Bishops, leaders debate church's basic doctrines

LONDON (AP) — Spurred by a bishop's doubts over Jesus Christ's resurrection and virgin birth, leaders of the Church of England today debated some of their most basic beliefs. But they were urged by the church's spiritual head not to lose sight of their mission.

"The church has a gospel to proclaim, a faith to affirm...It is not a debating society," said Archbishop of Canterbury Robert Runcie, leader of 65 million Anglicans worldwide, including 3 million Episcopalians in the United States.

Church House in Westminster was packed for the debate by the General Synod, a 560-member leadership council of bishops, clergy and laity.

Listening intently was the Bishop of Durham, the Rt. Rev. David Jenkins, who sparked controversy last year by questioning the virgin birth, comparing the biblical account of the resurrection to a "conjuring trick with bones" and declaring that Christians are not obliged to believe that Jesus was divine.

Church officials stressed that the 60-year-old cleric was not on trial. No vote was to be taken afterward.

But his remarks were central to the main question under discussion — the role of bishops as guardians of church doctrine. Traditionalists had sought the debate to counter Jenkins' opinions.

Runcie said he welcomed the debate. He assured his flock: "The doctrines of the incarnation and the resurrection are not in doubt among your bishops."

He added, "Uncertainty about matters of belief and insecurity about authority (of bishops) are nerves never far from the surface in a church which takes pride in its breadth."

The attack on Jenkins' opinions was launched by Bishop John Taylor of Winchester, who said he was worried that questioning basic tenets would divide the church.

"In the past decade, in all walks of life, I have watched the broad middle ground being eliminated," he declared.

"The extremists occupy the field. Compromise is a term of abuse and confrontation is the order of the day. Anyone with clear eyes can see that it is a recipe for self-destruction, both to the nation and the church," he said.

He added, "People everywhere look to their religion for a sense of certainty, order and meaning...It helps nobody in the long run if we lose the balance."

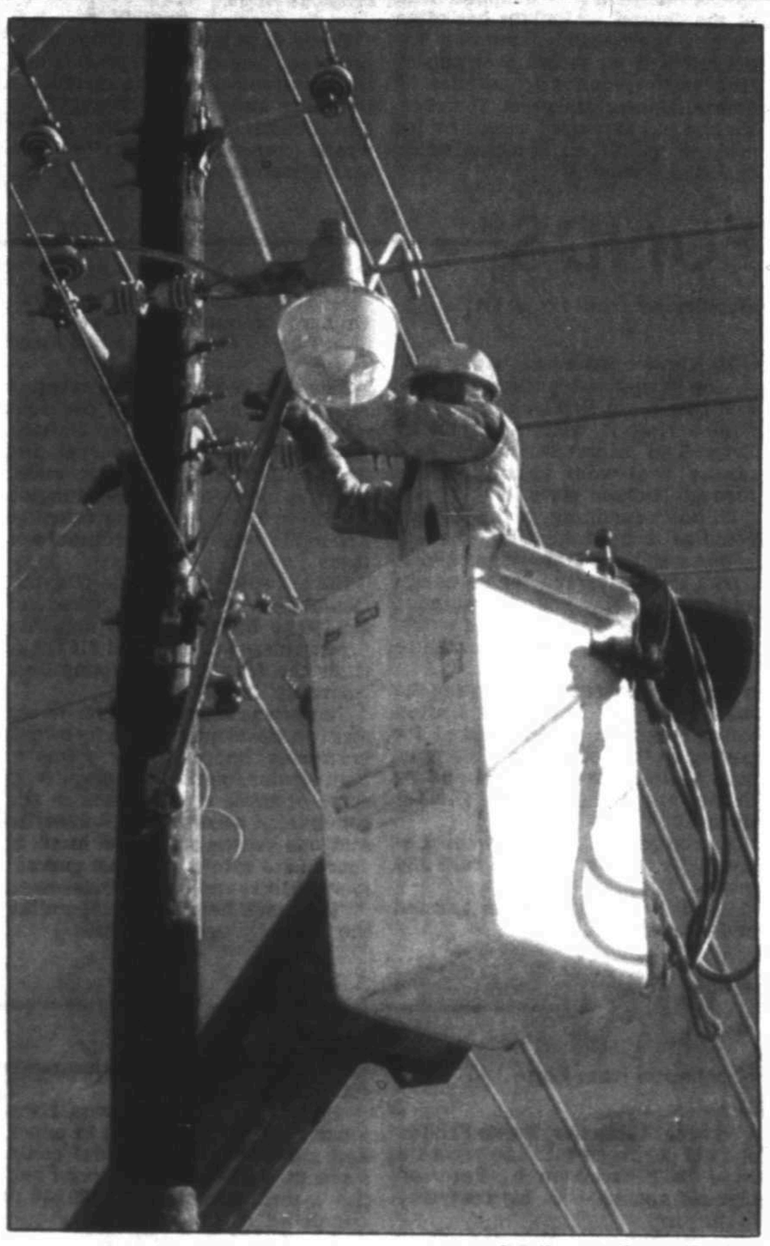

Archdeacon Michael Perry of Durham defended his bishop, saying news accounts had distorted Jenkins' remarks. He said the bishop's faith was firm.

"Hands off the Bishop of Durham," Perry demanded.

But Phillip Lovegrove, a businessman, complained that Jenkins had "damaged the members of the Church of England in the pews and damaged the faith."

He urged the Crown Appointments Commission, which recommends bishop candidates, not to name "bishops who when they say the (Nicene) Creed...give the impression that they have their fingers crossed behind their backs." The Nicene Creed is a confession of faith for many Christians.

Hotel blaze in Manila kills three Americans

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — About 1,000 firefighters today battled a raging fire that raced through a luxury bayside hotel, killing at least 24 people, including a cook who leaped from the seventh floor, a U.S. Internal Revenue Service agent and two other Americans, authorities said.

After more than 20 hours, firefighters were still trying to bring the blaze under control.

Officials said the death toll could double. They feared many of the hotel's estimated 370 guests and an undetermined number of employees were trapped in the darkened, smoke-filled rooms and hallways of the 11-story Regent of Manila hotel in suburban Pasay.

Rodolfo Villavicencio, metropolitan Manila fire superintendent, said the cause of the blaze was not yet known. But he said, "To me, it looks suspicious because the lateral spread was quick and the alarm was delayed."

It was the sixth hotel fire in the Philippines in four months. Police blamed three of the previous fires, which killed a total of 40 people, on arsonists, possibly Communist guerrillas.

Many of the dead were foreigners, including at least three Americans. Embassies said others among the dead were three Britons, one Canadian and possibly one Australian.

U.S. Embassy spokesman Mike Anderson said that of the 56 Americans registered in the hotel, 45 were safe, but 11 others were unaccounted for.

"They either have moved to other hotels or have died," Anderson said. Like the other embassies, he declined to give names pending verification and notification of relatives.

"There are Americans who died in the fire," said Al Croghan, an information officer at the embassy. He would only say there were several fatalities.

Policeman Enrico Palomar said one of the victims carried a Filipino drivers' license with the name Lewis Carrol Rowney, 62, with an address at the U.S. Subic Navy Base. But Chief Petty Officer Jack Leigh said officials at the base couldn't find the name in their records.

A group of guests who work for the IRS said one of their party had been killed and identified him as Edward Carroll, an agent based in Tokyo.

Defense tries to discredit government witness in arson trial

By LAWRENCE BUDD
Staff Writer

The defense began its attempts to discredit the testimony of the government's first key witness as the trial resumed this morning in the O'Michael Building arson trial.

Odessa attorney Warren Burnett spent about two hours questioning John Thomas Peterson about differences in various statements he has given and his testimony earlier this week in Judge Lucius Bunton's federal court in Midland.

Peterson, 45, insisted he had not lied in other statements and that his testiony was true. "I know things I've said happened," he said.

Problems with Peterson volunteering information continued. "Mr. Peterson, the court is attempting to be patient," said Bunton, ordering the witness to only answer the questions asked by the attorneys. "If you don't, I need to do something to correct it."

One day into the trial, Bunton adjourned proceedings early Tuesday when it was discovered 30 pages of grand jury testimony had not been provided to the defense.

Bunton had adjourned morning proceedings early due to the discovery that federal prosecutors had not provided attorneys for Ector County Commissioner Willie Hammond Jr. and former Odessa City Councilman Keith Weddel with all the documents the judge had ordered.

When the trial resumed in the afternoon, defense attorneys called for 30 pages of the grand jury testimony of Peterson, the witness who on Monday linked Hammond and Weddel with the Nov. 25, 1981 fire at the downtown office building.

The trial was adjourned until this morning to give defense attorneys time to read the grand jury testimony of Peterson, one of the federal government's key witnesses.

Before the trial began, Bunton had ordered federal prosecutors to give the defense documents that could help clear Hammond and Weddel of the charges or aid in their attempts to discredit the testimony of government witnesses.

In pre-trial hearings last week, Bunton ordered copies of all written statements or grand jury testimony of "alleged co-conspirators" also be provided to the defense.

During the Tuesday morning session, FBI agent Billy Kirkwood and Assistant U.S. Attorney Ellen Byers admitted that some documents had not been provided, but agreed to provide them before the afternoon session.

But the missing grand jury testimony was discovered after that recess and Bunton decided to adjourn for the day.

House to vote on water package

AUSTIN (AP) — The state House planned a final vote today on a water package that one member fears could send East Texas water to West Texas.

Rep. Smith Gilley, D-Greenville, said Tuesday the "ulterior motive" of backers of the $800 million water plan is to build East Texas lakes to catch water to ship west.

It was just the kind of talk that Speaker Gib Lewis didn't want to hear. Statewide water plans proposed in past years have died at the ballot box, victimized in part by East Texans' fears that they'd lose their water.

"We hope those rumors don't get started," Lewis said. "We made every precaution in the bill where it would not send out any alarm..."

The House on Tuesday gave 134-11 approval to a proposed constitutional amendment allowing the state to sell $800 million in bonds to pay the water program. It includes $200 million for flood control projects, $200 million for water quality projects, $200 million for reservoirs and $200 million for other use.

If approved by the Senate, the amendment will be on the November general election ballot.

Tentative approval was given by the House Tuesday for legislation that would implement the plan.

The votes came quickly and with relatively little debate.

Gilley asked bill sponsors whether the package includes water transfers. Rep. Chip Staniswalis, R-Amarillo, said it did not, but Gilley was not convinced.

"We know in our part of the state of Texas that one of the ulterior motives is to move water, not just to catch water for the heck of it, but to move water from one area of the state to another," Gilley told a reporter.

Lewis said the package he put together with Gov. Mark White and Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby does not include water transfers.

"That's always been one of the problems we had in the past, the misperception people had that we are going to transport water from one part of the state to the next," said Lewis. "That is nowhere in this bill, that is not the intent of this bill by any means."

Youths arrested in shooting

From Staff and Wire Reports

Two Pomona, Calif. youths, ages 17 and 14, were arrested Monday afternoon in connection with the Sunday night shooting death of a Midland oil man attending a company business seminar in Claremont, Calif.

A third 17-year-old is suspected of being involved although he has not been arrested, according to Lt. Ted Whitall of the Claremont Police Department.

The rifle used in the slaying of Robert Vance Lockart, 51, 3213 Sinclair St., was found at the third suspect's home in Pomona, on the northern outskirts of Claremont, Whitall said.

The two boys were arrested after a routine investigation into another incident in which five youths were throwing rocks at a vacant house on South Mountain Avenue, a few blocks from the motel where Lockart was killed, Whitall said.

Lockhart was found by his wife, Ann, outside the Howard Johnson's Motor Lodge on south Indian Hill Boulevard dead from a gunshot wound to the chest at about 10 p.m. Sunday. Mrs. Lockhart became concerned when her husband didn't return to their room after going to retrieve articles from his car, according to reports.

Lockhart, an employee of Union Oil Co., apparently was killed in an apparent robbery attempt in which he resisted, police said. Nothing was taken in the incident.

The two youths were transported to Los Padrinos Juvenile Hall in Downey. Whitall said they will be tried "within the next two days" in juvenile court unless the Los Angeles County District Attorney's Office in Pomona decides to try the 17-year-old as an adult.

"He's the one that did the shooting," Whitall said.

MISD has to tap reserves because Ticor's taxes late

By SUSAN LINDSAY
Business-Oil Writer

Although the Midland Independent School District will tap reserve funds because of Ticor Realty Tax Service's failure to pay county taxes by the Dec. 31, 1984, deadline, the other three government entities involved will not be as greatly affected.

Midland College, Midland Memorial Hospital and city government officials say they are inconvenienced by the delay of payments but can operate normally.

Ron Bill, Ticor vice president and area manager, said the company did not pay the taxes by the deadline because of a malfunction in a new computer system. He said he expects the property taxes to be paid by the end of March.

The Dallas office of the company, headquartered in Los Angeles, still has not submitted $1.6 million in property taxes for its 33 Texas lenders, said Roland Wilkinson, chief appraiser for the county.

Council hears suggestions on how to spend CD funds

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

Suggestions of street paving, parks irrigation systems, a minority procurement program and a feasibility study for a market place in east Midland more than consumed the $174,000 in leftover Community Development Block Grant funds for which the Midland City Council was seeking ways to spend.

During a public hearing Tuesday in City Hall Chambers, the council listened to the requests made by Susan Howell, CD coordinator for the city, Freddie Nelms, Amado Calderon and Roger Robles. These ideas will be compiled and a list of how the money could be dished out to answer the needs will be given to the council for a decision at its Feb. 26 meeting.

WEATHER SUMMARY

Warm temperatures should be continuing for Midland

Warm temperatures should continue Thursday in the Midland area as the cloudy skies forecast for tonight should clear Thursday and temperatures are expected to warm to the mid-50s, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport. Winds tonight will be from the east at five to 15 mph, decreasing from the south Thursday at less than 10 mph.

Tuesday's high of 63 was 23 degrees below the 1962 record. This morning's low was 21 degrees above the record of 13 set in 1963.

STATE

Fair skies, light winds and cool temperatures were again the dominant weather feature across Texas today.

The surface high pressure system responsible for the cool but dry weather over the state the past few days continued a slow eastward drift into the northwest Gulf of Mexico.

Just before dawn, Texas skies were cloud-free with only a few scattered high level clouds streaked over the Panhandle and north Texas.

The combination of high pressure to the east and a weak trough of low pressure in West Texas produced light southerly winds over most of the state. Exceptions were along the Red River and west of the Pecos, where light northeasterly winds prevailed.

Temperatures fell to near 30 degrees over East Texas, the High Plains, and the Trans Pecos region. Elsewhere, readings were mostly in the mid 30s to mid 40s.

At 4 a.m., Brownsville was the warmest spot in the state with a reading of 47 degrees. At the other end of the scale was Lufkin with 29.

The National Weather Service said highs today would climb into the 50s and 60s for most of the state.

NATION

A storm that dumped more than a foot and a half of snow onto parts of the Appalachians was packing gale-force winds as it moved east today, pushing rain ahead of it.

Snow early today extended from the upper Great Lakes through the southern and central Appalachians and the upper Ohio Valley. Rain spread from New York across New England.

By early today nearly an inch of rain had fallen in New Hampshire; both New Jersey and New York received an inch Tuesday.

Storm warnings for snow and wind were in effect for much of Ohio, West Virginia and western Virginia.

Travelers' advisories were issued in the Great Lakes region, the Ohio and Tennessee valleys and for the central Atlantic coastal states.

Heavy snowfall from the storm included as much as 10 inches at Charleston, W.Va., 14 inches in the west central highlands of West Virginia, and 20 inches along the Kentucky-West Virginia border.

Wind gusts to nearly 50 mph caused widespred drifting, piling up 5 foot drifts in Ohio and Kentucky. In northwest lower Michigan, gusty winds combined with 18 inches of snow to produce 10 foot drifts.

Gale-force winds whipped parts of the East Coast, Lake Michigan and Lake Superior.

Today's forecast called for rain over northern New England changing to snow over the remainder of New England with snow extending through Virginia into North Carolina, across the Great Lakes and the Ohio Valley.

Rain was forecast for the Washington Coast.

Highs were predicted to be in the teens over northern Minnesota; in the 30s across northern Maine; in the low 50s along the Washington and Oregon coasts; in the low 60s over southern Florida; near 70 across southern Texas; and in the 70s to near 80 through southern California and the desert southwest.

Temperatures around the nation at 2 a.m. EST ranged from 8 degrees below zero at Hibbing, Mont., to 63 at Key West, Fla.

Suspect robs Odessa service station

ODESSA — A Diamond Shamrock service station at 803 S. Crane was robbed of about $100 Tuesday night by a man with a knife who escaped on foot, according to police.

The suspect was described as a Hispanic male in his late 20s, about 5 feet 4 inches tall with black hair and a mustache, wearing a dark-colored jacket and armed with a knife, police said.

He entered the station at about 7:50 p.m. and demanded that Shamrock employee Hortencia Cortez give him the money from the cash register. She was unhurt, according to police.

Odessa police released the name of the third suspect arrested in connection with Saturday night's attempted robbery of a man making a night deposit at an M-Bank at the corner of 42nd Street and Grandview Avenue. Arraigned Tuesday on a charge of aggravated robbery was Kevin Dean Berry, 19, of Alpine, whose bond was set at $15,000. A fourth suspect is still at large, police said. Arraigned Monday on the same charge were Ricky Dale Kennedy, 23, and Ray Lynn Stull, 21, both of 208 Neal St.

BLAZE

The U.S. Embassy declined to identify any American dead until relatives had been notified.

The fire began about 12:30 a.m. today during a power blackout in the area.

Villavicencio said 16 bodies had been pulled from the building but firemen had located eight other bodies on the fifth and seventh floors of the hotel's east wing facing Manila Bay, the only portion firefighters had been able to penetrate.

He said the death toll could double or rise by "maybe another 50."

Many guests, he said, appeared to have panicked in the darkness and jammed corridors where they may have been overcome by smoke.

Some ran screaming from the hotel.

Maj. Manuel Innocentes of the Pasay Fire Department estimated today's blaze did more than $2.5 million in damage at the Regent.

Firemen, arriving in more than two dozen trucks, pumped water from the hotel swimming pool to help fight the flames. Water also was brought from several miles away.

Fire district superintendent Alfredo Garcia said firemen had difficulty getting into the smoldering building because of the dense smoke and intense heat.

"It's too hot and there's too much smoke," he said in a television interview. "So what's happening is we're fighting the fire only from the outside. We can't get in even with breathing apparatus."

Elevator shafts and air conditioning ducts sucked up the smoke like chimneys and spewed it into hallways and rooms, forcing firemen to retreat again and again in their struggle to recover bodies and search for survivors.

Later, firemen leaned out of windows on the upper stories, lowering bodies as crowds gathered to watch.

"I was screaming. I tried to block the smoke with wet towels and then went running down the hall," said Ann Douglas of Washington, one of 14 IRS officials attending a week-long meeting at the hotel.

"I heard people yelling in the hallway, but after a while there was no more sound," said Arthur Allegar, 45, who lay sprawled on an overhang for two hours after smashing through his window to escape the thick smoke.

The body of one victim hung from a seventh floor window for several hours. Smoke poured out of nearly every window and cast a haze over much of the city.

Firemen said two of those killed were a Filipino cook and waiter. The cook jumped from a room on the seventh floor to a concrete canopy over the main entrance, rescue workers said.

CHURCH

Since his appointment last year by Queen Elizabeth II — temporal head of the church — Jenkins has often been in the headlines, not only for his religious views but over opposition to the economic policies of Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher. He also has expressed sympathy for coal miners in their 11-month strike against pit closures.

At his consecration last June in York Minster, a parish priest seized the lectern and denounced Jenkins' religious views.

Three days later, the 700-year-old minster, one of Europe's finest Gothic structures, was struck by lightning and heavily damaged by fire. Critics claimed it was divine wrath over what they called Jenkins' blasphemy.

Jenkins, a former theology professor, said in a television interview about the virgin birth: "I'm pretty clear (it) is a story told after the event in order to express and symbolize a faith that this Jesus was a unique event from God."

Jenkins also said he believed in Christ's resurrection, but not that Jesus physically rose from the tomb, an account he likened to a "conjuring trick with bones."

The controversial bishop said he didn't think Jesus walked on water, doubted other New Testament miracles, and did not feel Christians were obliged to believe the Savior was divine.

Dismay spread in the state church when a poll found more than half the 42 other diocesan bishops agreed with Jenkins.

FUNDS

Ms. Howell had asked that $100,000 go for paving and putting in curbs and gutters on Hemlock Street and connecting it with Scharbauer Drive. This project would provide a major east-west thoroughfare through Midland, she said.

Of the remaining, about $40,000 could go to finish installing the irrigation systems at Hidalgo and Ulmer parks and resurface tennis courts and provide playground equipment at Washington Park. The rest would be up to the council to allocate, she said.

Amado Calderon, representing the local group of League of United Latin American Citizens, asked for paving on four streets in close proximity to De Zavala Elementary School and Hidalgo Park. The list included:

— Mesquite Street between Lee and Tyler streets. Also add curb and gutter.

— Davis Street between Lamesa and Tyler streets.

— Madison Street between Orchard Lane and Front Street.

— Tyler between South and Front streets.

Freddie Nelms reiterated a request he has made at previous council meetings to pave Indiana Avenue between Clay Street and Fairgrounds Road. He also asked that the intersection at Washington and New York Streets be raised to drain the water that accumulates there.

Robles, speaking for the Hispanic Chamber of Commerce, asked for $35,000 to help initiate a minority procurement program and $15,000 to study the feasibility of setting up a "mercado" in east Midland.

The procurement program would assist in developing minority-owned businesses, improve their access to mainstream markets and reinvest some of those monies back in the community, according to Robles. He said one person would be hired to coordinate efforts with all government entities and private businesses.

"It's a self-help program, unlike the welfare program," he said.

Councilman Gordon Marcum II warned Robles the program shouldn't become dependent on the CD money for funding each year. "We're not sure if the CD programs are going to last much longer," he said in referring to the federal government's proposed elimination or cutbacks of several grants to cities.

"We feel minorities have a service to provide and goods to offer. This is getting everybody together — government and industry — to see who needs goods that can be provided by minorities," Robles said.

In the second request, Robles envisioned a market place in east Midland similar to those in San Antonio and Austin. "It would be a focal point to draw more businesses to the area. It can be a point of development of our area, which has been too long neglected."

He admitted he had just "picked out" the $15,000 figure. "I feel someone ought to be able to do something with that much money."

"I agree with you," Councilman David Godfrey told Robles and other representatives from the Hispanic chamber. "I think there is tremendous potential on the east side for retail. You should contact some consultants and come back to us with some figures for the next budget year. We want some oversight on what their goals will be."

Mayor G. Thane Akins suggested the chamber contact other businesses that already have conducted studies and would be willing to share their figures. The city planning staff, he said, could locate sites where zoning was suitable for a mercado.

He added that the council's philosophy in the past has been to allocate CD funds where the effects are immediately visible, such as paving streets or putting in playground equipment in the parks. "Your two requests are a departure from that, although they could lead to that. We want some confidence it's leading to something tangible in those neighborhoods."

East Midland, Akins continued, "is the most likely area of development in the future of Midland. Our Master Plan is showing that."

TRIAL

Weddel's attorney, Travis Shelton of Lubbock, read into the record a June 1982 statement by Peterson that refuted some of his testimony to the jury.

In the statement, Peterson denied having any involvement in the burning of the building and absolved Weddel and former Odessa Mayor Bob Bryant of blame in the case.

Bryant has not been indicted in the case, but has suggested political motives were behind the grand jury resuming their deliberations in the case shortly before the April 1984 election in which he was defeated by John Minor.

In September, Hammond and Weddel were indicted for conspiracy to burn down the building and malicious destruction of a building used in interstate commerce. Hammond was also charged with lying twice in depositions during a civil lawsuit filed to collect the insurance claim after the fire.

If convicted on all counts, Hammond faces up to 25 years in prison and a $40,000 fine. Weddel could serve up to 15 years in prison and pay a maximum fine of $20,000 if convicted of the conspiracy and destruction of the building.

Weddel, Bryant and attorney Ray Stoker Jr. owned the building when it burned. The indictment alleges that Weddel — while a city councilman — had purchased interest in the building in July 1980 expecting a civic center to be built nearby.

A bond issue to finance the center's destruction was defeated in December. Rent allegedly failed to cover building expenses from late 1980 through November 1981 and the insurance coverage was doubled, according to the indictment.

Also, the indictment alleges:

— Peterson and Hammond met and discussed setting the building afire in October 1981.

— Hammond, Peterson and Weddel met in October or November 1981 and discussed burning the building to collect on the insurance.

— In October or November 1981, Peterson and Hammond met in Midland with Midlander L.C. Burditt about setting the fire.

— Burditt and Peterson's brother, Lawrence, set fire to the building on Nov. 25, 1981.

— After the fire, Hammond paid Peterson.

The jury heard less than 15 minutes of testimony Tuesday, as the lawyers and Bunton struggled over discovery of the statements and other documents involved in the case.

Bunton was critical of the government during the morning session. "That is a slipshod, shoddy way to handle a case," the judge told Ms. Byers.

Noting he had ordered an "open book policy" in the case, Bunton said "We're not going to ambush anyone in this court."

"I'm not happy with the situation as it now stands," he said.

On Monday, two witnesses provided background on the case. During the testimony of Peterson that followed, Burnett and Shelton made motions for a mistrial after the federal witness volunteered information not related to questions he was asked.

At one point, Peterson said marijuana had been present during one meeting between he, Burditt and Hammond.

Burnett moved for mistrial, based on the effect this statement would have on the jury. Shelton made a motion Tuesday to separate the two defendant's trials because of the statement about a meeting in which Weddel had not been involved.

Bunton has denied all motions to end the trial or dismiss the indictments.

WATER

After voicing his concerns on the floor, Gilley said, "One thing they are trying to accomplish is to make water much more available. In doing so I have a fear this will mean there will be numerous lakes built in Northeast Texas to cover up some of the richest farmland in the United States."

"It will displace homeowners and it will ultimately mean water will be transported from Northeast Texas and East Texas to other portions of the state," Gilley said.

Lewis praised the package as a "well-balanced bill." He said House members moved quickly on it as a result of "maybe a year-and-a-half of hearings across the state of Texas, a great deal of work by the (House Natural Resources) committee and a great deal of knowledge shared by members of the House."

House members probably will get another shot at the topic. The complicated legislation probably will wind up in a House-Senate conference committee. A Senate committee planned a hearing today on its more expensive plan — $1 billion.

Sponsor Tom Craddick, R-Midland, was asked only a few questions on the proposed amendment. Rep. Ed Watson, D-Pasadena, asked whether it is wise to put the proposal to voters this November when the only major elections are for Houston city posts.

Craddick said "the sooner the better." He is hopeful that voters across the state will remember the 1984 summer drought.

TICOR

Bob Phillips, vice president for fiscal affairs at Midland College, said county taxes make up 35 percent of the school's annual $4 million budget.

