I was quoted out of context in a way that seriously misstated me and my opinion. During the interview, I was asked by one of the reporters why Cameo had chosen to get into the retail business. Among several reasons I gave was a statement that there were not only quality retailers in the area but who were in a position to provide the marketing and service we needed for the entire West Texas area. Your reporter quoted me as saying that no quality retailers remain in the Permian Basin. This is not what I said nor is it my opinion.

It is very important to the operation of the Cameo plant, which currently provides 180 jobs in Big Spring, that we be represented in all of these markets by a quality retailer who is able to carry out a comprehensive marketing and service program which serves all of West Texas. While there are several quality manufactured housing retailers in the area, none of them is in a position to supply all of these markets for our company.

This was one of the key reasons that we opened the Apple Homes retail division, serving West Texas through model centers in Odessa, Big Spring, Monahans, Lubbock and Abilene. We are optimistic about the future of West Texas and everyone at Cameo is looking forward to furthering our service to the community through this new venture.

The reporter also stated that Cameo purchased three retail businesses. This is not correct. We did lease some of their locations, but we did not purchase these businesses.

I am sure the reporter meant no harm and they were innocent mistakes made by someone unfamiliar with our industry. Thank you for allowing me to clarify these points.

Jewish group goes to court to fight German-Americans

Jack Anderson

By JACK ANDERSON
and JOSEPH SPEAR

WASHINGTON — The B'nai B'rith Anti-Defamation League spends most of its time battling anti-Semitism whenever it rears its ugly head. But recently the Jewish organization had to take time to fight — and win — a legal skirmish with an upstart German-American group that had appropriated B'nai B'rith's registered "Anti-Defamation League" title.

It wasn't much of a contest. The German-American ADL, which had run four fund-raising ads in Washington, D.C., newspapers, turned tail and ran when the B'nai B'rith ADL threatened legal action. The copycat group quickly changed its name to the German American Information and Education Association.

The ADL battle began when B'nai B'rith official spotted the first German-American ad in the Washington Times on July 10. "There is a desperate attempt by a certain group to keep World War II events in the minds of people to retain their sympathy," the ad charged.

It then complained that "the very same people that impugn (Austrian President Kurt) Waldheim" for his admitted Nazi past "never uttered one word of outrage against (Menachem) Begin's past" as head of the Irgun Zvai Leumi, a Jewish underground guerrilla group in British-ruled Palestine before the founding of Israel.

On July 25, B'nai B'rith advised the German-American ADL that it was infringing on a federally registered name. Hans Schmidt, head of a sympathetic organization that shares the same address and telephone number, the German American National Political Action Comittee, explained what happened next in a letter sent out to "Dear friends of GANPAC and Germanity." Our associate Lucette Lagnado obtained a copy.

"Alas," Schmidt wrote, "neither we nor the lawyer who drew up the papers for our new organization was aware that the Jewish ADL had legally requisitioned both the acronym ADL, as well as the title 'Anti-Defa-mation League' for themselves.

"This is typical of the very people who fight for inclusion into, and part ownership of, everything we got but attempt to retain every piece of ground they have ever gained. At any rate, under the present circumstances we felt we had no choice but to change the name of our new organization. For us there was no loss since so far few Americans knew of our existence (the 'free' U.S. media saw to that!)."

In its new incarnation, the German American Information and Education Association sent out a fund-raising letter signed by its president, Stan Rittenhouse, identified by B'nai B'rith officials as the author of an anti-Semitic tract called "For Fear of the Jews."

In his letter, addressed to "friends of German culture and spirit...concerned Americans," Rittenhouse rails against the usual suspects for what's wrong with the country: "a grotesquely biased news media controlled behind the scenes by a tiny unrepresentative minority...anti-German hate movies on TV...almost unhindered immigration of (often) unassimilable aliens...one-worlders and usurpers."

The letter then promises: "Our organization will henceforth always take that position that seems best for America's ethnic majority!"

This is an apparent reference to Americans of German descent or "German heritage," which Schmidt and Rittenhouse claim is the largest U.S. minority, numbering 52 million. According to one of the organization's ads, Americans of Dutch, Belgian and Scandinavian backgrounds are counted as Germanic, and the "German" states of the union stretch from Pennsylvania to the Dakotas.

Rittenhouse's letter appeals for contributions, saying "we need $6 million to establish and staff a TRUTH CENTER...to inform the American people of important news currently being withheld by the liberal media."

When asked if the $6 million figure was chosen to corresspond to the number of Jews who died in the Nazi Holocaust, Rittenhouse chuckled and said it hadn't even occurred to him.

COMPLAINT, CONSOLATION: A reader recently wrote to complain that Rep. Gene Chappie, R-Calif., is setting up a scholarship fund with his campaign leftovers when he retires this year.

The reader said he gave $10 to Chappie for political use, not scholarships. If it's any consolation, Chappie at least can't spend the tenner of himself — as he could have if he had served in Congress before Jan. 8, 1980.

Until that loophole was closed, a retiring member could spend surplus campaign funds on anything lawful. Those who didn't serve before the cutoff date can spend leftovers on anything lawful — except themselves.

State dept. takes the token cakes

By ART BUCHWALD

When White House envoy Bud McFarlane went to Iran, it is reported he delivered a Bible and a chocolate cake.

I found the secret place that makes chocolate cakes for proterrorist regimes.

The baker was puttinig icing on one that was in the shape of a beard.

"Who is that for?" I asked.

"The Ayatollah Khomeini. The White House is going to pick it up in an hour."

"Does Khomeini eat cake?"

"The CIA swears he's a chocoholic. Once he gets his teeth into this we'll have him on his knees."

"What is this Bible doing here?"

"It's autographed by President Reagan and is part of America's new carrot and stick diplomacy. The Bible is the carrot and the cake is the stick. We're hoping to use both to bring our hostages out of Lebanon."

"From a diplomatic point of view it can't miss."

"It won't," the baker said. "As soon as we deliver the Bible, the cake and enough spare parts for 100 F4 fighter planes the Iranians will be eating out of our hands."

"I thought we had a policy against giving cake to countries who support terrorism."

"We do and we don't. It's all right to give out cake if we deliver it with spare parts."

"What happens when the Iranians run out of spare parts? Does that mean their people will kidnap new hostages?"

"Probably, unless we give them the equipment before they grab more Americans."

"Then they won it all. Doesn't that make us patsies for terrorism?"

"Don't ask me. I just make chocolate cakes."

"Who are you making those cakes over there for?"