"Because we do have state funds, we can operate normally," he said. "We just lose a little bit of interest."

He said he did not know the amount of money the college would lose in interest income because of the delay in funds.

Ron Peterson, vice president for finance at Midland Memorial Hospital, said less than 7 percent of his $43 million operating budget comes from taxes.

He said the hospital would never cut back its programs because of lost funding but would instead "reduce our investment earnings. This delays the transfer of money," he said.

Troy Gifford, city finance director, said the city will be able to operate normally as long as the city receives property taxes soon.

"If Ticor pays in some reasonable time, I see no significant effects," he said.

Gifford was not sure of the effects if property taxes are paid later than the expected March date.

Those taxes provide funding for general government services to the city, such as fire, police, streets and sanitation services.

MISD officials said the school district will tap into reserve funds to pay bills and employees after Ticor failed to pay almost $900,000 in school taxes.

Youth arrested in conncection with burglary

From Staff Reports

A 19-year-old Midland youth was arrested early this morning in connection with a burglary at De Zavala Elementary School.

According to reports, Resource Alarm Co. notified the police department at 12:53 a.m. that an alarm had been activated at the school, 1101 E. South St.

Officers responding saw a man dressed in dark clothes running out a double-door and gave chase on foot. The suspect was arrested after an officer in a patrol unit cornered him at the corner of Kansas Avenue and Lamesa Road.

The suspect, who is expected to be arraigned today, listed his address in the 900 block of North Lee.

Midland police this morning were investigating the Monday theft of a $9,000 car which a Midland woman had loaned to a neighbor to go to the store.

Delores Ann Smith of 4410 Lanham, Apt. 83-B, told police she had loaned her 1984 Plymouth Horizon to a neighbor at 3:45 p.m. Monday. At 1 p.m. Tuesday, the car still had not been returned, according to reports.

More than $1,300 worth of items were reported stolen by a Midland couple from their home Feb. 7. Mrs. Don Kennedy of 3303 W. Ohio told police Tuesday the house was entered between 7 a.m. and 6:30 p.m. and a $1,200 48-piece gold-plated flatware set, $40 drill, $40 sander, $50 in tools and $25 in kitchen wares were taken. The theft was reported for insurance purposes, reports said.

Police indicated the point of entry had not been determined and the locks had been changed since the burglary.

Stan Cobb, principal of Lee High School, told police $735 worth of microphones and microphone cords were stolen from the school's auditorium. The theft occurred between 10 p.m. Thursday and 2 p.m. Saturday, reports said.

Brian Pack of 3814 N. Holiday Hill Road told police $515 worth of tools were taken from an unlocked tool box on his pickup between 11 p.m. and midnight Tuesday. According to reports, the 1980 Chevrolet Scottsdale was parked in a parking lot at his residence.

Allen Wallace of 1707 E. Pine told police his house was burglarized between 7 a.m. and 5:30 p.m. Tuesday by someone who had pried open a door. According to reports, a $190 phone, two crystal figurines valued at $95 and a $40 pane of glass from a window were taken.

About $250 in cash was taken from two purses left in a locked car Tuesday afternoon, according to police. Janet Boren, 3417 N. Midland Drive Apt. 1307, told police her purse and one owned by a friend were taken from a 1981 Oldsmobile Cutlass while the two went into the friend's apartment at 2811 N. Loop 250 at 5:30 p.m.

Maria Hernandez of 1505 S. Fort Worth told police two bicycles and a tricycle valued at a total of $237 were stolen from the front step of her home. According to reports, the bikes were last seen Feb. 5.

In complaints filed with the Midland County Sheriff's Office, a $1,300 circulating pump was reported stolen from a drill site near County Road 1110, a mile east of the junction of U.S. Interstate 20 and U.S. Highway 80. According to Bob Hull, who reported the theft for Parker and Parsley Petroleum Co., the pump was taken sometime since Saturday.

A $7,500 Chevrolet Silverado half-ton pickup was reported stolen Tuesday night from the sales lot at Odessa Auto Auction on West U.S. Highway 80. According to reports, the pickup was stolen at about 9:30 p.m.

Citizens fight back, foil violent, non-violent crimes

The Associated Press

A suburban Chicago man who leaped like a Hollywood stuntman onto a stolen car as it drove away with his sons inside and a Houston woman who "had to do something" when she saw a kidnapping came on like gangbusters to foil the crimes.

In another incident, a 55-year-old Chicago man carrying beer to a friend's house emptied his .32-caliber revolver at two would-be robbers Sunday, killing one and wounding the other, police said.

McKinley Murray, wounded in the forearm by one of his assailants, pulled his pistol and emptied it at the pair, said police spokesman Sgt. William Lozanski.

Rodney Kirkwood, 17, was dead on arrival at University of Illinois Hospital, Lozanski said. Murray and Thaddeus Williams, 30, were wounded and admitted to the hospital, where a spokeswoman said they were in good and guarded condition, respectively.

Williams was wanted in the armed robbery of a Chicago hot dog stand on Dec. 21, Lozanski said.

The shootout occurred not far from the scene of a Jan. 17 shooting in which a 68-year-old plumber killed an assailant in self-defense, police said.

Earlier in the weekend, in nearby Cicero, Ill., Larry Banks Sr., 27, had just gone into the post office, leaving his car's motor running and his sons Matthew, 4, and Larry Jr., 5, in the front seat when he saw a man jump into the car, police said.

"Those are my kids!" Banks yelled as he ran outside, said police Sgt. Bernard Walsh.

Banks dived onto the hood of the moving car and hung on as it moved down the street, Walsh said. Thrown to the pavement when his car collided with another vehicle, Banks still tried to cbtch the thief, who was stopped in an alley by a witness, he said.

"Daddy was just like 'The Fall Guy' on TV," Banks' wife, Susan, quoted her sons as saying after the Saturday incident. "We're both pretty shaken up by this," she said. "Larry's on the couch. He's taken a sedative on the doctor's orders."

James Aderman, 27, was charged with aggravated kidnapping, aggravated battery, criminal damage to property, theft, possession of a stolen auto and several driving violations, Walsh said.

In Houston, Melody Richardson said she had to act when she saw two men forcing an elderly woman into the back of their car.

Dogs learn to snoop for drugs

FRANKFURT, West Germany (AP) — Timmi, a 3-year-old cocker spaniel found in an animal shelter, has an important assignment at Frankfurt's airport. He works for West German customs police sniffing luggage for drugs.

Timmi is one of hundreds of dogs trained by the customs police for drug detection at airports and borders here and around the world.

German shepherds, Labradors, cocker spaniels and even mongrels are chosen for the job, said Georg Schreiber, a customs spokesman at the airport.

According to Fritz Schlegel, spokesman at a customs training academy in Neuendettelsau, Bavaria, 10 Greek handlers completed training with West German dogs at the Bavarian school in 1984 and are now at work in Greece.

Other German dogs trained at the academy with foreign handlers are working in the United States, Mali, Malaysia, Singapore, Austria, France and Denmark, Schlegel added in a telephone interview.

The animals are obtained from a variety of sources, including breeders and animal shelters. Each dog remains with its handler from training onward, even sleeping at home with him.

The dogs are used to sniff for drugs in baggage at airports and in vehicles at border crossing points.

At the Frankfurt airport, the Europe's busiest, dogs are credited with uncovering one-third of the $71 million worth of narcotics seized in 1983.

Schreiber, the airport customs spokesman, said handlers often search for their own dogs.

The dogs normally can work only with one handler, and retraining with a new master is rare.

But Timmi was different.

He was rescued from the animal shelter by a handler who trained him and took him on border duty but then left his job. A second handler recognized Timmi's special abilities and took him through a second course in Bavaaria.

Research aimed at propeller planes

CLEVELAND (AP) — The United States has joined a research race with several other nations to develop the know-how to replace jet thrust on airplanes with propeller-driven planes.

Rather than a step back in time, the research is aimed at developing sleek, efficient propeller-driven engines, or propfans, that could reduce fuel costs on large commuter planes by as much as 60 percent in the next decade.

"Urgency on our part is required, because we know that the British, French, Japanese and Russians are very active in developing propfan technology at this time," said G. Keith Sievers, manager of the advanced turboprop project office at the NASA Lewis Research Center in Cleveland.

Lewis is widely known for contributions to the nation's space program and is now involved in space station planning. It also has researchers working to adapt new propeller technology to aircraft now using turbofan jets.

The aim is to develop propeller systems that will not cut air speed but could cut fuel costs by 15 to 60 percent, Sievers said.

New propeller designs have only slight resemblance to well-known two-, three- or four-bladed propellers. Newer propellers usually feature eight or 10 thin, curved blades — a design engineers have found greatly increases thrust.

Sievers said a test flight of a commercial-type aircraft with a modern propeller system called Large-Scale Advanced Propfan was planned in 1987. Lockheed-Georgia Corp. has a $50 million cost-sharing contract through NASA in the LAP project.

Former Miss America thinks of career

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — Suzette Charles, who reigned as Miss America for two months after Vanessa Williams gave up the crown in a scandal over nude photos, says she never thought of herself as "the other Miss America."

Instead, she says she helped "save" the beauty contest and boosted her own show business career in the process.

"I think the public knows that my career is most important. I used the pageant to promote that," says the 21-year-old entertainer.

"The only thing that's still surprising to me is that I would just walk into a department store and people still know who I am," she says.

Even her Christmas shopping was interrupted by autograph signing, but "I like it, it's nice to see people are still excited to meet you."

As Miss New Jersey, Miss Charles was first runner-up until July, when Miss Williams resigned after nude photographs of her with another woman were published in Penthouse magazine.

Miss Williams was the first black to wear the crown of Miss America; Miss Charles also is black.

When the scandal broke, Miss Charles was poised to become a headliner in Atlantic City. Of her sudden call to duty, she says: "I was kind of ready for the reality of it. I guess since I was near Atlantic City, the excitement was transmitted through the area."

She interrupted her career to reign until Sept. 15, when she crowned her successor, Miss Utah, Sharlene Wells, in the casino resort's annual pageant.

She says she never thought of herself as "the other Miss America."

Even though the public "didn't have a whole 12 months to know me being Miss America, it was a great introduction to the traveling," she says. "It was just perfect for me that I had the two months."

In January she opened for comedian Don Rickles at Resorts International Casino Hotel in Atlantic City, and has a contract for performances through the year. She also has opened for Lou Rawls, Stevie Wonder and Alan King and will appear before Sammy Davis Jr. in his show in Miami this month.

She says she is taking her "high energy" cabaret act on tour, with stops in Las Vegas, N.M., Dallas and Minneapolis. She also is awaiting word on whether the character she portrayed on ABC's daytime drama "Loving" will be brought back.

That character, model Sasha Hale, is "supposedly in Switzerland," says Miss Charles. She considers soap opera a good training ground because "it's a harder media, you have to learn your lines the night before."

Her main interest is a recording contract, although she has not signed with a major company.

A 1981 graduate of the high school of the Philadelphia College of the Performing Arts, Miss Charles began taking voice lessons at age 5 and dance lessons at 10.

NEIL SOLOMON, M.D.

Cataracts found among infants

Dear Dr. Solomon: What might cause a baby to be born with cataracts? I always thought that cataracts were a problem only for older people. — Nan, Athens, Ga.

Dear Nan: Congenital cataracts may be due to a number of causes, including radiation therapy of the mother when she was pregnant, drug use by the mother, or rubella during pregnancy.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My son is a good athlete but is kind of small for football. What do you think of soccer as a sport that will provide the benefits of participation in athletics and minimize the possibility of injury? — Kip, N.Y.

Dear Kip: Soccer is associted with relatively few injuries. In one survey of more than four thousand young soccer players, an injury rate of 4.4 percent was found. The most common injury was a sprain. As might have been expected, teams that played competitively had a higher overall injury rate than did those that played recreational soccer.

Dear Dr. Solomon: From the very name of the premenstrual syndrome, it would seem that the problem is related to a time before the woman begins menstruating. Is this actually true? — Diane, Oklahoma City, Okla.

Dear Diane: Symptoms of the premenstrual syndrome generally appear before menstruation and then fade or disappear during menstruation. In some women the symptoms remain for the first day or two of menstruation.

The most common symptoms include abdominal bloating, breast tenderness, irritability, depression and anxiety.

Dear Dr. Solomon: These days drugs seem to be the answer to everything, from treating headaches to becoming pregnant. I have become very anxious over the past few months, and the first thing anyone mentions when I talk to them about it is tranquilizers or some other kind of medication. Isn't there some other way besides the use of drugs that a person who has certain fears can be helped? — Virginia, York, Penna.

Dear Virginia: A behavorial approach to the treatment of panic disorders is possible, according to Dr. Robert L. DuPont, director of the Phobia Program of Washington in Rockville, Md. He has reported good results from a 16-week program of individual and group counseling without the use of drugs.

In general, the program emphasizes educating patients about the nature of their problems. They are told what their problems are and how they might cope with them. In addition, they must be exposed to the kinds of situations that trigger their attacks in order to learn how to deal with them.

Dr. DuPont reports that 89 of the first 100 patients to be treated in this fashion said they were better two years later, and only two said they were worse.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My father is going to have surgery and he was told that he could have either a general anesthetic or a local anesthetic. Would you please explain the difference between them? — Ms. C.W., Portland, Maine.

Dear Ms. W.: General anesthetics produce unconsciousness in a patient. They are used for major surgical procuedures, particularly if they are time-consuming.

Local anesthetics produce insensitivity to pain in a specific part of the body, but the patient remains awake. They are widely used in dentistry for such procedures as tooth extraction, as well as for surgery.

Chinese improve English

PEKING (AP) — Chinese are buying tickets to talk to each other — in English.

English Corner, a bleak roof space atop a bookstore on Peking's busy Wangfujing Street, is attracting hundreds of mostly young Chinese anxious to improve their English. They pay .15 yuan (6 U.S. cents) admission and gab, usually with each other.

It's the latest twist in an English-language craze that began in the late 1970s. A freewheeling English Corner also exists in Shanghai, China's largest and most cosmopolitan city.

Many schools teach English, thousands of workers attend spare-time classes and many listen to the BBC and Voice of America, which has special slow-speed programs for learners.

But opportunities to practice speaking are few.

"We talk about everything, but mostly how to study English," said technician Li Xiaoling, 29. "We discuss Peking traffic jams, economic reforms, supermarkets, Syrian-Israeli jet battles in the sky."

The state-run Foreign Languages Bookstore recently started the corner in roof space and a small, adjoining room. It opens weekends and several times during the week.

On one Sunday morning session, enthusiasts included high school and university students, clerks, soldiers, engineers, a doctor and a musician. One man, speaking in barely accented English, said "unemployed" when asked his job.

Few foreigners show up, but when one does Chinese immediately gather round. In the 1960s and 1970s a Chinese who approached a foreign visitor was courting police trouble, but conditions have eased with China's opening to the outside world.

"What does 'shake the legs' mean?" asked one student. "Dilly dally" and "like a dodo bird" were other puzzling idioms, most now dated in the West.

For most, English fluency is an advantage at work and a possible key to overseas travel.

Musician Liu Gong, a clarinet player with a Peking ensemble, said "after performances many foreigners come up to talk. I want to speak to them myself, not through an interpreter." Liu also wants to study overseas, as do many of those at English Corner.

Many Chinese attend spare-time English schools, some of them private. Tuition averages three yuan ($1.10) monthly, usually for 24-36 hours of instruction.

The price is right, "but sometimes the Chinese teachers are not so good," said one English speaker.

Few took the leap like 27-year-old He Tongning, who quit his job and is polishing his English before moving to the southern city of Canton "to establish my own company."

"I am more capable than my boss," he said to sympathetic smiles from onlookers. "I quit because I could not develop my ability. Not so many people dare to work for themselves," he added proudly.

Expression of discontent, especially to a foreigner, was enough to land the garrulous in jail during the 1960s Cultural Revolution.

"Now days," bank clerk Zhang Jianqin, 25, said in stumbling English, "it is very, very freedom."

Let's talk.

Information about your changing telephone service from Darlene Gifford, Manager-Community Relations

Divestiture revisited: one year later

A little over three years ago — January 8, 1982, to be exact — we were stunned by the announcement that AT&T would divest itself of 22 operating companies, including Southwestern Bell, in exchange for the federal government dropping its 8-year-old anti-trust suit.

Most of us remember that moment: where we were when we heard the news, the looks on the faces around us, the feeling in the pit of the stomach as it slowly dawned on us what it was going to take to dismember the world's largest corporation.

We did what we had to do — all the while wondering if it would work.

Today, it works.

Although every one of us is still analyzing divestiture's effects on our responsibility areas and working out the glitches, we've come a long way.

Service has remained at quality levels

A year ago, when divestiture took place, some thought the Bell System breakup would cause local telephone service to deteriorate drastically. But it hasn't.

And the many changes haven't always been easy — on you or on us. We still don't know where some of our longtime work friends in other departments wound up. And I can imagine the consternation of many customers who had been accustomed over the years to one call doing all, being told overnight they would have to get their own telephones.

To help you with your questions, we introduced a series of informational booklets in 1984 called "Tele-Help." And, as a result of your questions, more booklets are coming this year, including a series for small businesses.

New revenues, new services and budget cutting

One of the principal axioms of our business has always been, "to serve well, we must earn well." Since divestiture, that's never been truer in Texas.

It's important to point out we've managed to get through the first year on our own as a stand-alone company without any significant increase in local residence rates. In fact, flat-rate residential service increased only 30 cents per month in 1984 — and that was the result of a rate filing a year earlier.

And despite all the havoc of divestiture, our internal measurements tell us service has never been better in Texas.

But more than ever, we understand that really satisfying customers requires a great deal more than looking good on a monthly service report. We know we have some weak spots, but we're working on them.

You see, the ultimate judge is not what our surveys tell us, but what you tell us.

And serving you is our only business. We appreciate the opportunity to do so.

U.S. horseradish hub is major producer

COLLINSVILLE, Ill. (AP) — It takes Bill Keller several minutes to list all his relatives who, like himself, grow horseradish in the rich river bottoms of southwestern Illinois, the horseradish hub of America.

"My father grew horseradish and my wife's father grew horseradish," Keller begins chronologically. "My two brothers grow horseradish, and two of my wife's brothers grow horseradish. We have two sons-in-law in the business, and we each have cousins who grow horseradish."

He pauses for effect, then proudly concludes, "Half of the industry in this area are blood relatives."

Those relatives farm the nation's lushest horseradish soil — 1,200 acres in Madison and St. Clair counties near the eastern bank of the Mississippi River, across from St. Louis.

University of Illinois agricultural experts say two-thirds of the country's horseradish is grown in the "American Bottoms" of southern Illinois. Soil and climate conditions combine to create "the most concentrated area of horseradish production in the world," according to a university extension service pamphlet.

Keller, 60, said the acreage in southern Illinois comprised slightly more than half the total horseradish acreage in the U.S. and produced two-thirds of the pungent roots, which resemble large, white carrots.

Though horseradish was brought to America by European immigrants, most of the European growers have been wiped out by large supplies from communist countries in eastern Europe and Asia, Keller said. Information on the size and production of the "Iron Curtain" farms is not available, he said.

In the United States, Wisconsin and California join Illinois as horseradish-producing states, said Keller. German immigrants introduced the plant, a member of the mustard family, to southern Illinois at the turn of the century. It has flourished because the topsoil in the region is unusually deep, and rich in potash, a chemical nutrient on which the horseradish thrives, Keller said.

Since starting out in 1953, Keller has seen the number of area horseradish farmers dwindle by two-thirds. Still, he said, horseradish is a good cash crop that can support the small farmer as well as the large.

He estimated his production costs, at $2,000 per acre, with returns of up to $3,000 an acre. Keller hopes to send 600,000 pounds of roots to graters, who prepare the fiery hot plant for use in mustards, relishes and sauces.

Most of the southern Illinois horseradish farmers have lived there all their lives, said Keller's wife, Doris. "Bill grew up across the road and a half mile down," she said. "He used to pass by here on his way to school. Six families used to farm the land we now farm."

Clark Weckmann, who helps manage Keller's farm, started working as a field hand while in high school 20 years ago. After graduating, he tried to get other jobs but wound up back at the farm.

Weckmann, 35, now oversees the day-to-day operation for Keller, supervising up to 16 people who plant, trim, harvest and clean the thick roots. Sounding like an old-timer, Weckmann tells of the old days before electric belt machines and trimmers quickened the operation.

"These guys don't appreciate what they got now," he says, waving at the gloved workers busy cleaning and bagging in an open barn full of whirring machinery. "They probably go home and complain about the hard work, but they didn't have to do it by hand from the back of a truck."

Keller used to plant about 25 acres until four years ago, when he and his brother-in-law began copying the machinery used at horseradish farms they had visited.

"That's one reason for travel — to steal ideas," he says.

Woodchuck future

Oh, and how much wood could a woodchuck chuck, if a woodchuck could chuck wood?

That's the question the old rhyme asks about the woodchuck, which is another name for the groundhog and by now just about everyone should be familiar with that little rascal. He's the little guy who, legend says, pops out of his hole every Feb. 2 and if scans the surrounding terrain. If he sees his shadow, so we're told, there'll be six more weeks of winter weather. Oops!

And that's exactly what happened last week, much to the chagrin of weather-weary Americans even as far south as Midland. If one believes the "Groundhog-cast," it time to put another log on the fire and anticipate high utility bills for another couple of months at least. What's even worse, those friendly folks at the Smithsonian have now offered enlightenment as the the early spring forays of woodchucks.

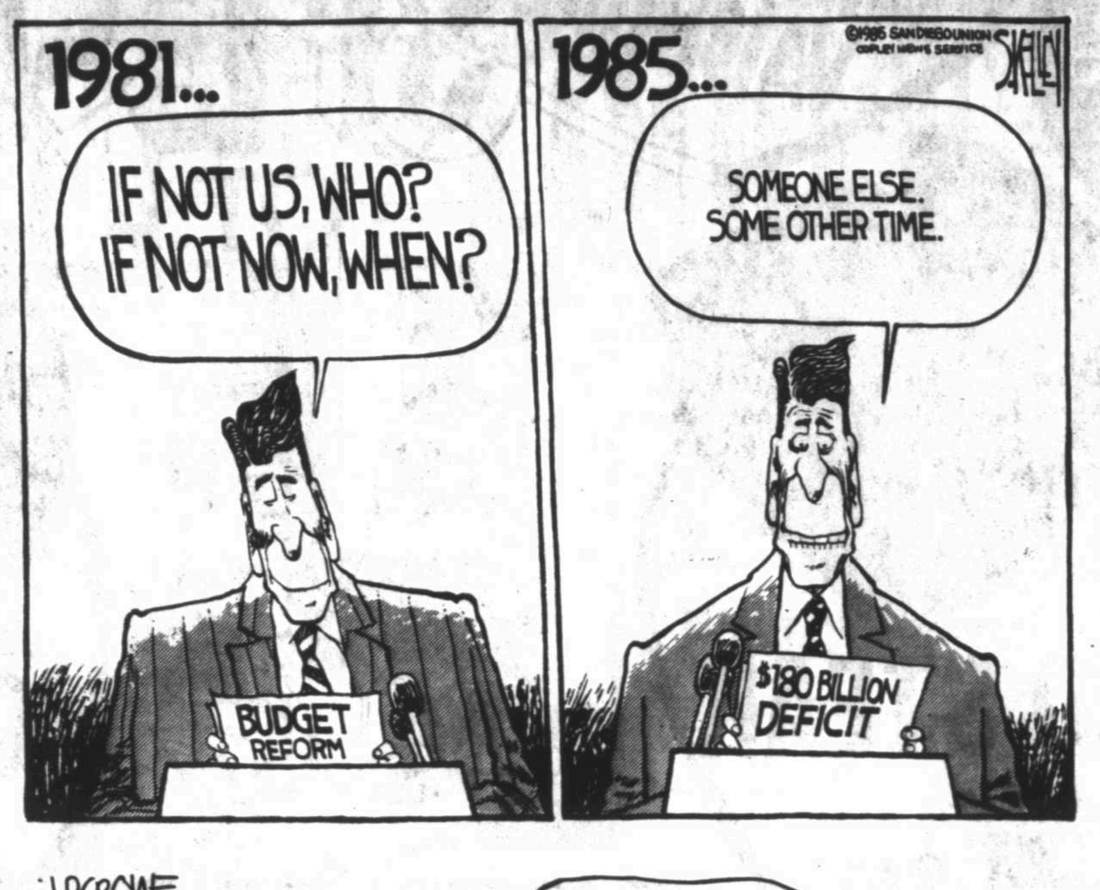

Says the magazine: "With rare exceptions, the first animals of the spring are mature males. For several weeks they feed little ... in part because there is nothing much for them to eat. Also they are preoccupied with sex, due to the fierce hormonal tides raging within them. Since the females continue to hibernate for several weeks longer, the males cannot initially fulfill their sexual urges and so they often battle savagely with each other."

As if the curiosity of humans studying their sexual desires isn't enough, now there's a move afoot to find out what makes groundhogs sleep so long and so well. The magazine goes on to report: "True or deep hibernation, which is the response of the woodchuck, occurs in relatively few mammals. In this state the body temperature drops to about 37 degrees F and can be maintained there for months."

Man's interest in the woodchuck's sleeping habits is more than just a passing fancy, however. Says the Smithsonian, "The potential implications of hibernation for humans have long intrigued scientists. Ever since space travel became a realistic prospect, there has been speculation that something akin to hibernation might be advantageous for crewmen making long voyages. A more immediate if less glamourous possibility is that periods of induced hibernation would benefit patients undergoing or recovering from certain types of medical treatment."

Maybe further research along this line won't help provide the answer to the riddle about the amount of wood a woodchuck can chuck, but it might help man conquer one or two uniquely human problems, like long-term space travel.

At the very least, maybe we'll find out how groundhogs predict the weather!

More than words

President Reagan had some stirring words to say about freedom in his State-of-the-Union address last Wednesday — words that went well beyond his familiar commitment, which he repeated, to keep faith with those struggling in Afghanistan and Nicaragua "to defy Soviet-supported aggression."

Declared the president: "Freedom is not the sole prerogative of a chosen few; it is the universal right of all God's children.... Our mission is to nourish and defend freedom and democracy and to communicate these ideals everywhere we can."

At this moment when the Reagan administration is rededicating itself to this goal, it is sobering to see the events that unfolded in South Korea in connection with the return of the opposition politician, Kim Dae Jung.

Americans have expended much blood and treasure to build freedom and democracy in Korea over the last 30-plus years. Yet what has been on view in Seoul in recent days is a stark picture of a police-run society that uses force and deception to keep an opposition figure from taking up an orderly and peaceful role in the public life of his country.

In addition, Americans accompanying Kim were, on evident official orders, physically abused — an action for which their political tactics provided not the slightest justification.

And the American Embassy itself, which thought it had worked out foolproof arrangements for a role of its own in the return proceedings, found itself helpless on the outside, duped by the very people in whom it had reposed its trust.

A brisk debate is under way over what were the elements of the arrival plan and who was responsible for its breakdown. The four major parties — Kim, his American escorts, the Korean government and the American government — have all contributed to it.

It is important to learn just what happened, but it is also important to keep in central focus the question of why it is that freedom and democracy are in such apparent short supply in South Korea, and what the United States ought to be doing in Korea, as the president put it, "to nourish and and defend freedom and democracy, and to communicate these ideals everywhere we can."

If this is a legitimate goal of American policy — and we believe it is — then the implications for the United States in South Korea are very clear.

Kim Dae Jung left Korea as a political exile in 1981. The Korean government greeted him by in effect restoring his condition as a political prisoner, immediately putting him back under house arrest.

To fence off Kim and other opposition figures by "sedition" charges and police guards is a direct and — one must assume — deliberate affront to the policy freshly enunciated by Reagan.

It is not the American escorts who are most challenged here: they are few, and they are remote from the levers of official power. It is Ronald Reagan. What is he going to do about it?

ART BUCHWALD

Here comes 'Dear John' letter!

It's amazing, but all the cost overrun scandals at the Pentagon have to do with small items, and not big ones. First it was the $400 hammer, then the $7,900 coffeemaker, followed by the $16,400 refrigerator — and last week, the $640 flying toilet seat.

Art Buchwald

That's what Lockheed Aircraft charged the Navy for each one it installed in its P3 Orion submarine-hunting airplane. The press instantly dubbed it "Toiletgate," and the revelation couldn't have come at a worse time. When the seat was displayed by Senator Roth of Delaware, all hell broke loose in the Defense Department. Cap Weinberger was having enough trouble defending his budget on The Hill, and he was in no mood to justify the cost of plumbing fixtures on a Navy aircraft.

Two minutes after the list price for the seat surfaced, "general quarters" was sounded at the Pentagon, and everyone grabbed a phone.

Weinberger called the secretary of the Navy, who called the chief of naval operations, who called the admiral in charge of aircraft procurement, who called the captain who heads up the P3 submarine-hunter program, who called Lockheed Aircraft for an explanation.

"What the hell are you guys doing charging us $640 for a toilet seat?" he yelled into the phone.

"We made a slight mistake," the Lockheed commode chief said. "We should have only billed you $554 for each one. We'll send you a rebate in the morning."

"Do you know what's going on here in Washington? You've jeopardized the entire $313 billion defense budget. You guys must be crazy."

"Now wait a minute. That seat is made of fiberglass and plastic and will withstand any combat situation that the P3 hunter is bound to encounter. We tested it in two crash landings and it didn't have a crack in it."

"That's not the point. If you overcharge us for a BiNuptial cruise digitator no one is going to question it. If you bury a few thousand bucks in the Gaffney flick switch, or a Dalmane synthesizer, Congress will never find it. And if you want to up the price on a Flangle Dipthong Upsurge, we'll look the other way. But the American taxpayer knows what toilet covers cost. Besides, the reason this whole thing broke is a small contractor claims he could make the same seat for $200."

"They all say that until they try to build one. It's not just the seat but the research and development that went into it. We had to build a special simulator to make sure it would hold up at 40,000 feet."

"Why didn't you add those costs on to the Septum Firth chronometer? We could have absorbed them there."

"Because $640 is peanuts in a multimillion-dollar airplane. Suppose we reduce the price to $500? We'll eat the difference."

"It's too late. The Navy is thinking of canceling the order for the rest of the planes. If you don't come down on those seats, you can start closing the assembly line."

"Okay, give us a figure we can live with."

"We're not going to pay more than $100 a seat."

"You have to be kidding. We gave you the plane at cost, but our understanding was we could charge anything we wanted for the optional equipment."

"Our agreement didn't include coffee pots and commodes. One hundred dollars or we take the whole program over to Grumman Aircraft."

"You have us over a barrel. We'll give it to you at that price but it will wipe out our entire profit margin. We only make $540 on each plane."

The captain said, "That's your problem. I want a telegram on my desk about the price reduction by this afternoon. If it isn't here, you're going to get a 'Dear John' letter from me in the morning."

JACK ANDERSON

Colombia learning dope's cost

WASHINGTON — The United States has had little success enlisting the governments of narcotics-producing countries in the fight against the international dope traffic. These countries are terrified their economies might collapse if the drug dealers are stopped.

Now there's a faint glimmer of hope that one of the worst offenders in this hemisphere — Colombia — is beginning to realize that the economic benefits of the dope trade may not be worth the political instability. This possible change of attitude is reported in confidential State Department cables seen by my associate Donald Goldberg.

Jack Anderson

Colombia is the source of a large share of the cocaine that is smuggled into this country. For years, the United States has been trying to get the Colombian government to crack down on growers, processors and shippers, who have been operating with virtual impunity in Colombia.

As recently as last year, the Colombians were clearly not enthusiastic about the anti-drug war. Drug Enforcement Administration officials privately told several members of Congress that DEA's offices in Bogota were actually being bugged by the government.

But the ugly turn of events in the past year has apparently been an eye-opener for the government of President Belisario Betancur. Not only have U.S. diplomats and drug agents been threatened, causing the State Department to recall some for their own protection, but Colombians themselves have been targets of assassins believed to be paid by the drug dealers. Betancur's minister of justice was one of the victims.

But perhaps most important was Betancur's realization that Colombia really doesn't reap much economic benefit from the dope traffic. The big money is made after the dope leaves Colombia.

"President Betancur dismissed the theory of some people that drug money is beneficial to Colombia because of its external debt," one cable reports on a conversation with Betancur. "Most of the drug money, he said, does not come to Colombia, but remains in the U.S. Only operating funds are returned to Colombia by the traffickers."

The Colombian president also pointed the finger of accusation at a group of such supposed probity that it has escaped attention in U.S. law enforcement circles. "The government of Colombia, said Betancur, is seeking ways to detect this money and to seize it," the cable stated, "but he added that some international banks in the U.S. and Europe stood at the margin of the law in accepting the enormous profits of the drug trade."

The clincher for Betancur, apparently, was the discovery of close ties between drug dealers and left-wing guerrilla groups. Though solid proof is difficult to get, the new Colombian justice minister, Enrique Parejo, gave this rundown to U.S. officials, according to a cable from the embassy:

"He said there appeared to be two schools of thought in the narcotraficantes' (drug dealers') ranks. One group held that money and arms should be supplied to insurgents in order to distract ... security forces from their anti-drug efforts. Another group allegedly held that the government of Colombia would eventually lessen the intensity of its anti-drug struggle in any case, and nothing need be done to encourage the insurgents.

"Parejo said the first theory was worrisome, but dismissed the second theory as wishful thinking."

Betancur has asked the Reagan administration for more patrol helicopters and for photographic intelligence from U.S. satellites on airplane flights within Colombia to help nail the smugglers.

Three men killed when two planes collide

HEALDTON, Okla. (AP) — Authorities have not released the names of three men killed when two single-engine planes collided and fell into pastures near this south Oklahoma town.

Two of the victims were in a plane owned by a Fort Worth, Texas company.

Investigators who rushed to the scene of the accident Tuesday morning confirmed that the two small planes hit each other before tumbling to the ground but withheld speculation on why the pilots couldn't avoid each other.

One plane "burst into a big ball of fire," on impact, said Howard Stewart, a local rancher who witnessed it.

Dr. Roger Reid, a medical examiner from nearby Ardmore, said two bodies found strapped in that craft's seats were burned beyond recognition.

He said he believed the identity of the third victim was known but it wasn't being publicized until his relatives are told.

The Oklahoma Highway Patrol said the wreckage of one plane was found about a mile north of Healdton. The second plane was found a mile north of that site along Oklahoma Highway 76.

Stewart recalled watching one plane plow into the cow pasture about a quarter of a mile from his home. "I knew at that time, there was no chance of getting anybody out. I felt terrible. Helpless. Helpless."

Tommy McFall, an air safety specialist with the National Transportation and Safety Board in Fort Worth, confirmed it was a mid-air collision. Investigating the crash can take up to six months, he said.

Officials from the Federal Aviation Administration in Oklahoma City also were on hand Tuesday.

Anti-abortionists will battle with videotape

WASHINGTON (AP) — Anti-abortion activists have carted hundreds of copies of a controversial videotape to Capitol Hill, calling its images of an actual abortion a powerful new weapon in their battle for legislation outlawing the practice.

"The Silent Scream," which has been in circulation since late last year, got a big push in January when President Reagan praised it in remarks to thousands of abortion protesters.

Critics, though, are crying fraud. They say the videotape's powerful impact comes not from its images, which often are difficult to make out, but from its dramatic narration. And they say the narration is highly misleading in claiming a 12-week-old fetus feels pain, has human functions "indistinguishable from ours" and can even sense approaching danger.

The producer and narrator of "The Silent Scream" displayed more than 500 copies of the videotape Tuesday at a gathering of like-minded activists in the Old Executive Office Building on the White House grounds.

They had hoped to give a ceremonial copy to Reagan personally but settled for a presentation to an aide.

Dr. Bernard Nathanson, the New York abortionist turned anti-abortion crusader who narrates the videotape, said copies would be given to every member of Congress and the Supreme Court.

Their reaction, he said, would be "a measure of this society."

Congressional legislation to negate the 1973 Supreme Court ruling allowing abortions has failed several times in recent years. However, supporters say they will continue the fight, buoyed in part by Reagan's encouragement.

The president told about 70,000 demonstrators on Jan. 22, "It's been said that if every member of Congress could see that film, they would move quickly to end the tragedy of abortion, and I pray that they will."

The title of the videotape comes from Nathanson's narration in which he says, "We see the child's mouth wide open in a silent scream" as an abortionist introduces an medical instrument into the womb.

Pro-abortion groups have criticized that particular language, arguing that a three-month fetus is not aware of its surroundings, let alone able to recognize danger and react to it.

In addition, those groups have protested contentions by Nathanson — and Reagan himself — that fetuses are able to feel pain. The American College of Obstetricians and Gynocologists also disputed Reagan on that last year, saying that "we know of no legitimate scientific information that supports the statement that a fetus experiences pain early in pregnancy."

Nathanson dismissed such arguments as "semantic acrobatics, an evasion."

In the videotape, which was played for reporters Tuesday, Nathanson shows a sonogram, which uses computer-reconstructed high-frequency sound waves to produce an image inside the womb.

In the description accompanying the sonogram, Nathanson says the fetus "does sense aggression in its sanctuary; it is moving away, one can see it moving to the left side of the uterus in an attempt to escape the inexorable instruments which the abortionist is using to extinguish its life."

"There is no question this child senses the most mortal danger imaginable."

Among critics, Barbara Radford, executive director of the National Abortion Federation, called the videotape "merely another piece of propaganda from the opposition."

Report profiles students

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's school population has changed radically in the past 15 years, with large increases in the number of children from broken homes and those living in poverty, an education analyst reported today.

Emily Feistritzer, director of the private National Center for Education Information, released a demographic report on America's 44 million elementary and secondary school students.

The report provides compelling evidence of the need to improve the nation's schools, said Ms. Feistritzer, a former teacher-educator who publishes several Washington-based newsletters.

"The difference between American children of today, compared with those of 1970...is nothing less than startling," said the report, "Cheating Our Children: Why We Need School Reform."

"Today we deal with a new kind of child, from a different background, with a different set of values, hopes and dreams," it said.

The study cites a wide range of statistics from the U.S. Bureau of the Census, the National Center for Education Statistics and other sources. Among them:

—One in five children now live in poverty; 23 percent of children under age 6 are poor.

—One in five children is being raised by a mother with no father in the home.

—The number of households headed by females with no husband present has doubled since 1970 and tripled since 1960. One-third of all households headed by women are poor.

—Only 27 percent of all households now have children living with them. Among married couples, only 49 percent have children at home, compared with 57 percent in 1970.

—Seventy percent of single parents work. Both parents work in more than half the families in which both the mother and father live in the home.

—Student achievement rises with family income levels and the level of parents' education.

Children from poor families "consistently fail to achieve in school at the level of children from affluent families," the report said.

Ms. Feistritzer said it may take "more mature...and tougher" teachers "to cope with today's more difficult-to-handle students."

White: Social programs cheaper than prison

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas should spend more on social programs for children because it's "cheaper to send that child to the University of Texas than it is to the penitentiary," Gov. Mark White says.

White told the Texas Baptists' Christian Life Commission Workshop Tuesday night that not enough social programs are being aimed at helping children of parents who abuse alcohol, narcotics or children.

"We're spending about $500 million a year for adult probation, juvenile probation, Texas Department of Corrections, Texas Youth Council and Board of Pardons and Paroles," White said.

"We should be spending more of our money on constructive purposes," he said. "It's much cheaper to send that child to the University of Texas than it is the penitentiary."

White noted that half of Texas' prisoners were abused as children or were high school dropouts.

White also reaffirmed his decision to veto a pari-mutuel betting bill unless it includes a statewide referendum, a local option plan and an anti-organized crime plan.

Suitcase bomb scare fizzles

BIG SPRING (AP) — Officials evacuated homes, sent 80 federal employees home early and barricaded two streets over a possible bomb scare that turned out to be only a harmless suitcase.

Police said a custodian at the federal building complex found an unclaimed suitcase about 2:30 p.m. outside the U.S. Post Office's west entrance, the Lubbock Avalanche Journal reported.

About 80 employees in the federal building were sent home early, and city police barricaded two city blocks.

An explosives operation team from Fort Hood arrived about 6 p.m. to examine the suitcase, and X-rays revealed what they believed might be a bomb.

Rather than risk trying to open the suitcase, the explosives team used a small charge to force the suitcase, officials said.

Service center lacks phones

HOUSTON (AP) — A new $3.1 million service center built to help Houston area water customers has all but one of the modern conveniences — telephones.

The city bought the new southeast Houston structure, which formerly housed a neighborhood bank, for $1.05 million in 1980.

Last September, after three years of renovation work, the 45,000 square-foot structure was ready, except for the lack of telephones.

Jane Cater, acting director of the city's public service department, said the breakup of AT&T is partially to blame for the delay.

"We were no longer able to simply call up Southwestern Bell and order new phones," she said. "There were lots of questions, because we were treading on new turf."

Criminals may pay rewards

AUSTIN (AP) — Rep. Randy Pennington thinks criminals should have to repay the reward money paid out to catch them.

Pennington, R-Houston, introduced a bill Tuesday giving judges authority to require persons convicted of an offense to repay "crime stoppers" organizations for any reward paid for information leading to the conviction.

"The crime stoppers programs have proven very effective," Pennington said. "However, it is unjust to ask victims of crime to bear the cost of such programs. It's time to make the criminal element pay a large part of the cost of such reward programs."

MHMR won't close facilities

AUSTIN (AP) — Gary Miller, director of the Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation says MHMR has no plans to close any facilities the next few years even with "significant" growth of community facilities.

Miller told the Senate Finance Committee that a 2.7 percent increase in funding would be needed the next two years because of two federal court judgments against the state.

The first priority request was for $38.8 million in operating funds plus $5.5 million in construction to meet initial requests of the federal court orders calling for more and better treatment of patients. Much of the money would go to increase staff to patient ratios and protect patients from each other.

The second priority request, Miller said, calls for $277 million to complete program expenditures required by the law suits and continued growth of the population in the hospitals.

Tractor cuts miles-long swath

CANYON (AP) — A tractor turned loose by an apparent prankster weaved more than 12 miles through fences and Texas Panhandle barns before it sputtered to a halt, authorities said.

Someone threw a $60,000 Case tractor belonging to Edgar Robinson into second gear, opened the throttle and hopped out about 4 a.m. Sunday, Randall County Sheriff's investigator Joel Richardson said.

"Twenty-one fences and two barns later," Richardson said, the heavily damaged tractor was found stalled at Jimmy Dietz's barn. Dietz lost another barn to the agricultural juggernaut moments before it stopped.

"It did a lot of damage," Richardson said. "It really did."

TCU begins big haul of Blue Chip grid prospects

From Wire Reports

Texas Christian began raking in what is expected, by nightfall, to be a giant-sized share of Texas' blue chip football players. But early today, the state's top prospect, Hart Lee Dykes of Bay City, still had folks wondering and guessing.

Dykes, a unanimous selection among the Southwest Conference coaches voting in the Dallas Times Herald's blue chip poll, had narrowed his choices to Illinois, Texas A&M and Oklahoma.

Dykes, the No. 1 target of college recruiters throughout the recruiting season, thought he might sign today, but wasn't making promises.

"It's been an experience and it's something that everybody should go through," a weary Dykes said. "But only once."

TCU Coach Jim Wacker who led the Frogs to an 8-3 record last season, has presented a high profile during the recruiting season, gaining pledges from four blue chip players from the Times Herald's 14-player list.

The Horned Frogs, who have never signed more than three blue chippers in one year, led all other Southwest Conference in commitments prior to today's first official day of signings.

TCU had commitments from a list of 28 recruits headed by Jasper wide receiver Reggie Davis, Huffman running back Greg Moore, Houston Madison quarterback Ronald Jiles and Fort Worth Eastern Hills defensive tackler Mitchell Benson.

Dykes, a superbly gifted all-around athlete, caught 94 passes during three varsity seasons with the Black Cats. He earned all-state honors as a wide receiver in his junior season and was a double first team all-stater as a senior at wide receiver and safety.

Dykes is a starter on the Bay City basketball team that is ranked No. 1 in the state in Class 4A and also is an accomplished pitcher on the Bay City baseball team.

Five SWC schools, Arkansas, Houston, Texas A&M, Rice and Texas Tech, went into the signing date with no Texas blue chip commitments.

Texas held a commitment from Ed Cunningham, a 6-8, 260 defensive tackle from Sanford-Fritsch and Baylor landed blue chipper Sam Collins, a 6-5 230 tight end from Lubbock Dunbar.

Out-of-state recruiters had verbal commitments from three blue chippers including Aldine MacArthur tackle Michael Babineaux, Louisiana State; Houston Westbury defensive back Kevin Thompson, Oklahoma and Houston Madison defensive end Broderick Thomas, Nebraska.

The three remaining uncommitted blue chippers all have non-Texas schools on their shopping lists.

In addition to Dykes and Delaney, Gainesville's Dante Williams is considering Ohio State, Nebraska and Oklahoma.

Arkansas Coach Ken Hatfield helped stem the exodus of the state by signing eight players off Arkansas' Super Team although the state's top quarterback prospect, Eric Mitchell of Pinebluff, apparently with go to Oklahoma.

Midlanders football prospects sign up with expected schools

From Staff Reports

There were no surprises for college recruiters from Midland athletes Wednesday morning as the national signing date for high school talent arrived.

At Midland High, tight end Darrell Davis and wide receiver Allan Foret both opted for Texas Christian University and Brad Edgar chose the University of California. All three had committed to those schools earlier.

At Midland Lee halfbacks Walter Jones and Tyrone Thurman both kept verbal promises with Texas Tech University while safety Earl Davis accepted a scholarship from Eastern New Mexico. Fullback Randy Ellis was expected to sign with Angelo State today.

All had made college decisions within the last three weeks, but verbal committments are not binding on the athlete. After today, however, athletes can not accept another school bid.

Abilene gains state playoffs

Abilene High joined Midland Lee in the District 4-5A playoff sweepstakes Tuesday night, thanks to a 96-67 win over Big Spring and Abilene Cooper's stunning 65-64 upset over San Angelo.

The Eagles of AHS are now 10-3 in the loop race, the same as Lee, but no other district teams are better than 8-5 with only one game left during regular season play. San Angelo entered Tuesday's game with a real shot at a playoff berth, but fell out of contention when they fell to Cooper.

San Angelo led Cooper by a 31-18 margin in the first half, but the Cougars pulled the game out in the fourth period by outscoring the Bobcats by a 23-12 margin. Darren Hopper led the way with 19 points while Fred Starks had 12 and Leo Williams 10.

San Angelo's Ottoway Perryman had 17 points and Brian Ross 14 while Willie Blakey added 11.

Lee vaults into playoffs

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

ODESSA — Following Midland Lee's 74-58 Dead Eye Dick shooting show here Tuesday night over the Odessa High Bronchos, the Rebels were satisfied to revel in their hottest cord ripping of the season — but they didn't know the rest of the story.

The Lee victory over OHS, coupled with a 65-64 upset by Abilene Cooper over San Angelo, vaulted the Rebels into the state playoffs for the first time since 1975 when Lee went all the way to the state semifinals.

In the Lee lockerroom, however, there was only talk of the 59 percent shooting eye against the Bronchos. The thoughts of the playoffs may have been there, but maybe those were thoughts were filled with mere hope.

The only thing that was sure was that Lee had at least earned a district playoff of some sort with another league team. But even that had escaped Lee coach Paul Stueckler.

"Are you sure we are in at least a district playoff for at least second place?" Stueckler asked. "I really haven't thought about it. I was just concerned with beating Odessa High. I always know that it's better to win than lose, but we'll take it. It's been a long time since we were in any kind of playoff."

BUT THE Cooper news hadn't filtered down to the OHS gym, so Stueckler and his Rebels didn't know that they now own an outright playoff berth.

Lee is now 10-3 in District 4-5A play, tied with Abilene High for first place. San Angelo and Midland High are both 8-5 and two full games back of the two leaders with only one game left to play. The top two teams in 4-5A earn a state playoff berth.

"That's really great," said Stueckler after hearing the news. "Before the Odessa High game, I was looking at Tyrone Thurman and Derek Westbrook, thinking that they might have only two games left to play for me. They have started for me since they were sophomores. Now they still have at least two more games to play."

AND WHAT a night for Lee to nail down the playoff berth! The Rebs couldn't miss from the field, hitting on 32 of 54 shots to destroy the Bronchos, a team that came at Lee with a 53 percent shooting eye of their own.

Westbrook led Lee scorers with 20 points, hitting seven of 11 from the field and six of seven at the charity stripe. "I don't know why we were so hot, but I do know that after losing to Abilene High Friday, we've been practicing real hard. We knew there was no tomorrow. We have to win now," said Westbrook.

And Westbrook had a lot of help. Brian Marczynski hit eight of 11 shots for 16 points while Thurman had eight of 15 for season high 16 points on the eve of his signing with Texas Tech to a football scholarship. Texas Tech defensive coordinator Spike Dykes, the former Lee football coach, was in the stands to witness the happenings.

Raymond Morney hit six of 10 from the field and had 14 points to round out the big Lee attack.

Bulldogs win, but playoff hopes dashed

By ERIC SCHURER
Sports Writer

Fighting for what may have been an outside chance at a playoff berth, the Midland High basketball team outscored Odessa Permian 21-7 in the final quarter to earn a 68-55 victory at the Chaparral Center Tuesday night.

Despite the win, the Bulldogs' 20th against 10 losses overall, Midland's slim playoff hopes were dashed, thanks to victories by District 4-5A leaders Midland Lee and Abilene High.

"When you throw athletes like that together on the floor, they're always going to try hard," Bulldog Coach Jack Stephenson said of his troops' efforts.

It took Midland three quarters, but the Bulldogs proved Stephenson right.

NOW, WITH just the inter-city rivalry left with Lee on Friday, the Bulldogs could let the rest of the season run its course.

But Midland's Darrell Davis is one man who isn't conceding the Rebs a thing in Friday's contest.

"We came in with a positive attitude tonight (against Permian)...with revenge on our minds," said Davis, who led all scorers with 23 points against the Panthers. "We want to get them Friday, we owe them one, too."

Although it took them a while, Midland showed it could provide Lee a tough obstacle to the district's top spot with a powerful fourth quarter against Permian.

The Bulldogs played a sluggish first half, falling behind by as many as eight points, 36-28, midway through the second quarter. Permian's Danny Servance, nine points, and Terry Williams, eight points, capitalized on easy lay up chances by continually beating the Bulldog press. But stubbornly, Midland refused to give up.

Six straight points by Davis brought Midland within two, 36-34 with under a minute to play in the half, but the Panthers took a 38-35 margin to the drawing board.

AFTER SHOOTING almost 60 percent from the floor in the first half (16 of 27), the Panthers went ice cold after intermission hitting on just 15 percent as Midland abandoned its press and fell back into a 2-3 zone.

Caution: This may contain material judged to be offensive by some readers

Once again it's question and answer time when serious events of the day are dissected and explained at the reader's request....

Q—Since when did the Midland Reporter-Telegram start publishing pornography? I think it's an outrage.

A—I read Ed Todd's column on his judging a beauty contest at the Chap Center, too. I am surprised Ed was permitted to participate in something as frivilous as judging young ladies in brief attire.

Q—Is it really true that you couldn't get into the fight at the Chap Center Saturday? What possible reason could they give for barring a member of the press?

A—I went to the wrong door. But I suspect it was really because I was wearing a tie. Bob Brundage had shown up earlier wearing a tie and the entire Chap Center security force had been immobilized by the shock. I think, however, the real reason was that Mike Stevens, who oversees what goes on at the Chap, was afraid I'd estimate the size of the crowd...as I did for a basketball game in Odessa.

Q—I notice that you said the crowd for the Blake-Medel fight was the largest ever for an athletic event at the Chap Center, yet the story said the crowd was 3,000, somewhat less than the capacity of 5,000. Who is right?

Matt Holton/Reporter-Telegram

A—My guess was based on the number of vehicles outside in the parking lot and parked on the drive encircling the campus. Bob Brundage based his count on the actual number of people inside. It all depends on who you want to believe, the guesstimate of someone who was there or someone who is experienced, dreadfully experienced, in judging the size of crowds.

Q—I read somewhere that you criticized Ed Todd for judging a bathing beauty contest. How can you criticize someone else when you once were picked to judge a chili contest and spent the afternoon judging a Wet T-Shirt contest?

A—That's different.

Q—Don't change the subject. What about that crowd Saturday. Do you think it will ever be surpassed and, if so, will they have to enlarge the seating capacity of the Chap Center?

A—The crowd Saturday will be surpassed by the turnout for the Midland College-Odessa College rematch later this month, especally if MC President Dr. Jess Parrish officiates the game, as has been rumored. If you are referring to my crowd estimate Saturday, that one will be surpassed by the NBA exhibition between the Houston Rockets and Boston Celtics. Or the July NHL exhibition between Edmonton and Montreal. The Chap Center will have to be enlarged for both events.

Q—I understand that the Chap Center may host an NBA exhibition game sometime in the future. Do you know anything about it?

A—How do rumors like this get started, anyway?

Q—What did MC Coach Jerry Stone say after he read your article comparing Spud Webb, the former Midland College cager, and Wake Forest's Tyrone Bogues after their nationally-televised duel?

Q—It so happened I asked Jerry what he thought. His look said I was guilty of treason, but his words were "No comment," a curt no comment, of course.

Q—What do you think of Spud after his performance against SMU on TV Sunday?

A—I think that against Wake Forest the week before, Spud was already playing SMU. Sunday it looked like the 5-7 point guard deliberately set out to embarrass some people in the game against the team from his own town. Why he would want to do that is a mystery.

One side comment...from the response to a column note Sunday that there were just two hockey fans in Midland. The number seems to be as understated as my estimate of the MC-OC basketball crowd in Odessa was overstated.