"That one is for Kadafi. We're going to send it over to him with 350 ground-to-air missiles in hopes he'll cut his worldwide death squads in half."

"Suppose he takes the missiles but not the cake?"

"We'll be disappointed but we'll continue our 'quiet diplomacy' anyway. This chocolate cake goes to Vietnam with 60 tanks, this one to Cambodia with 300,000 bazookas. The Black September cake with white icing goes to Syria. There are hundreds of countries in the world who are praying McFarlane is going to show up at their palace with a Bible and a cake."

"I don't blame the dictators around the world for wanting a piece of the cake," I said. "After all, you don't just get chocolate but U.S. flame throwers as well. Will this good neighbor terrorist policy send a message around the world?"

"Definitely. The more hostages a country holds, the more cake and spare parts it can demand from America."

"Whose bright idea was this anyway?"

"The President thought of it. One night he was having a state dinner and the chef served a chocolate layer cake. The President licked the knife and said, 'If our enemies could taste this cake they would never resort to terrorism again.' Thus another Reagan doctrine was born."

Big Spring Marketplace to debut Dec. 6 and 7

The Big Spring Marketplace, featuring a variety of Christmas ideas and consumer services, will be Dec. 6 and 7 at the Dorothy Garrett Coliseum.

Local merchants, individuals and dealers can apply for booths.

The board of directors of the Howard College Foundation and the Dora Roberts Rehabilitation Center have joined efforts for this project.

It is believed by the two organizations that local retailers, individuals and dealers can improve their visibility by bringing a large number of outlets together in one convenient location, according to a press release.

The unique shopping advantage and convenience will be advertised locally and in neighboring communities to draw Christmas shoppers and buyers, the release stated.

Officials of the Marketplace said they envision a retail version of the highly successful arts and crafts festival. It has been realized that buyers will drive to Big Spring to purchase handmade items if they can find a large selection and number of exhibitors in one central location, according to a relase.

Mel Prather, executive director of the Marketplace, said, "by pooling their resources, local merchants can take advantage of cooperative advertising, promotion and expenses. Anyone who has reviewed such costs knows that each individual merchant can't afford to advertise much in surrounding communities, even though they would like to."

Most of the exhibitors will be local merchants, dealers and individuals, Prather said.

"After all, one of the reasons for putting on the Marketplace was to help the local economy by encouraging people to come to Big Spring to buy and to get local citizens to shop here in our community."

Prather added that if there isn't enough local participation, outside entries will be accepted.

The Marketplace is a combination of the Consumerfest and the Arts and Crafts Festival. It will be like a large shopping center with 165 individual merchants, Prather explained.

Admission to the Marketplace is free.

Interested exhibitors who have not reserved a booth for the Big Spring Marketplace can do so by calling Howard College, 267-6311, ext. 312 or 229 for an information kit.

Girl living with lover lives with guilt

Dear Abby

DEAR ABBY: I am a 20-year-old, third-year college student with a big problem. Four months ago I moved in with my boyfriend, and since that time my family has thrown more guilt my way than a person can deal with in a lifetime. My mom says I will roast in hell and she will never accept my boyfriend as a son-in-law. (We plan to marry next year.) The last time my mom called, she begged me to move out, saying my sinful action is killing my grandparents — that my grandfather has removed all my pictures from their house and refuses to speak my name. My mom says my grandparents cry all the time and may never let me in their house again. Also, their 50th wedding anniversary party has been called off because I chose to live with my boyfriend.

Don't you think I am old enough to make my own decisions for my life, or should I allow my family to "blackmail" me into a decision made by them? I want to do the right thing.

LOST IN PORTLAND

DEAR LOST: You are indeed old enough to make your own decisions, but unless you can live with those decisions, you will reap more grief than joy. It's to your credit that you care enough about your family's feelings to have written to me, and even though you'd be submitting to emotional blackmail to move out, I think for now you'd be happier moving than staying.

DEAR ABBY: Re: the poem in your column that went:

"Married in white, you've chosen right,

"Married in blue, you will always be true,

"Married in green, ashamed to be seen,

Married in red, you'll wish you were dead" etc.

I have a better ending:

"Married in pink, your marriage will stink."

I was. And mine did.

ANNABELLE IN SPARKS, NEV.

DEAR ABBY: This is a plea for help from all the hooked cigarette smokers — myself included. I started smoking at 17 to lose a few pouinds. I'm 39 now. Twenty-two years ago, there were no health warnings, so I didn't know how addicting nicotine could be. Quitting is not just a matter of will power. If it were that easy, very few people would be smoking. This year, so far, I have tried a video stop-smoking program, hypnosis and the Shick Center — all to no avail.

It appears to be the "in" thing today to pick on smokers. Doesn't anyone realize that a little pity would go a lot further? We aren't criminals; we're victims. Most of us are considerate and try not to offend non-smokers.

We smokers get unsolicited advice from strangers — even children. One child said to me, "Why do you smoke so much? Don't you know you're killing yourself?"

Would you instruct your child to approach an obese person and say, "Why do you eat so much? Don't you know you're killing yourself?"

Please don't get me wrong. I'm not trying to justify smoking. I'm just asking for help and understanding, not abuse and humiliation. The worst day of my life was when I lit my first cigarette. You may use my name.

MARCIA EDGERLY, SIMI VALLEY, CALIF.

DEAR MARCIA: As for "picking on smokers," I have led the way, but I'm not short on compassion or understanding. Watch this space tomorrow for my Annual Great American Smokeout Day column. And don't buy any more cigarettes between now and then.

Diet is one factor in lowering cholesterol

Dr. Donohue

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Can you give us a good diet to lower cholesterol? — Mrs. L.K.

I could give you a good low-cholesterol diet, and happily, were that the only factor in lowering your blood cholesterol. But it is not the only factor. Cholesterol in food is only one cause of an increase in blood cholesterol.

Many foods you might consider safe so far as cholesterol is concerned might not be. Foods with saturated fats (that is, they remain solid at room temperature) are notorious contributors to high cholesterol levels. Oleo, for example, has no cholesterol in it but is loaded with saturated fats.

And another all-around important factor in cholesterol rise is the total numbers of calories from all sources that you consume daily. Lower your total caloric intake and you'll lower cholesterol levels.

Other factors play an important role in high cholesterol. Exercise will increase certain kinds of good cholesterol. Quitting tobacco will help also.