Walt Hazzard, an 'ugly' kind of scorer

Man and boy, full-court or free-throw line, no one threw in any uglier baskets than Walt Hazzard. They came from everywhere, under his arms, under his legs, behind his back, underhanded, overhanded, line drives, soap bubbles, rim shots, prayers, fallaways.

They would have had to improve merely to be called "garbage."

"He squirts points," a disgusted rival coach once complained. "He's like an octopus."

He was like a golfer with a loop in his backswing, a batter with a hitch. If he were a pitcher they would have described his motion as "herky jerky."

THE ONLY thing he did right was win. If you wanted to see pretty jump shots from the top of the key, picture layups, sky hooks, dunks, you didn't watch Walt Hazzard. "He looks like he's throwing up an anvil," Eddie Gottlieb once complained.

But you did notice after a while that it went in. Walt Hazzard was in the position of the celebrated golfer who once scraped the ball to the hole via two sections of rough, a sand trap and frog hair and then tapped in an 85-foot putt and when his opponent who had taken a more proper route to the hole exploded, he inquired sweetly "Are we playing 'how?' Or 'how many?'"

WALT HAZZARD played how many. He was like the skilled card player who made do with a pair of treys or raked in pots with king high. As a schoolboy, he led Philadelphia's Overbrook High to an 89-3 record. At UCLA, he played on the shortest team that ever won the NCAA and it went 30-0. As the ball players said it, Walt Hazzard specialized in capital "W's."

There was also a reason for his unorthodoxy. Growing up in the playgrounds of Philadelphia, young Walter Hazzard faced the kind of competition which would not stand there, let him set up for the classic, high-style mid-court jump shot with the elbows braced just so, the wrist cocked, the arm angled. If you did that in South Philly, you wound up with a broken arm.

Recalls Hazzard: "I had guys like Wilt Chamberlain, Wayne Hightower, Woody Sauldsberry, Wally Jones out there. Sometimes the entire future draft list of the Harlem Globetrotters. Man, you had to invent ways to get the ball in the basket. It was like smuggling the ball through a picket fence. You had to shoot the ball through your legs, around corners, under their legs. You think Wilt was going to stand there while you combed your hair and smoothed your jersey and got ready to jump-shoot? You think Guy Rodgers or Playground Pete were going to step back while you got everything just right?"

BUT IF Walt Hazzard's shotmaking seemed to come out of a manual "How Not To Play Classic Basketball," the rest of his game was textbook stuff. No one whistled the all-court passes with the velocity and accuracy of a Hazzard. No one was more adept at drawing the foul as he brought the ball up court, at throwing a defender off balance, at finding the open man. Hazzard quarterbacked the teams he played for. He set the table. He was the delivery system.

He had great players to deliver the ball to in the pros. Jerry West. Elgin Baylor. But he was more than just a caddy. Somehow, Walt Hazzard threw in 45 points one night. He averaged 23.9 points in 1967-68, which was seventh in the league and only one basket behind Oscar Robertson. If no one was open, Walt Hazzard threw it in himself.

He threw elbows with the best of them but he rarely fouled out. A typical season would find him with 500 assists and only 2 or 3 disqualifications. Once, when he changed his name for a period to M. Abdul-Rahman, a rival, Rick Barry, came in to observe, "I don't care what he calls himself, I recognize the elbows. That's Hazzard."

His shoulders were broad for more than basketball. At UCLA, he was not exactly John Wooden's whipping boy but neither was he teacher's pet. Early on, the coach perceived he had to expect more of Walt Hazzard than some of his other stars.

"I remember I could make 5 or 6 outstanding plays and then I'd throw the ball away and Coach Wooden would yell 'Hazzard where were you on that one?!' Then, someone else, say a Gail Goodrich, could mess up on 3 or 4 plays, then hit a jumper and the coach would say 'Way to play!'" Did Hazzard read anything into that? Walt shakes his head. "You recognize that some players can take criticism and continue to play their game. Others need encouragement or they go in a shell."

WALTER PAPHAEL Hazzard is now the coach himself, the fifth UCLA has tried since Wooden. The alumni is being fair. They told him to take as much time as possible to rebuild a champion — take a few months. Westwood fans are notorious for their patience. Like African dictators. Or hungry lions.

Walt Hazzard has to figure a way to get this ball in the basket. He has to figure a persona. A great coach has to be a great actor.

He can't be John Wooden. The scent of new mown hay does not waft off Walt Hazzard. You learn more than basketball in the mean streets of Philadelphia.

Maybe he should throw a towel over his shoulder and look at basketball owlishly through horn-rimmed glasses and an open tie and collar a la John Thompson. Only, there's no guy out there wearing two undershirts and cruising the court like a runaway flying horse for him.

The team he inherited is a little like Walt Hazzard. It has to find a way to beat you. It doesn't come immediately to mind, it calls for some degree of inventiveness, improvisation. It is a team which, like the coach, cannot afford mistakes, or discouragement. It is a team which the experts look at and say "I don't see how in the world they can beat you." But that's what they always said about the coach, too.

New kid steals Gretzky thunder

NHL All-Stars

CALGARY, Alberta (AP) — The Campbell Conference had the established guns in Wayne Gretzky and his sidekicks from Edmonton. A shootout in the National Hockey League All-Star Game would have fit their style perfectly.

But they forgot to count on a new sharpshooter, a kid by the name of Mario Lemieux.

Lemieux earned most valuable player honors Tuesday night as he scored twice and set up another goal in leading the Prince of Wales Conference to a 6-4 victory over the Clarence Campbell Conference. Lemieux, the top pick in the 1984 draft by the Pittsburgh Penguins and the most touted rookie to enter the league in more than a decade, had plenty of help.

HIS LINEMATES, fellow rookie Kirk Muller, the No. 2 pick overall last summer by New Jersey, and 33-year-old Anders Hedberg, the oldest All-Star, combined with Lemieux to form the most effective forward unit. And defenseman Ray Bourque of the Boston Bruins set an All-Star Game record with four assists.

"It's easier to play in an All-Star Game because nobody hits and you can control the puck more," said Lemieux, the top rookie scorer this season with 60 points. "That's my strength.

"I didn't expect to be here at all. There are so many good players in our division. But when I was named to the team, I said I would come and do my best and hope I could show I belonged."

He did that, in style.

With the game tied 2-2 midway through the second period, Lemieux's perfect pass found Hedberg in the slot and Hedberg's backhander beat goalie Grant Fuhr at 13:46. Four minutes later, Bourque and Muller teamed with Lemieux on a pretty three-way passing play and Lemieux beat Fuhr from 10 feet.

One minute after Gretzky pulled the Campbells within 4-3 with a short wrist shot at 10:09 of the final session, Lemieux collected his second goal.

"I took the puck at the red line from Raymond and he went to the net and I just cut in," said Lemieux, who made his spectacular move on the play sound routine. "I didn't even look at the net and it went in."

THE CAMPBELLS closed to 5-4 when Winnipeg's Randy Carlyle beat goalie Pelle Lindbergh of Philadelphia with 2:51 to go. The hosts pressured for the tying goal and nearly got it with 26 seconds left. But Gretzky's backhander toward an empty net hit Lindbergh.

"I just threw it at the net," said Gretzky. "He made a hell of a save. He just got the pad on it."

BULLDOGS

"We started to get out of it in the first half, but I didn't want to give Coach (Charles) Pattilo much time to adjust to it at halftime," Stephenson said. "We knew we had to give them something, and if they have a weakness, it is outside shooting. So we sat back and let them fire."

Permian (7-6 in district, 17-11 overall) never solved the Midland zone.

While the Panthers were firing from outside, Midland was still struggling to find its rythym.

Although Midland took its first lead when Davis converted an offensive rebound into an easy basket to make it 39-38, just over a minute into the final half, the Bulldogs let it slip away.

Permian came back with six straight points before Midland forward Anthony Deande responded with three quick buckets of his own to get the Bulldogs' juices flowing again before the third quarter buzzer. Deande was the only other Bulldog in double figures with 12 points.

THE COMBINATION of strong foul shooting in the bonus situation and good shot selection allowed Midland to outscore the Panthers 15-2 to open the quarter and turn a close game into a rout.

The junior varsity game was also a close one but Midland managed to hang on to a 45-36 victory over Permian. The win upped the JV squad's record to 20-10. Craig Crawford led all scorers with 10 points.

The sophomore game was won by Permian, 63-59.

REBELS

Despite hitting 14 of 25 shots in the first half, Lee held a meager 32-29 lead over the Bronchos. The Rebs were feeling a little uneasy at that point.

"Odessa was hitting too," noted Marczynski. "I was a little worried, but we cam out and got them with our press. We kept getting open shots off the fast break and everything seemed to go in."

But in the third quarter, Lee broke the game wide open with a 26-point blitz that saw the Rebels connect on an awesome 13 of 16 shots. Suddenly the lead was 58-40.

"I told the kids that they played one of their best games and we probably needed it the way Odessa High was shooting. I told Thurman to get the ball to whoever was the hottest shooter and I guess he thought he was the one. He scored 10 points in the first quarter and didn't miss a shot," said Stueckler.

OHS GOT a big 20-point effort from Keith Smith and 12 more from Tracey Blaylock, but the Bronchos just couldn't keep pace with winging Rebels. Lee also forced OHS into a lot of turnovers and controlled the boards, 32-20.

In the junior varsity contest, Lee erased a fourth quarter 15-point deficit to take a 50-47 win. Quintus Hampton led the charge with 14 points and Mike Courtney sealed the win with a slam dunk, one he almost missed by getting part of the rim. "I think the kids learned some things with that victory," said Lee assistant coach Bill Jordan. "We've got only three district losses and everyone else has at least five, so we've won this division too."

PLAYOFF NOTES: Lee may still be involved in a district playoff with Abilene High. If AHS beats Cooper and Lee beats Midland High Friday, the two will have to have a single game playoff to determine which team enters the playoffs as the district champion while the loser will go as the runnerup. The same holds true if both lose Friday. If such a game is needed, it will probably be played in Big Spring Tuesday at 8 p.m. at the Dorothy Garrett Colisieum. Regardless of the outcome of such a playoff, both teams will enter the state playoffs next week.

SPORTS IN BRIEF

Edberg upsets Lendl

By Associated Press

TENNIS

DELRAY BEACH, Fla. — Stefan Edberg's 6-4, 7-6 upset of top-seeded Ivan Lendl highlighted the Lipton International Players Championships. The quarterfinal between No. 7 Hana Mandlikova and Canada's Carling Bassett, seeded 10th, was postponed due to falling temperatures. Martina Navratilova and Chris Evert Lloyd advanced to the semifinals over Bettina Bunge 6-4, 6-4, and No. 12 Barbara Potter 4-6, 6-4, 6-1, respectively.

BASKETBALL

HUNTINGTON, W.Va. -Marshall University officials remeasured a miracle shot by guard Bruce Morris at 89 feet, 10 inches and said they would submit it to the Guinness Book of World Records as the longest shot in history. The school originally measured the shot at 92-5¼, but established the "official" distance as 89-10, using different parameters.That still would be seven inches longer than the existing Guinness record of 89-3 set by Virginia Tech's Les Henson in 1980 against Florida State.

TRACK AND FIELD

LONDON — British athletes who refuse random drug testing will not be considered for international competition, track and field officials said.

The British Amateur Athletic Board said athletes will be asked to sign a special register pledging their willingness to be vetted. "If they do not, then they will not be invited to represent Britain in our sport," said Nigel Cooper, the board's secretary. Although more than 20 sports in Britain are subject to year-round testing, checks in track and field have been confined to competitive events, meaning that athletes who use drugs out of season and during training can manipulate their intake to avoid detection.

Inspired 7-4 Sampson keys Rocket blast off

By Associated Press

Ralph Sampson put on an inspiring performance in the All-Star Game Sunday, and no one was more inspired by it than Ralph Sampson.

"I came out ready to play after the All-Star game," Sampson said after scoring 27 points to lead the Houston Rockets to a 126-114 victory over the Phoenix Suns Tuesday.

Houston Coach Bill Fitch said of Sampson: "I felt like when it got down to 11 points, he was one of the guys that said, 'Let's take over,' and I thought he did. I thought he played a strong game at that point, and I'm sure it will add even more to his confidence."

Mavericks 131, Cavaliers 112

Rolando Blackman scored 12 of his season-high 35 points in the third quarter as Dallas streaked from a halftime tie to a 20-point lead on the way to a runaway victory over Cleveland.

Eddie Sutton remains a Hog

From Wire Reports

BASKETBALL—Eddie Sutton says he is staying at the University of Arkansas as coach and that a statement he made about frustrations with college recruiting was an off-the-cuff remark. "I'm not going anywhere," Sutton said in response to a Dallas-datelined story. In that article, he said, "It's frustrating. I know people are winning because they're doing things illegally." At a news conference Tuesday, he said, "I am not going to the pros. My comment in talking to a writer in Dallas was, 'Sometimes a few of us get frustrated having to compete against those who are cheating and maybe that's what will drive me to the pros.'"...

Indiana's Bobby Knight says he wouldn't hesitate to again bench his Hoosier starters and start freshmen in their places if he thought the team needed to be shaken up. Knight says, he thinks star guard Steve Alford has improved his play since he was benched earlier this season. Alford was selected last week as player of the week in the Big Ten Conference...

Texas, winner of 91 straight SWC games, corraled 55 first place votes and 1,192 points to remain No. 1 in the AP Women's College poll. Long Beach State, No. 2, received the other five votes of the coaches. Texas Coach Jody Conradt is pleased over the way her team has avoided the crippling injuries of last year. But, "I'm getting tired of hearing how weak the Southwest Conference is. If we lost a couple of games then we'd suddenly hear how tough the league is. My record against Southeastern Conference teams this year is as good as it is against Southwest schools. What's so tough about the Sun Belt Conference. All they have is Old Dominion and Western Kentucky. We have two ranked teams."

Other top 10 teams are: 3. Old Dominion. 4. NE La., 5. Mississippi. 6. La. Tech, 7. Georgia. 8. Ohio State. 9. Auburn. 10. Penn State...

SE Louisiana's Robert Cousin, who scored 50 points in two games, helping keep SELU unbeaten in the Gulf Star Conference, was named Player of the Week...

AUTO RACING— Rusty Wallace beat out fellow NASCAR Grand National stock car drivers Geoff Bodine and Dale Earnhardt to win the pole position for Saturday's Goody's 300 Late Model Sportsman race. Wallace, driving a Pontiac, toured the 2.5-mile, high-banked Daytona International Speedway at an average speed of 187.438 mph...

BASEBALL—Funeral services were scheduled today for John L. Mokan, 89, an outfielder who played for the Pittsburgh Pirates and the Philadelphia Phillies in the 1920s.

GOLF— Oak Hill in Rochester, N.Y. has been selected as the site of the 1989 U.S. Open. It will be third Open and fifth USGA competition to be played on Oak Hill's East Course. Dr. Cary Middlecoff won the Open at Oak Hill in 1956 and Lee Trevino captured the title there in 1968...

Officer tells of Moses offer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A policewoman posing as a prostitute recounted at the sex trial of Edwin Moses how the Olympic gold medal-winning hurdler allegedly offered her $100 for two sex acts, and added that the conversation also was monitored by a fellow police officer.

Officer Susan Gonzales testified in Municipal Court on Tuesday that Moses asked her, "How much for an hour?" and then offered her $100 for two sex acts, which she said Moses referred to in slang terms.

Moses was then taken into custody early Jan. 13 by other officers who were part of the Hollywood Trick Task Force working the Sunset Boulevard area.

Moses has pleaded innocent to the misdemeanor charge of solicitation of prostitution. If convicted, he could receive a six-month jail sentence, a $1,000 fine, or both, although first-time offenders are usually given a small fine and placed on probation.

AFTER MS. Gonzales completed her testimony, the officer who had monitored her conversation with Moses via a radio transmitter, Kent Ridenour, supported her version of what happened.

Ms. Gonzalez said she had not made any notes of her conversation with Moses in which he allegedly offered to pay for sex.

"Do you think of yourself of having a photographic memory?" defense attorney Edward Medvene asked her.

"No," she answered.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Thursday, February 14, 1985

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Your determination will carry you to new heights in the months ahead. Physical fitness proves to be as important as mental agility in attaining a long-sought goal. A new love has a better chance of success than some people think. Be your own person! Real estate plays a key role in your finances. Actress Florence Henderson, "20/20" host Hugh Downs, longtime sports announcer Mel Allen, former Sen. Paul Tsongas of Massachusetts, San Diego Padres pitcher Dave Dravecky, Seattle utility man Larry Milbourne and the Milwaukee Brewers' Jaime Cocanower share your birthday. Also born on this date: Comedian Jack Benny.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): The work you have done behind the scenes will serve you well in a business meeting. Leave distant affairs well enough alone. Travel might not bring the results you expect.

TAURUS (April. 20-May 20): Catch up on odd jobs before launching a new project. Singles who attempt to solve their romantic problems will be successful. Let go of the past. The future looks bright!

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Your sensitivity to another's financial plight leads you to take action. Loans are likely to be granted. Someone who previously rejected your ideas is more receptive now. Forget past grievances.

CANCER (June 21-July 32): A shift in business plans proves disruptive. A change in personnel will ultimately work to your advantage. Keep the faith! A Virgo makes romantic overtures. Know your own heart.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Take steps to secure your future. People who have rejected you in the past suddenly say "yes." Pay more attention to correspondence. Answer letters and return phone calls promptly.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Keep up the pace at work and you will soon see the results you want. The projects you undertake now are earmarked for success. Family harmony is restored.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Many options are open to you now. New mentors and romantic partners are part of the picture! Happiness comes to those who make wise choices. Do what is best for all concerned.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A different approach will help you win a partnership or new clients. A family problem could make you feel uneasy. Open new lines of communication with your relatives. Greater harmony is possible.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Romance takes a temporary back seat to career or business. Recycling an old idea could mean new profits. Eliminate unnecessary expenses. An unconventional friendship could prove very rewarding.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): An aggressive approach is not the way to impress a partner or higher-up. Tact, however, can work wonders! Seek a quiet work environment when tackling a complex project. Romance shows improvement.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Unexpected developments at work could give you an unusual opportunity. Act on a Leo's advice; he or she makes a wonderful mentor. A social event could bring new happiness your way.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A personal relationship needs more nurturing. A lively Leo opens new financial or romantic doors. Think twice before accepting a favor from someone you distrust.

There is a whole compilation of safety plays to show you how you can limit your losses in a particular suit. But sometimes your safest play is to ignore them all.

The auction is reasonable. Once North has shown a good hand by freely rebidding his clubs at the three-level, South is justified in introducing his second suit, then going on to game over partner's preference.

West led the ace of hearts and shifted to a club. If trumps break 3-2, the hand offers no problem. Declarer simply wins, draws two rounds of trumps, then runs clubs until someone ruffs. But what if trumps are 4-1?

Obviously, then declarer would run the risk of losing control of the hand. There are ways to protect against losing two trump tricks in the event of a 4-1 split, but none of them will really work on this hand.

However, declarer can afford to lose two trump tricks and a heart. Therefore, the safest way to play the hand is simply to allow the defenders to make their two trump tricks while there is no chance of declarer losing control!

Declarer should win the club in hand and cash the king of trumps. If both defenders follow, the contract is assured. Declarer simply abandons trumps in favor of running his clubs. Let's assume that West ruffs the second club and reverts to hearts. Declarer ruffs, crosses to the table with the ace of trumps and continues clubs. Whether or not West ruffs, the defenders can get no more than three tricks, because declarer still has an entry to the board with a diamond ruff.

Bartender 'Coach' on series 'Cheers' dies of heart attack

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Nick Colasanto, an accomplished director who became famous as the dimwitted but lovable bartender "Coach" on the award-winning NBC comedy "Cheers," died of a heart attack while watching television at his Hollywood home. He was 61.

Colasanto, who had been recuperating following a two-week hospital stay for a heart ailment, was stricken Tuesday morning, said network spokesman Bill Kiley.

Colasanto directed episodes of numerous television shows and once said he preferred directing to acting, but it was as an actor that he became well-known and was nominated for Emmy and Tony awards.

Colasanto was remembered fondly by co-workers on the "Cheers" sitcom, which is set in a Boston bar. A planned filming session was canceled Tuesday night, said spokeswoman Joy Peterson.

"Nick was a wonderful man and a wonderful actor," co-star Shelley Long said through publicist Lisa Kasteler. "I'll miss him very much but I feel fortunate to have known him as long as I did."

"He's the sweetest man any of us knew," the show's producers, Les and Glen Charles, said in a statement.

Colasanto was nominated for an Emmy Award for best supporting actor in a comedy series in 1983 and 1984. He appeared in dozens of television shows, the motion pictures "Raging Bull," and "Family Plot," and several Broadway plays, including "Across the Board Tomorrow Morning," which earned him a Tony nomination.

The actor recently had reassured friends and co-workers that he was planning to resume work soon on "Cheers," Kiley said. Colasanto missed filming for the last five shows. Four more are to be filmed to complete the season.

"Death was very sudden. He was sitting up in a chair watching television," Kiley quoted the actor's doctor as saying. The physician did not want his name revealed.

Colasanto, a Providence, R.I., native, had played barkeep Coach Ernie Pantusso since "Cheers" went on the air in September 1982. The series, which won Emmys as best comedy series in 1983 and 1984, ranked 22nd on the Nielsen ratings last week and is 16th for the year.

Last year, Colasanto described "Coach" as innocent and sweet, but not dumb.

"He may be intelligent but he's not worldly wise. He's so positive. That's what makes him funny."

Colasanto directed about 100 episodes of television shows, including "Bonanza," "Columbo," "Name of the Game" and "Hawaii Five-O."

"It's tedious waiting around when you're an actor," he said. "Directing is more physically active and less emotionally demanding."

He had all but given up acting when "Cheers" came along.

"I'd done the picture 'Raging Bull,' playing the Mafia chief, and when 'Cheers' came along, my agent suggested me to the producers," Colasanto recalled. "It was a long stretch from that to the 'Coach.' But I read for them a few times and connected."

Colasanto was single with no children. Like the character played by Ted Danson on "Cheers," he was a recovering alcoholic.

"I never drank when I worked so I thought I had control of it," he said. "My Friday nights and Saturday nights were nonstop drinking." The actor said he stopped drinking more than eight years ago after joining Alcoholics Anonymous.

Sinatra's songs tell you all you ever wanted to know about love

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Having problems with your love life on Valentine's Day? Need advice? Just want to share your romantic feelings with others? Don't write Dear Abby or Ann Landers. Refer to the man who knows the most about amour, Frank Sinatra.

Frank Sinatra

The superstar crooner has recorded more than 100 songs about love, based on a list compiled by the public relations firm of Solters, Roskin, Friedman, Inc.

Sinatra has given advice to the lovelorn, expressed his disbelief about love, sang its glories and bid farewell to lovers.

He's also admitted his love for just about everything — and everyone — in songs such as "I Got a Gal I Love," "I Love My Wife," "I Love Paris" and "I Love You," which has three different versions.

Sinatra has been a polite lover in "Can I Steal a Little Love" and "Mind if I Make Love To You?," and a disbelieving one in "I Can't Believe That You're In Love With Me" and "Love Lies."

He's warbled about the end of a love affair in "Don't Take Your Love From Me" and "When Your Lover Has Gone," and also given advice to the lovelorn in "Hello, Young Lovers" and "Tell Her You Love Her."

But one thing appears certain, and Sinatra admits it himself in "I Fall in Love Too Easily."

LOS ANGELES — Steven Greenberger is looking for his Valentine in the fast lane this year and hopes others will merge the same way by using his new service called Tail Dating.

It's based on the notion that people see each other in cars and want to meet, but have no chance when one exits the freeway or barely makes it through the red light, leaving the other behind.

"It's a natural thing, especially in Los Angeles, where there are 5 million cars," said Greenberger, a 30-year-old bachelor.

Tail Dating costs $29 for an introductory membership and features a shiny, neon-looking magenta and yellow on black bumper sticker, the key to the operation.

If a member sees someone he or she wants to meet who is driving a car with that bumper sticker, the member has only to jot down the license plate number and get in touch with Tail Dating.

The service sends a personality profile to the person in the other car, without telling the recipient the sender's last name. It's up to the recipient to contact the person who sought the meeting.

The introductory membership provides the bumper sticker, personality profile and three cards to have the profile sent to three people.

"People are always checking each other out," said Greenberger "This is a way for them to meet. And what's great about it is that it's safe."

Kerrey is described in the magazine's February edition as "the divorced father of two (who) dates Debra Winger."

Kerrey said of his inclusion on the list: "It's depressing...I prefer not to be an eligible bachelor."

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Disbarred lawyer Mary Evans is "fitting in just fine" on a car stereo assembly line following her release from jail where she served 10 months for helping a convict-client escape.

Ms. Evans, 28, spent 139 days on the lam with William Timothy Kirk before the pair were arrested in August 1983 in Daytona Beach, Fla.

D. Glenn Hodges, president of Kimberlin Heights Industries, Inc., said he offered Ms. Evans the job out of sympathy for her family.

"We all make mistakes. There's a time to pay for them and a time to quit paying. It's time to leave her alone," said Hodges.

Ms. Evans had been assigned to defend Kirk on murder charges when, apparently out of emotional sympathy or dependency, she slipped him a gun at an Oak Ridge psychiatrists' office in March 1983. Kirk used the weapon to overpower three guards and make his escape.

They lived in a motel and bet on races at a Daytona dog track until their August 1983 arrest at the Daytona Beach telegraph office.

A matter of ethics

Gresham preaches conservation

By BILL SCHULZ

ATLANTA (AP) — Grits Gresham, who parlayed hunting, fishing and a gift of gab into a reputation bigger than even his bass stories, says ethics and respect for the prey are as important to hunting as downing the quarry.

Gresham, who drew a national following in 13 years on television's "American Sportsman," uses his reputation to preach conservation of animals and habitat whenever he gets a chance.

"The bottom line is, we are losing one-half million acres of wetlands every year," said Gresham, now shooting editor of Sports Afield Magazine.

He also said that hunters must show far more consideration for other hunters and game they are pursuing.

"IF YOU can't hunt ethically get out of it," he said in an interview during the Shooting Hunting and Outdoor Trade Show. "Two, develop increasing respect for the game. I don't think society will tolerate a hunter not having that respect.

"When you've taken an animal, it's a trophy. We've got to encourage people to look at it that way. Europeans carry that to the extreme. One thing you don't see bird-shooting in Europe, you don't see a bunch of birds piled in a pile. They are placed, neatly."

The so-called "slob hunter," Gresham said, probably "is more than just a small minority that causes these problems (for other hunters). Whatever it is, it's far too many.

"We have to address these problems more aggressively."

Another problem is the destruction of wildife habitat, Gresham said, giving the Wildlife Management Institute credit for a lot of work on that project.

"It's had an absolutely enormous impact on saving or restoring wildlife habitat," he said.

THE BIGGEST key to the problem is in Washington, Gresham said.