But you want a diet. Let me refer you to two separate diets included in the booklet, "Control Cholesterol Sensibly," which I am mailing along to you. It gives diets to both lower cholesterol and also shed excess pounds (Page 25). Other interested readers can order by writing me in care of the Big Spring Herald, enclosing a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope and $1.00.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I am 76 years old and was told recently I have a cataract starting in my left eye. I have been normal up to now. I have been told that eating brewer's yeast will get rid of cataracts and stop them from forming. Have you any advice in this regard for me? — S.D.

I've never heard of yeast retarding cataract development or stopping one from starting. I would be highly suspect of dietary claims with regard cataract formation. Some preliminary work has been done, trying to assess the possible action of aspirin in slowing cataract growth. At this point, nothing definitive can be said bout it.

Now, most people your age are bound to show some signs of beginning cataract, which is clouding of the eye's lens substance. It's almost part and parcel of aging.

Some people who have beginning cataract never develop it to the point where it creates disabling vision disturbance at all. In fact, S.D., this is true of most people.

There is at least one thing you can do, though, to try impeding development. Sunlight (ultraviolet light) is believed to be a factor in cataract progress. So it's wise to use proper sunglasses to filter out that light if you are outdoors quite a lot. Not all sunglasses will do, so you have to shop around. Ask the pharmacist.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: What dangers should a diabetic look for when in an exercise program? — Mrs. G.A.

Excessively low blood sugar is one. That can occur up to 24 hours after the end of exercise. They should keep a supply of emergency carbohydrate food for that eventuality. They should also stay well-hydrated on hot days. Insulin-dependent diabetics may have to decrease their insulin and should check with their doctor.

Perhaps the greatest long-range danger for the diabetic is foot damage. They are prone to that anyway, and any unaccustomed use can bring it on. They must take protective action and get prompt care for bruises, etc.

Hyerions have November meeting

The 1970 Hyperion Club had its November meeting in the home of Kay Fraser with Kae Wise serving as co-hostess. Janine Terry and Diane Murphy were welcomed as guests.

George Williams from George's Candyland was the speaker. He began making peanut brittle in 1947 while working for the railroad in Farmingon, N.M.

After 100 pounds of peanuts, he finally mastered peanut brittle, then he learned to make fudge and peanut patties. After retiring from the railroad, he and his wife traveled for three years.

He became bored with traveling and opened a candy shop in Big Spring at 18th and Benton. This is his second year in business and has developed recipes for over 40 varieties of candy. He discussed tips on candy making, especially for divinity, fudge and truffles. Some of his delicious candy was available for tasting.

Kae Wise reported that the Social Committee met and made plans for the Christmas party which will be Dec. 8 at 7 p.m. at the Brandin' Iron Restaurant. Husbands will be invited. Dessert will follow in the home of Thelma Carlisle where a $50 gift certificate will be given as the door prize.

Poll: Most Americans wouldn't choose baby's sex

NEW YORK (AP) — A boy or a girl? If Americans could choose the sex of babies, nearly three-quarters would refuse the opportunity and let nature take its course, according to a Media General-Associated Press poll.

Overall, the poll of 1,464 adult Americans found strong resistance to choosing the sex of babies, a choice now possible because of advances in "test tube" fertilization.

Asked what they thought about parents being able to choose the sex of babies, 49 percent in the Media General-AP poll said it was bad idea and 29 percent said it was good. Twenty-two percent weren't sure.

When asked, "If you were able to choose the sex of a child, would you choose a boy or a girl?" 27 percent of the respondents said they would choose a boy, 16 percent said a girl, and 57 percent had no preference or were unsure.

Among men, 30 percent said they would choose boys and 12 percent would choose girls. About one-quarter of the women also wanted boys, and 20 percent wanted girls.

Respondents were also asked, "If you were given the opportunity to choose the sex of your child, would you take the opportunity to do so, or not?" When the question was phrased that way, 72 percent said they would not do it, 21 percent said they would, and 7 percent were unsure.

In January, what was apparently the first sex-selected test-tube baby was born in Louisiana. The boy, Justin Spencer, was the product of in vitro fertilization, in which eggs were extracted from a woman's ovaries, fertilized with a man's sperm in the laboratory and implanted in the woman's womb. This "test tube" fertilization is done when the couple cannot conceive by natural means.

In Justin's case, doctors used a technique that allowed them to collect sperm with predominantly male chromosomes, thus increasing the chances that the baby would be a boy. Doctors say the technique is about 70 percent effective.

> "Asked what they thought about parents being able to choose the sex of babies, 49 percent in the Media General-AP poll said it was bad idea and 29 percent said it was good. Twenty-two percent weren't sure."

"If it wasn't going to complicate things, I wanted a boy," said Phyllis Spencer, the baby's mother. "There are more girls in the family, and we definitely wanted a boy, you know, to carry on the name."

In the Media General-AP poll, 13 percent of the respondents who preferred boys to girls echoed Mrs. Spencer's feelings about carrying on the family name, while 16 percent said they preferred boys because they already had girls.

Twenty-eight percent said they preferred boys because they understand or like them better and 15 percent said boys are easier to raise. The rest cited other reasons.

Among those who preferred girls, 31 percent said they liked girls better, 25 percent said they already had boys, and 18 percent said girls were easier to raise.

Many people want their first-born to be boys. One-third of the respondents who had no children said they would choose boys, while only one-quarter of those who had children would make that choice.

But overall, most people seemed uncomfortable with the idea of choosing the sex of babies. Among those who thought it was a bad idea, 38 percent said it was wrong or unnatural, 26 percent said it violated religious beliefs or was immoral, and 10 percent said it would take the mystery out of childbirth. Seven percent said the practice could lead to too many children of the same sex.

A majority of those who said it was a good idea said they liked it because it allowed parents to get the children they wanted.

Respondents in the Media General-Associated Press poll included a random, scientific sampling of 1,464 adults across the country Sept. 8-17. As with all sample surveys, the results of Media General-AP telephone polls can vary from the opinions of all Americans because of chance variation in the sample.

For a poll based on about 1,400 interviews, the results are subject to an error margin of 3 percentage points either way because of chance variations in the sample. That is, if one could have questioned all Americans with telephones, there is only 1 chance in 20 that the findings would vary from the results of polls such as this one by more than 3 percentage points.

Of course, the results could differ from other polls for several reasons. Differences in exact wording of questions, in the timing of interviews and in the interview methods could also cause variations.

Inmate stabs over paper

ROSHARON — A Texas Department of Corrections inmate who read a fellow inmate's newspaper was stabbed four times in the chest and lower back, a prison spokesman said.

Jeffrey Scott Quintana, 25, was taken to a nearby hospital before being transferred to the prison hospital in Galveston, spokesman David Nunnelee said Monday. The inmate is listed in serious condition, Nunnelee said.

Quintana, serving a six-year sentence for a Tarrant County conviction of delivery of marijuana, kidnapping and attempted sexual assault, was reading a newspaper in the day room at the Darrington Unit about 5:30 p.m. Sunday when another inmate grabbed the paper, hit him in the face and walked out of the room.

The inmate, who owned the paper, returned five minutes later armed with a four-inch paring knife, Nunnelee said.

Clemens wins MVP

NEW YORK (AP) — Roger Clemens, whose 24-4 record led the Boston Red Sox into the World Series,today was named the American League's Most Valuable Player, the first starting pitcher to the win the award in 15 years.

Clemens, who earlier won the AL Cy Young Award, gained his first MVP award over 1985 winner Don Mattingly of the New York Yankees and Boston teammate Jim Rice.

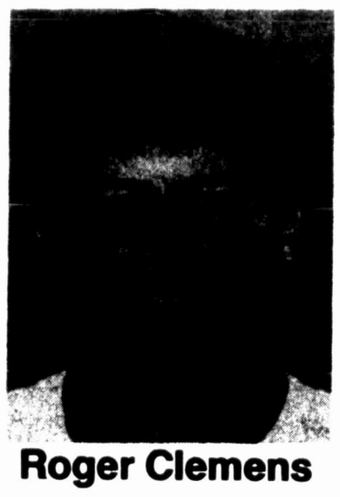
Clemens drew 339 points on 19 first-place votes, five second-place, two thirds and a fourth. Mattingly was second with 241 points, including five first-place votes, followed by Rice with the other four first-place votes and 241 points. They were the only players named on all 28 ballots.

The vote was conducted by the Baseball Writers' Association of America, and made Clemens the first starting pitcher to take the MVP since Vida Blue won the award for the Oakland A's in 1971.

Other pitchers who won the AL MVP award since 1971 were relievers Willie Hernandez of the Tigers in 1984 and Rollie Fingers of the Milwaukee Brewers in 1981, who also won the Cy Young.

Clemens, who was waiting for word at his home in Katy, Texas, said earlier, "I'm not anxious about it. I'm just very curious. Of course, if I won it, I'd be very elated."

Two members of the baseball writers from each American League city are eligible to vote for the MVP. Each writer lists 10 players with 14 points for each first-place vote, nine for second, eight for third, etc. The vote was taken prior to postseason play.



Roger Clemens

Mattingly, who would have been the first AL player to win successive MVP awards since former Yankee Roger Maris in 1960 and 1961, hit .352 with 238 hits, 31 homers and 113 RBI in 1986. Rice, the 1979 MVP and the last Boston player to win the award, hit .324 with 20 home runs and drove in 110 runs last season.

Other Red Sox players to win the MVP were Jimmy Foxx, 1938; Ted Williams, 1946 and 1949; Jackie Jensen, 1958; Carl Yastrzemski, 1967, and Fred Lynn, 1975.

Clemens' achievement is certain to renew the debate over whether a pitcher should beat out an everyday player for the MVP.

Rice, contacted before the results of the balloting were announced, said, "I think Clemens is going to win it and I hope he does. I'd be glad for him, but I think the MVP should be given to a player who goes out there and performs well every day."

Voters certainly considered the 14 times Clemens won games in 1986 following a Boston loss, keeping the team from any potential losing strings. He also helped keep the Red Sox in first place after the All Star Game when they went into a slump and won only three of 13 games, and Clemens won all three.

Since the Cy Young award for pitchers was created 30 years ago, the only players who have won both the Cy Young and the MVP in the same season are Don Newcombe of the Brooklyn Dodgers in 1956, Sandy Koufax of the Los Angeles Dodgers in 1963, Bob Gibson of the St. Louis Cardinals in 1968, Denny McLain of the Detroit Tigers, also in 1968, and Blue in 1971, all of whom were starters, plus Fingers and Hernandez.

Clemens, a 24-year-old right-hander, finished with a 2.48 earned run average and a league-leading 238 strikeouts. His record-setting 20 strikeouts, without a walk, in a game lastApril first brought him national attention and set the tone for the Red Sox. He won his first 14 games to help the Red Sox take the AL East lead they never relinquished and hurled three perfect innings in the All-Star game.

The Red Sox lost the World Series to the New York Mets in the seventh and final game. Clemens had no decisions in two starts in the Series.

Redskins hold off Frisco in Monday night marathon

WASHINGTON (AP) — Maybe it was just as well that most of the nation was probably asleep by the time the Washington Redskins finished beating the San Francisco 49ers 14-6.

Washington Redskins' defensive end Dexter Manley (72) offers a hand after sacking San Francisco 49ers quarterback (16) during the third quarter at RFK Stadium Monday night in Washington. The Redskins beat the 49ers 14-6.

This game wasn't made for prime time.

It was the longest game in Monday night history — 3 hours and 53 minutes, finally ending at 12:57 EST — and contained numerous other dubious milestones, so much so that the scoring was almost incidental.

For the record, George Rogers ran one yard for one Washington touchdown in the first quarter and Jay Schroeder passed 27 yards to Gary Clark for the other on the Redskins' first possession of the second half as Washington got back into a first-place tie in the NFC East with the New York Giants, each at 9-2.

San Francisco, which dropped to 6-4-1 and lost a chance to move into the NFC West lead, got its points on 34- and 38-yard field goals by Ray Wersching.

In between was futility. "Somehow, some way, we have a way of winning," was the way Washington Coach Joe Gibbs summed it up.

San Francisco's Joe Montana, who last week made a dazzling comeback from back surgery, completed 33 of 60 passes for 441 yards, team records in both attempts and yardage.

But he was intercepted three times; overthrew a wide-open Jerry Rice in the end zone; had another sure TD pass dropped by Joe Cribbs, and had the dubious distinction of becoming the first

Miami-Penn St. matchup looms closer and closer

By The Associated Press

Thanks in large part to Minnesota, top-ranked Miami and No. 2 Penn State are within one game of a matchup for the championship of college football.

The 21st such meeting since The Associated Press began the football poll in 1936 came into sharper focus last Saturday when Minnesota, a four-time loser this season, shocked second-ranked and previously unbeaten Michigan 20-17.

That cleared the way for third-ranked Penn State, 10-0 after a 24-19 defeat of Notre Dame, to slip into second place behind Miami. The Hurricanes, also 10-0, retained the top spot for the eighth consecutive week after dispatching Tulsa 23-10.