"So many of the habitat-destructive projects are financed by the federal government," at a high cost to wildlife and to taxpayers, he said.

An example, he said, is farmland worth $100-$150 an acre that occasionally floods.

"Washington puts up a flood-control district and levees it (the flooding stream) or channelizes it," he said. "Now the land's worth $1,500 an acre, the owner is a millionaire and the public has paid for it."

One way to make lazy mule deer move is to throw rocks in canyon bottoms.

Midlanders fortunate when it comes to mulies

Texas has long been known for its massive white-tailed deer numbers, especially those in the Edwards Plateau, of which the Hill Country is the most famous section. The state has also been recognized for its desert mule deer hunting in the rugged southwestern section of the state called the Trans Pecos.

Midlanders are fortunate because they are close to excellent deer hunting for both species. The range of the Edwards Plateau whitetails and the Trans Pecos desert mulies merge near a poorly defined line from Dryden to Fort Stockton. Along that line lies the best section of Texas to indulge any deer color preference — black, white or grey.

One point along that line is near Sanderson. Though the area is best for mulies, or as they are sometimes mistakenly called, blacktails, the ranches around Hell's Half Acre provide a handsome number of whitetails to fill hunter's icechests.

WHILE IT seems too early to consider deer hunting, Sanderson outfitter G.W. "Zac" Zachary says he'll begin booking hunts in the next two weeks or so, and that's not including carryover hunters from this season.

During the nine-day 1984 season in Terrell County, Zachary, five guides and 18 hunters located 18 mule deer — all of them older than 4 1/2 years, above seven points and wider than 17 1/2 inches.

"The desert mule deer, while still a mule deer, is naturally smaller than the Rocky Mountain mule deer," Zachary said. "Because we get so little rain in West Texas, there's simply not enough forage for the animals to put on book-class mass. But don't kid yourself, these are still impressive animals."

THEY CERTAINLY were. The hunters who paid $1,500 for access to the deer, guides, food, lodging and 33,000 acres found a range of take-home racks. In the first four-day hunt, one hunter shot the largest buck of Trans-Pecos Guide Service's short history — an 11-pointer measuring 21 inches.

But Terry Todd of Nagcodoches eclipsed that mark five days before the season closed Dec. 2. Todd, who was on his second TPGS hunt, had said he would hold out for a truly massive buck in 1984, even if it meant going home with nothing.

Then, because fellow Nagcodoches hunter Rob Atherton found a 23¼-inch eight point with 5½-bases on the break day between the first and second hunts, Todd felt even further pressed to make good.

"You bring a guy out here to show him a good time, and what does he do? He shoots the biggest buck of the year while you're asleep," he said.

Todd's time came Nov. 28, the next day. While Atherton was trying to fill his white-tailed buck tags, Todd and guide Kendall Billings happened upon an 11-point, 6½-year-old toad that had 22 inches of air between his horns. With one 150-yard shot from his .270 Todd had his ticket home.

THE TICKET, as well as being wide and tall, was massive. Each base was 5 inches thick, and that thickness extended up the beams into the tines — the back of the rack was slightly webbed.

The flexibility of Zachary's hunting arrangements is no clearer than in Todd and Atherton's story. Even when Atherton had all the mule deer he was legally entitled to, he still had the opportunity to shoot several whitetails, which he passed on. He said he wanted on to match his mulie.

NEXT WEEK: More on Trans Pecos Guide Service and planning now for desert mule deer and whitetail hunting.

Fishing for dollars

ONE OF THE larger nonaligned fishing tournaments in Texas is the KCKL Radio Greater Cedar Creek Lake Big Bass Tournament.

This year the tournament will guarantee $11,600 (with $5,000 going to first place) for 10 places. It's scheduled for March 30-31 at Cedar Creek Lake, which sits about 90 miles southeast of Dallas.

The nonprofit tournament last year paid $6,250 to Alvis Jordan of Henderson, who caught an 8.28-pound black bass to win. Prize money totaled $14,100.

Along with the winning prizes, hourly prizes of $100 will also be awarded this year. Registration is $35.

Entry blanks are available from Fred McBurney, KCKL Radio, Malakoff, Texas 75148. The phone number is (214) 489-1238.

Confidence is as important for weekender as the tournament pro

By BILL SCHULZ
Associated Press Writer

ATLANTA — Confidence is just as important for the weekend angler as it is for the tournament pro, according to Ricky Clunn, the only three-time winner of the BASS Masters Classic.

Confidence totally controls average anglers "and it dictates their outcome 90 percent of the fishing trips they go on," Clunn said. "That's why kids are such great fishermen, because they're so enthusiastic.

"They don't know all these reasons why you shouldn't be catching fish today, and they work hard and they don't get down. They're very positive.

"I think sometimes knowledge gives us not only reasons to catch fish, but reasons not to catch fish and we tend to sometimes emphasize reasons why we shouldn't be catching fish much more than why we should be catching fish."

Even on the tournament circuit, top anglers who lose their confidence stop catching fish, while anglers who lack top ability but have tremendous confidence succeed.

"I'm convinced that all the ability in the world is worthless without confidence," Clunn said during the Southeastern Fisharama in Atlanta. "Ability never changes. If anything, you should always be improving.

"The confidence is the one thing that's hard to maintain on the same level. And for me, the thing that will make me go into a slump quicker than anything else is that loss of confidence."

Clunn said there is no recipe for building confidence in your fishing ability, but the process starts with study and continues with practice, trying different baits, different techniques and different conditions.

"For me," he said, "it boiled down to me initially listening, reading, listening to people and getting the general knowledge, but I still couldn't put it together until I got out on the water by myself.

"I went through the struggles and frustrations, trying to figure out what the fish are doing. It's very painful because there's many days when you get out there and you don't do any good. But all of a sudden, boom, you figure it out.

"You figure it out. That's the key."

Learn general information about fishing a body of water, but "not that they're fishing this type of bait in five feet of water around stumps. That's usually something that happened yesterday," said Clunn, who set the record for fish caught in a Classic with a three-day limit of 21 bass weighing 75 pounds, 11 ounces in 1984 on the Arkansas River.

"You might start there, but you need to keep an open mind and figure our what these fish are doing today," he said. "It takes a while. Confidence will not come overnight. And once you gain it, then you are going to have to fight to keep it.

"Anybody can maintain confidence on those good days. It's those tough days when you really find out how much confidence you have."

Korean dissident calls election gains 'victory'

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Opposition leader Kim Dae-jung, who returned home from two years of self-exile less than a week ago, today called his new party's surprising gains in the National Assembly elections a "great victory for democratic forces."

Faced with the challenge to its authority, the ruling party of President Chun Doo-hwan said it will work with its opponents but declared stability in South Korea will be maintained.

Tuesday's National Assembly balloting saw the hastily formed New Korea Democratic Party emerge as the country's second strongest party, exceeding even its own expectations.

The outcome was likely to inject a fresh note into legislative proceedings that have largely been dormant during the past four years.

The new opposition party, which calls Chun a military dictator, is backed by South Korea's two leading dissidents — Kim Dae-jung, who returned from self-exile in the United States last Friday, and Kim Young-sam. Both have been barred from political activities since 1980.

With final results in at mid-afternoon today for the 92 two-seat districts, Korean media networks and headquarters of various parties gave the government's Democratic Justice Party 87 seats and the New Korea Democratic Party 50.

The rest of the seats were split among the old minority and splinter parties and independents.

With 92 seats in the 276-member, single-house assembly divided on a proportional basis, the ruling party should get another 61 seats to ensure its sizable margin, while the new opposition party should gain 18 more.

Before the voting, opposition figures had predicted the new party would get 20-35 seats.

Kim Young-sam

The election campaign had drawn large, enthusiastic crowds and the voter turnout was tentatively put at a record 84.2 percent of the country's 24 million eligible voters. The last election was held in 1981.

There were no reports of major disturbances or election irregularities.

While ultimate power rests with the president in South Korea and Chun's term does not expire until 1988, the election was seen as the first test of popular support for the government since Chun rose to power following the assassination of President Park Chung-hee in October 1979.

The president's office did not comment on the voting tally.

Soviet bloc has 'most serious' rights violations

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department, in its annual review of international human rights problems, says Soviet-bloc nations have "the most serious" rights violations, while "real progress" is being made in Latin America and the Caribbean.

And although the report praised the rights records in most democratic countries, the situation in Uganda, one of Africa's few parliamentary democracies, was described as "grave," with tens of thousands reported killed as a result of insurgent terrorism and government counter-measures.

Other countries singled out for unsually harsh appraisals were Albania, where conditions were said to be "exceptionally bad," with "extremely harsh prison conditions," and North Korea, described as "one of the most highly regimented and controlled" nations in the world.

Among anti-communist countries found to have rights problems, the report said there was a "general deterioration" in Chile following the imposition of a state of siege in November. The measures taken by the government included the internal exiling of 257 persons without trial and severe restrictions on political activity. The report also noted, however, that leftist terrorists were responsible for an undisclosed number of murders and hundreds of bombings last year.

Other pro-Western countries where human rights performance was said to have improved last year included the Philippines, South Korea and El Salvador.

The 1,453-page report, which is mandated by Congress and has been issued annually since the late 1970s, covers conditions in 164 countries through the end of 1984 and, in some cases, early 1985.

Asserting that objectivity was an important goal of the department's annual review, the report said that "while the Soviet Union presents the most serious long-term human rights problem, we cannot let it falsely appear that this is our only human rights concern."

According to the report, "Soviet performance in the realm of human rights fails to meet accepted international standards. The regime's common response to efforts to exercise freedom of expression is to incarcerate those concerned in prisons, labor camps or psychiatric hospitals."

Vietnam, a close Soviet ally, maintains "pervasive" surveillance and control over its citizenry, while the pro-Hanoi "puppet government" in neighboring Cambodia is responsible for "executions, forced labor, denial of legal process, forced relocations and arbitrary arrests."

The study said human rights groups have estimated the number of political prisoners in Cuba at between 250 and 1,000 and that many suffer from deficient medical treatment and deplorable living conditions.

But in an intervew shown on the Public Broadcasting Service on Tuesday night, Cuban President Fidel Castro said there are no Cubans detained for their political or religious beliefs.

Mexican police searching for kidnapped DEA agent

GUADALAJARA, Mexico (AP) — Mexican special police fanned out through western Mexico in a search for a U.S. drug enforcement agent kidnapped by suspected drug traffickers, and security was tightened for other agents and their families, authorities said.

Sources close to the case, who spoke on condition of anonymity for security reasons, said Tuesday hundreds of Mexican special agents, provided with technical assistance from U.S. experts, were hunting for Enrique Camarena Salazar.

But so far, they said, no major clues have surfaced.

Camarena, 37, was kidnapped last Thursday about 100 yards from the U.S. Consulate in this city, 322 miles northwest of the Mexican capital, where he has been helping coordinate, with Mexican authorities, a war against major drug traffickers during the past five years.

Four unidentified gunmen grabbed the unarmed Camarena, a 10-year veteran of DEA, after he left for a luncheon date with his wife and forced him into the back of a car, DEA officials and witnesses said.

In Mexico City, U.S. Ambassador John Gavin told a news conference Tuesday that following the abduction, security was increased for DEA agents and their families. He said the "families of those agents that we feel might be in danger" are being sent out of Mexico.

Gavin asserted that the U.S. and Mexican governments "will not be intimidated by underworld elements."

Meanwhile, the pilot of a small plane working for the Mexican Department of Agriculture who was helping Camarena on the side, was also abducted two hours after Camarena was kidnapped, the sources said.

Andes' 'lost city' actually well-known

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

The expedition to a "lost city" in the Peruvian Andes that University of Colorado archeologists recently announced with great fanfare involved well-known ruins that are even touted in tourist guidebooks as an interesting place to visit.

At a Jan. 31 news conference, the Colorado archeologists described the site as a "lost city" and issued a news release headlined "Pre-Incan Find May Rival Machu Picchu," the famed mountaintop ruins of an Incan city in southern Peru.

"The site," Thomas Lennon, a leader of the expedition, said then, "has been the subject of rumors and unsuccessful expeditions since the beginning of this century, if not from the time of the Spanish conquest" in the 16th century.

Lennon's announcement, reported on Page 1 in the Feb. 1 editions of The Washington Post and The New York Times and prominently elsewhere, did not claim the discovery of the site — he gave credit to "a Peruvian expedition" in the 1960s.

Jury selection to begin in Mattox bribery trial

AUSTIN (AP) — Jury selection was scheduled today in the commercial bribery trial of Attorney General Jim Mattox, which is expected to last at least three weeks.

The first state witness will be heard Friday with an unusual Saturday session a possibility.

State District Judge Mace Thurman selected a panel of 92 possible jurors Monday with one of the qualifications being that each could serve at least three weeks if they were among the 12 selected for the trial.

"I'd like to have a jury made up of working people," Mattox told reporters after pleading innocent at the opening of the trial Monday. "I just want people that will be fair."

The trial was in recess Tuesday and will be in recess Thursday.

Mattox says it will be "a long, complicated trial" that may cost Texas taxpayers as much as $500,000.

Mattox was indicted in September 1983 on charges that he threatened to put the Houston law firm of Fulbright & Jaworski out of the municipal bond business unless one of its partners, Tom McDade, dropped efforts to question Mattox's sister in connection with the lawsuit involving the state, South Texas rancher Clinton Manges and Mobil Oil.

Fulbright & Jaworski represented Mobil in the case, which was settled last year.

McDade will be the first state witness presented Friday.

Mattox said he planned to take the witness stand later.

Roy Minton, Mattox's top attorney, said an agreement was made Monday with Travis County District Attorney Ronnie Earle and his assistants on a defense request to examine the partnership agreement between Fulbright & Jaworski and the Dallas bond firm of Dumas, Huguenin, Boothman & Morrow, which handled most of the bonds involved. Later the law firm bought out the bond firm. Details of the agreement were sealed by the court, Minton said.

Ex-detective: Texas man arranged tanker's end

HOUSTON (AP) — A Houston businessman arranged the sinking of an oil tanker off the South African coast for a group of Greeks who had scuttled smaller vessels in the Mediterranean Sea, a former Scotland Yard detective said.

Peter Griggs, a former chief superintendent with London's Metropolitan Police, testified Tuesday that Frederick Soudan was the "man up front" in the tanker sinking.

Federal prosecutors allege Soudan, 41, stole 200,000 tons of oil from its owner and ordered it delivered to Durban, South Africa, in the tanker Salem. According to a 23-count indictment, Soudan and four other men arranged for the ship to be sunk off the Senegal coast on Jan. 17, 1980, to cover up the theft.

As a result of the alleged oil fraud, South Africa had to pay a $30.5 million settlement to the owner of the oil, Shell International Trading Co. Shell lost $15 million on the $56 million oil cargo and insurers lost another $10 million.

Soudan has been jailed in lieu of bond since May.

Griggs, who testified for federal prosecutors in U.S. District Judge Carl O. Bue's court, investigated the case for almost a year after the Salem sank and issued a 25-page report on the incident.

British authorities were interested in the case because Soudan took out $24 million in insurance on the Salem with Lloyd's of London, the former detective said.

Griggs said that less than a month after the sinking, Soudan said in a police statement he owned the Salem, but had little other property.

Soudan told police the Salem was chartered through Anton Ridel of Holland. But Soudan said he was unaware of the ship's course or whether it had delivered oil cargo to South Africa.

But Griggs said Soudan "knew what was going on at every stage of the voyage."

Griggs said he went to South Africa in March 1980 to investigate the sinking and learned Soudan and Ridell had met with officials of the nation's government to discuss a secret shipment of oil to South Africa.

South Africa was eager to acquire oil because members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries refused to sell to the country because of its racist policies.

Griggs said that during his investigation, he concluded the sinking was thought up by Greek businessman Nicholas Mitakis and a gang of Greeks who had been sinking small vessels in the Mediterranean Sea and "decided to have one big coup."

Griggs said Ridell recruited Soudan.

Senate votes to extend veterans' housing program

AUSTIN (AP) — The Senate has voted to extend the popular veterans' housing program and to allow Texas to transfer prisoners, such as those threatened by other inmates, out of state.

Sen. Lindon Williams' proposed constitutional amendment would raise the limit on bonds for the veterans' program from $500 million to $1 billion.

Williams, D-Houston, said the program, which allows eligible Texas veterans to borrow $20,000 at less than 10 percent interest for the purchase of a home, would run out of money by November if the bond limit is not increased.

He said his proposed amendment would extend the housing program to military personnel on active duty.

The measure was sent to the House on a 30-0 vote Tuesday. If it is approved by the House, it will go on the November statewide election ballot.

Sen. Ray Farabee, D-Wichita Falls, sponsored a proposed constitutional amendment that would allow the state to transfer prison inmates out of Texas.

Farabee said more than 40 states now have similar authority, and the Texas Department of Corrections requested the measure. He said prisoners could be transferred for medical reasons, so they would be closer to home, or to rid a prison of a troublemaker.

Another example, he said, "would be a state witness who might be in danger in a given setting."

Farabee's proposal, approved 31-0, also would go to the voters in November. His bill implementing the amendment was sent to the House on voice vote.

Senators also approved and sent to the House a bill that would set up a two-tiered program for judicial retirement, with future judges included under a less generous benefit formula than current judges.

The judicial retirement bill is a money-saver, according to its sponsor, Sen. Kent Caperton, D-Bryan. The fiscal note says it would cost the state $500,000 the first two years, $1.9 million the following two years and so forth.

"If we do nothing," Caperton said, the state would be paying out $200 million a biennium for the retirement system starting in the year 2010.

Couple could get 10-year sentence in child's death

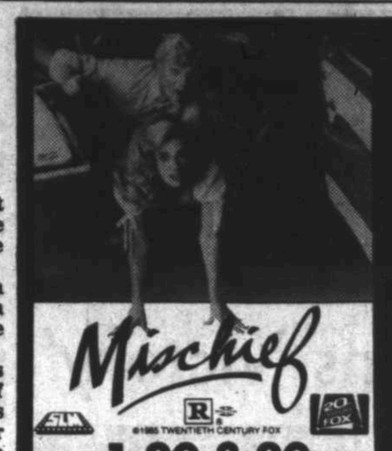

WACO (AP) — A Fort Hood couple face up to 10 years in prison after their conviction in the December 1982 bathtub scalding death of their infant daughter and injury to their son.

A U.S. District Court jury deliberated six hours over two days before convicting Sgt. Richard Lee Fesler, 24, and Deborah Ruth Fesler, 27, on Tuesday.

Mrs. Fesler sat expressionless as the verdict was read. Fesler leaned over the counsel table and rested his head on his hands.

The couple face maximum sentences of 10 years in prison and a $5,000 fine for "recklessly causing serious bodily injury" to their 11-month-old daughter, Laurie, or three years in prison and a $1,000 fine for involuntary manslaughter in the death.

They also could be sentenced to one year in prison and a $2,000 fine for recklessly injuring their 2-year-old son, Carl.

Jury finds man guilty of drug possession

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

After rejecting an offer of a 35-year-sentence for possession with intent to deliver because his attorney felt the state couldn't prove he intended to sell drugs, a 40-year-old Midland man prosecutors called a "pusher" was convicted Tuesday of the lesser offense of possession.

Reese X. Barnes was sentenced to two 40-year sentences in the Texas Department of Corrections for possessing less than 1 gram of substances which tests indicated contained an unknown amount of cocaine and methamphetamine.

His wife, Barbara, who also was charged with possession of methamphetamine with intent to deliver after the couple's arrest Dec. 6, gasped when the sentence was announced before lowering her head and crying quietly in 238th State District Judge Vann Culp's court.

The Barneses also face misdemeanor charges for possession of marijuana with intent to distribute.

In the absence of the two-man, 10-woman jury, defense attorney Carmen Eiker, a Midland County assistant district attorney before entering private practice in May 1982, made a motion to dismiss the trial, arguing the state had failed to prove its indictment for intent.

"NOT ONLY can they not prove possession with intent to deliver methamphetamine, they can't even prove possession according to the judge's instructions," Ms. Eiker argued before the jury after Culp denied the motion.

According to testimony during the two-day trial, Barnes was arrested in a pickup at a doughnut shop after police narcotics detectives executed a search warrant.

Ten bags of marijuana and a packet with .02 of a gram of powder which contained an undetermined amount of cocaine were found in a paper bag on the front seat of the pickup, the detectives testified. Cocaine also was found in .14 of a gram of powder found in a pink balloon in Barnes' pocket.

A packet containing .1 gram of powder which Department of Public Safety chemist David Legg testified had an unknown amount of cocaine and methamphetamine was found on the bedroom floor of the Barneses residence at 400 S. Benton. Mrs. Barnes was arrested at her residence after police searched the house.

Ms. Eiker reminded jurors of the definition of possession according to the judge's instructions.

"It's not good enough that he had care, custody, control or management of the house, but of the actual substance."

SHE ALSO POINTED out that the state had failed to prove the pickup Barnes was driving was registered to him and that testimony from the detectives failed to include seeing Barnes place the paper bag containing the drugs in the pickup or carry it during the two stops he made while they had him under surveillance.

She also pointed out that when the detectives left the house to follow Barnes, no officer was left behind to watch for persons entering or leaving the house. The detectives, during surveillance, could only see the back door through which Barnes exited before his arrest.

A food scale found in a bedroom closet that was introduced as evidence was not tested for drug residues, she argued. Earlier in the day, Detective Sgt. John Anastasio admitted under cross-examination that what the scales were used for was "pure speculation."

"The state hasn't proven anything...that puts him in control of the narcotic substance on that day," Ms. Eiker said, adding the amount of powder found "is negligible as far as evidence. If you add it all up together, it doesn't even total a gram. And we don't know what quantity or quality we're talking about. Even their chemist admitted that."

Assistant District Attorney Jack Connors asked the jury to be "reasonable."

"YOU BE THE judge of whether we have an intent to deliver. All we can do is infer the intent from the defendant's actions.

"OK, so maybe we didn't actually prove it was his pickup," Connors said. "Whose is it? What about the cocaine in his pocket? Did he get up and put on someone else's pants?

"Let's don't let the burden of proof and beyond a reasonable doubt shadow our common sense," he said.

The jury deliberated for two hours before finding Barnes guilty of the lesser included offense. Possession with intent to deliver, a first-degree felony, carries a sentence of 5 to 99 years or life and a fine of not more than $10,000. Possession, a second-degree felony, carries a fine of two to 20 years and a fine of not more than $10,000.

But during punishment arguments, enhancement allegations of a July 26, 1977, conviction for delivery of heroin in Tom Green County was introduced. Barnes pleaded not true to the allegation.

With an enhancement, the offense increases to a first-degree penalty, punishable by 5 to 99 years or life.

Lt. Hank Norton of the Midland Police Department testified for the prosecution that fingerprints of the defendant matched those in a penitentiary packet of the man convicted under the same name for delivery of heroin.

"He's a pusher," said Tom Morgan, administrative assistant district attorney. "He got five years back in 1977. Does he care about contaminating other people? Did he learn anything in prison. No, he came to Midland County — to your county and was in possession of cocaine and methamphetamine and marijuana. I think 60 years is reasonable."

"They're talking about a conviction that is eight years old," Ms. Eiker argued. "Sixty years is not fair or appropriate in this case. I'm not up here asking for mercy; I'm asking for justice in this case."

Anti-abortion protesters picket Planned Parenthood banquet

By MARK LEWIS
Staff Writer

About 40 anti-abortion activists and their children picketed a Planned Parenthood banquet at the Petroleum Club Tuesday night to protest the family planning agency's support of abortion rights.

"We want the public and especially those who support them (Planned Parenthood) financially to know the truth about this organization," said Orson Guenthner, president of West Texans for Life. "And that truth is that they are the largest supporter of abortions in this country."

The placard-waving protesters marched up and down the sidewalk near the front door of the downtown club between 6 and 7 p.m., but they made no attempt to prevent people from going inside. Before their annual banquet began, Planned Parenthood officials responded to Guenthner's charges that they encourage women to have abortions.

"That is totally 100 percent incorrect," said Tricia Shelton, director of community relations for Planned Parenthood of the Permian Basin Inc. "We do not encourge or push abortions. Planned Parenthood is trying to prevent unwanted pregnancies (by teaching women about contraceptives). Only by preventing unwanted pregnancies can we prevent abortions."

According to Charles Seltzer, board president of Planned Parenthood of the Permian Basin, "Very little of what we do has anything to do with abortions. By counseling on birth-control techniques, we prevent the need for an abortion."

Local Planned Parenthood clinics do not perform abortions, but women who choose them are referred to doctors or clinics where they are performed. According to Guenthner, agency counselors don't tell women enough about abortion.

"They're not really telling them the whole truth," he said. "I have no problem with them doing pregnancy testing (or teaching about) contraceptives. But we don't feel the women are functioning under informed consent."

Guenthner said women who want abortions should be told that fetuses are human beings.

"It's too easy (to have an abortion), especially in Texas," he said, citing with approval a bill recently introduced in the Legislature which among other things would require women to be given information about the risks of abortion before being allowed to have one.

Ron Jaap/Reporter-Telegram

Rachel Childers, 2, accompanied her mother R'Evelyn at a West Texans for Life protest Tuesday night outside the Petroleum Club, where Planned Parenthood of the Permian Basin was holding its annual meeting.

R'Evelyn Childers, another member of West Texans for Life, said she went into the Midland Planned Parenthood clinic for a counseling session about a year ago "because I wanted to see what they were saying to girls."

Ms. Childers was visibly pregnant at the time, and she said the first thing her counselor talked about was abortion.

"She talked to me for about three minutes, and at the end of our little talk she gave me an Edna Gladney pamphlet."

That pamphlet about the Fort Worth home for unwed mothers was all the information she received about the adoption alternative, according to Ms. Childers.

"I find that hard to believe," Ms. Shelton said. "I don't know what the circumstances (of Ms. Childers' visit to the clinic) were, but she came in as a pro-lifer and I think she heard exactly what she wanted to hear."

MISD joins class-action suit against asbestos manufacturers

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

It could well be called the asbestos paradox. Once thought to be a miraculous material that could save lives in the event of a school fire, asbestos now has been identified as a cancer-causing agent.

Across the country, school boards that just a few generations ago required the use of asbestos in school construction are now trying to banish the material from those same schools.

On Tuesday, Midland Independent School District trustees followed the lead of more than 12 other Texas school districts, voting unanimously to join a class action suit against the manufacturers of asbestos material to recover costs of removing asbestos from its buildings. The decision is subject to the recommendation of MISD attorney Charles Tighe.

Trustees announced the decision after a two-hour executive session. MISD decided to join the suit, which names 10 manufacturers of the material, in anticipation of the Friday deadline set by a U.S. District Court judge in Beaumont.

The decision, however, limits the defrayed cost of "determining the manufacturer of the product in its buildings to $5,000," according to assistant superintendent Garland Champman.