Michigan, meanwhile, plunged to sixth and out of the national championship race.

If Miami and Penn State can each win one more game — Penn State plays Pittsburgh on Saturday, Miami opposes East Carolina on Thanksgiving night — the national championship game would be played in the Fiesta Bowl on the night of Jan. 2.

Miami attracted 56 first-place votes and was second on the other four to easily outdistance Penn State in this week's rankings. The Hurricanes earned 1,196 out of a possible 1,200 points to 1,119 for Penn State, which got three first-place nods.

Oklahoma, a 28-0 winner over Colorado, moved up one spot to third with 1,083 points while Arizona State, which got the other first-place vote, claimed fourth with 1,025 points. ASU, the only other major undefeated team, improved to 9-0-1 by routing Wichita State 52-6.

Nebraska, which plays Oklahoma on Saturday for the Big Eight championship and an Orange Bowl berth, climbed into fifth after crushing Kansas 70-0. The Cornhuskers moved up one spot after collecting 964 points.

Michigan was next with 856 points, followed by Ohio State, which opposes the Wolverines on Saturday in a game that will decide Arizona State's opponent in the Rose Bowl. Ohio State, which has won nine in a row after losing its first two games, beat Wisconsin 30-17.

Auburn, last week's No. 8 team, lost to Georgia 20-16 and fell to 15th place. That paved the way for LSU to jump from 12th to eighth. The Tigers collected 730 points after trouncing Mississippi State 47-0.

Alabama, 11th last week, rejoined the Top Ten in the ninth position after beating Temple 24-14. The Top Ten was rounded out by Southern California, which beat California 28-3.

The Second Ten includes Arkansas, Washington, Texas A&M, Arizona, Auburn, Stanford, Baylor, UCLA, Clemson and Georgia.

Last week, it was Alabama, LSU, Southern Cal, Arizona, Clemson, Stanford, Arkansas, Baylor, UCLA and Mississippi.

Washington dropped from No. 10 last week after a 17-17 tie with UCLA, and Texas A&M plunged from No. 7 after a 14-10 loss to Arkansas.

Mississippi, which made the Top Twenty last week for the first time in 10 years, promptly dropped out by losing to Tennessee 22-10. The Rebels were replaced by Georgia, which appeared in the rankings four times earlier in the season.

Banks, Weaver making up for lost time

By STEVE BELVIN
Sports Editor

Cedric Banks and James Weaver are two Big Spring Steers that missed their calling last season. Both were scheduled to see varsity football action last season, but bad luck saw that both would have to wait until their senior year to get their chance. They are making up for lost time.

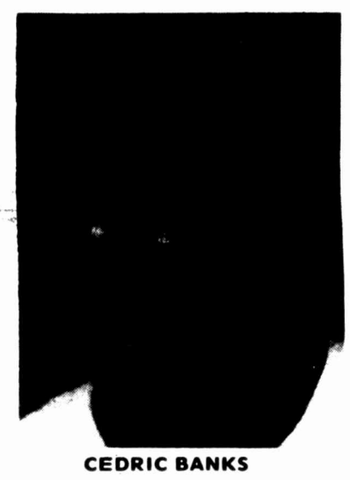
Banks, a 165-pound flanker, and Weaver, a 183-pound linebacker, have turned into two of the Steers' most consistent performers. Now, as Big Spring heads into the first round of postseason play, the two will have to pick up the load left by injured players.

Both Banks and Weaver were varsity players as juniors. Banks missed his calling in the spring of his sophomore season. He failed some courses and couldn't practice. Thus he fell behind the others and spent the fall on the junior varsity.

Weaver's misfortune happened in the spring. He broke his wrist and underwent surgery. He ended up missing the whole season.

"I thought I was going to get to play about halfway through the season," said Big Spring's weak side linebacker. "They put a fiberglass cast on it but the doctor told me it was better to stay out and wait until next year. I was real sad. I felt like crying, but I worked out in fall and summer and tried to make the best of it."

The doctor's decision and Weaver's hard work are paying off now. By the time this season rolled around, he had gained 15 pounds and increased his bench press to 290 pounds. He is currently the team's third leading tackler with 60 tackles. He also has one interception and has broken up numerous passes.



CEDRIC BANKS

JAMES WEAVER

He is quick to point out that he has a great supporting cast. "Coach Dorsett (Jack) is a great linebacker coach plus our linemen do a great job of protecting us from the offensive linemen."

Last season, while Weaver was sitting on the sidelines rooting for his teammates, Banks was making the most of his time on the junior varsity.

All season long he and quarterback Andy Dominguez hooked up for the "long ball". Banks ended the season with 12 TD receptions for a 30-yard average.

Although the passes have been fewer this season, Banks, who runs a 4.6 40-yard dash, still carries his big play potential. This season he is tied for the team lead in receptions with split end Shawn Shellman.

Banks' 23.8 average per catch leads the team. He has caught two TD passes and has thrown a 59 yarder to Shellman.

Banks is adjusting to not having the ball thrown his way. "At first I really missed getting the passes thrown my way, but now it's no big deal. We've got a really good running attack."

One reason the Steers' running game is so successful is because of the downfield blocking ability of Banks and the rest of the receivers.

"I owe the blocking to coach Velasquez (John, receiver coach). If we don't block we'll hear about it from him on the sidelines. He makes us do it right in practice, and we do it right in the game.

"Plus I know this is my last year and if there are scouts out there I want them to see I can play all parts of the game. I want the chance to play somewhere next year."

Against Andrews, the Steers lost both starting defensive ends, Victor Pruitt and Deeg Young, to knee injuries. Weaver is not pushing the panic button.

"Victor and Deeg are both two very good players, but we can't worry about them now. I wish we had them but I've got faith in the players taking their places." The Steers will have backup linebacker Robert Sumner and ends Marcos Ramos and Daniel Armstrong filling in.

"We've had injuries all year and we've had people come in and do the job. I think we'll continue to do that."

Contrary to what one might think about receivers, Banks prefers going over the middle for a reception. "One reason is because that's the route Paul (Decker, QB) throws. And the other thing is that most defensive guys don't think you'll come inside because you're scared. I don't worry about getting hit, I just try to catch the ball."

And he's hoping to catch lots of balls Saturday night against the Hereford defense. "I think we'll have a good chance throwing the ball. They play a cover three, which is man-to-man. I don't think anyone can stick to Shawn and me one-on-one."