While all the 149,856-square-feet of asbestos in MISD buildings has been sealed off at a cost of $181,714, Chapman said, he anticipates the Environmental Protection Agency would eventually order removal of all the material from school buildings. He refused to estimate the district's actual cost for removing it, but noted that levels in the 10 MISD buildings found to contain the material are in compliance with federal standards.

Chapman said 10-12 other school districts were expected to join the suit before the Friday deadline. Among those already involved are districts in Ector County, Beaumont, Hurst-Euless-Bedford, New Braunfels, White Settlement, Grapevine, Dayton, Birdville and Kirbyville.

Council grants residents along Garfield Street five-year reprieve

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

After several weeks of objecting to a city staff proposal to widen and rebuild Garfield Street between Golf Course Road and Cimmaron, citizens living along Garfield were given a five-year reprieve Tuesday by the City Council.

During its regular session in City Hall Chambers, the council also approved stop signs for eight locations, established its single member districts and set up April 6 polling places, noting that the plan could eventually send some voters to two places.

The idea to widen and rebuild Garfield was proposed last fall by the city's Public Works Department and drew vocal objections from the residents, who claimed Garfield would be too close to their residences and almost render useless some driveways.

Instead of rebuilding and widening Garfield to include a continuous left turn lane from south of Golf Course Road to Wadley, the city will pour on a five-eighth inch overlay from Golf Course to Cimmaron. At its intersection with Golf Course, Garfield will be widened to add a left turn lane. The city staff was instructed to begin acquiring rights of way south of Golf Course on Garfield, which would lead to an eventual connection of Garfield with Andrews Highway.

Councilman David Godfrey, in making this motion, added, "I realize that work on Garfield will only last five years but that will give us time to see if the traffic count numbers are correct. If everything takes place at the end of five years we'll be looking at widening Garfield."

Mayor G. Thane Akins also warned the residents: "My personal feeling is that whatever we do today won't change anything in the future. Garfield is on a section line. As the city growth continues, traffic will continue to grow. It (widening Garfield) will adversely affect someone whenever it is done. Whether it is at this point in time or later, it will have to be done."

Gramm wants tax simplification, but not at expense of oil industry

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm will stand and defend President Reagan's ideas for a constitutional amendment to balance the budget, for a simplified tax code (up to a point) and for a strong national defense.

But the Texas senator Tuesday night during a talk before the Society of Petroleum Engineers said Reagan would be on his own when it came to the proposed defense budget and a tax code that eliminates deductions for the oil and gas industry.

Speaking to about 300 persons at Ranchland Hills Country Club, Gramm said he supports a tax reform bill and expects one to be passed by Congress this year. But former Treasury Secretary Donald Regan's plan being studied by Reagan eliminates the intangible drilling costs and depletion allowance.

Gramm said he's trying to get support from all minerals industries — not just oil and gas — to quash the idea of ending the depletion allowance. "If it's only oil and gas, we'll end up on the short end of the stick on that debate," Gramm said.

The first-term Republican senator who replaced John Tower in January noted that for some industries the depletion allowance isn't important. "But for the coal industry the depletion allowance is six times more important than intangible drilling costs," he said.

VIEWPOINT

Midlanders worry about effect of tax-simplification plan

By MARK LEWIS
Staff Writer

In last week's State of the Union message, President Reagan reiterated his support for tax simplification. But a plan put forward by his Treasury Department to streamline the tax system by lowering tax rates and eliminating many deductions has met strong opposition from those who benefit from those deductions.

The idea behind the tax-simplification plan is to reduce tax brackets from the current 14 to three — 15 percent, 25 percent and 35 percent. But while the federal tax bite would be slashed, so would deductions — limits would be placed on what could be written off as a business expense or a charitable contribution, mortgage payments could only be claimed on the principal residence, and fringe benefits and capital gains would count as ordinary taxable income, to name only a few of the proposed changes.

According to U.S. News and World Report Magazine, about 56 percent of individual taxpayers would pay less under the plan, 22 percent would pay the same and 22 percent would pay more.

For businesses, the corporate tax rate would also be cut, but so would depreciation allowances and other investment incentives. The Treasury plan, which Reagan has called "simpler and fairer" but hasn't formally endorsed yet, is opposed by the oil and gas industry, and that opposition was reflected when the Reporter-Telegram asked 13 randomly selected Midlanders how they felt about tax simplification.

"It's a good idea, but it needs some work," said Dick Reed, 3609 Louisiana Ave. Reed, a field engineer, agreed the current system needs to be overhauled.

"It's too complicated — nobody can figure out their own taxes. And there's too many loopholes, which discourages people from being as honest as they used to."

Dick Reed | Steve Cole | Milton Robinson | Lois Mitchell

But he worries what would happen to the oil business if intangible drilling costs are disallowed as a deduction.

"I'd sure hate to see that," he said.

Steve Cole, 3112 Tealwood Place, an independent oil operator, shares Reed's concern.

"I'm not too happy about it (the tax plan). It could adversely affect the oil business, and that would directly affect Midland's economy."

Realtors are also up in arms about the proposed plan, according to Mike Bray, 1601 Gulf Ave., who manages the real-estate division for a local oil and gas company.

"It's the same as with the oil industry," he said. "Nobody would be in the apartment business without the tax benefits. If we really go to a flat tax it would take a lot of incentive out of risk, and people wouldn't take that risk."

Despite his reservations about this specific plan, Bray thinks the tax system should be simplified. Many Midlanders agreed with the idea of tax simplification but worried that attempting to change the system would only make things worse.

"It's not a bad idea, but it'll confuse things more," said Milton Robinson, 944 N. Dallas St., a cook.

Other Midlanders took a more cynical approach. Bookkeeper Geneva Harris, 418 E. Pine Ave., favored the idea because she always uses the IRS short form anyway.

"In the bracket I'm in, it would be good," she said, but the people who benefit from deductions and tax loopholes won't let it go through: "The people with the money rule everything, and they're the ones who would lose (under the plan), so..."

"They're going to get you one way or the other," said Thelma Beer, Route 9, Box 9796, a meter reader for the city of Midland.

For RaNon Caraway, Route 2, Box 19A, the plan would be good because "that way everybody would pay something instead of just a few paying it all." But the homemaker also doubts it will be adopted: "It's hard for small people who don't have any great income to get anything done."

Mary Roderick, 2303 Fannin Ave., likes the idea — "It'll be much better for everyone. It'll be more fair." — but worries that charities will feel the pinch if people can't deduct their contributions.

"I hate to see that," the bookkeeper said.

But for Lois Mitchell, P.O. Box 1442, who works nights as a computer operator and days as a babysitter, tax simplification isn't something to which she devotes a lot of thought.

"I work day and night and I don't have time for this," she said.

Man files for District 2 council seat

From Staff Reports

C. Meekins

Clarence Meekins has filed for the District 2 seat on the Midland City Council.

A 15-year resident of Midland, Meekins is a senior engineering technician for Arco Oil and Gas and holds an active real estate license.

He has been active in several civic groups and said he had been interested in seeking a City Council position prior to the lawsuit filed last spring which resulted in the single member district election this year.

"It was something I had planned to do in the past and this is a good time to implement the desire," he said.

His campaign will be "stressing neighborhood interest in the areas, promoting unity and cooperation between the people of District 2 and the City Council, and continuing the no-tax increase philosophy."

Complaints from residents in that area about the lack of street paving or water and sewer service would be addressed, according to Meekins, "but I would look at the city as a whole."

"I think someone should be on the council who can work with the council and get things accomplished for his district. You can't split the council and make it six against one."

Meekins, 42, was born in Roswell, N.M., and lives at 405 E. Dengar. He served in the U.S. Air Force and U.S. Army National Guard. He holds a degree from Midland College and has taken courses at Permian Basin Graduate Center.

He is a past United Way allocations committee member and former board member of the Parks and Recreation Commission. He is serving on the Planning and Zoning Commission.

Meekins was appointed to the Selective Service Board by former Texas Gov. Bill Clements and serves as political activities chairman for a Civic Action Program at Arco. He is a credit committee chairman and loan officer for a credit union.

He and his wife, Gina, have two sons, Mickele and Oliver.

Marcum declares for council seat

From Staff Reports

G. Marcum II

Gordon G. Marcum II has announced he is seeking re-election to the Midland City Council under the new single member district plan. Instead of trying to retain his Place 2 seat under the previous at-large plan, Marcum will be running for one of the two at-large positions.

"I am seeking re-election to continue my pledge to the citizens to make our city government more efficient, less costly and more responsive to all our citizens. Since there will be a change in the makeup of the council under the new single member district plan, I feel my eight years of experience will best ensure all citizens quality services for their tax dollar," he said in a prepared statement.

Marcum said he doesn't consider himself a politician, but he does have a sincere desire to "serve and provide the leadership necessary to keep Midland a great place to live and, with your assistance, proceed to make it an even better city."

He is serving on the boards of MidTran Commission, City of Midland Health Facilities Corporation, Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission, Midland Centennial Commission and Young Life.

He has served on the boards of Planning and Zoning Commission, March of Dimes, Midland County Legal Aid, American Cancer Society and Human Relations Council. He is a Sunday school teacher and elder at the First Presbyterian Church.

As president of Marcum Drilling Company and an independent oil and gas operator, he is a member of the Permian Basin Landmen's Association and state and county bar associations.

Marcum has lived in Midland 30 years. He and his wife, Margaret, a local artist, have a daughter and two sons.

Junior Achievement honors 'companies'

By RON GILMORE
Staff Writer

A crowd of 150 students, parents and company representatives gathered at the Midland Hilton Tuesday evening for the 23rd Annual Junior Achievement Awards Night to honor "companies" formed by high school students and counseled by area businesses.

Judge Pat Baskin, the program's emcee, presented the "Company of the Year" award to Mid-Lee Productions, sponsored by RepublicBank First National.

"There are those who watch things happen, those who make things happen and those who never notice anything happening at all," said Baskin.

"Junior Achievement is a program where businesses can work directly with the youth in teaching them about the free enterprise system," said Steve Spackman, senior program coordinator. "It gives them a hands-on experience in how a business works."

"It's an economic education," said one company advisor. "The students set up a 'company' and capitalize it by selling stock. They elect a board of directors and actually manufacture a product which they sell and distribute. They go all through the steps a real business does."

The student-run businesses produced and sold "products" such as wooden toys, first-aid kits and hazard lights.

Awards were given for top sales both individually and for the company as a whole. Individually, awards went for sales of $25, $50, $100, $200, $300, $500 and $600. Company awards went to Memoron (Chevron USA Inc.), YAPB (Drilco Industrial), Globe (Conoco Inc.) and WTA II (Southwestern Bell) for $1,000 in sales; Rebel Manufacturing (Gulf Oil Exploration and Production Co.) for $2,000 in sales and Mid-Lee Productions (RepublicBank First National Midland) for top sales of $3,000.

Other honors were handed out for perfect attendence during the semester-long program for grades 9 through 12.

COUNCIL

An ordinance establishing the single member district concept in city elections was approved. This was the result of a lawsuit filed last May by the Black Advisory Council and League of United Latin American Citizens. Instead of three at-large seats being up for election this year, under the new plan voters will decide on two at-large seats and one each from District 1 and 2. Only persons living in those districts can vote in that specific race.

Facing a similar lawsuit is the Midland Independent School District, although an agreement hasn't been worked out between the two parties in time to be implemented for this year's election, according to MISD Superintendent Dr. Joe Baressi.

He said this morning MISD had proposed a plan similar to the city's which calls for four persons elected by districts, two at-large and the mayor at-large. But the plaintiffs are wanting a plan with five seats elected by districts and two at-large.

By setting up different districts for the school and city, Councilman Gordon Marcum II said "the potential is there for some people having to vote in three different places."

Baressi noted that the school district's four-three plan involved some different district lines than the city's, but he believed they were close enough that different polling places wouldn't be required. But with a five-two plan, "that would complicate it."

For this year's election MISD will be sharing the city's nine polling places.

"We hope that whatever the final result is, it will encourage involvement and won't discourage it by making people go to more than one polling place," Baressi said.

Polling places for the City Council election are:

— Precinct 1, containing county voting precincts 208, 209 and 211, Lee Freshman High School.

— Precinct 2, containing county voting precinct 306, De Zavala Elementary.

— Precinct 3, containing precincts 304 and 305, Midland Freshman High School.

— Precinct 4, including precincts 205, 307, 309 and 310, Central Fire Station.

— Precinct 5, containing precincts 104, 105, 308 and 402, Senior Citizens Center.

— Precinct 6, containing precincts 102, 103 and 106, Alamo Junior High School.

— Precinct 7, including precincts 405 and 406, Rusk Elementary.

— Precinct 8, containing precincts 206, 207 and 403, Fannin Elementary School.

— Precinct 9, including precincts 204, 404, 407, 408 and 409, Quanah Parker Elementary School.

The council approved setting up stop signs at the intersections of Desta Drive and Wadley, Desta Drive and A Street, Smith Road and Air Park Drive, Smith Road and Big Spring Street, and on Melville Drive at Bluebird Lane, on Tilden Street at Orchard Lane, on Francis Street at Goode and on Missouri Avenue at Carver Street.

GRAMM

The defense budget proposed by Reagan isn't going to get Gramm's endorsement, according to the senator. "We have a budget problem and we have a national security problem. I'm not going to vote to reduce the defense to fund social programs instead of applying it to the deficit. For the last two years Congress has defended waste and cut weapons."

Gramm, who began his Washington service in 1978 as a Democratic congressman but switched in 1982 to the Republican party, offered his solution to the defense budget: Reform the way the Pentagon does business by allowing competitive bidding and second contractors. He also called for Congress to quit its "pork-barreling" by allowing Reagan to close military bases and consolidate some military functions.

By reducing the military budget, the federal deficit would be cut, theorized Gramm.

He attributed part of the increasing deficit to Congress, claiming that legislative body failed to implement all of Reagan's proposals four years ago.

In 1982, Reagan got 40 percent of the savings he wanted from Congress. In 1983, according to Gramm, Congress did not pass a binding budget and delivered no savings. In 1984, "not only did he not achieve any savings, but spending grew at 13 percent."

The president's budget proposal sent to Congress a few weeks ago "calls for substantial reform of every area as it relates to the private sector. It gores every ox," Gramm said.

Despite the lack of Congress' total support over the past four years, Gramm said the country had improved. He cited an increase in employment by 7.3 million jobs, a 46-year high in investments, a record in the number of military enlistments and in the recruits' IQs.

MISD

Greenwood Independent School District has decided against the action, said Superintendent Samuel Martin. GISD has been assured by its contractors that its "buildings contain no asbestos material," he said.

In other action, trustees unanimously agreed that a new elementary school, slated to open in September, will be called "The Ruth Cowden Scharbauer Centennial Elementary School."

The decision resulted following the recommendations of a committee who reviewed and prioritized the names submitted by seventh grade social studies students.

Trustees also:

— Granted three-year contract extensions to Midland High School football coach Douglas McCutcheon and Lee High School football coach Jack Tayrien.

— Granted an easement to Texas Electric Service Company for the Ruth Cowden Scharbauer Centennial Elementary School.

— Named the Midland High School baseball field in memory of longtime employee Galberson Zachery.

— Finalized revisions in board policy concerning pupil attendance requirements.

Changes in the policy, designed to conform to state law, specifies that students who accumulate more than five unexcused absenses in any class during a semester will not receive credit for the course.

Guenthner and Ms. Childers said Planned Parenthood's founder, Margaret Sanger, had studied eugenics, the science of "improving" mankind through selective breeding, under theorists in Nazi Germany, but Ms. Shelton dismissed the implied connection between eugenics and family planning.

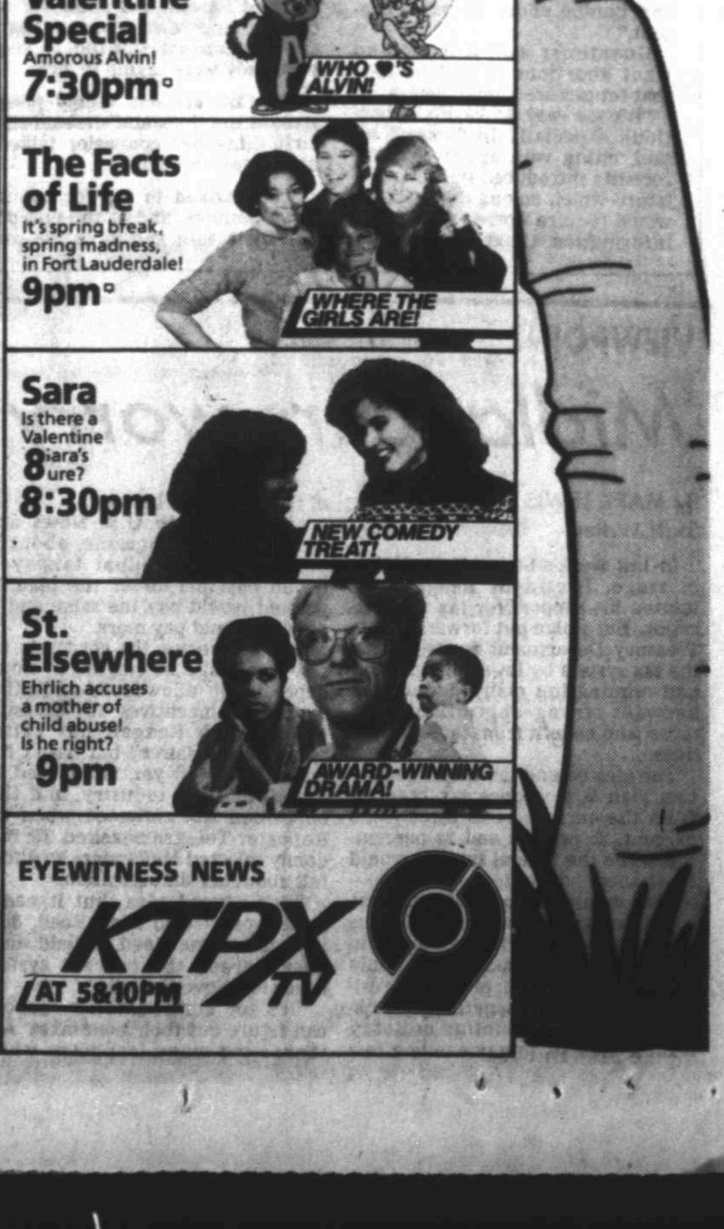

"Margaret Sanger's main accomplishment was in telling women about contraceptives and how to use contraceptives so they could plan their families," she said. "Her later interest in eugenics had nothing to do with Planned Parenthood."

VDTs blamed for eye problems

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

A 26-year-old man who works for a telecommunications firm in Fort Lauderdale, Fla., developed a severe sensitivity to bright lights, especially at night, forcing him to wear sunglasses around the clock.

In New York City a woman quit her job at a law office, saying "my eyes could simply not endure the pain any longer. After a few hours my eyes would sting, water and finally swell so that I could barely keep my eyes open. I'm 30 years old and feel like 75."

A 41-year-old computer technician in Minnesota had to get six prescriptions in 10 months to increase the lens strength in his glasses, yet he still complains of headaches that last a week.

These three people are among thousands of video display terminal (VDT) users who have developed eye problems.

Nearly 60 percent of all VDT users experience eye problems, according to the National Association of Women Office Workers (NAWOW), which recently performed a study of 423 VDT users. Nearly half of those surveyed said since using a VDT they had been diagnosed as needing glasses or have needed a more powerful prescription.

Similar complaints come in daily, according to NAWOW and the American Optometric Association, as the number of VDT users continues to increase. That number has doubled every year since the late 1970s, when VDTs were first widely used in homes and offices.

"It isn't known that VDTs cause eye problems," says Dr. Michael Smith, chief of motivation and stress research at the National Institute of Occupational Safety and Health (NIOSH). "What is known is that VDTs can aggravate existing problems."

That may explain why VDT users have experienced migraine and weeks-long headaches, temporary loss of focal ability, burning and swollen eyes, and have been required to wear bifocals, trifocals and stronger lenses while using a VDT.

The extent to which VDTs cause these problems won't be known for decades. As National Academy of Sciences researcher Dr. William Stark puts it, "people who use VDTs are our guinea pigs."

Approximately 10 million American workers use VDTs daily. By 1990 that number will be 20 million, and by the turn of the century 40 million people — nearly half of all U.S. workers — will use VDTs, NIOSH estimates.

"It's well documented that VDTs cause acute visual complaints," Smith explains. "However, there have been no chronic studies of these problems, meaning studies done over a long period of time to a wide range of people."

Smith, like many researchers, says he is skeptical about conclusions from large-scale research projects conducted in the 1980s on physical and mental effects of VDT use. VDTs were invented in the early 1940s and used mainly for military purposes until the late 1970s.

Video display terminals were adapted from televisions, and "therein lies the problem," says Stark, a professor of physiological optics and engineering science at the University of California at Berkeley. He helped write a 1982 report for the National Research Council on VDTs and vision.

Televisions "were designed for large moving objects to be viewed at a distance for a short period of time," Stark says. "We found (VDTs) are very bad ... they're not legible." He says that even a photocopy of a printed letter is sharper than the same letter on most VDT screens.

Glasses purport to limit glare

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

Have you ever wanted to look at life through rose-colored glasses? The American Optical Corp. of Southbridge, Mass., has invented a way to look at video screens through rose-colored "videoterminal glasses."

The glasses come in three tints — pink, gray and blue — to reduce glare and brighten the characters on a video screen, says Neal David, American Optical's senior marketing manager.

Different tints are necessary for the three most common types of video screens: green characters on a black background, black characters on a white background, and multicolored displays.

"For the green-on-black screen we use the pink glasses," says David, "because it's just the opposite in the color scheme, and (pink) just tends to bring out the characters and sharpen the edges." Gray tints are for black-and-white screens, and blue tints are for amber screens with multicolored displays.

Prehistory unearthed

CATAWISSA, Pa. (AP) — History is being unearthed on the banks of the Susquehanna, piece by piece.

Seven archaeologists from the University of Pittsburgh are stripping away centuries of dirt and wet clay, exposing a settlement once inhabited by Indians.

Even though it's too early in the dig to pinpoint the site's age, the discovery of small pieces of pottery indicates the settlement dates to about A.D.1000, supervisor Tom East said.

The archaeologists have been working at the site, located on the Rupert side of the Catawissa bridge, since September. Nearly 200 artifacts — arrowheads, charcoal, notched pebbles that served as sinkers on fish nets, pottery pieces, fire and storage pits and chips of flint (knocked from larger pieces in the making of tools) — had been disturbed or excavated before his team began to dig, East said.

The University of Pittsburgh submitted a bid to the state Department of Transportation (PennDOT) to do the archaeological work at the site.

While doing preliminary environmental studies last year for the new Catawissa bridge to be built next year, state Transportation Department workers discovered artifacts, PennDOT's John Elwell said.

Under orders from the state Museum Commission, PennDOT had to arrange for an archaeological dig to remove all the Indian artifacts.

"Dig" is a messy word to describe the meticulous process the team uses to unearth the artifacts.

A wooden frame draped with heavy plastic covers the roughly 25-foot trench.Inside, the smooth floor slopes gently downward, and the sharply cut walls show the colored layers of dirt, each marking the passage of time.

The floor, which is actually a grid divided by strings into two-meter squares, is dotted with artifacts.

The pieces are left where they're found, East said, so the exact location of each piece can be mapped before it's picked up, tagged and sent away.

The first two feet of dirt was scraped off with a bulldozer, East said, because earlier test digs had discovered how far below the surface the settlement was located.

The next layer was broken up with shovels until the archaeologists felt they were close to the settlement.

From that point on, the seven men have been on their knees, using trowels to dig out 10 centimeter chunks of dirt at a time, looking for artifacts.

All the dirt taken from the site is put in buckets, then sifted to make sure all possible artifacts have been found.

East and his men, wearing layers of muddy clothing to ward off the dampness, walk around the site in stocking feet to prevent crushing any of the artifacts.

Two more trenches exactly like the first will be dug, East said, to discover just how big the settlement was.

"All this could be within one big house," East said. "Until you find the edges of it, you won't know for sure."

Finding the edges means looking for "post scars," East said, marks in the ground indicating a post was once buried there.

And the work won't end there, he said.

The team has discovered fire and storage pits below the surface they're working on, which indicate a second, older settlement may lie beneath the site.

The archaeologists work 11 straight days at the site, then take three days off, East said.

They hope to have most of the settlement unearthed early in 1985.

Charcoal from the site will be dated to within a few hundred years, East said, and the style of pottery will indicate what type of Indians inhabited the site.

The findings will be useful in dating artifacts from the other sites in the state, East said.

Love-ly Valentine's Day Dinners

Valentine's Day descended from a Roman feast called Lupercalia, celebrated on February 15. Young women and men chose partners for the festival, exchanged gifts and enjoyed each other's company long after the celebration. The date and name were later changed and Valentine's Day became a joyful European custom with many romantic beliefs associated with this special occasion.

Although many of the old beliefs and superstitions have changed, the custom of giving candy, kisses or heart-felt sentiments to loved ones is still practiced.

One of the most personal ways to express your sentiments for family and friends is with special food prepared with loving care. Two superb valentine dinners are featured here ... a festive dinner for the family and an elegant company repast.

For a valentine entree to delight you family, serve Heart-y Salmon Patties, a delicious variation of an old favorite. Easy to prepare, nutritious canned salmon is flaked with a fork and combined with bread crumbs. hard-cooked eggs and seasonings. The mixture is shaped into heart-shaped patties, then fried until crisp and golden.

Convenient canned pears carry out the valentine message in a delicious Sweetheart Pear Cake. The base is a packaged pound cake mix, accented with crunchy nuts and orange peel. After baking, the cake is tipped with sweetened cream cheese, and juicy slices of canned pears. A glaze of currant jelly adds a colorful hue. For a final special touch, cream cheese is piped around the edge with a large star tip.

Elegance is combined with convenience in a regal ...er for four. For the distinctive entree, thawed split legs of Alaska King crab are basted with a savory butter sauce as they are broiled. The remaining sauce, a delicious blend of melted butter, bacon, green onion, lemon juice, garlic and tarragon is served on the side.

In an easy-to-prepare version of Cherries Jubilee, Cherries, Almondine combines ice cream, a sumptuous sauce of canned dark sweet cherries and almond liqueur, billowy whipped cream and roasted almonds in a brilliant dessert. The dark red Bings or heart-shaped Lamberts lend a festive mood to the occasion and an elegant end to a lovely evening!

HEART-Y SALMON PATTIES

1 can (7¾ oz.) salmon
½ cup fine dry bread crumbs
2 hard cooked eggs, very finely chopped or forced through sieve
1 egg, beaten
¼ cup minced onion
1 tablespoon lemon juice
¼ teaspoon salt
oil

Drain and flake salmon; reserve liquid. Combine salmon and reserved liquid with remaining ingredients except oil. Form into 4 heart-shaped patties about ¾-inch thick; pan fry in hot oil until golden brown on both sides. Make 4 servings.