From the defensive point of view, Weaver and his teamamtes will have to be on their toes against Hereford's balanced I-attack. "They have a good air attack plus a good tailback similar to Thompson (Charles) from Monahans. He doesn't have as much speed, but he's got the moves.

"I think we'll work hard on pass coverage this week. Besides," he said with a smile, "I'm ready to get my second interception."

Pokes' quarterback gets game ball for surviving San Diego beating

DALLAS (AP) — Dallas Cowboys Coach Tom Landry said he gave quarterback Steve Pelluer the game ball for "surviving" and scoring the game-winner after being sacked 12 times by the San Diego Chargers.

Although Pelluer earned a place in Cowboy and league history for suffering a record number of sacks, the Cowboys scored two fourth-quarter touchdowns Sunday that erased an 11-point deficit in a heart-stopping 24-21 win.

"This is the most I've ever been hit, including college ball," Pelluer said.

He was treated in the locker room for a hip injury in the fourth quarter, but he didn't miss a play.

"We were calling plays just to get the ball off," Pelluer said. "I wasn't playing that well, but I knew if we got the opportunity to get back in the game I had to be in the right frame of mind."

The win gave Dallas a 7-4 record and kept the Cowboys in the National Football League playoff chase. A loss would have dropped Dallas three games behind the Eastern Division-leading New York Giants.

"We were born again today," Landry said after the game. "We were almost dead."

"The confidence of your team make a great difference," Landry said. "Our team would have been really down had we lost that game, not that we couldn't have recovered from it."

After Pelluer scored what proved to the game-winner on a 2-yard run, giving the Cowboys a three-point lead with 1:37 remaining, Dallas held San Diego on four downs. The Cowboys got the ball back deep in San Diego territory with 58 seconds left.

On Dallas' first play, Pelluer dropped to one knee, which carved only five seconds off the clock. The Chargers then used their first time out.

On second down, Landry called for a pitchout to running back Tony Dorsett, who fumbled at the Charger 10.

San Diego recovered the fumble with 42 seconds left. That gave Chargers' quarterback Dan Fouts one more chance to do what he does best: move the ball quickly through the air.

Fouts moved the Chargers to the Dallas 37, and the Cowboys had to watch as Rolf Benirschke just missed sending the game into overtime with a 55-yard field goal.

Bernischke then tried his 55-yarder, two yards longer than his career best. The kick was long enough but sailed just wide to the left, missing by not more than a couple of feet.

Flags will start falling in Houston practices

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Oilers have been penalized 86 times season, the second highest total in the NFL, and now they may also be seeing flags thrown in practice.

In a move to make his players more aware of obeying the rules of the game, Coach Jerry Glanville hopes to have former NFL officials at practice this week to call infractions.

The Oilers had 17 points nullified by penalties in Sunday's 21-10 loss to Pittsburgh and Glanville wants some mid-week officiating, a legal move if the Oilers hire retired NFL officials.

"We'll do anything that's legal to win," Glanville said. "An official would make all the calls at our practices and stop and explain to the players why he made the call."

Glanville said he would not favor using college officials.

"I've been at places where they did that but it's two difference games," Glanville said. "The college officials don't know the pro game."

The Oilers are keeping pace with their penalty total last year when they had 88 penalties after 11 games.

"It's not something that's just raised it's ugly head," Glanville said.

Glanville doesn't like mentioning the need to avoid penalties, but he has little choice.

"I hate to even mention it, you don't want to take away any aggressiveness," Glanville said. "You'd rather say 'let's go crunch their noses.'"

Glanville's words went unheeded as the Oilers were flagged 12 times for 109 yards giving them a season total of 86 penalties for 716 yards.

Three of the penalties cost the Oilers 17 points, leaving them with more points taken away than they scored.

"When you are second in the league in penalties, it's something that you have to bring up," Glanville said. "You have to be aware of what you are trying to correct."

The Steelers jumped to a 21-10 halftime lead before Houston's defense shut them down in the second half.

"I think wr'e all trying to do our jobs and everyone else's too," Glanville said. "We're in a vice and every week someone different takes a few turns on the handle."

In addition to their penalties, the Oilers hurt their cause in the fourth quarter when they drove to Pittsburgh's 1-yard line and failed to score in four straight running plays.

On the fourth down play, rookie Ray Wallace was supposed to run to his right for the end zone flag. Instead he cut inside and was tackled.

Glanville said running back Mike Rozier, tight end Jaime Williams and tackle Bruce Matthews all had blocked their man to the ground.

"In defense of the offensive line, they blocked that play perfectly," Glanville said. "Yet people were saying after the game we couldn't even block good enough to get one yard."

The Oilers, 2-9, host winless Indianapolis Sunday.

File photo

This Herald file photo shows the Houston Oilers going through a practice in San Angelo during two-a-day workouts. The Oilers, who are coming off a loss to Pittsburgh in which they had 17 points called back because of penalties. Now the Oilers will practice with penalities being called, in hopes of cutting down on penalities in the game.

Healthy Knicks don't sport a healthy record

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Knicks are finding that a more healthy team does not necessarily mean a healthy record or a quiet atmosphere.

Only Bernard King, whose seriously damaged right knee could keep him out of uniform another season, is still on the injury list that last year also included Patrick Ewing, Pat Cummings, Rory Sparrow and Bill Cartwright.

Despite two victories in three games, the Knicks still are only 3-7 for the season, with more questions than answers.

This season's problems surfaced on Nov. 4 in Denver when Nuggets guard Darrell Walker, who had feuded with Knicks Coach Hubie Brown for years before being traded by New York just before the season started, sounded off to the media, saying Brown should be fired.

Walker also said that Ewing, who was playing poorly, disliked Brown and no longer wanted to play for him. Walker's statements provoked a flurry of speculation in the New York media, exacerbated by the Knicks' 0-4 start.

"No one would have noticed if we hadn't been losing," Brown said. "Ewing was totally embarrassed by Darrell Walker's statement. We met for 20 minutes and he did a lot of talking about how things were going. It was unfair that he felt he had to defend himself."

All the players told Brown they disagreed with Walker, and an air-clearing meeting between Brown and Ewing, who has yet to score more than 16 points in 10 games after averaging 20 in his rookie season, brightened the Knicks' outlook.

Much of the speculation surrounding the team dealt with Ewing, who is playing even though he's not completely recovered from a knee injury that cut short his spectacular first season. He also is having trouble dealing with a change from center to power forward.