SWEETHEART PEAR CAKE

1 package (16 oz.) pound cake mix
¼ cup broken nuts
½ teaspoon grated orange peel
1 can (29 oz.) pear halves or slices
1 package (8 oz.) cream cheese, softened
½ cup red currant jelly, melted and cooled

Prepare pound cake mix according to package directions; stir in nuts and orange peel. Pour half of batter into greased and floured 8- or 9-inch round or heart-shaped cake pan (see note). Bake at 350-F. 25 minutes or until wooden pick inserted near center comes out clean. Cool 10 minutes; removed from pan and finish cooling on wire rack. Drain pears; reserve 2 tablespoons syrup. Slice pears if necessary; blot with paper towel. Beat cream cheese until light and fluffy; beat in reserved pear syrup until mixture can be easily spread. Spread half of cream cheese mixture over top of cooled cake. Just before serving, arrange pear slices over cream cheese. Spoon jelly over pears, coating evenly. Pipe remaining cream cheese mixture around cake, using a pastry board and large star tip. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

Remaining batter may be baked in one greased 8½ x 4½ x 2½-inch loaf pan. Bake at 350-F. 35 to 40 minutes.

½ cup melted butter
¼ cup crumbled cooked bacon
2 tablespoons chopped green onion
2 tablespoons lemon juice
1 clove garlic, minced
⅛ to ¼ teaspoon tarragon

Thaw crab if necessary; place on broiler rack. Combine remaining ingredients; brush crab legs with sauce. Broil 5 inches from heat 3 to 4 minutes; brush once with sauce. Heat remaining sauce thoroughly; serve with crab. Makes 4 servings.

Note: Sauce may be doubled if desired.

CHERRIES ALMONDINE

2 tablespoons cornstach
Dash salt
¼ cup almond liqueur
4 large scoops almond roca ice cream
2 to 4 tablespoons roasted, salted almonds, chopped
Whipped cream or topping if desired

Drain cherries; reserve syrup. Combine cornstarch and salt; gradually blend in reserved syrup. Cook and stir until thickened and clear; stir in liqueur. Let sauce cool slightly; spoon over ice cream. Garnish with chopped almonds and whipped cream or topping, if desired. Makes 4 servings.

Peanuts made into snacks overnight or instantly

To boil peanuts in the shell for snacks, treat the peanuts like dry beans. There are two ways of cooking them.

Soak the unshelled peanuts overnight in cold water, then drain and cook in simmering salted water to cover until tender, about 1 to 2 hours.

Or cover with salted water in a pot and bring to a boil. Cover and let stand for 1 hour. Then simmer 1 to 2 hours or to desired tenderness. Drain and serve warm or at room temperature. —(L.A.T.)

Pie given chocolate twist

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

We've turned the original Pecan Cream Cheese Pie into a chocolate version.

CHOCOLATE PECAN CREAM CHEESE PIE

2 packages (each 3 ounces) cream cheese, softened
4 large eggs
Sugar
Vanilla
Unbaked 9-inch pastry shell
1¼ cups coarsely chopped pecans
¾ cup light corn syrup
⅛ teaspoon salt
2 squares (each 1 ounce) unsweetened chocolate, melted and cooled

In a small bowl beat together cream cheese, 1 of the eggs, ¼ cup sugar and 1 teaspoon vanilla just until smooth. Spread over bottom of unbaked pastry shell. Sprinkle with pecans.

In a medium bowl beat the remaining 3 eggs slightly. Gently beat in corn syrup, 2 tablespoons sugar and the salt until blended. Stir in chocolate and 1 teaspoon vanilla until blended. Gently pour over pecans.

Bake in a preheated 375-degree oven until knife inserted half-way between center and edge comes out clean — 35 minutes. Cool completely on wire rack.

Candy clues handy

By JANE CLIFFORD
Copley News Service

Don't be alarmed if a gift of assorted chocolates puts a slightly sour look on your sweetheart's face Thursday. Calories aside, there's the anxiety of biting into what might be a dreaded flavor, the frustration of having to punch every piece to find a favorite.

In an effort to reduce the embarrassment for those who give and receive sweets for Valentine's Day, I conducted an "in-depth investigation" into just how the confectioners' industry disguises the butter creams, nougats and nut chews under swirls, curls and cross-marks.

The first discovery was that there is no industry standard by which candy is coded to tell what's inside the dark or light chocolate. While all manufacturers have codes, each is unique. There are, however, some simple clues.

Most cream-filled chocolates are round, most chewy varieties are square and most nougats are rectangular. Nut clusters are obvious, even when drenched in chocolate — walnuts are bumpy, almonds are not.

Above all, look closely at the accompanying illustrations to distinguish whatever visible symbols appear atop each piece for an indication as to what's inside.

Of course, if the box is a Whitman's Sampler, there's no guesswork. The Philadelphia-based manufacturer has produced its 48-piece assortment with an index printed inside the lid for 73 years.

"It's tradition," responded Whitman's marketing director Demar Moeller, when asked why the company goes to the trouble of identifying each piece in the Sampler. "That's what's made it successful through the years. It enables everyone to pick their favorite piece."

Custard made with syrup

Associated Press

MAPLE CUSTARD
3 large egg whites
¼ cup firmly packed light brown sugar
¼ teaspoon vanilla
1½ cups milk
Maple Syrup

In a medium bowl gently beat whites until slightly foamy. Add sugar, vanilla and milk; beat gently until sugar dissolves. If very foamy, let stand until foam subsides. Pour 1 tablespoon maple syrup into each of four 6-ounce custard cups. Pour egg white mixture over syrup. Place cups in a baking pan; add very hot water to the pan until it comes up about as high as egg white mixture.

Bake in a preheated 325-degree oven until a metal knife inserted halfway between rim and center comes out clean — about 50 minutes. Cool quickly by standing cups in a pan of cold water. Chill. Serve in cups. Makes 4 servings.

Chocolate rich in symbolism

Copley News Service

They don't call them chocolate kisses for nothing.

Chocolate is frequently recognized as having aphrodisiac powers. To speak to your valentine in the chocolate-dipped language of love, check this chart to learn the symbolism of the chocolate you give or receive:

— New love: White chocolate
— Confused feelings: Assorted box
— Sweet seduction: Fruit-filled chocolate bars
— Sticky situation: Chocolate covered caramels
— Warming up: Any heart-shaped chocolate
— Cooling off: Chocolate-covered mints
— Hidden secret: Bittersweet dark chocolate

For those who are actually cooking with the lovers' favorite, here is what goes into the various types of chocolate:

— Unsweetened chocolate, "baking" or "cooking" chocolate or chocolate liquor: This is the solid that results from finely grinding cacao nibs (the meat of the cacao bean). Chocolate liquor contains no alcohol. It does have cocoa butter (50 percent to 58 percent), but no sugar, which accounts for its bitter taste. Unsweetened chocolate may be spiced, flavored with vanilla or vanillin, or otherwise seasoned.

— Dark chocolate — sweet and semisweet (bittersweet): is made of chocolate, cocoa butter and sugar and may contain flavorings such as vanilla. Varying the ratio of chocolate liquor to sugar will produce different degrees of sweetness. Chocolate chips are semisweet chocolate.

— Milk chocolate: Made of chocolate, cocoa butter, sugar, vanilla flavoring and whole milk, milk chocolate is lighter in color than semisweet chocolate. Milk chocolate is a popular chocolate for bars and candies and, until a few years ago, was the favored chocolate in America. Consumers today are testing their palates with different types of chocolate, and the country seems to be split — half prefer dark chocolate; the other half are milk chocolate aficionados.

— White chocolate: This confection has a creamy taste and buttery texture due in part to the large amount of cocoa butter. Like its darker counterparts, it also contains sugar, milk and flavoring.

Soda bread an Irish treat

By TOM HOGE
AP Wine and Food Writer

My two visits to Ireland left a memory of a warm people, a beautiful countryside and food that was undistinguished, save for the fish and breads.

The salmon and trout that inhabit Ireland's rivers and streams are superb. So are the lobsters and other shellfish. Otherwise, the meals are hearty and little more. But the baked goods, such as Irish soda bread and a potato-flour mixture known as boxty, are delicious.

When Irish poets sang of their land, they must have had in mind the breads and cakes baked daily in most homes.

That's why my favorite meal in Erin is the robust breakfast that features everything from oatmeal porridge to eggs and bacon, and, above all, the hearty soda bread washed down by strong, hot tea.

The Irish usually cover their bread with the rich local butter topped with heather-scented honey or a variety of local jams and marmalades.

Actually, soda bread is usually on the table at the main, midday meal and the evening repast known as tea. The Irish often eat the soda bread with one of the many cheeses made in their land.

Ireland, of course, is famous for its potatoes, and one of the best known potato combinations is boxty, a feature on Irish tables on Shrove Tuesday. It is a mixture of grated raw potatoes, potatoes that have been cooked and mashed, plus flour.

Boxty is usually cooked on a griddle or panfried. Most Irish households have a recipe that has been in the family for years.

Baking is a feature of the holidays, and Irish fruitcake coated with white icing has a place of honor on most Christmas tables.

Here's a recipe for soda bread given to me years ago by Kay Wrenn, an Associated Press employe who came from Ireland.

SODABREAD
1½ cups sifted flour
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon soda
2 teaspoons sugar
3 cups whole wheat flour
1 tablespoon butter, margarine or bacon fat
1¾ cups buttermilk
½ teaspoon baking powder

Sift together flour, salt, soda and sugar. Stir in whole wheat flour; add butter and mix in with pastry blender. Make a well in center of flour mixture and add buttermilk. Mix with a knife, enough to make a soft dough. Form with floured fingers into a round shape and place smooth side up on lightly-floured baking sheet. Cut a deep cross on top, letting cuts go over side of the bread. This is to let bread rise evenly and cook properly without splitting the crust. Bake at 450 degrees for 45 minutes, until a rich brown. Tap bottom of loaf. If it sounds hollow, the bread is done. When almost cool, wrap in towel for a tender crust.

Valentine's Day dinner good way to one's heart

By MARJORIE RICE
Hearst News Service

Valentine's Day is just around the corner, and it's perfectly timed for the football widow/widower who needs to get back into a romantic mood after too many hours of listening to Dandy Don and the guys wax poetic over some other tight end's moves. Now it's time for you to get into the huddle.

In celebration, here are menu suggestions for a way-to-his-heart dinner extravaganza. (It could be the way to her heart, but for the sake of simplicity, let's make our potential guest a he.) A romantic dinner for two, then.

I don't put much stock in the "Tom Jones" gnaw-on-a-drumstick-and-chew-lasciviously menu. It's much more romantic to be able to clinch between courses without first having to wash your hands.

While some of the recipes are complicated, they're long on make-ahead and short on last-minute, giving you time to serve up a little soft music, a little good champagne and maybe a tempting morsel (we're talking hors d'oeuvres here).

The couple that sautes together may stay together, but even the most ardent cook enjoys a night off, where the most that's required of him is to gaze into your eyes and eat without missing his mouth with the fork, pausing occasionally to murmur how your quenelles never were lighter. So these are recipes that you can start on early. If he must participate, let him open the champagne.

This first is a quick little spread that benefits from some refrigerator time, to let the flavors blend and mellow. Take it out of the refrigerator about an hour before serving so it will spread more easily.

TROUT PATE

1 boned smoked rainbow trout fillet (5 to 6 ounces)
¼ cup parsley leaves
8 ounces cream cheese, cut in 8 equal pieces
1 cup mayonnaise

Strip the skin from the fillet and discard. Finely chop the parsley in a food processor with a metal blade. Add the trout and chop it finely. Add the cream cheese and mayonnaise and process, scraping the bowl as necessary, until blended. Cover tightly and chill. Serve as a spread for crackers. Makes about 1¾ cups.

SCALLOPS IN SAFFRON CREAM SAUCE

2 tablespoons butter
1 tablespoon shallots, finely chopped
¾ cup whipping cream
1 dash hot pepper sauce
Salt, pepper to taste
1 thread of saffron, or small pinch of ground saffron
½ pound bay scallops
2 tablespoons fine bread crumbs
1 tablespoon butter

Melt the 2 tablespoons butter in a small saucepan over moderate heat. Add the shallots and cook until they are just wilted but not brown, about 3 minutes. Add the cream. Over high heat, bring the mixture to a boil, cooking until it reduces to ½ cup. Add the hot pepper sauce, lower the heat and season with salt, pepper and saffron, blending well. Cook the sauce over low heat for another 2 minutes, then remove the pan from the heat.

Place the scallops in ovenproof serving shells or dishes, dividing them into 2 portions. Pour the saffron cream sauce over each. Sprinkle 1 tablespoon bread crumbs over each, and dot with the remaining butter. The dish may be prepared to this point and refrigerated.

To cook, let the dishes come to cool room temperature, place them on a baking sheet and broil in a preheated broiler about 8 inches from the heat source, until golden and bubbly (2 to 5 minutes). Garnish with a sprig of watercress and serve immediately.

The following is a gorgeous main dish, one that lets you get most of the cooking and all of the mess out of the way long before the significant other comes through the door.

Yes, there's garlic in the broth, but it's subtle. And besides, if you both have it, it won't matter. The initial cooking step also cooks away much of the fat, so the bird won't flame up on the grill or broiler. This duck is a winner in other ways as well. When the poached duck is cooled, you can easily pull the rib bones away. That makes it easier to eat.

FIVE-SPICE GRILLED DUCK

1 duck, about 4½ to 5½ pounds
4 quarts water
2 tablespoons five-spice powder (available in Asian food markets)
4 slices fresh ginger
2 cloves garlic, crushed
1 cup soy sauce
7 scallions
½ cup dry sherry
1 orange, sliced

Thaw the duck, if necessary. Pull as much fat from the skin as you can. In a pot big enough to hold the duck and all the liquids, combine the water, five-spice powder, ginger, garlic, soy sauce, 4 of the scallions and the sherry. Bring the liquid and spice mixture to a boil, and add the duck. Return the liquid to a boil and immediately reduce the heat. Simmer the mixture, covered, for 90 minutes.

Remove the duck from the liquid and cool it slightly. When the duck is cool enough to handle, cut it in half along the breast and backbones. With your fingers, remove the rib bones. Refrigerate the duck, uncovered, for a few hours to dry the skin.

Grill the duck over coals on a hibachi or under a high broiler flame until the the skin is crisp and the duck is warmed through. Serve it immediately, garnished with the remaining scallions and the orange slices. Makes two generous servings, with plenty left for a duck salad the next day.

Breathes there a soul who doesn't love potatoes? This is a classic preparation, made easier with a mandoline slicer or a wide-feed tube food processor.

CRISP POTATO CAKE

¼ cup butter
3 medium baking potatoes (about 1 pound), peeled and sliced into very thin, uniform rounds
Salt, pepper to taste

Heat the oven to 400 degrees F., and set one rack as low as you can position it, another in the center of the oven.

Melt half the butter in a 9-inch skillet with an oven-proof handle. Do not let the butter brown. Melt the remaining butter in another container (a heatproof glass measuring cup placed in the oven as it preheats works very well). Tilt the pan to coat the sides with butter. Working over medium-low heat, arrange a layer of potatoes in a neat circular pattern. (When unmolded, this will be the top of the cake.) Salt and pepper the potatoes; drizzle some of the remaining butter over them.

Continue making layers, seasoning and buttering each until all of the potatoes are used. After the first layer, the precision of the arrangement is less important because it will not show. Press gently to compress the filled pan. Continue to cook on the stovetop another 5 minutes.

Put the skillet on the bottom shelf of the oven and bake the potatoes for 15 minutes, or until the bottom layer is brown. Check to make sure the butter is not burning. Lift the side of the potato cake gently with a spatula to check browning. When it is browned, transfer the pan to the center oven rack and bake until the potatoes are tender and slightly brown on top, about 20 to 30 minutes.

Drain off any excess butter. To unmold, center a serving dish over the pan and flip the skillet so the potatoes are unmolded crust side up. Cut into wedges and serve.

NOTE: To do some of this ahead, slice the potatoes into salted ice water. Dry them on paper towels.

This is Anne Willan's recipe. Creme Caramel "is one of those very simple things that just works," Willan says. This version is a bit different, because it uses chestnuts for flavor and texture, and whole eggs for firmer texture.

FLAN AUX BARRONS

1 pound fresh or canned chestnuts
Pinch of salt
4 eggs
½ cup sugar
2 cups milk
1 tablespoon rum
For the caramel:
7 tablespoons sugar
¼ cup water

For the caramel: In a heavy-based pan, heat the sugar with the water until dissolved; boil it steadily to a deep brown caramel. Willan says that it doesn't matter how much water you use in making caramel; you can use more and it will take longer, but will be easier to watch and prevent overbrowning. If you boil the water before the sugar dissolves, the sugar will crystalize before caramelizing. You also should avoid stirring very much.

Once the mixture starts coloring, it goes very fast. When the caramel is as brown as you want it, immediately pour it into 6 small (6 ounce) ramekins or custard dishes. (Yes, it is a dinner for two, but this will be great the next day.) Tilt the dishes to evenly coat the base and sides with a thin layer of caramel. Protect your hands with mitts; the caramel can give you a nasty burn. Let the dishes cool and set.

Meanwhile, peel the fresh chestnuts and simmer them in lightly salted water until tender, about 20 to 25 minutes. Drain the chestnuts thoroughly. Lightly crush the chestnuts, but leave some pieces — the mixture should not be a puree. Set the oven at 350 degrees F.

Beat the eggs and sugar and stir in the milk and the tablespoon of rum. Pour the mixture into the caramel-coated dishes and place them in a roasting pan. Pour in water to come about ½ inch from the rims of the dishes and bring the water just to a boil on top of the stove. Place it in the oven and bake until the custards are thickened but not set, about 10 to 15 minutes.

Drop the chestnuts onto the custards a tablespoon at a time so the chestnuts float throughout the mixture instead of sinking to the bottom. Return the pan to the oven and bake until the custards are set, 15 to 25 minutes longer.

Using mitts, carefully remove the dishes from the water bath. Let them cool, then refrigerate. Unmold the custards just before serving. Loosen them around the edge with the tip of a knife to make unmolding easier. Decorate with a glaceed chestnut and serve chilled.

Top food photographers create picture-perfect dishes

Hearst News Service

A 5-inch-thick sandwich is artfully constructed with layers of rye bread, crisp, curly lettuce, juicy tomatoes and thinly sliced meats and cheeses. A pickle glistens at its side, and a black olive, held by a toothpick, shines on top.

If it looks good enough to eat, it should, for millions of dollars are spent annually on food advertising. To capture food at its best, photographers act quickly, before the sauce gels or the lettuce wilts. Soft light and fresh, unblemished produce are necessities. But because food sometimes is photographed for several minutes, if not hours, techniques are used to prolong its beauty.

To keep a steak looking juicy, it's brushed with salad oil, says Maggie Waldron, food director at Ketchum Advertising. Sliced apples are presoaked in lemon juice and water to keep them from quickly turning brown. Vegetables are only slightly blanched, not fully cooked, to maintain shape and color.

Sculptured acrylic ice cubes costing $60 apiece are routinely used in liquor photos because real ice cubes melt too quickly, adds food photographer Terry Hallernan. And what looks like beads of water on a tomato might actually be drops of glycerin, individually applied with a hypodermic needle. Glycerin is used because it clings, while water might roll off at an untimely moment or evaporate.

Photographers charge $500 to $5,000 per project, depending on the task and the size of the ad budget, but food photography isn't always a piece of cake. The Federal Trade Commission, for instance, ordered Campbell Soup in 1969 to stop putting marbles in the bottom of a soup bowl to make vegetables rise to the surface in its TV ads.

Under truth-in-advertising regulations, "you can't misrepresent food," says food stylist Amy Nathan. Nathan shops for ingredients, cooks them and works with photographers to arrange artistic settings.

Ice cream also is difficult. Photographer Michael Lamotte says that years ago advertisers used colored, whipped Crisco shortening or whipped mashed potatoes in place of ice cream, which melts too quickly. Today, ice cream scoops are placed on a slab of dry ice until they're rock hard, Lamotte says. They hold their shape considerably longer.

Cook arouses 'Strawberry Passion'

GROVE HILL, Ala. (AP) — Scott Wilson is putting Grove Hill on the map with a spatula.

The 28-year-old gourmet cook opened Magnolia Inn in October 1981, serving carefully prepared plates of lasagna, veal, steaks and seafood to deer hunters and a country crowd.

Weight watchers beware. The vegetables are heaped on plates.

A dessert called Strawberry Passion — strawberry custard over pound cake with Amaretto, strawberries and whipped cream — may woo the most steadfast dieter to commit a gastronomical indiscretion.

"I can't keep eating lunch here. I'll weigh 300 pounds," groaned a departing customer on a recent visit.

The hefty, black-bearded Wilson apparently enjoys his own fare, as evidenced by the mid-section contour of his candy-striped apron.

His inn on Clarke County Route 29 in southwest Alabama timber country isn't an inn at all. It's a restaurant in a pineboard house, surrounded by pastures.

Across the fence, his father may be found loading cows into a trailer. Inside, Wilson may be found concocting rural recipes.

"I'm going to make green tomato pie next week," said Wilson, fulfilling a promise to a client in Mobile.

Although Mobile is about 1½ hours to the south, Wilson says some customers drive up on Sundays or stop in on their way to football games at Tuscaloosa in the fall.

After adding a 500-square-foot kitchen to the magnolia-shaded, 100-year-old farmhouse, he began catering for parties.

Preparing for parties in a county that prohibits the sale of liquor can be difficult, but Wilson said he tried to make up with catering for what's lost on the lack of liquor sales.

Weddings have been held outside under the pear trees in the spring with the receptions inside.

Wilson said he had given up hopes for a medical career after dropping out of Birmingham-Southern College.

A trip to Europe and a round of cooking classes from Mobile to San Francisco led to his new career.

He says people should learn better buying habits. Once people lose weight, they can maintain it by knowing what foods to buy when they shop, Brolus said.

Inexpensive lamb shanks useful in number of recipes

By MERLE ELLIS

Lamb shanks are among the least expensive cuts of lamb you are apt to find in any market. Only the breast of lamb is likely to sell for less. Yet the shanks often are overlooked. They're kind of awkward-looking things, with what looks to be a big hunk of bone and not much meat.

Lamb shanks are the front legs of the critter and, in spite of looking to be all bone, are rather meaty. At least two-thirds of the weight of a properly trimmed lamb shank is good, lean, richly-flavored (thanks to the bone) lamb meat that may be used in any number of marvelous lamb dishes.

Shanks make for hearty meals served whole (allow 1 pound shank per person) or they may be cooked ahead, the meat removed from the bone, frozen in some of the cooking liquid and used later for lamb curries, stews and casseroles of all kinds. The meat is more flavorful for having been cooked with the bones and it gains richness of flavor for the time spent in the freezer.

JUST PLAIN LAMB SHANKS

4 lamb shanks
2 tablespoons butter
2 cloves garlic, minced
1 medium onion, sliced
⅔ cup dry white wine
⅔ cup beef stock
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon freshly-ground black pepper
¼ teaspoon thyme
2 bay leaves

Brown lamb shanks in butter in a heavy skillet over medium-high heat, turning often until nicely browned on all sides. Remove shanks and set aside. Reduce heat to medium, add garlic and onions and cook, stirring occasionally, until the onions are golden (about 3 minutes). Add wine and simmer for 10 minutes. Add beef stock, salt, pepper, thyme and bay leaves. Return shanks to pan, cover and simmer for 1½ hours, until the meat is tender.

To serve: Thicken the sauce with a tablespoon or so of arrowroot dissolved in water and serve with plain boiled potatoes and carrots. Serves 4.

OR: Eliminate the thickening, allow the shanks to cool, remove the meat from the bones and put the meat in a freezer container. Cover with cooking liquid and freeze, covered, for later use.

BRANDIED LAMB SHANKS

4 lamb shanks
½ cup brandy
½ cup soy sauce
½ cup honey
2 tablespoons vegetable oil
2 tablespoons butter
1 large onion, thickly sliced

Marinate the lamb shanks overnight in a mixture of brandy, soy sauce and honey. Remove the shanks from the marinade (reserve marinade) and brown in hot oil in a heavy skillet, turning often to brown evenly on all sides.

Remove from skillet and set aside. Pour off the oil. Add butter to skillet and cook onions in it over low heat until golden. Return shanks to the pan and pour in the reserved marinade. Cover and simmer over medium-low heat for 1½ hours, until tender. Serves 4.

LAMB SHANKS IN ORANGE SAUCE

4 lamb shanks
2 tablespoons butter
2 cups orange juice
¼ cup lemon juice
½ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon pepper
Rind of 1 orange cut in julienne strips
1 sprig of fresh mint
Cornstarch

Brown lamb shanks in butter in a heavy skillet over medium-high heat, turning often until browned nicely on all sides. Transfer to a covered casserole. Add remaining ingredients except cornstarch, cover and bake in a 325-degree oven for 2 hours. Remove shanks to a heated platter and keep warm. Thicken pan juices with a tablespoon or so of cornstarch mixed with cold water to make a thin paste.

Return shanks to the casserole, or pour sauce over shanks on a serving platter and garnish, if you like, with additional orange zest and mint.

Spaniards: If it's not grown in Jerez, it's not sherry

JEREZ DE LA FRONTERA, Spain (AP) — People here say if it isn't made from grapes grown on a 20,000-acre triangle of hills in this provincial town or places nearby, it isn't sherry — jerez in Spanish and xeres in French.

The use of the term sherry (jerez or xeres) is one of the hundreds of issues in Spain's negotiations to join the European Common Market.

For Jerez de la Frontera and other parts of southwestern Spain it is the only issue.

Sherry, the name the English gave to the wine, has been produced in this area since the Romans came more than 2,000 years ago. It is now the economic backbone of the area.

Under a 1935 Spanish law only those wines made from grapes grown here and in surrounding areas can be called sherry, jerez or xeres.

But outside Spain, according to Luis Breton, managing director of the Sherry Exporters Association, "any boiled-down grape juice can carry the name."

What has aroused the sherry exporters' concern is a statement they consider a reversal of the Common Market's previous position on the protection of wine names — the controlled appellation of origin, in official parlance.

On Dec. 18, the Common Market's Council of Ministers issued a paper saying they didn't feel it was necessary to protect the name "sherry" against abuse by products marketed solely in Britain and Ireland, which are Common Market members.

But it happens that Britain and Ireland are the world's leading Spanish-sherry drinkers; they consumed about 60 million quarts of it last year.

The producers and exporters in the Jerez area — some of whom descend from English and Irish families with names like Osborne, Byass and Croft — don't want drinkers in the British isles to turn to something called "Cyprus sherry" or "Irish sherry" or even "British sherry."

It was the British who first applied the term "sherris" — distorting the Spanish pronunciation of Jerez — in 1608 to the Spanish drink. Over the years it became sherry.

In the late 18th century British shippers put Jerez on the map in their search for an alternative to French wines during the Napoleonic wars.

In an interview in his office in the House of Wine here, Breton claimed that British and Irish distillers now are producing their drink from dehydrated juice made of grapes grown on the Mediterranean island of Cyprus or purchased from French growers, who are subsidized by the Common Market.