"I'm hanging in there," Ewing said. "It's a new position and I have to get adjusted. It's the same on offense, but on defense I have to guard quicker, smaller people, and it's difficult. I'm a natural center, but there's no sense worrying about it because it looks like I'm a forward as long as Bill is here."

Brown plays down the significance of the change, saying "the two positions are interchangeable. The important thing is that he (Ewing) has to perform injury-free. He is starting to move more freely and it makes all the difference to the team. And when Patrick plays well, it also helps Bill Cartwright's freedom to move."

"I haven't scored much, but last year I was getting 20 shots a game," Ewing said. "Now I'm getting six or seven, but the last few games I've gotten more involved in the offense. That was one of the things I asked Hubie about in the meeting."

Ewing is averaging only 11.6 points in his first 10 games, but Brown is even more concerned by his lack of rebounding and shot-blocking from the 7-foot strongman. He has 72 rebounds and 16 blocked shots in 10 games.

Brown said a player can't be considered a fixture at center "until he averages 10-plus rebounds and gets three or four blocks a game. This is the NBA, not the Big East. Ewing has not been doing the job."

Since he wanted to start both Cartwright and Ewing, Brown chose the younger, quicker player to take the forward position.

"We just want to play our two best athletes at those two positions," Brown said. "If we're ever going to advance past the second round of the playoffs, we have to match up well at those two positions."

Brown's reason for the switch is to give the Knicks a chance to compete successfully against teams like Houston, Boston and Atlanta, all with big front lines.

With a 3-7 record, making the playoffs at all would seem to be the first consideration, but Brown has reason to be optimistic after victories over Phoenix and Washington at home and a three-point loss at Milwaukee last week.

"We're playing well in crunch time and that tells me something," Brown said.

Cartwright, who missed all but two games the last two seasons because of a stress fracture in the left foot, has been a bright spot at center. He has averaged 18 points and eight rebounds while scoring 20 or more points six times. Cartwright, criticized in the past for a lack of aggressiveness, is being widely praised, in marked contrast to Ewing.

"All of a sudden I'm this changed, more physical player," Cartwright said. "I'm just doing the same things I was doing. Maybe now I'm more appreciated."

Brown is far from satisfied with the play of his two 7-footers, however.

"They are nowhere near where I think they should be," Brown said. "With our big men, we want intimidating, shot-blocking and rebounding. Offense is third. Until they do the other things, we won't be satisfied."

quarterback ever to throw for more than 400 yards without his team scoring a touchdown. Five times the 49ers were inside the Redskins 20 but all they came out with were the two field goals.

"I didn't feel rusty, but I got tired at the end," Montana said.

"We just seemed a bit out of synch," said Dwight Clark, Montana's his favorite target until Rice came along.

The 49ers, who outgained the Redskins 501-266, were penalized 15 times for 118 yards, a team record, and continually had drives stalled by yellow flags. Rice, for example, caught 12 passes for 204 yards, but lost 67 more yards in receptions by penalty, including one that nullified a 19-yard gain to the Washington four.

"It's awfully tough to keep walking back to the huddle and having big gains erased," Rice said.

Coach Bill Walsh added that "some of those calls were mind-boggling; a couple were very questionable."

But the 49ers also had trouble containing the Washington pass rush.

While the Redskins sacked Montana only three times, five of the penalties were holding calls on offensive linemen and Montana was constantly hurried, particularly by Dexter Manley, who had said of Montana before the game: "I'll ring his clock."

The 49ers quarterback was running away from Manley when he overthrew Rice from 15 yards away in the third quarter and again on an interception by Calvin Daniels that killed a fourth-quarter drive at the Washington 15..

"Our opponent was better tonight," said Walsh, whose team would have leapfrogged over the 7-4 Los Angeles Rams with a win "They were just a step better on most of the plays."

But Washington's offensive numbers were minimal. Rogers carried 24 times for 104 yards, his fifth 100-yard game this year, and Schroeder was 17 of 40 for 170 yards, making it an even 100 passes thrown in the game.

And even some of the Redskins conceded the fates just seemed to be on their side.

Your Daily HOROSCOPE from the CARROLL RIGHTER INSTITUTE

FORECAST FOR WEDNESDAY, NOV. 19, 1986

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A warm and glowing feeling of romance and well-being with those whom you have any personal relationships with is likely. It's a good time for entertaining.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) It's important you pay more attention to your home. Get the furniture in better order and add some art.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Be more thoughtful of others' well-being when handling your correspondence, but not at your own expense.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Go over your accounts well before you complain to others about them. Build up your bank account.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) Your ideas to gain your cherished desires may be wrong at first, but later you use the right ones.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) You don't understand how to get rid of a worry, but it will work out. Show more thought and kindness.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Clarify your wishes in mentality. Try not to criticize your friends and accept them as they are.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) A home affair has to be handled before you go out to responsibilities in the business world.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Concentrate on new interests that can bring you greater progress in the days ahead.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Analyze a situation carefully where your mate is concerned. You can be romantically happier.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) The situation concerning a partner could upset you. Study a public affair well.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Take care you do not leave important duties undone, or you could lose out where it counts most.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) You may find it hard to enjoy yourself until evening comes, so get busy at the practical during the daytime.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will be capable of charming others and be highly attuned to whatever is modern. Teach this one not to wallow in self pity when something seems to be going wrong. This could be a blessing in disguise and testing the moral fiber here. Sports are a must.

Group to support Israel

SAN ANGELO — A Baptist minister and about 30 Christians have formed a caucus aimed at garnering political support for Israel.

The group of Christians teamed with the American Israel Public Affairs Committee, a poltical lobbying group, to try to ensure that Israel remains a Middle East power.

The caucus, formed in September, is believed to be one of the first such groups in the nation with a Christian chairman and a primarily Christian membership.

Members say their spiritual interest in Israel leads naturally to practical, political support of the country.

Dr. James Miller, pastor of Park Heights Baptist Church and the caucus' chairman, said his involvement is spiritual, not political. He said he perceives a link between Judeo-Christian interests and enabling Jews to build a strong Israel.

"It's just good politics to support a democratic government," said caucus member Kay McDonald. "Israel is the only democratic and stable government in the Middle East. It is our only reliable ally. It keeps us from having to keep a strong military presence in the area, which would cost us more than financial aid."

Fraternities to be studied

AUSTIN — A 23-member commission, including students, faculty, staff and alumni, has been appointed to conduct a comprehensive study of fraternal organizations at the University of Texas at Austin.

The commission was announced Monday by UT-Austin President William Cunningham, who selected the members.

"While it is clear that many fraternal organizations have had a positive impact on the university community, it is also evident that the role, nature and activities of these student groups suggest periodic review and discussion," Cunningham said.

A Travis County grand jury is reviewing the case of a UT fraternity pledge who died of an alcohol overdose after a fraternity-related activity.

Cunningham said the commission will specifically review hazing and alcohol abuse.

Law prevents sex charge

VERNON — A woman who said her husband forced her to have sex with another man cannot file charges against him because of a Texas law that prohibits a husband being charged in the sexual assault of his wife, authorities said.

Foard County District Attorney Gene Heatly said statements from the woman and the man with whom she was forced to have sex indicated that she did not protest during the act. Because of that and another Texas law, Heatly said, charges can be brought against neither the man who was initially arrested nor the woman's husband.

"I would have rather filed charges on the husband and lost in court than not to have done anything," said Foard County Sheriff Loy Hopkins.

The incident allegedly occurred March 3 in Crowell, a town of about 1,500 residents 30 miles southwest of here

Hopkins said he arrested the husband four days later, and bail was set at $100,000. But he said that by law he couldn't hold the man without filing charges.

Taft to take the heat

CINCINNATI — Taft Broadcasting Co. says it will absorb an estimated $50 million loss from its sale of five independent television stations, including one in Texas, to Virginia-based TVX Broadcast Group Inc.

Cincinnati-based Taft announced Monday that it will sell the stations for $240 million.

The stations, which have no network affiliation, are WTAF, Philadelphia; WDCA, Washington, D.C.; WCIX, Miami; KTXA, Fort Worth-Dallas; and KTXH, Houston.

Taft is selling the stations to concentrate on its operation of network-affiliated television stations, said Charles S. Mechem Jr., Taft's chairman and chief executive officer.

Taft said its preliminary estimate is that the deal will result in a charge to earnings of $45 million to $50 million, or $4.80 to $5.40 per share. However, Taft said the sale will improve future earnings by reducing interest expense and other charges related to the stations.

Lawyers claim land rights

DENER — A group of young Hispanic lawyers is seeking a $1 billion settlement from the Mexican government for land their forefathers lost in Texas following the Mexican War of 1848.

"If we are successful, we will be paid well. But the biggest reward will be in seeing this resolved,".

Robert J. Salazar, 35, lead counsel for the Asociacion de Reclamantes, in an interview with the Rocky Mountain News, said the roots of the dispute goes deep into the fertile, oil-rich land of southern Texas where Mexican families settled in the 1700s and 1800s.

The familes held the tracts until the land rush following the Mexican War in 1848.

"We're not trying to get the land back, nor are we asking for royalties to be paid them as former owners of the mineral rights. We're asking for a settlement for these families who lost 12 million acres of the best land in Texas because Anglo-American families wanted that land and took it," Salazar said.

Express closer to merger

NEWARK, N.J. — People Express Inc. has cleared another hurdle en route from independence to merger with Texas Air Corp., while shedding its "no frills" image to become a full-service airline.

A key condition of the merger was met Monday with word that the holders of 88.3 percent of People Express' public debt securities had agreed to cuts in the interest payments they receive.

Also Monday, People Express began offering free beverages, snacks and baggage check-in service for the first time in its five-year history. This follows the introduction earlier this year of seat selection and a frequent-flier program.

People Express said it would not abandon its tradition of low fares.

Proposal not meant to stifle

SAN ANTONIO — A GOP resolution asking the state to adopt English as the official language has sparked protest from some Hispanics, but the state Republican Party chairman says the proposal is not intended to stifle "ethnic cultures."

The resolution was adopted Saturday by the State Republican Executive Committee. The vote had been postponed since August.

Ruben Bonilla Jr., chairman of the Mexican American Democrats of Texas, said Monday that public proceedings and documents already are undertaken in English and that the resolution tends to split Hispanics.

"The Republican Party position reflects an ideological rigidity that will splinter and polarize our state along ethnic, racial and regional lines," Bonilla said.

The resolution calls for amendments to the Texas and U.S. constitutions to make English the official language.

If designated the official language, the requirements for bilingual ballots and other official documents could change.

State GOP Chairman George Strake said, however, the resolution is intended to unite the country, not divide it.

"This has nothing to do with cutting our ethnic cultures," Strake said. "It's an easy thing for opponents to demogague on and I expect that."

Texas Education Commissioner Bill Kirby said a law already is on the agency books designating English as the official curriculum language.

He said bilingual education could be affected and that could mean trouble.

"The whole purpose of bilingual education is to use it in teaching to expedite the learning of children who are in the process of learning English," Kirby said. "I can't say say there would be any change.

"It's only if they would try to make some sort of a jump and say you can't use any other language. If that's the case, that would be a step backward 30 years," Kirby said.

He said many Mexican-American students in the 1950s suffered because they were not allowed to speak Spanish on school grounds.

Strake said the resolution had nothing to do with bilingual education, just official documents.

"We are on nation, regardless of our ethnic background. We've done pretty well with one language so far," he said.

Six states have votes to make English the official language.

But Dr. Richard Lloyd-Jones, president of the National Council of Teachers of English, said that a dominant language in a particular region would outweigh laws.

"It doesn't have anything to do if you pass a law or a resolution," said Lloyd-Jones, a professor of English at the University of Iowa.

BUSINESS & INDUSTRY REVIEW

Reinert handles overhead doors

Reinert Welding and Steel Construction is expanding its steel fabrication business to include overhead doors sales and service.

"We install commercial and residential overhead doors and electric operators," says owner Ralph Reinert. The doors come in two styles: the rolling and the folding sectional. The folding sectional is available in a wood, fiberglass or steel-type door. Rolling doors are constructed of steel.

"We have the type of door that fits all needs, whether it be from the single car garage door to the multi-door warehouse type," he said. Reinert also handles several classes of commercial or residential electric operators that are designed for specific use.

Reinert repairs and services all brands or types of overhead doors. Whether it be torsion springs, guide rollers, lift cables or damaged door sections, the firm can handle it for the customer.

Reinert Welding has been in the steel erection business since 1978. In 1985, Reinert expanded his business to include overhead doors and steel fabrication. The firm's steel fabrication centers around the fabrication of metal buildings and component structural steel for commercial buildings, to include reinforcing steel, columns, beams, bar joists, roof decking and miscellaneous steel items.

Reinert has 25 years of skilled experience in the construction business. The fim designs and builds the products to fit the job requirements. Cost estimates are available upon request.

For your steel construction needs, call Reinert Welding and Steel Construction anytime at 267-1550.