He said the distillers add water, industrial alcohol and artificial coloring to the juice and sell it at half the cost of Spanish sherry.

"It is neither wine, nor British nor sherry," Breton said.

In 1979, Breton added, the Common Market's Economic Commission came out in support of strong protection of appellations of origin. He said it was difficult for the exporters to find an explanation for the reversal in December, except "the usual British and Irish opposition in community matters."

Spain was the first wine-producing country in the world to protect appellations of origin through legislation. The French followed six months later, in July 1935, with their own law.

Although Spain's eventual entry into the 10-member Common Market — scheduled for Jan. 1, 1986 — does not hinge on who can call what sherry, wine-related matters are of vital importance in the European community where France, Italy and Greece are apprehensive about Spanish competition.

At a recent luncheon in Madrid to stimulate Spanish exports, Prime Minister Felipe Gonzalez said he considered the sherry appellation issue to be "extremely serious."

Although sherry exports quadrupled in the past 25 years to around 34.3 million gallons last year, Breton said, they have levelled off after peaking five years ago.

In Jerez, nearby Puerto de Santa Maria and Sanlucar de Barrameda wineries cover entire city blocks and the health of the sherry trade is everybody's business.

But unemployment is higher in this area than in other parts of Spain, whose national jobless rate is 20 percent, the highest in Western Europe.

Truffle season on

By TOM HOGE
AP Wine and Food Writer

The season for one of man's greatest luxuries, the truffle, is under way in Europe and will last until early April.

These white and black fungi, which cost up to $500 a pound, are becoming more and more rare. Many farmers from the area of France where truffles are found have left for the cities because the soil which truffles favor is not rich enough for regular farming.

At the turn of the century, the French harvested about 2,000 tons of truffles in a year. Now the figure has plummeted to from 25 to 150 tons, depending on the weather.

Italy, which with Spain harvests about 50 tons, is the home of the white truffle, which is more expensive than its black cousin.

Truffles are found near the roots of oak, chestnut and pine trees, among others — usually about a foot underground. They develop their exquisite aroma and flavor in the cold, wet months of November to March.

About 30 varieties of truffle are grown in the United States. But experts claim that they don't have the distinctive characteristics of those from France or Italy.

The white and black varieties of European truffles are best known and dominate the market, but some truffles are violet, cream, yellow and reddish in hue. Their taste is said to be inferior, however.

Truffle hunters often use pigs or dogs to sniff out the fungi, and hunting usually takes place after dark, reportedly to make it difficult for spies to find out where truffles have been located. Poachers are one of a truffle landowner's biggest problems.

If you buy a fresh truffle, eat it as soon as possible. If you must store it a few days, keep it with raw rice in a tightly lidded plastic container in your refrigerator. The truffle exudes a lot of moisture and the rice absorbs it.

European truffles are often imported in cans after being cooked briefly. They have almost as fine a flavor as the unprocessed fungus. Truffle paste and olive oil flavored with the fungus are also available.

Here is a recipe for spaghettini with truffle sauce.

SPAGHETTINI WITH TRUFFLE SAUCE

24 ounces creme fraiche
3 egg yolks
⅛ ounce truffle (fresh)
2 ounces butter
14 ounces mushrooms
12 ounces spaghettini
1 ounce grated Parmesan cheese
Salt and pepper

Mix creme fraiche and yolks. Peel truffle, chop peelings fine, and mix with butter. Cut remainder of truffle in thin julienne strips. Put butter mixture in pan and cook until melted and foamy. Add mushrooms and saute lightly. Remove from pan and pour in creme fraiche mix and heat gently.

Cook pasta, drain and add creme fraiche sauce. Taste, and season with salt and pepper. Sprinkle on julienne strips of truffle after removing from heat. Put on heated plates and top with mushroom mix and Parmesan. Serves 4.

DEAR ABBY

Woman doesn't measure up

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Several months ago I met a fantastic woman I'll call Clara. She's 38 and divorced. I'm 42 and divorced. She's intelligent, has a wonderful sense of humor, is fun to be with, and she's great in bed. I really care for her and she says she loves me, and she shows it. I guess I'm lucky to have found her.

You're probably wondering, So what's the problem? Clara has a nice face but a terrible figure. She has practically no bust, and she's quite overweight. She says she's been heavy all her life but can't lose weight. I suppose this sounds immature, but my ex-wife had a terrific figure and so have all the other women I've been with, and I am not proud to be seen with Clara.

This is all that's stopping me from asking her to marry me. She's a super woman in every other way, but I just can't see myself married to a woman with a figure like hers. I can't help it. Am I a jerk to feel this way. What should I do? — FUSSY IN FLORIDA

DEAR FUSSY: Are you a jerk? Yes. But since you can't see yourself married to her, before you get further involved — or heaven forbid, get carried away in bed and propose marriage — say goodbye to this fantastic woman.

I'm sure you know that your chances for finding someone with all Clara's attributes plus a terrific figure are very slight. But keep looking. A perfect man should have a perfect woman.

DEAR ABBY: My wife and I had dinner at a very nice restaurant. The food was good, but the service was lousy.

When we got outside, my wife said, "I hope you didn't leave him a tip." I said, "I sure did. I left 15 cents. Had I not left anything, he might have thought I stupidly forgot. This way he knows I did not forget, and he also knows what I thought of the service." — DAN B., SAN FRANCISCO

DEAR DAN: A waiter usually knows when he has given "lousy" service. You should have given the manager a "tip." Managers appreciate knowing how their customers rate the service.

DEAR ABBY: Did you ever hear of a sick dog coming between friends? I used to have a friend that I played bridge with, went shopping with, etc.

A few years ago her dog's health started to deteriorate and she began devoting all her time to the care of this animal. She dropped out of all social circles and other activities. The last time she had the card club at her house, there were newspapers on the floor in every room, and we girls were upset over how sick the dog appeared to be. It was whining pathetically and obviously in pain. We all politely suggested that she put her dog to sleep, and she hasn't spoken to any of us since.

I know she has neglected to visit her aging widowed mother because there is no one available to sit with her dog.

What is your impression of this situation? And what would the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty of Animals have to say about this? — LOST A FRIEND TO A DOG

DEAR LOST: Some people love their pets as they would love a child. Would you have told her to put her sick child to sleep? In her mind, that is the way she perceived your suggestion.

The Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals would say that a rational pet owner who is truly devoted to a pet is selfish to allow it to suffer when it could be easily put out of its misery. Your friend is irrational. Don't judge her.

RAISIN APPLE PIE

Flaky pastry for a 2-crust 8-inch pie
3 large Granny Smith apples (about 1¼ pounds)
⅓ cup sugar
⅓ teaspoon ground cinnamon
⅓ cup golden raisins
Milk

Line an 8-inch pie plate with half of pastry, leaving an overhang. Roll out remaining pastry for top crust and cut four 1-inch vents in the center. Pare and core apples; slices medium thick — there should be 4 generous cups; mix in sugar, cinnamon and raisins; turn into pastry-lined crust; add top pastry; seal and flute edges. Bake on the rack below center in a preheated 425-degree oven until apples are tender and pastry browned — 45 minutes. Serve warm.

Dollar mixed

LONDON (AP) — After seven straight days of setting new records, the U.S. dollar eased against several major currencies in early trading today amid rumors of central bank intervention to try to rein it in. Gold prices rose.

The dollar was still very strong, despite half-hearted recoveries by the British pound and French franc from all-time lows against the U.S. currency, dealers said.

In its mixed early performance, the dollar hit a new trading record of 2,025.00 Italian lire, beating Tuesday's record closing of 2,020.37.

In Frankfurt, West German dealers reported that the Bank of Japan and the Monetary Authority of Singapore both appeared to have intervened with dollar sales.

But dealers were divided on whether other state banks would sell dollars — or seek instead to improve interest rates, hoping to make their currencies more attractive to investors than the dollar.

The British pound rallied by around half a cent to $1.0930 from Tuesday's record closing low of $1.0870.

Early dollar rates againt other key currencies, compared with late rates Tuesday:

–2.7957 Swiss francs, down from a 7-year high of 2.7962.

–10.0300 French francs, down from a record 10.0035.

–3.7167 Dutch guilders, down from a 13-year high of 3.7230.

–1.3398 Canadian dollars, up from 1.3384.

In Zurich, gold opened at $302.30, down from late Tuesday's $302.75, but rose later to $302.70.

In Hong Kong, gold dropped by 68 cents an ounce to close at $303.77.

Silver was quoted in London at $6.220 an ounce, down from $6.245 late Tuesday.

TRC fears foreign oil products threaten U.S.

By MICHAEL L. GRACZYK
Associated Press Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — The United States is depending more and more on imports of refined petroleum products, a situation that "threatens our national security and our economic well-being," Texas Railroad Commissioner Buddy Temple said Tuesday.

"This is an alarming trend," Temple said, speaking to mortgage bankers and real estate developers at a program sponsored by Commerce Title Co. of Houston. "In 1984 alone, according to the Department of Energy, product imports jumped 15 percent over 1983 levels, to some 2 million barrels a day. By 1990, if this trend continues, product imports would rise by another 24 percent, to nearly 2.5 million barrels a day."

Temple is chairman of the three-member Texas Railroad Commission, which regulates the oil and gas industry in Texas.

"In the near future, product imports are forecast to take an even greater share of the U.S. market, further deepening our vulnerability to foreign suppliers and eroding our domestic refining industry," he said.

Chief among the imports are gasoline, diesel fuel and home heating oil, he said, with gasoline imports in 1984 up more than 30 percent from the previous year and home heating oil and diesel engine fuel imports rising 62 percent in the same period.

And the growth is not likely to abate as six new refineries come on line in the next three years in the Middle East and North Africa, Temple said.

"These refineries, often subsidized by their governments, will add some 1.1 million barrels per day of petroleum product to world markets," he said.

The trend is "particularly disturbing" to the Gulf Coast and the Houston metropolitan area, according to Temple. "Market forces and surplus refinery capacity, together with competition from cheaper foreign products, have put refineries in recent years in a serious plight," he said.

Refining capacity is down along the Texas Gulf Coast and some operations have shut. "In all, it's a bleak picture," he said.

In December, refineries were operating at 70 percent capacity, while the break-even point is about 85 percent, Temple said.

"We've seen jobs lost to Texas refinery workers, with higher unemployment and the social problems that arise with it," he said.

He blamed the boost in imports on the strength of the U.S. dollar abroad, foreign government investment in their own refineries, and strict import limitations in countries other than the United States.

At the same time, Temple said the number of American refineries has dropped by more than a third since 1981 while the overall demand for refined products has slipped only 3 percent to 5 percent.

He proposed to halt the "steady erosion of our domestic refining industry" by backing a boost in the import tax on refined products or by reimposing quotas on the products.

"Both of these measures would encourage domestic exploration, production and refining, and in so doing would create jobs for Americans," he said. In addition, he said they would trim the energy trade deficit and put the burden of the import fee on the OPEC nations.

Financier announces third offer for Phillips Petroleum

NEW YORK (AP) — Wall Street analysts say they are becoming more skeptical about financier Carl Icahn's attempt to acquire Phillips Petroleum Co., the nation's eighth largest oil company.

On Tuesday, Icahn unveiled his third plan in eight days for buying the company, although he has yet to begin an offer. As in the past announcements, Icahn's latest bid was highly conditional.

In his latest plan, Icahn said he is prepared to offer $60 a share in cash to buy 70 million shares of the company's stock, which would be enough to increase his stake in Phillips to just over 50 percent. If that $4.2 billion offer succeeds, Icahn said he then would acquire the remaining 77.1 million shares for securities with a value of $50 a share.

The two-step $8.06 billion takeover offer is conditioned on arranging financing, a defusing of Phillips' new takeover defense and shareholder rejection at a special meeting next week of Phillips' own restructuring plan.

"This is the third offer this guy (Icahn) has come up with. It's fraught with 'ifs' and 'subject tos' and maybe it's wearing thin" on investors, said Warren Shimmerlik, an oil industry analyst at Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith Inc. in New York. "It doesn't look like a meaningful additional value to shareowners."

In heavy trading Tuesday, Phillips stock finished unchanged at $50 a share.

"In the absense of having a good-sized corporate partner, I wonder if it's do-able," said Rosario Ilacqua, an oil industry analyst for the New York securities firm L.F. Rothschild, Unterberg, Towbin. No such partner for Icahn has yet emerged.

Phillips said Icahn's offer "is not substantially different from the previous ones that were rejected."

In a related development, Phillips' directors said the company's president, C.J. Silas, had been elected to succeed Chairman William Douce, who earlier had announced plans to retire this spring. Directors named Glenn Cox, an executive vice president and chief financial officer, to succeed Silas as president of the company, headquartered in Bartlesville, Okla.

Icahn already owns 7.5 million shares of Phillips stock, or 4.85 percent of the outstanding shares.

A week ago, he announced an offer of $55 a share, evenly divided between cash and securities, for the remaining stock.

On Friday he said he would offer $57 a share for about 39 million shares, enough to give him 30 percent of the company's stock. That bid was abandoned after Icahn examined Phillips' latest defensive strategy, which included a bid by Phillips to make a hostile takeover prohibitively expensive.

Electric auto on edge of technological breakthrough

By SUSAN LINDSAY
Business-Oil Writer

The next Mercedes whizzing down the interstate may not be emitting diesel flames or a puff of super unleaded smoke. Instead, it may be a technological breakthrough because it is operating on a set of electric batteries.

The "Blitzen Benz", developed by Jack Hooker and George Thiess, owners of Electric Motor Cars in Richardson, will be unveiled today in Dallas.

Simply, the electric car is "fueled by magnesium, which is made with sea water," said Hooker.

He explained that a cubic mile of sea water transformed into magnesium will power every new car built in America last year for 12 months. He said that is 72 billion miles of driving on a drop of water.

Electric Motor Cars received its first Mercedes Benz 190E for conversion purposes in January of 1984.

The car will join a small fleet of electric Ford Escorts and other modified cars at the company's Richardson showrooms.

"If Henry Ford and other car pioneers could do it over again and they had today's technology, they wouldn't use the combustion engine," said Hooker. "We're on the edge of a real technological breakthrough."

The problem with electric vehicles in the past has been their limited range. A battery would not take a car more than 40 or 50 miles without a recharge of eight to 10 hours, said Hooker.

However, Thiess and Hooker said they have found a solution.

"A car with limited range is okay if you're just driving it straight to work and back," said Hooker. "But on a 300-mile trip, you've got problems. We've solved them by making it possible to replace the battery's 'fuel rod' every 3,000 miles."

Thiess, who invented the digital watch, and Hooker, a longtime automobile dealer and banker, first considered towing a battery charger on a small trailer behind the vehicle but decided against it because of its impracticality.

"We then decided that by recycling and replenishing the active ingredients in the battery, the magnesium rods and the battery fluid, the motorist just goes on and on," Hooker said.

He said the battery fluid is much safer than gasoline and has very little odor. The rods are electrically-treated salt water which is condensed into usable solids, he said.

The idea for the system came from the space shuttle, which uses fuel cells, he said, adding that the the power technique will give the car a range of 400 to 500 miles and the costs are comparable to buying gasoline.

The differences between the system and a combustion engine are pollution and the depletion of petroleum resources, Hooker said.

"Ten or 15 years from now, gasoline prices will be out of sight. But magnesium is the seventh most abundant element on earth. The world is anxious for an alternative to the the gas-powered car, and we believe the fuel cell is the answer," said Hooker.

EEOC seeks job discrimination

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Equal Opportunity Commission is moving to make sure that all cases where job discrimination is found are taken to court if no adequate settlement is reached, its members say.

Clarence Thomas, commission chairman, said Tuesday that new policies adopted by the panel unanimously last week would end the current practice of letting thousands of cases go without action because they were deemed to small or unimportant.

"You should see a significant increase in the number of cases we litigate," Thomas said.

"You could not count on us to sue you if you were caught violating the law (on discrimination)," he said. "We thought we should adopt a policy of certainty in this area."

Thomas said that in the fiscal year ending last Sept. 30, the commission had 1,603 cases in which it found discrimination but was unable to reach a settlement. But only 284 cases were recommended for court action, he said, and the rest of the cases went without action.

Tom Brown sells oil properties

Tom Brown, Inc. has agreed to sell its interest in some of its oil and gas producing properties for $45 million to PanCanadian Petroleum Co. of Calgary, Alberta, said company officials.

The company is also expected to sell its interest in the Anschutz Ranch East unit in Wyoming and Utah by the end of February.

Even IRS throws up hands over tax laws

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Internal Revenue Service admits to having made mistakes in some of the 53 million taxpayer questions it answered last year but puts part of the blame on a complex tax system.

"If ever a law cried out for reform, this is it," IRS Assistant Commissioner Stanley Goldberg told reporters Tuesday. "I don't think either man or beast can master this," he added, pointing to a 10-inch-high stack of volumes required to explain the changes Congress made only in 1984.

Meantime, he conceded, some of the 3,000 part-time and full-time employees who answer questions by telephone or at IRS walk-in offices are going to make mistakes.

"They are doing a very difficult job," Goldberg said. "Unfortunately, it is impossible to do it perfectly."

A taxpayer who relies on erroneous IRS advice in filling out a tax return is subject to the same interest and penalties as if the wrong answer had been provided by a private accountant.

Goldberg admitted to being defensive about a Wall Street Journal survey that asked fairly routine questions of IRS offices and received some incorrect answers. Seventeen offices and four questions were involved in the survey, and the Journal said no single question was answered correctly by all five offices to which it was put. On two questions, four of five responses were correct.

The IRS is "dismayed and not a little embarrassed" with such results, Goldberg said. "We don't like to see it but we know it happens."

One of the Journal questions asked five IRS offices about a credit for owners of diesel cars, which was enacted in 1984. The one-time credit is available for owners of certain diesel-powered cars and light trucks of 1979 or later vintage.

The newspaper said agents in Richmond, Denver, Indianapolis and Milwaukee had the right answer. The Boston office said incorrectly that the credit was available only for business vehicles.

"We try to hire the brightest people we can find" to answer the telephones during the peak tax season, Goldberg said, adding that the part-time people receive the same training as do full-time employees.

"We particularly train them that, 'when you don't know the answer, for Lord's sake ... please don't guess. Refer it to a more qualified person,'" Goldberg added. He said employees are told "you get no demerits for saying, 'I'll have to find out.'"

Second, he said, the "assisters" are trained not to give snap answers. "You've got to know all the circumstances surrounding the question," Goldberg said. "After having done all those things, we continue to make errors. Unfortunately, we probably will continue. ..."

But overall, he said, "they typically do a fairly good job."

In fact, the IRS claims it probably provided correct answers to 95 percent of the 53 million questions it was asked last year. But only about 22 million of those questions were technical ones involving taxes; the remainder were clerical queries involving the status of a refund or an account.

Goldberg noted that about 41 percent of taxpayers feel the need to ask the IRS, other professionals or friends for help in filling out their returns. Despite the occasional wrong answer, Goldberg said, "taxpayers should continue to call us."

IRS says taxes can be prepared without help

NEW YORK (AP) — Forty percent of the nation's 97 million taxpayers hired professional tax preparers last year, but not all the work was complex. Many people sought preparers simply because they broke out in a cold sweat at the thought of doing it themselves.

For taxpayers with financial complications, or those who are unaware of deductions available to them, hiring a professional tax preparer can be worthwhile. But don't look for a preparer simply because you assume the work is too hard to do yourself. You don't have to be a mathematician or cryptographer to complete the job.

"We always recommend that a person sit down, look at the tax package, the instructions in the package, and try to do it themselves," said Wilson Fadely, a spokesman for the IRS.

Tom Block, president of the tax operation division of H&R Block, the nation's largest tax preparation firm, said taxpayers don't need professional preparers if they "keep up with the tax law changes each year and already have a very good, basic understanding of our tax law." His company prepared 9 million tax returns last year.

Ms. DeLong, whose organization in Dayton, Ohio, has 700 members, said taxpayers who don't itemize or have only one source of income should try to do the work themselves. "If you have questions, it is better to call someone in the field," she said. "With a little information, maybe they can do it themselves."

She recommended that taxpayers seek a professional tax preparer "if they bought or sold a house, have stock transactions, are self-employed, if they have rental property, own a farm, or if their income has taken a substantial jump."

The National Association of Tax Practitioners, which is based in Kaukana, Wis., and has 4,000 members, also recommends hiring a preparer for these reasons: if you were divorced in the tax year, received a lump sum payment from a pension or profit-sharing plan, made an investment or bought a second home.

Runnels retest opens Gray oil production

Hutton fined for affecting trades in options

N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — The American Stock Exchange said last week that it had censured E.F. Hutton & Co. and fined it $7,500 for affecting trades in listed options that involved no change of ownership. Hutton settled without admitting or denying the allegation.

Thomas Rae, Hutton's general counsel, said the firm had executed the transaction for a client, who was apparently trying to buy and sell the same securities for tax reasons — something disallowed by the Internal Revenue Service. "We've tightened up our procedures," Rae said.

The Amex also said it had censured the Cralin Securities Co. and fined it $7,500 for violating net capital and financial reporting requirements and for failing to keep complete records. Cralin, too, settled without admitting or denying the allegations.

Cralin Securities was an affiliate of Cralin & Co., a broker-dealer, and has not operated for more than two years, according to Candice M. Sherman, a spokesman for Cralin & Co.

Paint factory still smoldering after explosion kills one man

MIDDLESEX, N.J. (AP) — Smoke seeped from the rubble of a paint factory today after an explosion that killed a man and injured 14 other people sent a "huge ball of flames" 50 feet high and threatened to ignite a nearby chemical plant.

Middlesex County Prosecutor Alan Rockoff said it was "miraculous" that most of the 18 plant workers escaped injury Tuesday at the Chemray Coatings Corp. plant. Half of them were outside on a coffee break when the blast tore through the two-story brick building at about 10 a.m.

Ten hours later, authorities announced the blast had killed a man who Rockoff said apparently was a missing duplicating machine serviceman believed to "have been caught in the fire."

One of the injured was thrown through a window by the force of the blast — and nearby businesses and homes were evacuated as the sky filled with black smoke and flames.

Police Sgt. Gregory Sharkey said smoke continued to come out of the rubble today and a few firefighters remained on the scene.

High winds and pelting rain hampered firefighting efforts and drove the flames to nearby buildings, damaging a radiator repair shop and a tile company.

But Rockoff said firefighters kept the blaze from spreading to a nearby Union Carbide plant where drums of chemicals were stored.

"It could have set off a chain reaction," he said.

The blast occurred in this borough about 15 miles southwest of Newark and the fire was brought under control at 3:10 p.m, two hours before the evacuees were permitted to return.

The cause of the explosion was under investigation but officials said it appeared it occurred in a room where chemicals are mixed to produce paint.

Police Sgt. Jerry Nowak, who was across the street from the plant in his patrol car when the blast occurred, said: "I felt the entire rear end of the car lift up and then drop down. I looked out the window and saw a huge ball of flame coming out of the center of the building."

The plant produced paint, varnishes, enamels and lacquers.

Goldwater proposes $33 billion cut in defense

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Barry Goldwater, chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, is proposing a three-year, $33 billion reduction in President Reagan's defense buildup as part of a Republican deficit-cutting strategy, congressional sources say.

Goldwater understands that Senate Majority Leader Robert Dole, R-Kan., "needs cuts in defense in order to leverage Republicans and Democrats into making the unsavory cuts" contemplated for domestic programs, one congressional official said Tuesday.

The aides, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the Arizona Republican stressed that his recommendation is dependent on the development of a comprehensive deficit-reduction plan that would include deep cuts in domestic programs.

The officials said Goldwater's proposal would allow Pentagon spending to rise by 4 percent annually for each of the next three years, in contrast to Reagan's call for a 5.9 percent hike next year and increases of 8.2 percent and 8.8 percent the following years.

In actual spending, Goldwater's plan would trim $2.1 billion from the president's recommendation next year, $9.2 billion in 1987 and $21.8 billion in 1988 for a total of $33.1 billion.

No details were available about what weapons, if any, would be affected by the proposal.

Many Republicans have conditioned their support of sensitive domestic spending cuts — including a one-year freeze on Social Security benefits — on a reduction in the defense budget.

But Goldwater's proposal was likely to be viewed by many lawmakers as too little to rally support for politically sensitive cuts such as a Social Security freeze.

Sen. Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee, has said, for example, that a spending freeze in defense is the "absolute minimum requirement."

Other lawmakers have discussed the possibility of holding defense spending rises to 3 percent annually for each of the next three years, a level that could satisfy the nation's commitment to NATO allies while achieving deeper budget cuts.

Dole is trying to produce a program to cut deficits to $100 billion by 1988, an effort that will require cuts totaling more than $260 billion over the next three years.

Republicans have been working in private for several weeks on a list of possible cuts, and so far, the most dramatic proposal to emerge is the Social Security freeze.

NATION IN BRIEF

Alleged terrorist convicted

MIAMI (AP) — The alleged leader of the anti-Castro terrorist group Omega 7 faces a prison sentence of up to 115 years after being convicted of possessing illegal weapons and conspiring to manufacture and possess them.

A federal jury on Tuesday convicted Eduardo Arocena, already sentenced to life plus 35 years on federal murder and terrorism convictions in New York City.

Nuns' charges dropped

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Federal charges against two Roman Catholic nuns who were among 16 people accused of smuggling Central American refugees into the United States have been dropped, but the nuns criticized the government's move.

U.S. District Judge Earl Carroll on Tuesday granted the government's motion that the charges be dismissed.

In a joint statement, Sisters Anna Priester and Mary Waddell of Phoenix said the charges against all the defendants in the federal probe of the sanctuary movement should be dropped on moral and religious grounds.

Meanwhile, Cecilia del Carmen Jaurez de Emery, who was indicted with the nuns, became the second person in the case to plead guilty to aiding and abetting the illegal entry of an alien. Twelve people still face trial.

Nurse's license suspened

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — A state official says he ordered the emergency suspension of a nurse because she admitted having mental problems, not because of the deaths of 12 people in two weeks at a nursing home where she worked.

Bobbie Sue Dudley's license was suspended because she can't continue to practice nursing with "reasonable skill and safety," Secretary Fred Roche of the Department of Professional Regulation said in a news satement Tuesday.

Mrs. Dudley was fired by the North Horizon Health Care Center in December. Between Nov. 13 and Nov. 26, 12 patients there died, according to state investigators, who have have suggested some of the deaths may have resulted from insulin overdoses.

Firefighter convicted of arson

BOSTON (AP) — A veteran city firefighter who faces up to 20 years in prison is the last person to be convicted in what prosecutors called the largest arson ring in U.S. history, says a federal prosecutor.

A federal jury on Tuesday found Ray J. Norton Jr., 44, guilty of conspiring to set 219 fires, perjury and arson of a building. Norton was with the fire department for 14 years.

Of the seven other people involved in the ring, six pleaded guilty and the seventh was convicted by a jury, said Assistant U.S. Attorney Mark E. Robinson. They are serving prison terms of five to 40 years.
